The glorious Lord said : You are our preceptor (counsellor) and uncle, nay, our praiseworthy friend. We ever deserve to be protected, nourished and treated with compassion by you, as a matter of fact, since we are your children. (29) Highly blessed and most worthy souls like you deserve constantly to be adored (more than gods) by men seeking blessedness. Gods are (after all) actuated by self-interest (and are pleased with those alone who offer oblations to them through the sacred fire); (but) not so the pious (who habitually do good to others without expecting any return from them). (30) It is not that there are no purifying agencies (in the shape of rivers, lakes etc.), consisting of water and no deities (with a body) made of clay and stone. They (however) exert a purifying influence through a long process of time, whereas pious souls do so through their very sight. (31) As such you are the foremost of our friends. Therefore, with intent to do a good turn to (my cousins) Yudhiṣṭhira and others (the sons of Pāṇḍu) proceed you to Hastināpura (the capital of the Kauravas, named after its founder, King Hasti) for making enquiries about them. (32) Brought (back from the forest where King Pāṇḍu lived) to his capital by the (blind) king (Dhṛtarāṣṭra, their elder uncle, who had ascended the throne on the plea of his being the reversionary heir of Pāṇḍu), their father having died (the other day), the boys are living in a most miserable condition with their mother

(Kuntī, my aunt): so we have heard. (33) Sure enough, the feeble-minded King Dhṛtarāṣṭra (the son of Ambikā), who is (at the same time) blind and follows the will of his vile son (Duryodhana), does not behave impartially towards his nephews. (34) Go (therefore) and ascertain his behaviour (towards them) now—whether it is good or bad. Having definitely known it, we shall so arrange that the welfare of our relations (the Pāṇḍavas) may be ensured." (35) Having thus duly instructed Akrūra, the almighty Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who alleviates the suffering of His devotees) then returned direct to His own residence alongwith Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarama) and Uddhava. (36)

Thus ends the forty-eighth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLIX

Akrūra's visit to Hastināpura

श्रीशुक उवाच

स गत्वा हास्तिनपुरं पौरवेन्द्रयशोऽङ्कितम् । ददर्श तत्राम्बिकेयं सभीषं विदुरं पृथाम् । १ ।
सहपुत्रं च बाह्लीकं भारद्वाजं सगीतमम् । कर्णं सुयोधनं द्रौणिं पाण्डवान् सुहृदोऽपरान् । २ ।
यथावदुपसङ्गम्य बन्धुभिर्गान्दिनीसुतः । सम्पृष्टस्तैः सुहृद्वर्ता स्वयं चापृच्छदव्ययम् । ३ ।
उवास कतिचिन्मासान् राज्ञो वृत्तवित्सया । दुष्प्रजस्याल्पसारस्य खलच्छन्दानुवर्तिनः । ४ ।
तेज ओजो बलं वीर्यं प्रश्रयादींश्च सद्गुणान् । प्रजानुरागं पार्थपु न संहृदिश्चिकीर्षितम् । ५ ।
कृतं च धार्तराष्ट्रैर्वद गरदानाद्यपेशलम् । आचख्यो सर्वमेवास्मै पृथा विदुर एव च । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Going to Hastināpura, marked with the glory of the kings of Pūru's race, Akrūra saw there Dhṛtarāṣṭra (the son of Ambikā) accompanied by Bhīṣma, (nay,) Vidura, Prthā (the mother of the Pāṇḍava brothers), Bāhlika (uncle of Bhīṣma) alongwith his son (Somadatta), Droṇa (the son of Bharadvāja), accompanied by Kṛpa (a scion of sage Gotama), (as well as) Karṇa, Suyodhana (Duryodhana), Aśwatthāmā (the son of Droṇa), Yudhiṣṭhira and his four brothers (the sons of Pāṇḍu) and other friends. (1-2) Meeting his relatives in an appropriate manner, Akrūra (the son of Gāndinī) was duly questioned by them about the welfare of their relatives (at Mathurā), and himself enquired about their well-being (in return). (3) He stayed there for some months with intent to ascertain the conduct (towards the sons of Pāṇḍu) of the king (Dhṛtarāṣṭra), who had vile sons and little moral strength and followed the will of the wicked (his brother-in-law Śakuni, Karṇa and others). (4) Prthā as well as Vidura* (another half-brother of Dhṛtarāṣṭra and a true friend and benefactor of the Pāṇḍavas) told him (Akrūra) of all the evil—in the shape of administering poison etc.—that had (already) been done and was (further) sought to be done by Duryodhana and others (the sons of Dhṛtarāṣṭra), who were envious of the majesty, military

* For the story of Vidura see Book III.

skill, bodily strength, prowess, modesty and other excellent qualities of Prthā's sons as well as of the love which the people bore for them. (5-6)

पृथा तु भ्रातरं प्राप्तमकूरमुपसृत्य तम् । उवाच जन्मनिलयं स्मरन्त्यश्रुकलेक्षणा । ७ ।
अपि स्मरन्ति नः सौम्य पितरौ भ्रातरश्च मे । भगिन्यो भ्रातृपुत्राश्च जामवः सख्य एव च । ८ ।
भ्रात्रेभ्यो भगवान् कृष्णः शरण्यो भक्तवत्सलः । पैतृषुसेयान् स्मरति रामश्चाभ्युक्तेक्षणाः । ९ ।
सापलमध्वे शोचन्ती वृकाणां हरिणीमिव । सान्त्वयिष्यति मां वायवैः पितृहीनांश्च बालकान् । १० ।
कृष्ण कृष्ण महायोगिन् विश्वात्मन् विश्वभावन । प्रपन्नां पाहि गोविन्द शिशुभिश्चावसीदतीम् । ११ ।
नान्यत्तव पदाम्भोजात् पश्यामि शरणं नृणाम् । बिभ्यतां मृत्युसंसारादीश्वरस्यापवर्गिकात् । १२ ।
नमः कृष्णाय शृङ्गाय ब्रह्मणे परमात्मने । योगेश्वराय योगाय त्वामहं शरणं गता । १३ ।

Approaching her cousin, Akṛūra, who was (quite) at hand, and recollecting her birth-place (Mathurā) Prthā for her part spoke to him with tear-drops in her eyes (as follows): —(7) "Do my parents (Sūrasena and Māṛiṣā) and brothers" (Vasudeva etc.), sisters (Śrutadevā and so on) and nephews (Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and others), ladies of the household (Devakī, Rohiṇī and others) as well as my female friends remember me? (8) Does my nephew, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is fit to protect all and is (so) fond of His devotees, as well as the lotus-eyed Balarāma, remember Yudhiṣṭhira and others (the sons of His father's sister, i.e., myself)? (9) Will He (ever care to) console with His (comforting) words me—grieving (as I do) in the midst of enemies (even) as a she-deer would do in the midst of wolves—as well as these fatherless boys (of mine)? (10) O Kṛṣṇa, O Enchanter of all, O great Yogi (Wielder of mystic powers), O Soul of the universe, O Saviour of all, O Deliverer of cows, protect me, that have sought You (as my refuge) and am suffering with my infants. (11) For men afraid of death and (future) birth I find no asylum other than Your lotus-feet, which are capable of conferring Liberation (on their worshippers), almighty that You are. (12) Hail to You, the Enchanter of all, the all-pure Brahma (the Absolute), the Supreme Spirit, the Master of Yoga (mystic powers), (nay,) Yoga (wisdom) personified! I have sought You as my refuge." (13)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यनुसृत्य स्वजनं कृष्णं च जगदीश्वरम् । प्राप्तुं दुःखिता राजन् भवतां प्रपितामही । १४ ।
समदुःखसुखोऽकूरो विदुरश्च महायशः । सान्त्वयामासतुः कुन्ती तत्पुत्रोत्पत्तिहेतुभिः । १५ ।
यास्यन् राजानमभ्येत्य विषयं पुत्रलालसम् । अवदत् सुहृदां मध्ये बन्धुभिः सौहृदोदितम् । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Remembering thus her own kinsfolk and (particularly) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of the universe, O king, your great grandmother (Kuntī) wept bitterly, afflicted as she was. (14) Akṛūra, to whom joy and sorrow made no difference, and the highly renowned Vidura comforted Kuntī by reminding her of those responsible for the birth of her sons (viz., Dharma, Vāyu, Indra and the two Aśvins). (15) Approaching the king (Dhṛtarāṣṭra)—who differentiated between his own sons and nephews and was (particularly) fond of the former—while about to return (to Mathurā), Akṛūra repeated in the midst of his kinsmen what was communicated (to the king) out of goodwill by his relations (Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and others). (16)

अकूर उवाच

भो भो वैचित्रवीर्यं त्वं कुरूणां कीर्तिवर्धन । भ्रातृपर्यप्ते पाण्डवाधुनाऽऽसनमास्थितः । १७ ।

धर्मेण पालयन्तुर्वी प्रजाः शीलेन रञ्जयन् । वर्तमानः समः स्वेषु श्रेयः कीर्तिमवाप्स्यसि । १८ ।
 अन्यथा त्वाचरँल्लोके गर्हितो यास्यसे तमः । तस्मात् समत्वे वर्तस्व पाण्डवेष्वात्मजेषु च । १९ ।
 नेह चात्यन्तसंवासः कर्हिचित् केनचित् सह । राजन् खेनापि देहेन किमु जायात्यजादिभिः । २० ।
 एकः प्रसूयते जन्तुरेक एव प्रलीयते । एकोऽनुभुङ्क्ते सुकृतमेक एव च दुष्कृतम् । २१ ।
 अधर्मोपचितं वित्तं हरन्त्यन्येऽल्पमेधसः । सम्भोजनीयापदेशैर्जलानीव जलौकसः । २२ ।
 पुष्पाति यानधर्मेण स्वबुद्ध्या तमपण्डितम् । तेऽकृतार्थं प्रहिण्वन्ति प्राणा रायः सुतादयः । २३ ।
 स्वयं क्लिबधमादाय तैस्त्यक्तो नार्थकोविदः । असिद्धार्थो विशत्यन्धं स्वधर्मविमुखस्तपः । २४ ।
 तस्माल्लोकमिमं राजन् स्वप्रमायामनोरथम् । वीक्ष्यायप्यात्मनाऽऽत्मानं समः शान्तो भव प्रभो । २५ ।

Akrūra said : O son of Vicitravīrya, O enhancer of the glory of the Kurus, your (younger) brother, Pāṇḍu, having demised, you have now ascended the throne (of Hastināpura). (17) Ruling over the earth with piety, gratifying the people with your good conduct and behaving impartially towards your own people (viz., your sons and the sons of Pāṇḍu) you will attain prosperity and renown. (18) Acting otherwise, you will be censured in the world (during your lifetime) and go (down) to hell (after your death). Therefore, behave impartially towards the sons of Pāṇḍu and your own. (19) And there is no (possibility of one's) living together perpetually with anyone anywhere in this world—even with one's own body, O king; how, then, could one expect to live eternally with one's wife, children and so on? (20) A creature is born alone and dies all by itself. Alone it enjoys the fruit of its good deeds and alone does it reap the consequences of its misdeeds. (21) Others going by the names of son etc., (that deserve to be nourished) drain the unrighteously accumulated wealth of the foolish one (even) as the brood of an aquatic animal share its waters (which constitute its very life as it were). (22) Life, riches and sons etc., that a man nourishes through unrighteousness under the (false) notion that they are his own (ultimately) forsake the stupid fellow for good (even) when he (feels that he) has not yet accomplished his purpose (the enjoyment of pleasures). (23) Deserted by them (even) when his object has not (yet) been achieved, and carrying (with him) his (load of) sins a man who is ignorant of his own (real) interest and (therefore) has his face turned away from his own duty himself descends (after death) into the dismal hell. (24) Therefore, realizing this world, O king, to be a (mere) dream, illusion or fancy, and controlling your mind with your reason, be composed and impartial (to all), O lord ! (25)

धृतराष्ट्र उवाच

यथा वदति कल्याणीं वाचं दानपते भवान् । तथानया न तृप्यामि मर्त्यः प्राप्य यथामृतम् । २६ ।
 तथापि सूनता सौम्य हृदि न स्थीयते चले । पुत्रानुरागविषमे विद्युत् सौदामनी यथा । २७ ।
 ईश्वरस्य विधिं को नु विधुनोत्यन्यथा पुमान् । भूमेर्भारावताराय योऽवतीर्णो यदोः कुले । २८ ।
 यो दुर्बिमर्शपथया निजमाययेदं सुष्ट्वा गुणान् विभजते तदनुप्रविष्टः ।
 तस्मै नमो दुरवबोधविहारतन्त्रसंसारचक्रगतये परमेश्वराय । २९ ।

Dhṛtarāṣṭra replied : (Even) as you tender this salutary advice, O prince among the charitable, I do not feel sated with it any more than a mortal would on securing nectar. (26) Still your wholesome and agreeable counsel, O gentle one, does not stick into my fickle mind—biassed (as it is) through attachment to my sons—any more than (a flash of) lightning does (into a cloud). (27) What man can possibly set aside (even) indirectly the decree of the almighty Lord, who (I am told) has appeared in the race of Yadu for removing the earth's burden ? (28) Hail to that supreme Lord who, having evolved this creation (consisting among others of numberless living organisms) by His own creative energy (known by the name of Prakṛti)—whose ways cannot be easily conceived—and entered it afterwards (as its Inner Controller), apportioned (to them diverse) duties and their rewards, and whose pastime—(so) difficult to comprehend—is mainly responsible for the movement of the wheel of transmigration. (29)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यभिप्रेत्य नृपतेरभिप्रायं स यादवः। सुहृद्भिः समनुज्ञातः पुनर्यदुपुरीमगात् । ३०।

शशंस रामकृष्णाभ्यां धृतराष्ट्रविचेष्टितम्। पाण्डवान् प्रति कौरव्य यदर्थं प्रेषितः स्वयम् । ३१।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशसहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायां

दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे एकौनपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ४९।

— :: :: —

समाप्तमिदं दशमस्कन्धस्य पूर्वार्द्धम्

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

Śrī Śuka went on : Having thus come to know the mind of Dhṛtarāṣṭra, and duly permitted by his relatives (the Kurus and the sons of Pāṇḍu), the aforesaid Akrūra (a scion of Yadu) returned to Mathurā (the capital of the Yadus). (30) (Reaching Mathurā) he reported to Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa the conduct in particular of Dhṛtarāṣṭra towards Yudhiṣṭhira and others (the sons of Pāṇḍu), for which purpose, O Paṇḍita (a scion of Kuru), he had been personally sent (by Them). (31)

Thus ends the forty-ninth discourse, in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā, a collection of eighteen thousand Ślokas composed by the sage Vedavyāsa.

END OF THE FIRST HALF OF BOOK TEN

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

दशमः स्कन्धः

(उत्तरार्धः)

अथ पञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa

Book Ten (Latter Half)

Discourse L

The Lord ensconces Himself in a fortress (built by Him in the western sea under the name of Dwārakā)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अस्तिः प्राप्तिश्च कंसस्य महिष्यौ भरतर्षभ। मृते भर्तारं दुःखार्ते ईयतुः स्म पितुर्गृहान्। १।
पित्रे मगधराजाय जरासन्धाय दुःखिते। वेदयाञ्चक्रतुः सर्वमात्मवैधव्यकारणम्। २।
स तदप्रियमाकर्ण्य शोकामर्षयुतो नृप। अयादर्वी महीं कर्तुं चक्रे परममुद्यमम्। ३।
अक्षौहिणीभिर्विशया तिसृभिश्चापि संवृतः। यदुराजधानीं मथुरां न्यरुणत् सर्वतोदिशम्। ४।

Śrī Śuka began again : Their husband being dead, Asti and Prāpti, the two wives of Kaṁsa, O Parīkṣit (the foremost of the Bharatas), went away stricken with sorrow to the house of their father: so the tradition goes. (1) Seized with agony they made known to their father, Jarāsandha, the ruler of the Magadhas, all that had contributed to their widowhood. (2) Full of grief and indignation of hear that unpleasant story, O protector of men, Jarāsandha put forth a supreme endeavour to rid the earth of the Yādavas. (3) Protected by three and twenty Akṣauhiṇīs* he besieged Mathurā, the capital of the Yadus, on all sides. (4)

निरीक्ष्य तद्वलं कृष्ण उद्वेलमिव सागरम्। स्वपुरं तेन संरुद्धं खजनं च भयाकुलम्। ५।
चिन्तयामास भगवान् हरिः कारणमानुषः। तद्देशकालानुगुणं स्वावतारप्रयोजनम्। ६।
हनिष्यामि बलं ह्येतद् भुवि भारं समाहितम्। मागधेन समानीतं वश्यानां सर्वभूभुजाम्। ७।
अक्षौहिणीभिः संख्यातं भटाश्वरथकुङ्जरैः। मागधस्तु न हन्तव्यो भूयः कर्ता बलीयसम्। ८।
एतदर्थोऽवतारोऽयं भूभारहरणाय मे। संरक्षणाय साधूनां कृतोऽन्येषां वधाय च। ९।

अन्योऽपि धर्मरक्षायै देहः संभ्रियते मया। विरामायाम्यधर्मस्य काले प्रभवतः क्वचित्। १०।

Taking a full view of his army, which resembled an ocean that had overflowed its banks, of His own city besieged by it and of His people (near and dear ones) stricken with fear, Śrī

* The strength of an Akṣauhiṇī has been specified as follows :-

खद्योपनिनवव्योमचन्द्रसंख्याः पदातयः । खेन्दुपद्मारपद्संख्या अक्षा नागा रथा अपि ॥

खादिनामेन्दुदृक्संख्या इत्येवाक्षौहिणी स्मृता ॥

In other words, an Akṣauhiṇī consists of 1,09,350 infantry, 65,610 horse, 21,870 elephants and an equal number of chariots.

Kṛṣṇa—who was no other than Lord Śrī Hari (Viṣṇu) appearing in a human semblance from some motive (viz., for removing the burden of the earth), pondered over (reviewed) the purpose of His descent (on this earthly plane) as well as on what was equal to the time and place in question. (5-6) (He took no time in arriving at a decision and said to Himself,) "I shall certainly destroy this army of all dependent chiefs, brought together by Jarāsandha (the ruler of the Magadhas), reckoned as many Akṣauhiṇis strong and consisting of foot soldiers, cavalry, chariots and elephants—a concentrated burden on the earth (and therefore easy to dispose of). Jarāsandha, however, is not to be killed (at once) as (in the event of his being let off) he is expected to put forth renewed efforts to mobilize an army (so that I shall be spared the trouble of hunting up evil-doers). (7-8) This present descent of Mine is directed towards this very end, viz., removing the earth's burden, protecting the virtuous and wiping out the vile. (9) (why this alone,) other (divine) forms too (such as those of a boar and a man-lion) are duly assumed by Me (from time to time) for the vindication of righteousness as well as for putting a stop to (the mad career of) unrighteousness gaining ascendancy during certain periods." (10)

एवं ध्यायति गोविन्द आकाशात् सूर्यवर्चसौ । रथावुपस्थितौ सद्यः ससूतौ सपरिच्छदौ । ११ ।
 आयुधानि च दिव्यानि पुराणानि यदृच्छया । दृष्ट्वा तानि हृषीकेशः सङ्कर्षणमथाब्रवीत् । १२ ।
 पश्यायं व्यसनं प्राप्तं यदूनां त्वावतां प्रभो । एष ते रथ आयातो दयितान्यायुधानि च । १३ ।
 यानमास्थाय जहोतद् व्यसनात् स्वान् समुद्धर । एतदर्थं हि नौ जन्म साधूनामीश शर्मकृत् । १४ ।
 त्रयोविंशत्यनीकास्त्रं भूमेर्भारमपाकुरु । एवं सम्मन्य दाशार्हो दंशितौ रथिनौ पुरात् । १५ ।
 निर्जग्मतुः स्वायुधाढ्यौ बलेनान्तीयसाऽऽवृत्तौ । शङ्खं दध्मौ विनिर्गत्य हरिदरुक्सारथिः । १६ ।
 ततोऽभूत् परसैन्यानां हृदि वित्रासवेपथुः । तावाह मागधो वीक्ष्य हे कृष्ण पुरुषाधम । १७ ।
 न त्वया योद्धुमिच्छामि बालेनैकेन लज्जया । गुप्तेन हि त्वया मन्द न सोऽप्येति बन्धुहन् । १८ ।
 तव राम यदि श्रद्धा युध्यस्व धैर्यमुद्रह । हित्वा वा मच्छरैश्छिन्नं देहं स्वर्गाहि मां जहि । १९ ।

While Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) was thus contemplating, there presently alighted from the heavens two chariots, possessing the effulgence of the sun and (each) accompanied by a charioteer and fitted with (necessary) appurtenances (such as armour and ensign). (11) There also appeared of their own accord eternal divine weapons (of the Lord). Perceiving them, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Controller of the senses) immediately spoke to Saṅkarṣaṇa (as follows):—(12) "See, noble Brother, the calamity that has come upon the Yadus, of whom You are the Guardian, O Lord! Here is Your chariot come, as well as Your favourite weapons (the plough, pestle and so on). (13) Mounting the vehicle, sweep off this army and completely deliver Your people (thereby) from the disaster (that stares them in the face). Surely to this end is directed Our descent, which brings happiness to the virtuous, O Lord! (14) Remove the earth's burden going by the name of the twenty-three Akṣauhiṇis." Having thus fully deliberated, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the two Scions of Daśārha) rode out of the city in their respective chariots, clad in armour and armed with Their own weapons and surrounded by a very small detachment. Coming out of the city into the open land, Śrī Hari, who had Dārūka for His charioteer, blew His conch (thereby challenging the enemy to encounter Them). (15-16) From that followed a shivering occasioned by terror in the heart of the enemy's ranks. Looking intently at the two (divine) Brothers, Jarāsandha (the ruler of the Magadhas) said to Them, "O Kṛṣṇa, the vilest among men, for very shame I do not wish to fight with you, a youngster, (especially) when you are alone. (No,) I am not going to have an encounter with you, O stupid fellow, who remained concealed (so long); (therefore), get away, O slayer of your (own) maternal uncle! (17-18) If there is an itching in you (for a combat), O Balarāma, offer battle to me and have patience (to see the result). Casting off your body torn with my shafts, (either) ascend to heaven or slay me (if you can). (19)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

न वै शूरा विकल्पन्ते दर्शयन्त्येव पौरुषम् । न गृहीमो वचो राजन्नातुरस्य मुमुर्षतः । २० ।

The glorious Lord replied : The valiant never brag; they only exhibit their manliness. We do not (however) take your words to heart, O knig, full of grief as you are (over the death of your son-in-law, Kāṁsa) and about to die. (20)

श्रीशुक उवाच

जरासुतस्तावभिसृत्य माधवौ महाबलौधेन बलीयसाऽऽवृणोत् ।
 ससैन्ययानध्वजवाजिसारथी सूर्यानिर्लौ वायुरिवाभ्रेणुभिः । २१ ।
 सुपर्णतालध्वजचिह्नितौ रथावलक्ष्यन्त्यो हरिरामयोर्मृधे ।
 स्त्रियः पुराड्डालकहर्म्यगोपुरं समाश्रिताः संमुमुहुः शुचार्दिताः । २२ ।
 हरिः परानीकपयोमुचां मुहुः शिलीमुखाल्बुल्वणवर्षपीडितम् ।
 स्वसैन्यमालोक्य सुरासुरार्चितं व्यस्फूर्जयच्छाङ्गैः शरासनोत्तमम् । २३ ।
 गृह्णन् निषङ्गादथ सन्दधच्छरान् विकृष्य मुञ्चच्छितबाणपूगान् ।
 निघ्नन् रथान् कुञ्जरवाजिपत्नीन् निरन्तरं यद्वदलातचक्रम् । २४ ।
 निर्भिन्नकुम्भाः करिणो निपेतुरनेकशोऽश्वा शरवृष्णकन्धराः ।
 रथा हताश्वध्वजसूतनायकाः पदातयश्छिन्नभुजोरुकन्धराः । २५ ।
 संछिद्यमानद्विपदेभवाजिनामङ्गप्रसूताः शतशोऽसुरापागाः ।
 भुजाहयः पूरुषशीर्षकच्छपा हतद्विपद्वीपहयग्रहाकुलाः । २६ ।
 करोरुमीना नरकेशशैवला धनुस्तरङ्गायुधगुल्मसङ्कुलाः ।
 अच्छरिकावर्तभयानका महामणिप्रवेकाभरणाश्मशर्कराः । २७ ।
 प्रवर्तिता भीरुभयावहा मृधे मनस्विनां हर्षकरीः परस्परम् ।
 विनिघ्नतारिन् मुसलेन दुर्मदान् सङ्कर्षणेनापरिमयेतेजसा । २८ ।
 बलं तदङ्गाणवदुर्गभैरवं दुरन्तपारं मगधेन्द्रपालितम् ।
 क्षयं प्रणीतं वसुदेवपुत्रयोर्विक्रीडितं तज्जगदीशयोः परम् । २९ ।
 स्थित्युद्भवान्तं भुवनत्रयस्य यः समीहतेऽनन्तगुणः खलीलया ।
 न तस्य चित्रं परपक्षनिग्रहस्तथापि मर्यानुविधस्य वण्यते । ३० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Marching towards Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the two Scions of Madhu), Jarāsandha (the foster-son of the demoness Jarā*, who had joined the two halves of his body into one) surrounded Them, including Their troops, vehicles, flags, horses and charioteers, with a very powerful and huge multitude of troops even as a tempest would envelop the sun and a fire with clouds and particles of dust respectively. (21) Stricken with grief not to perceive on the battle-field the chariots of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, distinguished with ensigns bearing the emblems severally of Garuḍa (the king of birds, the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu) and a palmyra tree, the women (of Mathurā), who had climbed up to the attics (on the fort) and (tops of) mansions and gates of the city, fell into a swoon. (22) Seeing His own (small) force oppressed with the formidable shower of shafts repeatedly discharged by clouds in the shape of hostile troops. Śrī Hari twanged His excellent Śārngīa bow, esteemed by the gods and demons (alike). (23) Taking arrows out of His quiver and fitting them (to the bow), pulling the string (of the bow) at full length and discharging volleys of sharp arrows and striking down chariots, elephants, horses and foot-soldiers (on all sides) without interval, the Lord whirled as a revolving fire-brand. (24) Elephants fell dead with the frontal globes on their foreheads plit up; horses (too) dropped dead in large numbers with their necks cut off with shafts; chariots toppled down with their horses, ensigns, charioteers and masters struck down, and foot-soldiers fell prostrate with their arms, thighs and necks severed. (25) On the field of battle were set flowing in hundreds streams of blood issued from the bodies of foot-soldiers, elephants and horses that were being mowed down—streams in which arms (of fallen soldiers) floated like (aquatic) serpents, the heads of men like tortoises, their hands and thighs like fishes, the locks of men like duck-weeds and their excellent and big gems and ornaments like gravel and stones. The streams were thick with shoals in the shape of killed elephants and alligators in the shape of slain horses; (nay,) they were full of waves in the shape of bows and bushes in the shape of (other) weapons, and looked terrible with eddies in the shape of shields (or wheels). They brought terror to cowards and encouragement to the valiant of one army to give battle to the other. By Śarikaṣṇa (Balarāma) of immeasurable prowess, even as He was (busy) annihilating the vainglorious enemies with His pestle, was brought to destruction (the remnant of) that force, led by Jarāsandha (the king of the Magadhas), (even) though it was hard to cross and fearful like the ocean and unfathomable (in prowess) and endless (in extent) O dear Parikṣit! That was (however) a mere amusing play on the part of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma (the two sons of Vasudeva), the Rulers of the universe. (26—29) The (aforesaid) discomfiture of the enemy's forces is no wonder on the part of the Lord who carries on the (processes of) creation, preservation and annihilation of (all) the three worlds by way of His (divine) sport, endowed as He is with endless attributes. Still the story is (being) told (at some length) as of Him who imitates the ways of mortals (and fought like two Kṣatriya) youths though capable of destroying any army whatsoever in a twinkling by mere will). (30)

जग्राह विरथं रामो जरासन्धं महाबलम् । हतानीकावशिष्टासु सिंहः सिंहमिवौजसा । ३१ ।

बध्यमानं हतारति पार्श्वारुणमानुषैः । वारयापास गोविन्दस्तेन कार्यचिकीर्षया । ३२ ।

स मुक्तो लोकनाथाभ्यां ब्रीडितो वीरसंमतः । तपसे कृतसङ्कल्पो वारितः पथि राजभिः । ३३ ।

वाक्यैः पवित्रार्थपदैर्नयनैः प्राकृतैरपि । स्वकर्मबन्धप्राप्तौष्यं यदुभित्ते पराभवः । ३४ ।

हृतेषु सर्वानीकेषु नृपो बार्हद्रथस्तदा । उपेक्षितो भगवता मगधान् दुर्मना ययौ । ३५ ।

(Even) as a lion would seize another with force, Balarāma caught hold of Jarāsandha, who though very powerful, had lost his chariot and was left (alone) with his life, his (entire) force having been wiped out. (31) With intent to accomplish His (own) work (of concentrating all undesirable elements) through him Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) prevented his being bound (by Balarāma) with the cords of Varuṇa as well as with human ropes, although he had (himself) killed (numberless redoubtable) foes (in the past). (32) Let go by Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma (the two Lords of the universe) and (therefore) abashed, Jarāsandha (who was honoured by the valiant) resolved upon austerities but was stopped on the way by (other) kings (such as his friend and associate Śiśupāla, the ruler of the Cedis and another sworn enemy of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, though related to Him by blood) by means of expressions consisting of words bearing sacred import and even worldly counsels saying "This discomfiture at the hands of the Yadus has been sustained by you through the binding nature of your own (past) actions." (33-34) Ignored by the Lord on all his battalions having been wiped out, King Jarāsandha (son of Bhadratha) withdrew dispirited to the Magadh territory (his own dominions). (35)

मुकुन्दोऽप्यक्षतबलो निस्तीर्णारिबलार्णवः । विकीर्यमाणः कुसुमैस्त्रिदशैरनुमोदितः । ३६ ।
 माथुरैरुपसङ्गम्य विज्वरैर्मुदितात्मभिः । उपगीयमानविजयः सूतमागधवन्दिभिः । ३७ ।
 शङ्खदुन्दुभयो नेतुर्भेरीतूर्यगनेकशः । वीणावेणुमुदङ्गानि पुरं प्रविशति प्रभौ । ३८ ।
 सिक्तमार्गा हृष्टजनां पताकाभिरलङ्कृताम् । निर्घृष्टां ब्रह्मघोषेण कौतुकाबद्धतोरणाम् । ३९ ।
 निच्रीयमानो नारीभिर्माल्यदध्यक्षताङ्कुरैः । निरीक्ष्यमाणः सस्नेहं प्रीत्युत्कलितलोचनैः । ४० ।
 आयोधनगतं वित्तमनन्तं वीरभूषणम् । यदुराजाय तत् सर्वमाहृतं प्रादिशत्प्रभुः । ४१ ।

Meeting the citizens of Mathurā, that had now been rid of (all) agony, and felt delighted at heart (and had now come out to greet and felicitate their Saviours), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) too returned—Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose army remained (completely) unscathed and who was applauded by the gods and was (also) being covered with flowers in that He had crossed without any effort the ocean of the enemy's forces, nay, whose victory was being celebrated by Śūtas (heralds), Māgadhas (bards) and Vāndis (panegyrists). (36-37) Conchs and drums, kettledrums and clarionets as well as lutes, flutes and clay tomtoms sounded (of themselves) while the Lord was entering the city, whose road had been sprinkled (with water), (nay) which was full of merry men, was decorated with flags and resonant with the chanting of Veda and which had ornamental arches erected all round by way of festivity. (38-39) Being strewn by women with flowers, curds unbroken grains of rice and sprouts, and lovingly regarded with eyes dilated through joy, the Lord presented to King Ugrasena (the ruler of the Yadus) all the untold wealth (found) lying on the field of battle and the jewellery of (killed) warriors, that had been brought by Him. (40-41)

एवं सप्तदशकृत्वस्तावत्यक्षौहिणीबलः । युयुधे मागधो राजा यदुभिः कृष्णपालितैः । ४२ ।
 अक्षिण्वंस्तद्वलं सर्वं वृणयः कृष्णतेजसा । हतेषु स्वेष्टनीकेषु त्यक्तोऽयादरिभिरूपः । ४३ ।
 अष्टादशमसंश्राम आगामिनि तदन्तरा । नारदप्रेषितो वीरो यवनः प्रत्यदृश्यत । ४४ ।
 सरोध मथुरामेव तिसृभिर्मल्लैश्चकोटिभिः । नृलोके चाप्रतिद्वन्द्वो वृष्णीकुत्वाऽऽत्मसम्मितान् । ४५ ।

Followed (each time) by an army consisting of the same number of (viz., twenty-three) Akṣauhiṇis, King Jarāsandha (the ruler of Magadha) fought in this way (as many as) seventeen times with the Yadus, who were protected by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (and were therefore invincible). (42) Endowed (however) with the (inexhaustible and unequalled) might of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Vṛṣṇis annihilated his entire force. Let off by the Yadus (his enemies) on his troops having been killed, the monarch withdrew (to his capital). (43) While the eighteenth encounter was yet to come, Kālayavana (a Yavana hero), despatched by the sage Nārada, appeared (on the scene) during the interval. (44) Having heard (from the mouth of Nārada,* of whom he had enquired the names of foremost warriors on the earth's surface) of the Yadus as being his equals (in prowess), Kālayavana, who had no rival among men, came and besieged Mathurā with thirty millions of Mlecchas (non-Aryans or barbarians). (45)

तं दृष्ट्वाचिन्तयत् कृष्णः सङ्कषणसहायवान् । अहो यदूनां वृजिनं प्राप्तं ह्युभयतो महत् । ४६ ।
 यवनोऽयं निरुधेऽस्मानद्य तावन्महाबलः । मागधोऽप्यद्य वा श्वो वा परश्वो वाऽऽगमिष्यति । ४७ ।
 आवधोर्युध्यतोरस्य यद्यागन्ता जरासुतः । बभूव वधिष्यत्यथवा नेष्यते स्वपुरं बली । ४८ ।
 तस्मादद्य विधास्यामो दुर्गं द्विपददुर्गमम् । तत्र ज्ञातीन् समाधाय यवनं घातयामहे । ४९ ।

इति सम्पन्न्य भगवान् दुर्गं द्वादशयोजनम् । अन्तःसमुद्रे नगरं कृत्स्नादुत्तमचीकरत् । ५० ।
 दृश्यते यत्र हि त्वाष्ट्रं विज्ञानं शिल्पनैपुणम् । रथ्याचत्वर्गवीथीभिर्यथावास्तु विनिर्मितम् । ५१ ।
 सुदृढमलोद्यानविचित्रोपवनान्वितम् । हेमभृङ्गैर्विद्विस्सृग्भिः स्फाटिकाट्टालगोपुरैः । ५२ ।
 राजतारकुटैः कोष्ठैर्हेमकुम्भैरलङ्कृतैः । रत्नकूटैर्गृहैर्हेमहामकरतस्थलैः । ५३ ।
 वास्तोष्पतीनां च गृहैर्वलभीभिश्च निर्मितम् । चातुर्वर्ण्यजनाकीर्णं यदुदेवगुहोल्लसत् । ५४ ।
 सुधर्मा पारिजातं च महेन्द्रः प्राहिणोद्धरे । यत्र चावस्थितो मय्यो मर्यदधर्मं युज्यते । ५५ ।
 श्यामैककर्णान् वरुणो हयाञ्छुक्लान् मनोजवान् । अष्टौ निधिपतिः कोशान् लोकेकपालो निजोदयान् । ५६ ।
 यद् यद् भगवता दत्तमाधिपत्यं स्वसिद्धये । सर्वं प्रत्यर्पयामासुर्हो भूमिगते नृप । ५७ ।
 तत्र योगप्रभावेण नीत्वा सर्वजनं हरिः । प्रजापालेन रामेण कृष्णः समनुमन्त्रितः ।
 निर्जगाम पुरद्वारात् पद्ममाली निरासुधः । ५८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे दुर्गनिवेदानं नाम पञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ५० ।

Seeing him, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who enjoyed the companionship of Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarāma), thought (as follows): "Oh, a great calamity has surely overtaken the Yadus from both sides (viz., Kālayavana and Jarāsandha). This Yavana, who is followed by a huge army, has certainly invested us today. (And) Jarāsandha (the ruler of Magadha) will also come either today or tomorrow or the day after (at the latest). (46-47) If Jarāsandha (the foster-son of Jarā, the demoness) comes while We are both (engaged in) contending with this fellow, the mighty Jarāsandha will (either) make short work of our relations or take them away (as captives) to his own capital. (48) Therefore, we shall this (very) day construct a citadel which will be difficult of access to men (lit., bipeds) and, having ensconced our relations there, shall (return and) have the Yavana killed (by strategem)."^{*} (49) Having deliberated thus, the Lord caused a fortress to be built in the (western) sea (by Viśwakarmā, the architect of the gods) as well as a city (inside the fortress), extending over (an area of) twelve Yojanas (96 miles) and containing all wonderful things—a city in which expert knowledge of architecture (a science attributed to Twaṣṭā, the architect of the gods) as well as (unique) masonic skill stood revealed, and which was specially constructed with roads, streets and quadrangles (strictly) conforming to the site (assigned to them in standard works on architecture). (50-51) It was (duly) provided with gardens consisting of celestial trees and creepers as well as with wonderful groves and was built (according to a definite plan) with attics and gateways of crystal touching the (very) heavens with their domes of gold, barns of silver and brass adorned with gold pitchers, houses of gold with tops of jewels and floors of emerald, temples dedicated to the deities presiding over the foundation of houses and home-steads etc., and wooden sheds on the roofs of houses. The city was crowded with men belonging to the four orders of society and shone forth with palaces belonging to the rulers of the Yadus (Ugrasena and Vasudeva, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (52—54) The great Indra sent down (from heaven as a present) for Śrī Kṛṣṇa (his famous assembly hall known by the name of) Sudharmā as well as the Pārijāta tree (one of the five well-known species of celestial trees), stationed under the shade of which a mortal does not remain tied down to the characteristics of mortals (viz., hunger and thirst, old age and death, grief and infatuation). (55) Varuṇa (the god of water) sent down (milk-) white horses with one dark ear and swift as thought; Kubera (the lord of treasures), the eight treasures; and the guardians of (other) spheres, the riches peculiar to themselves. (56) Śrī Hari Himself having come down to the earth (in the form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), O protector of men, others (such as the Siddhas too) returned (to Him) in toto whatever lordship had been granted (in their favour) by the Lord for the (successful) execution of their charge. (57) Transferring all the people (of Mathurā) to that retreat by dint of Yoga (His supernatural power), and having duly conferred with Balarāma, who was looking after (the rest of) the people (at Mathurā), Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Dispeller of the agony of His devotees, issued out of the city gate, wearing a garland of lotuses and unarmed. (58)

* The Lord did not kill the Yavana himself obviously because he had been got as a boon from Lord Śiva, who had further ordained that the boy would prove a terror to the Yadus. (Vide Viṣṇu-Purāṇa V.xiii. 1—4)

Thus ends the fiftieth discourse entitled "The Lord ensconces Himself in a fortress", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LI

(Kālayavana gets burnt and) King Mucukunda glorifies the Lord

श्रीशुक उवाच

तं विलोक्य विनिष्क्रान्तमुज्जिहानमिवोदुपम् । दर्शनीयतमं श्यामं पीतकौशेयवाससम् । १ ।
 श्रीवत्सवक्षसं भ्राजत्कौस्तुभामुक्तकन्धरम् । पृथुदीर्घचतुर्बाहुं नवकङ्गारुणेक्षणम् । २ ।
 नित्यप्रमुदितं श्रीमत्सुकपोलं शुचिस्मितम् । मुखारविन्दं बिभ्राणं स्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलम् । ३ ।
 वासुदेवो ह्ययमिति पुमाञ्श्रीवत्सलाञ्छनः । चतुर्भुजोऽरविन्दाक्षो वनमाल्यतिसुन्दरः । ४ ।
 लक्षणैर्नारदप्रोक्तैर्नान्यो भवितुमर्हति । निरायुधश्चलन् पदभ्यां योत्स्येऽनेन निरायुधः । ५ ।
 इति निश्चित्य यवनः प्राद्रवन्तं पराङ्मुखम् । अन्वधावजिघृक्षुस्तं दुरापमपि योगिनाम् । ६ ।
 हस्तप्राप्तमिवात्मानं हरिणा स पदे पदे । नीतो दर्शयता दूरं यवनेशोऽद्रिकन्दरम् । ७ ।
 पलायनं यदुकुले जातस्य तव नोचितम् । इति क्षिपन्ननुगतो नैनं प्रापाहताशुभः । ८ ।
 एवं क्षिप्तोऽपि भगवान् प्राविशद् गिरिकन्दरम् । सोऽपि प्रविष्टस्तत्रान्यं शयानं ददृशे नरम् । ९ ।
 नन्वसौ दूरमानीय शेते मामिह साधुवत् । इति मत्वाच्युतं मूढस्तं पदा समताडयत् । १० ।
 स उत्थाय चिरं सुप्तः शनैरुन्मील्य लोचने । दिशो विलोकयन् पार्श्वं तमद्राक्षीदवस्थितम् । ११ ।
 स तावत्स्य रुष्टस्य दृष्टिपातेन भारत । देहजेनाग्निना दग्धो भस्मसादभवत् क्षणात् । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : The Yavana (Kālayavana) beheld Śrī Kṛṣṇa fully emerged (from the city gate) like the rising moon—most charming to look at, dark brown (of hue), clad in yellow silk, with a white curl of hair (known by the name of Śrīvatsa) on His bosom and His neck adorned with the brilliant Kaustubha gem, endowed with four massive and long arms and eyes ruddy as a fresh-blown lotus, and wearing a lotus-like face, ever full of excessive joy, with beautiful and splendid cheeks and a bright smile and adorned with brilliant alligator-shaped ear-rings. (1—3) Concluding from the characteristics pointed out by Nārada that this most handsome man with four arms and lotus-like eyes and distinguished with the mark of Śrīvatsa and adorned with a garland of sylvan flowers must be Śrī Kṛṣṇa (son of Vasudeva) and none else, and resolving that since He was armless and was going on foot, he (too) must encounter Him unarmed (and unmounted), the Yavana pursued Him with intent to overtake Him while He was running fast with His back turned against him although He is not within easy reach even of those adept in Yoga. (4—6) The Yavana chief was lured far away to a mountain cave by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who showed Himself at every step as though within grasp. (7) Though (still) at His heels, reproaching Him in the words "It does not become you, born (as you are) in the race of Yadu, to run away (before an adversary)", he could not get at Him, his evil destiny (that prevented him from touching the Lord's sacred person) having not (yet) been exhausted. (8) Even though censured in this way, the Lord entered deep into the mountain cave. Having penetrated it himself, the Yavana found another man lying asleep there. (9) "Surely, having brought me (so) far away, the fellow is lying here like an innocent man !" Saying thus to himself and taking him to be Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), the stupid fellow struck him freely with his foot. (10) Waking up and slowly opening his eyes, the man, who had been long asleep, gazed all round and beheld the Yavana standing by his side. (11) Burnt by the fire produced out of the Yavana's (own) body even as the look of the lying man—who felt enraged (on his having been awakened so rudely and abruptly)—fell on him, he was reduced to ashes in an instant, O Parīkṣit (a scion of Bharata)! (12)

राजोवाच

को नाम स पुमान् ब्रह्मन् कस्य किंवीर्य एव च । कस्माद् गुहां गतः शिष्ये किन्तेजो यवनार्दनः । १३ ।

The king said : What was that man called, who killed the Yavana (thus), O holy Brāhmaṇa, and to whose race did he belong ? What (kind of) prowess did he possess in reality ? Wherefore did he go to sleep in the (said) cave and whose seed was he ? (13)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स इक्ष्वाकुकुले जतो मान्धातुतनयो महान् । मुचुकुन्द इति ख्यातो ब्रह्मण्यः सत्यसङ्गरः । १४ ।

स याचितः सुरगणैरिन्द्राद्यैरात्मरक्षणे । असुरेभ्यः परित्रस्तैस्तद्रक्षां सोऽकरोच्चिरम् । १५ ।

लब्ध्वा गुहं ते स्वःपालं मुचुकुन्दमथाब्रुवन् । राजन् विरमतां कुच्छाद् भवान्नः परिपालनात् । १६ ।

नरलोके परित्यज्य राज्यं निहतकण्टकम् । अस्मान् पालयतो वीर कामास्ते सर्व उञ्जिताः । १७ ।

सुता महिष्यो भवतो ज्ञातयोऽमात्यमन्त्रिणः । प्रजाश्च तुल्यकालीया नाधुना सन्ति कालिताः । १८ ।

कालो बलीयान् बलिनां भगवानीश्वरोऽव्ययः । प्रजाः कालयते क्रीडन् पशुपालो यथा पशून् । १९ ।

वरं वृणीष्व भद्रं ते ऋते कैवल्यमद्य नः । एक एवेश्वरस्तस्य भगवान् विष्णुरव्ययः । २० ।

एवमुक्तः स वै देवानभिवन्द्य महायशः । अशयिष्ट गुहाविष्टो निद्रया देवदत्तया । २१ ।

स्वायं यातं यस्तु मध्ये बोधयेत्त्वामचेतनः । स त्वया दृष्टमात्रस्तु भस्मीभवतु तत्क्षणात् । २२ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Born in the race of Ikṣvāku and an eminent son of Mandhātā, he was known as Mucukunda and was not only (supremely) devoted to the Brāhmaṇas but true to his promise (too). (14) He was entreated for their protection by the hosts of gods led by Indra, who were terribly afraid of the demons; and (accordingly) he ensured their safety for a long time. (15) Having found in Guha (the younger son of Lord Śiva), a guardian of heaven, they now said to Mucukunda, "O king, cease you (now) from the uphill task of protecting us on all sides. (16) Since you have been (busy) protecting us (all along), having completely renounced your kingdom on the mortal plane—which had (all) its enemies wiped out (by you)—all your enjoyments have ceased. (17) Nay,) your sons and wives and (other) relations, ministers and counsellors, and even the people of your time survive no more having been swept away (by the cruel hand of Death). (18) The Time-Spirit is mightier than the mighty; (nay,) it is the almighty and immortal Lord (Himself). Like a herdsman driving a herd it sweeps away created beings in (mere) sport. (19) May good betide you, ask of us today any boon other than Liberation; (for) the imperishable Lord Viṣṇu is the sole authority capable of granting it." (20) Thus addressed (by them), King Mucukunda of great renown respectfully saluted the gods and, entering deep into the (aforesaid) cave*, and overpowered by (a very long spell of) sleep, vouchsafed by the gods (in response to his prayer); lay down to repose (there). (21) (The gods further said to him,) "Let him, however, who thoughtlessly awakens you, when fallen into sleep, in the middle, be instantly reduced to mere ashes when but seen by you." (22)

यवने भस्मसाक्षीते भगवान् सात्वतर्षभः। आत्मानं दर्शयामास मुचुकुन्दाय धीमते। २३।
तमालोक्य घनश्यामं पीतकौशेयवाससम्। श्रीवत्सवक्षसं भ्राजत्कौस्तुभेन विराजितम्। २४।
चतुर्भुजं रोचमानं वैजयन्त्या च मालया। चारुप्रसन्नवदनं स्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलम्। २५।
प्रेक्षणीयं नूलोकस्य सानुरागस्मितेक्षणम्। अपीच्यवयसं मत्तमृगेन्द्रोदारविक्रमम्। २६।
पर्यपृच्छन्महाबुद्धिस्तेजसा तस्य धर्षितः। शङ्कितः शनकै राजा दुर्धर्षमिव तेजसा। २७।

On the Yavana having (thus) been converted into ashes, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the foremost of the Yadus) showed Himself to the wise Mucukunda. (23) Beholding the Lord—dark-brown as a cloud, clad in yellow silk, bearing the mark of Śrīvatsa on His breast, irradiated with the brilliant Kaustubha gem, endowed with four arms, splendored with a garland of sylvan flowers, wearing a lovely and cheerful countenance, and adorned with a pair of shining alligator-shaped ear-rings, captivating to the sight of human beings, enlivened with a loving smile and endearing glances, possessed of a charming youth, walking with the charming gait of a proud lion, and formidable as it were by His glory—and overwhelmed by His lustre, the king who was possessed of a great wisdom, was filled with awe and slowly inquired of Him (as follows). (24—27)

मुचुकुन्द उवाच

को भवानिह सम्प्राप्तो विपिने गिरिगह्वरे। पद्भ्यां पद्मपलाशाभ्यां विचरस्युस्कण्टके। २८।
किंस्वित्तेजस्विनां तेजो भगवान् वा विभावसुः। सूर्यः सोमो महेन्द्रो वा लोकपालोऽपरोऽपि वा। २९।
मन्ये त्वां देवदेवानां त्रयाणां पुरुषर्षभम्। यद् बाधसे गुहाध्वान्तं प्रदीपः प्रभया यथा। ३०।
शुश्रूषतामव्यलीकमस्माकं नरपुङ्गव। स्वजन्म कर्म गोत्रं वा कथ्यतां यदि रोचते। ३१।
वयं तु पुरुषव्याघ्र ऐश्वकाः क्षत्रबन्धवः। मुचुकुन्द इति प्रोक्तो यौवनाश्रितजः प्रभो। ३२।
चिरप्रजागरश्रान्तो निद्रयोपहतेन्द्रियः। शयेऽस्मिन् विजने कामं केनाप्युत्थापितोऽधुना। ३३।
सोऽपि भस्मीकृतो नूनमात्मीयेनैव पाप्मना। अनन्तरं भवाञ्छ्रीमान् लक्षितोऽमित्रशतानः। ३४।
तेजसा तेऽविषह्येण भूरि द्रष्टुं न शक्नुमः। हतौजसो महाभाग माननीयोऽसि देहिनाम्। ३५।
एवं सन्भाषितो राज्ञा भगवान् भूतभावनः। प्रत्याह प्रहसन् वाण्या मेघनादगभीरया। ३६।

Mucukunda submitted : Who may you be, arrived in the mountain cave, and how is it that you roam about in this forest abounding in thorns with your feet tender as the petals of a lotus ? (28) Are you the effulgence (incarnate) of the effulgent, or the glorious fire-god, the sun-god, the moon-god or the mighty Indra (the ruler of paradise) or any other Lokapāla (guardian of a particular sphere) ? (29) I consider You to be (no other than) Lord Viṣṇu, the Supreme Person) out of the three rulers of gods (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) as (is clear from

* The cave is located to the south of Mathurā near Dholpur in the State of Rajasthan.

the fact that) You are dispelling the darkness of this cave (as well as the darkness of ignorance enveloping my mind) by Your (very) effulgence even as a lamp. (30) May You, O Jewel among men, tell us—who are sincerely eager to hear—about your birth (pedigree), doings or family name, if it pleases you. (31) We, for our part, O Tiger among men, are Kṣatriyas by caste and belong to the race of Ikṣvāku. (Personally) I am sprung from the loins of Māndhātā (son of Yuvanāśwa), and called by the name of Mucukunda, O Lord. (32) Wearied with vigil extending over long ages (while engaged in protecting the gods against the onslaughts of the demons) and with my senses overpowered by sleepiness, I had lain asleep in this lonely cave undisturbed till I was aroused (just) now by someone (not known to me). (33) He too has been reduced to ashes surely by his own sin. Immediately afterwards was noticed (by me) Your glorious Self, the Destroyer of foes. (34) Dazzled by Your unbearable effulgence, we are unable to look at You for a long time, O highly blessed One! (All the same we can easily perceive that) You deserve to be honoured by (all) embodied souls. (35) Respectfully addressed in these words by the king, the Lord, who is the Protector of (all) created beings, heartily laughed and replied (as follows) in a voice deep as the rumbling of clouds. (36)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

जन्मकर्माभिधानानि सन्ति मेऽङ्ग सहस्रशः । न शक्यन्तेऽनुसंख्यातुमन्तत्त्वान्मयापि हि । ३७ ।
 क्वचिद् रजसि विममे पार्थिवान्युजन्मभिः । गुणकर्माभिधानानि न मे जन्मानि कर्हिचित् । ३८ ।
 कालत्रयोपपन्नानि जन्मकर्माणि मे नृप । अनुक्रमन्तो वैवान्तं गच्छन्ति परमर्थयः । ३९ ।
 तथाव्यद्यतनान्यङ्ग शृणुष्व गदतो मम । विज्ञापितो विरिञ्चेन पुराहं धर्ममुत्तये ।

भूमेर्भराचमाणा नामसुराणां क्षयाय च । ४० ।

अवतीर्णो यदुकुले गृह आनकदुन्दुभेः । वदन्ति वासुदेवेति वसुदेवसुतं हि माम् । ४१ ।
 कालनेमिर्हतः कंसः प्रलम्बाद्याश्च सदद्विषः । अयं च यवनो दग्धो राजस्ते तिग्मचक्षुषा । ४२ ।
 सोऽहं तवानुग्रहार्थं गुहामेतामुपागतः । प्रार्थितः प्रचुरं पूर्वं त्वयाहं भक्तवत्सलः । ४३ ।
 वरान् वृणीष्व राजर्षे सर्वान् कामान् ददामि ते । मां प्रपन्नो जनः कश्चिन्म भूयोऽर्हति शोचिन्तुम् । ४४ ।

The glorious Lord said : My descents, exploits and appellations, O beloved one, number thousands and cannot actually be counted even by Me (omniscient as I am) because of their being infinite (in number). (37) Someone might have at any time (in the past) been able through many lives to count the particles of dust on the earth; but one could never reckon My excellences, exploits and names or (even) My descents. (38) The greatest sages (like Nārada and Sanaka) cannot reach the end of My descents and doings relating to the past, present and future if they (try to) enumerate them in order. (39) Nevertheless, O beloved monarch, hear from Me, as I tell you, of those relating to the present day. Prayed to of yore by Brahmā (the creator) for the vindication of virtue and the extermination of the demons that were proving a (veritable) burden to the earth, I have appeared in the house of Ānakadundubhi (Vasudeva) in the race of Yadu. They call Me by the name of Vāsudeva because of My being the most distinguished son of Vasudeva (although I have been known by this name even before in a different sense of course). (40-41) (As regards My exploits) the demon Kālanemi, born as Kamsa, has been killed (by Me), as well as Pralamba and other enemies of the righteous. And this Yavana has been burnt to death (by Me), O king, through your fiery eyes. (42) Having been repeatedly entreated by you before, I the said Vāsudeva, have come to this cave (but) for the purpose of showering My grace on you, fond as I am of My devotees. (43) Ask boons of your choice (of Me), O royal sage; I shall confer on you all your desired objects. No body who has sought Me for protection will have cause to grieve any more. (44)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्तं प्रणम्याह मुचुकुन्दो मुदान्वितः । ज्ञात्वा नारायणं देवं गर्गावक्यमनुस्मरन् ॥४५॥

Śrī Śuka continued : Recollecting the prediction* of sage Garga (the elder) and realizing Śrī Kṛṣṇa to be (non else than) Lord Nārāyaṇa, when addressed in these words (by the Lord), Mucukunda bowed low to Him and, full of joy, spoke (as follows). (45)

मुचुकुन्द उवाच

विमोहितोऽयं जन ईश मायया त्वदीयया त्वां न भजत्यर्थदृक् ।
 सुखाय दुःखप्रभवेषु सज्जते गृहेषु योषित् पुरुषश्च वञ्चितः ॥४६॥
 लब्ध्वा जनो दुर्लभमत्र मानुषं कथञ्चिद्व्यङ्गमयत्नतोऽनघ ।
 पादारविन्दं न भजत्यसन्मतिर्गृहान्धकूपे पतितो यथा पशुः ॥४७॥
 मयैष कालोऽजित निष्फलो गतो राज्यश्रियोन्नद्धमदस्य भूपतेः ।
 मर्यात्सबुद्धेः सुतदारकोशभृशसज्जमानस्य दुरन्तचिन्तया ॥४८॥
 कलेवरोऽस्मिन् घटकुड्यसन्निधे निरूढमानो नरदेव इत्यहम् ।
 वृतो रथेभाश्वपदात्यनीकपैर्गा पर्यटंस्वागणयन् सुदुर्मदः ॥४९॥
 प्रमत्तमुद्दरितकृत्यचिन्तया प्रवृद्धलोभं विषयेषु लालसम् ।
 त्वमप्रमत्तः सहसाभिपद्यसे क्षुल्लेलिहानोऽहिरिवाखुमत्तकः ॥५०॥
 पुरा रथैर्हेमपरिष्कृतैश्चरन् मतङ्गजैर्वा नरदेवसंज्ञितः ।
 स एव कालेन दुरत्ययेन ते कलेवरो विदकुमिभस्मसंज्ञितः ॥५१॥
 निर्जित्य दिक्चक्रमभूतविग्रहो वरासनस्थः समराजवन्दितः ।
 गृहेषु मैथुन्यसुखेषु योषितां क्रीडामृगः पूरुष ईश नीयते ॥५२॥
 करोति कर्माणि तपस्सुनिष्ठितो निवृत्तभोगस्तदपेक्षया ददत् ।
 पुनश्च भूयेयमहं स्वराडिति प्रवृद्धतर्पो न सुखाय कल्पते ॥५३॥
 भवापवर्गो भ्रमतो यदा भवैज्जनस्य तर्ह्यच्युत सत्समागमः ।
 सत्सङ्गमो यर्हि तदैव सङ्गतौ परावरेषो त्वयि जायते मतिः ॥५४॥
 मन्ये ममानुग्रह ईश ते कृतो राज्यानुबन्धापगमो यदृच्छया ।
 यः प्रार्थ्यते साधुभिरकचर्यया वने विविक्षद्विरखण्डभूमिपैः ॥५५॥
 न कामयेऽन्यं तव पादसेवनादकिञ्चनप्रार्थ्यतमाद् वरं विभो ।
 आराध्य कस्त्वां ह्यपवर्गदं हरे वृणीत आयो वरमात्मबन्धनम् ॥५६॥
 तस्माद् विसृज्याशिष ईश सर्वतो रजस्तपःसत्त्वगुणानुबन्धनाः ।
 निरञ्जनं निर्गुणमद्वयं परं त्वां ज्ञप्तिमात्रं पुरुषं ब्रजाम्यहम् ॥५७॥

चिरमिह वृजिनारस्तप्यमानोऽनुतापैरवितृषषडभिप्रोऽलब्धशान्तिः कथञ्चित् ।

शरणद समुपेतस्वल्पदाञ्जं परात्मब्रभयमृतमशोकं पाहि मामपन्नमीश ॥५८॥

* Mucukunda was told by the sage Vṛddha Garga (the elder or senior Garga) that the Lord Himself would appear in the house of Vasudeva in the twenty-eighth round of Dvāpara Yuga in the course of the present Manvantara and that the king would have the rare and unique privilege of beholding Him and talking to Him.

Mucukunda prayed : Deluded by Your Mâyā (enchanting potency) and blind to the (highest) Reality (viz., Yourself), O Lord, this creature (man)—appearing (now) as male and (now as) female—does not worship You, but remains attached to the home, which is a (prolific) source of misery (alone), in search of happiness, of which (however) it is (ever) deprived. (46) Having somehow (by grace of God) secured without (any) effort birth—which is (so) difficult to attain—in this land (of Bhāratavarṣa) as a human being sound of body and mind (and therefore fit for devotions), O sinless Lord, man does not take refuge in Your lotus-feet, his mind being set on the pleasures of sense (which are unreal), and remains sunk in household life even like a beast fallen into a well overgrown with grass (and is unable to get out of it). (47) (All) this life of mine, O invincible Lord, has slipped in vain in endless anxiety, a ruler of the earth as I was with my pride puffed up by a royal fortune, viewing this mortal frame as my own self and remaining attached to children, wives, treasury and lands. (48) With the feeling about this body—which is as much apart from me as a jar or a wall—being my own self and a ruler of men, deeply rooted (in my mind), nay, traversing the earth in all directions, surrounded by generals commanding regiments of chariots, elephants, horses and foot-soldiers, and forgetting You (the Time-Spirit), I had grown very haughty. (49) Alert as the serpent that grabs a rat, licking the ends of its lips through hunger, You (appearing) as Death suddenly overtake the embodied soul that is utterly forgetful (of You), engrossed as it is in the thought of its (worldly) projects, and not only hankers after the pleasures of sense (even though its aspirations are thwarted at every step) but finds its thirst (for enjoyment) immensely aggravated (even as its aspirations are realized). (50) The same body which was formerly—while moving about in chariots adorned with gold ornaments or on (the back of) young elephants—bore the title of a ruler of men, (eventually) passes by the name of excrement (if left exposed and devoured by dogs, jackals or vultures and crows etc.) of worms (if interred) and of ashes (if cremated) when seized by You disguised as death, which is (so) hard to escape. (51) Having fully conquered all the (four) quarters, with all possibility of (a future) conflict precluded, and occupying a high seat (the exalted throne of a universal monarch) and hailed by monarchs that were (once) his equals, the man, O Lord, is led (hither and thither) as a toy-deer of young women in (the precincts of) the home, which offers (no other charm than) sexual pleasures. (52) Devoted heart and soul to austerities with all enjoyments ceased, and making gifts in the hope of (securing) such enjoyments (hereafter), he performs (virtuous) actions (in his present life) in order that he may be reborn as Indra (or as a universal monarch even in the life to come). He (however) whose thirst (for enjoyment) is (thus) fully developed is never able to enjoy (any) happiness (whatsoever). (53) When the end of (the cycle of) birth and death in the case of a soul undergoing transmigration is in sight, then (alone) his meeting with some saint takes place, O immortal Lord ! (And) when there is fellowship with a saint, then alone is engendered (a feeling of) devotion to You, the Refuge of saints and the Ruler of the high and the low. (54) I conclude that a (unique) favour has been done to me by You, O Lord, in that the shackles of sovereignty have fallen off my feet without (any) effort (on my part)—a consummation which is devoutly sought for by wise kings ruling over the entire globe and intending to retire into the woods with a vow to live (all) alone. (55) I do not covet any boon other than service to Your (sacred) feet—which is the highest blessing worth coveting in the eyes of those who have nothing to call their own, O almighty Lord ! For, having propitiated You, the Bestower of Liberation, O Hari, what wise man would ask (of You) a boon which is (only) calculated to bind the soul (further) ? (56) Therefore, rejecting, O Lord, all blessings associated with the qualities of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas (such as religious merit, worldly prosperity and the extermination of foes), I run (for protection) to You, the Supreme Person, who are pure consciousness free from (the taint of)

Māyā, (nay,) above the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and one without a second. (57) Long afflicted in this world with the fruits of actions and being tormented with the impressions left on the mind by those actions, nay, with my six (internal) foes (in the shape of the five senses of perception and the mind) not (yet) free from thirst and having (therefore) not (so far) been able to secure peace (of mind), I have somehow duly reached, O Bestower of Knowledge concerning Yourself, Your lotus Feet, which are divorced from fear and grief and which are all truth, O Supreme Spirit. (Pray.) protect me, O Lord, distressed as I am. (58)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

सार्वभौम महाराज मतिस्ते विमलोज्जिताः। वरैः प्रलोभितस्यापि न कार्मर्विहता यतः। ५९।
 प्रलोभितो वरैर्यत्त्वमप्रमादाय विद्धि तत्। न धीर्मय्येकभक्तानामाशीर्भिर्भिद्यते क्वचित्। ६०।
 युञ्जानानामभक्तानां प्राणायामादिभिर्मनः। अक्षीणवासनं राजन् दृश्यते पुनरुत्थितम्। ६१।
 विचरस्व - महीं कामं मय्यावेशितमानसः। अस्त्वेव नित्यदा तुभ्यं भक्तिर्मय्यनपायिनी। ६२।
 क्षात्रधर्मस्थितो जन्तून् न्यवधीर्मुगयादिभिः। समाहितस्तत्तपसा जह्याघं मदुपाश्रितः। ६३।
 जन्मन्यनन्तरे राजन् सर्वभूतसुहृत्तमः। भूत्वा द्विजवरस्त्वं वै मामुपैष्यसि केवलम्। ६४।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे मुचुकुन्दस्तुतिर्नामकपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः। ५१।

The glorious Lord replied : O great king, O ruler of the entire globe, your mind is free from (all) impurities (in the shape of attachment, greed etc.) and powerful (capable of perceiving the highest truth) in that it could not be lured by (offers of) enjoyments, even though you were tempted with boons of your choice. (59) Know that it was to show (to the world) your vigilance (in the matter of choosing the right thing and rejecting the false) that you were tempted with boons. The judgment of those who are exclusively devoted to Me can never be perverted by (offers of) sensuous enjoyments (which are coveted by the world). (60) The mind of those other than devotees, even though they try to curb it through breath-control etc., is seen (to get) riotous again, its craving for enjoyment having not (yet) ceased (which is possible only through Devotion), O king ! (61) With your mind set on Me, wander the earth at pleasure. May your devotion to Me continue uninterrupted for ever as a matter of course. (62) Devoted to the duties of a Kṣatriya (viz., the protection of your subjects), you killed game (of various kinds) through hunting etc.; (therefore) looking upon Me as your asylum and collected (in mind), get rid of the sinful tendency (acquired through such practices) by recourse to asceticism. (63) Being reborn as a Brāhmaṇa (the foremost of the twice-born), most friendly to all created beings, in your (very) next incarnation, O Mucukunda, you will surely attain to Me, the Absolute. (64)

Thus ends the fifty-first discourse, entitled "Mucukunda's Eulogy (of the Lord)," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्विपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LI

311

Śrī Kṛṣṇa's withdrawal to Dwārakā; Balarāma's marriage; Rukmiṇī sends a Brāhmaṇa with a message to Śrī Kṛṣṇa

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थं सोऽनुगृहीतोऽङ्ग कृष्णेनेक्ष्वाकुनन्दनः । तं परिक्रम्य सन्नम्य निश्चक्राम गुहामुखात् । १ ।
 स वीक्ष्य क्षुल्लकान् मर्यान् पशून् वीरद्वनस्पतीन् । मत्वा कलियुगं प्राप्तं जगाम दिशमुत्तराम् । २ ।
 तपःश्रद्धायुतो धीरो निःसङ्गो मुक्तसंशयः । समाधाय मनः कृष्णे प्राविशद् गन्धमादनम् । ३ ।
 बदर्याश्रममासाद्य नरनारायणालयम् । सर्वद्वन्द्वसहः शान्तस्तपसाऽऽराधयद्धरिम् । ४ ।
 भगवान् पुनराब्रज्य पुरीं यवनवेष्टिताम् । हत्वा प्लेच्छबलं निन्ये तदीयं द्वारकां धनम् । ५ ।
 नीयमाने धने गोभिर्नृभिश्चान्युतचोदितैः । आजगाम जरासन्धस्त्रयोविंशत्यनीकपः । ६ ।
 विलोक्य वेगरभसं रिपुसैन्यस्य माधवौ । मनुष्यचेष्टामापन्नो राजन् दुदुवतुर्दुतम् । ७ ।
 विहाय वित्तं प्रचुरमभीतो धीरुभीतवत् । पदभ्यां पद्मपलाशाभ्यां चेरतुर्वहुयोजनम् । ८ ।
 पलायमानौ तौ दृष्ट्वा मागधः प्रहसन् बली । अन्वधावद् रथानीकैरीशोऽप्रमाणवित् । ९ ।
 प्रदुष्य दूरं संश्रान्तौ तुङ्गमारुहतां गिरिम् । प्रवर्षणाख्यं भगवान् नित्यदा यत्र वर्षति । १० ।
 गिरौ निलीनावाज्ञाय नाधिगम्य पदं नृप । ददाह गिरिमधोभिः सप्तन्तादग्निमुत्सृजन् । ११ ।
 तत उत्पत्य तरसा दह्यमानतटादुभौ । दर्शकयोजनोत्तुङ्गाग्निपेततुरधो भुवि । १२ ।
 अलक्ष्यमाणौ रिपुणा सानुगेन यदूतमौ । स्वपुरं पुनरायातौ समुद्रपरिखां नृप । १३ ।
 सोऽपि दग्धाविति मूषा मन्वानो बलकेशवौ । बलमाकृष्य सुमहम्मगधान् मागधो ययौ । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Thus blessed, O dear Parikṣit, by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Mucukunda, a scion of Ikṣvāku, went round Him (clockwise as a mark of respect) and, bowing low to Him, came out (into the open country) through the mouth of the cave. (1) Observing diminutive men, beasts, plants and trees and concluding the age of Kali to have set in, he proceeded in a northerly direction. (2) Full of faith in austerities, self-possessed, free from attachment, and concentrating his mind on Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Mucukunda, who had (all) his doubts cleared, entered deep into the forest on Mount Gandhamādana. (3) Reaching Badarikāśrama (so called because of its grove of jujube trees), containing the abode of (the divine sages) Nara and Nārāyaṇa, he sought the favour of Śrī Hari through asceticism, enduring all pairs of opposites (such as heat and cold) and remaining tranquil (at all times). (4) Going back to the city (of Mathurā), which continued to be beleaguered by the Yavanas, and wiping out the barbarian host, the Lord took away their wealth to Dwārakā. (5) While the treasure was (thus) being carried away on (the back of) oxen and men directed by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), Jarāsandha appeared (on the scene) leading an army consisting (as usual) of twenty-three Akṣauhiṇis. (6) Observing the impetuosity of the onrush of the enemy's host, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the two Scions of Madhu), who had adopted the ways of human beings, took to Their heels at once. (7) Leaving the immense spoils (uncared for), the two Brothers covered many a mile with Their feet, resembling lotus petals, as though terribly afraid, though (absolutely) fearless. (8) Laughing heartily to see Them flying (like cowards), the powerful Jarāsandha (the ruler of Magadha) pursued Them with the hosts of chariots, not knowing the greatness of the two almighty Brothers. (9) Having run fast for a long distance and (therefore apparently) fully exhausted, They (nevertheless) climbed up a lofty mountain bearing the (significant) name of Pravarṣaṇa, where the glorious Indra (the god of rain) perpetually rains. (10) Concluding Them to have hidden (somewhere) on the mountain and not knowing the (exact) place (of Their concealment), O protector of men, Jarāsandha set the (whole) mountain ablaze with the help of piles of wood (with which the mountain was girt on all sides), strewing fire all round. (11) Then, springing up with (great) impetuosity from the mountain-peak, which was ten and one Yojanas (or eighty-eight miles) high and whose sides were (all) burning, They descended on the plains (across the area occupied by the besieging army). (12) Not being perceived by the enemy (Jarāsandha) and his followers, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma (the two jewels of Yadu's race) came back to Their own city (Dwārakā), which had the sea for its moat, O protector of men ! (13) Falsely taking Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva) as burnt (to death), the aforesaid Jarāsandha (the Ruler of Magadha) too returned to Magadha taking (back with him) the very large army (brought by him to rout Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (14)

आनर्त्ताधिपतिः श्रीमान् रैवतो रेवतीं सुताम् । ब्रह्मणा चोदितः प्रादाद् बलायेति पुरोदितम् । १५ ।

भगवानपि गोविन्द उपयेमे कुरुद्वह । वैदर्भी भीष्मकसुतां श्रियो मात्रां स्वयंवरो । १६ ।

प्रमथ्य तरसा राज्ञः शाल्वादींश्चैव्यपक्षगान् । पश्यतां सर्वलोकानां ताक्ष्यं पुनः सुधामिव । १७ ।

Urged by Brahmā (the creator), the glorious Kakudmī (son of Revata), the suzerain lord of the Anartas (the modern Kathiawad or Saurashtra), gave away his daughter, Revatī, to Balarāma: this has already been narrated (by me in Book IX)*. (15) Having vanquished by dint of prowess the kings ranged on the side of Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi—a rival suitor of Rukmiṇī) the foremost of whom was Śālva, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) too, O Jewel among the Kurus, espoused in a choice-marriage Rukmiṇī (the princess of Vidarbha—the modern Berar), the daughter of Bhīṣmaka (the ruler of Vidarbha) and a part manifestation of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity, the principal Spouse of Lord Viṣṇu)—(even) as Garuḍa (son of Tarkṣa, a nickname of the sage Kaśyapa) carried away (the jar containing) nectar—while all people stood gazing. (16-17)

राजोवाच

भगवान् भीष्मकसुतां रुक्मिणीं रुचिराननाम् । राक्षसेन विधानेन उपयेम इति श्रुतम् । १८ ।

भगवञ्छ्रेतुमिच्छामि कृष्णस्यामिततेजसः । यथा मागधशाल्वादीन् जित्वा कन्यामुगाहरत् । १९ ।

ब्रह्मन् कृष्णकथाः पुण्या माध्वीलोकमलापहाः । को नु त्वयेत शृण्वानः श्रुतसो नित्यनूतनाः । २० ।

The king (Parikṣit) said : The Lord espoused Rukmiṇī, the daughter of Bhīṣmaka, of lovely countenance, according to (what is known as) the Rākṣasa mode of marriage (so-called because it is principally in vogue among the Rākṣasas or ogres); so it is heard. (18) O divine sage, I long to hear (in detail) the story of Śrī Kṛṣṇa of unlimited energy—how He snatched away the girl, having conquered Jarāsandha (the ruler of Magadha), Śālva and others. (19) O holy Brāhmaṇa, what man who is capable of understanding and appreciating what he has heard would feel sated as a matter of fact while hearing the stories of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, which are not only delightful (to hear) and ever interesting but bring a great reward (to the listener) and wipe out the sins of mankind ? (20)

* Vide verses 27 to 36 of Discourse III.

श्रीशुक उवाच

राजाऽऽसीद् भीष्मको नाम विदर्भाधिपतिर्महान् । तस्य पञ्चाभवन् पुत्राः कन्यैका च वरानना । २१ ।

रुक्म्यग्रजो रुक्मरथो रुक्मबाहुरनन्तरः । रुक्मकेशो रुक्ममाली रुक्मिण्येषां स्वसा सती । २२ ।

सोपश्रुत्य मुकुन्दस्य रूपवीर्यगुणश्रियः । गृहागतैर्गौचिमानास्तं मेने सदृशं पतिम् । २३ ।

तां बुद्धिलक्षणौदार्यरूपशीलगुणाश्रयाम् । कृष्णश्च सदृशीं भार्यां समुद्बोद्धुं मनो दधे । २४ ।

बभूवामिच्छतां दातुं कृष्णाय भगिनीं नृप । ततो निवार्य कृष्णद्विजं रुक्मीं चैष्टममन्वत । २५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : There was a great king, Bhīṣmaka by name, (who was) the suzerain lord of Vidarbha (which is generally identified with the modern Berar). Five sons and one daughter of charming countenance were born to him. (21) The eldest (of them) was Rukmī, Rukmaratha the next, and then followed (in order of sequence) Rukmabāhu, Rukmakeśa and Rukmamālī. Rukmiṇī was (the name of) their virtuous sister. (22) Having closely heard about the comeliness, valour, excellences and affluence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) as being celebrated by visitors to her house, she began to look upon Him as her befitting husband. (23) Śrī Kṛṣṇa too made up His mind to marry her in an appropriate manner, knowing her (from similar sources) to be an embodiment of intelligence, (auspicious) bodily characteristics, generosity, physical charm, amiability and other virtues and (therefore) a worthy consort. (24) Rukmī (the eldest prince), who hated Śrī Kṛṣṇa, proposed Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi), deterring his relations (parents and brothers)—who intended to give away Rukmiṇī (his sister) to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, O protector of men—from that course. (25)

तद्वेत्स्यासितापाङ्गी वैदर्भी दुर्मना भृशम् । विचिन्त्याप्तं द्विजं कञ्चित् कृष्णाय प्राहिणोद् द्रुतम् । २६ ।

द्वारकां स समभ्येत्य प्रतीहारैः प्रवेशितः । अपश्यदाद्यं पुरुषमासीनं काञ्चनासने । २७ ।

दृष्ट्वा ब्राह्मण्यदेवस्तमवरुह्य निजासनात् । उपवेश्यार्हयाञ्चक्रे यथाऽऽत्मानं दिवौकसः । २८ ।

तं भुक्तवन्तं विश्रान्तमुपगम्य सतां गतिः । पाणिनाभिमृशन् पादावव्यग्रस्तमपृच्छत । २९ ।

कचिद् द्विजवरश्रेष्ठ धर्मसे वृद्धसम्पतः । वर्तते नातिकृच्छ्रेण संतुष्टमनसः सदा । ३० ।

संतुष्टो यर्हि वर्तते ब्राह्मणो येन केनचित् । अहीयमानः स्वाह्ममात्स ह्यस्याखिलकामधुक् । ३१ ।

असन्तुष्टोऽसकृल्लोकानाप्रोत्यपि सुरेश्वरः । अकिञ्चनोऽपि संतुष्टः शेते सर्वाङ्गविज्वरः । ३२ ।

विप्रान् स्वलाभसंतुष्टान् साधून् भूतसुहृत्तमान् । निरहङ्कारिणः शान्तान् नमस्ये शिरसासकृत् । ३३ ।

कचिद् वः कुशलं ब्रह्मन् राजतो यस्य हि प्रजाः । सुखं वसन्ति विषये पाल्यमानाः स मे प्रियः । ३४ ।

यतस्त्वमागतो दुर्गं निस्तीर्येह यदिच्छया । सर्वं नो ब्रूह्यगुह्यं चेत् किं कार्यं करवाम ते । ३५ ।

एवं सम्पृष्टसम्प्रश्नो ब्राह्मणः परमेष्ठिना । लीलागृहीतदेहेन तस्मै सर्वमवर्णयत् । ३६ ।

Greatly troubled in mind to learn this and pondering (awhile), the beautiful Rukmiṇī (the princess of Vidarbha) speedily despatched a trusted Brāhmaṇa to bring Śrī Kṛṣṇa (to her father's capital). (26) Having duly reached Dwārakā, and having been ushered (into the Lord's presence) by the porters, he beheld Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the most ancient Person) seated on a throne of gold. (27) Seeing him (from a distance), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a devotee of the Brāhmaṇas, though Himself adored by all) got down from His throne and, having seated him (there), honoured him in the same way as the gods (lit., the denizens of heaven) honoured Him (whenever He went to their abode). (28) Approaching him, when he had taken his meal and rested (awhile), and gently kneading his feet with His hand Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Goal of the righteous) coolly inquired of him (as follows):—(29) "I hope, O jewel among the foremost of Brāhmaṇas, your religious observances, approved by the elders, are going on without much difficulty, and I hope your mind is ever complacent. (30) When a Brāhmaṇa remains contented with whatever is obtained (without any endeavour), never swerving from his sacred duty, such contentment (alone) actually yields to him all his desired blessings. (31) A discontented Indra (the ruler of gods) too only migrates one after another to the higher worlds (and knows no rest); while a contented soul, even though destitute, enjoys a sound sleep, with all his limbs (including his mind) free from anguish. (32) I salute again and again with My head (bent low) pious and placid Brāhmaṇas contented with whatever is got unasked and most friendly to (all) created beings, yet free from egotism. (33) Are you (all) enjoying security, O Brāhmaṇa, at the hands of your king? Indeed he is dear to Me, in whose dominion the people, protected by him, live happily. (34) If not secret, (pray,) tell us everything—whence and seeking what you have come to this place crossing the sea (which is so difficult to cross). What work of yours can we do?" (35) Politely asked (all) these relevant questions by Śrī Kṛṣṇa the Supreme Ruler of the universe—who had assumed an embodied form for the sake of (mere) fun—the Brāhmaṇa told Him everything (how the parents of Rukmiṇī planned to give her away to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and how their plans were being thwarted by her eldest brother, Rukmī, who was in favour of marrying her to Śiśupāla, the ruler of Cedi, and had sent formal invitation to him). (36) (He then delivered to Śrī Kṛṣṇa the following message either orally or in the form of a letter written by the princess herself).

रुक्मिण्युवाच

श्रुत्वा गुणान् भुवनसुन्दर शृण्वतां ते निर्विन्द्य कर्णविवरैर्हृतोऽङ्गतापम् ।
 रूपं दृशां दृशिमतामखिलार्थलाभं त्वय्यच्युताविशति चित्तमपत्रपं मे ।३७।
 का त्वा मुकुन्द महती कुलशीलरूपविद्यावयोद्रविणधामभिरात्मतुल्यम् ।
 धीरा पतिं कुलवती न वृणीत कन्या काले नृसिंह नरलोकमनोऽभिरामम् ।३८।
 तन्मे भवान् खलु वृतः पतिरङ्ग जायामात्मार्षितश्च भवतोऽत्र विभो विधेहि ।
 मा वीरभागमभिमर्शतु चैष्ट आराद् गोमायुवन्मृगपतेर्बलिमम्बुजाक्ष ।३९।
 पूर्वेष्टदत्तनियमव्रतदेवविप्रगुर्वर्चनादिभिरलं भगवान् परेशः ।
 आराधितो यदि गदायज एत्य पाणिं गृह्णातु मे न दमघोषसुतादयोऽन्ये ।४०।
 श्रोभाविनि त्वमजितोद्बहने विदर्भान् गुप्तः सपेत्य पुतनापतिभिः परितः ।
 निर्मथ्य चैष्टमगधेन्द्रबलं प्रसह्य मां राक्षसेन विधिनोद्बह वीर्यशुल्काम् ।४१।
 अन्तःपुरान्तरचरीमनिहत्य बन्धूंस्त्वामुद्बहे कथमिति प्रवदाम्पुण्यम् ।
 पूर्वेषुरास्ति महती कुलदेवियात्रा यस्यां बहिनर्ववधूगिरिजामुपेयात् ।४२।
 यस्याङ्घ्रिपङ्कजःस्त्रपनं महान्तो वाञ्छन्पुमापतिरिवात्मतमोऽपहर्त्य ।
 यर्हाम्बुजाक्ष न लभेय भवत्प्रसादं जह्यामसूत्र व्रतकृशाञ्छतजन्मभिः स्यात् ।४३।

Rukmiṇī says:—Having heard, O immortal Lord, most handsome in all the (three) worlds, of Your excellences—which, entering deep into the heart through the apertures of the ears, dispel the agony of the hearts, O beloved one—as well as of Your charming appearance, which vouchsafes to those that have eyes all the blessings sought for by their eyes, my mind has been set on You, (all) shame having fled away from it. (37) What noble, firm and high-born maiden, O Bestower of Liberation, will, not on her coming of age elect You as her husband—You, O Lion among men, who are Your own compeer in point of pedigree, good disposition, comeliness of form, learning, youthfulness, opulence and glory and ravish the mind of (all) mankind? (38) Hence you have indeed been elected by me as my husband, O Darling, and this body has been bestowed on You. (Pray,) take me to wife here (at my father's home). Let not Śiśupāla forthwith touch this share of a hero like a jackal defiling the quarry of a lion, O lotus-eyed Lord ! (39) If the almighty Lord (Nārāyaṇa), the Supreme Ruler (of the universe), has thoroughly been propitiated (by me) through works of public utility (such as the digging of wells and tanks, construction of temples, laying out gardens and distribution of foodgrains), sacrificial performances, charitable gifts, religious observances (such as taking a dip in holy waters), fasting, offering worship to gods, the Brāhmaṇas, elders and so on, may Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the elder Brother of Gada) and not others such as Śiśupāla (the son of Damaghoṣa) come and espouse me. (40) Duly reaching (all alone) the territory of Vidarbha (the city of Kuṇḍinapura, the capital of the rulers of Vidarbha) incognito at a time when the marriage is going to take place the following day, O invincible Lord ! and (then), surrounded by the generals of Your army and completely crushing the (combined) forces of Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi) and Jarāsandha (the king of Magadha), marry me perforce according to the system prevalent among the Rākṣasas, winning me as a prize of valour. (41) If You urge (in protest), "How can I marry you without killing your relations (who are sure to resist any attempt on My part to take you by force), living as you do within the four walls of the gynaeceum (and therefore under the tutelage of your gurdians)?" I (hereby) tell You beforehand the means (of securing me without spilling the blood of my relations). On the eve of marriage a grand procession will be taken out to (the shrine of) Goddess Ambikā (our family deity), in which the young bride has to go out (of the palace) to see Goddess Pārvatī (the Daughter of Himavān, the king of mountains). (42) If (however) I do not secure Your grace, O lotus-eyed Lord—a bath in the dust of whose lotus-feet great souls like Lord Śiva (the Spouse of Umā) seek to obtain for dispelling their darkness (of ignorance)—I shall lay down my life, (already) withered through fasting, (each time I am reborn) in the hope that the grace may be secured (even) through (say) a hundred births. (43)

ब्राह्मण उवाच

इत्येते गुह्यमन्देशा यदुदेव मयाऽऽहताः विमृश्य कर्तुं यद्यत्र क्रियतां तदनन्तरम् । ४४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पाण्डवस्य संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे रुक्मिण्युद्वाहप्रस्तावे द्विपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ५२ ।

The Brāhmaṇa concluded : These are the secret messages brought by me (and delivered to You), O Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the adored of the Yadus) I Considering them, whatever is

* Our scriptures have recognized as many as eight different types of marriage. They are :—

1. The Āśva type, in which the bridegroom has to present a pair of cows to the bride's father before marriage.—'आश्वयदंतु गंधर्वम्' (Yājñavalkya-Smṛti III. 59; cf. Manusmṛti III. 53).
2. The Āsura type, in which the bride's father accepts large sums of money from the bridegroom as a price for the girl—'आसुरं द्रविणदानम्' (vide Y. S. I. 61; cf. M. S. III. 31).
3. The Brāhma type, in which the bride's father gives away the girl after duly adorning her according to his means—'ब्राह्मो विवाह आहूय दीयते शस्त्रमालंक्रुता' (Y. S. I. 58; cf. M. S. III. 27).
4. The Paisāca type, in which the girl is ravished while asleep, intoxicated or deranged—'सुप्तां प्रमत्तां वा रहो यत्रोपपच्छति' (M. S., III. (34)).
5. The Daiva type, in which a girl is given away to a priest officiating at a sacrificial performance—'यज्ञस्य ऋचिर्बैदेवः' (Y. S. I. 59).
6. The Gāndharva type, in which a pair is allowed to marry by mutual consent alone without ceremonies and without consulting relatives—'गान्धर्वः मन्यमान्निधः' (Ibid., I. 61).
7. The Rākṣasa type, in which a girl is taken away by force after vanquishing formidable opponents—'यस्मिन् युद्धरात्रौ' (Ibid.).
8. The Prājāpatya type, in which a girl is given away, without receiving any present from the bridegroom, on the express understanding that the two will practise virtue together—'सहीधो चरतां धर्ममिति याचनाभ्याम् । कन्याप्रदानं.....' (M. S., III. 30; cf. Y. S., I. 60).

worth doing in this connection may be done without delay. (44)

Thus ends the fifty-second discourse, bearing on the subject of Rukmiṇī's wedding, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रिपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LIII

Śrī Kṛṣṇa carries away Rukmiṇī

श्रीशुक उवाच

वैदर्भ्याः स तु सन्देशं निशम्य यदुनन्दनः । प्रगृह्य पाणिना पाणिं प्रहसन्निदमब्रवीत् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Hearing the message of Rukmiṇī (the princess of Vidarbha), the said Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a Scion of Yadu), however, heartily laughed and, warmly clasping the Brāhmaṇa's hand by His own, spoke (to him) as follows. (1)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

तथाहमपि तद्धितो निद्रां च न लभे निशि । वेदाहं रुक्मिणा द्वेषान्ममोद्वाहो निवारितः । २ ।

तामानयिष्य उच्यथ राजन्यापसदान् मृधे । मत्प्रसन्नमवद्याङ्गीमेधसोऽग्निशिखामिव । ३ ।

The glorious Lord said : My mind is likewise set on her and I get no sleep at night. I know my marriage (with her) has been stopped by Rukmi out of (personal) grudge (against Me). (2) Having routed in battle the vile kings (that will be assembled at Kuṇḍinapura), I shall bring (to Dwārakā) that princess of faultless limbs, (so) devoted to Me, even as one would capture a flame out of firewood. (3)

श्रीशुक उवाच

उद्वाहर्क्षं च विज्ञाय रुक्मिण्या मधुसूदनः । रथः संयुज्यतामाशु दालकेत्याह सारथिम् । ४ ।

स चाश्वैः शैव्यसुग्रीवमेघपुष्पबलाहकैः । युक्तं रथमुपानीय तस्यौ प्राञ्जलिरग्रतः । ५ ।

आरुह्य स्यन्दनं शौरिद्विजमारोप्य तूर्णगैः । आनन्तदिकरात्रेण विदर्भानिगमद्भयैः । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having come to know definitely (through the Brāhmaṇa) about the constellation under which the wedding of Rukmiṇī was going to take place (on the third day thence), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Slayer of the demon Madhu) said to His charioteer, "Let the chariot be got ready at once, O Dāruka !" (4) Having brought the chariot drawn by (four) horses—Śaibya, Sugrīva, Meghapuṣpa and Balāhaka—Dāruka too stood before the Lord with joined palms. (5) Mounting the chariot and picking up the Brāhmaṇa (too), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Grandson of Śūra) journeyed from Ānarta to the Vidarbha territory in the course of a single night with the help of those swift horses. (6)

राजा स कुण्डिनपतिः पुत्रस्नेहवशं गतः । शिशुपालाय स्वां कन्यां दास्यन् कर्माण्यकारयत् । ७ ।

पुत्रं सम्पृष्टसंसिक्तमार्गरथ्याचतुष्वथम् । चित्रध्वजपताकाभिस्तोरणैः समलङ्कृतम् । ८ ।

स्रगन्धमाल्याभरणैर्विरजोऽम्बरभूषितैः । जुष्टं स्त्रीपुरुषैः श्रीमद्गृहैरगुरुभूषितैः । ९ ।
 पितृन् देवान् समभ्यर्च्य विप्रांश्च विधिवन्नृप । भोजयित्वा यथान्यायं वाचयामास मङ्गलम् । १० ।
 सुन्नातां सुदतीं कन्यां कृतकौतुकमङ्गलम् । अहतांशुकयुग्मेन भूषितां भूषणोत्तमैः । ११ ।
 चक्रुः सामर्यजुर्नैर्वध्वा रक्षां द्विजोत्तमाः । पुरोहितोऽथर्वविद् वै जुहाव ग्रहशान्तये । १२ ।
 हिण्यरूप्यवासांसि तिलांश्च गुडमिश्रितान् । प्रादाद् धेनूश्च विप्रेभ्यो राजा विधिविदां वरः । १३ ।

Following the wishes of his son (Rukmi) out of affection (for him) and intending to give away his girl (Rukmiṇi) to Śiśupāla (against his own will), the aforesaid king Bhīṣmaka (the ruler of Kuṇḍinapura) had (the necessary) rites (preliminary to the wedding) performed (in due course). (7) The city—whose roads, streets and crossings were cleanly swept and amply sprinkled with water and which was crowded with men and women decked with sandal-paste, garlands and (other) ornaments of flowers, clad in spotless white and adorned with jewels, and was full of splendid mansions perfumed with incense of aloe—was tastefully decorated with flags of various designs and colours as well as with ornamental arches. (8-9) Having duly worshipped the manes and gods in accordance with the scriptural ordinance, O protector of men, an fed Brāhmaṇas and others each in his rightful place, the king caused benedictory verses to be recited (by Brāhmaṇas for the welfare of his daughter). (10) He (also) caused his daughter of charming teeth to be duly washed and adorned with an auspicious thread with a small piece of gold fastened to it in the middle and (further) decked with a brand-new pair of silken pieces and excellent ornaments. (11) The foremost among the Brāhmaṇas ensured the safety of the bride (against evil spirits and an evil eye) by reciting sacred texts from the Sāmaveda, Ṛgveda and Yajurveda; while the family priest, (who was) well-versed in Atharva-Veda, poured oblations into the sacred fire for the propitiation of (unpropitious) planets. (12) The king—who was foremost among those conversant with scriptural ordinances—gave away to Brāhmaṇas gold, silver and textiles as well as sesamum seeds mixed with jaggery and cows (too). (13)

एवं चेदिपती राजा दमघोषः सुताय वै । कारयामास मन्त्रज्ञैः सर्वपशुदयोचितम् । १४ ।
 मद्युद्धिर्गजानीकैः स्यन्दनैर्हममालिभिः । पत्यश्चङ्कुलैः सैन्यैः परितः कुण्डिनं ययौ । १५ ।
 तं वै विद्वद्भाधिपतिः समभ्येत्याभिपूज्य च । निवेशयामास मुदा कल्पितान्यनिवेशने । १६ ।
 तत्र शाल्वो जरासन्धो दन्तवक्रो विदूरथः । आजगमुर्शृङ्गपक्षीयाः पौण्ड्रकाद्याः सहस्रशः । १७ ।
 कृष्णरामद्विषो यताः कन्यां चैद्याय साधितुम् । यद्यागत्य हरेत् कृष्णो रामाद्यैर्यदुभिर्वृतः । १८ ।
 योत्स्यामः संहतास्तेन इति निश्चितमानसाः । आजगमुर्भुभुजः सर्वे समयबलवाहनाः । १९ ।

Likewise King Damaghoṣa, the ruler of Cedi, too caused all that was worth undertaking on festive occasions to be performed in the interests of his son (Śiśupāla) by Brāhmaṇas well-versed in sacred texts. (14) Surrounded by hosts of elephants discharging temporal fluid, war-chariots hung with gold necklaces and troops teeming with foot-soldiers and cavalry, Damaghoṣa marched to Kuṇḍinapura. (15) Going forth with due ceremony to meet him and honouring him in everyway, Bhīṣmaka (the suzerain lord of Vidarbha) gladly lodged him in another mansion specially constructed (for the bridegroom and his party). (16) Śālva, Jarāsandha, Dantavakra, Vidūratha, Paundraka and other kings, belonging to the party of Śiśupāla and inimical to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, (also) appeared there (in the city of Kuṇḍinapura) in thousands, bent on securing the bride for Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi). Having made up their mind that they would jointly contend with Śrī Kṛṣṇa in case He should go there accompanied by Balarāma and other Yadus and (endeavour to) take away the bride, the (aforesaid) kings had all arrived there with their entire host and all their mounts. (17—19)

श्रुत्वेतद् भगवान् रामो विपक्षीयनूपोद्यमम् । कृष्णं चैकं गते हर्तुं कन्यां कलहशङ्कितः । २० ।

बलेन महता सार्धं भ्रातृस्नेहपरिप्लुतः । त्वरितः कुण्डिनं प्रागाद् गजाश्वरथपतिभिः । २१ ।

Hearing of this (collective military) effort on the part of kings belonging to the opposite party, and of Śrī Kṛṣṇa having gone all by Himself (presumably) to take away the princess, Lord Balarāma apprehended strife. Overwhelmed with fraternal affection (therefore), he proceeded post haste to Kuṇḍinapura accompanied by a huge army consisting of elephants, horse, chariots and foot-soldiers. (20-21)

भीष्मकन्या वरारोहा काङ्क्षन्त्यागमनं हरेः । प्रत्यापत्तिमपश्यन्ती द्विजस्याचिन्तयत्तदा । २२ ।

अहो त्रियामान्तरित उद्वाहो मेऽल्पराधसः । नागच्छत्यरविन्दाक्षो नाहं वेदम्यत्र कारणम् ।

सोऽपि नावर्ततेऽद्यापि मत्सन्देशहरो द्विजः । २३ ।

अपि मय्यवनद्यात्मा दृष्ट्वा किञ्चिज्जगुप्सितम् । मत्पाणिग्रहणे नूनं नायाति हि कृतोद्यमः । २४ ।

दुर्भगाया न मे धाता नानुकूलो महेश्वरः । देवी वा विमुखा गौरी रुद्राणी गिरिजा सती । २५ ।

एवं चिन्तयती बाला गोविन्दहतमानसा । न्यमीलयत कालज्ञा नेत्रे चाश्रुकलाकुले । २६ ।

एवं वध्वाः प्रतीक्षन्त्या गोविन्दागमनं नृप । वाम ऊरुर्भुजो नेत्रमस्फुरन् प्रियभाषिणः । २७ ।

अथ कृष्णविनिर्दिष्टः स एव द्विजसत्तमः । अन्तःपुरचरीं देवीं राजपुत्रीं ददर्श ह । २८ ।

सा तं प्रहृष्टवदनमव्यप्राप्तमगतिं सती । आलक्ष्य लक्षणाभिज्ञा समपृच्छच्छचिस्मिता । २९ ।

तस्या आवेदयत् प्राप्तं शशंस यदुनन्दनम् । उक्तं च सत्यवचनमात्पोपनयनं प्रति । ३० ।

तमागतं समाज्ञाय वैदर्भी हृष्टमानसा । न पश्यन्ती ब्राह्मणाय प्रियमन्यत्रनाम सा । ३१ ।

Yearning for the arrival of Śrī Hari (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and not seeing the Brāhmaṇa return, the beautiful daughter of Bhīṣma thereupon thought (within herself) as follows:—(22) "Ah, my wedding, unlucky as I am, comes off (only) after the interval of a night. The lotus-eyed Lord (however) has not (yet) turned up. I do not know the reason for it. Even the Brāhmaṇa who bore my message has not returned till this moment. (23) Perhaps having found (later on) something disgusting in me, the Lord (who is faultless in character) is surely not coming (to Kuṇḍinapura now) to marry me, though prepared (to leave Dwārakā in the first instance). (That is why the Brāhmaṇa too, whom the Lord would have otherwise brought with Him, has not been able to reach Kuṇḍinapura in time, coming as he is on foot disappointed and disheartened. (24) Neither Brahmā (the ordainer of events and the dispenser of fruit of one's good or evil actions) nor Śiva (the supreme Lord) is propitious to me. And Goddess Gaurī, the Daughter of Himālaya (the king of mountains) and the virtuous Spouse of Lord Śiva (too) is unfavourable to me." (25) Pondering thus, the young maiden, whose mind had been ravished by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) and who knew that the time was not suitable for shedding tears (which is considered inauspicious on festive occasions), closed her eyes, bedimmed (as they were) with tear-drops. (26) (Meanwhile) the left thigh, arm and eye of the bride, who had thus been awaiting the arrival of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows), throbbed, auguring delightful news, O king ! (27) Specially instructed by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (to report His arrival), the same Sunanda (the foremost of Brāhmaṇas)—so the tradition goes—forthwith saw the princess, who dwelt in the gynaeceum and shone brightly (with joy born of her meeting with Śrī Kṛṣṇa in contemplation). (28) Full of bright smiles to find him wearing a cheerful countenance and unflinching of gait (which bespoke the success of his mission), the said virtuous maiden—who could read what was in the mind of another from the latter's facial expression and other indications—made detailed inquiries of him (about Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (29) He apprised her of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Yadu) having come, and (further) conveyed to her the unfailing assurance* given (by the Lord) about taking her (to His home at Dwārakā. (30) Delighted at heart to know for certain the fact of His having arrived (at Kuṇḍinapura) and seeing no other boon worth conferring on the Brāhmaṇa (in return for his unique service in the form of bringing Śrī Kṛṣṇa to her), the said Rukmiṇī (the princess of Vidarbha) bowed to him (and thereby expressed her lasting indebtedness to him, which automatically entitled him to infinitely more than the wealth of the entire universe, She being no other than Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth and prosperity). (31)

प्राप्तां श्रुत्वा स्वदुहितुरुद्धहप्रेक्षणोत्सुकौ । अभ्ययानुर्यघोषेण रामकृष्णौ समर्हणैः । ३२ ।
मधुपर्कमुपानीय वासांसि विरजांसि सः । उपायनान्यभीष्टानि विधिवत् समपूजयत् । ३३ ।
तयोर्निवेशनं श्रीमदुपकल्प्य महामतिः । ससैन्ययोः सानुगयोरातिथ्यं विदधे यथा । ३४ ।
एवं राज्ञां समेतानां यथावीर्यं यथावयः । यथाबलं यथावित्तं सर्वैः कामैः समर्हयत् । ३५ ।
कृष्णमागतमाकर्ण्य विदर्भपुरवासिनः । आगत्य नेत्राञ्जलिभिः पपुस्तमुखपङ्कजम् । ३६ ।
अस्यैव भार्या भवितुं रुक्मिण्यर्हति नापरा । असावप्यनवद्यात्मा भैष्याः समुचितः पतिः । ३७ ।
किञ्चित्सुचरितं यत्रस्तेन तुष्टिखिलोककृत् । अनुगृह्णातु गृह्णातु वैदर्भ्याः पाणिमच्युतः । ३८ ।

Hearing of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa having arrived (in Kuṇḍinapura) eager to witness the wedding of his daughter, Bhīṣmaka went forth to meet Them with a flourish of trumpets and excellent articles of worship. (32) Offering Madhuparka† (a delicious and refreshing preparation made of curds and honey and offered to an esteemed guest or the bridegroom on the latter's arrival at the door of the bride's father), immaculate garments and welcome presents (of various kinds), he duly worshipped Them in accordance with the scriptural ordinance. (33) Assigning Them alongwith Their troops and retinue an abode equipped with (all) luxuries and amenities, the highly intelligent monarch (who could easily perceive in no time that Śrī Kṛṣṇa had arrived with the intention of marrying Rukmiṇī) offered hospitality (to all) in a befitting manner. (34) He likewise duly entertained (all) the assembled kings by supplying them with all the objects of their desire with due regard to the prowess, age, might and financial status of each. (35) Hearing of Śrī Kṛṣṇa having arrived (there), the residents of Kuṇḍinapura (the capital of Vidarbha) came (out of their houses to see Him) and enjoyed (to their heart's content) the beauty of His lotus-like countenance with both their eyes together (even) as one would quaff honey with the hollow of one's joined palms. (36) (They said to one another,) "Rukmiṇī alone and no other girl deserves to be his consort and he alone of faultless limbs is the most worthy match for Rukmiṇī (the daughter of Bhīṣma). (37) Pleased with whatever meritorious deed has been performed by us (in this or any previous existence), may God (the Maker of the three worlds) show His grace (to us) and let Śrī Kṛṣṇa and none else marry the princess of Vidarbha (through such grace)." (38)

एवं प्रेमकलाबद्धा वदन्ति स्म पुरीकसः । कन्या चान्तःपुरात् प्रागाद् भटैर्गुप्ताम्बिकालयम् । ३९ ।
पद्भ्यां विनिर्ययौ द्रष्टुं भवान्याः पादपल्लवम् । सा चानुध्यायती सम्यङ्मुकुन्दचरणाम्बुजम् । ४० ।
यनवाङ्मातृभिः सार्धं सरवीभिः परिवारिता । गुप्ता राजभटैः शूरैः सन्नद्धैस्तदायुधैः ।
मृदङ्गशङ्खपणवासूर्यभेर्यश्च जघ्निरे । ४१ ।

*Vide verse 3 above.

†मधुपर्कं च सर्वाङ्गं दधि प्रोक्षणं मतीर्तव्यम् ।

By offering Madhuparka to Śrī Kṛṣṇa Bhīṣmaka indirectly expressed his willingness to give away his daughter to Him.

नानोपहारबलिभिर्वारमुख्याः सहस्रशः । स्रगन्धवस्त्राभरणैर्द्विजपत्यः स्वलङ्कृताः । ४२ ।
 गायन्तश्च स्तुवन्तश्च गायका वाद्यवादकाः । परिवार्यं वधूं जम्मुः सुतमागधवन्दिनः । ४३ ।
 आसाद्य देवीसदनं धौतपादकराम्बुजा । उपसृज्य शुचिः शान्ता प्रविवेशाम्बिकान्तिकम् । ४४ ।
 तां वै प्रवयसो बालां विधिज्ञा विप्रयोषितः । भवानो वन्द्याञ्चकुर्भवपत्नी भवान्विताम् । ४५ ।
 नमस्ये त्वाम्बिकेऽभीक्ष्णं स्वसन्तानयुतां शिवाम् । भूयात् पतिर्मे भगवान् कृष्णस्तदनुमोदताम् । ४६ ।
 अद्भिर्गन्धाक्षतैर्धूपैर्वासः स्रद्धामाल्यभूषणैः । नानोपहारबलिभिः प्रदीपावलिभिः पृथक् । ४७ ।
 विप्रस्त्रियः पतिमतीस्तथा तैः समपूजयत् । लवणापूपताम्रलकण्टसूत्रवलेक्षुभिः । ४८ ।
 तस्यै स्त्रियस्ताः प्रददुः शेषां युयुजुराशिषः । ताभ्यो देव्यै नमश्चक्रे शेषां च जगृहे वधूः । ४९ ।
 मुनिव्रतमथ त्यक्त्वा निष्क्रामाम्बिकागृहात् । प्रगृह्य पाणिना भृत्यां रत्नमुद्रोपशोभिना । ५० ।

Thus spoke the citizens (to one another), bound as they were by ties of intense love (to Rukmiṇī). And, guarded by soldiers, the maiden (Rukmiṇī) drove out of the gynaeceum to the shrine of Goddess Ambikā (Pārvatī). (39) Deeply contemplating on the lotus-feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) with her speech (duly) controlled, (nay,) surrounded by her female companions and protected by gallant soldiers of the king's personal guard, who were (all) clad in armour and marched with uplifted weapons, she sallied out (of her chariot at the outermost entrance of the temple) on foot along with her mother and other elderly ladies to behold the feet—tender like soft leaves—of Goddess Pārvatī (the Consort of Lord Śiva). Clay tomtoms, conchs and large drums as well as clarionets and kettle-drums were sounded (as she walked). (40-41) Surrounding the (royal) bride walked (with her) the foremost of dancing girls in thousands with a variety of offerings and (other) articles of worship, Brāhmaṇa's wives well adorned with garlands, sandal-paste, costumes and jewels, songsters singing songs and (other) musicians, playing on musical instruments, as well as Sūtas (those versed in ancient legends), Māgadhas (bards) and Vandīs (panegyrists), who glorified her (all along). (42-43) Having washed her lotus-like hands and feet and sipped water on reaching the main shrine of the goddess and, (thus) purified and tranquil of mind, she entered into the presence of Goddess Ambikā (the Divine Mother). (44) Elderly Brāhmaṇa ladies, conversant with the ritual, helped the girl to extol Goddess Pārvatī, the Consort of Lord Śiva, along with Śiva (as follows):—(45) "I repeatedly bow to You, the Consort of Lord Śiva, along with your children (Lord Gaṇeśa and God Kārtikeya). Let Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa be my husband and may You give countenance to it." (46) She (then) duly worshipped severally the Goddess as well as Her family with water (for washing the hands and feet of the Goddess with and other such purposes), sandal-paste, unbroken grains of rice, varieties of incense, raiment (of various description), garlands, necklaces and other ornaments, edibles and other articles of worship of various kinds and rows of lights (to be waved round the Goddess) and likewise worshipped with due ceremony Brāhmaṇa matrons whose husbands were alive with the same articles as well as with seasoned small round cakes of flour or meal, betel leaves (accompanied with areca-nut parings, lime, catechu and cardamoms etc.), auspicious coloured thread for the neck, fruits (of diverse kinds) and sugarcanes. (47-48) The aforesaid (Brāhmaṇa) ladies gave her a part of the offerings made to the Goddess (as a token of Her grace) and added their own blessings. The bride (for her part) bowed to them as well as to the Goddess and accepted the offerings made. (49) Then, terminating her vow of silence, she came out of the (main) shrine of Goddess Ambikā (the Divine Mother), holding tightly by the hand a maid-servant with her own hand brilliant with jewelled rings. (50)

तां देवमायामिव वीरमोहिनीं सुमध्यमां कुण्डलमण्डिताननाम् ।

श्यामां नितम्बापितरत्नमेखलां व्यञ्जस्तनीं कुन्तलशङ्कितेक्षणाम् । ५१ ।
 शुचिस्मितां बिम्बफलाधरद्युतिशोणायमानद्विजकुन्दकुड्मलाम् ।
 पदा चलन्तीं कलहंसगामिनीं सिञ्चत्कलानूपुरधामशोभिना ।
 विलोक्य वीरा मुमुहुः समागता यशस्विनस्तत्कृतहृच्छयादिताः । ५२ ।
 यां वीक्ष्य ते नृपतयस्तदुदारहासप्रीडावलोकहतचेतस उन्मितास्त्राः ।
 प्लेभुः क्षितौ गजरथाश्वगता विमूढा यात्राच्छलेन हरयेऽर्पयतीं स्वशोभाम् । ५३ ।
 सैवं शनैश्चलयती चलपद्मकोशौ प्राप्तिं तदा भगवतः प्रसमीक्षमाणा ।
 उत्सार्य वामकरजैरलकानपाङ्गैः प्राप्तान् ह्रियैक्षत नृपान् ददृशेऽच्युतं सा । ५४ ।
 तां राजकन्यां रथमारुरुक्षतीं जहार कृष्णो द्विषतां समीक्षताम् ।
 रथं समारोप्य सुपर्णलक्षणं राजन्यचक्रं परिभूय माधवः । ५५ ।
 ततो ययौ रामपुरोगमैः शनैः सुगालमध्यादिव भागहृद्धरिः । ५६ ।
 तं मानिनः स्वाभिभवं यशःक्षयं परे जरासन्धवशा न सेहिरे ।
 अहो धिगस्मान् यश आतधन्वनां गोपैर्हतं केसरिणां मृगैरिव । ५७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तार्धे रुक्मिणीहरणे नाम त्रिपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ५३ ।

Smitten with love kindled (in their breast) by her, the illustrious warriors assembled (there) felt bewildered to behold the princess, who was possessed of a shapely (slender) waist and had not yet attained puberty, and who had a girdle of jewels thrown about her hips and in whom signs of womanhood were (just) manifesting themselves, whose (charming) countenance was graced with ear-rings and whose eyes were moving as though afraid of her curly locks (that overhung her face), who had a bright smile playing on her lips and whose teeth—white as jasmine buds—looked red due to the lustre of her lips, cherry as a ripe Bimba fruit (being transferred to them when she smiled), who possessed the gait of a female swan and was walking with her feet shining by the splendour of brilliant jingling anklets and who cast her spell (even) on heroes as though she were the very Māyā (enchanting potency) of the Lord. (51-52) Stupefied to perceive Rukmiṇī, who under the pretext of going out in a procession (to the temple) had (all the time) been offering her loveliness to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the aforesaid kings—whose mind was captivated by her winsome smiles and bashful glances and who had (unconsciously) dropped their weapons—(themselves) fell to the ground, mounted as they were on elephants and horses as well as in chariots. (53) Eagerly looking forward to the arrival of the Lord at that time and therefore slowly moving as aforesaid her feet, that resembled a pair of mobile lotus buds, and removing her (flowing) locks (off her eyes) with her left hand fingers, the princess coyly looked with the corners of her eyes at the kings arrived (on the occasion) and (while doing so) espied Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord). (54) Śrī Kṛṣṇa snatched away the princess even as she sought to mount her chariot, unmindful of His adversaries (Śiśupāla, Jarāsandha and others), who stood gazing, and, having comfortably seated her in His (own) chariot bearing the emblem of Garuḍa (the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu), and setting at naught the whole host of Kṣatriyas (present there), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Spouse of Lakṣmī) then slowly departed (to Dwārakā) along with others headed by Balarāma, even as a lion would carry off its game from the midst of jackals. (55-56) His proud adversaries, who were (all) under the domination of Jarāsandha, did not brook that discomfiture (of theirs) and (consequent) loss of reputation. (They said to one another), "Fie upon us in that our glory, although we continued to wield our bow and were as good as lions, has been snatched away by cowherds, who are no better than deer." (57)

Thus ends the fifty-third discourse, entitled "The Lord carries away Rukmiṇī", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुःपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LIV

Discomfiture of Śiśupāla's allies and Rukmī and the Espousal of Rukmiṇī by Śrī Kṛṣṇa solemnized

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति सर्वे सुसंख्या वाहनास्तु दंशिताः । स्वैः स्वैर्बलैः परिक्रान्ता अन्वीयुर्धृतकार्मुकाः । १ ।
तानापतत आलोक्य यादवानीकयूथपाः । तस्थुस्तत्संमुखा राजन्विस्फूर्ज्य स्वधनुषि ते । २ ।
अश्वपृष्ठे गजस्कन्धे रथोपस्थे च कोविदाः । मुमुचुः शरवर्षाणि मेघा अद्रिबुधो यथा । ३ ।
पत्युर्बलं शरासारैश्छत्रं वीक्ष्य सुमध्यमा । सत्राडमैक्षतद्वक्त्रं भयविह्वललोचना । ४ ।
प्रहस्य भगवानाह मा स्म भैर्यामलोचने । विनङ्क्ष्यत्यधुनैवैतत् तावकैः शात्रवं बलम् । ५ ।
तेषां तद्विक्रमं वीरा गदसङ्कर्षणादयः । अमुष्यमाणा नाराचैर्घृह्ययगजान् रथान् । ६ ।
पेतुः शिरांसि रथिनामश्विनां गजिनां भुवि । सकुण्डलकिरीटानि सोष्णीषाणि च कोटिशः । ७ ।
हस्ताः सासिगदेद्वासाः करभा ऊरवोऽङ्घ्रयः । अश्वाश्चतरनागोष्ट्रखरमर्त्यशिरांसि च । ८ ।
हन्यमानबलानीका वृष्णिभिर्जयकाङ्क्षिभिः । राजानो विमुखा जग्मुर्जरासन्धपुरःसराः । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Riding on their mounts and surrounded each by his own troops, all the (aforesaid) kings, full of rage, ran with the foregoing words in (hot) pursuit (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), wielding their bows and clad in armour. (1) Seeing them rushing (after them), the celebrated generals of the Yādava army stood facing them, O king, twanging their bows. (2) Like clouds pouring showers on mountains, the adversaries—who were (all) skilled soldiers, and rode on horseback, the shoulders of elephants and in their seat on the chariots—discharged volleys of shafts on the Yādava warriors. (3) Perceiving the army of her Spouse screened by showers of arrows, Rukmiṇī (who had a slender waist) bashfully looked at His face with eyes confounded through fear. (4) Laughing heartily the Lord said (to her), "Do not be afraid, O fair-eyed one ! The yonder army of the enemies will be destroyed just now with the help of your (own) troops." (5) Intolerant of the aforementioned prowess of the enemies, Gada, Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarāma) and other heroes (of the Yādava army) proceeded to strike with Nārācas (a particular type of arrows) the horses and elephants as well as the chariots (of the hostile army). (6) There fell to the ground in tens of millions heads, adorned with earrings, diadems and turbans, hands—bearing swords, maces and bows—forearms, thighs and feet of car-warriors, horsemen and soldiers fighting on elephants, as well as heads of horses, mules, elephants, camels, donkeys and men (foot-soldiers). (7-8) Their armies being beaten (thus) by the Vṛṣṇis, who were keen after victory, the kings led by Jarāsandha, turned their backs and withdrew (from the field of battle). (9)

शिशुपालं समभ्येत्य हतदारमिवातुरम् । नष्टत्विषं गतोत्साहं शुष्यद्वदनमब्रुवन् । १० ।
 भो भोः पुरुषशार्दूल दौर्नमस्यपिदं त्यज । न प्रियाप्रिययो राजन् निष्ठा देहिषु दृश्यते । ११ ।
 यथा दारुमयी योषिन्मृत्युते कुहकेच्छया । एवमीश्वरतन्त्रोऽयमीहते सुखदुःखयोः । १२ ।
 शौरैः सप्तदशाहं वै संयुगानि पराजितः । त्रयोविंशतिभिः सैन्यैर्जिग्य एकमहं परम् । १३ ।
 तथाप्यहं न शोचामि न प्रहृष्यामि कर्हिचित् । कालेन दैवयुक्तेन जानन् विद्रावितं जगत् । १४ ।
 अधुनापि वयं सर्वे वीरयूथपयूथपाः । पराजिताः फल्गुतन्त्रैर्यदुभिः कृष्णपालितैः । १५ ।
 रिपवो जिग्युरधुना काल आत्मानुसारिणि । तदा वयं विजेष्यामो यदा कालः प्रदक्षिणः । १६ ।
 एवं प्रबोधितो मित्रैश्चैद्योगात् सानुगः पुरम् । हतशेषाः पुनस्तेऽपि ययुः स्वं स्वं पुरं नृपाः । १७ ।

Approaching Śiśupāla—who felt distressed as though his wedded wife had been abducted and was cheerless and dispirited, and whose face was withering (through melancholy)—Jarāsandha and others spoke to him (as follows):—(10) "O tiger among men, shake off this despondency. Permanence of joy and sorrow is not seen in embodied beings, O king ! (11) (Just) as a puppet dances to the will of the showman, likewise does this creature exert according to the will of Providence so as to reap joy and sorrow. (12) Having sustained defeat at the hands of Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūra) in as many as seventeen encounters, though followed by twenty-three Akṣauhiṇis (each time), I won only one battle (viz., the last one). (13) Yet I never grieve (over discomfiture) nor exult (over victory), knowing as I do the world to be ravaged by Them coupled with destiny. (14) This time too we, (who are) leaders (even) of those commanding troops of warriors, have all been vanquished by the Yadus, protected by Kṛṣṇa, though accompanied by a small army. (15) Time being favourable to them, the enemies (the Yadus) have won this time. We shall (likewise) excel them when time is particularly propitious (to us)." (16) Thus admonished by friends, Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi) returned to his capital alongwith his (surviving) followers. Those (other) kings too, such as were surviving, (accompanied Śiśupāla to Cedi and) then returned each to his own capital. (17)

रुक्मी तु राक्षसोद्वाहं कृष्णद्विडसहन् स्वसुः । पृष्ठतोऽन्वगमत् कृष्णमक्षौहिण्या वृतो बली । १८ ।
 रुक्म्यमर्षी सुसंरब्धः शृण्वतां सर्वभूभुजाम् । प्रतिजज्ञे महाबाहुर्दशितः सशरासनः । १९ ।
 अहत्वा सपरे कृष्णमप्रत्युह्य च रुक्मिणीम् । कुण्डिनं न प्रवेक्ष्यामि सत्यमेतद् ब्रवीमि वः । २० ।
 इत्युक्त्वा रथमारुह्य सारथिं प्राह सत्वरः । चोदयाश्चान् यतः कृष्णस्तस्य मे संयुगं भवेत् । २१ ।
 अद्याहं निशित्वार्णंगोपालस्य सुदुर्मतेः । नेष्ये वीर्यमदं येन स्वसा मे प्रसभं हता । २२ ।
 विकथ्यमानः कुमतिरीश्वरस्याप्रमाणवित् । रथेनैकेन गोविन्दं तिष्ठ तिष्ठेत्यथाह्वयत् । २३ ।
 धनुर्विकृष्य सुदृढं जज्ञे कृष्णं त्रिभिः शरैः । आह चात्र क्षणं तिष्ठ यदूनां कुलपांसन । २४ ।
 कुत्र यासि स्वसारं मे मुषित्वा ध्वाङ्गवद्धविः । हरिष्येऽद्य मदं मन्द मायिनः कूटयोधिनः । २५ ।
 यावन्न मे हतो वारणः शयीथा मुञ्च दारिकाम् । सयन् कृष्णो धनुश्छित्त्वा षड्भिर्विव्याध रुक्मिणम् । २६ ।
 अष्टभिश्चतुरो वाहान् द्वाभ्यां सूतं ध्वजं त्रिभिः । स चान्यद् धनुरादाय कृष्णं विव्याध पञ्चभिः । २७ ।
 तैस्ताडितः शरैर्धेसु चिच्छेद धनुरच्युतः । पुनरन्यदुपादत्त तदप्यच्छिनदव्ययः । २८ ।
 परिधं पट्टिशं शूलं चर्मासी शक्तितोमरौ । यद् यदायुधमादत्त तत् सर्वं सोऽच्छिनद्धिरः । २९ ।
 ततो रथादवपुत्य खड्गपाणिर्जिघांसया । कृष्णमथ्यद्रवत् क्रुद्धः पतङ्ग इव पावकम् । ३० ।
 तस्य चापततः खड्गं तिलशश्चर्म चेपुभिः । छित्त्वासिमाददे तिगं रुक्मिणं हन्तुमुद्यतः । ३१ ।
 दृष्ट्वा भ्रातृवधोद्योगं रुक्मिणी भयविह्वला । पतित्वा पादयोर्भर्तुरुवाच करुणं सती । ३२ ।

योगेश्वराप्रमेयात्मन् देवदेव जगत्पते । हन्तुं नाहंसि कल्याण भ्रातरं मे महाभुज । ३३ ।

Surrounded by an army (consisting of one Akṣauhiṇī) the mighty Rukmī, for his part, who hated Śrī Kṛṣṇa and did not brook his sister's being married (by Him) after the manner of the Rākṣasas, followed (close) upon the heels of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (18) Enraged and full of indignation, the mighty-armed Rukmī, who was clad in armour and armed with a bow, had undertaken the following vow within the hearing of all the kings (before they dispersed):—(19) "Without making short work of Kṛṣṇa in an encounter and bringing back Rukmiṇī I shall not re-enter Kuṇḍinapura: solemnly do I declare this before you (all)." (20) Saying so and mounting his chariot, he commanded the charioteer as follows:—"Drive the horses with despatch to the place where Kṛṣṇa may be; (for) there is going to be my encounter with him. (21) With my sharp-pointed arrows today I shall take away the pride of valour of that most evil-minded cowherd, by whom my sister has been forcibly carried away." (22) Pursuing the Lord in a single chariot forthwith the bragging fool, who did not know the extent of greatness of the almighty Lord, shouted out to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) saying "Stop ! Stop !!" (23) (Nay,) drawing (the string of) his very tough bow at full length, he hit Śrī Kṛṣṇa with three arrows and said, "Wait a moment, my enemy, a (veritable) disgrace to the race of Yadu ! (24) Having kidnapped my sister even as a crow would steal a sacrificial offering, where are you going ? I shall presently take away your pride, O fool, who are (so) wily and given to strategic fighting. (25) Leave my sister before you bite the dust when struck with my arrows." Smilingly tearing his bow Śrī Kṛṣṇa pierced Rukmī with six arrows, his four horses with eight more, his charioteer with two and his ensign with three. Taking up another bow, he too hit Śrī Kṛṣṇa (back) with five shafts. (26-27) Struck with those volleys of arrows, however, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) rent his bow asunder. He snatched yet another and the imperishable Lord cleft that too. (28) The celebrated Śrī Hari (likewise) tore every weapon that he took up (subsequently one after another)—viz., an iron club, a sharp-edged spear, a pike, a sword and a shield, a javelin and a bludgeon. (29) Then, leaping down from the chariot, sword in hand, he darted in rage at Śrī Kṛṣṇa with intent to kill Him, (even) as a moth would into a flame. (30) While he was (thus) rushing (towards Him), the Lord split his sword and shield (too) into particles with His shafts and picked up a sharp-edged sword, in readiness to make short work of Rukmī. (31) Overwhelmed with fear to behold this endeavour (on the part of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) to dispose of her brother, the virtuous Rukmiṇī fell at the feet of her Spouse and pitifully prayed (as follows):—(32) "O Master of Yoga, O incomprehensible Lord of the universe, O blessed god of gods, O mighty-armed One ! You ought not to kill my brother." (33)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तया परित्रासविकम्पिताङ्गया शुचावशुभ्यन्मुखरूढकण्ठया ।
 कातर्यविस्त्रसितहेममालया गृहीतपादः करुणो न्यवर्तत । ३४ ।
 ग्रैलेन बद्ध्वा तमसाधुकारिणं सश्मश्रुकेशं प्रवपन् व्यरूपयत् ।
 तावन्ममर्दुः परसैन्यमद्भुतं यदुप्रवीरा नलिनीं यथा गजाः । ३५ ।
 कृष्णात्तिकमुपव्रज्य ददृशुस्त्र रुक्मिणम् । तथाभूतं हतप्रायं दृष्ट्वा सङ्कर्षणो विभुः ।
 विमुच्य बद्धं करुणो भगवान् कृष्णमब्रवीत् । ३६ ।
 असाध्विदं त्वया कृष्ण कृतमस्मज्जुगुप्सितम् । वपनं श्मश्रुकेशानां वैरूढं सुहृदो वधः । ३७ ।
 मैवास्मान् साध्यसूयेथा भ्रातुर्वैरूढ्यचिन्तया । सुखदुःखदो न चान्योऽस्ति यतः स्वकृतभुक् पुमान् । ३८ ।
 बन्धुर्वधार्हदोषोऽपि न बन्धोर्वधमर्हति । त्याज्यः स्वेनैव दोषेण हतः किं हन्यते पुनः । ३९ ।

क्षत्रियाणामयं धर्मः प्रजापतिविनिर्मितः । भ्रातापि भ्रातरं हन्याद् येन घोरतरस्ततः । ४० ।
 राज्यस्य भूमेर्वित्तस्य स्त्रियो मानस्य तेजसः । मानिनोऽन्यस्य वा हेतोः श्रीमदान्धाः क्षिपन्ति हि । ४१ ।
 तवेयं विषमा बुद्धिः सर्वभूतेषु दुर्हदाम् । यन्मन्यसे सदाभद्रं सुहृदां भद्रमज्ञवत् । ४२ ।
 आत्ममोहो नृणामेष कल्पते देवमायया । सुहृद् दुर्हृददासीन इति देहात्मनानिनाम् । ४३ ।
 एक एव परो ह्यात्मा सर्वेषामपि देहिनाम् । नानेव गृह्णते मूर्खैर्यथा ज्योतिर्यथा नभः । ४४ ।
 देह आद्यन्तवानेष द्रव्यप्राणगुणात्मकः । आत्मन्यविद्यया क्लृप्तः संसारयति देहिनम् । ४५ ।
 नात्मनोऽन्येन संयोगो वियोगश्चासतः सति । तद्धेतुत्वान्तत्प्रसिद्धेर्दृग्गुपाभ्यां यथा रवेः । ४६ ।
 जन्मादयस्तु देहस्य विक्रियानात्मनः क्वचित् । कलानामिव नैवेन्दोर्मूर्तिर्हास्य कुहूरिव । ४७ ।
 यथा शयान आत्मानं विषयान् फलमेव च । अनुभुङ्क्तेऽन्यसत्यर्थं तथाऽऽप्नोत्यबुधो भवम् । ४८ ।
 तस्मादज्ञानजं शोकमात्तशोषविमोहनम् । तत्त्वज्ञानेन निर्हत्य स्वस्था भव शुचिस्मिते । ४९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : With His feet thus clasped by Rukmiṇī—whose limbs were perceptibly shaking with terror, (nay,) whose mouth was being parched and throat choked through grief and whose gold necklace had been displaced through nervousness—the merciful Lord desisted (from His purpose). (34) Binding the evil-doer with (his own) scarf, the Lord disfigured him by shaving him (with the blade of His sword) in such a way as to leave (intact) a part of his moustaches and locks. Meanwhile the chosen among the Yādava warriors (led by Balarāma) crushed the wonderful army of the enemy (even) as elephants would trample a lotus plant. (35) Making their way into the presence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, they found there Rukmi reduced to that (ignominious) plight and all but dead (through shame). Filled with pity to see him bound, the almighty Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa released him and spoke to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (thus):—(36) "Kṛṣṇa I you have perpetrated an impious act abhorred by our race. (Partially) removing the moustaches and (curly) locks of a relative and (thereby) disfiguring him is tantamount to killing him. (37) (Turning towards Rukmiṇī,) please do not take offence with us, O good lady, thinking of the disfiguration of your brother. None else is responsible for one's joy and sorrow; for a man reaps the fruit of his own doings (in the shape of pleasurable and painful experiences). (38) A relative does not deserve death at the hands of his relative even if he has committed an offence deserving such treatment and should be let off. Why should he who stands killed by his own offence be killed again? (39) Such is the code of conduct specially prescribed for the Kṣatriya race by Brahmā (the lord of created beings), by virtue of which even a brother is permitted to kill his (own brother). Hence it is (so) exceedingly cruel. (40) (Reverting to Śrī Kṛṣṇa,) the proud alone, who are blinded by pride of fortune, offer indignity to their relatives for the sake of dominion, land, (other movable) property, women, honour, dignity or any other consideration. (41) (Turning to Rukmiṇī once more,) it is your differential outlook through which you, like an ignorant person, constantly bear ill-will, among all created beings, to those who are ill-disposed to you, and wish well to those who are kindly disposed to you (remaining neutral to those who are indifferent to you). (42) By the Lord's Māyā (deluding potency) is engendered this self-deception in the mind of those who are identified with the body, that a certain individual is your friend, another your enemy and a third, neutral to you. (43) Indeed the transcendent Self, which is but common to all embodied beings, is perceived by the ignorant as varied, even as a luminary (such as the sun or the moon) is viewed as different (in relation to the different vessels full of water in which the luminary is reflected), or as the sky is conceived as different (in relation to the different apartments or jars in which it is enclosed). (44) This (objective) body (psycho-physical organism), constituted as it is of physical substances (the five gross elements), the (five) senses and the objects of their perception (viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell), and has a beginning and an end, and which has been projected through ignorance on the Self, subjects the soul (which is essentially free from birth and death) to metempsychosis. (45) There is no union or disunion of the Self with or from any other substance (such as the body, or the eye with which it is perceived), there being no such substance (other than the Self), O virtuous lady, and the appearance of such other substances (as the body or the eyes) being attributable to the Self (alone), (just) as there is no union or disunion of the sun with or from the eye and colour (both of which owe their existence and appearance to the sun itself). (46) Changes commencing from birth (and ending in death) pertain to the body alone and never to the soul, (just) as waxing and waning etc., pertain to the phases (of the moon) and not to the moon itself (which is ever the same). And indeed death (of the body) is attributed to the soul in the same way as the total disappearance of illumination is spoken of as Amāvāsyā (denoting the disappearance of the moon itself). (47) (Just) as a dreaming man perceives his own self (as invested with a body etc.) as well as the objects of perception (sound, taste and so on), and also experiences pleasure, pain etc. as the fruit of his past doings, even though none of these (really) exists (not even the body through which he seems to enjoy the pleasures etc., his actual body lying inert all the while), so does the ignorant Jīva undergo transmigration. (48) Therefore, completely getting rid—through realization of Truth—of grief born of ignorance, that withers and infatuates the soul, be consoled, O young lady of beautiful smiles ! (49)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं भगवता तन्वी रामेण प्रतिबोधिता । वैमनस्यं परित्यज्य मनो बुद्ध्या समादधे । ५० ।

प्राणावशेष उत्सृष्टो द्विर्द्भिर्हतबलप्रभः । स्मरन् विरूपकरणं वितथात्ममनोरथः । ५१ ।

चक्रे भोजकटं नाम निवासाय महत् पुरम् । अहत्वा दुर्मतिं कृष्णमप्रत्युह्य यवीयसीम् ।

कुण्डिनं न प्रवेक्ष्यामीत्युक्त्वा तत्रावसद् रुषा । ५२ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Shaking off disconsolation when thus comforted by Lord Balarāma, the slim lady eased her mind by recourse to reason. (50) Allowed to escape with life alone, his army as well as his glory having been smashed by his enemies (the Yadus), and his own hopes belied, and brooding over his disfigurement, Rukmī built for his residence a large city, Bhojakaṭa by name. (Solemnly) declaring that he would not (re-) enter Kuṇḍinapura without killing the evil-minded Kṛṣṇa and recovering Rukmiṇī (his younger sister), he lived there in a spirit of indignation. (51-52)

भगवान् भीष्मकसुतामेवं निर्जित्य भूमिपान् । पुरमानीय विधिवदुपयेये कुरुद्वह । ५३ ।

तदा महोत्सवो नृणां यदुपुर्या गृहे गृहे । अभूदनन्यभावानां कृष्णो यदुपतो नृप । ५४ ।

नरा नार्यश्च मुदिताः प्रमृष्टमणिकुण्डलाः । पारिवर्हमुपाजह्वर्ययोश्चित्रवाससोः । ५५ ।

सा वृष्णिपुंस्तुतिभित्तकेतुभिर्विचित्रमाल्याम्बरखतोरणैः ।

बभौ प्रतिद्वार्यपकुम्भमङ्गलैरापूर्णकुम्भागरुक्षूपदीपकैः । ५६ ।

सित्तमार्गा मदल्युद्धिराहूतप्रेष्ठभूभुजाय । गजैर्द्वास्तु परामृष्टरम्भापूरोपशोभिता । ५७ ।

कुरुसुञ्जयकैकेयविदर्भयदुकुल्यः । मिथो मुमुदिरे तस्मिन् सम्प्रमात् परिधावताम् । ५८ ।

रुक्मिण्या हरणं श्रुत्वा गीयमानं ततस्ततः । राजानो राजकन्याश्च बभूवुर्भूशविस्मिताः । ५९ ।

द्वारकायामभूद् राजन् महापोदः पुरीकसाम् । रुक्मिण्या रमयोपेतं दृष्ट्वा कृष्णं श्रियः पतिम् । ६० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे रुक्मिण्युद्वाहे चतुःपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ५४ ।

Having thus completely routed (hostile) kings and brought Rukmiṇī (the daughter of Bhiṣmaka) to Dwārakā, the Lord espoused her with due ceremony, O jewel among the Kurus ! (53) Great was the festivity on that occasion in the house of all men at Dwārakā (the city of the Yadus), who cherished exclusive devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Ruler of the Yadus, O protector of men ! (54) Full of joy and adorned with ear-rings made of highly polished gems, men as well as women brought (valuable) presents for the bride and the Bridegroom, who were clad in picturesque (bridal) attire. (55) That city of the Vṛṣṇis put up a smart appearance with flags raised in honour of Indra, picturesque wreaths, tapestries and bejewelled ornamental arches, auspicious articles (such as fried grains of paddy, sprouts of barley and flowers etc.) placed in front of every door as well as with pitchers full of water, aloë-wood burning as incense and lights. (56) It had its roads moistened by the elephants, shedding temporal juice, of invited friendly kings, and was graced with tall plantain and areca-nut trees set up at the entrances. (57) Among those running to and fro through excitement in that city the Kurus, the Śrījayas, the Kaikeyas, the Vidarbhas, the Yadus and the Kuntis rejoiced to meet one another. (58) Hearing the story how Rukmiṇī was carried off (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa), which was being sung at every place, the (assembled) princes and princesses felt greatly astonished. (59) Great was the jubilation, O king, among the citizens in Dwārakā at the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Spouse of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity), united (in wedlock) with Rukmiṇī, who was no other than (the said) Goddess Lakṣmī. (60)

This ends the fifty-fourth discourse, forming part of the story of Rukmiṇī's wedding, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LV

The story of Pradyumna's birth (and the destruction of the demon Śambara)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कामस्तु वासुदेवांशो दग्धः प्राग् रुद्रमन्युना । देहोपपत्तये भूयस्तमेव प्रत्यपद्यत । १ ।
स एव जातो वैदर्भ्या कृष्णवीर्यसमुद्भवः । प्रद्युम्न इति विख्यातः सर्वतोऽनवमः पितुः । २ ।
तं शम्बरः कामरूपी हत्वा लोकमनिर्दशम् । स विदित्वाऽऽत्मनः शत्रुं प्रास्योदन्वत्याद् गृहम् । ३ ।
तं निर्जगार बलवान् मीनः सोऽप्यपरैः सह । वृतो जालेन महता गुहीतो मत्स्यजीविभिः । ४ ।
तं शम्बराय कैवर्ती उपाज्जहुर्पायनम् । सुदा महानसं नीत्वावद्यन् स्वधितिनाद्धतम् । ५ ।
दृष्ट्वा तदुदरे बालं मायावर्त्य न्यवेदयन् । नारदोऽकथयत् सर्वं तस्याः शङ्कितचेतसः ।

बालस्य तत्त्वमुत्पत्तिं मत्स्योदरनिवेशनम् । ६ ।

सा च कामस्य वै पत्नी रतिर्नाम यशस्विनी । पत्युर्निर्दग्धदेहस्य देहोत्पत्तिं प्रतीक्षती । ७ ।
निरूपिता शम्बरेण सा सृपौदनसाधने । कामदेवं शिशुं बुद्ध्वा चक्रे स्नेहं तदारभके । ८ ।
नातिदीर्घेण कालेन स कार्ष्णी रुढयौवनः । जनयामास नारीणां वीक्षन्तीनां च विभ्रमम् । ९ ।

सा तं पतिं पद्मदलाद्यतेक्षणं प्रलम्बबाहुं नरलोकसुन्दरम् ।

सग्रीडहासोत्तभितभ्रुवेक्षती प्रीत्योपतस्थे रतिरङ्ग सौरतैः । १० ।

तामहा भगवान् कार्णार्पितस्ते मतिरन्यथा । मातृभावमतिक्रम्य वर्तसे कामिनी यथा । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having been burnt (to ashes) in his former birth by the wrath of Rudra (the god of destruction), Kāma (the god of love), a portion of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, sought for his part Him alone once more for investiture with a body. (1) Sprung from the loins of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the selfsame god of love was (re-) born of Rukmīṇī (the princess of Vidarbha) and became widely known as Pradyumna, and proved to be a compeer of his Father in every respect. (2) Coming to know Pradyumna to be his (future) enemy, the demon Śambara, who could assume any form at will, carried off the babe (from the lying-in-chamber) while it was not yet ten days old and, casting it into the sea, went home. (3) A mighty fish swallowed it and the former too was alongwith others enmeshed in a huge net by fishermen. (4) The fishermen brought the fish as a present to Śambara and the cooks (in charge of his kitchen) took it into the kitchen and cut the wonderful fish with a knife. (5) Discovering a babe in the bowels of the fish, they handed it over to Māyāvati (a maid-servant of Śambara), whose mind was full of doubts; and the celestial sage Nārada (presently) told her everything as to who the babe was, how it was born and how it had (finally) made its way into the bowels of the fish. (6) The maid-servant was really speaking (no other than) the illustrious consort of Kāma, Rati by name, who had been (eagerly) awaiting (all the while) the reincarnation of her spouse, whose body had been burnt to ashes (by Lord Śiva). (7) Having been entrusted with (the work of) cooking pulses and rice, she fastened her affection on the babe now that she had come to know the child to be (none other than) Kāmadeva (the god of love). (8) At no distant date Pradyumna (the son of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) attained (the prime of) youth and kindled love in the breast of women who gazed on him. (9) Lovingly regarding him, her husband—who had eyes big as the petals of a lotus and exceptionally long arms, nay, who was charming among men—with bashful smiles and upraised eyebrows, Rati, O dear Parikṣit, greeted him with amorous gestures. (10) Lord Pradyumna (the son of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) said to her, "(I find that) your affection (towards me) has got perverted inasmuch as, having abandoned your motherly sentiment, you are behaving as a paramour (which is rather strange), O mother !" (11)

रतिरुवाच

भवान् नारायणसुतः शम्बरेणाहृतो गृहात् । अहं तेऽधिकृता पत्नी रतिः कामो भवान् प्रभो । १२ ।
एष त्वानिर्दशं सिन्ध्यावक्षिपच्छम्बरोऽसुरः । मत्स्योऽग्रसीत्तदुदरादिह प्राप्तो भवान् प्रभो । १३ ।
तमिमं जहि दुर्धर्षं दुर्जयं शत्रुमात्मनः । मायाशतविदं त्वं च मायाभिर्माहनादिभिः । १४ ।
परिशोचति ते माता कुररीव गतप्रजा । पुत्रस्त्रेहाकुला दीना विवत्सा गौरिवातुरा । १५ ।
प्रभाष्यैवं ददौ विद्यां प्रद्युम्नाय महात्मने । मायावती महामायां सर्वमायाविनाशिनीम् । १६ ।
स च शम्बरमध्येत्य संयुगाय समाह्वयत् । अविषह्यैस्तमाक्षेपैः क्षिपन् सञ्जनयन् कलिम् । १७ ।
सोऽधिकक्षिप्तो दुर्वचोभिः पदा हत इवोरगः । निश्चक्राम गदापाणिरमर्षात्प्राग्लोचनः । १८ ।
गदामाविध्य तरसा प्रद्युम्नाय महात्मने । प्रक्षिप्य व्यनदन्नादं वज्रनिषेवनिष्ठुरम् । १९ ।
तामापतन्तीं भगवान् प्रद्युम्नो गदया गदाम् । अपास्य शत्रवे क्रुद्धः प्राहिणोत् स्वगदां नृप । २० ।
स च मायां समाश्रित्य दैतेयीं मयदर्शिताम् । मुमुचेऽस्त्रमयं वर्षं काष्णौ वैहायसोऽसुरः । २१ ।
बाध्यमानोऽस्त्रवर्षेण रौक्मिणेयो महारथः । सत्त्वात्मिकां महाविद्यां सर्वमायोपमर्दिनीम् । २२ ।
ततो गौह्यकगान्धर्वपेशाचोरगराक्षसीः । प्रायुङ्क्त शतशो दैत्यः कार्णिव्यधमयत् स ताः । २३ ।
निशातमसिमुद्यम्य सकिरीटं सकुण्डलम् । शम्बरस्य शिरः कायात् ताप्रश्मश्र्वोजसाहरत् । २४ ।
आकीर्यमाणो दिविजैः स्तुवद्भिः कुसुमोत्करैः । भार्ययाम्बरचारिण्या पुं नीतो विहायसा । २५ ।

Rati replied : "You are the son of Nārāyaṇa (Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa), who were stolen away by the demon Śambara from the lying-in-chamber. I am your appointed wife, Rati, and you are (no other than) Love, my consort ! (12) While you were not yet ten days old, the said demon Śambara cast you into the sea, where a fish devoured you and from the bowels of that fish you have reached this place (the residence of Śambara), my spouse ! (13) Get rid of this demon, your formidable foe—(so) difficult to conquer, knowing as he does hundreds of wiles—by recourse to (similar) wiles like stupefaction. (14) Overwhelmed with parental affection, your afflicted and disconsolate mother, is wailing like a she-ospree whose young has departed or like a cow deprived of its calf." (15) Advising him thus, Māyāvati (Rati, so-called because of her being adept in wiles) imparted to the high-souled Pradyumna a spell called Mahāmāyā, which was capable of undoing all kinds of wiles. (16) Approaching Śambara, Pradyumna accordingly challenged him to a combat, reproaching him with unbearable taunts and (thus) stirring up strife. (17) Taunted with abuses, Śambara, like a serpent trodden under foot, sallied forth, mace in hand, his eyes suffused with blood through indignation. (18) Whirling his mace with (great) velocity and hurling it at the high-minded Pradyumna, he uttered a roar harsh as a clap of thunder. (19) Beating back with his own the mace as it came flying at him, the almighty Pradyumna angrily hurled his own mace at the enemy, O protector of men ! (20) Fully resorting to the illusive demoniac devices taught by Maya, the demon rained a volley of missiles on Pradyumna (the son of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), himself remaining (unperceived) in the air. (21) Being plagued with the shower of missiles, Pradyumna (the son of Rukmiṇī), who was a great car-warrior (able to encounter ten thousand warriors single-handed) brought into use a great charm consisting (purely) of Sattva and capable of rendering ineffectual all kinds of illusive devices. (22) The demon then employed hundreds of illusive devices practised by the Guhyakas (Yakṣas), Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Piśācas (fiends), Nāgas and Rākṣasas (ogre). The celebrated Pradyumna (the son of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) counteracted them (all). (23) Taking up a sharp-edged sword, he then forcibly severed from Śambara's body his head with a coppery beard and moustaches alongwith his diadem and ear-rings. (24) Being showered over with heaps of flowers by heavenly beings, who were singing his praises (all the while), Pradyumna was taken to Dwārakā through the air by his consort (Māyāvati), who was capable of journeying by the air. (25)

अन्तःपुत्रं राजन् ललनाशतसङ्कुलम् । विवेश पत्न्या गगनाद् विद्युतेव बलाहकः । २६ ।
 तं दृष्ट्वा जलदश्याम् पीतकौशेयवाससम् । प्रलम्बबाहुं ताम्राक्षं सुस्मितं रुचिराननम् । २७ ।
 स्वलङ्कृतमुखाम्भोजं नीलवक्रालकालिभिः । कृष्णं मत्वा स्त्रियो ह्रीता निलिल्युत्तर तत्र ह । २८ ।
 अवधार्य शनैरीषद्वैलक्षणेन योषितः । उपजग्मुः प्रमुदिताः सस्त्रीरत्रं सुविस्मिताः । २९ ।
 अथ तत्रासितापाङ्गी वैदर्भी वल्गुभाषिणी । अस्मरत् स्वसुतं नष्टं स्नेहसुतपयोधरा । ३० ।
 को न्वयं नरवैर्दयः कस्य वा कमलक्षणाः । धृतः कया वा जठरे केयं लब्धा त्वेन वा । ३१ ।
 मम चाप्यात्मजो नष्टो नीतो यः सूतिकागृहात् । एतत्तुल्यवयोरूपो यदि जीवति कुत्रचित् । ३२ ।
 कथं त्वेन संप्राप्तं सारूयं शार्ङ्गधन्वनः । आकृत्यावयवैर्गत्या स्वरहासावलोकनैः । ३३ ।
 स एव वा भवेन्नृपं यो मे गर्भे धृतोऽर्भकः । अमुष्मिन् प्रीतिरधिका वामः स्फुरति मे भुजः । ३४ ।

Like a cloud attended with lightning, Pradyumna descended with his spouse from the sky into the magnificent gynaeceum crowded with hundreds of ladies. (26) Seeing him, sombre as a cloud and clad in yellow silk, with exceptionally long arms and reddish eyes, wearing a winsome smile and a charming countenance, his lotus-like face graced with locks of dark-blue curly hair, and thinking him to be Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the ladies, so the story goes, hid themselves wherever they could (out of bashfulness). (27-28) Concluding gradually through slight dissimilarity (viz., the absence of Kaustubha and Śrīvatsa) that he was not Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the ladies went up to him overjoyed, yet greatly amazed to find him accompanied with an excellent young lady. (29) Presently Rukmīṇī (the princess of Vidarbha)—the corners of whose eyes were (naturally) dark (without the use of collyrium) and who was gifted with a sweet tongue—recalled on that occasion (through similarity of features) her own lost son, milk flowing from her breasts through (maternal) affection. (30) (She said to herself,) "Who could this jewel among men with lotus-eyes possibly be? Again, whose son may he be or by whom was he borne in her womb and who, in fact may be this young woman obtained by him (through good-luck)? (31) My own son too—who was stolen away (by some evil spirit) from the lying-in-chamber and has been missing (all these years)—must have attained an age similar to this boy's and come to possess similar features, should he be living anywhere. (32) But how could this boy acquire (such) similarity of form with the Lord bearing the Śārṅga bow in point of features, limbs, gait, voice, smiles and glances? (33) Or he may undoubtedly be the selfsame boy who was borne in my womb; (for) great is my affection for him and my left arm is throbbing. (34)

एवं मीमांसमानायां वैदर्भ्यां देवकीसुतः । देवक्यानकदुन्दुभ्यामुत्तमश्लोक आगमत् ॥३५॥

विज्ञातार्थोऽपि भगवांस्तृष्णीमास जनार्दनः । नारदोऽकथयत् सर्वं शम्बराहरपादिकम् ॥३६॥

तच्छ्रुत्वा महदाश्चर्यं कृष्णान्तःपुरयोषितः । अभ्यनन्दन् बहून्वृद्धान् नष्टं मृतमिवागतम् ॥३७॥

देवकी वसुदेवश्च कृष्णारामौ तथा स्त्रियः । दम्पती तौ परिबुध्य रुक्मिणीं च ययुर्वदम् ॥३८॥

नष्टं प्रद्युम्नायातमाकर्ण्य द्वारकौकसः । अहो मृत इवायातो बालो दिष्ट्येति हान्नृवन् ॥३९॥

यं वै मुहुः पितृसरूपनिजेशभावास्तन्मातरो यदभजन् रहूढभावाः ।

चित्रं न तत् खलु रामस्पदबिम्बबिम्बे कामे स्मरेऽक्षिविषये किमुतान्यनार्यः ॥४०॥

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्योऽसंहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे प्रद्युम्नोत्पत्तिनिरूपणं नाम पञ्चपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः ॥५५॥

While Rukmīṇī (the princess of Vidarbha) was thus speculating, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devakī) of excellent renown made His appearance (there) alongwith (His parents) Devakī and Vasudeva. (35) Although the (whole) truth was fully known to Him, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is petitioned by all men) remained quiet. The sage Nārada (however) narrated (to them) everything as to how the demon Śambara had stolen away the boy (while he was yet a babe) and so on. (36) Hearing of that great miracle (viz., the baby's escaping alive and unhurt from the bowels of a fish and his subsequently killing a powerful demon) the ladies of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's gynaeceum greeted with joy the boy who had been missing for many years (past) and had returned (to life) as it were, though (once) dead. (37) Devakī and Vasudeva, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, as well as Rukmīṇī and the other ladies were transported with joy to embrace the (newly arrived) couple. (38) Hearing that Pradyumna had returned, though (long) lost, the citizens of Dwārakā—so the story goes—said (to one another), "Oh, the boy has by good-luck come back (to life) as it were though (once) dead!" (39) Indeed it is no wonder that when Pradyumna (Love incarnate)—whose very thought agitates one's mind, nay, who was an exact likeness of the personality of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Abode of Rāmā, the goddess of beauty and good fortune)—came within sight, (even) his mothers, who often (mis-) took him for their own Spouse due to his close resemblance with his Father, sought seclusion (out of modesty, love being kindled in their heart). Much more did other women feel like that in his presence. (40)

Thus ends the fifty-fifth discourse entitled "The story of Pradyumna's birth." in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षट्पञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LVI

The story of the Syamantaka gem; Śrī Kṛṣṇa weds

Jāmbavatī and Satyabhāmā

श्रीशुक उवाच

सत्राजितः स्वतनयां कृष्णाय कृतकिल्बिषः । स्यमन्तकेन मणिना स्वयमुद्यम्य दत्तवान् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having done a wrong (to Śrī Kṛṣṇa), Satrājīt gave away to Śrī Kṛṣṇa of his own accord after due exertion his daughter (Satyabhāmā) alongwith the Syamantaka gem. (1)

राजोवाच

सत्राजितः किमकरोद् ब्रह्मन् कृष्णस्य किल्बिषम् । स्यमन्तकः कुतस्तस्य कस्माद् दत्ता मुना हरेः । २ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : What wrong did Satrājīt perpetrate against Śrī Kṛṣṇa, O holy one ? Wherefrom was the Syamantaka gem got by him and why did he give away his daughter to Śrī Hari ? (2)

श्रीशुक उवाच

आसीत् सत्राजितः सूर्यो भक्तस्य परमः सखा । प्रीतस्तस्मै मणिं प्रादात् सूर्यस्तुष्टः स्यमन्तकम् । ३ ।

स तं विभ्रन् मणिं कण्ठे भ्राजमानो यथा रविः । प्रविष्टो द्वारकां राजंस्तेजसा नोपलक्षितः । ४ ।

तं विलोक्य जना दूरातेजसा मुष्टदृष्टयः । दिव्यतेऽक्षैर्भगवते शशंसुः सूर्यशङ्किताः । ५ ।

नारायण नमस्तेऽस्तु शङ्खचक्रगदाधर । दामोदराविन्दाक्ष गोविन्द यदुनन्दन । ६ ।

एष आयाति सविता त्वां दिदृक्षुर्जगत्पते । मुष्णन् राभस्तिचक्रेण नृणां चक्षुषि तिग्मगुः । ७ ।

नन्वन्विच्छन्ति ते मार्गं त्रिलोक्यां विबुधर्षभाः । ज्ञात्वाद्य गृहे यदुष्टु द्रष्टुं त्वां यात्यजः प्रभो । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : The sun-god, though adorable in the eyes of Satrājīt, his devotee, behaved as a loving friend to him. Pleased with him, the sun-god bestowed on him the Syamantaka gem. (3) Wearing that gem about his neck and shining as the sun (because of that gem), he entered Dwārakā (presumably from his place of worship in the outskirts of the city) but could not be identified. O king, through his (dazzling) brilliance. (4) Gazing at him from a distance, their eyes blinded with his splendour, and suspecting him to be the sun-god, people reported his arrival to the Lord, who was playing at dice (as follows):—(5) "Hail to You, O Nārāyaṇa, the Wielder of a conch, discus and mace ! O Lord, who (once) had a cord tied about Your abdomen (by mother Yaśodā by way of punishment), O lotus-eyed One, O Protector of cows, O Scion of Yadu ! (6) Dazzling the eyes of men with his rays, here comes the glorious sun-god with intent to see You, O Lord of the universe ! (7) Indeed the foremost of the gods (Brahmā and others) in the three worlds seek the way to You (but fail to find You). Having come to know You as living incognito at present among the Yadus, the sun-god (who is self-existent) comes to see You, O Lord." (8)

श्रीशुक उवाच

निशम्य बालवचनं प्रहस्याम्बुजलोचनः । प्राह नासौ रविर्देवः सत्राजिन्मणिना ज्वलन् । ९ ।

सत्राजित् स्वगृहं श्रीमत् कृतकौतुकमङ्गलम् । प्रविश्य देवसदने मणिं विप्रैर्यवेशयत् । १० ।

दिने दिने स्वर्णभारानष्टौ स सृजति प्रभो । दुर्भिक्षमार्यरिष्टानि सर्पाधिव्याधयोऽशुभाः ।

न सन्ति मायिनस्तत्र यत्रास्तेऽभ्यर्चिता मणिः । ११ ।

स याचितो मणिं क्वापि यदुराजाय शौरिणा । नैवार्थकामुकः प्रादाद् याच्ञाभङ्गमतर्कयन् । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the lotus-eyed One) heartily laughed to hear the report of those unknowing persons and observed, "He is not the sun-god, it is (only) Satrājīt glowing with his gem." (9) Entering in state his own splendid residence, which had been consecrated as a mark of festivity, Satrājīt caused the gem to be (duly) installed by Brāhmaṇas in the apartment intended for gods. (10) The gem, O lord, yielded from day to day gold weighing eight Bhāras (equivalent to three maunds and five seers approximately). Famine, pestilence and (other) calamities, serpents, mental worries and bodily ailments and other evils and rogues no longer exist where the gem stands worshipped. (11) Though solicited once by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who thought that the king was the fittest person to possess such a wonderful gem), Satrājīt, covetous as he was of wealth, did not hand it over to Ugrasena (the ruler of the Yadus), not foreseeing the (evil) consequences of rejecting the request (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Person). (12)

तमेकदा मणिं कण्ठे प्रतिमुच्य महप्रभम् । प्रसेनो हयमारुह्य मृगयां व्यचरद् वने । १३ ।

प्रसेनं सहयं हत्वा मणिमाच्छिद्य केसरी । गिरि विशङ्खाम्बता निहतो मणिमिच्छता । १४ ।

सोऽपि चक्रे कुमारस्य मणिं ब्रीडनकं बिले । अपश्यन् भ्रातरं भ्राता सत्राजित् पर्यतप्यत । १५ ।

प्रायः कृष्णेन निहतो मणिग्रीवो वनं गतः । भ्राता ममेति तच्छ्रुत्वा कर्णे कर्णेऽजपञ्जनाः । १६ ।

भगवांस्तदुपश्रुत्य दुर्यशो लिप्तमात्मनि । मारुतं प्रसेनपदवीमन्वपद्यत नागरैः । १७ ।

हतं प्रसेनमश्वं च वीक्ष्य केसरिणा वने । तं चाद्रिपृष्ठे निहतपृक्षेण ददृशुर्जनाः । १८ ।

Wearing that gem of surpassing lustre about his neck, one day, Prasena (brother of Satrājīt) went about a hunting on horseback in the forest. (13) Having killed Prasena, horse and all, and snatched the gem (out of curiosity because of its uncommon lustre), a lion was, while entering its mountainous cave, made short work of by Jāmbavān (the celebrated king of bears of Rāmāyaṇa fame), who wished to have it. (14) The latter for his part used the gem as a plaything for his boy. Not finding his brother (back), Satrājīt, the other brother, felt very miserable. (15) (He said to his own people,) "Surely my brother, who had gone to the forest with the gem about his neck, has been killed by Śrī Kṛṣṇa !" Hearing that, people (of a malicious disposition) spread the rumour in a whisper from ear to ear. (16) When the Lord learnt this, He followed the tracks (of the horse carrying) Prasena alongwith some citizens (of Dwārakā) in order to wipe off the imputation cast on Him. (17) Discovering (first) Prasena as well as his horse killed in the forest by a lion, people further saw the lion (itself) killed on the mountain side by a bear. (18)

ऋक्षराजबिलं भीममन्थेन तमसाऽऽवृतम् । एको विवेश भगवानवस्थाप्य बहिः प्रजाः । १९ ।

तत्र दृष्ट्वा मणिश्रेष्ठं बालक्रीडनकं कृतम् । हतं कृतमतिस्तस्मिन्नवतस्थेऽर्धकान्तिके । २० ।

तमपूर्वं नरं दृष्ट्वा धात्री चुक्रोश भीतवत् । तच्छ्रुत्वाभ्यद्रवत् क्रुद्धो जाम्बवान् बलिनां वरः । २१ ।

स वै भगवता तेन युयुधे स्वामिनाऽऽत्मनः । पुरुषं प्राकृतं मत्वा कुपितो नानुभाववित् । २२ ।

द्वन्द्वयुद्धं सुतुमुलमभयोर्विजिगीषतोः । आयुधाश्मद्रुपदैर्धिः क्रव्यार्थं श्येनयोरिव । २३ ।

आसीत्तदष्टाविंशहमितरैरमुष्टिभिः । वज्रनिष्पेषपरुषैरवश्रममहर्निशम् । २४ ।

कृष्णमुष्टिविनिष्पातनिष्पिष्टाङ्गोरुन्धनः । क्षीणसत्त्वः खिन्नगात्रस्तमाहातीव विस्मितः । २५ ।

जाने त्वां सर्वभूतानां प्राण ओजः सहो बलम् । विष्णुं पुराणपुण्यं प्रभविष्णुमधीश्वरम् । २६ ।

त्वं हि विश्वसृजां स्रष्टा सृज्यानामपि यच्च सत् । कालः कलयतामीशः पर आत्मा तथाऽऽत्मनाम् । २७ ।

यस्येष्टदुःकलितरोषकटाक्षमोक्षैर्वर्त्तादिशत् क्षुभितनक्रतिमिङ्गिलोऽग्निः ।

सेतुः कृतः स्वयश उज्ज्वलिता च लङ्का रक्षःशिरांसि भुवि पेटुरिषुक्षतानि । २८ ।

इति विज्ञातविज्ञानमृक्षराजानमच्युतः । व्याजहार महाराज भगवान् देवकीसुतः । २९ ।

अभिमृश्यारविन्दाक्षः पाणिना शङ्करेण तम् । कृपया परया भक्तं प्रेमगम्भीरया गिरा । ३० ।

मणिहेतोरिह प्राप्ता वयमृक्षपते बिलम् । मिथ्याभिशापं प्रमृजन्नात्मनो मणिनामुना । ३१ ।

इत्युक्तः स्वां दुहितरं कन्यां जाम्बवतीं मुदा । अर्हणार्थं स मणिना कृष्णायोपजहार ह । ३२ ।

The Lord stationed the people outside and entered alone the fearful cave of Jāmbavān (the king of bears), covered with thick darkness. (19) Espying there the excellent gem converted into a toy for an infant, and resolved to carry it away, the Lord waited there by side of the babe. (20) The nurse shrieked as though afraid to see that wonderful human being (but really on perceiving the latter's intention to carry the gem away). Enraged to hear the scream, Jāmbavān, the foremost of the mighty, rushed to meet Him. (21) Thinking Him to be an ordinary mortal and failing to perceive His greatness (divinity), Jāmbavān, full of rage, actually fought with the said almighty Lord, his own Master. (22) A most tumultuous duel ensued between the two, keen as they were to overthrow each other, like a pair of hawks contending for a piece of flesh, and fought with weapons (such as a mace), rocks, trees and (bare) arms and (finally) struck each other with their fists—which fell as severely as the strokes of lightning. The combat raged day and night without a pause for (as many as) twenty-eight days. (23-24) Having his many joints and muscles pounded with the strokes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's fists and his strength and courage (too) depleted and limbs perspiring (all over), Jāmbavān spoke to Him (thus), highly astonished (at this unexpected discomfiture, which he had never experienced before):—(25) "I (now) conclude You to be (none else than) the all-powerful Viṣṇu, the most ancient Person, the suzerain Lord, (nay), the life-energy, the organic power, the strength of mind as well as the bodily strength of all created beings. (26) Indeed You are the Creator (even) of Brahmā and others (the progenitors of the universe), as well as the Reality that underlies (as the material cause of) even created substances (such as the Mahat-tattva), the Ruler, in the form of the Time-Spirit, of those that control and destroy others, the supreme Self of (all) embodied souls. (27) (I now understand) You are the same Lord Rāmacandra (my Master) to whom the ocean with its crocodiles and whales thrown into agitation by Your casting sidelong glances, marked with anger slightly kindled (by its refractoriness), allowed passage, yet by whom a bridge was constructed (at its own entreaty) as an embodiment of His own glory, (nay,) by whom (the fortress and city of) Laṅkā (the capital of Rāvaṇa, His arch-enemy) was set on fire, and severed by whose (unfailing) arrows the heads of ogres fell to the ground!" (28) To His devotee, Jāmbavān (the king of bears), by whom His identity—which is all-consciousness (and bliss)—was thus directly perceived, O great king, the lotus-eyed Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devaki) spoke (as follows) in a voice deep with emotion, stroking him with His soothing hand out of supreme compassion:—(29-30) "For the sake of this gem did we (the leading citizens of Dwārakā headed by Myself) arrive at (the mouth of) your cave, O chief of bears; whereas I came here (inside the cave) with a view to wiping off the false imputation against Me through that gem." (31) Thus addressed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa), he (Jāmbavān) joyfully gave away by way of worship his own daughter, Jāmbavatī, alongwith the gem: so the tradition goes. (32)

अदृष्ट्वा निर्गमं शौरैः प्रविष्टस्य बिलं जनाः । प्रतीक्ष्य द्वादशहानि दुःखिताः स्वपुरं ययुः । ३३ ।

with an amiable disposition, comely appearance, magnanimity and other (similar) virtues. (44) The Lord (however) said (as follows), "O protector of men, "We would not accept the gem; let it remain with you, a devotee of the sun-god (who conferred it on you). We shall only enjoy its fruit (in the shape of the abundant gold it yields everyday)." (45)

Thus ends the fifty-sixth discourse, forming part of the story of Syamantaka, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LVII

Syamantaka stolen; Śatadhanvā killed and Akrūra recalled to Dwārakā

श्रीशुक उवाच

विज्ञातार्थोऽपि गोविन्दो दग्धानाकर्ण्य पाण्डवान् । कुन्तीं च कुल्यकरणे सहारामो ययौ कुरून् । १ ।

भीष्मं कृपं सवितुरं गान्धारीं द्रोणमेव च । तुल्यदुःखौ च सङ्गम्य हा कष्टमिति होचतुः । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Hearing about the sons of Pāṇḍu and Kuntī having been burnt (to death in a house of lac built for them and subsequently set on fire by Duryodhana), although the truth (about their having escaped unscathed in good time before the house was set on fire) was fully known to Him (omniscient as He was), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) proceeded to (Hastināpura, the capital of) the kingdom of the Kurus, accompanied by Balarāma, for a friendly inquiry after their family affairs (by way of condolence). (1) Meeting Bhīṣma, Kṛpa, Vidura and Gāndhārī (wife of King Dhṛtarāṣṭra) as well as Droṇa, and equally sharing their grief, so the tradition goes, the Lord said, "Ah, what a pity !" (2)

लब्ध्वैतदन्तरं राजन् शतधन्वानमूचतुः । अक्रूरकृतवर्माणौ मणिः कस्मात्त गृह्यते । ३ ।

योऽस्मभ्यं संप्रतिश्रुत्य कन्यारत्नं विगर्ह्य नः । कृष्णायादान्न सत्राजित् कस्माद् भ्रातरमन्विष्यात् । ४ ।

एवं भिन्नमतिस्ताभ्यां सत्राजितमसत्तमः । शयानमवधील्लोभात् स पापः क्षीणजीवितः । ५ ।

स्त्रीणां विक्रोशमानानां क्रन्दन्तीनामनाथवत् । हत्वा पशून् सौनिकवच्यणिमादाय जग्मिवान् । ६ ।

Seizing this opportunity (afforded by the absence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), O king, Akrūra and Kṛtavarmā (another leading Yādava and a devotee of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who hated Satrājīt for his having calumniated Śrī Kṛṣṇa) said to Śatadhanvā (who had a malice prepense), "Why should not the gem be taken possession of (at this opportune moment) ? (3) Why should not Satrājīt—who having solemnly promised us his jewel of a daughter, yet disregarding us, gave it away to Śrī Kṛṣṇa—(be made to) follow (the fate of) Prasena (his brother) ?" (4) His mind having thus been poisoned by them, that vile and most wicked fellow, whose life had (now) been spent, murdered Satrājīt (in cold blood) out of greed while he was asleep. (5) Having made short work of Satrājīt (even) as a butcher would slaughter animals, and taking the gem in the midst of the womenfolk who were (all) screaming and wailing as though masterless, Śatadhanvā withdrew. (6)

सत्यभामा च पितरं हतं वीक्ष्य शुचार्पिता । व्यलपत्तात तातेति हा हतास्मीति मुह्यती । ७ ।

निशम्य देवकी देवी रुक्मिण्यानकदुःखिः । सुहृदो ज्ञातयोऽशोचन् बिलात् कृष्णमनिर्गतम् । ३४ ।
 सत्राजितं शपन्तस्ते दुःखिता द्वारकौकसः । उपतस्थुर्महामायां दुर्गां कृष्णोपलब्धये । ३५ ।
 तेषां तु देव्युपस्थानात् प्रत्यादिष्टाशिषा स च । प्रादुर्बभूव सिद्धार्थः सदारो हर्षयन् हरिः । ३६ ।
 उपलभ्य हृषीकेशं मृतं पुनरिवागतम् । सह पत्न्या मणिप्रीवं सर्वे जातमहोत्सवाः । ३७ ।

Not finding Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūrasena) return (ever) since He entered the cave and disappeared into it, the people (that had accompanied Him to its mouth and had been left behind by Him there) returned to their city (Dwārakā), full of grief, having waited (there) for (as many as) twelve days. (33) Hearing (from them) that Śrī Kṛṣṇa had not come out of the cave (till then), Devakī (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's mother), the divine Rukmiṇī (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's premier Spouse) and Vasudeva as well as His (other) relations and kinsmen grieved for Him. (34) Cursing Satrājīta, the aforesaid citizens of Dwārakā, stricken (as they were) with grief, worshipped (prayed to) Goddess Durgā (known by the name of Candrabhāgā), the Supreme Energy (of the Lord), for the (safe) return of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (35) Thanks to their worship of (and prayers to) the Goddess and the benediction pronounced (by the Goddess) in response to their prayer, as a matter of fact, the said Śrī Hari appeared (all of a sudden) in their midst accompanied by His (new) bride (Jāmbavati), and gladdening them (all by His dramatic appearance), His purpose (in the shape of recovery of the Syamantaka gem) having been accomplished. (36) All were filled with great joy to find Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses), as though returned to life after death, with His (new) bride and with the gem about His neck. (37)

सत्राजितं समाहूय सभायां राजसन्निधौ । प्राप्तिं चाख्याय भगवान् मणिं तस्मै न्यवेदयत् । ३८ ।
 स चातिव्रीडितो रत्नं गृहीत्वावाङ्मुखस्ततः । अनुतप्यमानो भवनमगमत् स्वेन पाप्मना । ३९ ।
 सोऽनुध्यायंस्तदेवायं बलवद्विग्रहाकुलः । कथं मृजाम्यात्परजः प्रसीदेद् वाञ्छितः कथम् । ४० ।
 किं कृत्वा साधु मष्टं स्यात् शपेद् वा जनो यथा । अदीर्घदर्शनं क्षुद्रं मूढं द्रविणलोलुपम् । ४१ ।
 दास्ये दुहितरं तस्मै स्त्रीरत्नं रत्नमेव च । उपायोऽयं समीचीनस्तस्य शान्तिर्न चान्यथा । ४२ ।
 एवं व्यवसितो बुद्ध्या सत्राजितं स्वसुतां शुभाम् । मणिं च स्वयमुद्यम्य कृष्णायोपजहार ह । ४३ ।
 तां सत्यभामां भगवानुपयेमे यथाविधि । बहुभिर्याचितं शीलरूपीदार्यगुणान्विताम् । ४४ ।
 भगवानाह न मणिं प्रतीच्छामो वयं नृप । तवास्तां देवभक्तस्य वयं च फलभागिनः । ४५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्योऽंशे दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे स्यमन्तकोपाख्ये षट्पञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ५६ ।

Duly summoning Satrājīta into the royal presence at court and having told him how He had recovered the gem, the Lord handed it over to him. (38) Full of great shame he took the gem and with his head cast down returned home thence, repenting for his sin (in the shape of flouting the divine command and calumniating the Lord). (39) Brooding over that sinful act (of his) alone and feeling nervous over the unpleasantness, created with the mighty (Śrī Kṛṣṇa and His followers), he thought (within himself), "How shall I be able to wipe off my guilt and how could Śrī Kṛṣṇa be conciliated? (40) What course will prove expedient for me or what should be done so that people may not curse me, short-sighted, mean, stupid and covetous of wealth as I am? (41) I shall give away to him my daughter, a (veritable) jewel among women, as well as the (Syamantaka) jewel. This will be the proper remedy as there will be no end of quarrel otherwise." (42) Having thus resolved by recourse to reason, and moving in the matter himself, Satrājīta made a present to Śrī Kṛṣṇa of his own blessed daughter as well as of the gem: so the tradition goes. (43) The Lord espoused according to the scriptural ordinance the said girl, Satyabhāmā (by name), (who was) solicited by many and (was) gifted

तैलद्रोण्यां मृतं प्रास्य जगाम गजसाह्वयम् । कृष्णाय विदितार्थाय तप्ताऽऽचरन् पितृवधम् । ८ ।
तदाकर्ण्यैश्वरौ राजत्रनुसृत्य नृलोकताम् । अहो नः परमं कष्टमित्यस्त्राक्षौ विलेपतुः । ९ ।
आगत्य भगवांस्तस्मात् सभार्यः साग्रजः पुरम् । शतधन्वानमारेभे हन्तुं हर्तुं मणिं ततः । १० ।

Overwhelmed with grief to behold her father slain, Satyabhāmā too piteously wailed saying "Ah father, dear father, I am undone!" and fainting (at intervals). (7) Consigning the deceased to a trough full of oil (to guard against decomposition), the afflicted lady drove (all the way) to Hastināpura (the city bearing a name denoting the elephant) and reported to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was (already) aware of the fact (omniscient as He was), the death of her father. (8) Hearing the (sad) news and following the practice of the human world, O Parikṣit, the two almighty Brothers wailed with tears in Their eyes, exclaiming: "Alas, a great calamity has befallen us." (9) Returning (forthwith) from Hastināpura to Dwārakā alongwith His consort and elder Brother, the Lord made preparations to kill Śatadhanvā and recover the gem from him. (10)

सोऽपि कृष्णोद्यमं ज्ञात्वा भीतः प्राणपरीप्सया । साहाय्ये कृतवर्माणमयाचत स चाब्रवीत् । ११ ।
नाहमीश्वरयोः कुर्यां हेलनं रामकृष्णयोः । को नु क्षेमाय कल्पेत तयोर्वृजिनामाचरन् । १२ ।
कंसः सहानुगोऽपीतो यद्वेषात्याजितः श्रिया । जरासन्धः सप्तदश संयुगान् विरथो गतः । १३ ।
प्रत्याख्यातः स चाक्रूरं पार्णिग्राहमयाचत । सोऽप्याह को विरुध्येत विद्वान्नीश्वरयोर्बलम् । १४ ।
य इदं लीलया विश्वं सृजत्यवति हन्ति च । चेष्टां विश्वसृजो यस्य न विदुर्मोहिताजया । १५ ।
यः सप्तहायनः शैलमुत्पाट्यैकेन पाणिना । दधार लीलया बाल उच्छिरीन्ममिवार्भकः । १६ ।
नमस्तस्मै भगवते कृष्णायद्भुतकर्मणे । अनन्तायादिभूताय कूटस्थायात्मने नमः । १७ ।
प्रत्याख्यातः स तेनापि शतधन्वा महामणिम् । तस्मिन् न्यस्याश्वमारुह्य शतयोजनगं ययौ । १८ ।

Alarmed to know of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's plans (to kill him) and in his anxiety to save his life, Śatadhanvā too solicited Kṛtavarmā for help and the latter replied (as follows): (11) "I dare not cross the two almighty Brothers. Having given offence to Them, who can as a matter of fact hope to live in peace? (12) Kāṁsa was shorn of (all) his glory through enmity with Them and met his end alongwith his followers. (Nay,) Jarāsandha (the powerful ruler of Magadha and father-in-law of Kāṁsa) escaped (with life) at the end of (each of his) seventeen encounters (with Them), deprived (even) of his chariot." (13) Having been refused help (in these words by Kṛtavarmā), he next sought Akrūra for help. Akrūra too replied, "Knowing the strength of the two divine Brothers, who will dare antagonize Them? (14) Hail to the celebrated Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of marvellous deeds, who creates, preserves and dissolves the universe by way of sport; nay, deluded by whose Māyā (His beginningless Energy), (even) the progenitors of the world cannot comprehend His activity; who, having uprooted a (whole) mountain (Govardhana) (even) as a seven-year-old boy, held it up in one hand with as much ease as an infant would pluck up and hold a mushroom; Hail to that immortal and immutable Self, the most ancient Being!" (15—17) Refused help even by Akrūra, Śatadhanvā deposited the valuable gem with him and, riding a horse capable of traversing (in a single journey) one hundred Yojanas (eight hundred miles), left (Dwārakā). (18)

गरुडध्वजमारुह्य रथं रामजनादर्नौ । अन्वयातां महावेगैरश्वैः राजन् गुरुद्वहम् । १९ ।
मिथिलायामुपवने विसृज्य पतितं हयम् । पदश्यामधावत् सन्नस्तः कृष्णोऽयन्वद्वद रुषा । २० ।
पदातिर्भगवांस्तस्य पदातिस्तिग्मनेमिना । चक्रेण शिर उक्कृत्य वाससो व्यचिनोमणिम् । २१ ।
अलब्धमणिरागत्य कृष्ण आहारप्रजान्तिकम् । वृथा हतः शतधनुर्मणिस्तत्र न विद्यते । २२ ।
तत आह बलो नूनं स मणिः शतधन्वना । कस्मिंश्चित् पुरुषे न्यस्तस्तमन्वेष्ट पुरं व्रज । २३ ।
अहं विदेहमिच्छामि द्रष्टुं प्रियतमं मम । इत्युत्वा मिथिलां राजन् विवेश यदुनन्दनः । २४ ।

तं दृष्ट्वा सहस्रोत्थाय मैथिलः प्रीतमानसः । अर्हयामास विधिवदर्हणीयं समर्हणैः । १५ ।
उवास तस्यां कतिचिन्मिथिलायां समा विभुः । मानितः प्रीतियुक्तेन जनकेन महात्मना ।

ततोऽशिक्षद् गदां काले धार्तराष्ट्रः सुयोधनः । १६ ।

केशवो द्वारकामेत्य निधनं शतधन्वनः । अप्राप्तिं च मणेः प्राह प्रियायाः प्रियकृद्विभुः । १७ ।
ततः स कारयामास क्रिया बन्धोर्हतस्य वै । साकं सुहृद्भिर्गवान्वा या याः स्युः साम्प्रयायिकाः । १८ ।

Mounting Their car with a flag bearing the device of Garuḍa (the king of birds) and drawn by four horses possessing extraordinary speed, O king, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is solicited by all men) drove in pursuit of Śatadhanvā (the slayer of Their father-in-law). (19) Leaving the horse, that dropped down (exhausted) in an orchard in the outskirts of Mithilā (the capital of the Janakas), Śatadhanvā took to his heels, greatly alarmed; and Śrī Kṛṣṇa too chased him in rage. (20) Lopping off his head with His sharp-edged discus, the Lord, (also) moving on foot in fairness to the enemy, who was going on foot, looked for the gem in his upper and lower garments. (21) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, by whom the gem could not be found (with the slain), returned (to Their car) and said to His elder Brother (Balarāma), "In vain has Śatadhanvā been killed (by Me); for the gem is not with him !" (22) Thereupon Balarāma replied, "Surely that gem must have been deposited by Śatadhanvā with somebody (at Dwārakā). (Therefore) return to Dwārakā (and) trace him. (23) I (for my part) long to see the king of the Videha territory, my most beloved friend." Observing thus, Balarāma (a scion of Yadu) entered Mithilā, O Pankṣit ! (24) Delighted at heart to see him, the king of Mithilā rose all of a sudden (from his seat) and worshipped Balarāma (who was worthy of adoration) according to the scriptural ordinance with appropriate presents. (25) Honoured by the high-souled Janaka, who was full of love (for him), Balarāma (who was of an independent mind) sojourned in the aforesaid city for a number of years. (Later on) at the opportune time Suyodhana, the (eldest) son of Dhṛtarāṣṭra (and the leader of the Kauravas), learnt the use of a mace at his feet. (26) Reaching Dwārakā (on the other side), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa related to Satyabhāmā (His beloved spouse) the story of His having slain Śatadhanvā and (nevertheless) of His not finding the gem (with him), anxious as He was to please her (with that comforting news). (27) Then, with the co-operation of His kinsmen, the aforesaid Lord caused to be performed in an appropriate manner all the obsequies that were conducive to the welfare in the other world of His murdered father-in-law. (28)

अक्रूरः कृतवर्मा च श्रुत्वा शतधनोर्वधम् । व्यूषतुर्भयवित्रस्तौ द्वारकायाः प्रयोजकौ । १९ ।
अक्रूरे प्रेषितेऽरिष्टान्यासन् वै द्वारकौकसाम् । शरीरा मानसास्तापा मुहुर्दैविकभौतिकाः । २० ।
इत्यङ्गोपदिशन्त्येके विस्मृत्य प्रागुदाहृतम् । मुनिवासनिवासे किं घटेतारिष्टदर्शनम् । २१ ।
देवेष्वर्षति काशीशः श्रफल्कायागताय वै । स्वसुतां गान्दिनीं प्रादात् ततोऽर्षवत्स काशिषु । २२ ।
तत्सुतस्त्रभवावोऽसावक्रूरो यत्र यत्र ह । देवोऽभिवर्षते तत्र नोपतापा न मारिकाः । २३ ।
इति वृद्धवचः श्रुत्वा नैतावदिह कारणम् । इति मत्वा समानाव्य प्राहाक्रूरं जनार्दनः । २४ ।
पूजयित्वाभिभाष्यैनं कथयित्वा प्रियाः कथाः । विज्ञाताखिलचित्तज्ञः समयमान उवाच ह । २५ ।
ननु दानपते न्यस्तस्त्वय्यास्ते शतधन्वना । स्यमन्तको मणिः श्रीमान् विदितः पूर्वमेव नः । २६ ।
सत्राजितोऽनपत्यत्वाद् गृहीयुर्दुहितुः सुताः । दायं निनीयापः पिण्डान् विमुच्यर्णं च शेषितम् । २७ ।
तथापि दुर्धरस्त्वयैस्त्वय्यास्तां सुव्रते मणिः । किन्तु मामग्रजः सम्यङ् न प्रत्येति मणिं प्रति । २८ ।
दर्शयस्व महाभाग बन्धूनां शान्तिमावह । अव्युच्छिन्ना मखास्तेऽष्टा वर्तन्ते रुक्मवेदयः । २९ ।
एवं सामभिरालब्धः श्वफल्कतनयो मणिम् । आदाय वाससाच्छत्रं ददौ सूर्यसमप्रभम् । ३० ।

स्यमन्तकं दर्शयित्वा ज्ञातिभ्यो रज आत्मनः । विमृज्य मणिना भूयस्तस्मै प्रत्यर्पयत् प्रभुः ॥४१॥

Sore stricken with fear to hear the news of Śatadhanvā having been slain (by the Lord), Akṛūra and Kṛtavarmā, that had instigated Śatadhanvā (to murder Satrājīt and take away his gem), went out of Dwārakā (to escape His wrath). (29) Akṛūra having gone abroad, portentous phenomena foreboding misfortune appeared before (the eyes of) the residents of Dwārakā and agonies, (both) physical and mental, (nay,) those brought about by divine agencies and those caused by other living beings overtook them again and again ever since. (30) So declare some historians (Vaiśampāyana and others), forgetting what has been stated (by me) before, O dear Parīkṣit ! Is it (ever) possible that evil portents should be seen in the (very) home of the Lord who is the (one) Abode of ascetics (that are capable of counteracting all evils by their holy presence)? (31) "(Once upon a time) when Indra (the god of rain) did not pour seasonal showers (in his kingdom), the ruler of Kāśī (the modern Vārāṇasī) gave away with due ceremony to Śwaphalka (the father of Akṛūra), (recently) arrived (at his capital), his own daughter, Gāndinī (by name); thereupon Indra sent down showers in the kingdom of Kāśī. (32) Wherever stays the said Akṛūra, Śwaphalka's son, who has inherited his father's virtue, they say, Indra pours showers all round; neither calamities nor epidemics appear there." (33) Hearing the above-quoted words of the elders and though recognizing that the absence of Akṛūra was not the only cause of the evil portents, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is solicited by all men) had Akṛūra duly brought back (to Dwārakā) and spoke to him. (34) The Lord, who was not only omniscient but knew the mind (of all too), received him with respect, admonished him and addressed sweet words to him and (then) smilingly said, so the tradition goes:—(35) "That the glorious Syamantaka gem surely lay deposited with you by (the deceased) Satadhanvā was already known to us, O master of charities ! (36) Satrājīt having left no male issue, (it is but meet that) the sons of his daughter (Satyabhāmā) should offer oblations of water and rice (to the spirit of the deceased) and, paying off his debts, should inherit the rest of his property. (37) Yet let the gem—which cannot be easily maintained by others—remain with you, strict in the observance of religious vows. My elder brother (Balarāma), however, does not (fully) trust me in the matter of the gem (and suspects that it has been got removed by me). (38) (Therefore, pray,) show it (to us) and (thereby) bring relief to your relations (Balarāma, Satyabhāmā and Jāmbavatī). (I know) your sacrificial performances are going on unceasingly these days on altars of gold (thereby betraying the existence of the Syamantaka gem with you: for you could not otherwise get so much gold). (39) Won over by gentle words in this way, Akṛūra (Śwaphalka's son) brought and delivered the gem, which was brilliant as the sun, wrapped in a piece of cloth. (40) Having shown the Syamantaka to His kinsmen (Balarāma and others) and rubbed off through the gem the blame resting on Himself, the Lord then gave it back to Akṛūra. (41)

यस्त्वेतद् भगवत ईश्वरस्य विष्णोर्वीर्याब्धं वृजिनहरे सुमङ्गलं च ।

आख्यानं पठति शृणोत्यनुस्मरेद् वा दुष्कृतिं दुरितमपोह्य याति शान्तिम् ॥४२॥

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे स्यमन्तकोपाख्यानं सप्तपञ्चाशतमोऽध्यायः ॥५॥

He who simply reads, listens to or ponders this most blessed story replete with the exploits of the all-powerful Lord Viṣṇu—a story which destroys all sin—gets rid of his evil reputation and sin and attains (lasting) peace. (42)

Thus ends the fifty-seventh discourse, forming part of the story of Syamantaka, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LVIII

Śrī Kṛṣṇa's espousal with (the rest of) His eight principal Spouses

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदा पाण्डवान् द्रष्टुं प्रतीतान् पुरुषोत्तमः । इन्द्रप्रस्थं गतः श्रीमान् युयुधानादिभिर्वृतः । १ ।
 दृष्ट्वा तमागतं पार्था मुकुन्दमखिलेश्वरम् । उत्तस्थुर्युगपद् वीराः प्राणा मुख्यमिवागतम् । २ ।
 परिष्वज्याच्युतं वीरा अङ्गसङ्गहतैनसः । सानुरागस्मितं वक्त्रं वीक्ष्य तस्य मुदं ययुः । ३ ।
 युधिष्ठिरस्य भीमस्य कृत्वा पादाभिवन्दनम् । फाल्गुनं परिरभ्याथ यमाभ्यां चाभिवन्दितः । ४ ।
 परमासन आसीनं कृष्णं कृष्णमनिन्दितम् । नवोढा ब्रीडिता किञ्चिच्छनैरेत्याभ्यवन्दत । ५ ।
 तथैव सात्यकिः पार्थः पूजितश्चाभिवन्दितः । निषसादासनेऽन्ये च पूजिताः पर्युपासत । ६ ।
 पृथा समागत्य कृताभिवादनस्तयातिहादाद्रिदृशाभिरभितः ।
 आपृष्टवांस्तां कुशलं सहस्रुषां पितृष्वसारं परिपृष्टवान्धवः । ७ ।
 तमाह प्रेमवैङ्ग्यरुद्रकण्ठाश्रुलोचना । स्मरन्ती तान् बहून् क्लेशान् क्लेशापायात्मदर्शनम् । ८ ।
 तदैव कुशलं नोऽभूत् सनाथास्ते कृता वयम् । ज्ञातीन् नः स्मरता कृष्ण भ्राता मे प्रेषितस्त्वया । ९ ।
 न तेऽस्ति स्वपरभ्रान्तिर्विश्वस्य सुहृदात्मनः । तथापि स्मरतां शश्वत् क्लेशान् हंसि हृदि स्थितः । १० ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Once upon a time the glorious Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the foremost among men), accompanied by Yuyudhāna (Sātyaki) and others, drove to Indraprastha (the modern Delhi) to see Yudhiṣṭhira and his (four) brothers (the sons of Paṇḍu), who had been seen (at the court of Drupada, having once been taken to have been reduced to ashes within a house of shellac). (1) Seeing Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), the Ruler of all, arrived (at their door), the valiant sons of Pṛthā (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's aunt) rose (from their seat) at once (even) as the senses become active (again) on finding respiration returned. (2) Embracing the immortal Lord, with (all) their sins (of previous lives) wiped off by the (all-purifying) touch of His (divine) person, the heroes were transported with joy to gaze on His countenance bright with loving smiles. (3) Bowing at the feet of Yudhiṣṭhira and Bhīma (both of whom were senior to Him), and then hugging Arjuna (who was born on a day when the constellation Pūrvāṣṭhāṅgini was in the ascendant and was thus senior to the Lord only by eight days, the latter's advent being marked by the ascendancy of Rohiṇī, but was nevertheless treated as His equal), He was (in His turn) saluted by Nakula and Sahadeva (the twin-born half-brothers of Yudhiṣṭhira, who were the youngest and junior to the Lord). (4) Slowly approaching Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was seated on an excellent seat. Kṛṣṇa (Draupadī, so-called because she had a dark-brown complexion and thus bore affinity to the Lord in hue as well as in appellation), who had been newly wedded and (therefore) felt a little abashed, and was (absolutely) free from reproach (though espoused by all the five brothers), bowed low (to Him). (5) Honoured and greeted in the same way by the sons of Pṛthā, Sātyaki made Himself comfortable in his (own) seat. Treated with respect, others too sat in a circle nearby. (6) Having met and greeted His father's sister—Pṛthā, whose eyes were moistened through excessive love—and hugged by her (in turn) and questioned about (the welfare of) His kinsfolk, He (gave suitable replies to her and) made inquiries (in return) about her (own) health as well as about that of her daughter-in-law (Draupadī). (7) Recalling her numerous past sufferings, Kuntī, whose throat was choked with nervousness occasioned by affection and whose eyes were wet with tears, spoke (as follows) to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who reveals Himself (to His devotees) in order to end their miseries:—(8) "Happiness returned to us, and we were blessed with a protector the very moment my cousin (Akrūra) was despatched by You (to enquire about our welfare the other day), remembering us, Your relatives, O Kṛṣṇa ! (9) The mistaken notion recognizing one individual as one's own and another as alien does not exist in You—who are the friend, nay, the very Soul of the universe; yet constantly present in the heart of those who remember You, You end their sufferings." (10)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

किं न आचरितं श्रेयो न वेदाहमधीश्वर। योगेश्वराणां दुर्दर्शो यन्नो दृष्टः कुपेधसाम्॥११॥

इति वै वार्षिकान् मासान् राज्ञा सोऽभ्यर्थितः सुखम्। जनयन् नयनानन्दमिन्द्रप्रस्थौ कसां विभुः॥१२॥

Yudhiṣṭhira said : "I do not know what meritorious act has been performed by us, O supreme Lord, in that You, who cannot easily be perceived (even) by masters of Yoga, have come within our sight, men of perverse understanding that we are." (11) Entreated thus by the king (Yudhiṣṭhira), the said Lord happily spent (there all) the (four) rainy months, bringing joy to the eyes of the residents of Indraprastha (by His divine presence). (12)

एकदा रथमारुह्य विजयो वानरध्वजम्। गाण्डीवं धनुरादाय तूष्णीं चाक्षयसायकौ॥१३॥

साकं कृष्णेन सन्नद्धो विहर्तुं विपिनं वनम्। बहुव्यालमृगाकार्कणं प्राविशत् परवीरहा॥१४॥

तत्राविध्यच्छरैर्व्याघ्रान् सुकरान् महिषान् ररुन्। शरभान् गवयान् खड्गान् हरिणाञ्छशाल्लकान्॥१५॥

तान् निन्युः किङ्करा राज्ञे मेध्यान् पर्वण्युपागते। नृदूतरीतः परिश्रान्तो बीभत्सुर्मुनामगात्॥१६॥

तत्रोपस्पृश्य विशदं पीत्वा वारि महारथौ। कृष्णौ ददृशुः कन्यां चरन्तीं चासृदर्शनाम्॥१७॥

तामासाद्य वरारोहं सुदिवां रुचिराननाम्। पप्रच्छ प्रेषितः सख्या फाल्गुनः प्रमदोत्तमाम्॥१८॥

का त्वं कस्यासि सुश्रोणि कुतोऽसि किं विकीर्षसि। मन्ये त्वां पतिमिच्छन्तीं सर्वं कथय शोभने॥१९॥

Once upon a time (after the Khāṇḍava forest had been consumed by a huge conflagration) the all-conquering Arjuna, the slayer of hostile warriors, accompanied by Śrī Kṛṣṇa and clad in an armour, mounted his chariot, distinguished by its flag bearing the device of a monkey, and, taking his (famous) Gāṅḍīva bow and a pair of quivers containing an inexhaustible stock of arrows, entered a dense forest, infested with carnivorous and other (innocent) beasts, for the sake of sport. (13-14) There he pierced with his shafts (a number of) tigers, boars, bisons, Rurus (a species of deer), Śarabhas (a species of eight-footed animals now extinct), Gavayas (a species of quadrupeds resembling the cow), rhinoceroses, deer, hares and porcupines. (15) His attendants took such of them as were useful for sacrifice to the king (Yudhiṣṭhira), the full moon (which is considered specially sacred for sacrifices) having approached. Overcome with thirst and fully exhausted, Arjuna (who abhorred detestable acts) went to (the bank of) the Yamunā. (16) When they had bathed in the river and drunk of its crystal water, the two great car-warriors, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, (both of whom had a dark-brown complexion and accordingly bore the epithet 'Kṛṣṇa') noticed a maiden of comely appearance strolling about (on the river bank). (17) Sent by his (divine) Comrade, Phālguna (Arjuna) went up to that beautiful and excellent damsel with well-set teeth and a charming countenance and questioned her (thus):—"Who are you and whose daughter may you be, O fair damsel? Where do you come from and what do you mean to do? I infer you to be in quest of a (suitable) match. (Pray,) relate everything (to me), O good maiden!" (18-19)

कालिन्द्युवाच

अहं देवस्य सवितुर्दहिता पतिमिच्छती। विष्णुं वरेण्यं वरदं तपः परममास्थिता । २० ।
 नान्यं पतिं वृणे वीरं तमूते श्रीनिकेतनम्। तुष्यतां मे स भगवान् मुकुन्दोऽजातशत्रुश्च । २१ ।
 कालिन्दीति समाख्याता वसापि यमुनाजले। निर्मिते भवने पित्रा यावदच्युतदर्शनम् । २२ ।
 तथावदद् गुडाकेशो वासुदेवाय सोऽपि ताम्। रथमारोप्य तद् विद्वान् धर्मराजमुपागमत् । २३ ।
 यदैव कृष्णः सन्दिष्टः पार्थानां परमाद्भुतम्। कारयामास नगरं विचित्रं विश्वकर्माणा । २४ ।
 भगवांस्तत्र निवसन् स्वानां प्रियचिकीर्षया। अग्नये खाण्डवं दातुमर्जुनस्यास सारथिः । २५ ।
 सोऽग्निस्तुष्टो धनुर्दाद्व्याज्ज्वेतान् रथं नृप। अर्जुनायाक्षयौ तूणौ वर्म चाभेद्यमस्त्रिभिः । २६ ।
 मयश्च मोचितो वह्नेः सभां सख्य उपाहरत्। यस्मिन् दुर्योधनस्यासीजलस्थलदृशिभ्रमः । २७ ।

Kālindī (for such was her name) replied : Daughter of the glorious sun-god, I seek Lord Viṣṇu, the Bestower of boons of one's choice, who is worth wooing (in everyway), for my husband and am (accordingly) engaged in the severest (form of) austerities. (20) I would choose for my spouse none else than that Abode of Śrī (the goddess of fortune), O gallant one ! May that Lord, the Bestower of Liberation and the Refuge of the helpless, be propitious to me. (21) Known by the name of Kālindī, I dwell in a palace constructed by my father under the water of the Yamunā and propose to stay there till I am able to see that immortal Lord." (22) Arjuna (who had conquered sleep) spoke accordingly to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (son of Vasudeva) and He too, who knew of it (already), picked her up into the chariot and drove (back) into the presence of the king (Yudhiṣṭhira). (23) Śrī Kṛṣṇa had, as soon as requested, got built (long ago) by Viśvakarmā (the architect of the gods) a most wonderful and picturesque city for the sons of Pāṇḍu. (24) Residing there in order to oblige His own people (the Pāṇḍavas as well as their mother and wife), the Lord had (some time before) acted as the charioteer of Arjuna in order to consign (the forest of) Khāṇḍava (owned by Indra) to the god of fire. (25) Pleased (with the aforesaid service), the said god of fire had conferred on Arjuna, O king, the bow (Gāṇḍivā), (four) white horses as well as a chariot (drawn by them), a pair of inexhaustible quivers and an armour which could not be pierced by archers. (26) Nay, rescued from the (said) conflagration (which consumed the forest of Khāṇḍava), Maya (the architect of the demons) had (built and) presented (as a token of gratitude) to his friend (and benefactor, Arjuna) an assembly hall, in which optic illusion seized Duryodhana, who mistook a sheet of water for a paved floor and vice versa. (27)

स तेन समनुज्ञातः सहृद्दिश्चानुमोदितः। आययौ द्वारकां भूयः सात्यकिप्रमुखैर्वृतः । २८ ।
 अथोपयेमे कालिन्दीं सुपुण्यत्वंक्ष ऊजिते। वितन्वन् परमानन्दं स्वानां परममङ्गलम् । २९ ।

Duly permitted by Arjuna and with the consent of His (other) friends and relatives (Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira and so on), the Lord, accompanied by Sātyaki and others, returned to Dwārakā. (28) Now, on a certain day, when the planets exerted a favourable influence and when the season (too) was most propitious and a most auspicious star was in the ascendant, the Lord, who was supreme felicity (personified), espoused Kālindī, (thereby) bringing highest joy to His own people. (29)

विन्दाविन्दावावक्त्यौ दुर्योधनवशानुगौ। स्वयंवरे स्वभगिनीं कृष्णे सक्तां न्यषेधताम् । ३० ।
 राजाधिदेव्यास्तनयां मित्रविन्दां पितृष्वसुः। प्रसह्य हतवान् कृष्णो राजन् राज्ञां प्रपश्यताम् । ३१ ।

Vinda and Anuvinda, the rulers of Avanti (the modern Ujjain), who followed the will of Duryodhana, deterred their sister, who was devoted to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, from making her own choice (in a gathering of princes invited for the purpose). (30) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (however) forcibly snatched away Mitravindā (as such was her name), daughter of Rājādhivevi (His own father's sister*), in the midst of (other) princes, who stood gazing (helplessly), O king ! (31)

नम्रजिन्नाम कौसल्य आसीद् राजातिथार्मिकः । तस्य सत्याभवत् कन्या देवी नाम्रजिती नृप । ३२ ।
 न तां शेकुर्नृपा वोढुमजित्वा सप्त गोवृषान् । तीक्ष्णशृङ्गान् सुदुर्धर्मान् वीरगन्धासहान् खलान् । ३३ ।
 तां श्रुत्वा वृषजिल्लिभ्यां भगवान् सात्वतां पतिः । जगाम कौसल्यपुरं सैन्येन महता वृतः । ३४ ।
 स कौसलपतिः प्रीतः प्रत्युत्थानासनादिभिः । अर्हणेनापि गुरुणा पूजयन् प्रतिनन्दितः । ३५ ।
 वरं विलोक्याभिमतं समागतं नरेन्द्रकन्या चक्रमे रमापतिम् ।
 भूयादयं मे पतिराशिषोऽमलाः करोतु सत्या यदि मे धृतो ब्रतैः । ३६ ।
 यत्पादपङ्कजजलः शिरसा बिभर्ति श्रीरम्भजः सगिरिशः सहलोकपालैः ।
 लीलातनूः स्वकृतसेतुपरीप्सयेः काले दधत् स भगवान् मम केन तुष्येत् । ३७ ।
 अर्वितं पुनरित्याह नारायण जगत्पते । आत्मानन्देन पूर्णस्य करवाणि किमल्पकः । ३८ ।

There was a very pious king of Kosala, Nagnajit by name. He had a brilliant daughter, Satyā, nicknamed Nagnajitī (after the name of her father), O Parikṣit ! (32) Princes could not win her without subduing seven excellent, though wicked, bulls with pointed horns, that were most formidable and could not bear (even) the smell of heroes. (33) Hearing that she could be gained (only) by one who was able to subdue the bulls, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of the Yadus), accompanied by a huge army, drove to Ayodhyā (the capital of the kings of Kosala). (34) Full of delight, the said king of Kosala was hailed with joy (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa) while welcoming Him by going forth to meet Him, offering Him a (high) seat and valuable articles of worship too. (35) Beholding Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Spouse of Lakṣmī)—who was not only after her heart but was worth wooing (in every way)—arrived in state, the princess sought Him (as her husband) and prayed (as follows):—"If He has been (constantly) cherished by me as the goal of my sacred vows, let Him grant my innocent prayers and be my husband. (36) Through what effort (of mine) can that almighty Lord be pleased with me, the dust of whose lotus-feet do Lakṣmī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) and Brahmā (the lotus-born) as well as Lord Śiva (who dwells on Mount Kailāsa) and the (other) guardians of the world bear on their head, and who assumes from time to time embodied (divine) forms suited to His (various) pastimes with intent to maintain the standards of morality set up by Himself." (37) To Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who had now been (duly) worshipped, the king (of Kosala) spoke as follows:—"O Nārāyaṇa, O Lord of the universe what can I, an extremely poor fellow, do for You, sated as You are with the Bliss of Your very Self ? (38)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तमाह भगवान् हृष्टः कृतासनपरिग्रहः । मेघगम्भीरया वाचा सस्मितं कुरुनन्दन । ३९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Full of delight, the Lord, who had (now) taken His seat, smilingly replied to him in a voice deep as the rumbling of a cloud (as follows), O scion of Kuru ! (39)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

नरेन्द्र याच्या कविभिर्विगर्हिता राजन्यबन्धोर्निजधर्मवर्तिनः ।

तथापि याचे तव सौहृदेच्छया कन्यां त्वदीयां न हि शुल्कदा वयम् ।४०।

The Lord said : Solicitation has been condemned by the wise on the part of the humblest Kṣatriya, sticking to his own duty, O ruler of men ! Yet in My eagerness to secure your friendship I ask (of you) your daughter, since we are not prepared to pay any price (for the match). (40)

राजोवाच

कोऽन्यस्तेऽभ्यधिको नाथ कन्यावर इहेप्सितः । गुणैकधाप्रो यस्याङ्गे श्रीर्वसत्यनपायिनी ।४१।
 किं त्वस्माभिः कृतः पूर्वं समयः सात्वतर्षभ । पुंसां वीर्यपरीक्षार्थं कन्यावरपरीप्सया ।४२।
 सप्तैते गोवृषा वीर दुर्दान्ता दुरवग्रहाः । एतैर्भग्नैः सुबहवो भिन्नगात्रा नृपात्मजाः ।४३।
 यदिमे निगृहीताः स्युस्त्वयैव यदुनन्दन । वरो भवानभिमतो दुहितुमं श्रियः पते ।४४।
 एवं समयमाकर्ण्य बद्ध्वा परिकरं प्रभुः । आत्मानं सप्तधा कृत्वा न्यगृह्णाल्लीलयैव तान् ।४५।
 बद्ध्वा तान् दामभिः शौरिर्भग्नदर्पान् हतौजसः । व्यकर्षल्लीलया बद्धान् बालो दारुमयान् यथा ।४६।
 ततः प्रीतः सुतां राजा ददौ कृष्णाय विस्मितः । तां प्रत्यगृह्णाद् भगवान् विधिवत् सदृशीं प्रभुः ।४७।
 राजपत्न्यश्च दुहितुः कृष्णं लब्ध्वा प्रियं पतिम् । लेभिरे परमानन्दं जातश्च परमोत्सवः ।४८।
 शङ्खभेर्यान्का नेदुर्गीतिवाद्यद्विजाशिषः । नरा नार्यः प्रमुदिताः सुवासः खगलङ्कृताः ।४९।
 दशधेनुसहस्राणि पारिबर्हमदाद् विभुः । युवतीनां त्रिसाहस्रं निष्कग्रीवसुवाससाम् ।५०।
 नवनागसहस्राणि नागाच्छतगुणान् रथान् । रथाच्छतगुणानश्चानश्चाच्छतगुणान् नरान् ।५१।
 दम्पती रथमारोप्य महत्या सेनया वृतौ । स्नेहप्रङ्क्तिन्नहदयो यापयामास कोसलः ।५२।

The king replied : "Who else can be a more welcome match for my girl, O Lord, than You, the one Abode of (all) excellences, on whose bosom dwells Śrī (the goddess of beauty and fortune) as an inseparable companion. (41) With intent, however, to secure a (good) match for our daughter a vow has already been made by us, O Chief of the Yadus, for testing the prowess of suitors. (42) Here are seven excellent bulls, O gallant One, (so) difficult to tame and (so) hard to hold in check. Good many princes have been worsted by them and have had their limbs broken. (43) Since these animals must be curbed by You alone, O Scion of Yadu, You will be the acknowledged bridegroom for my daughter, O Spouse of Śrī !" (44) Hearing of this vow and tightening His girdle, nay, revealing Himself in seven forms, the Lord brought them (all) under His control by way of sport. (45) Tying them with cords (after passing them through their nose), now that their pride had been curbed and their spirit broken, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūra), drew them, when tied, by way of sport even as a child would draw toy-bulls made of wood. (46) Amazed and delighted at that (feat), the king gave away his daughter to Śrī Kṛṣṇa; and the almighty Lord (too) espoused her with due ceremony, worthy as she was of Him. (47) Having secured Śrī Kṛṣṇa as the beloved husband of their daughter, the queens too derived supreme joy and there was great rejoicing (over this happy event). (48) Conchs, kettledrums and big drums sounded; there was vocal and instrumental music and the benedictions of Brāhmaṇas (the sacerdotal class) were pronounced. Men and women clad in fine clothes and decked with garlands felt highly rejoiced. (49) The king gave away as dowry ten thousand newly calved cows and three thousand finely dressed young maid-servants decked with a string of gold coins, nine thousand elephants, a hundred times as many chariots, horses a hundred times the number of chariots, and men-servants hundred times the number of horses. (50-51) Placing the (married) couple in a chariot, the king of Kosala, whose heart was moistened through affection, sent them attended with a large army. (52)

श्रुत्वैतद् रुधुर्भूपा नयन्तं पथि कन्यकाम् । भगव्रीर्याः सुदुर्मर्षा यदुभिर्गोवृषैः पुर । ५३ ।
 तानस्यतः शरव्रातान् बन्धुप्रियकृदजुनः । गाण्डीवी कालयामास सिंहः क्षुद्रमृगानिव । ५४ ।
 पारिबर्हमुपागृह्य द्वारकामेत्य सत्यया । रेमे यदूनामृषभो भगवान् देवकीसुतः । ५५ ।

Hearing of this, the highly envious kings, even though they had their spirit broken by the Yadus (the followers of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and earlier by the lusty bulls, intercepted Śrī Kṛṣṇa, while He was taking the bride (with Him), on the road. (53) Arjuna, the wielder of the Gāṇḍiva bow, who was (accompanying the Lord and was) keen to oblige his friend and cousin, repulsed them even as they came discharging volleys of arrows (at the Lord), (just) as a lion would drive away small beasts (before it). (54) Reaching Dwārakā with the dowry, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Son of Devakī), the foremost of the Yadus, delightfully spent His time with Satyā. (55)

श्रुतकीर्तः सुतां भद्रामुपयेमे पितृवृषुः । कैकेयीं भ्रातृभिर्दत्तां कृष्णः सन्तर्दनादिभिः । ५६ ।
 सुतां च मद्राधिपतेर्लक्ष्मणां लक्षणैर्युताम् । स्वयंवरे जहारैकः स सुपर्णः सुधामिव । ५७ ।
 अन्याश्चैवंविधा भार्याः कृष्णस्यासन् सहस्रशः । भौमं हत्वा तन्निरोधादाहताश्चास्पर्शनाः । ५८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे अष्टमहिष्युद्राहो नामाष्टपञ्चाशत्तमोऽध्यायः । ५८ ।

Śrī Kṛṣṇa (next) married Bhadrā, a princess of Kekaya, daughter of His father's sister, Śrutakīrti* offered (to Him) by her brothers, the foremost of whom was Santardana. (56) He (further) carried away single-handed, in an assemblage called for self-election of a husband, Lakṣmāṇā, daughter of the (then) ruler of the Madra territory, endowed with auspicious marks, (even) as Garuḍa (the king of birds) snatched away (the jar of) nectar (from Indra's paradise). (57) There were other such consorts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (all) good-looking and numbering thousands (sixteen thousand) rescued from the captivity of Bhaumāsurat† (the son of Mother Earth) after killing him. (58)

Thus ends the fifty-eighth discourse entitled "Śrī Kṛṣṇa's marriage with (the rest of) His eight principal spouses", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* Vide IX xxiv. 30

† The demon was born of Mother Earth through her touch with the Lord manifested as the divine Boar at the time of His lifting her up from the depths of the ocean (vide II. xiii. 31). Mother Earth herself acknowledges this in the Viṣṇu-Purāṇa when she says:—

यदाहमुद्भूता नाथ त्वया सूकर्मतिना । तत्परांशमभवः पुत्रस्तदायं मध्याजयत ॥

अथैकोनषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LIX

The Lord snatches away (by force) a Pārījāta tree (from Indra's paradise) and kills the demon Naraka (the son of Mother Earth).

राजोवाच

यथा हतो भगवता भौमो येन च ताः स्त्रियः । निरुद्धा एतदाचक्ष्व विक्रमं शार्ङ्गधन्वनः । १ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : (Be pleased to) recount the aforesaid exploit of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Wielder of the Śārṅga bow)—how the demon Naraka (son of Mother Earth) was made short work of by the Lord and wherefore the aforementioned damsels were kept in bondage (by the former).(1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इन्द्रेण हतछत्रेण हतकुण्डलबन्धुना । हतामराद्रिस्थानेन ज्ञापितो भौमचेष्टितम् ।

सभायां गरुडारूढः प्राग्व्योतिषपुरं ययौ । २ ।

गिरिदुर्गः शस्त्रदुर्गजलान्वनिलदुर्गमम् । मुरपाशायुतेधोरैर्दृढैः सर्वत आवृतम् । ३ ।

गदया निर्विभेदाग्निं शस्त्रदुर्गाणि सायकैः । चक्रेणाग्निं जलं वायुं मुरपाशैस्तथासिना । ४ ।

शङ्खनादेन यन्त्राणि हृदयाणि मनस्विनाम् । प्राकारं गदया गुर्व्या निर्विभेद गदाधरः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Having been apprised of the (nefarious) activities of the demon Naraka (son of Mother Earth) by Indra, whose umbrella* (one of the insignia of sovereignty) had been snatched away (by the demon), (nay,) whose mother (Aditi) had been robbed (by him) of her ear-rings and who had been evicted (by the same demon) from the summit (called Mañiparvata) of Mount Mandara (the mountain of the gods), the Lord rode on (His carrier) Garuḍa (the king of birds) alongwith His (favourite) spouse (Satyabhāmā)† and flew to Prāgjyotiṣapura (the capital of Naraka and the premier town of Prāgjyotiṣa, now identified with Assam), fortified (as it was) on all sides with ramparts of mountains and weapons (such as artillery), (nay,) rendered difficult of access due to its belts of water, fire and wind, and encircled with myriads of dreadful and strong snares laid (here and there) by the demon Mura (an associate and follower of Naraka). (1—3) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Wielder of a mace) shattered

* The demon had snatched away (as a matter of fact) the umbrella of Indra's own brother Varuṇa (the guardian of the western quarter and the god of water) and not his own (vice verse 23 of Discourse LIX). But, as the head and overlord of all the Lokapālas and the ruler of all the three worlds, he deemed this as an encroachment upon his own sovereign rights and a direct affront to himself and hence considered himself deprived of his own umbrella.

† The Lord had conferred a boon on Mother Earth saying that He would not take the life of her son Naraka without her consent. And Satyabhāmā being an incarnation of Mother Earth, the Lord took her with Him in order to secure her consent before killing the demon. Again, it is mentioned in the scriptures that Indra complained to the Lord about the behaviour of the demon and sought redress of his grievances while He was staying in the palace of Satyabhāmā. Hence He took her just for her diversion.

down the (ramparts of) mountains with His mace, (known by the name of Kaumodaki), the fortifications of weapons with His shafts, (the belts of) fire, water and wind with His discus (Sudarśana) and the snares laid by Mura with His sword. (4) He blew down the engines (fixed on the ramparts) and broke down the hearts of the gallant (defenders) with the (blasts of) His (famous) conch (Pāñcajanya), and the fortification wall with His massive mace. (5)

पाञ्चजन्यध्वनिं श्रुत्वा युगान्ताशनभीषणम् । मुरः शयान उत्तस्थौ दैत्यः पञ्चशिरा जलात् । ६ ।

त्रिशूलमुद्यम्य सुदुर्निरीक्षणो युगान्तसूर्यनिलरोचिरुल्बणः ।

ग्रसंस्त्रिलोकीमिव पञ्चभिर्मुखैरभ्यद्रवत्ताक्षर्यसुतं यथोरगः । ७ ।

आविध्य शूलं तरसा गरुत्मते निरस्य वक्त्रैर्व्यनदत् स पञ्चभिः ।

सरोदसी सर्वदिशोऽन्तरं महानापूरयन्नण्डकटाहमावृणोत् । ८ ।

तदापतद् वै त्रिशिखं गरुत्मते हरिः शराभ्यामभिनत्त्रिधौजसा ।

मुखेषु तं चापि शरैरताडयत् तस्मै गदां सोऽपि रुषा व्यमुञ्चत । ९ ।

तामापतन्तीं गदया गदां मृधे गदाग्रजो निर्विभिदे सहस्रधा ।

उद्यम्य बाहून्भिधावतोऽजितः शिरांसि चक्रेण जहार लीलया । १० ।

व्यसुः पपाताम्भसि कृतशीर्षो निकृत्तशृङ्गोऽद्रिरिवेन्द्रेतेजसा ।

तस्यात्मजाः सप्त पितुर्वधातुराः प्रतिक्रियामर्षजुषः समुद्यताः । ११ ।

ताम्रोऽन्तरिक्षः श्रवणो विभावसुर्वसुर्नभस्वानरुणश्च सप्तमः ।

पीठं पुरस्कृत्य चमूपतिं मृधे भौमप्रयुक्ता निरगन् धृतायुधाः । १२ ।

प्रायुञ्जतासाद्य शरानसीन् गदाः शक्यृष्टिशूलान्यजिते रुषोल्बणाः ।

तच्छस्त्रकूटं भगवान् स्वमार्गणैरमोघवीर्यस्तिरशश्चक्रेत् ह । १३ ।

तान् पीठमुख्याननयद् यमक्षयं निकृत्तशीर्षोरुभुजाङ्घ्रिवर्मणः ।

स्वानीकपानच्युतचक्रसायकैस्तथा निरस्तान् नरको धरासुतः । १४ ।

निरीक्ष्य दुर्मर्षण आलवच्यदैर्गजैः पयोधिप्रभवैर्निराक्रमत् ।

दृष्ट्वा सभार्यं गरुडोपरि स्थितं सूर्योपेरिष्ठात् सतडिदधनं यथा ।

कृष्णं स तस्मै व्यसृजच्छतर्ग्रीं योधाश्च सर्वे युगपत् स्म विव्यधुः । १५ ।

तद् भौमसैन्यं भगवान् गदाग्रजो विचित्रवाजेर्निर्निशितैः शिलीमुखैः ।

निकृत्तबाहूश्शरोभ्रविग्रहं चकार तर्ह्येव हताश्वकुञ्जरम् । १६ ।

Hearing the blast of Pāñcajanya, terrific as the clap of thunder (heard) at the end of a Kalpa (marking the dissolution of the universe), the five-headed demon Mura rose from under the water (of the moat), where he had been lying asleep. (6) Lifting up his trident, the terrible demon, who shone like the sun and fire appearing at the end of a Kalpa and (as such) was difficult to gaze at, darted at the Lord, even as a serpent would rush at Garuḍa (son of the sage Kaśyapa), devouring as it were (all) the three worlds with his five (gaping) mouths. (7) Brandishing his trident and hurling it with force at Garuḍa, the demon roared with (all) his five mouths. Filling the horizon and the atmosphere as well as all the four quarters, the great roar covered the entire cosmos. (8) By a pair of shafts discharged with (great) vigour Śrī Kṛṣṇa split into three the trident even as it came flying at Garuḍa and struck in return his (wide open) mouths with (more) shafts. Mura too hurled his mace in indignation at Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (9) With His own mace Śrī Kṛṣṇa (elder Brother of Gada) split into thousands of splinters the said mace

(even) as it came flying on the battle-field. (Nay,) the invincible Lord lopped off in mere sport with His discus (all) the (five) heads of the demon as he rushed at Him lifting up his arms. (10) With his heads severed the demon fell lifeless into the water like a mountain whose crest had been sundered by the might of Indra. His seven sons, distressed as they were at the death of their father and impatient to take vengeance, stood fully prepared to give battle. (11) Urged on to an encounter by the demon Naraka (the son of Mother Earth) and placing Piṭha, their generalissimo, at the head, Tāmra, Antarikṣa, Śravaṇa, Vibhāvasu, Vasu, Nabhasvān and Aruṇa, the seventh, sallied forth equipped with arms. (12) Coming up, fierce through rage, they hurled shafts, swords, maces, javelins, spears and pikes at the invincible Lord. Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of unfailing prowess (however), so the tradition goes, cut down with His own shafts the (whole) body of arms into pieces as small as the sesamum seed. (13) The Lord sent them (all), Piṭha and others, to the abode of Death,* their heads, thighs, arms, feet and armours having been lopped off or split open. Enraged to see (from the top of the fortress) the generals of his army having been killed by the discus (Sudarśana) and arrows of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), the demon Naraka, son of Mother Earth, rushed forth with (an army of) sea-born elephants (whose descent was traceable from Airāvata, the king of elephants, the carrier of Indra). Perceiving Śrī Kṛṣṇa with His spouse (Satyabhāmā) mounted on Garuḍa (the king of birds) like a cloud united with lightning and appearing above the sun, Naraka hurried at Him the javelin known by the name of Śataghni; (nay,) all his warriors too hit Him all at once. (14-15) With His sharp arrows endowed with peculiar wings Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (elder Brother of Gada) forthwith hit the troops of Naraka in such a way as to lop off their arms, thighs and necks, and mangle their bodies and kill their horses and elephants. (16)

यानि योधैः प्रयुक्तानि शस्त्रास्त्राणि कुरुद्वह । हरिस्तान्यच्छिनत्तीक्ष्णैः शरैरेकैकशस्त्रिभिः । १७ ।

उद्धमानः सुपर्णेन पक्षाभ्यां निघ्नता गजान् । गरुत्पता हन्यमानास्तुष्टपक्षनखैर्गजाः । १८ ।

पुरमेवाविशन्नातां नरको युध्ययुध्यत । दृष्ट्वा विद्रावितं सैन्यं गरुडेनार्दितं स्वकम् । १९ ।

तं भौमः प्राहरच्छक्त्या वज्रः प्रतिहतो यतः । नाकम्पत तया विद्रो मालाहत इव द्विपः । २० ।

शूलं भौमोऽन्युतं हन्तुमाददे वितथोद्यमः । तद्विसर्गात् पूर्वमेव नरकस्य शिरो हरिः ।

अपाहृद् गजस्थस्य चक्रेण क्षुरनेमिना । २१ ।

सकुण्डलं चारुकिरीटभूषणं बभौ पृथिव्यां पतितं समुज्ज्वलत् ।

हाहति साधिव्युषयः सुरेश्वरा माल्यैर्मुकुन्दं विकिरन्त ईडिरे । २२ ।

ततश्च भूः कृष्णमुपेत्य कुण्डले प्रतप्ताज्ज्वलन्तरत्नभास्वरे ।

सर्वैजयन्त्या वनमालयार्पयत् प्राचेतसं छत्रमथो महामणिम् । २३ ।

अस्तांषीदथ विश्वेशं देवी देववरार्चितम् । प्राङ्गलिः प्रणता राजन् भक्तिप्रवणया धिया । २४ ।

Borne by Garuḍa, who was striking down elephants with his wings (all the way), Śrī Kṛṣṇa with His sharp arrows, three for one, cut down (a few minutes later), O Jewel among the Kurus, all the weapons and missiles that were employed by the (hostile) warriors (against Him before their death). Being struck by Garuḍa with his bill, wings and claws, the elephants (of the enemy) in their distress retreated into their city (Prāgyotiṣapura) itself. Seeing his army put to flight when assailed by Garuḍa, the demon Naraka fought on (all alone). (17-19) The son of Mother Earth hit Garuḍa with the same javelin by which the (very) thunderbolt (of Indra)

* The use of the compound word वनश्चम्पु in this context is intended simply to convey that the Lord made short work of them. Obviously those who died at the hands of the Lord could not be expected to have visited the abode of Yama. They must have attained absorption into the Lord by virtue of that unique privilege.

had been beaten off. Though pierced by it, Garuḍa did not budge any more than an elephant would when struck with a garland. (20) His attempt having proved futile, Naraka (son of Mother Earth) picked up a pike with intent to strike at Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (But) before he could discharge it, Śrī Kṛṣṇa with His discus (Sudarśana), which was keen-edged as a razor, lopped up the head of Naraka, who rode on an elephant. (21) Fallen on the ground, Naraka's head, which was accompanied with a pair of ear-rings and adorned with a lovely diadem, shone most resplendent. "Oh, what a pity!" cried his people and "Bravo!" exclaimed the seers; while the chiefs of gods extolled Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), covering Him with (a shower of) flowers. (22) Approaching Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Goddess Earth (the mother of Naraka) delivered (to Him) a pair of ear-rings (belonging to Aditi, mother of the gods), brilliant with jewels chased in purest gold, alongwith a garland of sylvan flowers accompanied by a Vaijayanti (a garland of valuable flowers interspersed with jewels), as well as the umbrella belonging to Varuṇa (the god of water and the guardian of the western quarter) and the crest of Mount Mandara, known by the name of Mahāmaṇi or Maṇiparvata (so-called because of its abounding in precious gems). (23) Bending low (in humility) with joined palms, and with a mind full of devotion the goddess then glorified (as follows) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of the universe), who is worshipped (even) by the foremost of gods, O king! (24)

भूमिरुवाच

नमस्ते देवदेवेश शङ्खचक्रगदाधर । भक्तेच्छोपातरूपाय परमात्मन् नमोऽस्तु ते । २५ ।
 नमः पङ्कजनाभाय नमः पङ्कजमालिने । नमः पङ्कजनेत्राय नमस्ते पङ्कजाङ्घ्रये । २६ ।
 नमो भगवते तुभ्यं वासुदेवाय विष्णवे । पुरुषाय दिवीजाय पूर्णबोधाय ते नमः । २७ ।
 अजाय जनयित्रेऽस्य ब्रह्मणेऽनन्तशक्तये । परावरात्मन् भूतात्मन् परमात्मन् नमोऽस्तु ते । २८ ।
 त्वं वै सिसृक्षू रज उत्कटं प्रभो तमो निरोधाय बिभर्धसंवृतः ।
 स्थानाय सत्त्वं जगतो जगत्पते कालः प्रधानं पुरुषो भवान् परः । २९ ।
 अहं पयो ज्योतिरथानिलो नभो मात्राणि देवा मन इन्द्रियाणि ।
 कर्ता महानित्यखिलं चराचरं त्वय्यद्वितीये भगवन्नयं भ्रमः । ३० ।
 तस्यात्मजोऽयं तव पादपङ्कजं भीतः प्रपन्नार्तिहरोऽपसादितः ।
 तत् पालयैनं कुरु हस्तपङ्कजं शिरस्यमुष्याखिलकरूपमपहम् । ३१ ।

Earth prayed : Hail to You, O Ruler of the (very) gods of god, O Wielder of a conch, discus and mace! O Inner Controller of the gods and other beings, my salutations be to You, who have assumed this form in deference to the wishes of Your devotees. (25) Hail to You, who have a lotus sprung from Your navel! Hail to You, who are adorned with a garland of lotuses !! Hail to You, the lotus-eyed One !!! Hail to You, who are possessed of lotus-like feet!!!! (26) Salutations to You, who are no other than Lord Viṣṇu, though appearing as a son of Vasudeva! Salutations to You, who are anterior* to all evolutes, the Cause (even) of Prakṛti (the source of the entire creation), (the Embodiment of) perfect Knowledge. (27) Hail to You, the birthless Creator of this (objective) universe, the Absolute, possessed of endless potencies! (My) salutation be to You, O Inner Controller of the great and the small, O Lord, who are one with the five (gross) elements, O Supreme Spirit!! (28) When inclined to create, O Lord, it is You who assume vehement Rajoguṇa (and appear as Brahmā); for the dissolution of the universe You assume gross Tamoguṇa (and appear in the form of Rudra, the god of destruction); and for the continuance of the world You assume abundant

* The Śruti says:— पूर्वमेवाहिमहासमिति तत् पुरुषस्य पुरुषत्वम्

Sattvagūṇa, though remaining (ever) unobscured (by these Guṇas), O Lord of the universe! (Nay,) You (alone) are the Time-Spirit, primordial Matter and Spirit (too) and (yet) distinct (from them). (29) Myself (earth), water, fire and air, ether, the (five) objects of the senses (viz., sound, touch, colour, taste and smell), the gods (presiding over the Indriyas etc.), the mind, the (ten) Indriyas (the five senses and the five organs of action), the ego, the Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), (nay,) the entire mobile and immobile creation—(all) this, O Lord, is a (mere) phantom (appearing) in You, who are (really) one without a second. (30) This son (Bhagadatta) of Naraka, afraid as he is, has (accordingly) been brought (by me) to (the soles of) Your lotus feet, O Reliever of the distress of those fallen at Your feet! Therefore, protect him and place on his head Your lotus palm, which destroys all sin. (31)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति भूम्यार्थितो वाग्भिर्भगवान् भक्तिनम्रया । दत्त्वाभयं भौमगृहं प्रविशत् सकलहिंमत् । ३२ ।
तत्र राजन्यकन्यानां षट्सहस्राधिकायुतम् । भौमाहूतानां विक्रम्य राजभ्यो ददृशे हरिः । ३३ ।
तं प्रविष्टं स्त्रियो वीक्ष्य नरवीरं विमोहिताः । मनसा वव्रिरेऽभीष्टं पतिं दैवोपसादितम् । ३४ ।
भूयात् पतिरयं मह्यं धाता तदनुमोदताम् । इति सर्वाः पृथक् कृणो भावेन हृदयं दधुः । ३५ ।
ताः प्राहिणोद् द्वारवतीं समुष्टविरजोऽम्बराः । नरयानैर्महाकोशान् रथाश्चान् द्रविणं महत् । ३६ ।
ऐरावतकुलेभ्यश्च चतुर्दन्तांस्तस्मिन् । पाण्डुरांश्च चतुःपङ्क्तिं प्रेषयामास केशवः । ३७ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Entreated in these words by Goddess Earth bent low with devotion, and vouchsafing security (to Naraka's son), Śrī Kṛṣṇa entered the palace of Naraka (son of Mother Earth), full of all (kinds of) riches (luxuries). (32) There Śrī Kṛṣṇa saw sixteen thousand (and one hundred*) Kṣatriya maidens snatched away by Naraka from (the gynaeceum of) kings (as well as of gods, Siddhas and demons) after showing valour. (33) Fascinated to behold that hero among men, who had (now) entered the women's apartments, the damsels mentally chose Him for their beloved spouse ushered (into their presence) by (a benign) providence. (34) (They) all severally set their heart on Śrī Kṛṣṇa with the feeling (prayer), "May He be my husband and may Providence approve of this." (35) Śrī Kṛṣṇa sent them (all) in (closed) palanquins to Dwārakā, now that they had been duly washed and neatly dressed, and (also) sent (with them) valuable treasures, chariots, horses and abundant wealth, as well as sixty-four swift-footed white elephants descended from Airāvata (the king of elephants and the carrier of Indra) and endowed with four tusks. (36-37)

गत्वा सुरेन्द्रभवनं दत्त्वादित्यं च कुण्डले । पूजितस्त्रिदशेन्द्रेण सहेन्द्रापया च सप्रियः । ३८ ।
चोदितो भार्ययोत्याद्य पारिजातं गरुत्मति । आरोप्य सेन्द्रान् विबुधान् निर्जित्योपानयत् पुरम् । ३९ ।
स्थापितः सत्यभामाया गृहोद्यानोपशोभनः । अन्वगुर्भ्रमराः स्वर्गात् तद्गन्धासवलम्पटाः । ४० ।
यद्याच आनम्य किरीटकोटिभिः पादौ स्पृशन्नत्युत्तमर्थसाधनम् ।
सिद्धार्थ एतेन विगृह्यते महानहो सुराणां च तमो धिगाढ्यताम् । ४१ ।

* We read in the Viṣṇu-Purāṇa as follows :—

देवसिद्धसुरादीनां नृपाणां च जनार्दन । इत्या तु सोऽसुरः कन्या रूढे निवर्तमाने ॥
x x x x x x x
कन्यापुरे स कन्यानां षोडशतुल्यविक्रमः । शताधिकानि ददृशे सहस्राणि महामते ॥

(V.xix. 9,31)

Having brought by force, O Kṛṣṇa (who are supplicated by all men)! daughters of gods, Siddhas and Asuras as well as of (human) kings (rulers of men), that demon (Naraka) detained them in his (own) palace. x x x Śrī Kṛṣṇa of incomparable prowess saw in his gynaeceum, O high-minded one, sixteen thousand and one hundred maidens.

Flying (thence) to the abode of Indra (the ruler of the gods), the Lord made over to Aditi (Indra's mother) her pair of ear-rings (recovered from the possession of Naraka, by whom they had been snatched away by force), as well as the umbrella (of Varuṇa) to Indra, and was worshipped (in return) alongwith His beloved spouse (Satyabhāmā) by the said king of immortals accompanied by his consort. (38) Urged on by His consort, He pulled up a Pārijāta tree (from the garden of Indra) and, placing it on the back of Garuḍa and vanquishing the gods, Indra and all (who opposed Him), He brought it down* to His (own) capital (Dwārakā). (39) It was planted to adorn the (pleasure-) garden attached to Satyabhāmā's mansion. Hanking after its (delicious) fragrance and honey, bees followed it (all the way) from heaven. (40) Bowing low (with reverence) and touching His feet with the corners of his diadem, Indra had (formerly) sought from Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) the accomplishment of his purpose (viz., the recovery of his mother's ear-rings and the umbrella of Varuṇa from Naraka). Once (however) he had his purpose accomplished, he fought with Him, though wise. Oh, the ignorance even of the gods (who are predominantly Sāttvika in character)! Accursed is opulence. (41)

अथो मुहूर्त एकस्मिन् नानागारेषु ताः स्त्रियः । यथोपयेमे भगवांस्तावदूषधरोऽज्ययः । ४२ ।

गृहेषु तासामनपाव्यतर्क्यकृन्निरस्तसाम्यातिशयेष्वस्थितः ।

रेमे रमाभिर्निजकामसंप्रुतो यथेतरो गार्हकमेधिकांश्चरन् । ४३ ।

इत्थं रमापतिमवाप्य पतिं स्त्रियस्ता ब्रह्मादयोऽपि न विदुः पदवीं यदीयाम् ।

भेजुर्मुदाविरतमेधितयानुरागहासावलोकेनवसङ्गमजल्पलज्जाः । ४४ ।

प्रत्युत्सामसनवराहणपादशौचताम्बूलविश्रमणवीजनगन्धमाल्यैः ।

केशप्रसारशयनस्त्रपनोपहार्यैर्दासीशता अपि विभोर्विदधुः स्म दास्यम् । ४५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे पारिजातहरणनरकवधो

नाम एकोनपट्त्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ५९ ।

Assuming as many semblances as the brides, and remaining undiminished (integral), the almighty Lord espoused with due ceremony (all) those damsels in different mansions at one and the same hour. (42) Remaining constantly (and simultaneously) present in their mansions, which were not only unsurpassed but were beyond (all) comparison (in point of abundance of luxuries), Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who wrought inconceivable things and was perfect in His own blissfulness, sported with those part manifestations of Goddess Rāmā like an ordinary mortal, (scrupulously) performing (all) the duties of a householder. (43) Having thus secured for their husband the (very) Spouse of Rāmā, whose ways (the path leading to whom) even Brahṁā (the creator) and others are unable to make out, the aforesaid ladies waited upon Him with incessantly increasing joy, greeting Him with glances accompanied by loving smiles in their (ever) fresh meeting (with the Lord) marked by exchange of jokes and bashfulness. (44) Though attended by hundreds of servant-maids, they rendered (personal) service to the almighty Lord by going forth to meet Him (when He called at their door), offering Him (an exalted) seat and excellent articles of worship, laving His feet, presenting betel leaves seasoned with catechu, lime areca-nut parings, cloves and cardamom seeds etc., relieving His fatigue (by kneading His feet etc.), fanning Him, daubing Him with sandal-paste and

* We have already seen in verse 55 of Discourse L that Indra himself sent a Pārijāta tree to Oṽārakā even when the city was built. But it was planed elsewhere away from the mansion of Satyabhāmā, who wanted to have one just beside her.

decking Him with garlands (in the hot weather), dressing His hair, arranging His bed, bathing Him and serving Him with refreshments etc. (45)

Thus ends the fifty-ninth discourse entitled "The Lord snatches away (by force) a Pārījāta tree (from Indra's paradise) and makes short work of Naraka," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LX

A dialogue between Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Rukmīṇī

श्रीसुक उवाच

कर्हिंचित् सुखमासीनं स्वतल्पस्थं जगद्गुरुम् । पतिं पर्यचरद् भूष्मी व्यजनेन सखीजनैः । १ ।
यस्त्वेतल्लीलया विश्वं सृजत्यस्यवतीश्वरः । स हि जातः स्वसेतूनां गोपीधाय यदुज्ज्वलः । २ ।
तस्मिन्नन्तर्गृहे भ्राजन्मुक्तादामविलम्बिता । विराजिते वितानेन दीपैर्मणिमयैरपि । ३ ।
मल्लिकादामभिः पुष्पैर्द्विरिफकुलनादितैः । जालरन्ध्रप्रविष्टैश्च गोभिश्चन्द्रमसोऽमलैः । ४ ।
पारिजातवनामोदवायुनोद्गानशालिना । धूपैरगुरुजं राजन् जालरन्ध्रविनिर्गतैः । ५ ।
पयःफेननिभे शुभ्रे पर्यङ्के कशिपूत्तमे । उपतस्थे सुखासीनं जगतामीश्वरं पतिम् । ६ ।
बालव्यजनमादाय रत्नदण्डं सखीकरात् । तेन वीजयती देवी उपासाञ्चक्र ईश्वरम् । ७ ।
सोपाच्युतं कृणयती मणिनूपुराभ्यां रेजेऽङ्गुलीयवलयव्यजनाग्रहस्ता ।
वस्त्रान्तगूढकुचकुङ्कुमशोणहारभासा नितम्बधृतया च परार्धकाञ्चया । ८ ।
तां रूपिणीं श्रियमनन्यगतिं निरीक्ष्य या लीलया धृतनोरनुरूपरूपा ।
प्रीतः स्मयन्नलककुण्डलनिष्ककण्ठवक्त्रोल्लसत्स्मितसुधां हरिराबभाषे । ९ ।

Śrī Suka began again : On a certain night Rukmīṇī (the daughter of king Bhīsmaka), accompanied by her female companions, was serving with a fan her (divine) Spouse (Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa), the Father and Illuminator of the world, who was comfortably seated on her own bed. (1) The same birthless Lord who creates, sustains and destroys the universe by way of sport was born in the race of Yadu for maintaining the (moral) standards set up by Himself. (2) Rukmīṇī waited upon her Spouse, the suzerain Lord of (all) the 'worlds, (who was) comfortably seated on a superb cushion, white as the foam of milk, mounted on a couch, O king ! within that (well-known) inner apartment (of Rukmīṇī's palace)—whose beauty was heightened by a canopy fringed with brilliant pearl-strings hanging from it, by gems serving as lights, by flowers and garlands of jasmines resonant with the humming of black bees, and by silvery rays of the moon that had penetrated into it through eye-holes of latticed windows—(nay,) which was fanned by breezes blowing through the garden (attached to it) and laden with the fragrance of Pārījāta trees (figuring in it), and scented with fumes rising from burning aloë-wood and escaping through the (aforementioned) eye-holes. (3—6) Taking from the hand of a female companion the chowrie provided with a handle of jewels, the glorious lady rendered service to the Lord, fanning Him with it. (7) Holding the handle of the fan in her hand adorned with rings and bangles and making music by her anklets made of gems beside the infallible Lord, she looked (most) charming with the splendour of her pearl necklace—reddened by the saffron painted on her breasts covered by the end of her sari—and with her girdle of unsurpassed value worn about her hips. (8) Delighted to see her, the beautiful Lakṣmī Herself, who was exclusively devoted to Him, and had assumed a form matching with Śrī Kṛṣṇa's—who had sportfully taken a (human) semblance—(nay,) on whose countenance, embellished by locks, ear-rings and a neck adorned with a gold necklace, shone a nectarine smile, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who captivates the heart of all) spoke smilingly (as follows). (9)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

राजपुत्रीपिता भूपैल्लोकपालविभूतिभिः । महानुभावैः श्रीमद्भी रूपार्पादवलोजितैः । १० ।
 तान् प्राप्तानर्थिनो हित्वा चैद्यादीन् स्मरदुर्मदान् । दत्ता भ्रात्रा स्वपित्रा च कस्मान्नो ववृषेऽसमान् । ११ ।
 राजभ्यो विभ्यतः सुभूः समुद्रं शरणं गतान् । बलवद्विद्विः कृतद्वेषान् प्रायस्त्यक्तनृपासनान् । १२ ।
 अस्पृष्टवर्मानां पुंसामलोकपथमीयुषाम् । आस्थिताः पदवीं सुभूः प्रावः सीदन्ति योषितः । १३ ।
 निष्किञ्चना वयं शश्वत्रिक्छिन्नजनप्रियाः । तस्मात् प्रायेण न ह्याह्वया मां भजन्ति सुमध्यमे । १४ ।
 ययोरात्मसमं वित्तं जन्मैश्वर्याकृतिर्भवः । तयोर्विवाहो मंत्री च नेतृमाधमयोः क्वचित् । १५ ।
 वैदभ्येतद्विज्ञाय त्वयादीर्घसमीक्षया । वृता वयं गुणैर्हीना भिक्षुभिः श्लाघिता मुधा । १६ ।
 अथात्मनोऽनुरूपं वै भजस्व क्षत्रियर्षभम् । येन त्वमाशिषः सत्या इहामुत्र च लप्स्यसे । १७ ।
 चैद्यशाल्वजरासन्धदन्तवक्रादयो नृपाः । मम द्विषन्ति वामोरु रुक्मी चापि तवाग्रजः । १८ ।
 तेषां वीर्यमदान्धानां दूमानां स्मयन्तये । आनीतसि मया भद्रे तेजोऽपहरतासताम् । १९ ।
 उदासीना वयं नूनं न स्व्यपत्यार्थकामकाः । आत्पलब्ध्याऽऽस्पृहे पूर्णा गेहयोज्योतिरक्रियाः । २० ।

The glorious Lord said : Princess ! you were sought after by kings, who vied in wealth with the lords of the spheres, wielded great influence, were endowed with splendour and distinguished for their comeliness, magnanimity and bodily strength. (10) Leaving them (all), the king of Cedi etc.—who were all love-intoxicated and had called at your door as suitors and to whom you had been affianced by your brother and father—how did you choose for your husband us, who were no match for you. (11) Afraid of kings, O beautiful one, ourselves have sought refuge in the ocean, have entered into enmity with the strong and have well-nigh relinquished the royal throne. (12) O lovely one ! generally those women suffer, who follow the track of men whose ways are not clear and who are treading the paths unrecognized by the world. (13) We are penniless and are ever loved by the poor. Therefore, O lady of slender waist, the well-to-do, as a matter of fact, do not generally resort to Me. (14) Marriage and friendship should be contracted between those two who are equal to each other in wealth, birth, sovereignty, exterior and future prospects, and never between a superior and an inferior. (15) O princess of Vidarbha ! ignoring these facts due to your short-sightedness, you (wrongly) selected (for a husband) us, who, though praised for nothing by beggars, are (really) devoid of merits. (16) Even now choose you an eminent Kṣatriya who is a match for you. Through him shall you find the desires of your heart fulfilled both here and hereafter. (17) Kings like Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi), Śālva, Jarāsandha and Dantavakra, nay, your own elder brother Rukmī too bear enmity towards me, O handsome lady ! (18) It was in order to curb the pride of those haughty kings, who had grown blind under the intoxication of their might that you were brought by Me, the eclipser of the wicked, O auspicious one ! (19) Having no desire of women, progeny and wealth, we are really indifferent (to the world), remain steeped in a sense of fullness through Self-Realization, are unattached to home or the body and doing no work remain as a witness only like a light.(20)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एतावदुक्त्वा भगवान्नात्मानं वल्लभामिव । मन्यमानामविश्लेषात् तदर्धं उपारभत् । ११ ।

इति त्रिलोकेशपतेस्तदाऽऽत्मनः प्रियस्य देव्यश्रुतपूर्वमप्रियम् ।

आश्रुत्य भीता हृदि जातवेपथुश्चिन्तां दुर्न्तां रुदती जगाम ह । १२ ।

पदा सुजातेन नखारुणश्रिया भुवं लिखत्यश्रुभिरञ्जनासितैः ।

आसिञ्जती कुङ्कुमरुषितौ स्तनौ तस्थावधोमुख्यतिदुःखरुद्धवाक् । १३ ।

तस्याः सुदुःखभयशोकविनष्टबुद्धेर्हस्ताच्छल्यद्वलयतो व्यजनं पपात ।

देहश्च विक्लवधियः सहस्रैव मुहान् रम्भेव वायुविहता प्रविकीर्य केशान् । १४ ।

तद् दृष्ट्वा भगवान् कृष्णः प्रियायाः प्रेमबन्धनम् । हास्यप्रौढिमजानन्त्याः करुणः सोऽन्वकम्पत । १५ ।

पर्यङ्कादवस्थाशु तामुत्थाप्य चतुर्भुजः । केशान् समुह्य तद्वक्त्रं प्रामुज्यं पद्मपाणिना । १६ ।

प्रमृज्याश्रुकले नेत्रे स्तनौ चोपहतौ शुचा । आश्लिष्य बाहुना राजत्रनयविषयां सतीम् । १७ ।

सान्त्वयामास सान्त्वजः कृपया कृपणां प्रभुः । हास्यप्रौढिभ्रमच्चिन्तामत्तदहौ सतां गतिः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Having spoken this much to Rukmiṇī, who looked upon herself by virtue of her constant presence by His side as His most beloved wife, the Lord, who sought to uproot her pride, became silent. (21) Hearing, then, these unwelcome words—such as had been never heard before—of her beloved Husband, the Lord of the three worlds, the glorious lady was struck with terror and, shuddering at heart and shedding tears, she was actually plunged into endless grief. (22) With her speech choked with excessive anguish she stood (there) scratching the ground with her tender feet gleaming red due to its (ruddy) nails, soaking both the breasts—painted with saffron—by her tears rendered black through collyrium and with her face cast down. (23) Severe agony, fear and grief had so obliterated her reason that the fan dropped from her hand which (shrivelling immediately) allowed the bracelets to slip off. The body too of that lady, who had lost control over her mind, swooning suddenly, fell down with dishevelled hair like a banana tree uprooted by the wind. (24) Seeing His beloved spouse, who had failed to grasp the deep subtlety of His humour, bound to Him with such a tie of affection, that merciful and glorious Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa was moved with pity. (25) Quickly stepping down from the couch and lifting her up, the four-armed Lord gathered up her locks and wiped her face with His lotus hand. (26) Wiping her tearful eyes and breasts soiled with tears of grief and folding in His arms the virtuous lady, who was single-heartedly attached to Him, O king, the Lord, who is the resort of the righteous and knew how to console, comforted His distressed consort, who was confounded in mind by the severity of the joke and was undeserving of it. (27-28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मा मा वैदर्भ्यसुयेथा जाने त्वां मत्परायणाम् । त्वद्वचः श्रोतुकामेन श्वेत्याऽऽचरितमङ्गने । १९ ।

मुखं च प्रेमसंरम्भस्फुरिताधरमीक्षितुम् । कटाक्षेपारुणापाङ्गं सुन्दरश्रुकटीतटम् । २० ।

अयं हि परमो लाभो गुहेषु गुहमेधिनाम् । यन्नर्पैर्नीयते यामः प्रियया भीरु भामिनि । २१ ।

The glorious Lord said : O daughter of the King of Vidarbha, no, do not be angry with Me. I know you are devoted to Me. I behaved jestingly with you, O beautiful lady, only with intent to hear your retort and to behold your countenance with the lips quivering due to resentment through love, with the corners of the eyes growing red while darting glances, and with the beautiful line of eyebrows knit together. (29-30) O lady marked with fear and frown! to the householders engrossed in their household duties this indeed is the greatest gain that they pass a few hours in pastimes in the company of their beloved. (31)

श्रीशुक उवाच

सैवं भगवता राजन् वैदर्भी परिसान्त्विता । ज्ञात्वा तत्परिहासोक्तिं प्रियत्यागभयं जहौ । ३२ ।
बभाष ऋषभं पुंसं वीक्षन्ती भगवन्मुखम् । सप्रीडहासरुचिरस्त्रिधापाङ्गेन भारत । ३३ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Rukmiṇī (the daughter of the King of Vidarbha), O king, on being thus amply comforted by the Lord, realized His utterance to be a joke and gave up the fear of being abandoned by her Darling. (32) Gazing on the Lord's face with affectionate glances graced by a bashful smile, she spoke (thus) to the greatest among men, O scion of Bharata ! (33)

रविमण्युवाच

नन्वेवमेतदरविन्दविलोचनाह यद् वै भवान् भगवतोऽसदृशी विभूषः ।
क्र स्वे महिम्यभिरतो भगवांस्त्र्यधीशः क्राहं गुणप्रकृतिरज्ञगुहीतपादा । ३४ ।
सत्यं भयादिव गुणेश्च उरुक्रमान्तः शेते समुद्र उपलम्बनमात्र आत्मा ।
नित्यं कदिन्द्रियगणैः कृतविग्रहस्त्वं त्वत्सेवकैर्नृपपदं विधुतं तपोऽध्यम् । ३५ ।
त्वत्पादपद्मकरन्दजुषां मुनीनां वर्त्तास्फुटं नृपशुभिर्ननु दुर्विभाव्यम् ।
यस्मादलौकिकमिवेहितमीश्वरस्य भूषंस्तवेहितमश्रो अनु ये भवन्तम् । ३६ ।
निष्किञ्चनो ननु भवान् न यतोऽस्ति किञ्चिद् यस्मै वलिं वलिभुजोऽपि हरस्यजायाः ।
न त्वा विदन्यमुनूपोऽन्तकमाढ्यताम्याः प्रेष्टो भवान् वलिभुजामपि तेऽपि तुभ्यम् । ३७ ।
त्वं वै समस्तपुरुषार्थमयः फलात्मा यद्वाञ्छया सुमतयो विसृजन्ति कृत्स्नम् ।
तेषां विभो समुचितो भवतः समाजः पुंसः स्त्रियाश्च रतयोः सुखदुःखिनोर्न । ३८ ।
त्वं न्यस्तदण्डमुनिभिर्गदितानुभाव आत्माऽऽत्मदश्च जगतामिति मे वृतोऽसि ।
हित्वा भवद्भुव उदीरितकालवेगध्वस्ताशिषोऽञ्जभवनाकपतीन् कुतोऽन्ये । ३९ ।
जाड्यं वचस्तव गदाग्रज यस्तु भूपान् विद्राव्य शार्ङ्गनिन्देन जहथ मां त्वम् ।
सिंहो यथा स्वबलिमीश पशून् स्वभागं तेभ्यो भवाद् यदुदधिं शरणं प्रपन्नः । ४० ।
यद्वाञ्छया नृपशिरागणयोऽङ्गवैन्यजायन्तनाहुषगायादय ऐकपत्यम् ।
राज्यं विसृज्य विविशुर्वनमम्बुजाक्ष सीदन्ति तेऽनुपदवीं त इहास्थिताः किम् । ४१ ।
कान्यं श्रयेत तव पादसरोजगन्धमाघ्राय सन्मुखगितं जनतापवर्गम् ।
लक्ष्म्यालयं त्वविगणय्य गुणालयस्य मर्त्या सद्गुरुभयमर्थविविक्तदृष्टिः । ४२ ।
तं त्वानुरूपमभजं जगतामधीशमात्मानमत्र च परत्र च कामपूरम् ।
स्यान्मे तवाङ्घ्रिररणं सुतिभिर्भ्रमन्त्या यो वै भजन्तमुपयात्यनुतापवर्गः । ४३ ।
तस्याः स्युरच्युत नृपा भवतोपदिष्टाः स्त्रीणां गृहेषु खरगोश्चविडालभृत्याः ।
यत्कर्णमूलमरिक्कर्षण नोपयायाद् युष्मत्कथा मृडविग्निसंभामु गीता । ४४ ।

त्वक्श्मश्रुरोमनखकेशपिनद्धमन्तर्मासास्थिरक्तकुमिविदकफपित्तवानम् ।
 जीवच्छवं भजति कान्तमतिर्विमुदा या ते पदाब्जमकरन्दमजिघ्रती स्त्री ।४५।
 अस्त्वम्बुजाक्ष मम ते चरणानुराग आत्मन् रतस्य मयि चानतिरिक्तदृष्टेः ।
 यर्हस्य वृद्धय उपात्तरजोऽतिमात्रो मामीक्षसे तदु ह नः परमानुकम्पा ।४६।
 नैवालीकमहं मन्ये वचस्ते मधुसूदन । अश्वया इव हि प्रायः कन्यायाः स्यादरतिः क्वचित् ।४७।
 व्यूढायाश्चापि पुंश्चल्या मनोऽभ्येति नवं नवम् । बुधोऽस्तीति न विभूयान् तां विभ्रदुभयच्युतः ।४८।

Rukmiṇī said : Of course, it is as You said. O lotus-eyed Lord, that I am surely unlike You, the glorious one, possessed of infinite qualities. What comparison is there between You, the glorious Lord of the three principal deities (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) and established in Your own greatness, and myself, the primordial Nature comprised of the three Guṇas and one whose feet are clutched by the ignorant ! (34) True it is that You sleep in the ocean of the (devotee's) heart as if afraid of the three Guṇas, O Lord of wide strides, who are pure Consciousness, the Self. You are ever at loggerheads with the wicked senses and even Your servants kick aside such a dark and gloomy thing as kingship. (35) The ways (even) of sages fond of the honey of Your lotus-feet are obscure and hence surely incomprehensible by beasts among men. For, when the doings of (even) those who follow You are as though supernatural, those of the Almighty Lord in You must be much more so. (36) Certainly You—to whom (even) Brahmā and others, who accept offerings (from others) bear offerings—are Akīrcana (not in the sense that You own nothing but) because there is nothing other than You. Those blinded by wealth and (engaged in) gratifying their senses do not know You, who steal away the hours of their life: You are the most beloved of those Brahmā and others (who enjoy the respect of others), and vice versa. (37) Indeed You are the embodiment of every (recognized) object of human pursuit, a personification of absolute joy, seeking which the wise give up everything. Their contact with You is most deserved, but not so of the man and woman who are attached one to the other and therefore subject to pleasure and pain. (38) You have been elected by me (as my husband), knowing that Your glory has been sung by sages who have renounced the rod, and that You are the Soul of the universe and are ready to bestow Your very self (on Your devotees), and rejecting (even) Brahmā (the lotus-born) and the rulers of heaven (Indra and others), whose fortune and blessings are dashed to the ground by the force of Time as propelled by a mere play of Your eyebrows, others (Śiśupāla and so on) being of no account. (39) Your plea that You resorted to the sea out of fear (of the kings) has no meaning. O elder Brother of Gada; for, by the mere twang of the Śārṅga bow you put them to flight and carried away myself. Your share, O Lord, (even) as a lion drives away other animals and appropriates its prey. (40) The foremost of kings like Ariga, Pṛthu (the son of Vena), Bharata (born of Jayanti, the spouse of Lord Rṣabhadeva), Yayāti (the son of Nahuṣa), Gaya and others retired to the forest renouncing their undisputed sovereignty in quest of You, O Lord of lotus eyes. Did they suffer because they sought Your feet here ? (41) O Lord, the abode of virtues ! the fragrance of Your lotus-feet grants freedom from transmigration to the people, is the resort of Lakṣmī and has been extolled by men of wisdom. What mortal woman with a clear insight into the real purpose of life, who has (once) smelt it, would (dare) ignore it and seek another who is ever subject to grave fears (of senility and death etc.)? (42) I have sought as my befitting partner You, who are the suzerain lord of the universe, (nay,) my own Self and the granter of (all) desired boons both here as well as hereafter. May Your feet, which seek him who worships You and release him from the deceptive cycle of births and deaths, prove to be an asylum to me, who have been wandering through (repeated) births. (43) O infallible One, O Destroyer of foes, let the kings (Śisupāla and others) suggested by You be the choice of that woman into whose ears has not entered a lay pertaining to You and sung in the courts of Śiva and Brahmā. Within their homes those kings behave towards the ladies like a donkey, an ox, a dog, a cat and a slave. (44) This human body, the interior of which contains (nothing but) flesh, bones, blood, worms, excreta, phlegm, bile and wind, is covered with skin, moustaches, nails and hair on the body and head, is a living corpse. That stupid woman alone serves such a body as a husband, who has never enjoyed the fragrance of honey in the lotus of Your feet. (45) I wish to burn with love for Your feet, O lotus-eyed One, who delight in Your own self and do not see anything extraordinary in me ! When for the advancement of this world You cast Your glance on me (as Prakṛti), assuming a superabundance of Rajas, that alone constitutes, as a matter of fact, (an act of) supreme grace on me. (46) (When You ask me to choose another partner even now,) O slayer of the demon Madhu, I do not regard Your words as without meaning; for sometimes, surely enough, there are girls who like Ambā* (the daughter of the celebrated king of Kāśī), cherish love for somebody else (than the one by whom they have been won). (47) The mind of a woman of easy virtue, though married, is always attracted towards a new person. A wise man should not (therefore) maintain such an unchaste woman; for by doing so he falls both here and hereafter. (48)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

साध्येतच्छ्रेतुकामेस्त्वं राजपुत्रि प्रलम्बिता । मयोदितं यदन्वात्थ सर्वं तत् सत्यमेव हि । ४९ ।
यान् यान् कामयसे कामान् मय्यकामाय भामिनि । सन्ति होकान्तभक्तायास्तव कल्याणि नित्यदा । ५० ।
उपलब्धं पतिप्रेम पतिव्रत्यं च तेऽनघे । यद्वाक्यंश्चाल्यमानाया न धीर्मय्यपकर्षिता । ५१ ।
ये मां भजन्ति दाम्पत्ये तपसा व्रतचर्यया । कामात्मानोऽपवर्गेण मोहिता मम मायया । ५२ ।
मां प्राप्य मानिन्यपवर्गसम्पदं वाञ्छन्ति ये सम्पद एव तत्पतिम् ।
ते मन्दभाष्या निरयेऽपि ये नृणां मात्रात्मकत्वात्रिरयः सुसङ्गमः । ५३ ।
दिष्ट्या गृहेश्वर्यसकृन्मयि त्वया कृतानुवृत्तिर्भवमोचनी खलैः ।
सुदुष्करासीं सुतरां दुराशियो ह्यसुम्भवाया निकृतिञ्चुषः स्त्रियाः । ५४ ।
न त्वादृशीं प्रणयिनीं गृहिणीं गृहेषु पश्यामि भामिनि यया स्वविवाहकाले ।
प्राप्तान् नृपानवगणय्य रहोहरो मे प्रस्थापितो द्विज उपश्रुतस्तत्कथस्य । ५५ ।
भ्रातृर्विरूपकरणं युधि निर्जितस्य प्रोद्वाहपर्वणि च तद्वधपक्षगोष्ठ्याम् ।
दुःखं समुत्थमसहोऽस्मदयोगभीत्या नैवाब्रवीः किमपि तेन वयं जितास्ते । ५६ ।
दूतस्त्वयाऽऽत्मलभने सुविक्तमन्त्रः प्रस्थापितो मयि चिरायति शून्यमेतत् ।
मत्वा जिहास इदमङ्गमनन्ययोग्यं तिष्ठेत् तत्त्वयि वयं प्रतिनन्दयामः । ५७ ।

The glorious Lord replied : O virtuous lady ! it was with intent to hear you speak in this strain. O princess, that you were subject to a joke by Me. In fact, the interpretation you have put on My words is wholly and literally true. (49) Whatever blessings you seek from Me are

* We are told in the Mahabharata how the three daughters of the Ihan king of Kāśī were conquered in an open contest by Bhīsmā for the sake of his cousins, Citrangada and Vicitravīrya, and how Ambā, the eldest of them, who had set her heart upon Śālva, was, when she opened her mind before Bhīsmā, allowed by the latter to seek the company of Śālva.

undoubtedly ever possessed by you, who are solely devoted to Me, O blessed one ! And blessings sought from Me lead to freedom from desires, i.e., Liberation. (50) O faultless one, I have come to know your love and fidelity to Me. For, though I tried to shake you by My words, your mind could not be estranged from Me. (51) They who propitiate Me, the Bestower of Liberation, for conjugal pleasures through austerities and vows have given their heart to sensuous enjoyments and are deluded by Mâyâ. (52) Having obtained (propitiated) Me, the Source and Bestower of Liberation as well as of worldly riches, O proud lady, they who seek after the latter only are unfortunate (as a matter of fact), inasmuch as these can be obtained even in the lowest species of life (which are compared with hell). To such men (however) whose mind is given to the pleasures of sense (even) hell appears to be a pleasant resort. (53) Well it is, O mistress of My household, that you have practised constant devotion to Me, which rids one of worldly bondage, and which is (so) very hard to practise for the wicked and more so for a deceitful woman reeking with unclean desires and given to sense-gratification only. (54) In the whole of My household I do not see a house-wife affectioate like yourself, O proud lady, who, ignoring all the kings assembled on the occasion of your marriage, sent a Brâhmaṇa carrying a confidential message to Me, of whom you had (only) heard good accounts (and whom you had never personally known). (55) You put up with the disfiguration of your brother vanquished in battle, nay, his death* (too at the hands of Balarâma) on the happy occasion of (Aniruddha's) wedding in a tournament of dice-playing, and the grief repeatedly caused by the memory of these (unpleasant) incidents. You (however) never spoke a word (about these things) for fear of separation from Us. By this conduct of yours you have (completely) won Me over. (56) A messenger was sent by you with a most judiciously-worded message in order to secure My hand. While I was tarrying, you looked upon this world (full of relatives and friends) as void and (even) sought to cast off this (charming) body of yours, which you did not consider as worthy of anyone else. Let that (unique) love of yours stand to your credit. (Unable to repay it) We (only) hail it with joy. (57)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं सौरतसंलपैर्भगवाञ्जगदीश्वरः । स्वरतो रमया रेमे नरलोकं विडम्बयन् । ५८ ।
तथान्यासामपि विभुर्गृहेषु गृहवानिव । आस्थितो गृहमेधीयान् धर्माल्लोकगुरुर्हरिः । ५९ ।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे कृष्णरुक्मिणीसंवादे नाम षष्टितमोऽध्यायः । ६० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : In this way the almighty Lord of the universe, though immersed in the Bliss of Self, sported with Lakṣmī (in the form of Rukmiṇī) by indulging in amorous talks (with her) imitating the ways of humanity. (58) So did the all-pervading Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Preceptor of the universe, sported (simultaneously) in the mansions of His other spouses too, discharging His household duties like a (common) householder. (59)

Thus ends the sixtieth discourse entitled "A dialogue between Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Rukmiṇī," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* Described later in verse 36 of Discourse LXI, though the incident presumably occurred earlier.

अथैकषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXI

(A description of the Lord's progeny;)

Rukmī killed (by Balarāma) during Aniruddha's wedding

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकैकशस्ताः कृष्णस्य पुत्रान् दश दशाबलाः । अजीजनन्ननवमान्यितुः सर्वात्मिसम्पदा । १ ।
 गृहादनपगं वीक्ष्य राजपुत्र्योऽच्युतं स्थितम् । प्रेष्टुं न्यमंसत स्वं स्वं न तत्तत्त्वदिवः स्त्रियः । २ ।
 चारुवज्रकोशवदनायतबाहुनेत्रसप्रेमहासरसवीक्षितवल्गुजल्पैः ।
 सम्मोहिता भगवतो न मनो विजेतुं स्वैर्विभ्रमैः समशकन् वनिता विभूषः । ३ ।
 स्मायावलोकलवदर्शितभावहारिभूमण्डलप्रहितसौरतमन्त्रशोण्डैः ।
 पल्यस्तु षोडशसहस्रमनङ्गबाणैर्यस्येन्द्रियं विमथितुं करणं शेकुः । ४ ।
 इत्थं रमापतिमवाप्य पतिं स्त्रियस्ता ब्रह्मादयोऽपि न विदुः पदवीं यदीवाम् ।
 भेजुर्मुदाविरतमेधितयानुरागहासाबलोकनवमङ्गमलालसाद्यम् । ५ ।
 प्रत्युद्गमासनवराहणपादशोचतामूलविश्रमणवीजनगन्धमाल्यैः ।
 केशप्रसाशयनस्रपनोपहार्यदीप्तिशता अपि विभोर्विदधुः स्म दास्यम् । ६ ।

Srī Śuka began again : The aforesaid wives of Śrī Kṛṣṇa bore Him ten sons each, who were in no way inferior to their Father in respect of all their mental and physical qualities. (1) Perceiving Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) not stirring out of their palaces but (always) present there, the princesses regarded themselves each as His most beloved spouse. (As a matter of fact) those ladies were unaware of His real character. (2) The loving ladies were exceedingly charmed by the lovely countenance, resembling a lotus flower, long arms, big eyes, glances full of love and merriment and winning talks of the Lord; (but) with (all) their charms they were unable to win the heart of the Perfect One. (3) (All) His sixteen thousand (and odd) wives could not shake His mind by their shafts of Cupid and other charms skilled in conveying the message of love despatched by their arched eyebrows fascinating with the sentiment expressed by their suppressed smile and sidelong glances. (4) Having gained for their husband (such a one as) the Consort of Rāmā, whose ways even (great) gods like Brahmā are unable to know, the aforesaid ladies indulged with ever growing delight in loving smiles, affectionate glances and a longing for union which ever appeared as new, and so on. (5) Though attended by hundreds of servant-maids, they rendered (personal) service to the all-pervading Lord by going forth to meet Him (on His arrival), offering Him a seat and excellent articles of worship, washing His feet, presenting betel-leaves seasoned with lime, catechu, areca-nut parings, cardamoms, cloves etc., relieving Him of His fatigue (by kneading His feet etc.), fanning Him, daubing Him with sandal-paste and adorning Him with garlands, dressing His locks, arranging His bed, bathing Him and serving Him with dishes (of various kinds). (6)

नासां या दशपुत्राणां कृष्णस्त्रीणां पुत्रेदिताः । अष्टौ महिष्यस्तत्पुत्रान् प्रद्युम्नादीन् गृणामि ते । ७ ।
 चारुदेष्णः सुदेष्णश्च चारुदेहश्च वीर्यवान् । सुचारुश्चारुगुप्तश्च भद्रचारुस्तथापरः । ८ ।
 चारुचन्द्रो विचारुश्च चारुश्च दशमो हरेः । प्रद्युम्नप्रमुखा जाता रुक्मिण्यां नावमाः पितुः । ९ ।
 भानुः सुभानुः स्वभानुः प्रभानुर्भानुमांस्तथा । चन्द्रभानुर्वृहद्भानुरतिभानुस्तथाष्टमः । १० ।
 श्रीभानुः प्रतिभानुश्च सत्यभामात्मजा दश । साय्वः सुमित्रः पुरुजिच्छत्रजिच्च सहस्रजित् । ११ ।
 विजयश्चित्रकेतुश्च वसुमान् द्रविडः क्रतुः । जाम्बवत्याः सुता ह्येते साय्वाद्याः पितृसंपताः । १२ ।
 वीरश्चन्द्रोऽश्वमेनश्च चित्रगुर्वेगवान् वृषः । आमः शङ्कुर्वसुः श्रीमान् कुन्तिर्नाम्रजितः सुताः । १३ ।
 श्रुतः कविर्वृषो वीरः सुबाहुर्भट्ट एकलः । शान्तिर्दर्शः पूर्णमासः कालिन्ध्याः सोमकोऽवरः । १४ ।
 प्रद्योषो गात्रवान्सिंहो बलः प्रबल ऊर्ध्वगः । माद्र्याः पुत्रा महाशक्तिः सह ओजोऽपराजितः । १५ ।
 वृको हर्षोऽनिलो गृध्रो वर्धनोऽत्राद एव च । महाशः पावनो वह्निर्मित्रविन्दात्मजाः क्षुधिः । १६ ।
 संग्रामजिद् बृहत्सेनः शूरः प्रहृग्नोऽरिजित् । जयः सुभद्रो भद्राया वाम आयुश्च सत्यकः । १७ ।
 दीप्तिमान्नाम्रतप्त्याद्या गेहिण्यास्लनया हरेः । प्रद्युम्नाद्यानिरुद्धोऽभूद्रुक्मवत्यां महाबलः । १८ ।
 पुत्र्यां तु रुक्मिणो राजन् नाम्ना भोजकटे पुरे । एतेषां पुत्रपौत्राश्च बभूवुः कोटिशो नृप ।
 मातरः कृष्णजातानां सहस्राणि च षोडश । १९ ।

Of the (sixteen thousand and odd) wives of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who had ten sons each, I (now proceed to) mention to you the sons, Pradyumna and so on, of the eight principal spouses (alone) that have been previously referred to (by me). (7) With Pradyumna as the eldest, Cārudeṣṇa, Sudeṣṇa, the valorous Cārudeha, Sucāru and Cārugupta and, next to him, Bhadracāru as well as Cārucandra, Vicāru and Cāru as the tenth were born of Rukmiṇī. They were in no way inferior to their father. (8-9) Bhānu, Subhānu, Swarbhānu, Prabhānu and Bhānumān, Candrabhānu, Bṛhadbhānu and Atibhānu, the eighth, as well as Śrībhānu and Pratibhānu were the ten sons of Satyabhāmā. Sāmba, Sumitra, Purujit, Śatajit and Sahasrajit, Vijaya and Citraketu, Vasmān, Draviḍa and Kratu—these were the sons of Jāmbavatī. Sāmba was the eldest of them and they were all loved by the Father. (10—12) Vīra, Candra and Aśwasena, Citragu, Vegavān, Vṛṣa, Āma, Śaṅku, Vasu and the glorious Kunti were the sons of Nāgnajitī. (13) Śruta, Kavi, Vṛṣa, Vīra, Subāhu, Bhadra, who fought the enemy single-handed, Śānti, Darśa, Pūrṇamāsa and Somaka, the youngest, were born of Kāliṇḍī. (14) Praghoṣa, Gātravān, Simha, Bala, Prabala, Urdhvaga, Mahāśakti, Saha, Oja and Aparājita were the sons of Lakṣmaṇā (the daughter of the ruler of Madra). (15) Mitravindā's sons were Vṛka, Harṣa, Anila, Grdhra, Vardhana, Annāda, Mahāśa, Pāvana, Vahni and Kṣudhi. (16) Sangrāmajit, Bṛhatsena, Śūra, Praharāṇa, Arijit, Jaya, Subhadra, Vāma, Āyu and Satyaka were born of Bhadrā (Śaibyā). (17) Diptimān, Tamra, Tapta and others were the sons of Śrī Kṛṣṇa through Rohiṇī (the first of the other sixteen thousand wives). And from the loins of Pradyumna appeared the mighty Aniruddha through Rukmavatī, the daughter of Rukmi (Rukmiṇi's brother), born while he was living in the city known by the name of Bhojakata, O king (Parikṣit)! The mothers of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's progeny numbered sixteen thousand and odd. (Hence) the sons and grandsons of (even) these (other) sons of Śrī Kṛṣṇa reached the figure of tens of million. O protector of men ! (18-19)

राजोवाच

कथं रुक्म्यरिपुत्राय प्रादाद् दुहितरं युधि । कृष्णेन परिभूतस्तं हन्तुं रन्ध्रं प्रतीक्षते ।

एतदाख्याहि मे विद्वन् द्विषोर्वैवाहिकं मिथः । २० ।

अनागतमतीतं च वर्तमानमतीन्द्रियम् । विप्रकृष्टं व्यवहितं सम्यक् पश्यन्ति योगिनः । २१ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : How did Rukmī, who had been worsted in battle by Śrī Kṛṣṇa and had (ever since) been awaiting an opportunity to kill Him, give away his daughter to his enemy's son? (Pray,) tell me this, O learned soul—the circumstances which brought about a mutual alliance through marriage between these two enemies. (20) Yogis clearly see the past, present and future, (nay, even) that which lies beyond the perception of the senses, that which is remote and that which is intercepted (by something else). (21)

श्रीशुक उवाच

वृतः स्वयंवरे साक्षादनङ्गोऽङ्गयुतस्तया । राज्ञः समेतान् निजित्य जहारैकरथो युधि । २२ ।

यद्यप्यनुस्मरन् वैरं रुक्मी कृष्णावमानितः । व्यतरद् भागिनेयाय सुतौ कुर्वन् स्वसुः प्रियम् । २३ ।

रुक्मिण्यास्तनयां राजन् कृतवर्मसुतो बली । उपयेमे विशालाक्षीं कन्यां चारुमतीं किल । २४ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Pradyumna (who was Love incarnate himself) was elected by Rukmavati in a choice marriage. Having completely vanquished in battle—with none other to help him beyond the chariot he drove in—the kings assembled (there), he carried her away. (22) Though constantly thinking of his hostility towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa, by whom he had been treated with contumely, yet seeking to oblige his sister (Rukmiṇī, who had been instrumental in saving his life), Rukmī gave away his daughter to his sister's son. (23) Kṛtavarmā's son, Balī, O king, married Rukmiṇī's daughter, Cārumatī, a girl with large eyes; so it is said. (24)

दौहित्रायानिरुद्धाय पौत्रौ रुक्म्यददाद्धरे । रोचनां बद्धवैरोऽपि स्वसुः प्रियचिकीर्षया ।

जानन्नधर्मं तद् यौनं स्नेहपाशानुबन्धनः । २५ ।

तस्मिन्नभ्युदये राजन् रुक्मिणी रामकेशवौ । पुरं भोजकटं जग्मुः साम्बप्रद्युम्नकादयः । २६ ।

तस्मिन् निवृत्त उद्वाहे कालिङ्गप्रमुखा नृपाः । दृष्ट्वास्ते रुक्मिणं प्रोचुर्बलमक्षैर्विनिर्जय । २७ ।

अनक्षत्रो ह्ययं राजत्रपि तद्व्यसनं महत् । इत्युक्तो बलमाहूय तेनाक्षे रुक्म्यदीव्यत । २८ ।

शतं सहस्रमयुतं रामस्तत्रादे पणम् । तं तु रुक्म्यजयत्तत्र कालिङ्गः प्राहसद् बलम् ।

दन्तान् सन्दर्शयन्नुच्चैर्नामृष्यत्तद्धलायुधः । २९ ।

ततो लक्षं रुक्म्यगृह्णाद् ग्लहं तत्राजयद् बलः । जितवानहमित्याह रुक्मी कैतवमाश्रितः । ३० ।

मन्युना क्षुभितः श्रीमान् समुद्र इव पर्वणि । जात्यारुणाक्षोऽतिरुषा न्यबुद्धं ग्लहमादे । ३१ ।

तं चापि जितवान् रामो धर्मेणच्छलमाश्रितः । रुक्मी जितं मयात्रेमे वदन्तु प्राश्रिका इति । ३२ ।

तदाब्रवीन्नभोवाणी बलेनैव जितो ग्लहः । धर्मतो वचनेनैव रुक्मी वदति वै मृषा । ३३ ।

तामनादृत्य वैदर्भो दुष्टराजन्यचोदितः । सङ्कर्षणं परिहसन् बभाषे कालचोदितः । ३४ ।

नैवाक्षकोविदा यूयं गोपाला वनगोचराः । अक्षैर्दीव्यन्ति राजानो बाणैश्च न भवादृशाः । ३५ ।

रुक्मिणैवमधिक्षिप्तो राजभिश्चोपहासितः । क्रुद्धः परिघमुद्यम्य जघ्रे तं नृमणसंसदि । ३६ ।

कलिङ्गराजं तरसा गृहीत्वा दशमे पदे । दन्तानपातयत् क्रुद्धो योऽहसद् विवृतैर्द्विजैः । ३७ ।

अन्ये निर्भिन्नबाहुरुशिरसो रुधिरोक्षिताः । राजानो दुद्रुवुर्भिता बलेन परिघार्दिताः । ३८ ।

निहते रुक्मिणि इयाले नाब्रवीत् साध्वसाधु वा । रुक्मिणीबलयो राजन् स्नेहभङ्गभयाद्धरिः । ३९ ।

ततोऽनिरुद्धं सह सूर्यया वरं रथं समारोप्य ययुः कुशस्थलीम् ।

रामादयो भोजकटाद् दशार्हाः सिद्धाखिलार्था मधुसूदनाश्रयाः । ४० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे अनिरुद्धविवाहे

रुक्मिवचो नामैकवष्टितमोऽध्यायः । ६९ ।

Though nursing deep-rooted animosity towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa and knowing such union as contrary to (the principles of) piety, Rukmī (further) gave away his grand daughter, Rocanā, to his daughter's son, Aniruddha, with intent to gratify his (own) sister (Rukmiṇī), bound as he was by ties of affection (with her). (25) For that festive occasion, O king, Rukmiṇī, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Sāmba, Pradyumna and others drove to the city of Bhojakaṭa. (26) The aforesaid wedding being over, some haughty kings with the ruler of Kālīṅga (the modern Utkala) at their head strongly said to Rukmī, "Thoroughly vanquish Balarāma in a game of dice. (27) Ignorant though he is of dice-playing, as a matter of fact, O king, great is his addiction to it." Thus advised, Rukmī invited Bala and played at dice with him. (28) In that game Balarāma made a wager (successively) of one hundred, one thousand and ten thousand gold coins; Rukmī, however, won them all. Showing his teeth on that occasion, the ruler of Kālīṅga very loudly laughed at Balarāma (the wielder of a plough), who (however) resented it. (29) Then Rukmī made a bet of one lakh and Balarāma won this time. Resorting to cunningness, Rukmī (however) said, "I have won." (30) Like the sea on a full moon, Balarāma (the glorious one) was (now) agitated with anger. His eyes, which were naturally red, began to glow with rage and he made a wager of a hundred million gold coins. (31) According to the laws of gambling Balarāma won that too. Taking recourse to deceit Rukmī (however) said, "I have won. Let these umpires arbitrate on this point." (32) A voice from the heavens thereupon declared that the bet was rightfully won by Balarāma alone; Rukmī is surely telling a lie when he says with his tongue alone (and not from his heart) that he has won. (33) Ignoring that voice, Rukmī, who was instigated by wicked kings and prompted by his own death, spoke mockingly to Balarāma (as follows):—(34) "Being keepers of cows roaming in woods, you do not know the game of dice. Kings (alone) play at dice and sport with arrows, not men like you." (35) Insulted thus by Rukmī and ridiculed by kings, Balarāma flew into a rage and, lifting up an iron bar, killed him (even) in that festive assembly. (36) Quickly seizing the ruler of Kālīṅga, who had laughed at him with open teeth (and had now taken to his heels), (even) at the tenth step, Balarāma smashed those teeth. (37) With their arms, thighs and heads broken, and bathed in blood, when struck with the iron bar by Balarāma, other kings fled in terror. (38) For fear of estranging the goodwill of either Rukmiṇī or Balarāma, the Lord did not make any favourable or adverse comment on His brother-in-law, Rukmī, having been killed. (39) Having comfortably seated Aniruddha alongwith his newly-wedded wife in an excellent chariot, Balarāma and the other Daśārhas, who looked upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Slayer of Madhu) as their asylum, and who had all their objects accomplished; drove from Bhojakaṭa to Dwārakā. (40)

Thus ends the sixty-first discourse entitled "Rukmī killed (by Balarāma) during the wedding of Aniruddha", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्विषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXII

Aniruddha made captive

राजोवाच

बाणस्य तनयामूषामुपयेमे यदूत्तमः । तत्र युद्धमभूद् घोरं हरिशङ्करयोर्महत् ।
एतत् सर्वं महायोगिन् समाख्यातु त्वमर्हसि । १ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : Aniruddha, a (veritable) jewel among the Yadus, married Bāṇa's daughter, Ūṣā, and in that connection (I am told) a great and terrible combat ensued between Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Lord Śaṅkara. May you be pleased to tell me all this in detail, O great Yogi ! (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

बाणः पुत्रशतज्येष्ठो बलेरासीन्महात्मनः । येन वामनरूपाय हरयेऽदायि मेदिनी । २ ।
तस्यौरसः सुतो बाणः शिवभक्तिरतः सदा । मान्यो वदान्यो धीमांश्च सत्यसन्धो दृढव्रतः । ३ ।
शोणितारख्ये पुरे रम्ये स राज्यमकरोत् पुरा । तस्य शम्भोः प्रसादेन किङ्करा इव तेऽमराः ।
सहस्रबाहुर्वाद्येन ताण्डवेऽतोषयन्मृडम् । ४ ।
भगवान् सर्वभूतेशः शरण्यो भक्तवत्सलः । वरेणच्छन्दयामास स तं वव्रे पुराधिपम् । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Bāṇa was the eldest of the hundred sons of the high-souled Bali, by whom the (entire) globe was given away to the Lord who appeared (before him) in the form of the divine Dwarf. (2) Sprung from his loins, Bāṇa even took delight in devotion to Lord Śiva. He was worthy of honour, liberal-minded, intelligent, true to his word and of firm resolve. (3) He in those days ruled over the beautiful city known by the name of Śoṇitapura. By the grace of Lord Śiva the gods, though adorable (themselves), behaved towards him as servants. Endowed (as he was) with a thousand arms, he propitiated Lord Śiva (the Delighter of all) by playing upon (various) musical instruments during the latter's Tāṇḍava dance. (4) The almighty Śaṅkara, the Ruler of all created beings, who affords shelter to all and is (so) fond of His devotees, bade him ask (of Him) a boon of his choice. Bāṇāsura sought His (constant) presence as a guardian of his city. (5)

स एकदाऽऽह गिरिशं पार्श्वस्थं वीर्यदुर्मदः । किरीटेनार्कवर्णेन संस्पृशंस्तत्पदाम्बुजम् । ६ ।
नमस्ये त्वां महादेव लोकानां गुरुमीश्वरम् । पुंसामपूर्णकामानां कामपूरापराङ्मथिपम् । ७ ।
दोःसहस्रं त्वया दत्तं परं भाराय मेऽभवत् । त्रिलोक्यां प्रतियोद्धारं न लभे त्वदृते समम् । ८ ।

कण्डूत्या निभृतदोर्भिर्युत्सुर्दिग्गजानहम् । आद्यायां चूर्णयन्नद्रीन् भीतास्तेऽपि प्रदुद्रुवुः । ९ ।
 तच्छ्रुत्वा भगवान् क्रुद्धः केतुस्ते भज्यते यदा । त्वहर्पणं भवेन्मूढ संयुगं मत्समेन ते । १० ।
 इत्युक्तः कुमतिर्हृष्टः स्वगृहं प्राविशन्नृपः । प्रतीक्षन् गिरिशदेशं स्ववीर्यनशनं कुधीः । ११ ।

Touching His lotus-feet with his crown shining like the sun, Bāṇa, intoxicated as he was with the pride of his prowess, spoke one day to the Lord of Kailāsa, who was standing beside him, (as follows:—) (6) "I bow to You, the Preceptor and Ruler of all the worlds, the celestial tree which grants the desires of men whose longings have not been sated, O supreme Deity! (7) The thousand arms given by You (by way of a boon) have only proved a burden to me (so far); (for) in (all) the three worlds I do not find a well-matched rival other than You. (8) Eager to fight, I proceeded, O most ancient Person, against the elephants guarding the quarters, pounding the mountains (even as I marched) with my arms full of itching (for a combat); but they too took speedily to their heels in terror." (9) The Lord flew into a rage to hear that and said, "When your ensign is broken, your encounter will take place with one equal to Me; that will crush your pride, O foolish one !" (10) Thus spoken to, the fool with a perverted mind withdrew to his palace, full of joy, O king, awaiting the fulfilment of the augury of Lord Śiva (the Lord of Kailāsa), even though it was expected to deal a crushing blow to his power. (11)

तस्योषा नाम दुहिता स्वप्ने प्राद्युग्निना रतिम् । कन्यालभत कान्तेन प्रागदृष्टश्रुतेन सा । १२ ।
 सा तत्र तमपश्यन्ती क्वासि कान्तेति वादिनी । सखीनां मध्य उत्तस्थौ विह्वला व्रीडिता भृशम् । १३ ।
 बाणस्य मन्त्री कुम्भाण्डश्चित्रलेखा च तत्सुता । सख्यपृच्छत् सखीमूषां कौतूहलसमन्विता । १४ ।
 कं त्वं मृगयसे सुभूः कीदृशस्ते मनोरथः । हस्तग्राहं न तेऽद्यापि राजपुत्र्युपलक्षये । १५ ।

Even as a virgin, his daughter, Ūṣā by name, enjoyed in a dream sexual delight with the lovely son of Pradyumna (viz., Aniruddha), who had (however) neither been seen nor heard of (by her) before. (12) Not finding him there (on opening her eyes), she got up in a state of excitement saying, "Where are you, my darling !" in the midst of her girl companions, and felt greatly abashed. (13) Kumabhāṇḍa was the minister of Bāṇa and Citralekhā, his daughter. Full of curiosity she, a (constant) companion of Ūṣā, questioned her friend (thus):—(14) O princess of charming eyebrows ! whom are you looking for and what is the nature of your longing ? I do not find till today anyone who has espoused you. (15)

ऊषोवाच

दृष्टः कश्चिन्नरः स्वप्ने श्यामः कमललोचनः । पीतवासा बृहद्बाहुयोषितां हृदयङ्गमः । १६ ।
 तमहं मृगये कान्तं पादयित्वाधरं मधु । क्वापि यातः स्पृहयतीं क्षिप्त्वा मां वृजिनार्णवे । १७ ।

Ūṣā replied : In my dream was seen a certain youngman of dark-brown hue, with long arms and lotus-like eyes, clad in yellow and captivating the heart of women. (16) I am in quest of that darling, who having allowed me to drink the honey of his lips, has gone to some unknown destination, plunging me, though thirsting (yet), into an ocean of misery. (17)

चित्रलेखोवाच

व्यसनं तेऽपकर्षामि त्रिलोक्यां यदि भाव्यते । तमान्ये नरं यस्ते मनोहर्ता तमादिश । १८ ।
 इत्युक्त्वा देवगन्धर्वसिद्धचारणपन्नगान् । दैत्यविद्याधरान् यक्षान् मनुजांश्च यथालिखत् । १९ ।
 मनुजेषु च सा वृष्णीन् शूरमानकदुन्दुभिम् । व्यलिखद् रामकृष्णौ च प्रद्युम्ने वीक्ष्य लज्जिता । २० ।
 अनिरुद्धं विलिखितं वीक्ष्योषावाङ्मुखी ह्रिया । सोऽसावसाविति प्राह स्मयमाना महीपते । २१ ।

Citralkhā said : "I shall bring the youth who has stolen your heart, if he is traced (by you) in the three worlds (the elite of which are going to be depicted by me), and dispel your agony (thereby). Point him out." (18) Having said so, she drew faithful sketches of gods, Gandharvas (heavenly musicians), Siddhas (a class of superhuman beings endowed with mystic powers), Cāraṇas (celestial bards), Nāgas (a class of superhuman beings—half men and half serpents), Daityas (demons), Vidyādhara (artistes of gods), Yakṣas (a class of demigods) and human beings. (19) Among men she portrayed the Vṛṣṇis, viz., Śūra, Vasudeva, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Perceiving Pradyumna, Uṣā blushed. (20) Beholding Aniruddha portrayed with particular care, Uṣā cast down her face through shyness, O king, and smilingly exclaimed: "It is he, it is he !" (21)

चित्रलेखा तमाज्ञाय पौत्रं कृष्णस्य योगिनी । ययौ विहायसा राजन् द्वारकां कृष्णपालिताम् । २२ ।
 तत्र सुप्तं सुपर्यङ्के प्राद्युम्नि योगमास्थिता । गृहीत्वा शोणितपुरं सख्यं प्रियमदर्शयत् । २३ ।
 सा च तं सुन्दरं विलोक्य मुदितानना । दुष्प्रेक्ष्ये स्वगृहे पुष्पी रेमे प्राद्युम्निना समम् । २४ ।
 परार्ध्यवासःस्नगन्धधूपदीपासनादिभिः । पानभोजनभक्ष्यैश्च वाक्यैः शृशूष्यार्चितः । २५ ।
 गृहः कन्यापुरे शश्वत्पवृद्धस्नेहया तया । नाहर्गणान् स ब्रुवधे ऊषयापहतेन्द्रियः । २६ ।

Concluding him to be Śrī Kṛṣṇa's grandson, Citralkhā, who possessed Yogic powers, journeyed, O king, through the air to Dwārakā protected by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Himself). (22) Resorting to her Yogic powers, she bore away Aniruddha (son of Pradyumna), (who had been) lying asleep there on a beautiful bed, to Śoṇitapura and showed her friend the object of her love. (23) With her face lit up with joy to behold the loveliest of the lovely, she enjoyed life with him in her palace, which could not be easily peeped into by males. (24) Honoured with exquisite raiment, garlands, sandal-paste, incense, lights, seats etc., drinks, food and other edibles, as well as with (loving) words and (bodily) service, and remaining concealed in the maidens' apartments, with his mind captivated by the said Uṣā—whose love (for him) was constantly increasing by leaps and bounds—Aniruddha had no idea of the number of days (that slipped away). (25-26)

तां तथा यदुर्वरेण भुज्यमानां हतव्रताम् । हेतुभिर्लक्षयाञ्चकुराप्रितां दुरवच्छदे । २७ ।
 भटा आवेदयाञ्चकुरा राजंस्ते दुहितुर्वयम् । विचेष्टितं लक्षयामः कन्यायाः कुलदूषणम् । २८ ।
 अनपाविभिरसाभिर्गुप्तायाश्च गृहे प्रभो । कन्याया दूषणं पुष्पिर्दुष्प्रेक्षया न विद्महे । २९ ।

While she was being thus (secretly) enjoyed by Aniruddha (the hero of Yadu's race) and felt overjoyed, the eunuchs (in charge of the gynaeceum) noticed her, through marks that could hardly be concealed, as having been deprived of her virginhood. They reported (to Bāṇa as follows):—"O king, we notice the conduct of your virgin daughter to be such as is apt to cast a stain on your family. (27-28) We are unable to make out how came about the defloration of your daughter, who is constantly guarded by us in her house and could not (as such) be easily perceived by men." (29)

ततः प्रव्यथितो बाणो दुहितुः श्रुतदूषणः । त्वरितः कन्यकागारं प्राप्नोऽज्ञाक्षीद् यदूहम् । ३० ।
 कामात्मजं तं भुवनैकसुन्दरं श्यामं पिशङ्गाध्वरम्बुजेक्षणम् ।
 बृहद्भुजं कुण्डलकुन्तलत्विषा स्मितावलोकेन च मण्डिताननम् । ३१ ।
 दीव्यन्तमक्षैः प्रिययाभिन्मृगया तदङ्गसङ्गस्तनकुङ्कुमस्त्रजम् ।
 बाह्वोर्दधानं मधुमल्लिकाश्रितां तस्याग्र आसीनमवेक्ष्य विस्मितः । ३२ ।
 स तं प्रविष्टं वृत्तमाततायिभिर्भटैरनीकैरवलोक्य माधवः ।
 उद्यम्य मौर्वं परिधं व्यवस्थितो यथान्तको दण्डधरो जिघांसया । ३३ ।
 जिघृक्षया तान् परितः प्रसर्पतः शनो यथा सूकरयूथपोऽहनत् ।
 ते हन्यमाना भवनाद् विनिर्गता निर्भिन्नमूर्धोरुभुजाः प्रदुर्वुः । ३४ ।
 तं नागपाशैर्बलिनन्दनो बली घ्नन्तं स्वसैन्यं कुपितो बबन्ध ह ।
 ऊषा भृशं शोकविषादविह्वला बद्धं निशम्याश्रुकलाक्ष्यरौदिषीत् । ३५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महानुणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धेऽनिरुद्धवन्द्यो नाम द्विषष्टितमोऽध्यायः । ६२ ।

Sore distressed to hear (the news) of his daughter's pollution, Bāṇa hastened thence to the maidens' apartments and noticed there Aniruddha (a jewel among the Yadus). (30) Bāṇāsura was taken aback to behold Aniruddha, sprung from the loins of Pradyumna (who was no other than Love incarnate), (and therefore) exceptionally charming in all the (three) worlds—dark-brown of hue, clad in yellow, having lotus-like eyes and long arms, a face lit up with the lustre of his ear-rings and (curly) locks as well as with his smiling glances, playing at dice with his darling—who was decked with festal ornaments all over her body—and seated in front of her, and wearing between his arms a wreath of jasmine flowers peculiar to the vernal season, tinged with the saffron painted on her breasts, during his bodily contact with her. (31-32) Perceiving Bāṇāsura to have entered the room, surrounded by a detachment of armed soldiers, Aniruddha (a scion of Madhu) stood firmly taking up (in his hand) a steel bludgeon with intent to make short work of them (all) like Yama (the god of death) wielding his rod (of punishment). (33) Like the leader of a pack of boars killing (an army of) dogs, he made short work of the warriors even as they rushed on all sides with intent to seize him. Being struck by him, they issued out of the mansion and ran helter-skelter with their heads, thighs and arms smashed. (34) The powerful Bāṇāsura (the son of Bali) got enraged and bound Aniruddha with the cords of serpents, while he was (busy) exterminating his army, so the tradition goes. Overwhelmed with grief and despondency to hear of his bondage, Ūṣā loudly wailed with tear-drops in her eyes. (35)

Thus ends the sixty-second discourse entitled "Aniruddha taken captive," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharisa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रिषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXIII

Aniruddha brought back (to Dwārakā)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अपश्यतां चानिरुद्धं तद्वन्धूनां च भारत । चत्वारो वार्षिका मासा व्यतीयुरनुशोचताम् । १ ।
 नारदात्तदुपाकर्ण्य वार्तां ब्रह्मस्य कर्म च । प्रययुः शोणितपुरं वृष्णयः कृष्णदेवताः । २ ।
 प्रद्युम्नो युयुधानश्च गदः साम्बोऽथ सारणः । नन्दोपनन्दभद्राद्या रामकृष्णानुवर्तिनः । ३ ।
 अक्षौहिणीभिर्द्वादशभिः समेताः सर्वतोदिशम् । रुरुधुबाणनगरं समन्तात् सात्वतर्षभाः । ४ ।
 भज्यमानपुरोद्यानप्राकाराद्दालगोपुरम् । प्रेक्षमाणो रुषाविष्टस्तुत्यसैन्योऽभिनिर्ययौ । ५ ।
 बाणार्थं भगवान् रुद्रः ससुतेः प्रमथैर्वृतः । आरुह्य नन्दिवृषं युयुधे रामकृष्णयोः । ६ ।
 आसीत् सुतमुलं युद्धमद्भुतं रोमहर्षणम् । कृष्णशङ्करयो राजन् प्रद्युम्नगुहयोरपि । ७ ।
 कुम्भाण्डकूपकर्णाभ्यां बलेन सह संयुगः । साम्बस्य बाणपुत्रेण बाणेन सह सात्यकेः । ८ ।
 ब्रह्मादयः सुराधीश मुनयः सिद्धचारणाः । गन्धर्वाप्सरसो यक्षा विमानैर्द्रष्टुमागमन् । ९ ।
 शङ्करानुचराञ्छौरिर्भूतप्रमथगुह्यकान् । डाकिनीयतुधानांश्च वेतालान् सविनायकान् । १० ।
 प्रेतमातृपिशाचांश्च कूष्माण्डान् ब्रह्मराक्षसान् । द्रावयामास तीक्ष्णाग्रैः शरैः शार्ङ्गधनुश्च्युतैः । ११ ।
 पृथग्विधानि प्रायुङ्क्त पिनाक्यस्त्राणि शार्ङ्गिणे । प्रत्यस्त्रैः शमयामास शार्ङ्गपाणिरविसितः । १२ ।
 ब्रह्मास्त्रस्य च ब्रह्मास्त्रं वायव्यस्य च पार्वतम् । आग्नेयस्य च पार्जन्यं नैजं पाशुपतस्य च । १३ ।
 मोहयित्वा तु गिरिशं जृम्भाणास्त्रेण जृम्भितम् । बाणस्य पृतनां शौरिर्जघानासिगदेयुधिः । १४ ।
 स्कन्दः प्रद्युम्नबाणौघैरघ्नमानः समन्ततः । असृग् विमुञ्चन् गात्रेभ्यः शिखिनापाक्रमद् रणात् । १५ ।
 कुम्भाण्डः कूपकर्णश्च पेततुर्मुसलादितौ । दुद्वुस्तदनीकानि हतनाथानि सर्वतः । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : On this side the four rainy months slipped by the relations (Śrī Kṛṣṇa and others) of Aniruddha, who (sorely) missed him and had been sorrowing for him (all the time), O scion of Bharata ! (1) Hearing from Nārada the (whole) story as to how he had been taken prisoner as well as of his doings (viz., how he had disposed of a whole contingent of Bāṇāsura's army), the Vṛṣṇis, who looked upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa as a deity, proceeded to Śoṇitapura. (2) Accompanied by (an army consisting of) twelve Akṣauhiṇis and united under the command of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Pradyumna, Sātyaki, Gada, Sāmba and Sāraṇa, as well as the (other) jewels among the Yadus—Nanda, Upananda, Bhadra and others—closely besieged the capital of Bāṇa from every side. (3-4) Beholding the city with its urban gardens, fortifications, towers and gates being shattered, Bāṇa, full of rage, sallied forth to meet them with an equally strong army. (5) Surrounded by (His followers known by the name of) Pramathas, including His son (Lord Kārtikeya), and riding on His bull, Nandī, Lord Rudra (too) fought with Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa for the sake (on the side) of Bāṇa. (6) A most tumultuous and astounding encounter took place between Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Lord Saṅkara—an encounter which made one's hair stand on end; and another between Pradyumna and Kārtikeya. (7) Another combat (similarly) raged between Balarāma (on the one hand) and Kumbhāṇḍa and Kūpakarṇa (on the other). A (similar) duel took place between Sāmba and Bāṇa's son, and another between Bāṇa and Sātyaki. (8) Rulers of gods headed by Brahṁā, ascetics, Siddhas and Cāraṇas, Gandharvas, Apsarās and Yakṣas came forth in their aerial cars to witness the conflict. (9) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūra) put to flight, with His sharp-pointed arrows discharged from the Śārṅga bow, the followers of Lord Śiva, viz., the Bhūtas, Pramathas, Guhyakas (Yakṣas), Ḍākinīs and Yātudhānas, Vetālas and Vināyakas, Pretas, Mātrkāś and Piśācas, Kūṣmāṇḍas and Brahmaṛākṣasas. (10-11) Lord Śiva (the Wielder of the Pināka bow) discharged various kinds of missiles at Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Wielder of the Śārṅga bow); the latter (however) unconcernedly neutralized them all with counter-missiles. (12) Against Brahṁāstra He employed Brahṁāstra; against Vāyavyāstra He employed the Pārvatāstra; against the fiery missile He employed the Pārjanyastra and against the Pāṣupatāstra He employed His own (Nārāyaṇāstra). (13) Then, stupefying with Jṛmbhaṇāstra Lord Śaṅkara, who (forthwith) began to yawn, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūra) began to strike down the army of Bāṇāsura with His sword, mace and arrows. (14) Being beaten on all sides by the volleys of arrows discharged by Pradyumna, and emitting blood from every limb, Skanda escaped from the battle-field on the back of His peacock. (15) Struck by (Balarāma's) pestle, Kumbhāṇḍa and Kūpakarna also fell down. With their generals killed, Bāṇāsura's troops fled in all directions. (16)

विशीर्यमाणं स्वबलं दृष्ट्वा बाणोऽत्यमर्षणः । कृष्णमभ्यद्रवत् संख्ये रथी हित्वैव सात्यकिम् । १७ ।
 धनूय्याकृष्य युगपद् बाणः पञ्चशतानि वै । एकैकस्मिञ्छरो द्वौ द्वौ सन्धे रणदुर्मदः । १८ ।
 तानि चिच्छेद भगवान् धनूषि युगपद्धरिः । सारथिं रथमश्वांश्च हत्वा शङ्खमपूरयत् । १९ ।
 तन्माता कोटरा नाम नम्रा मुक्तशिरोरुहा । पुरोऽवतस्थे कृष्णस्य पुत्रप्राणरिरक्षया । २० ।
 ततस्तिर्यङ्मुखो नम्रामनिरीक्षन् गदाग्रजः । बाणश्च तावद् विरथश्छिन्नधन्वाविशत् पुरम् । २१ ।

Highly indignant to see his army being scattered, Bāṇa, rushed towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa on the battle-field in a chariot, leaving Sātyaki alone. (17) Drawing five hundred bows all at once, Bāṇāsura, who ran amuck on the battle-field, applied a pair of arrows to each. (18) Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (however) split all those bows at once and, striking down the charioteer and the horses as well as the chariot, blew His conch. (19) Bāṇa's mother, Koṭarā by name, (now) stood naked with dishevelled hair before Śrī Kṛṣṇa with intent to save her son's life. (20) Making it a point not to look at the nude lady, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the elder Brother of Gada) turned His face aside. Meanwhile Bāṇa, who had been deprived of his chariot and had his bows broken, retreated into the city. (21)

विद्राविते भूतगणे ज्वरस्तु त्रिशिरस्त्रिपात् । अभ्यधावत् दाशहं दहन्निव दिशो दश । २२ ।
 अथ नारायणो देवस्तं दृष्ट्वा व्यसृजज्ज्वरम् । माहेश्वरो वैष्णवश्च युयुधाते ज्वरावुभौ । २३ ।
 माहेश्वरः समाक्रन्दन् वैष्णवेन बलार्दितः । अलङ्घ्याभयमन्यत्र भीतो माहेश्वरो ज्वरः ।
 शरणार्थी हृषीकेशं तुष्टाव प्रयताङ्गलिः । २४ ।

On the host of Bhūtas (genii) having been put to flight, the three-headed and three-legged Jwara (the spirit presiding over fever and despatched by Lord Śiva, who had now recovered from His stupefaction) rushed towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Daśārha) as if burning the ten directions. (22) Beholding him, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than Lord Nārāyaṇa) sent forth His (own) Jwara and both the Jwaras, the one belonging to Lord Śiva (the supreme Ruler of the universe) and the other belonging to Lord Viṣṇu, began to grapple with each other. (23) Beaten with violence by the Jwara commanded by Lord Viṣṇu and terrified not to find asylum anywhere else, the Jwara commanded by Lord Śiva loudly screamed and, seeking shelter with Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses), glorified Him with joined palms (as follows). (24)

ज्वर उवाच

नमामि त्वाऽनन्तशक्तिं परेशं सर्वात्मानं केवलं ज्ञप्तिमात्रम् ।
 विश्वोत्पत्तिस्थानसंरोधहेतुं यत्तद् ब्रह्म ब्रह्मलिङ्गं प्रशान्तम् । २५ ।
 कालो दैवं कर्म जीवः स्वभावो द्रव्यं क्षेत्रं प्राण आत्मा विकारः ।
 तत्सङ्घातो बीजरोहप्रवाहस्त्वन्मायैषा तन्निषेधं प्रपद्ये । २६ ।
 नानाभावैर्लीलयैवोपपन्नैर्देवान् साधूँल्लोकसेतून् बिभर्षि ।
 हंयन्मार्गान् हिंसया वर्तमानान् जयैतत्ते भारहाराय भूमेः । २७ ।
 तप्तोऽहं ते तेजसा दुःसहेन शान्तोग्रेणात्युल्बणेन ज्वरेण ।
 तावत्तापो देहिनां तेऽङ्घ्रिमूलं नो सेवेरन् यावदाशानुबद्धाः । २८ ।

The Jwara said : I salute You, endowed (as You are) with infinite power, the Ruler (even) of the highest gods, the Soul of the universe, the one without a second, absolute Consciousness, the Cause of the appearance, subsistence and dissolution of the universe, comprising whatever there is, the most tranquil Brahma, who are (only) inferred (and not directly known) by the Vedas. (25) The Time-Spirit (which disturbs the equilibrium of the three Guṇas), Destiny, Karma, Swabhāva (the tendencies produced by the latter), the individual soul, the (five) subtle elements, the body, the vital breath, the ego, the evolutes (viz., the five gross elements and the eleven Indriyas), the subtle body (a combination of the aforesaid evolutes) and the process of mutual causation going on in a cycle between the Liṅga body and Karma as between a seed and the sprout—all this constitutes Your Māyā (deluding potency). I take refuge in You, in whom the said Māyā finds its negation. (26) Appearing in diverse forms, assumed by way of mere sport, You protect the gods and the pious, uphold the standards of morality that maintain the world order, and kill those who deviate from the path of virtue and live by violence. Your present descent (too) is intended to relieve the burden of the earth. (27) I stand scorched by Your radiance in the form of this fever, which is most terrible and hard to bear, and which, though mild (before), has grown (so) severe (now). Embodied beings undergo suffering only so long as they remain bound by desire and do not seek the soles of Your lotus-feet. (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

त्रिशिरस्ते प्रसन्नोऽस्मि व्येतु ते मज्ज्वराद् भयम् । यो नौ स्मरति संवादं तस्य त्वन्न भवेद् भयम् । २९ ।
 इत्युक्तोऽप्युत्तमानम्य गतो माहेश्वरो ज्वरः । बाणस्तु रथमारूढः प्रागाद्योत्पञ्जनार्दनम् । ३० ।
 ततो बाहुसहस्रेण नानाधुधरोऽसुरः । मुमोच परमक्रुद्धो बाणांश्चक्राधुधे नृप । ३१ ।
 तस्यास्यतोऽस्त्राण्यसकृच्चक्रेण क्षुरनेमिना । चिच्छेद् भगवान् बाहून् शाखा इव वनस्पतेः । ३२ ।
 बाहुषुच्छिद्यमानेषु बाणस्य भगवान् भवः । भक्तानुकम्प्युपव्रज्य चक्राधुधमभायत । ३३ ।

The glorious Lord said : "I am pleased with you, O three-headed one ! Let your fear of My Jwara cease (now). There will be no more (cause of) fear from you to him who remembers this dialogue of ours." (29) Thus addressed (reassured) and bowing to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the infallible Lord), the Jwara under the command of Lord Śiva departed. Mounting a chariot in the meanwhile, Bāṇāsura returned (to the field of battle) to contend with Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (30) Highly enraged, the demon, who wielded various weapons in his thousand arms, then showered arrows on Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Wielder of a discus), O protector of men ! (31) While he was (thus) discharging missiles again and again the Lord with His discus, keen-edged like a razor, cut off his arms like the boughs of a tree. (32) (Even) as the arms of Bāṇa were being lopped off, Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), who took compassion on His devotee, approached Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Wielder of a discus) and submitted to Him (as follows). (33)

श्रीरुद्र उवाच

त्वं हि ब्रह्म परं ज्योतिर्गुहं ब्रह्मणि वाङ्मये । यं पश्यन्त्यमलात्मान आकाशमिव केवलम् । ३४ ।

नाभिर्नभोऽग्निर्मुखमम्बु रेतो द्यौः शीर्षमाशा श्रुतिरङ्घ्रिरूर्वा ।

चन्द्रो मनो यस्य दृगर्क आत्मा अहं समुद्रो जठरं भुजेन्द्रः । ३५ ।

रोमाणि यस्योषधयोऽम्बुवाहाः केशा विरिञ्चो धिषणा विसर्गः ।

प्रजापतिर्हृदयं यस्य धर्मः स वै भवान् पुरुषो लोककल्पः । ३६ ।

तवावतारोऽयमकुण्ठधामन् धर्मस्य गुप्त्यै जगतो भवाय ।

वयं च सर्वे भवतानुभाविता विभावयामो भुवनानि सप्त । ३७ ।

त्वमेक आद्यः पुरुषोऽद्वितीयस्तुर्यः स्वदृघेतुरहेतुरीशः ।

प्रतीयसेऽथापि यथाविकारं स्वमायया सर्वगुणप्रसिद्ध्यै । ३८ ।

यथैव सूर्यः पिहितश्छायया स्वया छायां च रूपाणि च सञ्जकास्ति ।

एवं गुणेनपिहितो गुणांस्त्वमात्मप्रदीपो गुणिनश्च भूम्नः । ३९ ।

Śrī Rudra prayed : Indeed You are the supreme effulgence lying hidden in the Veda (which is no other than the Supreme revealed as the Word of God) and known as Brahma (the Infinite), that men of purified intellect realize as all-pervading (like the sky) and absolute. (34) The firmament is Your navel; fire, Your mouth; water, Your generative fluid; the celestial region, Your head; the quarters, Your ears; the earth, Your feet; the moon, Your mind; the sun, Your eye; myself, Your ego; the ocean, Your belly; and Indra (and the other guardians of the sphere), Your arms. (35) Herbs and plants are the hair on Your body; clouds are Your (flowing) locks and Brahmā (the creator) is Your intellect, Prajāpati (the lord of creation) is Your organ of generation and Dharma (the god of virtue) is Your heart. Thus You are the Supreme Person with whom all the spheres are connected (as so many limbs). (36) O Lord of undiminished glory, You have taken this form for the vindication of virtue and advancement of the world. Endowed with power derived from You, we rule the seven regions (of the universe). (37) You are the one secondless, most ancient Person beyond the three states (brought about by Māyā viz., the waking, dream and dreamless states), self-luminous, the Cause and Ruler (of all), Himself uncaused; yet, in order to reveal the diversities of the three Guṇas, You appear through Your own Māyā in divergent forms (such as those of gods, men, birds, beasts and various other beings). (38) Just as the sun gets concealed (in others' eyes) by its own shadow (the clouds) and reveals the clouds as well as all other forms, even so, O Perfect One, self-luminous Yourself, You get as if covered by the Ego (which has its origin in You) and yet make the Guṇas and all beings, who are qualified by the Guṇas, shine (in Your light). (39)

यन्मायामोहितधियः पुत्रदारगृहादिषु । उन्मज्जन्ति निमज्जन्ति प्रसक्ता वृजिनाणवे । ४० ।

देवदत्तमिमं लब्ध्वा नृलोकमजितेन्द्रियः । यो नाद्रियेत त्वयादौ स शोच्यो ह्यात्मवञ्चकः । ४१ ।

यस्त्वां विसृजते मर्त्य आत्मानं प्रियमीश्वरम् । विपर्ययेन्द्रियार्थार्थं विषमन्त्यमृतं त्यजन् । ४२ ।

अहं ब्रह्माथ विबुधा मुनयश्चामलाशयाः । सर्वात्मना प्रपन्नास्त्वामात्मानं प्रेष्ठमीश्वरम् । ४३ ।

तं त्वा जगत्स्थित्युदयान्तहेतुं समं प्रशान्तं सुहृदामदैवम् ।

अनन्यमेकं जगदात्मकेतं भवापवर्गाय भजाम देवम् । ४४ ।

अयं ममेष्टो दयितोऽनुवर्ती मयाभयं दत्तममुष्य देव ।

सम्पाद्यतां तद् भवतः प्रसादो यथा हि ते दैत्यपतौ प्रसादः । ४५ ।

(O Lord,) with their mind deluded by Your Māyā people get attached to children, wife, house etc., and begin to sink and float in the ocean of misery. (40) He who, having obtained the human body (so graciously) granted by You, does not control his senses and worship Your feet, is no doubt pitiable creature who is deceiving himself. (41) O Lord, he who neglects You, the beloved Self, the Supreme Ruler, for the sake of sense-objects, which are just the reverse of You, (is a fool, who) swallows poison rejecting nectar. (42) Myself, Brahmā (the creator) and the (other) gods and (all) sages of pure mind have taken refuge in You with our whole being, because You are our dearest soul and supreme Lord. (43) You are responsible for the appearance, continuance and dissolution of the universe, alike to everyone, unperturbed, the beloved friend and deity, nay, the very Self of all. You are One without a second, the support of the worlds as also of the individual souls. O Lord, we adore You for release from the bondage of transmigration. (44) Lord, this Bāṇāsura is a beloved devotee of mine and is (much) liked by me; I have assured him of my protection. Therefore, (kindly) extend Your favour to him even as You did to (his great grandfather) Prahārāda (the ruler of the Daityas). (45)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यदात्थ भगवंस्त्वन्नः करवाम प्रियं तव । भवतो यद् व्यवसितं तन्मे साध्वनुमोदितम् । ४६ ।
अवध्योऽयं ममाद्येष वैरोचनिसुतोऽसुरः । प्रह्लादाय वरो दतो न वध्यो मे तवान्वयः । ४७ ।
दर्पोपशमनायास्य प्रवृक्णा बाहवो मया । सूदितं च बलं भूरि यच्च भारायितं भुवः । ४८ ।
चत्वारोऽस्य भुजाः शिष्टा भविष्यन्त्यजामराः । पार्षदमुख्यो भवतो न कुतश्चिद्भयोऽसुरः । ४९ ।

The glorious Lord replied : O Worshipful One, We shall do whatever You have said and that which is pleasing to You. I have fully approved of what You have decided (about him). (46) (I know that) Bāṇāsura is a grandson of Virocana (Prahārāda's son). I cannot kill him inasmuch as a boon has been granted by Me to Prahārāda that no one born in his line would be killed by Me. (47) His arms have been cut off by Me only to curb his pride, and his huge army has been exterminated simply because it was a burden on the earth. (48) Four arms are left to him; they will be proof against age or destruction. He will be the foremost among Your attendants. Though an Asura, he will henceforward have nothing to fear from any quarter. (49)

इति लब्ध्वाभयं कृष्णं प्रणम्य शिरसासुरः । प्राद्युम्नि रथमारोप्य सवध्वा समुपानयत् । ५० ।
अक्षौहिण्या परिवृत्तं सुवासः समलङ्कृतम् । सपत्नीकं पुरस्कृत्य ययौ रुद्रानुमोदितः । ५१ ।
स्वराजधानीं समलङ्कृतां ध्वजैः सतोरणैरक्षितमार्गचत्वारम् ।
विवेश शङ्खानकदुर्भुस्वनैरभ्युद्यतः पौरसुहृद्भिर्जातिभिः । ५२ ।

Obtaining this assurance of security, the said demon saluted Śrī Kṛṣṇa with his head (bent low) and duly brought Aniruddha back together with his bride (Uṣā), placing them on a chariot. (50) (Thereupon) with Bhagavān Śaṅkara's congratulation Śrī Kṛṣṇa departed placing in the van Aniruddha and his wife—who were finely dressed and fully adorned with ornaments—and were followed by an army consisting of one Akṣauhiṇī. (51) Śrī Kṛṣṇa entered His capital—artistically decorated with flags and ornamental arches, with its streets and quadrangles sprinkled with water—and was met by the citizens, His (own) relations and Brāhmaṇas, who came forth to receive Him with the sounding of conchs, drums and kettledrums. (52)

य एवं कृष्णविजयं शङ्करेण च संयुगम् । संस्परेत् प्रातरुत्थाय न तस्य स्यात् पराजयः । ५३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धेऽनिरुद्धानवने नाम त्रिषष्टितमोऽध्यायः । ६३ ।

(Parikṣit!) he who, rising from his bed in the morning, duly recalls the story of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's combat with Lord Śaṅkara and His victory, will never meet with discomfiture. (53)

Thus ends the sixty-third discourse entitled "Aniruddha brought back (to Dwārakā)," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुःषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXIV

The story of king Nrga

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदोषवन् राजन् जगम्यदुकुमारकाः । विहर्तुं साम्बप्रद्युम्नचारुभानुगदादयः । १ ।
 क्रीडित्वा सुचिरं तत्र विचिन्वन्तः पिपासिताः । जलं निन्दके कूपे ददृशुः सत्त्वमद्भुतम् । २ ।
 कृकलासं गिरिनिभं वीक्ष्य विस्मितमानसाः । तस्य चोद्धरणे यत्नं चक्रुस्ते कृपयान्विताः । ३ ।
 चर्मजैस्तान्त्वैः पार्श्वैर्बद्ध्वा पतितमर्भकाः । नाशकुवन् समुद्धर्तुं कृष्णायाचख्युरुत्सुकाः । ४ ।
 तत्रागत्यारविन्दाक्षो भगवान् विश्वभावनः । वीक्ष्योज्जहार वामेन तं करेण स लीलया । ५ ।

स उत्तमश्लोककराभिमुखो विहाय सद्यः कृकलासरूपम् ।

सन्तप्तचामीकरचारुवर्णः स्वर्गद्भुतालङ्कारणाम्बरस्रक् । ६ ।

पप्रच्छ विद्वानपि तन्निदानं जनेषु विख्यापयितुं मुकुन्दः ।

कस्त्वं महाभाग वरेण्यरूपो देवोत्तमं त्वां गणयामि नूनम् । ७ ।

दशमिमो वा कतमेन कर्मणा सम्प्रापितोऽस्यतदहं सुभद्र ।

आत्मानमाख्याहि विविस्मतां नो यन्मन्यसे नः क्षममत्र वक्तुम् । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parikṣit, on a certain day, Gada (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's younger brother), Pradyumna, Sāmba, Cāru, Bhānu and other Yādava princes went to play in a garden. (1) Having sported there for a pretty long time they felt thirsty and went to a well in search of water. They found the well dry and noticed a strange animal (fallen) in it. (2) It was a chameleon as big as a rock. Their mind was struck with wonder at the sight. Moved with pity they tied it with thongs of leather and ropes of fibres and attempted to take it out of the well but could not. Full of curiosity they (went to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and) reported this incident to Him. (3-4) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa of lotus-like eyes, the almighty Creator and Protector of the universe (went to the well), saw the animal and lifted it up with His left hand by way of play. (5) Touched by the hand of the glorious Lord, the animal forthwith cast off the form of a chameleon and was transformed into a celestial being adorned with wondrous jewels, clothes and garlands and possessed of a charming hue like that of molten gold. (6) Although He knew the cause of his obtaining the form of a chameleon, yet in order to make the facts known to the people, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) asked that shining person, "O highly blessed one, who are you, possessed of this excellent form? I surely reckon you to be a great god. (7) Through what Karma were you condemned to this state? Surely you did not deserve it, O highly virtuous soul! We are keen to know your history. If you consider it proper to inform Us about it, please tell Us all about you." (8)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति स्म राजा सम्पुष्टः कृष्णो नान्तमूर्तिना । माधवं प्रणिपत्याह किरीटेनार्कवर्चसा । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : (Parikṣit !) questioned in these polite words by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is possessed of infinite forms, King Nrga bowed to the Lord of Lakṣmī with his crown brilliant as the sun, and submitted (as follows). (9)

नृग उवाच

नृगो नाम नरेन्द्रोऽहमिक्श्वांकुतनयः प्रभो । दानिष्ठाख्यायमानेषु यदि ते कर्मस्युशम् । १० ।

किं नु तेऽविदितं नाथ सर्वभूतात्मसाक्षिणः । कालेनाव्याहतदृशो वक्ष्येऽथापि तवाज्ञया । ११ ।

यावत्स्यः सिकता भूमेर्यावत्स्यो दिवि तारकाः । यावत्स्यो वर्षधाराश्च तावतीरददां स्म गाः । १२ ।

पयस्विनीस्तरुणीः शीलरूपगुणोपपन्नाः कपिला हेमशृङ्गीः ।

न्यायार्जिता रूप्यखुराः सवत्सा दुकूलमालाभरणा ददावहम् । १३ ।

स्वलङ्कृतेभ्यो गुणशीलवद्भ्यः सीदत्कुटुम्बेभ्य ऋतव्रतेभ्यः ।

तपःश्रुतब्रह्मवदान्यसद्व्यः प्रादां युवभ्यो द्विजपुङ्गवेभ्यः । १४ ।

गोभूहिरण्यायतनाश्चहस्तिनः कन्याः सदासीतिलरूप्यशय्याः ।

वासांसि रत्नानि परिच्छदान् रथानिष्टं च यज्ञैश्चरितं च पूर्तम् । १५ ।

Nrga said : I am a ruler of men, Nrga by name, son of Ikṣvāku, O Lord ! My name might have reached Your ears, if the names of donors were (ever) mentioned (to You). (10) O Lord, what is there unknown to You, the Witness of the mind of all beings ? Your vision remains uninterrupted by time, yet I shall narrate my story to You in obedience to Your command. (11) (Lord I) I gave away to Brāhmaṇas as many cows as there are particles of sand on the earth, (nay,) as many as there are stars in the heavens and as many as rain-drops (falling on earth). (12) They were all milch-cows, young and good-natured, beautiful in form and of good breed, tawny in colour. I got them all with well-earned money. They had their calves with them. Their horns were plated with gold and their hoofs with silver. They were all decorated with silks, garlands and ornaments. (13) Adorning with clothes etc., the best of youthful Brāhmaṇas, who were even-minded and possessed of noble qualities and character, who came of a family suffering from want and who were pledged to truth, noted for their austerities and generous in imparting the knowledge of the Vedas (to their students), I used to give those cows to them. (14) I also gave away a number of oxen, lands, gold, houses, horses, elephants, girls with maid-servants, (piles of) sesamum seeds, silver, beds, clothes, jewels, household articles and chariots. (Besides these) I performed (many) sacrifices and carried out several works of public utility. (15)

कस्यचिद् द्विजमुख्यस्य भ्रष्टा गौर्मम गोधने । सम्पुक्ताविदुषा सा च मया दत्ता द्विजातये । १६ ।

तां नीयमानां तत्त्वामी द्वष्ट्वेवाच ममेति तम् । ममेति प्रतिग्राह्याह नृगो मे दत्तवानिति । १७ ।

विप्रौ विवदमानौ मामूचतुः स्वार्थसाधकौ । भवान् दातापहतंति तच्छ्रुत्वा मेऽभवद् भ्रमः । १८ ।

अनुनीतावुभौ विप्रौ धर्मकृच्छ्रातेन वै । गवां लक्षं प्रकृष्टानां दास्याम्येषा प्रदीयताम् । १९ ।

भवन्तावनुगृहीतां किङ्करस्याविजानतः । समुद्धरत मां कृच्छ्रात् पतन्तं निरयेऽशुचौ । २० ।

नाहं प्रतीच्छे वै राजत्रित्युक्त्वा स्वाम्यपाक्रमत् । नान्यद् गवामप्ययुतमिच्छामीत्यपरो ययौ । २१ ।

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे चार्यैर्दूर्तेर्नितो यमक्षयम् । यमेन पृष्टस्त्राहं देवदेव जगत्पते । २२ ।

पूर्वं त्वमशुभं भुङ्क्षे उताहो नृपते शुभम् । नान्तं दानस्य धर्मस्य पश्ये लोकस्य भास्वतः । २३ ।

पूर्वं देवाशुभं भुञ्ज इति प्राह पतेति सः । तावदद्राक्षमात्मानं कृकलासं पतन् प्रभो । २४ ।

ब्रह्मण्यस्य वदान्यस्य तव दासस्य केशव । स्मृतिर्नाद्यापि विध्वस्ता भवत्सन्दर्शनार्थिनः । २५ ।

स त्वं कथं मम विभोऽक्षिपथः परात्मा योगेश्वरैः श्रुतिदृशामलहृद्विभाव्यः ।

साक्षादधोक्षज उरुव्यसनान्धबुद्धेः स्यान्मेऽनुदय इह यस्य भवापवर्गः । २६ ।

देवदेव जगन्नाथ गोविन्द पुरुषोत्तम । नारायण हृषीकेश पुण्यश्लोकाच्युताव्यय । २७ ।

अनुजानीहि मां कृष्ण यान्तं देवगतिं प्रभो । यत्र कापि सतश्चेतो भूयामे त्वत्पदास्यदम् । २८ ।

नमस्ते सर्वभावाय ब्रह्मणेऽनन्तशक्तये । कृष्णाय वासुदेवाय योगानां पतये नमः । २९ ।

(On a certain day,) a cow belonging to a holy Brāhmaṇa (who never accepted any gift and was devoted to austerities) strayed and mingled with my cattle and, ignorant of the fact, I gave it away to some (other) Brāhmaṇa. (16) While it was being led away (by the latter), the real owner saw it and said to the Brāhmaṇa, "This is mine !" The Brāhmaṇa, who had received it as a gift from me, said, "This is mine; for King Nṛga has given it to me." (17) Both the Brāhmaṇas, bent on establishing their respective claims, brought their dispute to me. One of them said, "You gave it to me." The other said, "If this is a fact, you must have stolen the cow." I was confounded to hear what they said. (18) Placed on the horns of a dilemma, I tried to conciliate both (the Brāhmaṇas) and said, "I shall give you one lakh of excellent cows; please give this over to me. (19) I am your devoted servant. May you be pleased to forgive this fault committed unwittingly by me and save me from this embarrassing situation, which will lead me to dirty hell." (20) The owner of the cow said, "O King ! I will in no case accept the offer made by you," and (abruptly) went away. The other (Brāhmaṇa also) departed saying, "In exchange for this you offer me a lakh of cows, but) I am not inclined to take even ten thousand other cows." (21) O God of gods, O Lord of the universe, in the meanwhile (on my death), I was taken by the messengers of Yama (the god of retribution) to his abode. There Yama inquired of me, "O King, would you first reap the consequences of your evil deeds, or enjoy the fruit of your meritorious acts ? I do not see any limit to the charities and other virtues practised by you nor to the glorious life that awaits you (as their result)." (22-23) I replied, "O shining one, I shall first reap the consequences of my evil deeds." (Instantaneously) the god of Death said, "Fall (then)", and falling from there, O Lord, I found myself transformed into a chameleon. (24) O Kṛṣṇa, a servant of the Brāhmaṇas and liberal in my gifts, I was devoted to You and ever craved for a direct vision of You. It is therefore that my memory of the past has not been lost even today. (25) O Lord, You are the Supreme Self contemplated and realized in their pure heart by the masters of Yoga through the eye of the Upaniṣads. I therefore wonder how You, who are beyond sense-perception, came here directly within my sight, whose reason is blinded by the sufferings of various kinds; for You are visible to him alone whose release from the bondage of transmigration is near. (26) O God of gods, O Protector of cows, O Supreme Person, Ruler of the universe, O most glorious and infallible Lord, O undecaying One, O Nārāyaṇa (the support of all Jivas), O Hṛṣīkeśa (prompter of the senses), O Kṛṣṇa, (pray,) give me leave to go to my celestial abode. O Lord, wherever I may be, may my mind ever dwell in Your feet. (27-28) O Creator of all, O changeless One possessed of infinite energy (in the shape of Māyā), hail to You. O Kṛṣṇa, O Vāsudeva (the support of all creatures), O Master of all Yogas, I bow (again and again) to You. (29)

इत्युक्त्वा तं परिक्रम्य पादौ स्पृष्ट्वा स्वमौलिना । अनुज्ञातो विमानायामारुह्य पश्यतां नृणाम् । ३० ।

Saying so, the king went towards the Lord, touched His feet with his head, and with the permission of the Lord mounted an excellent aerial car while all men stood looking on. (30)

कृष्णः परिजनं प्राह भगवान् देवकीसुतः । ब्रह्मण्यदेवो धर्मात्मा राजन्याननुशिक्षयन् । ३१ ।
 दुर्जरं बत ब्रह्मस्वं भुक्तमग्नेर्मनागपि । तेजीयसोऽपि किमुत राज्ञामीश्वरमानिनाम् । ३२ ।
 नाहं हालाहलं मन्ये विषं यस्य प्रतिक्रिया । ब्रह्मस्वं हि विषं प्रोक्तं नास्य प्रतिविधिर्भुवि । ३३ ।
 हिनस्ति विषमत्तारं वह्निरद्भिः प्रशाम्यति । कुलं समूलं दहति ब्रह्मस्वारणिपावकः । ३४ ।
 ब्रह्मस्वं दुरनुज्ञातं भुक्तं हन्ति त्रिपूरुषम् । प्रसह्य तु बलाद् भुक्तं दश पूर्वान् दशापरान् । ३५ ।
 राजानो राजलक्ष्म्याऽऽ नात्मपातं विचक्षते । निरयं येऽभिमन्यन्ते ब्रह्मस्वं साधु बालिशाः । ३६ ।
 गृह्णन्ति यावतः पांसून् क्रन्दतामश्रुबिन्दवः । विप्राणां हतवृत्तीनां वदान्यानां कुटुम्बिनाम् । ३७ ।
 राजानो राजकुल्याश्च तावतोऽब्दात्रिरङ्कुशाः । कुम्भीपाकेषु पच्यन्ते ब्रह्मदायापहारिणः । ३८ ।
 स्वदत्तां परदत्तां वा ब्रह्मवृत्तिं हरेद्य यः । षष्टिवर्षसहस्राणि विष्टायां जायते कृमिः । ३९ ।
 न मे ब्रह्मधनं भूयाद् यद् गृध्रश्चाल्पायुषो नराः । पराजिताश्च्युता राज्याद् भवन्त्युद्वेजिनोऽहयः । ४० ।
 विप्रं कृतागसमपि नैव द्रुह्यत मामकाः । घ्नन्तं बहु शपन्तं वा नमस्कुरुत नित्यशः । ४१ ।
 यथाहं प्रणमे विप्राननुकालं समाहितः । तथा नमत यूयं च योऽन्यथा मे स दण्डभाक् । ४२ ।
 ब्राह्मणार्थो ह्यपहतो हतारं पातयत्यधः । अजानन्तमपि ह्येनं नृगं ब्राह्मणगौरिव । ४३ ।
 एवं विश्राव्य भगवान् मुकुन्दो द्वारकौकसः । पावनः सर्वलोकानां विवेश निजमन्दिरम् । ४४ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तर्धे नृगोपाख्याने नाम चतुष्टयित्तोऽध्यायः । ६४ ।

(On the departure of King Nrga), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, glorious son of Devakī, the Lover of Brāhmaṇas and an embodiment of virtue, addressed His people (as follows) with a view to instructing those born of the Kṣatriya class. (31) "The property of a Brāhmaṇa, even so little, when misappropriated, cannot be digested even by one who is as powerful as Fire, much less by a king who considers himself a ruler out of (false) conceit. (32) I do not consider the most deadly poison to be a poison; for it has an antidote. A Brāhmaṇa's property is the real poison; for (once it is misappropriated) there is no remedy for it in the world. (33) Poison kills him (alone) who swallows it; fire can be put out with water. (But) the fire produced by the Araṇi (a piece of wood used in kindling fire by attrition) of a Brāhmaṇa's property burns a whole family with its roots (the forbears). (34) The property of a man made use of without permission brings ruin to three generations (viz., the man who uses it as well as his parents and sons); if, however, it is wilfully taken and enjoyed by force, it will bring disaster to ten generations before and ten generations after the enjoyer. (35) Foolish kings who, blinded by their royal fortune, covet and enjoy a Brāhmaṇa's property, which is terrible as hell, do not realize to what an abysmal depth they will have to fall. (36) Those despotic rulers who deprive liberal-minded Brāhmaṇas, having a large family, of their property and means of livelihood, have to suffer with their descendants the tortures of the hell called Kumbhipāka (where the sinners are fried in boiled oil) for as many years as there are particles of earth moistened with their tears while they weep. (37-38) Nay, he who deprives a Brāhmaṇa of his livelihood whether given by himself or by another, lives as a worm born in the ordure for sixty thousand years. (39) (It is My desire that) the property of a Brāhmaṇa should never find its way to My treasury; (for) men who (even) covet such property forfeit their longevity, suffer defeat at the hands of their enemies, lose their kingdom and are born as dreadful serpents (after death). (40) O My kinsmen, do no harm to a Brāhmaṇa even if he is guilty of an offence. Even if he assaults you or pours abuse on you, salute him daily (in return). (41) Just as I bow to them with vigilance three times a day, so too do you. Whosoever does otherwise will receive punishment from Me. (42) A Brāhmaṇa's property, if misappropriated, brings about without fail the downfall of the man who does so, just as the Brāhmaṇa's cow brought about the downfall of this king (Nrga), even though he was ignorant of the fact that he had misappropriated. (43) Having thus exhorted the people of Dwārakā, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the purifier of all the worlds, retired to His palace. (44)

Thus ends the sixty-fourth discourse, entitled "The story of Nrga," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXV

Baladeva triumphantly diverts the river Yamunā from its course

श्रीशुक उवाच

बलभद्रः कुरुश्रेष्ठ भगवान् रथमास्थितः । सुहृद्दक्षकुलकण्ठः प्रययौ नन्दगोकुलम् । १ ।
परिवृक्तश्चिरोक्तकण्ठैर्गोपैर्गोपीभिरेव च । रामोऽभिवाद्य पितरावासीर्भिरभिनन्दितः । २ ।
चिरं नः पाहि दाशार्हं सानुजो जगदीश्वरः । इत्यारोप्याङ्गमालिङ्ग्य नेत्रैः सिचिचतुर्जलैः । ३ ।
गोपवृद्धांश्च विधिवद् यविष्ठैरभिवन्दितः । यथावयो यथासख्यं यथासम्बन्धमात्मनः । ४ ।
समुपेत्याथ गोपालान् हास्यहस्तग्रहादिभिः । विश्रान्तं सुखमासीनं पप्रच्छुः पर्युपागताः । ५ ।
पृष्टाश्चानामयं खेपु प्रेमगद्गदया गिरा । कृष्णो कमलपत्राक्षे संन्यस्ताखिलराधसः । ६ ।
कच्चिन्नो बान्धवा राम सर्वे कुशलमासते । कच्चित् स्मरथ नो राम यूयं दारसुतान्विताः । ७ ।
दिष्ट्या कंसो हतः पापो दिष्ट्या मुक्ताः सुहृज्जनाः । निहत्य निर्जित्य रिपून् दिष्ट्या दुर्गं समाश्रिताः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : The blessed Lord Balarāma, O jewel among the Kurus ! who eagerly longed to see all friends and relations (in Vraja), drove (on one occasion from Dwārakā) in his chariot to Gokula, ruled over by Nanda. (1) (On reaching there) He was embraced by the cowherds as well as by the cowherdesses (of Vraja), who had been long yearning (for His sight). Bowing to his (foster-) parents (mother Yaśodā and Nanda), he was cheered with blessings and addressed as follows:—(2) "O Bala (a scion of Daśārha), You are the Lord of the universe; may You with Your younger Brother (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) protect us long!" (Then) placing him on their lap and embracing him, they bathed him with tears (of joy) from their eyes. (3) Bowing to the elderly among the Gopas with due ceremony, he was bowed to by the younger ones. He duly met (all) the Gopas according to their age, intimacy and relation to himself, cutting jokes with them, taking them by the hand and so on. When he had reposed himself and was comfortably seated, (all) the Gopas gathered round him. They had renounced all their worldly pleasures as well as the enjoyments of heaven, nay, Mokṣa (itself) for the sake of Śrī Kṛṣṇa of lotus-like eyes. Inquired about their welfare, they made (similar) inquiries about the health of their kinsmen (the Yadus) in a voice choked with emotion (as follows:—)(4—6) "Balarāma, are all our kith and kin (at Dwārakā) well? You are now married and are blessed with children, O Rāma ! Do you remember us (now and then)? (7) By good luck the wicked Kaṁsa has been killed and our kinsmen luckily redeemed (from his tyranny). Happily (enough) you have (either) killed or vanquished your enemies and taken shelter in a fortified place (like Dwārakā). " (8)

गोप्यो हसन्त्यः पप्रच्छ रामसन्दर्शनादृताः । कश्चिदास्ते सुखं कृष्णः पुरस्त्रीजनवल्लभः । ९ ।

कश्चित् स्मरति वा बन्धून् पितरं मातरं च सः । अप्यसौ मातरं द्रष्टुं सकृदप्यागमिष्यति ।

(9)

अपि वा स्मरतेऽस्माकमनुसेवां महाभुजः । १० ।

मातरं पितरं भ्रातृन् पतीन् पुत्रान् स्वसूरपि । यदर्थं जहिम दाशार्हं दुस्त्यजान् स्वजनान् प्रभो । ११ ।

ता नः सद्यः परित्यज्य गतः संछिन्नसौहृदः । कथं नु तादृशं स्त्रीभिर्न श्रद्धीयेत भाषितम् । १२ ।

कथं नु गृह्णन्त्यनवस्थितात्मनो वचः कृतघ्नस्य बुधाः पुरस्त्रियः ।

गृह्णन्ति वै चित्रकथस्य सुन्दरस्मितावलोकच्छसितस्मरतुराः । १३ ।

किं नस्तकथया गोप्यः कथाः कथयतापराः । यात्यस्माभिर्विना कालो यदि तस्य तथैव नः । १४ ।

इति प्रहसितं शौरैर्जल्पितं चारु वीक्षितम् । गतिं प्रेमपरिषृङ्गं स्मरन्त्यो रुरुदुः स्त्रियः । १५ ।

The Gopis felt (greatly) honoured by the sight at close quarters of Balarāma and (approaching him,) smilingly asked him, "Is Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the beloved of the ladies of Mathurā, happy? (9) Does he (ever) remember his relations and friends, or (even) father and mother? Will he come here even once to see his mother? Does Śrī Kṛṣṇa of long arms remember our constant devotion to him? (10) For his sake, O Lord, we forsook our mother and father, brothers, husband, children, sisters and (all other) relations, so hard to renounce, O scion of Daśārha! (11) Yet, O Powerful one, he left us, who were so beloved of him, in a moment, breaking asunder all ties of affection. (We could stop him if we would, but) how could women fail to put faith in his honeyed words?" (12) (One Gopi said,) "How could the city women, who are shrewd (enough), believe the words of that fickle-minded and ungrateful soul?" Another Gopi said, "Śrī Kṛṣṇa is a past-master in the art of conversation. His winsome smiles and (loving) glances must have kindled love in their breast and overpowered them. Hence they put faith in his words." (13) (A third Gopi said,) "O Gopis, what is the use of talking about him? Take up some other topic for conversation. If he can spend his time without us, we should also be able to spend our time without him." (14) Thus talking (among themselves) and recalling Śrī Kṛṣṇa's laughter, His talk, His winsome glances, (graceful) gait and loving embraces, the women wept (bitterly). (15)

सङ्कर्षणस्ताः कृष्णस्य सन्देसैर्हृदयङ्गमैः । सान्त्वयामास भगवान् नानानुनयकोविदः । १६ ।

द्वौ मासौ तत्र चावात्सीन्मधुं माधवमेव च । रामः क्षपासु भगवान् गोपीनां रतिमावहन् । १७ ।

पूर्णचन्द्रकलामृष्टे कौमुदीगन्धवायुना । यमुनोपवने रेमे सेविते स्त्रीगणैर्वृतः । १८ ।

वरुणप्रेषिता देवी वारुणी वृक्षकोटरात् । पतन्ती तद् वनं सर्वं स्वगन्धेनाधवासयत् । १९ ।

तं गन्धं मधुधाराया वायुनोपहतं बलः । आघ्रायोपगतस्तत्र ललनाभिः समं पपी । २० ।

उपगीयमानचरितो वनिताभिर्हलायुधः । वनेषु व्यचरत् क्षीवो मदबिह्वललोचनः । २१ ।

स्नग्धेककुण्डलो मत्तो वैजयन्त्या च मालया । बिभ्रत् स्मितमुखाम्भोजं स्वेदप्रालेयभूषितम् । २२ ।

स आजुहाव यमुनां जलक्रीडार्थमीश्वरः । निजं वाक्यमनादृत्य मत्त इत्यापगां बलः ।

अनागतां हलाग्रेण कुपितो विचकर्ष ह । २३ ।

पापे त्वं मामवज्ञाय यत्रायासि मयाऽऽहुता । नेष्ये त्वां लाङ्गलाग्रेण शतधा कामचारिणीम् । २४ ।

एवं निर्भर्त्सिता भीता यमुना यदुनन्दनम् । उवाच चकिता वाचं पतिता पादयोर्नृप । २५ ।

राम राम महाबाहो न जाने तव विक्रमम् । यस्यैकांशेन विधृता जगती जगतः पते । २६ ।

परं भावं भगवतो भगवन् मामजानतीम् । मोक्तुमर्हसि विश्वात्मन् प्रपन्नां भक्तवत्सल । २७ ।

Skilled in the various methods of conciliation, Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa pacified those Gopīs with Śrī Kṛṣṇa's messages, which were most pleasing to their heart. (16) Balarāma spent there the two months (of the vernal season, viz.,) Caitra and Vaiśākha, entertaining the Gopīs during the nights. (17) At that time a gentle wind wafted the fragrance of (the blooming) lilies, the gardens on the banks of the Yamunā were illumined by the rays of the full moon, and Śrī Balarāma sported in the midst of crowds of Gopīs. (18) The celestial beverage called Vāruṇī, sent by Varuṇa (the deity presiding over the waters), and flowing from the hollow of a tree, filled the whole forest with its smell. (19) Perceiving the smell of the stream of honey borne by the wind, Balarāma went up to the tree and drank of it alongwith those women. (20) His exploits being sung by the Gopīs (who surrounded Him), Balarāma roamed about intoxicated through the woods with eyes swimming in intoxication. (21) Adorned with a wreath of flowers and a necklace called Vaijayantī, (nay,) with an ear-ring shining in one of His ears, and with His lotus-like face bright with smiles and decked with the dewy drops of sweat, the intoxicated Lord summoned the Yamunā to come near Him so as to enable Him to sport in her water. Taking Him to be intoxicated, the Yamunā (however) paid no heed to His command and did not come, whereupon Balarāma got enraged, they say, and, dragging the river with the point of His plough, said, "O sinful one, since you have disobeyed Me and do not come even though called by Me, I shall make you taste the fruit of your waywardness. With the end of My plough, I shall split you into a hundred streams." (22—24) Thus threatened (by Balarāma), the goddess presiding over the Yamunā fell on His feet and trembling with fear, said:— (25) "O Rāma, the delighter of all, O long-armed one, I had forgotten Your strength, and was ignorant of Your transcendent glory. O Lord of the universe, (I now realize that) by a mere part manifestation (Śeṣa) of Yours, the whole universe is supported. O almighty Lord, O Soul of the universe, who are (so) fond of (Your) devotees, I take refuge in You; kindly (excuse me for my error and) give me freedom to flow." (26-27)

ततो व्यमुञ्चद् यमुनां याचितो भगवान् बलः । विजगाह जलं स्त्रीभिः करेणुभिरिवेभराद् । २८ ।
 कामं विहत्य सलिलादुत्तीर्णायासिताम्बरे । भूषणानि महार्हाणि ददौ कान्तिः शुभो स्रजम् । २९ ।
 वस्तिवा वाससी नीले मालामामुच्य काञ्चनीम् । रेजे खलङ्कृतो लिप्तो माहेन्द्र इव वारणः । ३० ।
 अद्यापि दृश्यते राजन् यमुनाऽऽकृष्टवर्त्मना । बलस्यानन्तवीर्यस्य वीर्यं सूचयतीव हि । ३१ ।
 एवं सर्वा निशा याता एकेव रमतो ब्रजे । रामस्याक्षिप्तचित्तस्य मायुर्ध्वंरंजयोषिताम् । ३२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे बलदेवविजये यमुनाकर्षणे नाम

पञ्चषष्टितमोऽध्यायः । ६५ ।

(Thus) entreated by her, the Lord Balarāma thereupon released the Yamunā and entered its waters alongwith the Gopīs even as a leader of elephants would enter a stream (to sport) with his mates. (28) When having sported to His heart's content, Śrī Balarāma rose from the waters (of the Yamunā) Kānti, (an embodiment of Lakṣmī) presented Him with two pieces of cloth of blue colour, valuable ornaments and a shining necklace (of gold). (29) Putting on the two pieces of cloth, wearing the necklace and artistically decked with other gold ornaments and painted with sandal-paste, He shone like Airāvata (the white elephant of Indra, the lord of celestials). (30) Parikṣit, even to this day the Yamunā is seen flowing through the course it took after being dragged by Balarāma, as if proclaiming as a matter of fact the strength of Balarāma (who is possessed of infinite prowess). (31) Charmed with the sweet qualities of the damsels of Vraja, Balarāma lost all sense of time. In this way all the nights of His enjoyment in Vraja passed as if they were (but) one night. (32)

Thus ends the sixty-fifth discourse entitled "Baladeva triumphantly diverts the course of the Yamunā, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā."

अथ षट्षष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXVI

Paundraka and others killed

श्रीशुक उवाच

नन्दब्रजं गते रामे करूषाधिपतिर्नृपः वासुदेवोऽहमित्यज्ञो दूतं कृष्णाय प्राहिणोत् । १ ।
 त्वं वासुदेवो भगवानवतीर्णो जगत्पतिः । इति प्रस्तोभितो बालैर्मन आत्मानमच्युतम् । २ ।
 दूतं च प्राहिणोन्मन्दः कृष्णायव्यक्तवर्त्मने । द्वारकायां यथा बालो नृपो बालकृतोऽबुधः । ३ ।
 दूतस्तु द्वारकामेत्य सभायामास्थितं प्रभुम् । कृष्णं कमलपत्राक्षं राजसन्देशमब्रवीत् । ४ ।
 वासुदेवोऽवतीर्णोऽहमेक एव न चापरः । भूतानामनुकम्पार्थं त्वं तु मिथ्याभिधां त्यज । ५ ।
 यानि त्वमस्मद्विह्वानि मौढ्याद् बिभर्षि सात्वत । त्यक्त्वैहि मां त्वं शरणं नो चेद् देहि ममाहवम् । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parikṣit, when Śrī Balarāma had gone to Nanda's Vraja, Pauṇḍraka, the ruler of Karūṣa, sent a messenger to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, saying, "I am Vāsudeva"! Steeped as he was in ignorance, he was flattered by stupid people, who said, "You are the glorious Lord Vāsudeva, protector of the universe, who have appeared on earth (for its protection)", and the fellow began to look upon himself as Vāsudeva (the immortal Lord). (1-2) Just as a foolish boy set up by other boys as a king in sport would behave, so did the dull-witted fellow, unaware of the reality of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose ways are inscrutable, sent his messenger to Dwārakā. (3) The messenger came to Dwārakā and delivered (the following) message of his king to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of lotus-like eyes, who was seated in the council hall. (4) "I alone am Vāsudeva, and there is no other. I have come down on earth to bless all beings with my grace. You have falsely assumed that name, which you should now give up. (5) O scion of Yadu, abandon all my marks that you have adopted through (sheer) folly and come to me for shelter, or you should give me battle." (6)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कथ्यनं तदुपाकर्ण्य पौण्ड्रकस्याल्पमेधसः । उपसेनादयः सभ्या उच्चकैर्जहसुस्तदा । ७ ।
 उवाच दूतं भगवान् परिहासकथामनु । उत्स्रक्ष्ये मूढं चिह्नानि यैस्त्वमेवं विकथ्यसे । ८ ।
 सुखं तदपिधायाज्ञ कङ्कगृध्रवटैर्वृतः । शयिष्यसे हतस्त्र भविता शरणं शुनाम् । ९ ।
 इति दूतस्तदाक्षेपं स्वामिने सर्वमाहरत् । कृष्णोऽपि रथमास्थाय काशीमुपजगाम ह । १० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing this bragging of the dull-witted Pauṇḍraka, King Ugrasena and (all) others who were present in the assembly at that time loudly laughed. (7) When their jokes were over, the Lord replied through the messenger (as follows): "O foolish one, I shall (no doubt) discharge My (discus and other) insignia on you and (all) those associates of yours, encouraged by whom you brag in this manner. (8) O fool, hiding those lips (with which you are bragging) you will (then) lie down dead on the ground, surrounded by buzzards, vultures and other (carnivorous) birds, and (instead of giving shelter to Me,) you will serve as subsistence for dogs." (9) The messenger (returned) and conveyed the whole of this retort to his master. Śrī Kṛṣṇa too (for His part) mounted His chariot and invaded Kāśī (for the ruler of Karuṣa was then staying with his friend, the king of Kāśī). (10)

पौण्ड्रकोऽपि तदुद्योगमुपलभ्य महारथः । अक्षौहिणीभ्यां संयुक्तो निश्चक्राम पुराद् हुतम् । ११ ।
 तस्य काशिपतिमित्रं पाष्णिग्राहोऽन्वयान्नुय । अक्षौहिणीभित्तिस्मिभिरपश्यत् पौण्ड्रकं हरिः । १२ ।
 शङ्खार्यसिगदाशार्ङ्गश्रीवत्साद्युपलक्षितम् । विभ्राणं कौस्तुभमणिं वनमालाविभूषितम् । १३ ।
 कौशेयवाससी पीते वसानं गरुडध्वजम् । अमूल्यमौल्याभरणं स्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलम् । १४ ।
 दृष्ट्वा तमात्मनस्तुल्यवेषं कृत्रिममास्थितम् । यथा नटं रङ्गगतं विजहास भृशं हरिः । १५ ।
 शूलैर्गदाभिः परिधैः शक्यवृष्टिप्रासतोमरैः । असिभिः पट्टिशैर्बाणैः प्राहरन्नरयो हरिम् । १६ ।
 कृष्णस्तु तत्पौण्ड्रककाशिराजयोर्बलं गजस्यन्दनवाजिपत्तितम् ।
 गदासिचक्रेषुभिरार्दयद् भृशं यथा युगान्ते हुतभुक् पृथक् प्रजाः । १७ ।
 आयोधनं तद्रथवाजिकुञ्जरद्विपत्त्वरोष्ट्रेररिणावखण्डितैः ।
 वधौ चितं मोदवहं मनस्विनामाक्रीडनं भूतपतेरिवोल्बणम् । १८ ।

Having received the news of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's invasion, Pauṇḍraka, the great car-warrior, hastily sallied forth from the city with (an army consisting of) two Akṣauhīṇis; and his friend, the king of Kāśī, followed him as a commander in the rear, O king, with (a subsidiary force of) three Akṣauhīṇis. Pauṇḍraka could be (easily) distinguished by his conch, discus, sword and mace, the Śaṅga bow and (the mark of) Śrīvatsa, bore a Kaustubha gem and was decked with a wreath of sylvan flowers. (11—13) He was clad in two pieces of yellow silk and bore the design of Garuḍa on his ensign, wore a priceless crown and brilliant crocodile-shaped ear-rings. (14) All this outfit was so artificial that he looked like an actor on the stage. Finding Pauṇḍraka closely imitating Him in dress, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa heartily laughed. (15) (Now) the enemies assailed Śrī Kṛṣṇa with their pikes, maces, iron clubs, lances, spears, darts, bludgeons, swords, Paṭṭīśas and arrows. (16) Like the fire raging at the time of universal destruction, which destroys all creatures severally, Śrī Kṛṣṇa utterly crushed with His mace, sword, discus and shafts that (joint) army of Pauṇḍraka and the king of Kāśī, consisting (as it did) of elephants, chariots, horses and footmen. (17) The (whole) field was strewn with chariots and (dead bodies of) horses, elephants, men, donkeys and camels—cut to pieces by the discus of Śrī Kṛṣṇa—and looked as fearful as the place where Śaṅkara carries on His deadly dance of destruction (at the end of a Kalpa). Its sight afforded delight to the brave. (18)

अथाह पौण्ड्रकं शौरिर्भोः पौण्ड्रक यद् भवान् । दूतवाक्येन मामाह तान्यस्त्राण्युत्सृजामि ते । १९ ।
 त्याजयिष्येऽभिधानं मे यत्त्वयाज्ञं मृषा धृतम् । ब्रजामि शरणं तेऽद्य यदि नेच्छामि संयुगम् । २० ।
 इति क्षिप्त्वा शितैर्बाणैर्विरथीकृत्य पौण्ड्रकम् । शिरोऽवृथ्वा रथाङ्गेन वज्रेणेन्द्रो यथा गिरिः । २१ ।
 तथा काशिपतेः कायाच्छिर उलूक्य पत्रिभिः । न्यपातयत् काशिपुर्या पद्मकोशमिवानिलः । २२ ।
 एवं मत्सरिणं हत्वा पौण्ड्रकं ससखं हरिः । द्वारकामाविशत् सिद्धैर्गायमानकथातुतः । २३ ।
 स नित्यं भगवद्भयानप्रध्वस्ताखिलबन्धनः । विभ्राणश्च हरे राजन् खरूपं तन्मयोऽभवत् । २४ ।

Now Śrī Kṛṣṇa addressed Pauṇḍraka, (as follows): "Hullo Pauṇḍraka, you asked Me through the mouth of your messenger to give up the weapons (I carry on My person). I shall accordingly discharge them on you. (19) I shall compel you to give up My name, which has been falsely assumed by you, O ignorant one. You asked Me to take refuge in you. I would do so today, if I avoided a clash with you." (20) Reproaching him thus, Śrī Kṛṣṇa shattered the chariot of Pauṇḍraka with His sharp arrows and lopped off his head with His discus, (even) as Indra would knock down wings of a mountain with his thunderbolt. (21) Śrī Kṛṣṇa likewise severed the head of the king of Kāśī from his body with His arrows and caused it to (fly and) fall into the city of Kāśī even as the wind would carry away a lotus-bud. (22) Thus putting an end to (both) Pauṇḍraka and his ally (the king of Kāśī), who had been nursing enmity towards Him, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa returned to Dwarakā, the Siddhas singing His stories, sweet as nectar. (23) Parīkṣit, Pauṇḍraka ever used to think intensely of the Lord. All the ties of his Karma were cut asunder by this; and as he (constantly) remembered the Lord's Form, when imitating Him, he attained the same Form as His (after death). (24)

शिरः पतितमालोक्य राजद्वारे सकुण्डलम् । किमिदं कस्य वा वक्त्रमिति संशिशिये जनाः । २५ ।
 राज्ञः काशिपतेर्ज्ञात्वा महिष्यः पुत्रबान्धवाः । पौराश्च हा हता राजन् नाथ नाथेति प्रारुदन् । २६ ।
 सुदक्षिणस्तस्य सुतः कृत्वा संस्थाविधिं पितुः । निहत्य पितृहन्तारं यास्याम्यपचित्तिं पितुः । २७ ।
 इत्यात्मनाभिसन्ध्य सोपाध्यायो महेश्वरम् । सुदक्षिणोऽर्चयामास परमेण समाधिना । २८ ।
 प्रीतोऽविमुक्ते भगवांस्तस्मै वरमदाद् भवः । पितृहन्तुवधोपायं स वज्रे वरमीप्सितम् । २९ ।
 दक्षिणाग्निं परिचर द्वाह्यगैः सममुत्विजम् । अभिचारविधानेन स चाग्निः प्रमथैर्वृतः । ३० ।
 साधयिष्यति सङ्कल्पमब्रह्माण्ये प्रयोजितः । इत्यादिष्टस्तथा चक्रे कृष्णायाभिचरन् व्रतो । ३१ ।
 ततोऽग्निरुत्थितः कुण्डान्मूर्तिमानतिभीषणः । ततताप्रशिखाश्मश्रुङ्गारोद्गारिलोचनः । ३२ ।
 दंष्ट्रोऽग्रभुक्कुटीदण्डकठोरास्यः स्वजिह्वाया । आलिहन् सुक्किणीं नग्नो विधुर्बन्धिशिखं ज्वलन् । ३३ ।
 पदभ्यां तालप्रमाणाभ्यां कम्पयन्वनीतलम् । सोऽभ्यधावद् वृत्तो भूतैर्द्वारकां प्रदहन् दिशः । ३४ ।
 तमाभिचारदहनमायातं द्वारकौकसः । विलोक्य तत्रसुः सर्वे वनदाहे मृगा यथा । ३५ ।
 अक्षैः सभायां क्रीडन्तं भगवन्तं भयातुराः । त्राहि त्राहि त्रिलोकेश वह्नेः प्रदहतः पुरम् । ३६ ।
 श्रुत्वा तज्जनवैक्लव्यं दृष्ट्वा स्वानां च साध्वसम् । शरण्यः सम्प्रहस्याह मा भैष्टेत्यवितास्म्यहम् । ३७ ।

Seeing a human head with ear-rings lying at the entrance of the palace (in Kāśī), the people wondered whose head it was, and how it came. (25) Recognizing (at last) that it was the head of their king (the ruler of Kāśī), the queens, sons and relations of the king and the citizens wailed loudly saying, "O lord, O master, O king, alas, we are (all) undone." (26) The king's son, Sudakṣiṇa, performed the funeral rites to his father and resolved in his mind that he would repay the debt to his father by killing his slayer. With the help of his priest Sudakṣiṇa began to worship Śaṅkara with the utmost concentration. (27-28) Pleased with his worship at Kāśī, Lord Śaṅkara offered him a boon. Sudakṣiṇa replied, "Lord, (if You are pleased with me) tell me by what means I can kill the slayer of my father. That is the only boon I seek from You." (29) Śaṅkara said, "With the help of Brāhmaṇas worship the sacred fire called Dakṣiṇāgni, according to the Abhicāra method (employed for malevolent purposes). That fire, accompanied by Pramathas (the attendants of Śaṅkara) will accomplish your purpose (even) as a priest appointed to carry out one's wishes. It will, however, be powerless against one who is devoted to Brāhmaṇas." Thus commanded (by Lord Śaṅkara), Sudakṣiṇa did as he was bid, observing strict discipline and directing the Abhicāra force against Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (30-31) As soon as the Abhicāra was over, the god of fire emerged in person from the sacrificial pit, assuming a very terrible form. His locks, moustaches and beard looked red like heated copper; his eyes emitted sparks of fire. (32) His (large and protruding) teeth and threatening eyebrows gave him a stern appearance; he was licking the corners of his mouth with his tongue; his naked body threw out flames of fire. Flourishing a trident (in his hand), he strode the earth with legs as tall as a palm tree. Making the earth tremble under his feet and burning the cardinal points, he rushed towards Dwārakā, followed by spectress. (33-34) At the sight of that Abhicāra fire rushing towards them, the people of Dwārakā were all frightened, even as the deer get frightened at the sight of a forest conflagration. (35) They ran in consternation to the Lord, who was playing at dice in His court, and said, "O Ruler of the three worlds, protect us, O protect us, from the fire that is about to consume the city." (36) Hearing of this distress of His people, and seeing (the cause of) their fear, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the protector of His devotees) laughed loudly and heartily and said, "Do not be afraid, I shall protect you (from this danger)." (37)

सर्वस्यान्तर्बहिःसाक्षी कृत्यां माहेश्वरीं विभुः । विज्ञाय तद्विघातार्थं पार्श्वस्थं चक्रमादिशत् । ३८ ।

तत् सूर्यकोटिप्रतिमं सुदर्शनं जाज्वल्यमानं प्रलयानलप्रभम् ।

स्वतेजसा खं ककुभोऽथ रोदसी चक्रं मुकुन्दास्त्रमथाग्निमादयत् । ३९ ।

कृत्यानलः प्रतिहतः स रथाङ्गपाणेरस्त्रौजसा स नृप भग्नमुखो निवृत्तः ।

वाराणसीं परिसमेत्य सुदर्क्षिणं तं सत्त्विजं समदहत् स्वकृतोऽभिचारः । ४० ।

चक्रं च विष्णोस्तदनुप्रविष्टं वाराणसीं सादृशभालयापणाम् ।

सगोपुराद्वलककोष्ठसङ्कुलां सकोशहस्यश्चरन्नाशालाम् । ४१ ।

दग्धा वाराणसीं सर्वा विष्णोश्चक्रं सुदर्शनम् । भूयः पार्श्वमुपातिष्ठत् कृष्णस्याङ्घ्रिकर्मणः । ४२ ।

Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa is a witness of all that happens within and without all creatures. He at once came to know that it was the Kṛtyā (a malevolent force) of Lord Śiva (released from Kāśī). He commanded His discus (Sudarśana), that stood by His side, to nullify the Kṛtyā. (38) Brilliant like millions of suns, and flaming forth like the fire of universal destruction, the discus Sudarśana, the (favourite) missile of the Lord, lighted up heaven and earth as well as the intervening region and the (four) quarters with its lustre and forthwith subdued the Abhicāra fire. (39) Repulsed by the force of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's weapon, the magic fire known by the name of Kṛtyā had its force blunted and, turning back, returned to Kāśī and burnt up Sudakṣiṇa and his priests, by whom it had been released. (40) Following the Kṛtyā, Sudarśana, the discus of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, entered Kāśī and, reducing the whole city to ashes alongwith its high towers, assembly halls, houses, market-places, big gates, attics, granaries, treasuries, the stalls for elephants, horses and chariots and dining halls, returned to Dwārakā and stood once more by the side of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who did everything as a matter of sport. (41-42)

य एतच्छ्रवयेन्मर्यं उत्तमश्लोकविक्रमम् । सभाहितो वा शृणुयात् सर्वपापैः प्रमुच्यते । ४३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे पौण्ड्रकादिवधो नाम पट्षष्टितमोऽध्यायः । ६६ ।

The man who hears attentively, or relates, the story of this exploit of the glorious Lord (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) is completely rid of all sins. (43)

Thus ends the sixty-sixth discourse entitled "Paunḍraka and others killed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa)", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तषष्ठितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXVII

Dwivida killed (by Balarāma)

राजोवाच

भूयोऽहं श्रोतुमिच्छामि रामस्याद्भुतकर्मणः । अनन्तस्याप्रमेयस्य यदन्यत् कृतवान् प्रभुः । १ ।

King Parikṣit submitted : Lord Balarāma is possessed of infinite glory; His Form and virtues are unfathomable, His deeds are wonderful. I long to hear more of Him—what other feats He performed. (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

नरकस्य सखा कश्चित् द्विविदो नाम वानरः । सुग्रीवसचिवः सोऽथ भ्राता मैन्दस्य वीर्यवान् । २ ।
सख्युः सोऽपचितिं कुर्वन् वानरो राष्ट्रविप्लवम् । पुरग्रामाकरान् घोषानदहद् वह्निमुत्सृजन् । ३ ।
क्वचित् स शैलानुत्पाद्य तैर्देशान् समचूर्णयत् । आनर्तान् सुतरामेव यत्रास्ते मित्रहा हरिः । ४ ।
क्वचित् समुद्रमध्यस्थो दोर्भ्यामुनिक्षिप्य तज्जलम् । देशान् नागायुतप्राणो वेलोकूलानमज्जयत् । ५ ।
आश्रमान्निषिमुख्यानां कृत्वा भग्नवनस्पतीन् । अदूषयच्छकृन्मूत्रैरग्नीन् वैतानिकान् खलः । ६ ।
पुरुषान् योषितो दूतः क्ष्माभृद्दोषाणिगुहासु सः । निक्षिप्य चाप्यधाच्छैलैः पेशस्कारीव क्रीटकम् । ७ ।
एवं देशान् विप्रकुर्वन् दूषयंश्च कुलस्त्रियः । श्रुत्वा सुललितं गीतं गिरि रैवतकं ययौ । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : There was a certain monkey, Dwivida by name. He was a friend of Naraka, a counsellor of Sugrīva and the powerful brother of Mainda. (2) He made havoc of the country by setting fire to and burning towns, villages, mines and cowherds' stations with a view to clearing his debt to his friend (by wreaking vengeance on his enemy). (3) Sometimes he pulled out hills and smashed with them whole territories, especially the territory of Ānarta, where lived Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Slayer of his friend. (4) Possessing (as he did) the strength of ten thousand elephants, the monkey now and then took his stand in mid-ocean and splashed such a volume of water with his hands as to submerge the territories adjoining the shore. (5) The villain used to knock down trees in the hermitages of great sages and profaned their sacrificial fires with his excrement and urine. (6) Just as a wasp imprisons the larva, even so the power-intoxicated monkey threw men and women into the valleys and caves of mountains and blocked their mouths with (huge) rocks. (7) Thus he made havoc of the entire land, and (what is more) defiled even high-born women. (On a certain day,) hearing very sweet music, he went to the Raivataka hill. (8)

तत्रापश्यद् यदुपतिं रामं पुष्करमालिनम् । सुदर्शनीयसर्वाङ्गं ललनायुधमध्यगम् । ९ ।
गायन्तं वारुणीं पीत्वा मदविह्वललोचनम् । विभ्राजमानं वपुषा प्रभिन्नमिव वारणम् । १० ।
दुष्टः शाखांमृगः शाखामारूढः कम्पयन् हुमान् । चक्रे किलकिलाशब्दमात्मानं सम्प्रदर्शयन् । ११ ।
तस्य धाष्ट्यं कपेर्वीक्ष्य तरुण्यो जातिचापलाः । हास्यप्रिया विजहसुर्बलदेवपरिग्रहाः । १२ ।
ता हेलयामास कपिभृङ्क्षेपैः सम्मुखादिभिः । दर्शयन् स्वगुदं तासां रामस्य च निरीक्षतः । १३ ।
तं याव्या प्राहरत् क्रुद्धो बलः प्रहरतां वरः । स वज्रयित्वा यावाणं मदिराकलशं कपिः । १४ ।
गृहीत्वा हेलयामास धूर्तस्तं कोपयन् हसन् । निर्भिद्य कलशं दुष्टो वासांस्यास्फालयद् बलम् । १५ ।

कदर्शकृत्य बलवान् विप्रचक्रे मदोद्धतः। तं तस्याविनयं दृष्ट्वा देशांश्च तदुपद्रुतान्। १६।
 कुब्धो मुसलमादत हलं चारिजिघांसया। द्विविदोऽपि महावीर्यः शालमुद्यम्य पणिना। १७।
 अभ्येत्य तरसा तेन बलं मूर्धन्यताडयत्। तं तु सङ्कर्षणो मूर्ध्नि पतनमचलो यथा। १८।
 प्रतिजग्राह बलवान् सुनन्देनाहनञ्च तम्। मुसलाहतमस्तिष्को विरेजे रक्तधारया। १९।
 गिरिर्यथा गैरिकया प्रहारं नानुचिन्तयन्। पुनरन्यं समुत्क्षिप्य कृत्वा निष्प्रमोजसा। २०।
 तेनाहनत् - सुसंकुब्धस्तं बलः शतधाच्छिनत्। ततोऽन्येन रुषा जग्रे तं चापि शतधाच्छिनत्। २१।
 एवं युध्यन् भगवता भग्रे भग्रे पुनः पुनः। आकृष्य सर्वतो वृक्षान् निर्वृक्षमकरोद वनम्। २२।
 ततोऽमुञ्चच्छिलावर्षं बलस्योपर्यमर्षितः। तत् सर्वं चूर्णयामास लीलया मुसलायुधः। २३।
 स बाहू तालसङ्काशौ मुष्टीकृत्य कपीश्वरः। आसाद्य रोहिणीपुत्रं ताभ्यां वक्षस्यरुजत्। २४।
 यादवेन्द्रोऽपि तं दोर्भ्यां त्यक्त्वा मुसललाङ्गले। जत्रावभ्यर्दयत्कुब्धः सोऽपतद् रुधिरं वमन्। २५।
 चकम्पे तेन पतता सटङ्कः सवनस्पतिः। पर्वतः कुरुशार्दूल वायुना नीरिवाभसि। २६।
 जयशब्दो नमःशब्दः साधु साध्विति चाखरे। सुरसिद्धमुनीन्द्राणामासीत् कुसुमवर्षिणाम्। २७।
 एवं निहत्य द्विविदं जगदव्यतिकरावहम्। संसूयमानो भगवान्जनैः स्वपुरमाविशत्। २८।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे द्विविदवधो नाम सप्तपष्ठितमोऽध्यायः। ६७।

There he saw Balarāma, the protector of the Yadus, most charming in every limb and decked with a garland of lotuses, standing in the midst of a bevy of young girls. (9) Drunk with Vāruṇī, He was singing (beautifully) with eyes swimming in intoxication and with His glowing body looked like an elephant in rut. (10) Climbing up branches of trees the wicked monkey shook the trees and in order to attract notice loudly chattered. (11) Observing the impudence on the part of that monkey, the young girls, who were fond of fun and sportive by nature, loudly laughed. Being under the protection of Śrī Balarāma, they had no fear. (12) Under the very eyes of Balarāma the monkey began to insult the girls by twisting his eyebrows, making wry faces and showing them his hind part. (13) Full of rage, Balarāma, the foremost of warriors, hit him with a slab of stone; the crafty monkey (however) evaded it and (hastily coming down the tree) took up the pot of Vāruṇī and defied Balarāma by grinning at him and provoking him (thereby). The wicked monkey then smashed the pot of Vāruṇī, tore the clothes of the women and caused (infinite) annoyance to Śrī Balarāma and, puffed up with pride, showed disrespect to Him. Observing such defiant attitude of his and remembering how he made havoc of the country, Balarāma got enraged and took up (His weapons) the pestle and plough with intent to kill him. Dwidiva also, being very powerful, lifted up a sal tree with one hand and rushing with (great) vehemence, hit Balarāma with it on His head. The mighty Balarāma, however, remained immovable like a rock and, holding up with one hand the tree even as it came flying towards his head, struck the monkey with His pestle called Sunanda. With his brain crushed by the pestle and covered with a stream of blood, Dwidiva shone like a mountain covered with a solution of red chalk. But, unmindful of the stroke, he in extreme rage pulled out yet another tree and, removing all its leaves, hit Balarāma with it violently. Balarāma split the tree into a hundred pieces. The monkey struck Balarāma with another in great rage; but the latter split that too into a hundred pieces. (14—21) Thus he fought on. Each time a tree was smashed (by Balarāma), the monkey pulled out another. (Thus) uprooting the trees (one by one) he denuded the forest of its trees on all sides. (22) The enraged monkey thereupon began to rain slabs of stone on Balarāma; but these also the latter, as a matter of sport, reduced to powder with His pestle. (23) (Finally) clenching his arms, which were as long as a palm tree, the great monkey went up to Balarāma and struck

Him on the chest with both his fists. (24) (Thereupon) the Lord of the Yadus set aside His pestle and plough and, full of rage, hit him with both His hands on the collar-bone, and the latter fell down (dead) vomiting blood. (25) Parikṣit, like a ship rocking in water through the action of wind, the (whole) mountain with its peaks and trees shook as the monkey fell. (26) In the heavens the gods raised shouts of victory, the Siddhas uttered greetings and great sages loudly said, 'Well done, Well done!' and they all showered flowers on Balarāma. (27) Having thus put an end to Dwīvida, who had been desolating the land, Lord Balarāma returned to Dwārakā (His own city) amidst the praises and acclamations of the people. (28)

Thus ends the sixty-seventh discourse entitled "Dwīvida killed (by Balarāma)," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टषष्टितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXVIII

Triumph of Saṅkarṣaṇa—in the form of dragging Hastināpura

श्रीशुक उवाच

दुर्योधनसुतां राजन् लक्ष्मणां समितिञ्जयः । स्वयंवरस्थामहरत् साम्बो जाम्बवतीसुतः । १ ।
 कौरवाः कुपिता ऊचुर्दुर्विनीतोऽयमर्भकः । कदर्थीकृत्य नः कन्यामकामामहरद् बलात् । २ ।
 बध्नीतेमं दुर्विनीतं किं करिष्यन्ति वृष्णयः । येऽस्मत्प्रसादोपचितान् दत्तां नो भुञ्जते महीम् । ३ ।
 निगृहीतं सुतं श्रुत्वा यद्येच्छन्तीह वृष्णयः । भग्नदर्पाः शमं यान्ति प्राणा इव सुसंयताः । ४ ।
 इति कर्णः शलो भूरियंज्ञकेतुः सुयोधनः । साम्बमारोभिरे बद्धुं कुरुवृद्धानुमोदिताः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parikṣit ! Sāmba, son of Jāmbavatī, was (a great warrior, who was) always victorious in battle. He carried away Lakṣmaṇā, Duryodhana's daughter, from an assembly (of kings) called for the choice of her partner by the princess herself. (1) The Kauravas were enraged at this. They said, "Setting us at naught, this unruly boy has forcibly taken away the girl, who did not even seek his hand. (2) Imprison the wayward boy. What would the Yādavas do, who rule the land conferred on them by us and which has been thriving through our grace. (3) If, on hearing of the captivity of the boy, the Vṛṣṇis (venture to) come here, they will find their pride curbed and will be silenced in the same way as the senses thoroughly controlled (through Prāṇāyāma and other means) are easily tamed." (4) Resolving thus, Karna, Śala, Bhūriśravā, Yajñaketu, and Duryodhana proceeded to capture Sāmba with the approval of the elderly among the Kurus. (5)

दृष्ट्वानुधावतः साम्बो धार्तराष्ट्रान् महारथः । प्रगृह्य रुचिरं चापं तस्थौ सिंह इवकलः । ६ ।
 तं ते जिघृक्षवः क्रुद्धास्तिष्ठ तिष्ठेति भाषिणः । आसाद्य धन्विनो वार्ष्णेः कर्णाग्रण्यः समाकिन् । ७ ।
 सोऽपविद्धः कुरुष्रेष्ठ कुरुभिर्दुन्दनन्दनः । नामृष्यत्तदचिन्त्यार्भः सिंहः क्षुद्रमृगं वि । ८ ।
 विस्फूर्ज्य रुचिरं चापं सर्वान् विव्याध सायकैः । कर्णादीन् षड्धान् वीरांस्तावद्विर्युगपत् पृथक् । ९ ।
 चतुर्भिश्चतुरो वाहानैकैकेन च सारथीन् । रथिनश्च महेष्वासस्तस्य तत्तेऽन्यपूजयन् । १० ।

तं तु ते विरथं चक्रुश्चत्वारश्चतुरो हयान्। एकस्तु सारथिं जघ्ने चिच्छेदायः शरासनम्।११।

तं बद्ध्वा विरथीकृत्य कृच्छ्रेण कुरवो युधि। कुमारं स्वस्य कन्यां च स्वपुरं जयिनोऽविशन्।१२।

Seeing the sons of Dhṛtarāṣṭra (closely) pursuing him, Sāmba, a great car-warrior, took up a fine bow and singly stood defiant like a lion. (6) In their eagerness to capture him, the Kaurava warriors advanced in great rage under the leadership of Karṇa, shouting 'Stop, stop', and approaching him, covered him up with (a shower of) arrows. (7) Parīkṣit, though yet a boy, Sāmba was a son of the incomprehensible Lord (Śrī Kṛṣṇa). Unjustly attacked by the Kurus, he resented it like a lion attacked by the smaller animals. (8) Twanging his splendid bow, he individually hit the six Kuru heroes—advancing against him in their chariots—with six arrows each at one and the same time. (9) With four arrows he hit the four horses (drawing the chariot of each warrior) and with one arrow each he hit the driver as well as the warrior himself. The enemies, who were (each) armed with a large bow, admired this exploit of Sāmba. (10) (All) the (six) Kuru warriors then (attacked him simultaneously and) deprived him of his chariot. Four of them killed his four horses, one in his turn killed his charioteer and the remaining one tore off his bow. (11) (Thus) depriving him of his chariot in the battle, the Kurus bound Sāmba with difficulty and returned triumphantly to their city, carrying him and Duryodhana's daughter, Lakṣmaṇā (with them). (12)

तच्छ्रुत्वा नारदोक्तेन राजन् सञ्जातमन्यवः। कुरुन् प्रत्युद्यमं चक्रुर्ग्रसेनप्रचोदिताः।१३।

सान्त्वयित्वा तु तान् रामः सन्नद्धान् वृष्णिपुङ्गवान्। नैच्छत् कुरूणां वृष्णीनां कलिं कलिमलपहः।१४।

जगाम हास्तिनपुरं रथेनादित्यवर्चसा। ब्राह्मणैः कुलवृद्धैश्च वृत्तश्चन्द्र इव ग्रहैः।१५।

गत्वा राजाह्वयं रामो ब्राह्मणोपवनमास्थितः। उद्धवं प्रेषयामास धृतराष्ट्रं बुभुत्सया।१६।

Parīkṣit, hearing of this from the lips of the (celestial) sage Nārada, the Yadus felt greatly enraged and began their preparations, as directed by (their chief) Ugrasena, to march against the Kauravas. (13) Balarāma, the Destroyer of the impurities of the Kali age did not however approve of a quarrel between the Kurus and the Yadus. Although the Yādava heroes had completed their preparations (for the fight). He pacified them and drove to Hastināpura in a chariot brilliant like the sun, accompanied by a number of Brāhmaṇas and some elders of the Yadu race, like the moon in the midst of planets. (14-15) Reaching Hastināpura, Balarāma stopped in a garden outside the city and sent Uddhava to Dhṛtarāṣṭra with intent to ascertain the intention of the Kauravas. (16)

सोऽभिवन्द्याम्बिकापुत्रं भीष्मं द्रोणं च बाह्लिकम्। दुर्योधनं च विधिवद् राममागतमब्रवीत्।१७।

तेऽतिप्रीतास्तमाकर्ण्य प्राप्तं रामं सुहृत्तमम्। तमर्चयित्वाभिययुः सर्वे मङ्गलपाणयः।१८।

तं सङ्गम्य यथान्यायं गामर्घ्यं च न्यवेदयन्। तेषां ये तत्प्रभावज्ञाः प्रणम्यः शिरसा बलम्।१९।

बन्धून् कुशलिनः श्रुत्वा पृष्ट्वा शिवमनापयम्। परस्परमथो रामो बभ्राषेऽविह्वलं वचः।२०।

उग्रसेनः क्षितिशेरो यद् व आज्ञापयत् प्रभुः। तदव्यग्रधियः श्रुत्वा कुरुध्वं माविलम्बितम्।२१।

यद् यूयं बहवस्त्वेकं जित्वाधर्मेण धार्मिकम्। अबध्नीताथ तन्मूष्ये बन्धूनामैक्यकाम्यया।२२।

(Reaching the Kaurava court,) Uddhava duly saluted Dhṛtarāṣṭra, Bhiṣma, Droṇa, Bahlika (Bhiṣma's uncle) and Duryodhana and informed them of Balarāma's arrival. (17) The Kauravas were greatly delighted to hear of the arrival of Balarāma, their best friend, and, treating Uddhava with honour, all went forth to receive Balarāma, taking festal presents in their hands. (18) They received Balarāma with due honours and offered Him Arghya (water for washing His hands with) and a cow; and such of them as knew His greatness saluted Him with their heads (bent low). (19) When both parties had inquired after each other's welfare and health and learnt that their mutual friends and relations were doing well, Balarāma forthwith spoke these fearless words: (20) "Hear with an attentive mind what the king of kings, the mighty Ugrasena, has enjoined you to do and carry it out without delay. (21) He says: "I hear that many of you combined by unrighteous means to overpower Sāmba who fought single-handed respecting the laws of war, and that you have taken him prisoner. I have, however, tolerated this with intent to maintain harmony among friends and relations. (Therefore, do not extend the quarrel, release Sāmba from captivity and allow him to come to us with his newly wedded wife.)" (22)

वीर्यशौर्यबलौन्नद्धमात्मशक्तिसमं वचः । कुर्वो बलदेवस्य निशम्योचुः प्रकोपिताः । २३ ।

अहो महच्चित्रमिदं कालगत्या दुरत्यया । आरुरुक्षत्युपानद् वै शिरो मुकुटसेवितम् । २४ ।

एते यौनेन सम्बद्धाः सहस्राय्यासनाशनाः । वृष्णयस्तुल्यतां नीता अस्मद्वत्तृणासनाः । २५ ।

चामरव्यजने शङ्खमातपत्रं च पाण्डुरम् । किरीटमासनं शय्यां भुञ्जन्त्यसमुपेक्षया । २६ ।

अलं यदूनां नरदेवलाञ्छनैर्दातुः प्रतीपैः फणिनामिवामृतम् ।

येऽस्मत्सदादोषचिता हि यादवा आज्ञापयन्त्यद्य गतत्रया बत । २७ ।

कथमिन्द्रोऽपि कुरुभिर्भीष्मद्रोणार्जुनादिभिः । अदन्तमवरुन्धीत सिंहप्रसन्निवोरणः । २८ ।

Parikṣit, enraged to hear these haughty words of Baladeva, inspired as they were with a sense of virility, strength and gallantry and (quite) becoming of His own power, the Kauravas replied (as follows): (23) "Oh, what a great wonder it is that by force of Time, so hard to overcome, the shoe actually aspires to mount the head, which is occupied by the crown. (24) Bound by conjugal ties and allowed to share our bed, seat and food, and favoured with a royal throne by us, the Yādavas were exalted to a position of equality with us. (25) They enjoy the use of a chowrie, fan, conch, white umbrella, crown, a royal seat and bed through our sufferance. (26) They should no longer be allowed to retain these royal insignia, which are proving adverse to the giver even as milk offered to a serpent. Elevated (in rank) through our grace, they have now shamelessly begun to command us. What a pity ! (27) Just as a ram dare not seize the prey of a lion, how could even Indra (the celestial king) enjoy what is not offered to him by Bhīṣma, Droṇa, Arjuna and other Kuru chiefs ?" (28)

श्रीशुक उवाच

जन्मबन्धुश्रियोन्नद्धमदास्ते भरतर्षभ । आश्राव्य रामं दुर्वाच्यमसत्थाः पुरमाविशन् । २९ ।

दृष्ट्वा कुरुणां दौःशील्यं श्रुत्वावाच्यानि चाच्युतः । अवोचत् कोपसंरब्धो दुष्प्रेक्ष्यः प्रहसन् मुहुः । ३० ।

नूनं नानामदोन्नद्धाः शान्तिं नेच्छन्त्यसाधवः । तेषां हि प्रशमो दण्डः पशूनां लगुडो यथा । ३१ ।

अहो यदूर् सुसंरब्धान् कृष्णं च कुपितं शनैः । सान्त्वयित्वाहमेतेषां शममिच्छन्निहागतः । ३२ ।

त इमे मन्दमतयः कलहाभिरताः खलाः । तं मामवज्ञाय मुहुर्दुर्भाषान् मानिनोऽब्रुवन् । ३३ ।

नोप्रसेनः किल विभुभोजवृष्ण्यकेश्वरः । शक्रादयो लोकपाला यस्यादेशानुवर्तिनः । ३४ ।

सुधर्माऽऽक्रम्यते येन पारिजातोऽमराङ्घ्रिपः । आनीय भुज्यते सोऽसौ न किलाध्यासनार्हणः । ३५ ।

यस्य पादयुगं साक्षात् श्रीरुपास्तेऽखिलेश्वरी । स नाहंति किल श्रीशो नरदेवपरिच्छदान् । ३६ ।

यस्याङ्घ्रिपङ्कजजोऽखिललोकपालैर्मौल्युतमैर्धृतमुपासिततीर्थतीर्थम् ।

ब्रह्मा भवोऽहमपि यस्य कलाः कलायाः श्रीश्रोद्धहेम चिरमस्य नृपासनं क । ३७ ।

भुञ्जते कुरुभिर्दन्तं भूखण्डं वृष्णयः किल । उपानहः किल वयं स्वयं तु कुरवः शिरः । ३८ ।

अहो ऐश्वर्यमत्तानां मत्तानामिव मानिनाम् । असम्बद्धा गिरो रूक्षाः कः सहेतानुशसिता । ३९ ।

अद्य निष्कारवीं पृथ्वीं करिष्यामीत्यमर्षितः । गृहीत्वा हलमुत्तस्थौ दहन्निव जगत्त्रयम् । ४० ।
लाङ्गलाग्रेण नगरमुद्दिदार्थं गजाह्वयम् । विचक्रव स गङ्गायां प्रहरिष्यन्नमर्षितः । ४१ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Parikṣit, their pedigree, the strength of their kinsmen (Bhīṣma, Arjuna and others) and fortune had served to swell their pride. They cast even ordinary courtesy to the winds and, uttering such harsh words within the hearing of Balarāma, returned to their city. (29) The infallible Balarāma observed their discourtesy and heard their reproaches. Overwhelmed with indignation, and looking (quite) terrific, He burst into convulsions and said:—(30) "Certainly these wicked souls are not in favour of conciliation, elated as they are with pride of various kinds. Chastisement is undoubtedly the best means of softening such people, just as a staff is necessary to tame the beast. (31) Oh! having slowly pacified the Yadus, who were terribly excited, as well as Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was full of rage, I came here seeking to conciliate them. (32) But these slow-witted and wicked fellows are bent on strife. (Hence) these proud people treated Me, though I was so inclined, scornfully and showered abuses on Me. (33) Indeed Ugrasena, whose behests are carried out even by Indra and the other guardians of the world, is no suzerain lord but a mere ruler of the Bhojas, Vṛṣṇis and Andhakas. (34) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who occupies the Sudharmā hall and brought the celestial tree, viz., Pārijāta (from heaven) and enjoys it surely does not deserve the royal throne ! (35) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose feet are adored by Lakṣmī Herself, the mistress of the world, is certainly not entitled to bear the royal insignia ! (36) He, the dust of whose lotus-feet lends sanctity (even) to the sacred waters, which are resorted to by holy men, and is borne on their crowned heads not only by all the guardians of the world (the deities presiding over the various spheres of the universe), but even so by Brahmā and Rudra, (Goddess) Lakṣmī and Myself, who are mere fractions of His fractions, is unworthy of a royal seat ! (37) Indeed, the Yadus rule over a territory bestowed on them by the Kurus ! We are ideed shoes, while the Kurus represent the head ! (38) How is it possible for one, who is capable of dealing (proper) punishment to them, to put up with the harsh and incoherent words of these proud men who are intoxicated with power and are raving like madmen ? (39) I shall rid the earth of the Kurus today." With these words Balarāma took up (His weapon) the plough, and got up enraged, as if He would burn (all) the three worlds. (40) With the point of His plough He lifted up the (whole) city of Hastināpura and began to drag it angrily with a view to throwing it into the Gaṅgā. (41)

जलयानमिवाधूर्णं गङ्गायां नगरं पतत् । आकृष्यमाणालोक्य कौरवा जातसम्भ्रमाः । ४२ ।
तमेव शरणं जग्मुः सकुटुम्बा त्रिजीविषवः । सलक्ष्मणं पुरस्कृत्य साखं प्राञ्जलयः प्रभुम् । ४३ ।
राम रामाखिलाधार प्रभावं न विदाम ते । मूढानां नः कुबुद्धीनां क्षन्तुमर्हस्यनिक्रमम् । ४४ ।
स्थित्युत्पत्त्यप्ययानां त्वमेको हेतुर्निराश्रयः । लोकान् क्रीडनकानीश क्रीडतस्त वदन्ति हि । ४५ ।
त्वमेव मूर्ध्निदमनन्त लीलया भूमण्डलं विभर्षिं सहस्रमूर्धन् ।
अन्ते च यः स्वात्मनि रुद्धविश्वः शेषेऽद्वितीयः परिशिष्यमाणः । ४६ ।

कोपस्तेऽखिलशिक्षार्थं न द्वेषात्तु च मत्सरात् । विभ्रतो भगवन् सत्त्वं स्थितिपालनतत्परः । ४७ ।
नमस्ते सर्वभूतात्मन् सर्वशक्तिधराय्यय । विश्वकर्मन् नमस्तेऽस्तु त्वां वयं शरणं गताः । ४८ ।

Being dragged (into water), Hastināpura began to shake like a boat. When the Kauravas observed that it was falling into the Gaṅgā, they were seized with consternation. (42) Anxious to save their lives, they placed Sāmba and Lakṣmaṇa at their head and, taking their families with them, sought the almighty Balarāma Himself with joined palms for protection. (43) They said, "O Rāma, the Delighter of all, You are (no other than) Śeṣa (the support of the world).

We did not know Your greatness. Be pleased (therefore) to forgive us our transgression, foolish and evil-minded as we are. (44) You are the sole Cause of creation, continuance and destruction (of the universe), (the substratum of all, though) resting on nothing but Your own being. Indeed, O Lord, sages speak of the three worlds as Your toys and Yourself as the Player. (45) O Lord of infinite strength, possessed of a thousand heads ! You alone bear (the weight of) the terrestrial globe on one of Your heads, without any effort, and at the time of final dissolution with draw the universe into Yourself and lie (on the causal waters) as the only remaining substance (Nārāyaṇa) without a second. (46) Lord, You have assumed this Form consisting of pure Sattva (goodness). Your anger is not prompted by hatred or malice but is intended only to teach all and is directed towards the maintenance of the world order. (47) Hail to You, O Inner Controller of all created beings, O omnipotent and immutable Maker of the universe ! We have sought You as our Protector. Salutation be to You (again and again)." (48)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं प्रपन्नैः संविप्रैर्वेपमानायनैर्बलः । प्रसादितः सुप्रसन्नो मा भैष्टेत्यभयं ददौ ॥४९॥
 दुर्योधनः पारिवर्हं कुञ्जरान् षष्टिहायनान् । ददौ च द्वादशशतान्ययुतानि तुरङ्गमान् ॥५०॥
 रथानां षट्सहस्राणि रौक्माणां सूर्यवर्चसाम् । दासीनां निष्ककण्ठीनां सहस्रं दुहितृवत्सलः ॥५१॥
 प्रतिगृह्य तु तत् सर्वं भगवान् सात्वतर्षभः । ससुतः ससुषः प्रागात् सुहृद्भिरभिनन्दितः ॥५२॥
 ततः प्रविष्टः स्वपुरं हलायुधः समेत्य बन्धूननुक्तचेतसः ।
 शशंस सर्वं यदुपुङ्गवानां मध्ये सभायां कुरुषु स्ववेष्टितम् ॥५३॥
 अद्यापि च पुरं होतव्यं सूचयद् रामविक्रमम् । समुन्नतं दक्षिणतो गङ्गायामनुदृश्यते ॥५४॥

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्योऽंशसिंहायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे हास्तिनपुरकर्षणरूप-

सङ्कल्पविजयो नामाष्टषष्टितमोऽध्यायः ॥६८॥

Śrī Śuka went on : Propitiated thus by the Kurus, who had got alarmed to find their city shaking and sought protection with Him, Balarāma felt much pleased and promised them protection asking them to shed their fear. (49) Duryodhana was (very) fond of his daughter (Lakṣmaṇā). He gave away as a wedding present twelve hundred (young) elephants, each sixty years of age, ten thousand horses, six thousand gold chariots glowing like the sun, and a thousand maid-servants adorned with a gold necklace. (50-51) Accepting for His part all those presents, and acclaimed by his friends and relations, Lord Balarāma, the foremost of the Yadus, departed with Sāmba and his bride. (52) Returning to His city (Dwārakā), Balarāma met (all) His devoted friends and relations and in the open court told the Yādava chiefs everything, viz., how he had dealt with the Kurus. (53) Even to this day Hastināpura appears fairly elevated towards the south and sloping down towards the Gaṅgā, (thereby) testifying to this (supreme) exploit of Balarāma. (54)

Thus ends the sixty-eighth discourse entitled " The Triumph of Saṅkaraṣaṇa in the form of dragging Hastināpura", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-saṅkṛhita.

अथैकोनसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXIX

A Glimpse into the household life of Śrī Kṛṣṇa

श्रीशुक उवाच

नरकं निहतं श्रुत्वा तथोद्वाहं च योषिताम् । कृष्णेनेकेन बह्वीनां तद् विदुः स्म नारदः । १ ।
चित्रं वतैतदेकेन वपुषा युगपत् पृथक् । गृहेषु द्व्यष्टसाहस्रं स्त्रिय एक उदावहत् । २ ।
इत्युत्सुको द्वारवतीं देवर्षिर्द्रुमागमत् । पुष्पितोपवनारामद्विजालिकुलनादिताम् । ३ ।
उत्फुल्लेन्दीवराम्भोजकङ्कहारकुमुदोत्पलैः । छुरितेषु सरस्सूचैः कूजितां हंससारसैः । ४ ।
प्रासादलक्ष्मैर्नवभिर्जुष्टां स्फाटिकराजैः । महामरकतप्रख्यैः स्वर्णरत्नपरिच्छदैः । ५ ।
विभक्तस्थपाथचत्वारिण्यैः शालासभाभी रुचिरां सुरालयैः ।
संसिक्तमार्गाङ्गणवीथिदेहलीं पतत्पताकाध्वजवारितातपाम् । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having heard that the demon Naraka had been killed and that Śrī Kṛṣṇa had singly married numerous girls, the sage Nārada felt eager to see how the Lord lived with them (all). (1) He said to himself, " Oh, how wonderful it was that the one Lord should with one personality marry sixteen thousand wives in separate houses all at once. (2) Thus full of curiosity and eager to see (this sport of) the Lord (with his own eyes), the divine sage came to Dwārakā, which was adorned with parks and gardens in full blossom and resounded with the warbling of birds and the humming of bees. (3) It was rendered noisy with the loud crackle of swans and cranes residing in ponds spread over with full-blown lotuses and lilies of various colours. (4) It was studded with nine lakhs of mansions built of crystal and silver, inlaid with shining emeralds and furnished with articles of gold and precious stones. (5) It looked charming with its well-defined roads and other thoroughfares, quadrangles and market-places, sheds for animals, temples and guild halls. Its roads, courtyards, lanes and thresholds of houses were (daily) sprinkled with water. The everflying flags and pennons waved off sunshine. (6)

तस्यामन्तःपुरं श्रीमदचित्तं सर्वधिष्ययैः । हरेः स्वकौशलं यत्र त्वष्टा कात्स्न्येन दर्शितम् । ७ ।
तत्र षोडशभिः सद्यसहजैः समलङ्कृतम् । विवेशकतमं शौरेः पत्नीनां भवनं महत् । ८ ।
विष्टम्भं विद्रुमस्तम्भैर्वैदूर्यफलकोत्तमैः । इन्द्रनीलमयैः कुड्यैर्जगत्या चाहतस्त्रिषा । ९ ।
वितानैर्निर्मितैस्त्वष्ट्रा मुक्तादामविलम्बिभिः । दान्तैरासनपर्यङ्कैर्मण्युत्तमपरिष्कृतैः । १० ।
दासीभिर्निष्ककण्ठीभिः सुवासोभिरलङ्कृतम् । पुष्पिः सकञ्चकोष्णीषसुवस्त्रमणिकुण्डलैः । ११ ।
रत्नप्रदीपनिकरद्युतिभिर्निस्तध्वान्तं विचित्रवलभीषु शिखण्डिनोऽङ्ग ।
नृत्यन्ति यत्र विहितागुरुधूपमक्षैर्निर्यान्तीक्ष्य घनबुद्धय उन्नतः । १२ ।
तस्मिन् समानगुणरूपवयस्सुवेषदासीसहस्रयुतयानुसवं गृह्णिष्या ।
विप्रो ददर्श चमरव्यजनेन रुक्मदण्डेन सात्वतपतिं परिवीजयन्त्या । १३ ।

In that city there was the (most) splendid (richly furnished) row of palaces of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, admired by all the guardians of the world, in the construction of which Viśwakarmā (the celestial architect) had exhibited all his (architectural) skill. (7) The row was adorned with sixteen thousand (beautiful) mansions of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's consorts. Nārada (at random) entered a big palace out of these. (8) Supported on columns of coral, on excellent slabs of Vaidūrya (the cat's eye gem) and walls of sapphire, it was provided with a floor-whose lustre never faded-paved with the same precious stone. (9) It was (further) furnished with canopies made by Viśvakarmā (himself), from which strings of pearls were hanging, as well as with seats and beds made of ivory and inlaid with excellent gems. (10) It was attended by maid-servants adorned with gold necklaces, and dressed in fine clothes, and man-servants wearing coats, turbans, fine clothes and jewelled ear-rings. (11) Dear Paṅkṣit, the darkness in the palace was dispelled by lustre of jewels serving as lights. Seeing fumes of burning aloë-wood issuing out of the air-holes, the peacocks on its picturesque eaves screamed and danced under the impression that clouds were up. (12) Nārada saw Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of Yadus) seated there together with the mistress of the house (Rukmiṇī), who was (herself) fanning the Lord with a chowrie provided with a gold handle, although she was constantly waited upon by thousands of maid-servants, who were equal to her in virtue, beauty, age and neat dress. (13)

तं सन्निरीक्ष्य भगवान् सहस्रोत्थितः श्रीपर्वङ्कतः सकलधर्मभृतां वरिष्ठः ।
 आनम्य पादयुगलं शिरसा किरीटजुष्टेन साञ्जलिवीविशदासने स्वे । १४ ।
 तस्यावनित्य चरणौ तदपः स्वमूर्ध्ना बिभ्रज्जगद्गुरुतरोग्नि सतां पतिर्हि ।
 ब्रह्मण्यदेव इति यद्गुणनाम युक्तं तस्यैव यच्चरणशौचमशेषतीर्थम् । १५ ।
 सम्पूज्य देवऋषिवर्यमृषिः पुराणो नारायणो नरसखो विधिनोदितेन ।
 वाण्याभिभाष्य मितयामृतमिष्टया तं प्राह प्रभो भगवते करवाम हे किम् । १६ ।

Discerning the Devarṣi, the almighty Lord (Śrī Kṛṣṇa), the foremost among the supporters of virtue, immediately rose from the bed of Śrī (Rukmiṇī) and, bowing low with His head, adorned with a crown, at the feet of the sage with joined palms, installed him on His own seat. (14) (Paṅkṣit,) Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the supreme Teacher of the world; having washed His feet the Gaṅgā has become capable of purifying all. The Protector of holy men, He has earned the appropriate title of Brahmanya Deva by virtue of His (singular) devotion to the Brāhmaṇas. The Lord (therefore) washed the feet of the Devarṣi and bore that water on His head. (15) (Thereafter) the Lord, who was (no other than) the most ancient sage Nārāyaṇa, the (eternal) companion of Nara, duly worshipped the celestial sage according to the prescribed rules (of worship) and, addressing him in measured words sweet as nectar, humbly said, " (Pray, tell Me,) My lord, what service we may render your holy self." (16)

नारद उवाच

नैवाद्भुतं त्वयि विभोऽखिललोकनाथे मैत्री जनेषु सकलेषु दमः खलानाम् ।
 निःश्रेयसाय हि जगत्स्थितिरक्षणाभ्यां स्वैरावतार उरुगाय विदाम सुष्ठु । १७ ।
 दृष्टं तवाङ्घ्रियुगलं जनतापवर्गं ब्रह्मादिभिर्हृदि विचिन्त्यमगाद्यबोधैः ।
 संसारकूपपतितोत्तरणावलम्बं ध्यायंश्चराम्यनुगृह्णण यथा स्मृतिः स्यात् । १८ ।

Nārada replied : O almighty Lord of the universe, it is no wonder that You love all Your devotees and chastise the wicked. O glorious Lord, You have come down to earth of Your own accord for the supreme welfare of all as well as for the sake of maintaining and protecting the world. We know this full well. (17) (What a great fortune that) I have been enabled to day to enjoy the sight of Your (blessed) feet, which bring to mankind supreme peace and deliverance, which are ever contemplated at heart by Brahman and others possessed of infinite wisdom—the feet which are (as a matter of fact) like a rope with the help of which men fallen in the deep well of worldly life may rise above it. (Kindly) bless me that (wherever I may be) their thought may (ever) haunt me and I may go about contemplating on them. (18)

ततोऽन्यदाविशद् गेहं कृष्णपत्न्याः स नारदः । योगेश्वरेश्वरस्याङ्गं योगमायाविविक्तया । १९ ।
 दीव्यन्तमक्षैतत्रापि प्रियया चोद्धवेन च । पूजितः परया भक्त्या प्रत्युत्थानासनादिभिः । २० ।
 पृष्ठश्चविदुषेवासौ कदाऽऽयातो भवानिति । क्रियते किं नु पूर्णानामपूर्णे रसदादिभिः । २१ ।
 अथापि ब्रूहि नो ब्रह्मन् जन्मैतच्छोभनं कुरु । स तु विस्मित उत्थाय तूष्णीमन्यदगाद् गृहम् । २२ ।
 तत्राप्यचष्ट गोविन्दं लालयन्तं सुताञ्जिशून् । ततोऽन्यस्मिन् गृहेऽपरश्रम्यजनाय कृतोद्यमम् । २३ ।
 जुह्वन्तं च वितानाग्नीन् यजन्तं पञ्चभिर्मखैः । भोजयन्तं द्विजान् क्वापि भुञ्जानमवशेषितम् । २४ ।
 क्वापि सन्ध्यामुपासीनं जपन्तं ब्रह्म वाग्यतम् । एकत्र चासिचर्मभ्यां चरन्तमसिर्वत्सु । २५ ।
 अश्वैर्गजैः रथैः क्वापि विचरन्तं गदाग्रजम् । क्वचिच्छयानं पर्यङ्के सूयमानं च वन्दिभिः । २६ ।
 मन्त्रयन्तं च कस्मिंश्चिन्निभिश्चोद्धवादिभिः । जलक्रीडारतं क्वापि वारमुत्थाबलवृत्तम् । २७ ।
 कुत्रचिद् द्विजमुख्येभ्यो ददतं गाः स्वलङ्कृताः । इतिहासपुराणानि शृण्वन्तं मङ्गलानि च । २८ ।
 हसन्तं हास्यकथया कदाचित् प्रियया गृहे । क्वापि धर्मं सेवमानमर्थकामौ च कुत्रचित् । २९ ।
 ध्यायन्तमेकमासीनं पुरुषं प्रकृतेः परम् । शश्रूषन्तं गुरुन् क्वापि कामैर्भोगैः सपर्यया । ३० ।
 कुर्वन्तं विग्रहं कैश्चित् सन्धिं चान्यत्र केशवम् । कुत्रापि सह रामेण चिन्तयन्तं सतां शिवम् । ३१ ।
 पुत्राणां दुहितॄणां च काले विध्युपयापनम् । दारैर्वैस्तत्सदृशैः कल्पयन्तं विभूतिभिः । ३२ ।
 प्रस्थापनोपानयनैरपत्यानां महोत्सवान् । वीक्ष्य योगेश्वरेशस्य येषां लोका विसिस्मिरे । ३३ ।
 यजन्तं सकलान् देवान् क्वापि क्रतुभिरुज्जितैः । पूतयन्तं क्वचिद् धर्मं कूपाराममठादिभिः । ३४ ।
 चरन्तं मृगयां क्वापि हयमारुह्य सैन्यवम् । घ्नन्तं ततः पशून् मेध्यान् परीतं यदुपुङ्गवैः । ३५ ।
 अव्यक्तलिङ्गं प्रकृतिवृत्तः पुरगृहादिसु । क्वचिच्चरन्तं योगेशं तत्तद्भावबुभुत्सया । ३६ ।

Dear Parikṣit, then in order to ascertain the power of Yogamāyā (divine glory) of the Lord of all masters of Yoga Nārada entered the mansion of another consort of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (19) (There) he saw Śrī Kṛṣṇa (engaged in) playing at dice with His beloved consort and Uddhava. There also the Lord stood up (at the sight of the sage), offered him a seat and worshipped him with supreme devotion. (20) Then, like one who was unaware of the sage's arrival, He said, "When did you come ? You are (established in the Self and) perfect, whereas we are imperfect beings. What service can we render to you ? (21) All the same, O sage, (be pleased to) command us and bless our (human) birth." Nārada, however, was astonished (when he heard this) and, silently rising (from his seat) moved to another mansion. (22) There too he saw Śrī Kṛṣṇa fondling His infant sons. Again, in another house he found the Lord preparing for His bath. (23) (In this way the Devarṣi found the Lord engaged in different activities, all at once, in all the different mansions). If here He was engaged in pouring oblations in the sacrificial fire, there He was propitiating God through the five-fold daily sacrifices; somewhere He was feeding the Brāhmaṇas, while elsewhere He was partaking of the remaining food (Himself). (24) Here He was performing Sandhyā, and there the silent Japa of Gāyatrī. Here the elder brother of Gada was performing various tricks of fence with the sword and shield, and there He was riding on horses, elephants and chariots. Here He was resting on His bed, and was being eulogized by bards. (25-26) In one mansion, He was conferring with Uddhava and other counsellors, and in another sporting in waters surrounded by courtesans. (27) At one place He was gifting well-adorned cows to Brāhmaṇas and listening to the recitation of auspicious Itihāsas and Purāṇas. (28) In one mansion He was making merry and indulging in light talk with His beloved consort, and in another He was found engaged in the careful observance of Dharma. At a third place Nārada found him (engaged in) devising ways and means of accumulating wealth, and at another (in) enjoying the pleasures of sense permitted for a householder. (29) At one place, the Devarṣi saw Him seated all by Himself contemplating on the Supreme Person beyond Prakṛti, and at another doing service to the elders by offering them the desired objects of enjoyment and worship. (30) At one place, he found Śrī Kṛṣṇa preparing for war against some enemies, and at another discussing terms of peace. Here the Devarṣi saw Him devising-with Balarāma the ways and means of ensuring the well-being of the virtuous, and there performing with grandeur the wedding with due ceremony of sons and daughters with brides and bridegrooms worthy of them. (31-32) Here he found Him conducting festivities on a large scale while sending off a married girl (to her husband) and receiving another (on return from her husband's house). People wondered to see these grand festal activities of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of masters of Yoga). (33) Somewhere he saw Him offering worship to (the various) gods, his own rays, by means of grand sacrifices, and elsewhere observing piety through the construction of wells, gardens and temples etc., for public good. (34) Here he found Him riding on a horse born in the Indus valley, followed by prominent Yādavas, in pursuit of game and killing animals fit for sacrifice in the course of such chase. (35) At one place he saw Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Master of Yoga) moving incognito among the people as well as in the mansions of the palace etc., for ascertaining the inward feelings of their inmates as well as of the people. (36)

अथोवाच हृषीकेशं नारदः प्रहसन्निव । योगमायोदयं वीक्ष्य मानुषीमीयुषो गतिम् । ३७ ।
विदाम योगमायास्ते दुर्दर्शा अपि मायिनाम् । योगेश्वरात्मन् निर्भाता भवत्यादनिपेवया । ३८ ।
अनुजानीहि मां देव लोकांस्ते यशसाऽऽप्नुतान् । पर्यटामि तवोद्भयन् लीलां भुवनपावनीम् । ३९ ।

Having witnessed the display of wonderful powers of Yoga by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, though following the ways of a human being, Nārada spoke to Him as though laughing heartily. (37) O Master of Yoga, we know (the secret of) Your wonderful powers of Yoga which cannot be easily seen even by wielders of Māyā (like Brahmā) and which have been revealed to our mind through the worship of Your lotus-feet. (38) Pray, give me leave, O Lord, to go, so that I may move about the (fourteen) worlds flooded with Your glory, singing loudly the story of Your pastimes, which is capable of purifying the (whole) world. (39)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

ब्रह्मन् धर्मस्य वक्ताहं कर्ता तदनुमोदिता । तच्छिक्षयैल्लोकमिममास्थितः पुत्र मा खिदः । ४० ।

The Lord replied : O sage, I am not only the Teacher of Dharma, but I practise it Myself, and lend countenance to (those who practise) it. I follow the path of Dharma in order to teach the world (by My example). (Therefore,) do not get perplexed, My son, (at the sight of this My Yogamāyā). (40)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्याचरन्तं सद्धर्मान् पावनान् गृहमेधिनाम् । तमेव सर्वगेहेषु सन्तमेकं ददर्श ह । ४१ ।
कृष्णस्यानन्तवीर्यस्य योगमायामहोदयम् । मुहुर्दृष्ट्वा ऋषिभूदं विस्मितो जातकौतुकः । ४२ ।
इत्यर्थकामधर्मेषु कृष्णेन श्रद्धितात्मना । सभ्यक सभाजितः प्रीतस्तमेवानुस्मरन् ययौ । ४३ ।
एवं मनुष्यपदवीमनुवर्तमानो नारायणोऽखिलभवाय गृहीतशक्तिः ।
रेमेऽङ्ग षोडशसहस्रवराङ्गनां सत्रीडसौहृदनिरीक्षणहासजुष्टः । ४४ ।

यानीह विश्वविलयोद्भववृत्तिहेतुः कर्माण्यन्यविषयाणि हरिश्चकार ।

यस्त्वङ्ग गायति शृणोत्यनुमोदते वा भक्तिर्भवेद् भगवति ह्यपवर्गमार्गे । ४५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उन्मार्धे कृष्णगार्हस्थ्यदर्शनं नामैकोनसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः । ६९ ।

Śrī Suka went on : Thus, they say, the Devarṣi saw one and the same Śrī Kṛṣṇa (present in all the mansions of His consorts) performing the pious duties of householders which lead to their purification. (41) Seeing again and again, the vast display of the wonderful Yogic power of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who had infinite prowess, the curious sage was filled with astonishment. (42) Duly honoured by Śrī Kṛṣṇa who (behaved as though He) made much of (the first three objects of human pursuit viz.,) Dharma (virtue), Artha (wealth) and Kāma (enjoyment of life), the Devarṣi felt (much) delighted and went away constantly thinking of Him alone. (43) For the good of the world O dear one, Lord Nārāyaṇa takes the help of His (inconceivable) Yogamāyā and begins to sport as a human being. Greeted with their bashful looks and friendly smiles by (more than) sixteen thousand noble wives, the Lord thus delightfully spent His days (at Dwārakā). (44) O Parikṣit ! he who for his part celebrates the inimitable exploits performed by Śrī Kṛṣṇa—who is the (supreme) Cause of the evolution, continuance and dissolution of the universe—or heave of them, or views with approbation their singing and hearing, attains (loving) devotion to the almighty Lord, the Bestower of Liberation. (45)

Thus ends the sixty-ninth discourse entitled, "A Glimpse into the household life of Śrī Kṛṣṇa," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā

अथ सप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXX

Śrī Kṛṣṇa's Daily Routine; Kings taken captive by Jarāsandha send their Messenger to Śrī Kṛṣṇa

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथोषस्पृवृत्तायां कुक्कुटान् कूजतोऽशपन् । गृहीतकण्ठ्यः पतिभिर्माधव्यो विरहातुराः । १ ।
वयांस्यरुक्नुवन् कृष्णं बोधयन्तीव वन्दिनः । गायत्वलङ्घुनिन्द्राणि मन्दारवनवायुभिः । २ ।
मुहूर्तं तं तु वैदर्भी नामृष्यदतिशोभनम् । परिस्पृणविश्लेषात् प्रियबाह्वन्तरं गताः । ३ ।
ब्राह्मे मुहूर्तं उत्थाय वार्युपस्पृश्य माधवः । दर्ध्यां प्रसन्नकरण आत्मानं तमसः परम् । ४ ।

एकं स्वयंज्योतिरनन्यमव्ययं स्वसंस्थया नित्यनिरस्तकल्पम् ।

ब्रह्मास्थमस्योद्भवनाशहेतुभिः स्वशक्तिभिर्लक्षितभावनिवृत्तिम् । ५ ।

अथाप्तोऽम्भस्यमले यथाविधि क्रियाकलापं परिधाय वाससी ।

चकार सन्ध्योपगमादि सप्तमो हुतानलो ब्रह्म जजाप वायतः । ६ ।

उपस्थायाकमुद्यन्तं तर्पयित्वाऽत्मनः कलाः । देवानुषीन् पितृन् वृद्धान् विप्रानभ्यर्च्य चात्मवान् । ७ ।

धेनूनां रुक्मशृङ्गीणां साध्वीनां मौक्तिकस्रजाम् । पयस्विनीनां गृष्टीनां सवत्सानां सुवाससाम् । ८ ।

ददौ रूप्यखुराग्राणां क्षौमाजिनतिलैः सह । अलङ्कृत्येभ्यो विप्रेभ्यो बद्धं बद्धं दिने दिने । ९ ।

गोविप्रदेवतावृद्धगुरुन् भूतानि सर्वशः । नमस्कृत्यात्मसम्भूतीर्मङ्गलानि समस्पृशत् । १० ।

आत्मानं भूषयामास नरलोकविभूषणम् । वासोभिर्भूषणैः स्वीर्यैर्दिव्यस्त्रगनुलेपनैः । ११ ।

अवेक्ष्याज्यं तथाऽऽदर्शं गोवृषद्विजदेवताः । कामांश्च सर्ववर्णानां पौरान्तःपुरचारिणाम् ।

प्रदाप्य प्रकृतीः कामैः प्रतोष्य प्रत्यनन्दत । १२ ।

संविभज्याग्रतो विप्रान् सक्ताम्बूलानुलेपनैः । सुहृदः प्रकृतीर्दारानुपायुङ्क्त ततः स्वयम् । १३ ।

तावत् सूत उपानीय स्यन्दनं परमाद्भुतम् । सुग्रीवाद्यैर्हयैर्युक्तं प्रणम्यावस्थितोऽग्रतः । १४ ।

गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणी सारथेस्तमथारुहत् । सात्यक्युद्धवसंयुक्तः पूर्वाद्रिमिव भास्करः । १५ ।

ईक्षितोऽन्तःपुरस्त्रीणां - सब्रीडप्रेमवीक्षितैः । कृच्छ्राद् विसृष्टो निरगाज्जातहासो हरन् मनः । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : As the dawn approached, Śrī Kṛṣṇa's wives each sleeping with the arms of her husband about her neck would reproach the cocks that crowed for fear of being separated from Him. (1) Roused from sleep by the breeze blowing through the Mandāra grove in the midst of humming bees, birds sang loudly like bards as if in order to wake up Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (2) Clasped between His arms Rukmiṇī would not welcome this sacred hour for fear of being torn away from His embrace. (3) Waking up about two hours and a half before sunrise, Śrī Kṛṣṇa would first wash His hands and feet and rinse His mouth, and with a serene mind meditate on the Self beyond (the realm of) Prakṛti, that is one without a second, self-luminous and indestructible, which is by virtue of its own nature eternally free from the taint of Avidyā (nescience), which goes by the name of Brahma, whose existence and blissful nature are indicated by His own potencies (under the names of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra) that are responsible for the appearance (maintenance) and destruction of the universe. (4-5) After this Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the foremost among the righteous) would take a plunge bath in pure water, put on two (clean) pieces of cloth, perform according to the injunctions of the scriptures Sandhyā and other (obligatory) rites and having poured oblations into the sacred fire, would silently repeat the (sacred) Gāyatrī-Mantra. (6) He would stand before the rising sun and offer prayers to the sun-god and handfuls of water to the gods, Ṛsis and manes, His own rays. Then having worshipped the elders of His family as well as Brāhmaṇas with due ceremony, the vigilant Lord would give away from day to day, to well-adorned Brāhmaṇas together with silk clothes, deer-skin and sesamum seeds, thirteen thousand and eighty-four freshly calved and beautifully caparisoned cows, docile by nature, yielding abundant milk and accompanied with their calf, with their horns plated with gold, and hoofs with silver, and with their necks decked with pearl necklaces. (7-9) He would then salute cows, Brāhmaṇas, gods, elders, preceptors and all created beings, who were but manifestations of His own Self, and would duly touch auspicious things. (10) He would then adorn Himself, the one ornament of the human world, with clothes and ornaments, peculiarly His own, as well as with excellent garlands and pigments. (11) (Then,) looking into (liquid) ghee and a mirror, He would (first) have a look at the cows and bulls, Brāhmaṇa and (images of) gods. Thereafter He would take delight in causing boons to be conferred on all classes of people dwelling in the city and in the gynaeceum and gratifying His other subjects by granting their desires. (12) Presenting first (of all) the Brāhmaṇas, (then) His friends and relations, (then) His ministers and counsellors, and (then) His consorts with garlands, betel leaves and pigments, He would last of all accept them for Himself. (13) By that time His charioteer, (Dāruka) would bring His most wonderful chariot drawn by Sugrīva and other horses and, saluting the Lord, would stand before Him. (14) Holding the charioteer's hands in His own hand, Śrī Kṛṣṇa would then (proceed to) mount the chariot accompanied by Sātyaki and Uddhava, even as the sun ascends the eastern hills. (15) Watched with bashful and affectionate glances by the ladies of the gynaeceum and reluctantly permitted by them to go, the Lord would smile at them (for a moment) and, thus captivating their heart, would sally forth (to the Council Hall). (16)

सुधर्माख्यां सभां सर्वैर्वृष्णिभिः परिवारितः । प्राविशद् यन्निविष्टानां न सन्त्यङ्ग षडूर्मयः । १७ ।

तत्रोपविष्टः परमासने विभुर्बभौ स्वभासा ककुभोऽवभासयन् ।

वृत्तो नृसिंहैर्यदुभिर्यदूतमो यथोद्धराजो दिवि तारकागणैः । १८ ।

तत्रोपमन्त्रिणो राजन् नानाहास्यरसैर्विभुम् । उपतस्थुर्नटाचार्या नर्तक्यस्ताण्डवैः पृथक् । १९ ।

मृदङ्गवीणामुरजवेणुतालदस्वनेः । ननुतुर्जगुस्तुष्टुवुश्च सूतमागधवन्दिनः । २० ।

तत्राहुर्ब्राह्मणाः केचिदासीना ब्रह्मवादिनः । पूर्वेषां पुण्ययशसां राज्ञां चाकथयन् कथाः । २१ ।

Parikṣit, surrounded by all the Yadus, Śrī Kṛṣṇa would (then) enter the Hall bearing the name of Sudharmā, the inmates of which would not experience (for the time being) the six waves of existence (viz., hunger and thirst, grief and delusion, old age and death). (17) Seated on an exalted throne, illuminating (all) the quarters with His own splendour and surrounded by the lions of Yadu's race, the almighty Lord, the foremost of the Yadus, shone like the moon in the midst of hosts of stars in the heavens. (18) There the jesters would entertain the Lord with amusements of various kinds, and (even so) master dancers and dancing girls severally with (their) dances. (19) Sūtas, Māgadhas and Vāndis would dance, sing and panegyrize the Lord in accompaniment to clay tomtoms, lutes, tambourines, flutes, cymbals and conchs. (20) Seated there certain Brāhmaṇas, skilled in exposition, would expound Vedic Mantras, while others would narrate the stories of ancient kings of sacred renown. (21)

तत्रैकः पुरुषो राजन्नागतोऽपूर्वदर्शनः । विज्ञापितो भगवते प्रतीहारैः प्रवेशितः । २२ ।

स नमस्कृत्य कृष्णाय परेशाय कृताञ्जलिः । राज्ञामावेदयद् दुःखं जरासन्धनिरोधजम् । २३ ।

ये च दिग्विजये तस्य सन्नतिं न ययुर्नृपाः । प्रसह्य रुद्धास्तेनासन्नयुते द्वे गिरिव्रजे । २४ ।

कृष्ण कृष्णाप्रमेयात्मन् प्रपन्नभयभञ्जन । वयं त्वां शरणं यामो भवभीताः पृथग्विधैः । २५ ।

लोको विकर्मनिरतः कुशले प्रमत्तः कर्मण्ययं त्वदुदिते भवदर्चने स्वे ।

यस्तावदस्य बलवानिह जीविताशां सद्यस्छिनत्यनिमिषाय नमोऽस्तु तस्मै । २६ ।

लोके भवाञ्जगदिनः कलयावतीर्णः सद्रक्षणाय खलनिग्रहणाय चान्यः ।

कश्चित् त्वदीयमतिर्याति निदेशमीश किं वा जनः स्वकृतमृच्छति तन्न विद्यः । २७ ।

स्वप्नायितं नृपसुखं परतन्त्रमीश शश्वद्धयेन मृतकेन धुरं वहामः ।

हिक्वा तदात्मनि सुखं त्वदनीहलभ्यं क्लिश्यामहेऽतिकृपणास्तव माययेह । २८ ।

तत्रो भवान् प्रणतशोकहराङ्घ्रियुग्मो बन्धान् विरुद्धक्ष्व मगधाह्वयकर्मपाशात् ।

यो भूभुजोऽयुतमतङ्गजवीर्यमेको बिभ्रद् रुरोध भवने मृगराडिवावीः । २९ ।

यो वै त्वया द्विनवकृत्व उदात्तचक्र भग्नो मृधे खलु भवत्तमनन्तवीर्यम् ।

जित्वा नृलोकनिरतं सकृद्दृढदर्पो युष्मत्प्रजा रुजति नोऽजित तद् विधेहि । ३० ।

(One day) O king, a certain person, never seen before, made his appearance there. He was announced to the Lord by the porters (on duty) and ushered into His presence. (22) The man bowed to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Lord, with joined palms and communicated to Him the suffering of certain kings caused by their incarceration at the hands of Jarāsandha. (23) (Parikṣit,) twenty thousand and odd kings who did not pay homage to him, during his (expeditions for) the conquest of the (four) quarters, had been forcibly detained by him at (his capital) Girivraja (the modern Giridih). (24) (The new comer conveyed their message to Śrī Kṛṣṇa in the following words—) "O Kṛṣṇa, the Embodiment of Truth, Knowledge and Bliss, whose personality is immeasurable and who destroy the fear of those who have taken refuge in You! we, who are (yet) possessed of a differential outlook and are afraid of (the cycle of) birth and death, resort to You for protection. (25) (O Lord!) the generality of people on earth are intensely addicted to prohibited acts or those actuated by self-interest and are indifferent to Your worship, which is the only auspicious act enjoined on them by You. (Dogging their foot-steps) in the form of all powerful and ever vigilant Time in the meantime (however,) You suddenly uproot their hope of life. We bow to You (as such). (26) You are the Lord of the Universe, who have appeared on earth with Your part manifestation (viz., Balarāma) for protecting the virtuous and chastising the wicked. O Lord, we are (therefore) at a loss to understand how anyone other than You (be it Jarāsandha or anyone else) can transgress Your command (and tyrannize over us). Nor do we understand how men who have taken refuge in You (like us) can reap the fruit of their past actions (in the form of suffering). (27) O Lord, (we are aware that) the joy of rulership is dependent on others and is as unreal as a dream. (Moreover,) it is with this body, which is virtually dead and is subject to constant fear, that we bear (so many) burdens (of the world), having abandoned the joy existing in the self and obtained from You by disinterested people. Foolish as we are, we are suffering in this world due to Your Māyā. (28) O Lord, Your feet remove the grief of those who fall at them. Therefore, kindly release us, who are bound with the rope of Karma in the form of this Jarāsandha. Possessing the strength of ten thousand elephants himself he has imprisoned us kings in his palace even as the lion would round up (a flock of) sheep. (29) O wielder of the discus, You fought Jarāsandha eighteen times, vanquishing him in all battles except one. We know that Your power and strength are unlimited; and yet, behaving as You did like a human being, You allowed Yourself to be defeated by him once. This has aggravated his insolence. He now persecutes us knowing us to be Your servants. O invincible Lord, now do whatever You deem fit under the circumstances." (30)

दूत उवाच

इति मागधसंरुद्धा भवद्दर्शनकाङ्क्षिणः । प्रपन्नाः पादमूलं ते दीनानां शं विधीयताम् । ३१ ।

The messenger said : (Lord,) with words these the kings imprisoned by Jarāsandha have sought shelter under Your feet, eager to see You. May those helpless kings be blessed (with Your presence). (31)

श्रीशुक उवाच

राजदूते ब्रुवत्येवं देवर्षिः परमद्युतिः । विभ्रत् पिङ्गजटाभारं प्रादुरासीद् यथा रविः । ३२ ।

तं दृष्ट्वा भगवान् कृष्णः सर्वलोकेश्वरेश्वरः । ववन्द उत्थितः शीर्ष्णां ससभ्यः सानुगो मुदा । ३३ ।

सभाजयित्वा विधिवत् कृतासनपरिग्रहम् । बभाषे सूनृतैर्वाक्यैः श्रद्धया तर्पयन् मुनिम् । ३४ ।

अपि स्विदद्य लोकानां त्रयाणामकुतोभयम् । ननु भूयान् भगवतो लोकान् पर्यटतो गुणः । ३५ ।

न हि तेऽविदितं किञ्चिल्लोकेष्वीश्वरकर्तृषु । अथ पुच्छामहे युष्मान् पाण्डवानां चिकीर्षितम् । ३६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : (Pāṇṣit!) when the messenger of the kings was thus delivering the message (of the kings), the celestial sage (Nārada) appeared (on the scene) wearing a mass of golden matted locks, and dazzling like the sun. (32) Seeing the sage the almighty Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the suzerain Lord of all the worlds, rose (from His seat) with His councillors and attendants and joyfully bowed to the Devarṣi with His head bent low. (33) The Devarṣi having taken his seat, the Lord worshipped him with due honour and, bringing delight to the sage with His reverence spoke to him in the following sweet words. (34) "O sage, are all the three worlds now free from fear? Your constantly going about the three worlds surely constitutes a great gain to us (inasmuch as we receive all the news of the world through you). (35) Nothing in (all) the worlds of God's creation is unknown to you. We, therefore, enquire of you what the Pāṇḍavas and others intend to do (at present)." (36)

श्रीनारद उवाच

दृष्ट्वा मया ते बहुशो दुरत्यया माया विभो विश्वसृजश्च मायिनः ।

भूतेषु भूमंश्चरतः स्वशक्तिभिर्वहेरिवच्छत्ररुचो न मेऽद्भुतम् । ३७ ।

तवेहितं कोऽर्हति साधु वेदितुं स्वमाययेदं सृजतो नियच्छतः ।

यद् विद्यमानात्मतयावभासते तस्मै नमस्ते स्वविलक्षणायने । ३८ ।

जीवस्य यः संसरतो विमोक्षणं न जानतोऽर्थवहाच्छरीरतः ।

लीलावतारैः स्वयशःप्रदीपकं प्राज्वालयत्त्वा तमहं प्रपद्ये । ३९ ।

अथाप्याश्रावये ब्रह्म नरलोकविडम्बनम् । राज्ञः पैतृषुसेयस्य भक्तस्य च चिकीर्षितम् । ४० ।

यक्षयति त्वां मखेन्द्रेण राजसूयेन पाण्डवः । पारमेष्ठ्यकामो नृपतिस्तद् भवाननुमोदताम् । ४१ ।

तस्मिन् देव क्रतुवरे भवन्तं वै सुरादयः । दिदृक्षवः समेष्यन्ति राजानश्च यशस्विनः । ४२ ।

श्रवणात् कीर्तनाद् ध्यानात् पूज्यन्तेऽन्तेवसायिनः । तव ब्रह्ममयस्येश किमुतेक्षाभिर्मर्शिनः । ४३ ।

यस्यामलं दिवि यशः प्रथितं रसायां भूमौ च ते भुवनमङ्गल दिग्वितानम् ।

मन्दाकिनीति दिवि भोगवतीति चाधो गङ्गेति चेह चरणाम्बु पुनरिति विश्वम् । ४४ ।

Śrī Nārada replied : O all-pervading Infinite Lord, You are such a great magician that even conjurers like Brahmā (the creator of the world) are unable to penetrate (the veil of) Your Mayā. Lord, You abide in all created beings by virtue of Your (inscrutable) potencies even as fire remains latent in every log of wood. I have witnessed Your Mayā more than once, hence Your inquiry about the Pāṇḍavas does not appear to me as something out of the common. (37) (Lord,) You bring forth and destroy this universe by Your own Māyā; and by Your Māyā it appears as existent (though without any reality). Who can know Your intentions full well ? You are inconceivable by nature; my salutation be to You. (38) (Tied down to the body) the soul moves on the whirligig of birth and death and knows not the way to deliverance from this sheath, the source of (all) evil. Descending on earth in so many Forms by way of sport, You kindle the lamp of Your glory (with the help of which he may free himself from the bondage of the body). Lord, I resort to You for protection. (39) The Supreme Spirit as You are, You nevertheless imitate the ways of the human world; therefore I shall communicate to You what Your cousin and loving devotee, king Yudhiṣṭhira, intends to do. (40) The Pāṇḍava king enjoys on this very earth all the enjoyments of the abode of Brahmā (the highest Paradise). He is (absolutely) desireless. And yet he would worship You through the supreme sacrifice known as Rājasūya. May You be pleased to give Your consent to his proposal. (41) Eager to see You, the (principal) gods, Ṛṣis and illustrious kings too will assemble in that grand sacrifice. (42) Lord, You are an embodiment of the Supreme Spirit; even the low-born are hallowed by hearing of Your glories, singing Your praises and contemplating on Your virtues, to say nothing of those who see and touch Your person. (43) Lord, whose very presence on this earth constitutes a blessing for the three worlds, Your spotless glory envelops all the quarters and is diffused on earth, in heaven as well as in the subterranean regions, even as the waters washing Your feet hallow the (entire) universe under the name of Mandākinī in heaven, Bhogavatī in the subterranean regions and the Gaṅgā on earth. (44)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तत्र तेष्वामपक्षेष्वाङ्गुलसु विजिगीषया । वाचः पेशः सम्यन् भृत्यमुद्धवं प्राह केशवः । ४५ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : (Parikṣit !) the clansmen of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, assembled there, seized as they were with the desire to conquer Jarāsandha, did not receive with approbation the words of the sage. Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva), smilingly spoke to His devotee Uddhava in sweet words (as below). (45)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

त्वं हि नः परमं चक्षुः सुहृन्मन्त्रार्थतत्त्ववित् । तथात्र ब्रूहानुष्ठेयं श्रद्धयः करवाम तत् । ४६ ।

The glorious Lord said : (Uddhava !) you are Our disinterested friend and know the secret of what should be decided upon through deliberation. Indeed you are our supreme eye (as it were). Now tell us what should be done under the circumstances. We (fully) rely on you and shall act upon your advice. (46)

इत्युपामन्त्रितो भर्त्रा सर्वज्ञेनापि सुधवत् । निदेशं शिरसाऽऽधाय उद्धवः प्रत्यभाषत । ४७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे भगवद्गान्धर्वचारे सप्ततितमोऽध्यायः ॥७०॥

Questioned thus by the Master, who, though omniscient, was behaving like an ignorant man, Uddhava received His command with his head bent low and replied (as below). (47)

Thus ends the seventieth discourse bearing on the deliberations about the Lord's departure in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXI

Śrī Kṛṣṇa goes to Indraprastha

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युरीरितमाकर्ण्य देवर्षेरूद्धवोऽब्रवीत् । सभ्यानां मतमाज्ञाय कृष्णस्य च महामतिः । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit !) hearing these words (of the Lord), Uddhava who was possessed of great wisdom, considered the statement of the celestial sage Nārada and the opinion of the councillors as well as of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Himself), and spoke thus. (1)

उद्धव उवाच

यदुक्तमृषिणा देव साचिव्यं यक्षयतस्त्वया । कार्यं पैतृवृत्तस्य रक्षा च शरणैषिणाम् । २ ।

यष्टव्यं राजसूयेन दिक्कक्रजयिना विभो । अतो जरासुतजय उभयार्थो मतो मम । ३ ।

अस्माकं च महानर्थो ह्येतैरेव भविष्यति । यशश्च तव गोविन्द राज्ञो बद्धान् विमुञ्चतः । ४ ।

स वै दुर्विषहो राजा नागायुतसमो बले । बलिनामपि चान्येषां भीमं समबलं विना । ५ ।

द्वैतये स तु जेतव्यो मा शताक्षौहिणीयुतः । ब्रह्मण्योऽभ्यर्थितो विप्रैर्न प्रत्याख्याति कर्हिचित् । ६ ।

ब्रह्मवेषधरो गत्वा तं भिक्षेत वृकोदरः । हनिष्यति न सन्देहो द्वैतये तव सन्निधौ । ७ ।

निमित्तं परमीशस्य विश्वसर्गनिरोधयोः । हिरण्यगर्भः शर्वश्च कालस्यारूपिणस्तव । ८ ।

गायन्ति ते विशदकर्म गृहेषु देव्यो राज्ञां स्वशत्रुवधमात्मविमोक्षणं च ।

गोप्यश्च कुक्षरपतेर्जनकात्मजायाः पित्रोश्च लब्धशरणा मुनयो वयं च । ९ ।

जरासन्धवधः कृष्ण भूर्यथायोपकल्पते । प्रायः पाकविपाकेन तव चाभिमतः क्रतुः । १० ।

Uddhava submitted : Lord, as recommended by the Devarṣi, You should (certainly) help Your cousin, who intends to perform the Rājasūya sacrifice, and should also protect those who seek Your protection. (2) A Rājasūya sacrifice (however) is capable of being performed, O almighty Lord ! only by one who has conquered all the quarters. I am therefore driven to the conclusion that both these objects, can be gained by the overthrow of Jarāsandha. (3) Indeed great will be our advantage, O Protector of cows, if we simply succeed in accomplishing this; and Your restoring the imprisoned kings to freedom will bring glory to You. (4) Possessing (as he does) the strength of ten thousand elephants, king Jarāsandha is as a matter of fact not very easy to resist even for giants other than Bhīma, who is his equal in strength. (5) He should, however, be vanquished in a duel and not otherwise; for he has an army consisting of a hundred Akṣauhīnīs. He is a devotee of the Brāhmaṇas and never spurns the request of Brāhmaṇas. (6) (Therefore,) let Bhīma approach him in the guise of a Brāhmaṇa and ask of him the boon of a single combat. In Your presence he will no doubt succeed in killing him in a duel. (7) Lord, You are the almighty, formless Time. The creation and destruction of the universe take place through Your power. Brahmā and Śaṅkara are mere instruments (in carrying out the design). (8) (After the destruction of Jarāsandha) the consorts of the kings (imprisoned by him) would sing in their (respective) homes of Your glorious act of destroying their common enemy and bringing about the release of their (respective) husbands (who are dear to them as their own selves), even as the cowherdesses (of Vraja) sing of Your having delivered them (from the clutches of the demon Śaṅkhacūḍa), the sages who have taken refuge in You celebrate the rescue of the king of elephants and of Sitā (the Daughter of king Janaka), and we sing of Your having released Your parents (from Kāṁsa's captivity). (9) Thus, O Kṛṣṇa, the destruction of Jarāsandha will serve many a great purpose. As the merits of the imprisoned kings and the sins of Jarāsandha are going to bear fruit thereby, the performance of the Rājasūya sacrifice is in a large measure liked by You also. (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युद्धववचो राजन् सर्वतोभद्रमच्युतम् । देवर्षिर्यदुवृद्धाश्च कृष्णश्च प्रत्यपूजयन् । ११ ।
अथादिशत् प्रयाणाय भगवान् देवकीसुतः । भृत्यान् दारुकजैत्रादीननुज्ञाय गुरुन् विभुः । १२ ।
निर्गमय्यावरोधान् स्वान् ससुतान् सपरिच्छदान् । सङ्कर्षणमनुज्ञाय यदुराजं च शत्रुहन् ।
सुतोपनीतं स्वरथमारुहद् गरुडध्वजम् । १३ ।

ततो रथद्विषभटसादिनायकैः करालया परिवृत्त आत्मसेनया ।
मृदङ्गभेर्यानकशङ्खगोमुखैः प्रघोषघोषितककुभो निराक्रमत् । १४ ।
नृवाजिकाञ्जनशिखिकाभिरच्युतं सहात्मजाः पतिमनु सुव्रता ययुः ।
वराभ्यराभरणाविलेपनस्त्रजः सुसंवृता नृभिरसिचर्मपाणिभिः । १५ ।
नरोद्गुणमहिषखराश्चतयनः करेणुभिः परिजनवारयोधितः ।
स्वलङ्कृताः कटकटिकम्बलाम्बराद्युपस्करा ययुरधिगुप्य सर्वतः । १६ ।
बलं बृहदध्वजपटछत्रचामरैर्वरायुधाभरणकिरीटवर्मभिः ।
दिवांशुभिस्तुमुलरवं बभौ रवेद्यथार्णवः क्षुभिततिमिङ्गिलोर्मिभिः । १७ ।
अथो मुनिर्यदुपतिना सभाजितः प्रणम्य तं हृदि विदधद् विहायसा ।
निशम्य तदव्यवसितमाह्वारहोणो मुकुन्दसन्दर्शननिर्वृतेन्द्रियः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Parikṣit, the aforesaid counsel of Uddhava was faultless and good in every respect. The Devarṣi, the elderly Yādavas and Śrī Kṛṣṇa too approved of it. (11) Now, with the approval of elders (Vasudeva and others) the almighty Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa

(Son of Devakī) ordered His servants—Dārūka, Jaitra and others—to prepare for the journey. (12) With the permission of Ugrasena and Balarāma, O destroyer of foes, the Lord sent His consorts and sons with the retinue and luggage (in advance) and mounted His own chariot brought by Dārūka and distinguished by its banner bearing the device of Garuḍa. (13) He set out with His formidable army—consisting of chariots, elephants, cavalry and footmen and led by its numerous generals—filling the quarters with the tumultuous sound produced by clay tomtoms, kettle-drums, tabors, conchs and trumpets. (14) Clad in the best attire and adorned with ornaments, sandal-paste and garlands and strongly guarded by men armed with a sword and shield, devoted consorts of the Lord (Rukmiṇī and others) with their children followed their husband, the immortal Lord, in litters, chariots drawn by horses and gold palanquins. (15) Then followed (the trains of) servants' wives and courtesans, all richly adorned, with portable shelters of mats, woollen blankets and clothes and other appurtenances secured on all sides on oxen, buffaloes, donkeys and mules and themselves journeying in carts or litters or on the back of camels and elephants. (16) That huge army, full of tumultuous noises, shone during the daytime with its lofty flags, umbrellas, chowries, excellent weapons, ornaments, crowns and armours, under the rays of the sun, like the sea with its agitated waves and whales. (17) The sage (Nārada) was delighted at heart at the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation). Honoured by the Lord of the Yadus and hearing His decision, the sage bowed to Him. The Lord offered him worship at the time of his departure and the sage left Dvārakā by air treasuring the Lord's Form in his heart. (18)

राजदूतमुवाचेदं भगवान् प्रीणयन् गिरा । मा भेषट दूत भद्रं वो घातयिष्यामि मागधम् । १९ ।

इत्युक्तः प्रस्थितो दूतो यथावदवदन्नुपान् । तेषां सन्दर्शनं शौरिः प्रत्येक्षन् यन्मुमुक्षुः । २० ।

Then, turning to the messenger of the imprisoned kings, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa spoke to him in pleasing words: "Messenger, go and tell the kings that they should fear no more. Causing the death of Jarāsandha, I shall bring them freedom soon." (19) Thus commanded by the Lord, the messenger departed and duly conveyed His message to the kings, who, yearning for their release, eagerly looked forward to Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's appearance on the spot. (20)

आनर्तसौवीरमरूस्तीर्त्वा विनशानं हरिः । गिरीन् नदीरतीयाय पुरग्रामब्रजकारान् । २१ ।

ततो दृषद्वर्तिं तीर्त्वा मुकुन्दोऽथ सरस्वतीम् । पञ्चालानथ मत्स्यांश्च शक्रप्रस्थमथागमत् । २२ ।

तमुपागतमाकर्ण्य प्रीतो दुर्दर्शनं नृणाम् । अजातशत्रुनिरगात् सोपाध्यायः सुहृद्वृतः । २३ ।

गीतवादित्रघोषेण ब्रह्मघोषेण भूयसा । अभ्ययात् स हृषीकेशं प्राणाः प्राणमिवादृतः । २४ ।

दृष्ट्वा विकल्मन्हृदयः कृष्णं स्नेहेन पाण्डवः । चिराद् दृष्टं प्रियतमं सख्येऽथ पुनः पुनः । २५ ।

दोर्ध्वा परिष्वज्य रमामलालयं मुकुन्दगात्रं नृपतिर्हताशुभः ।

लेभे परां निर्वृतिमश्रुलोचनो ह्ययत्तनुर्विस्मृतलोकविभ्रमः । २६ ।

तं मातुलेयं परिष्वज्य निर्वृतो भीमः स्मयन् प्रेमजवाकुलेन्द्रियः ।

यमौ किरीटी च सुहृत्तमं मुदा प्रवृद्धवाय्वाः परिशिरेऽप्युत्तमः । २७ ।

अर्जुनेन परिष्वक्तो यमाभ्यामभिवादितः । ब्राह्मणेभ्यो नमस्कृत्य वृद्धेभ्यश्च यथार्हतः । २८ ।

मानितो मानयामास कुरुसृज्यकैकयान् । सूतमागधगन्धर्वा वन्दिनश्चोपमन्त्रिणः । २९ ।

मृदङ्गशङ्खपटहवीणापणवगोमुखैः । ब्राह्मणाश्चारविन्दाक्षं तुष्टुवुर्नृतुर्जगुः । ३० ।

एवं सुहृद्भिः पर्यस्तः पुण्यश्लोकशिखामणिः । संस्तूयमानो भगवान् विवेशालङ्कृतं पुम् । ३१ ।

Passing through the lands of Ānarta, Sauvira, Maru, and Kurukṣetra and crossing many hills and rivers, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa went past many towns, villages, cowherds, hamlets, mines and quarries. (21) Then, crossing the Dṛṣadvatī and Sarasvatī rivers, He passed through the kingdoms of Pañcāla and Matsya and finally reached Indraprastha. (22) Parikṣit, the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa is a rare boon. king Yudhiṣṭhira was delighted to hear the news of His arrival and marched out of the city with his priests, friends and relations. (23) Amidst the singing of auspicious songs, sounds of trumpets and other musical instruments, and loud recitation of the Vedas by Brāhmaṇas, he went forth with great zeal to receive the Lord, just as the senses begin to function as soon as the life-breath returns. (24) At the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whom he had seen after a long time, the heart of Yudhiṣṭhira overflowed with emotion and he embraced the Lord, his most beloved friend, again and again. (25) Encircling with his arms the person of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the sacred abode of Lakṣmī (the goddess of beauty), the king was rid of all evils and felt extremely delighted. With tears in his eyes and hair standing on end, he forgot all about this delusive world. (26) Bhīma too was transported with joy when he embraced his dear cousin with a broad smile on his lips and his heart overwhelmed with an outburst of emotion. Similarly, Arjuna and the twins, Nakula and Sahadeva, with profuse tears of joy, embraced the immortal Lord, their best friend and well-wisher. (27) Embraced by Arjuna (for a second time), and hailed by Nakula and Sahadeva (the twin brothers), Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself bowed to the Brāhmaṇas and the elder (among the Kurus) in the order of their age and seniority. (28) Honoured by the Kurus, Śrījayas and Kaikayas, the Lord also duly returned them honours. Sūtas (chroniclers), Māgadhas (panegyrist), Gandharvas (songsters), bards and court jesters sang and danced to the accompaniment of musical instruments, such as Mṛdaṅgas, conchs, tabors, lutes, drums and trumpets and the Brāhmaṇas uttered their praises. (29-30) Thus surrounded by friends and well-wishers, the blessed Lord, the foremost among those of sacred renown, entered the decorated city amidst the praises and acclamations of the people. (31)

संसिक्तवर्त्म करिणां मदगन्धतोयैश्चित्रध्वजैः कनकतोरणपूर्णकुम्भैः ।

मृष्टात्मभिर्नवदुकूलविभूषणस्त्रगगन्धैर्नृभिर्व्यवतिभिश्च विराजमानम् । ३२ ।

उद्दीप्तदीपबलिभिः प्रतिसद्यजालनिर्यातधूपरुचिरं विलसत्पताकम् ।

मूर्धन्यहेमकलशै रजतोरुध्वङ्गैर्जुष्टं ददर्श भवनेः कुरुराजधाम । ३३ ।

प्राप्तं निशम्य नरलोचनपानपात्रमौत्सुक्यविश्लथितकेशदुकूलबन्धाः ।

सद्यो विसृज्य गृहकर्म पतींश्च तल्पे द्रष्टुं ययुर्व्यवतयः स नरेन्द्रमार्गे । ३४ ।

तस्मिन् सुसङ्कुल इभाश्चरथद्विपद्भिः कृष्णं सभार्यमुपलभ्य गृहाधिरूढाः ।

नार्यो विकीर्य कुसुमैर्मनसोपगुह्य सुखागतं विदधुस्तुस्यवीक्षितेन । ३५ ।

ऊचुः स्त्रियः पथि निरीक्ष्य मुकुन्दपत्नीस्तारा यथोद्भुपसहाः किमकार्यमूभिः ।

यद्यक्षुषां पुरुषमौलिरुद्रासलीलावलोककलयोत्सवमातनोति । ३६ ।

तत्र तत्रोपसङ्गम्य पौरा मङ्गलपाणयः । चक्रुः सपर्या कृष्णाय श्रेणीमुख्या हतैनसः । ३७ ।

The roads of the city of Indraprastha were sprinkled with the juice flowing from the temples of elephants in rut as well as scented water, wonderful many-coloured flags flapped (at every step), temporary arches of gold were erected and gold pots filled with water were placed (at the entrance of houses). Having washed and scented themselves and putting on new garments, ornaments and garlands, the citizens, men and women, came out of their houses and crowded the streets. (32) Lights were kindled and offerings of flowers made in front of all houses; and scented fumes escaped from the lattices of their windows presenting an agreeable sight. The houses were decorated with buntings and domes of gold with silver bases adorned every house-top. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa observed this beauty of the Kaurava capital as He proceeded through its streets. (33) On hearing of His arrival, damsels hurriedly came out into the streets to see the one attraction of all human eyes, abandoning their household works and leaving their respective husbands in their beds. As they came out in haste the plaits of their hair and the knots of their dress got loosened on account of their ardent desire to see Him. (34) The roads were crowded with elephants, horses, chariots and pedestrians. The women, therefore, saw Śrī Kṛṣṇa and His consorts from the tops of their houses, showered flowers on Him and mentally embracing Him greeted Him with smiling looks. (35) Seeing the consorts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa accompanying their husband on the road even as the stars surround the moon, the women said to themselves: "We wonder what meritorious deeds were performed by these ladies whereby the Best of Persons, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, constantly delights their eyes with His winsome smiles and sportful glances." (36) Here and there prominent and sinless citizens and leaders of trade-guilds met Him with auspicious articles in their hands and offered Him worship. (37)

अन्तःपुरजनैः प्रीत्या मुकुन्दः फुल्ललोचनैः । ससम्भ्रमैरभ्युपेतः प्राविशद् राजमन्दिरम् । ३८ ।
 पृथा विलोक्य भ्रात्रेयं कृष्णं त्रिभुवनेश्वरम् । प्रीतात्मोत्थाय पर्यङ्कतु सस्तुषा परिवस्त्रजे । ३९ ।
 गोविन्दं गृहमानीय देवदेवेशमादृतः । पूजायां नाविदत् कृत्यं प्रमोदोपहतो नृपः । ४० ।
 पितृष्वसुरुरुक्तीणां कृष्णश्चक्रेऽभिवादनम् । स्वयं च कृष्णया राजन् भगिन्या चाभिवन्दितः । ४१ ।
 श्वश्र्वा सञ्जोदिता कृष्णा कृष्णपत्नीश्च सर्वशः । आनर्चं रुक्मिणीं सत्यां भद्रां जाम्बवतीं तथा । ४२ ।
 कालिन्दीं मित्रविन्दो च शैब्यां नाग्रजितीं सतीम् । अन्याश्चाभ्यागता यास्तु वासः स्रद्धमण्डनादिभिः । ४३ ।
 सुखं निवासयामास धर्मराजो जनार्दनम् । ससैन्यं सानुगामात्यं सभार्यं च त्वनं नवम् । ४४ ।
 तर्पयित्वा खाण्डवेन वह्निं फाल्गुनसंयुतः । मोचयित्वा मयं येन राज्ञे दिव्या सभा कृता । ४५ ।
 उवास कतिचिन्मासान् राज्ञः प्रियचिकीर्षया । विहरन् रथमारुह्य फाल्गुनेन भटैर्वृतः । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्योः संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे कृष्णस्येन्द्रप्रस्थगमनं नामैकसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः । ७९ ।

Welcomed by the women of the palace with eyes blooming with joy and excited with emotion, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa entered the king's palace. (38) When Kuntī saw her brother's son, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of the three worlds, her heart was filled with delight. Rising from her couch along with her daughter-in-law, Draupadī, she gave Him a hearty embrace. (39) King Yudhiṣṭhira was beside himself with joy on having brought (with him) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Ruler of the gods, within his palace and, full of reverence, did not know how to proceed with His worship. (40) Śrī Kṛṣṇa bowed to His aunt and other elderly women, and was in His turn saluted by Draupadī and His sister Subhadrā, O King ! (41) Under the direction of her mother-in-law, Draupadī, honoured Rukmiṇī, Satyabhāmā, Bhadrā, Jāmbavatī, Kālindī, Mitravindā, Lakṣmaṇā, the devoted Satyā and other consorts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who had accompanied them, by offering them costumes, garlands and other articles of beauty. (42-43) The virtuous King Yudhiṣṭhira comfortably lodged Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa with His army, attendants, ministers and consorts with elaborate arrangements for the supply of fresh articles (for their use). (44) Along with Arjuna, Śrī Kṛṣṇa propitiated the god of fire by offering to him the Khāṇḍava forest and rescued Maya, the demon, who in his turn constructed a wonderful assembly hall for the king. (45) In order to please Yudhiṣṭhira, the Lord spent several months at Indraprastha. There He occasionally went out with Arjuna for excursion in his chariot followed by a number of warriors. (46)

Thus ends the seventy-first discourse entitled "Śrī Kṛṣṇa's visit to Indraprastha," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्विसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXII

Jarāsandha killed

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदा तु सभामध्य आस्थितो मुनिभिर्वृतः । ब्राह्मणैः क्षत्रियैर्वैश्यैर्भ्रातृभिश्च युधिष्ठिरः । १ ।

आचार्यैः कुलवृद्धैश्च ज्ञातिसम्बन्धिवान्धवैः । शृण्वतामेव चैतेषामाभाष्येदमुवाच ह । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parikṣit, one day, King Yudhiṣṭhira, while seated in his court surrounded by sages, Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas, Vaiśyas, his own brothers (Bhīma and others), preceptors, elders of the race, clansmen and relations as well as his kinsmen, addressed Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa indeed within their hearing (as follows). (1-2)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

क्रतुराजेन गोविन्द राजसूयेन पावनीः । यक्ष्ये विभूतीर्भवतस्तत् सम्पादय नः प्रभो । ३ ।

त्वत्पादुके अविरतं परि ये चरन्ति ध्यायन्त्यभद्रनशने शुचयो गृणन्ति ।

विन्दन्ति ते कमलनाभ भवापवर्गमाशासते यदि त आशिष ईश नान्ये । ४ ।

तद् देवदेव भवतश्चरणारविन्दसेवानुभावमिह पश्यतु लोक एषः ।

ये त्वां भजन्ति न भजन्त्युत बोभयेषां निष्ठां प्रदर्शय विभो कुरुसृञ्जयानाम् । ५ ।

न ब्रह्मणः स्वपरभेदमतिस्तव स्यात् सर्वात्मनः समदृशः स्वमुखानुभूतेः ।

संसेवतां सुरतरोरिव ते प्रसादः सेवानुरूपमुदयो न विपर्ययोऽत्र । ६ ।

King Yudhiṣṭhira submitted : Govinda ! through the performance of the sovereign sacrifice, Rājasūya, I intend to worship You as well as the gods, who are but Your part manifestations. Kindly accomplish this desire of mine, O Lord ! (3) The pair of wooden sandals You wear under Your lotus-like feet destroy all evil. Those holy persons who constantly worship them, meditate on them and extol them obtain release from the bondage of mundane existence. They get even worldly boons, if they seek for them. Others, however, do not get either. (4) O God of gods, let these men of the world directly perceive the glory of worshipping Your lotus-like feet. Lord, kindly demonstrate to the Kuru and Śrījaya chiefs the destinies of those who worship and those who do not worship You. (5) Lord, You are the Self of all, the Supreme Brahma, being of the nature of self-enjoyment and looking on all with an equal eye; the cognition of 'Self' and 'not Self' does not exist in You. Those who worship You win Your favour even as persons betaking themselves to the wishyielding tree gain their object. The degree of success attained by them is commensurate with the amount of service they have put forth and does not point to any perversity on Your part. (6)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

सम्यग् व्यवसितं राजन् भवता शशुर्कश्चन । कल्याणी येन ते कीर्तिलोकाननु भविष्यति । ७ ।

ऋषीणां पितृदेवानां सुहृदामपि नः प्रभो । सर्वेषामपि भूतानामीप्सितः क्रतुराडयम् । ८ ।

विजित्य नृपतीन् सर्वान् कृत्वा च जगतीं वशे । सम्भृत्य सर्वसम्भारानाहरस्व महाक्रतुम् । ९ ।

एते ते भ्रातरो राजन् लोकपालांशसम्भवाः । जितोऽस्यात्मवता तेऽहं दुर्जयो योऽकृतात्मभिः । १० ।

न कश्चिन्मत्परं लोके तेजसा यशसा श्रिया । विभूतिभिर्वाभिभवेद् देवोऽपि किमु पार्थिवः । ११ ।

The glorious Lord said : O King, your resolution is excellent. Through the performance of the Rājāsūya sacrifice, your auspicious fame will extend to all the three world. (7) This sovereign sacrifice, O king, is welcomed by the sages, manes, gods, all your friends and relations including Myself, and, in fact, by all beings. (8) Conquering all the kings and bringing the world under your control, collect all necessary things and then perform the great sacrifice. (9) O king, these brothers of yours are born of deities (like Indra, the wind-god and others), who are guardians of the world. You yourself are a man of wisdom and self-control and have conquered Me by your virtues. Those who have not controlled their mind and senses cannot win Me. (10) Even the greatest of gods in this world cannot expect to overpower My devotee by means of his energy, glory, splendour and supernatural powers, much less any earthly being. (11)

श्रीशुक उवाच

निशम्य भगवद्गीतं प्रीतः फुल्लमुखाम्बुजः । भ्रातॄन् दिग्विजयेऽयुक्क्तं विष्णुतेजोपबृंहितान् । १२ ।
सहदेवं दक्षिणस्यामादिशत् सह सुजयैः । दिशि प्रतीच्यां नकुलमुदीच्यां सव्यसाचिनम् ।

प्राच्यां वृकोदरं मत्स्यैः केकर्यैः सह मद्रकैः । १३ ।

ते विजित्य नृपान् वीरा आजहृदिग्ध्य ओजसा । अजातशत्रवे भूरि द्रविणं नृप यक्ष्यते । १४ ।
श्रुत्वाजितं जरासन्धं नृपतेर्ध्यायते हरिः । आहोपायं तमेवाद्य उद्धवो यमुवाच ह । १५ ।
भीमसेनोऽर्जुनः कृष्णो ब्रह्मलिङ्गधरास्त्रयः । जग्मुर्गिरिज्रजं तात बृहदथसुतो यतः । १६ ।
ते गत्वाऽऽतिथ्यवेलायां गृहेषु गृहमेधिनम् । ब्रह्मण्यं समयाचेरन् राजन्या ब्रह्मलिङ्गिनः । १७ ।
राजन् विद्वद्यतिथीन् प्राप्तानर्थिनो दूरमागतान् । तत्र प्रयच्छ भद्रं ते यद् वयं कामयामहे । १८ ।
किं दुर्मयं तितिक्षूणां किमकार्यमसाधुभिः । किं न देयं वदान्यानां कः परः समदर्शिनाम् । १९ ।
योऽनित्येन शरीरेण सतां गेयं यशो ध्रुवम् । नाचिनोति स्वयं कल्पः सवाच्यः शोच्य एव सः । २० ।
हरिश्चन्द्रो रन्तिदेव उच्छ्वसितः शिबिर्बलिः । व्याधः कपोतो बहवो ह्यध्रुवेण ध्रुवं गताः । २१ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Parīkṣit, hearing these words of the Almighty Lord, King Yudhiṣṭhira was extremely delighted. His face became cheerful like a fresh-blown lotus. He commissioned all his brothers to conquer the earth. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa infused His energy into the Pāṇḍavas and made them unconquerable. (12) King Yudhiṣṭhira sent his youngest brother Sahadeva alongwith Sṛjāya warriors to conquer the southern regions; he deputed Nakula alongwith the Matsyas to the west, Arjuna and the Kekayas to the north, and Bhīma, accompanied by the Madras, to the east. (13) O King, conquering all the kings by dint of their prowess, these warriors brought untold riches from the various quarters to king Yudhiṣṭhira who was preparing for the sacrifice. (14) When Yudhiṣṭhira heard that Jarāsandha remained unsubdued, he became moody and began to muse. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa then laid before him the plan suggested by Uddhava: so the tradition goes. Thereupon Bhīmasena, Arjuna and Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa assumed the guise of Brāhmaṇas and went to Girivraja (the modern Giridih), the capital of Jarāsandha. (15-16) King Jarāsandha was a devotee of the Brāhmaṇas and scrupulous in the observance of the sacred duty of a householder. The three Kṣatriyas disguised as Brāhmaṇas went to Jarāsandha's palace at the hour appointed for the entertainment of unexpected guests. There they made their request to Jarāsandha as follows. (17) "O king, may you be blessed. Know us (three) to be your guests come from a long distance. We have come with a definite purpose; therefore, please grant us our request. (18) O king, a forbearing person can bear anything; the wicked can do anything; (in fact, there is nothing which he will regard as prohibited); and a generous donor will not hesitate to give away anything. And none is foreign to a man of undifferentiating outlook. (19) If a capable men, through his mortal body, does not earn enduring fame, worthy of being sung by men of virtue, he deserves to be pitied and censured. (20) Kings Hariścandra and Rantideva, Śibi, and Bali, the sage Mudgala (who lived on grains gleaned from the fields), the famous pigeon of the legend (who gave up his life for the sake of a fowler) and the fowler (who sacrificed his life in imitation of the pigeon's self-sacrificing act), and many more attained lasting happiness through the transient body and its belongings." (21)

श्रीरुक उवाच

खरैराकृतिभिस्तांस्तु प्रकोष्ठैर्याहतैरपि । राजन्यबन्धुन् विज्ञाय दृष्टपूर्वाच्चिन्तयत् । २२ ।
 राजन्यबन्धवो ह्येते ब्रह्मलिङ्गानि बिभ्रति । ददामि भिक्षितं तेभ्य आत्मानमपि दुस्सजम् । २३ ।
 बलेर्नु श्रूयते कीर्तिर्वितता दिक्ष्वकल्मषा । ऐश्वर्याद् भ्रंशितस्यापि विप्रव्याजेन विष्णुना । २४ ।
 श्रियं जिह्मैतेन्द्रस्य विष्णवे द्विजरूपिणे । जानन्नपि महीं प्रादाद् वार्यमाणोऽपि दैत्यराद् । २५ ।
 जीवता ब्राह्मणार्थाय को न्वर्थः क्षत्रबन्धुना । देहेन पतमानेन नेहता विपुलं यशः । २६ ।
 इत्युदारमतिः प्राह कृष्णार्जुनवृकोदरान् । हे विप्रा त्रियतां कामो ददाम्यात्मशरोऽपि वः । २७ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Parikṣit, from their tone, appearance and forearms bearing scars caused by the friction of bow-strings, Jarāsandha came to know that the newcomers were no Brāhmaṇas, but Kṣatriyas come in the guise of Brāhmaṇas. He had a hazy notion that he had seen them somewhere before. (22) But he reflected, "Though Kṣatriyas, they have taken this guise of Brāhmaṇas (out of fear for Me). When they have gone to the length of seeking a gift from me, I shall give them even this body though difficult to part with. (23) God Viṣṇu, appearing in the guise of a Brāhmaṇa, deprived Bali of his lordly position; and yet the unsullied fame of Bali is sung extensively in all directions. (24) It is true, Viṣṇu had assumed that diminutive form of a Brāhmaṇa in order to return the ruling authority to its rightful owner Indra. Bali had come to know it and was opposed by Śukra, his preceptor; and yet he gave away the earth. (25) This body is sure to perish one day. A Kṣatriya who does not endeavour to attain extensive fame through it, and does not live for the sake of the Brāhmaṇas alone, lives in vain." (26) (Parikṣit), Jarāsandha was a liberal-minded king. Reflecting thus, he said to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Arjuna and Bhīmasena, disguised as Brāhmaṇas, as follows:—"Brāhmaṇas, seek whatever you desire; I am prepared to give you everything, even my head." (27)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

युद्धं नो देहि राजेन्द्र द्वन्द्वो यो यदि मन्यसे । युद्धार्थिनो वयं प्राप्ता राजन्या नात्रकङ्क्षिणः । २८ ।
 असौ वृकोदरः पार्थस्तस्य भ्रातार्जुनो ह्ययम् । अनयोर्मतुलेयं मां कृष्णं जानीहि ते रिपुम् । २९ ।
 एवमावेदितो राजा जहासोच्चैः स्म मागधः । आह चापर्वितो मन्दा युद्धं तर्हि ददामि वः । ३० ।
 न त्वया भीरुणा योस्ये युधि विक्लवचेतसा । मथुरां स्वपुरीं त्यक्त्वा समुद्रं शरणं गतः । ३१ ।
 अयं तु वयसा तुल्यो नातिसत्त्वो न मे समः । अर्जुनो न भवेद् योद्धा भीमस्तुल्यबलो मम । ३२ ।
 इत्युक्त्वा भीमसेनाय प्रादाय महतीं गदाम् । द्वितीयां स्वयमादाय निर्जगाम पुराद् बहिः । ३३ ।
 ततः समे खले धीरौ संयुक्तावितरतरौ । जघ्नतुर्व्रत्रकल्पाभ्यां गदाभ्यां रणदुर्मदौ । ३४ ।
 मण्डलानि विचित्राणि सव्यं दक्षिणमेव च । चरतोः शुशुभे युद्धं नटयोरिव रङ्गिणोः । ३५ ।
 ततश्चतुष्टयशब्दो वज्रनिष्पेषसन्निभः । गदयोः क्षिप्तयो राजन् दन्तयोरिव दन्तिनोः । ३६ ।

ते वै गदे भुजजवेन निपात्यमाने अन्योन्यतोऽसकटिपादकरोरुजत्रून् ।

चूर्णीबभूवतुरुपेत्य यथाकेशास्त्रे संयुध्यतोद्विगदयोरिव दीप्तमन्त्र्योः । ३७ ।

इत्थं तयोः प्रहतयोगदयोर्नुवीरौ क्रुद्धौ स्वमुष्टिभिरयःस्पर्शैरपिष्णाम् ।

शब्दस्तयोः

प्रहर्तोरभयोः विरिणां त्रिघ्नां तव व्रपुरुषस्तलताडनोत्थः । ३८ ।

तयोरेवं प्रहर्तोः समशिक्षाबलौजसोः । निर्विशेषमभूत् युद्धमक्षीणजवयोर्नृप । ३९ ।

एवं तयोर्महाराज युध्यतोः सप्तविंशतिः । दिनानि निरगस्तत्र सुहृद्बन्धिनि तिष्ठतोः । ४० ।

The glorious Lord said : " O great king, we are no Brāhmaṇas seeking food from you. We have come here in search of a combat. If it pleases you, grant us the boon of a single combat with you. (28) That is Bhīma son of Kuntī, he is his younger brother, Arjuna, and know Me to be their cousin, Kṛṣṇa, your former adversary." (29) Hearing these words of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Jarāśandha laughed loudly and, filled with rage, said, " If you seek a combat, fools, I shall certainly offer fight with you. (30) But, Kṛṣṇa, I shall not fight with you. You are a coward and rose balance of mind in battle. Afraid of me you abandoned your city, Mathurā, and took shelter in the sea. (31) As for Arjuna, he is no warrior. He is junior to me in age and has no great prowess either. He is, therefore, no match for me. Bhīma (alone) is equal in strength to me." (32) With these words Jarāśandha gave a huge mace to Bhīmasena, and himself taking up another, came out of the city. (33) Going to the arena these two warriors who were furious in battle, closed with and struck each other with their respective maces, which were as hard as the thunderbolt. (34) They began to move right and left, manoeuvring for position with such adroitness that they looked like two actors playing at fight on a public stage. (35) When they hurled their maces at each other, the rattling noise resembled the clap of thunder or the sound of impact between the tusks of two fighting tuskers. (36) Just as when two elephants burning with rage fight with each other, with twigs of the sun-plant and the twigs are reduced to powder, even so the maces of the two warriors hurled with the full force of their arms against each other's shoulders, hips, feet, hands, thighs and collar-bones, were reduced to pulp. (37) Thus when their maces fell broken, the two warriors full of rage struck each other with their fists as hard as steel. As they fought like two elephants, the blows they dealt at each other with their palms produced a sound as sharp as the clap of thunder. (38) Parikṣit, Jarāśandha and Bhīmasena were equally matched so far as training, strength and vigour were concerned and both fought with unabated violence; yet their contest remained undecided. (39) Though engaged in a mortal fight during the day-time, they lived as friends during the nights. In this way twenty-seven days passed. (40)

एकदा मातुलेयं वै प्राह राजन् वृकोदरः । न शक्तोऽहं जरासन्धं निर्जंतुं युधि माधव । ४१ ।

शत्रोर्जन्ममूर्ती विद्वान् जीवितं च जराकृतम् । पार्थमाध्याययन् स्वेन तेजसाचिन्तयद्भरिः । ४२ ।

सञ्चिन्त्यारिवधोपायं भीमस्यामोघदर्शनः । दर्शयामास विटपं पाटयन्निव संज्ञया । ४३ ।

तद् विज्ञाय महासत्त्वो भीमः प्रहर्तां वरः । गृहीत्वा पादयोः शत्रुं पातयामास भूतले । ४४ ।

एकं पादं पदाऽऽक्रम्य दोर्ध्यामन्यं प्रगृह्य सः । गुदतः पाटयामास शास्त्रमिव महागजः । ४५ ।

एकपादोरुवृषणकटिपृष्ठस्तान्सके । एकबाह्वक्षिभ्रुकर्णे शकले ददृशुः प्रजाः । ४६ ।

हाहाकारो महानासीन्निहते मगधेश्वरे । पूजयामास्तुभ्रीमं परिरभ्य जयाच्युतौ । ४७ ।

सहदेवं तत्तनयं भगवान् भूतभावनः । अभ्यविञ्चदमेयात्मा मगधानां पतिं प्रभुः ।

मोचयामास राजन्यान् संरुद्धा मागधेन ये । ४८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे जयमन्वधो नाम द्विमासतितमोऽध्यायः । ७२ ।

Parikṣit, on the twenty-eighth day Bhīma said to his cousin, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, "Kṛṣṇa, I am unable to overthrow Jarāśandha in a duel." (41) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who knew the secret of Jarāśandha's birth and death, (viz.,) how the demoness Jarā joined his body divided into two and conferred life on him, considered the matter and comforting Bhīmasena infused His own strength into the latter. (42) Having hit upon the plan of overthrowing the enemy, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose insight was infallible, took up a twig and split it into two by way of a signal to demonstrate to Bhīmasena how to do it. (43) The foremost warrior of enormous strength, Bhīma, understood what was to be conveyed to him and taking hold of Jarāsandha by the feet threw him on the ground. (44) Pressing a foot of the enemy with one foot, he took hold of the other with both his hands, and split him into two from the anus, as a huge elephant splits up a twig. (45) The people saw the two halves of Jarāsandha's person each with one foot, one thigh, one testicle, one hip, half the back and one breast; one shoulder, one arm, one eye, one eyebrow and one ear. (46) Great was the outcry among his subjects when Jarāsandha, the king of Magadha, fell. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna greeted Bhīmasena by embracing him. (47) The Almighty Lord, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, is the life-giver of all creatures; no one can fathom His greatness. Having installed Jarāsandha's son, Sahadevā, on the throne of Magadha, he set at liberty all the kings who had been imprisoned by Jarāsandha. (48)

Thus ends the seventy-second discourse entitled "Jarāsandha killed", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रिसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः Discourse LXXIII

Śrī Kṛṣṇa and others return to Indraprastha

श्रीशुक उवाच

अयुते द्वे शतान्यष्टौ लीलया युधि निर्जिताः । ते निर्गता गिरिद्रोण्यां मलिना मलवाससः । १ ।
क्षुत्क्षामाः शुष्कवदनाः संरोधपरिकर्षिताः । ददृशुस्ते घनश्यामं पीतकौशेयवाससम् । २ ।
श्रीवत्साङ्कं चतुर्बाहुं पद्मगर्भारुणेक्षणम् । चारुप्रसन्नवदनं सफुरन्मकरकुण्डलम् । ३ ।
पद्महस्तं गदाशङ्खरथाङ्गैरुपलक्षितम् । किरीटहारकटकदिसूत्राङ्गदचितम् । ४ ।
भ्राजद्वरमणिग्रीवं निवीतं वनमालया । पिबन्त इव क्षुब्धार्थं लिहन्त इव जिह्वया । ५ ।
जिघ्रन्त इव नासाभ्यां रम्भन्त इव बाहुभिः । प्रणेमुर्हत्पाप्मानो मूर्धभिः पादयोहीः । ६ ।
कृष्णसन्दर्शनाह्लादध्वस्तसंरोधनह्वयाः । प्रशंसंसुहृषीकेशं गीर्भिः प्राञ्जलयो नृपाः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parīkṣit, Jarāsandha had subdued in battle without much effort twenty thousand and eight hundred Kṣatriya princes and had confined them in a place surrounded by mountains on all sides. Released by Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, they came out of their captivity with unclean bodies and dirty clothes. (1) They had been emaciated with hunger and their faces were lank. The long confinement had considerably reduced their weight. Coming out of the prison, they saw Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa standing before them. Having a complexion dark as the cloud, clad in yellow silken robes and possessed of four arms, holding a lotus in one hand and wielding the mace, conch and discus with others, bearing the mark of Śrīvatsa (a curl of hair) on the breast, with eyes reddish like the interior of a lotus, with a lovely and cheerful face, adorned with glowing ear-rings shaped like the alligator, and decked with a crown, a necklace of pearls, bracelets and girdle and a pair of armlets, the jewel Kaustubha shining in His neck and a garland of sylvan flowers hanging on His breast, the sight of the Lord kept them spellbound. They seemed to drink Him with their eyes, lick Him with their tongues, inhale Him with their nose and embrace Him with their arms. All their sins were washed away at His very sight. They bowed to the Lord, touching His blessed feet with their heads. (2—6) The joy derived through Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's sight removed the languor caused by their confinement. With joined palms, they offered their praises to the Lord in the following words. (7)

राज्ञान ऊचुः

नमस्ते देवदेवेश प्रपन्नार्तिहराव्यय । प्रपन्नान् पाहि नः कृष्ण निर्विण्णान् घोरसंसृतेः । ८ ।
 नैनं नाथान्वसूयामो मागधं मधुसूदन । अनुग्रहो यद् भवतो राज्ञां राज्यच्युतिर्विभो । ९ ।
 राज्यैश्वर्यमदोन्नद्धो न श्रेयो विन्दते नृपः । त्वन्मायामोहितोऽनित्य मन्यते सम्पदोऽज्वलाः । १० ।
 मृगतृष्णां यथा बाला मन्यन्त उदकाशयम् । एवं वैकारिणीं मायामयुक्ता वस्तु चक्षते । ११ ।
 वयं पुरा श्रीमदनष्टदृष्टयो जिगीषयास्या इतरेतरस्मृधः ।
 घ्नन्तः प्रजाः स्वा अतिनिर्घृणाः प्रभो मृत्युं परस्त्वाविगण्य दुर्मदाः । १२ ।
 त एव कृष्णाद्य गभीररंहसा दुरन्तवीर्येण विचालिताः श्रियः ।
 कालेन तन्वा भवतोऽनुकम्पया विनष्टदर्पाश्चरणौ स्मराम ते । १३ ।
 अथो न राज्यं मृगतृष्णिरूपितं देहेन शश्वत् पतता रुजां भुवा ।
 उपासितव्यं स्पृहयामहे विभो क्रियाफलं प्रेत्य च कर्णरोचनम् । १४ ।
 तं नः समादिशोपायं येन ते चरणाब्जयोः । स्मृतिर्यथा न विरमेदपि संसरतामिह । १५ ।
 कृष्णाय वासुदेवाय हरये परमात्मने । प्रणतक्लेशनाशाय गोविन्दाय नमो नमः । १६ ।

The kings prayed : O God of gods, remover of the distress of those who take refuge in You, O Imperishable Lord, we offer our salutations to You. Disgusted with the bitter experience of this fearful scourge of transmigration, we seek refuge in You; pray protect us. (8) Kṛṣṇa, we have no grudge against Jarāsandha; in fact, it was through Your grace that we were deprived of our kingdoms. (9) Puffed up with the pride of sovereignty and power, a king is generally deprived of true happiness; for, deluded by Your Māyā, he comes to regard worldly fortune as permanent. (10) Just as the ignorant take the mirage for a sheet of water, even so the unwise attached to the senses regard the ever changing Māyā as reality. (11) Lord, blinded by the intoxication of wealth and power, at one time we vied with one another in our lust for conquering the world and mercilessly brought about the destruction of our own people in pursuing our mad projects. We were so arrogant that we took no notice of You standing before us as Death itself. (12) Kṛṣṇa, mysterious are the ways of Time. Its potency is unfathomable; for it is one of Your many forms. It has deprived us of our fortune, and our pride has been shattered through Your grace. We now contemplate on Your sacred feet. (13) Lord, we no longer seek the boon of sovereignty enjoyable through this ever decaying body, the nursery of ailments. We have realized that the pleasures of sovereignty are like a mirage. Nor do we crave for the posthumous enjoyments of heaven which sound attractive only to the ear. (14) Pray tell us now the means whereby we may constantly remember You lotus-like feet, even though we may have to undergo a series of births. (15) Kṛṣṇa, You have descended on this earth through the agency of Vasudeva. You destroy the sins of those who come in contact with You and bring them deliverance. You are the Supreme Spirit. You exterminate the sufferings of those who bend low before You. O Govinda, the protector of cows, we offer our obeisances to You. (16)

श्रीशुक उवाच

संस्तूयमानो भगवान् राजभिर्मुक्तबन्धनैः । तानाह करुणस्तात शरण्यः श्लक्ष्णया गिरा । १७ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Parikṣit, when the kings now released from captivity praised in those words the merciful Lord, who affords shelter to those who seek it, He replied to them in sweet accents as below. (17)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अद्यप्रभृति वो भूपा मय्यात्मन्खिलेश्वरे । सुदृढा जायते भक्तिर्बाढमाशंसितं तथा । १८ ।
दिष्ट्या व्यवसितं भूपा भवन्त ऋतभाषिणः । श्रियैश्वर्यमदोत्राहं पश्य उन्मादकं नृणाम् । १९ ।
हैहयो नहुषो वेनो रावणो नरकोऽपरे । श्रीमदाद् भ्रंशिताः स्थानाद् देवदैत्यनरेश्वराः । २० ।
भवन्त एतद् विज्ञाय देहाद्युत्पाद्यमन्तवत् । मां यजन्तोऽध्वरैर्युक्ताः प्रजा धर्मेण रक्षथ । २१ ।
सन्तन्वन्तः प्रजातनून् सुखं दुःखं भवाभवौ । प्राप्तं प्राप्तं च सेवन्तो मच्चित्ता विचरिष्यथ । २२ ।
उदासीनाश्च देहादावात्मारामा धृतव्रताः । मय्यावेश्य मनः सम्यङ् मामन्तो ब्रह्मा यास्यथ । २३ ।

Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa said : As desired by you, O kings, you will henceforth entertain unswerving devotion to Me, the Universal Lord, who am the very Self of all. (18) You deserve congratulation, O kings, for your resolution, and what you say is certainly true. For I have seen that excess of pride of wealth and power makes people mad. (19) Haihaya, Nahuṣa, Vena, Rāvaṇa, Narakāsura and many other gods, demons and kings fell from their position through the intoxication of wealth and power. (20) Know that the body and everything connected with it is perishable inasmuch as it is subject to birth. Therefore, do not get attached to them. Carefully controlling your mind and senses, worship Me through sacrifices and protect your subjects in the righteous way. (21) Beget children for the continuity of the family line, and not for enjoyment, and accepting with an equable mind, as a boon from Me, whatever experiences come to your lot in the shape of birth and death, pleasure and pain, gain and loss etc., live in the world with your mind devoted to Me. (22) Remain indifferent to the body and everything connected therewith, take delight in the Self, practise Bhajana and observe religious vows. Thus fixing your mind steadily on Me, you will in the end attain to me, the Supreme Spirit. (23)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यादिश्य नृपान् कृष्णो भगवान् भुवनेश्वरः । तेषां न्ययुङ्क्त पुरुषान् स्त्रियो मज्जनकर्मणि । २४ ।
सपर्या कारयामास सहदेवेन भारत । नरदेवोचितैर्वस्त्रैर्भूषणैः सखिविलेपनैः । २५ ।
भोजयित्वा वरात्रेण सुस्नातान् समलङ्कृतान् । भोगैश्च विविधैर्युक्तांस्तान्खलुद्यैर्नृपोचितैः । २६ ।
ते पूजिता मुकुन्देन राजानो मृष्टकुण्डलाः । विरेजुर्मोचिताः क्लेशात् प्रावृडन्ते यथा ग्रहाः । २७ ।
स्थान् सदश्चानारोय मणिकाञ्चनभूषितान् । प्रीणाप्य सूनृतैर्वार्यैः स्वदेशान् प्रत्ययापयत् । २८ ।
त एवं मोचिताः कृच्छ्रान् कृष्णो न सुमात्मना । ययुस्तमेव ध्यायन्तः कृतानि च जगत्पतेः । २९ ।
जगद् प्रकृतिभ्यस्ते महापुरुषचेष्टितम् । यथान्वशासद् भगवांस्तथा चक्रुस्तन्द्रिताः । ३० ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Parikṣit, thus instructing the kings, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the almighty Lord of the universe, detailed a number of attendants, men and women, to give them a bath. (24) He then got Sahadeva, son of Jarāsandha, to honour the kings by offering them wearing apparel, ornaments, garlands, sandal-paste and other things worthy of royal use. (25) After they had finished their bath and adorned themselves they were entertained with excellent dishes and other luxuries—such as betel leaves etc.,—worthy of kings. (26) Thus treated with due honour by Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and rid of their suffering, the kings shone with their brilliant ear-rings like the planets at the end of the rainy season. (27) The Lord then provided them all with chariots adorned with jewels and gold and drawn by good horses, cheered them with sweet words and sent them away to their respective territories. (28) Thus delivered from their calamity by the high-souled Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the kings left for their capitals, contemplating on the Lord, His virtues and noble deeds. (29) Reaching their kingdoms, they related to their subjects the benevolent doings of the Supreme Person and diligently followed His injunctions in their daily lives. (30)

जरासन्धं घातयित्वा भीमसेनेन केशवः । पार्थाभ्यां संयुतः प्रायात् सहदेवेन पूजितः । ३१ ।
गत्वा ते खाण्डवप्रस्थं शङ्खान् दध्मुर्जितारयः । हर्षयन्तः स्वसुहृदो दुर्हदां चासुखवाहाः । ३२ ।
तच्छ्रुत्वा प्रीतमनस इन्द्रप्रस्थनिवासिनः । मेनिरे मागधं शान्तं राजा चाप्तमनोरथः । ३३ ।
अभिवन्द्याथ राजानं भीमार्जुनजनादनाः । सर्वमाश्रावयाञ्चक्रुरात्मना यदनुष्ठितम् । ३४ ।
निशम्य धर्मराजस्तत् केशवेनानुकम्पितम् । आनन्दाश्रुकलां मुञ्चन् प्रेम्णा नोवाच किञ्चन । ३५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे कृष्णाद्यागमने त्रिसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः ॥७३॥

Parīkṣit, thus having Jarāsandha killed by Bhīmasena, and being duly honoured by Jarāsandha's son, Sahadeva, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, accompanied by Bhīma and Arjuna, departed (for Indraprastha). (31) On reaching the outskirts of the city, the three victorious heroes blew their respective conchs, bringing joy to their friends and sorrow to their enemies. (32) The people of Indraprastha were extremely delighted at heart to hear the sound and concluded at once that Jarāsandha had been killed and that King Yudhiṣṭhira had well-nigh achieved his object. (33) There Bhīmasena, Arjuna and Śrī Kṛṣṇa bowed to King Yudhiṣṭhira and related to him all that they had done. (34) Overwhelmed with emotion at the exceptional favour shown to him by Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, King Yudhiṣṭhira shed tears of joy and could not speak a word. (35)

Thus ends the seventy-third discourse, bearing on the return of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and others (to Indraprastha), in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुःसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXIV

Śiśupāla killed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं युधिष्ठिरो राजा जरासन्धवधं विभोः । कृष्णस्य चानुभावं तं श्रुत्वा प्रीतस्तमब्रवीत् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parīkṣit, Yudhiṣṭhira was highly delighted to hear of Jarāsandha's fall and of the supreme glory of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, and spoke to Him as follows. (1)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

ये सुखैलोक्यगुरवः सर्वे लोकमहेश्वराः । वहन्ति दुर्लभं लब्ध्वा शिरसैवानुशासनम् । २ ।
स भवानरविन्दाक्षो दीनानामीशमानिनाम् । धत्तेऽनुशासनं भूमस्तदत्यन्तविडम्बनम् । ३ ।
न ह्येकस्याद्वितीयस्य ब्रह्मणः परमात्मनः । कर्मभिर्वर्धते तेजो ह्रस्ते च यथा रवेः । ४ ।
न वै तेऽजित भक्तानां ममाहमिति माधव । त्वं तवेति च नानाधीः पशूनामिव वैकृता । ५ ।

King Yudhiṣṭhira submitted : Kṛṣṇa, Lords of the three worlds like Brahmā and Saṅkara, and guardians of the world like Indra bow their heads to Your command whenever they obtain the rare privilege of receiving it. (2) O infinite Lord, though extremely humble and wretched, we are concealed enough to regard ourselves as kings and rulers. Yet (instead of degrading us) You submit to our authority and carry out our commands. O lotus-eyed Lord, this is nothing but imitation on Your part of the ways of men. (3) Just as the brilliance of the sun is neither enhanced nor suffers diminution with the ascent or decline of the sun, even so Your doings in no way exalt You or detract from Your glory. For You are the Supreme Spirit, the one Absolute without a second. (4) O unconquerable Lord, thoughts of diversity like "I and Mine" and "Thou and Thine" obtain only among the ignorant. Such crooked notions of difference do not find place even in Your devotees, much less in You. Whatever You do is, therefore, nothing but Your Sport. (5)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्त्वा यज्ञिये काले वव्रे युक्तान् स ऋत्विजः । कृष्णानुमोदितः पार्थो ब्राह्मणान् ब्रह्मवादिनः । ६ ।
 द्वैपायनो भरद्वाजः सुमन्तुर्गौतमोऽसितः । वसिष्ठश्च्यवनः कण्वो मैत्रेयः कवचव्रितः । ७ ।
 विश्वामित्रो वामदेवः सुमतिर्जैमिनिः क्रतुः । पैलः पराशरो गार्ग्यो वैशम्पायन एव च । ८ ।
 अथर्वा कश्यपो धौम्यो रामो भार्गव आसुरिः । वीतिहोत्रो मधुच्छन्दा वीरसेनोऽकृतव्रणः । ९ ।
 उपहूतास्तथा चाप्ये द्रोणभीष्मकृपादयः । धृतराष्ट्रः सहसुतो विदुरश्च महापतिः । १० ।
 ब्राह्मणाः क्षत्रिया वैश्या शूद्रा यज्ञदिदृक्षवः । तत्रेयुः सर्वराजानो राज्ञां प्रकृतयो नृप । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Saying so, and with Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's concurrence, King Yudhiṣṭhira invited at an hour propitious for the sacrifice Brāhmaṇas versed in the Vedas and proficient in the Vedic ritual to officiate as priests etc., at the sacrifice. (6) They were Śrī Kṛṣṇadwaipāyana Vyāsa, Bharadvāja, Sumantu, Gautama, Asita, Vasiṣṭha, Cyavana, Kaṇva, Maitreya, Kavaṣa, Trita, Viśvāmitra, Vāmadeva, Sumati, Jaimini, Kṛatu, Paila, Paraśara, Garga and Vaiśampāyana, Atharvā, Kaśyapa, Dhaumya, Paraśūrāma, Śukrācārya, Āsuri, Vitihoṭra, Madhuchandā, Virasena and Akṛtavraṇa. (7—9) Besides these, he also invited Droṇācārya, Bhīṣma, Kṛpācārya and others, (as well as) Dhṛtarāṣṭra with all his sons and the noble-minded Vidura to come and help in the performance. (10) In order to witness the great sacrifice many princes with their ministers and chief officers, Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas, Vaiśyas and Śūdras, arrived at Indraprastha, O king ! (11)

ततस्ते देवयजनं ब्राह्मणाः स्वर्णलाङ्गलैः । कृद्धा तत्र यथाप्राप्यं दीक्षयाञ्चक्रिरे नृपम् । १२ ।
 हैमाः किलोपकरणा वरुणस्य यथा पुरा । इन्द्रादयो लोकपाला विरिञ्चिभवंसुताः । १३ ।
 सगणाः सिद्धगन्धर्वा विद्याधरमहोरगाः । मुनयो यक्षरक्षांसि खगकिन्नरचाराणाः । १४ ।
 राजानश्च समाहूता राजपत्न्यश्च सर्वशः । राजसूयं समीयुः स्म राज्ञः पाण्डुसुतस्य वै । १५ ।
 मेनिरे कृष्णभक्तस्य सुपपन्नमविस्मिताः । अयाजयन् महाराजं याजका देववर्चसः ।
 राजसूयेन विधिवत् प्राचेतसमिवामराः । १६ ।

सुयेऽहन्त्यवनीपालो याजकान् सदसस्पतीन् । अपूजयन् महाभागान् यथावत् सुसमाहितः । १७ ।

Then the priests ploughed the sacrificial ground with ploughs of gold and initiated Yudhiṣṭhira, according to the scriptural injunctions, as the sacrificer. (12) The utensils used in this sacrifice were all made of gold as they were in the sacrifice performed by Varuṇa in ancient times. Brahmā, Saṅkara, Indra and other guardians of the world, Siddhas and Gandharvas with their retinues, Vidyādhara and Nāgas, sages, Yakṣas and Rākṣasas, birds, Kinnaras, Cāraṇas and powerful princes with their queens—all came to attend the Rājasūya sacrifice of King Yudhiṣṭhira at his invitation. (13—15) All of them admitted without any hesitation that he was qualified to perform the same. For to a devotee of Śrī Kṛṣṇa nothing is impossible of achievement. Then the priests, who were as glorious as the gods, conducted for the king the Rājasūya sacrifice according to the scriptural ordinance, as in ancient times the gods did for Varuṇa. (16) On the day fixed for extracting the Soma juice, the king honoured the blessed priests as well as the supervisors of the performance with due attention. (17)

सदस्याग्र्यार्हणार्हं वै विमृशन्तः सभासदः । नाध्यगच्छन्नैनैकान्यात् सहदेवस्तदाब्रवीत् । १८ ।
 अर्हीतं ह्यच्युतः श्रेष्ठ्यं भगवान् सात्वतां पतिः । एष वै देवताः सर्वा देशकालधनादयः । १९ ।
 यदात्मकमिदं विश्वं क्रतवश्च यदात्मकाः । अग्निराहुतयो मन्त्राः सांख्यं योगश्च यत्परः । २० ।
 एक एवाद्वितीयोऽसावैतदात्म्यमिदं जगत् । आत्मनाऽऽत्माश्रयः सभ्याः सृजत्यवति हृत्यजः । २१ ।
 विविधानीह कर्माणि जनयन् यदवेक्षया । ईहते यदयं सर्वः श्रेयो धर्मादिलक्षणम् । २२ ।
 तस्मात् कृष्णाय महते दीयतां परमार्हणम् । एवं चेत् सर्वभूतानामात्मनश्चार्हणं भवेत् । २३ ।
 सर्वभूतात्मभूताय कृष्णायानन्यदशिनि । देयं शान्ताय पूर्णाय दत्तस्यानन्यमिच्छता । २४ ।
 इत्युक्त्वा सहदेवोऽभूत् तूष्णीं कृष्णानुभाववित् । तच्छ्रुत्वा तुष्टुवः सर्वे साधु साध्विति सत्तमाः । २५ ।
 श्रुत्वा द्विजैरिति राजा ज्ञात्वा हार्दं सभासदाम् । समर्हयद्धृषीकेशं प्रीतः प्रणयविह्वलः । २६ ।
 तत्पादावनिज्यापः शिरसा लोकपावनीः । सभार्यः सानुजामात्यः सकुटुम्बोऽवहमुदा । २७ ।
 वासोभिः पीतकौशेयैर्भूषणैश्च महाधनैः । अर्हीत्यत्वाश्रुपूर्णाक्षो नाशकत् समवेक्षितुम् । २८ ।
 इत्थं सभाजितं वीक्ष्य सर्वे प्राञ्जलयो जनाः । नमो जयेति नेमुस्तं निपेतुः पुण्यवृष्टयः । २९ ।

Now, the members of the assembly proceeded to consider who was worthy of receiving the first place of honour, but could not come to any decision for want of unanimity. Thereupon Sahadeva addressed the assembly in the following words: (18) "In my opinion Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the crown-jewel of the Yadus, is the best man in this assembly and deserve the first place of honour. For all the gods as well as Time, Space, Wealth and Whatever other things there are in this world—all are but He. (19) The whole universe is His manifestation. The sacrifices are He, He is Fire, He is the oblations, He is revealed in the form of the Mantras. The path of Knowledge and the path of Action both lead to Him. (20) Members of this august assembly, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the one Absolute without a second; the whole universe is His body. Though self-dependent and unborn, He creates, protects and destroys the universe by His own will. (21) Through His grace people perform various acts in the world and pursue the fourfold object of life, viz., Dharma (virtue), Artha (worldly prosperity), Kāma (worldly enjoyment) and Mokṣa (liberation). (22) Therefore, I propose that foremost honour should be offered to Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the greatest of the great. Through honouring Him, we shall have honoured all beings as well as our own self. (23) He who seeks that his gifts should embrace infinity, should make them to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is the Self of all beings and views, none as other than Himself, who is absolutely unruffled and perfect in everyway." (24) Parīkṣit! Sahadeva, who was aware of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's greatness, became silent after saying this. All good people in the assembly were pleased to hear this, and applauded him saying, 'well said, well said'. (25) Hearing this ejaculation of the Brāhmaṇas and ascertaining the general sense of the members of the assembly, King Yudhiṣṭhira was extremely delighted and with a heart overwhelmed with emotion, honoured Śrī Kṛṣṇa by offering Him the worship due to the First Man in the assembly. (26) In great joy he washed the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and together with his consort (Draupadi), brothers, ministers and other members of his family, bore on his head the drops of that water, which purify the world. (27) Then he presented the Lord with robes of yellow silk and ornaments. His eyes being full of tears at the time, he could not even distinctly see the Form of the Lord. (28) Seeing Him thus honoured, all those present in the assembly joined their palms in reverence, with shouts of 'Namo Namaḥ' (Salutations) and 'Jaya-Jaya' (Victory to You), and showers of flowers fell on Him from the heavens. (29)

इत्थं निशम्य दमघोषमुतः स्वपीठादुत्थाय कृष्णगुणवर्णनजातमन्युः ।

उत्क्षिप्य बाहुमिदमाह सदस्यमर्षी संश्रावयन् भगवते परुषाण्यभीतः । ३० ।

ईशो दुरत्ययः काल इति सत्यवती श्रुतिः । वृद्धानामपि यद् बुद्धिर्बालवाक्यैर्विभिद्यते । ३१ ।

यूयं पात्रविदां श्रेष्ठा मा मन्वं बालभाषितम् । सदस्यतयः सर्वे कृष्णो यत् सम्मतोऽर्हणे । ३२ ।

तपोविद्याव्रतधरान् ज्ञानविध्वस्तकल्मषान् । परमर्षीन् ब्रह्मनिष्ठान् लोकपालैश्च पूजितान् । ३३ ।

सदस्यतीनतिक्रम्य गोपालः कुलपांसनः । यथा काकः पुरोडाशं सपर्या कथमर्हति । ३४ ।

वर्णाश्रमकुलापेतः सर्वधर्मबहिष्कृतः । स्वैरवर्ती गुणैर्हीनः सपर्या कथमर्हति । ३५ ।

ययातिनैषां हि कुलं शप्तं सद्भिर्बहिष्कृतम् । वृथापानरतं शश्वत् सपर्या कथमर्हति । ३६ ।

ब्रह्मर्षिसेवितान् देशान् हित्वैतेऽब्रह्मवर्चसम् । समुद्रं दुर्गमाश्रित्य बाधन्ते दस्यवः प्रजाः । ३७ ।

एवमादीन्यभद्राणि बभाषे नष्टमङ्गलः । नोवाच किञ्चिद् भगवान् यथा सिंहः शिवारुतम् । ३८ ।

भगवन्नन्दिनं श्रुत्वा दुःसहं तत् सभासदः । कर्णौ पिधाव निर्जमुः शपन्तश्चेदिपं रुषाः । ३९ ।

निन्दं भगवतः शृण्वंस्तत्परस्य जनस्य वा । ततो नापैति यः सोऽपि यात्यधः सुकृताच्युतः । ४० ।

Parīkṣit, Śiśupāla heard all this from his seat in the assembly. Enraged at the glorification of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, he rose from his seat and holding up his arm in great indignation fearlessly spoke these harsh words with reference to Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (30) He said, "Leaders of this House, the pronouncement of the Vedas that Time is God is quite true; for Time is inviolable, its decree cannot be revoked. (This has been made perfectly clear by the proceedings of this assembly.) (For) we have seen how even the (hardened) reason of wise and elderly people can be misled by the prattlings of children. (31) Remember, you are the best judge to decide who is worthy to receive the honour of first place in this assembly. Therefore, please do not accept as gospel truth Sahadeva's childish talk that Kṛṣṇa is worthy of that honour. (32) There are present here men of great austerity, learning and sacred vows, men who have wiped out their sins through wisdom, great sages who are established in Brahma and adored even by the greatest of gods. (33) Ignoring the leaders of this assembly, how can this coward, a disgrace to his clan and family, be considered worthy of receiving this honour? Does the crow deserve to receive a sacrificial oblation? (34) He owns no Varna (caste), or Āśrama (stage of life), and does not possess nobility of birth; he is beyond the pale of all Dharmas (sacred laws) and acts wantonly both against the Vedic injunctions and established usage. Moreover he is devoid of all virtues. Under the circumstances, how can he deserve the honour of first place? (35) You are aware that his clan is under the curse of Yayāti, and has, therefore, been boycotted by all good people. Moreover, they are all given to unauthorized drinking. How can he, therefore, be entitled to receive the honour of first place? (36) Abandoning Mathurā and other sacred places (inhabited by Brahmanical sages), they have resorted to a fortified place in the sea, destitute of Brāhmaṇas devoted to the Vedas. When they come out of their fortifications, they harass all creatures like pirates." (37) Parīkṣit, all the merits of Śiśupāla had been exhausted. That is why he uttered these and similar harsh words with reference to Śrī Kṛṣṇa. But just as the lion does not heed the jackal's howls, even so the Almighty Lord did not say a word in reply to Śiśupāla. (38) But the vilification of the Lord became unbearable to the audience, some of whom closed their ears and indignantly left the Hall censuring

Śiśupāla for his unjustifiable remarks. (39) (There was reason for this.) For, Parikṣit, he who, on hearing aspersions cast upon God or upon His devotee, does not leave the spot, loses his merit and goes down to hell. (40)

ततः पाण्डुसुताः क्रुद्धा मत्स्यकैकयसृञ्जयाः । उदायुधाः समुत्तस्थुः शिशुपालजिघांसवः । ४१ ।

ततश्चैद्यस्वसम्भ्रान्तो जगृहे खड्गचर्मणी । भर्त्सयन् कृष्णपक्षीयान् राज्ञः सदसि भारत । ४२ ।

तावदुत्थाय भगवान् खान् निवार्य स्वयं रुषा । शिरः क्षुरान्तचक्रेण जहारापततो रिपोः । ४३ ।

शब्दः कोलाहलोऽप्यासीत् शिशुपाले हते महान् । तस्यानुयायिनो भूषा द्रुद्वर्जिवितैषिणः । ४४ ।

चैद्यदेहोत्थितं ज्योतिर्वासुदेवमुपाविशत् । पश्यतां सर्वभूतानामुल्केव भुवि खाच्युता । ४५ ।

जन्मत्रयानुगुणितवैरसंख्यया धिया । ध्यायंस्तन्मयतां यातो भावो हि भवकारणम् । ४६ ।

ऋत्विग्भ्यः ससदस्येभ्यो दक्षिणां विपुलामदात् । सर्वान् सम्पूज्य विधिवच्चक्रेऽवभृथमेकराट् । ४७ ।

Now, the Pāṇḍavas, Matsyas, Kaikayas and Śrījāyas stood up in rage with uplifted weapons, determined to make short work of Śiśupāla. (41) Undaunted by the threat, the latter took up his sword and shield and rebuked the princes who sided with Śrī Kṛṣṇa in the assembly. (42) (Observing both the sides prepared for a combat,) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa stood up and pacified the rulers who sided with Him, and exhibiting some anger out off with His sharp-edged discus the head of Śiśupāla, who had in the meantime swooped on Him. (43) Great and tumultuous was the uproar in the assembly when Śiśupāla fell down dead. The princes who followed him took to their heels to save their lives. (44) Just as a meteor dropping from the sky gets absorbed into the earth, even so all people witnessed a column of light emanating from Śiśupāla's body enter Śrī Kṛṣṇa and merge into Him. (45) Parikṣit, contemplating on the Lord with thoughts of hatred and anger fostered for three consecutive lives, Śiśupāla became one with Him, and was restored to his original place as an attendant of the Lord. Thus it is the thought of the individual which determines his future state. (46) After Śiśupāla's deliverance, Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira gave sacrificial fees on a liberal scale to the priests and supervisors of the sacrifice and honoured all who attended it. Thereafter he performed ablutions betokening the completion of the sacrifice, according to the scriptural injunctions. (47)

साधयित्वा क्रतुं राज्ञः कृष्णो योगेश्वरेश्वरः । उवास कतिचिन्मासान् सुहृद्भिर्भयाचितः । ४८ ।

ततोऽनुज्ञाय राजानमनिच्छन्तमपीश्वरः । ययौ सभार्यः सामात्यः स्वपुरं देवकीसुतः । ४९ ।

वर्णितं तदुपाख्याय मया ते बहुविस्तरम् । वैकुण्ठवासिनोर्जन्म विप्रशपात् पुनः पुनः । ५० ।

राजसूयावभृथ्येन स्नातो राजा युधिष्ठिरः । ब्रह्मक्षत्रसभामध्ये शशुभे सुराडिव । ५१ ।

राज्ञा सभाजिताः सर्वे सुमानवखेचराः । कृष्णं क्रतुं च शंसन्तः स्वधामानि ययुर्मदा । ५२ ।

दुर्योधनमुते पापं कलिं कुरुकुलामयम् । यो न सेहे श्रियं स्त्रीतां दृष्ट्वा पाण्डुसुतस्य ताम् । ५३ ।

Parikṣit, having thus brought the Rājasūya sacrifice of Yudhiṣṭhira to a successful conclusion, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Lord of all masters of Yoga, spent some months at Indraprastha at the request of His friends and relations. (48) Then the Almighty Lord took leave of Yudhiṣṭhira, who was reluctant to allow Him to go, and left for Dwārakā with His consorts and ministers. (49) Parikṣit, I have already narrated to you at considerable length (in Skandha VII) how under the curse of Sanaka and his brothers Jaya and Vijaya, the two attendants of the Lord at Vaikuṇṭha, had to take repeated births on earth. (50) Having finished the ablutions at the close of the Rājasūya sacrifice, Yudhiṣṭhira shone like Indra (the king of gods) in the assembly of Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas. (51) Honoured by Yudhiṣṭhira all the gods, men and ethereal beings gladly returned to their respective abodes glorifying Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and the sacrifice performed by King Yudhiṣṭhira. (52) Duryodhana alone of all those who had attended the sacrifice could not bear the sight of the vast fortune and royal splendour of the Pāṇḍavas. For he was sinful and quarrelsome by nature, a veritable cancer in the body of the Kuru race, brought into being for its destruction. (53)

य इदं कीर्तयेद् विष्णोः कर्म चैद्यवधादिकम् । राजमोक्षे वितानं च सर्वपापैः प्रमुच्यते । ५४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे शिशुपालवधो नाम चतुःसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः । ७४ ।

Parikṣit, anyone who sings of this sport of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa relating to the destruction of Śiśupāla and Jarāsandha, the release of the imprisoned kings and performance of the Rājasūya sacrifice by Yudhiṣṭhira, will be freed of all sin. (54)

Thus ends the seventy-fourth discourse entitled Śiśupāla killed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa), in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXV

Duryodhana's Humiliation

राजोवाच

अजातशत्रोस्तं दृष्ट्वा राजसूयमहोदयम् । सर्वे मुमुदिरे ब्रह्मन् नृदेवा ये समागताः । १ ।
दुर्योधनं वर्जयित्वा रज्जानः सर्वयः सुराः । इति श्रुतं नो भगवन्स्त्रा कारणमुच्यताम् । २ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : Holy sage you told me just now that all the kings, sages and gods who had assembled there rejoiced at the grand success of the Rājasūya sacrifice performed by Yudhiṣṭhira and that Duryodhana was the only exception in this matter. O worshipful one, please tell me the reason of this. (1-2)

ऋषिरुवाच

पितामहस्य ते यज्ञे राजसूये महात्मनः । बान्धवाः परिचर्यायां तस्यासन् प्रेमबन्धनाः । ३ ।
भीमो महानसाध्यक्षो धनाध्यक्षः सुयोधनः । सहदेवस्तु पूजायां नकुलो द्रव्यसाधने । ४ ।
गुरुशुश्रूषणे जिष्णुः कृष्णः पादावनेजने । परिवेषणे द्रुपदजा कर्णो दाने महामनाः । ५ ।
युयुधानो विकर्णश्च हार्दिक्यो विदुरादयः । बाह्लीकपुत्रा भृगुर्वाद्यो ये च सत्तर्दनादयः । ६ ।
निरूपिता महायज्ञे नानाकर्मसु ते तदा । प्रवर्तन्ते स्म राजेन्द्र राज्ञः प्रियचिकीर्षवः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Parikṣit, your grandfather, Yudhiṣṭhira, was a great soul. Bound to him with ties of affection all his relations took upon themselves some form of service or office during the sacrifice. (3) Bhīma was placed in charge of the kitchen, Duryodhana was master of the treasury, Sahadeva was entrusted with the duty of honouring the guests; while Nakula had the charge of procuring supplies. (4) Arjuna waited upon the elders, and Śrī Kṛṣṇa took upon Himself the duty of washing the feet of the guests. Draupadī attended to the work of serving food, while the magnanimous Karna was entrusted with the duty of bestowing gifts. (5) Similarly Sātyaki, Vikarna, Hārdikya, Vidura, Bhūriśravā and the other sons of Bāhlika, Santardana and others were entrusted with one duty or other. All of them endeavoured to perform their respective duties to the satisfaction of Yudhiṣṭhira. (6-7)

ऋत्विक्सदस्यबहुवित्सु सुहृत्तमेषु स्विष्टेषु सनूतसमर्हणदक्षिणाभिः ।

चैद्ये च सात्वतपतेश्वरणं प्रविष्टे चक्रस्ततस्त्वबभूथस्त्रपनं ह्यनद्याम् । ८ ।

मृदङ्गशङ्खपणवधुसुयानकगोमुखाः । वादित्राणि विचित्राणि नेदुरावभूथोत्सवे । ९ ।

नर्तक्यो ननुरुहं गायका यूथशो जगुः । वीणावेपुतलोन्नादस्तेषां स दिवममृशत् । १० ।

चित्रध्वजपताकाग्रैरभेन्द्रस्यन्दनार्वाभिः । खलङ्कृतैर्भटैर्भूपा निर्ययू स्वममालिनः । ११ ।

यदुसुझयकाम्बोजकुल्लेककयकोसलाः । कम्यन्तो भुवं सैन्यैर्यजमानपुरःसराः । १२ ।

सदस्यत्विग्निजश्रेष्ठा ब्रह्मघोषेणभूयसा । देवर्षिपितृगन्धर्वास्तृष्टुवः पुष्पवर्षिणः । १३ ।

खलङ्कृता नरा नार्यो गन्धस्त्रभूषणाम्बरैः । विलिम्पन्त्योऽभिषिञ्चन्त्यो विजहुर्विविधै रसैः । १४ ।

तैलगोरसगन्धोदहरिद्रासान्द्रकुङ्कुमैः । पुम्भिलिप्ताः प्रलिम्पन्त्यो विजहुर्वारयोषितः । १५ ।

Parikṣit ! after the priests and supervisors of the sacrifice, men of learning, friends and relations had been duly honoured with sweet words, rich presents and sacrificial fees and Śiśupāla had entered the feet of the Lord, Yudhiṣṭhira went to the Gaṅgā to perform the concluding ablutions. (8) While the ceremony was being so performed, various instruments of music like the Mṛdaṅga, conch, drum, kettledrum, tabor and trumpet were played upon. (9) The courtesans danced in great joy, the songsters sang in batches. The sound of the Vīṇā, flute and cymbals reached the heavens. (10) Adorned with necklaces of gold, the Yādava, Śrījaya, Kāmboja, Kuru, Kekaya and Kōśala kings, with flags of various colours waving in the air, followed Yudhiṣṭhira to the Gaṅgā shaking the earth with their armies consisting of fully accounted foot-soldiers, elephants, chariots and horses. (11-12) Supervisors of the sacrifice, priests and learned Brāhmaṇas proceeded chanting the Vedic hymns in loud intonations. The gods, Ṛṣis, manes and Gandharvas showered flowers on the procession from the heavens and sang Yudhiṣṭhira's praises. (13) Men and women of the city adorned with scents, garlands, beautiful clothes and ornaments (came out on the public roads and) sported on, smearing and sprinkling one another with liquids of various kinds. (14) The courtesans smeared the men with oil, milk, butter, scented water, turmeric powder, saffron paste, and were themselves smeared over by men in return. It was thus that they amused themselves. (15)

गुप्ता नृभिर्निरगमन्नुपलब्धुमेतद् देव्यो यथा दिवि विमानवरैर्नृदिव्यः ।

ता मातुलेयसखिभिः परिषिच्यमानाः सन्नैर्ब्रह्मसविकसद्बदना विरेजुः । १६ ।

ता देवरानुत सखीन् सिषिचुर्दृतीभिः क्लिन्नाम्बरा विवृतगात्रकुचोरुमध्याः ।

औत्सुक्यमुत्कबराच्यवमानमालयाः क्षोभं दधुर्मलधियां रुचिरैर्विहारैः । १७ ।

Just as celestial ladies thronged in the sky in their beautiful aerial cars (to see this festivity on earth), (even) so the ladies of the royal House of Indraprastha, curious to have a look at the grand procession, came out (in beautiful palanquins and other vehicles) guarded by foot-soldiers Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, together with His companions, sprinkled water (of various colours on them), which made their faces, bloom in bashful smiles, thus heightening their beauty. (16) Sprinkled with water the clothes of the queens got wet, so that their limbs including their breasts, thighs and hips could be seen through. They also took up syringes filled with coloured water and threw jets of water on their brothers-in-law and their friends. In the flurry of the moment their braids got loosened and flowers dropped therefrom. Parikṣit, the sight of this lovely and innocent sport on their part brought impious thoughts in the mind of people possessed of impure hearts. (17)

स सप्राइ रथमारूढः सदश्वं रुक्ममालिनम् । व्यरोचत स्वपत्नीभिः क्रियाभिः क्रतुराडिव । १८ ।
 पत्नीसंयाजावभृथैश्चरित्वा ते तमृत्विजः । आचान्तं स्नापयाञ्चकुरगङ्गायां सह कृष्णया । १९ ।
 देवदत्तुभयो नेदुर्नरदुन्दुभिभिः समम् । मुमुचुः पुष्पवर्षाणि देवर्षिपितृमानवाः । २० ।
 सस्तुस्तत्र ततः सर्वे वर्णाश्रमयुता नराः । महापातक्यपि यतः सद्यो मुच्येत किल्बिषात् । २१ ।
 अथ राजाहते क्षौमे परिधाय स्वलङ्कृतः । ऋत्विक्सदस्यविप्रादीनानर्चाभरणाम्बरैः । २२ ।
 बभ्रुश्रान्तिनृपान् मित्रसुहृदोऽन्यांश्च सर्वशः । अभीक्ष्णं पूजयामास नारायणपरो नृपः । २३ ।
 सर्वे जनाः सुररुचो मणिकुण्डलस्रगुष्णीषकञ्चुकदुकूलमहार्घ्यहाराः ।
 नार्यश्च कुण्डलयुगलकवृन्दजुष्टवक्रश्रियः कनकमेखलया विरेजुः । २४ ।

Seated in his chariot drawn by the best horses and decked with gold necklaces, Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira with Draupadī and other consorts looked as if the great sacrifice Rājasūya with the attendant rituals had assumed human forms. (18) After the ritual known by the name Patni-Samyāja and the rites connected with the concluding ablutions had been over, the king performed Ācamana (sipped water born the palm of his hand), and, as directed by priests, bathed in the Gaṅgā alongwith Draupadī. (19) At that time the drums of celestials sounded in the heavens joined with the sounding of drums by men; and the gods. Ṛṣis, manes and men showered flowers. (20) After the Emperor had finished his ablutions, people belonging to all castes and stages of life took their dips in the Gaṅgā; for a bath at that time rids even the most sinful of their sins forthwith. (21) Then Yudhiṣṭhira put a piece of new silk cloth round his loins and another round his shoulders and adorning himself with ornaments, he honoured the priests and supervisors of the sacrifice as well as other Brāhmaṇas with gifts of cloth and ornaments. (22) Parīkṣit, a sincere devotee of God, the Emperor saw God in every being and honoured all his relations and kinsmen, brother princes, friends and well-wishers, and other ordinary folk again and again. (23) Wearing jewelled ear-rings, garlands of flowers, turbans, long coats, pieces of silk and costly necklaces of pearls all these people looked like gods come down on earth. And the women looked exceptionally charming with the beauty of their faces enhanced by their ear-rings and their overhanging locks, and with the zones of gold lying round their hips. (24)

अथर्त्विजो महाशीलाः सदस्या ब्रह्मवादिनः । ब्रह्मक्षत्रियविदशूद्रा राजानो ये समागताः । २५ ।
 देवर्षिपितृभूतानि लोकपालाः सहानुगाः । पूजितास्तमनुज्ञाय स्वधामानि ययुर्नृप । २६ ।
 हरिदासस्य राजर्षे राजसूयमहोदयम् । नैवातृप्यन् प्रशंसन्तः पिबन् मर्योऽमृतं यथा । २७ ।
 ततो युधिष्ठिरो राजा सुहृत्सन्धिविबान्धवान् । प्रेम्णा निवासयामास कृष्णं च त्यागकातरः । २८ ।
 भगवानपि तत्राङ्ग न्यवात्सीत्तन्मियङ्करः । प्रस्थाप्य यदुवीरांश्च साम्बादींश्च कुशस्थलीम् । २९ ।
 इत्थं राजा धर्मसुतो मनोरथमहार्णवम् । सुदुस्तरं समुतीर्य कृष्णेनासीद् गतज्वरः । ३० ।

Parīkṣit, all those who had assembled there—priests of high character, supervisors of the sacrifice well-versed in the Vedas, Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas, Vaiśyas and Sūdras, princes, gods, Ṛṣis, manes and members of other classes of beings, Indra and the other protectors of the world with their attendants—now took leave of Yudhiṣṭhira, and returned to their respective abodes, receiving appropriate honours from the Emperor. (25-26) Just as a mortal would never feel satisfied with a drink of nectar, so they did not get tired of praising the grand success of the Rājasūya sacrifice performed by the saintly King Yudhiṣṭhira, who was a great devotee of God. (27) The Emperor lovingly detained his kinsmen, friends and relations and also Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa at his capital, for he could not even bear the idea of their separation. (28) Sending away Sāmba, his other sons as well as the principal Yādava warriors to Dwārakā, the Almighty Lord stayed there with a view to pleasing the king. (29) Thus having realized with the help of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the long-cherished ambition of performing the Rājasūya sacrifice, which was as difficult to realize as it is to cross of ocean, Yudhiṣṭhira now heaved a sigh of relief. (30)

एकदात्पुः तस्य वीक्ष्य दुर्योधनः श्रियम् । अतप्यद् राजसूयस्य महिषं चाच्युतात्मनः । ३१ ।

यस्मिन् नरेन्द्रदितिजेन्द्रसुरेन्द्रलक्ष्मीनां विभान्ति किल विश्वसृजोपकृताः ।

ताभिः पतीन् द्रुपदराजसुतोपतस्थे यस्यां विषक्तहृदयः कुरुराडतप्यत् । ३२ ।

यस्मिंस्तदा मधुपतेर्महिषीसहस्रं श्रोणीभरेण शनकैः कणदङ्घ्रिशीभम् ।

मध्ये सुचारु कुचकुङ्कुमशोणहारं श्रीमन्मुखं प्रचलकुण्डलकुन्तलाढ्यम् । ३३ ।

On a certain day, Duryodhana felt greatly troubled at heart at the sight of Yudhiṣṭhira's splendour in his palace and the greatness attained by him, a great devotee of God, through the performance of the Rājasūya sacrifice. (31) The palace contained all the wealth and royal splendours of earthly monarchs, demon kings and lords of celestials, got together by the demon Maya, who had built it. Queen Draupadī waited upon her consorts with all these materials and it was mainly due to his attachment for her that Duryodhana was filled with jealousy. (32) More than a thousand consorts of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa lived in that palace at the time. The anklets at their feet charmingly jingled when they walked with slow paces on account of their bulky hips. They were slender-waisted and the saffron on their breast made their white necklace of pearls appear red. Rocking ear-rings and flowing locks enhanced the beauty of their faces. (33)

सभायां मयकृपायां कापि धर्मसुतोऽधिराट् । वृतोऽनुजैर्बन्धुभिश्च कृष्णेनापि स्वचक्षुषा । ३४ ।

आसीनः काञ्चने साक्षादासने मधवानिव । पारमेष्ठ्यश्रिया जुष्टः स्तूयमानश्च वन्दिभिः । ३५ ।

तत्र दुर्योधनो मानी परीतो भ्रातृभिर्नृप । किरीटमाली न्यविशदसिहस्तः क्षिपन् रुषा । ३६ ।

स्थलेऽभ्यगृह्णाद् वस्त्रान्तं जलं मत्वा स्थलेऽपतत् । जले च स्थलवद् भ्रान्त्या मयमायाविमोहितः । ३७ ।

जहास भीमस्तं दृष्ट्वा स्त्रियो नृपतयोऽपरे । निवार्यमाणा अप्यङ्ग राज्ञा कृष्णानुमोदिताः । ३८ ।

स व्रीडितोऽजागवदनो रुषा ज्वलन् निष्क्रम्य तूष्णीं प्रययौ गजाह्वयम् ।

हाहेति शब्दः सुमहानभूत् सतामजातशत्रुर्विमना इवाभवत् ।

बभूव तूष्णीं भगवान् भुवो भरं समुज्जिहीर्षुभ्रमति स्म यददृश । ३९ ।

एतत्तेऽभिहितं राजन् यत् पृष्ठोऽहमिह त्वया । सुयोधनस्य दौरात्म्यं राजसूये महाकृतौ । ४० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे दुर्योधनमानभङ्गो नाम पञ्चसत्तितमोऽध्यायः । ७५ ।

In a part of the Hall constructed by Maya, Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira, invested with imperial glory, was once seated on a throne of gold. Surrounded by his brother and kinsmen, and his guide, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, and extolled by bards, he looked like Indra. (34-35) Proud Duryodhana accompanied by his brothers appeared there, sword in hand, with a crown on his head and a necklace hanging on his breast. He angrily scolded the guards at the gate as he entered. (36) Deluded by the superb skill of Maya, he drew up his skirts mistaking a certain part of the floor for a sheet of water; and proceeding further he stumbled into water mistaking it for the bare floor. (37) Dear Parikṣit ! Bhīma, the royal ladies and other princes laughed when they saw him fall, notwithstanding Yudhiṣṭhira's remonstrances, being encouraged by a gesture from Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (38) Duryodhana was abashed at this discomfiture. Burning with rage, and with his face cast down, he silently left the Hall and immediately departed for Hastināpura. The incident raised a cry of dismay from all good people and Yudhiṣṭhira felt perturbed over it as it were. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, however, kept quiet over the incident, intent as He was upon relieving the burden of the earth. In fact, it was His enchanting look which threw Duryodhana into confusion and brought about the incident. (39) Parīkṣit, you asked me on this occasion how at the great Rājāsūya sacrifice Duryodhana developed his intense ill-will against the Pāṇḍavas. I have told you the secret of it. (40)

Thus ends the seventy-fifth discourse entitled "Duryodhana's Humiliation" in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षट्सप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXVI

Śālva's Encounter with the Yādavas

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथान्यदपि कृष्णस्य शृणु कर्माद्धृतं नृप। क्रीडानरशरीरस्य यथा सौभपतिर्हृतः । १ ।
 शिशुपालसखः शाल्वो रुक्मिण्युद्वाह आगतः। यदुभिर्निर्जितं संख्ये जरासन्धाद्यस्तथा । २ ।
 शाल्वः प्रतिज्ञामकरोत् शृण्वतां सर्वभूभुजाम्। अयादवीं क्ष्मां करिष्ये पौरुषं मम पश्यत । ३ ।
 इति मूढः प्रतिज्ञाय देवं पशुपतिं प्रभुम्। आराधयामास नृप पांसुमुष्टिं सकृद् यसन् । ४ ।
 संवत्सरात् भगवानाशुतोष उमापतिः। वरेणच्छन्दयामास शाल्वं शरणमागतम् । ५ ।
 देवासुरमनुष्याणां गन्धर्वोऽरारक्षसाम्। अभ्येष्टं कामगं वस्त्रे स यानं वृष्णिभीषणम् । ६ ।
 तथेति गिरिशदिष्टो मयः परपुरञ्जयः। पुरं निर्माय शाल्वाय प्रादात्सौभमयसयम् । ७ ।
 स लब्ध्वा कामगं यानं तमोधाम दुरासदम्। ययौ द्वारवतीं शाल्वो वैरं वृष्णिकृतं स्मरन् । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parīkṣit, now hear the story of still another wonderful achievement of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who had sportfully assumed a human semblance. This relates to the death of Śālva, owner of the celebrated aerial car called Saubha. (1) Śālva was a friend of Śiśupāla and accompanied the latter (as a member of the bridegroom's party) for his (proposed) wedding with Rukmiṇī. At that time he, alongwith Jarāsandha and others, was completely routed in battle by the Yādus. (2) Within the hearing of all the princes (assembled there) Śālva took a vow saying, "I shall rid the earth of the Yādavas; you will then witness my prowess." (3) Parīkṣit, having thus pledged himself, the fool began to worship the god of gods, Śaṅkara, taking by way of nourishment only a handful of dust once a day. (4) At the end of a year the almighty Spouse of Umā, Lord Śaṅkara, (who is propitiated very soon), offered to confer a boon on Śālva, who had sought his protection. (5) Śālva requested the Lord to confer on him an aerial car which could be taken wherever he liked, and which could not be broken by the gods, Asuras, men, Gandharvas and Rākṣasas, and which would be a terror to the Yādus. (6) Śaṅkara said, "Be it so !" Under his command, the demon Maya, who could (easily) bring about the fall of an enemy's stronghold, constructed an aerial car, called Saubha, which was made of steel, and handed it over to Śālva. It was not a car, but a city in miniature. (7) Full of darkness within, it was inaccessible (to others). It could be taken wherever one liked. Obtaining this car, Śālva proceeded against Dwārakā remembering the old grudge against the Yādus. (8)

निरुद्ध्य सेनया शाल्वो महत्या भरतर्षभ । पुरीं बभञ्जोपवनान्युद्यानानि च सर्वशः । १ ।
 सगोपुराणि द्वाराणि प्रासादादालोलिकाः । विहारान् स विमानाग्र्यान्निपेतुः शस्त्रवृष्टयः । १० ।
 शिला हुमाश्चाशनयः सर्पा आसारशर्कराः । प्रचण्डश्चक्रवातोऽभूद् रजसाऽऽच्छादिता दिशः । ११ ।
 इत्यर्द्यमाना सौभेन कृष्णस्य नगरी भृशम् । नाभ्यपद्यत शं राज्ञिखिपुरेण यथा मही । १२ ।
 प्रद्युम्नो भगवान् वीक्ष्य बाध्यमाना निजाः प्रजाः । मा भैष्टेयभ्यधाद् वीरो रथारूढो महायशः । १३ ।
 सात्यकिश्चास्तेष्वाश्च साम्बोऽङ्कुरः सहानुजः । हार्दिक्यो भानुविन्दश्च गदश्च शुक्रसारणौ । १४ ।
 अपरे च महेष्वासा रथयूथपयूथपाः । निर्ययुर्दशिता गुप्ता रथेभाश्चपदातिभिः । १५ ।
 ततः प्रवृत्ते युद्धे शाल्वानां यदुभिः सह । यथासुराणां विबुधैस्तुमुलं लोमहर्षणम् । १६ ।
 ताश्च सौभपतेर्मया दिव्यान्त्रै रविमणीसुतः । क्षणेन नाशयामास नैशं तम इवोष्माणुः । १७ ।
 दिव्याथ पञ्चविंशत्या स्वर्णपुङ्खुरयोमुखैः । शाल्वस्य ध्वजिनीपालं शरैः सन्नतपर्वभिः । १८ ।
 शतेनाताडयच्छाल्वमेकैकेनास्य सैनिकान् । दशभिर्दशभिर्नेतृन् वाहनानि त्रिभिस्त्रिभिः । १९ ।
 तदद्भुतं महत् कर्म प्रद्युम्नस्य महात्मनः । दृष्ट्वा तं पूजयामासुः सर्वे स्वपरसैनिकाः । २० ।
 बहुरूपैकरूपं तद् दृश्यते न च दृश्यते । मायामयं मयकृतं दुर्बिभाव्यं परैरभूत् । २१ ।
 क्वचिद् भूमौ क्वचिद् व्योम्नि गिरिमूर्ध्नि जले क्वचित् । अलातचक्रवद् भ्राम्यत् सौभं तद् दुरवस्थितम् । २२ ।
 यत्र यत्रोपलक्ष्येत ससौभः सहसैनिकः । शाल्वस्ततस्ततोऽमुञ्चन् शरान् सात्वतयूथपाः । २३ ।
 शरैरग्न्यकंसंस्पर्शैराशीविषदुरासदैः । पीड्यमानपुरानीकः शाल्वोऽमुह्यत् परेरितेः । २४ ।

Parikṣit, Śālva besieged the city with a large army and engaged himself in the wholesale destruction of its gardens and parks, the gateways with their massive superstructures, the mansions with their upper chambers and compound wall and the places of recreation. Volleys of destructive weapons rained from that huge aerial car. (9-10) Blocks of stone, trees, thunderbolts serpents and hailstones were showered on the city, and a fearful tornado was let loose over it, filling the quarters with dust. (11) Just as in the days of yore the earth suffered under the scourge of the demon Tripura, even so the city of Dwārakā was subjected to untold suffering by Śālva's aerial car, Saubha. The people could not find respite (even for a moment). (12) Observing the distress of the people, the renowned warrior, Bhagavān Pradyumna, mounted his chariot and cheered them by saying 'Fear not'. (13) Sātyaki, Caruḍeṣṇa, Sāmba, Akūrā and his younger brothers, Kṛtavarmā, Bhānuvinda, Gada, Śuka, Sāraṇa and many other big generals followed him with mighty bows in their hands. They were all protected with armours and were guarded by chariots, elephants, horses and foot-soldiers. (14-15) Just as in the days of yore there was a bitter conflict between the Devas and Asuras, even so a fierce and thrilling battle ensued between the soldiers of Śālva and the Yādavas. (16) With the help of his celestial weapons Pradyumna broke in an instant the magic spell of Śālva, the owner of Saubha, even as the sun dispels the darkness of the night. (17) With twenty-five arrows having feathers of gold and iron tips and with the knots of their wood well polished, he pierced the commander-in-chief of Śālva's army. (18) With a hundred more he struck Śālva (himself) and discharged one arrow each at his soldiers, ten each at his charioteers and three each at his horses. (19) Seeing this great and wonderful feat of arms exhibited by the valiant Pradyumna, the soldiers on both sides admired him. (Parikṣit,) the aerial car of Śālva constructed by Maya contained such magical contrivances that now it appeared as many, and now as only one, now it appeared in the sky, and now disappeared altogether. The Yādavas, therefore, found it difficult to discover where it was at a particular moment. (20-21) Now it descended on the ground, now flew into the air, now perched on the summit of a hill, and now began to float on water. Like a rotating firebrand it went round and round hardly stopping at any point. (22) Wherever Śālva with his car and soldiers came within their sight, the generals of the Yādava army showered their arrows on them. (23) Struck by those arrows, which burned like the sun and fire and were unapproachable like venomous snakes, Śālva's floating city and army sustained a severe blow, and Śālva himself fainted. (24)

शाल्वानीकपशस्त्रौधैर्वृष्णिर्वीरा भृशार्दिताः । न तयजू रणं स्वं स्वं लोकद्वयजिगीषवः । २५ ।
 शाल्वामार्यो द्युमान् नाम प्रद्युम्नं प्राकप्रपीडितः । आसाद्य गदया मौर्व्या व्याहृत्य च्यनदद् बली । २६ ।
 प्रद्युम्नं गदया शीर्णवक्षःस्थलमरिन्दमम् । अपोवाह रणात् सूतो धर्मविद् दासकात्मजः । २७ ।
 लब्धसंज्ञो मुहूर्तेन कार्ष्णिः सारथिमब्रवीत् । अहो असाध्विदं सूत यद् रणान्नेऽपसर्पणम् । २८ ।
 न यदूनां कुलं जातः श्रूयते रणविच्युतः । विना मत् क्लीबचित्तेन सूतेन प्राप्तकिल्बिषात् । २९ ।
 किं नु वक्ष्येऽभिसङ्गम्य पितरौ रामकेशवौ । युद्धात् सम्यगपक्रान्तः पृष्ठस्तत्रात्मनः क्षमम् । ३० ।
 व्यक्तं मे कथयिष्यन्ति हसन्त्यो भ्रातृजामयः । क्लैब्यं कथं कथं वीर तवान्यैः कथ्यतां मृधे । ३१ ।

(Parikṣit,) the Yādava warriors too were equally harassed by the volleys of arms showered by the generals of Śālva's army; but they did not abandon their respective positions on the battle-field; for they thought that death in battle would secure happiness in the other world, whereas victory would establish their supremacy on the earth. (25) (Parikṣit), there was a minister of Śālva (and a mighty warrior) Dyumān by name, to whom Pradyumna had previously dealt severe blows; he now suddenly attacked Pradyumna with a steel mace and striking a heavy blow with it gave a loud roar. (26) The blow smashed the chest of Pradyumna, the chastiser of foes. Thereupon Dārūka's son, his charioteer, knowing the canons of warfare, carried him away from the field. (27) Regaining consciousness after about an hour, Pradyumna said to his charioteer, "Oh, charioteer, you have done me a disservice by removing me from the field of battle. (28) No one born in Yādava's race except me is known to have abandoned the battle-field. You are a weak-minded charioteer: you have certainly wronged me. (29) What reply befitting my position shall I give to my uncle, Śrī Balarāma, and my father, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, when I see them and when they question me, now that I have cleverly managed to flee away from the battle-field? (30) My sisters-in-law will laugh at me and openly say, 'Please do tell us, O warrior, how you lost your manliness in the encounter with your enemy'. (31)

सारथिरुवाच

धर्मं विजानताऽऽयुष्मन् कृतमेतन्मया विभो । सूतः कृच्छ्रान्तं रक्षेद् रथिनं सारथिं रथी । ३२ ।
 एतद् विदित्वा तु भवान् मयापोवाहितो रणात् । उपसृष्टः परेणेति मूर्च्छितो गदया हतः । ३३ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवतं महापुराणं पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे शाल्वयुद्धे षड्सप्ततितमोऽध्यायः । ७६ ।

The charioteer replied : O long-lived one, I did all this knowingly, considering it to be the proper duty of a charioteer. Lord, the rule of battle is that the charioteer should come to the rescue of the warrior when the latter's life is in danger, and similarly the warrior should save the life of the charioteer in peril. (32) Cognizant of this rule, I removed you from the battle-field when I found that, struck by the enemy with a mace, you had sustained a fatal injury and fainted. (33)

Thus ends the seventy-sixth discourse, bearing on the (Yadus') encounter with Śālva, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Sarhīitā.

अथ सप्तसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXVII

Śālva's Deliverance

श्रीशुक उवाच

स तूपसृश्य सलिलं दंशितो धृतकार्मुकः । नय मां द्युमतः पार्श्वं वीरस्येव्याह सारथिम् । १ ।
विधमन्तं स्वसैन्यानि द्युमन्तं रुक्मिणीसुतः । प्रतिहत्य प्रत्यविध्यन्नारावैरष्टभिः स्मयन् । २ ।
चतुर्भिश्चतुरो वाहान् सूतमेकेन चाहनत् । द्वाभ्यां धनुश्च केतुं च शरेणान्येन वै शिरः । ३ ।
गदसात्यकिसाव्याद्या जघ्नुः सौभपतेर्बलम् । पेतुः समुद्रे सौभेयाः सर्वे संचिन्नकन्धराः । ४ ।
एवं यदूनां शाल्वानां निघ्नतामितरेतरम् । युद्धं त्रिणवरात्रं तदभूत्तुलमुल्बणम् । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit), Pradyumna now washed his hands and face, put on his armour, took up the bow and spoke to his charioteer thus, "Take me (once more) to the warrior, Dyumān." (1) Dyumān was at that time playing havoc with the Yādava army. First checking his depredations Pradyumna smilingly assailed Dyumān with eight shafts. (2) With four he struck his four horses, with one the charioteer, and with one shaft each he tore off Dyumān's bow and banner and with the remaining one he struck down Dyumān's head. (3) Gada, Sātyaki, Sāmba and others began to mow down the army of Śālva. The inmates of the aerial car, Saubha, with their necks severed from their bodies, dropped one by one into the sea. (4) Thus the Yādava army and the army of Śālva began to strike one another, and a fierce hand-to-hand fight raged between them for twenty-seven days and nights (without break). (5)

इन्द्रप्रस्थं गतः कृष्ण आहूतो धर्मसूनुना । राजसूयेऽथ निर्वृते शिशुपाले च संस्थिते । ६ ।
कुरुवृन्दननुज्ञाय मुनींश्च ससुतां पृथाम् । निमित्तान्यतिघोराराणि पश्यन् द्वारवर्ती ययौ । ७ ।
आह चाहमिहायात आर्यमिश्राभिसङ्गतः । राजन्याश्चैष्टपक्षीया नूनं हन्युः पुरीं मम । ८ ।
वीक्ष्य तत् कदनं स्वानां निरुध्य पुररक्षणम् । सौभं च शाल्वराजं च दारुकं प्राह केशवः । ९ ।
रथं प्रापय मे सूत शाल्वस्यान्तिकमाशु वै । सम्भ्रमस्ते न कर्तव्यो मायावी सौभराडयम् । १० ।
इत्युक्तश्चोदयामास रथमास्थाय दारुकः । विशन्तं ददृशुः सर्वं स्वे परे चारुणानुजम् । ११ ।
शाल्वश्च कृष्णमालोक्य हतप्रायबलेश्वरः । प्राहरत् कृष्णसुताय शक्तिं भीमरवां मूढे । १२ ।
तामापतन्तीं नभसि महोल्कामिव रंहसा । भासयन्तीं दिशः शौरिः सायकैः शतधाच्छिनत् । १३ ।
तं च षोडशभिर्विद्ध्वा ब्राणैः सौभं च खे भ्रमत् । अविध्यच्छरसन्दोहैः खं सूर्यं इव रश्मिभिः । १४ ।
शाल्वः शौरेस्तु दोः सव्यं सशार्ङ्गं शार्ङ्गधन्वनः । बिभेद न्यपतद्भस्तात् शार्ङ्गमासीत्तदद्भुतम् । १५ ।
हाहाकारो महानासीद् भूतानां तत्र पश्यताम् । विनद्य सौभराडुच्चैरिदमाह जनार्दनम् । १६ ।
यत्त्वया मूढ नः सख्युभ्रान्तुर्भार्या हतेक्षताम् । प्रमत्तः स सभामध्ये त्वया व्यापादितः सखा । १७ ।
तं त्वाद्य निशितैर्बाणैरपरराजितमानिनम् । नयाय्यपुनरावृत्तिं यदि तिष्ठेममग्रतः । १८ ।

Having been invited by Yudhiṣṭhira, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa was at that time staying at Indraprastha. Now that the Rājasūya sacrifice had been concluded and Śiśupāla had been killed, Śrī Kṛṣṇa took leave of the elderly Kurus and Rsis, Kuntī and the Pāṇḍavas, and proceeded to Dwārakā. On His way He observed frightful omens. (6-7) He therefore, said to Himself, "I came away hither with My revered brother, Śrī Balarāma; the kings in alliance with Śiśupāla must have surely availed themselves of the opportunity to attack Dwārakā." (8)

Reaching there, He found His people in a sad plight. Entrusting Balarāma with the work of defending the city and, observing Śālva and his aerial car, Saubha, He said to (His charioteer), Dārūka, (as follows). (9) "Take My chariot with great despatch to Śālva, owner of the aerial car, Saubha. Take care that you do not get frightened; for he is a warrior skilled in the use of magic." (10) Thus instructed, Dārūka mounted the chariot and drove it to the battle-field. As soon as Śrī Kṛṣṇa entered the field of battle, warriors on both sides recognized Him from the emblem of Garuḍa borne on His banner. (11) (Parīkṣit !) Śālva's army had mostly been extirpated. Observing Śrī Kṛṣṇa on the battle-field, Śālva discharged a terrible lance aimed at His charioteer. With a terrible noise it rushed through the air with great speed like a meteor illuminating the quarters. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa tore that lance into a hundred pieces with his arrows, hit Śālva with sixteen shafts and pierced the aerial car Saubha, that was wheeling in the sky, with volleys of arrows, even as the sun fills the space with his rays. (12—14) In the meantime Śālva hit Śrī Kṛṣṇa in the left arm with an arrow. The Śārīga bow which was being held by that arm fell from Śrī Kṛṣṇa's hand. It was a wonderful feat on the part of Śālva. (15) A loud outcry of wonder and fear rose from beings who watched the conflict (from the sky or from the ground). Śālva now gave a loud roar and said to Śrī Kṛṣṇa:— (16) "O deluded fool, you carried away before our very eyes the fiancé of our friend and brother, Śiśupāla, and killed him in an assembly, when he was off his guard. (17) I know you regard yourself as invincible. But if you stand before me in this fight today, I shall, with my sharp arrows, send you to the region from where people do not return." (18)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

वृथा त्वं कल्यसे मन्द न पश्यस्यन्तिकेऽन्तकम् । पौरुषं दर्शयन्ति स्म शूरा न बहुभाषिणः । १९ ।

इत्युक्त्वा भगवाञ्छाल्वं गदया भीमवेगया । तताड जत्रौ संरब्धः स चकम्पे वमन्नसृक् । २० ।

गदायां सन्निवृत्तायां शाल्वस्त्वन्तरधीयत । ततो मुहूर्तं आगत्य पुरुषः शिरसाच्युतम् ।

देवक्या प्रहितोऽस्मीति नत्वा प्राह वचो रुदन् । २१ ।

कृष्ण कृष्ण महाबाहो पिता ते पितृवत्सल । बद्ध्वापनीतः शाल्वेन सौनिकेन यथा पशुः । २२ ।

निशम्य विप्र्रियं कृष्णो मानुषो प्रकृति गतः । विमनस्को घृणी स्नेहाद् बभाषे प्राकृतो यथा । २३ ।

कथं राममसम्भ्रान्तं जित्वाजेयं सुरासुरैः । शाल्वेनाल्पीयसा नीतः पिता मे बलवान्विधिः । २४ ।

इति ब्रुवाणे गोविन्दे सौभराद् प्रत्युपस्थितः । वसुदेवमिवानीय कृष्णं चेदमुवाच सः । २५ ।

एष ते जनिता तातो यदर्थमिह जीवसि । वधिष्ये वीक्षतस्तेऽमुमीशश्चेत् पाहि बालिश । २६ ।

एवं निर्भर्त्स्य मायावी खड्गेनानकदुन्दुभेः । उक्त्य शिर आदाय खस्थं सौभं समाविशत् । २७ ।

ततो मुहूर्तं प्रकृतावुपप्लुतः स्वबोध आस्ते स्वजनानुपङ्गतः ।

महानुभावस्तद्वृद्ध्यदामुरीं मायां स शाल्वप्रसृतां मयोदिताम् । २८ ।

न तत्र दूतं न पितुः कलेवरं प्रबुद्ध आजौ समपश्यदच्युतः ।

स्वाप्ने यथा चाम्बरचारिणं रिपुं सौभस्थमालोक्य निहन्तुमुद्यतः । २९ ।

Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa replied : " O fool, in vain do you brag. You do not perceive Death standing before you. True heroes do not waste their words, but exhibit their prowess in battle." (19) Saying this, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa in great rage struck Śālva with tremendous force on the collar-bone with His mace. It made Śālva shake from head to foot and vomit blood. (20) When the mace returned to the Lord, Śālva for his part (suddenly) disappeared. Then after an hour a certain person came in, bowed with his head bent low to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and bursting into tears, said—" I have brought a message from Devakī. (21) She says, " O Kṛṣṇa of mighty arms, most devoted to parents, Your father has been captured and carried away by Śālva, just as a butcher drags an animal to be slaughtered." (22) Hearing this unpleasant news, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa exhibited the play of human emotions. Troubled at heart and full of compassion and filial affection like an ordinary human being, He said: (23) "How is it that My Brother, who cannot be subdued or daunted even by gods or Asuras, has been overcome by Śālva, who though a pygmy before Him has succeeded in carrying away our father? Indeed, Providence is all-powerful." (24) While Śrī Kṛṣṇa was saying this, Śālva made his appearance before Him holding Vasudeva as it were, and said to Him (as follows): (25) "O fool, here is your father who has brought you into being and for whom you live. I shall slay him before your eyes. Save him, if you can." (26) Uttering this threat, that master of magic, Śālva cut off the head of that (seeming) Vasudeva and, taking it with him, withdrew into his aerial car, Saubha, which stood near him in the air. (27) (Parikṣit!) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the embodiment of perfect wisdom by nature and has limitless power. Due to affection for his father, He remained plunged in sorrow, like an ordinary human being, for a moment. But presently He understood that it was nothing but an illusion created by Śālva, who was taught this art by the Asura named Maya. (28) As He fully recovered from the spell of Maya, Śrī Kṛṣṇa found that both the messenger and the body of His father had vanished from the battle-field like visions seen in a dream. Observing Śālva at this moment in his flying aerial car, the Lord resolved to kill him. (29)

एवं वदन्ति राजर्ये ऋषयः के च नाश्विताः । यत् स्ववाचो विरुध्येत नूनं ते न स्मरन्त्युत । ३० ।

क शोकमोहौ स्नेहो वा भयं वा येऽज्ञसम्भवाः । क चाखण्डितविज्ञानज्ञानैश्वर्यस्त्वखण्डितः । ३१ ।

यत्पादसेवोर्जितयाऽऽत्मविद्यया

हिन्वन्त्यनाद्यात्मविपर्ययग्रहम् ।

लभन्त आत्मीयमनन्तमैश्वरं कुतो नु मोहः परमस्य सङ्गते । ३२ ।

Parikṣit, this is the version of a few Ṛsis, who do not care so much for consistency. Surely they forget that such statements with reference to Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa contradict their own statements made on other occasions. (30) Grief, infatuation, attachment and fear—these find place only in the ignorant. They cannot be attributed to Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Perfect Being), the embodiment of perfect knowledge, wisdom and glory. (31) The greatest of sages worship the lotus-like feet of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and thereby attain the knowledge of the Self, which roots out ignorance existing from time without beginning in the form of identification of the self with the body and gain infinite spiritual glory. How can the Lord, who is the sole refuge of such sages, be subject to delusion? (32)

तं शस्त्रपूरैः प्रहरन्तमोजसा शाल्वं शरैः शौरिरमोघविक्रमः ।

विद्ध्वाच्छिनद् वर्म धनुः शिरोमणिं सौभं च शत्रोर्गदया सरोज ह । ३३ ।

तत् कृष्णहस्तेरितया विचूर्णितं पपात तोये गदया सहस्रधा ।

विसृज्य तद् भूतलमास्थितो गदामुद्यम्य शाल्वोऽच्युतमभ्यगाद् द्रुतम् । ३४ ।

आधावतः सगदं तस्य बाहुं भल्लेन छित्वाथ रथाङ्गमद्भुतम् ।

वधाय शाल्वस्य लयार्कसन्निभं बिभ्रद् बभौ सार्क इवोदयाचलः । ३५ ।

जहार तेनैव शिरः सकुण्डलं किरीटयुक्तं पुरुषायिनो हरिः ।

वज्रेण वृत्रस्य यथा पुरन्दरो बभूव हाहेति वचस्तदा नृणाम् । ३६ ।

तस्मिन् निपतिते पापे सौभे च गदया हते । नेदुर्दुन्दुभयो राजन् दिवि देवगणेतिताः ।

सखीनामपचिति कुर्वन् दन्तवक्त्रो रुषाभ्यगात् । ३७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे सौभवधो नाम सप्तसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः । ७७ ।

(Now,) Śālva vigorously attacked Śrī Kṛṣṇa with a volley of (destructive) weapons; but Śrī Kṛṣṇa, possessed of unfailing prowess, pierced Śālva with a shower of arrows and broke into pieces his armour, bow and the jewel on his head. With the mace, the Lord smashed Śālva's aerial car, Saubha. (33) Struck by the powerful blow of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's mace, the car broke into a thousand pieces and fell into the ocean. Leaving the car, Śālva dropped down on land and taking up his mace rushed headlong at Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (34) When the Lord saw him advancing towards Him, He cut off with a spear the arm with which he held the mace. Then, with a view to killing Śālva, the Lord took up His wonderful discus, dazzling like the sun at the time of universal destruction. Holding the discus in His hand, Śrī Kṛṣṇa vied in splendour with the Eastern Hill bearing the sun on its peak. (35) With that discus Śrī Kṛṣṇa lopped off the head, adorned with a crown and ear-rings, of that repository of Māyā, Śālva, even as (in the days of yore) Indra with his thunderbolt cut off the head of Vṛtrāsura. The fall of Śālva in battle raised an outcry of distress among his men. (36) Parikṣit, the gods sounded their drums in heaven when the wicked Śālva was struck down, and his aerial car was smashed to pieces. Now came the turn of Dantavakra, another friend of Śiśupāla, who marched in great rage against Śrī Kṛṣṇa to avenge the death of his friends, Śiśupāla and Śālva. (37)

Thus ends the seventy-seventh discourse entitled "The Deliverance of Śālva," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टसप्ततितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXVIII

Deliverance of Dantavakra and Vidūṛatha; Sūta killed by

Śrī Balarāma during His Pilgrimage

श्रीशुक उवाच

शिशुपालस्य शाल्वस्य षोण्ड्रकस्यापि दुर्मतिः । परलोकगतानां च कुर्वन् पारोक्ष्यसौहृदम् । १ ।
 एकः पदातिः संकुब्धो गदापाणिः प्रक्रमयन् । पदभ्यामिमां महाराज महासत्त्वो व्यदुष्यत । २ ।
 तं तथाऽऽयात्तमालोक्य गदामादाय सत्वरः । अवप्लुत्य रथात् कृष्णः सिन्धुं वेलेव प्रत्यधात् । ३ ।
 गदामुद्यम्य कारुण्ये मुकुन्दं प्राह दुर्मदः । दिष्ट्या दिष्ट्या भवानद्य मम दृष्टिपथं गतः । ४ ।
 त्वं मातुलेयो नः कृष्ण मित्रधुङ्गां जिघांससि । अतस्त्वां गदया मन्द हनिष्ये वक्रकल्पया । ५ ।
 तद्द्वान्ण्यमुपैष्यन्न मित्राणां मित्रवत्सलः । बन्धुरूपमरि हत्वा व्याधिं देहचरं यथा । ६ ।
 एवं रूक्षैस्तुन्द वावयैः कृष्णं तोत्रैरिव द्विपम् । गदया ताडयन्मूर्ध्नि सिंहवद् व्यनदस्रः । ७ ।
 गदयाभिहतोऽप्याजौ न चचाल यदूढहः । कृष्णोऽपि तपहन् गुर्व्यां कौमोदक्या स्तनान्तरे । ८ ।
 गदानिर्भिन्नहृदय उद्धमन् रुधिरं मुखात् । प्रसार्य केशबाह्वङ्घ्रीन् धरण्यां न्यपतद् व्यसुः । ९ ।
 ततः सूक्ष्मतरं ज्योतिः कृष्णामाविशदद्भुतम् । पश्यतां सर्वभूतानां यथा चैद्यध्वे नृप । १० ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Dantavakra was a great friend of Śiśupāla, Śālva and Pauṇḍraka, who had met their death at the hands of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. In order to avenge their death the fool appeared all alone to fight Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Full of rage he (neither took an army nor a chariot with him and) came armed with nothing but a mace. But he was so powerful that the earth shook under his feet when he proceeded on foot to meet Śrī Kṛṣṇa in battle. (1-2) Seeing him advance in that manner, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa promptly took up His own mace and, leaping down from His chariot, intercepted Dantavakra even as the shore checks the advancing sea. (3) Raising his mace, Dantavakra, the arrogant king of Karuṣa, said to Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, "I am glad, I am, indeed, lucky, O Kṛṣṇa, that you have appeared before my eyes today. (4) Even though you are my cousin, you have killed my friends and seek my life, too. Therefore, O fool, I shall make short work of you with this mace which is as hard as the thunderbolt. (5) Though a relation of mine, you are my enemy like a disease in one's body. Devoted as I am to my friends, I can discharge my debts to them only by putting an end to you." (6) Parikṣit, thus pricking Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa with unkind words even as a tamer pricks an elephant with his goad, Dantavakra struck Śrī Kṛṣṇa on the head with his mace and roared like a lion. (7) But Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the ornament of Yadu's race, remained quite unshaken by the shock, and with His own heavy mace known by the name of Kaumodaki struck in His turn a severe blow on Dantavakra's chest, which split the latter's heart. Vomiting blood through the mouth, Dantavakra fell down dead on the ground with dishevelled hair and outstretched arms and legs. (8-9) Parikṣit, just as it happened when Śiśupāla fell, a very subtle ray of light emanated from the body of Dantavakra and entered that of Śrī Kṛṣṇa in an astonishing way before the eyes of all. (10)

विदूरथस्तु तद्भ्राता भ्रातृशोकपरिप्लुतः । आगच्छदसिचर्मभ्यामुच्छ्वसस्तज्जिघांसया । ११ ।

तस्य चापततः कृष्णश्चक्रेण क्षुरनेमिना । शिरो जहार राजेन्द्र सकिरीटं सकुण्डलम् । १२ ।

एवं सौभं च शाल्वं च दन्तवक्त्रं सहानुजम् । हत्वा दुर्विहानन्येरीडितः सुरमानवैः । १३ ।

मुनिभिः सिद्धगन्धर्वैर्विद्याधरमहोरगैः । अप्सरोभिः पितृगणैर्यक्षैः किन्नरचारणैः । १४ ।

उपगीयमानविजयः कुसुमैरभिवर्षितः । वृत्तश्च वृष्णिप्रवरैर्विवेशालङ्कृतं पुरीम् । १५ ।

एवं योगेश्वरः कृष्णो भगवाज्जगदीश्वरः । ईयते पशुदृष्टीनां निर्जितो जयतीति सः । १६ ।

Dantavakra had a brother, Vidūratha by name. Overwhelmed with grief at the death of his brother, he appeared, panting (with rage) on the spot with a sword and shield in his hands, intent on killing Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (11) Parikṣit, as he rushed at Him, Śrī Kṛṣṇa with His sharp-edged discus lopped of Vidūratha's head armed with a crown and ear-rings. (12) Thus putting an end to Śālva, with his famous aerial car Saubha, as well as Dantavakra and his younger brother Vidūratha, who could not be easily encountered by others, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa returned in triumph to Dwārakā. Men and gods extolled Him at the time for His extraordinary feat of arms. (Greatest of) sages, Siddhas, Gandharvas, Vidyādharas, great serpents (like Vāsuki), Apsarās, the manes, Yakṣas, Kinnaras and Cāraṇas all showered flowers on Him and sang of His victory. The city was decorated to commemorate His triumph over His enemies and principal Yādava warriors followed Him in procession as He entered the city. (13—15) Parikṣit, the Master of Yoga and almighty Ruler of the universe, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, thus enacts various sports in the world. To the ignorant He appeared now and then as the vanquished. But as a matter of fact, He always wins. (16)

श्रुत्वा युद्धोद्यमं रामः कुरूणां सह पाण्डवैः । तीर्थाभिषेकव्याजेन मध्यस्थः प्रययौ किल । १७ ।

स्नात्वा प्रभासे सन्तर्प्य देवर्षिपितृमानवान् । सरस्वतीं प्रतिस्थोतं ययौ ब्राह्मणसंवृतः । १८ ।

पृथुदकं बिन्दुसखितकृपं सुदर्शनम् । विशालं ब्रह्मतीर्थं च चक्रं प्राचीं सरस्वतीम् । १९ ।

यमुनामनु यान्येव गङ्गामनु च भारत । जगाम नैमिषं यत्र ऋषयः सत्रमासते । २० ।

तमागतमभिप्रेत्य मुनयो दीर्घसत्रिणः । अभिनन्द्य यथान्यायं प्रणाम्योत्थाय चार्चयन् । २१ ।

सोऽर्चितः सपरीवारः कृतासनपरिग्रहः । रोमहर्षणमासीनं महर्षेः शिष्यमैक्षत । १२२ ।
 अप्रत्युत्थायिनं सूतमकृतप्रह्णाण्डलिम् । अध्यासीनं च तान् विप्रांश्चक्रोपोद्वीक्ष्य माधवः । १२३ ।
 कस्मादसाविमान् विप्रानध्यास्ते प्रतिलोमजः । धर्मपालांस्तथैवास्मान् वधमर्हति दुर्मतिः । १२४ ।
 ऋषेर्भगवतो भूत्वा शिष्योऽधीत्य बहूनि च । सेतिहासपुराणानि धर्मशास्त्राणि सर्वशः । १२५ ।
 अदानस्याविनीतस्य वृथा पण्डितमानिनः । न गुणाय भवन्ति स्म नटस्येवाजितात्मनः । १२६ ।
 एतदर्थो हि लोकेऽस्मिन्नवतारो मया कृतः । वध्या मे धर्मध्वजिनस्ते हि पातकिनोऽधिकारः । १२७ ।
 एतावदुक्त्वा भगवान् निवृत्तोऽसद्व्यादापि । भावित्वात् तं कुशाग्रेण कणस्थेनाहनत् प्रभुः । १२८ ।
 हाहेति वादिनः सर्वे मुनयः खिन्नमानसाः । ऊचुः सङ्कर्षणं देवमधर्मस्ते कृतः प्रभो । १२९ ।
 अस्य ब्रह्मासनं दत्तमस्माभिर्यदुनन्दन । आयुश्चात्माङ्गमं तावद् यावत् सत्रं समाप्यते । १३० ।
 अजाननैवाचरितस्त्वया ब्रह्मवधो यथा । योगेश्वरस्य भवतो नाम्नायोऽपि नियामकः । १३१ ।
 यद्येतद् ब्रह्महत्यायाः पावनं लोकपावनम् । चरिष्यति भवौल्लोकसङ्ग्रहोऽनन्यचोदितः । १३२ ।

Śrī Balarāma presently heard of the preparations of the Kurus for war with the Pāṇḍavas. He desired to remain neutral and therefore left Dwārakā on the pretext of going out for a dip in sacred waters. (17) He first went to Prabhāsa, took a plunge in the sea there and propitiated the gods, Ṛṣis and manes by offering them water and human beings by feeding them. Thus, accompanied by (some) Brāhmaṇas, He proceeded along the bank of the Saraswatī in an upward journey, in the course of which He visited Pṛthūdaka, Bindusara, Tritakūpa, Sudarśana, Viśāla, Brahmatīrtha, Cakratīrtha and the spot where the Saraswatī turns towards the east. (18-19) Thereafter, passing through the important places on the Jamunā and the Gaṅgā, He came to Naimiṣāraṇya, where the sages were holding a religious concourse. They had taken a vow of prolonged Satsaṅga. (20) When they saw Śrī Balarāma in their midst, the sages rose from their seats, welcomed Him, bowed to Him or blessed Him, according as it became their position, and worshipped Him. (21) Honoured thus, when He had taken His seat alongwith His followers, Śrī Balarāma observed Romaharṣaṇa, the disciple of the great sage Vyāsa, seated on the elevated seat meant for one who holds a discourse. (22) Though a Sūta by caste, he occupied a seat higher than the Brāhmaṇas and neither rose from his seat, nor bowed to Him with joined palms. Getting angry at the sight, Śrī Balarāma said to the Brāhmaṇas there. (23) "How has this Sūta, born as he is of an illegal union, viz., of a Kṣatriya father and a Brāhmaṇa mother, taken into his head to occupy a seat higher than the Brāhmaṇas and custodians of law like ourselves. The fool, therefore, deserves to be done to death. (24) Being a disciple of the great sage Vyāsa, under whom he has studied all the books on law, including the Itihāsas and Purāṇas, he cannot plead ignorance either. (25) Uncultured and arrogant, he falsely pretends to be a learned man. Since he has not been able to discipline his self, the instruction he has received is just like the part played by an actor on the stage. It can do no good to him not to anybody else. (26) Those who make a show of righteousness, though not actually righteous, are more sinful than the unrighteous and deserve death at My hands. It is precisely for killing such people that I have descended on earth." (27) Being on a pilgrimage, Śrī Balarāma had desisted even from the work of slaying the unrighteous in battle. Yet, with these words He struck the Sūta with the end of a Kuśa grass, which He held in His hand, which caused the instantaneous death of the Sūta. This was how it was destined to be; nobody could avert it. (28) All the sages cried out in distress when they saw the Sūta fall before them. Addressing Śrī Balarāma, who was another manifestation of the Supreme Deity, they said, "O Lord, You have committed an unrighteous act. (29) It was we who offered him the elevated seat of a Brāhmaṇa and vouchsafed him an unwearied existence for the time this assembly remained in session. (30) Thus You have unknowingly perpetrated an act which is equivalent to killing a Brāhmaṇa. We know You are a master of Yoga and transcend the authority of the Vedas. (31) But You have descended on earth in order to purify the world. Should You of Your own accord make some expiation for the sin of killing a Brāhmaṇa, You will thereby set a noble example before the world." (32)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

करिष्ये वधनिर्वेशं लोकानुग्रहकाम्यया । नियमः प्रथमे कल्पे यावान् स तु विधीयताम् । ३३ ।

दीर्घमायुर्बतैतस्य सत्त्वमिन्द्रियदेव च । आशासितं यत्तद् ब्रूत साधये योगमायया । ३४ ।

Bhagavān Śrī Balarāma said : I shall certainly make some atonement for this sin in order to teach a lesson to the world. Please lay down the best form of expiation for Me. (33) Through Yogamāyā I can also vouchsafe to him a renewed span of long life, energy and soundness of body and the senses and whatever else you desire. Tell me, what can I do for him? (34)

ऋषय ऊचुः

अस्त्रस्य तव वीर्यस्य मृत्योरस्माकमेव च । यथा भवेद् वचः सत्यं तथा राम विधीयताम् । ३५ ।

The Sages said : (Lord Balarāma!) kindly devise some means by which the infallibility of Your weapon and Your prowess, and the inevitability of his death may not be compromised and the boon granted by us may also be vindicated. (35)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

आत्मा वै पुत्र उत्पन्न इति वेदानुशासनम् । तस्मादस्य भवेद् वक्ता आयुरिन्द्रियसत्त्ववान् । ३६ ।

किं वः कामो मुनिश्रेष्ठा ब्रूताहं करवाण्यथ । अजानतस्त्वपचिति यथा मे चिन्त्यतां बुधाः । ३७ ।

Bhagavān Śrī Balarāma said : Worshipful sages, the Vedas declare that one's own self is reborn as the son. Therefore, in place of Romaharṣaṇa, his son will expound the Purāṇas to you. I shall endow him with long life, energy and soundness of the body and the senses. (36) If you desire anything else, pray tell me, I shall forthwith grant it. And please think over and tell me what will be the most appropriate expiation for the sin I have unknowingly committed. (For you know the subject full well.) (37)

ऋषय ऊचुः

इल्वलस्य सुतो घोरो बल्वलो नाम दानवः । स दूषयति नः सत्रमेत्य पर्वणि पर्वणि । ३८ ।

तं पापं जहि दाशार्हं तन्नः शुश्रूषणं परम् । पूयशोणितविष्णूमृत्रसुरामांसाभिवर्षणम् । ३९ ।

ततश्च भारतं वर्षं परीत्य सुसमाहितः । चरित्वा द्वादश मासांस्तीर्थस्नायी विशुद्धयसे । ४० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे बलदेवचरित्रे

बल्वलवधोपक्रमो नामाष्टमस्कन्धतितमोऽध्यायः । ७८ ।

The Sages said : (Lord Balarāma!) there is a terrible demon, Balwala by name, son of Ilwala, who comes here on every full-moon and new moon day, and outrages the sanctity of our gathering. (38) He throws on us piths, blood, faeces, urine, wine and flesh. O Lord of the Yadus, be pleased to put an end to that monster. You will have thereby rendered the most valuable service to us. (39) Then, for twelve months, please traverse the whole length and breadth of Bhāratavarṣa with a serene mind and take a plunge in its holy waters. That will bring you purification from this sin. (40)

Thus ends the seventy-eighth discourse entitled " A Prelude to the Destruction of Balwala," forming part of the narrative of Baladeva in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनाशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXIX

An account of Balarāma's Pilgrimage

श्रीरुक् उवाच

ततः पर्वण्युपावृत्ते प्रचण्डः पांसुवर्षणः । भीमो वायुरभूद् राजन् पूयगन्धस्तु सर्वशः । १ ।
ततोऽपेध्यमयं वर्षं बल्वलेन विनिर्मितम् । अभवद् यज्ञशालायां सोऽन्वदृश्यत शूलधृक् । २ ।
तं विलोक्य बृहत्कायं भिन्नाङ्गनचयोपमम् । तप्तताम्रशिखाश्मश्रुं दंष्ट्रोऽग्रभृकुटीमुखम् । ३ ।
सस्मार मुसलं रामः परसैन्यविदारणम् । हलं च दैत्यदमनं ते तूर्णमुपतस्थतुः । ४ ।
तमाकुष्य हलाग्रेण बल्वलं गगनेचरम् । मुसलेनाहनत् कुन्दो मूर्ध्नि ब्रह्मद्वं बलः । ५ ।
सोऽपतद् भुवि निर्भिन्नललाटोऽसृक् समुत्सृजन् । मुञ्चन्नार्तस्वरं शैले यथा वज्रहतोऽरुणः । ६ ।
संसृत्य मुनयो रामं प्रयुज्यावितथाशिषः । अभ्यषिञ्चन् महाभाग वृत्रघ्नं विबुधा यथा । ७ ।
वैजयन्तीं ददुर्माणां श्रीधामाप्लानपङ्कजाम् । रामाय वाससी दिव्ये दिव्यान्याभरणानि च । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Parikṣit, on the next full-moon day a violent storm broke over the place, covering all with dust and bringing the foul odour of pus from all sides. Next, there was a shower of urine and faeces on the sacrificial ground, caused by Balwala, who himself afterwards appeared with a trident in his hand. (1-2) Possessed of a dark gigantic body, he looked like a heap of soot. His hair, moustaches and beard had the colour of red-hot copper and his face with protruding teeth and (contracted) eyebrows looked most terrible. Seeing the demon, Balarāma thought of His celebrated pestle, which shatters the columns of the enemy's army, and His well-known plough, which subdues the demons; and both these weapons instantaneously presented themselves before Him. (3-4) With the end of His plough Balarāma drew down Balwala coursing in the air, and full of rage struck that (sworn) enemy of the Brāhmaṇas on the head with His pestle. (5) With his forehead split open the demon, bleeding profusely, fell on the ground, uttering a helpless cry, and looked like a mountain peak struck down with lightning and ejecting red streams (of molten character). (6) The blessed sages (of Naimiṣāranya) applauded Balarāma (for this action), pronounced their unfailing benedictions on Him and sprinkled (holy) waters over His head even as the gods sprinkled water over their ruler Indra on his having killed the demon Vṛtra. (7) (Then) they presented Balarāma with a pair of excellent pieces of cloth and ornaments and a beautiful Vaijayanṭī garland of never-fading lotuses. (8)

अथ तैरभ्यनुज्ञातः कौशिकीमेत्य ब्राह्मणैः । स्नात्वा सरोवरमगाद् यतः सरयुरास्रवत् । १ ।
अनुब्रूतेन सरयूं प्रयागमुपगम्य सः । स्नात्वा सत्तर्प्य देवादीन् जगाम पुलहाश्रमम् । १० ।
गोमतीं गण्डकीं स्नात्वा विपाशां शोण आप्नतः । गयां गत्वा पितृनिष्ठा गङ्गासागरसङ्गमे । ११ ।

उपस्पृश्य महेन्द्राद्रौ रामं दृष्ट्वाभिवाद्य च। सप्तगोदावरीं वेणां पम्पां भीमरथीं ततः। १२।
 स्कन्दं दृष्ट्वा ययौ रामः श्रीशैलं गिरिशालयम्। द्रविडेषु महापुण्यं दृष्ट्वादि वेङ्कटं प्रभुः। १३।
 कामकोष्णीं पुरीं काञ्चीं कावेरीं च सरिद्राम्। श्रीरङ्गाख्यं महापुण्यं यत्र सन्निहितो हरिः। १४।
 ऋषभाद्रि हरेः क्षेत्रं दक्षिणां मथुरां तथा। सामुद्रं सेतुमगमन्प्रापतकनाशनम्। १५।
 तत्रायुतमदाद् धेनून्ब्राह्मणेभ्यो हलायुधः। कृतमालां ताम्रपर्णीं मलयं च कुलचलम्। १६।
 तत्रागस्यं सपासीनं नमस्कृत्याभिवाद्य च। योजितस्तेन चाशीर्भिरनुज्ञातो गतोऽर्जवम्।
 दक्षिणे तत्र कन्याख्यां दुर्गां देवीं ददर्श सः। १७।

ततः फाल्गुनमासाद्य पञ्चाप्सरसमुत्तमम्। विष्णुः सन्निहितो यत्र स्नात्वास्पृशद् गवायुतम्। १८।

Now, with the permission of the sages of Naimiṣāranya, Balarāma together with His Brāhmaṇa companions went to the Kauśiki river, and after bathing in that river went to the lake from which the Sarayū emanates. (9) Following the downward course of the Sarayū, He thence came to Prayāga. After taking His bath there and propitiating the gods, Ṛṣis and manes by offering water to them, He went to the hermitage of the sage Pulaha. (10) (Then) he bathed in the Gomati, Gaṇḍaki, Vipāśā and Sona rivers and, visiting Gayā, worshipped the manes (according to the instructions of His father Śrī Vasudeva). From Gayā He went to the mouth of the Gaṅgā where He took a bath (and performed other religious rites). (Then) He went to the Mahendra Hill, where He saw and paid His respects to the sage Paraśurāma. Having bathed in the seven branches of the Godāvari and in the Veṇā and Bhimarathi rivers as well as in the Pampā lake, He paid a visit to the shrine of Lord Kārtikeya and (thence) proceeded to Śrīśaila, the abode of Lord Śiva (known by the name of Mallikāṛjuna). From Śrīśaila He went to see the most holy mountain-peak of Venkaṭa in the Dravida territory. (11—13) (Then) passing through Śiva-Kāñci and Viṣṇu-Kāñci and after taking a bath in the holy Kāveṛi, He reached the most sacred site of Śrīraṅga where Bhagavān Viṣṇu (eternally) dwells. (14) From there He went to visit the Rṣabha Hill, sacred to Lord Viṣṇu, and the southern Mathurā and thence proceeded to the dam across the sea at Rāmeśwara, visitors to which are purged (even) of their greatest sins. (15) There Balarāma gifted ten thousand cows to the Brāhmaṇas. (Then) after taking a bath in the Kṛtamālā and Tāmraparṇi rivers, He went to the Malaya mountain. It is one of the seven principal ranges of mountains of Bhāratavarṣa. (16) Greeting and bowing to the sage Agastya residing there, and receiving his blessings and permission, He went to the southern sea and visited (the shrine of) Goddess Durgā (at Kanyākumārī) known by the name of Kanyā. (17) Next He went to the Phālguna Tīrtha (Anantaśayana) and the great lake of Pañcāpsarasā, another abode of Lord Viṣṇu. There after bathing in its holy waters, He gave away ten thousand cows (to the Brāhmaṇas). (18)

ततोऽभिब्रज्य भगवान् केरलांस्तु त्रिगर्तकान्। गोकर्णाख्यं शिवक्षेत्रं सान्निध्यं यत्र धृज्जटैः। १९।
 आर्या द्वैपायनीं दृष्ट्वा शृणारकमगाद् बलः। तार्यो पयोष्णीं निर्विन्ध्यामुपस्पृश्याथ दण्डकम्। २०।
 प्रविश्य रेवामगमद् यत्र माहिष्यती पुरी। मनुतीर्थमुपस्पृश्य प्रभासं पुनरागमत्। २१।
 श्रुत्वा द्विजैः कथ्यमानं कुरुपाण्डवसंयुगे। सर्वराजन्यनिधनं भारं मेने हतं भुवः। २२।
 स भीमदुर्योधनयोर्गदाभ्यां युध्यतोर्मृधे। वारिप्यन् विनशनं जगाम यदुन्दनः। २३।

Then Lord Balarāma visited the principalities of Kerala and Trigarta, and (from there He) went to Gokarna, sacred to Śiva, where Bhagavān Śaṅkara is eternally present. (19) Thence He visited (the shrine of) Goddess Pārvatī (known by the name of Āryā) located in an island, after which He went to Śūrpāraka. Then after bathing in the Tāpti, Payoṣṇi and Nirvindhya rivers, He entered the Daṇḍaka forest. (20) (From there) He went to the bank of the Narbadā, where stands the city of Māhiṣmatī, and after bathing in the Manutīrtha returned to Prabhāsa. (21) There He heard from the mouth of Brāhmaṇas that in the historic fight between the Kurus and the Pāṇḍavas (almost) all the Kṣatriyas had lost their lives. He felt that the burden of the earth had been (greatly) relieved (by that terrible war). (22) On the day Bhīma and Duryodhana were engaged in a single combat with their maces on the battle-field, Śrī Balarāma reached Kurukṣetra to prevent their fight. (23)

युधिष्ठिरस्तु तं दृष्ट्वा यमौ कृष्णार्जुनावपि । अभिवाद्याभवंस्तुष्णीं किं विवक्षुरिहागतः । २४ ।
 गदापाणी उभौ, दृष्ट्वा संरञ्जौ विजयैषिणौ । मण्डलानि विचित्राणि चरन्ताविदमब्रवीत् । २५ ।
 युवां तुल्यबलौ वीरौ हे राजन् हे वृकोदर । एकं प्राणाधिकं मन्ये उतैकं शिक्षयाधिकम् । २६ ।
 तस्मादेकतरस्येह युवयोः समवीर्ययोः । न लक्ष्यते जयोऽन्यो वा विरमत्वफलो रणः । २७ ।
 न तद्वाक्यं जगृहतुर्बद्धवैरौ नृपार्थवत् । अनुस्मरन्तावन्त्योऽन्यं दुर्लभं दुष्कृतानि च । २८ ।
 दिष्टं तदनुमन्वानो रामो द्वारवतीं ययौ । उग्रसेनादिभिः प्रीतैर्ज्ञातिभिः समुपागतः । २९ ।
 तं पुनर्नैमिषं प्राप्तमृषयोऽयाजयन् मुदा । क्रत्वङ्गं क्रतुभिः सर्वैर्निवृत्ताखिलविग्रहम् । ३० ।
 तेभ्यो विशुद्धविज्ञानं भगवान् व्यतरद् विभुः । येनैवात्मन्यदो विष्णमात्मानं विश्वगं विदुः । ३१ ।
 स्वपत्यावभृथस्त्रातो ज्ञातिबन्धुसुहृद्वृतः । रेजे स्वज्योत्स्नयेवेन्दुः सुवासाः सुहृवलङ्कृतः । ३२ ।
 ईदृग्विधान्यसंस्थानि बलस्य बलशालिनः । अनन्तस्याप्रमेयस्य मायामर्त्यस्य सन्ति हि । ३३ ।
 योऽनुस्मरेत रामस्य कर्माण्यद्भुतकर्मणः । सायं प्रातरनन्तस्य विष्णोः स दयितो भवेत् । ३४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यी संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे बलदेवतीर्थयात्रानिरूपणं नामैकोनोत्तमोऽध्यायः । ७९ ।

Yudhiṣṭhira, for his part, Nakula, Sahadeva, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna, all bowed to Him, as soon as they saw Him, and stood silent anxious to know the mission which had brought Him there. (24) Bhīma and Duryodhana, burning with rage, were then performing, mace in hand, their wonderful manoeuvres with a view to overthrowing one another. Seeing them thus engaged, Balarāma said. (25) "King Duryodhana and Bhīmasena, both of you are (renowned) warriors equally matched in strength. If Bhīmasena is superior in strength, Duryodhana is more skilful in wielding the mace. (26) To my mind, neither of you is likely to win or be vanquished, since you possess equal energy. Therefore, let this useless fight cease." (27) Though this advice of Śrī Balarāma was salutary (to both), the enmity which they bore to each other was so deep-seated that they could not accept the same. They could not forget the offensive words and malevolent acts of each other. (28) Balarāma thought they were being driven to their fate by destiny; therefore (without making further attempt at a compromise) He returned to Dwārakā. There He was welcomed by Ugrasena and other relations who were all delighted at His arrival. (29) (Thence) Śrī Balarāma went to the Naimiṣa forest for the second time. There the sages, (acting as priests) gladly assisted Śrī Balarāma, who had kept Himself aloof from hostility and war, in performing all the sacrifices. Parikṣit, (really speaking) all sacrifices are but part and parcel of Śrī Balarāma (and yet He performed them in order to teach a lesson to the world). (30) The almighty Balarāma imparted pure wisdom to the sages, by virtue of which they realized the whole universe in themselves, and the Self as permeating the whole universe. (31) Then, performing the concluding ablutions with His consort, Revatī, and adorned with fine clothes and beautiful ornaments, He looked amidst friends and relations just like the moon accompanied by moonlight (in the midst of stars). (32) Parikṣit, almighty Bhagavān Śrī Balarāma is the infinite Lord Himself, His nature is incomprehensible. He had assumed a human semblance simply out of sport.

His exploits are indeed innumerable. (33) He who contemplates on the wonderful deeds of the infinite, all-pervading Balarāma, both morning and evening, becomes the most beloved of God. (34)

Thus ends the seventy-ninth discourse entitled "An account of the pilgrimage of Baladeva" in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXX

Śrī Kṛṣṇa's Reception of Sudāmā

राजोवाच

भगवन् यानि चान्यानि मुकुन्दस्य महात्मनः । वीर्याण्यनन्तवीर्यस्य श्रोतुमिच्छामहे प्रभो । १ ।

को नु श्रुत्वासकृद् ब्रह्मवृत्तमश्लोकसत्कथाः । विरमेत विशेषज्ञो विषण्णः काममार्गणैः । २ ।

सा वाग् यया तस्य गुणान् गृणीते करौ च तत्कर्मकरौ मनश्च ।

स्मरेद् वसन्तं स्थिरजङ्गमेषु शृणोति तत्पुण्यकथाः स कर्णः । ३ ।

शिरस्तु तस्योभयलिङ्गमानमेतदेव यत् पश्यति तद्धि चक्षुः ।

अङ्गानि विष्णोरथ तज्जनानां पादोदकं यानि भजन्ति नित्यम् । ४ ।

King Parikṣit submitted : O revered sage, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the same as the Supreme Spirit. His powers are infinite. Therefore, His sports (which manifest His love and glory), are also infinite. We wish to hear now of the other glorious sports of the Lord. (1) O sage, all beings on earth running after the mirage of worldly enjoyments are sorely afflicted at heart. The manifold desires pierce them every now and then like the shaft. Under the circumstance, what man of taste is there on earth, who having heard of the excellent sports of the most glorious Lord even repeatedly would cease listening to them further ? (2) That speech alone is worth the name through which one sings His praises; those hands alone which do service to Him deserve to be called, hands; that mind alone is rightly so-called which constantly remembers the Lord dwelling in all mobile and immobile creatures; and those ears alone deserve the title which hear the sacred stories of His sports. (3) That head alone deserves to be styled as such which bows to all mobile and immobile creatures, regarding them as the very images of God; that eye alone is the real eye, which sees God in everything; and those limbs alone are properly so-called, which are daily sprinkled with the waters which wash the feet of the Lord and of His devotees. (4)

सूत उवाच

विष्णुरातेन सम्पृष्टो भगवान् बादरायणिः । वासुदेवे भगवति निमग्नहृदयोऽब्रवीत् । ५ ।

Śrī Sūta resumed : O sages, when king Parikṣit made this submission to Śrī Śuka, the latter's heart got completely merged in the thought of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (Then) addressing the king, he said: (5)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कृष्णस्यासीत् सखा कश्चिद् ब्राह्मणो ब्रह्मवित्तमः । विरक्त इन्द्रियार्थेषु प्रशान्तात्मा जितेन्द्रियः । ६ ।
 यदुच्छयोपपन्नेन वर्तमानो गृहाश्रमी । तस्य भार्या कुचैलस्य क्षुत्क्षामा च तथाविधा । ७ ।
 पतिव्रता पतिं प्राह प्लायता वदनेन सा । दरिद्रा सीदमाना सा वेपमानाभिगम्य च । ८ ।
 ननु ब्रह्मन् भगवतः सखा साक्षाच्छ्रियः पतिः । ब्रह्मण्यश्च शरण्यश्च भगवान् सात्वतर्षभः । ९ ।
 तमुपैहि महाभाग साधूनां च परायणम् । दास्यति द्रविणं भूरि सीदते ते कुटुम्बिने । १० ।
 आस्तेऽधुना द्वारक्यां भोजवृण्यन्धकेश्वरः । स्मरतः पादकमलमात्मानमपि यच्छति ।

किं न्वर्थकामान् भजतो नात्यभीष्टाङ्गदगुरुः । ११ ।

स एवं भार्याया विप्रो बहुशः प्रार्थितो मृदु । अयं हि परमो लाभ उत्तमश्लोकदर्शनम् । १२ ।
 इति सञ्चिन्त्य मनसा गमनाय मतिं दधे । अयस्सुपायनं किञ्चिद् गृहे कल्याणि दीयताम् । १३ ।
 याचित्वा चतुरो मुष्टीन् विप्रान् पृथुकतण्डुलान् । चैलखण्डेन तान् बद्ध्वा भर्त्रे प्रादादुपायनम् । १४ ।
 स तानादाय विप्राग्र्यः प्रययौ द्वारकां किल । कृष्णसन्दर्शनं मह्यं कथं स्यादिति चिन्तयन् । १५ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : (Parikṣit), there was a certain Brāhmaṇa, who was a (great) friend of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. He possessed true knowledge of Brahma and was free from attachment to the objects of the senses. His mind was composed and he had full control over his senses. (6) Although a householder, he used to remain contented with whatever he got without effort. He was always ill-clad and his wife too had no sufficient clothing to cover her body with. (Due to extreme poverty they seldom had a full meal and) the wife (specially) became very feeble on account of starvation. (7) (One day) the poor and afflicted wife of the Brāhmaṇa, who was (extremely) devoted to her husband, approached her husband with a withering face and a trembling body, and said to him:—(8) "Adorable husband! Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the spouse of the Goddess of Wealth, Himself is your friend. He is like a wish-yielding tree to His devotees, the refuge of all and a great devotee of the Brāhmaṇas. (9) O blessed one, be pleased to approach Him, who is the resort of the righteous. When He comes to know that you are a householder and that you are suffering from want, He will bestow abundant wealth on you. (10) He now resides at Dwārakā as the protector of the Bhojas, Vṛṣṇis and Andhakas. He (is so generous that He) gives away His own Self to those who contemplate on His lotus-feet. It is no wonder, then, that He, the Supreme Teacher of the World, should bestow on His devotees wealth and objects of worldly enjoyment, which are after all not very desirable things." (11) Thus frequently and gently entreated by the wife, the Brāhmaṇa at last agreed to the proposal; for he thought that it would give him an opportunity of seeing Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, which was a supreme gain in itself. Developing this idea in his mind he decided to go, and addressing his wife said, "O dear, is there anything in the house fit to be taken as a present? If so, let me have it." (12-13) The wife of the Brāhmaṇa begged of her neighbours and secured four handfuls of parched and beaten rice, which she tied up in a piece of rag and gave it to her lord for presentation to Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (14) With those handfuls of beaten rice, it is said, the foremost of Brāhmaṇas set out on his journey to Dwārakā. His only thought on the way was how it would be possible for him to obtain a sight of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (15)

श्रीणि गुल्यान्यतीयाय तिस्रः कक्षाश्च स द्विजः । विप्रोऽगम्यान्धकवृष्णीनां गृहेऽव्युत्थदर्शनाम् । १६ ।
 गृहं द्व्यष्टसहस्राणां महिषीणां हरेर्द्विजः । विवेशैकतमं श्रीमद् ब्रह्मानन्दं गतो यथा । १७ ।
 ते किलोक्याच्युतो दूरात् प्रियापर्यङ्कमास्थितः । सहस्रोत्थाय चाभ्येत्य दोर्भ्यां पर्यग्रहीनुदा । १८ ।

सस्युः प्रियस्य विप्रर्षेऽङ्गसङ्गातिनिर्वृतः । प्रीतो व्यमुञ्चदब्बिन्दून् नेत्राभ्यां पुष्करेक्षणः । १९ ।
 अधोपवेदय पर्यङ्के स्वयं सस्युः समर्हणम् । उपहृत्यावनिज्यास्य पादौ पादावनेजनीः । २० ।
 अप्रहीच्छिरसा राजन् भगवॉल्लोकपावनः । व्यलिम्पद् दिव्यगन्धेन चन्दनागुरुकुङ्कुमैः । २१ ।
 धूपैः सुरभिभिर्मित्रं प्रदीपावलिभिर्मुदा । अर्चित्वाऽऽवेद्य ताम्बूलं गां च स्वागतमब्रवीत् । २२ ।
 कुचैर्ल मलिनं क्षामं द्विजं धमनिसंततम् । देवी पर्यचरत् साक्षाद्यामरव्यजनेन वै । २३ ।
 अन्तःपुरजने दृष्ट्वा कृष्णोनामलकीर्तिना । विस्मितोऽभूदतिप्रीत्या अवधूतं सभाजितम् । २४ ।
 किमनेन कृतं पुण्यमवधूतेन भिक्षुणा । श्रिया हीनेन लोकेऽस्मिन् गहिर्तिनाधमेन च । २५ ।
 योऽसौ त्रिलोकगुरुणा श्रीनिवासेन 'सम्भूतः । पर्यङ्कस्थां श्रियं हित्वा परिश्रुतोऽग्रजो यथा । २६ ।
 कथयाञ्चक्रतुर्गाथाः पूर्वा गुरुकुले सतोः । आत्मनो ललिता राजन् करौ गृह्य परस्परम् । २७ ।

(O Parikṣit, reaching Dwārakā), the Brāhmaṇa together with other Brāhmaṇas passed through three camps of guards and three protective walls (one after another), and then reached the mansions occupied by the Andhaka and Vṛṣṇi chiefs, who followed the righteous ways of the devotees of God, very difficult of access to ordinary people. (16) There was situated (in the centre of that innermost ring of the city) the palace of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa containing the dwellings of His sixteen thousand and odd consorts. In one of them, which was specially decorated, the Brāhmaṇa entered with the feelings of one who found himself merged in the Bliss of God-realization. (17) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa was at that time seated on a couch with His consort Rukmiṇī. Seeing the Brāhmaṇa from a distance, He suddenly rose from His seat and advancing towards him, joyously folded him in both of his arms. (18) (Parikṣit) the lotus-eyed Lord (who is the very embodiment of Bliss) felt extremely delighted when He touched the body of His beloved friend, the Brāhmaṇa sage. Tears of joy began to drop from His eyes. (19) (Taking the Brāhmaṇa by the hand) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the purifier of the world made His friend sit on His (own) couch, and bringing (Himself) all the articles necessary for worship, washed the Brāhmaṇa's feet and sprinkled His head with the drops of that water. (Then) He smeared the Brāhmaṇa's body with excellent perfumes as well as with the pastes of sandal, aloe-wood and saffron. (20-21) Having joyfully worshipped His friend with scented fumes and rows of lights, and offering him betel-leaf seasoned with catechu, lime, areca-nut parings and cloves etc., and a cow, the Lord greeted the Brāhmaṇa with sweet words. (22) The Brāhmaṇa was ill-clad, with an unclean and emaciated body, the veins of which were visible to the eyes. Queen Rukmiṇī herself actually waited on him having the chowry before him. (23) The women of the palace were astonished to see a rickā Brāhmaṇa being so lovingly honoured by Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa of spotless fame. (24) (They said to one another:—) "What meritorious act was performed by this naked, destitute, condemned and lowly beggar that the Lord of the three worlds, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, should receive him with such honour and respect. Leaving Śrī Rukmiṇī, a manifestation of Goddess Lakṣmī Herself, who was seated (with Him) in His bed, He embraced the Brāhmaṇa as if he were Lord Balarāma Himself." (25-26) Parikṣit, taking each other by the hand, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and the Brāhmaṇa recounted the sweet incidents of their boyhood, when they lived together in the house of the same teacher. (27)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अपि ब्रह्मन् गुरुकुलाद् भवता लब्धदक्षिणात् । समावृत्तेन धर्मज्ञ भायोंढा सदृशी न वा । २८ ।
 प्रायो गृहेषु ते चित्तमकामविहतं तथा । नैवातिप्रीयसे विद्वन् धनेषु विदितं हि मे । २९ ।
 केचित् कुर्वन्ति कर्माणि कामैरहतचेतसः । त्यजन्तः प्रकृतीर्देवीर्यथाहं लोकसङ्ग्रहम् । ३० ।

कचिद् गुरुकुले वासं ब्रह्मन् स्मरसि नौ यतः । द्विजो विज्ञाय विज्ञेयं तमसः पारमश्रुते । ३१ ।
 स वै सत्कर्मणां साक्षाद् द्विजातेरिह सम्भवः । आद्योऽङ्ग यत्राश्रमिणां यथाहं ज्ञानदो गुरुः । ३२ ।
 नन्वर्थकोविदा ब्रह्मन् वर्णाश्रमवतामिह । ये मया गुरुणा वाचा तरन्त्यङ्गो भवार्णवम् । ३३ ।
 नाहमन्याप्रजातिभ्यां तपसोपशमेन वा । तुष्येयं सर्वभूतात्मा गुरुशुश्रूषया यथा । ३४ ।

Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa said : O pious Brāhmaṇa, on your return from the preceptor's house, after making the voluntary present to him, did you or did you not marry a wife, who is in every respect worthy of you ? (28) I know that, even though you are leading (I presume) the life of a householder, your heart is free from worldly desires. I am also aware that having realized the truth, you do not entertain any love for wealth. (29) (In this world) people who have shaken off worldly desires brought forth by Divine Māyā, and who yet perform their prescribed duties with a heart unswayed by desire, just as I do, for the sake of setting an example before the world, are very rare. (30) Do you remember, O dear Brāhmaṇa, our stay in the house of the preceptor? It is there that the twice-born acquire the knowledge of that which is worth knowing, and thus cross the darkness of ignorance in the form of mundane existence. (31) O friend, the father from whom one gets the body is the first Guru in this world. Next, comes the teacher, who invests one with the sacred thread and teaches him his obligatory duties, He is worthy of adoration like Myself. Lastly, comes the teacher who imparts the knowledge of Self to men of all classes and orders and helps one in the realization of God. He is identical with Me. (32) O dear friend, the teacher is the same as Myself. Among the followers of the Varṇāśrama order in this world, they alone who carry out the preceptor's teachings and thereby cross the ocean of mundane existence without much ado know their true worldly and other-worldly interests. (33) O friend, I am the Universal Self (I reside in every heart as the Witness.) I am not so pleased with the performance of daily obligatory sacrifices by the householder, nor with investiture with the sacred thread and study of the scriptures, which is the duty of a celibate, nor with the penance of the ascetic, nor again with the quietism of the recluse, as I am with services rendered by a disciple to the preceptor. (34)

अपि नः स्मर्यते ब्रह्मन् वृत्तं निवसतां गुरौ । गुरुदरैश्चोदितानामिन्धनानयने कचिद् । ३५ ।
 प्रविष्टानां महारण्यमपतीं सुमहद् द्विज । वातवर्षमभूतीत्रं निष्ठुराः स्तनयित्त्वः । ३६ ।
 सूर्यश्चास्तं गतस्तावत् तमसा चावृता दिशः । निम्नं कूलं जलमयं न प्राजायत किञ्चन । ३७ ।
 वयं भृशं तत्र महानिलाम्बुभिर्निहन्मपाना मुहुरम्बुसम्प्लवे ।
 दिशोऽविदन्तोऽथ परस्परं वने गृहीतहस्ताः परिब्रिम्भातुराः । ३८ ।

एतद् विदित्वा उदिते रवौ सान्दीपनिगुरुः । अन्वेषमाणो नः शिष्यानाचार्योऽपश्यदातुराग्न । ३९ ।
 अहो हे पुत्रका द्यूमसदर्थेऽतिदुःखिताः । आत्मा वै प्राणिनां प्रेक्षस्तपनादृत्य मत्पराः । ४० ।
 एतदेव हि सच्छिष्यैः कर्तव्यं गुरुनिष्कृतम् । यद् वै विशुद्धभावेन सर्वार्थात्मार्षणं गुरौ । ४१ ।
 तुष्टोऽहं भो द्विजश्रेष्ठाः सत्याः सन्तु मनोरथाः । छन्दोऽस्ययातयामाणि भवन्तिह परत्र च । ४२ ।
 इत्थंविधान्येनेकानि वसतां गुरुवैश्वसु । गुरोरनुग्रहेणैव पुमान् पूर्णः प्रशान्तये । ४३ ।

O dear Brāhmaṇa, do you remember the incident how, one day, when living in the house of our preceptor, we both were asked by the latter's wife to bring fuel. (35) We entered a thick forest, O sage, and were overtaken by a mighty and violent storm of wind and rain, which broke unexpectedly out of season, and thunders roared relentlessly over our head. (36) The sun set in the meanwhile and all sides were enveloped in darkness. The land being covered with water we could not ascertain the high and low level of ground. (37) Severely and repeatedly beaten by violent blasts of wind and showers in that flood, and not knowing the directions, we wandered in the forest in great confusion holding each other by the hand. (38) Our preceptor, sage Sāṇḍipani, when he learnt this, proceeded in search of us at sunrise and discovered us, his disciples, in that bewildered state. (39) He said, "My dear boys, you have been put to great hardship on my account. One's own self is dear to all more than anything else. How wonderful that you have shown your devotion to me by disregarding even the self. (40) A good disciple should offer with a sincere heart his all, including his very self, to the Guru. That is precisely what he should actually do in order to repay the debt to the Guru. (41) O jewels of the twice-born, I am (supremely) pleased (with you); let all your desires be fulfilled, and may all the knowledge of the Vedas, that you have acquired from me, remain ever fresh in your memory. May it never fail you whether here or hereafter." (42) O friend, numerous incidents of this type occurred during our life at the preceptor's house. It is by the grace of the preceptor alone that man attains perfection and supreme peace. (43)

ब्राह्मण उवाच

किमस्माभिरनिर्वृतं देवदेव जगद्गुरो। भवता सत्यकामेन येषां वासो गुरावभूत् । ४४।

यस्यच्छन्दोमयं ब्रह्म देह आवपनं विभो। श्रेयसां तस्य गुरुषु वासोऽत्यन्तविडम्बनम् । ४५।

इति श्रीभद्रागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे श्रीदामचरितेऽष्टातितमोऽध्यायः ८०।

The Brāhmaṇa replied : O God of gods, Preceptor of the World, what else remains to be achieved by me? (I have accomplished everything, realized everything) inasmuch as I enjoyed the privilege of staying in the preceptor's house with You, whose resolution is unfailing? (44) O Lord, the Vedas which are the repository of the four objects of life, viz., Dharma (virtue), Artha (prosperity), Kāma (worldly enjoyments) and Mokṣa (salvation), constitute Your body. You went to the preceptor's house to study those very Vedas only to imitate the ways of men, as a matter of sport. (45)

Thus ends the eightieth discourse forming part of the Story of Sudāmā, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकाशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXI

The story of parched rice brought as a Present (for Śrī Kṛṣṇa) by Sudāmā

श्रीशुक उवाच

स इत्थं द्विजमुख्येन सह सङ्कथयन् हरिः। सर्वभूतमनोऽभिज्ञः स्मयमान उवाच तम् । १ ।

ब्रह्मण्यो ब्राह्मणं कृष्णो भगवान् प्रहसन् प्रियम्। प्रेम्णा निरीक्षणेनैव प्रेक्षन् खलु सतां गतिः । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit!) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa knows the mind of all beings. He is devoted to Brāhmaṇas (always takes care to relieve their suffering) and is the sole refuge of saints. Thus heartily talking along with that honourable Brāhmaṇa, He now smilingly spoke to His dear comrade in a jesting mood looking at him with eyes full of affection. (1-2)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

किमुपायनमानीतं ब्रह्मन् मे भवता गृहात्। अण्वण्वुपाहतं भक्तैः प्रेम्णा भूयैव मे भवेत् ।

भूयैव भक्तोपहृतं न मे तोषाय कल्पते । ३ ।

पत्रं पुष्पं फलं तोयं यो मे भक्त्या प्रयच्छति । तदहं भक्त्युपहृतमश्रामि प्रयतात्मनः । ४ ।
 इत्युक्तोऽपि द्विजस्तस्मै व्रीडितः पतये श्रियः । पृथुकप्रसृतिं राजन् न प्रायच्छदवाङ्मुखः । ५ ।
 सर्वभूतात्मदक् साक्षात् तस्यागमनकारणम् । विज्ञायाचिन्त्यत्रायं श्रीकामो माभजत्पुरा । ६ ।
 पत्न्याः पतिव्रतायास्तु सखा प्रियचिकीर्षया । प्राप्तो मामस्य दास्यामि सम्पदोऽमर्यदुर्लभाः । ७ ।
 इत्थं विचिन्त्य वसनाद्यौषधैर्द्विजन्मनः । स्वयं जहार किमिदमिति पृथुकतपडुलान् । ८ ।
 नन्वेतदुपनीतं मे परमप्रीणनं सखे । तर्पयन्त्यङ्गं मां विश्वमेते पृथुकतपडुलाः । ९ ।
 इति मुष्टिं सकृज्जग्ध्वा द्वितीयां जग्ध्वादादे । तावच्छ्रीर्जगृहे हस्तं तत्परा परमेष्ठिनः । १० ।
 एतावतालं विश्वात्मन् सर्वसम्पत्समृद्धये । अस्मिल्लोकेऽथवापुष्पिन् पुंसस्त्वतोषकारणम् । ११ ।

The glorious Lord said : "O friend, what present have you brought for Me from your house? I consider as great even a small present offered by the devotee with real love; but a lot of things offered without devotion do not bring Me pleasure. (3) Whosoever offers to Me with love a leaf, a flower, a fruit or even water, I accept and heartily enjoy that offering of love by that man of purified intellect." (4) Parikṣit, though encouraged by the Lord in this way, the Brāhmaṇa, feeling shy, did not present the handful of beaten rice to the Lord of Lakṣmī (the goddess of wealth) Himself. He (simply) hung his head. (5) But the Lord, who sees the mind of all beings, knew the cause of his visit. He said to Himself, "This Brāhmaṇa is a great friend of Mine; he never sought wealth from Me before. He approached Me now, at the entreaty of his devoted wife, whom he is naturally anxious to please. I shall bestow on him a fortune which is difficult of attainment even by the immortals." (6-7) Reflecting thus, the Lord snatched from under the covering of the Brāhmaṇa the beaten rice tied in a rag and said "Dear comrade, what is this? Here you have brought Me something which I like most. These grains of beaten rice will satisfy not only Me, but the whole world." (8-9) Saying this, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa ate one handful of that beaten rice and took another to eat, when Rukmiṇī, who was a manifestation of the Goddess of Wealth Herself, caught hold of the Lord's hand, for devoted as She was to the Lord Himself, She was unable to leave Him. (10) She said "O Lord of the universe, this is enough. One handful of rice is sufficient to please You and to bring one an abundance of wealth of all kind in this as well as the next world. (Taking more of it, please do not part with me as well.)" (11)

ब्रह्मणस्तां तु रजनीमुषित्वाच्युतमन्दिरे । भुक्त्वा पीत्वा सुखं मेने आत्मानं स्वर्गतं यथा । १२ ।
 शोभूते विश्वभावेन स्वसुखेनाभिवन्दितः । जगाम स्वालयं तात पथ्यनुब्रज्य नन्दितः । १३ ।
 स चालब्ध्वा धनं कृष्णात्तु याचितवान् स्वयम् । स्वगृहान् व्रीडितोऽगच्छन्महर्षाननिर्वृतः । १४ ।
 अहो ब्रह्मण्यदेवस्य दृष्ट्वा ब्रह्मण्यता मया । यद् दरिद्रतमो लक्ष्मीमाश्लिष्टो बिभ्रोतसि । १५ ।
 काहं दरिद्रः पापीयान् क्व कृष्णः श्रोत्रिकेतनः । ब्रह्मबन्धुरिति स्माहं बाहुभ्यां परिरम्भितः । १६ ।
 निवासितः प्रियानुष्टे पर्यङ्के भ्रातरो यथा । महिष्या वीजितः श्रान्तो बालव्यजनहस्तया । १७ ।
 शुश्रूषया परमया पादसंवाहनादिभिः । पूजितो देवदेवेन विप्रदेवेन देववत् । १८ ।
 स्वर्गापवर्गयोः पुंसां रसायां भुवि सम्पदाम् । सर्वासामपि सिद्धीनां मूलं तद्वरणार्चनम् । १९ ।
 अधनोऽयं धनं प्राप्य माद्यन्नुच्चैर्न मां स्मरेत् । इति कारुणिको नूनं धनं मेऽभूरि नाददात् । २० ।

The Brāhmaṇa spent the night in Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's palace, partook of a hearty repast and felt himself as happy as if he were in the Lord's own paradise. (12) (Pankṣit), the next morning, (taking leave of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa) he left for his home. The source of life of the entire universe, the very embodiment of Self-enjoyment, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa followed him to some distance, delighted him by sweet and polite words and bowed to him. (13) Even though the Brāhmaṇa did not receive any fortune from the Lord directly, he did not ask for anything himself. He felt ashamed of the meanness of his heart. He, however, felt supremely happy for having obtained the blessed sight of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (14) He said to himself, "Oh (wonder of wonders) I have seen today with my own eyes, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's love for a Brāhmaṇa. He is really a devotee of the Brāhmaṇas. He clasped to His bosom, which is the abode of the Goddess of Wealth, a destitute like myself! (15) What affinity is there between me, a vile sinner and destitute (on the one hand), and Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the abode of Lakṣmī (on the other). Only because I am born of Brāhmaṇa parents, He folded me in his arms. (16) Not only that, like His own brother, He made me sit on the bed of His beloved consort Rukmiṇi, and finding me fatigued, Queen Rukmiṇi fanned me with a chowry in Her hand. (17) The God of gods, who treats the Brāhmaṇa as His deity, shampooed my feet and rendered every other form of personal service to me and treated me with the respect due to a god! (18) Heavenly bliss, salvation, riches of this world or of the nether world, and all supernatural powers follow from the worship of His feet. (19) And yet He did not give me even a little wealth. Because He thought, poor as I was, wealth would completely turn my head and make me forget Him. Oh, how merciful is the Lord to me. (He has really done me an act of grace by withholding wealth from me)." (20)

इति तद्यन्तयन्त्रतः प्राप्नो निजगृहान्तिकम् । सूर्यान्लेन्दुसङ्काशौर्विमानैः सर्वतो वृत्तम् । १२१ ।

विचित्रोपवनोद्यानैः कूजद्विजकुलाकुलैः । प्रोत्फुल्लकुमुदाभोजकहाराद्येत्यलवारिभिः । १२२ ।

जुष्टं खलङ्कृतैः पुष्पिः स्त्रीभिश्च हरिणाक्षिभिः । किमिदं कस्य वा स्थानं कथं तदिदमित्यभूत् । १२३ ।

एवं मीमांसमानं तं नरा नायैऽमरप्रभाः । प्रत्यगृह्णन् महाभागं गीतवाद्येन भूयसा । १२४ ।

पतिमागतमाकर्ण्य पत्युर्द्वर्षातिसम्भ्रमा । निश्चक्राम गृहान्तर्णं रूपिणी श्रीरिवाल्यात् । १२५ ।

पतिव्रता पति दृष्ट्वा प्रेमोक्तण्डाश्रुलोचना । मौलिताक्ष्यनमद् बुद्ध्या मनसा परिष्वजे । १२६ ।

Musing inwardly thus, the Brāhmaṇa arrived near his house. There he found the area surrounded on all sides by seven-storeyed buildings resplendent as the sun, fire and the moon. (21) It was interspersed with beautiful gardens and parks which resounded with the warbling of birds of all descriptions, with ponds and pools in which various types of lilies and lotuses were in full blossom. (22) Well-adorned men and pretty women were moving here and there. The Brāhmaṇa stood puzzled at the sight. He said to himself, "What is this (I am seeing in front of me)? Whose place is this? (Is it the same place where I lived? If so,) what magic has transformed it into so many palaces?" (23) As he was engrossed in these thoughts, men and women, possessing the splendour of gods advanced to receive the blessed Brāhmaṇa singing and playing upon various musical instruments. (24) Hearing of the return of her lord, the wife of the Brāhmaṇa was extremely delighted (at heart), and in joyous impatience, hurriedly came out of the palace. She looked like the veritable Goddess Lakṣmī coming out of her abode. (25) At the sight of her husband her eyes became wet with tears of love and excitement. Closing her eyes (out of shyness) she respectfully bowed to him and mentally embraced him. (26)

पत्नीं वीक्ष्य विस्फुरन्तीं देवीं वैमानिकीमिव । दासीनां निष्ककण्ठीनां मध्ये भान्तौ स विस्मितः । १२७ ।

प्रीतः स्वयं तथा युक्तः प्रविष्टो निजमन्दिरम् । मणितस्तम्भशतोपेतं महेन्द्रभवनं यथा । १२८ ।

पयःफेननिभाः शय्या दान्ता रुक्मपरिच्छदाः । पर्यङ्का हेमदण्डानि चामरव्यजनानि च । १२९ ।

आसनानि च हैमानि मृदूपस्तरणानि च । मुक्तादामविलम्बीनि वितानानि ह्युपनि च । १३० ।

स्वच्छस्पटिककुण्डेषु महामारकतेषु च । रत्नदीपा भ्राजमाना ललनारत्नसंयुताः । ३१ ।
विलोक्य ब्राह्मणस्तत्र समृद्धीः सर्वसम्पदाम् । तर्कयामास निर्व्यग्रः स्वसमृद्धिमहैतुकीम् । ३२ ।

नूनं बतैतन्मम दुर्भगस्य शश्वद्वरिद्रस्य समृद्धिहेतुः ।
महाविभूतेरवलोकितोऽन्यो नैवोपपद्येत यदूत्तमस्य । ३३ ।
नन्वनुवाणो दिशते समक्षं याचिष्णावे भूर्यपि भूरिभोजः ।
पर्जन्यवत् स्वयमीक्षमाणो दाशार्हकाणामुषधः सखा मे । ३४ ।
किञ्चित्करोत्युर्वपि यत् स्वदत्तं सुहृत्कृतं फलवपि भूरिकारी ।
मर्यापनीतं पृथुकैकमुष्टिं प्रत्यग्रहीत् प्रीतियुतो महात्मा । ३५ ।
तस्यैव मे सौहृदसख्यमैत्री दास्यं पुनर्जन्मनि जन्मनि स्यात् ।
महानुभावेन गुणालयेन विषज्जतस्तत्पुरुषप्रसङ्गः । ३६ ।
भक्ताय चित्रा भगवान् हि सम्पदो राज्यं विभूतीर्न समर्थयत्यजः ।
अदीर्घबोधाय विचक्षणः स्वयं पश्यन् निपातं धनिनां मदोद्धवम् । ३७ ।

इत्थं व्यवसितो बुद्ध्या भक्तोऽतीव जनार्दने । विषयाज्ञायया त्यक्ष्यन् बुभुजे नातिलम्पटः । ३८ ।

The Brāhmaṇa was astonished to see his wife brilliant like a celestial lady and shining in the midst of maid-servants adorned with necklaces of gold. (27) Followed by her he now joyfully entered his own house, which contained hundreds of columns of gems and looked like the abode of the celestial king, Indra. (28) It was furnished with bedsteads made of ivory and plated with gold, the beds on which were spread sheets as white and soft as the foam of milk. Chowries with gold handles were hanging here and there. (29) There were seats of gold provided with soft cushions and strings of pearls hung from brilliant canopies. (30) The walls made of clear crystal were inlaid with emeralds, and excellent images of women made of precious stones held dazzling jewels in their hands to light up the rooms. (31) Seeing there such abundance of riches of all kinds come to him without any ostensible cause, the Brāhmaṇa reflected on this windfall with a calm mind: (32) "I am poor and unluckily from birth; Oh, wherefrom could this wonderful fortune come to me? Nothing but the (gracious look) of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the crown-jewel of Yadus and the possessor of untold riches, could be the cause of this. (33) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of the goddess of wealth and perfect in every way), has infinite objects of enjoyment always at His disposal. Therefore, knowing the mind of His suppliant devotee, He gives in abundance to the latter, though He regards the gift as very insignificant and does not mention it to the devotee. My friend, the crest-jewel of Yadus, is generous like the cloud, (which though capable of filling up the ocean, sometimes does not choose to rain in the presence of the peasant, but inundates his fields at night when he is a sleep, and yet considers the gift as inadequate). (34) Though underrating His own abundant gifts, He makes much even of a small present by His devotee. The noble-minded Lord accepted with great delight the handfuls of beaten rice I took for Him. (35) May I secure from birth to birth His good-will, love, friendship and service. (I have no need for wealth.) May I cherish ever-growing devotion to the lotus-feet of the glorious Lord, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the one abode of excellent qualities, and obtain association with His devotees! (36) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is ever free from the shackles of birth and death, is acquainted with the evil underlying worldly prosperity. He knows how the intoxication of wealth and power brings about the fall of many a wealthy man. That is why (out of compassion) He very often refuses to grant the prayer for wealth, kingdom and power of short-sighted devotees." (37) (Parikṣit!) having reached this conclusion by force of his reason, the Brāhmaṇa in conjunction with his wife enjoyed the worldly pleasures sparingly and without attachment, and his devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa grew from more to more. (38)

तस्य वै देवदेवस्य हरेर्यज्ञपतेः प्रभोः । ब्राह्मणाः प्रभवो दैवं न तेभ्यो विद्यते परम् । ३९ ।

एवं स विप्रो भगवत्सुहृत्तदा दृष्ट्वा स्वभृत्यैरजितं पराजितम् ।

तद्भजानवेगोदग्रथितात्मबन्धनस्तद्धाम लेभेऽचिरतः सतां गतिम् । ४० ।

एतद् ब्रह्मण्यदेवस्य श्रुत्वा ब्रह्मण्यतां नरः । लब्धभावो भगवति कर्मबन्धाद् विमुच्यते । ४१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे पृथुकोपाख्यानं नामैकाशीतितमोऽध्यायः ॥ ८१ ॥

(Parikṣit!) the almighty God of gods, the Lord of sacrifices, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, looks upon the Brāhmaṇa as His own Lord and deity. Therefore, there is no being (on earth) greater than the Brāhmaṇa. (39) Now, this Brāhmaṇa, the friend of the Lord, realized that, though unconquerable by others, the Lord easily submits to the will of His devotee. Realizing this, he became absorbed in contemplation on the Lord. His ties of ignorance were cut asunder by force of this contemplation and before long he attained the abode of the Lord, the sole resort of saints. (40) (Pankṣit!) the man who hears this account which illustrates Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's love for the Brāhmaṇas attains devotion to the Lord and obtains release from the bondage of Karma. (41)

Thus ends the eighty-first discourse entitled "The story of beaten rice (taken by Sudāmā as a present for Śrī Kṛṣṇa)," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्व्यशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXII

Meeting of the Vṛṣṇis with the Gopas and Gopīs (of Vṛndāvana)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथैकदा द्वारवत्यां वसतो रामकृष्णयोः । सूर्योपरागः सुमहानासीत् कल्पक्षये यथा । १ ।

तं ज्ञात्वा मनुजा राजन् पुरस्तादेव सर्वतः । समन्तपञ्चकं क्षेत्रं ययुः श्रेयोविधित्सया । २ ।

निःक्षत्रियां महीं कुर्वन् रामः शस्त्रभृतां वरः । नृपाणां रुधिरौघेण यत्र चक्रे महाहृदान् । ३ ।

ईजे च भगवान् रामो यत्रासृष्टोऽपि कर्मणा । लोकस्य ग्राहयन्नीशो यथाऽन्योऽघापनुत्तये । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again: Parikṣit, once upon a time when Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Śrī Balarāma were (thus) residing in Dwārakā, there occurred a total eclipse of the sun, which (ordinarily) occurs at the time of universal destruction. (1) Having come to know of it (from astrologers) beforehand, people thronged from all sides to the sacred spot called Samanta-pāñcaka (Kurukṣetra) with the object of earning merit or blessedness. (2) That is the place where, while exterminating the Kṣatriyas on earth, Paraśurāma, the foremost warrior (of his time), caused five big tanks to be filled with their blood. (3) The almighty Lord Paraśurāma also performed a sacrifice there for the expiation of sin. Though ever untouched by good or evil Karma, He did it like an ordinary mortal in order to set an example before the world. (4)

महत्यां तीर्थयात्रायां तत्रागन् भारतीः प्रजाः । वृष्णयश्च

तथाकूरवसुदेवाहुकादयः । ५ ।

ययुर्भारत तत् क्षेत्रे स्वमघं क्षपयिष्णवः । गदप्रद्युम्नसाम्बाद्याः सुचन्द्रशुकसारणैः । ६ ।
 आस्तेऽनिरुद्धो रक्षायां कृतवर्मा च यूधपः । ते रथैर्देवधिषण्याभैर्हयैश्च तरलध्रुवैः । ७ ।
 गजैर्नन्दद्विरभ्राभैर्नृभिर्विद्याधरद्युभिः । व्यरोचन् महातेजाः पथि काञ्चनमालिनः । ८ ।
 दिव्यस्त्रस्त्रसन्नाहाः कलत्रैः खेचरा इव । तत्र स्रात्वा महाभागा उपोष्य सुसमाहिताः । ९ ।
 ब्राह्मणेभ्यो ददुर्धेनूर्वासःस्त्रयुक्ममालिनीः । रामहृदेषु विधिवत् पुनराप्नुय वृष्णयः । १० ।
 ददुः स्वत्रं द्विजाग्रयेभ्यः कृष्णो नो भक्तिरस्त्विति । स्वयं च तदनुज्ञाता वृष्णयः कृष्णदेवताः । ११ ।
 भुक्त्वोपविशुः कामं स्निग्धच्छायाद्द्विपाद्घ्रिषु । तत्रागतांस्ते ददुः सुहृत्सम्बन्धिनो नृपान् । १२ ।
 मत्स्योशीनकौसल्यविदर्भकुरुसुञ्जयान् । काम्बोजकैकयान् मद्रान् कुन्तीनानर्तकेरलान् । १३ ।
 अन्यांश्चैवात्मपक्षीयान् परांश्च शतशो नृप । नन्दादीन् सुहृदो गोपान् गोपीश्लोत्कण्ठिताश्चिरम् । १४ ।
 अन्योन्यसन्दर्शनहर्षरंहसा प्रोत्फुल्लहृद्वक्त्रसरोरुहश्रियः ।
 आदिलष्य गाढं नयनैः स्त्रवज्जला हृष्यत्स्वचो रुद्धगिरो ययुर्मदम् । १५ ।
 स्त्रियश्च संवीक्ष्य मिथोऽतिसौहृदस्मितामलापाङ्गदृशोऽभिरेभिरे ।
 स्तनैः स्तनान् कुङ्कुमपङ्कुरूपितान् निहत्य दोर्भिः प्रणयाश्रुलोचनाः । १६ ।
 ततोऽभिवाद्य ते वृद्धान् यविष्ठैरभिवादिताः । स्वागतं कुशलं पृष्ट्वा चक्रुः कृष्णकथा मिथः । १७ ।

Parikṣit, on this great occasion for pilgrimage people from all parts of India, intent to wash away their sin, assembled at Kurukṣetra. There came Yadus like Akṛūra, Vasudeva and Ugrasena (among the elders), and Gada, Pradyumna, Sāmba and others (among the younger generation). (Pradyumna's son) Aniruddha and Kṛtavarmā, the Yādava general, alongwith Sucandra, Śuka and Sāraṇa were left (at Dwāraka) for the protection of the city. The Yadus came all the way with great pomp and splendour. Adorned with necklaces of gold, garlands of celestial flowers and excellent clothes, and protected by armour, they looked like gods as they proceeded with their wives in chariots shining like aerial cars, on horses springing like waves, and on trumpeting elephants appearing like thundering clouds, and in palanquins, etc., carried by foot-men shining like Vidyādhara. (5—8) (Reaching Kurukṣetra,) the (blessed) Yadus took their bath in the sacred waters, observed a fast according to the rule (during the eclipse) and made gifts of cows in right earnest to the Brāhmaṇas adorning them with clothes, garlands and chains of gold. (On the conclusion of the eclipse) they again took their bath in the tanks associated with the name of Paraśurāma, and thereafter fed deserving Brāhmaṇas with dainty dishes. Their object in doing all this was to strengthen their devotion to Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's feet. (Then) the Yadus, who regarded Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa alone as their deity, broke their fast with the permission of the Brāhmaṇas and lay down to rest at pleasure under the cool shade of umbrageous trees. (After taking repose for a while) they began to visit their friends and relations among the princes that had congregated there on this occasion. (9—12) Kings of Matsya, Uśinara, Kosala, Vidarbha, Kuru, Śrījaya, Kāmboja, Kekaya, Madra, Kuntī, Anarta, Kerala, and many other principalities, who were either their allies or enemies, had assembled there in their hundreds, O Parikṣit! Besides, Nanda and the other Gopas, who were (great) friends of the Yādavas, and the Gopis, who had been long yearning to see Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, had also arrived there. (The Yadus saw them all one after another.) (13-14) The joy they derived from one another's sight opened the buds of their heart. With faces glowing like lotuses in full blossom and with tears trickling down their eyes, they clasped one another in close embrace. Their hair stood on end, their voices got choked with emotion and all were transported with joy. (15) (Like the men) the women also greeted and looked at one another with smiles and side long glances full of love and folded one another in their arms. While doing so they pressed to their bosoms the bosoms of another smeared with saffron-paste, and tears of love stood in their eyes. (16) The younger ones bowed to the elders, and were themselves bowed to by those still younger, and welcoming one another and enquiring after their mutual welfare, they related to one another (enchanting) stories of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (17)

पृथा भ्रातॄन् स्वसूरीक्ष्य तत्पुत्रान् पितरावपि । भ्रातृपत्नीर्मुकुन्दं च जहौ संकथया श्रुचः । १८ ।
(Parikṣit!) Kuntī, when she saw her brothers and sisters with their children, as also her parents, sisters-in-law and Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, had her grief soothed in conversation with them. (18)

कुन्त्युवाच

आर्य भ्रातरहं मन्ये आत्मानमकृताशिषम् । यद् वा आपत्सु मद्भ्रातॄन् नानुस्मरथ सत्तमाः । १९ ।
सुहृदो ज्ञातयः पुत्रा भ्रातरः पितरावपि । नानुस्मरन्ति स्वजनं यस्य दैवमदक्षिणम् । २० ।

Kuntī (addressing Vasudeva) said : My brother, I find myself extremely unfortunate. Not a single desire of mine has been fulfilled. What a pity that even noble brothers like you should forget me during my calamities! (19) I am now convinced that friends, relations, sons, brothers and even parents forget one on whom fortune does not smile. (Why should I blame you for this?) (20)

वसुदेव उवाच

अम्ब मास्मानसूयेथा दैवक्रीडनकान् नरान् । ईशस्य हि वशे लोकः कुरुते कार्यतेऽथवा । २१ ।
कंसप्रतापिताः सर्वे वयं याता दिशं दिशम् । एतर्ह्येव पुनः स्थानं दैवेनासादिताः स्वसः । २२ ।

Vasudeva replied: Dear sister, do not find fault with us. We, mortals, are nothing but toys in the hands of Providence. The world is subject to the control of the Supreme Ruler, and everyone acts and is made to act according to His will. (21) Sister, you are aware how harassed by Kāṁsa, we had to flee from one quarter to another. It is only now that we have been restored to a secure position by Providence. (22)

श्रीशुक उवाच

वसुदेवोप्रसेनाद्यैर्यदुभिस्तेऽर्चिता नृपाः । आसन्नच्युतसन्दर्शपरमानन्दनिर्वृताः । २३ ।
भीष्मो द्रोणोऽश्विकापुत्रो गान्धारी ससुता तथा । सदाराः पाण्डवाः कुन्ती सुभ्यो विदुरः कृपः । २४ ।
कुन्तिभोजो विराटश्च भीष्मको नम्रजिह्वहान् । पुरुजिद् द्रुपदः शल्यो धृष्टकेतुः सकाशिराट् । २५ ।
दमघोषो विशालाक्षो मैथिलो मद्रकेकयौ । युधामन्युः सुशर्मा च ससुता बह्मिकादयः । २६ ।
राजानो ये च राजेन्द्र युधिष्ठिरमनुव्रताः । श्रीनिकेतं वपुः शौरैः सखीकं वीक्ष्य विस्मिताः । २७ ।
अथ ते रामकृष्णाभ्यां सम्यक् प्राप्तसमर्हणाः । प्रशंसं सुमुदा युक्ता वृष्णीन् कृष्णपरिग्रहान् । २८ ।
अहो भोजपते यूयं जन्मभाजो नृणामिह । यत् पश्यथासकृत् कृष्णं दुर्दर्शमपि योगिनाम् । २९ ।

यद्विश्रुतिः श्रुतिनुतेदमलं पुनाति पादावनेजनपयश्च वचश्च शास्त्रम् ।

भूः कालभर्जितभगापि यदङ्घ्रिपद्मस्य शोऽत्यशक्तिरभिवर्षति नोऽखिलार्थान् । ३० ।

तद्दर्शनस्पर्शनानुपथप्रजल्पशय्यासनाशनसयौनसपिण्डबन्धः ।

येषां गृहे निरयवर्त्मनि वर्ततां वः स्वर्गापवर्गविरमः स्ववमास विष्णुः । ३१ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : (Parikṣit!) (all) the kings present there were duly honoured by Vasudeva, Ugrasena and the other Yadus, and they felt supremely delighted and gratified at the sight of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (23) Parīkṣit! Bhīṣma, Droṇa, Dhṛtarāṣṭra, Gāndhārī with her sons (Duryodhana and others), the Pāṇḍavas with their consorts, Kunti, Śrījaya, Vidura, Kṛpācārya, Kuntibhoja, Virāṭa, Bhīṣmaka, the great king Nagnajit, Purujit, Drupada, Śālya, Dhṛṣṭaketu alongwith the king of Kāśī, Damaghosa, Viśālākṣa, the king of Mithilā, the kings of Madra and Kekaya, Yudhāmanyu and Suśarmā, Bāhlika and others with their sons—these and other kings, who had accepted the suzerainty of Yudhiṣṭhira, were astonished to see the person of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the abode of all excellence and beauty, together with His consorts. (24—27) Śrī Balarāma and Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa duly honoured them all, and they in their turn joyfully extolled (the good fortune of) the Yadus, who were the kinsfolk of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and lived under His care. (28) (Addressing Ugrasena,) they said; " O king of Bhojas! of all men in this world you Yadus alone have realized the fruit of your existence inasmuch as you constantly have before your eyes Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who can rarely be seen even by the greatest of Yogis. (29) The glory of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, which is sung by the Vedas (with such zest), the Gaṅgā water that washes His feet and His utterances in the form of the scripture go a long way in purifying the world. The earth had of late been robbed of its splendour by Time; its potentialities have now been revived by the mere touch of His lotus-like feet, and it has once more begun to yield all the objects of our desire. (30) You Yadus have both marital and lineal relationship with Śrī Kṛṣṇa. You constantly see Him, touch His sacred person, walk with Him, chat with Him, sit close to Him, eat with Him and even sleep with Him. Even though you lead the life of a householder, which ordinarily paves the way to hell, you have constantly in your midst all-pervading Lord Viṣṇu Himself, whose very sight puts an end to the craving not only for heaven but for salvation itself." (31)

श्रीशुक उवाच

नन्दस्त्र यदूनं प्राप्तात् ज्ञात्वा कृष्णपुरोगमान् । तत्रागमन् वृत्तो गोपैरन्यैर्दुःक्षया ॥३२॥
तं दृष्ट्वा वृष्णयो हृष्टास्तन्वः प्राणमिवोत्थिताः । परिष्वजिरे गाढं चिरदर्शनकातराः ॥३३॥
वसुदेवः परिष्वज्य समीतः प्रेमविह्वलः । स्मरन् कंसकृतान् क्लेशान् पुत्रन्यासं च गोकुले ॥३४॥
कृष्णरामौ परिष्वज्य पितरावभिविवाद्य च । न किञ्चनोचतुः प्रेम्णा साश्रुकण्ठौ कुरुद्वह ॥३५॥
तावात्मासनमारोप्य बाहुभ्यां परिरभ्य च । यशोदा च महाभागा सुतौ विजहतुः शुचः ॥३६॥
गेहिणी देवकी चाथ परिष्वज्य ब्रजेश्वरीम् । स्मरन्त्यौ तत्कृतां मैत्रीं बाष्पकण्ठ्यौ समूचतुः ॥३७॥
का विस्मरेत वां मैत्रीमनिवृत्तां ब्रजेश्वरि । अवाप्याप्यैन्द्रमैश्वर्यं यस्या नेह प्रतिक्रिया ॥३८॥

एतावदृष्टपितरौ युवयोः स्म पित्रोः सम्प्रीणनाभ्युदयोषणपालनानि ।

प्राप्योषतुर्भवति पक्ष्म ह यद्वदक्ष्णोन्यस्तावकुत्र च भयौ न सतां परः स्वः ॥३९॥

Śrī Śuka continued : (Parīkṣit,) when (the celebrated Gopa) Nanda learnt that Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and the other Yadus had come to Kurukṣetra, he too came there together with other Gopas to see them with abundant supplies of provisions in their carts. (32) The Yadus were delighted to see Nanda (and his companions). They stood up to receive him, even as dead bodies are spurred into activity when infused with new life. Having been anxious for long to meet him, they embraced him tightly. (33) Vasudeva embraced Nanda with great delight and was overwhelmed with emotion as he recollected (one by one) the persecutions to which he had been subjected by Kāṁsa, and how he had been compelled to place his sons in Nanda's keeping at Gokula. (34) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Śrī Balarāma embraced their foster-parents Nanda and Yaśodā and bowed to them. Parīkṣit, overwhelmed with emotion, they could not utter a word as their throats were choked with tears. (35) The blessed Yaśodā and Nanda, too, made their foster-sons sit on their lap and folded them in their arms. This removed the agony of their heart (caused by the long separation from their children, the apples of their eyes.) (36) Rohiṇi and Devakī too embraced Yaśodā, and remembering her friendly behaviour towards them spoke to her in faltering words with their throats choked with tears:—(37) "Yaśodā, we can never forget the continued friendship you have showed to us. It is not possible for us to repay that debt, even if we obtain the fortune of Indra, the ruler of paradise. (Can anyone be so ungrateful as to forget that service of yours?) (38) When Śrī Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa had not even seen their parents and their father left them under your care, you protected them even as the eye-lashes protect the eyes. You gave them nourishment, protection and loving caresses and performed propitiatory rites for their welfare. In fact, you did all the duty of parents to them. Under your care, they had no cause of fear from anyone. (It was but meet and proper for you to treat them as your own children, for) noble souls like you make no distinction between one who is their own and one who is not so. (O consort of Nanda! you and your husband both are really great souls.") (39)

श्रीसुक उवाच

गोयश्च कृष्णमुपलभ्य चिरादभीष्टं यत्प्रेक्षणे दृशिषु पक्षमकृतं शप्ति ।

दृग्भिर्हृदीकृतमलं परिरभ्य सर्वास्तद्भावमापुरपि नित्ययुजां दुरापम् । ४० ।

भगवांस्तास्तथाभूता विविक्त उपसङ्गतः । आश्लिष्यानामयं पृष्ठं प्रहसन्नदमब्रवीत् । ४१ ।

अपि स्मरथ नः सख्यः स्वानामर्थचिकीर्षया । गर्ताश्चिरायिताञ्छुपक्षक्षपणचेतसः । ४२ ।

अय्यवधायथास्मान् विदकृतज्ञाविशङ्कया । नूनं भूतानि भगवान् युनक्ति वियुनक्ति च । ४३ ।

वायुर्यथा घनानीकं तृणं तूलं रजांसि च । संयोज्याक्षिपते भूयस्तथा भूतानि भूतकृत् । ४४ ।

मयि भक्तिर्हि भूतानाममृतत्वाय कल्पते । दिष्ट्या यदासीन्मत्प्रेहो भवतीनां मदापनः । ४५ ।

अहं हि सर्वभूतानामादिरन्तोऽन्तरं बहिः । भौतिकानां यथा खं वार्ष्णेय्योतिरङ्गनाः । ४६ ।

एवं ह्येतानि भूतानि भूतेष्वाम्नाऽऽत्मना ततः । उभयं मय्यथ परे पश्यताभातमक्षरे । ४७ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : (Parikṣit ! I have already told you that the highest object of the Gopis' love was Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa.) When seeing Him, they used to curse the Creator for having provided their eyes with eye-lashes (which interrupted their vision by falling every moment). Seeing the Lord, for whom they had cherished such intense longing, after such a long time, they all ushered Him into their heart through (the gateway of) the eyes and holding Him in close embrace mentally became one with Him. The state of oneness with the Lord attained by them through Love was not within the easy reach of even those who are ever united with Him through meditation. (40) When the Almighty Lord (Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa) found the Gopis in that state (of absorption), He saw them in private, embraced them, enquired after their health and smilingly said as follows:—(41) "(Dear) friends, for the service of our people, We had to go (out of Vraja and leaving friends like you) had to engage ourselves in destroying enemies. Do you still remember Us who have been out of sight for a long time? (42) I hope you do not entertain a low opinion of us, considering us as ungrateful? (You will be unfair to Me, if you do so.) It is God's will that unites or disunites beings. (43) Just as the wind brings together or scatters clouds, blades of grass, flakes of cotton, particles of dust, even so the Creator brings together or scatters beings of His creation. (44) Friends, it is a matter for congratulation that you have developed that (transcendental) Love for Me, which (automatically) leads to My realization; and I need not tell you that loving devotion to Me brings immortality to all who practise it. (45) I am the beginning and end of all beings and pervade them both inside and outside, even as the elements, viz., the earth, water, air, fire and ether constitute the beginning and end of all material objects and pervade them both inside and outside, O fair ones! (46) These five elements have entered into the constitution of all physical bodies as their material causes, whereas the spirit or self resides in them as the enjoyer or the individual self. I am the Ego Absolute beyond them both. In fact, both these appear in Me. " (47)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अध्यात्मशिक्षया गोप्य एवं कृष्णेन शिक्षिताः । तदनुस्मरणध्वस्तजीवकोशास्तमध्यगन् । ४८ ।

आहुश्च ते नलिननाभ पदारविन्दं योगेश्वरैर्हृदि विचिन्त्यमगाधबोधैः ।

संसारकूपपतितोत्तरणावलम्बं गेहञ्ज्वलामपि मनस्युदियात् सदा नः । ४९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे वृष्टिगोपसङ्गमो नाम द्व्यशीतितमोऽध्यायः । ८२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : (Parikṣit!) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa thus instructed the Gopis in spiritual lore. Revolving that in their mind, again and again, the Gopis got rid of their ego-body and became one with the Supreme Self. (48) They said, " O Lord, from whose navel sprung the lotus where Brahṁā, the creator, took His birth, the greatest of Yogis, possessed of infinite wisdom, contemplate on Your lotus-like feet in their hearts. Your feet alone serve as the support to enable people fallen in the abyss of mundane existence to get out of it. (O Lord,) occupied as we are with our household duties, kindly bless us that Your lotus-feet may ever remain present before our mental eyes, (so that we may never forget them even for a moment)." (49)

Thus ends the eighty-second discourse entitled "The Meeting of the Vṛṣṇis with the Gopas and Gopis of Vraja", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्र्यशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXIII

Conversation between Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's consorts and Draupadī

श्रीशुक उवाच

तथातुगृह्य भगवान् गोपीनां स गुरुर्गतिः । युधिष्ठिरमथापृच्छत् सर्वांश्च सुहृदोऽव्ययम् । १ ।

त एवं लोकनाथेन परिपृष्टाः सुसत्कृताः । प्रत्युद्धर्तृमनसस्तत्पदेक्षाहताहसः । २ ।

कुतोऽशिवं त्वच्छरणाम्बुजासवं महन्मनस्तो मुखनिःसृतं क्वचित् ।

पिबन्ति ये कर्णपुटैरलं प्रभो देहभृतां देहकृदस्मृतिच्छिदम् । ३ ।

ह्रित्वाऽऽत्मधामविधुतात्कृतव्यवस्थामानन्दसम्पन्नमखण्डमकुण्ठबोधम् ।

कालोपसृष्टनिगमावन आतयोगमायाकृति परमहंसगति नत्ता स्म । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit!) the almighty Lord (Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa) was the Preceptor of the Gopis, as well as the goal (which they sought to attain through the practice of His teachings). Having thus shown His favour to them, the Lord saw Yudhiṣṭhira and all (other) friends and enquired about their welfare. (1) (Parikṣit!) their sins disappeared at the very sight of the lotus-feet of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Kindly enquired after and duly honoured by the Lord of the (three) worlds, they felt delighted at heart, and replied:—(2) " (Blessed) Lord, exalted souls enjoy with their mind the nectar of your lotus-feet, which occasionally flows out through their lips (in the form of the stories of Your enchanting sports). Those who quaff this nectar to their heart's fill with the cup of their ears are rid of all ignorance in respect of You—ignorance, which is the root of corporeal existence of all embodied beings. How can any evil befall them? (3) Lord, You are an embodiment of unfailing wisdom and a perfect ocean of Bliss. The three states of the soul occasioned by its contact with the mind (viz., wakefulness, dream and dreamless sleep) cannot touch even the fringe of Your effulgent Being and melt away even in Its proximity. You are the sole resort of recluses, who have lost all consciousness of the world. You have assumed a human semblance through Your own inconceivable Yogamāyā (enchanting power) in order to protect the Vedas whose influence had waned through the force of time. We offer our obeisances to You." (4)

ऋषिरुवाच

इत्युत्तमलोकशिखामणिं

जनेषुभिष्टुवत्वथककौरवस्त्रियः ।

समेत्य गोविन्दकथा मिथोऽगुणस्त्रिलोकगीताः शृणु वर्णयामि ते । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : (Parikṣit!) when Yudhiṣṭhira and others were thus extolling the most glorious Lord (Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa), ladies of the Yādava and Kaurava families met together and began to relate to one another the stories of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa sung throughout the three worlds. I shall now tell you (in detail) what they said. Please listen. (5)

द्रौपद्युवाच

हे वैदर्भ्यच्युतो भद्रे हे जाम्बवति कौसले । हे सत्यभामे कालिन्दि शैब्ये रोहिणि लक्ष्मणे । ६ ।

हे कृष्णपत्य एतन्नो ब्रूत वो भगवान् स्वयम् । उपयेमे यथा लोकमनुकुर्वन् स्वमायया । ७ ।

Draupadī said : Rukmiṇi, Bhadrā, Jāmbavatī, Satyā, Satyabhāmā, Kālindī, Śaibya, Lakṣmaṇa, Rohiṇi and other consorts of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (please) tell me how the glorious Lord Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa espoused you. Though God Himself, He behaves like a mortal through His own Māyā (enchanting power)." (6-7)

रुक्मिण्युवाच

चैद्याय मार्षयितुमुद्यतकार्मुकेषु राजस्वजेयभटशेखरिताङ्घ्रिरेणुः ।

निन्ये मृगेन्द्र इव भागमजावियूथात् तच्छ्रीनिकेतचरणोऽस्तु मार्मार्चनाय । ८ ।

Rukmiṇi said : (Draupadī,) Jarāsandha and the other kings wanted that I should be given in marriage to Śiśupāla. They came armed for a fight to carry out this intention of theirs. But the Lord took me away from their midst even as a lion carries away its prey from a herd of goats and sheep. (It is no wonder that He should do so; for) even invincible warriors bear the dust of His feet on their crowns. (Dear Draupadī, I sincerely wish that) the lotus-feet of my Lord, the repository of all prosperity and beauty, may be available to me for worship from (birth to birth). (8)

सत्यभामोवाच

यो मे सनाभिवधत्प्रहृदा ततेनलिप्ताभिशापमपमार्ष्टुमुपाजहार ।

जित्वक्षराजमथ रत्नमदात् स तेन भीतः पितादिशत मां प्रभवेष्वपि दत्ताम् । ९ ।

Satyabhāmā said : (Draupadī,) my father was sorely grieved at the death of his brother (Prasena); he, therefore, charged the Lord with Prasena's murder. In order to wipe off this stigma cast on Him, the Lord vanquished the lord of bears, Jāmbavān, (in battle) and winning the jewel from him restored it to my father. Seized with fear on account of the false imputation made by him, my father bestowed the jewel on the Lord alongwith myself, even though he had affianced me to another. (9)

जाम्बवत्युवाच

प्राज्ञाय देहकृदमुं निजनाथदेवं सीतापतिं त्रिणवहान्यमुनाभ्ययुध्यत् ।

ज्ञात्वा परीक्षित उपाहरदर्शनं मां पादौ प्रगृह्य मणिनाहममुष्य दासी । १० ।

Jāmbavatī said : (Draupadī,) my father (Jāmbavān, the lord of bears,) was unaware that my Lord was the same as Śrī Rāma, (his own lord and deity). (Therefore,) he fought the Lord for twenty-seven days. After this test when he recognized the Lord (to be Śrī Rāma Himself), he took hold of His feet and offered me as a present, together with the jewel. May I continue to be His slave (from birth to birth, is my only prayer to the Lord). (10)

कालिन्द्युवाच

तपश्चरन्तीमाज्ञाय

स्वपादस्पर्शनाशया । सख्योपेत्याग्रहीत् पाणिं योऽहं तद्गृहमार्जनी । ११ ।

Kālindī said : (Draupadī !) when the Lord came to know that I was practising austerities in the hope of obtaining the privilege to touch His feet, He came with his friend (Arjuna), and espoused me. I have now the privilege of sweeping His house. (11)

मित्रविन्दोवाच

यो मां स्वयंवर उपेत्य विजित्य भूपान् नित्ये श्वयूथगमिवात्मबलिं द्विपारिः ।

भ्रातृश्च मेऽपकुस्तः स्वपुरं श्रियौकस्तस्यास्तु मेऽनुभवमङ्घ्रयवनेजनत्वम् । १२ ।

Mitravindā said : (Draupadī !) my father called an assembly of kings at his capital to enable me to elect my own partner in life. The Lord too attended the assembly and, vanquishing all the kings (in battle), took me away to His capital (Dwārakā), which is the abode of all excellence and beauty, even as the lion carries away his prey from a pack of dogs. My brothers, who offered Him resistance, with a view to delivering me from His hands and thereby injuring me, were equally worsted in the fight. I now seek that in every life I may get the privilege of washing His feet. (12)

सत्योवाच

सप्तोक्षणोऽतिबलवीर्यसुतीक्षणशृङ्गान् पित्रा कृतान् क्षितिपवीर्यपरीक्षणाय ।

तान् वीरदुर्मदहनस्तरसा निगृह्य क्रीडन् बबन्ध ह यथा शिशवोऽजतोक्तान् । १३ ।

य इत्थं वीर्यशुल्कां मां दासीभिश्चतुरङ्गिणीम् । पथि निर्जित्य राजन्यान् नित्ये तद्दास्यमस्तु मे । १४ ।

Satyā said : (Draupadī !) in order to test the strength of the kings (who had assembled to seek my hand), my father had secured seven oxen endowed with inordinate strength and energy and very sharp horns. These oxen had shattered the pride of many a valiant warrior; but the Lord playfully and quickly took hold of them, (put strings through their noses) and brought them under His power in no time, even as children deal with kids. (13) Thus winning me as a reward for His strength, my Lord carried me to Dwārakā with all my attendant maids under the protection of a strong army. He conquered on the way all the princes who tried to intercept. (O queen, my only desire now is that) I may (always) get the opportunity of serving Him. (14)

भद्रोवाच

पिता मे मातुलेयाय स्वयमाहूय दत्तवान्। कृष्णो कृष्णाय तद्धितामक्षौहिण्या सरस्वीजनैः । १५।
अस्य मे पादसंस्पर्शो भवेज्जन्मिन् जन्मनि। कर्मभिर्भ्रात्र्यमाणाया येन तच्छ्रेय आत्वनः । १६।

Bhadrā said : Draupadi, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the son of my maternal uncle. Knowing that I had given my heart to Him, my father sent for Śrī Kṛṣṇa of his own accord and bestowed me on Him, with an army consisting of one Akṣauhīṇī and many maids-of-honour. (15) I now consider that my highest good lies in obtaining in every birth the touch of His feet, wherever I may be thrown by the force of my Karma. (16)

लक्ष्मणोवाच

ममापि राज्यच्युतजन्मकर्म श्रुत्वा मुहुर्नारदगीतमास ह।
चित्तं मुकुन्दे किल पद्महस्तया वृतः सुसंमृश्य विहाय लोकपान् । १७।
ज्ञात्वा मम मतं साध्वि पिता दुहितुवत्सलः। बृहत्सेन इति ख्यातस्तत्रोपायमवीकरोत् । १८।
यथा स्वयंवरे राज्ञि मत्स्यः पार्थेप्सया कृतः। अयं तु बहिराच्छत्रो दृश्यते स जले परम् । १९।
श्रुत्वैतत् सर्वतो भूषा आयुर्मत्पितुः पुरम्। सर्वास्त्रशस्त्रतत्त्वज्ञाः सोपाध्यायाः सहस्रशः । २०।
पित्रा सम्पूजिताः सर्वे यथावीर्यं यथावयः। आददुः सशरं चापं वेदुं पर्षदि मद्भियः । २१।
आदाय व्यसृजन् केचित् सज्यं कर्तुमनीश्वराः। आकोटि ज्यां समुत्कृष्य पेतुरेकेऽमुना हताः । २२।
सज्यं कृत्वापरे वीरा मागधाम्बृहदेदिपाः। भीमो दुर्योधनः कर्णो नाविन्दस्तदवस्थितिम् । २३।
मत्स्याभासं जले वीक्ष्य ज्ञात्वा च तदवस्थितिम्। पार्थो यत्तोऽसृजद्बाणं नाच्छिन्त् पस्पृशे परम् । २४।

Lakṣmaṇā said : O queen, Devarṣi Nārada frequently sings the story of the descent and sports of the Lord on earth. Having heard those songs and duly considering the fact that Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth, rejecting (Indra and) the (other) guardians of the world, had chosen Him as her consort, I set my heart on the Lord. (17) O virtuous lady ! my father, who is known by the name of Brhatsena, loved me intensely. When he came to know of my mind, he contrived a plan for carrying it into effect. (18) O queen, just as on the occasion of your self-choice of a husband your father invented the device of a fish in order to get Arjuna for you, my father too invented a similar device, with this difference that the fish was totally screened externally and only its reflection could be seen in the water. (19) Hearing of this, kings versed in the secrets of archery, and the use of all other arms comes alongwith their teachers, in their thousands from all sides to the capital of my father. (20) All were honoured by my father with due regard to their prowess and age. With their heart set on (winning) me, they took up the bow and arrow kept in that assembly and attempted, (turn by turn,) to hit the mark. (21) Some of them lifted the bow but finding themselves unable to string it left it where it was. Others succeeded in drawing the string as far as the other end of the bow, but (unable to fasten it to that end) fell down struck by it. (22) Greatest warriors like Jarāsandha, Śiṣupāla, the king of Ambaṣṭha, Bhīma, Duryodhana and Karṇa succeeded in stringing the bow, but could not locate the fish. (23) Seeing the reflection of the fish in the water, Arjuna was able to locate it, discharged the arrow aiming at it with great care, but failed to hit it, the arrow only touching the fish. (24)

राजन्येषु निवृत्तेषु भग्नमानेषु मानिषु। भगवान् धनुरादाय सज्यं कृत्वाथ लीलया । २५।
तस्मिन् सन्ध्याय विशिखं मत्स्यं वीक्ष्य सकृज्जले। छित्तेषुणापातयत्तं सूर्यं चाभिजिति स्थिते । २६।
दिवि दुन्दुभयो नेदुर्जयशब्दयुता भुवि। देवाश्च कुसुमासारान् मुमुचुर्हर्षविह्वलाः । २७।

तद् रङ्गमाविशमहं कलनूपुराभ्यां पदभ्यां प्रगृह्य कनकोज्ज्वलरत्नमालाम् ।

नूले निवीय परिधाय च कौशिकाय्ये सत्रीडहासवदना कबरीधृतस्रक् । २८ ।

उत्तरीय वक्त्रमुस्कन्तलकुण्डलविड् गण्डस्थलं शिशिरहासकटाक्षमोक्षे ।

राज्ञो निरीक्ष्य परितः शनकैर्मुतारेरंसेऽनुरक्तहृदया निदधे स्वमालाम् । २९ ।

तावन्मृदङ्गपट्टहाः

शङ्खभेर्यानाकादयः । निनेदुर्नटनर्तक्यो ननुर्गायिका जगुः । ३० ।

(O queen !) the pride of the proudest of princes having thus been crushed, most of the kings returned to their seats (giving up all hopes of winning me). It was then that the almighty Lord took up the bow, strung it sportfully, joined the arrow to it, and looking but once at the reflection of the fish pierced it by His shaft and brought it down to the ground. The sun was at the meridian at that time. (25-26) (O good Draupadi !) shouts of victory were raised all over the earth while celestial drums began to sound in the heavens and gods transported with joy showered flowers. (27) (O queen !) I entered the arena at that moment, with the anklets at my feet sweetly jingling. I wore round my loins a new piece of finest silk and had wrapped myself with another. With flowers adorning my braid and bashful smiles on my lips, I carried in my hands a brilliant necklace of jewels wrought in gold. (28) Thick tresses of hair overhung my face and brilliant ear-rings added lustre to my cheeks. Lifting up my face I glanced at the kings on all sides with enlivening smiles and sidelong looks and with a heart over-flowing with love gently placed the necklace round the neck of my Lord. (29) The moment I placed the necklace round His neck, clay tomtoms, tabors, conchs, drums and kettledrums were sounded; male and female dancers began to dance, and songsters began to sing (in various tunes). (30)

एवं वृते भगवति मयेशे नृपयूथपाः । न सेहिरे याज्ञसेनि स्पर्थन्तो हृच्छयातुराः । ३१ ।

मां तावद् रथमारोष्य हयरत्नचतुष्टयम् । शार्ङ्गमुद्यम्य सन्नद्धस्तस्थावाजौ चतुर्भुजः । ३२ ।

दारुकश्चोदयामास काञ्चनोपस्करं रथम् । मिषतां भूभुजां राज्ञि मृगाणां मृगराडिव । ३३ ।

तेऽन्वसजन्त राजन्या निषेद्धं पथि केचन । संयत्ता उद्धृतेष्वासा ग्रामसिंहा यथा हरिम् । ३४ ।

ते शार्ङ्गच्युतबाणौघैः कृतबाह्वद्विकन्धराः । निपेतुः प्रधने केचिदेके सन्त्यज्य दुद्रुवुः । ३५ ।

Draupadi ! when I thus chose my beloved Lord as my life's partner, the other love-lorn monarchs grew (extremely) jealous and were very much upset at their discomfiture. (31) In the meanwhile my Lord, possessed of four arms, (at once) placed me on His chariot drawn by four excellent horses and, lifting up His bow and putting on His armour stood prepared for battle. (32) Dāruka drove the chariot decorated with gold as all the kings looked on, O queen, and the Lord proceeded to Dwārakā even as the lion passes through a herd of deer. (33) Lifting up their bows and prepared for a battle, some of those kings pursued my Lord with a view to obstructing Him on the way; but their attempt was no more successful than that of dogs to check the lion. (34) Some of them fell in battle, their arms, legs and necks being torn asunder by the arrows discharged from the Śāringa bow of the Lord; while others abandoning the fight took to their heels. (35)

ततः पुरीं यदुपतिरत्यलङ्कृतां रविच्छदध्वजपटचित्रतोरणाम् ।

कुशस्थलीं दिवि भुवि चाभिसंस्तुतां समाविशन्तरणिव स्वकेतनम् । ३६ ।

पिता मे पूजयामास सुहृत्सम्बन्धिबान्धवान् । महाहर्वासोऽलङ्कारैः शय्यासनपरिच्छदैः । ३७ ।

दासीभिः सर्वसम्पद्भिर्भटेभरथवाजिभिः । आयुधानि महार्हाणि ददौ पूर्णस्य भक्तितः । ३८ ।

आत्मारामस्य तस्येमा वयं वै गृहदासिकाः । सर्वसङ्गनिवृत्त्याद्धा तपसा च बभूविम । ३९ ।

Then the Lord of the Yadus, like the very sun, entered His home, the city of Dwārakā, whose glories are sung in heaven as well as on earth. The city was specially decorated on this day with various ornamental arches and streamers which screened off the rays of the sun. (36) My father honoured all his friends, relations and kinsmen with valuable textiles and ornaments, beds, seats and other articles. (37) Though my dearest Lord lacks nothing being complete by Himself (in everyway) and delights only in the Self, yet my father out of love presented Him with a number of maid-servants, all kinds of wealth, foot-soldiers, elephants, chariots, horses and many valuable weapons. (O queen !) we must have (in our previous lives) practised great austerities giving up attachment to all. That is why in this birth we earned the privilege of actually working as His maid-servants in the household of our Lord. (38-39)

महिष्य ऊचुः

भौमं निहत्य सगणं युधि तेन रुद्धा ज्ञात्वाथ नः क्षितिजये जितराजकन्याः ।

निर्मुच्य संसृतिविमोक्षमनुस्मरन्तीः पादाम्बुजं परिणनाथ य आप्नकापः ।४०।

न वयं साध्वि साप्ताज्यं स्वाराज्यं भौज्यमप्युत । वैराज्यं पारमेष्ठ्यं च आनन्त्यं वा हरेः पदम् ।४१।

कामयापह एतस्य श्रीमत्यादरजः श्रियः । कुचकुङ्कुमगन्धाढ्यं मूर्ध्ना वोढुं गदाभूतः ।४२।

ब्रजस्त्रियो यद् वाञ्छन्ति पुलिन्दस्तृणवीरुधः । गावश्चारयतो गोपाः पादस्पर्शं महात्मनः ।४३।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः ।८३।

Rohinī (on behalf of the sixteen thousand consorts) said : Having conquered many a king during his expeditions for world conquest, Bhaumāsura had made us, their daughters, captive and kept us confined in his palace. When, having put an end to Bhauma and all his forces in battle, He came to know of our existence in his palace. He liberated us and, though Perfect in Himself married us (all), knowing as He did that we ever contemplated on His lotus- feet, which bring emancipation from the bondage of birth and death. (40) O virtuous lady, we crave not for universal sovereignty on earth, or for rulership of the heaven, for the enjoyments attaching to both these positions or for supernatural powers, for the position of Brahmā, or for Liberation or for (the various forms of personal existence in) the (eternal) abode of God. (41) We (only) desire that we may (continue to) bear on our head the glorious dust of the lotus-feet of our Lord, which is scented with the saffron on the bosom of Lakṣmī (the goddess of wealth). (42) We long for the touch of the (sacred) feet of the glorious Lord, which the Gopas and the Gopis, the Bhīla women, nay the very creepers and blades of grass craved for where He tended cows in Vraja (May this yearning of our heart be fulfilled by the Lord). (43)

Thus ends the eighty-third discourse, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुरशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXIV

An account of the pilgrimage (undertaken by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa)

श्रीशुक उवाच

श्रुत्वा पृथा सुबलपुत्र्यथ याज्ञसेनी माधव्यथ क्षितिपपत्य उत स्वगोयः ।

कृष्णेऽखिलात्मनि हरौ प्रणयानुबन्धं सर्वां विसिस्म्युरलमश्रुकलाकुलाक्ष्यः । १ ।

इति सम्भाषमाणसु स्त्रीभिः स्त्रीषु नृभिर्नृषु । आययुर्मुनयस्तत्र कृष्णरामदिदृक्षया । २ ।

द्वैपायनो नारदश्च च्यवनो देवलोऽसितः । विश्वामित्रः शतानन्दो भरद्वाजोऽथ गौतमः । ३ ।

रामः सशिष्यो भगवान् वसिष्ठो गालवो भृगुः । पुलस्त्यः कश्यपोऽत्रिश्च मार्कण्डेयो बृहस्पतिः । ४ ।

द्वितस्त्रितश्चैकतश्च ब्रह्मपुत्रास्तथाङ्गिराः । अगस्त्यो याज्ञवल्क्यश्च वामदेवादयोऽपरे । ५ ।

तान् दृष्ट्वा सहस्रोत्थाय प्रागासीना नृपादयः । पाण्डवाः कृष्णरामौ च प्रणोमुर्विश्ववन्दितान् । ६ ।

तानानर्बुर्व्यथा सर्वे सहगमोऽच्युतोऽर्चयत् । स्वागतासनपादार्घ्यमाल्यधूपानुलेपनैः । ७ ।

उवाच सुखमासीनान् भगवान् धर्मगुप्सुनः । सदसस्तस्य महतो यतवाचोऽनुशृण्वतः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit !) hearing of this deep attachment of the consorts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Soul of the universe, to His person, Kuntī, Gāndhārī, Draupadī, Subhadrā, the consorts of the other kings and even the Gopīs, whom He held so dear, were all greatly astonished and their eyes were bedimmed with tears of joy. (1) When ladies were thus talking with ladies and men with men, a number of sages appeared on the spot for the sight of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Śrī Balarāma. (2) The more prominent of them were Kṛṣṇadwaipāyana (Vyāsa), Devarṣi Nārada, Cyavana, Devala, Asita, Viśvāmītra, Śatānanda, Bharadvāja, Gautama, the glorious Paraśurāma with his disciples, Vasiṣṭha, Gālava, Bhṛgu, Pulastya, Kaśyapa, Atri, Mārkaṇḍeya, Bṛhaspati, Dwita, Ekata, Sanaka, Sanandana, Sanātana and Sanatkumāra, Aṅgīrā, Agastya, Yājñavalkya, Vāmadeva, and (a few) others. (3—5) Seeing these Rṣis, revered and worshipped by the world, all the kings who had been sitting there from before, including (Yudhiṣṭhira and) the (other) Pāṇḍavas, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma at once stood up and bowed to them. (6) (There) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and all (those who were present there) welcomed them with sweet words and duly honoured them by offering seats, water to wash their hands and feet with, garlands, incense, sandal-paste etc. (7) When the sages were comfortably seated, the Lord, who had appeared on earth for the protection of virtue, spoke (as follows) with the great assembly silently listening to Him. (8)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अहो वयं जन्मभृतो लब्धं कातन्त्येन तत्फलम् । देवानामपि दुष्प्रापं यद् योगेश्वरदर्शनम् । ९ ।

किं स्वल्पतपसां नृणामर्चायां देवचक्षुषाम् । दर्शनस्पर्शनप्रश्रवहृपादार्चनादिकम् । १० ।

न ह्यमयानि तीर्थानि न देवा मृच्छिणामयाः । ते पुनस्त्युरुकालेन दर्शनादेव साधवः । ११ ।

नाग्निर्न सूर्यो न च चन्द्रतारका न भूर्जलं खं श्वसनोऽथ वाङ्मनः ।

उपासिता भेदकृतो हरन्त्ययं विपश्चितो घ्नन्ति मुहूर्तसेवया । १२ ।

यस्यात्मबुद्धिः कुणपे त्रिधातुके स्वधीः कलत्रादिषु भौम इत्यधीः ।

यत्तीर्थबुद्धिः सलिले न कर्हिचिज्जनेष्वभिज्ञेषु स एव गोखरः । १३ ।

The glorious Lord said : Today our life has been highly blessed, and the object of our taking birth has been fully realized; (for) we have been honoured with a visit from the great Masters of Yoga, whose sight cannot be easily obtained even by the gods. (9) How can people whose austerities are poor, and who see God cabined in a particular image (only), gain (the rare privilege of) your sight and touch, of inquiring about your health etc., and of offering you salutations and worship ? (10) Sacred waters alone do not possess purificatory virtues, nor do images of clay and stone alone represent the deities. Whereas these purify a man after one has recourse to them and worshipped them for a long time, holy men purify by their very sight. (11) The gods presiding over fire, the sun, the moon, the stars, the earth, water, ether, air, speech and mind, when worshipped, cannot completely wash off our sins, inasmuch as they promote our sense of diversity; whereas the wise wipe off our sins even if we serve them for a few minutes, (less than an hour). (12) (O sages and assembled friends) he who looks upon His contemptuous body (which is virtually dead), constituted of the three elements of wind, bile and phlegm as the self, those related to the body (wife etc.) as one's own and images of clay, stone or wood as his objects of worship, and who regards the sacred waters alone as purifying, and never so the men of wisdom, is indeed, a donkey among cows (in human form). (13)

श्रीशुक उवाच

निशम्येत्थं भगवतः कृष्णस्याकुण्ठमेधसः । वचो दुस्त्वयं विप्रास्तुष्णीमासन् भ्रमद्वियः । १४ ।
चिरं विमृश्य मुनय ईश्वरस्येशितव्यताम् । जनसङ्ग्रह इत्युचुः सम्यन्तस्तं जगद्गुरुम् । १५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : (Parikṣit.) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the possessor of unfailing wisdom. Hearing the above words from His lips, the sages kept silent. Unable to make out the meaning of those mysterious words, they got confounded. (14) After long consideration they came to the conclusion that though the (Supreme) Lord of the universe, He was behaving like an ordinary man subject to the law of Karma just in order to teach a lesson to the world. Realizing this, they smiled and addressed Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the supreme Teacher of the world) as follows. (15)

मुनय ऊचुः

यन्मायया तत्त्वविदुत्तमा वयं विमोहिता विश्वसृजामधीश्वराः ।
यदीशितव्यायति गूढ ईहया अहो विचित्रं भगवद्विचेष्टितम् । १६ ।
अनीह एतद् बहुधैक आत्मना सृजत्यवत्यति न बध्यते यथा ।
भौमैर्हि भूमिर्बहुनामरूपिणी अहो विभूषश्रितं विडम्बनम् । १७ ।
अथापि काले स्वजनाभिगुप्तये विभर्षिं सत्त्वं खलनिग्रहाय च ।
स्वलीलया वेदपथं सनातनं वर्णाश्रमात्मा पुरुषः परो भवान् । १८ ।
ब्रह्म ते हृदयं शुङ्गं तपःस्वाध्यायसंयमैः । यत्रोपलब्धं सद् व्यक्तमव्यक्तं च ततः परम् । १९ ।
तस्माद् ब्रह्मकुलं ब्रह्मन् शास्त्रयोनेस्त्वमात्मनः । सभाजयसि सद्भाम तद् ब्रह्मण्याप्रणीर्भवान् । २० ।
अद्य नो जन्मसाफल्यं विद्यायास्तपसो दुःशः । त्वया सङ्गम्य सन्नया यदन्तः श्रेयसां परः । २१ ।
नमस्तस्मै भगवते कृष्णायकुण्ठमेधसे । स्वयोगमाययाच्छत्रमहिम्ने परमात्मने । २२ ।
न यं विदन्त्यमी भूपा एकारामाश्च वृष्णयः । मायाजवनिकाच्छत्रमात्मानं कालमीश्वरम् । २३ ।
यथा शयानः पुरुष आत्मानं गुणतत्त्वदक् । नाममात्रेन्द्रियाभाते न वेद रहितं परम् । २४ ।
एवं त्वा नाममात्रेषु विषयेष्विन्द्रियेहया । मायया विभ्रमद्वित्तो न वेद स्मृत्युपप्लवात् । २५ ।
तस्याद्य ते ददृशमाङ्घ्रिमघौघमर्षतीर्थास्पदं हृदि कृतं सुविपक्वयोगैः ।

उत्सिक्तभक्त्युपहृताशयजीवकोशा आपुर्भवद्रतिमथोऽनुगृह्णाण भक्तान् । २६ ।

The sages said: (Lord, even) great progenitors of the world (like Marici) and the highest sages like us stand deluded by Your Mâyā (enchanting power). The almighty Lord of the universe, You behave like an ordinary creature, concealing Your true Self behind Your seemingly human activities. Oh, (all) Your sports are (really) most wonderful. (16) Just as the earth (though one) assumes different names and forms through its various products (viz., the tree, stone, jar etc., which are essentially the same as the earth), even so, though one, You assume various names and forms and, though static, You create and protect the universe and (finally) swallow up the same by Your own Self and (yet) these activities do not bind You. Oh, what is all this but a mere sport on Your part, O perfect one! (17) (Lord,) though You are the (supreme) Spirit beyond the realm of Prakṛti (Nature), You assume from time to time a Form made of pure Sattva for the protection of Your devotees and suppression of the wicked and by Your example maintain (and perpetuate) the eternal Vedic path. (Really speaking) it is You who manifest Yourself in the form of the different castes and orders. (18) (Lord,) the Vedas constitute Your immaculate heart; through askesis, study, meditation and Samādhi (absorption) You are realized there in both Your Manifest and Unmanifest aspects, as well as in Your transcendental aspect which is beyond these two (and is the substratum of both). (19) Since You are known through the medium of the Vedas (which are stored in the heart of the Brāhmaṇas), it is the Brāhmaṇas who are the real medium of your realization. O Perfect One ! that is why You are the foremost patron of the Brāhmaṇas, and that is why You honour them so much. (20) In You lies the culmination of all blessings; You are the sole refuge of saints. Having met You today we have attained the fruition of our birth, learning, austerities and wisdom. (21) (Lord!) Your wisdom is unbounded: You are the Supreme Spirit, the Embodiment of Truth, Knowledge and Bliss. You have concealed Your glory by Your own Yogamâyā (enchanting power). We offer salutation to You as such. (22) The kings assembled here, and even the Yadus, who enjoy life together (with You), do not (truly) know You as the Universal Soul, the Time-spirit and Ruler of the universe, veiled as You are by Your own Mâyā. (23) As a dreaming person looks upon all objects of his dream as real, and regards his dream-formed body which is perceived (only) with the mind and exists in name alone—as his self, and not the body of his waking life, which is out of his mind for the time being, (even) so (in waking life) when the mind gets deluded by Mâyā in the form of the wandering of the senses among their objects which exist only in name, its discrimination gets clouded, and the Jiva fails to realize You who stand beyond the waking life. (24-25) (O Lord !) sages who have attained ripeness of Yoga succeed in enthroning in their heart Your lotus-feet, which are the origin of the holy waters of the Gaṅgā, which wipe off heaps of sins. We are glad we have seen those feet today. Lord, we are Your devotees. (Pray) shower Your grace on us. Now the (highest) state of Your realization is attained only by those who through their overflowing devotion succeed in shedding their ego, which obscures the souls. (26)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यनुज्ञाय दशार्हं धृतराष्ट्रं युधिष्ठिरम् । राजर्षे स्वाश्रमान् गन्तुं मुनयो दधिरे मनः । २७ ।

तद् वीक्ष्य तानुपव्रज्य वसुदेवो महायशाः । प्रणम्य चोपसंगृह्य बभ्रापेदं सुयन्त्रितः । २८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: O royal sage ! having thus (praised and) taken leave of the Lord, King Dhṛtarāṣṭra and (the virtuous) Yudhiṣṭhira, the sages thought of returning to their hermitages. (27) Perceiving this, the illustrious Vasudeva approached them. Bowing to them, and clasping their feet, he addressed them with great humility. (28)

वसुदेव उवाच

नमो वः सर्वदेवेभ्य ऋषयः श्रोतुमर्हथ । कर्मणा कर्मनिर्हारी यथा स्यात्स्तदुच्यताम् । २९ ।

Vasudeva submitted : Sages, in you reside all the gods,* I offer my salutations to you. Kindly listen to me. (Pray) tell us by what sort of activity one may be able to rid oneself of all Karma and (the desire for Karma). (29)

नारद उवाच

नातिवित्रभिदे विप्रा वसुदेवो ह्युभुत्सया । कृष्णं मत्पार्श्वकं यत्रः पृच्छति श्रेय आत्मनः । ३० ।

सन्निकर्षो हि मर्यानामनादरणकारणम् । गार्ङ्गं हित्वा यथान्याम्भस्तत्रयो याति शुद्धये । ३१ ।

यस्यानुभूतिः कालेन लयोत्पत्त्यादिनास्य वै । स्वतोऽन्यस्माद्य गुणतो न कुतश्चन रिच्यति । ३२ ।

तं क्लेशकर्मपरिपाकगुणप्रवाहैरव्याहृतानुभवमीश्वरमद्वितीयम् ।

प्राणादिभिः स्वविभवैरुपगृह्यमन्यो मन्येत सूर्यमिव मेघहिमोपरारैः । ३३ ।

Devarṣi Nārada replied : O sages, it is no great wonder that regarding Śrī Kṛṣṇa as his child, Vasudeva should inquire of us with a view to his enlightenment, the road to his spiritual welfare. (30) For human beings are generally prone to underrate those who are near them. We find persons living on the banks of the Gaṅgā leaving the Gaṅgā water and resorting to other sacred waters for their purification. (31) Śrī Kṛṣṇa's self-awareness is never obscured by the processes of creation, preservation and dissolution of the universe, which are carried out by Time. It does not suffer diminution on any account (either) by itself or through any external cause, or through the action of the Guṇas. (32) His wisdom is never obscured by the (five) afflictions (in the shape of ignorance, egotism, attraction, repulsion and fear of death), nor by (virtuous and sinful) Karmas, nor by their fruits (in the form of joy and sorrow), nor again by the ebb and flow of Sāttvika (and) the (other) Guṇas. He is the one Lord, without a second. When He veils Himself under His own potencies, the vital airs etc., ignorant people consider Him as veiled, even as when the vision gets obstructed by clouds, mist and eclipse, etc., people regard the sun as screened by them. (33)

अथोचुर्मुनयो राजत्राभाष्यानकदुन्दुभिम् । सर्वेषां शृण्वतां राज्ञां तथैवाच्युतरामयोः । ३४ ।

कर्मणा कर्मनिर्हारे एष साधु निरूपितः । यच्छ्रद्धया यजेद् विष्णुं सर्वयज्ञेश्वरं मखैः । ३५ ।

चित्तस्योपशमोऽयं वै कविभिः शास्त्रचक्षुषा । दर्शितः सुगमो योगो धर्मश्चात्ममुदावहः । ३६ ।

अयं स्वस्त्ययनः पन्था द्विजातेर्गृहमेधिनः । यच्छ्रद्धयाऽऽप्तचित्तेन शृङ्गेनेत्येत पुरुषः । ३७ ।

वित्तैषणां यज्ञदानैर्गृहिर्दारसुतैषणाम् । आत्मलोकेषणां देव कालेन विसृजेद् बुधः ।

प्रामे त्यक्तैषणाः सर्वे यदुर्ध्वरास्तपोवनम् । ३८ ।

ऋणैस्त्रिभिर्द्विजो जातो देवर्षिपितृणां प्रभो । यज्ञाध्ययनपुत्रैस्तान्यनिस्तृयं त्यजन् पतेत् । ३९ ।

त्वं त्वद्य मुक्तो द्वाभ्यां वै ऋषिपित्रोर्महामते । यज्ञैर्द्वर्णमुन्मुच्य निऋणोऽशरणो भव । ४० ।

वसुदेव भवान् नूनं भक्त्या परमया हरिम् । जगतामीश्वरं प्रार्चः स यद् वां पुत्रतां गतः । ४१ ।

Addressing Vasudeva, (as follows) within the hearing of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and the kings (present there), O king, the sages then said: (34) The best way of neutralizing past acts and wiping out the desire for future action through action itself is to propitiate, with (due) reverence, Viṣṇu, the Lord of all sacrifices, through sacrifices. (35) Perceiving through the

* The Śruti says. यावन्तीर्षं देवतायान्ताः सव्यो वेदविदि प्रादायणं वसन्ति । eye of the Śāstras, the all-knowing sages have declared it to be the easiest means of attaining tranquillity of mind, and a sacred duty the performance of which brings delight to the heart. (36) For the twice-born householder the most propitious course is to perform with reverence the worship of the Supreme Person expending (liberal sums of) money earned by fair means. (37) O Vasudeva, a wise man should get rid of his thirst for wealth by performing sacrifices and making gifts, his craving for wife and children by enjoying the pleasures of a married life, and his desire for the enjoyment of the higher worlds etc., by thoughts of their being subject to the ravages of Time, Having (thus) renounced all (the three types of) desires even at home, the wise proceeded to the forest for askesis. (38) O Vasudeva, the Brāhmaṇa, the Kṣatriya and the Vaiśya are born with debts to gods, the Ṛṣis and the manes. He who renounces the home without discharging these debts through the performance of sacrifices, study of the scriptures and by begetting a son respectively (surely) falls. (39) (O wise Vasudeva,) you are as a matter of fact free from your debts to the Ṛṣis and the manes now. Pay off your debt to the gods (too) through the performance of sacrifices, and thus freed from all obligations you may quit the home. (40) Vasudeva, you have surely worshipped Śrī Hari, the Lord of the universe, with supreme devotion. That is why He has accepted the role of a son to you. (41)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति तद्वचनं श्रुत्वा वसुदेवो महामनाः । तानृषीन्त्विजो वव्रे मूर्धाऽऽनम्य प्रसाद्य च । ४२ ।
त एनमूषयो राजन् वृता धर्मेण धार्मिकम् । तस्मिन्त्रयाजयन् क्षेत्रे परैरुत्तमकल्पकैः । ४३ ।
तदीक्षायां प्रवृत्तायां वृणयः पुष्करस्त्रजः । स्वाताः सुवाससो राजन् राजानः सुषुवलङ्कृताः । ४४ ।
तत्पहिष्यश्च मुदिता निककण्ठ्यः सुवाससः । दीक्षाशालामुपाजग्मुर्गाल्मिणस्तुपाणयः । ४५ ।
नेदुर्मदङ्गपटहश्च ह्यभयानकादयः । ननूर्तुनटनर्तक्यस्तुष्टुवुः सूतमागधाः ।

जगुः सुकण्ठ्यो गन्धर्व्यः सङ्गीतं सहभर्तृकाः । ४६ ।

तमभ्यषिञ्चन् विधिवदक्तमभ्यक्तमृत्विजः । पत्नीभिरष्टादशभिः सोमराजमिवोडुभिः । ४७ ।
ताभिर्दुकूलवल्लयैर्हारिनूपुरकुण्डलैः । खलङ्कृताभिर्विबभौ दीक्षितोऽजिनसंवृतः । ४८ ।
तस्यत्विजो महाराज रत्नकौशेयवाससः । ससदस्या विरेजुस्ते यथा वृत्रहणोऽध्वरे । ४९ ।
तदा रामश्च कृष्णश्च स्वैः स्वैर्बभूवुर्भिरन्वितौ । रेजतुः स्वसुतेदरैर्जिविशौ स्वविभूतिभिः । ५० ।

Śrī Śuka went on : (Parikṣit,) hearing the aforesaid words of the Ṛṣis the high-minded Vasudeva sought their favour by saluting them with his head bent low and appointed them to officiate as priests at his sacrificial performance. (42) Duly appointed as priests, O king, the Ṛṣis helped the pious Vasudeva in performing a number of sacrifices on the largest scale in that holy place. (43) On Vasudeva being initiated for the sacrifice, the Yadus and (other) kings took their bath, put on their best attire and ornaments and adorned themselves with garlands of lotuses. (44) The consorts of Vasudeva too adorned themselves with gold necklaces and besmeared their bodies with sandal-paste and, clad in their best attire, joyously entered the sacrificial hall with offerings in their hands. (45) Clay tomtoms, tabors, conchs, drums, kettledrums and other musical instruments were sounded (at the time); dancers, both male and female danced; bards and panegyrists uttered praises; Gandharva women with their husbands sang beautiful songs. (46) Vasudeva applied collyrium to his eyes and anointed his body with butter. The priests (then) consecrated him alongwith his eighteen wives by sprinkling water on them, just as (in the ancient times) the moon and the stars were consecrated. (47) Initiated for the sacrifice and clad in deer skin Vasudeva looked most charming with his wives who were all dressed in (beautiful) saris and adorned with bracelets, necklaces, anklets and ear-rings. (48) Clad in silk and adorned with jewels, the priests and supervisors of the sacrifice shone like the priests at the sacrifice performed by Indra (the slayer of Vṛtra). (49) Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, the Rulers of (all) Jivas shone brightly on that occasion with their relations, consorts and sons, who were their part manifestations. (50)

ईजेऽनुयज्ञं विधिना अग्निहोत्रादिलक्षणैः । प्राकृतैर्वैकुण्ठैर्द्रव्यज्ञानक्रियेश्वरम् । ५१ ।
 अथत्विभ्योऽद्ददात् काले यथाप्रातं स दक्षिणाः । खलङ्कृतोभ्योऽलङ्कृत्य गोभूकन्या महाधनाः । ५२ ।
 पत्नीसंयाजावभृथैश्चरित्वा ते महर्षयः । ससू रामहृदे विप्रा यजमानपुरःसराः । ५३ ।
 स्नातोऽलङ्कारवासोसि वन्दिभ्योऽद्दात्तश्चा स्त्रियः । ततः खलङ्कृतो वर्णानाश्चभ्योऽन्नेन पूजयत् । ५४ ।
 बन्धून् सदरान् ससुतान् पारिवर्हेण भूयसा । विदर्भकोसलकुरून् काशिकेकयसुञ्जयान् । ५५ ।
 सदस्यत्विक्सुराणान् नृभूतपितृचारणान् । श्रीनिकेतमनुज्ञाय शंसन्तः प्रययुः क्रतुम् । ५६ ।
 धृतराष्ट्रोऽनुजः पार्था भीष्मो द्रोणः पृथा यमौ । नारदो भगवान् व्यासः सुहृत्सम्बन्धिबान्धवाः । ५७ ।
 बन्धून् परिश्रज्य यदून् सौहृदात् क्लिञ्चचेतसः । ययुर्विरहकृच्छ्रेण स्वदेशांश्चापरे जनाः । ५८ ।
 नन्दस्तु सह गोपालैर्बुहत्या पूजयार्चितः । कृष्णरामोग्रसेनाद्यैर्व्यावसीद् बन्धुवत्सलः । ५९ ।
 वसुदेवोऽञ्जसोत्तीर्थं मनोरथमहार्णवम् । सुहृद्वृतः प्रीतमना नन्दमाह करे स्पृशन् । ६० ।

At the end of each sacrifice, Vasudeva performed, in accordance with the scriptural's ordinance, the Agnihotra and other sacrifices as well as those falling under the category of Prākṛta and Vairkṛta sacrifices, and thereby worshipped and propitiated Viṣṇu (the Lord of all substances, rituals and the Mantras with which they are performed). (51) Then in due time he adorned the priests well (with clothes and ornaments) and gave them sacrificial fees and also gifted them duly adorned cow and girls as well as lands and abundant wealthy as laid down in the scriptures. (52) After going through the ritual of Patnīsarṃyāja (which is a part of the sacrifice) and the rites connected with the concluding bath, those great sages who had officiated as priests of the Sacrifice followed Vasudeva to the tank named after Paraśurāma and performed their ablutions there. (53) After taking their bath, Vasudeva and his wives gave away all their ornaments and clothes to the bards and, adorning themselves well (with new ornaments and dress) entertained all classes of men and animals down to the dog. (54) He honoured with extensive presents (all) his relations alongwith their wives and son as well as the princes of Vidarbha, Kosala, Kuru, Kāśī, Kekaya and Śrījaya, the supervisors of the sacrifice, the priests, hosts of gods, men, spirits, manes and the celestial bards. They (all) took leave of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the abode of Śrī) and left for their homes praising the sacrifice. (55-56) (Parikṣit,) king Dhṛtarāṣṭra, Vidura, Yudhiṣṭhira, Bhīma, and Arjuna, Bhīṣma, Droṇa, Kunti, Nakula, Sahadeva, Devaṛsi Nārada, Bhagavān Vyāsa, and other friends and relations and kinsmen felt the agony of separation (when leaving their friends, the Yadus). With their hearts moistened through affection, they embraced the Yadus and departed for their homes with (great difficulty). The other people also left with them. (57-58) (Parikṣit,) honoured with extensive presents by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma, Ugrasena and others, Nanda, alongwith the other Gopas, out of love for them, stayed (there for some time more). (59) (O dear king,) having (thus) easily realized his great ambition like one who crosses an ocean without much effort, Vasudeva felt (greatly) delighted at heart. In the midst of his friends and relations he took Nanda by the hand, and addressed him (thus). (60)

वसुदेव उवाच

भ्रातरिशकुतः पाशो नृणां यः स्नेहसंज्ञितः । तं दुस्स्यजमहं मन्ये शूराणामपि योगिनाम् । ६१ ।

अस्मास्वप्रतिक्लप्यं यत् कृताज्ञेषु सत्तमैः। मैत्र्यर्पिताफला वापि न निर्वर्तेत कर्हिचित्। ६२।
 प्रागकल्पाच्च कुशलं भ्रातवो नाचराम हि। अधुना श्रीमदान्याक्षा न पदयामः पुरः सतः। ६३।
 मा राज्यश्रीरभूत् पुंसः श्रेयस्कामस्य मानद। स्वजनानुत बन्धून् वा न पश्यति ययान्धदृक्। ६४।

Vasudeva said : Brother (Nanda), God has forged for men a bond which is known by the name of affection. I think the greatest of warriors and Yogis find it difficult to undo it. (61) Highly virtuous as you are, the friendship you have shown to us, ungrateful souls, is unparalleled and cannot be repaid; and yet (we know) it will never cease (it will continue for ever). (62) O brother, formerly we could not do any good turn to you precisely because we were helpless, and now we are blinded by intoxication of wealth and power and do not look at you even though you stand before us. (63) O virtuous brother, let not royal fortune fall to the lot of one who seeks blessedness. Blinded by it, man fails to recognize even his own kinsmen and relations. (64)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं सौहृदशैथिल्यचित्त आनकदुन्दुभिः। रुदोद तत्कृतां मैत्रीं स्मरन्नश्रुविलोचनः। ६५।
 नन्दस्तु सख्युः प्रियकृत् प्रेम्णा गोविन्दरामयोः। अद्य श्व इति मासंस्त्रीन् यदुभिर्मानितोऽवसत्। ६६।
 ततः कापैः पूर्यमाणः सन्नजः सहबान्धवः। परार्घ्याभरणक्षौमनानानर्घ्यपरिच्छदैः। ६७।
 वसुदेवोपसेनाभ्यां कृष्णोद्धवबलादिभिः। दत्तमादाय पारिबर्हं यापितो यदुभिर्भयौ। ६८।
 नन्दो गोपाश्च गोप्यश्च गोविन्दचरणाम्बुजे। मनः क्षिप्तं पुनर्हर्तुमनीश मथुरां ययुः। ६९।

Śrī Śuka continued : (Parikṣit,) Vasudeva's heart melted with love as he said all this. Tears rushed to his eyes, as he remembered the love and friendship which Nanda bore to him and he began to weep. (65) Anxious to please his friend and out of affection for Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, Nanda put off his departure from day to day and stayed (there) for three months receiving the best attentions of the Yadus. (66) They gratified him and his brother Gopas and other residents of Vraja (who had accompanied him) with enjoyments of various kinds as well as with valuable ornaments, silk garments and other invaluable presents. (67) Vasudeva, Ugrasena, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma, Uddhava and others (severally) presented him with gifts. Taking all these and permitted by the Yadus, Nanda left (for his home). (68) (Parikṣit,) Nanda as well as the other Gopas and Gopis had transferred their heart to the lotus-feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa; and they were unable to withdraw it from them. (So) they departed for Mathurā (leaving their heart behind). (69)

बन्धुषु प्रतियातेषु वृण्वयः कृष्णदेवताः। वीक्ष्य प्रावृषमासत्रां ययुर्द्वावतीं पुनः। ७०।

जनेभ्यः कथयाञ्चकुर्यदुदेवमहोत्सवम्। यदासीत्तीर्थयात्रायां सुहृत्सन्दर्शनादिकम्। ७१।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे तीर्थयात्रानुवर्णने नाम चतुर्शतितमोऽध्यायः। ८४।

(Parikṣit,) when all the friends had (thus) returned (to their respective places), the Yadus, who looked on Śrī Kṛṣṇa as their deity, and who now saw the monsoon approaching, returned to Dwārakā. (70) (Reaching there) they gave to the people an account of the grand festival (in the form of a sacrificial performance) celebrated by Vasudeva, the adored of the gods, their meeting with friends and relations, and all that had happened in course of the pilgrimage.(71)

Thus ends the eighty-fourth discourse entitled "An account of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's pilgrimage," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चाशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXV

The Lord brings back (from the abode of Death) His (six) elder brothers(throttled by Kāmsa)

श्रीबादरायणिरुवाच

अथैकदाऽऽत्मजौ प्राप्नो कृतपादाभिवन्दनौ । वसुदेवोऽभिनन्द्याह प्रीत्या सङ्कर्षणाच्चतौ । १ ।
 मुनीनां स वचः श्रुत्वा पुत्रयोर्धामसूचकम् । तद्वीर्यैर्जातविश्रम्भः परिभाष्याभ्यभाषत । २ ।
 कृष्ण कृष्ण महायोगिन् सङ्कर्षण सनातन । जाने वामस्य यत् साक्षात् प्रधानपुरुषौ परौ । ३ ।
 यत्र येन यतो यस्य यस्यै यद् यद् यथा यदा । स्यादिदं भगवान् साक्षात् प्रधानपुरुषेश्वरः । ४ ।
 एतन्नानाविधं विश्वमात्मसृष्टमधोक्षज । आत्मनानुप्रविश्यात्मन् प्राणो जीवो बिभर्ष्यजः । ५ ।
 प्राणादीनां विश्वसृजां शक्तयो याः परस्य ताः । पारतन्याद् वैसादृश्याद् द्वयोश्चेष्टैव चेष्टताम् । ६ ।
 कान्तिस्तेजः प्रभा सत्ता चन्द्राग्न्यर्कक्षविद्युताम् । यत् स्थैर्यं भूभृतां भूमेर्वृत्तिर्गन्धोऽर्थतो भवान् । ७ ।
 तर्पणं प्राणनमपां देवत्वं ताश्च तद्रसः । ओजः सहो बलं चेष्टा गतिर्वायोस्तवेश्वरः । ८ ।
 दिशां त्वमवकाशोऽसि दिशः खं स्फोट आश्रयः । नादो वर्णस्त्वमोङ्कार आकृतीनां पृथक्कृतिः । ९ ।
 इन्द्रियं त्विन्द्रियाणां त्वं देवाश्च तदनुग्रहः । अवबोधो भवान् बुद्धेर्जविद्यानुसृतिः सती । १० ।
 भूतानामसि भूतादिरिन्द्रियाणां च तैजसः । वैकारिको विकल्पानां प्रधानमनुशायिनाम् । ११ ।
 नश्वरेष्विह भावेषु तदसि त्वमनश्चरम् । यथा द्रव्यविकारेषु द्रव्यमात्रं निरूपितम् । १२ ।
 सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति गुणास्तद्वृत्तयश्च याः । त्वय्यद्वा ब्रह्मणि परे कल्पिता योगमायया । १३ ।
 तस्मात्र सन्त्यमी भावा यर्हि त्वयि विकल्पिताः । त्वं चामीषु विकारेषु हान्यदाव्यावहारिकः । १४ ।
 गुणप्रवाह एतस्मिन्नबुधास्त्वरविलात्मनः । गतिं सूक्ष्मामबोधेन संसरन्तीह कर्मभिः । १५ ।
 यदुच्छया नृतां प्राप्य सुकल्पामिह दुर्लभाम् । स्वार्थे प्रमत्तस्य वयो गतं त्वमाख्येश्वर । १६ ।
 असावहं ममैवैते देहे चास्यान्वयादिषु । स्नेहपाशैर्निबध्नाति भवान् सर्वमिदं जगत् । १७ ।
 युवां न नः सुतौ साक्षात् प्रधानपुरुषेश्वरौ । भूभारक्षत्रक्षपण अवतीर्णौ तथाऽऽद्य ह । १८ ।

तते गतोऽस्म्यरणमद्य पदारविन्दमापन्नसंसृतिभयापहमार्तबन्धो ।

एतावतालमलमिन्द्रियलालसेन मर्त्यात्मदृक् त्वयि परे यदपत्यबुद्धिः । १९ ।

सूतीगृहे ननु जगाद भवानजो नौ संजज्ञ इत्यनुयुगं निजधर्मगुप्त्यै ।

नानातनूर्गगनवद् विदधज्जहासि को वेद भूष उरुगाय विभूतिमायाम् । २० ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit, on their return from Kurukṣetra) one morning, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma went to Their parents to offer Their salutations to them. Vasudeva received his Sons (most) affectionately and, after They had bowed to his feet, spoke to them (as follows). (1) (Parikṣit.) Vasudeva had heard about the glory of his sons from the lips of the sages and had himself witnessed Their wonderful exploits. He was thus convinced that They were no ordinary beings but divine personages. Addressing them with great affection, he said—(2) "O Kṛṣṇa, the embodiment of Truth, Knowledge and Bliss, O Saṅkarṣaṇa, the Lord of the greatest Yogis, You both are eternal. I know You are the rulers even of Prakṛti and Puruṣa (Matter and Spirit), the two direct causes of this universe. (3) You are directly the substratum and both the instrumental and material cause of the universe. (Nay,) You are its sole Lords, and it has been brought into being for Your sport. Whenever and in whatever form it exists and whatever You react upon is nothing but You. You are the enjoyable in the form of Prakṛti, and the enjoyer in the form of Puruṣa, and also the ruler beyond them both. (4) Lord, You are beyond the senses and beyond birth, existence and other modifications; having created this diversified universe in Yourself, You have Yourself entered it as its Inner Controller. Appearing as Prāṇa (active force) and as Jīva (cognitive force), it is You who sustain and nourish it. (5) The potency possessed by the Prāṇa and other forces responsible for the creation of the universe is (in fact) Your potency; for (unlike You) they are material and not spiritual in essence, and are also dependent on You. The activity which they exhibit is only apparent (the motive power behind them is Yours). (6) (O Lord,) the lustre of the moon, the glow of fire, the effulgence of the sun, the twinkling of stars and the flash of lightning, the firmness of mountains, the odour and sustaining power of the earth—all these are, in fact, You. (7) O Lord, the slaking, life-giving and purifying property of water, are You. You are water itself as well as its taste. The vigour of the senses, mental energy and bodily strength, the activity of the body and its locomotion (—all these), though attributed to the wind, (really) proceed from You. (8) The cardinal points and the space denoted by them are You. Ether and its principle sound, i. e., speech in its subtlest form known by the name of Parā, and its other forms, viz., Paśyanti, Madhyamā as well as Vaikharī (articulate speech), consisting of letter-sounds and words denoting several objects are nothing but You. (9) The power to reveal objects inhering in the senses, the deities presiding over them and the power by which they do so are indeed You. The determining faculty of the intellect and the power of duly connecting various experiences, inhering in the Jīva, are You. (10) In the elements You inhere as their cause, the Tāmasa aspect of Ahaṅkāra (Ego); in the senses You exist as their cause, the Tajasa (Rajasa) aspect of Ahaṅkāra; in the deities presiding over senses as well as in the mind You exist as their cause, the Vaikārika (Sāttvika) aspect of Ahaṅkāra; and You are Māyā, the cause of the repeated birth of Jīvas, bound to Karma. (11) (Just) as in the (various) modifications of a substance the original substance is observed to be the abiding factor, so You are the imperishable truth behind all these perishable objects. (12) (O Lord!) the three modes of Prakṛti—viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—and what are known as their modifications (the Mahat-Tattva etc.) are, in fact, assumed in You, the transcendent Brahma, through Your wonderful Yogic power. (13) Therefore, these modifications (viz., birth, existence, growth, etc.), do not exist in You. When they are projected on You, (then only) they appear in You, who appear as permeating them. At other times, however, (when they cease to be so projected, e.g., during deep sleep), You remain in Your absolute state (unconnected with these modifications). (14) This universe is but a (continuous) flow of the three Guṇas. They who fail to perceive the subtle presence in it of Your absolute state as the All-Soul get entangled in (the meshes of) Karma (due to their identification with the body) and (have to) undergo repeated births and deaths in this world. (15) O Lord, providentially I have attained in this land (of Bhāratavarṣa) the rare gift of a human body, endowed with vigorous senses and organs, and yet under the influence of Your Māyā (enchanting power) my life-time has been frittered away in (utter) neglect of the (main) purpose of my existence. (16) (O Lord!) You have bound the whole of this universe with ties of affection having their roots in self-identification with the body and the feeling of meum with regard to those connected with the body. (17) (I know) You are no other than the Lords of Prakṛti as well as of all individual souls, and not my sons. You have come down for the destruction of the Kṣatriyas, who have become a burden to the earth; You Yourself spoke like that in unambiguous terms to me (at the time of Your descent). (18) Therefore, O Befriender of the afflicted, I have sought for protection this day Your lotus-feet, which (alone) dispel the fear of transmigration haunting those who have taken shelter with them. I am fed up with this much of craving for sense-enjoyments. It was under the influence of this that I have (so long) identified myself with this mortal body and looked on You, the Supreme, as my child. (19) O Lord, in the lying-in-chamber You said that, though unborn, You had, as a matter of fact, been manifesting Yourself through us in different pairs each time for defending Your own laws. Like the sky, You assume diverse forms and cast them off, even though You are one and infinite. Who can know the secret of Your wonderful potency—Yogamāyā? All people extensively sing Your glories. (20)

श्रीशुक उवाच

आकर्ण्येत्थं पितुर्वाक्यं भगवान् सात्वतर्षभः । प्रत्याह प्रश्रयानम्रः प्रहसन् श्लक्ष्णया गिरा । १२१ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Hearing these words of His father (Vasudeva), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the crown-jewel of the Yadus) began to smile. Bowing in all humility (to His father), He replied in sweet words as follows. (21)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

वचो वः समवेतार्थं तातैतदुपमन्महे । यन्नः पुत्रान् समुद्दिश्य तत्त्वग्राम उदाहृतः । १२२ ।

अहं यूयमसावार्य इमे च द्वारकौकसः । सर्वेऽप्येवं यदुश्चेष्ट विमृश्याः सचराचरम् । १२३ ।

आत्मा ह्येकः स्वयंज्योतिर्नियोज्यो निर्गुणो गुणैः । आत्मसृष्टैस्तत्कृतेषु भूतेषु बहुधेयते । १२४ ।

खं वायुर्योतिरापो भूस्तत्कृतेषु यथाशयम् । अविस्तिरोज्ज्वभूयेको नानात्वं यात्यसावपि । १२५ ।

The glorious Lord said : Father! we are your sons; you have in these words expounded the highest philosophical truths to us. We accept as true whatever you have said. (22) Yourself, my venerable brother, Śrī Balarāma, myself, these citizens of Dvāraka and all others including the mobile and immobile creation should be regarded as Brahma, O jewel among the Yadus! (23) (O father!) the Self is really one, self-effulgent, eternal, identical with the body etc., and unqualified; yet it projects the Gunas out of Itself, and in the bodies of the various creatures evolved out of these Gunas it appears as diversified, perceptible, transient, distinct from the body etc., and qualified. (24) Just as (each of the five elements—) ether, air, fire, water and earth—though one in essence, appears differently in its different products and can be distinguished as manifest or unmanifest, meagre or abundant, and so on, so the Self too appears as many through Its (various) adjuncts. (25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं भगवता राजन् वसुदेव उदाहृतम् । श्रुत्वा विनष्टनानाधीस्तृष्णीं प्रीतमना अभूत् । १२६ ।

अथ तत्र कुम्भेष्ट देवकी सर्वदेवता । श्रुत्वाऽऽनीतं गुरोः पुत्रमात्मजाभ्यां सुविस्मिता । १२७ ।

कृष्णारमौ समाश्राव्य पुत्रान् कंसविहिंसितान् । स्मरन्ती कृपणं प्राह वैङ्कव्यादश्रुलोचना । १२८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Parikṣit, hearing these words of the almighty Lord Vasudeva was rid of his sense of diversity, and delighted at heart, became silent and drove away all thoughts from his mind. (26) Devaki, who represented all the deities in her person (and was also present there when this conversation was going on) was greatly astonished to hear that her Sons had brought back the (deceased) son of Their preceptor (from the abode of Yama). (27) Recollecting her sons who had been done to death by Kamsa, she felt agitated in mind and, addressing Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma with tears in her eyes, piteously spoke (thus). (28)

देवक्युवाच

राम रामाप्रमेयात्मन् कृष्ण योगेश्वरेश्वर । वेदाहं वां विश्वसृजामीश्वरावादिपूरुषौ । २९ ।
 कालविध्वस्तसत्त्वानां राज्ञामुच्छास्त्रवर्तिनाम् । भूमेर्भारायमाणानामवतीर्णौ किलाद्य मे । ३० ।
 यस्यांशांशांशभागेन विश्वोत्पत्तिलयोदयाः । भवन्ति किल विश्वात्मसं त्वाद्याहं गतिं गता । ३१ ।
 चिरान्मृतसुतादाने गुण्णा कालचोदितौ । आनिन्यथुः पितृस्थानाद् गुरवे गुम्दक्षिणाम् । ३२ ।
 तथा मे कुरुतं कामं युवां योगेश्वरेश्वरौ । भोजराजहतान् पुत्रान् कामये द्रष्टुमाहताम् । ३३ ।

Devakī said : O Balarāma, the delighter of hearts, Your nature is beyond the ken of mind and speech, O Kṛṣṇa, You are the supreme Lord even of great masters of Yoga. I know You to be the rulers of even Prajāpatis (the progenitors of all creation) and manifestations of the most ancient Being (Sri Nārāyaṇa Himself). (29) They say You have descended on earth through me this time for the destruction of kings who having lost through flux of time their virtues and excellences are transgressing the injunctions of the scriptures and have, therefore, become a burden to the earth. (30) O Soul of the universe, it is well-known that from Your part manifestation in the form of the Spirit proceeds Māyā and from Māyā, the three Guṇas—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas; and from a particle of these Guṇas, proceed the creation, growth and dissolution of the universe. Today, I resort to You for protection. (31) I have heard that being urged by Your preceptor, Sāṇḍipani, and guided by Providence, You brought back his son, who had died long before, from the abode of Death, and thereby discharged Your debt to the preceptor. (32) The Lords (even) of masters of Yoga as You are, I desire that You should similarly grant my desire also, and bring my sons, who had been done to death by Kamsa so that I may see them (and bring satisfaction to my eyes). (33)

ऋषिरुवाच

एवं सञ्जोदितौ मात्रा रामः कृष्णश्च भारत । सुतलं संविशितुर्वेणगमायामुपश्रितौ । ३४ ।
 तस्मिन् प्रविष्टावुपलभ्य दैत्यराड् विश्वात्मदेवं सुतरां तथाऽऽत्मनः ।
 तद्दर्शनाद्वादर्पिषुताशयः सद्यः समुत्थाय ननाम सान्वयः । ३५ ।
 तयोः समानीय वरासनं मुदा निविष्टयोस्तत्र महात्मनोस्तयोः ।
 दधार पादाववनित्य तज्जलं सवृन्द आब्रह्म पुनर्द यदम्बु ह । ३६ ।
 समर्हयामास स तौ विभूतिभिर्महार्हवत्त्वाभरणानुलेपनैः ।
 ताम्बूलदीपामृतभक्षणादिभिः स्वगोत्रविज्ञातसमर्पणेन च । ३७ ।
 स इन्द्रसेनो भगवत्पदाम्बुजं विभ्रन्मुहुः प्रेमविभ्रत्रया धिया ।
 उवाच हानन्दजलाकुलक्षणः प्रहृष्टगोमा नृप गद्गदक्षरम् । ३८ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus directed by Their mother, O scion of Bharata, both Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, with the help of Their Yogamāyā, (divine power), entered (the subterranean region of) Sūtala. (34) When Bali (the king of demons) saw the Soul and adorable object of the universe as well as of his own (manifested in the dual form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma) enter Sūtala, he sprang at once from his seat and with a heart overflowing with joy at Their sight, greeted Them alongwith his family. (35) Full of delight he offered them excellent seats and, when both these divine personages were seated on them, so the tradition goes, washed Their feet and sprinkled on his head as well as on all the members of his family that water which purifies the whole universe from Brahmā downwards. (36) (Then) Bali duly worshipped Them by offering Them valuable clothes, ornaments, sandal-paste, betel-leaves, lights, dishes sweet as nectar and other sumptuous articles, and surrendering (his all, including) his family, wealth and (even) his self (to Them). (37) With a heart saturated with love he bore the Lord's lotus-feet again and again (on his bosom and on his head), so the tradition goes, his eyes bedimmed with tears of joy, and his hair standing on their ends; and in a voice choked with emotion he prayed to the Lord (as follows), O protector of men! (38)

बलिर्वाच

नमोऽनन्ताय बृहते नमः कृष्णाय वेधसे । सांख्ययोगवितानाय ब्रह्मणे परमात्मने । ३९ ।
दर्शनं वां हि भूतानां दुष्प्रापं चाप्यदुर्लभम् । रजस्तमःस्वभावानां यत्रः प्राप्नोति यदृच्छया । ४० ।
दैत्यदानवगन्धर्वाः सिद्धविद्याध्रुवाणाः । यक्षरक्षःपिशाचाश्च भूतप्रमथनायकाः । ४१ ।
विशुद्धसत्त्वधाम्न्यद्वा त्वयि शास्त्रशरीरिणि । नित्यं निबद्धवैरागसे वयं चान्ये च तादृशाः । ४२ ।
केचनोद्बुद्धवैरेण भक्त्या केचन, कामतः । न तथा सत्त्वसंरब्धाः सन्निकृष्टाः सुरादयः । ४३ ।
इदमित्यमिति प्रायस्तव योगेश्वरेश्वर । न विदन्त्यपि योगेशा योगमायां कुतो वयम् । ४४ ।
तत्रः प्रसीद निरपेक्षविमृग्ययुष्मत्पादारविन्दधिषणान्यगृहात्तृकृपात् ।

निष्कम्प्य विश्वशरणाङ्घ्रयुपलब्धवृत्तिः शान्तो यथैव उत सर्वसखैश्चरामि । ४५ ।

शाध्यस्मान्निशितव्येष्टा निष्पापान् कुरु नः प्रभो । पुमान् यच्छ्रद्धयाऽऽतिष्ठंश्चोदनाया विमुच्यते । ४६ ।

Bali said : O Rama, You are infinite. You are (so) great (that manifestations like Śeṣa are all included in You). O Kṛṣṇa (embodiment of Truth, Knowledge and Bliss)! You are the Creator of the universe. The path of Knowledge and the path of Devotion have both been originated by You. You are the Absolute, the Supreme Spirit. (39) Surely Your sight cannot be easily obtained by ordinary beings; (through their own effort) and yet (through Your grace) it is so easy to gain. For You have (today) of Your own accord vouchsafed that to us, whose temperament is predominantly Rājasika and Tamasika. (40) O Lord, we and other beings similar to us, viz., Daityas, Dānavas, Gandharvas, Siddhas, Vidyādhara, Carāṇas, Yakṣas, Rākṣasas, Piśācas, Bhutas and the leaders of Pramathas (instead of adoring You through devotion) constantly bear deep-seated grudge to You, whose Form is the very embodiment of the Vedas, a manifestation of the purest form of Sattva. (41-42) That is why some of us through inveterate hatred, and others through devotion with some interested motive, have been so closely united with You as has not been possible even for gods possessed of a Sāttvika nature. (43) O Lord of masters of Yoga, even great Yogis often fail to comprehend the true nature and mode of operation of Your Yogamāyā. How, then, can we be expected to know it ? (44) Therefore (O Lord,) be pleased to grant that my mind may obtain a firm hold on Your (lotus) feet, which are sought after even by those who are free from all desires, so that by resorting to them I may be able to get out of this dark well of a householder's life, and under the shelter of those feet, which are the sole refuge of the world, may attain peace and tranquillity and move in the world without any company. And if I have to associate at all with anybody, let it be with those saints, who are friends of all. (45) Lord! You are the Ruler of all beings in creation. Pray, make us sinless and advise us that course by following which with faith man acquires immunity from injunctions and interdictions. (46)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

आसन् मरीचेः षट् पुत्रा ऊर्णायां प्रथमेऽन्तरे । देवाः कं जहसुर्वीक्ष्य सुतां यभितुमुद्यतम् । ४७ ।
तेनासुरीमगन् योनिमधुनावद्यकर्मणा । हिरण्यकशिपोर्जाता नीतास्ते योगमायया । ४८ ।
देवक्या उदरे जाता राजन् कंसविहिंसिता । सा ताञ्छेचय्यात्मजान् स्वांस्त इमेऽध्यासतेऽन्तिके । ४९ ।
इत एतान् प्रणेष्यामो मातृशोकापनुत्तये । ततः शापाद् विनिर्मुक्ता लोकं यास्यन्ति विज्वराः । ५० ।
स्मरोद्गीयः परिवृद्धः पतङ्गः क्षुद्रभृद् घृणी । षडिमे मत्प्रसादेन पुनर्यास्यन्ति सद्गतिम् । ५१ ।

इत्युक्त्वा तान् समादाय इन्द्रसेनेन पूजितौ। पुनर्द्वावतीमेत्य मातुः पुत्रानयच्छताम् । ५२।
 तान् दृष्ट्वा बालकान् देवी पुत्रस्नेहस्तुतनी। परिषृज्याङ्कमारोष्य मूर्ध्वजिघ्रदभीक्ष्णशः । ५३।
 अपाययत् स्तनं प्रीता सुतस्पर्शपरिप्लुता। मोहिता मायया विष्णोर्वया सृष्टिः प्रवर्तते । ५४।
 पीत्वामृतं पयस्तस्याः पीतशेषं गदाभुतः। नारायणाङ्गसंस्पर्शप्रतिलब्ध्यात्मदर्शनाः । ५५।
 ते नमस्कृत्य गोविन्दं देवकीं पितरं बलम्। मिषतां सर्वभूतानां ययुर्धाम दिवौकसाम् । ५६।
 तं दृष्ट्वा देवकी देवी मृतागमननिर्गमम्। मेने सुविस्मिता मायां कृष्णस्य रचितां नृप । ५७।
 एवंविधान्यदभुतानि कृष्णस्य परमात्मनः। वीर्याण्यनन्तवीर्यस्य सन्त्यनन्तानि भारत । ५८।

The glorious Lord said : (O chief of demons!) in the first Manvantara (presided over by Svāyambhuva Manu) Marici had six sons through his wife Urṇā. They were all gods. They laughed when they saw Brahmā intent upon sexual intercourse with his own daughter. (47) On account of this misdemeanour on their part they (were cursed by Brahmā and) had to take birth in the Asura race as the sons of Hiranyakaśipu. Thence they were transferred to Devakī's womb by Yogamāyā, and were murdered by Kāṁsa as they were born. (O chief of the Daityas,) mother Devakī grieves for those children of her own, who are now with you. (48-49) For removing the sorrow of our mother We propose to take them from here. They will thereby get completely freed from their curse, once for all and will happily return to their (celestial) abode. (50) Their names are Smara, Udgitha, Pariśvaṅga, Pataṅga, Kṣudrabhṛt and Ghr̥ṇi. By My grace, all the six of them will regain their (original) happy state. (51) (Parikṣit,) having thus explained Their mission to Bali, the two Brothers took the children with Them and, duly worshipped by Bali, returned to Dwārakā and handed over the children to mother Devakī. (52) At the sight of those children, milk began to flow from the breasts of Devakī through (excess of) maternal love. Placing them on her lap, she embraced them and repeatedly smell their crowns. (53) Overwhelmed with emotion at the touch of her children, she suckled them with great delight, deluded as she was by the Lord's Yogamāyā, which takes the form of affection in order to keep the cycle of creation going on. (54) The milk in Devakī's breasts was veritable nectar; for it was the remnant of what had been tasted by Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Having suckled such milk and, blessed with the touch of the Supreme Lord, they attained knowledge of the Self. (55) They (now) bowed to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows), (mother Devakī), their father (Vasudeva) and Balarāma, and ascended the abode of the celestials in the presence of all. (56) Mother Devakī was astounded to see her deceased children return to earth and then depart again, and concluded that it was nothing but a sport of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, O protector of men! (57) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, O scion of Bharata, is the same as the Supreme Spirit; His powers are unlimited. Endless are His exploits which are so wonderful as this. (58)

सूत उवाच

य इदमनुशृणोति श्रावयेद् वा मुरारेश्चरितममृतकीर्तैर्वर्णितं व्यासपुत्रैः ।

जगदग्रभिललं तद्धस्तसत्कर्णपूर् भगवति कृतचित्तो याति तत्क्षेमधाम । ५९।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तराग्रं मृताग्रजानयने नाम पञ्चाशीतितमोऽध्यायः । ८५।

Sūta resumed : O sages, the fame and glory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa are immortal. The stories of His sports rid the world of all sins and bring delight to the ears of devotees and saints. They have been narrated by the revered Śrī Śuka, son of Vyāsa (himself). He who constantly hears them or repeats them to others gets his mind fixed in the (almighty) Lord, and attains His abode of eternal Bliss. (59)

Thus ends the eighty-fifth discourse entitled "Śrī Kṛṣṇa brings back His deceased elder brothers (from the abode of Bali)", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षडशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXVI

(Subhadrā carried away by Arjuna;) the Lord's Grace on Śrutadeva

राजोवाच

ब्रह्मन् वेदितुमिच्छामः स्वसारं रामकृष्णयोः । यथोपयेमे विजयो या ममासीत् पितामही । १ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : O sage, we desire to know how (my grandfather) Arjuna married Subhadrā, the sister of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was my grandmother ? (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अर्जुनस्तीर्थयात्रायां पर्यटन्नवनीं प्रभुः । गतः प्रभासमश्रुणोन्मातुलेयीं स आत्मनः । २ ।

दुर्योधनाय रामस्तां दास्यतीति न चापरे । तल्लिप्सुः स यतिर्भूत्वा त्रिदण्डी द्वारकामगात् । ३ ।

तत्र वै वार्यिकान् मासानवात्सीत् स्वार्थसाधकः । पौरैः सभाजितोऽभीक्ष्णं रामेणाजानता च सः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : (Parikṣit), wandering over the earth in the course of his pilgrimage, the powerful Arjuna went to Prabhāsa and heard (there) of his maternal uncle's daughter (Subhadrā). (2) He further learnt that Balarāma would give her away to Duryodhana, but not others. Eager to win her he went to Dwārakā disguised as a recluse bearing a triple staff (symbolic of renunciation). (3) There Arjuna spent the four months of the monsoon intent upon accomplishing his object. He was every now and then honoured by the citizens as well as by Balarāma, who could not identify him. (4)

एकदा गृहमानीय आतिथ्येन निमन्त्र्य तम् । श्रद्धयोपहतं भैक्ष्यं बलेन बुभुजे किल । ५ ।

सोऽपश्यन्न महतीं कन्यां वीरमनोहराम् । प्रीत्युत्फुल्लेक्षणस्तस्यां भावशुब्धं मनो दधे । ६ ।

सापि तं चकमे वीक्ष्य नारीणां हृदयङ्गमम् । हसन्ती व्रीडितापाङ्गी तत्र्यस्तहृदयेक्षणा । ७ ।

तां परं समनुध्यायन्नतरं प्रेप्सुर्जुनः । न लेभे शं भ्रमद्भिः कामेनातिबलीयसा । ८ ।

One day, so it is said, he was invited as a guest by Balarāma and brought to the palace, where he partook of the dishes offered with reverence. (5) There Arjuna saw the youthful maiden (Subhadrā), who captivated the heart of (great) heroes. With his eyes blooming with joy (at her sight) he set on her his heart agitated with passion. (6) Subhadrā too fell in love with him as soon as she saw him, ravishing as he did the heart of women. She cast her bashful glances at him and fixed her heart and eyes on him. (7) Focussing his thought on her alone Arjuna looked for an opportunity (to run away with her). His mind being distracted by an overwhelming passion for her, he had no peace of mind. (8)

महत्यां देवयात्रायां रथस्थां दुर्गनिर्गताम् । जहारानुमतः पित्रोः कृष्णस्य च महारथः । ९ ।

रथस्थो धनुरादाय शूरांश्चारुथतो भटान् । विद्राव्य क्रोशतां स्वानां स्वभागं मृगराडिव । १० ।
तच्छ्रुत्वा क्षुभितो रामः पर्वणीव महार्णवः । गृहीतपादः कृष्णो सुहृद्भिश्चान्वशाम्यत । ११ ।
प्राहिणोत् पारिवर्हाणि वरवध्योर्मुदा बलः । महाधनोपस्करेभरथाश्चनरयोषितः । १२ ।

With the consent of her parents (Devakī and Vasudeva) as well as of Śrī Kṛṣṇa he took her away (one day) even as she drove out of the fort in a chariot to visit an important temple. (9) Taking his seat in her chariot Arjuna took up his bow and put to flight all the gallant warriors who tried to intercept him. In the midst of Subhadrā's own people screaming (in distress) Arjuna stole her away just as the king of beasts would carry away its prey. (10) Hearing of this, Balarāma was agitated like the ocean on a full moon and got pacified (only) when Śrī Kṛṣṇa and other friends and relations clasped His feet (and tried to appease His anger). (11) (Then) Balarāma joyously dispatched for the bride and the bridegroom presents in the form of abundant wealth and articles of household use and a number of elephants, chariots, horses and male and female servants. (12)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कृष्णस्यासीद् द्विजश्रेष्ठः श्रुतदेव इति श्रुतः । कृष्णकभक्त्या पूर्णार्थः शान्तः कविरलम्पटः । १३ ।
स उवास विदेहेषु मिथिलायां गृहाश्रमी । अनिहयाऽऽगताहार्यनिर्वर्तितनिजक्रियः । १४ ।
यात्रामात्रं त्वरहर्दवादुपनमस्युः । नाधिकं तावता तुष्टः क्रियाश्रके यथोचिताः । १५ ।
तथा तद्राष्ट्रपालोऽङ्ग बहुलाश्च इति श्रुतः । मैथिलो निरहम्मान उभावयच्युतप्रियौ । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : (Parikṣit,) at Mithilā, the capital of the Videha territory there lived a jewel among Brāhmaṇas, known by the name of Śrutadeva, who had all his objects accomplished by virtue of his single-minded devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and was tranquil (of mind), full of wisdom and destitute of attraction for sense-objects. Though (he lived the life of) a householder, he performed (all) his duties and lived on whatever subsistence came to him without (any) effort. (13-14) Everyday he got by the will of Providence as much as was barely necessary for his sustenance, and not (a bit) more. (fully) contented with this, he discharged (all) his duties in the proper manner. (15) Dear Parikṣit, the (then) ruler of Mithilā was similarly devoted to the Lord. He was known by the name of Bahulāśwa. He was (absolutely) free from egotism. Both (the king and the Brāhmaṇa) were beloved of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord). (16)

तयोः प्रसन्नो भगवान् दारुकेणाहंत रथम् । आरुह्य साकं मुनिभिर्विद्वान् प्रययौ प्रभुः । १७ ।
नारदो वामदेवोऽत्रिः कृष्णो रामोऽसितोऽरुणिः । अहं बृहस्पतिः कण्वो मैत्रेयश्चवनादयः । १८ ।
तत्र तत्र तमायातं पौरा जानपदा नृप । उपतस्थुः साध्यहस्ता ग्रहैः सूर्यमिवोदितम् । १९ ।

आनर्तधन्वकुरुजाङ्गलकङ्कपत्स्यपाञ्चालकुन्तिमधुकैकयकोसलार्णाः ।

अन्ये च तन्मुखसरोजमुदारहासस्निग्धेक्षणं नृप पपुर्दृशिभिर्नार्यः । २० ।

तेभ्यः स्ववीक्षणविनष्टमिस्त्रदृग्भ्यः क्षेमं त्रिलोकगुरुर्थदृशं च यच्छन् ।

शृण्वन् दिगन्तधवलं स्वयशोऽशुभ्रं गीतं सुरैर्नृभिर्गाच्छनकैर्विद्वान् । २१ ।

Pleased with them (both), the almighty Lord (once) mounted the chariot brought by Dāruka and drove to the kingdom of Videha, accompanied by (a number of) seers. (17) The (celestial sage) Nārada, Vāmadeva, Atri, (my father) Kṛṣṇadwaipāyana (Vedavyāsa), Paraśurāma, Asita, Aruṇi, myself (Śuka), Brhaspati, Kaṇwa, Maitreya, Cyavana and others formed the party. (18) At every stage (in the course of the journey), O protector of men, the citizens and villagers waited upon Him with offerings in their hands, appearing as He did (with His followers) like the sun surrounded by planets. (19) O king ! (during that journey of the Lord) the men and women of Ānarta, Dhanva, Kurujāngala, Kaṇka, Matsya, Pāñcāla, Kunti

Madhu, Kekaya, Kosala, Arjuna and those belonging to other territories drank with their eyes the nectarine beauty of His lotus-like countenance enlivened by His winsome smiles and loving glances. (20) On those people, from whose eyes the scales of ignorance had completely fallen through His sight, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Teacher of the three worlds), conferred (by His very look) insight into the Truth as well as final beatitude (the fruit of such insight) and hearing (even as He advanced) His own glory, sung by gods and men, which illumined the quarters and drove away all evil. (In this way) the Lord slowly journeyed to Videha. (21)

तेऽच्युते प्राप्तामाकर्ण्य पौरा जानपदा नृप। अभोयमुदितास्तस्मै गृहीताहर्णपाणयः । १२२।
 दृष्ट्वा त उत्तमश्लोकं प्रीत्युत्फुल्लाननाशयाः। कैर्धृताञ्जलिभिर्नमः श्रुतपूर्वास्तथा मुनीन् । १२३।
 खानुग्रहाय सम्प्राप्तं मन्वानौ तं जगद्गुरुम्। मैथिलः श्रुतदेवश्च पादयोः पेततुः प्रभोः । १२४।
 न्यमन्त्रयेतां दाशार्हमातिथ्येन सह द्विजैः। मैथिलः श्रुतदेवश्च युगपत् संहताञ्जली । १२५।
 भगवांस्तदभिप्रेत्य द्वयोः प्रियचिकीर्षया। उभयोरविशद् गेहमुभाभ्यां तदलक्षितः । १२६।
 श्रोतुमप्यसतां दूरान् जनकः स्वगृहागतान्। आनीतेष्वासनाग्रयेषु सुखासीनान् महामनाः । १२७।
 प्रवृद्धभक्त्या उद्धर्षहृदयास्त्राविलेक्षणः। नत्वा तदङ्घ्रीन् प्रक्षाल्य तदपो लोकपावनीः । १२८।
 सकुटुम्बो वहन् मूर्ध्ना पूजयाञ्चक्र ईश्वरान्। गन्धमाल्याम्बराकल्पधूपदीपार्घ्यगोवृषैः । १२९।
 वाचा मधुरया प्रीणन्निदमाहारत्रर्पितान्। पादावङ्कगतौ विष्णोः संस्पृशञ्जनकैर्मृदा । ३०।

Parikṣit ! delighted to hear of the arrival of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), the people of the city of Mithilā and of the adjoining villages (all) came forth to receive Him with offerings in their hands. (22) At the sight of the glorious Lord, their faces brightened and the buds of their hearts opened through ecstasy. With their heads bent low and with their palms joined on them they greeted the Lord and His companions) the sages, of whom they had (only) heard before. (23) Realizing that Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Teacher of the world, had come to shower His grace on them, the king of Mithilā as well as Śrūtadeva, fell at the feet of the Lord. (24) With joined palms they both simultaneously invited Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Daśārha) alongwith the sages to partake of their hospitality. (25) Accepting their invitation, and with intent to please them both, the Lord (simultaneously) entered the residence of both in two separate forms, unperceived by the other one. (26) The king of Videha, Bahulāśwa, was a high-minded prince. Finding that Śrī Kṛṣṇa and others, whose very name could not reach the ears of the unrighteous, had called at his house (uninvited), brought (excellent) seats for them and seated them (all) comfortably on them. (27) His heart leapt for joy through intense devotion, and his eyes were bedimmed with tears. Bowing to them, he washed their feet and sprinkled that all purifying water on his head and on his relatives and worshipped the Lord as well as the divine sages by offering them sandal-paste, flowers, textiles, ornaments, scented fumes, lights, oblations of water, cows and oxen. (28-29) After they had been heartily fed, Bahulāśwa placed the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu) on his lap and gently pressing them, and delighting Him with sweet words, joyously prayed (as follows) . (30)

राजीवाच

भवान् हि सर्वभूतानामात्मा साक्षी स्वदृग् विभो। अथ नस्त्वत्पदाम्भोजं स्मरतां दर्शनं गतः । ३१।
 स्ववचस्तदुतं कर्तुमस्मदगुगोचरो भवान्। यदात्यैकान्तभक्तान् मे नानतः श्रीरजः प्रियः । ३२।
 को नु त्वधरणाभोजमेवंविद् विमृजेत् पुमान्। निष्किञ्चनानां शान्तानां मुनीनां यस्त्वमात्स्यः । ३३।
 योऽवतीर्य यदोर्वशे नृणां संसरतामिह। यशो वितेने तच्छान्यै त्रैलोक्यवृजिनापहम् । ३४।
 नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते कृष्णायकुण्ठमेधसे। नारायणाय ऋषये सुशान्तं तप ईदृशे । ३५।
 दिनानि कतिचिद् भूमन् गृहान् नो निवस द्विजैः। समेतः पादरजसा पुनीहीदं निमेः कुलम् । ३६।

इत्युपामन्त्रितो राज्ञा भगवानल्लोकभावनः । उवास कुर्वन् कल्याणं मिथिलानयोषिताम् ॥३७॥

The king (Bahulaśwa) said : " O Lord, You are the soul of all created beings, the witness of all hearts and self-efulgent. You have presently revealed Yourself to us, who have been (constantly) contemplating on Your lotus-feet. (31) (O Lord !) You have appeared before us just in order to vindicate that statement of Yours which You have (often) declared, viz., that neither Śrī Balarāma (who is Your second Self) nor (Your better half) Lakṣmī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) nor (even Your child) Brahmā are dearer to You than one who is exclusively devoted to You. (32) Is there any man on earth who would abandon Your lotus-feet even after he has come to know that You offer Your very self to those sages of serene mind who regard nothing as their own (not even their body). (33) Appearing in the race of Yadu, You have extended Your glory—which is capable of wiping out the sins of (all) the three worlds—in order to put an end to the transmigration of men revolving on the whirligig of births and deaths. (34) Hail to You, the almighty Śrī Kṛṣṇa of unrestricted wisdom, who have taken to austerities in their mildest form in the person of the (divine) sage Nārāyaṇa. (35) (Be pleased to) stay in our house, O infinite Lord, for some days alongwith the sages, and purify this line of Nimi with the dust of Your feet." (36) (O Parikṣit !) entreated thus by the king, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the almighty Lord), the Protector of the worlds, stayed on (at Mithilā) in order to confer blessings on the men and women of the place. (37)

श्रुतदेवोऽच्युतं प्राप्तं खगृहाञ्जनको यथा । नत्वा मुनीन् सुसंहृष्टो धुन्वन् वासो ननर्त ह ॥३८॥

तृणपीठवृसीष्ठेतानानीतेषूपवेश्य सः । स्वागतेनाभिनन्द्याङ्घ्रीन् सभायैर्ज्वनिजे मुदा ॥३९॥

तदम्भसा महाभाग आत्मानं सगृहान्वयम् । स्नापयामाकुरु उद्धृष्टो लब्धसर्वमनोरथः ॥४०॥

फलहार्णोशीरशिवामृताम्बुभिर्भृदा सुरभ्या तुलसीकुशाम्बुजैः ।

आराधयामास यथोपपत्रया सपर्यया सत्त्वविवर्धनान्धसा ॥४१॥

स तर्कयामास कुतो ममान्वभूद् गृहान्धकूपे पतितस्य सङ्गमः ।

यः सर्वतीर्थास्पदपादरेणुभिः कृष्णेन चास्यात्मनिकेतभूसुरैः ॥४२॥

सूपविष्टान् कृतातिथ्याञ्जुतदेव उपस्थितः । सभार्यस्वजनापत्य उवाचाङ्घ्रयभिमर्शनः ॥४३॥

(Dear Parikṣit !) like the king of Videha, (the Brāhmaṇa) Śrūtadeva (too) was overjoyed to find Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) and the sages arrived at his door and bowing to them (all), he began to dance waving his cloth: so the tradition goes. (38) Bringing raised seats made of straw and mattresses of Kuśa grass (from inside his cottage or from his neighbours) he requested the guests to sit on them and, greeting them with words of welcome, he gladly washed their feet alongwith his wife. (39) With that water the highly blessed Brāhmaṇa sprinkled himself as well as his house and his people, and felt that all his objects had been achieved. He was (literally) transported with joy. (40) (Then) he propitiated (all) with whatever articles of worship could be (easily) procured, namely, fruits (offered by way of an auspicious present) and other offerings (such as sandal-paste, flowers, incense and lights), cool, scented and sweet water, scented earth (for being used at the time of bath or for washing one's hands and feet with), Tulasi leaves, Kuśa grass and lotuses as well as with food which promotes the quality of Sattva. (41) He reflected: " (I wonder) how this meeting has been possible for me, condemned as I am to this hellish life of a householder, with Śrī Kṛṣṇa and (these) sages, who have enthroned Him in their hearts, nay, the very dust of whose feet brings sanctity to all holy places." (42) When the guests had partaken of his hospitality and were comfortably seated, Śrūtadeva alongwith his wife, children and other relations, waited on them, and, touching the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (his principal guest), addressed them (as follows). (43)

श्रुतदेव उवाच

नाद्य नो दर्शनं प्राप्तः परं परमपूरुषः । यर्हीदं शक्तिभिः सृष्ट्वा प्रविष्टो ह्यात्मसत्तया । ४४ ।
 यथा शयानः पुरुषो मनसैवात्ममायया । सृष्ट्वा लोकं परं स्वाप्नमनुविश्यावभासते । ४५ ।
 शृण्वतां गदतां शश्वदर्वतां त्वाभिवन्दताम् । नृणां संवदतामन्तर्हीदं भास्यमलात्मनाम् । ४६ ।
 हृदिस्थोऽप्यन्तिदूरस्थः कर्मविक्षिप्तचेतसाम् । आत्मशक्तिभिरग्राह्योऽप्यन्युपेतगुणात्मनाम् । ४७ ।
 नमोऽस्तु तेऽध्यात्मविदां परात्मने अनात्मने स्वात्मविभक्तमृत्यवे ।
 सकारणाकारणलिङ्गमीयुषे स्वमाययासंवृतच्छृङ्खलदृष्टये । ४८ ।

म त्वं शाधि स्वभृत्यान् नः किं देव 'करवाप्तये । एतदन्तो नृणां क्लेशो यद्धवानक्षिणोचरः । ४९ ।

Śrutadeva submitted : (Lord !) You are the Supreme Person (beyond Prakṛti and the Jivas). It is not for the first time that You have come to our view today. For You have been with us (since the very beginning of creation), when, having created the universe with the help of your potencies, You entered it as its Soul (even) as a sleeping person creates with his mind itself a peculiar dream-world of his own through his ignorance and, entering that world himself, appears in various forms. (44-45) You shine in the heart of those men who constantly hear and repeat Your stories, worship and bow to Your images and talk with one another about You and have their heart purified (thereby). (46) Though present in their heart, You are remote from those whose mind is distracted by activities (of various kinds) and temporal duties. Though beyond the grasp of the various faculties of the mind, You are (on the other hand) proximate to those who have developed the excellent qualities of their heart (by singing and hearing of Your glories). (47) (My) salutation be to You, who are the Supreme spirit in the eyes of those who know the Self; whereas before those who regard the body etc., (which are other than the Self) as their self, You come, as death allotted by Yourself. You are the ruler of all effects as well as of their cause. Your Mayā cannot screen Your vision, though it screens the vision of all others. (48) O self-effulgent Lord ! (pray,) instruct us, Your servants, what service we should render to You. The sufferings of men disappear as soon as You come to their view. (49)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तदुक्तमित्युपाकर्ण्य भगवान् प्रणतार्तिहा । गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणिं प्रहसंस्तमुवाच ह । ५० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing these words of Śrutadeva, the Lord, who dispels the agony of those who betake themselves to Him in all humility, took the Brāhmaṇa by hand, and smilingly said (as follows): so the tradition goes. (50)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

ब्रह्मंस्तेजुग्रहार्थाय सम्प्राप्तान् विद्ध्यमूर् मुनीन् । सञ्चरन्ति मया लोकान् पुनन्तः पादरेणुभिः । ५१ ।
 देवाः क्षेत्राणि तीर्थानि दर्शनस्पर्शनाचनैः । शनैः पुनन्ति कालेन तदप्यर्हतेमक्षया । ५२ ।
 ब्राह्मणो जन्मना श्रेयान् सर्वेषां प्राणिनामिह । तपसा विष्टया तुष्टया किमु मत्कलया युतः । ५३ ।
 न ब्राह्मणान्मे दयितं रूपमेतद्यतुर्भुजम् । सर्ववेदमयो विप्रः सर्वदेवमयो ह्यहम् । ५४ ।
 दुष्प्राज्ञा अविदित्वैवमवजानन्त्यसूयवः । गुरुं मां विप्रमात्मानमर्चादाविन्यदृष्टयः । ५५ ।
 चराचरमिदं विश्वं भावा ये चास्य हेतवः । मद्रूपाणीति चेतस्याधत्ते विप्रो मदीक्षया । ५६ ।
 तस्माद् ब्रह्मऋषीनेतान् ब्रह्मन् मच्छृद्ध्याचय । एवं चेदर्वितोऽस्म्यद्वा नान्यथा भूरिभूतिभिः । ५७ ।

The glorious Lord said : Śrutadeva ! know that these (great) sages have come here

(only) to shower their grace on you. They move about with Me purifying the world with the dust of their feet. (51) The (images of) gods, holy places and sacred waters purify one slowly by sight, touch and worship after a long time; the saints (however) do so at once. (Nay,) the gods etc., too derive their purificatory virtue through the very sight of exalted souls. (52) (O Śrutadeva !) the Brāhmaṇa by his very birth is superior to all beings in this creation, the more so if he is endowed with austerity, learning, contentment and devotion to Me. (53) (Even) this Personality of Mine, endowed as it is with four arms, is not dearer to Me than the Brāhmaṇa. Indeed the Brāhmaṇa is an embodiment of all the Vedas, while I am the embodiment of all gods. (54) Men of crooked understanding, who do not know this truth, regard (only) idols as worthy of adoration and, full of jealousy, disregard the Brāhmaṇa, the preceptor of the world, who is the same as I and their (very) soul. (55) By perceiving Me in all a Brāhmaṇa bears in his mind that this universe consisting of mobile and immobile creation and the (various) categories (such as the Mahat-tattva) that contribute to its existence are (but) My manifestations. (56) Therefore, O Śrutadeva, worship these Brāhmaṇa sages with faith, regarding them as My own selves. If you do so, I shall have been directly worshipped, but not by any other means, (even) through enormous (expenditure of) wealth and show of splendour. (57)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स इत्थं प्रभृणाऽऽदिष्टः सहकृष्णान् द्विजोत्तमान् । आराध्यैकात्मभावेन मैथिलश्रापं सदागमम् । ५८ ।

एवं स्वभक्त्यो राजन् भगवान् भक्तभक्तिमान् । उपित्वाऽऽदिदयं सन्मार्गं पुनर्द्वारवतीमगात् । ५९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे श्रुतं वानुग्रहे नाम षडशीतितमोऽध्यायः । ८६ ।

Śrī Śukadeva said : Instructed as aforesaid by the Lord, Śrutadeva worshipped Him as well as the sages as one with their own self, and (through their grace) attained oneness with God (the goal of the pious). Bahulāśwa (the king of Mithilā) too attained the same (exalted) state. (58) Parikṣit ! (just as the devotee loves God), God (too) loves the devotee. He (therefore) stayed on with His two devotees and, having taught them the ways of the righteous, returned to Dwarakā. (59)

Thus ends the eighty-sixth discourse entitled "Śrī Kṛṣṇa's Grace on Śrutadeva", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṃhitā.

अथ सप्ताशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXVII

A Song of Praise uttered by the Vedas (in their living form)

परीक्षितुवाच

ब्रह्मन् ब्रह्मण्यनिर्देश्ये निर्गुणे गुणवृत्तयः । कथं चरन्ति श्रुतयः साक्षात् सदसतः परे । १ ।

Parikṣit submitted : How can the Śruti texts, dealing as they do with the (three) Guṇas (material phenomena), refer directly to Brahma (the Absolute), which is indefinable and beyond the (three) Guṇas and transcends (both) the Cause (the Unmanifest) as well as the effect (the visible universe) ? (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

बुद्धीन्द्रियमनःप्राणान् जनानामसृजत् प्रभुः । मात्रार्थं च भवार्थं च आत्मनेऽकल्पनाय च । १ ।
सैया ह्युपनिषद् ब्राह्मी पूर्वेषां पूर्वजैर्भुता । श्रद्धया धारयेद् यस्तां क्षेमं गच्छेदकिञ्चनः । ३ ।
अत्र ते वर्णयिष्यामि गाथां नारायणाञ्चिताम् । नारदस्य च संवादमपेनारायणस्य च । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka replied: The almighty Lord evolved the intellect, senses, mind and the vital airs of the (innumerable) Jivas (embodied souls) for their enjoyment (of sense-delights), acts of being born and so on, for enjoying the delights of the various worlds and for final beatitude (in the shape of cessation of all speculation). (It is with the help of these that one can determine the real import of the Śruti texts, which as a matter of fact deal with Brahma alone). (2) This indeed is the well-known secret of the Vedas relating to Brahma, treasured up by Sanaka and others (more ancient even than the ancient). Whosoever cherishes it (even now) will be shorn of identification with body etc., and attain blessedness. (3) On this subject I shall narrate to you a story connected with the (divine sage) Nārāyaṇa, and shall also reproduce (as follows) the dialogue between (the celestial sage) Nārada and the sage Nārāyaṇa. (4)

एकदा नारदो लोकान् पर्यटन् भगवत्प्रियः । मनातनमूषि द्रष्टुं ययौ नारायणाश्रमम् । ५ ।
यो वै भारतवर्षेऽस्मिन् क्षेमाय स्वस्तये नृणाम् । धर्मज्ञानशमोपेतमाकल्पादास्थितस्तपः । ६ ।
तत्रोपविष्टमूषिभिः कलापग्रामवासिभिः । परीतं प्रणतोऽपृच्छदिदमेव कुरुद्वह । ७ ।
तस्मै ह्रवोचद् भगवानृषीणां शृण्वतामिदम् । यो ब्रह्मवादः पूर्वेषां जनलोकनिवासिनाम् । ८ ।

Going about the worlds, on one occasion, (the sage) Nārada, beloved of the Lord, went to the hermitage of (the sage) Nārāyaṇa in order to see the immortal seer, who has from the (very) beginning of the Kalpa (cycle) betaken Himself in this (land of) Bhāratavarṣa, for the prosperity and spiritual well-being of men, to (a life of) asceticism, coupled with piety, Self-Knowledge and dispassion. (5-6) Bending low (with reverence), O jewel among the Kurus, Nārada put this very question to the divine sage, who was seated there (in His hermitage) surrounded by sages inhabiting the village of Kalāpa. (7) In the midst of (other) Ṛṣis, who were (all) listening, the divine Sage (Nārāyaṇa) actually gave to him the following reply, which embodied (the gist of) a discussion bearing on (the topic of) Brahma, held among the ancient Ṛṣis (Sanaka and others) of Janaloka (the fifth heaven). (8)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

स्वायम्भुव ब्रह्मसत्रं जनलोकेऽभवत् पुरा । तत्रस्थानां मानसानां मुनीनामूर्ध्वरेतसाम् । १ ।
श्वेतद्वीपं गतवति त्वयि द्रष्टुं तदीश्वरम् । ब्रह्मवादः सुसंवृतः श्रुतयो यत्र शेरते ।
तत्र हायमभूत् प्रश्नस्त्वं मां यमनुपृच्छसि । १० ।

तुल्यश्रुततपःशीलास्तुल्यस्वीयारिमध्यमाः । अपि चक्रुः प्रवचनमेकं शुश्रूषवोऽपरे । ११ ।

The divine Sage said : O Nārada (son of Brahmā, the self-born), of yore there took place a meeting, for exchange of views regarding (the true nature of) Brahma, in Janaloka, of sages born of Brahmā's mind and dwelling in that sphere, who were all lifelong celibates (lit., who had directed the flow of their generative fluid upwards). (9) On one occasion when you (O Nārada!) had departed to Śvetadwīpa to see Lord Aniruddha (the Ruler of that island, a form of Lord Viṣṇu), there ensued (among the Ṛṣis of that sphere) a masterly and thorough discussion concerning Brahma (the Absolute), about which the Vedas (too) remain silent.

* Another name of Badarikāśrama, where the famous shrine of Badnatha is now situated.

There (in that assembly) arose the same question which you have (just) put to me. (10) Though equal in point of learning, askesis (self-abnegation) and practice of virtue, and although friends, foes and neutrals were alike to them, they treated one (of themselves, viz., Sanandana) as an expounder (of truths), while the rest remained inclined to listen. (11)

सनन्दन उवाच

स्वसृष्टिमिदमापीय शयानं सह शक्तिभिः । तदन्ते बोधयाञ्चकुस्तल्लिङ्गैः श्रुतयः परम् । १२ ।

यथा शयानं सप्राज्ञं वन्दिनस्तपराक्रमैः । प्रत्युषेऽभ्येत्य सुरलोकैर्बोधयन्त्यनुजीविनः । १३ ।

Sanandana said : At the end of Pralaya (the period of Dissolution of the universe) the deities presiding over the Śruti texts (and sprung up from His very first breath) awakened the Supreme, who had been lying asleep (as it were all the time) alongwith His (innumerable) potencies (Prakṛti, Puruṣa, Time and so on), having swallowed this universe evolved by Himself—through (the following) hymns indicating His true character in the same way as bards depending for their subsistence on an emperor call on him, while he is (still) asleep, at daybreak and awaken him with songs of praise celebrating his exploits that contribute to his excellent fame. (12-13)

श्रुतय ऊचुः

जय जय जह्नुजामजित दोषगृभीतगुणं त्वमसि यदात्मना समवरुद्धसमस्तभगः ।

अगजगदोकसामखिलशक्त्यवबोधक ते क्वचिदजयाऽऽत्मना च चतोऽनुचरेन्न्रिगमः । १४ ।

बृहदुपलब्धमेतदवयव्यवशेषतया यत उदयास्तमयौ विकृतेर्मृदि वाविकृतात् ।

अत ऋषयो दधुस्तव्यि मनोवचनाचरितं कथमयथा भवन्ति भुवि दत्तपदानि नृणाम् । १५ ।

The Śrutis prayed : Manifest Your glory, reveal Your exalted nature, O unconquered Lord ! Root out the nescience, which has no beginning, of (all) the Jivas invested with an immobile or mobile body—nescience which has assumed the (three) Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) for an evil purpose (viz., obscuring the blissful nature of the Jivas and there by throwing them into bondage), possessed as You are of all divine attributes by virtue of Your own essential nature, O Awakener of all the powers in those souls ! The Veda is able to describe You (only) when during the period of creation You sport in conjunction with Your Māyā (beginningless divine energy) or exist in Your absolute state. (14) The wise recognize this known (seen and heard of) universe, to be (no other than) Brahma (Yourself), because it is Brahma (alone) that remains (when all else is dissolved) and because it is from and into Brahma (the material cause)—which remains unchanged—that the universe (Its evolutes) emanates and returns (even) as the earthenware are evolved out of and disappear into clay. Hence (because of Its being the material Cause of and, therefore, comprising the entire universe) the Vedic texts have concluded as referring to You whatever is contemplated with the mind (that is, the import of words,) and uttered with the tongue (viz, the names). How could the feet of men placed anywhere (on earth) be regarded as not placed on the earth (itself) ? (15)

इति तव सूर्यस्यधिपतेऽखिललोकमलक्षपणकथामृताब्धिमवगाह्य तपांसि जहुः ।

किमुत पुनः स्वधामविधुताशयकालगुणाः परम भजन्ति ये पदमजस्रसुखानुभवम् । १६ ।

दूतय इव श्वसन्त्यसुभृतो यदि तेऽनुविधा महदहमदयोऽण्डमसृजन् यदनुग्रहतः ।

पुरुषविधोऽन्वयोऽत्र चरमोऽन्नमयादिषु यः सदसतः परं त्वमथ यदेवैवशेषमुत्तमम् । १७ ।

Therefore, O Lord of Māyā (consisting of the three Guṇas), the wise have taken a plunge into the ocean of nectar in the shape of Your stories—that wash away the impurities of all men (who sing them)—and (thereby) shed their (threefold) sufferings. What wonder, then, that they should get rid of their afflictions, who, having conquered by dint of their Self-Realization the tendencies (evil) of their mind (in the shape of attraction and repulsion etc.) as well as the effects of Time (such as old age), O Supreme, contemplate on Your essential character consisting of eternal consciousness and bliss. (16) People live (justify their existence only) if they are obedient to You (follow Your commandments) or else they (simply) breathe like bellows. You are that (creative principle) by whose grace (interpenetrated by which) Mahattattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), Ahaṅkāra (the cosmic ego) etc., (though insentient) have brought into being this egg-like universe (including this microcosm); (nay,) it is You who animate (all) the (five) sheaths (with which the soul is invested), assuming the shape of those sheaths and permeating them (as their material Cause), although (as a matter of fact) You are the ultimate Substance underlying all (phenomena), beyond the gross as well as the subtle, that which remains (after everything else has disappeared) as the Reality. (17)

उदरमुपासते य ऋषिवर्त्मसु कूर्पदृशः परिसरपद्धतिं हृदयमारुणयो दहम् ।
तत उदगादनन्त तव धाम शिरः परमं पुनरिह यत् समेत्य न पतन्ति कृतान्तमुखे । १८ ।
स्वकृतविचित्रयोनिषु विशत्रिव हेतुतया तरतमतश्चकास्यनलवत् स्वकृतानुकृतिः ।
अथ वितथास्वमूर्खवितथं तव धाम समं विरजधियोऽन्वयन्त्यभिविपणय एकरसम् । १९ ।

Out of the (many) paths (leading to God-realization) chalked out by the seers (of old), men of gross vision (lit., having their eyes blinded with gravel) contemplate on (Brahma as presiding over the spiritual centre called Manipūṛaka located in) the abdomen; while the sons of the sage Aruṇa (who are possessed of a subtler vision) contemplate on (Brahma as manifested in the centre known as the Anāhata Cakra located in) the cavity of the heart, the organ from which the veins and arteries branch out (in various directions). Thence proceeds upwards, O infinite Lord, the artery known as Suṣumṇā (the supreme effulgent channel leading to You) to (the crown of) the head (the seat of the spiritual centre known as the Sahasrāra). Reaching this path men do not fall again into the jaws of death here. (18) Entering as it were the diverse types of living organisms evolved by Yourself, though (as a matter of fact) You already existed in them as their (material) Cause, and assuming those forms, You shine (through them) as high or low like fire (which, though undifferentiated in itself, assumes diverse shapes according to the shape of the fire-wood). Therefore, men of unclouded judgment, who do not expect any (worldly or other-worldly) reward for their actions, recognize Your true nature as the one immutable, undifferentiated and uniform Substance in those unreal forms. (19)

स्वकृतपुष्पमेष्वबहिरन्तरसंवरणं तव पुरुषं वदन्त्यखिलशक्तिधृतोऽशकृतम् ।
इति नृगतिं विविच्य कवयो निगमावपनं भवत उपासतेऽङ्घ्रिमभवं भुवि विश्रुतिताः । २० ।
दुरवामात्मतत्त्वनिगमाय तवात्ततनोश्चरितमहामृताब्धिपरिवर्तपरिश्रमणाः ।
न परिलयन्ति केचिदपवर्गमपीश्वर ते चरणसरोजहंसकुलसङ्घविमुष्टगृहाः । २१ ।
त्वदनुपथं कुलायमिदमात्मसुहृत्प्रियवच्चरति तथोन्मुखे त्वयि हिते प्रिय आत्मनि च ।
न बत रमन्त्यहो असदुपासनयाऽऽत्महनौ यदनुशया ध्रमन्त्युरुभये कुशरीरभूतः । २२ ।
निभृमरुन्मनोऽक्षदृढयोगयुजो हृदि यन्मुनय उपासते तदरयोऽपि ययुः स्मरणात् ।
स्त्रिय उरगेन्द्रभोगभुजदण्डविषक्तधियो वयमपि ते समाः समदृशोऽङ्घ्रिसरोजसुधाः । २३ ।

The Vedas speak of the Puruṣa (the individual soul) dwelling in these bodies shaped (as a result of its own deeds) by itself—though, as a matter of fact, it is not limited by anything which is of the nature of a cause or an effect—as a part made as it were out of You, the Wielder of all potencies. Having thus determined the nature of the Puruṣa, the wise on this earth, full of faith, adore Your feet, at which (all) acts enjoined by the Vedas are offered and which (as a result of such offering) put an end to rebirth (for all time). (20) Some, who have got over their fatigue (caused by revolving on the whirligig of births and deaths) by diving into the ocean of nectar-like stories relating to You—who have assumed personal forms for the purpose of revealing the truth about Your own Self, which is (so) difficult to realize—and who have renounced their home as a result of their fellowship with devotees revelling like swans in the lotus of Your feet, do not aspire even for emancipation, O Lord ! (21) This human body (which is like a nest* for the soul, that has been compared to a bride flitting from one body to another in the course of its mundane existence), when it follows the track leading to You, behaves as our own self, benefactor and loved one. People (however) do not find as much delight in You—who are (ever) favourably inclined towards them and are their (true) well-wisher and loved one, nay, their very Self—and kill their soul by pampering this body and those connected with it (which are all unreal and) by cleaving to which they are thrown into wretched wombs (like those of dogs and swine) and revolve in this mundane existence, which is full of great fear. Oh, what a pity! (22) By thinking of You Your enemies too have realized the same truth which ascetics that have controlled their breath, mind and senses and rigidly practised Yoga contemplate in their heart. The women (cowherdesses of Vṛndavana) who set their mind on Your (delicate, long and) stout arms resembling the body of Śeṣa (taking You to be a finite being), and even we, who look upon You as equally present everywhere and hold fast to Your lotus-feet, are equal in Your eyes. (23)

क इह नु वेद ब्रतावरजन्मलोऽग्रसरं यत उद्गादुषिर्यमनु देवगणा उभये ।

तर्हि न सन्न चासदुभयं न च कालजवः किमपि न तत्र शास्त्रमवकृष्य शयीत यदा । २४ ।

जनिमसतः सतो मृतिमुतात्मनि ये च भिदा विषण्णतं स्मरन्त्युपदिशन्ति त आरुपितः ।

त्रिगुणमयः पुमानिति भिदा यदबोधकृता त्वयि न ततः परत्र स भवेदेवबोधसे । २५ ।

Alas! what individual of posterior birth and death can possibly know You, who are anterior to all and from whom came forth Brahmā (the first sage), after whom appeared the two classes of gods (viz., those presiding over the Indriyas, mind etc., and those presiding over the heavenly regions). When, withdrawing everything (into Yourself at the end of creation), You repose (as now), there exist at that time neither the gross phenomena (ether etc.) nor the subtle (such as the Mahat-tatva and Ahaṅkāra) nor the product of both (viz., the psychophysical organism) nor the flux of time nor anything else nor the scriptural texts (by means of which You could be known). (24) They who posit (as the Vaiśeṣikas do) the coming into existence of that which did not exist before (viz., of this world as an evolute of Matter), or who affirm (as the Naiyāyikas do) the cessation (known by the name of Liberation) of that which exists (viz., suffering of twenty-one kinds), as well as they who admit (as the Naiyāyikas or Sāṅkhyas do) of diversity in the soul or who declare (as the Mīmāṃsakas do) the fruit of actions (in the shape of enjoyment here as well as hereafter) to be real inculcate all this on the ground of misconception (alone). Since the conception of diversity with regard to the soul based on texts such as "The soul is composed of the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti)" is caused by ignorance about You, the latter cannot exist in You, who are above such ignorance, Knowledge being Your (very) essence. (25)

सद्वि मनस्त्रिवृत्त्वयि विधात्यसदामनुजात् सदभिमृशन्त्यंशेषमिदमात्मतयाऽऽत्मविदः ।

न हि विकृतिं त्यजन्ति कनकस्य तदात्मतया स्वकृतमनुप्रविष्टमिदमात्मतयावसितम् । २६ ।

* Etymologically the body has been spoken of as a 'Kulāya' because it gets dissolved into the earth after death (कूलो नीले)

तव परि ये चरन्त्यखिलसत्त्वनिकेततया त उत पदाऽऽक्रमन्त्यविगणय्य शिरो निर्ऋते ।
 परिवयसे पशुनि गिरा विबुधानपि तांस्त्वयि कृतसौहृदाः खलु पुनन्ति न ये विमुखाः । १२७ ।
 त्वमकरणः स्वराडखिलकारकशक्तिधरस्तव बलिमुद्ब्रह्मन्ति समदन्त्यजयानिमिषाः ।
 वर्षभुजोऽखिलक्षितिपतेरिव विश्वसृजो विदधति यत्र ये त्वधिकृता भवतश्चकिताः । १२८ ।
 स्थिरचरजातयः स्युरजयोत्थनिमित्तयुजो विहर उदीक्षया यदि परस्य विमुक्त ततः ।
 न हि परमस्य कश्चिदपरो न परश्च भवेद् वियत इवापदस्य तव शून्यतुलां दधतः । १२९ ।

All this(objective) universe, consisting of the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti)—which is a projection of the mind (alone)—including the Jiva (which is referred to as the self), though unreal, appears as real (because of its) being superimposed on You. The knowers of the Self (however) recognize this entire universe (both subjective and objective) to be real because of its (being a projection of) their (very) self. Just as those in quest of gold do not reject its modification (in the shape of gold ornaments) because of its being gold itself, so is this universe (both in its subjective and objective aspects) concluded (by such knowers of the Ātmā) to be their very self inasmuch as it is evolved and interpenetrated (too) by the Ātmā. (26) They alone who worship You as the Indweller of all created beings take no account, and set their foot on the head of, Death. You keep bound (on the other hand) with the word of God (in the form of the Vedas) as (so many) beasts (with a rope) even the so-called wise (to their respective duties). Indeed they who have cultivated love for You (are able to) purify themselves as well as others; (but) not so they who have turned their face away from You. (27) Though devoid of organs (of sense etc., in Your formless aspect). You wield the powers of all the organs, self-dependent as You are (and hence requiring no such instruments). As the rulers of subcontinents bear tribute to the suzerain Lord of the entire globe and (at the same time) unreservedly enjoy the tribute collected from their own people, so do Brahmā and others (the creators of the universe) as well as the (other) divinities (guardians of the various spheres, and those presiding over the ten Indriyas and mind etc.) united as they are with Māyā (which has no beginning), bear tribute to You and gladly partake of the oblations offered by human beings (through the sacrificial fire). Afraid of You, they do that work to which they have been appointed (by You). (This is the form of tribute they bear to You). (28) When, O Lord who are eternally free, the desire to sport with Māyā (which has no beginning) appears in You, who are beyond that Māyā, (the countless) species of mobile and immobile creatures, endowed with a subtle body made up of the latencies of their Karmas and brought into existence by Your very look, come into being. To You, who are untainted like the sky and bear resemblance to the void (in point of subtleness) and are supreme (in every respect), none is kindred or alien (so that the disparity among created beings is traceable to the divergence of their Karma and not to any partiality in You). (29)

अपरिमिता ध्रुवास्तनुभूतो यदि सर्वगतास्तर्हि न शास्येति नियमो ध्रुव नेतरथा ।
 अजनि च यच्चयं तदविभुच्य नियन्तु भवेत् सममनुजानतां यदमतं मतदुष्टतया । ३० ।
 न घटत उद्भवः प्रकृतिपूरुषयोरजयोरुभययुजा भवन्त्यनुभूतो जलबुद्बुदवत् ।
 त्वयि त इमे ततो विविधनामगुणैः परमे सरित इवाण्वे मधुनि लिख्युरशेषरसाः । ३१ ।

If the Jivas (embodied beings) are (held to be) infinite (in number), everlasting and all-pervading, their subordination (to another's will) cannot be maintained (because of their equality with one another as well as with Yourself) any more than Your control over them, which could be possible (only) in the opposite case (i.e., if they were held to be limited in number, short-lived and finite), O eternal Lord ! (For) that (Brahma alone) could be the ruler

(of the Jiva), as whose evolute it has come into being and which is inseparable from it as its material cause and is equally present in all, nay, which is (practically) unknown to those who claim to know it, since whatever comes to be known is known imperfectly only. (30) The birth (coming into being at a particular point of time) of Prakṛti (primordial Matter) or of Puruṣa (Spirit) does not stand to reason inasmuch as both of them are (declared in the scriptures as) birthless or without beginning. Living beings (on the other hand) come into existence (only) when the two (viz., Prakṛti and Puruṣa, matter and spirit) come to be united (mistaken for one another), (just) as bubbles appear on (the surface of) water through the interaction of air and water. (Since the birth of the Jivas in this way is only apparent and not real,) that is why they get merged in You (the final Cause) with (all) their several names and attributes (in the state of Liberation) even as rivers disappear into the sea or (during dreamless sleep) just as all (kinds of) nectars of flowers get dissolved into (what is ultimately known by the name of) honey. (31)

नृषु तव मायया भ्रममपीश्वरगत्य भृशं त्वयि सुधियोऽभवे दधति भावमनुप्रभवम् ।

कथमनुवर्ततां भवभयं तव यद् भुक्नुतिः सृजति मुहुर्निष्णेमिर्भवच्छरणेषु भयम् ।३२।

विजितहृषीकवायुभिरदान्तमनस्तुरगं य इह यतन्ति यन्तुमतिलोलमुपायखिदः ।

व्यसनशतान्विताः समवहाय गुरोश्चरणं वणिज इवाज सन्यक्तकर्णधरा जलधौ ।३३।

Perceiving the misapprehension (in the shape of self-identification with the body etc.), implanted by Māyā (Your deluding potency), in these human beings, men of sound judgment develop intense devotion—that grows every moment to You, who are capable of putting a stop to their transmigration. How can the fear of birth (even) haunt those that worship You, since Your frown in the shape of (the wheel of) Time (as represented by a twelvemonth) with its threefold rim (as consisting of the three parts of the year, viz., winter, summer and the rainy season) inspires terror (again and again) into (the mind of) those (alone) who do not resort to You as their asylum. (32) They who endeavour to break the most restless steed of their mind—unsubdued (even) by those who have controlled their senses and breath (too)—neglecting the feet of their preceptor, and taking (great) pains over other devices (for mind-control), remain beset with a hundred and one calamities in this world like merchants that have not secured a pilot (for their vessel) in the sea, O birthless Lord ! (33)

स्वजनसुतात्मदारधनधामधरासुरधैस्त्वयि सति किं नृणां श्रयत आत्मनि सर्वसे ।

इति सदजानतां मिथुनतो रतये चरतां सुखयति को न्विह खविहते खनिरस्तभगे ।३४।

भुवि पुष्पपुण्यतीर्थसदनान्यृषयो विमदास्त उत भवत्यदाम्बुजहृदोऽप्यभिदङ्घ्रिजलाः ।

दधति सकृन्मनस्त्वयि य आत्मनि नित्यसुखे न पुनरुपासते पुष्पसारहरावसथान् ।३५।

What is to be gained by men though kinsfolk, progeny, (their own) body, wife, wealth, houses, land, (nay,) their (very) life and chariots etc., while You, the (real) Self of the man seeking shelter in You, the embodiment of all blessings, are there (by his side)? Indeed what object in this inherently perishable world, intrinsically shorn of all substance, can (really) gratify those who are unaware of this (aforementioned) truth (viz., Your being the sole embodiment of real happiness) and are striving for the (false) pleasure of married life?(34) Sages who are destitute of (all) pride and treasure Your-lotus feet in their heart and the water washing whose feet is (accordingly) capable of destroying the (entire) sin (of those who sip it or sprinkle it on their head and eyes etc.) yet resort to the numerous holy lakes and rivers and places of pilgrimage on (the surface of) the earth (since it is there that they secure the company of exalted souls). For, they who set their mind (but) once on You, their (very) Self, the embodiment of everlasting bliss, no longer remain attached to their household, which drains the very best in men (in the shape of their judgment, fortitude, forbearance, peace of mind and so on). (35)

सत इदमुत्थितं सदिति चेन्ननु तर्कहतं व्यभिचरति क्व च क्व च मृषा न तथोभययुक् ।
व्यवहृतये विकल्प इषितोऽन्धपरम्परया भ्रमयति भारती त उरुवृत्तिभिरुक्थजडान् । ३६ ।
न यदिदमग्र आस न भविष्यदतो निधनादनुमितमन्तरा त्वयि विभाति मूषैकारसे ।
अत उपमीयते द्रविणजातिविकल्पपर्यैर्वितथमनोविलासमृतमित्यवयत्युद्धाः । ३७ ।

If it is argued that this (objective) universe is real in that it has evolved from the Real (God), this proposition is surely disproved by critical examination. The fact of an effect following the nature of its cause varies in certain cases (as for example a son is found to be different from his father); while in some (other) cases the evolute of a real substance is known to be false (just as the perception of a serpent following from a real substance, viz., a rope is false). (It may be objected here that it is not the rope alone but the rope coupled with ignorance which is responsible for its being mistaken for a snake. Our reply to this objection is that) the world (too) is a product of both (viz., Brahma and Avidyā); hence it is not real. (If the world is held to be real because it serves our purpose and discharges some function too, our reply is that) for explaining worldly transactions the illusory nature of the universe is (on the other hand) more welcome (to us); for worldly transactions will be carried on by blindly following past traditions. Your word (in the shape of Vedic texts declaring the reward of ritual acts as real) deludes by its manifold powers of expressing, indicating or suggesting a meaning (only) those dull-witted persons who have been blinded by their excessive faith in (Vedic) rituals. (36) Since this (phenomenal world) neither existed in the beginning (i.e., before creation) nor will it survive after dissolution, hence it is concluded that during the intervening period (too) it falsely appears in You, the absolute Existence. Therefore it is likened (by us, the Vedas) to the ways of the diverse manifestations (e.g., an earthen jar, ear-ring etc.) of material substances (like earth, gold and steel). Therefore, ignorant are they who recognize this unreal world, a (mere) play of fancy, to be real. (37)

स यदजया त्वजामनुशयीत गुणांश्च जुषन् भजति सरूपतां तदनु मृत्युमपेतभगः ।
त्वमुत जहासि तामहिरिव त्वचमात्तभगो महसि महीयसेऽष्टगुणितेऽपरिमेयभगः । ३८ ।
यदि न समुद्भ्रन्ति यतयो हृदि कामजटा दुर्धगमोऽसतां हृदि गतोऽस्मृतकण्ठमणिः ।
असृनुपयोगिनामुभयतोऽप्यसुखं भगवन्नपगतान्तकादनधिरूढपदाद् भवतः । ३९ ।

(Ever) since under the influence of Māyā (Your deluding potency) the Jiva (soul) embraces ignorance (which has no beginning) it identifies itself with a body, senses and so on (Products of the three Guṇas) and then, acquiring the characteristics of these (viz., the body etc.) undergoes transmigration, its (conscious and blissful) divine nature being obscured. You, on the other hand, (ever) keep that ignorance away (even) as a serpent casts off the slough, retaining Your divinity and possessed of infinite power, and shine in Your eightfold* glory. (38) If strivers (outwardly engaged in subduing their senses, mind etc.) do not tear the roots of passion planted in their heart, You remain difficult of access to such vile persons, though (ever) present in their heart (even) like a gem about the neck of a man, though forgotten by him. And for Yogis (passing by this name but) given to the gratification of their senses, O Lord, there is misery from both sides, viz., from Death (on the one hand) that has not turned his back (on him, here) and (after death, on the other) from You, whose truth remains unrealized (by him). (39)

* The eightfold lory denotes here the eight Siddhis or supernatural powers enumerated in the works on Yoga, viz., Animā, Laghimā, Mahimā, Prāpti, Prakāmya, Iśitva, Vāśitva and Kamāvasāyitva.

त्वदवगमी न वेत्ति भवदुःखशुभाशुभयोगुणविगुणान्वयांस्तर्हि देहभृतां च गिरः ।

अनुयुगमन्वहं सगुण गीतपरम्परया श्रवणभृतो यतस्त्वमपवर्गगतिर्मनुजैः । ४० ।

द्वुपतय एव ते न यदुरन्तमनन्ततया त्वमपि यदन्तराण्डनिचया ननु सावराणाः ।

ख इव रजांसि वान्ति वयसा सह यच्छ्रुतयस्त्वयि हि फलन्त्यतन्निरसनेन भवत्रिधनाः । ४१ ।

He who has come to know You (in reality) no longer feels the impact of joys and sorrows that follow from good and evil acts (committed in past lives and) coming in relief by Your will (prone as You are to requite them according to their merit or demerit); nor does he recognize in that state the commandments (of the Vedas, which are no longer binding on him inasmuch as he has risen above them by virtue of his being no longer identified with his psycho-physical organism), intended as they are (only) for those identified with their body. (This is but natural); for, ushered (into the heart) through the ears (even) by men (who have not realized Your truth) day after day with the help of teachings handed down from age to age to all, O Lord with (sixfold) divine properties, You are (eventually) attained by them in the form of final beatitude. (40) Even Brahmā and others (the rulers of the heavenly regions) could not reach Your limit (farthest end), nor even You, because of Your being limitless—You, in whom, indeed, driven by time, float together, like particles of dust in the air, multitudes of cosmic eggs alongwith their (seven) sheaths (viz., earth and so on, each of which is ten times as large as the one enclosed by it)! That is why we, Śrutis, finding our end (goal) in You, become fruitful in You, (describing You indirectly as we do) by negating everything other than You (including ourselves). (41)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

इयेतद् ब्रह्मणः पुत्रा आश्रुत्यात्मानुशासनम् । सनन्दनमथानर्चुः सिद्धा ज्ञात्वाऽऽत्मनो गतिम् । ४२ ।

इत्यशेषसमाग्रायपुराणोपनिषद्रसः । समुद्धृतः पूर्वजातैर्व्यामयानैर्महात्माभिः । ४३ ।

त्वं चेदद् ब्रह्मदायाद् श्रद्धयाऽऽत्मानुशासनम् । धारयंश्चर गां कामं कामानां भर्जनं नृणाम् । ४४ ।

Lord (the divine Sage Nārāyaṇa) continued : Having heard in this way the aforesaid exposition regarding the Self (in the shape of the eulogy uttered by the Vedas in their living form) and realized the (true) nature of the Self, and (thereby) achieved their end (as it were), Sanaka and others (the celebrated mind-born sons of Brahmā, who were already accomplished of their purpose) now paid their homage to Sanandana (their preceptor for the time being). (42) In this way was churned out by the exalted souls (Sanaka and others)—who are the earliest born (among the entire creation) and course through the air (unconcerned as they are with everything)—the essence of all the Vedas (their earlier portion, consisting of the Samhitās and their exegesis, the Brāhmaṇas, the Purāṇas and the Upaniṣads (the later portion and the crown of the Vedas). (43) Cherishing with faith, O Nārada (son of Brahmā), this exposition relating to the Self—which is) capable of burning out (all) the desires of men—perambulate you at will the globe (as well as the other spheres typified by it). (44)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं स ऋषिणाऽऽदिष्टं गृहीत्वा श्रद्धयाऽऽत्मवान् । पूर्णः श्रुतधरो राजन्नाह वीरव्रतो मुनिः । ४५ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Receiving thus with reverence what was imparted by the divine Seer (Nārāyaṇa), the sage (Nārada)—who had (full) control over his self, who was (fully) accomplished of his purpose, (nay,) who (ever) bears in mind the teachings of the scriptures and observes the heroic vow of perpetual celibacy, submitted (to Him), O king! (as follows):—(45)

नारद उवाच

नमस्तस्मै भगवते कृष्णायामलकीर्तये । यो धत्ते सर्वभूतानामभवायोशतीः कलाः । ४६ ।

Nārada prayed : Hail to the celebrated Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of stainless glory (in You), who assumes charming forms for putting an end to the (repeated) birth of all created beings. (46)

इत्याद्यमृषिमानम्य तच्छिष्यांश्च महात्मनः । ततोऽगादाश्रमं साक्षात् पितुर्द्वैपायनस्य मे । ४७ ।

सभाजितो भगवता कृतासनपरिग्रहः । तस्मै तद् वर्णयामास नारायणमुखाच्छ्रुतम् । ४८ ।

इत्येतद् वर्णितं राजन् यत्रः प्रश्नः कृतस्त्वया । यथा ब्रह्मण्यनिर्देश्ये निर्गुणेऽपि मनश्चरेत् । ४९ ।

योऽस्योत्प्रेक्षक आदिमध्यनिधने योऽव्यक्तजीवेश्वरो

यः सृष्ट्वेदमनुप्रविश्य ऋषिणा चक्रे पुरः शास्ति ताः ।

यं संपद्य जहात्यजामनुशयी सुप्तः कुलायं यथा

तं कैवल्यनिरस्तयोनिमभयं ध्यायेदजस्रं हरिम् । ५० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे नारदनारायणसंवादे

वेदस्तुतिर्नाम सप्ताशीतितमोऽध्यायः । ८७ ।

Bowing low in this way to the Sage Nārāyaṇa (the most ancient seer) as well as to His high-souled disciples, Nārada proceeded from that place to the hermitage of my father, the sage Dwaipāyana, (who was) directly present there (at that time). (47) Welcomed by the divine sage (Vyasa) and having taken his seat, Nārada reproduced to him the aforesaid hymn (chanted by the Vedas in living form) as heard from the lips of the sage Nārāyaṇa. (48) In this way has this hymn (sung by the Vedas) been reproduced by me, O Parikṣit, describing how the mind (as well as the Veda) could penetrate Brahma even though the latter was indefinable and untouched by the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), which (precisely) was the question that had been put to us by you. (49) One should constantly meditate on Śrī Hari, the Dispeller of (all) fears, who in His absolute state keeps Maya (the prime cause) at a distance; who plans this universe and continues at the beginning, middle and end of it; who is the Ruler of both the Unmanifest (Prakṛti) and the Jiva (embodied soul); who, having created this universe and entered it forthwith alongwith the Jiva, evolves bodies (for the Jivas) and controls (maintains) them; and having attained to whom the Jiva sheds ignorance (that has no beginning) in the same way as a man fast asleep loses consciousness of his body. (50)

Thus ends the eighty-seventh discourse intitled " A Song of Praise uttered by the Vedas (in their living form)," forming the theme of a dialogue between Nārada and the divine Sage Nārāyaṇa, in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टाशीतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXVIII

Lord Rudra rescued (from trouble)

राजोवाच

देवासुरमनुष्येषु ये भजन्यशिवं शिवम् । प्रायस्ते धनिनो भोजा न तु लक्ष्म्याः पतिं हरिम् । १ ।
एतद् वेदितुमिच्छामः सन्देहोऽत्र महान् हि नः । विरुद्धशीलयोः प्रभवोर्विरुद्धा भजतां गतिः । २ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : Those among the gods, demons and men that worship Lord Śiva, who has spurned all enjoyments, are generally found to be wealthy and enjoying the pleasures of sense; but not so those who are devoted to Lord Viṣṇu (the Spouse of the goddess of wealth and consequently endowed with all enjoyments). (1) We are (according) eager to know how it is that the lot of those worshipping the two (Lord Śiva and Lord Viṣṇu) of contrary disposition is (quite) the opposite (of what might be expected). Great indeed is our doubt on this point. (2)

श्रीशुक उवाच

शिवः शक्तियुतः शश्वत् त्रिलङ्को गुणसंवृतः । वैकारिकसैजसश्च तामसश्चेत्यहं त्रिधा । ३ ।
ततो विकारा अभवन् षोडशमीषु कञ्चन । उपधावन् विभृतीनां सर्वासामश्रुते गतिम् । ४ ।
हरिर्हि निर्गुणः साक्षात् पुरुषः प्रकृतेः परः । स सर्वदुःखप्रष्टा तं भजन् निर्गुणो भवेत् । ५ ।
निवृत्तेष्वध्वमेधेषु राजा युष्मत्पितामहः । शृण्वन् भगवतो धर्मानपृच्छदिदमच्युतम् । ६ ।
स आह भगवांस्तस्मै प्रीतः शुश्रूषवे प्रभुः । नृणां निःश्रेयसार्थाय योऽवतीर्णो यदोः कुले । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : (Parikṣit!) Lord Śiva ever remains united with His Śakti (Energy). He is invested with the three Guṇas and is the deity presiding over Ahaṅkāra (the Cosmic Ego), which is threefold (in character), viz., Sāttvika, Rājasika and Tāmasika. (3) Out of these three varieties of Ahaṅkāra are evolved the sixteen final evolutes (viz., the mind from the Sāttvika type, the ten Indriyas from Rājasika and the five gross elements from the āmasika). He who worships the deity presiding over anyone of these obtains access to all forms of (earthly) prosperity. (4) Lord Viṣṇu, on the other hand, is the Supreme Person Himself, (far) beyond Prakṛti and devoid of the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti); He is omniscient and the witness (of all hearts). Anyone worshipping Him is rid of the (three) Guṇas. (5) (Parikṣit !) at the conclusion of the Aśwamedha sacrifices your grandfather, King Yudhiṣṭhira, while listening from (the lips of) the Lord to an exposition of (the various types of) sacred duties put this (very) question to Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (6) (Parikṣit!) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the almighty Lord, who appeared in the race of Yadu for ensuring the highest good of men, felt (much) pleased (to hear the question) and spoke to the king, who was eager to listen (in the following strain). (7)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यस्याहमनुगृह्णामि हरिष्ये तद्धनं शनैः । ततोऽधनं त्यजन्त्यस्य स्वजना दुःखदुःखितम् । ८ ।
स यदा वितथोद्योगो निर्विण्णः स्याद् धनेहया । मत्परैः कृतमैत्रस्य करिष्ये मदनुग्रहम् । ९ ।
तद्ब्रह्म परमं सूक्ष्मं चिन्मात्रं सदनन्तकम् । अतो मां सुदुरारार्थं हिवान्यान् भजते जनः । १० ।
ततस्त आशुतोषेभ्यो लब्धराज्यश्रियोद्धताः । मत्ताः प्रमत्ता वरदान् विस्मरन्त्यवजानते । ११ ।

The glorious Lord said : Him on whom I shower My grace I gradually deprive of wealth. His own people thereupon forsake him when he is (thus) reduced to penury and stricken with sorrow. (8) When, striving (once more) with intent to acquire wealth, he finds all his attempts abortive (through my grace) and, getting disappointed, makes friends with My devotees; that is the time I show My (special) grace to him, whereby he attains (oneness with) that supreme infinite Brahma which is (very) subtle (and therefore difficult to comprehend) and consists of pure consciousness and Truth. That is why people turn their back on Me as one very difficult to please and (proceed to) worship other deities. (9-10) Elated through the royal fortune obtained (through such worship) from gods who are quickly propitiated, they get intoxicated (with pride) and go astray. Forgetting the very gods that conferred boons on them, they neglect them. (11)

श्रीशुक उवाच

शापप्रसादयोरीशा ब्रह्मविष्णुशिवादयः । सद्यःशापप्रसादोऽङ्ग शिवो ब्रह्मा न चाच्युतः । १२ ।
अत्र चोदाहरन्तीममितिहासं पुरातनम् । वृकासुराय गिरिशो वरं दत्त्वाऽऽपसङ्कटम् । १३ ।
वृको नामासुरः पुत्रः शकुनेः पथि नारदम् । दृष्ट्वाऽऽशुतोषं पप्रच्छ देवेषु त्रिषु दुर्मतिः । १४ ।
स आह देवं गिरिशमुपाधावाशु सिद्धयसि । योज्ज्याभ्यां गुणदोषाभ्यामाशु तुष्यति कुप्यति । १५ ।
दशास्यबाणयोस्तुष्टः सुवतोर्वन्दिनोरिव । ऐश्वर्यमतुलं दत्त्वा तत आप सुमङ्कटम् । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Dear Parikṣit! Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva and the other gods have the power to curse as well as to bless. (Of these again,) Lord Śiva as well as Brahmā (get propitiated and angry soon and) are (therefore) very prompt in blessing as well as in cursing, (but) not so Viṣṇu. (12) In order to illustrate this truth, the wise relate an ancient anecdote showing how by conferring a boon on the demon Vṛka Lord Śiva (who has His abode on Mount Kailāsa) got into trouble. (13) (Parikṣit!) meeting (the celestial sage) Nārada on the way, this evil-minded demon, Vṛka by name, son of Śakuni, inquired (of him) which of the three gods (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) was quick to propitiate. (14) The sage replied, "Betake yourself to Lord Śiva. You will (thereby) gain your object very soon; He it is who is soon Pleased with a small measure of merit and gets angry equally quickly through a slight offence. (15) pleased with Rāvana (the ten-headed monster) and Bāṇa (the demon), who (simply) glorified Him like bards, He conferred (on them) immense wealth and power, and courted serious trouble thereby (in that Rāvana uprooted His very home, Mount Kailāsa, while Bāṇa secured from Him a boon that He should ever guard his city)." (16)

इत्यादिष्टस्तमसुर उपाधावत् स्वगात्रतः । केदार आत्मकव्येण जुह्वानोऽग्निमुखं हरम् । १७ ।
देवोपलब्धिमप्राप्य निर्वेदात् सप्तमेऽहनि । शिरोऽवृश्चत् स्वधितिना तत्तीर्थं त्रिभूर्धनम् । १८ ।
तदा महाकारुणिकः स धूर्जटिर्यथा वयं चाग्निविरोधितोऽजलात् ।
निगृह्य दोर्ध्या भुजयोर्यवारयत् तत्पशनाद् भूय उपस्कृताकृतिः । १९ ।
तमाह चाङ्गालमलं वृणीष्व मे यथाभिकामं वितरामि ते वरम् ।
प्रीयेय तोयेन नृणां प्रपद्यतामहो त्वयाऽऽत्मा भृशमर्हते वृथा । २० ।
देवं स वद्रे पापीयान् वरं भूतभयावहम् । यस्य यस्य करं शीर्ष्णं धाये स प्रियतामिति । २१ ।
तच्छ्रुत्वा भगवान् रुद्रो दुर्मना इव भारत । ओमिति प्रहसंस्तस्मै ददेऽहेर्मृतं यथा । २२ ।

Instructed thus (by Nārada), the demon worshipped Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe), propitiating Him by means of (oblations of) his own flesh out of his body through the mouth of fire at the sacred spot of Kedāra (a summit of the Himalayas). (17) Unable to gain the sight of the Lord (even after worshipping Him in this way for six days) he proceeded out of despair, on the seventh day, to lop off with his sword his (very) head, the hair on which were wetted through a dip in the holy waters of that place, (and offer it as an oblation to Lord Śiva). (18) (O King!) the highly merciful Lord Śiva (who wears matted locks on His head) rose out of the flames, (brilliant) like the god of fire, and, holding Vṛka by the arms with His own, deterred the latter (from that terrible act) even as we would deter a friend from committing suicide. Through His blessed touch the demon was whole again. (19) The Lord said to him, "O dear one, enough of this, no more of this. Ask of Me any boon of your choice, (and) I shall grant it to you. I should be pleased with (a little) water offered by men who resort to Me. Oh, in vain is this body tormented by you (so) cruelly." (20) The highly wicked demon (thereupon) sought from the Lord a boon which was terrifying to all beings. (He said,) "On whosoever head I should place my hand, let him die." (21) Hearing that request, O scion of Bharata, Lord Rudra looked grave as it were (for a moment), and (then) laughingly said, "Amen!" He thus conferred on him a boon, which was as good as giving milk to a serpent. (22)

इत्युक्तः सोऽसुरो नूनं गौरीहरणलालसः । स तद्वरपरीक्षार्थं शम्भोर्मूर्ध्नि किलासुरः ।

स्वहस्तं धातुमारेभे सोऽब्रिभ्यत् स्वकृताच्छिवः । २३ ।

तेनोपसृष्टः संत्रस्तः पराधावन् सवेपथुः । यावदन्तं दिवो भूमेः कक्षाणामुदगादुदक् । २४ ।

अजानन्तः प्रतिविधिं तूष्णीमासन् सुरेश्वराः । ततो वैकुण्ठमगमद् भास्वरं तमसः परम् । २५ ।

यत्र नारायणः साक्षाज्यासिनां परमा गतिः । ज्ञानानां न्यस्तदण्डानां यतो नावर्तते गतः । २६ ।

तै तथा व्यसनं दृष्ट्वा भगवान् वृजिनार्दनः । दूरात् प्रत्युदियाद् भूत्वा वटुको योगमायया । २७ ।

मेखलजिनदण्डाक्षैस्तेजसाग्निरिव ज्वलन् । अभिवादयामास च तं कुशपाणिर्विनीतवत् । २८ ।

Thus assured (by the Lord), the said demon was as a matter of fact possessed with the desire of laying his hands on (Goddess) Pārvatī; and in order to test (the efficacy of) the boon, the demon, it is said, proceeded to place his hand on the head of Lord Śaṅkara (Himself). The all-blissful Lord (now) got dismayed at His own act (of granting that boon). (23) Trembling in great fear, He fled before the Asura, who now pursued Him. He covered the whole length of the earth and heavens and reached the very end of the cardinal points; but (finding the Asura still pursuing Him) ran (further) in a northerly direction. (24) Finding no remedy for the trouble, all the great gods kept quiet. Finally Bhagavān Śaṅkara went to the shining region of Vaikuṇṭha, lying beyond the sphere of Prakṛti. (25) It is the realm of Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa, the supreme resort of recluses who, having taken a vow of complete non-violence have attained perfect tranquillity of mind. On reaching this region one does not return to mundane life. (26) Seeing Śiva in that miserable plight, from a distance, Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa, who removes all affliction, assumed the form of a young Brahmachāri (religious student) by dint of His Yogamāyā (wonderful creative power) and appeared before Vṛkāsura. (27) Adorned with a girdle made of Muñja grass, (black) deer-skin, a staff and a rosary of Rudrākṣa beads, He shone by His lustre like the fire. Holding a (bunch of) Kuśa grass in His hand, He hailed the Asura like a humble student. (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

शाकुनेय भवान् व्यक्तं श्रान्तः किं दूरमागतः । क्षणं विश्रम्यतां पुंस आत्मायं सर्वकामधुक् । २९ ।

यदि नः श्रवणायालं युष्मद्व्यवसितं विभो । भण्यतां प्रायशः पुम्भिर्धृतैः स्वार्थान् समीहते । ३० ।

The Lord (disguised as a Brahmachāri) said : O Vṛkāsura, evidently you are (much) fatigued. Have you covered a long distance? Rest Yourself awhile. This body is the source of all blessings. (Why do you put it to unnecessary exertion ?) (29) Mighty as you are, please tell me, if the matter is fit for our ears, what you have set your mind upon. For people generally seek to accomplish their object through persons chosen for their help. (30)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं भगवता पृष्ठो वचसामृतवर्षिणा । गतक्लमोऽब्रवीत्तस्यै यथापूर्वमनुष्ठितम् । ३१ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : (Parikṣit !) thus questioned by the Lord in words raining nectar (as it were) the Asura felt refreshed and related to Him in order of sequence all that he had done. (31)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

एवं चेत्तर्हि तद्वाक्यं न वयं श्रद्धामहि । यो दक्षशापात् पैशाच्यं प्राप्तः प्रेतपिशाचराट् । ३२ ।
यदि वस्तत्र विश्रम्भो दावेन्द्र जगद्गुरो । तर्ह्यङ्गानु स्वशिरसि हस्तं न्यस्य प्रतीयताम् । ३३ ।
यद्यसत्यं वचः शम्भोः कथञ्चिद् दानवर्षभ । तदैवं जह्यसद्वाचं न यद् वक्तानृतं पुनः । ३४ ।
इत्थं भगवतश्चित्रैर्वचोभिः स सुपेशलैः । भिन्नधीर्विस्मृतः शीर्ष्णं स्वहस्तं कुमतिर्व्यधात् । ३५ ।
अथापतद् भिन्नशिरा वज्राहत इव क्षणात् । जयशब्दो नमःशब्दः साधुशब्दोऽभवद् दिवि । ३६ ।
मुमुचुः पुष्पवर्षाणि हते पापे वृकासुरे । देवर्षिपितृगन्धर्वा मोचितः सङ्क्राच्छिवः । ३७ ।
मुक्तं गिरिशमथ्याह भगवान् पुरुषोत्तमः । अहो देव महादेव पापोऽयं स्वेन पाप्मना । ३८ ।
हतः को नु महत्स्वीश जन्तुर्वै कृतकिल्बिषः । क्षेमो स्यात् किमु विश्वेशे कृतागस्को जगद्गुरो । ३९ ।

The Lord said : "If it is so, then we do not believe his words. Do you not know that under the curse of Dakṣa He has adopted the ways of Piśācas (evil spirits)? He is now the ruler of Pretas (genii) and Piśācas. (32) O lord of demons, if you still repose faith in Śaṅkara as the Teacher of the world, the truth may be verified (by you) this very instant, O dear friend, by placing your hand on your own head. (33) O chief of Asuras, if the words of Śaṅkara are found to deviate from truth in any wise, you had better do away with that liar so that he may not (live to) utter a falsehood again." (34) The words spoken by the Lord were so very sweet and cast such a magic spell on him that he lost his reasoning power, and the wicked Asura in utter forgetfulness placed his hand on his own head. (35) Instantaneously he fell down with his head split as if by a stroke of lightning; and shouts of triumph, salutations and applause were raised (by the gods) in heaven. (36) On the sinful Vrkāsura rained having been killed, gods, manes and Gandharvas showers of flowers, and Bhagavān Śaṅkara was redeemed from a precarious situation. (37) The almighty Lord Viṣṇu (thereupon) said to Śaṅkara, who was (now) free, " O Lord ! O supreme Deity, this wicked Asura has been killed by his own sins. O Lord, having actually sinned against the great who can possibly be happy? Much less could he be happy who did wrong to You the Lord and preceptor of the universe". (38-39)

य एवमव्याकृतशक्त्युदन्वतः परस्य साक्षात् परमात्मनो हरेः ।

गिरिमोक्षं कथयेच्छृणोति वा विमुच्यते संसृतिभिस्तथार्षिभिः । ४० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो मंहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे रुद्रमोक्षो नामाष्टादशतितमोऽध्यायः । ४८ ।

Śrī Hari is an ocean of powers, which are both incomprehensible and beyond the range of speech. He is no other than the Supreme Spirit beyond Prakṛti. He who relates or listens to this story of His rescuing Lord Śankara (from trouble) gets completely freed from (the cycle of) births and deaths and is rid of the fear of enemies. (40)

Thus ends the eighty-eighth discourse entitled " Lord Rudra rescued (from trouble)," in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनवतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse LXXXIX

(The three chief gods put to test by the sage Bhṛgu;) the Lord brings back the (dead) sons of a Brāhmaṇa

श्रीशुक उवाच

सखस्वत्यास्तदे राजशृषयः सत्रमासत । वितर्कः समभूतेषां त्रिषुधीशेषु को महान् । १ ।
तस्य जिज्ञासया ते वै भृगुं ब्रह्मसुतं नृप । नन्तत्पत्यै प्रेषयामासुः सोऽभ्यगाद्ब्रह्मणः सभाम् । २ ।
न तस्मै प्रह्वणं स्तोत्रं चक्रे सत्त्वपरीक्षया । तस्मै चक्रोऽपि भगवान् प्रज्वलन् स्वेन तेजसा । ३ ।
स आत्मन्युत्थितं मन्युमावजायात्मना प्रभुः । अशीशमद यथा वर्हिः स्वयोन्या वारिणाऽऽवभूः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : O king, (on one occasion) great sages assembled on the bank of the Sarasvatī (for exchange of views on the object of life and the means of attaining the same). (In the course of their discussion) a question came up before the assemblage as to which of the three lords of creation (viz., Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) was the greatest. (1) O king, the Ṛṣis actually deputed Bhṛgu, one of Brahmā's sons, to ascertain the out of curiosity fact with intent to know this truth, Maharṣi Bhṛgu (first) visited the court of Brahmā, and with a view to testing Brahmā's forbearance and other qualities, did neither bow to him nor offer any praises. Brahmā got angry with him and looked as if burning with his majestic glow. (2-3) But considering that the insult was offered by his own son, Brahmā (the self-born) subdued the anger of his heart within his mind by force of reason, just as one extinguished fire by water, which is an evolute of fire itself. (4)

ततः कैलासमगमत् स तं देवो महेश्वरः । परिब्रुव्यु समापे उत्थाय भ्रातरं मुदा । ५ ।
नैच्छत्वमस्युत्पथग इति देवश्चक्रोप ह । शूलमुद्यम्य तं हन्तुमारुहे तिमलोचनः । ६ ।
पतित्वा पादयोर्देवी सान्त्वयामास तं गिरा । अथो जगाम वैकुण्ठं यत्र देवो जनार्दनः । ७ ।
शयानं श्रिय उत्सङ्गे पदा वक्षस्यताडयत् । तत उत्थाय भगवान् सह लक्ष्म्या सतां गतिः । ८ ।
स्वतल्यादवरुह्यथ ननाम शिरसा मुनिम् । आह ते स्वागतं ब्रह्मन् निषीदात्रासने क्षणम् ।

अजानतामागतान् वः क्षन्तुमर्हथ नः प्रभो । ९ ।

अतीव कोमलौ तात चरणौ ते महामुने । इत्युक्त्वा विप्रचरणौ मर्दयन् स्वेन पाणिना । १० ।
पुनीह सहलोकं मां लोकपालांश्च मद्गतान् । पादोदकेन भवतस्तीर्थानां तीर्थकारिणा । ११ ।

अद्याहं भगवँल्लक्ष्म्या आसमेकान्तभाजनम् । वत्स्यत्युरसि मे भूतिर्भवत्यादहांसः । १२ ।

From Brahmā's court the sage Bhṛgu went to Kailāsa (the home of Śiva). Seeing that it was his own brother (Bhṛgu, who had come on a visit to Him), the Lord Śaṅkara (the supreme Deity) rose in (great) joy (from His seat) and proceeded to embrace the sage. (5) But Bhṛgu avoided his touch saying, "I shall not touch you, since you have broken social conventions and flouted the injunctions of the Vedas." Śiva lost His temper when He heard this. His eyes shot fire. Taking up His trident, He proceeded to strike the sage (with it.) (6) But Goddess Pārvati, falling at Śiva's feet, pacified Him by soothing words. Thereafter Bhṛgu went to Vaikuṇṭha, the realm of Bhagavān Viṣṇu. (7) He found the Lord reposing (with His head) on the lap of Lakṣmī (the goddess of prosperity). (Breaking into His room unceremoniously) the sage suddenly kicked Him on the chest. The almighty Lord, the (sole) refuge of the virtuous, thereupon (quickly) rose with Lakṣmī alighted from His bed and, bowing His head (in reverence) to the sage said, "O sage, you are welcome. Make yourself comfortable on this seat and rest awhile. Unaware of your arrival, we could not offer you welcome in time. Pray, forgive us this omission. (8-9) O great one ! great sage, your feet are so soft, O dear one !" Saying this, the Lord began to knead the feet of the sage with His own hands, and again said:—(10) "O sage, the water touched by your feet lends sanctity even to the sacred waters. (Pray) sanctify Me, My realm (Vaikuṇṭha) and the protectors of the world residing in Me, with the same. (11) O worshipful sage, all My sins have been washed off by the very touch of your feet. From this day I have become the sole abode of Śrī Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth. She will hereafter (constantly) dwell on My bosom (bearing the mark of your foot)." (12)

श्रीरुक् उवाच

एवं ब्रुवाणे वैकुण्ठे भृगुस्तन्मन्द्रया गिरा । निर्वृतस्तर्पितस्तूर्णी भक्त्युत्कण्ठोऽश्रुलोचनः । १३ ।
पुनश्च सत्रमाव्रज्य मुनीनां ब्रह्मवादिनाम् । स्वानुभूतमशेषेण राजन् भृगुवर्णयत् । १४ ।
तत्रिशम्याथ मुनयो विस्मिता मुक्तसंशयाः । भूयांसं श्रद्धधुर्विष्णुं यतः शान्तिर्यतोऽभयम् । १५ ।
धर्मः साक्षाद् यतो ज्ञानं वैराग्यं च तदन्वितम् । ऐश्वर्यं चाष्टधा यस्माद् यशश्चात्ममलापहम् । १६ ।
मुनीनां न्यस्तदण्डानां शान्तानां समचेतसाम् । अकिञ्चनानां साधूनां यमाहुः परमां गतिम् । १७ ।
सत्त्वं यस्य प्रिया मूर्तिर्ब्राह्मणास्विष्टदेवताः । भजन्यनाशिषः शान्ता यं वा निपुणबुद्धयः । १८ ।
त्रिविधाकृतयस्तस्य राक्षसा असुराः सुगः । गुणिन्या मायया सृष्टाः सत्त्वं तत्तीर्थसाधनम् । १९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing these words of the Lord uttered in a deep low tone, the sage Bhṛgu felt (highly) satisfied and happy. His voice got choked through (the rising tide of) Devotion and tears rushed to his eyes. He could not utter a word. (13) O king, returning to the assembly of sages, who were (all) expository of the Vedas, he narrated all that he had experienced (in the realms of Brahmā, Śaṅkara and Bhagavān Viṣṇu). (14) Hearing his experiences, the sages in the assembly were filled with wonder and freed from all doubts. They were now convinced that Viṣṇu was the Supreme Deity, the fountain-head of tranquillity and security. (15) From Viṣṇu proceed virtue itself, wisdom, dispassion, united with it, the eight forms of supernatural powers and fame, which wipes out the impurities of the mind. (16) He is described as the supreme resort of saints and sages who are embodiments of peace, equanimity and detachment, and who have taken a vow of complete non-violence. (17) The quality of Sattva constitutes His beloved person, and the Brāhmaṇa is His favourite deity. Men possessed of disinterestedness, serenity (of mind) and subtle understanding take to His adoration. (18) It is his Māyā, constituted of the three Gunas, which has evolved His three forms, viz., the Rākṣasas, the Asuras and the gods. Of these, only gods embodying the quality of Sattva are the means of His realization (He Himself being the end of all pursuit). (19)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं सारस्वता विप्रा नृणां संशयनुत्तये। पुरुषस्य पदाम्भोजसेवया तद्वति गताः। १२०।

Śrī Śuka went on : (Parikṣit !) the sages assembled on the bank of the Saraswati arrived this conclusion (not for their own sake, but) for dispelling the doubts of men. Adoring the lotus-feet of the Supreme Person, they attained to His supreme state. (20)

सूत उवाच

इत्येतन्मुनितनयास्यपद्मगन्धपीयूषं भवभयभित् परस्य पुंसः।

सुरलोके श्रवणपुटैः पिबत्यभीक्ष्णं पान्योऽध्वभ्रमणपरिश्रमं जहाति। १२१।

Sūta said : (Saunaka and other sages !) this story, which brings out the glory of the Supreme Person, dispel the fear of transmigration (in the form of births and deaths). Like (a stream of) sweet-smelling nectar it has emanated from the lotus-like lips of Śrī Śuka, (the son of the sage Vyāsa.) The traveller who, coursing through the circuitous paths of this world, constantly drinks of it through the cups of his ears gets rid of the fatigue of wandering through the world. (21)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदा द्वारवत्यां तु विप्रपत्न्याः कुमारकः। जातमात्रो भूवं स्पृष्ट्वा ममार किल भारत। १२२।

विप्रो गृहीत्वा मृतकं राजद्वार्युपधाय सः। इदं प्रोवाच विलपन्नातुरो दीनमानसः। १२३।

ब्रह्मद्विपः शठधियो लुब्धस्य विषयात्मनः। क्षत्रबन्धो कर्मदोषात् पञ्चत्वं मे गतोऽर्भकः। १२४।

हिंसाविहारं नृपतिं दुःशीलमजितेन्द्रियम्। प्रजा भजन्त्यः सीदन्ति दरिद्रा नित्यदुःखिताः। १२५।

एवं द्वितीयं विप्रार्थिस्तृतीयं त्वेवमेव च। विमृज्य स नृपद्वारि तां गाथां समगायत। १२६।

तामर्जुन उपश्रुत्य कर्हिचित् केशवान्तिके। परेते नवमे बाले ब्राह्मणं समभाषत। १२७।

किंस्वद् ब्रह्मंस्त्वत्रिवासे इह नास्ति धनुर्धरः। राजन्यबन्धुरेते वै ब्राह्मणाः सत्र आसते। १२८।

धनदारात्मजापुक्ता यत्र शोचन्ति ब्राह्मणाः। ते वै राजन्यवेषेण नटा जीवन्त्यसुम्भराः। १२९।

अहं प्रजा वां भगवन् रक्षिष्ये दीनयोरिह। अनिस्तीर्णप्रतिज्ञोऽग्निं प्रवेक्ष्ये हतकल्मषः। १३०।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Parikṣit, once upon a time at Dwārakā the wife of a Brāhmaṇa gave birth to a child; but the moment it was born and touched the ground, they say, it died. (22) Taking the deceased child to the portal of the royal palace, the Brāhmaṇa laid it on the ground and with a heart full of grief began to weep (for it) piteously. He spoke thus:—"My child has died because of some vicious act of the ruler of this kingdom, (a base kṣatriya) who is a Brāhmaṇa-hater, has a wicked disposition, is full of avarice and has set his mind on the pleasures of his sense. (23-24) The people depending on a ruler who takes delight in bloody acts, has a vicious character and is a slave of his senses, lead a miserable life and are always in distress for want of money." (25) The second and third child of the Brāhmaṇa sage also died under similar circumstances and the Brāhmaṇa brought their dead bodies in the same manner to the palace gate and repeating the same observation in a loud tone left the deceased children there. (26) (Thus as many as eight children of the Brāhmaṇa died one after another.) When he repeated the complaint at the loss of his ninth child, Arjuna was also sitting by the side of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Hearing the remarks of the Brāhmaṇa, he vauntingly said, " O venerable Brāhmaṇa, is there no Kṣatriya who can wield a bow in this city of Dwārakā (where you reside)? It seems these Yādavas (who are unable to protect their subjects) are no better than Brāhmaṇas assembled for a sacrifice. (27-28) The rulers in whose kingdom a Brāhmaṇa grieves over the loss of his wealth, wife or children are (no Kṣatriyas, but) mere actors playing the role of a Kṣatriya only to fill their belly. (They live in vain.) (29) O Brāhmaṇa, I undertake to protect the child that may be born to you (hereafter), afflicted as you and your wife are (by the loss of your children) here. If I fail to carry out my promise, I shall jump into fire (and put an end to my life) and (thereby) atone for my sin." (30)

ब्राह्मण उवाच

सङ्कर्षणो वासुदेवः प्रद्युम्नो धन्विनां वरः । अनिरुद्धोऽप्रतिरथो न त्रातुं शक्नुवन्ति यत् । ३१ ।
तत् कथं नु भवान् कर्म दुष्करं जगदीश्वरैः । चिकीर्षमि त्वं बालिभ्यात् तत्र श्रद्धमहे वयम् । ३२ ।

The Brāhmaṇa said : (Arjuna!) when Śrī Balarāma, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Pradyumna, the foremost of archers, and the matchless warrior Aniruddha have failed to protect my children, how dare you undertake to do so ? Even those lords of the world find it an impossible task. It is simply childish on your part to brag like this. We cannot put any faith in your words. (31-32)

अर्जुन उवाच

नाहं सङ्कर्षणो ब्रह्मन् न कृष्णः काष्णिगि च । अहं वा अर्जुनो नाम गाण्डीवं यस्य वै धनुः । ३३ ।
मावर्षस्था मम ब्रह्मन् वीर्यं त्र्यम्बकतोषणम् । मृत्युं विजित्य प्रधने आनयेते ते प्रजां प्रभो । ३४ ।

Arjuna replied : I am neither Balarāma, nor Śrī Kṛṣṇa, nor again Pradyumna. Surely I am Arjuna, the wielder of the famous Gāṇḍīva bow, O worshipful one! (33) Please do not make light of my prowess, with which I pleased the three-eyed Śaṅkara (Himself). I shall conquer even the god of death in battle and bring back your child, my master. (34)

एवं विश्रम्भितो विप्रः फाल्गुनेन परंतप । जगाम स्वगृहं प्रीतः पार्थवीर्यं निशामयन् । ३५ ।
प्रसूतिकां आसत्रे भार्याया द्विजसत्तमः । पाहि पाहि प्रजां मृत्योरित्याहर्जुनमातुरः । ३६ ।
स उपस्पृश्य शुच्यम्भो नमस्कृत्य महेश्वरम् । दिव्यान्वस्त्राणि संस्मृत्य सज्यं गाण्डीवमाददे । ३७ ।
न्यरुणत् सूतिकागारं शनैर्नानास्त्रयोजितैः । तिर्यगूर्ध्वमधः पार्थश्चकार शरपञ्जरम् । ३८ ।
ततः कुमारः संजानो विप्रपत्न्या रूढन् मुहुः । सद्योऽदर्शनमापेदे सशरीरो विहायसा । ३९ ।
तदाऽहं विप्रो विजयं विनिन्दन् कृष्णसन्निधौ । मौढ्यं पश्यत मे योऽहं श्रद्धे क्लीबकथनम् । ४० ।
न प्रद्युम्नो नानिरुद्धो न रामो न च केशवः । यस्य शोकः परित्रातुं कोऽन्यस्तदवितेश्वरः । ४१ ।

धिगर्जन् मृषावादं धिगात्सलाघिनो धनुः । दैवोपसृष्टं यो मौढ्यादानिनीषति दुर्मतिः । ४२ ।

Parikṣit, thus (comforted and) assured by Arjuna, the Brāhmaṇa returned to his place full of delight and eager to witness Arjuna's prowess. (35) As the period of confinement of his wife drew near, the exalted Brāhmaṇa approached Arjuna in great anxiety and entreated him saying, "Pray, protect my child from death." (36) (Hearing this), Arjuna sipped a little pure water and bowed to Bhagavān Śaṅkara. Thereafter he invoked all his weapons of super-natural efficacy and took up his Gāṇḍīva bow having strung it properly. (37) He fenced on all sides, as well as above and below, the house of confinement with arrows charmed with the power of Mantras, thus encasing it in a cage of arrows as it were. (38) The wife of the Brāhmaṇa in due course gave birth to a child, which gave repeated cries; but presently it bodily disappeared through the sky. (39) Now the Brāhmaṇa began to censure Arjuna in the presence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. He said, "Look at my folly I put my faith in the futile boast of a eunuch. (40) Who else is powerful enough to save one whom neither Pradyumna nor Aniruddha, nor even Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa could protect ? (41) Fie upon Arjuna, who made empty boasts. Five upon the bow of Arjuna, who indulges in self-praise. Look at his dull-wittedness! The fool intends to bring back what has been snatched away from me by Providence. (42)

एवं शपति विप्रवीं विद्यामास्थाय फाल्गुनः । ययौ संयमनीमाशु यत्रास्ते भगवान् यमः । ४३ ।

विप्रापत्यमचक्ष्णानस्तत एनेरीमगात् पुरीम् । आत्रेयीं नैर्ऋतीं सौम्यां वायव्यां वारुणीमथ ।

रसातलं नाकपृष्ठं धिष्यथान्यन्यानुदायुधः । ४४ ।

ततोऽलब्धद्विजसुतो ह्यनिस्तीर्णप्रतिश्रुतः । अग्निं विविक्षुः कृष्णेन प्रत्युक्तः प्रतिषेधता । ४५ ।

दर्शये द्विजमूर्तस्ते मावज्ञात्मानमात्मना । ये ते नः कीर्तिं विमलां मनुष्याः स्थापयिष्यन्ति । ४६ ।

When the Brāhmaṇa sage began to reproach him thus, Arjuna, with the help of charms, at once went to the capital of Yama, where rules the god of retribution (43) Not finding the child of the Brāhmaṇa there, he thence proceeded, bow in hand, to the cities of Indra (the lord of immortals.), Agni (the god of fire), Nirṛti (the god of death), Soma (the moon-god), Varuṇa (the god of water), Vāyu (the wind-god), to the nether world known as Rāsātala, to regions higher than Indra's paradise and other regions, but did not find the Brāhmaṇa child anywhere. Having thus failed to redeem his promise, he now decided to jump into blazing fire. But Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa deterred him, saying, "Brother Arjuna, do not make light of yourself in this way. I shall show you (all) the children of the Brāhmaṇa. The very men who reproach you now will then resuscitate our spotless glory." (44—46)

इति संभाष्य भगवानर्जुनेन सहेश्वरः । दिव्यं स्वरथमास्थाय प्रतीचीं दिशमाविशत् । ४७ ।

सप्त द्वीपान् सप्त सिन्धून् सप्तसप्तगिरीनथ । लोकालोकं तथातीत्य विवेश सुमहत्तमः । ४८ ।

तत्राश्वाः शैव्यसुग्रीवमेघपुष्पबलाहकाः । तमसि भ्रष्टगतयो बभूवुर्भरतर्षभ । ४९ ।

तान् दृष्ट्वा भगवान् कृष्णो महायोगेश्वरेश्वरः । सहस्रादित्यसंकाशं स्वचक्रं प्राहिणोत् पुरः । ५० ।

तमः सुधोरं गहनं कृतं महद् विदारयद् भूरितरेण रोचिषा ।

मनोजवं निर्विविशे सुदर्शनं गुणच्युतो रामशरो यथा चम्पूः । ५१ ।

द्वारेण चक्रानुपथेन तत्तमः परं परं ज्योतिरनन्तपारम् ।

समश्रुवानं प्रसमीक्ष्य फाल्गुनः प्रताडिताक्षोऽपिदधेऽक्षिणी उभे । ५२ ।

ततः प्रविष्टः सलिलं नभस्वता बलीयसैजद्वहदूर्ध्वभूषणम् ।

तत्राद्भुतं वै भवनं द्युमत्तमं भ्राजन्मणिस्तम्बसहस्रशोभितम् । ५३ ।

तस्मिन् महाभीममनन्तमद्भुतं सहस्रमूर्धन्यफणामणिद्युभिः ।

विभ्राजमानं द्विशुणोल्बणक्षेपं सिताचलाभं शतिकण्ठजिह्वम् । ५४ ।

ददर्श तद्भोगसुखासनं विभुं महानुभावं पुरुषोत्तमोत्तमम् ।

सान्द्राम्बुदाभं सुपिशङ्गवाससं प्रसन्नवक्त्रं रुचिरायतेक्षणम् । ५५ ।

महामणित्रातकिरीटकुण्डलप्रभापरिक्षिप्तसहस्रकुन्तलम् ।

प्रलम्बचार्वक्षुभुजं सकौस्तुभं श्रीवत्सलक्ष्मं वनमालया वृतम् । ५६ ।

सुनन्दनन्दप्रमुखैः स्वपार्श्वैश्चक्रादिभिर्मूर्तिधरैर्निजायुधैः ।

पृच्छा श्रिया कीर्त्यजयाखिलार्द्धिभिर्निषेव्यमाणं परमेष्ठिनां पतिम् । ५७ ।

ववन्द आत्मानमनन्तमच्युतो जिष्णुश्च तद्दर्शनजातसाध्वसः ।

तावाह भूमा परमेष्ठिनां प्रभुर्बद्धाञ्जली सस्मितमूर्जया गिरा । ५८ ।

पूर्णकामावपि युवां नरनारायणावृषी । धर्ममाचरतां स्थित्यै ऋषभौ लोकसंग्रहम् । ६० ।

Thus consoling Arjuna, the almighty Lord, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, took Arjuna with Him and, mounting His divine chariot, proceeded towards the west. (47) Crossing the seven Dvīpas, each containing seven mountain ranges, the seven oceans (dividing those Dvīpas from one another) and the Lokāloka mountain (situated beyond them all), He entered the region of thick darkness. (48) Parikṣit! His (celestial) horses—Śaibya, Sugrīva, Meghapuṣpa and Balahaka—lost their way in that darkness (and could not proceed further). (49) Seeing them in that plight, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of all great masters of Yoga, sent ahead of Him (as a guide) His discus (Sudarśana), which shone like a thousand suns (put together). (50) Quick as thought, Sudarśana made its way through that extensive thick and most terrible darkness created by the Lord Himself, piercing it by its enormous light. It appeared (at that time) like a shaft discharged from the bow string of Śrī Rāma penetrating the armies of Rākṣasas. (51) Following the path made by Sudarśana, the chariot reached the end of the region of darkness. Beyond it shone the region of supreme, infinite and all-pervading Light. Dazed by that light, Arjuna had to shut both his eyes. (52) Crossing the region of light, the divine chariot entered the region of (supramundane) water, which looked most beautiful because of its huge waves created by a strong wind (which was blowing at that time). A wonderful and most luminous palace shining with thousands of columns of brilliant jewels appeared before them there. (53) Bhagavān Śeṣa, most terrible and wonderful to look at, was present there. Possessed of a thousand hoods, each radiant with many jewels on its top and two fearful eyes, He shone brightly like the white Kailāsa mountain, and was blue at the neck and endowed with blue tongues. (54) (Parikṣit! there) Arjuna saw the most exalted Supreme Person, the all-pervading Lord of infinite powers, reposing on Śeṣa, making the coils of the latter His comfortable bed. His Form resembled in colour a cloud surcharged with humidity. He was clad in bright yellow, and His cheerful countenance and big eyes looked (most) charming. (55) The lustre of the ear-rings and of the crown on His head, containing many precious jewels, lighted up His profuse curly locks. He possessed eight long and lovely arms; the Kaustubha gem shone at His neck; His chest bore the mark of Śrīvatsa, and the garland of sylvan flowers hung up to His knees. (56) (Parikṣit!) Arjuna saw that the Lord's attendants like Nanda and Sunanda, His discus (Sudarśana) and other weapons endowed with personal forms, His four Potencies viz., Puṣṭi (Grace), Śrī (Splendour), Kīrti (Fame) and Māyā, and all the fortunes waited on Him, who is the Lord of Brahmā and the other Rulers of the world. (57) (Parikṣit!) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa bowed to the infinite Lord, who was but Himself in another form. Arjuna was (somewhat) filled with awe at His sight: (but following Śrī Kṛṣṇa) he too bowed to Him and both of them stood (there) with joined palms. (Now) with a smile on His lips, and in a deep and sonorous voice the Perfect Person, who is the Lord of Brahmā and other protectors of the world, said to them. (58) "(O Śrī Kṛṣṇa, O Arjuna), desirous of seeing You both, I had the sons of the Brāhmaṇa brought here. You have both appeared on earth with Your part manifestations for the vindication of virtue. Killing the Asuras, who have become a burden to the earth, soon return to Me. (59) You are the sages Nara and Nārāyaṇa. Though sated in everyway and foremost of all, follow the path of virtue for maintaining the world order by setting an example before men." (60)

न्यवर्ततां स्वकं धाम सम्प्रहृष्टौ यथागतम् । विप्राय ददतुः पुत्रान् यथारूपं यथावयः । ६२ ।

निशाम्य वैष्णवं धाम पार्थः परमविस्मितः । यत्किञ्चित् पौरुषं पुंसां मेने कृष्णानुकम्पितम् । ६३ ।
 इतीदृशान्यनेकानि वीर्याणीह प्रदर्शयन् । बुभुजे विषयान् ग्राम्यानीजे चात्युजितैर्मखैः । ६४ ।
 प्रववर्षांखिलान् कामान् प्रजासु ब्राह्मणादिषु । यथाकालं यथैवेन्द्रो भगवाञ्छ्रेष्ठमास्थितः । ६५ ।
 हत्वा नृपानधर्मिष्ठान् घातयित्वार्जुनादिभिः । अञ्जसा वर्तयामास धर्मं धर्मसुतादिभिः । ६६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे द्विजकुमारानयनं नाम एकोनवर्तितमोऽध्यायः ॥ ८९ ॥

The said Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna accepted the mandate of the Supreme Person, bowed to Him and, supremely delighted, returned to Dwārakā with the sons of the Brāhmaṇa following the same route by which they had gone there. The sons of the Brāhmaṇa had grown up according to their respective age, but in appearance they were the same as at the time of their birth. Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Arjuna returned them to the Brāhmaṇa. (61-62) Seeing the glorious realms of Bhagavān Viṣṇu, Arjuna felt much astonished. He realized that whatever prowess is possessed by men was due to the grace of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (63) (Parikṣit!) exhibiting these and many other similar feats, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa appeared to men as if enjoying worldly pleasures (like ordinary men of the world) and performed sacrifices on the highest scale (like the greatest of kings). (64) Just as Indra sends down timely showers, so He showered all boons on the Brāhmaṇas and other subjects, adopting the conduct of an ideal king. (65) He Himself killed many an unrighteous king, and caused many others to be killed by Arjuna and others. In this way He easily re-established the rule of Dharma (throughout the world) with the help of Yudhiṣṭhira and other (righteous) kings. (66)

Thus ends the eighty-ninth discourse entitled "The Lord brings back the (dead) sons of a Brāhmaṇa", in the latter half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ नवतितमोऽध्यायः

Discourse XC

The Story of (the amorous sports of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa narrated

श्रीशुक उवाच

सुखं स्वपूर्या निवसन् द्वारकायां श्रियः पतिः । सर्वसंपत्समृद्ध्यायां जुष्टायां वृष्णिपुङ्गवैः । १ ।
 स्त्रीभिश्चोत्तमवेषाभिर्नवयौवनकान्तिभिः । कन्दुकादिभिर्हर्म्येषु क्रीडन्तीभिस्तडिद्युभिः । २ ।
 नित्यं संकुलमार्गायां मदच्युद्धिर्मतङ्गजैः । स्वलङ्कृतैर्भटैरश्वै रथैश्च कनकोज्ज्वलैः । ३ ।
 उद्यानोपवनाढ्यायां पुष्पितद्रुमराजिषु । निर्विशद्भृङ्गविहगैर्नादितायां समन्ततः । ४ ।
 रेमे षोडशाहस्रपत्नीनामेकवल्गवः । तार्वद्विचित्ररूपोऽसौ तद्गृहेषु यर्हन्दिषु । ५ ।
 प्रोत्फुल्लोत्पलकङ्कहारकुमुदाम्भोजरेणुभिः । वासितामलतोयेषु कूजदद्विजकुलेषु च । ६ ।
 विजहार विगाह्याम्भो हृदिनीषु महोदयः । कुचकुङ्कुमलिसाङ्गः परिरब्धश्च योषिताम् । ७ ।
 उपगीयमानो गन्धर्वैर्मुदङ्गपणवानकान् । वादयद्भिर्मुदा वीणां सूतमागधवन्दिभिः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again: (Parikṣit! the splendour of Dwārakā was matchless.) Its roads and streets were day and night thronged with young elephants in rut, richly adorned soldiers, horses and brilliant chariots plated with gold. On every side of the city there were gardens and parks containing rows of trees in blossom which were filled with the music of birds and humming bees. It was a city abounding in wealth of every description. The world's greatest heroes, the Yadus, considered it a privilege to live in it and enjoy its amenities. The women of that city possessed budding youth. When, while playing with balls etc., in their mansions, their gorgeous dress got unsettled exposing a part of their body, it flashed as a streak of lightning. The Lord of Lakṣmī (the goddess of prosperity) Himself lived in that city with great ease and comfort. It was His own (favourite) city. (1—4) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa was the one beloved consort of (more than) sixteen thousand wives. Each of them possessed a mansion of surpassing wealth and splendour for her residence. Assuming as many charming forms as He had wives, He sported with them (severally) in their mansions. (5) All these mansions possessed beautiful tanks of their own. Their limpid water was ever fragrant with the pollen of lotuses of every description, (Swans, cranes and other beautiful) birds (continually) warbled in them. (6) The Lord of prosperity (Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa) sported (with His consorts) entering the water of the rivers, and the saffron on the breasts of these ladies transferred itself to His bosom as they embraced Him (in the course of these sports.) (7) The Gandharvas (at that time) sang His praises, while the Sūtas, Māgadhas and bards joyously sounded their clay tom-toms, kettledrums, tabors and lutes. (8)

सिच्यमानोऽच्युतस्ताभिर्हस्मन्तीभिः सम रेचकैः । प्रतिषिञ्चन् विचिक्रीडे यक्षीभिर्यक्षराडिव । ९ ।

ताः क्लिन्नवस्त्रविवृतोरुकुचप्रदेशाः सिञ्चन्त्य उद्धृतवृहत्कवरप्रभूनाः ।

कान्तं सम रेचकजिहीरषयोपगुह्य जातस्मरोत्सवलसद्वदना विरेजुः । १० ।

कृष्णस्तु तत्तनविषजितकुङ्कुमस्रक्रीडाभिषङ्गधुतकुन्तलवृन्दबन्धः ।

सिञ्चन् मुहुर्धुवतिभिः प्रतिषिच्यमानो रेमे करेणुभिरिवेषपतिः परीतः । ११ ।

नटानां नर्तकीनां च गीतवाद्योपजीविनाम् । क्रीडालङ्कारवासंसी कृष्णोऽदातस्य च स्त्रियः । १२ ।

कृष्णस्यैवं विहरतो गत्यालापेक्षितस्मितैः । नर्मक्ष्वेलिपरिष्ठङ्गैः स्त्रीणां किल हता धियः । १३ ।

ऊचुर्मुकुन्दैकधियोऽगिर उन्मत्तवज्रडम् । चिन्तयन्त्योऽरविन्दाक्षं तानि मे गदतः शृणु । १४ ।

The consorts of the Lord would (now and then) smilingly throw jets of water on Him through syringes, and He (too) sprinkled water on them and drenched them in return. Sporting thus with His wives, He would appear like Kubera (the king of Yakṣas) sporting with Yakṣa women. (9) The breasts and thighs of these ladies would appear through their wet clothes, and flowers stuck to their swollen braids would drop. Throwing water on Him (through their syringes), they would approach Him with intent to wrest the syringe from His hands, and make it an excuse for embracing their beloved Lord. Through His thrilling touch their love would grow all the more, which would make their face bloom in great joy. The beauty of the queens naturally increased on such occasions. (10) The garland of sylvan flowers hanging on Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's bosom would get tinged with the saffron on their breasts. Through intense absorption in enjoyment the braid of His curly locks would get loosened and begin to wave free in the air. He would throw, again and again, jets of water on His consorts, who in their turn would drench Him in the same fashion. In this way the Lord sported with His consorts (even) as the leader of a herd of wild elephants would with their females. (11) (On the conclusion of this sport) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa and His consorts would give away their clothes and ornaments used at the time of sport to male and female dancers and to those who subsisted by vocal and instrumental music. (12) (Parikṣit!) that is how the Lord used to carry on His sports. His (charming) gait, (sweet) words, (endearing) glances, (enchanting) smiles, (enlivening) jests and jokes and (loving) embraces captivated the heart of His consorts. (13) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa was the be-all and end-all of their lives, the sole possessor of their heart. Absorbed in the thought of their lotus-eyed Lord, they would remain speechless for a while, and would suddenly break out with incoherent talks in the manner of a lunatic. (In the intensity of their love) they would (now and then begin to experience excruciating pain of separation from the Lord even in His presence and) give way delirious talks. I shall reproduce these talks; (please) listen to them. (14)

महिष्य ऊचुः

कुररि विलपसि त्वं वीतनिद्रा न शेषे स्वपिति जगति रात्र्यामीश्वरो गुप्तबोधः ।

वयमिव सखि कश्चिद् गाढनिर्भिन्नचेता नलिननयनहासोदारलीलेक्षितेन । १५ ।

The queens said : O she-osprey, we are in the depth of the night now, and the whole world appears to be one big void. The Lord Himself has buried His ever wakeful consciousness (for the time being), and has gone to sleep. But your eyes know no sleep. Why do you wail and lament thus, keeping awake for the whole night ? O friend, it seems your heart has been pierced, equally with that of ours, by the (sweet) smiles and gracious and sportive glances of the lotus-eyed Lord. Surely that is the reason why you do not get sleep. (15)

नेत्रे निमीलयसि नक्तमदृष्टबन्धुस्त्वं रोरवीषि करुणं वत चक्रवाकि ।

दास्यं गता वयमिवाच्युतपादजुष्टां किं वा स्रजं स्पृहयसे कबरेण वोढुम् । १६ ।

O red goose, why have you closed your eyes during the night ? Is it because your partner has gone out of sight that you wail so piteously ? If so, we are really sorry for you. Or is it that you are possessed like us with the desire of waiting upon the Lord, and long to adorn your braid with the garland offered at the feet of the Lord ? (16)

भो भोः सदा निष्ठनसे उदन्वन्नलब्धनिद्रोऽधिगतप्रजागरः ।

किं वा मुकुन्दापहतात्मलाञ्छनः प्राप्तो दशां त्वं च गतो दुरत्ययाम् । १७ ।

O ocean, you constantly roar and thunder. Do you get no sleep at all ? It seems you have developed the disease of insomnia. Or is it that our dear Lord has robbed you of the natural qualities of tranquillity and gravity etc.? That is why, like us, you have developed a disease which is so difficult to get rid of. (17)

त्वं यक्ष्मणा बलवतासि गृहीत इन्दो क्षीणस्तमो न निजदीधितिभिः क्षिणोषि ।

कश्चिन्मुकुन्दगदितानि यथा वयं त्वं विस्मृत्य भोः स्थगितगीरुपलक्ष्यसे नः । १८ ।

O moon, you have fallen a victim to the fell disease of consumption. Oh good gracious, you have got so attenuated that you cannot disperse the darkness by your rays. (No, no;) it seems the (sweet confidential) talks of our beloved Lord (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) have escaped out of your memory, as out of ours. That is why you have become mute. (18)

। किं त्वाचरितमस्माभिर्मलयांनिल तेजप्रियम् । गोविन्दापाङ्गनिर्भिन्ने हृदीरयसि नः स्मरम् । १९ ।

O southern wind, what offence have we given you that you send impulses of love into our heart, which is already torn to pieces by the sidelong glances of the Lord ? (19)

मेघ श्रीमंस्त्वमसि दयितो यादवेन्द्रस्य नून श्रीवत्साङ्कं वयमिव भवान् ध्यायति प्रेम्बद्धः ।

अत्युत्कण्ठः शबलहृदयोऽस्मद्विधो बाष्पधाराः स्मृत्वा स्मृत्वा विसृजसि मुहुर्दुःखदस्तत्रसङ्गः । २० ।

O cloud, your colour is as lovely and beautiful as that of our beloved Lord. Surely you are very dear to our Lord, the crown-jewel of the race of Yadu. That is why, bound to Him with ties of love, you are absorbed in His thought like us. With a heart full of anxiety you always pine for Him like us and recollecting Him again and again shed profuse tears. Oh, the very contact with Him is painful. (20)

प्रियरावपदानि भाषसे मृतसङ्गीविकियानया गिरा ।
करवाणि किमद्य ते प्रियं वद मे वल्गितकण्ठ कोकिल । २१ ।

O cuckoo, your voice is so sweet and melodious. It seems our beloved Lord has made it so sweet (by drilling it). You warble in notes as sweet as those of the honey-tongued Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Your songs bring life even to the dead. Please tell us what service we may render to you today. (21)

न चलसि न वदस्युदारबुद्धे क्षितिधर चिन्तयसे महान्तमर्थम् ।
अपि बत वसुदेवनन्दनाङ्घ्रि वयमिव कामयसे स्तनैर्विधुर्तुम् । २२ ।

Oh, dear mountain, you possess a noble mind. It is you who support the earth by maintaining her balance. How is it that you neither move nor speak anything ? You seem to be merged in some serious thought. Or is it that you long to place the lotus-feet of our beloved Lord on your breast-like peaks (even) as we. (22)

शुष्यद्धृदाः कर्षिता बत सिन्धुपत्न्यः सम्प्रत्यपास्तकमलश्रिय इष्टभर्तुः ।
यद्वद वयं मधुपतेः प्रणयावलोकमप्राप्य मुष्टहृदयाः पुरुकर्षिताः स्म । २३ ।

O rivers, consorts of the ocean, (it is summer now). Your beds are dry. The beauty of the lotus (full bloom) is no longer to be found in you. You have become very lean and thin. (The reason is not far to seek.) (Just) as we have been robbed of our heart and have become much too emaciated, being deprived of the love-laden glances of (our beloved Consort,) the Lord of the Yadus, so have you been reduced to this wretched condition because the clouds no longer supply you with water from your beloved ocean. (23)

हंस स्वागतमास्यतं पिब पयो ब्रूहङ्ग शौरेः कथां दूतं त्वां नु विदाम कच्चिदजितः स्वस्यास्त उक्तं पुरा ।

किं वा नश्चलसौहृदः स्मरति तं कस्माद् भजामो वयं क्षौद्रालापय कामदे श्रियमृते सैवैकनिष्ठा स्त्रियाम् । २४ ।

O dear swan, you are welcome. Take your seat (here) and have a little milk. Please tell us something of our beloved Lord. We know you are His messenger. Is our dear Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is under no body's control, hale and hearty ? O brother, He is very fickle in His friendship. Once He told us that we were the most beloved of Him. Does He remember that profession of His love ? However, let it go. (If He can afford to be indifferent to us, why should we languish for Him ?) (Vile) messenger of a treacherous lover! we do not care to go to Him. (Or if He calls us just in order to make friends with us,) you might (as well) bring Him here. (so that we may have a direct talk with Him); but take care not to bring Lakṣmi with Him. (If He cannot come here leaving Lakṣmi alone, we ask you one thing.) Of all women, does Lakṣmi alone boast of Her exclusive love for the Lord ? (Is there none among us, who can claim to possess such love ?) (24)

इतीदृशेन भावेन कृष्णे योगेश्वरेश्वरे । क्रियमाणेन माधव्यो लेभिरे परमां गतिम् । २५ ।
श्रुतमात्रोऽपि यः स्त्रीणां प्रसह्याकर्षते मनः । उरुगायोरुगीतो वा पश्यन्तीनां कुतः पुनः । २६ ।
याः सम्पर्यवरन् प्रेम्णा पादसंवाहनादिभिः । जगद्गुरुं भर्तुबुद्ध्या तासां किं वर्ण्यते तपः । २७ ।

(Parikṣit!) such was the (depth of) love and devotion which the consorts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa cherished for their husband, the Supreme Lord of great masters of Yoga; and through that they attained the supreme state. (25) The sports of the Lord have been sung in various ways through exquisite songs and poetry. (They are so sweet, so captivating that) they irresistibly draw the mind (and heart) of women when they hear them. How much greater, then, should be the attraction of those who (are privileged to) see Him (with their own eyes!) (26) And how could one form an estimate of the austerities performed by those (privileged) women who, regarding the (Supreme) Teacher of the world (Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa) as their husband, kneaded His feet, washed His body, fed Him and served Him with other kinds of loving attentions. (27)

एवं वेदोदितं धर्ममनुतिष्ठन् सतां गतिः । गृहं धर्मार्थकामानां मुहुश्चादर्शयत् पदम् । २८ ।
आस्थितस्य परं धर्मं कृष्णस्य गृहमेधिनाम् । आसन् षोडशसहस्रं महिष्यश्च शताधिकम् । २९ ।
तासां स्त्रीरत्नभूतानामष्टौ याः प्रागुदाहृताः । रुक्मिणीप्रमुखा राजस्तत्पुत्राश्चानुपूर्वशः । ३० ।
एकैकस्यां दश दश कृष्णोऽजीजनदात्मजान् । यावत्स्य आत्मनो भार्या अमोघगतिरीश्वरः । ३१ ।
तेषामुद्दामवीर्याणामष्टादश महारथाः । आसन्नदारयशसस्तेषां नामानि मे शृणु । ३२ ।
प्रद्युम्नश्चानिरुद्धश्च दीप्तिमान् भानुरेव च । साय्बो मधुर्वहन्नायुश्चित्रभानुर्वकोऽरुणः । ३३ ।
पुष्करो वेदबाहुश्च श्रुतदेवः सुनन्दनः । चित्रबाहुर्विरूपश्च कविर्न्यग्रोध एव च । ३४ ।
एतेषामपि राजेन्द्र तनुजानां मधुद्विषः । प्रद्युम्न आसीत् प्रथमः पितृवद् रुक्मिणीसुतः । ३५ ।
स रुक्मिणो दुहितरमुपयेमे महारथः । तस्मात् सुतोऽनिरुद्धोऽभूत्प्रागायुतबलान्वितः । ३६ ।
स चापि रुक्मिणः पौत्रौ दौहित्रो जगृहे ततः । वज्रस्तस्याभवद् यस्तु मौसलादवशेषितः । ३७ ।
प्रतिबाहुरभूतस्मात् सुबाहुस्तस्य चात्मजः । सुबाहोः शान्तसेनोऽभूच्छतसेनस्तु तत्सुतः । ३८ ।
न ह्येतस्मिन् कुले जाता अधना अबहुप्रजाः । अल्पायुषोऽल्पवीर्याश्च अब्रह्मण्याश्च जज्ञिरे । ३९ ।
यदुवंशप्रसूतानां पुंसां विख्यातकर्मणाम् । संख्या न शक्यते कर्तुमपि वर्षायुतेर्नृप । ४० ।
तिस्रः कोट्यः सहस्राणामष्टाशीतिशतानि च । आसन् यदुकुलाचार्याः कुमारानामपि श्रुतम् । ४१ ।
संख्यानं यादवानां कः करिष्यति महात्मनाम् । यत्रायुतानामयुतलक्षेणास्ते स आहूकः । ४२ ।

(Parikṣit!) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the (sole) refuge of (all) virtuous souls. Practising virtue as enjoined by the Vedas, He clearly demonstrated (to the world) more than once how (the three objects of life, viz.,) religious merit, prosperity and enjoyment of worldly pleasures could be attained by leading the life of a householder. (28) That is why He had adopted the supreme way of life of a householder. (O king, I have already told you that) the number of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's consorts was sixteen thousand, one hundred and eight; the principal eight of those jewels among women, Rukmiṇi and others, as well as their offspring have already been named in order of sequence. (29-30) The wives of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa (other than these eight too) bore Him ten sons each. This should cause on wonder; the Lord is Almighty and of unfailing resolution. (31) Of those sons of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, all of whom possessed unbounded valour, eighteen were warriors of foremost rank and possessed excellent renown. Hear their names from Me. (32) They were Pradyumna and Aniruddha, Diptimān and Bhānu, Sāmba, Madhu Brāhmadhānu, Citrabhānu, Vṛka, Aruṇa, Puṣkara and Vedabāhu, Śrutadeva, Sunandana Citrabāhu and Virūpa, Kavi and Nyagrodha. (33-34) Parikṣit, of these (eighteen) sons of Śr Kṛṣṇa (again) Pradyumna, born of Rukmiṇī, was the first and foremost. He was equal to his father (in every respect). (35) Pradyumna, a great car-warrior, married Rukmī's daughter, and out of that wedlock was born Aniruddha possessed of the strength of ten thousand elephants. (36) Aniruddha married the daughter of his own maternal uncle, Rukmī's son. Vajra was born out of this wedlock. He was the only survivor after the destruction (of Yadu's race) through the instrumentality of a piston (brought into existence by the curse of Brāhmaṇa sages). (37) Vajra's son was named Pratibāhu, whose son was Subāhu. Subāhu's son was Śāntasena and his son was Śāntasena. (38) No one born in this race was destitute or weak, and none of them died early. All of them were devoted to the Brāhmaṇas and possessed more sons than one. (39) O king, this race produced so many (famous and) distinguished men that it is not possible to enumerate them in tens of thousands of years. (40) I have heard that the number of teachers who taught the children of this race was three crore and eighty-eight lakh. (41) Who could tell the number of the high-souled Yadus in such circumstances? King Ugrasena alone was (always) accompanied by warriors numbering ten billions (10,000,000,000,000). (42)

देवासुराहवहता दैतेया ये सुदारुणाः । ते चोत्पन्ना मनुष्येषु प्रजा दृष्ट्वा ब्रवाधिरे । ४३ ।
तन्निग्रहाय हरिणा प्रोक्ता देवा यदोः कुले । अवतीर्णाः कुलशतं तेषामेकाधिकं नृप । ४४ ।
तेषां प्रमाणं भगवान् प्रभुत्वेनाभवद्धरिः । ये चानुवर्तिनस्तस्य ववधुः सर्वयादवाः । ४५ ।
शय्यासनाटनालापक्रीडास्तानादिकर्मसु । न विदुः सत्तमात्मानं वृणयः कृष्णचेतसः । ४६ ।

(Parikṣit, in days of yore) many a terrible Asura was slain in the encounter between the gods and the Asuras; they were reborn among men. These proud and arrogant Asuras (reborn as human beings) began to molest the people. (43) In order to chastise and subdue them the gods under the direction of the Supreme Lord were born in the race of Yadu, O King! This race was divided into one hundred and one families. (44) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa was the sole guide and Lord of all the Yadus. All those Yādavas, who faithfully followed Him (and worked for Him) prospered (in every way). (45) The mind of the Yādavas remained (constantly) fixed on Śrī Kṛṣṇa, so much so that they lost consciousness of their body while sleeping, resting, walking, chatting, sporting, bathing and performing other duties (of their daily routine). (They carried on these functions like so many automatons.) (46)

तीर्थं चक्रे नृपोऽनं यदजनि यदुषु स्वःसरित्पादशौचं
विद्विदस्त्रिधाः स्वरूपं ययुरजितपरा श्रीर्यदर्थेऽन्ययत्नः ।
यत्रामामङ्गलघ्नं श्रुतमथ गदितं यत्कृतो गोत्रधर्मः
कृष्णस्यैतन्न चित्रं क्षितिभरहरणं कालचक्रायुधस्य । ४७ ।
जयति जननिवासो देवकीजन्मवादो यदुवरपर्यन्तवैदोर्भिरस्यत्रधर्मम् ।
स्थिरचरवृजिनघ्नः सुस्मितश्रीमुखेन ब्रजपुरवनितानां वर्धयन् कामदेवम् । ४८ ।

Parikṣit ! the Gaṅgā which washes the feet of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, is (certainly) very sacred. But, when the same Lord (the holiest of the holy) descended in the race of Yadu, the glory of the Gaṅgā naturally diminished as compared to the glory of His incomparable fame. (How great, indeed, is the glory of the Lord's Form that) those who loved Him and those who hated Him, both attained His state. Goddess Lakṣmī, who is sought after by other gods, keeps Herself (constantly) engaged in His service. His (auspicious) Name (once) heard or uttered destroys (all) evil. Of all forms of Dharma preached and practised by the descendants of (various) Ṛṣis, Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the founder (and fountain-head). He holds in His hand the discus (which is a symbol of the ever rotating wheel of Time, the all-destroyer). Under such circumstances, it is no wonder that He should relieve the burden of the earth (from time to time). (47) Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the (sole) asylum of (all) beings. (He is constantly present everywhere, and yet) they say He manifested Himself from the womb of Devaki. The Yadava heroes (always) waited on Him (with joined palms). By (the strength of) His arms He put down (all) unrighteousness. (By His very nature, O king,) the Lord wipes out the sufferings of all mobile and immobile creatures. By His charming countenance full of winning smiles He kindled love into the hearts of (the women) of Vraja as well as of the towns, He is the one conqueror of the whole world. (Victory to Him and Him alone I) (48)

इत्थं परस्य निजवर्त्मरिरक्षयाऽऽत्तलीलातनोस्तदनु रूपविडम्बनानि ।
 कर्मणि कर्मकषणानि यदूतमस्य श्रूयामुष्य पदयोरनुवृत्तिमिच्छन् ॥४९॥
 मर्त्यस्तयानुसवमेधितया मुकुन्दश्रीमत्कथाश्रवणकीर्तनचिन्तयैति ।
 तद्धाम दुस्तरकृतान्तजवापवर्गं ग्रामाद् वनं क्षितिभुजोऽपि ययुर्यदर्थाः ॥५०॥
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशसाहस्र्यां परमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे उत्तरार्धे श्रीकृष्णचरितानुवर्णने नाम नवतितमोऽध्यायः ॥९०॥

— ::x:: —

इति दशमस्कन्धोत्तरार्धः सम्पूर्णः

श्रीकृष्णार्पणमस्तु

(Parikṣit I) the Supreme Person (who is beyond the realm of Prakṛti) sportively assumed a (transcendental) Form with intent to vindicate the path of virtue chalked out by Himself, and enacted (many wonderful) sports appropriate to that Form. Everyone of His acts is capable of cutting asunder the bonds of Karma (of those who contemplate on it). He who seeks to gain the privilege of serving the (lotus) feet of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the crown-jewel of Yadus, should (make it a point to) listen to the stories of His sports. (49) By listening to, chanting and contemplating on the charming stories of Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa every moment, man develops the devotion which leads him to the (supreme) sphere of the Lord. (True,) it is (most) difficult to reach beyond the jurisdiction of Time; but in the Lord's realm Time has no sway. Even rulers of the earth have left their kingdom and retired to the forest for (the performance of austerities with the object of) gaining that eternal realm. (Therefore, one should constantly engage oneself in hearing the stories of the Lord.) (50)

Thus ends the ninetyeth discourse entitled "The Story of (the amorous sports of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa narrated," in the latter half of Book ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā, composed by the sage Vedavyāsa and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.

END OF THE SECOND HALF OF BOOK TEN

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

एकादशः स्कन्धः

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa

Book Eleven

Discourse I

The curse of the Ṛṣis invoking the destruction of Yadu's race

श्रीबादरायणिरुवाच

कृत्वा दैत्यवधं कृष्णः सरामो यदुभिवृतः । भुवोऽवतारयद् भारं जविष्ठं जनयन् कलिम् । १ ।

ये कोपिताः सुबहु पाण्डुसुताः सपत्नैर्दुर्युतहेलनकचग्रहणादिभिस्तान् ।

कृत्वा निमित्तमितरेतरतः समेतान् हत्वा नृपान् निरहरत् क्षितिभारमीशः । २ ।

भूभारराजपृतना यदुभिर्निरस्य गुप्तैः स्वबाहुभिरचित्तयदप्रमेयः ।

मन्येऽवनेर्ननु गतोऽप्यगतं हि भारं यद् यादवं कुलमहो अविषह्यमास्ते । ३ ।

नैवान्यतः परिभवोऽस्य भवेत् कथञ्चिन्मत्संश्रयस्य विभवोन्नहनस्य नित्यम् ।

अन्तःकलिं यदुकुलस्य विधाय वेणुस्तम्बस्य वह्निमिव शान्तिमुपैमि धाम । ४ ।

एवं व्यवसितो राजन् सत्यसङ्कल्प ईश्वरः । शापव्याजेन विप्राणां संजग्हे स्वकुलं विभुः । ५ ।

स्वमूर्त्या लोकलावण्यनिर्मुक्त्या लोचनं नृणाम् । गीर्भिस्ताः स्मरतां चित्तं पदैस्तानीक्षतां क्रियाः । ६ ।

आच्छिद्य कीर्तिं सुरलोको वितत्य ह्यज्ञसा नु कौ । तमोऽनया तरिष्यन्तीत्यगात् स्वं पदमीश्वरः । ७ ।

Śrī Śūka (son of Vedavyāsa) began again : Attended by Balarāma and the Yādavas, Śrī Kṛṣṇa destroyed the demons and, creating violent discord (between the Pāṇḍavas and the Kauravas) relieved the earth of her burden. (1) Making His instrument the Pāṇḍavas, whose ire had been repeatedly provoked by their enemies (the Kauravas), through deceitful gambling, humiliating insult, dragging (Draupadi) by the hair and in other ways, the Lord caused destruction of the kings gathered on both sides and (thus) relieved the earth of her burden. (2) Having thus annihilated the kings and their armies, who were a burden to the earth, through the Yādavas, protected by His own arms, the Lord of inscrutable ways thought:—"Though the burden of the earth has been removed, yet I do not take it as (completely) removed so long as the unconquerable race of Yadu exists. (3) Having always been protected by Me, and grown uncontrollable through prosperity, this race of Yadu can by no means be vanquished by others (even by gods). (Therefore,) just as a bamboo grove is consumed by fire (produced by the friction of the bamboos themselves), I shall destroy the Yādavas by creating internal strife among them, and (then) in peace shall return to My realm (Vaikuṇṭha)." (4) O king (Parikṣit) ! having thus resolved, the Lord of truthful resolution brought about the annihilation of His own race through the curse of the Brāhmaṇas as a pretext (or obvious cause). (5) Having attracted the eyes of people by His (transcendent) personality, which disparaged beauty in others, and by His words the hearts of those who remembered them; and suspending by (the sight of) His footprints the (movements and) actions of those who saw them; and having His fame spread in the world and sung in charming verses and thinking that through such renown (when heard or sung) people would easily emerge from darkness the Lord retired to His realm. (6-7)

राजोवाच

ब्रह्मण्यानां वदान्यानां नित्यं वृद्धोपसेविनाम् । विप्रशापः कथमभूद् वृष्णीनां कृष्णचेतसाम् । ८ ।
यत्रिमितः स वै शापो यादृशो द्विजसत्तम । कथमेकात्मनां भेद एतत् सर्वं वदस्व मे । ९ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : How did the curse of Brāhmaṇas fall upon the Vṛṣṇis, who were devoted to the Brāhmaṇas, were liberal and always served their elders, and who had given their mind (in devotion) to Sri Kṛṣṇa ? (8) O the best of Brāhmaṇas ! what was the occasion of the curse, and what was its nature ? How did discord find place among those who were of one mind ? Do tell me all this. (9)

श्रीशुक उवाच

बिभ्रद् वपुः सकलसुन्दरसन्निवेशं कर्माचरन् भुवि सुमङ्गलमाप्तकामः ।
आस्थाय धाम रममाण उदारकीर्तिः संहर्तुमैच्छत कुलं स्थितकृत्यशेषः । १० ।
कर्माणि पुण्यनिवहानि सुमङ्गलानि गायज्गत्कलिमलापहराणि कृत्वा ।
कालात्मना निवसता यदुदेवगेहे पिण्डारकं समगमन् मुनयो निःसृष्टाः । ११ ।

विश्वामित्रोऽसितः कण्वो दुर्वासा भृगुरङ्गिराः । कश्यपो वामदेवोऽत्रिर्वसिष्ठो नारदादयः । १२ ।
क्रीडन्तस्तानुपब्रज्य कुमारो यदुनन्दनाः । उपसंगृह्य पप्रच्छुरविनीता विनीतवत् । १३ ।
ते वेषयित्वा स्त्रीवेषैः साम्बं जाम्बवतीसुतम् । एषा पृच्छति वो विप्रा अन्तर्वत्स्यसितेक्षणा । १४ ।
प्रष्टुं विलज्जती साक्षात् प्रव्रतामोघदर्शनाः । प्रसोष्यन्ती पुत्रकामा किंस्वित् सञ्जनयिष्यति । १५ ।
एवं प्रलब्ध्वा मुनयस्तान्युचुः कुपिता नृप । जनयिष्यति वो मन्दा मुसलं कुलनाशनम् । १६ ।
तच्छ्रुत्वा तेऽतिसन्नस्ता विमुच्य सहसोदरम् । साम्बस्य ददृशुस्तस्मिन् मुसलं खल्वयस्मयम् । १७ ।
किं कृतं मन्दभार्य्यैः किं वदिष्यन्ति नो जनाः । इति विह्वलिता गेहानादाय मुसलं ययुः । १८ ।
तद्योपनीय सदसि परिप्लानमुखश्रियः । राज्ञ आवेदयाञ्चक्रुः सर्वयादवसन्निधौ । १९ ।
श्रुत्वाभोगं विप्रशापं दृष्ट्वा च मुसलं नृप । विस्मिता भयसन्नस्ता बभूवुर्द्वात्रकौकसः । २० ।
तद्युष्मयित्वा मुसलं यदुराजः स आहूकः । समुद्रसलिले प्रास्यल्लोहं चास्यावरोषितम् । २१ ।
कश्चिन्मत्स्यो प्रसील्लोहं चूर्णानि तरलैस्ततः । उह्यमानानि वेलायां लग्नान्यासन् किलैरकाः । २२ ।
मत्स्यो गृहीतो मत्स्यघ्नैर्जलेनान्यैः सहाण्वे । तस्योदरगतं लोहं स शल्ये लुब्धकोऽकरोत् । २३ ।
भगवाञ्जातसर्वार्थ ईश्वरोऽपि तदन्यथा । कर्तुं नैच्छद् विप्रशापं कालरूप्यन्वमोदत । २४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

Sri Śuka replied : Exhibiting a form embodying all graces in the world, performing most auspicious actions with (all) His desires (ever) gratified, enjoying Himself in His city (Dwārakā), the Lord of widely established fame desired to destroy His race as that was the only work left unaccomplished (by Him). (10) The Lord had performed highly auspicious deeds, which (when sung) bring holiness and destroy the sins of the Kali age in those that sing them. Now He was residing in the house of Vasudeva as the Destroyer. He bade farewell to the sages—Viśwamitra, Asita, Kaṇva, Durvasā, Bhṛgu, Aṅgirā, Kaśyapa, Vāmadeva, Atri, Vasiṣṭha, Nārada and others, and they went away to (the holy place of) Piṇḍāraka (near Dwārakā). (11-12) The Yādava youths, while sporting (there), approached them and with mock humility clasped their feet and impudently asked them a question. (13) Having attired Jāmbavatī's sons, Sāmba; as a woman, they said (to the Ṛṣis); "O Brāhmaṇas of unfailing vision, this pregnant woman of dark eyes, soon to give birth to a kṛṣṇa, and desiring to bring forth a son, wishes to know if she will give birth to a son or a daughter. She (however) feels shy to ask you directly." (14-15) O king, the sages, who were thus imposed upon, got angry and said to them: "O fools, she will give birth to a pestle which will destroy your race!" (16) Greatly terrified to hear that (curse), they at once bared the belly of Sāmba and actually found a pestle of iron there. (17) "What have we, unfortunate fellows, done? What will people say (of us)?" Thus perplexed, they returned home with the pestle. (18) With sad and pale faces they brought the pestle in the court, and in the presence of all the Yādavas narrated the (whole) incident to their king (Ugrasena). (19) O king, hearing about the unfailing curse of the sages and seeing the pestle (all) the inhabitants of Dwārakā were struck with wonder and got alarmed through fear. (20) Ahuka (Ugrasena), the said king of the Yādavas, got the pestle reduced to powder and thrown into the water of the sea. The remaining iron piece of the pestle (which could not be powdered) was also thrown (into the sea). (21) Some fish swallowed that iron piece, while the particles of the powder were borne by the waves to and deposited on the shore, where they grew into a kind of grass called Erakā. (22) The fish was caught in the net along with other fishes in the sea by some fisherman. The iron piece found in its stomach was fixed to the point of his arrow by a hunter. (23) The Lord knew the whole truth and (being almighty) had the power to nullify the curse of the sages; but He did not like to render it ineffectual. (On the other hand) He approved of it, being Himself the Destroyer. (24)

Thus ends the first discourse, in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse II

Nārada visits Vasudeva and reproduces the dialogue between

King Janaka and the nine Yogiśwaras

श्रीयुक् उवाच

गोविन्दभुजगुप्तायां द्वारवत्यां कुरुद्वह । अवात्सीन्नारदोऽभीक्ष्णं कृष्णोपासनलालसः । १ ।
को नु राजत्रिन्द्रियवान् मुकुन्दचरणाम्बुजम् । न भजेत् सर्वतोमृत्युरुपास्यममरोत्तमैः । २ ।
तमेकदा तु देवर्षि वसुदेवो गृहागतम् । अर्चितं सुखमासीनमभिव्याद्येदमब्रवीत् । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : O Parikṣit (the best of the Kurus) I eager to wait upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Nārada very frequently stayed in Dwārakā, which was protected by the arms of Govinda. (1) O king ! what mortal man, possessing sound senses, would possibly neglect to worship the lotus-feet of Lord Mukunda, which are fit to be adored by the best of gods (Brahmā and others) ? (2) On one occasion, when Nārada (the divine sage) came to His house and had been worshipped and comfortably seated, Vasudeva greeted him and spoke thus:—(3)

वसुदेव उवाच

भगवन् भवतो यात्रा स्वस्त्ये सर्वदिहिनाम् । कृपणानां यथा पित्रोरुत्तमश्लोकवर्त्मनाम् । ४ ।

भूतानां देवचरितं दुःखाय च सुखाय च । सुखायैव हि साधूनां त्वादृशमच्युतात्मनाम् । ५ ।

भजन्ति ये यथा देवान् देवा अपि तथैव तान् । छायेव कर्मसचिवाः साधवो दीनवत्सलाः । ६ ।

ब्रह्मन्तथापि पृच्छामो धर्मान् भागवतांस्तव । याञ्छुत्वा श्रद्धया मर्त्यं मुच्यते सर्वतोभयात् । ७ ।

अहं किल पुरानन्तं प्रजार्थो भुवि मुक्तिदम् । अपूजयं न मोक्षाय मोहितो देवमायया । ८ ।

यथा विचित्रव्यसनाद् भवद्विर्विश्वतोभयात् । मुच्येयं ह्यङ्गसैवाद्वा तथा नः शधिं सुव्रत । ९ ।

Vasudeva submitted : O venerable sage, (just) as the movement of parents is conducive to the welfare of children, and that of pious persons treading the path of the glorious Lord is meant for the good of those bound by worldly attachments, your visit is a blessing to all creatures. (4) The conduct of the deities may conduce both to the happiness and misery of created beings; but the conduct of pious souls devoted to Lord Viṣṇu like you promotes their happiness only. (5) The deities, acting like one's own shadow, serve their worshippers even as the latter worship them, following the course of their Karma. Saints (however) are compassionate towards the afflicted (irrespective of their Karma). (6) All the same, O holy Brāhmaṇa, we request you to tell us those Dharmas (righteous courses) which delight the Lord, and hearing of which with faith the mortal man is rid of all fear. (7) Indeed, in my previous birth in this world I worshipped the immortal Lord, who grants Liberation, for the sake of progeny, but not for (the boon of) emancipation, deluded as I was by His Māyā. (8) O sage of noble vows, so instruct us that through you we may surely and easily be rid of (this) worldly existence full of manifold misery and beset with fear on all sides. (9)

श्रीशुक उवाच

राजन्नेवं कृतप्रश्नो वसुदेवेन धीमता । प्रीतस्तमाह देवर्षिर्हीरः संस्मारितो गुणैः । १० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : O king ! questioned thus by the wise Vasudeva, and vividly reminded (thereby) of the Lord's qualities, the divine sage (Nārada) felt (much) pleased and said to him (as follows). (10)

नारद उवाच

सम्यगेतद् व्यवसितं भवता सात्वतर्षभ । यत् पृच्छसे भागवतान् धर्मास्त्वं विश्वभावनान् । ११ ।

श्रुतोऽनुपठितो ध्यात आदृतो वानुमोदितः । सद्यः पुनाति सद्भूमौ देव विश्वदुष्टोऽपि हि । १२ ।

त्वया परमकल्याणः पुण्यश्रवणकीर्तनः । स्मारितो भगवानद्य देवो नारायणो मम । १३ ।

अत्राप्युदाहरन्तीममितिहासं पुरातनम् । आर्षभाणां च संवादं विदेहस्य महात्मनः । १४ ।

प्रियव्रतो नाम सुतो मनोः स्वायम्भुवस्य यः । तस्याग्रीध्रस्ततो नाभिर्ऋषभस्तत्सुतः स्मृतः । १५ ।

तमाहुर्वसुदेवांश्च मोक्षधर्मविवक्षया । अवतीर्णं सुतशतं तस्यासीद् ब्रह्मपारगम् । १६ ।

तेषां वै भरतो ज्येष्ठो नारायणपरायणः । विख्यातं वर्षमेतद् यत्राप्रा भारतमद्भुतम् । १७ ।

स भुक्तभोगां त्यक्त्वेमां निर्गतस्तपसा हरिम् । उपासीनस्तत्पदवीं लेभे वै जन्मभिखिभिः । १८ ।

तेषां नव नवद्वीपपतयोऽस्य समन्ततः । कर्मतन्त्रप्रणेतार एकाशीतिर्द्विजातयः । १९ ।
 नवाभवन् महाभागा मुनयो हर्षशंसिनः । श्रमणा वातरशना आत्मविद्याविशारदाः । २० ।
 कविर्हरित्तरिक्षः प्रबुद्धः पिप्पलायनः । आविर्होत्रोऽथ द्रुमिलश्चमसः करभाजनः । २१ ।
 त एते भगवद्रूपं विश्वं सदसदात्मकम् । आत्मनोऽव्यतिरेकेण पश्यन्तो व्यचरन् महौम् । २२ ।
 अव्याहतेष्टगतयः सुरसिद्धसाध्यगन्धर्वयक्षनरकिन्नरनागलोकान् ।
 मुक्ताश्चरन्ति मुनिचारणभूतनाथविद्याधरद्विजगवां भुवनानि कामम् । २३ ।
 त एकदा निमेषः सत्रमुपजगमुर्यदृच्छया । वितायमानमृषिभिरजनाभे महात्मनः । २४ ।
 तान् दृष्ट्वा सूर्यसंकाशान् महाभागवतान् नृपः । यजमानोऽग्नयो विप्राः सर्व एवोपतस्थिरे । २५ ।
 विदेहस्तानभिप्रेत्य नारायणपरायणान् । प्रीतः सम्पूजयाञ्चक्रे आसनस्थान् यथाहृतः । २६ ।
 तान् रोचमानान् स्वरूपा ब्रह्मपुत्रोपमान् नव । पप्रच्छ परमप्रीतः प्रश्रयावनतो नृपः । २७ ।

Nārada replied : O Vasudeva (the foremost of the Yadavas) ! you have resolved well to have inquired me about the virtues and duties that delight the Lord and purify all. (11) Heard of or talked about, dwelt upon, accepted with reverence or (even) approved (when practised by others), this righteous course purifies at once without doubt even those who are hostile to the deities, nay, to all creatures. (12) I have been reminded by you today of the almighty Lord Nārāyaṇa, who is most auspicious and whose name, when heard or sung, brings merit. (13) In this connection the wise narrate the following ancient legend embodying a conversation between the sons of Ṛṣabha and the high-souled Janaka (the king of the Videhas). (14) Priyavata, the well-known son of Svāyambhūva Manu, had a son called Āgnidhra—of whom was born Nābhi, whose son was known as Ṛṣabha. (15) The wise declare that Ṛṣabha descended (on earth) for popularizing the cult (of renunciation) leading to Liberation, and that he had an element of Lord Vāsudeva in him. He had a hundred sons, who were (all) well-versed in the Vedas. (16) Of them the eldest son was Bharata. He was really a devotee of Lord Nārāyaṇa. It is after him that this wonderful land (sub-continent) came to be known. (17) After enjoying the pleasures of this world he renounced it and left his home and, worshipping Lord Hari through askesis for three (consecutive) births, finally attained His state. (18) Out of those (ninety-nine younger brothers of Bharata), nine became the rulers of the nine Dvīpas surrounding Bhāratavarṣa. And eighty-one became Brāhmaṇas and authors of treatises on ritual acts, while (the remaining) nine became highly blessed sages. Having laboured in the domain of knowledge of Self, the latter propounded the highest truth and, living naked, became adepts in spiritual knowledge. (19-20) Their names are: Kavi, Hari, Antariṣṭha, Prabuddha, Pippalāyana, Āvirhotra, Drumila, Camasa, and Karabhājana. (21) These sages beheld the universe, gross as well as subtle (the cause and its mutations) as identical with the Lord and without distinction from themselves, and wandered over the earth. (22) They go wherever they like as their path is unobstructed. They freely range over the regions of the gods, Siddhas, Sādhyas, Gandharvas, Yakṣas, men, Kinnaras, Nāgas, ascetics, Cāraṇas, Bhairavas, Vidyādhara, Brāhmaṇas and cows. (Being liberated souls), they had no attachment for any place or beings. (23) On one occasion they went of their own accord to attend a sacrificial performance of King Nimi, an enlightened soul, which was being conducted by Ṛṣis in (that region of Jambūdīpa called) Ajanābha (the old name of Bhāratavarṣa). (24) O king (Parikṣit), seeing those sages, effulgent like the sun and (so) earnestly devoted to the Lord, the sacrificer (Nimi), the (sacred) fires and the Brāhmaṇas (who were performing the rites) all rose to welcome them. (25) Knowing them to be (great) devotees of Lord Nārāyaṇa, King Nimi felt (much) delighted (to see them). When they had been seated, he duly worshipped them in the order of their seniority. (26) The nine sages were resplendent with their own lustre, like the sons of Brahman (Sanaka and others). King Nimi was greatly delighted to see them. Bent low with humility he put questions to them (as follows). (27)

विदेह उवाच

मन्ये भगवतः साक्षात् पार्षदान् वो मधुद्विषः । विष्णोर्भूतानि लोकानां पावनाय चरन्ति हि । २८ ।
दुर्लभो मानुषो देहो देहिनां क्षणभङ्गुरः । तत्रापि दुर्लभं मन्ये वैकुण्ठप्रियदर्शनम् । २९ ।
अत आत्यन्तिकं क्षेमं पृच्छामो भवतोऽनघाः । संसारेऽस्मिन् क्षणार्थोऽपि सत्सङ्गः शेषधर्मिणाम् । ३० ।
धर्मान् भागवतान् ब्रूत यदि नः श्रुतये क्षमम् । यैः प्रसन्नः प्रपन्नाय दास्यत्यात्मानमप्यजः । ३१ ।

King Nimi said : I conclude you to be the direct attendants of Lord Viṣṇu (the Destroyer of the demon Madhu); for (I know) His devotees go about the worlds to purify them. (28) The human body is a rare boon to embodied souls and that too is very transient. In the human life too it is very rarely that one meets the devotees of the Lord. (29) O pious souls, we, therefore, ask you what leads to everlasting bliss. In this world association with pious souls (like you) even for half a moment is (indeed) like a treasure to human beings. (30) If we are qualified to hear of them, (pray) tell us those righteous duties and observances sacred to the Lord, pleased with which that birthless Lord confers His very Self upon His votary. (31)

श्रीनारद उवाच

एवं ते निमिना पृष्टा वसुदेव महत्तमाः । प्रतिपूज्याब्रुवन् प्रीत्या सप्तदस्यविवर्जं नृपम् । ३२ ।

Nārada continued : O Vasudeva, questioned thus by King Nimi, the worshipful sages complimented the king, his priests and the supervisors of the sacrifice, and gladly spoke (by turns as follows). (32)

कविरुवाच

मन्येऽकुतश्चिद्भयमच्युतस्य पादाम्बुजोपासनमत्र नित्यम् ।
उद्विग्नबुद्धेरसदात्मभावाद् विश्वात्मना यत्र निवर्तते भीः । ३३ ।
ये वै भगवता प्रोक्ता उपाया ह्यात्मलब्धये । अन्नः पुंसामविदुषां विद्धि भागवतान् हि तान् । ३४ ।
यानास्थाय नरो राजन् न प्रमाद्येत कर्हिचित् । धावन् निमील्य वा नेत्रे न स्वलेत्र पतेदिह । ३५ ।
कायेन वाचा मनसेन्द्रियैर्वा बुद्ध्याऽऽत्मना वानुसृतस्वभावात् ।
करोति यद् यत् सकलं परस्मै नारायणार्थेति समर्पयेत्तत् । ३६ ।
भयं द्वितीयाभिविदेशतः स्यादोशादपेतस्य विपर्ययोऽस्ति ।
तन्माययातो बुध आभजेत्तं भक्त्यैक्येशं गुरुदेवतात्मा । ३७ ।
अविद्यमानोऽप्यवभाति हि द्वयोर्ध्यातुर्धिया स्वप्नमनोरथौ यथा ।
तत् कर्मसङ्कल्पविकल्पकं मनो बुधो निरुन्ध्यादभयं ततः स्यात् । ३८ ।
शृण्वन् सुभद्राणि रथाङ्गपाणेरजन्मानि कर्माणि च यानि लोके ।
गीतानि नामानि तदर्थकानि गायन् विलज्जो विचरेदसङ्गः । ३९ ।
एवंव्रतः स्वप्रियनामकीर्त्या जातानुरागो द्रुतचित्त उच्चैः ।
हसत्यथो रोदिति रौति गायत्युन्मादवव्रत्यति लोकबाह्यः । ४० ।
खं वायुमग्निं सलिलं मही च ज्योतीषि सत्त्वानि दिशो ह्रमादीन् ।
सरित्समुद्रांश्च हरेः शरीरं यत् किञ्च भूतं प्रणमेदन्यः । ४१ ।

भक्तिः परेशानुभवो विरक्तिरन्यत्र येष त्रिक एककालः ।
 प्रपद्यमानस्य यथाश्रतः स्युस्तुष्टिः पुष्टिः क्षुद्रपायोऽनुधासम् । ४२ ।
 इत्यच्युताङ्घ्रिं भजतोऽनुवृत्त्या भक्तिविरक्तिर्भगवत्प्रबोधः ।
 भवन्ति वै भागवतस्य राज्ञस्ततः परां शान्तिमुपैति साक्षात् । ४३ ।

Kavi said : I believe that, for the man whose mind is always agitated by mistaking this worthless body etc., for one's own self, worship of the Lord's lotus-feet is the safest course in that through such worship (all) fear completely disappears. (33) All those courses of conduct which were actually taught by the Lord Himself for His own Realization without much exertion even by the ignorant, surely know them as conducive to His pleasure. (34) O king, resorting to those courses a man would never go astray; even if he follows them running (in a desultory way) or with closed eyes (ignorantly), he would not stumble or take a false step. (35) Whatever he does with his body, tongue, mind or senses, reason or intellect or by the force of his inherited nature, he should consecrate all as an offering to the supreme Lord Nārāyaṇa. (36) He who has turned away from the Lord loses the memory (of his real self), thanks to His Māyā, and falls a prey to the erroneous belief that the body is one's own self. He is then seized with fear engendered by identification with the body (which is other than the self). Therefore, a discerning person should worship Him with exclusive devotion, looking upon his preceptor as the Deity as well as his own self. (37) Though duality has no (real) existence, it does appear like a dream or mental image to the mind of one who dwells upon it. Therefore, a wise man should control that mind from which proceed ideations and doubts. Fearlessness will follow from it. (38) (Therefore) hearing of the most auspicious descents and deeds of Śrī Hari (the Wielder of the discus) and singing His names denoting His descents and actions, well-known in the world, without any fear of being mocked at, one should move about free from attachment. (39) The man who, having adopted such a course of conduct, develops love for Him by singing the names of his beloved Lord, his heart melting in devotion, loudly laughs and weeps, screams, sings or dances like one possessed, transgressing conventions. (40) With exclusive devotion he bows to the sky, air, fire, water, earth, heavenly bodies, living beings cardinal points, trees and the like, rivers and seas and all created beings, considering them as the body of the Lord. (41) As one who eats (food) feels satisfied, gets nourishment and relief from hunger with every morsel, (similarly) in him who has resigned himself to the Lord, devotion, realization of the supreme Lord and aversion to other objects—all the three appear at once. (42) In the votary of God O king, who worships uninterruptedly as aforesaid the feet of Śrī Hari (the immortal Lord) Devotion, a distaste for the enjoyments of the world and direct knowledge of God appear (simultaneously); and through them he directly attains (the state of) supreme peace. (43)

राजोवाच

अथ भागवतं ब्रूत यद्धर्मो यादृशो नृणाम् । यथा चरति यद् ब्रूते यैर्लङ्घ्यैर्भगवत्प्रियः । ४४ ।

The king (Nimi) submitted : Now (kindly) describe the characteristics of the Lord's devotee among men, his disposition and course of conduct, how he behaves and what he speaks, and the distinctive traits which make him the favourite of the Lord. (44)

हरिर्वाच

सर्वभूतेषु यः पश्येद् भगवद्भावमात्मनः । भूतानि भगवत्यात्मन्येष भागवतोत्तमः । ४५ ।
 ईश्वरे तदधीनेषु बालिशेषु द्विषत्सु च । प्रेममैत्रीकृपोपेक्षा यः करोति स मध्यमः । ४६ ।
 अर्चायामेव हयैः पूजां यः श्रद्धयेहते । न तद्भक्त्युच्यते स भक्तः प्राकृतः स्मृतः । ४७ ।

गृहीत्वापीन्द्रिवैरथान् यो न द्वेष्टि न हृष्यति । विष्णोर्मायामिदं पश्यन् स वै भागवतोत्तमः । ४८ ।

देहेन्द्रियप्राणमनोधियां यो जन्माप्ययक्षुद्रयतर्पकृच्छ्रेः ।

संसारधर्मैर्विमुह्यमानः स्मृत्या हरेर्भागवतप्रधानः । ४९ ।

न कामकर्मबीजानां यस्य चेतसि सम्भवः । वासुदेवैकनिलयः स वै भागवतोत्तमः । ५० ।

न यस्य जन्मकर्मभ्यां न वर्णाश्रमजातिभिः । सज्जतेऽस्मिन्नहंभावो देहे वै स हरेः प्रियः । ५१ ।

न यस्य स्वः पर इति विन्तेन्नात्मनि वा भिदा । सर्वभूतसमः शान्तः स वै भागवतोत्तमः । ५२ ।

त्रिभुवनविभवहेतवेऽप्यकुण्ठस्मृतिरजितात्मसुरादिभिर्विमुग्यात् ।

न चलति भगवत्पदारविन्दाल्लवनमिषार्धमपि यः स वैष्णवाग्र्यः । ५३ ।

भगवत् उरुविक्रमाङ्घ्रिशिखानखमणिचन्द्रिकया निरस्ततापे ।

हृदि कथपुष्पसीदतां पुनः स प्रभवति चन्द्र इवोदितेऽर्कतापः । ५४ ।

विमुजति हृदयं न यस्य साक्षाद्धरिवशाभिहितोऽप्यधौघनाशः ।

प्रणयरशनया धृताङ्घ्रिपद्मः स भवति भागवतप्रधान उक्तः । ५५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । २ ।

Harī said : He is the foremost of the Lord's devotees, who sees himself established in all creatures as in the Lord (himself), and sees (all) creatures established in his own self as in the Divine Soul. (45) The votary who cherishes love for the Lord, is friendly to other devotees of the Lord, compassionate to the ignorant, and indifferent to his enemies, is a second-rate votary (because he discriminates among these classes, whereas the one described in the previous verse makes no discrimination). (46) He who does worship to the Lord with faith in an image only and does not serve His devotees and other beings is an ordinary devotee. (47) He who sees the universe as (a creation of) Viṣṇu's Māyā and, even though contacting the objects with his senses, neither experiences delight nor repulsion is indeed a devotee of the highest order. (48) He is the foremost devotee of the Lord, who by virtue of his (constant) remembrance of Śrī Harī is never overwhelmed by mundane properties, (viz.,) birth and death, hunger (and thirst), fatigue, fear and ardent longing, which (really) belong to the body, vital air, senses, mind and intellect (and never to the Self). (49) He is undoubtedly the foremost devotee of the Lord, in whose mind the craving for enjoyment, the impulse for action and the seeds of future incarnation (in the shape of virtue and sin) never sprout, and to whom Lord Viṣṇu is the only resort. (50) He is indeed beloved of the Lord, who never identifies himself with this body by virtue of his birth and pursuits, grade in society, race or stage of life. (51) He is the best among the devotees of the Lord, who makes no distinction between his own and that belonging to others in the matter of his possessions and body. He looks upon all created beings with an equal eye and is (always) calm. (52) He is the foremost of the votaries of Lord Viṣṇu, whose memory of the Lord is ever fresh, and who even for the sovereignty of all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) and even for half the time taken by the twinkling of an eye does not turn away from (the adoration of) the Lord's lotus-feet, which are sought after by the gods and others whose mind is fixed on the invincible Lord. (53) Just as with the rising of the moon the heat of the sun disappears, so the fever in the devotee's heart, (once) banished by the cool lustre shed by the gem-like nails of the Lord's feet taking long strides (while dancing with the devotee as during the Rāsa dance) can never appear again. (54) The name of the Lord is such that, even when uttered under constraint or unconsciously, it destroys multitudinous sins. That man is called the best of devotees, whose heart the Lord Himself does not leave as His lotus-feet are fastened by the cord of Love. (55)

Thus ends the second discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

A Description of Māyā and the means of transcending it;
an exposition of Brahma and the Path of Action

राजोवाच

परस्य विष्णोरीशस्य मायिनामपि मोहिनीम् । मायां वेदितुमिच्छामो भगवन्तो ब्रुवन्तु नः । १ ।
नानुत्पये जुषन् युष्मद्वचो हरिकथामृतम् । संसारतापनिस्तप्तो मर्त्यस्तत्तापभेषजम् । २ ।

The king (Nimi) submitted : We wish to know the (true nature of) Māyā (the deluding potency) of the supreme Lord Viṣṇu, which bewilders even those who are adepts in Māyā (conjuring tricks). You revered sirs may (kindly) tell us of it. (1) I am a mortal sore afflicted by the sorrows of the world. Hearing your words narrating the nectar-like story of Śrī Hari, which are the antidote for such afflictions, I do not feel satiated (desire to hear them again and again). (2)

अन्तरिक्ष उवाच

एभिर्भूतानि भूतात्मा महाभूतैर्महाभुज । ससर्जोऽष्टावचान्याद्यः स्वमात्रात्मप्रसिद्धये । ३ ।
एवं सृष्टानि भूतानि प्रविष्टः पञ्चधातुभिः । एकधा दशधाऽऽत्मानं विभजन्नुपते गुणान् । ४ ।
गुणैर्गुणान् स भुञ्जान आत्मप्रद्योतितैः प्रभुः । मन्यमान इदं सृष्टमात्मानमिह सज्जते । ५ ।
कर्माणि कर्मभिः कुर्वन् सनिमित्तानि देहभृत् । तत्तत् कर्मफलं गृह्णन् भ्रमतीह सुखेतरम् । ६ ।
इत्थं कर्मगतींच्छन् बह्वभद्रवहाः पुमान् । आभूतसम्पत्वात् सर्गप्रलयावश्रुतेऽवशः । ७ ।
धातूपप्लव आसन्ने व्यक्तं द्रव्यगुणात्मकम् । अनादिनिधनः कालो ह्यव्यक्तायापकर्षति । ८ ।
शतवर्षा ह्यनावृष्टिर्मविष्यत्युल्बणा भुवि । तत्कालोपचितोष्णाको लोकांस्त्रीन् प्रतपिष्यति । ९ ।
पातालतलमारभ्य सङ्कर्षणमुखानलः । दहनूर्ध्वशिखो विष्णुर्ध्वधते वायुनेरितः । १० ।
सांवर्तको मेघगणो वर्षति स्म शतं समाः । धाराभिर्हिंसितहस्ताभिलीयते सलिले विराट् । ११ ।
ततो विराजमुत्सृज्य वैराजः पुरुषो नृप । अव्यक्तं विशते सूक्ष्मं निरिन्धन इवानलः । १२ ।
वायुना हतगन्था भूः सलिलत्वाय कल्पते । सलिलं तद्भूतरसं ज्योतिष्टयापकल्पते । १३ ।
हतरूपं तु तमसा वायौ ज्योतिः प्रलीयते । हतस्पर्शोऽवकाशेन वायुर्नभसि लीयते । १४ ।
कालात्मना हतगुणं नभ आत्मनि लीयते । इन्द्रियाणि मनो बुद्धिः सह वैकारिकैर्नृप ।

प्रविशन्ति ह्यहङ्कारं स्वगुणैरहमात्मनि । १५ ।

एषा माया भगवतः सर्गस्थित्यन्तकारिणी । त्रिवर्णा वर्णितास्माभिः किं भूयः श्रोतुमिच्छसि । १६ ।

Antarikṣa said : O mighty-armed one, Māyā is that energy by which the most ancient Person, figuring as the Source of (the entire) creation, evolved with the help of these gross elements (all) forms of life, great and small, for the enjoyment and emancipation of embodied souls (His particles). (3) Having thus (for the good of the Jivas) entered (as the Inner Controller of) all forms of life evolved by means of the five gross elements, the Supreme Person splits Himself up (and appears first) as one (in the form of the mind) and (further) into ten (in the form of the ten Indriyas) and makes them (the Jivas) enjoy the (various) pleasures (through them). (4) Enjoying the (various) pleasures of sense by means of the senses illuminated by the (said) Inner Controller, the embodied soul identifies itself with this created body and gets attached to it. (5) Performing with the organs of action actions prompted by interested motives and reaping the agreeable and disagreeable consequences of his varied actions (of past lives), the embodied soul revolves in this whirligig (of mundane life). (6) Thus undergoing (various) forms of existence brought about by his (past) actions and carrying many evils (with them), the soul helplessly goes through (repeated) births and deaths till the final dissolution of creation. (7) When the dissolution of the (five gross) elements is imminent, the Time-Spirit, endless and without beginning, actually draws the manifest universe, consisting of gross and subtle matter, towards the Unmanifest (primordial Matter). (8) (Then) there appears on earth a dreadful drought lasting for a hundred years. The sun with its heat increased by the said Time-Spirit torments the three worlds. (9) A (huge and terrible) fire rising from the (thousand) mouths of Saṅkarṣaṇa (the serpent-god) and, burning everything from the bottom of the subterranean world, shoots up in high flames and, propelled by the wind, spreads in all directions. (10) The host of clouds charged with universal dissolution pour down showers, as thick as the trunk of an elephant, for one hundred years (without pause) with the result that the cosmos is submerged in water. (11) Then, leaving his cosmic body, O protector of men, Brahmā (the cosmic person) gets merged in the Unmanifest (Brahma), just as fire enters its unmanifest state (gets extinguished) when divested of fuel. (12) Denuded of its (distinctive quality) smell by the wind, the earth is reconverted into the state of water; and, deprived by the same of taste, water is reduced to the state of fire. (13) Deprived of (its attribute, viz.,) colour by darkness, fire gets merged into the air; and, deprived of (its quality of) touch by ether, the air merges into the latter (ether, its cause). (14) Deprived of (its quality of) sound by God in the form of the Time-Spirit, ether gets merged into the (Tāmasika) ego. The senses and the intellect, O king, merge in the ego of passion, and the mind with the deities born of the illuminated ego merges into the knowledge of the Self. The ego with its triple modification merges into the Mahat-tattva, which in its turn merges into Prakṛti or the elemental Nature and this (ultimately) merges into Brahma. (15) We have described (for you) the Lord's triple Māyā (comprising of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) which creates, sustains and annihilates (the creation). What else do you desire to hear ? (16)

राजीवाच

यथैतामैश्वरीं मायां दुस्तपमकृतात्मभिः । तस्म्यञ्जः स्थूलधियो महर्ष इदमुच्यताम् । १७ ।

The king (Nimi) submitted : It may (kindly) be pointed out (to me now), O eminent sage, how men looking upon the gross body as their self may easily get over this divine Māyā, (so) difficult to cross for those who have not been able to control their mind. (17)

प्रबुद्ध उवाच

कर्माप्यारभमाणानां दुःखहर्त्य सुखाय च । पश्येत् पाकविपर्यासं मिथुनीचारिणां नृणाम् । १८ ।

नित्यातिदिनं विवर्तेन दुर्लभेनात्ममृत्युना । गृहापत्याप्तपशुभिः का प्रीतिः साधितैश्चलैः । १९ ।

एवं लोकं परं विद्यान्नश्रं कर्मनिर्मितम् । सतुल्यातिशयध्वंसं यथा मण्डलवर्तिनाम् । १० ।
 तस्माद् गुरुं प्रपद्येत जिज्ञासुः श्रेय उत्तमम् । शब्दे परे च निष्णातं ब्रह्मण्युपशमाश्रयम् । ११ ।
 तत्र भागवतान् धर्मान् शिक्षेद् गुवात्सदैवतः । अमाययानुवृत्त्या यैस्तुष्येदात्माऽऽत्मदो हरिः । १२ ।
 सर्वतो मनसोऽसङ्गमादौ सङ्गं च साधुषु । दयां मैत्रीं प्रश्रयं च भूतेषु ब्रह्मा यथोचितम् । १३ ।
 शौचं तपस्तितिक्षां च मौनं स्वाध्यायमार्जवम् । ब्रह्मचर्यमहिंसां च समत्वं द्वन्द्वसंज्ञयोः । १४ ।
 सर्वत्रात्मेष्टरात्वीक्षां कैवल्यमनिकेतताम् । विविक्तचीरवसनं सन्नोषं येन केनचित् । १५ ।
 श्रद्धां भागवते शास्त्रेऽनिन्दामन्यत्र चापि हि । मनोवाक्कर्मदण्डं च सत्यं शमदमावपि । १६ ।
 श्रवणं कीर्तनं ध्यानं हरेर्द्भुतकर्मणः । जन्मकर्मगुणानां च तदर्थेऽखिलचेष्टितम् । १७ ।
 इष्टं दत्तं तपो जप्तं वृत्तं यद्यात्मनः प्रियम् । दारान् सुतान् गृहान् प्राणान् यत् परस्मै निवेदनम् । १८ ।
 एवं कृष्णात्मनाथेषु मनुष्येषु च सौहृदम् । परिचर्यां चोभयत्र महत्सु नृषु साधुषु । १९ ।
 परस्परानुकथनं पावनं भगवद्यशः । मिथो रतिर्मिथस्तुष्टिर्निवृत्तिर्मिथ आत्मनः । २० ।
 स्मरन्तः स्मारयन्तश्च मिथोऽघोघहरं हरिम् । भक्त्या सज्जातया भक्त्या बिभ्रत्युत्पुलकां तनुम् । २१ ।

क्वचिद् रुदन्यच्युतचित्तन्या क्वचिद्भ्रसन्ति नन्दन्ति वदन्यलौकिकाः ।

नृत्यन्ति गायन्त्यनुशीलयन्त्यजं भवन्ति तूष्णीं परमेत्य निर्वृताः । ३२ ।

इति भागवतान् धर्मान् शिक्षन् भक्त्या तदुत्थया । नारायणपरो मायामञ्जस्तरति दुन्तराम् । ३३ ।

Prabuddha replied : One must observe how human beings living in pairs (as husband and wife) striving to gain happiness and remove misery obtain only contrary results. (18) What happiness can be derived from wealth, which is (so) difficult to obtain and can be earned only by means of constantly painful effort and which leads to one's death ? Or, what joy can one get from the possession of houses, children friends or relations and cattle, transient as they are, and the fruit of one's actions ? (19) Similarly one should realize that the heavenly regions are also transient (and full of misery), their attainment being the fruit of one's actions; (and there too as in this world) there is rivalry with the superior ones, mutual discord among the equals and hatred towards those inferior to one's own self and fear of a fall, as there is here among chieftains. (20) Therefore, one desirous of knowing the highest good should resort to a preceptor who is versed in the Vedas (which embody Brahma in the form of words), has realized the ultimate Reality and who is free from attachment and hatred. (21) Under the preceptor, whom one should love as one's own self and as the object of one's devotion, one should, by rendering devoted service to him, learn the ways of life of the Lord's devotees, by which Śrī Hari is pleased—Śrī Hari, who is the Soul of the universe and gives Himself away to His devotees. (22) First the disciple should learn detachment of the mind from all objects (body, children etc.), and attachment to the Lord's devotees. And he should also learn to cherish in all sincerity compassion, friendliness and humility towards one's inferiors, equals and superiors respectively. (23) He should (further) learn (to acquire) purity (external and internal), devotion to his religious duties, endurance, control over his speech, a habit to study the scriptures, sincerity, continence, non-violence and evenness of mind under the stress of dualities (like pleasure and pain, profit and loss). (24) He should learn to see the Ātma (as the intelligent substance) and Īśvara (the Ruling Principle) pervading all, live in solitude, without any sense of possession for any dwelling, wear pure clothing or rags (stitched together) and feel satisfied with whatever he could get for food. (25) He should (also) learn to have faith in the scriptures celebrating the Lord, without disparaging other scriptures, and curb his mind, speech and actions (through control of breath, tongue and activity respectively), and to be truthful and able to control the senses and mind. (26) He should learn to hear, sing and dwell on the story of the advent, pastimes and excellences of Lord Śrī Hari of wonderful deeds and to do everything for (pleasing) Him. (27) He should (further) learn to offer to the supreme Lord all his sacrificial activities, gifts, austerities, repetition of the sacred syllables, righteous conduct, and all that he likes for himself, (nay,) his wife, children, house and his very life. (28) He should also learn to love devotedly those persons who have realized Śrī Kṛṣṇa as their own Self and as the Lord of their life; to serve the mobile and immobile creatures (as the embodiments of the Lord); and (specially) to serve human beings and among them more specially those who adhere to their own duty and are devotees of the Lord. (29) He should (further) learn to expound and discuss among the devotees the sacred glory of the Lord, and in association with others find delight and satisfaction resulting in the freedom of the mind from egotism. (30) (Thus) remembering and reminding one another of Śrī Hari, who destroys innumerable sins (in an instant), their devotion turning into divine love, the devotees filled with rapture experience a thrill of joy. (31) Sometimes they weep due to the anguish of separation from Śrī Hari, sometimes they laugh and rejoice and address Him (as if He were present by their side), indulge (joyfully) in dancing and singing, and sometimes thinking of the birthless Lord feel that they have reached the Supreme Person, and (thereby) become peaceful and silent. In this way their behaviour becomes altogether unconventional. (32) Thus learning (and following) the ways of life of the Lord's devotees and devoted to Him, his devotion developing into divine love, the devotee easily crosses the unfathomable Māyā. (33)

राजोवाच

नारायणाभिधानस्य ब्रह्मणः परमात्मनः । निष्ठामर्ह्यथ नो वक्तुं यूयं हि ब्रह्मवित्तामः । ३४ ।

The king (Nimi) said : O sages, since you are foremost among those who have realized Brahma (the Ultimate Reality), pray, explain to us the real nature of Paramātmā or Brahma, who is called by the name of Nārāyaṇa. (34)

पिप्पलायन उवाच

स्थित्युद्भवप्रलयहेतुरहेतुरस्य यत् स्वप्नजागरसुषुप्तिषु सद् बहिश्च ।
देहेन्द्रियासुहृदयानि चरन्ति येन सञ्जीवितानि तदवेहि परं नरेन्द्र । ३५ ।
नैतन्मनो विशति वागुत चक्षुरात्मा प्राणेन्द्रियाणि च यथानलमर्विषः स्वाः ।
शब्दोऽपि बोधकनिषेधतयाऽऽत्ममूलमर्थोक्तमाह यदृते न निषेधसिद्धिः । ३६ ।
सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति त्रिवृदेकमादौ सूत्रं महानहमिति प्रवदन्ति जीवम् ।
ज्ञानक्रियार्थफलरूपतयोरुशक्तिं ब्रह्मैव भाति सदसच्च तयोः परं यत् । ३७ ।
नात्मा जजान न मरिष्यति नैधत्तेऽसौ न क्षीयते सवनविद् व्यभिचारिणां हि ।
सर्वत्र शश्वदनपाय्युपलब्धमात्रं प्राणो यथेन्द्रियबलेन विकल्पितं सत् । ३८ ।
अण्डेषु पेशिषु तरुषु विनिश्चितेषु प्राणो हि जीवमुपधावति तत्र तत्र ।
सत्रे यदिन्द्रियगणेऽहमि च प्रसुप्ते कूटस्थ आशयमृते तदनुस्मृतिर्न । ३९ ।
यद्वाब्जनाभचरणौषणयोरुभक्त्या चेतोमलानि विधमेद गुणकर्मजानि ।
तस्मिन् विशुद्ध उपलभ्यत आत्मतत्त्वं साक्षाद् यथामलदृशोः सवितृप्रकाशः । ४० ।

Pippalāyana said : O ruler of men, know that to be the supreme Reality, which is responsible for the creation, sustenance and dissolution of this universe; and itself has no cause of its own; and that which exists in (all the three states of consciousness—) waking life, dream and deep sleep, as well as in the supra-conscious state. (beyond the aforesaid three states), and animated by which the body, senses, breath and the inner mind (exist and) perform their functions. (35) Just as sparks cannot illumine, much less burn, fire (which is their origin), the mind, speech, eye, intellect, life-breath and senses cannot grasp or reach the ultimate Reality. The revealed word (Veda) too makes no positive assertion about Its though it is the (only) authority for Its existence. By denying itself the power to describe It, it speaks of It (merely) by import (inference). No negative description (however) would be possible if there were no Reality. (36) That which was one before creation became known as Pradhāna (or Prakṛti) of triple nature, consisting of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas. Then by its active power it became known as the Sūtrātma and by its power of understanding it became known as the Mahat-tattva. (Again,) as a condition investing the Jiva or individual soul it became known as Ahaṅkāra (the ego). The incomprehensible Brahma alone shines as the deities presiding over the senses, the senses and the objects of senses and the experience of pleasure and pain. The (gross) effect and the (subtle) cause are all Brahma, because It is the Cause of both. (37) This Ātmā (Brahma) was never born and will never die, It neither grows nor undergoes decay, because It is the witness of the different states of those objects which come into existence and die away. It is omnipresent and eternally abiding pure consciousness; yet like Prāṇa (life-breath) It appears as many under the influence of the senses. (38) The vital air, as a matter of fact, follows everywhere the Jiva, whether born of egg, womb, sweat or sprung out of soil, and itself remains unchanged in the different bodies. (Even so) the Ātmā too remains unaffected (in the state of sound sleep) when the senses are oblivious and also when the ego is dormant, i.e., the subtle body has become functionless. (Its continuity even at that time is proved by the fact that) we remember the Ātmā (on waking as the witness of the enjoyment of sound sleep). (39) Just as the light of the sun shines to clear eyes, so the truth of the Self is directly revealed to the pure heart of the man who is earnestly devoted to the Lord and intensely desires to obtain His holy feet, and has thus freed his mind from the impurities born of qualities and actions. (40)

राजोवाच

कर्मयोगं वदत नः पुरुषो येन संस्कृतः । विधूयेद्वाशु कर्माणि नैष्कर्म्यं विन्दते परम् । ४१ ।

एवं प्रश्नमपीन् पूर्वमपृच्छं पितुरन्तिके । नाब्रुवन् ब्रह्मणः पुत्रास्तत्र कारणमुच्यताम् । ४२ ।

The king submitted : (Pray) describe for us that Yoga of action through which man in his present life soon destroys his Karma and, thus purified, attains that supreme knowledge which follows dissociation from all actions. (41) Formerly, in the presence of my father (Ikṣvāku) I put this question to the Ṛṣis (Sanat Kumāra etc.); but those Ṛṣis (sons of Brahma) did not answer it. (Pray,) tell me why they did not reply. (42)

आविर्होत्र उवाच

कर्माकर्मविकर्मैति वेदवादो न लौकिकः । वेदस्य चेष्टरात्मत्वात् तत्र भुङ्क्षति सूरयः । ४३ ।

परोक्षवादो वेदोऽयं बालानामनुशासनम् । कर्ममोक्षाय कर्माणि विधत्ते ह्यगद यथा । ४४ ।

नाचरेद् यस्तु वेदोक्तं स्वयमज्ञोऽजितेन्द्रियः । विकर्मणा ह्यधर्मेण मृत्योर्मुक्त्युमुषैति सः । ४५ ।

वेदोक्तमेव कुर्वाणो निःसङ्गोऽर्पितमीश्वरे । नैष्कर्म्या लभते सिद्धिं रोचनार्था फलश्रुतिः । ४६ ।

Āvirhotra said : Actions enjoined by the scriptures, prohibitions as opposed to the former and transgressions of the prescribed ones are to be known only from the Vedas and are not (mere) secular affairs; and as the Vedas are the revelations of God, (even) the learned get confused in distinguishing the three kinds of actions. (If the Ṛṣis did not reply to your question, obviously the reason was that at that time you were a mere lad and would not have understood the answer.) (43) The Veda has a deeper import than what the words apparently convey. The real purpose of the Veda is to secure exemption from actions and their fruit but (obviously) temptations of gaining heaven through prescribed actions are held out to the ignorant, just as a boy is tempted with sweets to swallow a (bitter) medicine. (44) One who is himself ignorant and has no control over one's senses and fails to perform actions enjoined by the Vedas commits the sin of dereliction and passes from one death to another (that is, remains involved in the cycle of births and deaths). (45) One who performs only actions prescribed by the Vedas, without attachment to their fruits and surrendering them to the Lord, attains to that ultimate fulfilment, which means that knowledge which proceeds from freedom from actions. The promise of fruits (as mentioned in the Vedas) is meant only to create interest in actions (The prescribed actions and their fruits are described really for getting ultimately freedom from actions). (46)

य आशु हृदयग्रन्थिं निर्जिहीषुः परात्मानं । विधिनोपचरेद् देवं तन्त्रोक्तेन च केशवम् । ४७ ।

लब्धानुग्रह आचार्यात् तेन सन्दर्शितागमः । महापुरुषमध्यर्चयेन्मूर्त्याभिमतयाऽऽत्मनः । ४८ ।

शुचिः सम्मुखमासीनः प्राणसंयमनादिभिः । पिण्डं विशोध्य संन्यासकृतश्लोचयेद्धरिम् । ४९ ।

अर्चादीं हृदये चापि यथालब्धोपचारकैः । द्रव्यक्षित्यात्मलिङ्गानि निष्पाद्य प्रोक्ष्य चासनम् । ५० ।

पाद्यादीनुपकल्याण सन्निधाप्य समाहितः । हृदादिभिः कृतन्यासो मूलमन्त्रेण चार्चयेत् । ५१ ।

साङ्गोपाङ्गं सपार्षदां तां तां मूर्तिं स्वमन्त्रतः । पाद्यार्घ्याचमनीयाद्यैः स्नानवासोविभूषणैः । ५२ ।

गन्धमाल्याक्षतस्त्रिभूर्धूपदीपोपहारकैः । साङ्गं सम्पूज्य विधिवत् सत्तैः स्तुत्वा नमेद्धरिम् । ५३ ।

आत्मानं तन्मयं ध्यायन् मूर्तिं सम्पूजयेद्धरेः । शेषामाधाय शिरसि स्वधाम्प्युद्वास्य सकृत्तपः । ५४ ।

एवमन्यर्कतोयादावतिथौ हृदये च यः । यज्ञतीश्चरमात्मानमचिरामुच्यते हि सः । ५५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पागमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे तृतीयोऽध्यायः । ३ ।

Whoever wishes to snap quickly the knot of heart (viz., egotism—the sense of I and mine—and mistaking the body for the soul) in the soul, who is no other than the Supreme, should with Vedic rites, accompanied by Tantric rites, worship Lord Keśava. (47) One who has obtained initiation (in the sacred texts) through the grace of a preceptor, and has learnt from him the mode of worship should worship the Lord in the image of his choice. (48) He should observe cleanliness and then, sitting in front of the image, purify his body by controlling his breath and other practices and fortify himself by duly assigning the various parts of the body to different deities and worship the Lord. (49) First he should purify the articles of worship (flowers etc., by removing insects and so on), the earth (by sweeping it), his own self (through calmness) and the image (by removing the coating of sandal-paste etc.), and thus make them fit for worship. Then he should sprinkle water on his seat, keep ready water for washing the hands and feet etc., of the Deity with and other articles. Then with a concentrated mind (he should) invoke the Deity (in the image) and, having installed the Deity in his heart and other parts of the body, adore the Lord, with the available articles of worship, in the image etc., or in the heart chanting the fundamental sacred formula or Mantra. (50-51) He should worship the image of the Deity including His (various) limbs as well as the emblems He wears (e. g., the discus Sudarśana etc.), and His retinue (Sunanda and others), repeating the sacred syllables pertaining to that Deity, offering water for washing His hands and feet and rinsing His mouth, and so on, bathing the image, robing and decorating It with ornaments, offering Him sandal-paste, flowers, unbroken grains of rice (for adorning His forehead with), garland, incense, light and food. Thus worshipping the Lord with His entourage well according to the prescribed rites, the devotee should sing hymns in praise of Lord Śrī Hari and prostrate himself (before the image). (52-53) One should duly worship the image of Śrī Hari while thinking himself as permeated by the Lord; and then, placing the holy relic (offered flowers etc.), on his own head, (finish the worship and) deposit the worshipped image at its place and the Lord in his heart. (54) He who thus worships the Lord, the Universal Soul, in the fire, the sun, water etc., or in his guest or his own heart surely gets liberated very soon. (55)

Thus ends the third discourse, in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

A description of the Lord's Descents

राजोवाच

यानि यानीह कर्माणि यैर्यैः स्वच्छन्दजन्मभिः । चक्रे करोति कर्ता वा हस्तिनानि ब्रुवन्तु नः । १ ।

King Nimi said : Pray, narrate to us those various deeds which Śrī Hari performed in this world during His different incarnations, assumed according to His free will and tell us those deeds also which He is performing now or will perform (in future). (1)

द्रुमिल उवाच

यो वा अनन्तस्य गुणाननन्ताननुक्रमिष्यन् स तु बालबुद्धिः ।
 रजांसि भूमेर्गणयेत् कथञ्चित् कालेन नैवाखिलशक्तिधाम्नः । २ ।
 भूतैर्यदा पञ्चभिरात्मसृष्टैः पुरे विराजं विरचय्य तस्मिन् ।
 स्वांशेन विष्टः पुरुषाभिधानमवाप नारायण आदिदेवः । ३ ।
 यत्काय एष भुवनत्रयसन्निवेशो यस्येन्द्रियैस्तनुभूतामुभयेन्द्रियाणि ।
 ज्ञानं स्वतः श्वसनतो बलभोज ईहा सत्त्वादिभिः स्थितिलयोद्धव आदिकर्ता । ४ ।
 आदावभूच्छतधृती रजसास्य सर्गे विष्णुः स्थितौ क्रतुपतिर्द्विजधर्मसेतुः ।
 रुद्रेऽप्ययथा तमसा पुरुषः स आद्य इत्युद्धवस्थितिलयाः सततं प्रजासु । ५ ।

The sage Drumila said : He who seeks (completely) to count the endless qualities of the infinite Lord is really a person of puerile understanding. One may (possibly) count anyhow in course of time the particles of dust on earth, but in no case the excellences of the omnipotent Lord. (2) When Lord Nārāyaṇa the first and foremost Deity, created, with the five primary elements evolved by Himself, the universe as His body and entered into it by a part of His (as Its Inner Controller), then He acquired the name of Puruṣa. (3) The three worlds constitute His body; through His organs come into being the twofold organs (of action and knowledge) of all creatures, and by Himself He is Consciousness; His breath is the source of the bodily and organic strength and activity of the world; through Sattva and other qualities (Rajas and Tamas) He is the first author responsible for the creation, subsistence and destruction of universe. (4) United with Rajas, that most ancient Person appeared in the beginning as Brahmā for the creation of this universe; in association with the quality of Sattva the same Lord appeared as God Viṣṇu for the continuity of the universe and for the maintenance of Dharma among the twice-born and for giving the fruit of sacrifices; endowed with Tamas He appeared as Rudra for the destruction of the universe. Through these (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra) proceed the creation, preservation and destruction of the creatures in each Kalpa. (5)

धर्मस्य दक्षदुहितर्यजनिष्ठं मूर्त्या नारायणो नर ऋषिप्रवरः प्रशान्तः ।

नेष्कर्ण्यलक्षणमुवाच चचार कर्म योऽद्यापि चास्त ऋषिवर्यनिषेविताङ्घ्रिः । ६ ।

इन्द्रो विशङ्क्य मम धाम जिघृक्षतीति कामं न्ययुङ्क्त सगणं स बद्र्युपाख्यम् ।

गत्वप्सरोगणवसन्तसुमन्दवातैः स्त्रीप्रेक्षणेषुभिरविध्यदन्त्यहिज्ञः । ७ ।

विज्ञाय शक्रकृतमक्रममादिदेवः प्राह प्रहस्य गतविस्मय एजमानान् ।

मा भैष्ट भो मदन मास्त देववध्वो गृहीत नो बलिमशून्यमिमं कुरुध्वम् । ८ ।

He was born as the foremost of the Ṛṣis, possessed of perfect tranquillity, viz., Nārāyaṇa and Nara, of Mūrti, daughter of Dakṣa and wife of Dharma. They preached that kind of action (viz., worship of the Lord) which leads to the knowledge of the Self and themselves practised it. Their feet are worshipped by the best of Ṛṣis and even today They (Nara-Nārāyaṇa) are performing that (very) action. (6) Suspecting that the sage (Nārāyaṇa) desired to take possession of his domain (heaven), Indra sent Kāmadeva (the god of love) with his attendants to Badarikāśrama (which owed its name to its grove of jujube trees). Kāmadeva did not know His prowess and he went there with a bevy of celestial nymphs, soft breezes and the spring season, and tried to disturb His mind with the arrow-like amorous glances of the women. (7) Nārāyaṇa, knowing that Indra had done that misdeed, loudly laughed and without astonishment or haughtiness said to the trembling visitors, "O (powerful) Kāmadeva, O wind-god and celestial damsels ! do not be afraid. Accept our hospitality and fill this hermitage by your presence." (8)

इत्थं ब्रुवत्यभयदे नरदेव देवाः सत्रीडनप्रशिरसः सपुणं तमुचुः ।

नेतद् विभो त्वयि परेऽविकृते विचित्रं स्वारामधीनिकरानतपादपये । ९ ।

त्वां सेवतां सुरकृता बहवोऽन्तरायाः स्त्रीकौ विलङ्घ्य परमं व्रजतां पदं ते ।

नान्यस्य बर्हिषि बलीन् ददतः स्वभागान् धत्ते पदं त्वमविता यदि विप्रमूर्ध्नि । १० ।

क्षुत्तृत्रिकालगुणपास्तजैह्व्यशैश्यानस्मानपारजलधीनतितीर्य केचित् ।

क्रोधस्य यान्ति विफलस्य वशं पदे गोर्मज्जन्ति दुश्चरतपश्च वृथोत्सृजन्ति । ११ ।

इति प्रगुणतां तेषां स्त्रियोऽप्यद्भुतदर्शनाः । दर्शयामास शश्रूषां स्वचिताः कुर्वतीविभुः । १२ ।

ते देवानुचरा दृष्ट्वा स्त्रियः श्रीरिव रूपिणीः । गन्धेन मुमुहुस्तासां रूपोदायंहतश्रियः । १३ ।

तानाह देवदेवेशः प्रणतान् प्रहसन्निव । आसामेकतपां वृद्ध्वं सवर्णां स्वर्गभूषणाम् । १४ ।

ओमित्योदेशमादाय नत्वा तं सुरबन्दिनः । उर्वशीमप्सरःश्रेष्ठां पुरस्कृत्य दिवं ययुः । १५ ।

इन्द्रायानम्य सदसि शृण्वतां त्रिदिवौकसाम् । ऊर्चुनारायणबलं शक्रस्तत्रास विस्मितः । १६ ।

Oking ! when Nārāyaṇa made them fearless and spoke thus, (Kāmadeva and) the (other) gods bent their heads with shame, and said to the merciful Lord, "If You remained unaffected (by the attacks of Kāmadeva) it is no matter for surprise, as You are beyond Māyā and subject to no change. Your lotus-feet are adored by hosts of sages who have conquered their senses and revel in the Self. (9) When persons worshipping You transcend the region of the gods and rise to Your supreme Abode, deities put many obstacles in their path. But the other one is not (so) obstructed—he who offers to the deities their shares in the form of oblations into the sacred fire. (Yet,) You being the Protector, the devotee tumbles over all obstacles. (10)

Some people get over us in the guise of hunger and thirst, cold, heat and rain (the distinguishing features of the cold and the hot weather and the rains), control the air, the palate and the sexual urge, which are (so) difficult to cross like endless oceans; but they fall victims to futile anger and thus render useless their hard austerities. They are like persons who having crossed oceans get drowned in the hollow caused by a cow's hoof." (11) When Kāmadeva, Spring etc., thus praised Him, the almighty Nārāyaṇa (produced and) displayed women of wonderful beauty, fully adorned (with ornaments), waiting upon Himself (And thus the pride of Kāmadeva and his retinue was humbled). (12) Those attendants of Indra saw these women, as beautiful as Goddess Lakṣmī, and got enchanted by the fragrance of their bodies; they found their own beauty faint when compared with their surpassing beauty. (13) Lord Nārāyaṇa laughingly told the humbled Kāmadeva and others that they might choose from among those women one like themselves who would be an ornament to heaven. (14) Obeying this command with the word "Amen!" Indra's attendants offered their respects to Nārāyaṇa and choosing Urvaśī, the best of those celestial damsels, returned to heaven following her. (15) They bowed to Indra in the court of the gods, and described to them, eager to hear, the prowess of Nārāyaṇa, hearing which Indra was astonished and got dismayed. (16)

हंसस्वरूप्यवदद्व्युत आत्मयोगं दत्तः कुमार ऋषभो भगवान् पिता नः ।
 विष्णुः शिवाय जगतां कलयावतीर्णस्तेनाहता मधुभिदा श्रुतयो हयास्ये ।१७।
 गुणोऽप्यये मनुर्लौघधयश्च मात्स्ये क्रौडे हनो दितिज उद्धरताम्भसः क्षमाय ।
 कौर्मे धृतोऽद्रिरमृतोन्मथने स्वपृष्ठे ग्राहात् प्रपन्नमिभराजममुञ्चदार्तम् ।१८।
 संस्तुन्वतोऽग्निप्रपिताञ्जलमणानृषींश्च शक्रं च वृत्रवधतस्तमसि प्रविष्टम् ।
 देवस्त्रियोऽसुरगृहे पिहिता अनाथा जघ्रेऽसुरेन्द्रमथयाय सतां नृसिंहे ।१९।
 देवासुरे युधि च दैत्यपतीन् सुरार्थं हत्वान्तरेषु भुवनान्यदधात् कलाभिः ।
 भूत्वाथ वामन इमामहरद् बलेः क्षमां याच्ञाच्छलेन समदाददितेः सुतेभ्यः ।२०।
 निःक्षत्रियामकृत गां च त्रिःसप्तकृत्वो रामस्तु हैहयकुलाप्ययभार्गवाग्निः ।
 सोऽग्निं बब्रूय दशवक्त्रमहन् सलङ्कं सीतापतिर्जयति लोकमलघ्नकीर्तिः ।२१।
 भूमेर्भरावतरणाय यदुष्टजन्मा जातः कश्चिद्यति सुरैरपि दुष्कराणि ।
 वार्दैर्विमोहयति यज्ञकृतोऽतदर्हान् शूद्रान् कलौ क्षितिभुजो न्यहनिष्यदत्ते ।२२।
 एवंविधानि कर्माणि जन्मानि च जगत्पतेः । भूरीणि भूग्नयशसो वर्णितानि महाभुज ।२३।

इति श्रीमद्भागवतं महापुराणं पारमहंस्यो मेरिनायामेकादशस्कन्धे चतुर्थाध्यायः । ४।

Appearing for the good of the worlds in (varying) digits as the divine Swan, Lord Dattatreya, the sages Sanaka, Sanandana, Sanātana and Sanatkumāra, and our father, Lord Rṣabha, the immortal Lord Viṣṇu Himself taught the knowledge of the Self. In the form of Hayagrīva He killed (the demon) Madhu and recovered the Vedas (from him). (17) In His descent in the form of the divine Fish the Lord rescued at the time of universal dissolution the Manu (named Satyavratā) and protected the earth as well as (the seeds of) the (different) foodgrains. Lifting the earth from (the bottom of) the ocean in His descent as the divine Boar, He killed the demon (Hiranyākṣa). In the form of the divine Tortoise, He supported the mountain (called Mandara) on His back when the ocean was being churned for nectar, and rescued the distressed king of elephants from (the jaws of) the alligator when the former sought Him (for protection). (18) The Lord rescued the Rsis (known as the Vālakhilyas) who (being of the size of a thumb and) having grown weak through austerities had fallen into a pit (as though into the sea) and had been duly praising Him. (Similarly) He saved Indra, who had incurred the sin of Brahmanicide by having killed Vṛtra (a Brāhmaṇa by birth), and further rescued helpless celestial women who stood imprisoned in the houses of Asuras. And during His descent as the Man-Lion (Lord Narasimha) He killed Hiranyakaśipu (the ruler of the Asuras) in order to rid His devotees (like Prahlāda) of fear. (19) And in the war between the gods and demons He killed the demon chiefs for the sake of the gods, and in different Manvantaras through (different) part manifestations protected the worlds. Assuming the form of the divine Dwarf (Vāmana) He obtained on the pretext of asking for alms the earth from Bali and gave it to the gods (the sons of Aditi). (20) Descending as Paraśurāma, the fire born of the Bhārgava race for the destruction of the Haihayas, He swept the Kṣatriyas off the surface of the earth thrice seven times. And (in His descent) as Śrī Rāma (the Spouse of Sītā) He bridged the ocean and killed the ten-headed demon (Rāvaṇa) and destroyed (his capital) Laṅkā. He is (always) victorious everywhere and His fame destroys the sins of the people. (21) Though birthless, the Lord will appear in the race of Yadu in order to remove the burden of the earth, and perform deeds which cannot easily be accomplished even by the gods. (Then appearing as Lord Buddha) He will bewilder (and confuse) by His arguments those who perform sacrificial rites though unqualified for them. And (appearing as Kalki) at the end of the Kali age, He will destroy the Sūdra kings. (22) O king of mighty arms ! many such descents and deeds of the Lord of the universe, of immense glory have been recounted (by the wise). (23)

Thus ends the fourth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

The Fate of non-devotees; different methods of the Lord's worship according to the different Yugas

राजोवाच

भगवन्तं हरिं प्राप्यो न भजन्त्यात्मवित्तपाः । तेषामशान्तकामानां का निष्ठाविजितात्मनाम् । १ ।

The king (Nimi) submitted : O jewels among those (sages) who have realized the Self ! what will be the fate of those who do not generally adore Lord Śrī Hari and whose desires have not been satiated and whose mind and senses are (yet) uncontrolled ? (1)

चमस उवाच

मुखबाहूभयादेभ्यः पुम्यस्याश्रमैः सह । चत्वारो जज्ञिरे वर्णा गुणैर्विप्रादयः पृथक् । २ ।

य एषां पुम्यं साक्षादात्मप्रभवमीश्वरम् । न भजन्यवजानन्ति स्थानाद्भ्रष्टाः पतन्त्यधः । ३ ।

दूरेहरिकथाः केचिद् दूरेचाच्युतकीर्तनाः । स्त्रियः शूद्रादयश्चैव तेऽनुकम्पया भवादृशाम् । ४ ।

विप्रो राजन्यवैश्यौ च हरेः प्राप्ताः पदान्तिकम् । श्रौतेन जन्मनाथापि मुह्यन्त्याप्रायवादिनः । ५ ।

कर्मण्यकोविदाः स्रब्धा मूर्खाः पण्डितमानिनः । वदन्ति चाटुकान् मूढा यया माध्व्या गिरोत्सुकाः । ६ ।

रजसा घोरसङ्कल्पा कामुका अहिमन्यवः । दाम्बिका मानिनः पापा विहसन्त्यच्युतप्रियान् । ७ ।

वदन्ति तेऽन्योन्यमुपासितस्त्रियो गृहेषु मैथुन्यपरेषु चाशिषः ।

यजन्त्यमुष्टान्नविधानदक्षिणं वृत्त्यै परं भ्रन्ति पशुनतद्विदः । ८ । permitting sexual commerce with one's wedded wife, meat-eating at the end of an animal sacrifice, drinking of wine during a Sautrāmaṇi sacrifice (in the case of those who are addicted to these); the (real) intention (of the Śāstra) is to turn man away from them. (11) The only fruit (proper use) of wealth is Dharma or piety which gives knowledge and direct realization and forthwith leads to supreme peace or Liberation. Those who use wealth (solely) for their own comfort or of their family forget death, the formidable enemy of their body. (12) They do not understand the pure essence of their religion. Only the smelling of wine is sanctioned (in a Sautrāmaṇi sacrifice) and animal sacrifice is allowed for the adoration of the deities and it is not permissible to kill them for meat. Similarly, sexual relation with one's wife is allowed with the motive of getting an issue and not for the sake of enjoyment. (13) Those who are ignorant of this real Dharma and, though wicked and haughty, account themselves virtuous kill animals without any feeling of remorse or fear of punishment, and are devoured by those very animals in their next birth. (14) Those who hate others, in whom also dwells the same Self or Hari, hate Hari Himself and, being deeply attached to their mortal body and other relations, fall into hell. (15) Those who have not attained the knowledge of real truth but have passed the stage of utter ignorance, and are attached to the threefold objects of existence (Dharma, Artha and Kāma), but have no time to pursue the path (of Liberation) are sure to bring about their ruin. (16) They kill their own self, and, being devoid of peace of mind, regard ignorance as knowledge (confuse action for knowledge). They do not experience fulfilment and, being frustrated in their aims and thwarted by the Time-Spirit, become miserable. (17) Those who are averse to the Lord are obliged against their will to forsake their home, wealth, children and friends, gained with great difficulty, and enter the dark hell. (18)

राजोवाच

कस्मिन् काले स भगवान् किं वर्णः कीदृशो नृभिः । नाम्ना वा केन विधिना पूज्यते तदिहोच्यताम् । १९ ।

The king (Nimi) submitted : Pray, tell us now in which ages, assuming what forms and colours and by what names the Lord is known, and by what prescribed rites He is worshipped by men. (19)

करभाजन उवाच

कृतं त्रेता द्वापरं च कलिरित्येषु केशवः । नानावर्णाभिधाकारो नानैव विधिनेज्यते । २० ।
कृते शुक्लशतुर्बाहुर्जटिलो वल्कलाभ्यः । कुष्णाजिनोपवीताक्षान् बिभ्रद् दण्डकमण्डलू । २१ ।
मनुष्यास्तु तदा शान्ता निर्वैराः सुहृदः समाः । यजन्ति तपसा देवं शमेन च दमेन च । २२ ।
हंसः सुपर्णो वैकुण्ठो धर्मो योगेश्वरोऽमलः । ईश्वरः पुरुषोऽप्यक्तः परमात्मेति गीयते । २३ ।
त्रेतायां रक्तवर्णोऽसौ चतुर्बाहुस्त्रिमखिलः । हिरण्यकेशश्चन्द्रात्मा सुखस्तुवाद्युपलक्षणः । २४ ।
तं तदा मनुजा देवं सर्वदेवमयं हरिम् । यजन्ति विद्यया त्रया धर्मिष्ठा ब्रह्मवादिनः । २५ ।
विष्णुर्वज्रः पृश्निगर्भः सर्वदेव उरुक्रमः । वृषाकपिर्जयन्तश्च उरुगाय इतीर्यते । २६ ।
द्वापरे भगवाञ्छ्यामः पीतवासो निजायुधः । श्रीवत्सादिभिरङ्कैश्च लक्षणैरुपलक्षितः । २७ ।
तं तदा पुरुषं मर्त्या महाराजोपलक्षणम् । यजन्ति वेदतन्त्राभ्यां परं जिज्ञासवो नृप । २८ ।
नमस्ते वासुदेवाय नमः सङ्कर्षणाय च । प्रद्युम्नायानिरुद्धाय तुभ्यं भगवते नमः । २९ ।
नारायणाय ऋषये पुरुषाय महात्मने । विश्वेश्वराय विश्वाय सर्वभूतात्मने नमः । ३० ।
इति द्वार उर्वीश स्तुवन्ति जगदीश्वरम् । नानातन्त्रविधानेन कलावपि यथा शृणु । ३१ ।

The sage Karabhājana replied : Lord Keśava in the ages of Satya, Tretā, Dwāpara an-

Kali assumes different colours, names and forms and is worshipped in different modes. (20) In the Satya age the Lord is of white complexion, has four arms, wears matted locks and is clad in barks and deerskin. He puts on the sacred thread and carries a rosary of Rudrākṣa and a staff and a Kamaṇḍalu (water-pot made of wild cocoanut shell). (21) In that age men have as a matter of fact a calm mind, entertain no feeling of animosity towards anybody and are friendly towards all creatures; they look upon all with an equal eye. They propitiate the Lord by their Tapas (in the form of contemplation) and by their control of mind and the senses. (22) (In the Satya age) the Lord is called by the names of Haṁsa, Suparna, Vaikuṇṭha, Dharma, Yogeśvara, Amala, Īśvara, Puruṣa, Avyakta and Paramātmā. (23) In the age of Tretā the Lord is of crimson hue; He has four arms, wears a triple cord about His loins and has golden locks. He appears in the form of sacrifices as described in the three Vedas and wields on His person a Sruk, Sruvā (ladies for pouring ghee into the sacred fire) and other accessories used in the performance of sacrifices. (24) In that age pious men who are teachers of the Vedas worship through the Vedic lore Lord Śrī Hari as an embodiment of all the deities. (25) (In that age of Tretā) He is called by the names of Viṣṇu, Yajña, Prśnigarbha, Sarvadeva, Urukrama, Vṛṣākapi, Jayanta and Urugāya. (26) In the Dvāpara age the Lord is of a dark brown complexion, remains clad in yellow silk, wields (in His arms) His own weapons and emblems (viz., the conch, discus, mace and lotus), wears the Kaustubha gem and is distinguished by the marks of Śrīvatsa (a curl of white hair on the right side of His bosom) etc. (27) In that age, O king, men seeking to know the ultimate Reality worship the Supreme Person, who is characterized by the regalia proper to a monarch (such as the umbrella, fly-whisk etc.), as indicated in the Vedas and the Tantras. (28) Hail to You, Vāsudeva; hail to Saṅkarṣaṇa and hail to You, the almighty Lord, as Pradyumna and Anirudha ! (29) Hail to the sage Nārāyaṇa, the almighty, all-pervading, all-embodying Ruler of the universe, dwelling in the heart of all. (30) O king, it is thus that people adore and praise the Lord of the universe in the Dvāpara age. (Now) hear how they worship Him with various rituals prescribed by the Tantras during the Kali age. (31)

कृष्णवर्णं त्रिषाकृष्णं साङ्गोपाङ्गास्त्रपार्षदम् । यज्ञैः सङ्कीर्तनप्रायेर्यजन्ति हि सुमेधसः । ३२ ।

ध्येयं सदा परिभवघ्नमभीष्टदोहं तीर्थास्पदं शिवविरिञ्चिनुतं शरण्यम् ।

भृत्यार्तिहं प्रणतपाल भवाब्धिपोतं वन्दे महापुरुष ते चरणारविन्दम् । ३३ ।

त्यक्त्वा सुदुस्सजसुरेप्सितराज्यलक्ष्मीं धर्मिष्ठ आर्यवचसा यदगादरण्यम् ।

मायामृगं दयितयेप्सितमन्वधावद् वन्दे महापुरुष ते चरणारविन्दम् । ३४ ।

It is well-known that (in this age) wise men worship, through sacrifices mostly consisting of chanting the names of the Lord and singing His praises, the Lord who is of a dark colour, though bright by lustre, perfect in all limbs, adorned with ornaments, furnished with His weapons and waited upon by His attendants. (32) O the most exalted person, O the Protector of devotees, I bow to Your lotus-feet which are worthy of being constantly meditated upon, put an end to all discomfiture, yield all desired boons, which are the focus of all sacred places, are extolled by Śiva and Brahmā, afford shelter to all and dispel the distress of devotees and which serve as a bark for crossing the ocean of mundane existence. (33) O the most exalted and righteous Person, I bow to Thy lotus-feet, which ran after the illusory deer sought after by Thy beloved one (Sītā). You resigned the royal fortune—which was coveted by the gods and was most difficult to forsake—(merely) at the word of your father and went away (in exile) to the forest. (34)

एवं युगानुरूपाभ्यां भगवान् युगवर्तिभिः । मनुजैर्गज्यते राजन् श्रेयसामीश्वरो हरिः । ३५ ।

कलिं सभाजयन्त्यार्या गुणज्ञाः सारभागिनः । यत्र सङ्कीर्तनेनैव सर्वः स्वार्थोऽभिलष्यते । ३६ ।

न ह्यतः परमो लाभो देहिनां भ्राय्यतामिह । यतो विन्दते परमां शान्तिं नश्यति संसृतिः । ३७ ।
 कृतादिषु प्रजा राजन् कलाविच्छन्ति सम्भवम् । कलौ खलु भविष्यन्ति नारायणपरायणाः । ३८ ।
 क्वचित् क्वचिन्महाराज द्रविडेषु च भूरिशः । ताम्रपर्णी नदी यत्र कृतमाला पयस्विनी । ३९ ।
 कावेरी च महापुण्या प्रतीची च महानदी । ये पिबन्ति जलं तासां मनुजा मनुजेश्वर ।
 प्रायो भक्ता भगवति वासुदेवेऽमलाशयाः । ४० ।

देवर्षिभूताम्रनृणां पितॄणां न किङ्करो नायमृणी च राजन् ।
 सर्वात्मना यः शरणं शरण्यं गतो मुकुन्दं परिहृत्य कर्तम् । ४१ ।
 स्वपादमूलं भजतः प्रियस्य त्यक्तान्यभावस्य हरिः परेशः ।
 विकर्म यद्योत्पतितं कथञ्चिद् धुनोति सर्वं हृदि सन्निविष्टः । ४२ ।

Thus, O king, Lord Śrī Hari—the Bestower of (all) blessings (including Liberation)—is worshipped by men belonging to different Yugas under a name and in a form appropriate to the age. (35) Elderly and discriminating persons who appreciate the merits of the Kali age and choose the essence of things, extol this age, in which by merely chanting the names of the Lord one can attain all the desired objects (which could otherwise be had through many virtues only). (36) (Therefore,) for men lost in this world indeed there is no higher gain than the chanting of His names, whereby one attains to perfect peace and as a sequel to which the cycle of birth and death comes to an end. (37) (For this reason) O king, those living in the ages of Satya, Tretā and Dvāpara seek birth in the Kali age. O great king, in the Kali age (only) here and there men will be devoted to Lord Nārāyaṇa; but their number will be large in the Dravida territory, wherein flow the rivers Tāmraparṇī, Kṛtamālā, Payaswinī, the most sacred Kāvērī, Mahānadi and Praticī. O great king, men who drink their waters generally become pure-minded devotees of Lord Vāsudeva. (38–40) O king, renouncing all obligation (or the notion of separateness from the Lord), he who whole-heartedly and completely resorts for protection to the protecting Lord is no more a servant of or debtor to the deities, Rṣis or other creatures, relations or other men (newcomers) and deceased ancestors. (Such a person discharges all his responsibilities merly by seeking refuge in the Lord.) (41) If a beloved devotee who has forsaken all other attachments and sought shelter in the soles of feet of the Lord incurs any sin for any reason (although as a rule he is incapable of sin), the Supreme Lord, Śrī Hari, enshrined in his heart, washes off all that sin. (42)

नारद उवाच

धर्मान् भागवतानित्यं श्रुत्वाथ मिथिलेश्वरः । जायन्तेयान् मुनीन् प्रीतः सोपाध्यायो ह्यपूजयत् । ४३ ।
 ततोऽन्तर्दधिरे सिद्धाः सर्वलोकस्य पश्यतः । राजा धर्मानुपातिष्ठन्नवाप परमां गतिम् । ४४ ।
 त्वमप्येतान् महाभाग धर्मान् भागवताञ्जुतान् । आस्थितः श्रद्धया युक्तो निःसङ्गो वायस्यसे परम् । ४५ ।
 युवयोः खलु दम्पत्योर्यशसा पूरितं जगत् । पुत्रतामगमद् यद् वां भगवानीश्वरो हरिः । ४६ ।
 दर्शनालिङ्गनालापैः शयनासनभोजनैः । आत्मा वां पावितः कृष्णे पुत्रत्वेहं प्रकुर्वतोः । ४७ ।
 वैरेण यं नृपतयः शिशुपालपौण्ड्रशाल्वाद्यो गतिविलासविलोकनाद्यैः ।
 ध्यायन्त आकृतधियः शयनासनादौ तत्साम्यमापुरुरक्षिधां पुनः किम् । ४८ ।
 मापत्यबुद्धिमकृथाः कृष्णे सर्वात्मनीश्वरे । मायामनुष्यभावेन गूढैश्चर्यं परेऽप्यये । ४९ ।
 भूभासारसुराजन्महन्त्वे गुप्तये सताम् । अवतीर्णस्य निर्वृत्ये यशो लोके वितन्यते । ५० ।

The sage Nārada resumed : Hearing (the exposition) of these courses of conduct pleasing to the Lord, Nimi (the king of Mithilā) with his priests and preceptors delightedly adored the sons of Jayanti, the (nine) sages (mentioned before). (43) Then those accomplished sages vanished out of sight while all the people stood looking on. Following the aforesaid courses of conduct, the king attained to the highest goal. (44) O Vasudeva (the best among fortunate persons)! following these righteous courses pleasing to the Lord, which you have (just) heard of, full of faith and free from attachment, you too will attain the highest goal. (45) The fame of you both, husband and wife, really fills the (whole) world because the almighty Lord Śrī Hari has chosen to be your son. (46) Cherishing parental love for Śrī Kṛṣṇa, you have both purified your soul by His sight, embrace and conversation with Him, as well as by sitting, sleeping and eating with Him. (47) When (even) Śiśupāla, Pauṇḍraka, Śālva and other kings, thinking of Him with the feeling of enmity while sleeping, sitting or eating, had His gait, graceful movements and glances etc., imprinted on their mind and (accordingly) attained similarity to His form, what to say of those whose mind is attached to Him. (48) Śrī Kṛṣṇa is the Universal Soul, the almighty Lord, though He has concealed His divinity by assuming a human personality as a matter of sport; He is above and beyond all and is immortal. You should not look upon Him as your son. (49) To destroy the devilish kings who had become a burden to the earth, and to protect the virtuous, Śrī Kṛṣṇa has appeared on earth. It is for the liberation of all men that He spreads His fame throughout the world. (50)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एतच्छ्रुत्वा महाभागो वसुदेवोऽतिविस्मितः । देवकी च महाभागा जहतुर्मोहमात्मनः । ५१ ।

इतिहासमिमं पुण्यं धारयेद् यः समाहितः । स विधूयेह शमलं ब्रह्मभूयाय कल्पते । ५२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Hearing this, the highly fortunate Vasudeva and Devakī felt much astonished and they overcame their infatuation (ceased to look upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa as a mortal or their son). (51) Whoever with a concentrated mind retains in his memory this sacred story shakes off his delusion during his life-time and becomes qualified for attaining oneness with Brahma (after death). (52)

Thus ends the fifth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Samhitā.

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

The gods entreat the Lord to return to His divine realm and Uddhava approaches Him on the eve of the Yadus' departure for Prabhāsa

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ ब्रह्माऽऽत्मजैर्देवैः प्रजेशैरावृतोऽभ्यगात् । भवश्च भूतभव्येशो ययौ भूतगणर्वृतः । १ ।

इन्द्रो मरुद्भिर्गवग्वानादित्या वसवोऽश्विनौ । ऋभवोऽङ्गिरसो रुद्रा विश्वे साध्याश्च देवताः । २ ।

गन्धर्वाप्सरसो नागाः सिद्धचारुगुह्यकाः । ऋषयः पितरश्चैव सविद्याधरिकित्रराः । ३ ।

द्वारकामुपसंजग्मुः सर्वे कृष्णदिदृक्षुवः । वपुषा येन भगवान् नरलोकमनोरमः ।

यशो वितेने लोकेषु सर्वलोकमलापहम् । ४ ।

तस्यां विभ्राजमानायां सम्पृद्धायां महद्भिभिः । व्यचक्षतावितृप्ताक्षाः कृष्णमद्भुतदर्शनम् । ५ ।

स्वगोद्यानोपगैर्मल्यैश्छादयन्तो यदूनमम् । गोभींश्चित्रपदार्थाभिस्तृप्तुर्वर्गदीश्वरम् । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again: Now (when Nārada had finished his discourse to Vasudeva and left Dwārakā), Brahṁā, surrounded by his sons (Sanaka and others), the gods and the lords of creation, arrived and so did Lord Śiva, the Ruler of those that have gone by as well as those that are yet to come, accompanied by goblins. (1) (Similarly) the glorious Indra with the Maruts (the forty-nine wind-gods), the Ādityas (sons of Aditi), the (eight) Vasus, the (two) Āświns, the R̥bhus, the Āṅgirās, the (eleven) Rudras, the (class of) gods known as the Viśwedevas and the Sādhyas, Gandharvas, Apsarās, Nāgas, Siddhas, Cāraṇas and Guhyakas (Yakṣas), Ṛṣis as well as manes, accompanied by Vidyadhara and Kinnaras—all went to Dwārakā, eager to see Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who captivated the mind of the (entire) human race, in that (charming) form by which He spread in (all) the (three) worlds a glory that destroyed the sins of the whole universe. (2—4) In that brilliant city abounding in all kinds of superior wealth they saw Śrī Kṛṣṇa of wonderful beauty with unsatiated eyes. (5) Covering Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the foremost among the Yadus, with flowers that can be had in heaven (alone), they praised the Lord of the universe by means of (laudatory) hymns couched in charming words and full of charming ideas. (6)

देवा ऊचुः

नताः स्म ते नाथ पदारविन्दं बुद्धीन्द्रियप्राणमनोवचोभिः ।

यच्चिन्त्यतेऽन्तर्हृदि भावयुक्तैर्मुमुक्षुभिः कर्ममयोरुपाशात् । ७ ।

त्वं मायया त्रिगुणयाऽऽत्पनि दुर्विभाव्यं व्यक्तं सृजस्ववसि लुम्पसि तदगुणस्थः ।

नैतैर्भवानजित कर्मभिरज्यते वै यत् स्वे सुखेऽव्यवहितेऽभिरतोऽनवद्यः । ८ ।

शुद्धिर्नृणां न तु तथेड्य दुराशयानां विद्याश्रुताध्ययनदानतपःक्रियाभिः ।

सत्त्वात्मनामृषभ ते यशसि प्रवृद्धसच्छ्रद्धया श्रवणसम्भृतया यथा स्यात् । ९ ।

स्यान्नस्तवाङ्घ्रिरशुभाशयधूमकेतुः क्षेमाय यो मुनिभिरार्द्रहृदोद्दामनाः ।

यः सात्वतैः समविभूतय आत्मवद्विद्वृष्टिर्चितः सवनशः स्वरतिक्रमाय । १० ।

यश्चिन्त्यते प्रयतपाणिभिरध्वराग्रौ त्रय्या निरुक्तविधिनेश हविर्गृहीत्वा ।

अध्यात्मयोग उत योगिभिरात्ममायां जिज्ञासुभिः परमभागवतैः परीष्टः । ११ ।

पर्युष्टया तव विभो वनमालयेयं संस्पर्धिनी भगवती प्रतिपत्तिवच्छ्रीः ।

यः सुप्रणीतमम्यारहणमाददन्नो भूयात् सदाङ्घ्रिरशुभाशयधूमकेतुः । १२ ।

केतुस्त्रिविक्रमयुतस्त्रिपतपताको यस्ते भयाभयकरोऽसुरदेवचक्रयोः ।

स्वर्गाय साधुषु खलेष्वितराय भूमन् पादः पुनातु भगवन् भजतामर्धं नः । १३ ।

नस्योतगाव इव यस्य वशे भवन्ति ब्रह्मादयस्तनुभूतो मिथुरर्द्धमानाः ।

कालस्य ते प्रकृतिपूरुषयोः परस्य शं नस्तनोतु चरणः पुंस्योत्तमस्य । १४ ।

अस्यासि हेतुर्दयस्थितिसंयमानामव्यक्तजीवमहतामपि कालमाहूः ।

सोऽयं त्रिणाभिरखिलापचये प्रवृत्तः कालो गभीररय उत्तमपूरुषस्त्वम् । १५ ।

त्वतः पुमान् समधिगम्य यया स्ववीर्यं धत्ते महान्तमिव गर्भममोघवीर्यः ।

सोऽयं तयानुगत आत्मन आपण्डकोशं हैमं ससर्ज बहिरावरणैरुपेतम् । १६ ।

तत्तत्पुत्रश्च जगतश्च भवानधीशो यन्माययोऽथगुणाविक्रिययोपनीतान् ।

अर्थाङ्गुषत्रपि हृषीकपते न लिप्तो येऽन्ये स्वतः परिहृतादपि बिभ्यति स्म । १७ ।

स्मायावलोकलवदंशितभावहारिभूमण्डलप्रहितसौरतमन्त्रशौण्डैः ।

पत्न्यस्तु षोडशसहस्रमनङ्गबाणैर्यस्येन्द्रियं विमथितं करणैर्न विभ्यः । १८ ।

विभ्यस्तवाप्तकथोदवहास्त्रिलोक्याः पादावनेत्रसरितः शमलानि हन्तुम् ।

आनुश्रवं श्रुतिभिरङ्घ्रिमङ्गसङ्गैस्तीर्थद्वयं शुचिषदस्त उपस्पृशन्ति । १९ ।

The gods said : With our reason and senses, body, mind and speech, O Lord ! we bow to Your lotus-feet, which are meditated upon in the heart by those who are full of devotion and seek to be freed from the stout shackles of Karma. (7) O invincible Lord ! presiding over the (three) Guṇas born of Your Māyā You create, preserve and destroy this manifest inconceivable universe in Yourself through Your Māyā consisting of the three Guṇas, and yet remain ever unaffected by these actions, being free from (all) blemish (in the form of likes and dislikes etc.), and since You remain completely absorbed in the unobscured Bliss which constitutes Your (very) nature. (8) O praiseworthy and supreme Lord ! purification of men of impure mind is not so radically effected through worship, study of scriptures, (acts of) charity, austerities, ritual acts etc., as of pure-minded persons through mature and genuine faith, developed by (constant) hearing, in Your glory. (9) May Your feet serve as a fire to consume all our unholy cravings—the feet which are being contemplated upon with a heart moistened with love by ascetics for the sake of blessedness; which are worshipped by devotees through individual divine manifestations (Vāsudeva and so on) for attaining a glory similar to that of the Lord; and by the wise (as many as) three times (a day) in order that they may transcend heaven (and ascend to Vāikuṇṭha); (nay,) which are contemplated, O Lord, in the sacrificial fire (by those well-versed in sacrifices) taking in their outstretched hands the material for being consigned to that fire according to the procedure laid down by the three Vedas (Ṛk, Sāma and Yajus); and which are contemplated in the course of their Yogic practice for the realization of the Self by strivers seeking to obtain an insight into the Māyā that veils the true character of the Spirit, and are worshipped everywhere by the highest devotees of the Lord. (10-11) Like a co-wife this divine Śrī (the goddess of fortune, appearing as a golden streak on Your bosom), O Lord, vies (even) with a faded garland of sylvan flowers (adorning Your bosom along with Her). You (nonetheless) accept the worship duly offered (to You by Your loving devotees even) with such a garland. (So partial You are to Your devotees !) May Your feet serve as a fire to consume our evil tendencies. (12) O almighty and omnipresent Lord, may Your foot cleanse our sins, who worship You—the foot which took three strides (in order to measure the three worlds and thereby to oust Bali from heaven) and (on reaching Satyaloka, the highest heaven in its second stride) stood as a (tall triumphal) flag with the Gaṅgā flowing through the three worlds as its streamer and (as such) inspired terror and instilled fearlessness into the titanic and the celestial armies respectively, and which, brought heaven to the righteous and spelt ruin to the unrighteous. (13) May the feet of the Supreme Person in You augment our joy—You who are superior (both) to Prakṛti and Puruṣa. (Matter and the Spirit) and who are the Propeller of all (as the Time-Spirit) and subject to whose control, like bulls held by the nose-string, are Brahmā (the creator) and other embodied souls who are being tormented by one another. (14) You are Puruṣottama (the Highest Person) in that You are responsible for the creation, continuance and destruction of this universe; the Vedas speak of You as the Controller of Prakṛti, Puruṣa and the Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence); and You are also Kāla (the wheel of Time revolving in the form of a twelve-month) consisting of three navels (each of four months), engaged in the destruction of all and possessed of imperceptible speed. (15) Having derived its power from You and (thus) acquiring unfailing energy, the Puruṣa (Spirit) in conjunction with Mâyā deposited the Mahat-tattva, corresponding as it were to the seed of this (visible) universe. Equipped with that (very) power the Mahat produced out of itself the golden (effulgent) egg of the universe enveloped by its (seven) external sheaths (in the shape of the earth, water, fire, air, ether, ego and mind). (16) Therefore, O Propeller of the Indriyas, You are the suzerain Ruler of the immobile as well as the mobile creation, because even though enjoying (in the form of the Jīva) the objects of the senses evolved through the modification of the Guṇas brought about by Mâyā You remain unattached to them; while others (the Jivas) remain afraid of sense-enjoyments even when they have been renounced by themselves. (17) (All) Your sixteen thousand (and odd) wives could not even shake Your mind by their shafts of Cupid and other charms skilled in conveying the message of love despatched by their arched eyebrows fascinating with the sentiment expressed by their suppressed smile and sidelong glances. (18) The streams (of Your glory) bearing the water of Your nectar-like stories and rivers (like the holy Gaṅgā) that have washed Your feet are capable of destroying (all) the sins of the three worlds. Those who take pains for the purification of their self resort to both these types of holy waters—the former, in the form of Your glory sung in the Vedas, by means of their ears and the latter, emanating from Your feet, through the contact of their body. (19)

बादरायणिर्वाच

इत्यभिष्टूय विबुधैः सेशः शतधृतिर्हरिम्। अभ्यभाषत गोविन्दं। प्रणम्याम्बरमाश्रितः। १२०।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Having thus extolled and bowed low to Śrī Hari, alongwith the (other) gods, Brahmā, accompanied by Lord Śiva and standing in the air (all the while), submitted to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows):—(20)

ब्रह्मोवाच

भूमेर्भारवताराय पुरा विज्ञापितः प्रभो। त्वमस्माभिरशेषात्वंस्तत्तथैवोपपादितम्। १२१।

धर्मस्थ स्थापितः सत्सु सत्यसन्धेषु वै त्वया। कीर्तिंश्च दिक्षु विक्षिप्त्वा सर्वलोकेमलपहा। १२२।

अवतीर्य यदोर्वशे बिभ्रद् रूपमनुत्तमम्। कर्मण्युद्दामवृत्तानि हिताय जगतोऽङ्कथाः। १२३।

यानि ते चरितानीश मनुष्याः साधवः कलौ। शृण्वन्तः कीर्तयन्तश्च तरिष्यन्त्यञ्जसा तपः। १२४।

यदुर्वशेऽवतीर्णस्य भवतः पुरुषोत्तम। शरच्छतं व्यतीयाय पञ्चविंशतिं प्रभो। १२५।

नाधुना तेऽखिलाधार देवकार्यावशेषितम्। कुलं च विप्रशपेन नष्टप्रायमभूदिदम्। १२६।

ततः स्वधाम परमं विशस्व यदि मन्यसे। सलोकाँल्लोकपालान् नः पाहि वैकुण्ठकिङ्करान्। १२७।

Brahmā said: Formerly You were entreated by us to remove the burden of the earth, O Lord ! That has been accomplished (by You) precisely as was desired by us, O Inner Controller of all ! (21) Righteousness has been firmly established by You among the virtuous pledged to truth and glory, which is capable of destroying the sins of all men, diffused on all sides. (22) Descending in the line of Yadu and manifesting a form unsurpassed (in elegance), You performed deeds of extraordinary valour for the good of the world. (23) Hearing of and celebrating, O Lord, those exploits of Yours that have been mentioned heretofore, pious men in the Kali age shall easily get through (the darkness of) ignorance. (24) A century and twenty-five years more have elapsed, O Lord, since You appeared in the race of Yadu, O Supreme Person ! (25) O Support of the universe, no part of the gods' purpose now remains to be accomplished; and this race of Yours (too) has become well-nigh extinct through the curse of the Brāhmaṇas. (26) Therefore, return, if You please, O Viṣṇu, to Your transcendent realm

(Vaikuṇṭha), and bless us, Your servants, the guardians of the spheres, alongwith the spheres (by visiting our realms and accepting our homage). (27)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अवधारितमेतन्मे यदास्थ विबुधेश्वर । कृतं वः कार्यमखिलं भूपेभारोऽवतारितः । २८ ।
तदिदं यादवकुलं वीर्यशौर्यश्रियोद्धतम् । लोकं जिघृक्षद् रुद्धं मे वेलयेव महार्णवः । २९ ।
यद्यसंहृत्य दूषणानां यदूनां विपुलं कुलम् । गन्तास्म्यनेन लोकोऽयमुद्धेन विनङ्क्ष्यति । ३० ।
इदानीं नाश आरब्धः कुलस्य द्विजशापतः । यास्यामि भवनं ब्रह्मत्रेतदन्ते तवानघ । ३१ ।

The glorious Lord replied : What you say has already been decided upon by Me, O ruler of the gods ! All your purpose has been accomplished and the burden of the earth removed. (28) Made insolent by prowess, heroism and fortune and inclined to take possession of the (whole) world, this (celebrated) race of Yadu has been kept in check by Me as the ocean by its shore. (29) If I depart (from this world) without destroying the huge race of the Yadus, who have grown (so) insolent, this (entire) human race will meet its destruction through this ocean, that has (already) transgressed its limits. (30) The destruction of this race has (already) begun through the imprecation of the Brāhmaṇas. When its destruction is complete, O sinless Brāhmā, I shall ascend to your realm (en route to My own realm). (31)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्तो लोकनाथेन स्वयम्भूः प्रणिपत्य तम् । सह देवगणैर्देवः स्वधाम समपद्यत । ३२ ।
अथ तस्यां महोत्पातान् द्वारवत्यां समुत्थितान् । विलोक्य भगवानाह यदुवृद्धान् समागतान् । ३३ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Told thus by the Lord of the universe, god Brāhmā (the self-born) fell prostrate before Him and duly returned to his realm alongwith the host of (other) gods. (32) Presently noticing grave portents appearing over the aforesaid (city of) Dwārakā, the Lord spoke to the elderly among the Yadus, that had assembled (there). (33)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

एते वै सुमहोत्पाता व्युत्तिष्ठन्तीह सर्वतः । शापश्च नः कुलस्यासीद् ब्राह्मणेभ्यो दुरत्ययः । ३४ ।
न वस्तव्यमिहास्माभिर्जिजीविषुभिरार्यकाः । प्रभासं सुमहत्पुण्यं यास्यामोऽद्यैव मा चिरम् । ३५ ।
यत्र स्नात्वा दक्षशापाद् गृहीतो यक्ष्मणोऽङ्गुराद् । विमुक्तः किल्बिषात् सद्यो भजे भूयः कलोदयम् । ३६ ।
वयं च तस्मिन्नाश्रुत्य तर्पयित्वा पितॄन् सुगान् । भोजयित्वोऽंशजो विप्रान् नानागुणवताम्यसा । ३७ ।
तेषु दानानि पात्रेषु श्रद्धयोपवा महान्ति वै । दृजिनानि तरिष्यामो दानैर्नोभिरिवार्णवम् । ३८ ।

The Lord said : These exceptionally grave portents are particularly appearing on all sides here, and a curse from the Brāhmaṇas, that cannot be easily overcome, has overtaken our race. (34) We should no longer stay here, if we wish to live on, O respected ones ! We shall (accordingly) shift this very day to Prabhāsa, a most sacred place. Let there be no delay. (35) Having bathed there, the moon-god (the ruler of the stars), who had been seized with tuberculosis due to a curse pronounced by Dakṣa, was at once rid of his trouble and began to enjoy once more the waxing of his digits (as before). (36) Having bathed (in the sacred waters) there and gratified the manes and gods (with offerings of water), fed good Brāhmaṇas with (delicious) food of various tastes and bestowed valuable gifts on those worthy ones, we shall through those gifts get over our sins (even) as people cross the ocean with the help of ships. (37-38)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं भगवताऽऽदिष्टा यादवाः कुलनन्दन । गन्तुं कृतधियस्तीर्थं स्यन्दनान् समयूयुजन् । ३९ ।
तत्रिरीक्ष्योद्धवो राजन् श्रुत्वा भगवतोदितम् । दृष्टारिष्टानि घोरानि नित्यं कृष्णमनुव्रतः । ४० ।
विविक्त उपसङ्गम्य जगतामीश्वरम् । प्रणम्य शिरसा पादौ प्राङ्गलिस्तमभाषत । ४१ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus directed by the Lord, O delight of your race, the Yādavas made up their mind to undertake a journey to the sacred place (Prabhāsa) and began to get ready their chariots. (39) Seeing this and overhearing the utterance of the Lord and observing the fearful portents, Uddhava, who was ever devoted to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, approached the suzerain Lord of the universe in seclusion and, touching His feet with his head, submitted to Him with joined palms (as follows). (40-41)

उद्धव उवाच

देवदेवेश योगेश पुण्यश्रवणकीर्तन । संहत्यैतत् कुलं नूनं लोकं सन्त्यक्ष्यते भवान् ।
विप्रशापं समर्थोऽपि प्रत्यहन्न यदीश्वरः । ४२ ।
नाहं तवाङ्घ्रिकमलं क्षणार्धमपि केशव । त्यक्तुं समुत्सहे नाथ स्वधाम नय मामपि । ४३ ।
तव विक्रीडितं कृष्ण नृणां परममङ्गलम् । कर्णपीयूषमास्वाद्य त्यजत्यन्यस्पृहां जनः । ४४ ।
शय्यासनाटनस्थानस्नानक्रीडाशनादिषु । कथं त्वां प्रियमात्मानं वयं भक्तास्त्यजेमहि । ४५ ।
त्वयोपभुक्तस्वगन्धवासोऽलङ्कारचर्चिताः । उच्छिष्टभोजिनो दासास्तव मायां जयेमहि । ४६ ।
वातरशना य ऋषयः श्रमणा ऊर्ध्वमन्थिनः । ब्रह्माख्यं धाम ते यान्ति शान्ताः संयासिनोऽमलाः । ४७ ।
वयं त्विह महायोगिन् भ्रमन्तः कर्मवर्त्ससु । त्वद्द्वार्तया तरिष्यामस्तावकैर्दुस्तरं तमः । ४८ ।
स्मरन्तः कीर्तयन्तस्ते कृतानि गदितानि च । गत्युत्तिमतेक्षणक्ष्वेलि यन्त्रलोकविडम्बनम् । ४९ ।

Uddhava said : O Ruler (even) of the adored of gods, O Master of Yoga, the very hearing and chanting of whose names and praises makes one sacred, having exterminated this race You are surely going to leave this world for good as (is evident from the fact that) You did not (choose to) counteract the Brāhmaṇas' curse, though able to do so, almighty as You are. (42) I cannot bear to abandon Your lotus-feet even for half a second, O Ruler (even) of Brahmā and Lord Śiva ! (Kindly, therefore,) take me as well to Your (divine) realm, O Lord ! (43) Having enjoyed (with their ears) the story of Your extraordinary pastimes, which is most auspicious to hear and is (sweet as) nectar to the ear, people give up the craving for other objects. (44) How (then) could we do without You, our beloved One, (nay,) our very self—we, who have (constantly) waited on You, while You lay in bed, sat or rambled, (with us), stood (beside us), bathed (in our company), were engaged in (some) sport or dined (with us) and so on ? (45) We are Your servants who have been adorned with garlands, sandal-paste, raiments and ornaments etc., used (and given up) by You, and ate the remnants of Your food. (As such) we shall conquer Your Māyā (We are not afraid of Your Māyā but of separation from You). (46) Sages who have (absolutely) no covering on their body beyond the belt of air about their loins, have taken great pains on devotions, are lifelong and perfect celibates (lit., have directed the flow of their generative fluid upwards or stopped its downward flow for all time to come), are free from passion, have renounced (all) enjoyments, and have no (trace of) impurity left (in their mind)—they (alone) attain to Your glorious state known by the name of Brahma. (47) We, however, O supreme Yogi, even though we are revolving in the alleys of Karma in this world, shall get over the darkness of ignorance, which is (so) difficult to surmount, through talks about You carried on with Your devotees, dwelling upon and celebrating Your doings and utterances, Your gait, smiles, glances and jokes and whatever You did in imitation of human beings. (48-49)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं विज्ञापितो राजन् भगवान् देवकीसुतः। एकान्तिनं प्रियं भृत्यमुद्धवं समभाषत । ५०।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे षष्ठोऽध्यायः । ६।

Śrī Śuka said : Entreated thus, O king, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devaki) spoke (as follows) to His beloved servant and absolute devotee, Uddhava. (50)

Thus ends the sixth discourse, in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VII

The Legend of an Ascetic—the Story of eight (out of twenty-four) preceptors (from the earth to the pigeon) recognized by him

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यदात्थ मां महाभाग तद्विकीर्षितमेव मे। ब्रह्मा भवो लोकपालाः स्वर्वासं मेऽभिकाङ्क्षिणः । १ ।
मया निष्पादितं ह्यत्र देवकार्यमशेषतः। यदर्थमवतीर्णोऽहमंशेन ब्रह्मणार्थितः । २ ।
कुलं वै शापनिर्दग्धं नङ्गद्यत्यन्योऽन्यविग्रहात्। समुद्रः सप्तमेऽह्येतां पुरीं च प्लावयिष्यति । ३ ।
यह्नोवायं मया त्यक्तो लोकोऽयं नष्टमङ्गलः। भविष्यत्यचिरात् साधो कलिनापि निराकृतः । ४ ।
न वस्तव्यं त्वयैवेह मया त्यक्ते महीतले। जनोऽधर्मरुचिर्भद्रं भविष्यति कलौ युगे । ५ ।
त्वं तु सर्वं परित्यज्य स्नेहं स्वजनबन्धुषु। मय्यावेश्य मनः सम्यक् समदृग् विचरस्व गाम् । ६ ।
यदिदं मनसा वाचा चक्षुर्भ्यां श्रवणादिभिः। नश्वरं गृह्यमाणं च विद्धि मायामनोमयम् । ७ ।
पुंसोऽयुक्तस्य नानार्थो भ्रमः सगुणदोषभाक्। कर्माकर्मविकर्मेति गुणदोषधियो भिदा । ८ ।
तस्माद् युक्तेन्द्रियग्राभो युक्तचित् इदं जगत्। आत्मनीक्षस्व विततमात्मानं मय्यधीश्वरे । ९ ।
ज्ञानविज्ञानसंयुक्त आत्मभूतः शरीरिणाम्। आत्मानुभवतुष्टात्मा नान्तरायैर्विह्वल्यसे । १० ।
दोषबुद्धयोभयातीतो निषेधात्र निवर्तते। गुणबुद्ध्या च विहितं न करोति यथार्थकः । ११ ।
सर्वभूतसुहृच्छान्तो ज्ञानविज्ञाननिश्चयः। पश्यन् मदात्मकं विश्वं न विपद्येत वै पुनः । १२ ।

The glorious Lord began again : That alone which you have asked Me (to do), O highly blessed one, (in verse 42 of Discourse VI above) is intended by Me. Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) and the (other) guardians of the spheres (too) long for My presence in heaven. (1) Indeed I have wholly accomplished the purpose of the gods (viz., the removal of the earth's burden) for which, as requested by Brahmā, I descended on this earth with My part manifestation (Balarāma). (2) This race (of Yadu), which (is the only surviving burden on the earth and) has (already) been consumed by the curse (of the Brāhmaṇas) will surely perish through mutual strife; (and) on the seventh day the sea will overflow and submerge this city (of Dwarakā). (3) The moment this (mortal) world is forsaken by Me it will be assailed by Kali (the Dark Age) and before long, O pious one, all its auspiciousness will be gone. (4) You should in no case live on this terrestrial globe when abandoned by Me; for the Kali age having set in (then), O good Uddhava, people will conceive a liking for unrighteous ways. (5) Completely shaking off all attachment for your own people and kinsmen and fully concentrating your mind on Me, for your part, go you about the earth looking upon all with an equal eye. (6) Whatever is being apprehended with the mind, speech, eyes, ears etc., know it to be a creation of the mind and therefore (merely) illusory and transient. (7) A man with an unsteady (wandering) mind falls a prey to misapprehension consisting in the perception of diversity, which (in its turn) leads to the sense of good and evil; and in the eyes of an individual having the notion of good and evil there exists the distinction of prescribed action, inaction and prohibited action. (8) Therefore, having controlled your mind and senses, visualize this world (of senses) as projected in the Self and see your own self existing in Me, the Supreme Lord (as one with Me). (9) Possessed of knowledge (of the meaning of the Vedas) and realization (of what has been taught by them) and with your mind sated through Self-Realization and becoming one with the self of (all) embodied beings, you will no longer be baulked by (any) impediments. (10) He who has transcended the sense of good and evil does not refrain from wrong-doing because he perceives any evil in it; nor does he perform prescribed duties because he thinks well of it; he (merely) acts (by force of habit) like a child (whose actions are never premeditated). (11) He who has gained certitude about the Self through knowledge (of the true spirit of the Vedas) coupled with realization (of the Truth), who is a friend to all created beings, who is full of peace, and who beholds the universe as one with Me, never undergoes suffering (in the form of transmigration). (12)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यादिष्टो भगवता महाभागवतो नृपः उद्धवः प्रणिपत्याह तत्त्वज्ञानासुरच्युतम् । १३ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus instructed by the Lord, Uddhava, the great devotee of the Lord, O protector of men, fell prostrate before Him and, being eager to know the truth, spoke to Him (as follows). (13)

उद्धव उवाच

योगेश योगविन्यास योगात्मन् योगसम्भव । निःश्रेयसाय मे प्रोक्तस्त्यागः संन्यासलक्षणः । १४ ।

त्यागोऽयं दुष्करो भूमन् कामानां विषयात्मभिः । सुतरां त्वयि सर्वात्मन्रभक्तैरिति मे मतिः । १५ ।

सोऽहं ममाहमिति भूढमतिर्विगाढस्त्वन्मायया विरचितात्मनि सानुबन्धे ।

नत्त्वञ्जसा निगदितं भवता यथाहं संसाधयामि भगवन्ननुशाधि भूयम् । १६ ।

सत्यस्य ते स्वदृश आत्मन् आत्मनोऽयं वक्तारमीश विबुधेषुपि नानुचक्षे ।

सर्वे विमोहितधियस्तव माययेमे ब्रह्मादयस्तनुभूतो बहिरर्थभावाः । १७ ।

तस्माद् भवन्तमनवद्यमनन्तपारं सर्वज्ञमीश्वरमकुण्ठविकुण्ठधिष्यम् ।

निर्विण्णधीरहम् ह वृजिनाभितप्तो नारायणं नरसखं शरणं प्रपद्ये । १८ ।

Uddhava submitted : O Lord (Rewarder) of Yoga, O the ultimate end and support of Yoga, O the embodiment of Yoga ! O the Fountainhead of Yoga ! (it is) for my highest good that this cult of renunciation without any expectation of return has been preached by You. (14) O all-pervading and all-embracing Lord ! such renunciation of the pleasures of sense is difficult (nay, well-nigh impossible) for those attached to sense-enjoyment; and more so for those who are not devoted to You: such is my conviction. (15) I am ignorant, O Lord; for I am attached to this body and children, which are the creation of Your Mayā. I am immersed in the notion of 'I' and 'Mine'. Therefore, instruct me, Your servant, that I may easily attain to that renunciation which has been taught by You. (16) O Lord, I do not see, except You, anyone even among the celestials, who can give me instruction about the self-revealed Ātmā, the only Truth. (Even) Brahmā and all these beings are deluded by Your Māyā as they look upon external things as real. (17) Therefore, afflicted as I am with sorrows and with my mind turned away from the world, O Lord, I, seek refuge in You, who are (no other than) Lord Nārāyaṇa, the friend of (all) living beings, devoid of (all) defects, eternal and infinite, omniscient, the supreme Ruler of all, whose abode is the eternal Vaikuṇṭha ! (18)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

प्रायेण मनुजा लोके लोकतत्त्वविचक्षणाः । समुद्धरन्ति ह्यात्मानमात्मनैवाशुभाशयात् । १९ ।

आत्मनो गुरुरात्मेव पुरुषस्य विशेषतः । यत् प्रत्यक्षानुमानाभ्यां श्रेयोऽसावनुविन्दते । २० ।

पुरुषत्वे च मां धीराः सांख्ययोगविशारदाः । आविस्तरा प्रपश्यन्ति सर्वशक्त्युपबृंहितम् । २१ ।

एकद्वित्रिचतुष्पादो बहुपादस्तथापदः । बह्व्यः सन्ति पुरः सृष्टास्तासां मे पौरुषी प्रिया । २२ ।

अत्र मां मार्गयन्त्यद्वा युक्ता हेतुभिरीश्वरम् । गृह्यमाणैर्गुणैर्लिङ्गैर्ग्राह्यमनुमानतः । २३ ।

अत्राप्युदाहरन्तीममितिहासं पुरातनम् । अवधूतस्य संवादं यदोरमिततेजसः । २४ ।

अवधूतं द्विजं कञ्चिच्चरन्तमकुतोभयम् । कविं निरीक्ष्य तरुणं यदुः पप्रच्छ धर्मवित् । २५ ।

The Lord replied : In this world those who are engaged in investigating the true nature of this world often lift themselves up by their own efforts and rid themselves of the craving for the pleasures of sense. (19) The Ātmā itself is indeed the (infallible) guide of one's own self, especially in the case of man, inasmuch as by direct perception and inference he can work out his own good. (20) In their human birth persons of ripe judgment and knowing the secret of Sāṃkhya and Yoga (the paths of Knowledge and Action) directly and clearly perceive Me as their own Self endowed with all faculties. (21) Numerous forms of living beings with one foot, with two, three, four or many feet and also without feet stand evolved by Me. Of them (all) the human body is (most) dear to Me. (22) (And) here (in the human body) those who are ever vigilant directly discover Me, the Supreme Ruler—who cannot be perceived (by ordinary means of perception)—through assumption* based on evidences in the shape of material instruments (such as the intellect), which are (themselves) open to perception, as well as through inference on the same grounds. (23) By way of an illustration on this subject they narrate the following ancient legend in the form of a dialogue between an ascetic of a high order and Yadu of great prowess and intelligence. (24) Perceiving a youthful Brāhmaṇa† with an unclean body, though full of wisdom, roaming about fearlessly, Yadu, who knew what is Dharma (piety), put (the following) questions to him. (25)

यदुरुवाच

कुतो बुद्धिरियं ब्रह्मत्रकर्तुः सुविशारदा । यामासाद्य भर्वाल्लोकं विद्वांश्चरति बालवत् । २६ ।

प्रायो धर्मार्थकामेषु विविक्तायां च मानवाः । हेतुनैव समीहन्ते आयुषो यशसः श्रियः । २७ ।

त्वं तु कल्पः कविर्दक्षः सुभगोऽमृतभाषणः । न कर्ता नेहसे किञ्चिज्जोन्मत्तपिशाचवत् । २८ ।

जनेषु दह्यमानेषु कामलोभदवाग्रिना । न तप्यसेऽग्निना मुक्तो गङ्गास्थः स्थ इव द्विपः । २९ ।

त्वं हि नः पृच्छतां ब्रह्मत्रात्यन्यानन्दकारणम् । ब्रूहि स्पर्शविहीनस्य भवतः केवलात्मनः । ३० ।

* The assumption is that material instruments such as the intellect cannot lead to perception of objects unless they are themselves illumined by some self-effulgent principle such as the Self or God. And the form of the inference is that just as appliances like a hatchet can be wielded only by an active agent, so the intellect etc., too are being used by some intelligent agent

† A reference to II, vii, 4 leads us to conclude that the Brāhmaṇa was no other than Lord Dattātreya

Yadu said : Remaining inactive, O Brāhmaṇa sage, whence did you get this highly penetrating wisdom, obtaining which you, though enlightened, go about the world like an (innocent) boy ? (26) Generally men strive after religious merit, riches and enjoyment, as well as after self-enquiry only from the motive of acquiring longevity, renown and fortune. (27) You for yourself are able-bodied, learned, skilful, good-looking and sweet-tongued; (nevertheless) you do nothing, covet nothing, and behave like a dunce, a maniac or a devil. (28) In the midst of people burning with the wild fire of concupiscence and greed, you remain unscathed by that fire, and do not get scorched by it (even) like an elephant standing in the water of the Gaṅgā. (29) (Pray,) tell us, who are making this enquiry, O Brāhmaṇa, the cause of the joy abiding in your mind, even though you are living singly and are devoid of enjoyment (of the pleasures of sense). (30)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यदुनैवं महाभागो ब्रह्मण्येन सुमेधसा । पृष्ठः सभाजितः प्राह प्रश्रयावनतं द्विजः । ३१ ।

The glorious Lord said : Thus honoured and questioned by Yadu, who was exceptionally intelligent and devoted to the Brāhmaṇas, the highly blessed Brāhmaṇa sage addressed (in the following words) Yadu, who stood bent low with humility. (31)

ब्राह्मण उवाच

सन्ति मे गुरवो राजन् बहवो बुद्ध्युपाश्रिताः । यतो बुद्धिमुपादाय मुक्तोऽयमीह ताञ्छृणु । ३२ ।
 पृथिवी वायुराकाशमापोऽग्निश्चन्द्रमा रविः । कपोतोऽजगरः सित्युः पतङ्गो मधुकृद् गजः । ३३ ।
 मधुहा हरिणो मीनः पिङ्गला कुरोऽर्धकः । कुमारी शरकृत् सर्प ऊर्णनाभिः सुपेशकृत् । ३४ ।
 एते मे गुरवो राजंश्चतुर्विंशतिराश्रिताः । शिक्षा वृत्तिभिरनेषामन्वशिक्षामिहात्मनः । ३५ ।
 यतो यदनुशिक्षामि यथा वा नाहुषात्मज । ततथा पुरुषव्याघ्र निबोध कथयामि ते । ३६ ।
 भूतैराक्रम्यमाणोऽपि धीरो दैववशानुगैः । तद् विद्वान्न चलेन्मार्गान्दिवशिक्षं क्षितेर्ब्रतम् । ३७ ।
 शश्वत्परार्थसन्नेहः परार्थकान्तसम्भवः । साधुः शिक्षेत भूभृतो नगशिष्यः परात्मताम् । ३८ ।
 प्राणवृत्त्यैव सन्तुष्येन्मुनिर्नैवेन्द्रियप्रियैः । ज्ञानं यथा न नश्येत नावकीर्येत वाङ्मनः । ३९ ।
 विषयेष्वाविशन् योगी नानाधर्मेषु सर्वतः । गुणदोषव्यपेतात्मा न विषज्जेत वायुवत् । ४० ।
 पार्थिवेष्टिह देहेषु प्रविष्टस्तद्गुणाश्रयः । गुणैर्न युज्यते योगी गन्धैर्वायुरिवात्मदृक् । ४१ ।
 अन्तर्हितश्च स्थिरजङ्गमेषु ब्रह्मात्मभावेन समन्वयेन ।
 व्याप्याव्यवच्छेदमसङ्गमात्मनो मुनिर्नभस्त्वं विततस्य भावयेत् । ४२ ।

तेजोऽब्रजमयैर्भावैर्मैघाद्यैर्वायुनेरितैः । न स्पृश्यते न भस्तद्वत् कालसृष्टैर्गुणैः पुमान् । ४३ ।
 स्वच्छः प्रकृतितः स्निग्धो माधुर्यस्तीर्थभूर्नुणाम् । मुनिः पुनात्यपां मित्रमीक्षोपस्पर्शकीर्तनैः । ४४ ।
 तेजस्वी तपसा दीप्तो दुर्धर्षोऽदरभाजनः । सर्वभक्षोऽपि युक्तात्मा नादते मलमग्नित्वम् । ४५ ।
 क्वचिच्छत्रः क्वचित् स्पष्ट उपास्यः श्रेय इच्छताम् । भुङ्क्ते सर्वत्र दातृणां दहनं प्रागुत्तराशुभम् । ४६ ।
 स्वमायाया सृष्टिमिदं सदसल्लक्षणं विभुः । प्रविष्ट ईयते तत्तत्स्वरूपोऽग्निरिबैधसि । ४७ ।
 विसर्गाद्याः श्मशानान्ता भावा देहस्य नात्मनः । कलांनामिव चन्द्रस्य कालेनाव्यक्तवर्त्मना । ४८ ।
 कालेन ह्योषधवेगेन भूतानां प्रभवाप्ययौ । नित्यावपि न दृश्येते आत्मनोऽप्रेर्यथाविधिषा । ४९ ।
 गुणैर्गुणानुपादते यथाकालं विमुञ्चति । न तेषु युज्यते योगी गोभिर्गा इव गोपतिः । ५० ।
 बुध्यते स्वेन भेदेन व्यक्तिस्य इव तद्वत् । लक्ष्यते स्थूलमतिभिरात्मा चावस्थितोऽर्कवत् । ५१ ।

The Brāhmaṇa said : Many are my preceptors, O king, selected by my keen sense, acquiring wisdom from whom I wander in the world free (from all turmoil and worry). Please hear about them. (32) The earth, the air, the sky, water, fire, the moon and the sun, the dove, the boa-constrictor, the sea, the moth, the honey-bee, the elephant, the honey-gatherer, the deer, the fish, Piṅgalā (a courtesan), the osprey, the infant, the maiden, the forger of arrows, the serpent, the spider and the Bhṛṅga (a kind of wasp)—these twenty-four have been accepted, O king, by me as preceptors. From the conduct of these have I learnt all that I had to learn in this life for my good. (33—35) I (presently) tell you, O tiger among men, what I learnt from whom and how, O son of Yayāti (Nahūsa's son); (please) hear it. (36) I imbibed from the earth her vow, viz., that remaining unperturbed even while being oppressed by beings following the will of Providence, a man should not deviate from his course (of righteousness), conscious of the fact (of their being subject to the will of Providence). (37) A pious man should learn from the mountain (a modification of the earth itself) that (like a mountain) all his movements should ever be guided by altruism and that his (very) birth is solely intended for (the service of) others. (Similarly) as a disciple of the tree (another modification of the earth) he should learn (complete) submission to the will of others. (38) An ascetic should remain fully gratified with bare sustenance after the manner of the life-breath (a form of the air, which is sustained by mere subsistence) and should not pamper his senses by means of articles which are delightful to them. He should (only) so manage that his cognitive faculty may not be lost (through starvation), nor should he indulge himself in such a manner that his speech and mind may be diverted. (39) Though moving (freely) among (and enjoying) all (sorts of) objects (of the senses) possessing diverse characteristics, a Yogi should not get particularly attached, to them any more than the (external) air, his mind remaining unaffected by their merits or demerits. (40) Although clothed in earthly bodies in this (mortal) plane and (appearing as though) endowed with their characteristics (plumpness, slimness and so on), an ascetic who has his eyes fixed on the Self is not (actually) endowed with those characteristics any more than the air is with the odours (of various kinds, which really belong to the particles of earth wafted by the air and not to the air itself). (41) Though clothed in a body, the ascetic should, by identifying himself with Brahma (the Infinite), visualize the affinity of his all-pervading soul with the sky in the shape of freedom from (all) limitations and absence of attachment because of its interpenetrating all mobile and immobile organisms at once. (42) The soul is not touched by material adjuncts (like the body)—(which are) the creation of Kāla (the Time-Spirit) and are constituted of fire, water and earth (in the form of its products, viz., food-grains)—any more than the sky is by phenomena like the clouds, tossed by the wind. (43) Bearing (close) affinity with water, an ascetic is transparent, soft by nature, sweet and a seat of purity and purifies people through (mere) sight, touch and utterance of his name. (44) Full of glory and made brighter by glow (in the shape of austerity), formidable and having no vessel other than his belly, the Yogi, like fire, does not imbibe any impurity (in the form of sin) even though consuming anything and everything (although he never consciously eats any impure substance). (45) (Like fire, again,) he remains hidden from view at times and becomes visible at others, (thereby) earning the respect of those who seek blessedness. And burning the past as well as the future sin of those who make an offering to him, he eats everywhere (only that which is offered by others). (46) (Again, even) as fire (though having no definite shape of its own) assumes the shape of the firewood through which it reveals itself, (so) having entered a particular body (viz., that of a divinity or a sub-human creature) possessed of noble or ignoble characteristics and evolved by His own Māyā, the all-pervading Brahma appears endowed with that (very) form. (47) The (various) states beginning with birth and ending with death, brought about by (the passage of) Time, whose course cannot be perceived, belong to the body alone and not to the soul, just as appearance and disappearance etc., occur only to the digits of the moon (and not to the moon itself). (48) Though taking place every moment by force of Time, which flits with the rapidity of a stream (of water), the birth and death of bodies assumed by the Spirit are not perceived any more than the rising and going out of the flames of fire (which likewise take place every moment). (49) Like the sun sucking the moisture (in summer) and releasing it (during the monsoons) by its rays, a Yogi (engaged in the quest of the Spirit) enjoys with his senses the objects of the senses and parts with them according to the needs of the moment but is not affected (by the act of enjoyment or gift). (50) (Even) as the sun reflected in a reflecting substance (e.g., a vessel full of water), is perceived by men of gross understanding differently (though one and the same) as though existing in the vessel etc., so is the (one) self clothed in a vesture (like the body) understood differently by those who recognize the physical body as their self, though one by itself. (51)

नातिस्नेहः प्रसङ्गो वा कर्तव्यः क्वापि केनचित् । कुर्वन् विन्देत सन्तापं कपोत इव दीनधीः । ५२ ।
 कपोतः कश्चनारण्ये कृतनीडो वनस्पती । कपोत्या भार्यया सार्धमुवास कतिचित् समाः । ५३ ।
 कपोती स्नेहगुणितहृदयौ गृहधर्मिणौ । दृष्टिं दृष्ट्वाङ्गमङ्गेन बुद्धिं बुद्ध्या बबन्धतुः । ५४ ।
 शय्यासनाटनस्थानवार्ताक्रीडाशनादिकम् । मिथुनीभूय विस्त्रब्धौ चेतुर्वनराजिषु । ५५ ।
 यं यं वाञ्छति सा राजस्तर्पयन्त्यनुकम्पिता । तं तं समनयत् कामं कृच्छ्रेणाप्यजितेन्द्रियः । ५६ ।
 कपोती प्रथमं गर्भं गृह्णीत काल आगते । अण्डानि सुषुवे नीडे स्वपत्युः सन्निधौ सती । ५७ ।
 तेषु काले व्यजायन्त रचितावयवा हरेः । शक्तिभिर्द्विर्भाव्याभिः कोमलाङ्गतनूरुहाः । ५८ ।
 प्रजाः पुपुषतुः प्रीतो दम्पती पुत्रवत्सलौ । शृण्वन्तौ कूजितं तासां निर्वृता कलभापिते । ५९ ।
 तासां पतत्रैः सम्पशैः कूजितैर्मुग्धचेष्टितैः । प्रत्युद्गमैरदीनानां पितरौ मुदमापतुः । ६० ।
 स्नेहानुबद्धहृदयावयवैर्विष्णुमायया । विमोहितौ दीनधीयौ शिशून् पुपुषतुः प्रजाः । ६१ ।
 एकदा जग्मतुस्तासामन्नाथं तौ कुटुम्बिनौ । परितः कानने तस्मिन्नाथनौ चेतुश्चिरम् । ६२ ।
 दृष्ट्वा तांल्लुब्धकः कश्चिद् यदृच्छातो वनेचरः । जगृहे जालमातत्य चरतः स्वालयान्तिके । ६३ ।
 कपोतश्च कपोती च प्रजापोषे सदोत्सुकौ । गतौ पोषणमादाय स्वनीडमुपजग्मतुः । ६४ ।
 कपोती स्वात्मजान् वीक्ष्य बालकाञ्जालसंवृतान् । तानभ्यधावत् क्रोशन्ती क्रोशतो भृशदुःखिता । ६५ ।
 सासकृत्स्नेहगुणिता दीनचित्ताजमायया । स्वयं चाबध्यत शिवा बद्धान् पश्यन्त्यपस्पृशतुः । ६६ ।
 कपोतश्चात्मजान् बद्धानात्मनोऽप्यधिकान् प्रियान् । भार्या चान्समसां दीनो विललापातिदुःखितः । ६७ ।
 अहो मे पश्यतापायमल्पपुण्यस्य दुर्मतेः । अतुमस्याकृतार्थस्य गृहस्त्रैर्वर्गिको हतः । ६८ ।
 अनुरूपानुकूला च यस्य मे पतिदेवता । शून्ये गृहे मां सन्त्यन्य पुनैः स्वर्गाति साधुभिः । ६९ ।
 सोऽहं शून्ये गृहे दीनो मृतदारो मृतप्रजः । जिजीविषे किमर्थं वा विधुरो दुःखजीवितः । ७० ।
 तांस्तथैवावृताञ्जिर्भर्मत्युपगृह्णातु विचेष्टतः । स्वयं च कृपणः शिशुं पश्यन्नयंबुधोऽपततुः । ७१ ।
 तं लब्ध्वा लुब्धकः क्रूरः कपोतं गृहमेधिनम् । कपोतकान् कपोतीं च सिन्धार्थः प्रययौ गृहम् । ७२ ।
 एवं कुटुम्ब्यशान्तात्मा द्वन्द्वारामः पतत्विजितुः । पुष्पान् कुटुम्ब्यं कृपणः सानुबन्धोऽवसीदति । ७३ ।
 यः प्राप्य मानुषं लोकं मुक्तिद्वारमपावतम् । गृहेषु खगवत् सक्तस्तमारूढच्युतं विदुः । ७४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे सप्तमोऽध्यायः । ७ ।

Excessive fondness or attachment should never be conceived for any person or object by anyone. The mind of a man who does so becomes unhappy and he comes to grief like the (famous) dove (of the legend). (52) Having built a nest on a tree, a certain dove lived in a forest with its mate, the female dove, for some years. (53) With their hearts bound through love and enjoying the pleasures of copulation, the pair knit their understanding with understanding, eye with eye and body with body. (54) Free from fear or reserve (in relation to one another), they slept, sat, flew about, stood, chatted, sported and ate together in the rows of trees of that forest. (55) The male dove, whose senses were out of its control, procured even with (great) hardship whatever enjoyment its mate craved for, inasmuch as the latter gratified it (in every way) and was (in turn) treated with (great) sympathy. (56) Conceiving for the first time, the female bird, who was devoted to the male, laid eggs, when the time came, in the nest by the side of its mate. (57) At the proper time there emerged from the eggs fledglings with delicate limbs (fully) evolved by the inconceivable potencies of Lord Śrī Hari (in the form of the Time-Spirit, destiny, nature and so on), and covered with soft down. (58) Hearing their cooing and delighted by their sweet chirping, the pair, fond as they were of their offsprings, nourished them with (great) affection. (59) The parents derived (great) joy through (the touch of) the feathers, (so) pleasant to touch, (sweet) chirps and charming movements of their happy youngs and their coming forth to meet them. (60) With their hearts knit together by mutual affection and deluded by the Māyā (enchanting potency) of Lord Viṣṇu, the parent birds brought up their young brood with their mind (ever) distracted (through solicitude for them). (61) Desiring food for their offsprings, the pair, that now had a (large) family (to support) went out in search of it, and wandered all about the forest for long. (62) A fowler, who roamed about in the forest, appeared there by chance and, seeing the little birds sporting near their own nest, spread his net and caught them. (63) (Meanwhile) the male and the female doves, which were always anxious to nourish their progeny and had gone out (in search of nourishment), returned to their nest with the nourishment. (64) Perceiving its young brood caught in the net and wailing, the female dove felt extremely miserable and flew to them screaming. (65) Bound by (ties of) affection bestowed (on them) more than once through the Māyā of the birthless Lord, the female dove, afflicted in mind as she was, forgot that it might likewise be caught in the trap and (even though) seeing the little ones entangled, was caught in the trap itself. (66) Sore distressed to find its offsprings, dearer than itself, caught along with its mate, which was as dear (to it) as its own self, the male dove helplessly wailed (as follows):—(67) "Oh ! behold my ruin, scanty of virtue and evil-minded as I am. Though I am (still) unsatiated (with the pleasures of sense) and am yet unaccomplished of purpose, my household life, which was the (only) means of realizing the threefold object of life has been brought to an (abrupt) end. (68) My mate—that looked upon me as its object of veneration, was agreeable (to me in everyway) and was a match for me (in every respect)—is going to heaven with its innocent (guileless) offsprings, leaving me once for all in this desolate dwelling. (69) Such as I am, whose mate and progeny are no more, what for should I seek to survive as a wretched widower leading a miserable life in my deserted habitat ?" (70) Seeing them entangled in the net and struggling in the jaws of death, the foolish and feeble-minded dove likewise fell into the trap of its own accord. (71) Having (thus) secured the male dove, the master of its household, as well as its mate and progeny (the young doves), and accomplished of purpose, the cruel fowler returned home. (72) Maintaining his family in the aforesaid manner, any householder of unquiet mind, revelling in the pairs of opposites (such as joys and sorrows) and attached to the pleasures of sense comes to grief, like the aforesaid dove, with (all) those connected with him (viz., his wife and children). (73) The wise recognize him as having fallen from a height on (once) climbing up to it, who, having attained a human body, which is an open door (as it were) to (the mansion of) final beatitude, remains attached, like the (aforesaid) dove, to his household. (74)

Thus ends the seventh discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

What the Avadhūta learnt from the nine preceptors

ब्राह्मण उवाच

सुखमैन्द्रियकं राजन् स्वर्गे नरक एव च । देहिनां यद् यथा दुःखं तस्मान्नेच्छेत् तद् बुधः । १ ।
 प्रासं सुमुष्टं विरसं महान्तं स्तोकमेव वा । यदृच्छयैवापतितं ग्रसेदाजगरोऽक्रियः । २ ।
 शयीताहानि भूरीणि निराहारोऽनुपक्रमः । यदि नोपनमेद् प्रासो महाहिरिव दिष्टभुक् । ३ ।
 ओजःसहोबलयुतं बिभ्रद् देहमकर्मकम् । शयानो वीतनिद्रश्च नेहेतेन्द्रियवानपि । ४ ।
 मुनिः प्रसन्नगम्भीरो दुर्विगाहो दुस्वयः । अनन्तपारो ह्यक्षोभ्यः स्तिमितोद् इवार्णवः । ५ ।
 समृद्धकामो हीनो वा नारायणपरो मुनिः । नोत्सर्पेत न शुष्येत सरिद्धिरिव सागरः । ६ ।
 दृष्ट्वा स्त्रियं देवमायां तद्भ्रवैरजितेन्द्रियः । प्रलोभितः पतत्यन्धे तमस्यग्रीतं पतङ्गवत् । ७ ।

योषिद्धिरण्याभरणाम्बरादिद्रव्येषु मायारचितेषु मूढः ।

प्रलोभितात्मा ह्युपभोगबुद्ध्या पतङ्गवन्नश्यति नष्टदृष्टिः । ८ ।

स्तोकं स्तोकं ग्रसेद् प्रासं देहो वर्तेत यावता । गृहानहिसन्नातिष्ठेद् वृत्तिं माधुकरिं मुनिः । ९ ।
 अणुभ्यश्च महत्तथ्यश्च शास्त्रेभ्यः कुशलो नरः । सर्वतः सारमादद्यात् पुष्पेभ्य इव षट्पदः । १० ।
 सायन्तनं श्वस्तनं वा न संगृहीतं भिक्षितम् । पाणिपात्रोदरामत्रो मक्षिकेव न सङ्ग्रही । ११ ।
 सायन्तनं श्वस्तनं वा न संगृहीतं भिक्षुकः । मक्षिका इव सङ्गृह्णन् सह तेन विनश्यति । १२ ।
 पदापि युवतीं भिक्षुर्न स्पृशेद् दारवीमपि । स्पृशन् करीव बध्येत करिण्या अङ्गसङ्गतः । १३ ।
 नाधिगच्छेत् स्त्रियं प्राज्ञः कर्हिचिन्मृत्युमात्मनः । बलाधिकैः स हन्येत गजैरन्यैर्गजो यथा । १४ ।
 न देयं नोपभोग्यं च लुब्धैर्यद् दुःखसञ्चितम् । भुङ्क्ते तदपि तद्यान्यो मधुहेवार्थविच्यु । १५ ।
 सुदुःखोपार्जितैर्वितैराशासानां गृहाशिषः । मधुहेवाग्रतो भुङ्क्ते यतिर्वै गृहमेधिनाम् । १६ ।
 ग्राम्यगीतं न शृणुयाद् यतिर्वनचरः क्वचित् । शिक्षेत हरिणाद् बद्धान्मृगयोगीतमोहितात् । १७ ।
 नृत्यवादित्रगीतानि जुषन् ग्राम्याणि योषिताम् । आसां क्रीडनको वश्य ऋष्यशृङ्गो मृगीसुतः । १८ ।
 जिह्वयातिप्रमाथित्या जनो रसविमोहितः । मृत्युमुच्छत्यसद्वुद्धिर्मनस्तु बडिशैर्यथा । १९ ।
 इन्द्रियाणि जयन्त्याशु निराहारा मनीषिणः । वर्जयित्वा तु रसनं तत्रिरन्नस्य वर्धते । २० ।
 तावज्जितेन्द्रियो न स्याद् विजितान्येन्द्रियः पुमान् । न जयेद् रसनं यावज्जितं सर्वं जिते रसे । २१ ।
 पिङ्गला नाम वेश्याऽऽसीद् विदेहनगरे पुरा । तस्या मे शिक्षितं किञ्चिन्निबोध नृपनन्दन । २२ ।
 सा स्वैरिण्येकदा कान्तं सङ्केतं उपनेष्यती । अभूत् काले बहिर्द्वारि बिभ्रती रूपमुत्तमम् । २३ ।
 मार्गं आगच्छतो वीक्ष्य पुरुषान् पुरुषर्षभ । ताञ्छुल्कदान् वित्तवतः कान्तान् मेनेऽर्थकामुका । २४ ।
 आगतेष्वपयातेषु सा सङ्केतोपजीविनी । अप्रयन्त्यो वित्तवान् कोऽपि मामुपैष्यति भूरिदः । २५ ।
 एवं दुराशया ध्वस्तनिद्रा द्वयैवलम्बती । निर्गच्छन्ती प्रविशती निशीथं समपद्यत । २६ ।
 तस्या वित्ताशया शृष्यद्वक्त्राया दीनचेतसः । निर्वेदः परमो जज्ञे चिन्ताहेतुः सुखावहः । २७ ।
 तस्या निर्विण्णचिन्ताया गीतं शृणु यथा मम । निर्वेद आशापाशानां पुरुषस्य यथा ह्यसिः । २८ ।
 न ह्यङ्गाजातनिर्वेदो देहबन्धं जिहासति । यथा विज्ञानरहितो मनुजो ममतां नृप । २९ ।

The Brāhmaṇa said : O king ! pleasure and pain which come through the senses are experienced in heaven as well as in hell by embodied beings; therefore a wise man should not seek them. (1) Like a python one should eat food, obtained without effort, whether it be more or less and sweet or bitter. (2) If no food reaches one, (then) like the python let one go without it and make no effort to obtain it. Let one sleep for many days patiently believing that it is Fate which provides food. (3) Bearing one's body actionless even when one is strong of body, mind and senses, and lying down, though sleepless, one should do nothing, though having the strength to exercise senses. (4) An ascetic should be quiet and grave like the calm deep sea. He should be inscrutable, dominated by none and unaffected by time and space and unperturbed by likes and dislikes. (5) An ascetic devoted to the Lord, whether he has or has not the desired objects, should feel neither elated nor depressed just as the ocean does not swell when rivers flow into it nor dries up when they do not. (6) When the man who has no control over his senses sees the Māyā of the Lord in the shape of a woman, he is allured by her gestures and falls into the darkness of hell just as a moth falls into fire. (7) The ignorant man allured by the gold ornaments, clothes etc., of a woman for the sake of enjoyment of these objects, which are the creation of the Lord's Māyā, loses his discrimination and is destroyed like a moth. (8) An ascetic should take food in small quantities (from householders), without giving them any trouble, and barely enough to maintain his body, and thus adopt the course of the black bee. (9) Like the bee collecting honey from (many) flowers a discriminating person should gather the essence from all scriptures, great or small. (10) He should not keep in store for the evening or the following day the food collected by begging; his hands (alone) should be the vessel and belly, the receptacle for food. He should not be a hoarder like the bee. (11) A mendicant should keep nothing in store, either for the evening or the day following; he who does it perishes like a bee with that collection. (12) A begging ascetic should not touch even with his foot even the wooden figure of a youthful woman; if he touched it, he would be chained like the elephant brought in contact with a she-elephant. (13) A wise man should never seek a woman, who is his death (as it were); (for) he might be killed by other man more powerful persons (after her) just as an elephant is killed by stronger tuskers. (14) Riches amassed with great pains by misers are neither enjoyed by them nor gifted away; they are enjoyed by some other person, who like the honey-gatherer discovers the hoard (and appropriates it). (15) Like the honey-gatherer, the ascetic really first enjoys the riches of householders who have amassed them with great pains and with a view to enjoying them. (16) An ascetic, living in a forest, should never hear vulgar songs. He should take this lesson from the deer, which attracted by the music of the hunter gets snared. (17) Enjoying the vulgar dance, instrumental music and songs of women, Rṣyaśṅga, born of a deer, became a plaything in the hands of women. (18) Enraptured by love of taste, a foolish person, through his uncontrollable tongue, is destroyed like the fish by the hooks. (19) Through fasting wise men can soon control their senses, except the tongue which becomes more powerful in the case of a fasting person. (20) One may have subdued all other senses; but, unless one conquers the sense of taste, one cannot be said to have gained self-control; all senses get subdued when the sense of taste is conquered. (21) Now hear O prince, what I learnt from Piṅgalā, a courtesan, who at one time lived in the city of Videha (Mithilā). (22) One day that courtesan decorated her person at night and in order to take her paramour in the pleasure-house she sat just outside the house at the door. (23) O the best of men, on seeing the passers-by she, desirous of money, took them as rich men seeking pleasure on payment of money. (24) Seeing the passers-by gone, she, who lived upon her solicitations, began to indulge in the hope that some other rich man would come and give her plentiful money. (25) Waiting at the door thus frustrated, and having lost her sleep, she kept going inside and outside the house till it was midnight. (26) Her mouth was parched and she felt dejected through hope for earning money; but ultimately the sense of frustration leading to happiness dawned on her through thinking as mentioned below. (27) Now duly hear from me the song she sang in her utter disappointment; because for people dispassion is like a sword to cut asunder the noose of hope. (28) For no person, O King, who has not acquired this feeling of disgust for the world would snap the bodily ties any more than he who is devoid of discretion could give up the sense of my-ness. (29)

पिङ्गलोवाच

अहो मे मोहवितति पश्यताविजितात्मनः । या कान्तादसतः कामं कामये येन बालिश । ३० ।

सन्तं समीपे रमणं रतिप्रदं वित्तप्रदं नित्यमिमं विहाय ।

अकामदं दुःखभयादिशोकमोहप्रदं तुच्छमहं भजेज्जा । ३१ ।

अहो मयाऽऽत्मा परितापितो वृथा साङ्केत्यवृत्त्यातिविगर्हवातया ।

स्त्रैणान्नाद् यार्थतृषोऽनुशोच्यात् क्रीतेन वित्तं रतिमात्मनेच्छति । ३२ ।

यदस्थिभिर्निर्मितवंशवंश्यस्थूणं त्वचा रोमनखैः पिनद्धम् ।

क्षरन्नवद्वारमगारमेतद् विण्मूत्रपूर्णं मदुपैति कान्या । ३३ ।

विदेहानां पुरे हस्मिन्नहमेकैव मूढधीः । यान्यमिच्छन्त्यसत्यस्मादात्मदात् काममच्युतात् । ३४ ।

सुहृत् प्रेष्ठतमो नाथ आत्मा चायं शरीरिणाम् । तं विक्रीयात्मनैवाहं रमेज्जेन यथा रमा । ३५ ।

कियत् प्रियं ते व्यभजन् कामा ये कामदा नराः । आद्यन्तवन्तो भार्याया देवा वा कालविद्रुताः । ३६ ।

नूनं मे भगवान् प्रीतो विष्णुः केनापि कर्मणा । निर्वेदोऽयं दुर्गशाया यन्मे जातः सुखावहः । ३७ ।

मैवं स्युर्मन्दभाग्यायाः क्लेशा निर्वेदहेतवः । येनानुबन्धं निर्हृत्य पुरुषः शममृच्छति । ३८ ।

तेनोपकृतमादाय शिरसा ग्राम्यसङ्गताः । त्यक्त्वा दुर्गशाः शरणं ब्रजामि तमधीश्वरम् । ३९ ।

सन्तुष्टा श्रद्धयत्येतद्यथालाभेन जीवती । विहराम्यमुनैवाहमात्मना रमणेन वै । ४० ।

संसारकूपे पतितं विषयैर्मुषितेक्षणम् । ग्रस्तं कालाहिनाऽऽत्मानं कोऽप्यस्त्रातुमधीश्वरः । ४१ ।

आत्मेव ह्यात्मनो गोप्ता निर्विद्येत यदाखिलात् । अप्रमत्त इदं पश्येद् ग्रस्तं कालाहिना जगत् । ४२ ।

Pingalā said : Alas ! how senseless and of uncontrolled mind am I ! Behold the extent of my foolishness; ignorant as I am, I have expected the fulfilment of my desire from a trifling mean paramour ! (30) Forsaking (the adoration of) the eternal and real Lord, who resides in the heart and gives joy and wealth forever, fondly have I sought a poor man who cannot satisfy my desires and who only gives grief, fear, worry, sorrow and infatuation. (31) Lo ! how uselessly have I afflicted my soul by leading the life of a courtesan and living by such a highly reproachful profession; I expected wealth and satisfaction from a lustful, greedy and lamentable person through my body sold to him ! (32) What female other than myself would find enjoyment through a (paramour's) body, which is like a house of which the framework is of bones, covered with skin, hair and nails, which is full of urine and excreta and has nine doors through which constantly flows foul matter ? (33) Among the (wise) citizens of Mithilā I am the only foolish and wicked person in that I expect satisfaction from anybody else than the immortal Lord, who bestows his own Self. (34) He is the friend, most beloved Lord and Self of all embodied beings; to Him shall I offer myself as a price and find enjoyment in Him like Laksmī, who sports with Him. (35) To what extent have mortal men and even celestials, subject to the ravages of Time, been able to give satisfying pleasure or enjoyment to their wives ? (36) Forsooth, Lord Viṣṇu has been pleased with me for some action of mine, as in my heart, full of vicious hope, the feeling of disgust for the world has been engendered, which will lead to happiness. (37) Had I been unfortunate, I would not have met with miseries which have produced the feeling of disgust for the world. It is this despondency through which man attains peace by snapping the fetters of home etc. (38) Placing on my head the benefit rendered by Him and forsaking vicious hopes of sense-enjoyments, I shall seek refuge with the said Lord. (39) Feeling contented with whatever I get and living upon it, and trusting the Lord, who is my own Self, I shall now sport with Him as my husband. (40) My soul is fallen in the well of worldliness, the senses have deprived me of discrimination, and I stand devoured by the serpent of Time. Who else but the Lord can save me? (41) When one carefully sees the world devoured by the serpent of Time and feels disgusted with worldly objects, one realizes the fact that one's Self is the only protector. (42)

ब्राह्मण उवाच

एवं व्यवसितमतिर्दुराशां कान्ततर्षजाम् । छित्त्वोपशममास्थाय शय्यामुपविवेश सा ॥४३॥

आशा हि परमं दुःखं नैराश्यं परमं सुखम् । यथा संछिद्य कान्ताशां सुखं सुषुप्ता पिङ्गला ॥४४॥

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धेऽष्टमोऽध्यायः ॥८॥

The Brāhmaṇa said : Thus determined, she abandoned the vicious hope born of lust and, resorting to peace, she (quietly) sought her bed. (43) Hope is the greatest misery and the absence of it is the greatest joy; for Piṅgalā, getting rid of the hope to get a paramour, enjoyed a peaceful sleep. (44)

Thus ends the eighth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ नवमोऽध्यायः

Discourse IX

Story of the seven preceptors, the osprey and others; and the end of the Avadhūta's discourse

ब्राह्मण उवाच

परिग्रहो हि दुःखाय यद् यत्प्रियतमं नृणाम् । अनन्तं सुखमाप्नोति तद् विद्वान् यस्त्वकिञ्चनः । १ ।
सामिषं कुररं जघ्रुर्बलिनो ये निरामिषाः । तदामिषं परित्यज्य स सुखं समविन्दत । २ ।
न मे मानावमानौ स्तो न चिन्ता गेहपुत्रिणाम् । आत्मक्रीड आत्मरतिर्विचरामीह बालवत् । ३ ।
द्वावेव चिन्तया मुक्तौ परमानन्द आप्नुतौ । यो विमुग्धो जडो बालो यो गुणेभ्यः परं गतः । ४ ।
क्वचित् कुमारी त्वात्मानं वृणानान् गृहमागतान् । स्वयं तानर्हयमास क्वापि यातेषु बन्धुषु । ५ ।
तेषामभ्यवहारार्थं शालीन् रहसि पार्थिव । अवधन्त्याः प्रकोष्ठस्थाश्चक्रुः शङ्खाः स्वनं महत् । ६ ।
सा तज्जुगुप्सितं मत्वा महती व्रीडिता ततः । बभञ्जैकैकशः शङ्खान् द्वौ द्वौ पापयोरशेषयत् । ७ ।
उभयोरप्यभूद् घोषो ह्यवधन्त्याः स्म शङ्खयोः । तत्राप्येकं निरभिददेकस्मात्त्राभवद् ध्वनिः । ८ ।

अन्वक्षिषमिं तस्या उपदेशमरिन्दम् । लोकाननुचरन्नेतल्लोकतत्त्ववित्सया । १ ।
 वासे बहूनां कलहो भवेद् वार्ता द्वयोरपि । एक एव चरेत्स्मात् कुमार्या इव कङ्कणः । १० ।

The Brāhmaṇa said : The source of misery is indeed the acquisition of whatever men love most. One who knows this and desires no acquisition enjoys everlasting happiness. (1) The stronger ospreys which had no flesh attacked the osprey which had it. The latter then dropped the piece of flesh and felt happy. (2) I feel neither honour nor dishonour; I have no care which householders have for home and children. Like a child (free from care) I wander in the world sporting in the Self and devoted to it. (3) Only two are free from cares and anxieties and are immersed in supreme bliss—the ignorant and guileless child and he who has transcended the three Guṇas (and realized the Supreme Being). (4) In a certain place, a maiden herself had to attend to the comforts of those who came to her house to choose her for a bride when her relations had gone away to some other place. (5) O king, while she was pounding paddy aside to provide them food, the bangles of shells on her wrists made a loud jingling sound. (6) The (wise) girl, feeling much ashamed of doing the humiliating task herself, broke the bangles one by one, and retained only two each on her wrists. (7) Even the two bangles produced sound as she pounded (the paddy), she again broke one each (so that) the remaining one each did not produce any sound. (8) And the following lesson I learnt from her, O subduer of enemies, as I wandered in this wide world to know what was desirable and what was to be shunned. (9) Where many dwell together quarrel would ensue; even between two living together there is talk. Therefore one should wander alone as the single bangle on the wrists of the maiden. (10)

मन एकत्र संयुज्याजितश्चासौ जितासनः । वैराग्याभ्यासयोगेन ध्रियमाणमतन्द्रितः । ११ ।

यस्मिन् मनो लब्धपदं यदेतच्छनैः शनैर्मुञ्चति कर्मणून् ।

सत्त्वेन वृद्धेन रजस्तमश्च विध्य निर्वर्णमुपैत्यनिधनम् । १२ ।

तदेवमात्मन्यवरुद्धचित्तो न वेद किञ्चिद् बहिरन्तरं वा ।

यथेषुकारो नृपतिं व्रजन्तमिषौ गतात्मा न ददर्श पार्श्वे । १३ ।

एकचार्यनिकेतः स्यादप्रमत्तो गुहाशयः । अलक्ष्यमाण आचारैर्मुनिरेकोऽल्पभाषणः । १४ ।

गृहारम्भोऽतिदुःखाय विफलश्चाधुवात्मनः । सर्पः परकृतं वेश्म प्रविश्य सुखमेधते । १५ ।

एको नारायणो देवः पूर्वसृष्टं स्वमायया । संहृत्य कालकलया कल्पान्त इदमिष्टरः । १६ ।

एक एवाद्वितीयोऽभूदात्माधारोऽखिलाश्रयः । कालेनात्मानुभावेन साम्यं नीतासु शक्तिषु ।

सत्त्वादिष्ठादिपुरुषः प्रधानपुरुषेश्वरः । १७ ।

परावराणां परम आस्ते कैवल्यसंज्ञितः । केवलानुभवानन्दसन्दोहो निरुपाधिकः । १८ ।

केवलात्मानुभावेन स्वमायां त्रिगुणात्मिकाम् । संक्षोभयन् सृजत्यादौ तथा सूत्रमरिन्दम् । १९ ।

तामाहुस्त्रिगुणव्यक्तिं सृजन्तीं विश्वतोमुखाम् । यस्मिन् प्रोतमिदं विश्वं येन संसरते पुमान् । २० ।

यथोर्णनाभिर्हृदयादूर्णां सन्तत्य वक्त्रतः । तथा विहत्य भूयस्तां ग्रसत्येवं महेश्वरः । २१ ।

यत्र यत्र मनो देही धारयेत् सकलं धिया । स्नेहाद् द्वेषाद् भयाद् वापि याति तत्तत्स्वरूपताम् । २२ ।

कीटः पेशस्कृतं ध्यायन् कुड्यां तेन प्रवेशितः । याति तत्सात्मतां राजन् पूर्वरूपमसन्त्यजन् । २३ ।

एवं गुरुभ्य एतेभ्य एषा मे शिक्षिता मतिः । स्वात्मोपशिक्षितां बुद्धिं शृणु मे वदतः प्रभो । २४ ।

देहो गुरुर्मम विरक्तिविवेकहेतुर्बिभ्रत् स्म सत्त्विधनं सततात्युदकम् ।

तत्त्वान्यनेन विमुशामि यथा तथापि पारक्यमित्यवसितो विचराम्यसङ्गः । २५ ।

जायात्मजार्थपशुभृत्यगृह्णतवर्गान् पुष्पाति यत्प्रियचिकीर्षुतया वितन्वन् ।
 स्वान्ते सकृच्छ्रमवरुद्धधनः स देहः सृष्ट्वास्य बीजमवसीदति वृक्षधर्मा । २६ ।
 जिह्वैकतोऽमुमपकर्षति कर्हि तर्षा शिश्नोऽन्यतस्त्वगुदरं श्रवणं कुतश्चित् ।
 घ्राणोऽन्यतश्चपलदृक् क्व च कर्मशक्तिर्बह्व्यः सपत्न्य इव गेहपतिं लुनन्ति । २७ ।
 सृष्ट्वा पुराणि विविधान्यजयाऽऽत्मशक्त्या वृक्षान् सरीसृपपशून् खगदंशमत्स्यान् ।
 तैस्तेतुष्टद्वयः पुरुषं विधाय ब्रह्मावलोकधियणं मुदमाप देवः । २८ ।
 लब्ध्वा सुदुर्लभमिदं बहुसम्भवान्ते मानुष्यमर्थदमनित्यमपीह धीरः ।
 तूर्णं यतेत न पतेदनुमृत्यु यावन्निःश्रेयसाय विषयः खलु सर्वतः स्यात् । २९ ।

एवं सज्जातवैराग्यो विज्ञानालोक आत्मनि । विचारामि महीमेतां मुक्तसङ्गोऽनहङ्कृतिः । ३० ।
 न ह्येकस्माद् गुरोर्ज्ञानं सुस्थिरं स्यात् सुपुष्कलम् । ब्रह्मैतद्वितीयं वै गीयते बहुधर्मिभिः । ३१ ।

One should steady the mind on one thing by controlling it as well as the breath, and by acquiring a steady pose and remaining vigilant practising dispassion and concentration. (11) The mind is to be steadied on That One, established in which it slowly renounce the desire for actions and, developing the Sattva Guṇa controls the Rājasika and Tāmasika impulses and in their absence attains absorption in contemplation. (12) Just as the maker of arrows absorbed in his work did not see the king passing by him, so the man who has concentrated his mind on the Self does not know anything inside or outside. (13) Again, an ascetic should wander alone, have no fixed abode; and ever vigilant and living in a cave, unrecognized by obvious marks, he should be without any support and sparing of speech. (14) For man with his perishable body to build a house is useless and fraught with great misery. The serpent happily inhabits the hole borrowed by others. (15) The one almighty Lord, existing by Himself and the support of all, destroys this previously created universe through His Time-Energy at the end of a Kalpa. And then He remains One alone, quite undifferentiated. When by force of time, powerful in itself, all the energies in the shape of the three Guṇas get merged in the Unmanifest (when the creation ends), the most ancient Person, the Lord of Matter and Spirit, attainable by Brahmā and other liberated beings, exists. He remains the absolute and unconditioned, and self-manifest Bliss, fit to be called Liberation (itself). (16—18) O slayer of enemies, with His own unassisted power He agitates His Māyā, consisting of the three Guṇas and first creates Sūtra or Mahattatva. (19) They say that Sūtra is the manifestation of the three Guṇas, capable of creating the universe of multifarious forms, through which it runs like a thread and the individual soul gets into the world. (20) Just as the spider projecting the web from its heart through mouth, sports with it and then swallows it, so does the Supreme Lord creates, preserves and destroys the universe. (21) On whatever the embodied being deliberately centres its mind in its entirety, through love, hatred or fear, it attains that very form. (22) O king, the larva confined by the wasp in a hole in the wall and contemplating on the wasp, without discarding its former body, transforms itself into the latter. (23) O king, I thus learnt this wisdom from these preceptors. Now hear as I tell You what I have learnt from my own body. (24) This body, subject to birth and death and constantly and ultimately a source of afflictions, is my preceptor as it promotes renunciation and discrimination. Though it helps me to contemplate on realities, it really belongs to others (who devour it). Realizing this I wander renouncing all. (25) Man earns money with difficulty in order to enjoy pleasures and maintain the growing number of wives, children, possessions, cattle, servants, houses and relations and friends. Like a tree which when ultimately destroyed leaves behind seed for another tree to grow, he too dies leaving seeds for his next birth. (26) His tongue drags him to one side, thirst to another and the organ of generation to some other; so do the touch, stomach and ear in some other directions; the sense of smell in another and the restless eye to something else; and every physical organ draws him in a different direction. Thus like the lord of the house torn up by co-wives, his senses and organs pull him on all sides. (27) Having created through His innate energy the bodies of the different species of living beings, such as trees, reptiles, animals, birds, gad-flies, fish etc., the Lord was not satisfied. He rejoiced (only) when He created the human body endowed with reason and capable of realizing the Supreme Deity. (28) Having after many births in this world acquired the rare human body, however frail, which is still the means of attaining the object of life, a wise man should speedily strive to attain Liberation, before this body, constantly subjected to annihilation, is not destroyed. The enjoyment of sense pleasures can of course be had in all species. (29) Having thus freed myself from all attachments and egotism and developed dispassion, and possessing the light of knowledge (acquired from several preceptors), I wander in this world established in the Self. (30) Stable and comprehensive knowledge cannot be acquired from one preceptor. This Brahma, without a second, has been variously sung by R̥ṣis. (31)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

इत्युक्त्वा स यदु विप्रस्तमामन्य गभीरधीः । वन्दितोऽभ्यर्थितो राज्ञा ययौ प्रीतो यथागतम् । ३२ ।

अवधूतवचः श्रुत्वा पूर्वेषां नः स पूर्वजः । सर्वसङ्गविनिर्मुक्तः समचित्तो बभूव ह । ३३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे नवमोऽध्यायः । ९ ।

The Lord said : The Brāhmaṇa of deep wisdom having thus spoken to King Yadu and greeted and adored by him, took leave and delightedly went his way. (32) Having listened to the discourse of the Avadhūta (Dattātreya) our remote ancestor (King Yadu) rid himself of all attachments and gained the steady equilibrium of mind. (33)

Thus ends the ninth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः

Discourse X

The emptiness of earthly and other-worldly enjoyments exposed

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मयोदितेष्टवह्नितः स्वधर्मेषु मदाश्रयः । वर्णाश्रमकुलाचारमकामात्मा समाचरेत् । १ ।

अन्वीक्षेत विशुद्धात्मा देहिनां विषयात्मनाम् । गुणेषु तत्त्वध्यानेन सर्वारम्भविपर्ययम् । २ ।

सुप्तस्य विषयालोको ध्यायतो वा मनोरथः । नानात्मकत्वाद् विफलस्तथा भेदात्मधीर्गुणैः । ३ ।

निवृत्तं कर्म सेवेत प्रवृत्तं मत्परस्यजेत् । जिज्ञासायां संप्रवृत्तो नाद्रियेत् कर्मचोदनाम् । ४ ।

यमानभीक्ष्णं सेवेत नियमान् पत्नरः क्वचित् । मदभिज्ञं गुरुं शान्तमुपासीत मदात्मकम् । ५ ।

अमान्यमत्सरो दक्षो निर्ममो दृढसौहृदः । असत्त्वरोऽर्थजिज्ञासुरनसूयुरमोघवाक् । ६ ।

जायापत्यगृहक्षेत्रस्वजनद्रविणादिषु । उदासीनः समं पश्यन् सर्वैष्वर्थमिवात्मनः । ७ ।

विलक्षणः स्थूलसूक्ष्माद् देहादात्मैक्षिता खट्वक् । यथामिदंरुणो दाह्याद् दाहकोऽन्यः प्रकाशकः । ८ ।
 निरोधोत्पत्त्यणुबृहन्नात्वं तत्कृतान् गुणान् । अन्तःप्रविष्ट आधत्त एवं देहगुणान् परः । ९ ।
 योऽसौ गुणैर्विरचितो देहोऽयं पुरुषस्य हि । संसारस्तन्निबन्धोऽयं पुंसो विद्याच्छिदात्मनः । १० ।
 तस्माज्जिज्ञासयाऽऽत्मानमात्मस्थं केवलं परम् । सङ्गम्य निरसेदेतद्वस्तुबुद्धिं यथाक्रमम् । ११ ।
 आचार्योऽग्निराद्यः स्यादन्तेवास्तुतराग्निः । तत्सन्धानं प्रवचनं विद्यासन्धिः सुखावहः । १२ ।
 वैशादी सातिविशुद्धबुद्धिर्धुनोति मायां गुणसम्प्रसृताम् ।

गुणांश्च सन्दह्य यदात्ममेतत् स्वयं च शाम्यत्यसमिद् यथाग्निः । १३ ।

अर्थेषां कर्मकर्तृणां भोक्तृणां सुखदुःखयोः । नानात्वमथ नित्यत्वं लोककालागमात्मनाम् । १४ ।
 मन्यसे सर्वभावानां संस्था ह्यौत्पत्तिकी यथा । तत्तदाकृतिभेदेन जायते भिद्यते च धीः । १५ ।
 एवमप्यङ्ग सर्वेषां देहिनां देहयोगतः । कालावयवतः सन्ति भावा जन्मादयोऽसकृत् । १६ ।
 अत्रापि कर्मणां कर्तृस्वातन्त्र्यं च लक्ष्यते । भोक्तुश्च दुःखसुखयोः को न्वर्थो विवशं भजेत् । १७ ।
 न देहिनां सुखं किञ्चिद् विद्यते विदुषामपि । तथा च दुःखं मूढानां वृथाहङ्कृषां परम् । १८ ।
 यदि प्राप्तिं विधातं च जानन्ति सुखदुःखयोः । तेऽप्यद्धा न विदुर्योगं मृत्युर्न प्रभवेद् यथा । १९ ।
 को न्वर्थः सुखयत्येनं कामो वा मृत्युरन्तिके । आघातं नीयमानस्य वध्यस्येव न तृप्तिदः । २० ।
 श्रुतं च दृष्टवद् दुष्टं स्पर्धासूयात्ययव्ययैः । बह्वन्तरायकामत्वात् कृषिवद्यापि निष्फलम् । २१ ।
 अन्तरायैरविहतो यदि धर्मः स्वनुष्ठितः । तेनापि निर्जितं स्थानं यथा गच्छति तच्छृणु । २२ ।
 इष्टेह देवता यज्ञैः स्वर्लोकं याति याज्ञिकः । भुञ्जीत देववत्तत्र भोगान् दिव्यान् निजार्जितान् । २३ ।
 स्वपुण्योपपत्तिं शूभ्रे विमान उपगीयते । गन्धर्वैर्विहग्नं मध्ये देवीनां हृद्यवेषधृक् । २४ ।
 स्त्रीभिः कामगयानेन किङ्किणीजालमालिना । क्रीडन् न वेदात्मपातं सुराक्रीडेषु निर्वृतः । २५ ।
 तावत् प्रमोदते स्वर्गे यावत् पुण्यं समाप्यते । क्षीणपुण्यः पतत्यवगनिच्छन् कालचालितः । २६ ।
 यद्यधर्मतः सङ्गादसतां वाजितेन्द्रियः । कामात्मा कृपणो लुब्धः स्त्रैणो भूतविहिंसकः । २७ ।
 पशूनविधिनाऽऽलभ्य प्रेतभूतगणान् यजन् । नरकानवशो जन्तुर्गत्वा यात्युल्बणं तमः । २८ ।
 कर्माणि दुःखोदकाणि कुर्वन् देहेन तैः पुनः । देहमाभजते तत्र किं सुखं मर्त्यधर्मिणः । २९ ।
 लोकानां लोकपालानां मद्भयं कल्पजीविनाम् । ब्रह्मणोऽपि भयं मत्तो द्विपार्थपरायुषः । ३० ।
 गुणाः सृजन्ति कर्माणि गुणोऽनुसृजते गुणान् । जीवस्तु गुणसंयुक्तो भुङ्क्ते कर्मफलान्यसौ । ३१ ।
 यावत् स्याद् गुणवैषम्यं तावन्नानात्वमात्मनः । नानात्वमात्मनो यावत् पारतन्त्र्यं तदैव हि । ३२ ।
 यावदस्यास्वतन्त्रत्वं तावदीश्वरतो भयम् । य एतत् समुपासीरस्ते मुह्यन्ति शुचापिताः । ३३ ।
 काल आत्माऽऽगमो लोकः स्वभावो धर्म एव च । इति मां बहुधा प्राहृगुणव्यतिकरे सति । ३४ ।

The Lord said : Attentive to the righteous duties taught by Me, and depending upon Me, and forsaking all desires, man should follow the conduct prescribed by his caste, order and family. (1) Having thus purified his mind, he should observe how the actions of worldly men attached to sense-pleasures, who consider them to be real, produce contrary results (cause misery). (2) As the dreams of a sleeping person and the fancies of one drowned in a reverie are of no value, being of a diversified character, so is the notion of differences produced by the Guṇas illusory. (3) One who is devoted to Me should perform all obligatory or occasional duties but should forsake all actions prompted by desire. If one is fully engaged in an inquiry into the Self, he need not attend even to his prescribed duties. (4) My votary should devoutly practise austerities and at times observe sacred vows (too); and he should wait upon his preceptor of tranquil mind who has realized Me as identical with Myself. (5) He should be free from pride, jealousy, sloth and attachment; he should be firmly devoted to his preceptor and cool, and a seeker after Self-Knowledge he should not be fault-finding and one indulging in useless talk. (6) He should not feel attached to his wife, children, home, lands, relations and wealth etc., and should find his purpose equally in all. (7) As a burning fire, that shows things, is different from the piece of wood that is burnt and illumined, so is the self-manifest soul, the witness of all, distinct from the subtle and gross bodies. (8) Just as fire burning a piece of wood assumes its qualities of destructibility, coming into being, smallness or magnitude, and variety, so does the soul assume the attributes of the body when it enters it. (9) The subtle as well as the gross body is constituted of the Guṇas controlled by the Lord; and transmigration of the soul is the result of identifying it with the body. This misapprehension can be dispelled only by the real knowledge of the Self. (10) Therefore, through inquiry one should gradually realize the transcendent and absolute Self, permeating the body etc., and the latter as unreal and different from the Self. (11) The preceptor is the piece of wood underneath, the disciple is the upper one and the instruction is the middle one or churning rod; and (Self-)knowledge is the delightful fire produced by friction. (12) The perfectly purified wisdom obtained from an efficient preceptor dispels Mayā, the product of the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and these Guṇas too; and ultimately the intellect itself becomes quiescent as fire with its fuel consumed. (13) If you admit the variety of souls, the agents of actions, subject to happiness and misery; if you maintain that the regions, time, the Vedas and the soul are eternal; and if you hold that all objects while constantly changing are eternal and that the whole sense of perception is engendered by the objects perceived and then changes with the objects; then, O Uddhava, you will have to admit that all souls associated with a body are subject to time and repeatedly to the states of birth and death etc. Then it is evident from your standpoint that the doer of actions is surely subject to pleasure and pain and for one so dependent there can be little happiness. (14—17) Even learned persons, because they have bodies, enjoy no happiness, and even fools are not necessarily unhappy. Therefore egotism on the part of both is simply vain. (18) Even if they know how to win happiness and overcome misery, they surely have not been able to discover means of averting death. (19) What happiness can wealth or any sense-enjoyment bring to man when the nearness of death gives him no satisfaction, just as a victim being escorted to the place of execution cannot enjoy any pleasure? (20) Like the worldly pleasures, the bliss of heaven is also vitiated by envy, jealousy, evanescence and decay. There are many impediments in attaining to that bliss and it is fruitless (at times) like cultivation. (21) You should also hear how one attains the region through the successful performance of religious duties unbalked by interruptions. (22) One who performs sacrifices in this world and propitiates the gods through them goes to heaven and enjoys there heavenly pleasures, gained through his actions, and feels happy like the deities. (23) He assumes a beautiful form and flying in a celestial car earned through his meritorious deeds and surrounded by heavenly damsels and sung by heavenly singers he goes about blissfully. (24) But while merrily sporting with the celestial damsels in heavenly pleasantries and flying in a celestial car, adorned with small bells and whose speed is controlled by the will of the rider, he does not notice his impending fall. (25) He enjoys heaven so long as his meritorious deeds bear fruit; but when his merit is exhausted, driven by time, though reluctant, he has to take birth in the lower regions. (26) If a person associates with the wicked and delights in impiety, or losing control over his senses indulges in low worldly pleasures and becomes mean, avaricious, lustful and oppressive to living creatures, and (misled by the wicked) kills animals ignoring religious sanction, and worships ghosts and goblins, he inevitably goes to hell and assumes bodies of low ignorant creatures. (27-28)

Clothed in a body man performs actions which result in misery. In consequence of those actions he assumes another body and thus living in the world the mortal man enjoys little happiness. (29) The regions of the universe and their rulers who live till the end of a Kalpa are afraid of Me; even Brahmā who lives for two Parārdhas only is afraid of Me. (30) The senses bring about actions and the Guṇas prompt the senses to act, and the said Jīva, being invested with bodies and senses and identifying itself with them, reaps the fruit of actions. (31) So long as the diversity of the Guṇas prevails the Ātmā will appear manifold. And so long as the manifoldness of Ātmā lasts dependent state will continue. (32) So long as the state of dependence of the Jīva continues there is fear from the Lord. Therefore, those who take to these Guṇas get deluded, and come to grief. (33) Time, Ātmā, Śāstra, the world, Nature and Dharma are the various names by which I am called when the equilibrium of the three (illusive) qualities is disturbed or they are agitated. (34)

उद्धव उवाच

गुणेषु वर्तमानोऽपि देहेज्जन्मपावृतः । गुणैर्न बद्धयते देही बद्धयते वा कथं विभो । ३५ ।
कथं वर्तेत विहरेत् कैर्वा ज्ञायेत लक्षणैः । किं भुञ्जीतोत विसृजेच्छयीतासीत याति वा । ३६ ।
एतदव्युत मे ब्रूहि प्रश्नं प्रश्नविदां वर । नित्यमुक्तो नित्यबद्ध एक एवेति मे भ्रमः । ३७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे भगवदुद्धवसंवादे दशमोऽध्यायः । १० ।

Uddhava said : O Lord, though associated with a body etc., why should not the Jīva be bound by actions begotten of body ? Or having no connection with them, how does the soul get tied to them ? (35) How does a person liberated or bound behave or sport and by what characteristics is he to be known ? How does he eat, ease nature, sleep, sit or walk ? (36) O Acyuta, the foremost of those expert in answering questions ! (pray) answer this question My mistaken notion is as to whether the same Ātmā is (both) ever bound and ever liberated (too). (37)

Thus ends the tenth discourse forming part of the Dialogue between the Lord and Uddhava, in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Samhitā.

अथैकादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XI

The characteristics of bound and liberated souls as well as of devotees

श्रीभगवानुवाच

बद्धो मुक्त इति व्याख्या गुणतो मे न वस्तुतः । गुणस्य मायामूलत्वात् मे मोक्षो न बन्धनम् । १ ।
शोकमोहौ सुखं दुःखं देहापत्तिश्च मायया । स्वप्नो यथाऽऽत्मानः ख्यातिः संसृतिर्न तु वास्तवी । २ ।
विद्याविद्ये मम तनू बद्ध्युद्धव शरीरिणाम् । मोक्षबन्धकरी आद्ये मायया मे विनिर्मिते । ३ ।
एकस्यैव ममांशस्य जीवस्यैव महामते । बन्धोऽस्याविद्ययानादिर्विद्यया च तथेतरः । ४ ।

The glorious Lord began again : The characterization of a Jiva as bound or emancipated is determined by its being subject or not to (the influence of) the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) controlled by Me, and has nothing to do with its essential nature. And the Guṇas being rooted in Māyā (which is under My control), there is neither emancipation nor bondage for Me. (1) (Even) as dream is an illusory aspect of the mind, grief and infatuation, joy and sorrow and embodiment (or the loss of one's body) are falsely attributed to the Self. (Hence even) transmigration (of the soul) is not real (but is ascribed to it through ignorance alone). (2) Know that Saving Knowledge and Ignorance are My potencies, specially brought into being by My Māyā, and have existed without beginning, and make for release and bondage (respectively of the Jiva), O Uddhava ! (3) Though I am one, O highly intelligent one, it is in relation to the Jiva alone, a reflection of Mine, that bondage has existed from time immemorial through ignorance; and it is in relation to the Jiva alone that the other state (release) is brought about through Knowledge (in the form of Self-Realization vouchsafed by Me). (4) Next I (proceed to) tell you the distinction between the one in bondage (viz., the Jiva or the individual soul) and the other who is liberated (viz., God), characterized by contrary properties (viz., sorrow and joy respectively), though (co-) existing in one and the same individual, O dear Uddhava ! (5) The two (viz., the Jiva and God, the Inner Controller of the Jiva) are (distinct from the body like) a pair of birds (dwelling on a tree yet apart from it), kindred (in character as being spiritual in substance) and settled as (constant) companions in the same nest (of the heart) on the tree (of the body) by force of Māyā (the divine Will). One of them (viz., the Jiva) partakes of the fruit (in the shape of joy and sorrow to be experienced) in the peepul tree of the body (as a result of past good and evil deeds); while the other (viz., God), though going without food (in the shape of those pleasurable and painful experiences) is (always) superior (to the former) in strength (the strength of wisdom etc.).* (6) (Of the two aforementioned,) the enlightened one (viz., God), who does not partake of the fruit of the peepul tree, knows Himself as well as the other (the Jiva); but not so the one who partakes of the fruit of the peepul tree. Again, the one who is characterized by ignorance (viz., the Jiva) has been in bondage from eternity; while He who is all Knowledge (viz., God) is ever free. (7) An enlightened soul (a Jivanmukta) is not tied to the body even though he remains in the body (by force of his past Saṁskāras), any more than one who has awoke from a dream (remains tied to the dream body, though continuing in that body in thought). A man of perverted intellect (who looks upon the body alone as his self) remains identified (on the contrary) with his body, though not (essentially) confined within it, (even) as one who is (actually) seeing a dream is identified with his dream body, though not (actually) present in it. (8) Remaining unaffected

* This very idea finds expression in the following Śruti text:—

द्वा सुपणौ मय्ना मखाय समानं वृक्षं परिपश्यतः । तयोरेकः पिप्पलं स्वादुष्यन्नं वृक्षं विभक्त्योर्जितं ॥

while the objects of sense—which are no other than modifications of the three Guṇas—are being apprehended by the senses, (which are) modifications of the (same) Guṇas, he who is enlightened does not feel that he is apprehending them. * (On the other hand he feels that it is the Guṇas themselves in the form of the senses that apprehend their objects, which are made up of the same substance). (9) Functioning in this body controlled by his Prārabdha (destiny), the ignorant Jīva, (however) remains tied to it through the (egotistic) notion that he is the agent, as a result of actions which are (actually) being performed by the Indriyas (which are the modifications of the three Guṇas and as such identical with them). † (10)

एवं विरक्तः शयन आसनाटनमज्जने । दर्शनस्पर्शनघ्राणभोजनश्रवणादिषु । ११ ।

न तथा बद्धचेतः विद्वत्तत्र तत्रादयन् गुणान् । प्रकृतिस्थोऽप्यसंसक्तो यथा खं सवितानिलः । १२ ।

वैशारद्येक्ष्यासङ्गशितया छिन्नसंशयः । प्रतिबुद्ध इव स्वप्नाज्ञानात्वाद् विनिवर्तते । १३ ।

यस्य स्युर्वतिसङ्कल्पाः प्राणेन्द्रियमनोधियाम् । वृत्तयः स विनिर्मुक्तो देहस्थोऽपि हि तद्गुणैः । १४ ।

यस्यात्मा हिंस्यते हिंसायै न किञ्चिद् यदृच्छया । अच्यते वा क्वचित्तत्र न व्यतिक्रियते बुधः । १५ ।

न स्तुवीत न निन्देत कुर्वत साध्वसाधु वा । वदतो गुणदोषाभ्यां वर्जितः समदृङ्मनुजः । १६ ।

न कुर्यात् वदेत् किञ्चित् ध्यायेत् साध्वसाधु वा । आत्मारामोऽनया वृत्त्या विचरेज्जडवन्मनुजः । १७ ।

Thus remaining free from passion while (lying) in bed, sitting, moving about, bathing, seeing, touching, smelling, eating and hearing etc., and allowing the (three) Guṇas (in the form of the senses) to enjoy the various objects of the senses, the enlightened soul does not get bound (by such actions) like the ignorant man. Though continuing in his psycho-physical organism (which is a modification of Prakṛti) he remains unattached to it like the sky, the sun (which remains unattached to the water in which it is reflected) or the wind (which remains unattached even though blowing everywhere). (11-12) With (all) his doubts resolved by (the sword of) his penetrating intellect whetted by (all-round) detachment he turns away from the sense of diversity, even as one who has woken up from a dream turns away from it. (13) He whose vital, organic, mental and intellectual functions are absolutely free from deliberate thought remains as a matter of fact altogether unfettered by the three Guṇas operating through his body, though dwelling in it (14) A wise man is he who is not (adversely or agreeably) affected when his body is tormented by mischievous persons or by chance treated somewhat with honour by someone at some place. (15) The sage who has transcended (the sense of) good and evil and sees equality (everywhere) would neither praise those that do or say (anything) good nor censure those who do or say (anything) evil. (16) Revelling in his self, a man given to contemplation should neither do nor contemplate nor speak anything good or evil and should roam about like a stupid fellow and live in the aforesaid manner. (17)

शब्दब्रह्मणि निष्णातो न निष्णायात् परे यदि । श्रमस्तस्य श्रमफले ह्यधेनुमिव रक्षतः । १८ ।

* Compare Śrīmad Bhagavadgītā III 28:—

नन्वाविनु महाबाहो गुणकर्मविभागयोगे । गुण गुणेषु बन्धन इति मन्वा न मज्जते ॥

* He however, who has true insight into the respective spheres of the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and their actions holding (as he does) that it is the Guṇas (in the shape of the senses, mind etc.) that move among the Guṇas (objects of perception), does not get attached to them, Arjuna !*

† Cf. Śrīmad Bhagavadgītā III 27—

प्रकृतेः क्रियमाणानि गुणैः कर्माणि सर्वशः । अहंकारमिदमात्मा कर्ताहमिति मन्वते ॥

* All actions are being performed by the modes of Prakṛti (primordial Matter). The fool (however), whose mind, is deluded by egotism, thinks "I am the doer"

गां दुग्धदोहामसतीं च भार्या देहं पराधीनमसत्प्रजां च ।
 वित्तं त्वतीर्थीकृतमङ्गं वाचं हीनां मया रक्षति दुःखदुःखी । १९ ।
 यस्यां न मे पावनमङ्गं कर्म स्थित्युद्भवप्राणनिरोधमस्य ।
 लीलावतारेऽस्मितजन्म वा स्याद् वन्यां गिरं तां विभूयात् धीरः । २० ।

If one, though well-versed in the Veda (the Supreme revealed in the form of word), has not attained perfection in the Knowledge (realization) of the supreme (Brahma), his labour (on the study of the Vedas) has ended in labour alone like that of a man who tends a dry cow. (18) The man who maintains a cow that has been milked for good (offers no more prospect of yielding milk), a false wife, a body depending (for its support) on another and an unworthy son, nay, who guards wealth which is not bestowed on worthy recipients and cultivates, O dear Uddhava ! speech which does not glorify Me reaps misery after misery. (19) A wise man ought not to cultivate such barren speech as does not glorify, O dear Uddhava, My purifying activity responsible for the appearance, continuance and extinction of this universe and does not describe My advent (in the form) of Śrī Rāma, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and so on), which is so dear to the world, among My (numerous) descents taken for the sake of sport. (20)

एवं जिज्ञासयापोह्य नानात्वभ्रममात्मनि । उपारमेत विरजं मनो मय्यर्थं सर्वगं । २१ ।
 यद्यनीशो धारयितुं मनो ब्रह्माणि निश्चलम् । पयि सर्वाणि कर्माणि निरपेक्षः समाचर । २२ ।
 श्रद्धालुर्मे कथाः शृण्वन् सुभद्रा लोकपावनीः । गायत्रनुस्मरन् कर्म जन्म चाभिनयन् मुहुः । २३ ।
 मदर्थं धर्मकामार्थानाचरन् मदपाश्र्वयः । लभते निश्चलां भक्तिं मय्युद्भव सनातन । २४ ।

सत्सङ्गलब्धया भक्त्या मयि मां स उपासिता । स वै मे दर्शितं सद्विरज्जसा विन्दते पदम् । २५ ।

Having cast aside, through inquiry on the lines indicated in the foregoing verses, the mistaken notion of diversity with respect to the soul, and focussed one's mind, free from (all) impurities, on Me, the omnipresent Lord, one should retire (from all activity). (21) If (however) you are unable to fix your mind irrevocably on Brahma, do all your (allotted) duties efficiently in a disinterested spirit for My sake. (22) Hearing with reverence My stories, which bring merit (to the hearer) and purify the worlds, chanting them (if there is someone to hear) and constantly recalling them (even when there is none to chant or hear them), arranging dramatic representation of My advent and pastimes again and again, (nay,) pursuing righteousness, enjoyment and wealth for My sake and depending on Me, O Uddhava ! one develops unflinching devotion to Me, the Eternal. (23-24) Equipped with Devotion acquired through the fellowship of saints, he becomes My worshipper. (And) such a worshipper undoubtedly attains with ease to My state as shown by the righteous. (25)

उद्भव उवाच

साधुस्तवोत्तमश्लोक मतः कीदृग्बन्धः प्रभो । भक्तिस्त्वय्युपयुज्येत कीदृशी सद्विरादता । २६ ।

एतन्मे पुरुषार्थक्ष लोकाध्यक्ष जगत्प्रभो । प्रणतयानुरक्ताय प्रपन्नाय च कथ्यताम् । २७ ।

त्वं ब्रह्म परमं व्योम पुरुषः प्रकृतेः परः । अवतीर्णोऽसि भगवन् स्वेच्छोपात्तपृथक्त्वपुः । २८ ।

Uddhava submitted : What kind of man is considered by You to be a pious soul, O illustrious Lord ? And what kind of devotion has been esteemed by the righteous and may be directed towards You ? (26) Let this be pointed out to me, bent low (before You), devoted (to You) and fallen at Your feet, O Ruler (even) of Brahmā and others (the highest souls), the Controller of the spheres, the Lord of the (entire) creation ! (27) You are the supreme Brahma, taintless like the sky, the Spirit beyond Prakṛti; yet, O Lord ! You have descended (on this earth) having assumed a distinct (finite) personality at Your own (sweet) will. (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

कृपालुरकृतद्रोहस्तितिक्षुः सर्वदेहिनाम् । सत्यसगोऽनवद्यात्मा समः सर्वोपकारकः । १२९ ।
 कामैरहतधीर्दान्तो मृदुः शुचिरकिञ्चनः । अनीहो मितभुक् शान्तः स्थिरो मच्छरणो मुनिः । १३० ।
 अप्रमत्तो गभीरात्मा धृतिमाञ्जितषड्गुणः । अमानी मानदः कल्पो यैत्रः कारुणिकः कविः । १३१ ।
 अज्ञायैवं गुणान् दोषान् मयाऽऽदिष्टानपि स्वकान् । धर्मान् सन्त्यज्य यः सर्वान् मां भजेत स सत्तमः । १३२ ।
 ज्ञात्वाज्ञात्वाथ ये वै मां यावान् यश्चास्मि यादृशः । भजन्त्यनन्यभावेन ते मे भक्ततमा मताः । १३३ ।

The glorious Lord replied : A pious soul is compassionate to all embodied souls, harms none, is forbearing, has truthfulness for his strength, faultless of mind, equipoised (in joy and sorrow) and beneficent to all; his judgment is never clouded by (attachment to) the pleasures of sense; he is self-disciplined, soft (by nature), pure (perfectly moral in his dealings), resourceless and effortless, lives on a scanty meal, is free from passions and constant, solely depends on Me and is given to contemplation and vigilant, remains unexcited (even when there is room for excitement) and firm (even in adversity); he must have conquered the six waves (viz., cold and heat, greed and infatuation, hunger and thirst), does not seek honour, though bestowing it (on others), is capable of imparting knowledge to others, sincere altruistic and possessed of right knowledge. (29—31). He (too) is (likewise) the best of (all) virtuous men, who—having completely neglected all his duties, though prescribed by Me, while knowing full well the virtues (resulting from the performance of duty) and sins (incurred by neglecting them)—worships Me (alone). (32) They are considered by Me to be the foremost of (all) devotees, who worship Me with exclusive devotion, knowing in reality how great I am, what I am and what like I am, or (even) not knowing this. (33)

मल्लिङ्गमद्भक्तजनदर्शनस्पर्शनार्चनम् । परिचर्या स्तुतिः प्रह्मगुणकर्मानुकीर्तनम् । १३४ ।
 मत्कथाश्रवणे श्रद्धा मदनुष्ठानमुद्भव । सर्वलाभोपहरणं दास्येनात्मनिवेदनम् । १३५ ।
 मज्जन्यकर्मकथनं मम पर्वाणुमोदनम् । गीतताण्डववादित्रगोष्ठीभिर्मदगृहोत्सवः । १३६ ।
 यात्रा बलिविधानं च सर्ववार्षिकपर्वसु । वैदिकी तान्त्रिकी दीक्षा मदीयव्रतधारणम् । १३७ ।
 ममार्यास्थापने श्रद्धा स्वतः संहत्य चोद्यमः । उद्यानोपवनान्नीडपुरमन्दिरकर्मणि । १३८ ।
 सम्मार्जनोपलेपाभ्यां सेकमण्डलवर्तनैः । गृहशुश्रूषणं मह्यं दासवद् यदमायया । १३९ ।
 अमानित्वमदम्बित्वं कृतस्यापरिकीर्तनम् । अपि दीपावलोकं मे नोपयुज्यान्निवेदितम् । १४० ।

यद् यदिष्टतमं लोके यद्यातिप्रियमात्मनः । तत्तन्निवेदयेन्मह्यं तदानन्त्याय कल्पते । १४१ ।

Devotion to Me consists, O Uddhava ! in beholding, touching and worshipping My representations of (in the form of images etc.) and people devoted to Me, rendering (bodily) service to them (such as kneading their feet), extolling them, bowing to them and repeatedly recounting My excellences and exploits; developing reverence for hearing My stories, practising contemplation on Me, offering all one's gains to Me, offering one's body (to Me) for service; narrating the stories of My advent and recounting My deeds, celebrating festivals connected with Me (such as the Janmāṣṭami festival connected with My advent) and conducting festivities in My temples with vocal and instrumental music, dance and Puranic discourses; visiting holy places in procession and conducting (special) worship (with flowers etc.) on all annual festive occasions (particularly on every Ekādaśī during the four rainy months), initiating men into certain forms of Vedic and Tāntrika worship etc., and undertaking vows sacred to Me (such as fasting on Ekādaśī days); enthusiasm in installing My images (in temples specially built for the purpose) and individual as well as collective effort for laying out gardens, orchards and pleasantries, erecting boundary walls round towns and constructing temples, keeping my temples tidy and clean after the manner of a servant by removing their dust and plastering their floor with cowdung etc., washing their floor and decorating it with ornamental designs and diagrams in a guileless way (without any expectation of return); absence of pride and hypocrisy and refraining from making known one's own services.* One should not use† (for one's own benefit) even the light of a lamp offered (by oneself or anyone else) to Me (or, to interpret it in another way, one should not offer to Me even the light of a lamp (already) offered (to Me or to any other deity).‡(34—40). One should (on the other hand) offer to Me whatever is most favoured with the world as well as whatever is most liked by himself; for such an offering is capable of yielding immortality. (41)

सूर्योऽग्निर्ब्राह्मणो गावो वैष्णवः खं मरुज्जलम् । भूरात्मा सर्वभूतानि भद्र पूजापदानि मे । ४२ ।
 सूर्यं तु विद्यया त्रया हविषाग्नौ यजेत माम् । आतिथ्येन तु विप्राग्रये गोष्ठ्यं यवसादिना । ४३ ।
 वैष्णवे बन्धुसक्त्या हृदि खे ध्याननिष्ठया । वायौ मुख्यधिया तोये द्रव्यैस्तोयपुस्कृतैः । ४४ ।
 स्थण्डिले मन्त्रहृदयैर्भोगैरात्मानमात्मनि । क्षेत्रज्ञं सर्वभूतेषु समत्वेन यजेत माम् । ४५ ।
 धिष्यतेष्वेष्विति मद्रूपं शङ्खचक्रगदायुजैः । युक्तं चतुर्भुजं शान्तं ध्यायन्नर्चेत् समाहितः । ४६ ।
 इष्टापूर्तेन मामेवं यो यजेत समाहितः । लभते मयि सद्धिर्लभ्य मत्स्मृतिः साधुसेवया । ४७ ।
 प्रायेण भक्तियोगेन सत्सङ्गेन विनोद्धव । नोपायो विद्यते सध्वयः प्रायणं हि सतामहम् । ४८ ।
 अथैतत् परमं गुह्यं शृण्वतो यदुनन्दन । सुगोप्यमपि वक्ष्यामि त्वं मे भूत्यः सुहृत् सखा । ४९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशास्कन्धे एकादशोऽध्यायः । ११ ।

The sun, fire, the Brāhmaṇa, cows, a votary of Lord Viṣṇu, the sky, the air, water, earth, one's own body and all living beings are the media of My worship, O good one ! (42) In the sun one should worship Me by (waiting upon Me with) hymns forming part of the three Vedas; in (the sacred) fire, by (pouring) oblations; in a worthy Brāhmaṇa, through hospitality of course; and in cows, through green grass etc., O dear Uddhava; in a votary of Lord Viṣṇu, through attentions due to a relation; in the cavity of one's heart, through fixity in meditation; in the air, through the thought that it is the life-giving principle running through the entire universe; in the water, through articles of worship followed by water (itself); in a raised ground

* A Smṛti text says :- धर्मः शरति कीर्तनात् ।

† A virtue is spent by being made known through one's own lips."

‡ It is for this reason that in order to guard against the offence of seeing things with the help of such light it has been enjoined that a light offered to a deity should contain a double wick. Of course, this does not debar us from accepting for one's own use in a spirit of devotion the offerings made to a deity in the shape of eatables, sandal-paste, garland and scent etc., which has been extolled in the scriptures as conducive to Liberation. The scripture says:—

यद्विभर्माणोऽयमैमं यत्फलं परिकीर्तितम् । विष्णोर्नैवेद्यमिच्छेन पुण्यं तद्भुङ्क्ता क्ली ।

हृदि रूपं मुखे नाम नैवेद्यमुदरे हः । पादोदके च निर्माल्यं मन्त्रके यन्मोऽप्युतः ॥

"In the Kali age the same virtue accrues from the food offered to Lord Viṣṇu to those partaking of it as has been declared to result from a fast undertaken for a whole month as many as six times. He is identical with Lord Viṣṇu, who carries a mental image of Lord Śrī Hari in his heart, His name on his lips, the food offered to Him in his stomach, nay, the water in which His feet have been washed and flowers etc., offered to Him on the head."

§ The Smṛti says :-

विष्णोर्नैवेद्यताम्रेण यत्तद्व्यं देवतान्तरम् । पितृभ्यश्चैव तदेषं तदानन्त्याय कल्पते ॥

पितृश्रेण तु यो दद्यादयं परमात्मने । तेतोषाः पितरस्तस्य भवन्ति क्रेशभाविनः ॥

"One ought to propitiate other deities by means of food (already) offered to Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Deity); nay, it should be offered to the manes as well (during the Śrāddha ceremony), as such consecrated food (it offered to the manes) is capable of yielding an immortal fruit. In the case (however) of him who offers the food already offered to the manes to Lord Śrī Hari, the Supreme Spirit, the manes who were responsible for his birth undergo (great) suffering."

(duly) levelled and cleared (through consecration) by means of mystic formulas. In one's own body, one should propitiate the soul through amenities (permitted by the Śāstras); and in all created beings one should worship Me as the conscious Self through undifferentiated vision. (43—45) Through these media one should contemplate and worship with a concentrated mind in the aforesaid manner My serene and four-armed personality equipped with a conch, discus, mace and lotus. (46) He who worships Me as aforesaid with a concentrated mind through (Vedic) sacrifices and acts of pious liberality (such as the gift of food; enjoined in the Smṛtis) attains true devotion to Me and through service to the righteous follows My (constant) remembrance (or realization too). (47) Ordinarily there is no royal road (to My realization) other than the discipline of Devotion preceded by association with the righteous, O Uddhava; for I am the greatest resort of the righteous. (48) Therefore, hear this (following) sovereign secret, O scion of Yadu ! I shall tell you even that which deserves to be scrupulously guarded; (for) you are My servant and sincere friend. (49)

*Thus ends the eleventh discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious
Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Samhitā.*

अथ द्वादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XII

The Glory of Satsaṅga; how to perform one's prescribed duty and how to relinquish it ?

श्रीभगवानुवाच

न रोधयति मां योगो न सांख्यं धर्म एव च । न स्वाध्यायस्तपस्यागो नेष्टापूर्तं न दक्षिणा । १ ।
व्रतानि यज्ञश्छन्दांसि तीर्थानि नियमा यमाः । यथावच्छेदो सत्सङ्गः सर्वसङ्गापहो हि माम् । २ ।
सत्सङ्गेन हि दैतेया यातुधाना मृगाः खगाः । गन्धर्वाप्सरसो नागाः सिद्धाधारणगुह्यकाः । ३ ।
विद्याधरा मनुष्येषु वैश्याः शूद्राः स्त्रियोऽन्यजाः । रजस्तमः प्रकृतयस्तस्मिंस्तस्मिन् युगेऽनघ । ४ ।
बहवो मत्पदं प्राप्तास्त्वाष्ट्रकायाधवादयः । वृषपर्वा बलिर्बाणो मयश्चाथ विभीषणः । ५ ।
सुग्रीवो हनुमान्क्षो गजो गृध्रो वणिक्पथः । व्याधः कुब्जा व्रजे गोप्यो यज्ञपत्यस्तथापरे । ६ ।
ते नाधीतश्रुतिगणा नोपासितमहत्तमाः । अन्नतातप्ततपसः सत्सङ्गान्मामुपागताः । ७ ।
केवलेन हि भावेन गोप्यो गावो नगा मृगाः । येऽन्ये मूढधियो नागाः सिद्धा मामीयुरञ्जसा । ८ ।
यं न योगेन सांख्येन दानव्रततपोऽध्वरैः । व्याख्यास्वाध्यायसंन्यासैः प्राप्नुयाद् यत्नवानपि । ९ ।
रामेण सार्धं मथुरां प्रणीते श्वाफल्किना मय्यनुक्तचित्ताः ।
विगाढभावेन न मे वियोगतीव्राधयोऽन्यं ददुःशः सुखाय । १० ।
तास्ताः क्षपाः प्रेष्ठतमेन नीता मयैव वृन्दावनगोचरेण ।
क्षणार्धवत्ताः पुनरङ्ग तासां हीना मया कल्पसमा बभूवुः । ११ ।
ता नाविदन् मय्यनुषङ्गबद्धधियः स्वमात्मानमदस्तथेदम् ।
यथा समाधौ मुनयोऽब्धितोये नद्यः प्रविष्टा इव नामरूपे । १२ ।

मत्कामा रमणं जारमस्वरूपविदोऽबलाः । ब्रह्म मां परमं प्रापुः सङ्गाच्छतमहत्तशः । १३ ।
 तस्मात्त्वमुद्धवोत्सृज्य चोदनां प्रतिचोदनाम् । प्रवृत्तं च निवृत्तं च श्रोतव्यं श्रुतमेव च । १४ ।
 मामेकमेव शरणमात्मानं सर्वदेहिनाम् । याहि सर्वात्मभावेन मया स्या ह्युक्तोभयः । १५ ।

The glorious Lord began again : Neither Yoga (consisting of eight limbs enumerated in the Yogā-Sūtras of Patañjali) nor Sāṅkhya (knowledge of the distinctive character of the different categories discussed in the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy) nor righteousness (consisting of non-violence, benevolence etc.), study of the Vedas (or Japa of the Divine Name), austerity and renunciation nor pouring oblations into the sacred fire and works of public utility (such as the digging of wells and tanks and the laying out of gardens) nor (the bestowal of) gifts, (observing) fasts, worship of gods, muttering secret spells, resorting to holy waters and places of pilgrimage, (undertaking) sacred observances (such as purity of body and mind) and the (five) forms of self-abnegation (non-violence etc.) gain Me over as does Satsaṅga capture Me—Satsaṅga, which actually puts an end to all (other) attachments. (1-2) For, thanks to the fellowship of saints, a number of Daityas (the sons of Diti), Yātudhānas (ogres), beasts and birds, Gandharvas and Apsarās, Nāgas, Siddhas, Cāraṇas and Guhyakas (Yakṣas), Vidyādhara, and among human beings (even) Vaiśyas and Śūdras, womenfolk and the lowest born, possessed of a Rājasika and Tāmasika disposition, such as Vṛtrāsura (son of the god Twaṣṭā through a Daitya mother), Prahrāda (son of Kayādhū), Vṛṣaparvā, Bālī, Bāṇa, Maya and Vibhiṣaṇa, sub-human (beings like) Sugriva, Hanuman, Jāmbavān (a bear), the (celebrated) elephant (of the legend), Jaṭāyu (a vulture), Tulādhāra (a merchant), Dharmavyādhā (a hunter by profession), Kubjā (a hunch-backed damsel), the Gopis (cowherdresses) as well as the wives of Brāhmaṇas (engaged in performing a sacrifice) of Vraja and others ascended to My realm in different Yugas, O sinless Uddhava ! (3-6) Although they had never studied the Śruti texts, had never waited upon the most exalted ones (for the said purpose), had not observed any sacred vows nor practised any austerities, they (nevertheless) attained to Me through the fellowship of saints (alone). (7) Through mere love indeed the cowherdresses and cows, (nay,) trees and antelopes, cobras and other dull-witted creatures accomplished the object of their life and easily attained to Me, whom one cannot reach (even) with (great) exertion through Yoga or Sāṅkhya, liberality, sacred vows, austerities and sacrificial performances, exposition of sacred texts, study of the Vedas (or Japa of the Divine Name) and renunciation. (8-9) When I was taken to Mathurā alongwith Balarāma by Akrūra (the son of Śwaphalka), the Gopis—whose mind was attached to Me through intense devotion and who suffered acute pangs of separation (from Me)—did not look upon anyone else than Me as a source of delight. (10) Those very (autumnal) nights (of ineffable sweetness) which had (during the Rāsa dance), been spent (by them) like half a second with Me, the highest object of their love when I was present (by their side) in (the woods of) Vṛndāvana, hung heavy on them like a Kalpa (a thousand revolutions of the four Yugas) now that they were bereft of Me, O loved one ! (11) With their mind fastened on to Me with (chords of) love they were no longer conscious of their own people or (even) of their (own) self, much less of this world or the next—any more than sages lost in Yogic trance are conscious of (this world consisting of) names and forms—and merged into (become one with) Me like rivers that lose themselves in the waters of the ocean. (12) Full of passion for Me, thinking Me (only) as their lover, nay, paramour, women (of Vraja) in their hundreds and thousands, who did not know My essential (divine) character, attained to Me, the supreme Brahma, through the fellowship of the righteous. (13) Therefore, turning your back upon injunctions as well as upon interdictions, (nay,) renouncing worldly activity as well as cessation from activity, and rejecting that which has been learnt and that which has (yet) to be learnt, O Uddhava, seek as your refuge Me alone, the one Self of all embodied creatures, with all your being; for with Me alone (as your Master) you can be rid of fear from all quarters. (14-15)

उद्धव उवाच

संशयः शृण्वतो वाचं तव योगेश्वरेश्वर । न निर्वर्तत आत्मस्थो येन भ्राम्यति मे मनः । १६ ।

Uddhava submitted : Even though I am hearing Your discourse, O Lord of (all) Masters of Yoga, the doubt in my mind (as to whether I should really abandon all activity or not) does not cease, so that my mind stands bewildered. (16)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

स एष जीवो विवरप्रसूतिः प्राणेन घोषेण गुहां प्रविष्टः ।
मनोमयं सूक्ष्ममुपेत्य रूपं मात्रा स्वरो वर्णं इति स्थविष्टः । १७ ।
यथानलः खेऽनिलबन्धुरूप्या बलेन दारुण्यधिमथ्यमानः ।
अणुः प्रजातो हविषा समिध्यते तथैव मे व्यक्तिरियं हि वाणी । १८ ।
एवं गदिः कर्म गतिर्विसर्गो घ्राणो रसो दृक् स्पर्शः श्रुतिश्च ।
सङ्कल्पविज्ञानमथाभिमानः सूत्रं रजःसत्त्वतमोविकारः । १९ ।
अयं हि जीवस्त्रिवृदब्जयोनिरव्यक्त एको वयसा स आद्यः ।
विश्लिष्टशक्तिर्बहुधेव भाति बीजानि योनिं प्रतिपद्य यद्वत् । २० ।
यस्मिन्निदं प्रोतमशेषमोतं पटो यथा तन्नुवितानसंस्थः ।
य एष संसारतरुः पुराणः कर्मात्मकः पुष्पफले प्रसूते । २१ ।
द्वे अस्य बीजे शतमूलस्त्रिनालः पञ्चस्कन्धः पञ्चरसप्रसूतिः ।
दशैकशारो द्विसुपर्णनीडस्त्रिबल्कलो द्विफलोऽर्कं प्रविष्टः । २२ ।
अदन्ति चैकं फलमस्य गृध्रा ग्रामेचरा एकमरण्यवासाः ।
हंसा य एकं बहुरूपमिज्यैर्मयामयं वेद स वेद वेदम् । २३ ।
एवं गुरुपासनयैकभक्त्या विद्याकुठारेण शितेन धीरः ।
विवृश्य जीवाशयमप्रमत्तः सम्यद्य चात्मानमथ त्यजास्त्रम् । २४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे द्वादशोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

The glorious Lord replied : The aforesaid Supreme (who gives life to all) is self-evident in that He reveals Himself (as follows) in the (six) Cakras (spiritual centres existing in the human body). Having (first) entered the Ādhāra Cakra (located near the anus) alongwith the sonant Prāṇa (known by the name of Parā speech) and assumed the subtle forms composed of the mind-stuff (and known by the names of Paśyanti and Madhyamā in the Manipūra and Viśuddhi Cakras located near the navel and throat respectively), He (finally) manifests Himself (within the mouth) in the grossest form (known by the name of Vaikhari speech and) consisting of Mātrā (measure of time taken in uttering a vowel sound), accent (Udāta etc.), and articulate sound. (17) Just as fire, existing in the form of (unmanifest) heat in the sky, appears in a minute form (as a spark) when being repeatedly churned with force out of (a block of) wood and (fanned by the wind and) growing larger (in course of time), blazes forth with the help of oblations (poured into it), even so I appear (by degrees), as a matter of fact, as (the Parā, Paśyanti, Madhyamā and Vaikhari forms of) this (Vedic) speech. (18) Likewise articulation, work done by the hands, locomotion, evacuation of the bowels and the bladder, perceiving smell and taste, vision, perceiving the touch and audition, conception, cognition and intellection and self-identification with the body etc. (the function of the ego), permeating things (the function of Prakṛti) and the entire range of objective existence (consisting of the Indriyas, the modifications of Rajas, the deities presiding over them, the modifications of Sattva, and the five gross elements, the modifications of Tamas) are My manifestations. (19) This God (the, life-giver of all) is indeed one and unmanifest (in the beginning); for He is the first to become the support of the three Guṇas and the source of the lotus of the universe. Having by force of time purposively embraced His potency (in the form of Mâyā), He appears manifold as it were (even) as, having found a (suitable) soil, seeds assume diverse shapes (in the form of trees etc.). (20) This universe is in no way other than God, in whom it stands woven warp and woof like a piece of cloth, which owes its existence to the expanse of threads. (Just as threads exist even independently of the cloth, but not so the cloth, the universe owes its existence to God but God exists even independently of the universe.) This tree of mundane existence has no beginning, is characterized by activity and puts forth flowers and fruits (in the shape of enjoyment and final beatitude). (21) (Virtue and sin—) two are its seeds, innumerable are its roots (in the shape of cravings); (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—) three are its stalks; five (viz., the five elements) are its main boughs; it yields five (kinds of) saps (in the shape of the five objects of senses); ten and one are its secondary branches (in the shape of the ten Indriyas and the mind); it bears (on it) the nest of two birds (viz., God and the Jiva, the individual soul); three are the layers of its bark (in the shape of the three humours of the body, viz., wind, bile and phlegm); it bears two (varieties of) fruits (viz., joy and sorrow) and spreads as far as (the sphere of) the sun (there being no metempsychosis for those who have penetrated beyond the sphere of the sun). (22) Full of carnal desires (the vulture-like) men of the world partake of its one fruit (viz., misery, even heavenly enjoyment being ultimately productive of sorrow); while (the swan-like) men of wisdom dwelling in the woods (cut off from the world) eat the other (viz., the bliss of immortality). He (alone) knows (the true import of) the Vedas, who comes to realize through (his) preceptors (worthy of respect) the one God (Myself) appearing in multitudinous forms by dint of His Mâyā (In the shape of His will to become many). (23) Having thus subdued yourself and remaining alert (all the while), cut at the root of your astral body (the distinguishing appurtenance of a Jiva) with exclusive devotion (to Me) acquired by sitting at the feet of a preceptor or by means of the keen-edged axe of wisdom (in the form of Self-Realization); and, having (thereby) realized the Self, cast off forthwith (even) the weapon (with which you have rent the veil of ignorance in the form of your Jivahood). (24)

Thus ends the twelfth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIII

The teaching imparted by the Lord in the form of the Divine Swan to the sage Sanaka and his three brothers

श्रीभगवानुवाच

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति गुणा बुद्धेर्न चात्मनः । सत्त्वेनान्यतमो हन्यात् सत्त्वं सत्त्वेन चैव हि । १ ।
 सत्त्वाद् धर्मो भवेद् वृद्धात् पुंसो मद्भक्तिर्लक्षणः । सात्त्विकोपासया सत्त्वं ततो धर्मः प्रवर्तते । २ ।
 धर्मो रजस्तमो हन्यात् सत्त्ववृद्धिरनुत्तमः । आशु नश्यति तन्मूलो ह्यधर्म उभये हते । ३ ।
 आगमोऽपः प्रजा देशः कालः कर्म च जन्म च । ध्यानं मन्योऽथ संस्कारो दशैते गुणहेतवः । ४ ।
 तत्तत् सात्त्विकमेवैषां यद् यद् वृद्धाः प्रचक्षते । निन्दन्ति तामसं तत्तद् राजसं तदुपेक्षितम् । ५ ।
 सात्त्विकान्येव सेवेत पुमान् सत्त्वविवृद्धये । ततो धर्मस्ततो ज्ञानं यावत् स्मृतिरपोहनम् । ६ ।
 वेणुसङ्घर्षजो वह्निर्दध्वा शाम्यति तद्वनम् । एवं गुणव्यत्ययजो देहः शाम्यति तत्क्रियः । ७ ।

The glorious Lord began again : Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—these are the modes of Buddhi (Prakṛti) and not of the Self. By (developing) the quality of Sattva (therefore) one should control (the operation of) the other two (viz., Rajas and Tamas) and (then) Sattva itself (in the shape of Sāttvika virtues like truthfulness and compassion) by Sattva (in the form of quietism). (1) As a result of Sattva grown predominant appears in man the virtue bearing the label of Devotion to Me. Sattva develops through the use of Sāttvika things and thence proceeds righteousness (in the form of Devotion). (2) Righteousness (in the form of Devotion), which contributes to the predominance of Sattva and which is (therefore) the superlative virtue, curbs (the element of) Rajas and Tamas; and, when both these are subdued, unrighteousness, which has its root in these latter, soon disappears as a matter of course. (3) Scripture, water, the people (environment), place (surroundings), time, occupation and birth, (the object of) contemplation, Mantra (spell) and purificatory rites—these ten are contributory to the growth of a particular Guṇa. (4) Of these (latter) whatever men of mature judgment speak approvingly of is unquestionably Sāttvika; that which they condemn is Tāmasika and that which is looked upon by them with indifference is Rājasika. (5) For the predominance of Sattva a man should make use of Sāttvika things alone. Thence will proceed righteousness (in the form of Devotion) and thence (again) will follow (the light of) wisdom culminating in Self-Realization and the extinction of darkness (in the form of the two bodies and their ultimate cause, (viz., the three Guṇas). (6) The fire produced by the attrition of bamboo stalks subsides after consuming that thicket (by its flames); so the body born of unevenness of the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and behaving like the (said) fire, ceases to be. (7)

उद्धव उवाच

विदन्ति मर्त्याः प्रायेण विषयान् पदमापदाम् । तथापि भुञ्जते कृष्ण तत् कथं श्वरराजवत् । ८ ।

Uddhava submitted : Men generally know the pleasures of sense to be the source of calamities; how is it (then) that, like the dog, the donkey and the goat, they still (doggedly pursue and) enjoy them, O Kṛṣṇa ? (8)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अहमित्यन्यथाबुद्धिः प्रमत्तस्य यथा हृदि । उत्सर्पति रजो घोरं ततो वैकारिकं मनः । ९ ।
 रजोयुक्तस्य मनसः सङ्कल्पः सविकल्पकः । ततः कामो गुणध्यानाद् दुःसहः स्याद्दि दुर्मतेः । १० ।
 करोति कामवशः कर्माण्यविजितेन्द्रियः । दुःखोदकाणि सम्पश्यन् रजोवेगविमोहितः । ११ ।
 रजस्तमोभ्यां यदपि विद्वान् विक्षिप्तधीः पुनः । अतन्द्रितो मनो युञ्जन् दोषदृष्टिर्न सज्जते । १२ ।
 अप्रमत्तोऽनुयुञ्जीत मनो मय्यर्पयञ्छनैः । अनिर्विण्णो यथाकालं जितश्लासो जितासनः । १३ ।
 एतावान् योग आदिष्टो मच्छिष्यैः सनकादिभिः । सर्वतो मन आकृष्य मय्यद्वाऽऽवेश्यते यथा । १४ ।

The glorious Lord replied : The perverted notion of "I" (with reference to the body etc.) duly springs up in the heart of the deluded soul; due to such notion Rajas, which is the root of sorrow, pervades the mind, even though the latter is born of Sattva. (9) In the mind, coloured with Rajas, of a man of perverted judgment springs up (first of all) the notion about an object being worth enjoying and (then) as to how it can be enjoyed. Next arises in him, as a result of his dwelling on the excellent aspects of that object, a passion for it which is indeed difficult to arrest. (10) Having no control over his senses and overpowered by desire, the man embarks upon actions attended with sorrow) though clearly perceiving them to be such, deluded as he is by the impetuosity of Rajas. (11) The man of discrimination, though his mind (too) is (sometimes) distracted (and even infatuated) by Rajas and Tamas, collects his mind again with effort, alive as he is to the evil inherent in the pleasures of sense, and does not get attached to them. (12) Having controlled the breath and secured steadiness of posture, and remaining alert and not feeling bored (in the event of success not coming within sight soon) one should slowly compose the mind, concentrating it on Me at the appointed time (thrice a day). (13) Withdrawing the mind from everything (else), it should be duly and directly established in Me; this much comprises the Yoga taught (by Me) to Brahmā accompanied by My disciples, the sages Sanaka and others. (14)

उद्धव उवाच

यदा त्वं सनकादिभ्यो येन रूपेण केशव । योगमादिष्टवानेतद् रूपमिच्छामि वेदितुम् । १५ ।

Uddhava submitted : I wish to know about that form in which and when you taught the Yoga to Sanaka and his three brothers, O Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva) ! (15)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

पुत्रा हिरण्यगर्भस्य मानसाः सनकादयः । पप्रच्छुः पितरं सूक्ष्मां योगस्यैकान्तिकीं गतिम् । १६ ।

The glorious Lord replied : Sanaka and his brothers mind-born sons of Brahmā (the creator), questioned their father (once) about the unfailing and highest consummation of Yoga, so difficult to understand. (16)

सनकादय ऊचुः

गुणेषुविशते चेतो गुणाश्चेतसि च प्रभो । कथमन्योन्यसंयागो मुमुक्षोरतितृतीयोः । १७ ।

Sanaka and others submitted : The mind clings to the sense-objects (by virtue of its natural affinity to them) and the latter get imprinted on the mind (in the form of latencies). O Lord ! How can it be possible for the seeker of Liberation, who is keen to reach the other shore, to part them one from the other ? (17)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

एवं पृष्ठो महादेवः स्वयंभूर्भूतभावनः । ध्यायमानः प्रश्नबीजं नाभ्यपद्यत कर्मधीः । १८ ।
 स मामचिन्तयद् देवः प्रश्नपारितोषया । तस्याहं हंसरूपेण सकाशमगमं तदा । १९ ।
 दृष्ट्वा मां त उपव्रज्य कृत्वा पादाभिवन्दनम् । ब्रह्माणमग्रतः कृत्वा पप्रच्छुः को भवानिति । २० ।
 इत्थं मुनिभिः पृष्ठस्तत्त्वजिज्ञासुभिस्तदा । यदवोचमहं तेभ्यस्तदुद्धव निबोध मे । २१ ।
 वस्तुनो यद्यनानात्वमात्मनः प्रश्न ईदृशः । कथं घटेत वो विप्रा वक्तुर्वा मे क आश्रयः । २२ ।
 पञ्चात्मकेषु भूतेषु समानेषु च वस्तुतः । को भवानिति वः प्रश्नो वाचारम्भो ह्यनर्थकः । २३ ।
 मनसा वचसा दृष्ट्या गृह्यतेऽन्यैरपीन्द्रियैः । अहमेव न मनोऽन्यदिति बुध्यध्वपञ्चसा । २४ ।
 गुणेषु विविशते चेतो गुणाश्चेतसि च प्रजाः । जीवस्य देह उभयं गुणाश्चेतो मदात्मनः । २५ ।
 गुणेषु चाविशश्चित्तमभीक्ष्णं गुणसेवया । गुणाश्च चित्तप्रभवा मद्रूप उभयं त्यजेत् । २६ ।
 जाग्रत् स्वप्नः सुषुप्तं च गुणतो बुद्धिवृत्तयः । तासां विलक्षणो जीवः साक्षित्वेन विनिश्चितः । २७ ।
 यर्हि संसृतिबन्धोऽयमात्मनो गुणवृत्तिदः । मयि तुर्ये स्थितो जह्यात्तत्त्यागस्तद् गुणचेतसाम् । २८ ।
 अहङ्कारकृतं बन्धमात्मनोऽर्थविपर्ययम् । विद्वान् निर्विद्य संसारचिन्तां तुर्ये स्थितस्त्वजेत् । २९ ।
 यावन्नानार्थधीः पुंसो न निर्वर्तेत युक्तिभिः । जागर्त्यपि स्वपन्नज्ञः स्वप्ने जागरणं यथा । ३० ।
 असत्त्वादात्मनोऽन्येषां भावानां तत्कृता भिदा । गतयो हेतवश्चास्य मृषा स्वप्नदृशो यथा । ३१ ।
 यो जागरे बहिरनुक्षणधर्मिणोऽर्थान् भुङ्क्ते समस्तकरणैर्हृदि तत्सदृक्षान् ।
 स्वप्ने सुषुप्ते उपसंहरते स एकः स्मृत्यन्वयात्त्रिगुणवृत्तिदुर्गिन्द्रियेशः । ३२ ।
 एवं विमृश्य गुणतो मनसस्त्रयवस्था मन्मायया मयि कृता इति निश्चितार्थाः ।
 संछिद्य हार्दमनुमानसदुक्तितीक्ष्णज्ञानासिना भजत माखिलसंशयाधिम् । ३३ ।

The glorious Lord continued : Thus interrogated, Brahmā (the great god), the self-born creator of beings, could not get, in spite of his deep thought, at the root of the question (ignorance about the Self), his mind being taken up with his duty (of creation). (18) The said god fixed his mind on Me with intent to get to the other side (the hidden meaning) of the question. Then I sought his presence in the form of a swan (in order to hint at His capacity to alienate the sense-objects from the mind just as the swan is credited with the virtue of separating water from milk when mixed together). (19) Beholding Me and placing Brahmā at their head, they (Sanaka and others) came up to Me and, bowing at My feet, asked Me as to who I was. (20) In these words was I interrogated on the said occasion by the sages, keen as they were to know the Truth. (Now) hear from Me, O Uddhava, what I spoke to them (in reply). (21) If there is unity of the substance known as the Self (and If your question relates to the Self in Me), how can such a question on your part (as you have asked Me, calling upon Me to specify Myself out of many) be relevant, O Brāhmaṇa sages ! Or (even) if I (proceed to) speak (in reply), what (distinctive quality) can be My basis (for an answer) ? (22) (If, on the other hand, it relates to My body, even then) your question as to who I am is indeed a (mere) drill in words and (hence) meaningless, the bodies of living creatures being identical (in substance), constituted (as they are) of the five elements, and (also) from the point of view of ultimate reality. (23) Whatever is grasped by the mind, expressed through speech and perceived through the faculty of vision, nay, even with the other senses is but Myself, there is nothing other than Me; know this as a result of enquiry into the truth. (24) (True,) the mind cleaves to the sense-objects and the latter get imprinted on the mind, O My sons ! The senseobjects and the mind both (however) constitute the body (i.e., an adjunct and not the essence) of the Jiva, which is essentially the same as I (so that there is no real affinity between the Jiva, on the one hand, and the sense-objects and the mind, on the other, which can therefore be easily transcended by the Jiva by contemplating on its divine essence, its identity with Brahma. (25) Becoming one with Me (and thus realizing its own true nature), the Jiva should (therefore) give up both—viz., the mind clinging to the sense-objects as a result of repeatedly enjoying them and the sense-objects that get imprinted on it (in the form of latencies). (26) Wakefulness, the dream state and deep slumber are the (three) states of the mind (and not of the Jiva), following from (the preponderance of) the (three) Guṇas, (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas respectively). The Jiva, however, is conclusively known to be distinct from them as being their witness. (27) Since this identification of the soul with Buddhi (which is responsible for its transmigration) attributes to it the functions of the (three) Guṇas, therefore, getting established in Me, the transcendent Brahma (which lies beyond the three states of wakefulness etc.), the Jiva should shake off this identification. Thereafter follows the (mutual) divorce of the sense-objects and the mind. (28) Realizing the bondage of the soul—occasioned by self-identification with one's psycho-physical organism—to be the source of evil (in the shape of obscuring one's blissful nature), and feeling disgusted with it, one should get established in the fourth (transcendent) principle and give up identification with the body etc., (which is responsible for the transmigration of the soul) and the resultant thought of gratifying the self. (29) So long as the sense of reality of diverse objects does not disappear from the mind of man through arguments, the fool continues to sleep even though he is awake, just like the man who is waking in a dream. (30) (Objective entities like the body) other than the Self having no existence, the differences (of Varṇa, Āśrama and so on) occasioned by them, the (various) destinies (such as the enjoyments of heaven, to be attained by men after death and described in the Vedas) and their causes (in the shape of good and evil actions of various kinds) are (all) unreal with the Self as things seen by a dreaming man. (31) He who while waking perceives outside himself through all his senses objects having properties changing every moment, (nay,) who experiences within his heart in a dream things (shaped by his Vāsanās or cravings and) similar to those perceived in the waking state and who in deep slumber withdraws them (all) is one and the same, connected as he is with all the states by memory as their witness and as the controller of the senses. (32) Pondering thus and arriving at the following conclusion about the nature of the Self that the three states of the mind (referred to heretofore and) traceable to the (three) Guṇas (or modes of Prakṛti) are superimposed on Me (appearing as the Jiva) by My deluding potency (veiling My true nature), cut at the root of egotism, the basis of all doubts (as to whether the soul is different from the body etc., or one with it, whether it is one or there is a plurality of souls and so on) with the sword of wisdom whetted by reasoning, the precepts of saints and the Śruti texts, and betake yourselves to Me seated in your (very) heart. (33)

ईक्षेत विभ्रममिदं मनसो विलासं दृष्टे विनष्टमतिलोलमलगतचक्रम् ।

विज्ञानमेकमुखधेव विभाति माया स्वप्नस्थिता गुणविसर्गकृतो विकल्पः । ३४ ।

दृष्टिं ततः प्रतिनिवर्त्य निवृत्तृष्णस्तृष्णी भवेन्नृजसुखानुभवो निरोहः ।

संदृश्यते क्व च यदीदमवस्तुबुद्ध्या त्यक्तं भ्रमाय न भवेत् स्मृतिरानिपातात् । ३५ ।

देहं च नश्वरमवस्थितमुत्थितं वा सिद्धो न पश्यति यतोऽध्यगमत् स्वरूपम् ।

दैवात्पेतपुत दैववशादुपेतं वासो यथा परिकृतं मदिरामदायः । ३६ ।

देहोऽपि दैववशः खलु कर्म यावत् स्वारम्भकं प्रतिसमीक्षत एव सासुः ।

तं सप्रपञ्चमधिरूढसमाधियोगः स्वाप्नं पुनर्न भजते प्रतिबुद्धवस्तुः । ३७ ।

मयैतदुक्तं वो विप्रा गुह्यं यत् सांख्ययोगयोः । जानीत माऽऽगतं यजं युष्मद्धर्मविवक्षया । ३८ ।
 अहं योगस्य सांख्यस्य सत्यस्यैतस्य तेजसः । परायणं द्विजश्रेष्ठाः श्रियः कीर्तनस्य च । ३९ ।
 मां भजन्ति गुणाः सर्वे निर्गुणं निरपेक्षकम् । सुहृदं प्रियमात्मानं साम्यासद्भादयोऽगुणाः । ४० ।

One should look upon this (objective) world as an illusion in that it is a creation of the mind, open to perception and evanescent as a dream and most unsteady like a revolving firebrand. Consciousness, though one, appears as many (through a freak of imagination) and this threefold division (in the shape of the body, the Indriyas and the mind), wrought by the projection of the (three) Guṇas (or modes of Prakṛti) is a (mere) illusory appearance. (34) (Therefore,) diverting one's eye (mind) from the body etc., (which are all superimposed on the Self), one should remain absorbed in the realization of one's own blissful nature. His thirst for enjoyment having ceased (once for all), he should keep quiet and effortless. Even if this body etc., is perceived (as a distinct reality) at times (while taking one's meals, answering the calls of nature and so on), what has been dismissed as unreal (other than the Self) can no longer delude us, although its impression on the mind may continue till death. (35) Nay, a man established in the Self no longer cognizes (even) his perishable body, by means of which he realized his self, as risen (from his seat), or settled (again), gone out (to some other place) or come (back) by chance, any more than a man blinded by intoxication caused by wine cognizes the garment worn by him as (still) on his person or fallen therefrom. (36) The body too, including the Indriyas and the vital principle, functioning as it does under the control of Providence, undoubtedly and invariably survives till the Karma (the stock of merit and sin) which brought it into existence stands (has not been reaped). He (however) who has climbed up to the highest ladder of Yoga (concentration of mind) known by the name of Samādhī (absorption of mind into the Universal Spirit) and realized the truth does not recapture (as his own self or its own) the body alongwith the world (directly connected with it in the shape of one's wife, children, house and other material possessions) any more than the man who has awoke from sleep does his dream-body. (37) This is the secret of Sāṅkhya (the branch of knowledge which distinguishes Matter from Spirit) and Yoga (the system of philosophy founded by the sage Patañjali), which has been expounded by Me, to you, O Brāhmaṇa sages ! Know Me to be Yajña (Lord Viṣṇu Himself) arrived (here) with intent to expound (unfold) to you (the secret of) Dharmas (the righteous courses leading to Liberation). (38) I am the supreme goal of Yoga and Sāṅkhya, virtue both in its ideal and practical form, glory and prosperity, celebrity and self-control, O jewels among the twice-born ! (39) All virtues like even-mindedness and non-attachment, which are not products of the three Guṇas (and therefore eternal) find shelter in Me, transcendent and free from desire as I am, the beloved friend, (nay,) the (very) Self (of all). (40)

इति मे छिन्नसन्देहा मुनयः सनकादयः । सभाजयित्वा परया भक्त्यागृणत संस्तवैः । ४१ ।

तैरहं पूजितः सम्यक् संस्तुतः परमर्षिभिः । प्रत्येयाय स्वकं धाम पश्यतः परमेष्ठिनः । ४२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः । १३ ।

Having (duly) worshipped Me with supreme devotion, the sages Sanaka and his (three) brothers—who had their doubts (as to the way in which the mind could be weaned from the objects of sense) thus resolved by Me (in the form of the divine Swan)—celebrated Me through songs of praise. (41) Honoured with due ceremony and glorified at length by the aforesaid great sages, I flew back to My (divine) realm, Brahma (the highest functionary of the universe) looking on. (42)

Thus ends the thirteenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIV

Glorious of the Path of Devotion and the Process of Meditation described

उद्धव उवाच

वदन्ति कृष्ण श्रेयांसि बहूनि ब्रह्मवादिनः । तेषां विकल्पप्राधान्यमुताहो एकमुख्यता । १ ।

भवतोदाहृतः स्वामिन् भक्तियोगोऽनपेक्षितः । निरस्य सर्वतः सङ्गं येन त्वय्याविशेष्मन् । २ ।

Uddhava submitted : Exponents of Veda speak of many a course of discipline leading to final beatitude, O Kṛṣṇa ! Does their importance vary according to the choice of the striver or does prominence attach to (only) one (of them)? (1) The discipline of Devotion—by recourse to which the mind, having shaken off attachment for all (others), gets fixed on You—has been declared by You as independent of other disciplines, my Master ! (2)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

कालेन नष्टा प्रलये वाणीयं वेदसंज्ञिता । मयाऽऽदौ ब्रह्मणे प्रोक्ता धर्मो यसां मदात्मकः । ३ ।

तेन प्रोक्ता च पुत्राय मनवे पूर्वजाय सा । ततो भृवाद्योऽगृह्णन् सप्त ब्रह्ममहर्षयः । ४ ।

तेभ्यः पितृभ्यस्तत्पुत्रा देवदानवगृह्यकाः । मनुष्याः सिद्धगन्धर्वाः सविद्याधरचारणाः । ५ ।

किं देवाः किन्नरा नागा रक्षः किम्पुरुषादयः । बह्व्यस्तेषां प्रकृतयो रजःसत्त्वतमोभुवः । ६ ।

याभिर्भूतानि भिद्यन्ते भूतानां मतयस्तथा । यथाप्रकृति सर्वेषां चित्रा वाचः स्रवन्ति हि । ७ ।

एवं प्रकृतिर्वैचित्र्याद् भिद्यन्ते मतयो नृणाम् । पारम्यरेण केषाञ्चित् पाखण्डमतयोऽपरे । ८ ।

मन्त्रायामोहितधियः पुरुषाः पुरुषर्षभ । श्रेयो वदन्त्यनेकान्तं यथाकर्म यथारुचि । ९ ।

धर्ममेके यशश्चान्ये कामं सत्यं दमं शमम् । अन्ये वदन्ति स्वार्थं वा ऐश्वर्यं त्यागभोजनम् । १० ।

केचिद् यज्ञतपोदानं व्रतानि नियमान् यमान् । आद्यन्तवन्त एवैषां लोकाः कर्मविनिर्मिताः ।

दुःखोदकास्तमोनिष्ठाः क्षुद्रानन्दाः शुचार्पिताः । ११ ।

The glorious Lord replied : In course of time this word (of Mine), bearing the name of Veda, in which stands described the course of conduct helping one to fix one's mind on Me, disappeared during Pralaya (the period of final dissolution). At the beginning of (the next) creation (however) it was delivered by Me to Brahmā. (3) By Brahmā, again, it was taught to his eldest son, (Svāyambhuva) Manu; and the seven great seers associated with the creation of the universe, Bhṛgu and others, received it from (Svāyambhuva) Manu. (4) From them, the fathers (of creation), their progeny, the gods, the Dānavas and the Guhyakas (Yakṣas), human beings, Siddhas and Gandharvas, including Vidyādharas and Cāraṇas as well as men* of the other Dvīpas (divisions of the terrestrial globe other than Jambūdīpa),

* Being proof against fatigue, sweet and foul smell, they are so akin to the gods that when seen they give rise to a doubt in the mind of the looker-on whether they are gods or earthly beings. Hence they are referred to in the above verse as 'किं देवाः'.

Kinnaras* Nāgas, Rākṣasas, Kimpuruṣas† and others received it. Diverse are the natural tendencies of the aforementioned, born as they are of (varied proportions of) Rajas, Sattva and Tamas, due to which created beings and their thoughts (too) differ, and in conformity with their nature indeed diverse interpretations of the Vedas flow from (the mouths of) them all. (5—7) In this way what with diversity of disposition and what with the oral teaching imparted from father to son the minds of some men get perverted, while others embrace heretic views. (8) With their judgment clouded by My deluding potency, O jewel among men, people speak of different ways to attain blessedness according to their own past Karma and taste. (9) Some (viz., the advocates of Karma-Mīmāṃsā) declare it to be Dharma (religious merit); others (the poets) call it renown; (still) others (such as Vātsyāyana) name it as sexual enjoyment; some (the advocates of Yoga) designate it as truthfulness, control of the senses and mind-control. Others (such as politicians) speak of wealth and power as their well-known end (and the policies of conciliation etc., as the means to that end). Advocates of renunciation declare it as renunciation, while hedonists call it sensuous enjoyment. (10) Some call it Yajña (worship of gods); while others speak of it as austerity, liberality, sacred vows, observances and the five forms of self-abnegation. The rewards of these are indeed such as have a beginning and an end, fruits as they are of (human) endeavour. They bring sorrow in their train, culminate in ignorance, afford trivial delight and are attended with grief (even while they are being enjoyed). (11)

मय्यर्पितात्मनः सन्ध्व निरपेक्षस्य सर्वतः । मयाऽऽत्मना सुखं यत्तत् कुतः स्याद् विषयात्मनाम् । १२ ।

अकिञ्चनस्य दान्तस्य शान्तस्य समचेतसः । मया सन्तुष्टमनसः सर्वाः सुखमया दिशः । १३ ।

न पारमेष्ठ्यं न महेन्द्रधिष्यं न सार्वभौमं न रसाधिपत्यम् ।

न योगसिद्धीरपुनर्भवं वा मय्यर्पितात्वेच्छति मद्भिनायत् । १४ ।

न तथा मे प्रियतम आत्मयोनिर्न शङ्करः । न च सङ्कर्षणो न श्रीर्नवात्मा च यथा भवान् । १५ ।

निरपेक्षं मुनिं शान्तं निर्वैरं समदर्शनम् । अनुब्रजाम्यहं नित्यं पूयेत्यङ्गिरेणुभिः । १६ ।

निष्किञ्चना मय्यनुरक्तचेतसः शान्ता महान्तोऽखिलजीववत्सलाः ।

कामैरनालब्धधियो जुषन्ति यत् तत्रैरपेक्ष्यं न विदुः सुखं मम । १७ ।

How could that happiness fall to the lot of those who have set their mind on sense-delights—the happiness which is enjoyed with Me as his self, O noble one, by him who has fixed his mind on Me and expects no gratification from any (other) source ? (12) All the (four) quarters are full of joy to him who has nothing to call his own, has (fully) subdued his senses and mind, (nay,) whose mind is equipoised (free from likes and dislikes) and fully gratified with Me. (13) He who has bestowed his mind on Me no more aspires for the position of Brahmā (the highest functionary in the administration of the universe), much less for the realm of the great Indra (the ruler of paradise), still less for sovereignty over the entire globe, rulership of the subterranean worlds or mystic powers acquired through the practice of Yoga, nor does he seek (even) final beatitude (lit., cessation of rebirth for all time to come) divorced from Me. (14) Neither Brahmā (My own son) nor Lord Śiva (who is My own Self) nor again Lord Balarāma (My own elder brother) nor Goddess Śrī (My better half) nor My own (divine) personality is so very dear to Me as (a devotee like) you. (15) I ever dog the footsteps of him who is free from (all) expectation, is given to contemplation (on Me), composed, free from animosity and sees unity everywhere, in order that I may be cleansed (absolved from

* The Kinnaras (किन्नरा इव) are so-called because they partially resemble human beings in their form or facial structures

† The Kimpurusas (किंचित् पुरुषा इव) are another class of semi-human beings partly resembling human beings and partly the stigma of not being able to repay My debt to him) by the dust of his feet (that is sure to fall on My person in that case). (16) Others cannot realize My all-blissful character which is apprehended by those exalted souls who have nothing to call their own, whose mind is devoted to Me, who have subdued their passions and are fond of all living beings and whose understanding is unclouded by desires; (for) this character of Mine can be known only by those who are free from wants. (17)

बाध्यमानोऽपि मद्धक्तो विषयैरजितेन्द्रियः । प्रायः प्रगल्भया भक्त्या विषयेनाभिभूयते । १८ ।

यथाग्निः सुसमृद्धार्चिः करोत्येधांसि भस्मसात् । तथा मद्धिवया भक्तिरूढवैनांसि कृत्स्नशः । १९ ।

न साधयति मां योगो न सांख्यं धर्म उद्धव । न स्वाध्यायस्तपस्यागो यथा भक्तिर्ममोर्जिता । २० ।

भक्त्याहमेकया ग्राह्यः श्रद्धयाऽऽत्मा प्रियः सताम् । भक्तिः पुनरिति मन्निष्ठा श्रृपाकानपि सम्भवात् । २१ ।

धर्मः सत्यदशोपेतो विद्या वा तपसान्विता । मद्धक्त्यापेतमात्मानं न सम्यक् प्रपुनरिति हि । २२ ।

कथं विना रोमहर्षं द्रवता चेत्तस्मात् विना । विनाऽऽनन्दाश्रुकलया शुद्धेद् भक्त्या विनाऽऽशयः । २३ ।

वाग् गद्गदा द्रवते यस्य चित्तं रुदत्यभीक्ष्णं हसति क्वचिच्च ।

विलज्ज उद्गायति नृत्यते च मद्धक्तियुक्तो भुवनं पुनरिति । २४ ।

यथाग्निना हेम मलं जहाति ध्यातं पुनः स्वं भजते च रूपम् ।

आत्मा च कर्मानुशयं विधूय मद्धक्तियोगेन भजत्यथो माम् । २५ ।

यथा यथाऽऽत्मा परिमृज्यतेऽसौ मत्पुण्यगाथाश्रवणाभिधानैः ।

तथा तथा पश्यति वस्तु सूक्ष्मं चक्षुर्यथैवाञ्जनसम्प्रयुक्तम् । २६ ।

Though attracted by objects of senses, My devotee, who has not (yet) been able to conquer his senses, is not generally overpowered by (such) objects, thanks to his powerful devotion (to Me). (18) (Even) as fire which has fully burst into flames reduces a pile of firewood to ashes, so does devotion directed towards Me (whatever its origin) burns one's sins in toto, O Uddhava ! (19) Neither Yoga nor Sāṅkhya nor righteousness nor study of the Vedas (or Japa of the Divine Name), austerity or renunciation captivates Me (so thoroughly) as does intense Devotion. (20) I, the beloved Self of the righteous, can be captured (only) through exclusive Devotion coupled with reverence. Devotion concentrated on Me absolves even the pariahs (who cook and eat the flesh of dogs) from the stigma attaching to their birth. (21) Piety accompanied by veracity and compassion or (even) learning coupled with askesis indeed does not thoroughly and once for all cleanse a mind destitute of Devotion. (22) How can Devotion be known except through the hair standing on end or through one's heart melting or through tears of joy (trickling down one's cheeks) and how can one's mind be purified except through Devotion ? (23) A man full of devotion to Me—who speaks in a voice choked with emotion, whose heart melts (through affection), who weeps incessantly (at the thought of his separation from Me) and sometimes laughs (when reminded of the inwardness of My pastimes), (nay,) who sings unabashed at the top of his voice and dances (out of joy)—purifies the (whole) world. (24) (Even) as gold sheds its dross and regains its purity (only) when heated with fire, so does the soul shake off the seeds of Karma through the discipline of Devotion and forthwith attains oneness with Me. (25) The more one's mind gets purified by listening to and recounting My auspicious stories the better able is the Jiva to discern the subtle reality (of the Self), even as the eye is better able to perceive a minute object (the clearer it becomes) when treated with a (medicated) pigment. (26)

विषयान् ध्यायतश्चित्तं विषयेषु विषजते । मामनुस्मरतश्चित्तं मध्येव प्रविलीयते । २७ ।

तस्मादसदभिधानं यथा स्वप्नमनोरथम् । हित्वा मयि समाधत्स्व मनो मद्भावभाविनम् । २८ ।

स्त्रीणां स्त्रीसङ्गिनां सङ्गं त्यक्त्वा दूरत आत्मवान्। क्षमे विवर्त्त आसीनश्चिन्तयेन्मामतन्द्रितः। १२९।

न तथास्य भवेत् क्लेशो बन्धश्चान्यप्रसङ्गतः। योषित्सङ्गाद् यथा पुंसो यथा तत्सङ्गिसङ्गतः। १३०।

The mind of a man dwelling on the objects of sense gets attached to them. (Even so) the mind of one (engaged in) contemplating on Me gets absorbed in Me alone. (27) (Therefore), giving up the thought of the unreal and worthless objects (of the world) as things seen in a dream or fancied, concentrate your mind-purified through devotion to Me—on Me (alone). (28) Abandoning from a distance the company of women as well as of men delighting in the company of women, and having conquered one's mind, one should sit down in a secure and lonely place and unweariedly think of Me. (29) In the case of such a man no such affliction and no such bondage results from attachment to others as does from the company of women as well as of men delighting in the company of women. (30)

उद्धव उवाच

यथा त्वामरविन्दाक्ष यादृशं वा यदात्मकम्। ध्यायेन्मुमुक्षुरेतन्मे ध्यानं त्वं वक्तुमर्हसि। १३१।

Uddhava submitted : (Now) be pleased to tell Me, O Lord with lotus-like eyes, the process of meditation indicated in the foregoing verses—as to how, in what form and as what a seeker of Liberation should contemplate on You. (31)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

सम आसन आसीनः समकायो यथासुखम्। हस्तावुत्सङ्गं आधाय स्वनासाग्रकृतेक्षणः। १३२।

प्राणस्य शोधयेन्मार्गं पूरकुम्भकरचकैः। विपर्ययेणापि शनैरभ्यसेन्नित्जितेन्द्रियः। १३३।

हृद्यविच्छिन्नमोङ्कारं घण्टानादं विसोर्णवत्। प्राणेनोदीर्यं तत्राथ पुनः संवेशयेत् स्वरम्। १३४।

एवं प्रणवसंयुक्तं प्राणमेव समभ्यसेत्। दशकृत्वस्त्रिषवणं मासादवागं जितानिलः। १३५।

हृत्पुण्डरीकमन्तःस्थमूर्ध्वनालमधोमुखम्। ध्यात्वोर्ध्वमुखमुन्निद्रमष्टपत्रं सकर्णिकम्। १३६।

कर्णिकायां न्यसेत् सूर्यसोमाग्नीनुत्तरोत्तरम्। बह्निमध्ये स्मरेद् रूपं ममैतद् ध्यानमङ्गलम्। १३७।

समं प्रशान्तं सुमुखं दीर्घचारुचतुर्भुजम्। सुचारुसुन्दरग्रीवं सुकपोलं रुचिस्मितम्। १३८।

समानकर्णिविन्यस्तस्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलम्। हेमाम्बरं घनश्यामं श्रीवत्सश्रीनिकेतनम्। १३९।

शङ्खचक्रगदापद्मचवनमालाविभूषितम्। नूपुरैर्विलसत्पादं कौस्तुभप्रभया युतम्। १४०।

द्युमकिरीटकटककटिसूत्राङ्गादायुतम्। सर्वाङ्गसुन्दरं हृद्यं प्रसादसुमुखेक्षणम्।

सुकुमारमभिध्यायेत् सबद्धिषु मनो दधत्। १४१।

The glorious Lord replied : Seated on a seat of moderate height (neither very high nor very low) with his body erect in a comfortable posture placing both his hands (with palm upwards) on his lap and steadying his gaze on the tip of his nose, and having fully controlled his senses, one should cleanse the passages of the life-breath by (the three processes of breath-control (viz., Pūraka (slow inhalation) Kumbhaka (retention of breath) and Recaka (slow exhalation) and should slowly practise this course in the reverse order (i. e., by doing Recaka first, Kumbhaka next and Pūraka last of all) too. (32-33) Manifesting in mind through the instrumentality of the life-breath the sound of Praṇava (the sacred syllable OM), as extending uninterruptedly, fine as a fibre of the lotus stalk, (from the Mūlādhāra located near the anus up to the crown of the head) one should then follow it with a sharp nasal sound continuous as the ringing of a bell. (34) In this way he should exercise his breath, joining it with Praṇava, thrice a day ten times each; within a month he will have attained control over his breath. (35) Visualizing the heart—existing within the body in the shape of a lotus bud turned upside down with its stalk upwards (like the flower of a plantain)—(in an inverted position) with eight open petals and pericarp turned upwards, he should picture to his mind in succession the sun, the moon and fire as existing (in the form of circles) on the pericarp; in the centre of fire he should mentally behold My form as depicted hereafter, (so) happy to contemplate upon. (36-37) He should conceive It as symmetrical, gracious, having a charming countenance, with four long beautiful arms, a most shapely and graceful neck, lovely cheeks and bright smiles; with brilliant alligator-shaped ear-rings adorning well-matched ears, clad in golden raiment, dark-brown as a cloud, bearing (on the right and left side respectively of the chest) the marks of Śrīvatsa (a white curl of hair) and Śrī (a golden streak); decked with a conch, discus, mace and lotus and a wreath of sylvan flowers, feet shining with anklets, (nay,) distinguished by the effulgence of the Kaustubha gem, graced all over with a glorious diadem, wristlets, girdle and armlets; charming of every limb, pleasing to the heart, with a countenance and eyes enlivened with grace and very soft to the touch. And he should concentrate the mind on each limb (individually as well). (38—41)

इन्द्रियाणीन्द्रियार्थेभ्यो मनसाऽऽकृष्य तन्मनः । बुद्ध्या सारथिना धीरः प्रणयेन्मयि सर्वतः । ४२ ।
तत् सर्वव्यापकं चित्तमाकृष्यैकत्र धारयेत् । नान्यानि चिन्तयेद्भूयः सुस्मितं भावयेन्मुखम् । ४३ ।
तत्र लब्धपदं चित्तमाकृष्य व्योम्नि धारयेत् । तच्च त्यक्त्वा मदगरोहो न किञ्चिदपि चिन्तयेत् । ४४ ।
एवं समाहितमतिर्मामेवात्मानमात्मनि । विचष्टे मयि सर्वात्मन ज्योतिर्योतिषि संयुतम् । ४५ ।
ध्यानेनेत्थं सुतीव्रेण युञ्जतो योगिनो मनः । संयास्यत्याशु निर्वाणं ब्रह्मज्ञानक्रियाभ्रमः । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः । १४ ।

Withdrawing the senses from their objects with the help of the mind, and weaning the said mind (too) from all (other) objects with the help of the intellect, the driver (of the chariot of the body), a wise man should focus it on Me. (42) Gathering that mind which takes in the entire personality (of the Lord), he should (learn to) concentrate it on one member (alone). He should no more think of other limbs and should fix his thought (exclusively) on the (Lord's) face wearing a winsome smile. (43) Diverting the mind once it has gained its firm hold on My countenance, he should fix it on My all-pervading Self, (the substratum of all and unattached to all like the sky); and, transcending that too, and becoming one with Me (the Absolute), should cease to think of anything else (not even of the distinction between the subject and the object). (44) With his intellect thus established (in Me) he sees Me in himself and himself actually merged in Me, the Universal Soul, like (an individual) light in (the element of) fire. (45) The misconception regarding Matter (in the form of the body etc., being his own self), knowledge (in the form of ascribing knowership to the Self) and action (in the form of attributing activity to the Self) will soon disappear from the mind of the striver who concentrates his mind through most intense meditation as aforesaid. (46)

Thus ends the fourteenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Sarhita.

अथ पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XV

Names and Characteristics of the various Siddhis (mystic powers) acquired through Yoga

श्रीभगवानुवाच

जितेन्द्रियस्य युक्तस्य जितश्वासस्य योगिनः। मयि धारयतश्चेत उपतिष्ठति सिद्धयः। १।

The glorious Lord began again : Siddhis (mystic powers of various kinds) wait upon the Yogi of steady mind who has subdued his senses and controlled his breath (according to the procedure detailed in verses 32 to 35 of the foregoing discourse) and concentrates his mind on Me. (1)

उद्धव उवाच

कया धारणया कास्वित् कथंस्वित् सिद्धिरच्युत। कति वा सिद्धयो ब्रूहि योगिनां सिद्धिदो भवान्। २।

Uddhava submitted : Kindly say through what mode of concentration which and what kind of Siddhi can be acquired and how many Siddhis (in all) are there, since You are the Bestower of (such) Siddhis on the Yogis, O immortal Lord ! (2)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

सिद्धयोऽष्टादश प्रोक्ता धारणायोगपारगैः। तासामष्टौ मत्प्रधाना दशैव गुणहेतवः। ३।
अणिमा महिमा मूर्तेर्लघिमा प्राप्तिरिन्द्रियैः। प्राकायं श्रुतदृष्टेषु शक्तिप्रेरणमीशिता। ४।
गुणेष्वसङ्गो वशिता यत्कामस्तदवस्यति। एता मे सिद्धयः सौम्य अष्टावौत्पत्तिका मताः। ५।
अनूर्मिमत्त्वं देहैऽस्मिन् दूरश्रवणदर्शनम्। मनोजवः कामरूपं परकायप्रवेशनम्। ६।
स्वच्छन्दमृत्युर्देवानां सहक्रीडानुदर्शनम्। यथासङ्कल्पसंसिद्धिराज्ञाप्रतिहतागतिः। ७।
त्रिकालज्ञत्वमद्वन्द्वं परचिताद्यभिज्ञता। अग्न्यर्काव्युविषादीनां प्रतिष्टम्भोऽपराजयः। ८।
एताश्चेद्देशतः प्रोक्ता योगधारणसिद्धयः। यया धारणया या स्याद् यथा वा स्यान्निबोध मे। ९।
भूतसूक्ष्मात्मनि मयि तन्मात्रं धारयेन्मनः। अणिमानमवाप्नोति तन्मात्रोपासको मम। १०।
महत्यात्मन्यपि परे यथासंस्थं मनो दधत्। महिमानमवाप्नोति भूतानां च पृथक् पृथक्। ११।
परमाणुमये चित्तं भूतानां मयि रज्जयन्। कालसूक्ष्मार्थतां योगी लघिमानमवाप्नुयात्। १२।
धारयन् मय्यहंतत्वे मनो वैकारिकेऽखिलम्। सर्वेन्द्रियाणामात्मत्वं प्राप्तिं प्राप्नोति मन्मनाः। १३।
महत्यात्मनि यः सूत्रे धारयेन्मयि मानसम्। प्राकायं पारमेष्ठ्यं मे विन्दतेऽव्यक्तजन्मनः। १४।
विष्णोः त्र्यधीश्वरे चित्तं धारयेत् कालविग्रहे। स ईशित्वमवाप्नोति क्षेत्रक्षेत्रज्ञचोदनाम्। १५।
नारायणे तुरीयाख्ये भगवच्छब्दशब्दिते। मनो मय्यादधद् योगी मद्धर्मा वशितामियात्। १६।
निर्गुणे ब्रह्मणि मयि धारयन् विशदं मनः। परमानन्दमाप्नोति यत्र कामोऽवसीयते। १७।
श्वेतद्वीपपतौ चित्तं शुद्धे धर्ममये मयि। धारयञ्छ्वेततां याति षड्भूमिरहितो नरः। १८।
मय्यकाशात्मनि प्राणे मनसा घोषमुद्वहन्। तत्रोपलब्ध्वा भूतानां हंसो वाचः शृणोत्यसौ। १९।

चक्षुस्त्वष्टरि संयोज्य त्वष्टरमपि चक्षुषि । मां तत्र मनसा ध्यायन् विश्वं पश्यति सूक्ष्मदृक् । १२० ।
मनो मयि सुसंयोज्य देहं तदनु वायुना । मद्भरणानुभावेन तत्रात्मा यत्र वै मनः । १२१ ।
यदा मन उपादाय यद् यद् रूपं बुभूषति । तत्तद् भवेन्मनोरूपं मद्योगबलमाश्रयः । १२२ ।
परकायं विशन् सिद्ध आत्मानं तत्र भावयेत् । पिण्डं हित्वाविशेत् प्राणो वायुपूतः षड्विधिवत् । १२३ ।
पाण्डुर्याऽऽपीड्य गुदं प्राणं हदुरः कण्ठमूर्धसु । आगोष्य ब्रह्मरन्ध्रेण ब्रह्म नीत्वोत्सृजेत्तनुम् । १२४ ।
विहरिष्यन् सुराक्रीडे मत्स्थं सत्त्वं विभावयेत् । विमानेनोपतिष्ठन्ति सत्त्ववृत्तिः सुरस्त्रियः । १२५ ।
यथा सङ्कल्पयेद् बुद्ध्या यदा वा मत्परः पुमान् । मयि सत्ये मनो युञ्जन्तथा तत् समुपाश्रुते । १२६ ।
यो वै मद्भावमापन्न ईशितुर्वशितुः पुमान् । कुतश्चिन्न विहन्येत तस्य चाज्ञा यथा मम । १२७ ।
मद्भक्त्या शूद्रसत्त्वस्य योगिनो धारणाविदः । तस्य त्रैकालिकी बुद्धिर्जन्ममृत्युपबन्धिता । १२८ ।
अग्न्यादिभिर्न हन्येत मुनेर्योगमयं वपुः । मद्योगश्रान्तचित्तस्य यादसामुदकं यथा । १२९ ।
मद्विभूतीरभिध्यायन् श्रीवत्सास्त्रविभूषिताः । ध्वजातपत्रव्यजनैः स भवेदपराजितः । १३० ।

The glorious Lord replied : Eighteen (in all) are the Siddhis as well as the modes of concentration (leading to them) taught by those that have attained perfection in Yoga (the minor ones, such as insight into the past, present and future, being easily attainable by others too). Of the former, eight abide chiefly in Me (and in a lesser degree in those that have attained similarity of form with Me), (the other) ten being attainable through (mere development of) Sattvaguṇa. (3) 1-Ānimā (reducing one's body to the size of an atom), 2-Mahimā (magnifying it to a gigantic size) and 3-Laghimā (extreme lightness of body)—these three pertain to the body; 4-Prāpti consists in establishing contact with the senses of the entire creation in form of the deities presiding over those senses. 5-Prākāmya means the capacity to enjoy pleasures heard of (through the scriptures as enjoyable in the other world alone) and capable of being seen (though enjoyed only in the subterranean regions); while 6-Īśitā consists in the capacity to impel Māyā and other subordinate potencies to function (according to one's will). (4) 7-Vaśitā means absence of attachment to the pleasures of sense; while the eighth Siddhi is Kāmavasāyitā (according to which one is able to enjoy in the highest measure whatever pleasure one seeks to enjoy). These eight Siddhis, O gentle one, are considered as natural to Me (and unsurpassed). (5) The other ten Siddhis are:—1-absence of hunger and thirst, old age etc., in this (very) body; 2 & 3-the capacity to see and hear from an unusual distance; 4-locomotion at a speed which can be increased according to one's will; 5-taking any form at will; 6-(leaving one's own body and) entering any other (unattended) body; 7-giving up the ghost at will; 8-participation in the pastimes of gods (with the Apsarās or celestial nymphs); 9-attainment of one's desired ends; and 10-exercising authority unobstructed everywhere. (6-7) The minor Siddhis (hinted at in verse 3 above) are:—to know things relating to the past, present and future; to remain unaffected by pairs of opposites (like heat and cold, joy and sorrow, likes and dislikes, etc.); to read others' mind etc; to neutralize the power of fire, the sun, water and poison etc., and to suffer no defeat (at the hands of anyone whatsoever). (8) These are the Siddhis following from Yogic concentration, typically mentioned by Me. (Now) hear from Me what Siddhi can be acquired through which mode of concentration and how. (9) He who focusses his mind, identified with the subtle elements, on Me as ensouling the subtle elements and worships (Me in) that form alone acquires My power of assuming an atomic size (and thereby attaining the capacity to enter even a slab of stone). (10) (Even so) concentrating his mind, identified with Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), on Me, the Supreme ensouling the (said) Mahat-tattva, he acquires the capacity to assume any magnitude (sought for by him); and, focussing his mind on Me as ensouling any of the (five gross) elements individually, he attains the magnitude (all-pervasive character) of that particular element. (11) (Similarly) concentrating his mind on Me as ensouling the atoms of the (four) elements (other than ether), a Yogi attains (extreme) lightness (of body), viz., the capacity to become as subtle as the subtlest division of time. (12) (Likewise) focussing his entire mind on Me as ensouling the (cosmic) Ego, born of Sattvaguna, the Yogi who has given his mind to Me attains the (Siddhi of) Prāpti in the shape of control over the senses of all. (13) He who concentrates his mind on Me as ensouling the (Sūtra, the active aspect of) Mahat-tattva attains (the Siddhi known as) Prākāmya (easy access to all sorts of enjoyments of one's seeking), the highest Siddhi possessed by Me as presiding over the Sūtra, which is born of the Unmanifest. (14) He who focusses his mind on (Me as) the all-pervading Witness, the Ruler of Māyā (consisting of the three Guṇas), attains (the Siddhi known as) Iśitva, viz., control over all bodies and conscious selves. (15) The Yogi who concentrates his mind on Me as Lord Nārāyaṇa, spoken of as the fourth or transcendent principle* (existing beyond the three states of 1. Virāt or the Cosmic Person, presiding over the physical plane, 2. Hiranyagarbha, presiding over the astral plane, and 3. the Causal Principle, presiding over the causal plane) and called by the name of Bhagavān (embodying in Himself the six divine properties of universal dominion, righteousness, glory, prosperity, wisdom and dispassion each in its entirety) acquires My virtues and attains (the Siddhi or) Vaśitā (non-attachment to all material objects). (16) Focussing his pure mind (cleansed through Prāṇāyama etc.), on Me as the transcendent Brahma, one attains supreme bliss (which is only another name for the Siddhi called Kāmāvasāyitā), in which all desire ceases (for good). (17) Concentrating his mind on Me as Lord Aniruddha (the Lord of Śvetadwīpa, who is (absolutely) pure (untainted by the three Guṇas) and the embodiment of (or Propeller of) virtue, man attains (absolute) purity (in the form of no longer being subject to the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti) and is rid of the six waves or changes (viz., hunger and thirst, old age and death, grief and infatuation). (18) Mentally perceiving the (unexpressed) sound in Me as conceived in the form of the cosmic breath, taintless and all pervading like the sky, the said Jīva is able to hear (from a distance) the (diverse) sounds of living beings manifested therein. (19) Uniting the eye with the sun and the sun too with the eye, and contemplating on Me in the aforesaid (mutual) union (of the two), man is gifted with a penetrating vision and is (consequently) able to perceive the (whole) universe. (20) By virtue of the concentration (of mind) practised after uniting with Me the mind and thereafter the body (too) alongwith the breath (accompanying the body), (one attains the Siddhi called Manojava, as a result of which) the body surely finds itself wherever the mind goes. (21) The Yogi gets converted into the very form, sought for by his mind, that he would assume making the mind his material (for that form), the force of concentration of the mind on Me (whose potency is inconceivable and who appear in numerous forms) being the ground of all Siddhis. (22) Seeking to enter another (soulless) body, the Yogi who has controlled his breath as well as his Indriyas and mind should conceive himself as present in that body. (As a result of such contemplation) his vital air (the chief constituent of his astral body, which makes for his Jīva-hood) leaves his (own) body and becoming one with the cosmic air, enters (alongwith it) the other (through its nostrils) as a black bee passes from one flower to another. (23) Having blocked his rectum with his heel and pushed up the vital air (successfully to his heart, chest, throat and crown of head, and (mentally) forcing it upwards through the (aperture known as) Brahmarandhra

* The scripture defines the Turiya or fourth principle as below –

विराट् हिरण्यगर्भश्च कारणं चैत्युपाधयः । ईशम्य यन्त्रिभूतैर्न तुरीयं तत्पदं विदुः ॥ to Brahma (or any other destination sought to be reached by him), the Yogi should shed the body (whenever he likes). (24) Seeking to sport in the sport ground of the gods (in heaven), one should contemplate on Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas and) constituting My personality. (As a sequel to this contemplation) Apsarās (celestial damsels), representing (so many) rays of Sattva, wait on him with aerial cars (ready to take him bodily to heaven). (25) Devoted to Me and focussing his mind on Me, true of resolve as I am, man duly attains that (very) object which he seeks with his intellect whenever and in whatever way he wants it. (26) The command of a man who has acquired My disposition is not flouted anywhere any more than Mine, the Ruler of all and (absolutely) self-dependent as I am. (27) (Direct) knowledge of the past, present and future, coupled with (that of) birth and death (etc., as well as of others' mind etc.), comes to that Yogi whose mind has been purified through devotion to Me and who knows how to concentrate his mind (on Me, the Knower of the past, present and future). (28) Seasoned by Yoga (in the form of concentration on My Personality, which is incapable of being damaged even slightly by fire etc.) the body of a sage whose mind has found its repose in concentration on Me cannot (likewise be damaged by fire and other elements, which cannot harm him any more than water can prove harmful to aquatic creatures. (29) Contemplating on My glorious manifestations (Avatāras) graced with (the marks of) Śrīvatsa (etc.), and decked with My weapons (viz., conch etc.), and distinguished by an ensign, umbrella and chowrie (etc.); the aforesaid sage turns out to be invincible. (30)

उपासकस्य मामेवं योगधारणया मुनेः । सिद्धयः पूर्वकथिता उपतिष्ठन्त्यशेषतः । ३१ ।
 जितेन्द्रियस्य दान्तस्य जितश्चासात्मनो मुनेः । यद्धारणां धारयतः का सा सिद्धिः सुदुर्लभा । ३२ ।
 अन्तरायान् वदन्त्येता युज्यन्तो योगमुत्तमम् । मया सम्पद्यमानस्य कालक्षपणहेतवः । ३३ ।
 जन्मौषधितपोमन्त्रैर्यावन्तिरिह सिद्धयः । योगेनाप्नोति ताः सर्वा नान्यैर्योगगतिं ब्रजेत् । ३४ ।
 सर्वासामपि सिद्धिनां हेतुः पतिरहं प्रभुः । अहं योगस्य सांख्यस्य धर्मस्य ब्रह्मवादिनाम् । ३५ ।
 अहमात्माऽऽन्तरो बाह्योऽनावृतः सर्वदेहिनाम् । यथा भूतानि भूतेषु बहिरन्तः स्वयं तथा । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे षष्ठदशोऽध्यायः । १५ ।

The aforesaid Siddhis in their entirety wait upon the sage who worships Me through Yogic concentration as detailed in the foregoing verses. (31) What is that (there is no) Siddhi which is very difficult to attain for the sage who, having conquered his senses, tamed his mind, and controlled his breath and body, practises concentration on Me ? (32) The wise (however) speak of these as obstacles in the path of the man who is practising the highest (form of) Yoga (such as Jñānayoga or Bhaktiyoga) in that they cause delay in his getting united with Me (his true goal). (33) One attains here through concentration (as aforesaid on Me) all those Siddhis that follow from birth, (the use of) drugs, austerity and (the utterance of) spells.* One cannot (however) obtain the supreme reward (in the shape of residence in the divine realm of the Lord etc.), of Yoga (concentration on Me) by recourse to other means. (34) I am the Source (Bestower), I am the Custodian and Controller of all Siddhis, as well as of Yoga (union with God in the shape of final beatitude), Śāṅkhya (Knowledge leading to such union), Dharma (piety as taught by the exponents of Veda), nāy, of the teachers of Veda (themselves). (35) I am the Self of all embodied souls, being their Inner Controller as well as enclosing them (from without) though unenclosed Myself, (even) as the (gross) elements both permeate and

* Cf. the following aphorism from the Yoga-Sūtras of Patañjali —

जन्मौषधितपोमन्त्रयोगजाः सिद्धयः ।

enclose the bodies of living beings. (36)

Thus ends the fifteenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षोडशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVI

Glorious manifestations of the Lord enumerated

उद्धव उवाच

त्वं ब्रह्म परमं साक्षादनाद्यन्तमपावृतम् । सर्वेषामपि भावानां त्राणस्थित्यप्ययोद्धवः । १ ।
उद्यावचेषु भूतेषु दुर्जयमकृतात्मभिः । उपासते त्वां भगवन् याथातथ्येन ब्राह्मणाः । २ ।
येषु येषु च भावेषु भक्त्या त्वां परमर्षयः । उपासीनाः प्रपद्यन्ते संसिद्धिं तद् वदस्व मे । ३ ।
गूढश्चरसि भूतात्मा भूतानां भूतभावनः । न त्वां पश्यन्ति भूतानि पश्यन्तं मोहितानि ते । ४ ।
याः काश्च भूमौ दिवि वै रसायां विभूतयो दिक्षु महाविभूते ।
ता मद्गमाख्याह्यनुभावितास्ते नमामि ते तीर्थपदाङ्घ्रिपद्मम् । ५ ।

Uddhava submitted : You are actually the supreme Brahma, having no beginning or end, and unobscured (by Māyā). You are responsible for the protection, subsistence, destruction and birth of all existences. (1) The knowers of the (real) import of the Vedas (alone) worship You, O Lord, in Your reality as abiding in (all) created beings, high and (low as their Cause), though You cannot be easily known (perceived) by those that have not been able to purify their mind. (2) (Therefore, pray,) point out to me those particular entities (by) contemplating on You through which with devotion men of supreme wisdom (are able to) attain highest perfection (in the form of true devotion or saving wisdom). (3) The Inner Controller of beings, You remain hidden from their view. O Life-giver of (all) created beings ! Deluded by You, living beings are unable to perceive You, even though You behold them (all). (4) Mention to me all those powerful manifestations of Yours, invested by You with Your own divine glory, that may be existing on earth, in the quarters, in heaven or in the subterranean region, O Lord of infinite prowess ! bow to Your lotus-feet, which are the abode of (all) sanctuaries. (5)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

एवमेतदहं पृष्टः प्रश्नं प्रश्नविदां वर । ययुत्सुना विनशने सपत्नैरजुनेन वै । ६ ।
ज्ञात्वा ज्ञातिवधं गहमधर्मं राज्यहेतुकम् । ततो निवृत्तो हन्ताहं हतोऽयमिति लौकिकः । ७ ।
स तदा पुरुषव्याघ्रो युक्त्या मे प्रतिबोधितः । अभ्यभाषत मामेवं यथा त्वं रणमूर्धनि । ८ ।
अहमात्मोद्धवामीषां भूतानां सुहृदीश्वरः । अहं सर्वाणि भूतानि तेषां स्थित्युद्धवाप्ययः । ९ ।
अहं गतिर्गतिमतां कालः कलयतामहम् । गुणानां चाप्यहं साम्यं गुणिन्यौयत्तिको गुणः । १० ।
गुणिनामप्यहं सूत्रं महतां च महानहम् । सूक्ष्माणामप्यहं जीवो दुर्जयानामहं मनः । ११ ।
हिरण्यगर्भो वेदानां मन्त्राणां प्रणवस्त्रिवृत् । अक्षराणामकारोऽस्मि पदानिच्छन्दसामहम् । १२ ।
इन्द्रोऽहं सर्वदेवानां वसूनामसि हव्यवाद् । आदित्यानामहं विष्णु रुद्राणां नीललोहितः । १३ ।

ब्रह्मर्षीणां भृगुरहं राजर्षीणामहं मनुः । देवर्षीणां नारदोऽहं हविर्धान्यस्मि धेनुषु । १४ ।
 सिद्धेश्वराणां कपिलः सुपर्णोऽहं पतत्रिणाम् । प्रजापतीनां दक्षोऽहं पितृणामहमर्यमा । १५ ।
 मां विद्ध्युद्धव दैत्यानां प्रह्लादमसुरेश्वरम् । सोमं नक्षत्रौषधीनां धनेशं यक्षरक्षसाम् । १६ ।
 ऐरावतं गजेन्द्राणां यादसां वरुणं प्रभुम् । तपतां ह्यमतां सूर्यं मनुष्याणां च भूपतिम् । १७ ।
 उच्चैःश्रवास्तुरङ्गाणां धातूनामस्मि काञ्चनम् । यमः संयमतां चाहं सर्पाणामस्मि वासुकिः । १८ ।
 नागेन्द्राणामनतोऽहं भृगुन्द्रः शृङ्गिर्दंष्ट्रिणाम् । आश्रमाणामहं तुर्यां वर्णानां प्रथमोऽजय । १९ ।
 तीर्थानां स्रोतसां गङ्गा समुद्रः सरसामहम् । आयुधानां धनुरहं त्रिपुरघ्नो धनुष्पताम् । २० ।

The glorious Lord replied : In a like manner I was put this very question by Arjuna while just going to fight with his enemies at (the battle-field of) Kuruksetra, O chief of those possessing insight into the meaning of questions ! (6) Feeling like the common man that "I am the slayer and the other one is slain (by me)", and believing that slaying one's kinsfolk for the sake of kingdom is reproachful and unrighteous, he ceased from that act (at the beginning). (7) Disillusioned by My reasoning, that tiger among men then interrogated Me at the van of fight in the same way as you have done. (8) I am the Self, the Befriender and the Ruler of all these created beings, O Uddhava ! (in fact,) I am all the beings as well as responsible for their birth, life and death. (9) I am the motion of the mobile and Kāla (the Time-Spirit) among those that bring others under their control. I am the state of equilibrium (in the shape of Prakṛti) of the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and the property natural to a thing with attributes. (10) I am the Sūtra (the active aspect of Mahat-tattva, the very first evolute of Prakṛti) among the products constituted of the three Guṇas; (nay,) I am Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence) among big things. Of subtle principles I am the Jīva (the embodied soul); and of those that are difficult to conquer I am the mind. (11) Of the Vedas I am their teacher, Brahmā (who taught them for the first time to his mind-born sons); of Mantras (sacred texts) I am Praṇava (the sacred syllable OM), consisting of three members (A, U, M). Of the letter-sounds I am the sound represented by the letter 'अ' (A); of metres I am the metre Gāyatrī (consisting of three feet). (12) Of all the gods I am Indra (their chief); of the (eight) Vasus (a particular class of gods) I am the god of fire (who carries oblations to the gods). Of the (twelve) sons of Aditi I am Viṣṇu (known by the name of Upendra, the youngest, who appeared in the court of the demon king Bali as a dwarf and robbed him of his dominion extending over the three worlds); of the (eleven) Rudras, I am Nīla-Lohita (Lord Śiva). (13) Of the nine Brāhmaṇa sages (born of Brahmā's mind) I am Bhṛgu (the foremost of them); of the royal sages I am (Swāyambhuva) Manu. Of the celestial sages I am Nārada; of cows I am Kāmadhenu (lit., the storehouse of milk and its products used as oblations for the gods). (14) Of the lords of Siddhas I am Lord Kapila; of birds I am Garuḍa (the king of birds, the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu). Of Prajāpatīs (the gods presiding over creation) I am Dakṣa (the foremost of them); of the manes I am Aryamā (their head). (15) Of Daityas (the sons of Diti) know Me to be Prahrāda, the ruler of the demons. Of the stars and annual plants know Me to be (their ruler,) the moon-god; of Yakṣas and Rākṣasas know Me to be (their chief) Kubera (the lord of treasures), O Uddhava ! (16) Of the lords of elephants know Me to be Airāvata (the carrier of Indra); of aquatic creatures know Me to be their lord, Varuṇa (the god presiding over the waters). Of those emitting heat and light know Me to be the sun; and know Me to be the king among men. (17) I am Uccaiḥśrava among horses; of metals I am gold. Of those that punish, I am Yama (the god of retribution); and of serpents I am Vāsuki (the chief of serpents). (18) Of the rulers of snakes I am Lord Ananta (the serpent-god); of all animals having horns or large teeth I am the lion (the king of beasts). Of the (four) stages of life I am Sannyāsa (the fourth and the last); of the (four) grades of society I am the (very) first (viz., the Brahmana class), O sinless Uddhava ! (19) Of (all) holy streams I am the (holy) Gaṅgā; (while) of (all) stationary waters I am the ocean. Of weapons I am the bow; of the wielders of bow I am Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the three cities). (20)

धिष्ण्यानामस्यहं मेरुगहनानां हिमालयः । वनस्पतीनामश्वत्थ ओषधीनामहं यवः । १२१ ।
 पुरोधसां वसिष्ठोऽहं ब्रह्मिष्ठानां बृहस्पतिः । स्कन्दोऽहं सर्वसेनान्यामग्रण्यां भगवानजः । १२२ ।
 यज्ञानां ब्रह्मयज्ञोऽहं व्रतानामविहिसनम् । वाय्वग्न्यर्काम्बुवागात्मा शुचीनामप्यहं शुचिः । १२३ ।
 योगानामात्मसंगेधो मन्त्रोऽस्मि विजिगीषताम् । आन्वीक्षिकी कौशलानां विकल्पः स्थितिवादिनाम् । १२४ ।
 स्त्रीणां तु शतरूपाहं पुंसां स्वायम्भुवो मनुः । नारायणो मुनीनां च कुमारो ब्रह्मचारिणाम् । १२५ ।
 धर्माणामस्मि संन्यासः क्षेपाणामबर्हिर्मतिः । गुह्यानां सूतं मौनं मिथुनानामजस्त्वहम् । १२६ ।
 संवत्सरोऽस्म्यनिमिषामृतूनां मधुमाधवौ । मासानां मार्गशीर्षोऽहं नक्षत्राणां तथाभिजित् । १२७ ।
 अहं युगानां च कृतं धीराणां देवलोऽसितः । द्वैपायनोऽस्मि व्यासानां कवीनां काव्य आत्मवान् । १२८ ।
 वासुदेवो भगवतां त्वं तु भागवतेऽब्रह्म । किमुखाणां हनुमान् विद्याधराणां सुदर्शनः । १२९ ।
 रत्नानां पद्मरागोऽस्मि पद्मकोशः सुपेशसाम् । कुशोऽस्मि दर्भजातीनां गव्यमाज्यं हविः । १३० ।
 व्यवसायिनामहं लक्ष्मीः कितवानां छलग्रहः । तितिक्षास्मि तितिक्षूणां सत्त्वं सत्त्ववतामहम् । १३१ ।
 ओजः सहो बलवतां कर्माहं विद्धि सात्त्वताम् । सात्त्वतां नवमूर्तीनामादिपूर्तिरहं परा । १३२ ।
 विश्वासुः पूर्वचित्तिर्गन्धर्वाप्सरसामहम् । भूधराणामहं स्थैर्यं गन्धमात्रमहं भुवः । १३३ ।
 अपां रसश्च परमस्तेजिष्ठानां विभावसुः । प्रभा सूर्येन्दुताराणां शब्दोऽहं नभसः परः । १३४ ।
 ब्रह्मण्यानां बलिरहं वीराणामहमर्जुनः । भूतानां स्थितिरुत्पत्तिरहं वै प्रतिसङ्क्रमः । १३५ ।
 गत्युक्त्युत्तरोपादानमानन्दस्पर्शलक्षणम् । आस्वादश्चतुर्विधाणामहं सर्वेन्द्रियेन्द्रियम् । १३६ ।
 पृथिवी वायुराकाश आपो ज्योतिरहं महान् । विकारः पुरुषोऽप्यक्तं रजः सत्त्वं तमः परम् । १३७ ।
 अहमेतत्प्रसंख्यानं ज्ञानं तत्त्वविनिश्चयः । मयेष्टरेण जीवेन गुणेन गुणिना विना ।

सर्वात्मनापि सर्वेण न भावो विद्यते क्वचित् । १३८ ।

संख्यानं परमाणूनां कालेन क्रियते मया । न तथा मे विभूतीनां सृजतोऽण्डानि कोटिशः । १३९ ।
 तेजः श्रीः कीर्तिश्चर्यं ह्रीस्त्यागः सौभगं भगः । वीर्यं तितिक्षा विज्ञानं यत्र यत्र स मेऽशकः । १४० ।
 एतास्ते कीर्तिताः सर्वाः सङ्क्षेपेण विभूतयः । मनोविकारा एवैते यथा वाचाभिधीयते । १४१ ।
 वाचं यच्छ मनो यच्छ प्राणान् यच्छेन्द्रियाणि च । आत्मानमात्मना यच्छ न भूयः कल्पसेऽध्वने । १४२ ।
 यो वै वाङ्मनसी सम्यगस्यच्छन् धिया यतिः । तस्य व्रतं तपो दानं त्रयत्यामघटाव्युवत् । १४३ ।
 तस्मान्मनोवचःप्राणान् नियच्छेन्मत्परायणः । मद्भक्तियुक्तया बुद्ध्या ततः परिसमाप्यते । १४४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवतं महापुराणं पारमहंस्यं संहितायामेकदशस्कन्धे षोडशोऽध्यायः । १६ ।

I am Mount Meru (the abode of Brahmā) among (all) abodes; of (all) spots difficult of access I am the Himālaya. Of trees I am the Aśwattha (the holy fig-tree); of annual plants I am barley. (21) Of family priests I am the sage Vasiṣṭha (the priest of the ancient solar dynasty of kings); of those devoted to the spirit of the Vedas I am the sage Brhaspati (the preceptor of the gods). Of (all) leaders of armies I am Skanda (the generalissimo of the gods); of those that lead men on the right path I am the glorious Brahmā (the birthless one). (22) Of (all) sacrificial performances I am Brahmayaज्ञा (the daily recitation of the Vedas); of (all) sacred vows I am (the vow of) harmlessness. Of purifying agencies, again, I am the purifying agency (par excellence) in the shape of the air, fire, the sun, water and the word (of a Brāhmaṇa who is the only man qualified to judge and pronounce the purity or otherwise of a substance or living being). (23) Of all the limbs of Yoga (self-discipline) I am Samādhi (total absorption of the mind into the Spirit); I am political wisdom in those that seek victory. Of (all) scientific courses of correct understanding I am the science by which the distinction between Matter and Spirit is known; I am the (unending) doubt of those debating on the theory of Perception. (24) Of the fair sex I am Śatarūpā (the wife of Swāyambhuva Manu and the first female offspring of Brahmā); of men I am Swāyambhuva Manu (the first human male creation of Brahmā). Of ascetics I am the sage Nārāyaṇa; and of celibates, Sanat Kumāra. (25) Of (all) virtues I am the vow of causing no fear to anyone; of all factors conducive to fearlessness I am thought withdrawn from without (and directed towards one's own self). Of (all) means of maintaining secrecy I am kind speech and silence (both of which help a man to conceal what exists in his mind); of pairs, again, I am Brahmā (the birthless one, who assumed two forms, the first part becoming a man and the other a woman).* (26) Of those that (ever) keep awake (without even winking) I am the (ever-revolving wheel of) time (represented by a twelvemonth); of the (six) seasons (constituting a year) I am (the two months of) Caitra and Vaiśākha (constituting the vernal season). Of the (twelve) months (of a year) I am (the month of) Mārgaśīrṣa; and of the (twenty-seven) lunar mansions I am Abhijit.† (27) Of the (four) Yugas or aeons I am the Kṛta (Satyayuga) and of the self-controlled I am the sages Asita and Devala. Of the compilers and arrangers of the Vedas I am the sage (Kṛṣṇa) Dwaipāyana; of more of wisdom I am the self-possessed Śukrācārya (the preceptor of the demon kings). (28) Of divine personages I am Lord Vāsudeva (the first and foremost of the four Vyūhas or manifestations of the Godhead, the Deity presiding over the Intellect or Citta); and of the votaries of the Lord I am you (Uddhava). Of Kimpuruṣas (a species of semi-divine beings resembling a monkey in shape) I am Hanumān (the monkey-god); of Vidyādhara (heavenly artists) I am Sudarśana. (29) Of precious stones I am the ruby; of lovely objects I am a lotus bud. Of the (many) varieties of Darbha grass (such as Kuśa and Dūrvā) I am (the variety known by the name of) Kuśa; of offerings thrown into the sacred fire I am cow's ghee. (30) Of those engaged in any business (and seeking to amass wealth) I am the wealth; in those engaged in practising trickery I am gambling. I am the endurance in those practising endurance; I am the courage of the courageous. (31) I am the organic strength as well as the strength of mind of the strong; (and) know that I am the action (done by way of an offering to Me) of the devotees of the Lord. Of the nine forms (viz., Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna, Aniruddha, Nārāyaṇa, Hayagrīva, Varāha, Nṛsiṃha, and Vāmana) worshipped by the Sātvatas (followers of the Pāñcarātra Āgama) I am the first and the highest (of them, viz., Vāsudeva). (32) I am Viśwāvasu of the Gandharvas (celestial songsters) and Pūrvacitti

* Vide III xli 52-53. The Śruti says:—अर्धो ह वा एव आत्मनो यत्पत्नीति ।

† Abhijit represents the last quarter of the asterism Uttarāśāḍha and one-fifteenth of the constellation Śravaṇa. Says the Śruti:—

अभिजिज्ञाम नक्षत्रमुपरिष्टादीपादानामधस्ताच्छ्रोणायाः ।

‡ A Bhagavān or divine personage is defined as below:—

उत्पत्तिं प्रलयं चैव भूतानामागतिं गतिम् । वेति विद्यामविद्यां च म वेद्यो भगवानिति ॥

* He (alone) should be recognized as a divine being, who possesses knowledge relating to the creation and destruction of life, the life and death of individual beings end of knowledge and nescience.*

* A reference to this Sudarśana has already been made in X. xxxiv. 12—18 of the Apsarās (celestial nymphs). I am the firmness of mountains (and) the (pure) odour (characteristic) of the earth. (33) I am the sweet taste (characteristic) of water; of the most glorious I am (the god of) fire. I am the brilliant light in the sun, the moon and the stars; I am sound, the distinguishing property of ether. (34) I am Bali among those devoted to the Brahmanas; of the valiant, I am Arjuna. I am the genesis, existence and final dissolution of created beings. (35) I am (the functions of) locomotion, speech, defecation, grasping and enjoyment (of the organs of action) and touching, seeing, tasting, hearing and smelling (of the senses of perception), as well as the faculty (of perceiving the sense-objects) inhering in all the senses of perception. (36) I am (the seven categories which are both of the nature of cause and effect, viz., the subtle elements of) earth, the air, ether, water, fire; the (cosmic) Ego and Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence); (sixteen categories which are) modifications (alone, viz., the five gross elements and the eleven Indriyas), the soul (which is neither a cause nor an effect), the Unmanifest (primordial Matter*, which is a cause alone), (the three modes of Prakṛti, viz.,) Rājas, Sattva and Tamas as well as Brahma (the Absolute). (37) (Nay,) I am the numbering of these categories, their (distinguishing) knowledge (by means of their characteristics) and the (resultant) Realization of Truth. Nothing exists anywhere apart from Me, who am God as well as Jīva (the individual soul), the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) as well as the categories made up of the (three) Guṇas (viz., the Mahat-tattva and so on), (nay,) who am the Inner Controller of all as well as all. (38) The reckoning of atoms can be done by Me in course of time, but not so of My glorious manifestations (which are endless) as I evolve universes in tens of millions. (39) Wherever there is glory, affluence, renown, authority, modesty, liberality, elegance, good luck, valour, endurance and knowledge of Truth, that is (indeed) My part manifestation. (40) These are all My glorious manifestations made known to you in brief. They are (however) mere caprices of the mind (and not real); they are like something merely expressed in words. (41) (Therefore,) restrain (your) speech, curb (your) mind, control (your) breath, tame (your) senses and conquer your intellect with your (Sattvika) intellect and you will no longer be liable to return to the path of transmigration. (42) The sacred vows, austerities and liberality of the Yogi who does not duly subdue his speech and mind with his reason leak out (unnoticed) as water from an unbaked jar. (43) Therefore, keeping his eyes fixed on Me as his goal, a man should control his mind, speech and breath by means of his intellect full of devotion to Me; thereby he will have reached the end of his journey. (44)

Thus ends the sixteenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Samhitā.

* Cf. Sāṅkhya-Kārika of Iṣwara Kṛṣṇa, which says:—

मूलप्रकृतिरविकृतिर्महदाद्याः प्रकृतिविकृतयः मय । योऽशक्यन्व विकारो न प्रकृतिर्नाविकृतिः पुरुषः ॥

अथ सप्तदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVII

The duties pertaining to the four Varnas and four Āśramas

उद्धव उवाच

यस्त्वयाभिहितः पूर्वं धर्मस्त्वद्धक्तिलक्षणः । वर्णाश्रमाचारवतां सर्वेषां द्विपदामपि । १ ।
यथानुष्ठीयमानेन त्वयि भक्तिर्नृणां भवेत् । स्वधर्मेणारविन्दाक्ष तत् समाख्यातुमर्हसि । २ ।
पुरा किल महाबाहो धर्म परमकं प्रभो । यत्नेन हंसरूपेण ब्रह्मणेऽभ्यास्य माधव । ३ ।
स इदानीं सुमहता कालेनामित्रकर्शन । न प्रायो भविता मर्त्यलोके प्रागनुशासितः । ४ ।
वक्ता कर्ताविता नान्यो धर्मस्याच्युत ते भुवि । सभायामपि वैरिज्यं यत्र मूर्तिधराः कलाः । ५ ।
कर्त्रावित्रा प्रवक्त्रा च भवता मधुसूदन । त्यक्ते महीतले देव विनष्टं कः प्रवक्ष्यति । ६ ।
तत्त्वं नः सर्वधर्मज्ञ धर्मस्त्वद्धक्तिलक्षणः । यथा यस्य विधीयेत तथा वर्णय मे प्रभो । ७ ।

Uddhava submitted : The righteous course expressive of and engendering devotion to You and open to those observing the rules of conduct laid down for the (four) Varnas (grades of society) and Āśramas, nay, to all human beings was taught by You in the foregoing Kalpa (cycle). (1) (Now) be pleased to tell me in detail, O lotus-eyed One, how Devotion is engendered (in man) through one's own (allotted) duty being (duly) followed. (2) The supreme and blissful course of conduct, O Lord of mighty arms, which You taught, it is said, to Brahmā in the former days in the form of the divine Swan mentioned before (in Discourse XIII), O Lord of Lakṣmi ! has now disappeared after a very long time, O Chastiser of foes ! and will not ordinarily survive on this mortal plane, even though it was taught (by You) long ago. (3-4) Other than You, O immortal Lord, there is none to teach, institute or defend this righteous course on earth, (nay) not even in Brahmā's court, where (all) sciences (in the form of the Vedas etc.) are in attendance in a personal form. (5) When the terrestrial soil is deserted, O Slayer of the demon Madhu ! by You—who institute, maintain and teach this righteous course—O Lord ! who will expound this extinct Dharma ? (6) Therefore, O Knower of (the secret of) all righteous courses, (pray,) tell me, O Lord, how and on whom among us the Dharma engendering Devotion to You has been enjoined. (7)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थं स्वभृत्यमुख्येन पृष्टः स भगवान् हरिः । प्रीतः क्षेमाय मर्यानां धर्मानाह सनातनान् । ८ ।

Sri Śuka continued : Thus interrogated by Uddhava (the foremost of His servants), the celebrated Lord Śrī Hari (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) felt (much) delighted and taught (as follows) for the welfare of mortals the courses of conduct which are binding for all times. (8)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

धर्म्य एष तव प्रश्नो नैःश्रेयसकरो नृणाम् । वर्णाश्रमाचारवतां तमुद्धव निबोध मे । १ ।
आदौ कृतयुगे वर्णां नृणां हंस इति स्मृतः । कृतकृत्याः प्रजा जाता तस्मात् कृतयुगं विदुः । १० ।
वेदः प्रणव एवाग्ने धर्मोऽहं वृषरूपधृक् । उपासते तपोनिष्ठा हंसं मां मुक्तकिल्बिषाः । ११ ।
त्रेतामुखे महाभाग प्राणान्मे हृदयात्प्रययौ । विद्या प्रादुरभूतस्या अहमासं त्रिवृन्मखः । १२ ।
विप्रक्षत्रियविदशुद्रा मुखबाहूस्पदजाः । वैराजात् पुरुषाज्जाता य आत्माचारलक्षणाः । १३ ।
गृहाश्रमो जघनतो ब्रह्मचर्यं हृदो मम । वक्षःस्थानाद वने वासो न्यासः शीर्षणि संस्थितः । १४ ।

वर्णानामाश्रमाणां च जन्मभूयनुसारिणीः । आसन् प्रकृतयो नृणां नीचैर्नोचोत्तमाः । १५ ।
 शमो दमस्तपः शौचं सन्तोषः क्षान्तिरार्जवम् । मद्धक्तिश्च दया सत्यं ब्रह्मप्रकृतयस्त्विमाः । १६ ।
 तेजो बलं धृतिः शौर्यं तितिक्षादार्द्यमुद्यमः । स्थैर्यं ब्रह्मण्यतैश्चर्यं क्षत्रप्रकृतयस्त्विमाः । १७ ।
 आस्तिक्यं दाननिष्ठा च अदम्भो ब्रह्मसेवनम् । अतृष्टिरथोपचर्यैर्वैश्यप्रकृतयस्त्विमाः । १८ ।
 शुश्रूषणं द्विजगवां देवानां चाप्यमायया । तत्र लब्धेन सन्तोषः शुद्रप्रकृतयस्त्विमाः । १९ ।
 अशौचमनृतं स्तेयं नास्तिक्यं शुष्कविग्रहः । कामः क्रोधश्च तर्पश्चस्वभावोऽन्तेवसायिनाम् । २० ।
 अहिंसा सत्यमस्तेयमकामक्रोधलोभता । भूतप्रियहिंसा च धर्मोऽयं सार्ववर्णिकः । २१ ।

The glorious Lord began again: This question of yours is full of righteousness in that it leads to Devotion (which is conducive to the highest good of men). (Now) hear from Me (something) about the righteous course followed by those observing the rules prescribed for the (four) Varnas (grades of society) and Āśramas (stages in life). (9) In the (very) first Satya Yuga (of the present Kalpa) the caste of men was (only one and) known by the name of Hamsa. People had their object (of life) accomplished by virtue of their (very) birth; hence they understood it by the name of Kṛtayuga (the aeon of blessedness). (10) In the beginning Praṇava (the mystic syllable OM) alone formed (the text of) the Veda; while I (alone as existing in their thought) constituted their piety appearing in the form of a bull (standing on all its four feet). Firm in askesis (in the shape of one-pointedness* of mind and senses) and free from sin they contemplated on Me, the immaculate Lord. (11) At the beginning of (the next Yuga known by the name of) Tretā (after the expiry of Kṛtayuga), O highly blessed Uddhava, was revealed from My heart through My respiration the threefold Veda (knowledge consisting of three limbs in the shape of Ṛk, Sāma and Yajus); (and) from the latter appeared I as (the institution of) sacrifice† with its triple functions (of a Hotā, Adhvaryu and Udgātā). (12) (Again) from Brahmā (born of the Cosmic Person) appeared the (four grades of society under the names of) Brāhmaṇas, the Kṣatriyas, the Vaiśyas and the Śūdras, evolved (respectively) from His mouth, arms, thighs and feet and distinguished by their own (respective) conduct. (13) The householder's order appeared from My hips and loins; the order of (lifelong) celibates, from My heart; forest-life (the order of anchorites) from My chest (below the heart); while the order of recluses (Samnyāsa) was located in (sprang from the) crown of My head. (14) The nature of men belonging to the (different) Varnas and Āśramas developed according to the character of their place of origin (the limb of the cosmic body from which they sprang up)—low in the case of those of a low origin and lofty in the case of those sprung of high origin. (15) Control of mind and the senses, meditation, (external as well as internal) purity, contentment, forgiveness, straightforwardness, devotion to Me, compassion and truthfulness—these are the natural traits of a Brāhmaṇa. (16) Majesty, strength, fortitude, valour, forbearance, liberality, industry, firmness, devotion to the Brāhmaṇas and rulership—these are the (distinguishing) traits of a Kṣatriya. (17) Faith (in the scriptures as well as in the words of one's preceptor), firm adherence to liberality, sincerity (absence of hypocrisy) service to the Brāhmaṇas and remaining dissatisfied with hoards of money—these are the inborn characteristics of a Vaiśya. (18) Sincere (guileless) service to the Brāhmaṇa, the cow and the gods too and contentment with whatever is obtained through such service—these are the inborn characteristics of a Śūdra. (19) Impurity, mendacity, thieving,

* मन्त्रक्षेत्रिद्याणां च योक्ताष्टौ धर्मो नभः ।

† The Sruti says : "यज्ञो वै विष्णुः ।"

want of faith, quarrelling without cause, concupiscence, anger and cupidity are the inborn characteristics of the casteless.(20) Non-violence, truthfulness, abstaining from theft, freedom from lust, anger and greed and doing what is pleasing and good to living beings—this constitutes the sacred duty of all the Varnas (grades of society). (21)

द्वितीयं प्राप्यानुपूर्व्याञ्चोपनयनं द्विजः । वसन् गुरुकुले दान्ते ब्रह्माधीयत चाहतुः । १२२ ।

मेखलाजिनदण्डाक्षब्रह्मसूत्रकमण्डलून् । जटिलोऽधौतद्वामोऽरक्तपीठः कुशान् दधत् । १२३ ।

स्नानभोजनहोमेषु जपोद्यारे च वाग्यतः । न च्छिद्यान्नखरोमाणि कक्षोपस्थगनान्यपि । १२४ ।

रेतो नावकिरेजातु ब्रह्मव्रतधरः स्वयम् । अवकीर्णोऽवगाह्याप्सु यतासुस्त्रिपदीं जपेत् । १२५ ।

अन्यकार्यगोविप्रगुरुबुद्धसुराज्युचिः । समाहित उपासीत सन्ध्ये च यतवाग् जपन् । १२६ ।

आचार्यं मां विजानीयात्रावमन्येत कर्हिचित् । न मर्त्यबुद्ध्यामूयेत सर्वदेवमयो गुरुः । १२७ ।

सायं प्रातरुपानीय भैक्ष्यं तस्मै निवेदयेत् । यद्यान्यदप्यनुज्ञातमुपयुञ्जीत संयतः । १२८ ।

शुश्रूषमाण आचार्यं सदोपासीत नीचवत् । यानशय्यासनस्थानैर्नातिदूरे कृताङ्गलिः । १२९ ।

एवंवृत्तो गुरुकुले वसेद् भोगविवर्जितः । विद्या समाप्यते यावद् बिभ्रद् व्रतमखण्डितम् । १३० ।

Having undergone in due course (viz., after the purificatory rites relating to birth etc., have been gone through) a second birth in the shape of investiture with the sacred thread, and dwelling in the house of a preceptor with his senses (duly) controlled, the twice-born (male child) should (learn to) recite the Vedas (with due intonation) and reflect on their meaning (with the help of the guru) when called upon (to do so). (22) A Brahmacāri (religious student) should wear a girdle (of Muñja grass) and deerskin (round his loins), a string of Rudrākṣa beads (about his neck) and the sacred thread (baldric-wise across his left shoulder), should carry a staff (of the Palāśa tree) and a water-pot (made of the shell of a wild cocoanut or gourd) and a bunch of Kuśa grass (in the palm of his hand) and grow matted locks (for want of proper care). He should never scrub his teeth (with a brush etc.) nor apply soap etc., to his clothes and should never use a coloured seat. (23) He should remain silent while bathing, taking his meals, pouring oblations into the sacred fire, doing Japa (muttering a prayer) and answering the calls of nature. He should never pare his nails nor remove the hair even in his arm-pits and on his private parts. (24) Observing a (strict) vow of celibacy, he should never voluntarily allow his seed to escape; and if it (ever) escapes anyhow (in spite of himself in a dream etc.), he should (proceed to) take a plunge bath and, going through a course of Prāṇāyāma (inhaling the air through his right nostril, holding it as long as one can and exhaling it through the left), should repeat the Gāyatrī-Mantra (at least 108 times on his rosary). (25) Pure of body and calm of mind he should (both morning and evening) worship the fire (by pouring oblations into it), the sun-god (by offering Arghya or oblations of water to him), the Acārya (who has invested him with the sacred thread and taught him the Gāyatrī), the cow (by offering handfuls of grass to her), the Brāhmaṇas, the preceptor (who has merely instructed him in the Śāstras), the elders and the gods and should wait upon both the twilights, silently muttering the Gāyatrī-Mantra. (26) He should know the Acārya to be (no other than) Myself (the Supreme Lord) and should never disregard him nor should he pry into his faults taking him to be a mortal; for the preceptor represents all the gods (in his person). (27) Bringing alms (from other houses) (both) morning and evening, he should offer it to the preceptor as also whatever else he might have received and make use of only what is permitted (by the preceptor) keeping himself fully under control. (28) Doing service to the preceptor, the student should always wait upon him with joined palms like a menial by following him (wherever he goes), lying down (full of vigilance when he is asleep), sitting (when he is taking rest after being relieved of his fatigue by kneading his feet etc.) and standing (when he is comfortably seated) not far from him.(29) Conducting himself as aforesaid and maintaining his vow (of celibacy uninterrupted till his course of learning is completed, he should (continue to) live in the preceptor's house, completely weaned from all luxuries. (30)

यद्यसौ छन्दसां लोकमारोक्ष्यन् ब्रह्मविष्टपम् । गुरवे विन्यसेद् देहं स्वाध्यायार्थं बृहद्व्रतः । ३१ ।
अग्नौ गुणवात्मनि च सर्वभूतेषु मां परम् । अपृथग्वीरूपासीत ब्रह्मवर्चस्यकल्पम् । ३२ ।
स्त्रीणां निरीक्षणस्पृशसंलापक्ष्वेलनादिकम् । प्राणिनो मिथुनीभूतानगृहस्थोऽग्रतस्त्यजेत् । ३३ ।
शौचमाचमनं स्नानं सन्ध्योपासनमार्जवम् । तीर्थसेवा जपोऽस्पृश्याभक्ष्यासंभाष्यवर्जनम् । ३४ ।
सर्वाश्रमप्रयुक्तोऽयं नियमः कुलनन्दन । मद्भावः सर्वभूतेषु मनोवाक्कायसंयमः । ३५ ।
एवं बृहद्व्रतधरो ब्राह्मणोऽग्रिरिव ज्वलन् । मद्भक्तस्तीव्रतपसा दग्धकर्माशयोऽमलः । ३६ ।

If the student seeks to ascend (after death) to (the highest heaven, viz...) Satyaloka (the realm of Brahman),* the home of the Vedas (living in a personal form), he should completely dedicate his body (life) to the preceptor for (further) study of the Vedas (as well as to repay his debt to the preceptor), observing the vow of lifelong celibacy. (31) Full of splendour born of a study of the Vedas and devoid of (all) sin, the Brahmacāri should have no sense of diversity (left in him) and should worship Me, the Supreme. (alone) in (the sacred) fire, the preceptor, his own self and in all created beings. (32) He who is not a householder (a Brahmacāri, an anchorite or a recluse) should give up the sight and touch of womankind, conversation and joking etc., with them and should (even) avoid coming face to face with living beings sexually united. (33) Purity (of body and mind), rinsing one's mouth with water (after answering the calls of nature and taking one's meals or refreshment and sipping water before commencing a sacred rite or devotions or taking one's meals etc.), bathing (after passing stool and shaving oneself and on ceremonial occasions as well as on touching an untouchable person or object, and on the expiry of a period of impurity caused by birth or death in one's family and so on), saying the Sandhyā prayers (both morning and evening as well as at midday), straightforwardness, resorting to holy places and sacred waters, muttering sacred texts (such as the Gayatri) and keeping aloof from untouchable persons and objects, prohibited food (and drink) and people who are not worth speaking to, looking upon all created beings as (no other than) Myself and control of mind, speech and body—this constitutes the Dharma (sacred duty) prescribed for all the Āśramas (stages of life pertaining to the first three Varnas), O Uddhava (the delight of your race) ! (34-35) Having mastered the Vedas and with the seeds of his Karma burnt by intense Tapas (askesis), the Brahmacāri observing the vow of perpetual celibacy and resplendent like fire becomes My devotee (and attains to Me) if he is devoid of impurity (in the shape of interested motives). (36)

अथानन्तरमावेक्ष्यन् यथा जिज्ञासितागमः । गुरवे दक्षिणां दत्त्वा स्नायाद् गुर्वनुमोदितः । ३७ ।
गृहे वनं वोपविशेत् प्रव्रजेद् वा द्विजोत्तम । आश्रमादाश्रमं गच्छेन्नान्यथा मत्परश्चरेत् । ३८ ।
गृहार्थी सदृशीं भार्यामुद्बुधेदनुगुप्सिताम् । यवीयसीं तु वयसा तां सवर्णामनुक्रमात् । ३९ ।
इत्याध्ययनदानानि सर्वेषां च द्विजन्वनाम् । प्रतिग्रहोऽध्यापनं च ब्राह्मणस्यैव याजनम् । ४० ।
प्रतिग्रहं मन्यमानस्तपस्तेजोयशोनुदम् । अन्याभ्यामेव जीवेत शिल्पां दोषदृक् तयोः । ४१ ।
ब्राह्मणस्य हि देहोऽयं क्षुद्रकामाय नेष्यते । कृच्छ्राय तपसे चेह प्रेत्यानन्तसुखाय च । ४२ ।
शिलोऽञ्जवृत्त्या परितुष्टचित्तो धर्मं महान्तं विरजं जुषाणः ।
मय्यर्पितात्मा गृह एव तिष्ठन्नातिप्रसक्तः समुपैति शान्तिम् । ४३ ।

समुद्भरन्ति ये विप्रं सीदन्तं मत्प्रयणम् । तानुद्धरिष्ये नचिरादापदभ्यो नौरिवार्णवात् । ४४ ।
 सर्वाः समुद्धरेद् राजा पितेव व्यसनात् प्रजाः । आत्मानमात्मना धीरो यथा गजपतिर्गजान् । ४५ ।
 एवंविधो नरपतिर्विमानेनार्कवर्चसा । विधूयेहाशुभं कृत्स्नमिद्रेण सह मोदेत् । ४६ ।
 सीदन् विप्रो वणिग्वृत्त्या पण्यैरेवापदं तरेत् । खड्गेन वाऽऽपदाक्रान्तो न श्ववृत्त्या कथञ्चन । ४७ ।
 वैश्यवृत्त्या तु राजन्यो जीवेन्मुगययाऽऽपदि । चरेद् वा विप्ररूपेण न श्ववृत्त्या कथञ्चन । ४८ ।
 शुद्रवृत्तिं भजेद् वैश्यः शुद्रः कारुकटक्रियाम् । कुक्ष्यन्मुक्तो न गर्ह्यो वृत्तिं लिप्सेत् कर्मणा । ४९ ।
 वेदाध्यायस्वधास्वाहाबल्यन्नाद्यैर्यथोदयम् । देवर्षिपितृभूतानि मद्रूपाण्यन्वहं यजेत् । ५० ।
 यदृच्छ्योपपन्नेन शुक्लेनोपार्जितेन वा । धनेनापीडयन् भृत्यान् न्यायेनैवाहरेत् कर्तुन् । ५१ ।

He who, having duly investigated the purport of the Vedas, forthwith seeks to enter the next Āśrama (stage of life, viz., the life of a householder) should after offering Dakṣiṇā (a parting present by way of gratitude) to the preceptor perform the ceremony known as the Samāvartana-Saṁskāra (marking the completion of his studies and coming back home from the preceptor's house) with the approval of the preceptor. (37) A Brahmacārī may enter the life of a householder (if he has the sexual urge) or the life of an anchorite (if he is keen on self-purification) or (if he is pure-minded already and), if he is a Brāhmaṇa (the foremost of the twice-born classes), he may (even) renounce the world and go about as a mendicant recluse. (Or) he should (in the regular course) pass from one stage to another. He who is devoted to Me* should in no case act otherwise (i.e., remain without embracing any Āśrama or return from a higher Āśrama to a lower one). (38) A Brahmacārī desiring to enter the life of a householder should take a wife belonging to his own Varṇa (grade of society); Unblemished (in point of pedigree and bodily and other characteristics), and younger (than himself) in age. If, however, he takes a wife belonging to a Varṇa different from his own, he should marry her after he has espoused a girl belonging to the same Varṇa as his won and that too in the proper order. (39) Performance of sacrifices, study of the Vedas and bestowal of gifts are the duties of all the twice-born; whereas to accept gifts, to teach the Vedas and to officiate as a priest in sacrifices constitute the vocation of a Brāhmaṇa alone. (40) Looking upon acceptance of gifts as (something) detracting from his austerity, (Brahmanical) glory and renown, a Brāhmaṇa should live by the other two (vocations) alone or, perceiving the drawbacks of those vocations (too), should live by (gleaning) the food-grains left by the owner of a field after reaping the crop. (41) This body of a Brāhmaṇa is surely not intended for trivial enjoyment but for (undergoing) hardship and investigation of truth in this life and for (attaining) everlasting happiness (in the shape of final beatitude) after death. (42) With his mind fully satisfied by living on the food-grains gleaned (partly) from the fields and (partly) from the grain market (when the stock has been removed or sold at the end of a day), and with his soul dedicated to Me, nay, following his noble duty (of a householder in the shape of entertaining a newcomer and so on) in a disinterested spirit and continuing to live at home, though never deeply attached (to its inmates or things), a Brāhmaṇa duly attains (abiding) peace. (43) (Even) as a vessel rescues a drowning man from the sea, I deliver without delay from straits those who duly redeem a Brāhmaṇa or (for that matter) anyone (solely) depending on Me and suffering hardship. (44) (Just) as a father would save his progeny from woes (of every kind) or (just) as a king elephant would lift up (fellow) elephants as well as himself (from a pit into which they have fallen), a sagacious king should deliver all (classes of) people from calamities (of every description) and save himself (too) by himself (his own efforts). (45) Shaking off all sin (that he might have incurred in his past lives) in this (very) life, such a (benevolent) king ascends to heaven (after death) in an aerial car, brilliant like the sun, and revels in the company of Indra (the lord of paradise). (46) A Brahmana in distress may (try to) get over it by taking to the calling of a merchant, dealing in such goods only as are worth selling (and not in prohibited articles such as spirituous liquor, salt etc.) or (as a third alternative), when overwhelmed with adversity, he may live even by the sword*, but under no circumstance by service to a man of lower grade. (47) A Kṣatriya too may live by the trade of a Vaiśya or (even) by hunting in (times of) adversity or he may live by teaching etc., (the pursuit of a Brahmana), but in no case by menial service. (48) (Even so) a Vaiśya (in adversity) may adopt the calling of a Śūdra and the latter, the craft of an artisan †, such as making mats and so on. When rid of adversity (of course) a man belonging to a higher caste should no longer seek his living by a reproachful pursuit (prescribed for men of a lower grade). (49) A householder (belonging to the twice-born classes) should according to his means daily worship the gods, the Rsis, the manes and (other) living beings (including men) as My (own) manifestations, through oblations into the sacred fire, recitation of the sacred texts (technically known by the name of Brahmayaજ્ઞા), Śrāddha and Tarpaṇa, Bali or Bhutayaજ્ઞા (offering before the daily meals morsels of cooked food to birds and animals, nay, all other creatures including lifeless objects) and offering food and water etc., to newcomers respectively. (50) With the wealth got without effort or earned (by pursuing one's own avocation) and (therefore) free from blemish he should perform sacrifices with due ceremony alone without putting his dependents to hardship. (51)

* According to another interpretation the words अयस्य मत्प्रः should be split up as अयस्य अमत्प्रः, taking the intervening 'अ' as dropped according to the rules of Sandhi. That would mean that the interdiction is binding only on those who are not devotees, devotees being exempted from this rule.

કુટુમ્બેષુ ન સજ્જેત ન પ્રમાદોત્ કુટુમ્બયપિ । વિપશ્ચિન્નશ્ચં પશ્યેદ્દુષ્ટમપિ દૃષ્ટવત્ । ૫૨ ।
 પુત્રદારાત્ત્વચ્યુતો સદ્ગમઃ । પાત્ર્યસદ્ગમઃ । અનુદેહં વિચિન્યેતે સ્વશ્ચો નિદ્રાનુગો યથા । ૫૩ ।
 ઇત્યં પરિમૃશન્મુક્તો ગૃહેષ્વતિથિવદ્ વસન્ । ન ગૃહૈરનુબદ્યેત નિર્મમો નિરહઙ્કૃતઃ । ૫૪ ।
 કર્મભિર્ગૃહમેધોયૈરિષ્ટા મામેવ ભક્તિમાન્ । તિષ્ઠેદ્ વનં લોપવિશેત્ પ્રજાવાન્ વા પરિવ્રજેત્ । ૫૫ ।
 યસ્વાસક્તમતિર્ગૃહે પુત્રવિત્તૈષણાતુરઃ । સ્ત્રેણઃ કૃપણધીર્મૂઢો મમાહમિતિ બદ્યેતે । ૫૬ ।
 અહો મે પિતરૌ વૃદ્ધૌ માર્યા બાલાત્મજાઽઽત્મજાઃ । અનાથા મામૃતે દીનાઃ કથં જીવન્તિ દુઃખિતાઃ । ૫૭ ।
 એવં ગૃહાશયાશિષ્ઠહૃદયો મૃતધીરયમ્ । અનુપ્સાન્નનુધ્યાયન્ મૃતોઽયં વિશતે તપઃ । ૫૮ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवतं महापुराणं पारमहंस्यो मंलिनायामकादशस्कन्धे सप्तदशोऽध्यायः । १७ ।

A sane householder too should not get attached to the members of his family nor should he be unmindful of his goal (i.e., Myself). (Nay.) he should realize even the invisible (worlds) to be (as) perishable as the visible. (52) Association with one's sons, wife, friends and relations is no better than the coming together of travellers (in a rest-house). With every change of body they vanish like a dream seen during sleep. (53) Pondering thus and living

* Although the law-giver Gautama enjoins a Brahmana in straitened circumstances to take to the military profession in preference to trade, the Lord permits him to do so only as a third alternative and gives preference to trade obviously because it is a peaceful pursuit and does not involve destruction of life

† Lord Manu classifies Karus or artisans under the following five heads -

તેશા ચ તનુવાયશ્ચ નાર્પતો રત્નકર્ત્તા । પશ્ચમધ્મકારશ્ચ કારવઃ શિલ્પિનો મતાઃ ॥

"The five varieties of Karus are - carpenters, weavers, barbers, washermen and shoemakers or tanners of leather"

(unattached) in his house like a stranger and having no sense of "I" and "mine" (with regard to the body and those connected with it), he does not get bound by his household but remains free (from all bondage). (54) Worshipping Me alone through his household duties, a devotee may stay in his house (continue to be a householder) or retire into the forest (enter the order of an anchorite) or renounce the world and go about as a mendicant recluse if he has a male issue. (55) The fool whose mind is attached to the house and who is afflicted with the hankering for progeny and wealth, (nay,) who is domineered over by his wife and whose intellect is (ever) bewildered by the notion of "I" and "mine" gets bound. (56) He remains engrossed in thought as follows:—"Alas ! my aged parents, my wife, whose children are (yet) very young, and my children (too) (—all these) will be left without a protector and will feel (very) miserable and afflicted without me. How will they survive ?" (57) With his mind wholly distracted thus through excessive attachment to his household and his judgment clouded, (nay,) unsated with the pleasures of sense and thinking of them all the time, this fellow, when dead, descends into (the) blinding darkness (of hell). (58)

Thus ends the seventeenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVIII

The Duties of anchorites and recluses

श्रीभगवानुवाच

वनं विविक्षुः पुत्रेषु भार्या न्यस्य सहैव वा। वन एव वसेच्छान्तस्तृतीयं भागमायुषः। १।
कन्दमूलफलैर्वन्यैर्मध्येर्वृत्तिं प्रकल्पयेत्। वसीत वल्कलं वासस्पृणपर्णाजिनानि च। २।
केशरोमनखदंशुमलानि विभृयाद् दतः। न धावेदप्सु मज्जेत त्रिकालं स्थण्डिलेशयः। ३।
ग्रीष्मे तथ्येत पञ्चाग्नीन् वर्षास्वासारयाद् जले। आकण्ठमग्नः शिशिरे एवंवृत्तस्तपश्चरेत्। ४।
अग्निपक्वं समश्रीयात् कालपक्रमथापि वा। उलूखलाश्मकुट्टो वा दन्तोलूखल एव वा। ५।
स्वयं संचिनुयात् सर्वमात्मनो वृत्तिकारणम्। देशकालबलाभिज्ञो नाददीतान्यदाऽहृतम्। ६।
वन्यैश्चरुपुरोडाशैर्निर्वपेत् कालचोदितान्। न तु श्रौतेन पशुना मां यजेत वनाश्रमी। ७।
अग्निहोत्रं च दर्शश्च पूर्णमासश्च पूर्ववत्। चातुर्मास्यानि च पुनरेग्रातानि च नैगमैः। ८।
एवं क्षीणेन तपसा मुनिर्धर्मनिसन्ततः। मां तपोमयमाराध्य ऋषिलोकादुपैति माम्। ९।
यस्त्वेतत् कृच्छ्रतश्चीर्णं तपो निःश्रेयसं महत्। कृमायात्पीयसे युञ्ज्याद् बालिशः कोऽप्यस्ततः। १०।
यदासौ नियमेऽकल्पो जगया जातवेपथुः। आत्मन्यग्नीन् समारोप्य मच्छिन्तोऽग्निं समाविशेत्। ११।
यदा कर्मविपाकेषु लोकेषु निरयात्मसु। विरागो जायते सम्यङ् न्यस्ताग्निः प्रव्रजेततः। १२।
इष्टा यथोपदेशं मां दत्त्वा सर्वस्वमुत्तिजे। अग्नीन् स्वप्राण आवेश्य निरेपेक्षः पवित्रजेत्। १३।
विप्रस्य वै संन्यसतो देवा दागदिरूपिणः। विप्रान्कुर्वन्त्ययं ह्यस्मान्नाक्रम्य समियात् परम्। १४।
विभृयाद्येमुनिर्वासः कौपीनाच्छादनं परम्। त्यक्तं न दण्डपात्राभ्यामन्यत् किञ्चिदनापदि। १५।

दृष्टिपूतं न्यसेत् पादं वस्त्रपूतं पिबेज्जलम्। सत्यपूतां वदेद् वाचं मनःपूतं समाचरेत्। १६।
 मौनानीहानिलायामा दण्डा वाम्देहचेतसाम्। न ह्येतो यस्य सन्त्यङ्ग वेणुभिर्न भवेद् यतिः। १७।
 भिक्षां चतुर्षु वर्णेषु विगहान् वर्जयश्चरेत्। सप्तागारानसंकृपांस्तुल्लेख्येन तावता। १८।
 बहिर्जलाशयं गत्वा तत्रोपस्पृश्य वाग्यतः। विभज्य पावितं शेषं भुञ्जीताशेषमाहृतम्। १९।
 एकश्चरेन्महीमेतां निःसङ्गः संयतेन्द्रियः। आत्मक्रीड आत्मरत आत्मवान् समदर्शनः। २०।
 विवर्त्तकक्षमशरणो मद्भाविमलाशयः। आत्मानं चिन्तयेदकमभेदेन मया पुनिः। २१।
 अन्वीक्षेतात्मनो बन्धं मोक्षं च ज्ञाननिष्ठया। बन्ध इन्द्रियविक्षेपो मोक्ष एषां च संयमः। २२।
 तस्मान्नियम्य षड्वर्गं मद्भावेन चरेन्मुनिः। विरक्तः क्षुल्लकामेभ्यो लब्ध्वाऽऽत्मनि सुखं महत्। २३।
 पुरग्रामब्रजान् सार्थान् भिक्षार्थं प्रविशंश्चरेत्। पुण्यदेशसरिच्छैलवनाश्रमवतीं महीम्। २४।
 वानप्रस्थाश्रमपदेष्वभीक्ष्णं भैक्ष्यमाचरेत्। संसिध्यत्याश्रमसंगोहः शुद्धसत्त्वः शिलायुसा। २५।

The glorious Lord began again : Committing his wife to the care of his sons, the householder who is keen to retire into the woods (enter the life of an anchorite) should spend the third part of his life in the forest alone or even with his wife with his senses fully controlled. (1) He should subsist on wild bulbs, roots and fruits which are fit for being offered into the sacrificial fire and should wear as his apparel the bark of trees or matting etc., made of grass or leaves or deerskin. (2) He should allow the hair of his head as well as on his body, nails, moustaches and beard as well as the dirt on his body to grow and should not (even) scrub his teeth (with a brush etc.), should take a plunge bath (after the manner of a pestle without rubbing his body) three times (daily, viz., in the morning and evening as well as at midday) and should sleep on the ground (covered with grass etc.). (3) In summer he should allow himself to be heated by five fires (one placed in each quarter about himself and the fifth in the form of the sun blazing overhead); during the rains he should expose* himself to showers while in the closing months (Māgha and Phālguna) of winter (comprising what is known as the Śisīra Rtu and roughly corresponding to January and February of the English calendar) he should remain immersed up to the neck in water.†He should practise austerities, following this mode of life. (4) He is permitted to eat (only) what is roasted in fire or gets ripened by (process of) time. He can thrash (wild corn) in a mortar (with a pestle) and pound hard substances with a stone or may use the teeth alone for a mortar (and pestle). (5) Fully aware of the place and time where and when a certain thing could be had as well as of his own (digestive) power he should personally get together (all) the means of his subsistence and should never use what was got at another time ‡ (and laid by for future use). (6) An ascetic should perform rites (such as the Āgrayaṇa) enjoined at particular periods of time with oblations prepared out of wild products; but he should on no account propitiate Me through (the sacrifice of) an animal as enjoined by the Vedas. (7) Agnihotra (offering to the sacred fire an oblation consisting chiefly of milk, oil and sour gruel), Darśa (half-monthly sacrifice performed on every Amāvāsyā or the new moon) Pūrṇamāsa (the half-monthly sacrifice performed on every full moon) and the (three) sacrifices performed at the beginning of the three seasons of four months each (under the names of Vaiśvadeva, Varuṇapraghāsa

* This is technically known by the name of Abhrāvākāsa-Vrata

† This has been mentioned in the Smṛiti-texts under the name of Udaya-vasa-Vrata

‡ Cf VII xii 19, where an anchorite has been called upon to reject the old stock each time a fresh (natural) supply of cereals and other eatables is obtained.

and Śākamedha) have been enjoined on an anchorite as in the case of a householder by the exponents of the Vedas. (8) Having propitiated Me, the embodiment of wisdom, through austerities undergone by him thus, a hermit reduced to a (mere) skeleton (lit., spread all over with protruding veins for want of flesh) comes to Me (through successive stages) from Mahārloka* (the realm of the Ṛṣis, to which he ascends in the ordinary course after death). (9) Who could be more stupid than him who would divert such great Tapas, performed with (great) hardship and calculated to secure the highest good, to the fulfilment of a paltry desire (viz., the desire for any material or ethereal fruit up to the attainment of Brahmaloṅka) ? (10) When the ascetic, shaking with old age, is incapable of observing any longer the sacred vow (to which he has pledged himself), he may withdraw the (three) sacred fires (known by the names of Āhavanīya, Gārhapatya and Dakṣiṇā, that he has been maintaining and worshipping) into himself and, with his mind fixed on Me, enter † the fire (burn himself to death). (11) When (however) he develops a thorough distaste for the higher worlds (upto the realm of Brahmā, the creator) as a reward of pious acts (done from an interested motive), though (as a matter of fact) no better than hell (abounding as they do in sorrows), he may, on the sacred fires having been withdrawn (into himself), renounce the world and go about as a mendicant recluse from the very Āśrama in which he may be stationed. ‡ (12) Having propitiated Me according to precept (through the Prājāpatya sacrifice after performing the eight types of Śrāddha incumbent on him who is going to renounce the world), if he is free from (all) desires, and given everything to the officiating priest and having withdrawn the sacred fire into his own breath, the hermit may enter the order of recluses. (13) In the way of a Brāhmaṇa who is actually going to renounce the world the gods in the garb (through the agency) of his wife and so on place obstacles, for fear lest he should outstrip them and attain to the Supreme. (One who is bent on attaining final beatitude should not, however, be deterred by such obstacles). (14) If at all a recluse would have a covering (for his body), he should wear a piece of cloth barely enough to cover the strip of cloth used by him to hide his private parts with. Nor should he retain (in his possession) anything renounced by him (at the time of entering the order of Saṁnyāsa) other than a staff (used as a token of Saṁnyāsa) and a Kamaṇḍalu (a water-pot made of the shell of a wild cocoanut) otherwise than in a critical plight. (15) He should take (every) step (only) after the ground he is going to tread has been scanned with his eyes (lest he should unwittingly trample any creature); he should drink water strained with (a piece of) cloth, utter words tested on the touchstone of truth and do that which has been found correct by reference to his conscience. (16) Silence is the cudgel to control one's speech; abstinence from interested action, the one to control one's body; and Prāṇāyāma (breath-control) is the cudgel to curb one's mind. He who does not wield these (cudgels) cannot be (held to be) a recluse by (mere) bamboo-staves carried on his person. (17) A recluse should resort for alms to the four types of Brāhmaṇas alone (those living by gifts received, teaching, officiating at sacrifices and gleaning food-grains from fields and grain-markets), avoiding those of reproachful conduct and visit only seven houses not specified before, and should remain

* As regards the devotee whose mind has been thoroughly purified through the disinterested practice of devotion, he gets liberated even before death.

† An ascetic who prosecutes his austerities till the end of his life is sure to attain Mokṣa; while he who observes the rules laid down for an anchorite till the end of the third stage of his life earns the title to enter the order of Saṁnyāsa even if he has not developed full Vairāgya. The course recommended in this verse is only intended for him who is unable to carry on his austerities till the end of the third stage on account of a weak constitution and has not the requisite Vairāgya to qualify him for Saṁnyāsa.

‡ The Śruti lays down that a Brahmana may turn out to be a recluse whenever true Vairāgya appears in him, in whatever stage of life he may be— 'यदहरेव विरजेतदहरेव प्रयजेत्'.

contented with the food got from those houses (alone). (18) Going to a reservoir of water (such as a pond or tank) outside the town or village, he should rinse his mouth there and, allotting a (due) share to those deserving it (viz., Lord Viṣṇu, Brahmā, the sun-god and all created beings) once it has been consecrated (by sprinkling with water and so on), he should silently consume all the rest that was brought (by him—neither bringing more than was required nor laying by anything for another time). (19) With his senses fully controlled he should perambulate this earth (all) alone and free from attachment, finding recreation and delight in the Self, self-possessed and viewing all alike. (20) Dwelling in a lonely yet secure abode and keeping his mind pure through devotion to Me, the sage should contemplate on the Self as one and undistinguishable from Me. (21) By inquiring into the truth (of things) he should investigate the true nature of bondage and liberation of the Self. Bondage consists in the distraction of the senses and Liberation in their full control. (22) Therefore, keeping in check the six senses (the five external senses and the mind, the internal sense) and averse to the trifling pleasures of sense, and finding abundant joy in the Self, the recluse should go about the world contemplating on Me. (23) He should perambulate the earth full of holy tracts, rivers, mountains, woodlands and hermitages, entering towns and villages, cowherd stations and caravanserais (only) for the sake of alms. (24) He should often beg alms from the hermitages of anchorites; for, his mind being purified by the (hermit's) food obtained by gleaming grains from the fields, he is rid of infatuation and attains the goal of his life soon. (25)

नैतद् वस्तुतया पश्येद् दृश्यमानं विनश्यति। असक्तचित्तो विरपेदिहामुत्र चिकीर्षितात्। २६।

यदेतदात्मनि जगन्मनोवाक्प्राणसंहतम्। सर्वं मायेति तर्केण स्वस्थस्यक्त्वा न तत् स्मरेत्। २७।

ज्ञाननिष्ठो विरक्तो वा मद्धक्तो वानपेक्षकः। सलिङ्गानाश्रमांस्त्यक्त्वा चरेदविधिगोचरः। २८।

बुधो बालकवत् क्रीडेत् कुशलो जडवच्चरेत्। वदेदुन्मत्तवद् विद्वान् गोचर्या नैगमश्चरेत्। २९।

वेदवादरतो न स्यान्न पाखण्डी न हैतुकः। शुष्कवादविवादे न कञ्चित् पक्षं समाश्रयेत्। ३०।

नोद्विजेत जनाद् धीरो जनं चोद्वेजयेत् तु। अतिवादास्तितिक्षेत नावपन्येत कञ्चन।

देहमुद्दिश्य पशुवद् वैरं कुर्यान्न केनचित्। ३१।

एक एव परो ह्यात्मा भूतेष्वात्मन्यवस्थितः। यथेन्दुरुद्रपात्रेषु भूतान्येकात्मकानि च। ३२।

He should not regard this visible world as real because it is perishable. (Therefore,) with his mind unattached to this world as well as to the next he should cease from every activity intended (to secure the objects of senses). (26) Realizing by force of reasoning (on the analogy of a dream) that all that exists (apart from the Self) viz., this (objective) universe (regarded as "mine") as well as the body (and referred to as "I") conjoined with the mind, speech and the vital air (alongwith the delights of sense) as a (mere) mental illusion superimposed on the Self, and (therefore) turning his back on it, he should think no more of it and remain established in the Self. (27) No longer governed by the scriptural ordinance, he who is established in Self-Knowledge, though (outwardly) appearing as a seeker of Liberation (averse to the pleasures of sense) or a devotee of Mine, seeking nothing (not even Liberation), may do as he likes, renouncing (attachment to the duties of) the four Āśramas (stages of life) alongwith their distinguishing marks (such as the triple staff in the case of a recluse). (28) Though sound of judgment, he should sport like a child (bereft of the sense of honour and ignominy); though clever, he should behave like a dullard. Though learned he should rave like a madman (inasmuch) as he has none to please by his speech; though devoted to the intention of the Vedas, he should behave like an animal (observing no consistency in his behaviour). (29) He should not take delight in expounding the section of the Vedas treating of ritual acts, nor should he observe any rules of conduct opposed to the injunctions of the Vedas and the Smṛti texts, nor should he be devoted to (empty) ratiocination, nor again should he take any side in a fruitless discussion. (30) He should not be annoyed with anyone nor should he annoy anyone with his mind (fully) controlled he should put up with abuses and should never show disrespect to anyone; nor should he for the sake of his body make enemies with anyone like a brute. (31) For, (just) as the same moon gets reflected in (a number of) vessels holding water, the same transcendent Self is present in (all) created beings as well as in one's own body (so that there is no ground for enmity whatsoever from the point of view of the spirit) and the bodies (too) are essentially one constituted as they are of the same gross elements (so that enmity with any being whatsoever is enmity with one's own Self). (32)

अलङ्घ्या न विषीदेत काले कालेऽशनं क्वचित् । लब्ध्वा न हृष्येद् धृतिमानुभयं दैवतञ्जितम् । ३३ ।

आहारार्थं समीहेत युक्तं तत् प्राणधारणम् । तत्त्वं विमृश्यते तेन तद् विज्ञाय विमुच्यते । ३४ ।

यदुच्योपपन्नान्नमद्याच्छ्रेष्ठमुतापगम् । तथा वासस्तथा शय्यां प्राप्तं प्राप्तं भजेन्मुनिः । ३५ ।

शौचमाचमनं स्नानं न तु चोदनया चरेत् । अन्यांश्च नियमान् ज्ञानी यथाहं लीलयेद्भारः । ३६ ।

न हि तस्य विकल्पाख्या या च मद्दीक्षया हता । आदेहान्तात् क्वचित् ख्यातिस्ततः सम्पद्यते मया । ३७ ।

Full of fortitude a Saṁnyāsi should not get dejected on not getting food in time on any occasion nor should he feel rejoiced to get it; (for) both (his getting and not getting it) lie in the hands of Providence. (33) (This should not lead one to think that a Saṁnyāsi need not even go out to beg food.) He must exert himself to procure food; for an attempt on his part to sustain life would be (quite) justified; (for) by sustaining life truth is investigated by him and realizing the truth thereby he will get liberated for all time to come. (34) A recluse should eat the food, whether excellent or of the worst type, obtained by the will of Providence and (also) accept whatever clothing and bed is got (by him). (35) A man of wisdom should cultivate the habits of cleanliness, rinsing the mouth (after answering the calls of nature, taking food or even light refreshment such as milk and fruits and sipping water before meals etc.), and bathing (thrice everyday) and observe other rules of conduct (mentioned heretofore) by way of sport, as I, the almighty Lord, do, but not in compliance with scriptural ordinance (which is no longer binding on him). (36) For there is no longer any perception of difference in him; whatever there was has been uprooted by My realization (as the Self of all). What does appear (in him) at times (e.g., at the time of begging alms and taking meals etc., even now as a recurrence of what has already been set aside) will continue (by force of Prārabdha) till death. Thereafter he will get (indissolubly) united with Me. (37)

दुःखोदकैषु कामेषु जातनिर्वेद आत्मवान् । अजिज्ञासितमद्धर्मो गुणं मुनिमुपाव्रजेत् । ३८ ।

तावत् परिचरेद् भक्तः श्रद्धावाननसूयकः । यावद् ब्रह्म विजानीयान्यामेव गुरुमादृतः । ३९ ।

यस्त्वसंयतवड्वर्गः प्रचण्डेन्द्रियसारथिः । ज्ञानवैराग्यरहितस्त्रिदण्डमुपजीवति । ४० ।

सुरानात्मानमात्मस्थं निहनुते मां च धर्महा । अविपक्वकथायोऽस्मादमुष्माद्यं विहीयते । ४१ ।

भिक्षोर्धर्मः शमोऽहिंसा तप ईक्षा वनौकसः । गृहिणो भूतरक्षेय्या द्विजस्याचार्यसेवनम् । ४२ ।

ब्रह्मचर्यं तपः शौचं सन्तोषो भूतसौहृदम् । गृहस्थस्याप्यृतौ गन्तुः सर्वेषां मदुपासनम् । ४३ ।

इति मां यः स्वधर्मेण भजन् नित्यमनन्यभाक् । सर्वभूतेषु मद्भावो मद्भक्तिं विन्दते दृढाम् । ४४ ।

भक्त्योद्भवानपायिन्या सर्वलोकमहेश्वरम् । सर्वोत्पत्त्यययं ब्रह्म कारणं मोषयति सः । ४५ ।

इति स्वधर्मनिर्णक्तसत्त्वो निर्ज्ञातमद्रतिः । ज्ञानविज्ञानसम्पन्नो नचिरात् समुपैति माम् । ४६ ।

वर्णाश्रमवतां धर्म एष आचारलक्षणः । स एव मद्रक्तियुतो निःश्रेयसकरः परः । ४७ ।

एतन्नेभिहितं साधो भवान् पृच्छति यच्च माम् । यथा स्वधर्मसंयुक्तो भक्तो मां समीयात् परम् । ४८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पाद्महंसाय संनितायामेकादशस्कन्धे अष्टादशोऽध्यायः । १८ ।

A man of self-control who has got disgusted with the pleasures of sense, which are (invariably) attended with sorrow, but who has not (yet) been instructed in the duties that enable one to realize Me should betake himself to a teacher given to contemplation. (38) Full of reverence and devotion and free from censoriousness he should do service to the preceptor in a respectful mood, knowing him really to be Myself, till he realizes Brahma. (39) He, however, who has not (yet) been able to control his six senses (including the mind, the internal sense); whose intellect, the controller of his senses, (too) is intensely fond of the pleasures of sense; who is destitute of wisdom and dispassion and (simply) makes his living by the triple staff (the emblem of a recluse); the impurities of whose heart have not yet been fully burnt and who has (thus) violated the duties of a Samnyasi and is deceiving the gods (by his ceasing to propitiate them through sacrificial performances which he would have otherwise done), his own self (by depriving himself of luxuries which he would have freely enjoyed as a householder) as well as Myself, dwelling in his heart, (by failing to realize Me) is deprived of this world as well as of the next. (40-41) (To sum up,) control of the mind and the senses and harmlessness (mainly) constitute the righteous course of a mendicant (recluse); enduring hardships prescribed by the Śāstras and inquiry into the truth, of an anchorite (dewelling in the woods); protection of living beings and performance of (the five great) sacrifices, of a householder; and rendering service to the preceptor, that of the celibate (who has gone through a second birth by being invested with the sacred thread and taught the Gayatrī). (42) Observing chastity (during the nights other than those in which he is permitted to copulate with his wedded wife), enduring hardships involved in the discharge of his rightful duties, purity (of body and mind), contentment and kindness to (all) created beings (—these) constitute the sacred duty even of a householder who seeks the bed of his wife (only) during the period following the courses favourable for conception (sixteen nights after their appearance); (whereas) My worship is the pious duty common to all. (43) He who constantly worships Me through the performance of his duty as aforesaid, seeking no other reward (beyond My pleasure) begins to look upon all created beings as Myself and attains firm devotion to Me. (44) Through unceasing Devotion, O Uddhava, he attains to Me, the supreme Ruler of all the worlds, responsible for the creation and destruction of all, the Source of the Vedas. (45) He whose mind has thus been purified through the performance of his own duty and who has fully realized My divine character is equipped with (both) indirect and direct knowledge concerning Me and (eventually) attains to Me before long. (46) This is the righteous course of those affiliated to a particular Varna (grade of society) and Āśrama (stage in life), consisting of certain (definite) rules of conduct. The same Dharma, when characterized by devotion to Me (i.e., pursued as an offering to Me) proves to be of supreme value as a means to final beatitude. (47) (Thus) I have told you, O good one, how a man wedded to his righteous course turns out to be a devotee and duly attains to Me, the Supreme. And this is what you asked Me (in particular). (48)

Thus ends the eighteenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Samhitā.

अथैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIX

A Dissertation on Devotion, Spiritual Enlightenment and Yogic disciplines in the form of the five Yamas, the (five) Niyamas and so on

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यो विद्याश्रुतसम्पन्न आत्मवान् नानुमानिकः । मायामात्रमिदं ज्ञात्वा ज्ञानं च मयि संन्यसेत् । १ ।
ज्ञानिनस्त्वहमेवेष्टः स्वार्थो हेतुश्च संपतः । स्वर्गश्चैवापवर्गश्च नान्योऽर्थो मद्गते प्रियः । २ ।
ज्ञानविज्ञानसंसिद्धाः पदं श्रेष्ठं विदुर्मम । ज्ञानी प्रियतमोऽजो मे ज्ञानेनासौ बिभर्ति माम् । ३ ।
तपस्तीर्थं जपो दानं पवित्राणीतराणि च । नालं कुर्वन्ति तां सिद्धिं या ज्ञानकलया कृता । ४ ।
तस्मान्ज्ञानेन सहितं ज्ञात्वा स्वात्मानमुद्धव । ज्ञानविज्ञानसम्पन्नो भज मां भक्तिभावितः । ५ ।
ज्ञानविज्ञानयत्नेन मामिष्ट्वाऽऽत्मानमात्मनि । सर्वयज्ञपतिं मां वै संसिद्धिं मुनयोऽगमन् । ६ ।

त्वय्युद्धवाश्रयति यस्त्रिविधो विकारो मायान्तराऽऽपतति नाद्यपवर्गयोर्व्यत् ।

जन्मादयोऽस्य यदमी तव तस्य किं स्युर्गच्छन्तयोर्वदसतोऽस्ति तदेव मध्ये । ७ ।

The glorious Lord began again: He who is equipped with learning culminating in intuition, (nay,) who has realized the Self and does not take his stand on (mere) logical reasoning should know this world of differences (as well as the means of subiating it) to be a mere phantom appearing in Me and (eventually) relinquish this knowledge too. (This is what is technically known by the name of Vidwat-Samnyāsa.) (1) To a man of wisdom I am the only beloved; I am recognized to be his purpose (goal) as well as the means of accomplishing it; I am his heaven (highest joy) and Mokṣa (release) too; no object other than Me is dear to him. (2) (Only) those whose mind has been thoroughly purified through knowledge and realization (of the Self) are able to know My supreme state (glory). The man of wisdom bears Me up with his knowledge, hence he is most beloved of Me. (3) Askesis, resorting to sacred places or holy waters, the muttering of prayers, charity and other purifying agencies do not consummately bring about that perfection which is wrought by a ray of Knowledge. (4) Therefore, knowing your own self up to the stage of realization, O Uddhava, and equipped with (such) knowledge and realization and full of Devotion worship Me (alone, rejecting everything else). (5) Having worshipped Me, their Inner Controller and Bestower of the fruit of all sacrifices, in their own self (heart), sages have attained to Me alone in the form of highest perfection (final beatitude). (6) This threefold modification (of Prakṛti, in the form of the body, the senses and the mind) that crops up in you, O Uddhava, is (only) an illusion (and not real) in that it appears in the middle (like the serpent in a rope), and does not exist in the beginning or at the end. (Hence) when these (six) states—in the shape of birth etc., (viz., birth, existence, growth, transformation, decay and death)—befall (by turns) this psychophysical organism, nothing happens (no change comes) to you, the substratum (beyond and unaffected by these states). (Reverting to the illustration of the serpent and the rope) what (the rope) persists before (the appearance of) and after (the disappearance of) a phantom (viz., the serpent) also exists in the middle. (Just as the states through which a serpent passes do not affect its substratum, viz., the rope, the states of the body do not affect you, the substratum of the body). (7)

उद्धव उवाच

ज्ञानं विशुद्धं विपुलं यथैतद्विराग्यविज्ञानयुतं पुराणम् ।

आख्यहि विश्वेश्वर विश्वमूर्ते त्वद्भक्तियोगं च महद्भिषग्यम् । ८ ।

तापत्रयेणाभिहतस्य घोरे संतप्यमानस्य भवाध्वनीश ।
 पश्यामि नान्यच्छरणं तवाद्भिद्वन्द्वतपत्रादमृताभिवर्षत् । ९ ।
 दष्टं जनं संपतितं बिलेऽस्मिन् कालाहिना क्षुद्रसुखोत्तर्यम् ।
 समुद्धरैनं कृपयाऽऽपवर्ग्यैर्वचोभिरासिञ्च महानुभाव । १० ।

Uddhava submitted : (Pray,) expound in a thorough (conclusive) way, O Lord of the universe, which is Your own form ! this purifying and most ancient (because embodied in the dateless Vedas) wisdom, coupled with dispassion and intuition, as well as the path of Devotion, sought after (even) by the great (Brahmā and others). (8) For a man tormented on all sides with the threefold agony (viz., 1—that brought about by divine agencies in the form of natural calamities, 2—that inflicted by other living beings and 3—that arising out of bodily distemper or mental disturbance) and undergoing intense suffering in the fearful path of metempsychosis, O Lord, I find no shelter other than the umbrella of Your feet, which (not only affords protection against the scorching sunshine but also) rains nectar on all sides. (9) Kindly lift up once for all this creature fallen deep into this abyss (of transmigration) and bitten by the snake of Death, (yet) seized by the great thirst for trifling delights (of sense), and soothe me with (nectar-like) words showing the way to Liberation, O Lord possessed of immense glory ! (10)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

इत्थमेतत् पुरा राजा भीष्यं धर्मभृतां वरम् । अजातशत्रुः पप्रच्छ सर्वेषां नोऽनुशृण्वताम् । ११ ।
 निवृत्ते भारते युद्धे सहत्रिधनविह्वलः । श्रुत्वा धर्मान् बहून् पश्यान्मोक्षधर्मानपृच्छत् । १२ ।
 तानहं तेऽभिधास्यामि देवव्रतमुखाच्छ्रुतान् । ज्ञानवैराग्यविज्ञानश्रद्धाभक्त्युपबृंहितान् । १३ ।
 नवैकादश पञ्च त्रीन् भावान् भूतेषु येन वै । ईक्षेताथैकमप्येषु तत्ज्ञानं मम निश्चितम् । १४ ।
 एतदेव हि विज्ञानं न तथैकेन येन यत् । स्थित्युत्पत्त्यप्ययान् पश्येद् भावानां त्रिगुणात्मनाम् । १५ ।
 आदावन्ते च मध्ये च सृज्यात् सृज्यं यदन्वियात् । पुनस्तत्प्रतिसंक्रामे यच्छिष्येत तदेव सत् । १६ ।
 श्रुतिः प्रत्यक्षमैतिह्यमनुमानं चतुष्टयम् । प्रमाणेष्वनुवस्थानाद् विकल्पात् स विरज्यते । १७ ।
 कर्मणां परिणामित्वादाविरिञ्चादमङ्गलम् । विपश्चित्रश्वरं पश्येद्दृष्टमपि दृष्टवत् । १८ ।

The glorious Lord replied : Thus did King Yudhiṣṭhira (who bore no enmity to any creature whatsoever) ask this (very) question in the former days of Bhīṣma, the foremost of those devoted to the righteous course (pleasing to the Lord), while all of us listened. (11) Having heard the exposition of many righteous courses—when the (internecine) war between the Bhāratas had come to an end—Yudhiṣṭhira, distressed over the death of his kinsmen, subsequently asked Bhīṣma about the courses of conduct conducive to emancipation. (12) I shall reproduce to you the exposition of those righteous courses which was heard (by Me) from the lips of Bhīṣma (of heavenly vows), and which is full of precepts on spiritual enlightenment, dispassion, intuition, faith and Devotion. (13) Jñāna (spiritual enlightenment) has been concluded by Me to be that by which one is enabled to perceive the nine (viz., Prakṛti or primordial Matter, Puruṣa or the Spirit, Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, Ahaṅkāra or the cosmic Ego and the five Tanmātrās or subtle elements), the eleven (viz., the five senses of perception, the five organs of action and the mind), the five (viz., the gross elements), and the three catēgones (namely, the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti, viz., Sattva or the principle of harmony, Rajas or the principle of activity and Tamas or the principle of ignorance and inertia) as permeating (all) created beings (from Brahmā, the earliest and foremost of all, down to the merest blade of grass) and further perceives the one (intelligent principle, viz., the Supreme Spirit) running through them. (14) When (however) a man no longer perceives as he did before the many (phenomena) as permeated by the one (reality, viz., Brahma) but sees that one reality only, that alone is Vijñāna to be sure. (In order to perceive this one reality (alone), he should ponder the coming into existence, continuance and dissolution (i.e., the transitoriness and hence unreality) of (the many) existences constituted of the three Guṇas. (15) That alone should be concluded to be real, which abides at the beginning as well as at the end (of creation) and follows from one evolute to another in the middle, and again which remains (as the residue) in the process of their involution (return to original state). (16) Of the (many) Pramāṇas (means of cognition) Śruti texts (negating plurality), direct perception (of an effect being invariably produced by a cause), tradition and inference—these four are the most authoritative. Plurality of substances not finding support in the light of these; a discerning man (realizes the spiritual substance permeating all phenomena to be the only reality and) recoils from diversity (in the form of this world of matter). (17) Since (all) ritual acts (which are rewarded with heaven) are transient, a wise man should look upon even the invisible world, including the realm of Brahmā (the creator), as full of misery and perishable like the visible. (18)

भक्तियोगः पुरैवोक्तः प्रीयमाणाय तेऽनघ । पुनश्च कथयिष्यामि मद्भक्तेः कारणं परम् । १९ ।

श्रद्धामृतकथायां मे शश्वन्मदनुकीर्तनम् । परिनिष्ठा च पूजायां स्तुतिभिः स्तवनं मम । २० ।

आदरः परिचर्यायां सर्वाङ्गैरभिवन्दनम् । मद्भक्तपूजाभ्यधिका सर्वभूतेषु मन्त्रति । २१ ।

मदर्थेष्वङ्गुचेष्टा च वचसा मदगुणोरणम् । मय्यर्पणं च मनसः सर्वकामविवर्जनम् । २२ ।

मदर्थस्यैव परित्यागो भोगस्य च सुखस्य च । इष्टं दत्तं हुतं जप्तं मदर्थं यद् व्रतं तपः । २३ ।

एवं धर्मैर्मुष्याणामुद्भवात्पनिवेदिनाम् । मयि सद्भायने भक्तिः कोऽन्योऽर्थोऽस्यावशिष्यते । २४ ।

The path of Devotion has already been delineated by Me. I shall, however, tell you once more the royal road to Devotion, since you have developed a liking for it, O sinless one ! (19) Keenness to hear My nectar-like stories, repeated exposition of My stories when they have been (duly) heard, intense devotion to (My) worship, and glorifying Me with songs of praise, enthusiasm in doing service to Me (in the form of sweeping My temple and so on), saluting Me with all the eight limbs (viz., the head, breast, hands, knees and feet), offering much more devoted worship to My devotees and looking upon all created beings as Myself; directing (all) the movements of one's body to pursuits intended to propitiate Me (e.g., plucking basil leaves and flowers etc., for My worship), to utter My praises (alone) with one's speech, resigning the mind to Me, and giving up all (one's) desires; spurning for My sake (in order to be able to carry on My adoration uninterruptedly) wealth as well as the means of enjoyment (luxuries) and self-gratification, (all of which generally interfere with Devotion) and undertaking sacrificial performances, practising charity, offering oblations into the sacred fire, muttering prayers, observing fasts and other sacred vows and (other) austerities (in the form of undergoing hardships sanctioned by the Śāstras) done for My sake—all these are stepping-stones to Devotion. (20—23) Devotion (consisting in all-absorbing Love for Me, the reward of all spiritual endeavours) to Me develops, by (following) such righteous courses, in the heart of men who dedicate (to My service) their (very) self (in the shape of their psychophysical organism as well as all that is connected with it), O Uddhava ! What other objected remains for such a devotee to be accomplished ? (In other words, all his objects are accomplished as a matter of course through Devotion alone.) (24)

यदाऽऽत्मन्यर्पितं चित्तं शान्तं सत्त्वोपबृंहितम् । धर्मं ज्ञानं सर्वैराग्यमैश्वर्यं चाभिपद्यते । २५ ।
 यदर्पितं तद् विकल्पे इन्द्रियैः परिधावति । रजस्वलं चासन्निष्टं चित्तं विद्धि विपर्ययम् । २६ ।
 धर्मो मद्भक्तिकृत् प्रोक्तो ज्ञानं चैकात्म्यदर्शनम् । गुणेष्वसङ्गो वैराग्यमैश्वर्यं चाणिमादयः । २७ ।

When the mind, equipped with Sattva and (therefore) tranquil, is devoted to Me, man (automatically) acquires piety, wisdom coupled with dispassion and divine powers. (25) When (however) the aforesaid mind is set on various objects (the body, dwelling etc.), it wanders alongwith the senses and gets all the more stained with Rajas and addicted to evil and then know it (for certain) that a man develops the reverse of piety etc., (viz., unrighteousness, ignorance, passion and lack of divinity). (26) That (alone) which engenders devotion to Me is extolled (in the scriptures) as Dharma (piety); that (alone) which enables one to perceive unity (everywhere) is glorified as wisdom; a distaste for the pleasures of sense is spoken highly of as dispassion and mystic powers (such as the capacity to assume the size of an atom) are extolled as divine powers. (27)

उद्धव उवाच

यमः कतिविधः प्रोक्तो नियमो वारिकर्शन । कः शमः को दमः कृष्ण का तितिक्षा धृतिः प्रभो । २८ ।
 किं दानं किं तपः शौर्यं किं सत्यमृतमुच्यते । कस्यागः किं धनं चेष्टं को यज्ञः का च दक्षिणा । २९ ।
 पुंसः किं सिद्धं बलं श्रीमन् भगो लाभश्च केशव । का विद्या ह्रीः परा का श्रीः किं सुखं दुःखमेव च । ३० ।
 कः पण्डितः कश्च मूर्खः कः पन्था उत्पथश्च कः । कः स्वर्गो नरकः कः स्वित्को बन्धुस्त किं गृहम् । ३१ ।
 क आढ्यः को दरिद्रो वा कृपणः कः क ईश्वरः । एतान् प्रश्नान् मम ब्रूहि विपरीतांश्च सत्यते । ३२ ।

Uddhava submitted : Of how many varieties is Yama (self-control) declared to consist and of how many types is Niyama (self-discipline) declared to be, O Chastiser of foes ? What is Śama ? What does Dama consist in, O Enchanter of beings ? What is (the definition of) Titikṣā (and) what is firmness, O Lord ? (28) What is charity ? What is Tapas ? What is valour ? What is truthfulness and what is called (by the name of) Rta ? What is (known as) Tyāga ? What is the esteemed wealth ? What is Yajña and what goes by the name of Dakṣiṇā ? (29) What is the strength of men, O glorious One ? What is fortune and what is the gain, O Ruler (even) of Brahmā and Śiva ? What is supreme Wisdom ? What is Hri ? What is adornment ? What is happiness and what is misery ? (30) Who is a man of erudition and who is a fool ? What is the path (of virtue) and what is the wrong way ? What is heaven ? What is hell ? Who is a friend and what is the home ? (31) Who is opulent and who is a destitute ? Who is pitiable and who is the master of his self ? (Pray,) answer these questions of mine and (also) define the contraries (of what has been asked), O Protector of the virtuous ? (32)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अहिंसा सत्यमस्तेयमसङ्गो ह्रीरसञ्जयः । आस्तिक्यं ब्रह्मचर्यं च मौनं स्थैर्यं क्षमाभयम् । ३३ ।
 शौचं जपस्तपो होमः श्रद्धाऽऽतिथ्यं मदर्वनम् । तीर्थाटनं परार्थेहा तुष्टिराचार्यसेवनम् । ३४ ।
 एते यमाः सनियमा उभयोर्द्वादश स्मृताः । पुंसमुपासितास्तात यथाकामं दुहन्ति हि । ३५ ।
 शमो मन्त्रिष्ठता बुद्धेर्दम इन्द्रियसंयमः । तितिक्षा दुःखसंमर्षो जिह्वोपस्थजयो धृतिः । ३६ ।
 दण्डन्यासः परं दानं कामत्यागस्तपः स्मृतम् । स्वभावविजयः शौर्यं सत्यं च समदर्शनम् । ३७ ।
 ऋतं च सूता वाणी कविभिः परिकीर्तिता । कर्मस्वसङ्गमः शौचं त्यागः संन्यास उच्यते । ३८ ।
 धर्म इष्टं धनं नृणां यतोऽहं भगवन्तमः । दक्षिणा ज्ञानसन्देशः प्राणायामः परं बलम् । ३९ ।
 भगो म ऐश्वरो भावो लाभो मद्भक्तिरुत्तमः । विद्याऽऽत्मनि भिदाबाधो जुगुप्सा ह्रीरकर्मसु । ४० ।

श्रीगुणा नैरोपेक्ष्याद्याः सुखं दुःखसुखात्ययः । दुःखं कामसुखापेक्षा पण्डितो बन्धमोक्षवित् । ४१ ।
 मूर्खो देहाद्यहंबुद्धिः पन्था मन्निगमः स्मृतः । उत्पथश्चित्तविक्षेपः स्वर्गः सत्त्वगुणोदयः । ४२ ।
 नरकस्तमउन्नाहो बन्धुर्गुरुहं सखे । गृहं शरीरं मानुष्यं गुणाढ्यो ह्याढ्य उच्यते । ४३ ।
 दरिद्रो यस्त्वसन्नुष्टः कृपणो योऽजितेन्द्रियः । गुणेष्वसक्तधीरीशो गुणसङ्गो विपर्ययः । ४४ ।
 एत उद्धव ते प्रश्नाः सर्वे साधु निरूपिताः । किं वर्णितेन बहुना लक्षणं गुणोदयोः ।

गुणोदोषदृशिर्दोषो गुणस्तूभयवर्जितः । ४५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायामेकादशास्कन्धे एकोनविंशोऽध्यायः । १९ ।

The glorious Lord replied : Harmlessness, uttering only that which is wholesome, agreeable and true, non-thieving, absence of attachment, modesty, non-accumulation of possessions, faith, chastity, silence, firmness (of resolve), forgiveness and fearlessness, bodily cleanliness and mental purity, muttering the Gāyatri and other sacred texts, austerity, pouring oblations into the sacred fire, reverence (for true religion), hospitality and offering worship to Me; visiting sacred places, working for the benefit of others, contentment and service to the preceptor—these have been declared to be the twelve Yamas and the twelve Niyamas divided in two (separate) verses. Carried into practice they positively yield fruit (in the shape of final beatitude or worldly prosperity) according to the desire of men, O dear one ! (33—35) Śama is dependence of the intellect on Me; Dama consists in control of the senses. Titikṣā consists in (calmly) enduring, suffering and firmness in completely controlling the palate and the sex. (36) Forswearing enmity towards (the entire) creation is the highest form of charity; Tapas has been declared to consist in abandoning luxuries (of all kind). Valour consists in curbing one's natural propensities or cravings and truthfulness consists in perceiving unity (in the form of Brahma) everywhere. (37) Rta has been declared by the wise as consisting in truthful and agreeable speech. Śauca (which is a variety of Tyāga when construed in the sense of shaking off impurity) consists in absence of attachment to one's actions; while Tyāga is declared as consisting in (renouncing the world and) entering the order of Saṁnyāsa. (38) Righteousness is the esteemed wealth of men; Myself, the supreme Lord, am the Yajña (which should accordingly be performed as identical with Myself and not as a dry ritual). Dakṣiṇā (or gift made at a sacrifice) consists in service to the preceptor (which induces the preceptor to impart wisdom). Prāṇāyāma (control of breath) is the supreme strength (inasmuch as it is helpful in curbing the mind, which is so difficult to curb). (39) My divine state (consisting in the six attributes of lordship, piety, glory, affluence, wisdom and compassion, each in its fullest measure) is (real) fortune and Devotion to Me is the highest gain. Wisdom consists in sublating diversity (appearing) in the Self and Hari is shrinking from prohibited acts. (40) Adornment consists in virtues like desirelessness; happiness consists in rising above joys and sorrows and misery lies in seeking gratification through enjoyment; a man of erudition is he who knows what is bondage and what is liberation. (41) The fool is he who looks upon the body as his self and that connected with it as his; that which leads to My realization (the path of renunciation) has been declared to be the path (of virtue) and the path of worldly activity (which distracts the mind) is the wrong one; predominance of Sattvaguna is heaven. (42) Preponderance of Tamoguna is hell. The preceptor is one's (true) friend and he is no other than Me (the teacher of the entire universe), O friend ! The human body is the (true) habitation (place of enjoyment). He alone who abounds in virtues is said to be opulent. (43) Destitute is he who is discontented; he (alone) is pitiable, who has not been able to control his senses. He is the master (of his self), whose mind is not attached to the objects of sense; and he who is attached to the pleasures of sense is the opposite of a master (i.e., a slave). (44) These questions of yours have all been duly answered. What is to be gained by elaborate discussion ? The definition of good and evil (in a nutshell) is as follows. To direct one's eyes to the virtues and faults (of others) is evil, while virtues lies in developing a disposition entirely free from the habit of seeing the merits and demerits of others, O Uddhava ! (45)

Thus ends the nineteenth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XX

Jñānayoga, Karmayoga and Bhaktiyoga analysed

उद्धव उवाच

विधिश्च प्रतिषेधश्च निगमो हीश्वरस्य ते । अवेक्षतेऽप्रविन्दाक्ष गुणं दोषं च कर्मणाम् । १ ।
वर्णाश्रमविकल्पं च प्रतिलोमानुलोमजम् । द्रव्यदेशवयःकालान् स्वर्गं नरकमेव च । २ ।
गुणदोषभिदादृष्टिमन्तरेण वचस्तव । निःश्रेयसं कथं नृणां निषेधविधिलक्षणम् । ३ ।
पितृदेवमनुष्याणां वेदश्चक्षुस्तवेश्वर । श्रेयस्त्वनुपलब्धेऽर्थं साध्यसाधनयोरपि । ४ ।
गुणदोषभिदादृष्टिर्निगमात्ते न हि स्वतः । निगमेनापवादश्च भिदाया इति ह भ्रमः । ५ ।

Uddhava submitted : The command of the almighty Lord, viz., Yourself, (which goes by the name of Veda) consists of (both) injunctions and interdictions, and (thus) takes into account the good and evil nature of actions (as determined by their good and evil consequences), O lotus-eyed One ! (1) The Veda further cognizes the distinction of the Varnas and Āśramas (based on their virtues and faults); the merits and demerits of those born in the irregular course (of the union of a man of a lower order with a woman of a higher grade) and those regularly born (of the union of a man of a higher order with a woman of lower grade); the substance, place, age and time (suitable or otherwise for a sacrifice) as well as (the existence of) heaven and hell (attained as a result of virtuous and sinful actions). (2) How can Your word (in the form of the Vedas), consisting as it does of injunctions and interdictions, lead to final beatitude without taking into consideration the distinction of good and bad (actions)? (3) Your word in the form of Veda is the (one) excellent eye possessed by the manes, gods and human beings, enabling them to obtain insight into the unseen purpose (of life, viz., final beatitude, heavenly bliss and so on) as well as into the end (to be attained in this very life) and the means (of attaining it), O almighty Lord ! (4) Knowledge of the distinction between good and evil is derived from Your command (the Veda), and not by itself. And it is by Your word (alone) that this distinction is negated. This obviously causes bewilderment (in my mind). (Be pleased to set it at rest). (5)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

योगास्त्रयो मया प्रोक्ता नृणां श्रेयोविधित्सया । ज्ञानं कर्म च भक्तिश्च नोपायोऽन्योऽस्ति कुत्रचित् । ६ ।

निर्विण्णानां ज्ञानयोगो न्यासिनामिह कर्मसु । तेषु निर्विण्णचित्तानां कर्मयोगस्तु कामिनाम् । ७ ।
 यदृच्छया मत्कथादौ जातश्रद्धस्तु यः पुमान् । न निर्विण्णो नतिसक्तो भक्तियोगोऽयं सिद्धिदः । ८ ।
 तावत् कर्मणि कुर्वीत न निर्विद्येत यावता । मत्कथाश्रवणादौ वा श्रद्धा यावन्न जायते । ९ ।
 स्वधर्मस्थो यजन् यज्ञैरनाशीः काम उद्धव । न याति स्वर्गनरकौ यद्यन्यत्र समाचरेत् । १० ।
 अस्मिन्लोके वर्तमानः स्वधर्मस्थोऽनघः शुचिः । ज्ञानं विशुद्धमाप्नोति मद्भक्तिं वा यदृच्छया । ११ ।
 स्वर्गिणोऽप्येतमिच्छन्ति लोकं निरयिणस्तथा । साधकं ज्ञानभक्तिभ्यामुभयं तदसाधकम् । १२ ।
 न नरः स्वर्गतिं काङ्क्षेन्नारकौ वा विचक्षणः । नेमं लोकं च काङ्क्षेत देहावेशात् प्रमाद्यति । १३ ।
 एतद् विद्वान् पुरा मृत्योरभवाय घटे सः । अप्रमत्त इदं ज्ञात्वा मर्त्यमप्यर्थसिद्धिदम् । १४ ।
 छिद्यमानं यमैरेतैः कृतनीडं वनस्पतिम् । खगः स्वकेतमुत्सृज्य क्षेमं याति ह्यलम्पटः । १५ ।
 अहोरात्रैरिच्छद्यमानं बुद्ध्वाऽऽयुर्भयवेपथुः । मुक्तसङ्गः परं बुद्ध्वा निरीह उपशम्यति । १६ ।
 नृदेहमाद्यं सुलभं सुदुर्लभं प्रबलं सुकल्पं गुरुकर्णधारम् ।
 मयानुकूलेन नभस्तेरितं पुमान् भवाब्धिं न तरेत् स आत्महा । १७ ।

The glorious Lord replied : Three Yogas (disciplines or paths) in the shape of (spiritual) enlightenment, (disinterested) action and Devotion have been taught by Me (in the sections of the Veda treating of Brahma, ritual acts and worship of gods respectively) with intent to ensure the highest good of men (in the shape of Liberation). No other way is found anywhere (in the scriptures). (6) Out of these the path of Jñāna is efficacious for those who have lost (all) charm for (the fruit of) ritual acts (considering it to be full of sorrow) and (accordingly) abandoned such acts; whereas the path of Action is effectual for those who hanker after their fruit and whose mind has not (therefore) recoiled from such acts (as full of sorrow). (7) To the man, however, in whom has sprouted by (some) stroke of (good) fortune a zeal for (hearing) My stories (and chanting My name) etc., and who is neither disgusted with the pleasures of sense nor deeply attached to them, the path of Devotion brings success (in the form of God-Realization). (8) A man should (continue to) do his duties (enjoined upon him by the Śāstras—whether of an obligatory nature or those of an occasional type) so long as he does not get disgusted with the pleasures of sense or so long as keenness does not appear in him for listening to My stories etc. (9) A man adhering to his course of conduct and propitiating Me through sacrificial performances, but never hankering for their fruit, O Uddhava, neither ascends to heaven nor goes down to perdition unless he perpetrates a prohibited act. (10) (Nay,) continuing in this body and sticking to his own righteous course, abstaining from sin and (thus) purged of (all) impurities (in the shape of attachment etc.), he automatically attains pure wisdom (in the form of Self-Realization) or (even) devotion to Me (which is superior to Self-Realization) by My grace. (11) In the same way as the denizens of hell/heavenly beings too covet (an abode in) this world, which is favourable for the attainment of wisdom and Devotion (both), whereas both the aforesaid realms are unhelpful to it. (12) A wise man should not long for heaven any more than he should for hell; nor should he long even for (being reborn in) this world (as a human being). (For) through attachment to a particular body one (generally) neglects one's (true) interests. (13) Alive to this truth he should diligently strive for Liberation (lit., cessation of transmigration) before death (overtakes him), knowing this body to be mortal, though helpful to the attainment of his goal. (14) A bird which is unattached (to its abode) surely attains happiness on abandoning its abode in the form of the tree on which it has built its nest, which is being cut down by these agents of Death. (15) Shuddering with fear to perceive his life being cut short by (the passage of) days and nights, and free from attachment, the man who has no desire (likewise) attains

(everlasting) peace on realizing the Supreme. (16) That man (undoubtedly) kills his soul (brings about his own spiritual degradation), who—having secured the exceptionally fit vessel of a human body, the source of all blessings and (therefore) a most rare boon, yet easily obtained (without any effort by the grace of God) and piloted by (an expert helmsman in the form of) a preceptor and propelled by a favourable wind in the shape of Myself—(nevertheless) fails to cross the ocean of mundane existence. (17)

यदाऽऽश्मेषु निर्विण्णो विरक्तः संयतेन्द्रियः । अभ्यासेनात्मनो योगी धारयेदचलं मनः । १८ ।
 धार्यमाणं मनो यर्हि भ्राम्यदाश्चनवस्थितम् । अतन्द्रितोऽनुरोधेन मार्गेणात्मवशं नयेत् । १९ ।
 मनोगतिं न विसृजेज्जितप्राणो जितेन्द्रियः । सत्त्वसम्पन्नया बुद्ध्या मन आत्मवशं नयेत् । २० ।
 एष वै परमो योगो मनसः संग्रहः स्मृतः । हृदयजत्वमविच्छिन् दम्यस्येवावतो मुहुः । २१ ।
 सांख्येन सर्वभावानां प्रतिलोमानुलोमतः । भवाप्ययावनुध्यायेन्मनो यावत् प्रसीदति । २२ ।
 निर्विण्णस्य विरक्तस्य पुरुषस्योक्तवेदिनः । मनस्त्यजति दौरात्यं चिन्तितस्यानुचित्तया । २३ ।
 यमादिभिर्योगपथैरान्वीक्ष्वया च विद्यया । ममार्योपासनाभिर्वा नान्यैर्योग्यं स्मरेन्मनः । २४ ।

When (however) a man feels averse to (all) actions (realizing their being attended with evils of various kinds) and disgusted (with their fruit as a source of attachment and consequently of misery), a Yogi should after fully controlling his senses (try to) concentrate his mind so as to make it steady through repeated effort (at turning it towards the Self). (18) When, (even) while it is being focussed (on the Self), it soon begins to wander (due to its habitual vagrancy) and becomes unsteady (again), one should be on his alert and bring it (back) under his control by recourse to the method of conciliation (in the form of granting it a little freedom). (19) (Once it has been brought under control again) he should never allow its movements to go unnoticed and, having controlled his breath and conquered his senses, should reduce his mind to subjection by means of his intellect enriched with Sattva. (20) (Just) as he who seeks (to secure) the obedience of a horse that has yet to be broken succeeds in taming it (only) by following its will to some extent in the beginning, repeatedly winning over the mind (by recourse to the method of conciliation) as aforesaid has been declared to be (a ladder to) the highest Yoga. (21) With a clear knowledge of the ultimate principles (enumerated by the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy), he should constantly contemplate in the order of creation the evolution, and in the reverse order the involution, of all categories (from Mahat-tatva down to his own body) till his mind becomes still. (22) The mind of a man averse to worldly activity of various kinds disgusted with the pleasures of this world as well as of the next and ruminating on what has been taught by his preceptor gives up its wickedness (in the form of attachment to the pleasures of sense) by repeatedly dwelling upon what has (already) been ruminated upon (by him viz., the teachings of his preceptor). (23) The mind should dwell on the Supreme Spirit (the only object worthy of thought) through Yama (self-control) and other Yogic processes, through right knowledge in the form of an inquiry into the essential unity of the individual soul and the Supreme Spirit or through worship of My image or other representation (worthy of adoration), but never by other methods. (24)

यदि कुर्यात् प्रमादेन योगी कर्म विगर्हितम् । योगेनैव दहेदहो नान्यतत्र कदाचन । २५ ।
 खे खेऽर्थिकारे या निष्ठा स गुणः परिकीर्तितः । कर्मणां जात्यशुद्धानामनेन नियमः कृतः ।
 गुणदोषविधानेन सङ्गानां त्याजनेच्छया । २६ ।
 जातश्रद्धो मत्कथासु निर्विण्णः सर्वकर्मसु । वेद दुःखात्मकान् कामान् परित्यागेऽप्यनीश्वरः । २७ ।
 ततो भजेत मां प्रीतः श्रद्धालुर्दुर्द्विन्शयः । जुषमाणश्च तान् कामान् दुःखोदार्कश्च गर्हयन् । २८ ।

प्रोक्तेन भक्तियोगेन भजतो मासकृन्पुनेः । कामा हृदय्या नश्यन्ति सर्वे मयि हृदि स्थिते । २९ ।
 भिद्यते हृदयग्रन्थिरिच्छन्ते सर्वसंशयाः । क्षीयन्ते चास्य कर्माणि मयि दृष्टेऽखिलात्मनि । ३० ।
 तस्मान्मद्वक्तियुक्तस्य योगिनो वै मदात्मनः । न ज्ञानं न च वैराग्यं प्रायः श्रेयो भवेदिह । ३१ ।
 यत् कर्मभिर्यत्तपसा ज्ञानवैराग्यतश्च यत् योगेन दानधर्मेण श्रेयोभित्तिरैरपि । ३२ ।
 सर्वं मद्वक्तियोगेन मद्वक्तो लभतेऽङ्गसा । स्वर्गापवर्गं मद्भाम कथञ्चिद् यदि वाञ्छति । ३३ ।
 न किञ्चित् साधवो धीरा भक्ता ह्येकान्तिनो मम । वाञ्छन्त्यपि मया दत्तं कैवल्यमपुनर्भवम् । ३४ ।
 नैरपेक्ष्यं परं प्राहुर्निःश्रेयसमनल्पकम् । तस्मान्निराशिषो भक्तिरिरेपेक्षस्य मे भवेत् । ३५ ।
 न मय्येकान्तभक्तानां गुणदोषोद्भवा गुणाः । साधूनां समचित्तानां बुद्धेः परमुपेयुषाम् । ३६ ।
 एवमेतान् मयाऽऽदिष्टाननुतिष्ठन्ति मे पथः । क्षेमं विन्दन्ति मत्स्थानं यद् ब्रह्म परमं विदुः । ३७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायामेकदशस्कन्धे विंशोऽध्यायः । २० ।

If a Yogi (ever) commits through error a reproachful act (although ordinarily there is little chance of his doing so), he should burn that sin by recourse to Yoga alone (in the form of repeated effort at Self-Realization, contemplation on Me or chanting of the Divine Name etc.) and should never resort to any other act (such as penance) in such circumstances. (25) That (alone) which is known as strict adherence to one's own individual course has been extolled as a virtue. By making such demarcation of virtue and fault, restriction has been imposed on actions, which are (all) impure by origin (and that too) with the intention of enabling one to shake off attachments (to the pleasures of sense). (26) He who has reverence for My stories developed (in his heart) and has lost (every) charm for all activities (but not for their rewards) and, though recognizing the pleasures of sense to consist of sorrow (alone) is yet unable to relinquish them should therefore lovingly worship Me (by means of hearing and chanting My names and stories etc.), full of faith and firm in his conviction (that everything will be accomplished through Devotion alone) and enjoying those pleasures while condemning them as attended with misery. (27-28) All the cravings embedded in the heart of the sage constantly worshipping Me through the discipline of Devotion as (already) taught (in verses 20—23 of Discourse XIX above) disappear, I being present in his heart. (29) The knot (in the shape of the ego-sense) in his heart is broken, all his doubts get resolved and the (entire) stock of his Karma is exhausted the moment I, the Soul of the universe, am realized. (30) Therefore, for the Yogi who is full of devotion to Me and has his mind fixed on Me, neither Jñāna (spiritual enlightenment) nor even Vairāgya (dispassion) is generally conducive to blessedness in this world. (31) By recourse to the discipline of devotion to Me My devotee easily attains all that can be had through actions (enjoined by the Vedas), that which is obtained through askesis, nay, that which is secured by means of spiritual enlightenment and dispassion, (practice of) Yoga, piety in the form of liberality as well as by recourse to other means of attaining blessedness (such as undertaking a pilgrimage to sacred places and observing fasts etc.)—heaven, final beatitude or (residence in) My realm if he so desires on any account. (32-33) As a matter of fact, pious men of wisdom exclusively devoted to Me seek nothing, not even final beatitude characterized by freedom from rebirth, though conferred by Me. (34) The wise declare, desirelessness to be the greatest and most efficacious way to final beatitude. Therefore, devotion to Me falls to his lot (alone) who does not seek—much less solicit—anything (else). (35) Virtue and sin, resulting from good and evil, do not attach to pious souls (free from likes and dislikes) that are even-minded and exclusively devoted to Me and have (accordingly) attained to Me, who stand beyond reason. (36) Those who follow in the aforesaid manner the paths shown by Me as leading to Me attain to My realm, which is free from fear (of death etc.), and realize that which is known as the supreme Brahma. (37)

Thus ends the twentieth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXI

The process of determining what is good and what is evil and the secret underlying it

श्रीभगवानुवाच

य एतान् मत्पथो हित्वा भक्तिज्ञानक्रियात्मकान् । क्षुद्रान् कामांश्चलैः प्राणैर्जुष्यन्तः संसरन्ति ते । १ ।
स्वे स्वेऽधिकारे या निष्ठा स गुणः परिकीर्तितः । विपर्ययस्तु दोषः स्यादुभयोरपि निश्चयः । २ ।
शुद्ध्यशुद्धी विधीयेते समानेष्वपि वस्तुषु । द्रव्यस्य विचिकित्सार्थं गुणदोषौ शुभाशुभौ । ३ ।
धर्मार्थं व्यवहारार्थं यात्रार्थमिति चानघ । दर्शितोऽयं मयाऽऽचारो धर्ममुद्बुद्धतां धुरम् । ४ ।
भूयम्बुग्न्यनिलाकाशा भूतानां पञ्च धातवः । आब्रह्मस्थावरादीनां शारीरा आत्मसंयुताः । ५ ।
वेदेन नामरूपाणि विषमाणि समेष्वपि । धातुषुऽद्वय कल्प्यन्त एतेषां स्वार्थसिद्ध्ये । ६ ।
देशकालादिभावानां वस्तूनां मम सत्तम । गुणदोषौ विधीयेते नियमार्थं हि कर्मणाम् । ७ ।
अकृष्णसारो देशानामब्रह्मण्योऽशुचिर्भवेत् । कृष्णसारोऽप्यसौवीरकीकटासंस्कृतेरिणम् । ८ ।
कर्मण्यो गुणवान् कालो द्रव्यतः स्वत एव वा । यतो निवर्तते कर्म स दोषोऽकर्मकः स्मृतः । ९ ।
द्रव्यस्य शुद्ध्यशुद्धी च द्रव्येण वचनेन च । संस्कारेणाथ कालेन महत्त्वाल्पतयाथवा । १० ।
शक्त्याशक्त्याथवा बुद्ध्या समुद्ध्या च यदात्मने । अघं कुर्वन्ति हि यथा देशावस्थानुसारतः । ११ ।
धान्यदार्वास्थितनूनां रसतैजसचर्मणाम् । कालवाय्वग्निमृत्तोर्यैः पार्थिवानां युतायुतैः । १२ ।
अमेध्यलिप्तं यद् येन गन्धं लेपं व्यपोहति । भजते प्रकृतिं तस्य तच्छ्रीं च तावदिष्यते । १३ ।
स्नानदानतपोऽवस्थावीर्यसंस्कारकर्मभिः । मत्स्यूत्या चात्मनः शौचं शुद्धः कर्माचरेद् द्विजः । १४ ।
मन्त्रस्य च परिज्ञानं कर्मशुद्धिर्मदर्पणम् । धर्मः सम्पद्यते षड्भिरधर्मस्तु विपर्ययः । १५ ।
क्वचिद् गुणोऽपि दोषः स्याद् दोषोऽपि विधिना गुणः । गुणदोषार्थनियमस्तद्भिदामेव ब्राधते । १६ ।
समानकर्माचरणं पतितानां न पातकम् । औत्पत्तिको गुणः सङ्को न शयानः पतत्यधः । १७ ।
यतो यतो निवर्तते विमुच्येत ततस्ततः । एष धर्मो नृणां क्षेमः शोकमोहभयापहः । १८ ।

The glorious Lord began again : Abandoning the aforesaid paths leading to Me, consisting of Devotion, spiritual enlightenment and (disinterested) action, they who enjoy the trifling pleasures of sense with their fickle senses undergo transmigration. (1) What goes by the name of devotion to one's own duty has been proclaimed to be a virtue. The contrary of it (viz., devotion to another's duty), however, is a fault. Such is the conclusion about the nature of both (viz., virtue and fault). (2) Purity and impurity (fitness for use or otherwise), virtue and fault (goodness or otherwise) and good and evil consequences are determined in regard to homogeneous substances in order to regulate one's natural proneness to betake oneself to a particular substance, by creating a doubt (in one's mind) about it. (3) (Of these) purity and impurity are determined for the purpose of knowing the righteous way as distinguished from the unrighteous; virtue and fault are defined in order to regulate usage (what is intrinsically good is used in exceptional cases notwithstanding its impurity); and good and evil consequences are determined in order to enable one to make one's living (one is permitted to use an impure substance in exceptional circumstances only to the extent necessary for maintaining one's existence), O sinless one ! Such a course of conduct has been shown by Me (in the form of Manu and other divine Law-givers) for men bearing the responsibility of upholding the cause of virtue. (4) Earth, water, fire, the air and ether these five elements coupled with the Self (Spirit) enter into the constitution of the bodies of all created beings from Brahmā (the foremost of created beings) down to the immobile creation (the plant or vegetable kingdom, the lowest species of life). (That is to say, all created beings are one in point of the material stuff of which they are constituted as well as in point of their Jivahood or spiritual essence). (5) (Yet) in order to enable these creatures (by regulating their activity) to attain their purpose (of life in the form of Dharma or religious merit, Artha or material possessions, Kāma or gratification of the senses and Mokṣa or final beatitude) diverse names and forms (viz., Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya and so on) are invented by the Vedas with reference to the bodies though made up of the same substance, O Uddhava ! (6) In order (however) to regulate the activities (of created beings) goodness and otherwise are attributed by Me (in the form of the Vedas) even to entities like space and time (including the fruit and motive of actions, as well as those qualified for various types of actions), nay, to substances, O most noble one! (7) Of (all) tracts of land, that which is untrodden by the black deer is unholy, more so that which is lacking in devotion to the Brāhmaṇas. Even that which is hallowed by the presence of the black deer is unholy if destitute of righteous men. The tract known by the name of Kikaṭa (comprising the territories of Aṅga, Vāṅga and Kāliṅga*, roughly corresponding to the modern district of Bhagalpur in Bihar and the states of Bengal and Utkala) is unholy if not inhabited by good men.† The land mostly inhabited by Mlecchas ‡ and barren land (too) is likewise unholy. (8) (A period of) time which is fit for the performance of righteous actions from the point of view of (adequate supply of) requisite articles or by itself is valuable (from that point of view); whereas (a period of) time in which a (sacred) rite (already commenced) has to be abandoned (for scarcity of requisite materials or political upheaval) and (even so) that which is declared as unfit for any (religious) rite (due to impurity occasioned by the death of a blood relation or other near relative or childbirth in one's own house or family) is impure. (9) The purity and impurity of a substance are brought about by another substance as well as by the word of mouth (of a Brāhmaṇa), by a purificatory process (and otherwise), nay, by (flux of) time§ and by largeness and smallness of area respectively (as in the case

* A Smṛti text says:—

अङ्गवङ्गकलिङ्गेषु सीमादुपगच्छेषु च । तीर्थयात्रां विना गत्वा पुनः संस्कारमर्हति ॥

† "One travelling in the territories of Aṅga, Vāṅga and Kāliṅga, Saurāṣṭra and Magadha except on a pilgrimage deserves to undergo the rite of investiture with the sacred thread once more."

‡ स तैः "पुण्यमो देशः सत्पित्रो यत्र विद्यते ।

* "That land indeed is most holy where resides a noble and deserving person !"

§ In the Baudhāyana-Smṛti a Mleccha has been characterized as follows —

गोमांसखादको यस्तु विन्देति यदु भाषते । सर्वोपायविहीनश्च म्लेच्छ इत्याभिधीयते ॥

* He is called a Mleccha, who eats the bovine flesh, speaks much that is self-contradictory and is destitute of all good conduct."

§ A Smṛti text says:—

काले मेषोदकं याह्य वस्यं तु अहमेव हि । अकाले दशरात्रं म्याततः शुद्धिर्बिधीयते ॥ of a tank polluted by the touch of a low-born person), by physical fitness and otherwise or by knowledge and the affluent circumstances (or otherwise) of the individual concerned. (Nay,) the sin which the aforementioned agencies (of pollution) bring to a soul (by polluting a substance) really do so (only) according to the local conditions and other circumstances of the individual concerned. (10-11) The purity of food-grains, (articles of) wood, bones (such as ivory) and textiles, savoury substances (such as milk, ghee and honey), metals (especially gold), hides and skins and earthen substances is brought about by (passage of) time, the air, fire, earth and water jointly or severally. (12) That by recourse to which an article (such as a stool, household utensil or cloth) smeared with an impure substance sheds its (foul) smell and (impure) coating and returns to its natural state is intended to be its purifier. (13) The purity of a deer prompted by the ego-sense is brought about by bathing, munificence, askesis, age (prescribed for a certain act), strength, purificatory rites (such as investiture with the sacred thread) and righteous acts (like the saying of Sandhyā prayers) and (above all) by remembering Me. A member of the twice-born classes (or even a Śūdra for that matter) should (proceed to) do his duty (only) when purified (by these). (14) The purity of a Mantra (sacred formula) is brought about by learning it (properly from a qualified man) and the purity of an act lies in dedicating it to Me. Religious merit is acquired through (the purity of) the aforesaid factors (place, time, substance, agent, sacred formula and righteous act enumerated in the foregoing verses); while the reverse (their impurity) (makes for) unrighteousness. (15) In some cases even a virtue turns out to be a fault and vice versa in the light of a scriptural ordinance. (In this way) the scriptural ordinance determining the goodness or otherwise of a particular object cuts at the root of the distinction (of good and bad) itself. (16) In the case of those (already) fallen (in social rank or morals) the perpetration of an act similar to that which is sinful for others (not so fallen) is not (further) degrading. (Similarly) sexual intercourse (whith one's lawfully wedded wife during the days permitted* by the Śāstras) when already afire upon is a virtue (although it is a sin in the case of a recluse); (for) a person (already) lying (on the ground) has no chance of a (further) fall. (17) A man is rid of attachment for each of those objects and actions from which he desists. This righteous course (in the shape of detachment) is salutary for men and dispels their grief, infatuation and fear. (18)

विषयेषु गुणाध्यासात् पुंसः सङ्गस्ततो भवेत् । सङ्गात्तत्र भवेत् कामः कामादेव कलिर्नृणाम् । ११ ।

कलेर्दुर्विषहः क्रोधस्तमस्तमनुवर्तते । तमसा ग्रस्यते पुंसश्चेतना व्यापिनी द्रुमः । १० ।

तया विरहितः साधो जन्तुः शून्याय कल्पते । ततोऽस्य स्वार्थविभ्रंशो मूर्च्छितस्य मृतस्य च । ११ ।

विषयाभिनिवेशेन नात्मानं वेद नापरम् । वृक्षजीविकया जीवन् व्यर्थं भस्त्रेव यः श्वसन् । १२ ।

From (our) misconception regarding the goodness (agreeability) of an object springs up attachment to it in man. From attachment follows the desire to possess it and from desire alone ensues quarrel among men (as a sequel to such desire being thwarted by someone). (19) From quarrel proceeds anger which is difficult to restrain; infatuation follows anger and by infatuation is soon obscured man's all-penetrating judgment (distinguishing right from wrong). (20) Deprived of judgment, O good one, a living being (man) is as good as Rain water collected in a reservoir such as a tank during the rains can be used (for drinking and other purposes). Of course it should be avoided for three days (so that the impurities that may have flowed into it from the catchment area may settle down in the meantime). At other times one should wait for ten days; then (only) purity is ordained to have been brought about.

* A Śruti text says :—

“कृत्वा भार्यामुपेयात् ।”

One should copulate with one's wedded wife during the sixteen nights following the period of menstruation.

a non-entity. The (very) purpose (of life) of such an (almost) unconscious and dead man is consequently defeated. (21) Due to excessive attachment (and longing) for the pleasures of sense he who knows neither himself nor the Supreme lives in vain (as if unconscious) like a tree and breathes like the bellows (is as good as dead for all practical purposes). (22)

फलश्रुतिरियं नृणां न श्रेयो रोचनं परम् । श्रेयोविवक्षया प्रोक्तं यथा भैषज्यरोचनम् । १२३ ।
 उत्पत्यैव हि कामेषु प्राणेषु स्वजनेषु च । आसक्तमनसो मर्त्या आत्मनोऽनर्थहेतुषु । १२४ ।
 न तानविदुषः स्वार्थं भ्राम्यतो वृजिनाध्वनि । कथं युज्यात् पुनस्तेषु तांस्तपो विशतो बुधः । १२५ ।
 एवं व्यवसितं केचिद्विज्ञाय कुबुद्धयः । फलश्रुतिं कुसुमितां न वेदज्ञा वदन्ति हि । १२६ ।
 कामिनः कृपणा लुब्धाः पुष्पेषु फलबुद्धयः । अग्निमुग्धा धूमतात्ताः स्वं लोकं न विदन्ति ते । १२७ ।
 न ते मामङ्गं जानन्ति हृदिस्थं य इदं यतः । उक्थशस्त्रा ह्यसुतृपो यथा नीहारचक्षुषः । १२८ ।
 ते मे मतमविज्ञाय परोक्षं विषयात्मकाः । हिंसायां यदि रागः स्याद यज्ञ एव न चोदना । १२९ ।
 हिंसाविहारा ह्यालब्धैः पशुभिः स्वसुखेच्छया । यजन्ते देवता यज्ञैः पितृभूतपतीन् खलाः । १३० ।

Such a promise of reward (in the shape of heaven etc., contained in the Vedas as for example 'स्वर्गकामो यजेत'—One aspiring for heaven should perform sacrifices like Aśwamedha) does not point out the way to blessedness but is put forward only in order to create in the mind of men (externally inclined) a taste (for ritual acts) as introductory to an exposition of final beatitude, even as before administering a (dose of) bitter medicine (to a stubborn child) a sweet promise is made (by parents just in order to prevail upon the child to take the dose). (23) Indeed mortals naturally have their mind attached to objects of desire (such as wealth, cattle etc.), to their life (including their sense-organs, vitality, virility etc.), as well as to their own people (progeny, wife and so on), even though they are (ultimately) sources of misery (bondage) to the Self. (24) How could the (all-knowing) Veda direct such men—blind to their (real) interests and yet devout (convinced about the infallibility of the Vedas) and wandering (as a reward of their sacrificial performances) in the path of enjoyment (the superhuman species of life—the state of gods and other heavenly beings) and (then) entering (as a punishment for their cruelty to animals in the course of those sacrificial performances) the inanimate forms of life (such as the plant kingdom)—once more to those (very) enjoyments (through such texts as 'पशुकामो यजेत', 'आयुरिन्द्रियकामो यजेत', 'पुत्रादिकामो यजेत'—One desirous of cattle, one desirous of longevity, sound organs etc., and one desirous of progeny, wife and so on should undertake sacrificial performances) ? (25) Not knowing such intention (of the Vedas), some misguided people (the advocates of Karma or ritual acts) interpret the promises (contained in the Vedas) of fruit (in the shape of final beatitude) as offering blossoms (alone in the shape of heavenly enjoyment). (But) not so the knowers of (the real import of) the Vedas (sages Vyāsa and others) indeed. (26) Men seeking pleasures of sense and (therefore ever) miserable, grasping, mistaking the enjoyments of heaven (which are like so many flowers) as the (supreme) fruit (of human endeavour) confounded by their excessive attachment to ritual acts (in which the sacred fire plays a prominent part) and finding the Path of Smoke at the end (of their life) are not able to realize their own self. (27) With ritual acts as the only theme of their talks and intent on gratifying their flesh, they are unable to know Me, though present in their heart—Me, who am this universe and from whom this universe has sprung up—any more than those whose eyes are bedimmed by mist are able to recognize even that which is close at hand, O dear Uddhava ! (28) Not knowing My opinion—which is not quite apparent, and which is to the effect that if one has a passion for destruction of life, it should be restricted to sacrificial performances only, and that there is no scriptural ordinance making it obligatory on us—those wicked men indulging in destruction of life as a pastime and with their mind set on the pleasures of sense worship the gods as well as the manes and the rulers of evil spirits through sacrificial performances carried on by means of animals slaughtered with the desire of gratifying themselves. (29-30)

स्वप्नोपममुं लोकमसत्तं श्रवणप्रियम् । आशिषो हृदि सङ्कल्प्य त्यजन्त्यर्थान् यथा वणिक् । ३१ ।

रजःसत्त्वतमोनिष्ठः रजःसत्त्वतमोजुषः । उपासत इन्द्रमुख्यान् देवादीन् न तथैव माम् । ३२ ।

इष्टोह देवता यज्ञैर्गत्वा रंस्यामहे दिवि । तस्यान्त इह भूयास्म महाशाला महाकुलाः । ३३ ।

एवं पुष्यितया वाचा व्याक्षिप्तमनसां नृणाम् । मानिनां चातिस्तब्धानां मद्भर्तापि न रोचते । ३४ ।

Picturing to their mind the other world—which is evanescent like the objects seen in a dream and a source of misery, though delightful to the ear—and the blessings sought for (in this world), they part with their earnings (expend them on sacrificial performance etc.), even as a merchant would stake his (hard-earned) fortune (in the hope of gaining more). (31) Rooted in Rajas, Sattva and Tamas, they worship gods etc., Indra being the chief of them—who (likewise) take delight in Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—and not so (devotedly) Myself (who stand beyond the three Guṇas). (32) They indulge in the (fond) hope that, having worshipped the gods through sacrifices in their earthly career, they will ascend to heaven and revel (there), and at the end of such enjoyment (in heaven) will be born (again) in the terrestrial region of a high pedigree and be great householders (living in stately mansions). (33) Even the talk bearing on Me does not find favour with the egotistic and highly arrogant men who have their mind distracted thus by (seemingly) flowery promises (contained in the Vedas). (34)

वेदा ब्रह्मात्मविषयास्त्रिकाण्डविषया इमे । परोक्षवादा ऋषयः परोक्षं मम च प्रियम् । ३५ ।

शब्दब्रह्म सुदुर्बोधं प्राणेन्द्रियमनोमयम् । अनन्तपारं गम्भीरं दुर्विगाहं समुद्रवत् । ३६ ।

मयोपबृंहितं भूमा ब्रह्मणानन्तशक्तिना । भूतेषु घोषरूपेण विसेषूँष्वे लक्ष्यते । ३७ ।

यथोर्णनाभिर्हृदयादूर्णमुद्रमते मुखात् । आकाशाद् घोषवान् प्राणो मनसा स्पर्शरूपिणा । ३८ ।

छन्दोमयोऽमृतमयः सहस्रपदवीं प्रभुः । ओङ्काराद् व्यञ्जितस्पर्शस्वरोपान्तःस्थभूषिताम् । ३९ ।

विचित्रभाषाविततां छन्दोभिश्चतुस्तैः । अनन्तपारां बृहतीं सृजत्याक्षिपते स्वयम् । ४० ।

गायत्र्युष्णिगनुष्टुप् च बृहती पङ्क्तिरेव च । त्रिष्टुब्जगत्यतिच्छन्दो ह्यत्यष्ट्यतिजगद् विराद् । ४१ ।

किं विधत्ते किमाच्छेदं किमनूद्य विकल्पयेत् । इत्यस्या हृदयं लोके नान्यो मद् वेद कश्चन । ४२ ।

मां विधत्तेऽभिधत्ते मां विकल्प्यापोहान्ते त्वहम् । एतावान् सर्ववेदार्थः शब्द आस्थाय मां भिदाम् ।

मायामात्रमनूद्यान्ते प्रतिषिद्ध्य प्रसीदति । ४३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकदशस्कन्धे एकविंशोऽध्यायः । २१ ।

These Vedas dealing with the three departments (viz., ritual acts, the worship of gods and Brahma-Realization) teach (as a matter of fact) the truth that Brahma (alone) constitutes the Self of (us) all. The Vedic texts, however, (as well as their seers) convey their meaning (only) indirectly (and hence it is not manifest to all at first sight) and (such indirect mode of) teaching (alone) is dear to Me as well (inasmuch as the pure-hearted alone can grasp the real spirit, the generality of men being liable to misunderstand it and be led astray). (35) (The meaning of) the Veda (which is Brahma manifested in the form of word) is most difficult to understand, consisting as it does of the vital air (the Parā stage of speech), the mind (the Paśyanti stage residing in the Anāhata Cakra, including the Madhyamā stage, consisting of Buddhi or the intellect and residing in the Manipūra Cakra located in the heart) and the organ of speech

(the Vaikhari state). (As consisting of the Cosmic Prāṇa) it is endless (in point of time) and limitless (in space), profound (obscure) and difficult to fathom like the ocean. (36) Presided over by Me—the infinite Brahma, possessed of endless potencies—the said Veda is perceived (by the wise) in the form of the Anāhata sound in (all) created beings as the fibre in a lotus stalk. (37) (Even) as a spider sends forth the cobweb from its heart through its mouth, (the Lord in the form of Hiraṇyagarbha working through) the vital air, essentially blissful, and appearing in the form of Veda, with the material of Anāhata sound evolves from the cavity of the heart through the mind, which conceives the (various) sounds represented by the letters of the alphabet, the Vaikhari form of speech—flowing in a thousand channels and embellished with (the articulate sounds represented by the letters of the alphabet* classified (in Indian phonetics) as sibilants, vowels, aspirants and semi-vowels (so-called because they stand between the vowels, on the one hand, and consonants on the other), manifested out of the (sacred sound) OM (heard in a subtle form within the heart)—elaborated by various languages (Vedic as well as secular) and characterized by (a number of) metres successively consisting of four more letters than the preceding and having no limit or end; and Himself withdraws it. (38—40) Some of these metres are (respectively known by the names of) Gāyatri †, Uṣṇik, Anuṣṭubh, Br̥hati, Pankti, Triṣṭubh, Jagati, Aticchanda, Atyaṣṭi, Atijagati and Ativirāt. (41) None in the world other than Me knows the heart (hidden meaning) of this (sacred) speech (in the form of Veda)—as to what it lays down (in the section dealing with ritual acts), what it reveals (through the various Mantras or sacred texts in the section dealing with the worship of gods) and what it puts forward by way of hypothesis and (then) calls it in question (in the section dealing with spiritual knowledge). (42) Me (alone in the form of Yajña) it enjoins (in the Karmakāṇḍa); Me (alone in the form of various deities) it names (in the Devatākāṇḍa); (nay,) whatever (objective existence such as ether) is superimposed on Me (first) and (then) negated (in the Jñānakāṇḍa) is also Myself. Taking its stand on Me (as the Cause of all causes and the highest Reality) the Veda posits diversity as a mere illusion and (then), denying it, ultimately becomes quiet. This much is the import of all the Vedas. (43)

*Thus ends the twenty-first discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known
as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā*

* The twenty-five consonants, viz., क, ख, ग, घ, ङ, च, छ, ज, झ, ञ, ट, ठ, ड, ढ, ण, त, थ, द, ध, न, प, फ, ब, भ and म are collectively known as the sibilants. अ, इ, उ, ऋ, ए, ओ and औ are known as vowels; ण, य, व, and ऋ are called the aspirants; while य, र, ल and व are known as the Antahsthas.

† Of these the Gāyatri consists of 24 letters, Uṣṇik, of 28, Anuṣṭubh, of 32 and so on

अथ द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXII

Categories enumerated; Distinction between Prakṛti and Puruṣa

उद्धव उवाच

कति तत्त्वानि विश्वेश संख्यातामृषिभिः प्रभो । नवैकादश पञ्च त्रीण्याथ त्वमिह शृश्रुम् । १ ।

केचित् षड्विंशति प्राहुरपरे पञ्चविंशतिम् । सप्तैके नव षट् केचिच्चत्वार्येकादशापरे । २ ।

केचित् सप्तदश प्राहुः षोडशैके त्रयोदश । एतावत्त्वं हि संख्यानामुपयो यद्विवक्षया ।

गायन्ति पृथगायुमन्त्रिदं नो वक्तुमर्हसि । ३ ।

Uddhava submitted : How many are the categories or fundamental principles enumerated by the seers, O Ruler of the universe ? You (for your part) have referred (in Discourse XIX above) to nine, eleven, five and three—twenty-eight categories (in all), O Lord, as we have heard (1) Some (however) speak of twenty-six categories; others, of twenty-five. Some (more) declare seven, nine, six and four respectively; while others mention eleven. (2) Some (again) declare seventeen; others, sixteen and (still) others, thirteen. With what intention do the sages severally declare such a (large) variety of numbers ? Be pleased O eternal Lord, to tell us this. (3)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

युक्तं च सन्ति सर्वत्र भाषन्ते ब्राह्मणा यथा । मायां मदीयामुदगृह्य वदतां किं नु दुर्घटम् । ४ ।

नैतदेवं यथाऽऽत्य त्वं यदहं वच्मि तत्तथा । एवं विवदतां हेतुं शक्तयो मे दुरत्ययाः । ५ ।

यासां व्यतिकरादासीद् विकल्पो वदतां पदम् । प्राप्ते शमदमेऽप्येति वादस्तमनुशायति । ६ ।

परस्परानुप्रवेशात् तत्त्वानां पुरुषर्षभ । पौर्वापर्यप्रसंख्यानं यथा वक्तुर्विवक्षितम् । ७ ।

एकस्मिन्नपि दृश्यन्ते प्रविष्टानीतराणि च । पूर्वस्मिन् वा परस्मिन् वा तत्त्वे तत्त्वानि सर्वशः । ८ ।

पौर्वापर्यमतोऽपीषां प्रसंख्यानमभीप्सताम् । यथा विवर्तितं यद्वक्त्रं गृहीमो युक्तिसम्भवात् । ९ ।

The glorious Lord replied : Whatever the Brāhmanas (well-versed in the Vedas) declare is but right; (for) all categories stand included in all (others). What is there hard to establish for those who make their assertion accepting the potency of My Māyā ? (4) My potencies (in the form of the three Guṇas—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas appearing as so many modifications of the mind)—which are (so) difficult to overcome—are at the back of those wrangling over the cause (of the universe) in the following strain; "It is not quite as you say; what I say is correct." (5) Diversity (in the form of this universe), which is the subject of controversy among the disputants, follows from the disturbance of equilibrium of these potencies. When control of the mind and subjugation of the senses are attained, the diversity disappears and the controversy (also) is set at rest as a sequel to it. (6) The categories being comprised in one another, O jewel among men, they are enumerated as more or less according to the viewpoint of the speaker (by including effects in a cause and vice versa). (7) In a single category, whether it is a cause or an effect, are found comprised all other categories (viz., effects in a cause and vice versa). (8) Therefore, we accept as conclusive whatever is stated according to one's own viewpoint by anyone of those (disputants) seeking to establish the relation as cause and effect or a definite number of categories, there being a cogent reason behind every such assertion. (9)

अनाद्यविद्यायुक्तस्य

पुरुषस्यात्मवेदनम् । स्वतो न सम्भवादन्यस्तत्त्वज्ञो ज्ञानदो भवेत् । १० ।

पुरुषेश्वरयोरत्र न वैलक्षण्यमण्वपि । तदन्यकल्पनापार्था ज्ञानं च प्रकृतेर्गुणः । ११ ।
 प्रकृतिर्गुणसायं वै प्रकृतेर्नात्मनो गुणाः । सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति स्थित्युत्पत्त्यन्तहेतवः । १२ ।
 सत्त्वं ज्ञानं रजः कर्म तमोऽज्ञानमिहोच्यते । गुणव्यतिकरः कालः स्वभावः सूत्रमेव च । १३ ।

Self-Realization in the case of the Jiva (individual soul), (who is) characterized by ignorance that has no beginning, cannot take place by itself (and is possible only through instructions imparted by another omniscient being) there must be another (being) who knows the truth and is able to impart His Knowledge (to the Jiva). (That is the argument advanced in favour of their contention by those who recognize an additional category, viz., God as apart from the soul and thus raise the number of categories to twenty-six.) (10) There is not the least difference in this body between the individual soul and God (both being of the nature of consciousness). (Therefore) the assumption that they are distinct from one another is meaningless. And knowledge (or Self-Realization) is (but) a function of Sattvaguna (a constituent of Prakṛti). (Hence it is not necessary to recognize a twenty-sixth category in the shape of God in order to rationalize the possibility of Self-Realization. This is the stand taken by those who recognize only twenty-five principles.) (11) Prakṛti (primordial Matter) is (only another name for) the (state of) equilibrium of the (three) Guṇas. Therefore, Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—which are (severally) responsible for the continuance, appearance and disappearance of the universe—are the adjuncts of Prakṛti and not of the Spirit (who is a non-doer and hence cannot be accepted as the ground of the three Guṇas responsible for the continuance etc., of the universe). (12) Knowledge, according to this (latter) classification, is spoken of as (but) a modification of Sattva ; action, of Rajas; and ignorance, of Tamas (all the three of which are comprised in Prakṛti; hence action and ignorance too are included in Prakṛti). (Again,) Time is (no other than) God (who is responsible for the disturbance of equilibrium of the Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti) and Swabhāva (nature) is the Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence, which is all-powerful (Hence it is not necessary to multiply categories in both these classifications). (13)

पुरुषः प्रकृतिर्व्यक्तमहङ्कारो नभोऽनिलः । ज्योतिरापः क्षितिरिति तत्त्वान्युक्तानि मे नव । १४ ।
 श्रोत्रं त्वग्दर्शनं घ्राणो जिह्वेति ज्ञानशक्तयः । वाक्याण्युपस्थपाय्वङ्मिकर्माण्यङ्गोभयं मनः । १५ ।
 शब्दः स्पर्शो रसो गन्धो रूपं चेत्यर्थजातयः । गत्युक्त्युत्सर्गशिल्पानि कर्मायतनसिद्धयः । १६ ।
 सर्गादौ प्रकृतिर्हास्य कार्यकारणरूपिणी । सत्त्वादिभिर्गुणैर्धत्ते पुरुषोऽव्यक्त ईक्षते । १७ ।
 व्यक्तादयो विकृताणा धातवः पुरुषेक्षया । लब्धवीर्याः सुजन्यण्डं संहताः प्रकृतेर्बलात् । १८ ।

(Of the twenty-eight categories mentioned in verse 1 above, in four groups of nine, eleven, five and three respectively, the last, three viz., the three Guṇas, which are included by others in Prakṛti have thus been enumerated. Of the remaining twenty-five) Puruṣa (the Spirit, comprising God as well as the individual soul, both of which are conscious by nature), Prakṛti (primordial Matter), Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), Ahaṁkāra (the cosmic Ego), ether, the air, fire, water and earth (in their gross form)—these are the nine categories (already) referred to by Me (in verse 1 above). (14) The (five) faculties (senses) of cognition (perception), viz., the senses of hearing, touch, sight, smell and taste; the (five) organs of action, viz., the organ of speech, hands, the organ of generation, the organ of defecation and feet, and the mind, the controller of both (the senses of preception and the organs of action); the (five) varieties of sense-objects, viz., sound, touch, taste, smell and colour—these are the other eleven and five categories mentioned in verse 1 supra. Locomotion and speech, urination and defecation and handicraft are the (five) functions of the organs of actions (and no separate categories). (15-16) Appearing in the form of (the sixteen) evolutes (viz., the five gross elements, the ten Indriyas and the mind) and the (seven) causal principles (viz., the Mahat-tattva, Ahankāra and the five objects of sense) indeed, Prakṛti (being the material cause) undergoes the state of being created etc., through Sattva and the other (two) Guṇas (or modes of Prakṛti) at the time of creation etc., of this (visible) universe; whereas the immutable Puruṣa (being the efficient cause) looks on (as a mere witness). (17) Energized by a glance from the Puruṣa and united with one another, fundamental principles like Mahat-tattva (which enter into the constitution of the universe), undergoing transformation, bring forth the cosmic egg with the help of Prakṛti (their source). (18)

सप्तैव धातव इति तत्रार्थाः पञ्च खादयः । ज्ञानमात्मोभयाधारस्ततो देहेन्द्रियासवः । १९ ।

षडित्यत्रापि भूतानि पञ्च षष्ठः परः पुमान् । तैर्युक्त आत्मसम्भूतैः सृष्टेर्द्वयं समुपाविशत् । २० ।

चत्वार्येवेति तत्रापि तेज आपोऽन्नमात्मनः । जातानि तैरिदं जातं जन्मावयविनः खलु । २१ ।

संख्याने सप्तदशके भूतमात्रेन्द्रियाणि च । पञ्च पञ्चैकमनसा आत्मा सप्तदशः स्मृतः । २२ ।

तद्वत् षोडशसंख्याने आत्मैव मन उच्यते । भूतेन्द्रियाणि पञ्चैव मन आत्मा त्रयोदश । २३ ।

एकादशत्वा आत्मासौ महाभूतेन्द्रियाणि च । अष्टौ प्रकृतयश्चैव पुरुषश्च नवेत्यथ । २४ ।

इति नानाप्रसंख्यानं तत्त्वानामुपिभिः कृतम् । सर्वं न्यायं युक्तिमत्त्वाद् विदुषां किमशोभनम् । २५ ।

According to the view that the fundamental principles are (only) seven (vide verse 2 above), the five elements beginning with ether, (the principle of) consciousness (viz., the subject or Jiva) and the (universal) Spirit, the Ground of both (the subject and the object), these are the (seven) categories (Prakṛti etc., the causal principles, being included in their evolutes); from the above-named (seven categories) spring up the body, the Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) as well as the vital airs (comprising the evolutes, all of which are likewise included in their causes). (19) (Similarly) even according to the view (also referred to in verse 2 above) that the fundamental principles are six (only), they are the five elements, the sixth being the Supreme Person. Having evolved this (objective) universe in conjunction with the former (viz., the elements), sprung from Himself, He enters it (as its Inner Controller) (According to this view all objective existences should be taken as covered by the five elements and the individual soul by the Universal Spirit.) (20) Even according to the view (also mentioned in verse 2 above) that the categories are four only, they are fire, water and earth (the source of and as such no other than food), evolved from the Spirit (the fourth principle). (Prakṛti and the other causal principles should be recognized here as included in their three evolutes enumerated in this verse and the other two elements, viz., ether and the air too likewise included in them or rejected as superfluous.) By means of the aforesaid (four) categories indeed has this evolution of the universe (which is made up of so many parts) taken place. (21) According to the view (referred to in verse 3 above) which enumerates seventeen principles, they are the five elements, the five Tanmātrās (objects of senses) and the five senses of perception alongwith the one mind, and the Ātmā (or the Spirit, which includes the individual soul as well as the Universal Spirit) being recognized as the seventeenth. (22) Likewise, according to the view (also mentioned in verse 3) which enumerates sixteen categories, the Ātmā itself (in its thinking aspect) is spoken of as the mind. (Again, according to the view, finding mention in verse 3 above, which recognizes only thirteen categories) the five elements (including the five Tanmātrās) and the same number of senses (that reveal them), the mind and the twofold Spirit (viz., the individual soul and the Universal Spirit) constitute the thirteen principles. (23) According to the view (referred to in verse 2) restricting the number of categories to eleven (only), they comprise the aforesaid Ātmā (which includes the individual soul as well as the mind), the (five) gross elements and the (five) senses (of perception). (Similarly according to the view, also mentioned in verse 2, recognizing nine categories only) the eight causal principles* (viz, the five elements, the mind, the intellect and the ego) and Puruṣa (the Spirit)—these are the nine categories (the evolutes being included in the causal principles). (24) Thus the fundamental principles have been reckoned in different ways by the seers. All that reckoning is justified supported, as it is by reason. What is there unbecoming on the part of the wise ? (25)

उद्धव उवाच

प्रकृतिः पुरुषश्चोभौ यद्यप्यात्मविलक्षणौ । अन्योन्याप्राश्रयात् कृष्ण दृश्यते न भिदा तयोः । २६ ।

प्रकृतौ लक्ष्यते ह्यात्मा प्रकृतिश्च तथाऽऽत्मनि । एवं मे पुण्डरीकाक्ष महान्तं संशयं हृदि ।

छेतुमर्हसि सर्वज्ञ वचोभिर्नयनेपुणैः । २७ ।

त्वतो ज्ञानं हि जीवानां प्रमोषस्तेऽत्र शक्तिः । त्वमेव ह्यात्ममायाया गतिं वेत्थ न चापरः । २८ ।

Uddhava submitted : Although both Prakṛti (Primordial Matter) and Puruṣa (the Spirit) are essentially distinct (one from the other), their diversity is not perceived, O Kṛṣṇa, because of their inter-relation. (26) The Spirit is seen in (and through) the body (a product of Matter) alone and Prakṛti (body) too is seen in (as identical with) the Self. Be pleased (therefore), O lotus-eyed One, to resolve the grave doubt in my mind in this matter by Your clever words supported with reason, O omniscient Lord ! (27) Since enlightenment in this world comes to the Jivas (embodied souls) through You (alone), and the obscuration of knowledge (too) follows from Your energy (in the shape of Avidyā or Nescience), therefore You alone know the course of Your own Māyā, and none else. (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

प्रकृतिः पुरुषश्चेति विकल्पः पुरुषर्षभ । एष वैकारिकः सर्गो गुणव्यतिकरात्मकः । २९ ।

ममाङ्गं माया गुणमव्यनेकधा विकल्पबुद्धीश्च गुणैर्विधत्ते ।

वैकारिकस्त्रिविधोऽध्यात्ममेकमथाधिदेवमधिभूतमन्यत् । ३० ।

दृग् रूपमार्कं वपुश्च रन्ध्रे परस्परं सिध्यति यः स्वतः खे ।

आत्मा यदेवामपरो य आद्यः स्वयानुभूत्याखिलसिद्धिसिद्धिः ।

एवं त्वगादि श्रवणादि चक्षुर्निर्ह्रादि नासादि च चित्तयुक्तम् । ३१ ।

योऽसौ गुणक्षोभकृतो विकारः प्रधानमूलान्महतः प्रसूतः ।

अहं त्रिवृन्मोहविकल्पहेतुर्वैकारिकस्तामस ऐन्द्रियश्च । ३२ ।

आत्मा परिज्ञानमयो विवादो ह्यस्तीति नास्तीति भिदार्थनिष्ठः ।

व्यर्थोऽपि नैवोपरमेत पुंसां मत्तः परावृत्तधियां स्वलोकात् । ३३ ।

The glorious Lord replied : Prakṛti (the body) and Puruṣa (the soul)—there is radical difference between the two, O Jewel among men ! This psycho-physical organism (which is a product of Prakṛti) undergoes numerous changes (in the course of its existence) inasmuch as it owes its existence to a disturbance in the equilibrium of the three Guṇas (while the soul is absolutely changeless). (29) My Māyā (enchanting potency), O loved one, consisting as it does of the three Guṇas, creates by means of those (very) Guṇas differences as well as the manifold notions difference. (Though limitless in variety) this changeable universe is (broadly speaking) threefold (in character); one (such) variety is Adhyātma; the next (in order) is Adhidaiva and the other is Adhibhūta. (30) The sense of sight (for example) falls under the category of Adhyātma; colour (its object) is Adhibhūta and the solar element

* Cf Bhagavadgītā VII. 4.—

भूमिगोऽमलो वायुः खं मनो बुद्धिरिव च । अहंकार इतीयं मे भिदा प्रकृतिपृष्ठा ॥ existing in the organ of sight (which enables it to perceive light) is Adhidaiva. Everyone of these (three) depends for its existence on the other two. That which exists in the sky (viz., the orb of the sun, however), being self-existent, is independent of these three. (Similarly) since the Ātmā—being the cause of all these (Adhyātma etc.)—is (their witness and therefore) different from them, (therefore) by virtue of its own (self-existent) conscious nature illumines all illuminating agents (Adhyātma etc.). (Just as the eye has been shown above to have three aspects,) the tactile sense, the auditory sense, the palate, the olfactory sense as well as the intellect, the mind, the ego and the faculty of reason (also) should be (similarly) understood to possess a threefold character. (31) The modification evolved out of the Mahat-tattva—which has its root in Prakṛti—through the instrumentality of Kāla (the Time-Spirit) or God, who is responsible for disturbing the equilibrium of the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), viz., Ahāṅkāra (the cosmic ego), and which is of three kinds, viz., Vaikārika (Sāttvika), Tāmasika and Aindriya (Rājasika), lies at the root of the notion of difference brought into being by ignorance about the Self. (32) The controversy whether the Self as distinguished from the body exists or not is the result of not realizing the Self. Though meaningless (inasmuch as it is capable of being set at rest by Self-Realization) it does not cease in the case of men whose mind is turned away from Me, their real Self. (33)

उद्धव उवाच

ततः परावृत्तधियः स्वकृतैः कर्मभिः प्रभो । उद्धावचान् यथा देहान् गृह्णन्ति विसृजन्ति च । ३४ ।

तन्माख्याहि गोविन्द दुर्विभाव्यमनात्मभिः । न ह्येतत् प्रायशो लोके विद्वांसः सन्ति वञ्चिताः । ३५ ।

Uddhava submitted : Tell me, O Protector of cows I how men whose mind is turned away from You take and (then) give up corporeal forms, high and low, in conformity with actions performed by themselves, O Lord ! (in other words) how the omnipresent Self could pass from one body to another, how actions could be ascribed to the actionless, and how birth and death could be attributed to that which is beyond birth and death. It is a thing which cannot be easily conceived by men of poor understanding; for, generally speaking there are none in the world who are conversant with this topic, deluded as people are (by Your Māyā). (34-35)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मनः कर्ममयं नृणामिन्द्रियैः पञ्चभिर्युतम् । लोकाल्लोकं प्रयात्यन्य आत्मा तदनुवर्तते । ३६ ।

ध्यायन् मनोऽनु विषयान् दृष्ट्वा नानुश्रुतानथ । उद्यत् सीदत् कर्मतन्त्रं स्मृतिस्तदनु शायति । ३७ ।

विषयाभिनिवेशेन नात्मानं यत् स्मरेत् पुनः । जन्तोर्वै कस्यचिद्धेतोर्मृत्युरत्यन्तविस्मृतिः । ३८ ।

जन्म त्वात्मतया पुंसः सर्वभावेन भूरिद । विषयस्वीकृतिं प्राहुर्यथा स्वप्नमनोरथः । ३९ ।

स्वप्नं मनोरथं चेत्थं प्राक्तनं न स्मरत्यसौ । तत्र पूर्वमिवात्मानमपूर्वं चानुपश्यति । ४० ।

इन्द्रियायनसृष्ट्येदं त्रैविध्यं भाति वस्तुनि । बहिरन्तर्भिदाहेतुर्जनोऽसज्जनकृद् यथा । ४१ ।

नित्यदा ह्यङ्ग भूतानि भवन्ति न भवन्ति च । कालेनालक्ष्यवेगेन सूक्ष्मत्वात्तत्र दृश्यते । ४२ ।

यथार्चिषां स्रोतसां च फलानां वा वनस्पतेः । तथैव सर्वभूतानां वयोऽवस्थादयः कृताः । ४३ ।

सोऽयं दीपोऽर्चिषां यद्वत् स्रोतसां तदिदं जलम् । सोऽयं पुमानिति नृणां मूषा गीर्धोर्मूषायुषाम् । ४४ ।

मा स्वस्य कर्मबीजेन जायते सोऽप्ययं पुमान् । प्रियते वामरो भ्रान्त्या यथाग्निर्दारुसंयुतः । ४५ ।

The glorious Lord replied : United with the five senses (as well as with the five organs of action and the five subtle elements), the mind of the Jivas, consisting as it does of latencies of Karma, travels from one body to another; and the soul, though distinct from it, follows it (identified as it is with that mind). (36) Being under the sway of Karma (destiny which determines the nature of future existence), the mind contemplates (at the dying moment) objects (actually) seen or heard of (promised in the Vedas and brought to the forefront by the said destiny) and, being reborn in the midst of those (contemplated) objects, gets insensible to his present surroundings. The memory (too of his present life) ceases thereafter. (37) When through deep attachment for (identification with) a new body¹ the mind no longer remembers the previous body, this complete forgetfulness of a Jiva (about the body with which he was identified till the last moment), brought about by some reason (or other in the shape of the Prārabdha which kept him tied down to the previous body having been exhausted) constitutes his death (in relation to that body). (38) And the wise declare the birth of a Jiva to consist in completely identifying himself with a particular body just as a dream and a reverie consist in one's identifying oneself with the body appearing in a dream or a reverie, O giver of plenty ! (39) Just as the Jiva identified with the present body no longer remembers the preceding one, the dreaming soul or the soul drowned in a reverie no longer remembers (the body of) a preceding dream or a preceding reverie; nay, he visualizes his self, though old (existing from before) as if it had newly come into existence. (40) Due to the coming into existence of a body (the seat of the ten Indriyas) or due to the appearance in another setting of the mind (which forms the background of the ten Indriyas) a threefold distinction (in the form of the mind, senses and body) appears in the (one) Self (the only reality), as a result of which the Self becomes the occasion for internal and external differences, just as a Jiva assumes a number of undesirable bodies in the course of a dream and appears manifold or just as a man begetting a number of wicked children, though one, assumes different relations with reference to the friends and enemies etc., of those children and appears diversified. (41) As a matter of fact, O dear Uddhava, (the bodies of) created beings come into existence and perish every moment by action of Time, whose velocity is too subtle to be perceived; and it is due to this subtlety that their appearance and disappearance in quick succession every moment are not seen. (42) As in the case of flames of lamps, the currents of streams and the fruits of a tree, so in the case of all created beings their age, condition etc., are determined (by Time). (43) (Just) as the notion (entertained) and assertion (made) about (a series of) flames (arising and disappearing in place of one another) that this is the same flame, or about the particles of water following one after another in a stream that this is the same water are false, so it is the unwise alone (whose life is spent in vain) that entertain the notion and make the assertion about bodies arising and disappearing in place of one another at the same spot that this is the same body. (44) Even such (an ignorant) Jiva is neither born nor dies as a result of its Karma continuing in the form of a seed. Yet through illusion (in the form of false identification with the body etc.), it appears to be born (though really unborn) and also dies as it were (though immortal), (just) as fire (though abiding in the form of an element till the end of the Kalpa) appears to come into existence and die through illusion (as a result of contact with fire-wood and the cessation of such contact respectively). (45)

निषेकगर्भजन्मानि बाल्यकौमारयौवनम् । वयोमध्यं जरा मृत्युरित्यवस्थास्तनोर्नव । ४६ ।
 एता मनोरथमयीर्हान्यस्योद्भावचास्तनूः । गुणसङ्घादुपादते कञ्चित् कश्चिज्जहाति च । ४७ ।
 आत्मनः पितृपुत्राभ्यामनुमेयौ भवाप्ययौ । न भवाप्ययवस्तुनामभितो द्वयलक्षणः । ४८ ।
 तरोर्बीजविपाकाभ्यां यो विद्वाञ्जन्मसंयमौ । तरोर्विलक्षणे द्रष्टा एवं द्रष्टा तनोः पृथक् । ४९ ।
 प्रकृतेरेवमात्मानमविचिन्वाबुधः पुमान् । तत्त्वेन स्पर्शसम्पृक्तः संसारं प्रतिपद्यते । ५० ।
 सत्त्वसङ्घादुदीन् देवान् रजसासुरमानुषान् । तमसा भूततिर्यक्त्वं भ्रामितो याति कर्मभिः । ५१ ।
 नृत्यतो गायतः पश्यन् यथैवानुकरोति तान् । एवं बुद्धिगुणान् पश्यन्नहीहोऽन्यनुकार्यते । ५२ ।

यथाश्वसा प्रचलता तरवोऽपि चला इव । चक्षुषा भ्राम्यमाणेन दृश्यते भ्रमतीव भूः । ५३ ।
 यथा मनोरथधियो विषयानुभवो मृषा । स्वप्नदृष्टाश्च दासार्हं तथा संसार आत्मनः । ५४ ।
 अर्थं ह्यविद्यमानेऽपि संसृतिर्न निवर्तते । ध्यायतो विषयानस्य स्वप्नेऽनर्थगमो यथा । ५५ ।
 तस्मादुद्धव मा भुङ्क्ष्व विषयानसदिन्द्रियैः । आत्माग्रहणनिर्भातं पश्य वैकल्पिकं भ्रमम् । ५६ ।
 क्षिप्तोऽवमानितोऽसद्भिः प्रलब्धोऽमूयितोऽथवा । ताडितः सन्निबद्धो वा वृत्त्या वा परिहापितः । ५७ ।
 निष्ठितो मूर्तितो वाजैर्बन्धुधैवं प्रकम्पितः । श्रेयस्कामः कृच्छ्रगत आत्मनाऽऽत्मानमुद्धोत् । ५८ ।

Entry into the womb (in the form of seed), gestation and birth, infancy (extending up to the age of five), boyhood (extending up to the age of sixteen), youth (extending up to the age of forty-five), middle age (extending up to the age of sixty), old age and death—these are the nine states of the body. (46) These states, high and low—brought about by one's own desire of course—of a body (which is other than the Self) a certain individual soul accepts as one's own through false identification with Matter; while another with great difficulty disowns them (by grace of God). (47) One's own birth (including the preceding two states, which cannot be directly known by oneself) can be inferred from the birth of one's son and death from that of one's father. The knower of things subject to birth and death can never be subject to birth and death (himself). (48) He who comes to know the birth (sprouting) of an annual plant from its seed and its end from its being shrivelled up after yielding its fruit (in the shape of food-grains), such a seer is distinct from the plant. Even so the seer of a body (viz., the soul) is distinct from the body. (Therefore, he who knows these states of the body is not affected by them though dwelling in the body.) (49) Failing to distinguish the Spirit from Matter in the aforesaid manner and getting deeply attached to the pleasures of sense as the only reality, the ignorant Jiva undergoes transmigration. (50) Made to revolve (in the whirligig of metempsychosis) by his actions, a man attains to the regions of gods and Rsis through application to virtues (born of Sattvaguna), like control of the mind and the senses to the realm of demons (the subterranean regions) and human beings (the terrestrial plane) through devotion to lust etc., (born of Rajoguna) and descends to the realm of spirits and to the scale of sub-human creatures (and even immobile creation) through close application to grief and infatuation etc., (born of Tamoguna). (51) Just as a man who sees others dancing and singing (naturally) tries to imitate them, so the soul, though actionless, is made to follow the movements of the body etc., prompted by the intellect, when it sees them (and takes them to be its own). (52) (Just) as by the side of moving water the trees also appear as though moving, the activity etc., of the body are reflected in the Self. And (just) as when the eye is made to revolve (alongwith our body) the earth (around us too) is seen as though revolving (alongwith us), the excellences attributed to the objects of senses by the perceiving mind appear to exist in them, though not actually existing. (53) (Again) just like the experiences of a reverie or those of a dream our sense-experiences as well as our identification with the body etc., are false, O scion of Daśārha ! (54) Even though pleasurable and painful experiences do not belong to the soul, (suffering entailed by) metempsychosis does not cease for him who dwells on the pleasures of sense (as something enjoyed by the Self), any more than calamities (which are anything but real) cease to befall a dreaming man (till he is fully awake). (55) Therefore, Uddhava, do not enjoy (any more) the pleasures of sense with your vile senses (which are so difficult to gratify and are sure to lead you to perdition if indulged without restraint). Look upon the varied experiences (both of the pleasurable and painful type) as illusory and as reflected in the soul (only) because of our ignorance about its true nature (as the ground of all experiences). (56) Whether reproached or insulted, ridiculed or belittled, beaten or tightly bound (with ropes) etc., or deprived of one's means of livelihood, literally spat or un-nated upon by the wicked and thus shaken in many ways from one's fixity in the Self by the ignorant, and even when reduced to straits, a seeker of blessedness should (try to) redeem oneself by recourse to reason. (57-58)

उद्धव उवाच

१*

यथैवमनुबुध्येयं वद नो वदतां वर । सुदुःसहमिमं मन्य आत्मन्यसदतिक्रमम् । ५९ ।

विदुषामपि विश्वात्मन् प्रकृतिर्हि बलीयसी । ऋते त्वद्धर्मनिरतान् शान्तांस्ते चरणालयान् । ६० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः । १२२ ।

Uddhava submitted : (Pray,) tell us (all seekers of blessedness), O Jewel among speakers, how I should get enlightened thus (so as to be able to put up with all such outrages). I regard such outrage to oneself by the wicked as most difficult to bear even for the knowing, except (of course) those who are engaged in duties pleasing to You (such as chanting and hearing Your names and glories) and have found shelter in Your feet and whose passions have (accordingly) been stilled; for nature (in the form of tendency to revolt against ill-treatment) is (indeed) very powerful (and therefore hard to conquer), O Soul of the universe ! (59-60)

Thus ends the twenty-second discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIII

The Episode of a forbearing Brāhmaṇa

बादरायणिरुवाच

स एवमाशंसित उद्धवेन भागवतमुख्येन दाशार्हमुख्यः ।

सभाजयन् भृत्यवचो मुकुन्दस्तमाबभाषे श्रवणीयवीर्यः । १ ।

Śrī Śuka (the son of Vedavyāsa) began again : Thus prayed to by Uddhava, the foremost of the Lord's devotees, and welcoming the words of His servant (Uddhava), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) the Jewel of the Daśārhas, the story of whose exploits is worth listening to, addressed him (as follows). (1)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

बार्हस्पत्य स वै नात्र साधुर्वै दुर्जनेरिते । दुर्लभैर्भिन्नमात्मानं यः समाधातुमीश्वरः । २ ।

न तथा तप्यते दिव्धः पुमान् बाणैः सुमर्मगैः । यथा तुदन्ति मर्मस्था ह्यसतां परुषेषवः । ३ ।

कथयन्ति महत्पुण्यमितिहासमिहोद्धव । तमहं वर्णयिष्यामि निबोध सुसमाहितः । ४ ।

केनचिद् भिक्षुणा गीतं परिभूतेन दुर्जनैः । स्मरता धृतियुक्तेन विपाकं निजकर्मणाम् । ५ ।

The glorious Lord said : Indeed, there is scarcely any pious soul in this world, O pupil of the sage Bṛhaspati, who is really able to compose his mind agitated by the abusive words uttered by a wicked fellow. (2) A man is not so (severely) pained when pierced by shafts that have deeply entered his vital parts as indeed by the shaft-like pungent words of the wicked, that wrangle in his heart and torment him. (3) In this connection the wise narrate, O Uddhava, a most sacred story (of his despondency) told by some mendicant, who was subjected to indignity by wicked people and (yet) remained full of composure, recognizing it to be the consequence of his own (evil) deeds. I shall (presently) relate it to you; please hear it with a fully concentrated mind. (4-5)

अवन्तिषु द्विजः कश्चिदासीदाढ्यतमः श्रिया । वार्तावृत्तिः कदर्यस्तु कामी लुब्धोऽतिकोपनः । ६ ।
 ज्ञातयोऽतिथयस्तस्य वाङ्मन्त्रेणापि नार्चिताः । शून्यावसथ आत्मापि काले कामैरनर्चितः । ७ ।
 दुःशीलस्य कदर्यस्य द्रुह्यन्ते पुत्रबान्धवाः । दारा दुहितरो भृत्या विषण्णा नाचरन् प्रियम् । ८ ।
 तस्यैव यक्षवित्तस्य च्युतस्योभयलोकतः । धर्मकामविहीनस्य चुक्रुधुः पञ्चभागिनः । ९ ।
 तदवध्यानवित्तस्तपुण्यकथस्य भूरिद । अर्थोऽप्यगच्छन्निधनं बह्वयासपरिश्रमः । १० ।
 ज्ञातयो जगृहुः किञ्चित् किञ्चिद् दस्यव उद्धव । दैवतः कालतः किञ्चिद् ब्रह्मबन्धोर्नृपार्थिवात् । ११ ।
 स एवं द्रविणे नष्टे धर्मकामविवर्जितः । उपेक्षितश्च स्वजनैश्चिन्तामाप दुरत्ययाम् । १२ ।
 तस्यैव ध्यायतो दीर्घं नष्टरायस्तपस्विनः । खिद्यतो बाष्पकण्ठस्य निर्वेदः सुमहानभूत् । १३ ।

In the principality of Avanti (Malwa) there lived a certain Brāhmaṇa richly endowed with wealth, though parsimonious*, lascivious, greedy and most irascible, and pursued the vocation of agriculture and trade. (6) Neither relatives nor guests were (ever) honoured by him even with bare words. (Nay,) living in a house devoid of piety and ritual acts, even his own person was never gratified with pleasures when there was time for it. (7) The relations and servants, (nay, even) the wife and sons as well as the daughters of that ill-behaved and stingy fellow felt disgusted (with him) and not only did not do what was liked by him but (actually) bore ill-will to him. (8) The five claimants (viz., the gods, the manes, the subhuman species, human beings, i.e., newcomers and the Brāhmaṇa seers, to whom offerings are made during the five great sacrifices) got angry at that Brāhmaṇa, who (simply) guarded his wealth like a Yakṣa (a species of demigods) as aforesaid, was destitute of piety and enjoyment (both) and (as such) had fallen from this world as well as from the next. (9) Even the wealth—that had cost him so much (fruitless) exertion through pursuits (like agriculture) which entailed untold hardships—of that Brāhmaṇa, whose (residual) stock of merit had run out through his neglect of the said (five) claimants, O liberal-minded Uddhava, met with destruction. (10) The relations seized a portion of the wealth of that unworthy Brāhmaṇa, robbers laid their hands on another, O Uddhava; while the rest was lost through the agency of Providence (in the shape of fire etc., time, the king and other human beings. (11) His wealth having been lost in the aforesaid manner, the Brāhmaṇa, who was destitute of (all) piety and enjoyment and was neglected by his own people, gave way to anxiety that was hard to overcome. (12) A very great despondency overtook the Brāhmaṇa, who, having lost his wealth, had been reduced to a pitiable condition and had thus long been brooding over his lot and sorrowing with his throat choked with tears. (13)

* A Kadarya (miser) has been defined in a Smṛiti text as follows:—

आत्मन धर्मकृत्यं च पुत्रदारांश्च पौडस्य । दैवतानिधिभूषांश्च स कदर्य इति स्मृतः ॥

"He is spoken of as a miser, who allows his own self (body), sons and wife, deities guests and servants and (even) his sacred duties to suffer (on account of his stinginess)."

स चाहेदमहो कष्टं वृथाऽऽत्मा मेऽनुतापितः । न धर्माय न कामायै यस्यार्थायास ईदृशः । १४ ।
 प्रायेणार्थाः कदर्याणां न सुखाय कदाचन । इह चातोपतापाय मृतस्य नरकाय च । १५ ।
 यशो यशस्विनां शुद्धं श्लाघ्या ये गुणिनां गुणाः । लोभः स्वलोपोऽपि तान् हन्ति श्वित्रो रूपमिवेष्यताम् । १६ ।
 अर्थस्य साधने सिद्धं उत्कर्षे रक्षणे व्यये । नाशोपभोग आयासस्त्रासश्चिन्ता भ्रमो नृणाम् । १७ ।
 स्तेयं हिंसानृतं दम्भः कामः क्रोधः सयो मदः । भेदो वैरमविश्वासः संस्पृधा व्यसनानि च । १८ ।
 एते पञ्चदशानर्था ह्यर्थमूला मता नृणाम् । तस्मादनर्थमर्थारण्यं श्रेयोऽर्थो दूरतस्त्यजेत् । १९ ।
 भिद्यन्ते भ्रातरो दाराः पितरः सुहृदस्तथा । एकाग्रिन्धाः काकिणिना सद्यः सर्वेऽयः कृताः । २० ।
 अर्थेनान्तीयसा ह्येते संरब्धा दीप्तमन्यवः । त्यजन्त्याशु स्पृधो घ्नन्ति सहोमेत्सुन्यं सौहृदम् । २१ ।
 लब्ध्वा जन्मप्रमार्थं मानुष्यं तद द्विजाप्रयताम् । तदनादृत्य ये स्वार्थं घ्नन्ति यान्त्यशुभां गतिम् । २२ ।
 स्वर्गापवर्गयोर्द्वारं प्राप्य लोकमिमं पुमान् । द्रविणे कोऽनुषज्जेत मर्त्योऽनर्थस्य धामनि । २३ ।
 देवर्षिपितृभूतानि ज्ञातीन् बन्धूंश्च भागिनः । असंविभज्य चात्मानं यक्षवित्तः पतत्यधः । २४ ।
 व्यर्थयार्थेहया वित्तं प्रमत्तस्य वयो बलम् । कुशला येन सिध्यन्ति जठरः किं नु साधये । २५ ।
 कस्मात् संक्षिश्यते विद्वान् व्यर्थयार्थेहयासकृत् । कस्यचिन्मायया नूनं लोकोऽयं सुविमोहितः । २६ ।
 किं धनैर्धनदैर्वा किं कामैर्वा कामदैरुत । मृत्युना प्रत्यमानस्य कर्मभिर्वोत जन्मदैः । २७ ।

And he said (to himself) as follows:—"Oh, what a pity ! In vain has this body been subjected to suffering by me, who took such (great) pains over (the acquisition of) wealth neither for religious merit nor for self-gratification ! (14) Generally the riches of misers never contribute to their (bodily) comfort (or happiness). In this life, on the other hand, they conduce to the agony of their soul; and when a miser is no more (in this world) they lead him to hell (as a result of neglect of his obligatory and other duties). (15) Just as white leprosy spoils an exterior worth coveting, even a little greed mars the immaculate glory of the glorious and the laudable qualities that exist in those possessing merit. (16) Bodily exertion, apprehension, anxiety and delusion fall to the lot of men engaged in the acquisition of wealth, in augmenting and preserving it once it has been acquired, and anxiety (grief alone) is involved in its expenditure, loss and enjoyment. (17) (Moreover) since the tendency to misappropriate others' property, violence, mendacity, hypocrisy, covetousness and anger, pride, arrogance, discord, animosity, distrust, a spirit of rivalry and fondness for women in general, love of gambling and addiction to wine—these fifteen evils found in men are believed to have their source in wealth; therefore, a seeker of (final) beatitude should abandon from a distance the evil going by the name of wealth (lit., that which is solicited). (18-19) (One's own) brothers, wife, parents and uncles as well as one's near and dear ones, who were (once) full of love, nay, had identity of interest, are all estranged in no time by a single shell and converted into enemies. (20) Agitated and incensed over the question of the least wealth, these people cast at once (all) affection to the winds and, full of jealousy, forsake in no time and (even) take the life of their rival. (21) They who, having secured a human birth—worthy of being solicited even by immortals—and there too the status of a Brāhmaṇa, the foremost of the twice-born, and yet ignoring it, mar (fail to achieve) their self-interest (in the shape of final beatitude) meet with an evil destiny (go down to hell as a result of their addiction to the evils enumerated in verse 18 above). (22) Having obtained this (human) body, the gateway to heaven as well as to final beatitude, what mortal man would get attached to wealth, the abode of (all) evil ? (23) He who guards his wealth like a Yakṣa, neither propitiates (by means of it) the gods, the Rṣis, the manes and (other) living beings kinsmen, relatives and other claimants nor himself and goes down (to perdition). (24) My fortune, lifetime and strength, through which men of understanding achieve perfection, have (all) been carelessly spent, occupied as I have been with My fruitless endeavours in the cause of (amassing) wealth. What can I possibly accomplish now, as I have grown old ? (25) Wherefore does a man alive to the evil repeatedly allow himself to be troubled so much by his futile endeavours for (the acquisition of) wealth ? To be sure this world stands fully enchanted by the deluding potency of some (unknown and unseen) agency. (26) What purpose of a man who is (already in the process of) being devoured by Death could be served by riches or by those that confer wealth (on him) and what is to be gained (by him) through enjoyments sought after by the world or those that cater for (such) enjoyments or (for that matter) through actions that are conducive to rebirth ? (27)

नूनं मे भगवांस्तुष्टुः सर्वदेवमयो हरिः । येन नीतो दशमेतो निर्वेदश्चात्मनः प्लवः । २८ ।
 सोऽहं कालावदोषेण शोषयिष्येऽङ्गमात्मनः । अप्रमत्तोऽखिलस्वार्थं यदि स्यात् सिद्ध आत्मनि । २९ ।
 तत्र मामनुमोदेरन् देवास्त्रिभुवनेश्वराः । मुहूर्तेन ब्रह्मलोकं खट्वाङ्गः समसाधयत् । ३० ।

"Surely Lord Śrī Hari, who embodies in His person all the gods, by whom I have been reduced to this predicament, is pleased with me, and (it is through His pleasure alone that) despondency has come over me, which will serve (me) as a bark (to cross the ocean of metempsychosis). (28) Complacent of mind and (wide) awake to all my interests, I, who have (luckily enough) been reduced to such a (pitiable) plight, shall during what (little) time—if any—is left (at my disposal) attenuate my body (through askesis). (29) Let the gods who are the rulers of the three worlds (earth, heaven and the intermediate region) shower their grace on me in the aforesaid state. (I feel reassured by the thought that) Khatvāṅga (an ancient king) attained in no time Vaikuṇṭha (the realm of Lord Viṣṇu, which is a manifestation of Brahma)." (30)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

इत्यभिप्रेत्य मनसा ह्यावन्यो द्विजसत्तमः । उमुच्य हृदयग्रन्थिन् शान्तो भिक्षुरभूमुनिः । ३१ ।
 स चचार महीमेतां संयतात्वेन्द्रियानिलः । भिक्षार्थं नगरग्रामानसङ्गोऽलक्षितोऽविशत् । ३२ ।
 तं वै प्रवयसं भिक्षुमवधूतमसज्जनाः । दृष्ट्वा पर्यभवन् भद्र बह्वीभिः परिभूतिभिः । ३३ ।
 केचित्त्रिवेणुं जगद्गुरेकं पात्रं कमण्डलुम् । पीठं चैकेऽक्षसूत्रं च कस्यां चीराणि केचन । ३४ ।
 प्रदाय च पुनस्तानि दर्शितान्याददमुनेः । अत्र च भैक्ष्यसम्पन्नं भुञ्जानस्य सरित्ते । ३५ ।
 मूर्खयति च पापिष्ठाः श्रौतन्त्यस्य च मूर्धनि । यतवाचं वाचयन्ति ताडयन्ति न वक्ति चेत् । ३६ ।
 तर्जयन्त्यपरे वाग्भिः स्तेनोऽयमिति वादिनः । बध्नन्ति रज्ज्वा तं केचिद् बध्यतां बध्यतामिति । ३७ ।
 क्षिपन्त्येकेऽवजानन् एष धर्मध्वजः शठः । क्षीणवित् इमां वृत्तिमग्रहीत् स्वजनेन्द्रितः । ३८ ।
 अहो एष महासारो धृतिमान् गिरिराडिव । मौनेन साधयत्यर्थं बकवद् दृढनिश्चयः । ३९ ।
 इत्येके विहसन्त्येनमेके दुर्वातयन्ति च । तं बबन्धुर्निरुधुर्यथा क्रीडनकं द्विजम् । ४० ।
 एवं स भौतिकं दुःखं दैविकं दैहिकं च यत् । भोक्तव्यमात्मनो दिष्टं प्राप्तं प्राप्नोमबुध्यत । ४१ ।
 परिभूत इमां गाथाभागयत नराधमैः । पातयद्भिः स्वधर्मस्थो धृतिमास्थाय सच्चिकीम् । ४२ ।

The glorious Lord continued : Having thus resolved in his mind, the Brāhmaṇa (the foremost of the twice-born classes) who belonged to Avanti undid the knots (in the shape of the ego-sense and the feeling of myness) existing in his heart and turned out to be a peaceful ascetic subsisting on alms. (31) With his mind, senses and breath fully controlled he traversed this globe and entered towns villages (only) for (begging) alms (and that too) incognito and unattached. (32) Seeing that aged mendicant untidy (in appearance), wicked people ill-treated him in numerous insulting ways, O good Uddhava ! (33) Some snatched away his triple bamboo staff (carried as a symbol of complete renunciation); others, his (begging) bowl and Kamaṇḍalu (vessel made of cocoanut shell for carrying water); some took away his seat and string of Rudrākṣa beads and still others, his quilt of rags and even strips of cloth. (34) Returning them (once) or (simply) showing them (as if offering them back) they would snatch them from the ascetic once more; nay, while he partook on the riverside of the food got by way of alms, they would snatch away that (too). (35) People who were extremely vile (even) spat and urinated on his head; they forced him to speak while he was silent and would thrash him if he did not. (36) Calling him a thief, others threatened him with words; while others tied him with a rope, exclaiming "Let him be bound, let him be bound !" (37) Some would insultingly taunt him, saying "He is (in the heart of his hearts) a rogue, though (outwardly) carrying a (triple) staff as an emblem of piety. Deserted by his own people on his wealth having been depleted, he has adopted this course of life (as a means of livelihood rather than in a spirit of renunciation)." (38) Others would ridicule him saying "Oh, this most robust fellow is firm as a huge mountain. Strong of resolution like a heron he seeks to gain his end through (a vow of) silence !" while others broke wind at him. (Nay,) people (even) tied and restrained that Brāhmaṇa (even) as a bird kept for diversion. (39-40) Whatever affliction—caused by any living being, brought about by Providence, or having its source in his own body—thus came to him he took each as his own lot to be worked out by him (and reconciled himself with it). (41) Ill-treated (as aforesaid) by the basest of men bent on bringing about his downfall (by forcing him to abandon his course of conduct befitting a recluse), and (yet) adhering to his duty and resorting to firmness of a Sāttvika type (as depicted in Gītā, XVIII. 33), the mendicant sang the following song. (42)

द्विज उवाच

नायं जनो मे सुखदुःखहेतुर्न देवताऽऽत्मा ग्रहकर्मकालाः ।
मनः परं कारणमामनन्ति संसारचक्रं परिवर्तयेद् यत् । ४३ ।
मनो गुणान् वै सृजते बलीयस्ततश्च कर्माणि विलक्षणानि ।
शुक्लानि कृष्णान्यथ लोहितानि तेभ्यः सवर्णाः सृतयो भवन्ति । ४४ ।
अनीह आत्मा मनसा समीहता हिरण्यमयो मत्सख उद्विष्टे ।
मनः खल्विदं परिगृह्य कामान् जुषन् निबद्धो गुणसङ्गतोऽसौ । ४५ ।
दानं स्वधर्मो नियमो यमश्च श्रुतं च कर्माणि च सद्व्रतानि ।
सर्वे मनोनिग्रहलक्षणान्ताः परो हि योगो मनसः समाधिः । ४६ ।
समाहितं यस्य मनः प्रशान्तं दानादिभिः किं वद तस्य कृत्यम् ।
असंयतं यस्य मनो विनश्यद् दानादिभिश्चेदपरं किमेभिः । ४७ ।
मनोवशेऽन्ये ह्यभवन् स देवा मनश्च नान्यस्य वशं समेति ।
भीष्मो हि देवः सहस्रः सहीयान् युञ्ज्याद् वशे तं स हि देवदेवः । ४८ ।
तं दुर्जयं शत्रुमसह्यवेगमरुन्तुदं तन्न विजित्य केचित् ।
कुर्वन्त्यसद्विग्रहमत्र मर्त्यैर्मित्राण्युदासीनरिपून् विमूढाः । ४९ ।
देहं मनोमात्रमपि गृहीत्वा ममाहमित्यन्धधियो मनुष्याः ।
एषोऽहमन्योऽयमिति भ्रमेण दुरन्तपारे तमसि भ्रमन्ति । ५० ।

जनस्तु हेतुः सुखदुःखयोश्चेत् किमात्मनश्चात्र ह भौमयोस्तत् ।
 जिह्वां क्वचित् संदशति स्वदद्धिस्तद्वेदनायां कतमाय कुप्येत् । ५१ ।
 दुःखस्य हेतुर्यदि देवतास्तु किमात्मनस्तत्र विकारयोस्तत् ।
 यदङ्गमङ्गेन निहन्यते क्वचित् कुध्येत कस्मै पुरुषः स्वदेहे । ५२ ।
 आत्मा यदि स्यात् सुखदुःखहेतुः किमन्यतस्तत्र निजस्वभावः ।
 न ह्यात्मनोऽन्यद् यदि तन्मृषा स्यात् कुध्येत कस्मात् सुखं न दुःखम् । ५३ ।
 प्रह्ला निमित्तं सुखदुःखयोश्चेत् किमात्मनोऽजस्य जनस्य ते वै ।
 ग्रहैर्ग्रहस्यैव वदन्ति पीडां कुध्येत कस्मै पुरुषस्ततोऽन्यः । ५४ ।
 कर्मास्तु हेतुः सुखदुःखयोश्चेत् किमात्मनस्तद्धि जडाजडत्वे ।
 देहस्त्वचित् पुरुषोऽयं सुपर्णः कुध्येत कस्मै न हि कर्ममूलम् । ५५ ।
 कालस्तु हेतुः सुखदुःखयोश्चेत् किमात्मनस्तत्र तदात्मकोऽसौ ।
 नाग्नेर्हि तापो न हिमस्य तत् स्यात् कुध्येत कस्मै न परस्य द्वन्द्वम् । ५६ ।
 न केनचित् क्वापि कथञ्चनास्य द्वन्द्वोपरागः परतः परस्य ।
 यथाहमः संसृतिरूपिणः स्यादेवं प्रबुद्धो न बिभेति भूतैः । ५७ ।
 एतां स आस्थाय परात्मनिष्ठामध्यासितां पूर्वतमैर्महर्षिभिः ।
 अहं तरिष्यामि दुरन्तपारं तपो मुकुन्दाङ्घ्रिनिपेवयैव । ५८ ।

The Brāhmaṇa said : Neither these people nor any deity nor the self nor the stars nor Karma nor the Time-Spirit is responsible for my joys and sorrows. The Śruti texts declare the mind alone to be the cause (of our joys and sorrows)—the (same) mind which sets going the course of worldly existence. (43) The powerful mind indeed sets into operation the three Guṇas (by giving rise to attachment and aversion etc.), and from the latter proceed actions of various kinds—immaculate (Sāttvika or virtuous), black (Tāmasika or sinful) and bright (Rājasika or of a mixed type—virtuous as well as sinful); thence crop up (the various) states of existence conforming to the colour (character) of those actions. (44) Co-existing with the thinking mind (as the Inner Controller), yet unattached to its operations, and full of wisdom, God, who is a friend (director) of mine (the Jīva), merely looks on with His unclouded vision. Accepting as its own self the mind, which unfolds the universe within itself, and enjoying the objects of the senses through attachment with the three Guṇas, the Jīva (individual soul) gets bound. (45) Liberality (to the poor), devotion to one's allotted duty, observance of the five Niyamas (viz., 1-external purity, 2-contentment, 3-austerity, 4-study of the scriptures and chanting of the Divine Name and 5-self-surrender to God) and the five Yamas (viz., 1-non-violence, 2-truthfulness, 3-non-thieving, 4-continence and 5-non-acquisition of property), learning, meritorious acts and noble vows—all find their culmination in control of the mind; for subjugation of the mind (alone) constitutes the highest Yoga (wisdom). (46) Say what is there to be accomplished through charitable gifts etc., by him whose mind is perfectly calm and collected ? And what other object can be achieved through these gifts etc., by him whose mind is uncontrolled or inert (through languor etc.) ? (47) Indeed others, i.e., the senses (or even the gods presiding over them—viz., Brahma and others) are under the control of the mind. But the mind does not readily come under the control of anyone else; for the god (of a mind) is redoubtable (being the cause of the manifold worldly sufferings) and more powerful than the powerful, so that he who is able to bring it under control is adorable even to the gods. * (48) Unable to conquer that enemy (in the guise of the mind), of irresistible tempo, which is (so) difficult to conquer (otherwise than by the Lord's grace), and which torments the (very) vitals, some deluded persons thereupon make friends, neutrals and enemies of men and wage a wicked warfare in this world. (49) Taking this body (of their own)—a creation of their mind (alone)—as their very self and the body of their son, wife etc., as theirs, men of clouded judgment, labouring under the misapprehension that this is my own self and he is another, revolve in the world of matter (enveloped in the darkness of ignorance), the end of which is difficult to reach. (50) If, however, an individual is (held to be) responsible for our joy and sorrow, even in this case what does it matter to the soul (which is neither the giver nor the experiencer of joy and sorrow) ? The capacity to give and experience joy and sorrow indeed belongs to two earthly bodies (and not to the soul, which is devoid of action and as such incapable of giving or experiencing sorrow). If ever a man (unwittingly) bites his own tongue with his own teeth, with which of them should he get angry on his experiencing pain through such biting ? (51) If any god (presiding over any particular Indriya) is held to be responsible for (our) sorrow (or joy), let it be so. Even then what does it matter to the soul (which neither inflicts nor suffers pain) ? The capacity to inflict and suffer pain belongs to the two gods inflicting and suffering pain (through the organs presided over by them and not to the soul, which is devoid of form and beyond all change). When a (particular) limb (presided over by one deity) in one's own body is (ever) smitten by another (presided over by a different god) at which of the two limbs (or gods) should the man get angry ? (52) If the soul is responsible (for our joys and sorrows) (even) then what blame attaches to another, one's own intrinsic nature being responsible for one's joys and sorrows ? (If, however, it is argued that others become instrumental in such modification of the soul, my reply is that) there is no entity other than the soul (which is all comprehensive—'सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्म' as the Śruti says); if there is (or appears to be), it is illusory. Hence there is neither joy nor sorrow. Wherefore (then) should one feel angry (at all) ? (53) If the stars (are held to be) responsible for (one's) joys and sorrows, what responsibility attaches to the soul, which is birthless? They exert their influence only on a body which is subject to birth (and death). (Moreover) the astrologers declare the evil (or good) influence exerted by the stars as falling directly on a (fellow) star (the star which happened to be at the ascendant at the birth of a man and only indirectly on the personality born at that particular time because of the deity presiding over that star identifying itself with the said personality). At whom (then) should the soul, which is other than the star as well as from the body born under its influence, get angry ? (54) If Karma (action done in a previous or even the present life) is (held to be) responsible for (one's) joys and sorrows, let it be (so). (Even in that case) what responsibility attaches to the soul ? For, action is possible only in the event of the being a substance (both) material and conscious. (That alone which is material is subject to change and no one who is not conscious can engage in a pursuit conducive to one's own interests.) The body, however, is material (and is not alive to its own interests); while the soul consists of pure wisdom (and is therefore never liable to change). Hence Karma, which is the root of joy and sorrow, does not exist (at all). At whom (then) should one feel angry ? (55) If, however, Kāla (the Time-Spirit) is (believed to be) responsible for one's joy and sorrow, (even) in that case what responsibility attaches to the soul ? (For) the soul (being a fragment of Brahma) is the same as Kāla (which is identical with Brahma). No suffering can come to a part from the whole any more than the heat of fire could burn an individual flame or the coldness of ice could benumb

This is an echo of the following Śruti text :—

मनो कश्चि सर्वोपरं यदृष्टं न चान्यस्य मनो वशमभिययत् । भीष्मो हि देवः सहस्रः सहोयान् ।

a particle of it. (Nay, the soul is the same as the Supreme and) there can be no pair of contraries (e.g. joy and sorrow) to the Supreme. (Such being the case,) at whom should one be angry ? (56) Through (the agency or instrumentality of) none and at no place or time and on no account can there be any connection of the Self—which lies beyond Prakṛti (the ultimate cause of the universe)—with the pairs of opposites (such as joy and sorrow) as there is in the case of Ahankāra (the ego-sense), which reveals the world (even though it does not exist in the Self). (Hence) he who has awakened to this truth has no fear from (other) created beings. (57) Embracing the aforesaid conclusion regarding the Supreme Spirit, adopted by the most ancient and eminent seers, I, such as I am, shall get over this mundane existence (having its root in the darkness of ignorance—which is (so) difficult to cross—through worship of the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) alone. (58)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

निर्विद्य नष्टद्रविणो गतक्लमः प्रब्रज्य गां पर्यटमान इत्थम् ।

निराकृतोऽसद्भिरपि स्वधर्मादकम्पितोऽमुं मुनिराह गाथाम् । ५९ ।

सुखदुःखप्रदो नान्यः पुरुषस्यात्मविभ्रमः । मित्रोदासीनरिपवः संसारस्तमसः कृतः । ६० ।

तस्मात् सर्वात्मना तात निगृहाण मनो धिया । मय्यावेशितया युक्त एतावान् योगसंग्रहः । ६१ ।

य एतां भिक्षुणा गीतां ब्रह्मनिष्ठां समाहितः । धारयज्ज्ञावयज्जुषन् द्वन्द्वैर्नैवाभिभूयते । ६२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः । २३ ।

The glorious Lord went on : Getting disgusted with the pleasures of sense and leaving his home and wandering over the earth, the ascetic—whose depression of spirits was gone even though he had lost his fortune, and who did not budge from his righteous course of conduct though ill-treated as aforesaid by the wicked—chanted the foregoing song. (59) None other brings joy or sorrow to the Jiva (embodied soul). Friends, neutrals and foes, nay, the (whole) world is an illusion of the mind, engendered by ignorance (about the Self). (60) Endowed with an intellect focussed on Me, therefore, O dear Uddhava, control the mind by all means; such is the highest consummation of Yoga (wisdom). (61) He who hears or repeats (to others) or remembers with a concentrated mind this song chanted by the (aforesaid) mendicant, bearing as it does on absorption in Brahma, is never overpowered by pairs of opposites (such as joy and sorrow). (62)

Thus ends the twenty-third discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIV

A Dissertation on Sāṅkhya-Yoga

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अथ ते संप्रवक्ष्यामि सांख्यं पूर्वैर्विनिश्चितम् । यद् विज्ञाय पुमान् सद्यो जह्याद् वैकल्पिकं भ्रमम् । १ ।
 आसीञ्ज्ञानमथो ह्यर्थं एकमेवाविकल्पितम् । यदा विवेकनिपुणा आदौ कृतयुगेऽयुगे । २ ।
 तन्मायाफलरूपेण केवलं निर्विकल्पितम् । बाह्व्योऽगोचरं सत्यं द्विधा समभवद् बृहत् । ३ ।
 तयोरेकतरो ह्यर्थः प्रकृतिः सोभयात्मिका । ज्ञानं त्वन्यतमो भावः पुरुषः सोऽभिधीयते । ४ ।
 तमो रजः सत्त्वमिति प्रकृतेरभवन् गुणाः । मया प्रक्षोभ्यमाणायाः पुरुषानुमतेन च । ५ ।
 तेभ्यः समभवत् सूत्रं महान् सूत्रेण संयुतः । ततो विकुर्वतो जातोऽहङ्कारो यो विमोहनः । ६ ।
 वैकारिकस्तैजसश्च तामसश्चेत्यहं त्रिवृत् । तन्मात्रेन्द्रियमनसां कारणं चिदचिन्मयः । ७ ।
 अर्थस्तन्मात्रिकाज्ज्ञे तामसादिन्द्रियाणि च । तैजसाद् देवता आसन्नेकादश च वैकृतात् । ८ ।
 मया सञ्चोदिता भावाः सर्वे संहत्यकारिणः । अण्डमुत्पादयामासुर्ममायतनमुत्तमम् । ९ ।
 तस्मिन्नहं समभवमण्डे सलिलसंस्थितौ । मम नाभ्यामभूत् पद्मं विश्वाख्यं तत्र चात्मभूः । १० ।
 सोऽसृजत्तपसा युक्तो रजसा मदनुग्रहात् । लोकान् सपालान् विश्वात्मा भूषुवः खरिति त्रिधा । ११ ।
 देवानामोक आसीत् स्वर्भूतानां च भुवः पदम् । मर्त्यादीनां च भूलोकः सिद्धानां त्रितयात् परम् । १२ ।
 अधोऽसुराणां नागानां भूपेरेकोऽसृजत् प्रभुः । त्रिलोक्यां गतयः सर्वाः कर्मणां त्रिगुणात्मनाम् । १३ ।
 योगस्य तपसश्चैव न्यासस्य गतयोऽमलाः । महर्जनस्तपः सत्यं भक्तियोगस्य मद्भितः । १४ ।
 मया कालात्मना धात्रा कर्मयुक्तमिदं जगत् । गुणप्रवाह एतस्मिन्नुत्पन्नजति निमज्जति । १५ ।
 अणुर्वहत् कृशः स्थूलो यो यो भावः प्रसिध्यति । सर्वोऽप्युभयसंयुक्तः प्रकृत्या पुरुषेण च । १६ ।
 यस्तु यस्यादिरन्तश्च स वै मध्यं च तस्य सन् । विकारो व्यवहारार्थो यथा तैजसपार्थिवः । १७ ।
 यदुपादाय पूर्वस्तु भावो विकुरुतेऽपरम् । आदिरन्तो यदा यस्य तत् सत्यमभिधीयते । १८ ।
 प्रकृतिर्ह्यस्योपादानमाधारः पुरुषः परः । सतोऽभिव्यञ्जकः कालो ब्रह्म तत्त्रितयं त्वहम् । १९ ।
 सर्गः प्रवर्तते तावत् पौर्वापर्येण नित्यशः । महान् गुणविसर्गार्थः स्थित्यन्तो यावदीक्षणम् । २० ।
 विराण्मयाऽऽसाद्यमानो लोककल्पविकल्पकः । पञ्चत्वाय विशेषाय कल्पते भुवनैः सह । २१ ।
 अत्रे प्रलीयते मर्त्यमन्त्रं धानासु लीयते । धाना भूमौ प्रलीयन्ते भूमिगन्धे प्रलीयते । २२ ।
 अप्सु प्रलीयते गन्ध आपश्च स्वगुणे रसे । लीयते ज्योतिषि रसो ज्योती रूपे प्रलीयते । २३ ।
 रूपं वायौ स च स्पृशे लीयते सोऽपि चाम्बरे । अम्बरं शब्दतन्मात्र इन्द्रियाणि स्वयोनिषु । २४ ।
 योनिर्वैकारिके सौम्य लीयते मनसीश्वरे । शब्दो भूतादिमप्येति भूतादिर्महति प्रभुः । २५ ।
 स लीयते महान् स्वेपु गुणेषु गुणवन्तमः । तेऽव्यक्ते संप्रलीयन्ते तत् काले लीयतेऽव्यये । २६ ।
 कालो मायामये जीवे जीव आत्मनि मय्यजे । आत्मा केवल आत्मस्थो विकल्पापायलक्षणः । २७ ।
 एवमन्वीक्षमाणस्य कथं वैकल्पिको भ्रमः । मनसो हृदि तिष्ठेत् व्योम्नीवाकौदये तमः । २८ ।

एष सांख्यविधिः प्रोक्तः संशयग्रन्थिभेदनः । प्रतिलोमानुलोमाभ्यां परावरदृशा मया । १९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः । १२४ ।

The glorious Lord began again: I shall now fully expound before you the truth underlying the doctrine of Sāṅkhya as conclusively ascertained by the ancient seers (Kapila and others), realizing which a man bids fair to shed at once the delusion (in the shape of varied experiences such as joy and sorrow etc.), occasioned by the notion of difference (as between oneself and others). (1) During the period of final dissolution (before the Yugas began to run their course), in the very first Satya Yuga (at the beginning of creation) and whenever there are men shrewd of judgment, (in their eyes too) the subjective consciousness (in the shape of the seer) as well as the entire objective existence was one absolutely undifferentiated substance (Brahma) indeed. (2) That absolute undifferentiated reality, Brahma (the Infinite), which is beyond the ken of speech and the mind, became dual (as it were) in the shape of Mayā (objective existence) and that which is reflected in it (viz., the Jiva or the seer). (3) Of the said two (halves), one substance indeed is the well-known Prakṛti, consisting of two aspects (viz., cause and effect); while the other entity is consciousness (itself), and that is called Puruṣa (the Spirit). (4) Out of (this) Prakṛti—even while its equilibrium was being disturbed by Me (in the form of the Time-Spirit) as motivated by the Jivas (whose Karma is ultimately responsible for creation)—there appeared the three Guṇas—Tamas, Rajas and Sattva. (5) Out of the aforesaid (three Guṇas) was evolved the Sūtra (the principle of cosmic activity) as well as Mahat (the principle of cosmic intelligence), which is (ever) accompanied by the Sūtra (of which it is a counterpart and in conjunction with it forms one composite whole). From Mahat, even as it underwent modification, there appeared Ahankāra (the cosmic ego), which deluded the Jiva (by bringing about its identification with the body etc.). (6) (This) Ahankāra is of three kinds, viz., Sāttvika, Rājasika and Tāmasika. It is the cause of the five Tanmātrās (the subtle elements), the eleven Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) and the mind (including the deities presiding over the Indriyas and the mind) and (though material or non-spiritual in substance it is a sort of connecting link between Spirit and Matter inasmuch as it is interpenetrated by a reflection of the Spirit and) is (therefore considered to be both) spiritual and material. (7) From the Tāmasika type of Ahankāra, which is the source of the (five) Tanmātrās, came into being (through the Tanmātrās) the (five gross) elements (ether, the air, fire, water and earth), from the Rājasika type sprang up the (ten) Indriyas; and from the Sāttvika type were evolved the eleven deities (presiding over the Indriyas and the mind, viz., the deities presiding over the quarters, the wind-god, the sun-god, Varuṇa, the god of water, the Aśvinikumāras, the god of fire, Indra, the lord of paradise, Lord Viṣṇu, Mitra and Prajāpati, the deity presiding over procreation, and the moon-god), as well as the mind. (8) Impelled (energized) by Me, and rendered operative in conjunction with one another, all the (aforementioned) categories evolved the cosmic egg, (which served as) My excellent sporting-ground (when I entered it as its Inner Controller). (9) In that egg as it lay on the waters (that constituted a support for the egg and are referred to in the Vaiṣṇava literature by the name of Garbhoda) appeared I (in the form of Garbhodaśāyī Nārāyaṇa, the second Cosmic Person). From My navel sprang up the lotus that (brought forth the universe and as such) bore the name of the universe; and on that lotus appeared Brahma (the self-born, another manifestation of the Cosmic Person with four faces and invested with a body evolved as a result of past meritorious deeds). (10) Characterized by Rajas (the principle of activity) and equipped with askesis, the aforesaid Brahmā (the creator of the universe) evolved by My grace the three spheres—viz., Bhūloka (the terrestrial globe including the seven subterranean regions, viz., Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Talātala, Mahātala, Rasātala and Pātala), Bhuvarloka (the aerial region) and Swarloka (understood in its wider sense as comprising the five celestial worlds—Swarloka or paradise, Maharloka, Janaloka, Tapoloka and Satyaloka)—with their guardian deities. (11) (Of these three spheres), Swarloka (construed in the narrow sense of paradise) constituted the home of the gods; Bhuvarloka, of spirits and Bhūrlōka, of men and other living beings (constituting the sub-human species—animals, birds, reptiles, insects and moths etc.); while the (ethereal) region extending beyond the three (aforesaid) worlds constituted the home of the Siddhas (eminent Brāhmaṇa sages like Bhṛgu). (12) Brahmā (the ruler of the universe) created a home for the Asuras (demons) and the Nāgas (serpent-demons) underground (in the subterranean regions known by the name of Atala and so on). In the aforesaid three spheres, are worked out all the destinies of those prompted by the three Guṇas (Sattva etc.). (13) Maharloka, Janaloka, Tapoloka and Satyaloka, (Brahmaloka) are the (successively higher) goals—free from (all) impurities (in the shape of attachment, greed etc.)—to be reached through Yoga (as propounded by the sage Patañjali), askesis (as practised by those belonging to the third stage of life, viz., Vānaprastha) and Saṁnyāsa (renunciation as practised by recluses, that have renounced their home as well as family life); (whereas) My realm (Vaikuṇṭha) is the objective to be reached through the discipline of Devotion. (14) With Me, having Kāla (the Time-Spirit) for My energy, as the Dispenser of the fruit of actions, this (living) creation, yoked to Karma, rises higher (upto the Brahmaloka) and descends (to the level of the plant kingdom in the scale of spiritual evolution according to the nature of his actions) in this world (of matter), which is (nothing but) a stream of the three Guṇas. (15) Minute or large, lean or stout, whatever entity has come into being is pervaded by (made up of) Prakṛti (Matter) and Puruṣa (Spirit) both. (16) That which really constitutes the beginning as well as the end of a thing represents its middle too and that alone is real (inasmuch as it pervades all its states). Its modifications have only a practical value even as the modifications (ornaments etc.), of gold or those of clay (viz., earthenware). (17) That alone is real, adopting which as its material an earlier existence (e.g., the Mahat-tattva) produces a later existence (e.g., Ahankāra). That which is intended in a particular instance to be mentioned as the beginning and end of some effect is spoken of as real. (18) The well-known material cause of this (visible) universe, viz., Prakṛti (Primordial Matter), He who presides over this Prakṛti, viz., the Supreme Person, and the Time-Spirit, which manifests the universe (by disturbing the equilibrium of Prakṛti)—all these three are as a matter of fact the same as I, the Infinite. (19) The elaborate process of creation ever continues in (due) order of succession (from father to son) for the sake of (enjoyment of) the embodied soul (that undergoes birth in various species of life made up of the three Guṇas) until the life of the universe comes to a close, or (in other words) until the Lord (Myself) so wills it. (20) When contacted (gazed on) by Me (as the Time-Spirit, the Destroyer of created beings), the cosmic egg, in which the creation and dissolution of the worlds alternately take place, becomes fit alongwith the (various) worlds (comprised in it) for disintegration into the five (gross) elements. (21) (Consequent on the total failure of crops occasioned by a prolonged drought extending over a hundred years) the mortal body (of human beings and other living creatures) is withdrawn into the food (on which it subsisted); the food is reduced to seeds (persists in the form of seeds alone); the seeds get merged into the soil (no longer take root); while the earth (on being dried by the sun and burnt by the flames emanating from the mouths of Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa) is reduced to (the subtle state of) odour (the cause of the earth). (22) Odour gets merged into (its cause, the element of) water and water is reduced to its own (essential property, viz., the quality of) taste. Taste gets merged into (its cause, the element of) fire, and fire is withdrawn into (its own essential property of) colour. (23) Colour gets merged into (its cause,) the air and the latter is reduced to (its subtle state, viz., the quality of) touch while that too gets merged into (its cause, the element of) ether. Ether (on being swallowed by Ahaṅkāra) is reduced to (its subtle state, viz.,) the quality of sound. (Even so) the Indriyas (the products of Rājasika Ahaṅkāra) are merged in their (respective) causes (viz., the deities presiding over them and ultimately into the Rājasika Ahaṅkāra). (24) The causes (viz., the gods), O gentle one, are merged in their controller, the mind, which is a product of Sāttvika Ahaṅkāra (and ultimately into the Sāttvika Ahaṅkāra along with the gods). (Even) sound returns to (the state of) the Tāmasika Ahaṅkāra (the cause of the elements) and the mighty Tāmasika Ahaṅkāra (as well as the Sāttvika and Rājasika types of Ahaṅkāra) is merged in Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence). (25) The most powerful Mahat-tattva (which is endowed with the potency of Jñāna or knowledge and the potency of Karma or activity) is reduced to its causes, the (three) Guṇas. The latter get dissolved into the Unmanifest (Primordial Matter) and the Unmanifest is merged in the Time-Spirit, which has (now) ceased to operate. (26) The Time-Spirit is merged in the Cosmic Person (the Creator of the universe), the Director of Māyā; and the latter, in Me, the birthless (eternal) Spirit. The Spirit, which is absolute (unconditioned) and is inferred by (the processes of) creation and dissolution (of the universe as their background), stands by Itself (and does not get merged in any other entity). (27) How could there arise any misconception, engendered by the notion of difference, in the mind of one investigating into the Spirit as aforesaid; and (if it ever arose) how could it persist any more than darkness would on the appearance of the sun in the sky? (28) This is the process of differentiating the Spirit from Matter, which cuts the knot of doubt and which has been set forth by me, the Knower of (the truth relating to both) the cause and the effect, from the standpoint of evolution and involution. (29)

Thus ends the twenty-fourth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXV

The operation of the three Guṇas described

श्रीभगवानुवाच

गुणानामसमिश्राणां पुमान् येन यथा भवेत् । तन्मे पुरुषवर्षेदमुपधारय शंसतः । १ ।
 शमो दमस्तितिक्षेक्षा तपः सत्यं दया स्मृतिः । तुष्टिस्त्यागोऽस्पृहा श्रद्धा ह्रीर्दयादिः स्वनिर्वृतिः । २ ।
 काम ईहा मदस्तृष्णा स्ताम्भ आशीर्भिदा सुखम् । मदोत्साहो यशःप्रीतिर्हास्यं वीर्यं बलोद्यमः । ३ ।
 क्रोधो लोभोऽजृतं हिंसा यावृक्षा दम्भः क्लमः कलिः । शोकमोहौ विषादादौ निद्राऽऽशा भीरुद्यमः । ४ ।
 सत्त्वस्य रजसश्चैतास्तमसश्चानुपूर्वशः । वृत्तयो वर्णितप्रायाः सन्निपातमथो शृणु । ५ ।
 सन्निपातस्त्वहमिति ममेत्युद्धव या मतिः । व्यवहारः सन्निपातो मनोमात्रेन्द्रियासुभिः । ६ ।
 धर्मे चार्थे च कामे च यदासौ परिनिष्ठितः । गुणानां सन्निकर्षोऽयं श्रद्धारतिधनावहः । ७ ।
 प्रवृत्तिलक्षणे निष्ठा पुमान् यर्हि गृहाश्रमे । स्वधर्मे चानुतिष्ठेत् गुणानां समितिर्हि सा । ८ ।

The glorious Lord began again: (Now) learn from Me, O jewel among men, as I tell you, how and by which of the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), working independently of one another, is man affected (1) Control of the mind and the senses, forbearance, sound judgment, askesis (in the form of strict adherence to one's prescribed course of conduct), truthfulness, compassion, retentive power, contentment, self-abnegation, absence of thirst for the pleasures of sense, belief in God, life after death and so on, modesty and shrinking from unrighteous acts, liberality etc., and remaining delighted in the self (forming the first group); hankering after the pleasures of sense, (self-centred) activity, arrogance, insatiability, inflexibility, seeking after blessings (from gods etc.), differentiation (between one's own self and others), self-gratification, bellicosity through arrogance, love of praise, jocularly, display of valour and exertion through might (forming the second group); and intolerance, stinginess, mendacity, malevolence, mendicancy, hypocrisy, languor, discord, grief and delusion, gloom and wretchedness, drowsiness, expectation, fear and indolence (forming the third group);— these are severally the effects of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, enumerated (by Me) almost exhaustively, Now hear (from Me) the combined effect (of the three Guṇas). (2—5) The notion which is expressed in the words "I am (tranquil, passionate or angry)" and "These (traits such as tranquillity, lust and anger) belong to me" is as a matter of fact a combined effect (of the three Guṇas); and whatever is done with the mind, the objects of the senses (viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell), the senses (themselves) and the vital airs (jointly) is also a combined effect of the three Guṇas (since all these instruments are themselves a product of the three Guṇas and all action is preceded by the feeling of I-ness and my-ness). (6) When a man is keenly devoted to religious merit, material possessions and sense-gratification, this (keen devotion of his also) is a combined effect of the three Guṇas (inasmuch as Dharma etc., are themselves a product of the three Guṇas) and conduce to reverence, wealth and sense-gratification respectively. (7) When a man is devoted to holy rites performed with interested motives and when he sticks to the life of a householder and later on adheres to his (obligatory and occasional) duty, such devotion etc., (as well) on his part is indeed a combined effect of the three Guṇas (inasmuch as devotion to holy rites performed with interested motives, attachment to the household and devotion to one's allotted duty are products of Rajas, Tamas and Sattva respectively). (8)

पुरुषं सत्त्वसंयुक्तमनुमीयाच्छमादिभिः । कामादिभी रजोयुक्तं क्रोधाद्यैस्तमसा युतम् । ९ ।

यदा भजति मां भक्त्या निरपेक्षः स्वकर्मभिः । तं सत्त्वप्रकृतिं विद्यात् पुरुषं स्त्रियमेव वा । १० ।

यदा आशिष आशास्य मां भजेत स्वकर्मभिः । तं रजःप्रकृतिं विद्याद्विषामाशास्य तामसम् । ११ ।

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति गुणा जीवस्य नैव मे । चित्तज्ञा येस्तु भूतानां सज्जमानो निब्रध्यते । १२ ।

यदेतरो जयेत् सत्त्वं भास्वरं विशदं शिवम् । तदा सुखेन युज्येत धर्मज्ञानादिभिः पुमान् । १३ ।

यदा जयेत्तमः सत्त्वं रजः सङ्गं भिदा चलम् । तदा दुःखेन युज्येत कर्मणा यशसा श्रिया । १४ ।

यदा जयेद् रजः सत्त्वं तमो मूढं लयं जडम् । युज्येत शोकमोहाभ्यां निद्रयाहिंसायाऽऽशया । १५ ।

यदा चित्तं प्रसीदेत इन्द्रियाणां च निर्वृतिः । देहेऽभ्यं मनोऽसङ्गं तत् सत्त्वं विद्धि मत्पदम् । १६ ।

विकुर्वन् क्रियया चाधीरनिर्वृतिश्च चेतसाम् । गात्रास्वास्थ्यं मनो भ्रान्तं रज एतैर्निशमय । १७ ।

सीदद्यित्तं विलीयेत चेतसो ग्रहणेऽक्षमम् । मनो नष्टे तमो ग्लानिस्तमस्तदुपधारय । १८ ।

From virtues like self-control one should conclude a man to be endowed (predominantly) with Sattva; from passion etc., one should know him to be (principally) full of Rajas and from anger and other characteristics he should infer him to be full of Tamas. (9) When a person worships Me disinterestedly with devotion through (the performance of) his duties one should know that man or woman too to be endowed with a Sattvika disposition. (10) When a man seeking the pleasures of sense worships Me through his actions, one should know him to be of Rājāsika disposition; and when he does so expecting injury to others (his adversaries etc.), one should know him to be Tāmasika (by nature). (11) The Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, affect the Jiva (embodied soul) alone and not Me, inasmuch as they appear (only) in the mind of the former and because it is the Jiva alone that is bound (to this mundane existence) through them, getting attached to the elements (in the form of the body, senses, mind and the objects of the senses). (12) When Sattva, which is illuminating, transparent and tranquil, prevails over the other two Guṇas (viz., Rajas and Tamas), a man is characterized by wisdom, piety and happiness etc., respectively. (13) When (on the other hand) Rajas—which gives rise to attachment and the notion of diversity and spurs one to activity—gets the better of Tamas and Sattva, then one is sized with a craving for glory and fortune and is characterized by unhappiness and activity. (14) When (however) Tamas—which perverts one's judgment, clouds one's vision and induces dullness—dominates Rajas and Sattva, a man is characterized by grief, infatuation and violence (as a result of perverted judgment), (excessive) sleep (through obscurity of the mind) and by expectation of help from others (through indolence caused by dullness). (15) When the mind is lucid and the senses recoil from their objects, (nay,) when there is fearlessness in relation to the body and the mind is free from (all) attachment, know that Sattva, which is conducive to My realization, is predominant at that time. (16) When, getting agitated through activity a man finds his intellect distracted on all sides, (nay,) his senses know no rest, the organs of action are not quite at ease and the mind is confused, conclude from these symptoms that Rajas holds sway. (17) When, getting obscured and (therefore) in capable of being moulded into the spiritual substance, the faculty of reason ceases to function and the mind (too) has its activity suspended, and when ignorance and gloom prevail, know that Tamas is in the ascendant. (18)

एधमाने गुणे सत्त्वे देवानां बलमेधते। असुराणां च रजसि तमस्युद्धव रक्षसाम्। १९।
 सत्त्वाज्जागरणं विद्याद् रजसा स्वप्नादिशेत्। प्रस्वापं तमसा जत्तोत्सुरीयं त्रिषु सन्ततम्। २०।
 उपर्युपरि गच्छन्ति सत्त्वेन ब्राह्मणा जनाः। तमसाधोऽथ आमुख्याद् रजसान्तरचारिणः। २१।
 सत्त्वे प्रलीनाः स्वयान्ति नरलोके रजोलयाः। तमोल्यास्तु निरयं यान्ति मामेव निर्गुणाः। २२।
 मदर्पणं निष्फलं वा सात्त्विकं निजकर्म तत्। राजसं फलसङ्कल्पं हिंसाप्रायादि तामसम्। २३।
 कैवल्यं सात्त्विकं ज्ञानं रजो वैकल्पिकं च यत्। प्राकृतं तामसं ज्ञानं मन्त्रिष्ठं निर्गुणं स्मृतम्। २४।
 वनं तु सात्त्विको वासो ग्रामो राजस उच्यते। तामसं हृतसदनं मन्त्रिकेन तु निर्गुणम्। २५।
 सात्त्विकः कारकोऽसङ्गी रागाद्यो राजसः स्मृतः। तामसः स्मृतिविभ्रष्टो निर्गुणो मदप्राश्रयः। २६।
 सात्त्विक्याध्यात्मिको श्रद्धा कर्मश्रद्धा तु राजसी। तामस्यधर्मं या श्रद्धा मत्सेवायां तु निर्गुणा। २७।
 पथं पृतमनायस्तमाहार्यं सात्त्विकं स्मृतम्। राजसं चेन्द्रियप्रेष्ठं तामसं चार्तिदाशुचि। २८।
 सात्त्विकं सुखमात्मोन्मत्तं विषयोन्मत्तं तु राजसम्। तामसं मोहदैव्योन्मत्तं निर्गुणं मदप्राश्रयम्। २९।

When Sattvaguna is on the increase, the strength of the gods increases; that of the Asuras, when Rajas is in the ascendant; and that of the Rākṣasas* when Tamas is predominant, O Uddhava ! (19) One should trace the waking state of a man from Sattva, attribute his dream state to Rajas and deep slumber to Tamas and declare the fourth (transcendent) state (which is no other than the Self) as (uniformly) running through (all) the three (aforementioned) states (of consciousness). (20) Men following the courses of conduct prescribed in the Vedas go higher and (still) higher through Sattva by recourse to Tamas they descend lower and (still) lower, embracing even inanimate life; while by recourse

* It is the indriyas given over to other-worldliness, worldly activity and infatuation respectively that are referred to here by the appellation of gods, Asuras (demons) and Rākṣasas (ogres).

to Rajas they (continue to) move in the intermediate state (as human beings). (21) Those who died when Sattva was in the ascendant ascend to heaven; those whose death occurred at a time when Rajas was predominant return to the human world; those whose death took place at a time when Tamas was in the ascendant go down to hell; while they who have transcended the three Guṇas attain to Me alone (even when they are still alive). (22) One's own (allotted) duty (whether of an obligatory or occasional type) performed with the intention of propitiating Me or without seeking any reward, is of a Sāttvika character (has the element of Sattva predominating in it). That which is performed with the expectation of a reward is Rājasika (in character); while that which is performed with intent to harm others and is full of violence etc., is Tāmasika (in character). (23) Knowledge concerning the absolute Self (without reference to the body etc.) is of a Sāttvika type; while that which relates to the Self not unconnected with the body etc., has (the element of) Rajas prevailing in it. The knowledge possessed by the uncultured (e.g., children or the deaf and dumb) or that relating to natural acts such as eating and drinking is Tāmasika (in character); while that relating to Me (the Supreme Divinity) is beyond (the realm of) the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti). (24) The forest, as a matter of fact, is a Sāttvika place of abode (inasmuch as it is solitary and undefiled); while the countryside is spoken of as Rājasika. The gambling house is a Tāmasika dwelling, while My temple (which is hallowed by My constant presence in the form of an image) is beyond the (three) Guṇas. (25) An unattached doer is Sāttvika; he who is blinded with passion (i.e., keenly intent on its fruit has been declared to be a Rājasika agent. He who has lost his judgment (the notion of right and wrong) is a Tāmasika agent; while a doer who (solely) depends on Me is unaffected by the (three) Guṇas. (26) Faith in things spiritual is Sāttvika, while that in ritual acts and other (worldly) duties is Rājasika. Faith in unrighteousness (as though it were righteousness, is Tāmasika) while that in My worship is beyond the realm of the (three) Guṇas. (27) Food which is wholesome, pure and obtained without taking pains (for it) has been declared to be Sāttvika; that which is most agreeable to the palate is Rājasika; while that which is unwholesome (conducive to suffering in the form of a malady) and impure (that which corrupts the mind) is Tāmasika. Again, that which has been offered to Me is beyond the three Guṇas. (28) The joy springing from (the realization of) the Self is Sāttvika; while that which proceeds from the objects of sense is Rājasika. (Again,) that which proceeds from infatuation (caused by intoxicating drugs and drinks) and cajolery (practised towards one's own wife and children) is Tāmasika; while that arising from thought etc., of Me is beyond the sphere of the (three) Guṇas. (29)

द्वयं देशः फलं कालो ज्ञानं कर्म च कारकः । श्रद्धावस्थाऽऽकृतिर्निष्ठा त्रैगुण्यः सर्व एव हि । ३० ।

सर्वे गुणमया भावाः पुरुषाव्यक्तधिष्ठिताः । दृष्टे श्रुतमनुध्यातं बुद्ध्या वा पुरुषर्षभ । ३१ ।

एताः संसृतयः पुंसो गुणकर्मनिबन्धनाः । येनेमे निर्जिताः सौम्य गुणा जीवेन चित्तजाः ।

भक्तियोगेन मत्प्रिष्ठो मद्भावाय प्रपद्यते । ३२ ।

तस्माद् देहमिमं लब्ध्वा ज्ञानविज्ञानसम्भवम् । गुणसङ्गं विनिर्धूय मां भजन्तु विचक्षणाः । ३३ ।

निःसङ्गो मां भजेद् विद्वानप्रमत्तो जितेन्द्रियः । रजस्तमश्चाभिजयेत् सत्त्वसंसेवया मुनिः । ३४ ।

सत्त्वं चाभिजयेद् युक्तो नेरपेक्ष्येण शान्तधीः । सम्पद्यते गुणैर्मुक्तो जीवो जीवं विहाय माम् । ३५ ।

जीवो जीवविनिर्मुक्तो गुणैश्चाशयसम्भवैः । मयैव ब्रह्मणा पूर्णो न बहिर्नान्तराश्रयेत् । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे पञ्चविंशोऽध्यायः । २५ ।

(In this way) substance (food as classified in verse 28 above), place of abode (as mentioned in verse 25), fruit (in the shape of joy referred to in verse 29), time (as indicated in verses 13 to 16), knowledge (referred to in verse 24), action (classified in verse 23), the agent (as mentioned in verse 26), faith (referred to in verse 27), state of consciousness (as told in verse 20), form (state of existence as classified in verse 21) and final destiny (as referred to in verse 22)—everything is as a matter of fact constituted of the three Guṇas alone. (30) (In fact) all entities pervaded by the Spirit and Matter—whatever is seen, heard or pondered by the intellect—are constituted of the three Guṇas, O Jewel among men! (31) (All) these states of existence of the embodied soul are brought about by the three Guṇas (holding sway over it) and the actions performed by it. That embodied soul (however) by which these Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) appearing in the mind have been thoroughly brought under control, O gentle one, and which stands firmly established in Me by treading the path of Devotion gets qualified for becoming one with Me. (32) Therefore, having obtained this (human) body, in which (alone) Knowledge and Realization (of Truth) can be had, and completely shaking off (all) attachment to the (three) Guṇas, let the wise worship (take refuge in) Me. (33) Free from attachment (to the pleasures of sense) and with his senses brought under control a wise man should carefully worship Me and, given over to contemplation, should get the better of Rajas and Tamas by duly cultivating Sattva. (34) And, possessed of a tranquil mind and united with Me (through contemplation), he should thoroughly subdue Sattva (too) by means of Sattva (itself in the shape of desirelessness). Rid (in this way) of the (three) Guṇas, the embodied soul disowns the subtle body (constituting its Jivahood) and attains to (becomes one with) Me. (35) Completely disunited from its Jivahood (in the shape of the subtle body) as well as from the (three) Guṇas appearing in the mind, and full of Me (consisting of perfect bliss) the Jiva neither goes out (to enjoy the external objects) nor turns inward (to enjoy them mentally). (In other words, he gets liberated during his very lifetime.) (36)

Thus ends the twenty-fifth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षड्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVI

The Utterance of Purūravā bearing on Aversion for the pleasures of Sense

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मल्लक्षणमिमं कायं लब्ध्वा मर्द्धम आस्थितः । आनन्दं परमात्मानमात्मस्थं समुपैति माम् । १ ।

गुणमय्या जीवयोन्या विमुक्तो ज्ञाननिष्ठया । गुणेषु मायामात्रेषु दृश्यमानेष्ववस्तुतः ।

वर्तमानोऽपि न पुमान् युज्यतेऽवस्तुभिर्गुणैः । २ ।

सङ्गं न कुर्यादसतां शिशोदरतृपां क्वचित् । तस्यानुगस्तमस्यथे प्रतत्यन्यानुगान्धवत् । ३ ।

ऐलः सम्राडिमो गाथामगायत बृहच्छ्रवाः । उर्वशीविरहान् मुहान् निर्विण्णः शोकसंयमे । ४ ।

त्यक्त्वाऽऽत्मानं व्रजन्तीं तां नम्र उन्मत्तवन्नपः । विलपन्नन्वगाजाये घोरे तिष्ठेति विह्वलः । ५ ।

कामाननुप्नोऽनुजुषन् क्षुल्लकान् वर्षयामिनीः । न वेद यान्तीर्नयान्तीर्नर्वश्याकृष्टचेतनः । ६ ।

The glorious Lord began again : Having obtained this (human) body, the (sole) medium of perceiving My true nature, he who has betaken himself to the course of conduct pleasing to Me (viz., the path of Devotion) duly attains to Me, his very Self, the embodiment of supreme Bliss, dwelling in his own heart. (1) (Once) completely freed, by means of firm devotion to the path of Knowledge, from the bondage of Matter (which conditions the embodied soul) the Jiva does not get attached to the unreal objects of senses, though living in the midst of such objects, which are mere creations of Māyā (My deluding potency) and are being falsely perceived (as one's own self or possession). (2) One should on no account cultivate the fellowship of unworthy men given to the gratification of their sexual urge and satisfaction of their hunger (alone); (for) the follower of (even) one such sensualist falls into (the) blinding darkness (of hell) like a blind man following another blind man. (3) Falling a prey to infatuation due to separation from Urvaśī (in the first instance) and (eventually) disgusted (with the pleasures of sense) on his grief having been overcome as a result of his meeting her once more at Kurukṣetra and attaining to her realm in heaven by offering oblations to the sacred fire entrusted to him by the Gandharvas and thereby propitiating the gods (vide IX. xiv. 32—47), Emperor Purūravā (the son of Ilā) of extensive fame sang the following song (concerning himself, reproduced in verses 7 to 24 below). (4) As she went leaving him (alone in the bed), the monarch felt (greatly) perturbed and followed her in a state of nature like a madman, crying: "Tarry (awhile), my cruel wife I" (5) Deprived of his reason by Urvaśī, he was aware neither of the nights that passed nor of the coming ones for years together while repeatedly enjoying the trivial pleasures without satiety. (6)

ऐल उवाच

अहो मे मोहविस्तारः कामकर्मलचेतसः । देव्या गृहीतकण्ठस्य नायुः खण्डा इमे स्मृताः । ७ ।
 नाहं वेदाभिनिर्मुक्तः सूर्यो वाभ्युदितोऽमुष्या । मुषितो वर्षपूगानां ब्रताहानि गतान्युत । ८ ।
 अहो मे आत्मसम्प्राप्ते योनात्मा योषितां कृतः । क्रीडापूगशृङ्गवर्ती नरेदवशिखामणिः । ९ ।
 सपरिच्छदमात्मानं हित्वा तृणमिवेश्वरम् । यान्तीं स्त्रियं चान्वगमं नग्न उन्मत्तवद् रुदन् । १० ।
 कुतस्तस्यानुभावः स्यात् तेज ईशत्वमेव वा । योऽन्वगच्छं स्त्रियं यान्तीं खरवत् पादताडितः । ११ ।
 किं विद्यया किं तपसा किं त्यागेन श्रुतेन वा । किं विविक्षेन मौनेन स्त्रीभिर्यस्य मनो हतम् । १२ ।
 स्वार्थस्याकोविदं धिङ् मां भूर्खं पण्डितमानिनम् । योऽहमीश्वरतां प्राप्य स्त्रीभिर्गोखरवज्जितः । १३ ।
 सेवतो वर्षपूगान् मे उर्वश्या अधरासवम् । न तृप्यत्यात्मभूः कामो वह्निराहुतिभिर्यथा । १४ ।
 पुंश्रुत्यापहतं चित्तं को न्यव्यो मोचितुं प्रभुः । आत्मारामेश्वरमृते भगवन्तमधोक्षजम् । १५ ।
 बोधितस्यापि देव्या मे सूक्तवाक्येन दुर्मितः । मनोगतो महामोहो नापयात्यजितात्मनः । १६ ।
 किमेतया नोऽपकृतं रज्ज्वा वा सर्पचेतसः । रज्जुस्वरूपाविदुषो योऽहं यदजितेन्द्रियः । १७ ।
 क्वायं मलीमसः कायो दौर्गन्ध्याद्यात्मकोऽशुचिः । क्व गुणाः सौमनस्याद्या ह्यध्यातोऽविद्यया कृतः । १८ ।
 पित्रोः किं खं नु भार्यायाः स्वामिनोऽग्नेः श्वगृध्रयोः । किमात्मनः किं सुहृदामिति यो नावसीयते । १९ ।
 तस्मिन् कलेवरेऽमेध्ये तुच्छनिष्ठे विषज्जते । अहो सुभद्रं सुनसं सुस्मितं चं मुखं स्त्रियः । २० ।
 त्वङ्मांसरुधिरस्त्रायुमेदोमज्जास्थिसंहतौ । विण्मूत्रपूये रमतो कृमीणां कियदन्तरम् । २१ ।
 अथापि नोपसज्जेत स्त्रीषु स्त्रैणेषु चार्थवित् । विषयेन्द्रियसंयोगान्मनः क्षुभ्यति नान्यथा । २२ ।
 अदृष्टादश्रुताद् भावात्र भाव उपजायते । असम्प्रयुञ्जतः प्राणान् शान्त्यति स्तिमितं मनः । २३ ।
 तस्मात् सङ्गो न कर्तव्यः स्त्रीषु स्त्रैणेषु चेन्द्रियैः । विदुषां चाप्यविश्रब्धः षड्वर्गः किमु मादृशाम् । २४ ।

Purūravā sang : Astounding (indeed) is the magnitude of my infatuation, my judgment having been clouded by passion, inasmuch as (all) these years of my life have passed unnoticed by me while my neck remained clasped (in embrace) by my celestial wife ! (7)

Charmed by her alas ! I did not perceive when the sun set or when it rose, nor did I know of the days, totalling numbers of years, that rolled by ! (8) How great is the infatuation of my soul by which myself, a universal monarch, the crest-jewel of kings, was made a toy deer of in the hands of women ! (9) Crying like a madman, all naked, I followed the woman (even) as she went away deserting me, a ruler of men, including my kingdom, like a straw. (10) Whence could there be any glory, majesty or lordship in me, who followed a departing woman (even) like a donkey kicked by a she-ass ? (11) What will be gained through worship of gods, renunciation, askesis, study of scriptures, solitary life or observing silence by him whose heart has been stolen by women ? (12) Fie upon me, a (veritable) fool, though fancying myself to be a learned man, who, blind as I am to my own (real) interests, have been enslaved by women just like a bull or a donkey, even after attaining sovereignty. (13) Although I have been enjoying the inebriating nectar of Urvāṣī's lips for multitudes of years, my hankering, mind-born as it is, knows no satiety any more than fire could be quenched by (pouring) oblations (into it). (14) Who else than Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception), the ruler of those revelling in the Self, can possibly succeed in reclaiming a mind captivated by a lewd woman ? (15) Even though I was admonished by that celestial woman in truthful words (finding place in a Vedic hymn), the great infatuation lurking in my mind, perverse of intellect and uncontrolled of mind as I am, does not depart. (16) Or what offence could have been done by her against us any more than by a rope against a man who, being ignorant of its reality, (erroneously) conceived it to be a serpent ? For, (in reality) it is I, whose senses are (still) uncontrolled, that stand to blame. (17) How incompatible are this dirty body (of a woman), full of bad smell etc., and impure, and the excellences (attributed to it) such as fragrance, purity and delicacy etc., (which are generally associated with a flower). It was through ignorance as a matter of fact that the aforesaid virtues were wrongly attributed (by me) to her body. (18) It cannot be definitely ascertained whether the body (of a human being) is the property of one's parents, wife (who provides amenities and enjoyment for it), master (employer, if one happens to be a servant), fire (to which it is ultimately and ordinarily consigned at the time of cremation), the dog and the vulture (by which it is consumed in the event of its being left undisposed of after death), the soul (tenanting it, which reaps the fruit of its actions) or its near and dear ones (who befriend and render good offices to it). (19) Man gets attached to such an impure body, which has a contemptible end (in that it resolves itself into worms if interred, into excreta if devoured by animals and into ashes if cremated), and lavishes praise on it in the words "Oh, how delightful is the face of this woman with a shapely nose and full of charming smiles !" (20) How little difference is there between those who take delight in the body of a woman (which is no more than a mass of skin, flesh, blood, nerves, fat, marrow and bones), (on the one hand) and the worms wallowing in ordure, urine and pus (on the other) ? (21) Therefore, he who is alive to his (own) interests should on no account associate even through sight with the fair sex nor with slaves of woman; (for) it is through contact of the senses with their objects that the mind is agitated, not otherwise. (22) No (such) agitation follows from an unseen or unheard of object; (hence) the mind of a man who does not direct his senses towards their objects becomes still and (eventually) gets composed. (23) Therefore, one should not associate through the senses with the fair sex nor with those devoted to woman; (for) the five senses and the mind do not deserve to be trusted even by the wise, much less by (indiscreet) men like me. (24)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

एवं प्रगायन् नृपदेवदेवः स उर्वशीलोकमथो विहाय ।
आत्मानमात्मन्यवगम्य मां वै उपागमन्तानविधूतमोहः ॥२५॥

ततो दुःसङ्गमुत्सृज्य सत्सु सज्जेत बुद्धिमान् । सन्त एतस्य छिन्दन्ति मनोव्यासङ्गमुक्तिभिः । २६ ।
 सन्तोऽनपेक्षा मध्विन्ताः प्रशान्ताः समदर्शिनः । निर्ममा निरहङ्कारा निर्द्वन्द्वा निष्परिग्रहाः । २७ ।
 तेषु नित्यं महाभाग महाभागेषु मत्कथाः । सम्भवन्ति हिता नृणां जुषतां प्रपुनन्त्यघम् । २८ ।
 ता ये शृण्वन्ति गायन्ति ह्यनुमोदन्ति चादृताः । मत्पराः श्रद्धावानाश्च भक्तिं विन्दन्ति ते मयि । २९ ।
 भक्तिं लब्धवतः साधोः किमन्यदवशिष्यते । मय्यनन्तगुणे ब्रह्मण्यनन्दानुभवात्मनि । ३० ।
 यथोपश्रयमाणस्य भगवन्तं विभावसुम् । शीतं भयं तमोऽप्येति साधून् संसेवतस्तथा । ३१ ।
 निमज्ज्योन्मज्जतां घोरे भवाब्धौ परमायनम् । सन्तो ब्रह्मविदः शान्ता नौदुर्देवाप्सु मज्जताम् । ३२ ।
 अत्रं हि प्राणिनां प्राण आर्तानां शरणं त्वहम् । धर्मो वित्तं नृणां प्रेत्य सन्तोऽर्वाङ् विभ्यतोऽरणम् । ३३ ।
 सन्तो दिशन्ति चक्षूषि बहिरर्कः समुत्थितः । देवता बाध्मवाः सन्तः सन्त आत्माहमेव च । ३४ ।
 वैतसेनस्ततोऽप्येवमुर्वश्या लोकनिःस्पृहः । मुक्तसङ्गो महीमेतामात्मारामश्चचार ह । ३५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे षड्विंशोऽध्यायः । २६ ।

The glorious Lord continued : Singing thus at the top of his voice, the celebrated Pururavā (the object of veneration of kings and gods alike) left the realm of Urvaśi and, having realized Me as his very self (dwelling) in his (own) heart and shaken off, by dint of that realization, his delusion (in the shape of identification with the body etc.), retired forthwith from the world. (25) Therefore, eschewing evil company, a prudent man should associate with the righteous; (for) the latter cut asunder the deep attachment of his mind (for the pleasures of sense) by their precepts. (26) The righteous are free from craving (for the pleasures of sense), have their mind fixed on Me, are perfectly serene (free from passion), view everything alike (as an embodiment of Brahma), are free from the senses of mineness as well as from the ego-sense (identification from the body etc.), are unaffected by the pairs of opposites and own no property. (27) In the midst of those exceedingly fortunate people, O highly blessed Uddhava, My stories are always told—stories that are salutary to mankind and eradicate the sin of those that take delight in them. (28) They who listen to them, sing them and as a matter of fact heartily approve of them and are respectful towards Me, nay, exclusively devoted to Me (expecting no other return) and are full of reverence acquire devotion to Me. (29) What else remains to be achieved by the pious soul who has attained devotion to Me, endowed with endless virtues (potencies), the (ultimate) Cause of all, the embodiment of (Truth,) Consciousness and Bliss? (30) (Even) as cold, dismay and darkness disappear in the case of a man who betakes himself to the glorious Agni (the god of fire), so do the rigidity and obtuseness (born of stern devotion to duty), the fear of future births and its root, ignorance, get dissolved in the case of the man who renders loving service to pious souls. (31) Just as a strong bark is the supreme resort to those that are being drowned in water, noble souls who have realized Brahma and have attained (perfect) peace of mind are the highest resort to those who having sunk (once) to the lowest depths are coming (once more) to the surface in the ocean of mundane existence. (32) (Just as) food is life itself to those that breathe, (as) I am the only shelter to the afflicted, and (even as) piety is the (only) wealth for men (to depend upon) in the other world (after death), (so) saints are the (only) resort to him who is afraid of being born (again and again) on this (mortal) plane. (33) (Even) having fully risen, the sun bestows (on us) the external eye (alone), whereas holy men confer (on those enjoying their fellowship) inner eyes (in the shape of knowledge relating to the Saguna and Nirguna aspects of Brahma). Holy men (therefore) are (veritable) gods as well as one's near and dear ones. They are one's (very) soul (nay,) Myself. (34) Rid in this way of longing for Urvaśi's realm (or sight), and free from (all) attachment due to the fellowship of saints, Purūravā (the son of Sudyumna, who had attained a feminine form under the name of Ilā alongwith his retinue due to the curse of Goddess Pārvatī) went about this globe revelling in the Self: so the tradition goes. (35)

Thus ends the twenty-sixth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVII

The Yoga of Formal Worship

उद्धव उवाच

क्रियायोगं समाचक्ष्व भवदाराधनं प्रभो । यस्मात्त्वां ये यथार्चन्ति सात्वताः सात्वतर्षभ । १ ।
एतद् वदन्ति मुनयो मुहुर्निःश्रेयसं नृणाम् । नारदो भगवान् व्यास आचार्योऽङ्गिरसः सुतः । २ ।
निःसृतं ते मुखाम्भोजाद् यदाह भगवानजः । पुत्रेभ्यो भृगुमुख्येभ्यो देव्यै च भगवान् भवः । ३ ।
एतद् वै सर्ववर्णानामाश्रमाणां च सम्मतम् । श्रेयसामुत्तमं मन्ये स्त्रीशूद्राणां च मानद । ४ ।
एतत् कमलपत्राक्ष कर्मबन्धविमोचनम् । भक्ताय चानुरक्ताय ब्रूहि विश्वेश्वरेश्वर । ५ ।

Uddhava submitted : (Pray,) explain (to me) the course of discipline consisting of formal worship intended to propitiate You, O Lord, (and) also what type of devotees worship You in what manner and from what motive, O Protector of devotees ! (1) Sages such as Nārada, the divine Vyāsa and Brhaspati (Aṅgirā's son), the preceptor (of the gods) repeatedly declare this (course) as conducive to the highest good of men. (2) It emanated (for the first time) from Your lotus-like lips; and (receiving it from You) the divine Brāhmā taught it to his sons, the foremost of whom is Bhṛgu, and Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) imparted it to his divine Spouse (Goddess Pārvatī). (3) It is highly commendable for all the (higher) grades of society and stages of life and I consider it to be the best of all the courses of discipline conducive to blessedness even for womenfolk and Śūdras, O Bestower of honour ! (4) Explain this course, untying (as it does) once for all the bonds of Karma, O lotus-eyed Lord, to me, who stand devoted and attached to You, O suzerain Lord (even) of the Rulers of the universe (Brāhmā, Śiva and so on). (5)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

न ह्यन्तोऽनन्तपारस्य कर्मकाण्डस्य चोद्धव । संक्षिप्तं वर्णयिष्यामि यथावदनुपूर्वशः । ६ ।
वैदिकस्तान्त्रिको मिश्र इति मे त्रिविधो मखः । त्रयाणामीप्सितेनैव विधिना मां समर्चयेत् । ७ ।
यदा स्वनगमेनोक्तं द्विजत्वं प्राप्य पुरुषः । यथा यजेत मां भक्त्या श्रद्धया तत्रिबोध मे । ८ ।
अर्चायां स्थण्डिलेऽग्नौ वा सूर्ये वाप्सु हृदि द्विजे । द्रव्येण भक्तियुक्तोऽर्चयेत् स्वगुणं माममायया । ९ ।
पूर्वं स्नानं प्रकुर्वीत धौतदन्तोऽङ्गशुद्धये । उपयैरपि च स्नानं मनैर्मृदप्रहणादिना । १० ।
सन्ध्योपास्यादिकर्माणि वेदेनाचोदितानि मे । पूजां तैः कल्पयेत् सम्यक् सङ्कल्पः कर्मपावनीम् । ११ ।
शैली दारुमयी लौही लेख्या लेख्या च सैकती । मनोमयी मणिमयी प्रतिमाष्टविधा स्मृता । १२ ।

चलचलेति द्विविधा प्रतिष्ठा जीवमन्दिरम् । उद्धासावाहने न स्तः स्थिरायामुद्धवार्चने । १३ ।
 अस्थिरायां विकल्पः स्यात् स्थण्डिले तु भवेद् द्वयम् । स्वपते त्वविलेप्यायामन्यत्र परिमार्जनम् । १४ ।
 द्रव्यैः प्रसिद्धैर्मद्यागः प्रतिमादिषु मायिनः । भक्तस्य च यथालब्धैर्हृदि भावेन चैव हि । १५ ।
 स्नानालङ्काराणां प्रेष्टमर्चायामेव तूद्धव । स्थण्डिले तत्त्वविन्यासो बह्मवाज्यमुद्भूतं हविः । १६ ।
 सूर्ये चाभ्यर्हणं प्रेष्ठं सलिले सलिलादिभिः । श्रद्धयोपाहृतं प्रेष्ठं भक्तेन मम वार्यपि । १७ ।
 भूर्ययभक्तोपहृतं न मे तोषाय कल्पते । गन्धो धूपः सुमनसो दीपोऽन्नाद्यं च किं पुनः । १८ ।

The glorious Lord began again : Since there is no end to the branch of the Vedas dealing with ritual acts, which is unlimited in scope and infinite in volume, O Uddhava ! I shall (accordingly) discuss this topic (of Kriyāyoga) in a nutshell in order of sequence in its true perspective. (6) The procedure of My worship is threefold, viz., Vedic, Tāntika and mixed (consisting of both elements). Of the three, one should duly worship Me according to that procedure alone which is liked by him. (7) Hear from Me the way in which, having (first) attained the status of the twice-born (by getting himself invested with the sacred thread) as enjoined by (the part of) the Veda prescribing his duties— when the worshipper happens to be a member of the twice-born classes—a man should worship Me with devotion and reverence. (8) Full of Devotion he should worship Me, his teacher and father, with the requisite material (flowers etc.), with sincerity (lit., guilelessness in the shape of entertaining no hope for its reward) in (through the medium of) an image, a raised ground (levelled, squared and prepared for a sacrifice) or the sacred fire, the sun, water, (the cavity of) the heart or a Brāhmaṇa . (9) Having cleansed his teeth (with the end of a small green twig crushed with the teeth and converted into a brush), he should first (of all) perform his ablutions for the purification of his body. The bath should be repeated with (the utterance of) both types of Mantras (Vedic as well as Tantric) after (first) daubing the (whole) body with clay (as well as with fresh cowdung, sacrificial ashes and so on) and going through other preliminaries (such as invoking the presence of the Gaṅgā and other sacred waters, offering Arghya to them and seeking their permission for a bath). (10) Undertaking a noble vow (of propitiating Myself), he should perform My worship, which wipes out (all) Karmas, side by side with (not neglecting) duties (of a binding nature) such as saying the Sandhyā prayers, (that have been) enjoined by the Veda. (11) An image has been declared to be of eight kinds according as it is carved out of (a block of) stone or wood, made of (molten) metal (such as brass or bronze), clay or sandal-paste etc., painted (on a wall etc.), made of sand or carved out of a precious stone or conceived by the mind. (12) An image, which is a temple of the Lord, is (again) of two varieties, movable and immovable. (The ceremonies of) invoking the presence of or bidding farewell to a deity are not necessary in worship done through the medium of an immovable one, O Uddhava ! (13) There is option in the matter of invocation etc., in the case of a movable image (other than a Śālagrāma stone, where no invocation etc., is needed); while both must be done in the worship through the medium of a raised ground (or through an image of sand). Only an image other than a painted one or that made of clay or sandal-paste etc., should be (invariably) bathed; in (all) other cases (mere) sprinkling all round with water is enough. (14) My worship through images etc., should be done with excellent articles. In the case, however, of a devotee (who is) free from wiles (in the shape of a selfish motive) it may be conducted with articles that are (easily) available. In (the cavity of) the heart, of course, worship is offered with love alone. (15) (Worship in the form of) bathing and (decoration with) ornaments is highly desirable only in an image, O Uddhava; in a raised ground (of course) the (conceptual) installation of the various deities (viz., the principal Deity and His entourage) in their respective place (with the uttering of formulas sacred to each);

in a sacred fire, (the offering of) oblations soaked in ghee; in the sun, respect shown (to the sun-god in the form of offering Arghya and waiting upon Him with prayers) and in water, worship through (gratification by offering) water etc., is considered most desirable. Even water offered with reverence by a devotee is most pleasing to Me; how much more, then, are sandal-paste, incense, flowers, light and food etc., dear to Me ? On the other hand, anything offered by one who is not a devotee does not contribute to My pleasure even if it is abundant. (16—18)

शुचिः सम्पृतसम्भारः प्रादर्थैः कल्पितासनः । आसीनः प्रागुदगं वार्चंदर्चायामथ समुत्तुः । १९ ।
कृतन्यासः कृतन्यासां मदर्चां पाणिना मृजेत् । कलशं प्रोक्षणीयं च यथावदुपसाधयेत् । २० ।
तदद्भिर्देवयजनं द्रव्याण्यात्मानमेव च । प्रोक्ष्य पात्राणि त्रीण्यद्भिस्तैर्दर्व्यैश्च साधयेत् । २१ ।
पाद्यार्घ्याचमनीयार्थं त्रीणि पात्राणि दैशिकः । हृदा शीर्षाथ शिखया गायत्र्या चाभिमन्त्रयेत् । २२ ।
पिण्डे वाय्वग्निसंशुद्धे हृत्पद्मस्थां परां मम । अण्वीं जीवकलां ध्यायेत्तदानीं सिद्धभविताम् । २३ ।
तयाऽऽभूतया पिण्डे व्याप्ते सम्पूज्य तन्मयः । आवाह्यार्चादिषु स्थाप्य न्यस्ताङ्गं मां प्रपूजयेत् । २४ ।
पाद्योपस्यशार्ङ्गहृणादीनुपचारान् प्रकल्पयेत् । धर्मादिभिश्च नवभिः कल्पयित्वाऽऽसनं मम । २५ ।
पद्ममष्टदलं तत्र कर्णिकाकेसरोज्ज्वलम् । उभाभ्यां वेदतन्त्राभ्यां मह्यं तूभयसिद्धये । २६ ।
सुदर्शनं पाञ्चजन्यं गदासीषुधनुर्हलान् । मुसलं कौस्तुभं मालां श्रीवत्सं चानुपूजयेत् । २७ ।
नन्दं सुनन्दं गरुडं प्रचण्डं चण्डमेव च । महाबलं बलं चैव कुमुदं कुमुदक्षणम् । २८ ।
दुर्गा विनायकं व्यासं विश्वसेनं गुरून् सुरान् । स्वे स्वे स्थाने त्वभिमुखान् पूजयेत् प्रोक्षणादिभिः । २९ ।

Having got together (all) requisites (articles of worship etc.), and prepared a seat with blades of Darbha grass pointing to the east, and sitting (on it) with his face turned towards the east or the north or in front of the image (to be worshipped) in the event of the latter being immovable, and himself pure, the votary should commence worshipping (Me). (19) Having consecrated himself (by assigning the various syllables of the Mantra to be used in the worship to the different parts of his hand as well as to the limbs of his body), he should gently rub the image (with a view to wiping of the coat of sandal-paste etc., on it) when it has been similarly consecrated and (then) duly adorn (with sandal-paste and flowers etc.), the pitcher (full of water to be used for worship from the beginning to the end) and the vessel containing water for sprinkling (and thereby consecrating) the utensils and articles of worship etc., with (20) Consecrating with that water the temple, the articles of worship as well as himself, the votary should get ready three vessels (filling them with water taken from the pitcher, and providing them) with (necessary) accessories* (for offering Pādyā, Arghya and Ācamaniya, i. e., water for washing the feet and hands and rinsing the mouth of the Deity respectively). (21) The worshipper should (then) consecrate the said three vessels (containing water) for washing the feet and hands and rinsing the mouth of the deity by breathing into them the sacred formulae connected with the heart, the head and the tuft of hair on the crown (viz., 'हृदे नमः',

* The scriptures dealing with the details of worship lay down that the following accessories should be used alongwith water when washing the feet and hands and rinsing the mouth of the deity respectively:—

पाद्ये श्यामाकटुर्वाज्विष्णुक्रान्तादिरिष्यते । गन्धपुष्पाक्षतयक्कुशाग्नितिलसर्षपाः ॥
दूर्वा चेति क्रमादर्थद्रव्याष्टकमुदीरितम् । जालैलवङ्गकङ्गोलैर्मत्तमाचमनीयकम् ॥

* Grains of Śyāmāka rice (which are very small as compared to ordinary rice), blades of Dūrvā (panic grass), lotus flowers, a kind of herb called Viṣṇukrāntā etc., are approved for use with the water intended for washing the feet of the Lord with. Sandal-paste, flowers unbroken grains of rice, grains of barley, blades of the sacred Kuśa grass, sesame seeds, mustard seeds and blades of panic grass—these eight substances have been prescribed for being used with the water intended for washing the hands of the Deity with; while the water intended for rinsing the mouth of the deity should be accompanied by the nutmeg, cloves, berries of Kaṅkola plant etc.*

'शीर्षे स्वाहा', 'शिखायै वषट्' respectively and lastly the Gāyatri-Mantra (into all). (22) (Then) within his (own) body conceived as dried up by the gastric wind and (then) consumed by the fire at the navel and (ultimately revived by nectar flowing from the moon located in the forehead and thus) thoroughly sublimated, he should meditate on My supreme and subtle form (the form of Lord Nārāyaṇa), of which the Jiva is but a particle, installed on the lotus of the heart and contemplated by accomplished souls at the end of Nāda (the fifth part of the sound of Praṇava consisting of अ, उ, ऋ, ॠ or the nasal sound and नद or the echo). (23) On his body being permeated (as a house by the light emanating from a lamp) by that subtle form contemplated as his own being, he should (first) worship Me in that form (with conceptual articles) and, full of that presence, should (then) invoke My presence in the image etc., and, having installed Me there and assigned the syllables of the Mantra to the (various) limbs of the image, proceed with My worship. (24) Having (mentally) prepared a (high) seat for Me with Dharma etc. (viz., Dharma or Righteousness, Jñāna or Wisdom, Vairāgya or Dispassion and Aśīswarya or Supremacy for its four feet; Adharma or Unrighteousness, Ajñāna or Ignorance, Avairāgya or Absence of Dispassion and Anaśīswarya or Lack of Supremacy for its four sides; and Sattva, Rajas and Tamas for the three planks constituting its base) and the nine Śaktis or potencies (viz., Vimalā, Utkarṣiṇī, Jñānā, Kriyā, Yogā, Prahvī, Satyā, Īśānā and Anugrahā or Purity, Exaltation, Wisdom, Activity, Supernatural Power, Humility, Truthfulness, Rulership and Graciousness mounted on it) and (mentally) spread on it a lotus of eight petals shining bright with its pericarp and filaments (and with the orbs of the sun and other luminaries fixed on it), he should (instal Me on it and) Offer to Me (various) articles of worship such as water for washing My feet and hands and rinsing My mouth with according to the spirit of the Vedas and the Tantras both and with a view to securing both (worldly enjoyment and final beatitude). (25-26) He should (further) worship in their order of sequence (the discus) Sudarśana, (the conch named) Pāñcajanya, the mace (Kaumodakī), the sword, the bow and the arrows as well as (the emblems of Lord Śaṅkarṣaṇa, viz.,) the plough and the pestle in the eight directions and the Kaustubha (gem), the (Vaijayanti) garland and (the mark of) Śrīvatsa (all the three on the bosom of the Lord in their respective position). (27) He should (likewise) worship (the eight attendants of the Lord, viz.,) Nanda, Sunanda, Pracaṇḍa as well as Caṇḍa, Mahābala and Bala; Kumuda and Kumudekṣaṇa (as standing around the Lord in the eight directions) and (His carrier) Garuḍa (as facing the Lord). (28) He should (also) worship, by offering them water to wash their hands with and so on, (Goddess) Durgā, Vināyaka (Lord Gaṇeśa), (the sage) Vyāsa and Viṣwakṣena (all these four as surrounding the Lord in the four corners intervening the four quarters), his own preceptor (as standing to-His left) and the gods (viz., the eight guardians of the spheres) each in his relative position (according to the direction in which their spheres are located), (all) of course facing the Lord. (29)

चन्दनोशीरकपूरकुङ्कुमागुस्वास्वितैः । सलिलैः स्नापयेच्चत्रैर्नित्यदा विभवे सति । ३० ।
 स्वर्णघर्मानुवाकेन महापुरुषविद्यया । पौरुषेणापि सूक्तेन सामभी राजनादिभिः । ३१ ।
 वल्गोपवीताभरणपत्रत्रगन्धलेपनैः । अलङ्कुर्वीत सप्रेम मद्भक्तो मां यथोचितम् । ३२ ।
 पादमाचमनीयं च गन्धं सुमनसोऽक्षतान् । धूपदीपोपहार्याणि दद्यान्मे श्रद्धयार्चकः । ३३ ।
 गुडपायससर्पिषि शङ्कुल्यापूपमोदकान् । संयावदधिसृपांश्च नैवेद्यं सति कल्पयेत् । ३४ ।
 अभ्यङ्गोर्मदनादर्शदन्तधावाधिषेचनम् । अत्राद्यगीतनृत्यादि पर्वणि सुस्तान्वहम् । ३५ ।

The votary should, if there is (sufficient) wealth, daily bathe Me with water made fragrant by sandal-paste, Uśira (a kind of aromatic grass), camphor, saffron and aloe-wood, chanting (all the while) sacred texts such as the Suvarṇagharmānuvāka (or Rgveda, commencing with the words सुवर्णं धर्मम् etc.), the Mahāpuruṣavidyā* (a sacred text sacred to Lord Viṣṇu, the Supreme Person), the Puruṣa-Sūkta† and the texts of Sāmaveda such as the Rājana Sāma and the Rauhiṇa Sāma. (30-31) My devotee should (also) lovingly set Me off in the proper way with raiments, the sacred thread, jewels, wreaths of basil leaves, scents and sandal-paste. (32) The worshipper should (then) reverently offer to Me water to wash My feet and rinse My mouth with, sandal-paste flowers and grains of unbroken rice (for decoration), incense, light and articles of food. (33) If there be wealth, one should offer as food (to Me daily or at least on festive occasions) jaggery (or sugar), rice boiled in milk and sweetened with sugar, ghee; large round cakes of ground rice, sugar and sesamum seeds and cooked in oil; piles of sweet cakes made of meal and sugar and fried in ghee; lumps of sweets composed of meal cooked in ghee; a kind of porridge made of wheat flour with ghee, milk and molasses; curds and seasoned soup of pulses. (34) Offering a brush (made of a small green twig with one of its ends crushed) for cleansing My teeth, perfumed oil for anointing My body with, a paste (of saffron and camphor powder) for being rubbed on the various parts of My body in order to free it from dirt; (bathing My image with a preparation composed of milk, curds, ghee, honey and sugar as well as with scented water; clothing Me with costly silk and adorning Me with jewels, sandal-paste and wreaths etc.), and putting a mirror before Me (in order to show Me how I look); offering Me food which could be (easily) swallowed (without mastication) as well as that needing mastication (together with fragrant water, betel leaves, a bed of flowers etc.), and (also) singing songs and dancing etc., should be arranged (at least) on a sacred day (e.g., Ekādaśī or the full moon), and preferably everyday (if one's means allow it). (35)

विधिना विहिते कुण्डे मेखलागर्तवेदिभिः । अग्निमाधाय परितः समूहेत् पाणिनेदितम् । ३६ ।

परिस्तीर्याथ पर्युक्षेदन्वाधाय यथाविधि । प्रोक्षण्याऽऽसद्य द्रव्याणि प्रोक्ष्याग्नौ भावयेत् माम् । ३७ ।

तप्तजाम्बूनदप्रख्यं शङ्खचक्रगदाम्बुजैः । लसद्यत्तुर्भुजं शान्तं पदकिञ्चलकावाससम् । ३८ ।

स्फुरत्किरीटकटकदित्स्रवरारुद्रम् । श्रीवत्सवक्षसं भ्राजत्कौस्तुभं वनमालिनम् । ३९ ।

ध्यायन्नभ्यर्च्य दारुणि हविषाभिघृतानि च । प्रास्यान्यभागावाधायैर् दत्त्वा चाज्यघृतं हविः । ४० ।

जुहुयान्मूलमन्त्रेण षोडशर्चावदानतः । धर्मादिभ्यो यथान्यायं मन्त्रैः स्विष्टकृतं बुधः । ४१ ।

Depositing fire in a sacrificial pit, dug and constructed with due ceremony alongwith (three) zone-like constructions, a hollow and a raised ground, one should collect and concentrate it with the hand once it has been kindled (by fanning it). (36) Then enclosing it on all sides with twenty blades of Kuśa grass, one should sprinkle water on the Kuśa blades all round and, duly replenishing it with fuel while uttering the Vyāhrtis (५: पुवः and so on) and placing (to the north of the sacred fire) articles to be offered to the fire and sprinkling them with water taken from the consecrating vessel, should contemplate Me in the fire as shining brightly like molten gold, distinguished by four arms resplendent with a conch, discus, mace and lotus, calm (and composed), clad in silk possessing the (golden) hue of the filaments of a lotus, adorned with a brilliant diadem, bangles, a girdle (round My waist) and excellent armlets, bearing the mark of Śrīvatsa on My bosom, distinguished with the lustrous Kaustubha gem and with a garland of sylvan flowers. (37—39) Visualizing and worshipping Me (as such) and casting (into the fire) sacrificial sticks soaked in ghee and having made the two offerings of ghee known by the name of Āghāras (and consisting of sprinkling ghee across the sacrificial pit from the northern to the southern end and from the southern to the northern end, uttering the formulas 'प्रजापतये स्वाहा' and 'इन्द्राय स्वाहा') and two (more) offerings known by the name of Ājyabhāgas (and consisting of pouring ghee into the sacred fire uttering the formulas 'अग्नये स्वाहा' and 'सोमाय स्वाहा' respectively), should offer oblations soaked in ghee, uttering the fundamental Mantra (ॐ नमो नारायणाय) and then the hymn known by the name of Puruṣa-Sukta (consisting of sixteen Mantras); taking a fresh oblation (in a limited quantity with every utterance). The knowing devotee should (further) offer oblations (through the fire) to Dharma and others in the order mentioned before (in verse 25 above), uttering the name of the deity with the indeclinable "Swāha" added to it and (then) the oblation known as "Swiṣṭakṛt" (which is offered at the end of a sacrifice with the formula 'अग्नये स्विष्टकृते स्वाहा' and is so-called because it is believed to turn the sacrifice into a success). (40-41)

* जितं ते पुण्डरीकाक्ष नमस्ते विश्वभावन । सुजगन्पथ नमस्तेऽस्तु महापुरुषपर्यवर्जम् ॥

† The 16 Mantras of R̥gveda X. xc; Atharva. XIX. vi; the first 16 Mantras of Śukla Yajurveda XXXI and Kṛṣṇa Yajurveda III. xii; Sāmaveda 617—621

अथ्यर्च्यथ नमस्कृत्य पारिदध्यो बलिं हरेत्। मूलमन्त्रं जपेद् ब्रह्म सरन्नारायणात्मकम् ।४२।
 दत्त्वाऽऽचमनमुख्ये विष्णुक्सेनाय कल्पयेत्। मुखवासं सुरभिमतं ताम्बूलालाम्बाहयेत् ।४३।
 उपगायन् गुणन् नृत्यन् कर्माण्यभिनयन् मम। मत्कथाः श्रावयञ्छृण्वन् मुहूर्तं क्षणिको भवेत् ।४४।
 स्ववैरूक्षावचैः स्तोत्रैः पौराणैः प्राकृतैरपि। स्तुत्वा प्रसीद भगवन्निति वन्देत् दण्डवत् ।४५।
 शिरो मत्पादयोः कृत्वा बाहुभ्यां च परस्परम्। प्रपन्नं पाहि मामीश भीतं मृत्युग्रहार्णवात् ।४६।
 इति शेषां मया दत्तां शिरस्थाधाय सादरम्। उद्वासयेद्येदुद्वासं ज्योतिर्ज्योतिषि तत् पुनः ।४७।
 अर्चादिषु यदा यत्र श्रद्धा मां तत्र चार्चयेत्। सर्वभूतेष्वात्मनि च सर्वात्माहमवस्थितः ।४८।

Having worshipped Me (as indwelling the fire) and saluted Me, the votary should offer oblations (in the eight directions) to My attendants (Nanda and others, mentioned in verse 28 above) and (then returning to the place of worship and taking his seat before Me), should repeat the Mūla (principal) Mantra (as long as possible), contemplating (all the while) on the Infinite in the form of Lord Nārāyaṇa. (42) (Then, visualizing Me as having finished My dinner in the meantime,) he should offer water (to Me) for rinsing My mouth with and (again inviting Me back to My seat) should make over the remnants to Viṣwakṣena (the foremost attendant to the Lord). (Again,) offering betel-leaves etc., containing aromatic substances, intended to perfume the mouth, he should then conclude the worship (by showering on Me flowers placed in the hollow of one's joined palms). (43) (Then) celebrating, recounting and dramatically representing My exploits, dancing (out of joy while doing so) and narrating or listening to My stories, one should remain immersed in joy awhile. (44) Glorifying Me through long or short hymns found in ancient works (such as the Vedas and Purāṇas) as well as through those composed by human beings, and praying in the words "Be pleased, O Lord!" he should salute Me falling flat (on the ground) like a log, placing his head at My feet and with his arms joined together (at his back after the fashion of a criminal) and saying, "O Lord, protect me, afraid (as I am) of the ocean of worldly existence rendered all the more fearful by the presence of the alligator in the shape of death, and (as such) come to You (for protection)." (45-46) Praying thus he should respectfully place on his head as if given by Me the flowers etc., offered to Me and in case he must send back the deity (from the image in the event of its being intended for temporary worship); the (divine) effulgence invoked into the image should be drawn back (from it and merged) into the (divine) flame burning in the lotus of the heart (and the image deposited into some holy tank or river). (47) One can worship Me through whichever of the media (enumerated in verse 9 above), e. g., an image, he conceives a reverence for on a particular occasion; for, being the Soul of the universe, I dwell in all created beings as well as in the self (of the worshipper himself). (48)

एवं क्रियायोगपथैः पुमान् वैदिकतान्त्रिकैः। अर्चन्नुभयतः सिद्धिं यतो विन्द्यधीप्सिताम् ।४९।
 मदर्चा सम्प्रतिष्ठाप्य मन्दिरं कारयेद् दृढम्। पुष्पोद्यानानि रम्याणि पूजायात्रोत्सवाश्रितान् ।५०।

पूजादीनां प्रवाहार्थं महापर्वस्वथान्वहम् । क्षेत्रापणपुरग्रामान् दत्त्वा मत्सार्ष्टितामियात् । ५१ ।
 प्रतिष्ठया सर्वभौमं सधना भुवनत्रयम् । पूजादिना ब्रह्मलोकं त्रिभर्मत्सायतामियात् । ५२ ।
 मामेव नैरपेक्ष्येण भक्तियोगेन विन्दति । भक्तियोगं स लभत एवं यः पूजयेत माम् । ५३ ।
 यः स्वदत्तां परैदत्तां हरेत् सुरविप्रयोः । वृत्तिं स जायते विद्भुग् वर्षाणामयुतायुतम् । ५४ ।
 कर्तुंश्च सारथेर्हेतोरनुमोदितुरेव च । कर्मणां भागिनः प्रेत्य भूयो भूयसि तत् फलम् । ५५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे सप्तविंशोऽध्यायः । २७ ।

Worshipping Me as aforesaid in accordance with the courses of worship taught in the Vedas as also in the Tantras, a man secures at My hands success of the kind coveted by him both here and hereafter. (49) One (who can afford to do so) should cause a strong (enduring) house of worship to be built and, having duly installed My image (in it), should (further) cause beautiful flower-gardens to be laid out and make a (formal) grant (in favour of the temple) of fields, markets, towns or villages helpful for the (daily) worship, (occasional) congregations (on sacred days) and festivals. Granting these for the regular (and uninterrupted) conduct of worship etc., from day to day as well as on specially sacred days, one bids fair to enjoy a fortune as great as Mine. (50-51) Through installation (of an image) one bids fair to acquire sovereignty of the entire globe; by erecting a temple he is sure to attain dominion of (all) the three worlds; through worship etc., one can hope to reach the realm of Brahmā and through all these three (combined) one can attain a state of equality with Me. (52) He who worships Me as aforesaid secures union (in thought with Me) through Devotion and through (such) course of disinterested Devotion one attains to Me alone. (53) He who takes away the endowment made either by himself or by others in favour of (the image of) a deity or a Brāhmaṇa continues for ten crores of years to be born as a creature living on ordure. (54) Such a destiny (whether good or bad as depicted in verses 49 to 54 above) awaits hereafter the agent as well as his assistant, prompter and supporter too, since each (of them) is a partner in the act; and the reward or punishment is greater according as the action is more dignified or atrocious. (55)

Thus ends the twenty-seventh discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टाविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVIII The Highest Truth Discussed

श्रीभगवानुवाच

परस्वभावकर्माणि न प्रशंसेत्र गर्हयेत् । विश्वमेकात्मकं पश्यन् प्रकृत्या पुरुषेण च । १ ।
 परस्वभावकर्माणि यः प्रशंसति निन्दति । स आशु भ्रश्यते स्वाध्यादिसत्यभिनिवेशतः । २ ।
 तैजसे निद्रयाऽऽपन्ने पिण्डस्थो नष्टचेतनः । मायां प्राप्नोति मृत्युं वा तद्वन्नानार्थदृक् पुमान् । ३ ।
 किं भद्रं किमभद्रं वा द्वैतस्यावस्तुनः कियत् । वाचोदितं तदनुत् मनसा ध्यातमेव च । ४ ।

छायाप्रत्याह्वयाभासा ह्यसन्नोऽप्यर्थकारिणः । एवं देहादयो भावा यच्चन्त्या मृत्युतो भयम् । ५ ।
 आत्मेव तदिदं विश्वं सृज्यते सृजति प्रभुः । त्रायते त्राति विश्वात्मा ह्रियते हरतीश्वरः । ६ ।
 तस्मात्र ह्यात्मनोऽन्यस्मादन्यो भावो निरूपितः । निरूपितेयं त्रिविधा निर्मूला भातिरात्मनि ।

इदं गुणमयं विद्धि त्रिविधं मायया कृतम् । ७ ।

एतद् विद्वान् मदुदितं ज्ञानविज्ञाननैपुणम् । न निन्दति न च स्तौति लोके चरति सूर्यवत् । ८ ।
 प्रत्यक्षेणानुमानेन निगमेनात्मसंविदा । आद्यन्तवदसंज्ञात्वा निःसङ्गो विचरेदिह । ९ ।

The glorious Lord began again : Visualizing the universe—though brought about by (the co-operation of) Prakṛti (Matter) and Puruṣa (the Spirit)—as one in substance (as a manifestation of Brahma or the Absolute), one should neither praise nor condemn the (tranquil, vehement or torpid) nature and (corresponding) actions of others. (1) He who eulogizes or denounces the natural bent of mind and actions of others quickly strays from his (real) purpose (of Self-Knowledge) on account of his clinging to duality (which is unreal). (2) On the senses (evolved from the Rājasika ego) being overpowered with sleep the soul imprisoned in the body enters the realm of Māyā (illusion in the shape of the dream state in the event of the mind continuing to function) and having lost its consciousness (of the body and its surroundings later on when the mind too becomes torpid) reaches the state of deep sleep (which has been likened to death). So does the man perceiving many things (instead of the one real substance) experience distraction on coming in contact with the pleasures of sense and later on finds himself sunk into the depths of ignorance). (3) In the midst of duality, which is unreal (the question does not arise) what is good (praiseworthy) and what is evil (deprecable) and to what extent a (particular) thing is good or bad; (for) whatever is expressed through word (i.e., whatever is grasped through the senses) as well as whatever is contemplated with the mind is false. (4) A reflection, an echo and an illusory object (such as a mother of pearl presenting the appearance of silver), though unreal, react on us (as though they were real). So do the body and other entities (continue to) inspire fear till they disappear (into their one substratum, viz., Brahma). (5) Therefore, this universe is (no other than) the (Supreme) Spirit, inasmuch as It is capable of assuming all forms and almighty (capable of evolving everything). It is that (Universal) Spirit (alone) which creates and is created, protects and is protected, destroys and is destroyed. (It is both the subject and the object). (6) Therefore, no entity other than the Self existing apart from that which is created and so on has been posited (by the Vedas). This threefold appearance (in the shape of creation, continuance and destruction of the universe) in the Self has been declared (by the wise) as baseless. Know the threefold existence (in the shape of the perceiver, the perceived and the act of perception), being a product of the three Guṇas, as brought about by Māyā (My deluding potency). (7) He who comes to know (what is meant by) this ripeness of Jñāna and Vijñāna as taught by Me who neither extol nor revile anyone and would move about in the world (free from partiality and prejudice) as the sun. (8) Realizing this world as having a beginning and an end and (therefore) unreal (when conceived as apart from the Spirit) by means of perception, inference, the authority of the scriptures and one's own direct experience, one should move about in this world unattached. (9)

उद्धव उवाच

नैवात्मनो न देहस्य संसृतिर्द्रष्टृदृश्ययोः । अनात्मस्वदृशोरीश कस्य स्यादुपलभ्यते । १० ।
 आत्माव्ययोऽगुणः शुद्धः स्वयंज्योतिरनाकृतः । अग्निरवाहुरुवद्विदेहः कस्येह संसृतिः । ११ ।

Uddhava submitted : Transmigration (or in other words, the experience of pleasure and pain etc.), is undergone neither by the soul, who is the perceiver and therefore self-luminous, nor by the body, which is the object of perception and therefore other than the Self. (All the same) it is experienced, O Lord! (The question, therefore, arises:) by whom is it undergone ? (10) The soul is undecaying, unqualified, free from impurities, self-effulgent like fire and unobscured (by the evil of Avidyā or nescience) while the body is material like wood. (Therefore,) which (of the two) undergoes transmigration ? (11)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यावद् देहेन्द्रियप्राणैरात्मनः सन्निकर्षणम् । संसारः फलवांस्तावदपार्थोऽप्यविवेकिनः । १२ ।
 अर्थे ह्यविद्यमानोऽपि संसृतिर्न निवर्तते । ध्यायतो विषयानस्य स्वप्रेऽनर्थागमो यथा । १३ ।
 यथा ह्यप्रतिबुद्धस्य प्रस्वापो बह्वनर्थभृत् । स एव प्रतिबुद्धस्य न वै मोहाय कल्पते । १४ ।
 शोकहर्षभयक्रोधलोभमोहस्पृहादयः । अहङ्कारस्य दुश्यन्ते जन्म मृत्युश्च नात्मनः । १५ ।
 देहेन्द्रियप्राणमनोऽभिमानो जीवोऽन्तरात्मा गुणकर्ममूर्तिः ।
 सूत्रं महानित्युरुधेव गीतः संसार आधावति कालतन्त्रः । १६ ।
 अमूलमेतद् बहुरूपरूपितं मनोवचःप्राणशरीरकर्म ।
 ज्ञानासिनोपासनया शितेनच्छित्त्वा मुनिर्गा विचरत्यतृष्णाः । १७ ।
 ज्ञानं विवेको निगमस्तपश्च प्रत्यक्षमैतिह्यमथानुमानम् ।
 आद्यन्तयोरस्य यदेव केवलं कालश्च हेतुश्च तदेव मध्ये । १८ ।
 यथा हिरण्यं स्वकृतं पुरस्तात् पश्चाच्च सर्वस्य हिरण्यमस्य ।
 तदेव मध्ये व्यवहार्यमाणं नानापदेशैरहमस्य तद्वत् । १९ ।
 विज्ञानमेतत्त्रियवस्थमङ्गं गुणत्रयं कारणकार्यकर्तृ ।
 समन्वयेन व्यतिरेकतश्च येनैव तुर्येण तदेव सत्यम् । २० ।
 न यत् पुरस्तादुत यन्न पश्चान्मध्ये च तन्न व्यपदेशमात्रम् ।
 भूतं प्रसिद्धं च परेण यद् यत् तदेव तत् स्यादिति मे मनीषा । २१ ।
 अविद्यमानोऽप्यवभासते यो वैकारिको राजससर्ग एषः ।
 ब्रह्म स्वयंज्योतिरतो विभाति ब्रह्मेन्द्रियार्थात्मविकारचित्रम् । २२ ।
 एवं स्फुटं ब्रह्मविवेकहेतुभिः परापवादेन विशादेन ।
 छित्त्वाऽऽत्मसंदेहमुपारमेत स्वानन्दतृष्टोऽखिलकामुकेभ्यः । २३ ।
 नात्मा वपुः पार्थिवमिन्द्रियाणि देवा ह्यसुर्वायुजलं हुताशः ।
 मनोऽन्नमात्रं धिषणा च सत्त्वमहङ्कृतिः खं क्षितिरर्थसायम् । २४ ।
 समाहितैः कः करणैर्गुणात्मभिर्गुणो भवेन्मत्सुविविक्तधाम्नः ।
 विक्षिप्यमाणैरुत किं नु दूषणं घनैरुपेतैर्विगतै रवेः किम् । २५ ।
 यथा नभो वाय्वनलाम्बुभूगुणैर्गतागतैर्वर्तुगुणैर्न सजते ।
 तथाक्षरं सत्त्वरजस्तमोमलैरहं मतेः संसृतिहेतुभिः परम् । २६ ।
 तथापि सङ्गः परिवर्जनीयो गुणेषु मायारचितेषु तावत् ।
 मद्भक्तियोगेन दृढेन यावद् रजो निरस्येत मनःकषायः । २७ ।

The glorious Lord replied : So long as there is contact of the undiscriminating soul with the body, senses and vital airs metempsychosis continues to bear fruit (in the shape of pleasure and pain), even though it has no reality. (12) Even though phenomena (in the shape of the various bodies) do not exist (in the Self), metempsychosis (consisting in the experience of pleasure and pain) does not cease in the case of the embodied soul continuing to think of the objects of senses, even as calamities do not cease to afflict a man in the dream state so long as the dream is not broken, although the objects seen in it (including the body appearing in the dream) do not (actually) exist. (13) Just as the dream experience brings many a woe to a man who has not yet woken—while the same surely does not infatuate him who has woken up—so what brings sorrow to the ignorant does not afflict a wise man. (14) Grief, delight, fear, anger, greed, infatuation, craving and other moods as well as birth and death are seen in relation to the ego and not to the Self. (15) The spirit hidden behind the body, the senses, the vital airs and the mind and identifying itself with them is called the Jiva. The subtle body (constituted of the Guṇas and Karmas) is its material manifestation and is variously known as the Sūtrātmā or the Mahat-tattva. Controlled by God (in the form of the Time-Spirit), it revolves in Saṁsāra (the whirligig of metempsychosis). (16) Cutting down with the sword of wisdom, whetted by worship (of God), this (tree of the) ego-sense—which has no root and (yet) stands revealed in multitudinous forms (such as those of gods, human beings etc.), and is entertained in relation to the mind, speech, vital airs and body—a contemplative soul roams about on the globe destitute of (all) thirst (for the pleasures of sense). (17) Wisdom consists in distinguishing the Self from the non-Self. (Study of) the Vedas and askesis (in the shape of discharging one's own sacred obligations), the teachings of exalted souls, ratiocination (consistent with those teachings) and one's own realization (which does not contradict the two) constitute the means to (the attainment of) such discriminating knowledge. And such discrimination results in the conviction that what alone existed at the beginning of creation and will survive at the end of it exists in the middle as well and that is (Brahma,) the revealer as well as the cause of the universe. (18) (Even) as gold not (yet) wrought into various beautiful shapes (as ornaments), which existed before as well as after all that is made of it, is the same even at the middle, while it is being called by different names (ear-ring, bangle and so on), so do I (the Cause of the universe) exist before and after the universe and am designated by different names even at the middle. (In other words, the creation is in no way other than Me.)(19) That (one substance, viz., Brahma) alone is real, because of which—the fourth principle (consisting of absolute Consciousness)—O dear uddhava, this mind subject to its three states (viz., waking, dream and deep slumber), the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti (which bring about the three states) as well as the threefold universe (consisting of the cause, viz., the Ādhyātma or the senses, the effect, viz., the Adhibhūta or the five elements—earth etc., and the agent, viz., the Adhidaiva or the gods presiding over the Indriyas) appear through invariable concomitance, and which substance (equally) persists even when this threefold distinction disappears (viz., during Samādhi or the state of absorption).(20) That (on the other hand) which neither existed before nor will persist after (viz., the manifest creation) does not (really) exist even in the middle except in name alone. An effect is the same as that other substance (viz., the cause) through which it came into being and by which it stands revealed: such is My conviction.(21) This world of modifications, though it did not exist (before), has evolved from Brahma through Rajas and is revealed (also) by Brahma, which (on the other hand) is the cause of all by itself (and not the effect of any other cause) and the revealer (too). (Therefore) it is Brahma (alone) which appears as this diversified universe, consisting (as it does) of the senses and their objects (the subtle elements), the mind (including the gods presiding over the senses and the mind) and the five gross elements. (22) Resolving one's doubts concerning the Self by the aforesaid means of clearly distinguishing Brahma (vide verse 18 above) and by rejecting the possibility of the body etc., (which are other than the Self) being recognized as the Self and by the grace of a wise preceptor, and sated with the bliss of Self-Realization, one should dissociate oneself from all the senses etc., (thirsting after enjoyment). (23) Indeed the body, (which is) a product of the earth, the senses, the deities presiding over them, life-breath, the air, water, fire and the mind, which is sustained by food, reason and the intellect, the ego, ether, earth, the (five) objects of the senses and Prakṛti (the state of equilibrium of the three Guṇas) are not the Self (since they are all material). (24) What gain can there be to him who has fully realized My Truth through his senses, made up of the three Guṇas, being composed or, say, what harm can befall him through his senses being tossed about? What gain or loss can accrue to the sun through the clouds having gathered about it or dispersed? (25) (Even) as the sky is not affected by the (drying, burning, drenching and soiling) properties of the air, fire, water and earth or by the peculiarities, that come and go, of the various seasons, so the transcendent Indestructible is never contaminated by the impurities (impure tendencies and actions) of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, which bring about the transmigration of one who looks upon the body as his self. (26) All the same attachment to the pleasures of sense, which are the creations of Māyā (Prakṛti) should be completely eschewed until the impurity attaching to the mind in the form of passion is shaken off through the intense practice of Devotion. (27)

यथाऽऽमयोऽसाधुचिकित्सितो नृणां पुनः पुनः संतुदति प्ररोहन् ।
 एवं मनोऽपक्वकषायकर्म कुयोगिनं विध्यति सर्वसङ्गम् । २८ ।
 कुयोगिनो ये विहितान्तरायैर्मनुष्यभूतैस्त्रिदशोपसृष्टैः ।
 ते प्राक्तनाभ्यासबलेन भूयो युज्जन्ति योगं न तु कर्मतन्त्रम् । २९ ।
 करोति कर्म क्रियते च जन्तुः केनाप्यसौ चोदित आनिपातात् ।
 न तत्र विद्वान् प्रकृतौ स्थितोऽपि निवृत्ततृष्णाः स्वसुखानुभूत्या । ३० ।
 तिष्ठन्तमासीनमुत व्रजन्तं शयानमुक्षन्तमदन्तमन्नम् ।
 स्वभावमन्यत् किमपीहमानमात्मानमात्मस्थमतिर्न वेद । ३१ ।
 यदि स्म पश्यत्यसदिन्द्रियार्थं नानानुमानेन विरुद्धमन्यत् ।
 न मन्यते वस्तुतया मनीषी स्वाप्नं यथोत्थाय तिरोदधानम् । ३२ ।
 पूर्वं गृहीतं गुणकर्मचित्रमज्ञानमात्मन्यविविक्तमङ्ग ।
 निवर्तते तत् पुनरीक्षयैव न गृह्यते नापि विसृज्य आत्मा । ३३ ।
 यथा हि भानोरुदयो नृचक्षुषां तमो निहन्यान्न तु सद् विधत्ते ।
 एवं समीक्षा निपुणा सती मे हन्यात्तमिच्छं पुरुषस्य बुद्धेः । ३४ ।
 एष स्वयंज्योतिरजोऽप्रमेयो महानुभूतिः सकलानुभूतिः ।
 एकोऽद्वितीयो वचसां विरामे येनेषिता वागसबध्श्चरन्ति । ३५ ।

(Just) as a disease in men sprouts again and again, if treated improperly, and causes much pain, so does the mind whose passions and (the latencies of) Karma to which they are traceable have not been burnt and which has conceived an attachment for all (wealth, sons, wife and so on) brings about the fall of one who has not attained perfection in Yoga (wisdom). (28) Those imperfect Yogis who are (thus) frustrated by (living) impediments in the form of human beings (such as wife and sons, kinsfolk and disciples) placed by the gods take once more to (the practice of) Yoga, by force of the habit acquired in previous births, but never to the elaborate course of action. (29) Impelled by some agency (the Inner Controller or force of destiny etc.), the ignorant man performs actions till his death and is subjected to joy and sorrow (undergoes transmigration thereby). The enlightened soul (however) is not so subjected, though seated in the body (a product of Matter), his thirst (for the pleasures of sense) having ceased due to his enjoying the bliss of Self-Realization (and hence does not undergo transmigration through performing actions all his life). (30) He whose mind is fixed on the Self is not aware of the body whether it is standing or sitting, walking or lying down, answering the calls of nature or masticating food or pursuing any other natural activity. (31) If at all a man of wisdom perceives the various objects of his extroverted senses, he does not recognize as real anything other than the Self—for such a thing would be contrary to reason—any more than a man rising from sleep recognizes as real an object seen in a dream and as such vanishing. (32) This psycho-physical organism (a product of ignorance), wonderfully wrought by the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and Karmas (conforming to those Guṇas), which was formerly (in the state of bondage) perceived as non-distinct from the Self, O dear Uddhava, now disappears in the light of Self-Knowledge. The Self (however) can neither be apprehended nor rejected. (33) Just as the emergence of the sun (only) disperses the darkness screening the human eyes, but does not create (anew) what has already been there, so My consummate and true realization dispels the darkness enveloping the mind of man. (34) The Self is never hidden from our view (but ever directly perceptible). It is self-luminous, beyond birth (and death etc.), beyond all proof, unlimited in point of time and space etc. (and therefore beyond all change), comprising all sorts of experiences, and remaining one (without a second) when all words cease to describe it. Speech and the senses function (only) when impelled by It. (35)

एतावानात्मसंमोहो यद् विकल्पस्तु केवले। आत्मवृत्ते स्वमात्मानमवलम्ब्यो न यस्य हि । ३६।

यन्नामाकृतिभिर्ग्राह्यं पञ्चवर्णमबाधितम्। व्यर्थेनाप्यर्थवादोऽयं द्वयं पण्डितमानिनाम् । ३७।

The notion of difference in the absolute Self is entirely a delusion of the mind; for other than one's own self there is no ground for this difference. (36) The view of some self-conceited men that the duality (in the form of the body etc.), perceptible (with the senses) in the form of (so many) names and forms and consisting of the five (gross) elements cannot be refuted is a meaningless tall talk. (37)

योगिनोऽपक्वयोगस्य युञ्जतः काय उस्थितैः। उपसर्गैर्विहन्त्ये तत्रायं विहितो विधिः । ३८।

योगधारणया कांश्चिदात्मनैर्धारणान्वितैः। तपोमन्त्रौषधैः कांश्चिदुपसर्गान् विनिर्देहेत् । ३९।

कांश्चिन्ममानुधानेन नामसङ्कीर्तनादिभिः। योगेश्वरानुवृत्त्या वा हन्यादशुभदाञ्छनैः । ४०।

केचिद् देहमिमं धीराः सुकल्पं वयसि स्थिरम्। विधाय विविधोपायैश्च युञ्जन्ति सिद्धये । ४१।

न हि तत् कुशलादृत्यं तदायासो ह्यपार्थकः। अन्तवत्त्वाच्छरीरस्य फलस्येव वनस्पतेः । ४२।

योगं निषेवतो नित्यं कायश्चेत् कल्पतामियात्। तच्छृद्ध्यात्र मतिमान् योगमुत्सृज्य मत्सरः । ४३।

योगचर्यामिमं योगी विचरन् मदपाश्रयः। नान्तराग्यैर्विहन्त्ये निःस्पृहः स्वसुखानुभूः । ४४।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायामेकदशस्कन्धोऽष्टाविंशोऽध्यायः । १८।

If the body of a Yogī who has not yet achieved perfection in Yoga and who is still striving is visited by (some) calamities (ailments etc.), appearing all of a sudden, the following is prescribed as a remedy. (38) One should get rid of some obstacles (such as heat and cold) through Yogic concentration (severally on the moon and the sun), others (viz., flatulence and other ailments) by means of Yogic postures accompanied by concentration on the air and still others (viz., those brought about by evil stars and snakes etc.), through askesis (self-denial), spells and drugs (as required). (39) Some obstacles (such as lust and anger) yielding evil result: one should gradually get over through continued contemplation on Me, by loudly chanting the Divine Names and so on, and still others (such as hypocrisy and pride) by waiting upon masters of Yoga. (40) Some men, having controlled their senses and made their living body exceptionally strong (proof against disease and old age) and ever young by various means, take to the practice of Yoga for the attainment of mystic powers (such as transferring one's soul to a dead body and tenanting it). (41) That is (however) not to be made much of by the wise; for the pains taken over such a consummation are futile inasmuch as the body (after all) is perishable like the fruit of a tree (and might drop any moment). (42) (Even) if the body of a man ever diligently practising Yoga attains exceptional fitness, a wise man should not lay much store by such fitness, discontinuing the (practice of) Yoga; he should (on the other hand) remain devoted to Me. (43) The Yogi who, depending on Me, diligently carries on the aforesaid practice of Yoga is not baffled by obstacles; he is (on the other hand) rid of all hankerings and enjoys the bliss of Self-Realization. (44)

Thus ends the twenty-eighth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनत्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIX

Courses of conduct pleasing to the Lord; Uddhava's departure for Badarikāśrama

उद्धव उवाच

सुदुश्चरामिमां मन्ये योगचर्यामनात्मनः । यथाञ्जसा पुमान् सिद्ध्येत् तन्मे ब्रूहञ्जसाच्युत । १ ।
प्रायशः पुण्डरीकाक्ष युञ्जन्तो योगिनो मनः । विषीदन्त्यसमाधानान्मनोनिग्रहकर्षिताः । २ ।
अथात आनन्ददुग्धं पदाम्बुजं हंसाः श्रयेरन्नरविन्दलोचन ।
सुखं नु विधेश्चर योगकर्मभिस्त्वन्माययामी विहता न मानिनः । ३ ।
किं चित्रमच्युत तवैतदशेषबन्धो दासेष्वनन्यशरणेषु यदात्मसात्त्वम् ।
योऽरोचयत् सह मृगैः स्वयमीश्वराणां श्रीमत्किरीटतटपीडितपादपीठः । ४ ।
तं त्वाखिलात्मदधितेश्वरमाश्रितानां सर्वार्थदं स्वकृतविद् विस्मजेत को नु ।
को वा भजेत् किमपि विस्मृतयेऽनु भूत्यै किं वा भवेन्न तव पादरजोजुषां नः । ५ ।
नैवोपयन्त्यपचितिं कवयस्तवेश ब्रह्मायुषापि कृतमृद्धमुदः स्मरन्तः ।
योऽन्तर्बहिस्तनुभृतामशुभं विधुन्वन्नाचार्ययैत्यवपुषा स्वगतिं व्यनक्ति । ६ ।

Uddhava submitted : I consider this Yogic discipline extremely hard to practise for one who has not been able to control his mind. (Therefore, pray) tell me explicitly, O immortal Lord, the means by which a man may easily attain perfection. (1) Yogis (strivers) trying to curb their mind, O lotus-eyed Lord, get tired in their attempt to control it and often feel frustrated because of their not being able to compose it. (2) It is for this very reason that men who are capable of distinguishing the substantial from the unsubstantial easily and definitely resort to Your lotus-feet, yielding (the nectar of) supreme bliss, O lotus-eyed Lord of the universe! Handicapped (however) are they by Your Maya (deluding potency), who, being proud of their Self-Knowledge and (knowledge of) ritual acts, do not (so) resort to You. (3) That You should be subject to the will of Your servants (devotees) that are exclusively devoted to You, O Befriender of all, is no wonder for You, O immortal Lord ! who found delight in the company of animals (monkeys etc.) in Your descent as Sri Rāma as well as in Your infantile sports at Vrindābana, even though Your very footstool is (ever and anon) rubbed by the end of the brilliant diadems of Brahmā and others (the rulers of the world)! (4) What man who is conscious of good offices done (by you) to Your devotees (in the past) can possibly turn his back on You as aforesaid, the Ruler and the Beloved, (nay,) the very Self of the entire creation, who bestow all desired boons upon those that have sought shelter with You ? What (knowing) man will as a matter of fact go in for something (other than You, even though gifted by You,) which is conducive to good fortune (alone) and later on, to forgetfulness (about You) ? What good fortune will not attend on us, who take delight in the dust of Your feet ? (5) (Even) enlightened souls cannot get square with You, O Lord ! even through the span of life allotted to Brahmā (viz., 31,10,40,00,00,00,000 years) and feel overjoyed while recalling Your obligations; for (they know that) appearing in the form of the preceptor outside and in the form of the Inner Controller within (their heart) it is You who drive away the sin (and impurities) of embodied souls and reveal Your true nature (to them). (6)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युद्धवेनात्यनुरक्तचेतसा पृष्टो जगत्क्रोडनकः स्वशक्तिभिः ।

गृहीतमूर्तित्रय ईश्वरेश्वरो जगद् सप्रममनोहरस्मितः । ७ ।

Srī Śuka began again : Questioned thus by Uddhava, whose mind was excessively devoted to Him, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the suzerain Lord even of Brahma and others, the rulers of the universe), who, having assumed three forms (under the names of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) through His own potencies (in the shape of Rajas, Sattva and Tamas), toys with the world, lovingly spoke (as follows) with a soul-ravishing smile (on His lips). (7)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

हन्त ते कथयिष्यामि मम धर्मान् सुमङ्गलान् । यादृक्पुण्ड्रयाऽऽचरन् मर्त्यो मृत्युं जयति दुर्जयम् । ८ ।

कुर्यात् सर्वाणि कर्माणि मर्त्यं शनकैः स्मरन् । मय्यर्पितमनश्चित्तो मद्धर्मात्ममनोरतिः । ९ ।

देशान् पुण्यानाश्रयेत मद्भक्तैः साधुभिः श्रितान् । देवासुरमनुष्येषु मद्भक्ताचरितानि च । १० ।

पृथक् सत्रेण वा मह्यं पर्वयात्रामहोत्सवान् । कारयेद् गीतनृत्याद्यैर्महाराजविभूतिभिः । ११ ।

मामेव सर्वभूतेषु बहिरन्तरपावृतम् । ईक्षेतात्मनि चात्मानं यथा खममलशयः । १२ ।

इति सर्वाणि भूतानि मद्भावेन महाद्युते । सभाजयन् मन्यमानो ज्ञानं केवलमाश्रितः । १३ ।

ब्राह्मणे पुल्लसे स्तेने ब्राह्मण्येऽर्के स्फुलिङ्गके । अकूरे कूरके चैव सप्तदृक् पण्डितो मतः । १४ ।

नरेषुभीक्ष्णं मद्भावं पुंसो भावयतोऽचिरान् । स्पर्धासूयातिरस्काराः साहङ्कारा विव्यन्ति हि । १५ ।

विसृज्य स्मयमानान् स्वान् दूशं ब्रीडां च दैहिकीम् । प्रणमेद् दण्डवद् भूमावाश्रवाण्डालगोखराम् । १६ ।

यावत् सर्वेषु भूतेषु मद्भावो नोपजायते । तावदेवमुपासीत वाङ्मनःकायवृत्तिभिः । १७ ।

सर्वं ब्रह्मात्मकं तस्य विद्ययाऽऽत्ममनीषया । परिपश्यन्नुपरमेत् सर्वतो मुक्तसंशयः । १८ ।

अयं हि सर्वकल्पानां सद्भीचीनो मतो मम । मद्भावः सर्वभूतेषु मनोवाक्कायवृत्तिभिः । १९ ।

न ह्यङ्गोपक्रमे ध्वंसो मद्भक्तस्योद्धवाण्वपि । मया व्यवसितः सम्यङ्निर्गुणत्वाद्नाशिषः ॥ २० ॥

यो यो मयि परे धर्मः कल्प्यते निष्फलाय चेत् । तदायासो निरर्थः स्याद् भयादेरिव सत्तम ॥ २१ ॥

एषा बुद्धिमतां बुद्धिर्मनीया च मनीषिणाम् । यत् सत्यमनृतेनेह मर्त्यनाप्नोति मामुतम् ॥ २२ ॥

The glorious Lord said : Hullo ! I shall tell you the most auspicious courses of conduct pleasing to Me, following which with reverence a mortal conquers death, which is so difficult to conquer. (8) With mind and intellect dedicated to Me and his mind and soul finding delight in the courses of conduct pleasing to Me, a man should gradually (learn to) perform all actions for My sake, remembering Me (all the while). (9) He should take up his abode in holy lands inhabited by pious men devoted to Me and follow the conduct of my devotees among the gods, demons and human beings. (10) He should arrange (either) individually or collectively in My honour on sacred days (such as Ekādaśī) processions and great festivities alongwith songs, dances etc., spending large sums of money on a monarchical scale. (11) Pure of mind, he should behold Me alone, the Supreme Self, as pervading within as well as without and unconditioned as the sky in all created beings as also in his own self. (12) He who, embracing thus the point of view of Self-Knowledge alone, regards all created beings as identical with Me, O highly enlightened one, and honours them as such, (nay,) who looks with an equal eye upon a Brāhmaṇa and a low-born individual, a thief and a devotee of Brāhmaṇas, the sun and a spark, a tender-hearted and a cruel man is accounted wise. (13-14) (The spirit of) rivalry (with equals), fault-finding (with one's superiors) and contempt (for one's inferiors) coupled with self-conceit surely disappear before long from the mind of a man incessantly (engaged in) looking upon men and women as (no other than) Myself. (15) Ignoring his own people (even) if they laugh at him and giving up the body-consciousness (as a result of which one comes to regard oneself as superior and the low-born and animals etc., as inferior to one's own self) and casting to the winds (all sense of) shame, he should bow low to all down to a dog, a pariah, a cow and a donkey, falling flat on the ground like a log of wood. (16) Until the conviction about all created beings being identical with Myself gets rooted in him, he should worship Me in the aforesaid manner through the active agency of his speech, mind and body. (17) Everything is reduced to Brahma (the Absolute) in his eyes. (And) seeing Brahma (and Brahma alone) everywhere by virtue of knowledge (raised to the level of realization) gained by looking upon everything as Brahma, and freed from all doubts, he should cease from all activity. (18) Looking upon all created beings as Myself through the active agency of mind, speech and body—this indeed is considered by Me to be the best of all disciplines (conducive to My realization). (19) There is no (fear of) loss in the least degree of this course of conduct in the form of My worship, O dear Uddhava, once it has been taken up (in right earnest), because it is free from (all) craving and since it has been deliberately determined by Me, unaffected as it is by the (three) Guṇas. (20) (Nay,) whatever worldly exertion, though fruitless (e.g., the act of fleeing and crying through fear etc.), yet dedicated in a disinterested spirit to Me, the Supreme, is exalted to the level of Dharma (righteousness), O most pious Uddhava ! (21) Here lies the wisdom of the wise, (nay,) the cleverness of the clever consists in this (alone) that one attains in this (very) life to Me, the (only) immortal and real substance, through this bogus and mortal frame. (22)

एष तेऽभिहितः कृत्स्नो ब्रह्मवादस्य सङ्ग्रहः । समासव्यासविधिना देवानामपि दुर्गमः ॥ २३ ॥

अभीक्ष्णशस्ते गदितं ज्ञानं विस्पष्टयुक्तिमतम् । एतद् विज्ञाय मुच्येत पुण्ये नष्टसंशयः ॥ २४ ॥

सुविचिक्तं तव प्रश्नं मयेतदपि धारयेत् । सनातनं ब्रह्मगुह्यं परं ब्रह्माधिगच्छति ॥ २५ ॥

य एतन्मम भक्तेषु सम्प्रदद्यात् सुपुष्कलम् । तस्याहं ब्रह्मदायस्य दद्याम्यात्मानमात्मना ॥ २६ ॥

य एतत् समधीयीत पवित्रं परमं शुचिम् । स पूयेताहरहर्मा ज्ञानदीपेन दर्शयन् ॥ २७ ॥

य एतच्छ्रद्धया नित्यमव्यग्रः शृणुयान्नरः । मयि भक्तिं परां कुर्वन् कर्मभिनं स बध्यते । २८ ।
 अयुद्धव त्वया ब्रह्म सखे समवधारितम् । अपि ते विगतो मोहः शोकश्चास्ति मनोभवः । २९ ।
 नैतत्त्वया दाम्भिकाय नास्तिकाय शठाय च । अशुश्रूषोरभक्ताय दुर्विनीताय दीयताम् । ३० ।
 एतैर्दोषैर्विनीताय ब्रह्मण्याय प्रियाय च । साधवे शुचये ब्रूयाद् भक्तिः स्याच्छ्रद्धयोपिताम् । ३१ ।
 नैतद् विज्ञाय जिज्ञासोर्ज्ञातव्यमवशिष्यते । पीत्वा पीयूषममृतं पातव्यं नावशिष्यते । ३२ ।
 ज्ञाने कर्मणि योगे च वार्तायां दण्डधारणे । यावानर्थो नृणां तात तावांस्तेऽहं चतुर्विधः । ३३ ।
 मर्यां यदा त्यक्तसमस्तकर्मा निवेदितात्मा विविकीर्षितो मे ।
 तदामृतत्वं प्रतिपद्यमानो मयाऽऽत्मभूयाय च कल्पते वै । ३४ ।

The aforesaid teaching covers the entire range of Vedantic teaching, which has been taught by Me to you in a nutshell or in extenso, (as necessary) and which is (so) difficult to grasp even for the gods. (23) Repeatedly has this Knowledge (of Truth) been expounded by Me in a very lucid and reasoned way. Having grasped it fully a man will have (all) his doubts dispelled and bids fair to get liberated. (24) (Nay,) he who treasures (in his mind) this question of yours as well as this discourse containing my reply (to it) will realize the everlasting transcendent Brahma, that lies hidden in the Vedas. (25) (Again,) I shall voluntarily confer My own Self on that teacher of Brahma who imparts this knowledge to My devotees most extensively. (26) He who repeats aloud in an intelligent way this most sacred teaching (of Mine), which is capable of sanctifying others (too), will get purified in that he will be revealing Me day to day (to others) by the lamp of wisdom. (27) A man who attentively listens to this (dialogue) with reverence from day to day will be practising (in effect) supreme devotion to Me and will not be bound by actions. (28) I hope, O Uddhava, my friend, (the true nature of) Brahma has been fully understood by you; I presume also that your mind-born infatuation and grief too has totally disappeared. (29) Let this teaching (of Mine) not be imparted by you to a hypocrite, an unbeliever, a cheat, an irreverent listener, one who is not a devotee and to an insolent person. (30) One should speak about it to him who is utterly devoid of the aforementioned faults, to a devotee of the Brāhmanas, to one's (own) favourite, to a pious and holy man, (nay, even) to the Śūdras and womenfolk if there is Devotion in them. (31) Nothing remains to be known by a seeker of Knowledge after knowing this, (just as) nothing remains to be quaffed after taking a draught of the immortalizing nectar. (32) To (devotees like) you, O dear Uddhava, I (Myself) cover the entire range of the fourfold object (of human pursuit), which is (partially) attained by men (in the shape of, say, final beatitude) through self-knowledge, (Dharma or religious merit) through (the performance of prescribed) duty, (mystic powers included under the category of Kāma or enjoyment) through (the practice of) Yoga, (wealth) through (the pursuit of) agriculture etc., (the vocation of a Vaisya), and (dominion, also included in the category of enjoyment) through the wielding of a sceptre (a symbol of ruling power). (33) When, having relinquished all duties, a mortal dedicates himself to Me, he is chosen by Me as an object of special favour; and, attaining immortality, he then gets qualified in reality for becoming one with Me (or acquiring divine powers). (34)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स एवमादर्शितयोगमार्गस्तोत्तमश्लोकवचो निश्रयः ।
 बद्धाञ्जलिः प्रीत्युपरूढकण्ठो न किञ्चिद्देश्यपरिगृह्यताक्षः । ३५ ।
 विष्टब्धचित्तं प्रणयावपूर्णं धैर्येण राजन् बहुमन्यमानः ।
 कृताञ्जलिः प्राह यदुप्रवीरं शीष्णां स्पृशंस्तच्चरणारविन्दम् । ३६ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Hearing the discourse of Śrī Kṛṣṇa of excellent renown, Uddhava, who had thus been shown the path of Yoga (union with the Lord), stood with joined palms, his eyes overflowing with tears, and could not at that time utter a word (in return) as his throat was choked with emotion. (35) Controlling his mind, agitated through affection, by firmness, O king, and accounting himself blessed, he (now) replied (as follows) to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the greatest hero among the Yadus) with joined palms, touching His lotus-feet with his head. (36)

उद्धव उवाच

विद्रावितो मोहमहान्धकारो य आश्रितो मे तव संनिधानात् ।
विभावसोः किं नु समीपगस्य शीतं तपो भीः प्रभवन्त्यजाह ॥३७॥
प्रत्यर्पितो मे भवतानुकम्पिना भृत्याय विज्ञानमयः प्रदीपः ।
हित्वा कृतज्ञस्तव पादमूलं कोऽन्यत् समीयाच्छरणं त्वदीयम् ॥३८॥
वृक्णाश्च मे सुदुःखः स्नेहपाशो दाशार्हवृष्ण्यन्धकसात्वतेषु ।
प्रसारितः सृष्टिविवृद्धये त्वया स्वमायया ह्यात्मसुबोधहेतिना ॥३९॥

नमोऽस्तु ते महायोगिन् प्रपन्नमनुशाधि माम् । यथा त्वच्चरणाम्बोजे रतिः स्यादनपायिनी ॥४०॥

Uddhava submitted : The thick darkness of ignorance that had been hugged by me has been dispersed by Your teaching. Can cold and darkness or the fear born of these possibly prevail against a man who has sought the presence of fire, O Creator (even) of Brahmā ? (37) The lamp of wisdom (that had been snatched away by Your Māyā) has been restored to me, Your servant, by You, compassionate as You are. Leaving the soles of Your feet, what grateful man would seek any other asylum ? (38) Nay, the most tough snare of my affection for the Dāsārhas, the Vṛṣṇis, the Andhakas and the Sātvatas, that had been spread by You through Your deluding potency for the propagation of species, has actually been torn asunder by You with the sword of Self-Realization. (39) (My) salutation be to You, O Supreme Master of Yoga ! (Pray,) instruct me, who have come to You for protection, so that unceasing love for Your lotus-feet may abide in my heart. (40)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

गच्छोद्धव मयाऽऽदिष्टो बदर्याख्यं ममाश्रमम् । तत्र मत्पादतीर्थं दि स्नानोपस्पर्शनैः शुचिः ॥४१॥
ईक्ष्यालकनन्दाया विधूताशेषकल्मषः । वसानो वल्कलान्यङ्ग वन्यभुक् सुखनिःस्पृहः ॥४२॥
तितिक्षुर्हृदमात्राणां सुशीलः संयतेन्द्रियः । शान्तः समाहितधिया ज्ञानविज्ञानसंयुतः ॥४३॥
मतोऽनुशिक्षितं यते विविक्तमनुभावयन् । मय्यावेशितवाक्चित्तो मद्धर्मनिरतो भव ।

अतिव्रज्य गतीस्त्रिस्तो मामेध्यसि ततः परम् ॥४४॥

The glorious Lord replied : Enjoined by Me, O Uddhava ! proceed to My hermitage, called by the name of Badarikāśrama. Hallowed there by bathing in and drinking the water of the (holy) Gaṅgā (which has washed My feet and acquired sanctity thereby), nay, purged of all impurities by the (very) sight of the Alakanandā (a tributary of the Gaṅgā), wearing the bark of trees, O dear one! living on wild fruits and free from (all) hankering for pleasure, enduring all experiences in the form of pairs of opposites (such as cold and heat), amiable of disposition, with your senses fully controlled, calm and possessed of a collected mind, endowed with wisdom and Self-Realization, ruminating most thoughtfully upon whatever you have learnt from Me and devoting your speech and mind to Me, remain assiduously engaged in duties pleasing to Me. Transcending the three courses of destiny, (viz., ascent to heaven in a celestial form, rebirth as a human being and being cast into the womb of any subhuman creature, according to the predominance of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas respectively), you will then attain to Me. (41—44)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स एवमुक्तो हरिमेधसोद्धवः प्रदक्षिणं तं परिसृत्य पादयोः ।
 शिरो निधायश्रुकलाभिराद्रधीर्न्यषिञ्चदद्वन्द्वपरोऽप्यपक्रमे । ४५ ।
 सुदुस्त्यजस्त्रेहवियोगकातरो न शक्तुवस्तं परिहातुमातुरः ।
 कृच्छ्रं ययौ मूर्धनि भर्तृपादुके बिभ्रन्नमस्कृत्य ययौ पुनः पुनः । ४६ ।
 ततस्तमन्तर्हृदि संनिवेश्य गतो महाभागवतो विशालाम् ।
 यथोपदिष्टं जगदेकबन्धुना तपः समास्थाय हरेरगाद् गतिम् । ४७ ।
 य एतदानन्दसमुद्रसम्भृतं ज्ञानामृतं भागवताय भाषितम् ।
 कृष्णोऽयं योगेश्वरसेविताङ्घ्रिणा सञ्चक्षुःप्राप्य जगद् विमुच्यते । ४८ ।
 भवभयमपहन्तुं ज्ञानविज्ञानसारं निगमकृदुपजह्ने भृङ्गवद् वेदसारम् ।
 अमृतमुद्विगतापाययद् भृत्यवर्गान् पुरुषमुषभमाद्यं कृष्णसंज्ञं नतोऽस्मि । ४९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो मंलितायमेकादशस्कन्धे एकोनविंशोऽध्यायः । २९ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Instructed thus by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (devotion to whom puts an end to metempsychosis), Uddhava went round the Lord keeping Him always to his right (so as to ensure His constant goodwill) and, placing his head on His feet while departing, bathed them with drops of tears, his mind (too) being moistened with emotion, even though he had transcended the pairs of opposites (in the form of joy and sorrow etc., as a result of the Lord's teaching). (45) Alarmed at his (impending) separation from Śrī Kṛṣṇa—whose affection was most difficult to turn one's back upon—and unable to leave Him, Uddhava felt ill at ease and suffered (great) agony. (Then) bearing on his head the pair of wooden sandals belonging to his Master (and gifted by Himself as a token of His pleasure) and bowing to Him again and again, he departed. (46) Having firmly installed the Lord in the inmost of his heart, the great votary of the Lord then reached Viśālā (another name of Badarikāśrama); and, practising austerities according to rules, attained to the state of Śrī Hari as taught by Śrī Kṛṣṇa* (the sole Befriender of the universe). (47) He who tastes ever so little with real reverence this nectar of wisdom, churned out of the ocean of bliss (in the shape of the Upaniṣads, so-called because they reveal the nature of Brahma, which is all bliss) and taught to Uddhava (a great devotee of the Lord) by (no less a personage than) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose (lotus) feet are resorted to (even) by masters of Yoga (like Lord Śiva), is not only liberated himself but the world (at large) gets liberated (through his fellowship). (48) I bow to the Supreme Person known by the name of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the First Cause, the Author of the Vedas, who in order to put an end to rebirth (in the case of devotees that have turned their face from the world) and the fear of old age and disease etc., (in the case of those following the ways of the world) extracted like a bee (the twofold) nectar, viz., 1-the quintessence of the Vedas in the form of Jñāna (Self-Knowledge) and Vijñāna (God-Realization)—which are the only valuable things (in life)—and 2-the immortalizing beverage of the gods (churned) out of the ocean, and gave the (twofold) nectar to the (aforementioned two) classes of His devotees to drink. (49)

Thus ends the twenty-ninth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharisa-Saṁhitā.

* Vide verse 34 above.

अथ त्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXX

Holocaust of Yadu's Race

राजोवाच *

ततो महाभागवत उद्भवे निगति वनम् । द्वारक्यां किमकरोद् भगवान् भूतभावनः । १ ।

ब्रह्मशापोपसंसृष्टे स्वकुले यादवर्षभः । प्रेयसीं सर्वनेत्राणां तनुं स कथमत्यजत् । २ ।

प्रत्याकृष्टुं नयनमबला यत्र लग्नं न शेकुः कर्णाविष्टं न सरति ततो यत् सतामात्यलग्नम् ।

यच्छ्रीवाचां जनयति रति किं नु मानं कवीनां दृष्ट्वा जिष्णोर्युधि रथगतं यच्च तत्साम्यमीयुः । ३ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : Uddhava, a great devotee of the Lord, having proceeded to the woodland (of Badarikāśrama), what did the Lord, the father of (all) created beings, do next in Dwārakā ? (1) His (own) race having been wiped out through the curse of Brahmanas, how did Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the foremost of the Yadus) cast off His body, the most beloved of the eyes of all, from which ladies could not withdraw their eyes (once) riveted on it; which, having (once) entered the ears of the virtuous and (then) clung to their mind (through the passage of the ears), never departs from it; whose splendour (when glorified by poets) gives a delightful character to their speech and what goes without saying, brings honour to them, and looking on which, (when) seated in the car of (the all-victorious) Arjuna, warriors (who fell in battle) attained similarity to it ! (2-3)

ब्रह्मिणोवाच

दिवि भुव्यन्तरिक्षे च महोत्पातान् समुत्थितान् । दृष्ट्वाऽऽसीनान् सुधर्मायां कृष्णः प्राह यदुनिदम् । ४ ।

एते घोरा महोत्पाता द्वारक्यां यमकेतवः । मुहूर्तमपि न स्थेयमत्र नो यदुपुद्भवाः । ५ ।

स्त्रियो बालाश्च वृद्धाश्च शङ्खोद्भारं व्रजन्वितः । वयं प्रभासं यास्यामो यत्र प्रत्यक् सरस्वती । ६ ।

तत्रापिषिच्य शुचय उपोष्य सुसमाहिताः । देवताः पूजयिष्यामः स्नपनालेपनार्हणैः । ७ ।

ब्राह्मणांस्तु महाभागान् कृतस्वस्त्ययना वयम् । गोभूहिण्यवासोभिर्गजाश्चरथवेदमभिः । ८ ।

विधिरेष ह्यरिष्टो मङ्गलायनपुत्तमम् । देवद्विजगवां पूजा भूतेषु परमो भवः । ९ ।

The sage (Śrī Śuka) replied : Seeing evil portents of a grave nature manifest in the heavens and on earth as well as in the air, Śrī Kṛṣṇa spoke thus to the Yadus sitting (together) in (the assembly hall known by the name of) Sudharmā. (4) "These grave portents of a terrible nature appearing in Dwārakā are indications of a holocaust. We should not (therefore) stay here even for an hour, O leaders of the Yadus ! (5) Let the womenfolk, infants and aged men move from this place to (the sacred spot called) Śaṅkhoddhāra, while we shall proceed to Prabhāsa, where the river Sarasvatī flows towards the west (and joins the sea). (6) Having bathed in that river and (thus) purified, and remaining without food, we shall (all) worship the (images of) gods with a fully concentrated mind by bathing them, daubing them with sandal-paste and offering (other) articles of worship. (7) Having been blessed (by the Brahmanas) through the recitation of benedictory Mantras (sacred texts) and offering of flowers etc., we shall also honour the highly blessed Brāhmanas by gifting them cows, lands, gold and raiments as well as elephants, horses, chariots and dwellings. (8) That is the surest way of dispersing evil and the best means of securing happiness. Worship of gods, the Brāhmanas and cows brings supreme exaltation to men." (9)

इति सर्वं समाकर्ण्य यदुपुद्भवा मधुद्विषः । तथेति नौभिरुत्तोर्यं प्रभासं प्रययू रथैः । १० ।

तस्मिन् भगवताऽऽदिष्टं यदुदेवेन यादवाः । चक्रुः परमया भक्त्या सर्वश्रेयोपवृंहितम् । ११ ।

ततस्तस्मिन् महापानं पपुमैर्यकं मधु । दिष्टविभ्रंशितधियो यद्रवैर्भ्रश्यते मतिः । १२ ।
 महापानाभिमत्तानां वीराणां दृप्तचेतसाम् । कृष्णमायाविमूढानां सङ्घर्षः सुमहानभूत् । १३ ।
 युयुधुः क्रोधसंरब्धा वेलयामाततायिनः । धनुर्भरसिभिर्भल्लैर्गदाभिस्तोमरार्ष्टिभिः । १४ ।
 पतत्यताकै रथकुञ्जरादिभिः खरोष्ट्रगोभिर्महिषैर्नरैरपि ।
 मिथः समेत्याश्रतैः सुदुर्मदा न्यहज्जरैर्ददिरिव द्विषा वने । १५ ।
 प्रद्युम्नसाम्बौ युधि रूढमत्सरावक्रूरभोजावनिरूढसायकी ।
 सुभद्रसङ्ग्रामजितौ सुदारुणौ गदौ सुमित्रासुरथौ समीयतुः । १६ ।
 अन्ये च ये वै निशठोल्मुकादयः सहस्रजिह्वतजिह्वानुमुख्याः ।
 अन्योन्यामाद्य मदान्धकारिता जघ्नुर्मुकुन्देन विमोहिता भृशम् । १७ ।
 दाशार्हवृष्यन्धकभोजसात्वता मध्वर्बुदा माथुरशरसेनाः ।
 विसर्जनाः कुकुराः कुन्त्यश्च मिथस्ततस्तेऽथ विसृज्य सौहृदम् । १८ ।
 पुत्रा अयुधन् पितृभिर्भ्रातृभिश्च स्वस्वीयदौहित्रपितृव्यमातुलैः ।
 मित्राणि मित्रैः सुहृदः सुहृद्भिर्जातीस्त्वहन् ज्ञातय एव मूढाः । १९ ।
 शरेषु क्षीयमाणेषु भयंमानेषु धन्वसु । शस्त्रेषु क्षीयमाणेषु मुष्टिभिर्जह्नुरेरकाः । २० ।
 ता वक्रकल्पा ह्यभवन् परिघा मुष्टिना भृताः । जघ्नुर्द्विषस्तैः कृष्णेन वार्यमाणास्तु तं च ते । २१ ।
 प्रत्यनीकं मन्यमाना बलभद्रं च मोहिताः । हन्तुं कृतधियो राजन्नापन्ना आततायिनः । २२ ।
 अथ तावपि सङ्कुन्दावृष्टय्य कुरुनन्दन । एरकामुष्टिपरिघौ चरन्तौ जघ्नतुर्धुधि । २३ ।
 ब्रह्मशापोपसृष्टानां कृष्णमायावृतात्मनाम् । स्पर्धाक्रोधः क्षवं निन्ये वैणवोऽग्रियंशा वनम् । २४ ।
 एवं नष्टेषु सर्वेषु कुलेषु खेषु केशवः । अवतारितो भुवो भार इति मेनेऽवशेषितः । २५ ।

Attentively hearing this speech of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the enemy of the demon Madhu) and saying "Amen!", the elderly among the Yadus all proceeded to Prabhāsa in chariots after crossing the sea by means of barks. (10) There the scions of Yadu performed with supreme Devotion whatever was enjoined by the Lord alongwith all (other) means of ensuring prosperity. (11) Then, their judgment having been vitiated by (an evil) destiny, they drank there a highly intoxicating and delicious drink known by the name of Maireyaka, by the filtrates of which the intellect is perverted. (12) There ensued a very bitter clash between the heroes, who were (all) proud at heart and were hard drunk with the strong beverage and were (further) deluded by the enchanting potency of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (13) Inflamed with anger and equipped with arms they contended (with one another) on the seashore by means of bows, swords, spears, maces, bludgeons and lances. (14) Closing with one another in chariots and on elephants etc., as well as on (the back of) donkeys, camels, bulls, buffaloes and mules and men, bearing ensigns that fluttered in the breeze, the highly intoxicated warriors hit one another with arrows even as elephants in a forest would strike one another with their tusks. (15) Pradyumna closed on the battle-field with Sāmba, Akṛūra with Bhoja, Aniruddha with Satyaki, Subhadra with Saṅgrāmajit, Gada (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's brother) with Śrī Kṛṣṇa's son of the same name and Sumitra with Āsuraḥa. All the pairs looked very fierce, their rancour having grown very intense. (16) Blinded by intoxication and utterly infatuated by (the enchanting potency of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), others too, viz., Nisāṭha, Urukha and so on, the chief of whom were Sahasrajit, Śatajit and Bhānu, met and struck one another (at close quarters). (17) Casting (all) affection to the winds, then, the Dāsārhas, Vṛṣṇis, Andhakas, Bhojas and Satvatas, the Madhus and the Arbudas, the Māthuras and the Śūrasenas, the Visarjanas, the Kukuras and the Kuntis—these contended with one another. (18) Sons fought with their fathers and brothers with brothers; while maternal uncles, maternal grandfathers, nephews and sister's sons severally crossed their swords with their sister's sons, daughter's sons, uncles and maternal uncles. (Likewise) friends contended with friends, and relations with relations; while kinsmen killed kinsmen, deluded as they (all) were. (19) When (the stocks of) arrows began to be exhausted, bows began to be broken (when used as cudgels) and (the stocks of) weapons began to be depleted, they tore up with their clenched hands blades of Erakā* grass. (20) Held by the clenched hand they turned into (so many) clubs studded with iron, (which were) almost as hard as adamant. They (now) began to strike their enemies with them, and, being checked by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, they took Him as well as Balabhadra to be their adversary, deluded as they were. (Nay,) resolved to kill Them, the desperadoes came up (before Them), O king ! (21-22) Highly irritated, They too took up handfuls of Erakā grass, (presently) converted into clubs, O delight of the Kurus, and struck them (in return with those clubs) moving (from one place to another). (23) The fury, engendered by rivalry, of those warriors, who were possessed (as it were) by the curse of the Brāhmaṇas and whose judgment had been obscured by the deluding potency of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, brought about their destruction (even) as fire (produced by the friction) of bamboos would consume a (whole) forest. (24) All His own people as well as clans having thus perished, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva) concluded that the remaining burden of the earth was (also) removed. (25)

रामः समुद्रवेलायां योगमास्थाय पौरुषम् । तत्याज लोकं मानुष्यं संयोज्यात्मानमात्मनि । २६ ।

रामनिर्याणमालोक्य भगवान् देवकीसुतः । निषसाद धरोपस्थे तूष्णीमासाद्य पिप्लम् । २७ ।

बिभ्रक्षतुर्भुजं रूपं भ्राजिष्णु प्रभया स्वया । दिशो वितिमिराः कुर्वन् विधूम इव पावकः । २८ ।

श्रीवत्साङ्गं घनश्यामं तप्तहाटकवर्चसम् । कौशेयाम्बरयुग्मेन परिवीतं सुमङ्गलम् । २९ ।

सुन्दरस्मितवक्त्राब्जं नीलकुत्तलमण्डितम् । पुण्डरीकाभिरामाक्षं स्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलम् । ३० ।

कटिसूत्रब्रह्मसूत्रकिरीटकटाङ्गदैः । हारनूपुरमुद्राभिः कौस्तुभेन विराजितम् । ३१ ।

वनमालापरीताङ्गं पूर्तिमद्भिर्निजायुधैः । कृत्वोरो दक्षिणे पादमासीनं पङ्कजारुणम् । ३२ ।

Resorting at the seashore to Yoga in the form of concentration of mind on the Supreme Person, i.e., (in other words) identifying his self with the (Supreme) Spirit Balarāma cast off the human semblance. (26) Perceiving the ascent of Balarāma (to His own realm Pātāla), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Son of Devakī) went up to a peepul (the sacred fig tree) and sat down quietly on the ground (resting His back against its trunk). (27) He revealed His resplendent four-armed form and, like a smokeless fire, dispelled by His own effulgence the gloom of (all) the quarters. (28) It bore the mark of Śrīvatsa (a curl of white hair on the breast), was dark-brown (of hue) like a (rainy) cloud, was wrapped in a pair of silk pieces and (thereby) shone like burnished gold and was most auspicious (to look at). (29) It had a lotus-like countenance with a lovely smile playing on it, was graced with dark hair, had a pair of delightful lotus-like eyes and was adorned with a shining pair of alligator-shaped ear-rings. (30) It was decked with a girdle, the sacred thread, a diadem, a pair of bracelets and armlets as well as with a pearl necklace, a pair of anklets and rings and the Kaustubha gem. (31) Its limbs were encircled by a garland of sylvan flowers; (nay,) It was waited upon by His own weapons (discus, mace and the Śārṅga bow etc.), in a living form and was seated placing the left-foot, (with its sole) ruddy as a lotus, on the right thigh. (32)

* It will be remembered that when the steel pestle generated by the curse of Brāhmaṇas had been crushed into powder and cast into the sea, the particles of the powder were borne by the waves to and deposited on the shore, where they grew into a grass named Erakā (vide verses 21 and 22 of Discourse I above)

मुसलावशेषायः खण्डकृतैर्बुलुब्धको जरा । मृगास्याकारं तच्छरणं विव्याध मृगशङ्कया । ३३ ।
 चतुर्भुजं तं पुरुषं दृष्ट्वा स कृतकिल्बिषः । भीतः पपात शिरसा पादयोरसुरद्विषः । ३४ ।
 अजानता कृतमिदं पापेन मधुसूदन । क्षन्तुमर्हसि पापस्य उत्तमश्लोक मेऽनघ । ३५ ।
 यस्यानुस्मरणं नृणामज्ञानध्वान्तनाशनम् । वदन्ति तस्य ते विष्णो मयासाधु कृतं प्रभो । ३६ ।
 तन्माऽऽशु जहि वैकुण्ठ पाप्मानं मृगलुब्धकम् । यथा पुनरहं त्वेवं न कुर्यां सदतिक्रमम् । ३७ ।
 यस्यात्मयोगरचितं न विदुर्विरिञ्चो रुद्रादयोऽस्य तनयाः पतयो गिरां ये ।
 त्वन्मायया पिहितदृष्टय एतदङ्गः किं तस्य ते वयमसद्गतयो गृणीमः । ३८ ।

Jarā, a hunter, who had forged (the head of) his arrow out of the iron piece that had been left after pulverizing the (steel) pestle (generated by the execration of Brāhmaṇas), pierced (as it were) His (aforesaid) foot, that resembled in shape the mouth of a deer, suspecting Him to be an antelope. (33) Discovering (his quarry to be an other than) a four-armed personage, the hunter, who was frightened on account of his having committed an offence (against the Lord), fell (prostrate) at the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a sworn enemy of the demons) touching them with his head. (34) (He submitted:) "Be pleased, O Slayer of the demon Madhu, to forgive this transgression of mine, sinful as I am, O Sinless One, in that it has been perpetuated by this sinner unwittingly, O Lord of excellent renown ! (35) Offence has been done by me to You, O Lord Viṣṇu, whose remembrance, they say, is capable of dispersing the darkness of men's ignorance. (36) Therefore, speedily kill me, a sinful hunter of (innocent) deer, O Lord of Vaikuṇṭha, lest I should commit offence against noble souls any more as I have done (this time). (37) How can we of impious birth make any observation directly about this gesture (in the shape of the wholesale destruction of Yadu's race) of Gours as Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the work of whose handmaid (Māyā) even Brahmā (the creator), his sons, Rudra and others, and the seers of Veda whose vision has been obscured by Your Māyā, are unable to know. (38)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मा भैरि त्वमनिष्ट काम एष कृतो हि मे । याहि त्वं मदनुज्ञातः स्वर्गं सुकृतिनां पदम् । ३९ ।

The glorious Lord said : Don't you be afraid, O Jarā, get up; indeed this part (of making Me the target of your arrow) has been played by you as desired by Me. Ascend you as permitted by Me to heaven, the abode of the virtuous. (39)

इत्यादिष्टो भगवता कृष्णेनेच्छाशरीरिणा । त्रिः परिक्रम्य तं नत्वा विमानेन दिवं ययौ । ४० ।
 दारुकः कृष्णपदवीमन्विच्छत्रधिगम्य ताम् । वायुं तुलसिकामोदमाघ्रायाभिमुखं ययौ । ४१ ।
 तं तत्र तिग्मद्युभिरायुधैर्वृतं ह्यश्वत्थमूले कृतकेतनं पतिम् ।
 स्नेहप्लुतात्मा निपपात पादयो रथादवप्लुत्य सबाष्पलोचनः । ४२ ।
 अपश्यतस्त्वच्छरणाम्बुजं प्रभो दृष्टिः प्रनष्टा तमसि प्रविष्टा ।
 दिशो न जाने न लभे च शान्तिं यथा निशायामुडुपे प्रनष्टे । ४३ ।
 इति ब्रुवति सूते वै रथो गरुडलाञ्छनः । खमूलुपपात राजेन्द्र साश्वध्वज उदीक्षतः । ४४ ।
 तमन्वगच्छन् दिव्यानि विष्णुप्रहरणानि च । तेनातिविस्मितात्मानं सूतमाह जनार्दनः । ४५ ।
 गच्छ द्वारवतीं सूत ज्ञातीनां निधनं मिथः । सङ्कर्षणस्य निर्याणं बन्धुभ्यो ब्रूहि महशाम् । ४६ ।
 द्वारकायां च न स्थेयं भवद्भिश्च स्वबन्धुभिः । मया त्यक्ता यदुपुरी समुद्रः प्लावयिष्यति । ४७ ।
 स्वं स्वं परिग्रहं सर्वे आदाय पितरौ च नः । अजुनेनाविताः सर्वे इन्द्रप्रस्थं गमिष्यथ । ४८ ।
 त्वं तु मद्धर्ममास्थाय ज्ञाननिष्ठ उपेक्षकः । मन्मायारचनानेतां विज्ञायोपशमं व्रज । ४९ ।

इत्युक्तं परिक्रम्य नमस्कृत्य पुनः पुनः । तत्पादौ शीघ्रयुगाधाय दुर्मनाः प्रययौ पुरीम् । ५० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवतं महापुराणं पारमहंस्यां महिनायामकादशस्कन्धे त्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३० ।

Commanded thus by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who takes a form at will, the hunter thrice walked round Him clockwise (so as to keep Him ever to his right and thus ensure His benignity) and, bowing to Him, ascended to heaven in an aerial car (brought by His attendants to take him). (40) Hunting up and tracking out the whereabouts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa by inhaling the breeze charged with the fragrance of Tulasī, Dārūka (the Lord's own charioteer) sought His presence. (41) Seeing his Master actually seated there at the base of an Aśwattha (the sacred fig tree) and surrounded by weapons (appearing in a living form) possessing a dazzling brilliance, the charioteer jumped down from (his box in) the chariot and fell prostrate at His feet, with eyes full of tears, his mind overwhelmed with affection. (42) (He said,) "O Lord, my vision has completely gone and stands enveloped in darkness (opacity) ever since I have ceased to behold Your lotus-feet. (Even now) I fail to recognize the (four) quarters and find no peace (of mind) any more than a traveller on the moon having set at night." (43) While the charioteer was speaking thus, the (Lord's) chariot, which was distinguished by the emblem of Garuḍa (on its banner), rose to the sky, horses, banner and all, O king of kings, while Dārūka stood looking up. (44) The transcendent weapons of Lord Viṣṇu (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) too followed the chariot, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is solicited by all men) said to the charioteer, who felt much astonished at heart at the aforesaid occurrence:—(45) "Proceed, O charioteer, to Dwārakā and communicate to My kinsfolk (there) the destruction of their relations at the hands of one another, (nay,) the departure (for His own divine realm) of Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarāma) as well as My own predicament. (46) (Tell them on My behalf:) "You should no longer stay at Dwārakā with your relations inasmuch as the sea will submerge the capital of the Yadus (now that it has been) forsaken by Me. (47) Taking (with you) each your own family and possessions as well as Our parents (Devaki and Vasudeva) and guarded by Arjuna, you should all leave for Indraprastha without exception." (48) As for yourself, follow the course of conduct (the path of Devotion) which is dear to Me, get established in the knowledge of your being one with Brahma, cultivate an attitude of nonchalance (towards the world) and, realizing this (visible) universe to be a creation of My Māyā (enchanting potency), acquire calmness (of mind)." (49) Instructed thus (by the Lord), Dārūka went round the Lord (clockwise so as to keep Him always to his right), bowed to Him again and again and, placing His feet on his head (and then removing them) proceeded to Dwārakā, sad at heart. (50)

Thus ends the thirtieth discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकत्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXI

The Lord's Ascent to His Divine Realm

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ तत्रामदं ब्रह्मा भवान्या च समं भवः । महेन्द्रप्रमुखा देवा मुनयः सप्रजेश्वराः । १ ।
पितरः सिद्धगन्धर्वा विद्याधरमहोरगाः । चारणाः यक्षरक्षांसि किन्नराप्सरसो द्विजाः । २ ।
द्रष्टुकामा भगवतो निर्याणं परमोत्सुकाः । गायन्तश्च गृणन्तश्च शौरेः कर्माणि जन्म च । ३ ।

वपुः पुष्पवर्षाणि विमानावलिभिर्नभः । कुर्वन्तः सङ्कुलं राजन् भक्त्या परमया युताः । ४ ।
 भगवान् पितामहं वीक्ष्य विभूतीरात्मनो विभुः । संयोज्यात्मनि चात्मानं पद्मनेत्रे न्यमीलयत् । ५ ।
 लोकाभिरामां स्वतनुं धारणाध्यानमङ्गलम् । योगधारणयाऽऽग्नेय्यादध्वा धामाविशत् स्वकम् । ६ ।
 दिवि दुन्दुभयो नेदुः पेतुः सुमनसश्च खात् । सत्यं धर्मो धृतिर्भूमेः कीर्तिः श्रीशानु तं ययुः । ७ ।
 देवादयो ब्रह्मपुत्रा न विशन्तं स्वधामनि । अविज्ञातगतिं कृष्णं ददृशुश्चातिविस्मिताः । ८ ।
 सौदामन्या यथाऽऽकाशे यान्त्या हित्वाभ्रमण्डलम् । गतिर्न लक्ष्यते मर्त्येस्तथा कृष्णस्य दैवतैः । ९ ।
 ब्रह्मरुद्रादयस्ते तु दृष्ट्वा योगगतिं हरेः । विस्मितास्तां प्रशंसन्तः स्वं स्वं लोकं ययुस्तदा । १० ।

Śrī Śuka began again: Now (after the departure of Dārūka) there appeared on the scene Brahmā (the creator) as well as Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) alongwith His (divine) Spouse (Goddess Pārvatī), (other) gods led by the great Indra (the ruler of the gods), sages accompanied by the lords of creation, manes, Siddhas and Gandharvas, Vidyādhara and great Nāgas, Cāraṇas, Yakṣas and Rākṣasas, Kinnaras and Apsaras with their rows of aerial cars, O Parikṣit! (4) Casting His glance on Brahmā (the grandfather or forbear of the entire creation, the sages Marici and others being its fathers) as well as on the (other) gods (His own glorious manifestations) and fixing His mind on His own (divine) essence, the all-pervading Lord closed His lotus-eyes. (5) Not consuming, through concentration of mind on the element of fire, His own (divine) body, which sustains the (entire) universe and is the all-blissful object of meditation and concentration, He (bodily) ascended to His own (divine) realm. (6) Kettledrums sounded in heaven and flowers rained from the sky. Truth, piety, fortitude, glory and prosperity departed from the earth alongwith Him. (7) Gods and others, Brahmā being the foremost of them, did not behold Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose ways are unknown (to all), entering His own (divine) realm; while some of them (who were more fortunate than the rest) did perceive Him and felt much astonished. (8) The movements of Śrī Kṛṣṇa cannot be perceived by the gods any more than those of lightning disappearing into the sky leaving a mass of clouds. (9) Amazed to witness the aforesaid disappearance of Śrī Hari by dint of His (wonderful) Yogic power, and extolling it, the said gods, Brahmā, Śiva and others, for their part, presently withdrew each to his own realm. (10)

राजन् परस्य तनुभूजननाप्ययेहा मायाविडम्बनमवेहि यथा नटस्य ।
 सृष्ट्वाऽऽत्मनेदमनुविश्य विहृत्य चान्ते संहृत्य चात्ममहिमोपरतः स आस्ते । ११ ।
 मर्त्येन यो गुरुमुतं यमलोकनीतं त्वां चानयच्छरणतः परमाश्रयधम् ।
 जिग्येऽन्तकान्तकमपीशमसावनीशः किं स्वावने स्वरनयन्मृगयुं सदेहम् । १२ ।
 तथाप्यशेषस्थितिसम्बन्धायैष्वन्यहेतुर्वदशेषशक्तिधृक् ।
 नैच्छत् प्रणेतुं वपुश्च शेषितं मर्त्येन किं स्वस्थगतिं प्रदर्शयन् । १३ ।

य एतां प्रातरुत्थाय कृष्णस्य पदवीं पराम् । प्रयतः कीर्तयेद् भक्त्या तामेवाप्रोत्यनुत्तमाम् । १४ ।

Know the advent, sports and disappearance of the Supreme Lord among embodied (human) beings, O King, to be a (mere) acting by dint of His Māyā (deluding potency) as that of a dramatic performer. Having created this universe by Himself (unaided by others and with no material other than His own volition) and then entered it (as its Inner Controller), sported (in it) and withdrawn it (into Himself) at the end (at the time of final dissolution) and retired [565] B.M. Part II—50

(from all activity). He remains established in His own glory. (11) Could He have been incapable of protecting Himself (preserving intact His own divine Personality)—He, who brought back in his mortal frame the son of His (own) teacher (Sāṅdipani), that had been taken to the realm of Death, and revived you (O Parikṣit), that had been burnt to death (within your mother's womb) by the supreme missile (presided over by Brahmā and discharged by Aśwatthāmā, the son of Droṇācārya), and (thereby) gave relief (to your mother, who had sought refuge with Him), (nay,) who conquered even Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of Death himself), and bodily transferred to heaven the hunter (Jarā by name, that had struck the Lord with a shaft in the sole of His foot) ?* (12) Though being the independent Cause of the evolution, continuance and destruction of the whole universe, wielding as He does all powers, the Lord did not, however, choose to retain His body here (on earth) demonstrating thereby (to the world) the sublimity of the ways of those established in the Self and showing their unconcernedness about the mortal body. (13) He who, rising (from his bed) in the morning, sings, with devotion and full of self-control, the story of the aforesaid transcendent voyage of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (to His own divine realm) will attain to the same highest destiny. (14)

दारुको द्वारकामेव वसुदेवोऽग्रसेनयोः । पतित्वा चरणावस्त्रैर्न्यषिञ्चत् कृष्णविच्युतः । १९ ।
 कथयामास निधनं वृष्णीनां कृत्स्नशो नृप । तच्छ्रुत्वोद्विग्नहृदया जनाः शोकविमूर्च्छिताः । १९ ।
 तत्र स्म त्वरिता जग्मुः कृष्णविश्लेषविह्वलाः । व्यसवः शेरते यत्र ज्ञातव्यो घ्नन् आननम् । १७ ।
 देवकी रोहिणी चैव वसुदेवस्तथा सुतौ । कृष्णरामावपश्यन्तः शोकार्ता विजहूः स्मृतिम् । १८ ।
 प्राणांश्च विजहूस्तत्र भगवद्दिह्रातुराः । उपगुह्य पतींस्तात चित्तामारुहूः स्त्रियः । १९ ।
 रामपत्न्यश्च तद्देहमुपगृह्णाग्रिमाविशन् । वसुदेवपत्न्यस्तद्वात्र प्रद्युम्नादीन् हरेः स्नुषाः ।
 कृष्णपत्न्योऽविशत्राग्निं रुक्मिण्याद्यास्तदात्मिकाः । २० ।

Returning to Dwārakā and falling at the feet of Vasudeva and Ugrasena (the king of Dwārakā), Dāruka (the charioteer of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa), (now) bereft of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, bathed their feet with (his) tears. (15) He narrated the story of the wholesale destruction of the Vṛṣṇis, O Parikṣit. Grieved at heart to hear of it, the people (of Dwārakā) fainted with grief. (16) Upset at (the news of) their separation from Śrī Kṛṣṇa, they hastened, beating their heads (all the way), to the spot where their kinsmen had been lying (dead). (17) Stricken with grief not to perceive their Sons, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, Devaki (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's mother) and Rohiṇi (Balarāma's mother) as well as (Their father) Vasudeva lost their consciousness. (18) Nay, afflicted at their separation from the Lord, they gave up the ghost on that (very) spot. The womenfolk ascended the funeral pile and, hugging each her own husband, entered the fire. (19) The wives of Balarāma entered the fire, embracing the (dead) body of Balarāma; the wives of Vasudeva followed suit, hugging the latter's body, and the daughters-in-law of Śrī Kṛṣṇa did the same, clasping to their bosom Pradyumna and others (the sons of the Lord). Similarly Rukmiṇi and others, the Spouses of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, entered the fire with their mind fixed on the latter. (20)

अर्जुनः प्रेयसः सख्युः कृष्णस्य विरहातुरः । आत्मानं सान्त्वयामास कृष्णगीतैः सदुक्तिभिः । २१ ।
 बन्धूनां नष्टगोत्राणामर्जुनः साम्प्रयायिकम् । हतानां कारयामास यथावदनुपूर्वशः । २२ ।
 द्वारकां हरिणा त्यक्तां समुद्रोद्ग्लवयत् क्षणात् । वर्जयित्वा महाराज श्रीमद्भगवदालयम् । २३ ।
 नित्यं सन्निहितस्तत्र भगवान् मधुसूदनः । स्मृत्याशेषाशुभहरं सर्वमङ्गलमङ्गलम् । २४ ।

स्त्रीबालवृद्धानादाय हतशोषान् धनञ्जयः । इन्द्रप्रस्थं समावेश्य वज्रं तत्राभ्येषेचयत् । १५ ।
 श्रुत्वा सुहृद्वधं राजत्रर्जुनाते पितामहाः । त्वां तु वंशधरं कृत्वा जग्मुः सर्वे महापथम् । १६ ।
 य एतद् देवदेवस्य विष्णोः कर्माणि जन्म च । कीर्तयेच्छृद्धया मर्त्यः सर्वपापैः प्रमुच्यते । १७ ।
 इत्थं हरेर्भगवतो रुचिरावतारवीर्याणि बालचरितानि च शन्तमानि ।
 अन्यत्र चेह च श्रुतानि गूणान् मनुष्यो भक्तिं परां परमहंसगतौ लभेत । १८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशाहस्योऽध्याये पारमहंस्योऽसंहितायामेकादशस्कन्धे एकविंशोऽध्यायः । ३१ ।

—:~::~:—

इत्येकादशः स्कन्धः सम्पूर्णः

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

Distressed at his separation from Śrī Kṛṣṇa, his beloved friend, Arjuna comforted himself with the utterances of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (contained in the Bhagavadgītā), full of veracious statements. (21) Arjuna (then) duly caused to be performed in order of seniority (by competent priests) funeral rites for the welfare in the other world of (those of) his kinsmen that had been slain (on the battle-field) and whose progeny (too) had perished (in the war). (22) The ocean drowned in an instant (the city of) Dwārakā, forsaken (as it was) by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, barring, O great king, the palace of the Lord, which wipes out all evils (in the forms of sins and calamities) and is the most auspicious of all auspicious things in that Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Slayer of the demon Madhu) is ever (bodily) present there. (23-24) Taking (with him) to Indraprastha (the former capital of the Pāṇḍavas) the womenfolk, infants and aged men that had survived* the slain, and having settled them, Arjuna crowned as king Vajra (the surviving son of Aniruddha) there. (25) Hearing from (the mouth of) Arjuna of the destruction of their kinsfolk (the Yadus), O king, your grandfathers (the Pāṇḍavas) all proceeded (in a body) to the Himālaya mountain (on their voyage to the other world), appointing you of course as their successor (on the throne of Hastināpura). (26) The man who celebrates with reverence the aforesaid advent and exploits of Lord Viṣṇu, the adored of the gods (themselves), is completely absolved from all sins. (27) A man recounting as aforesaid the most auspicious infantile and other sports, full of delightful divine feats, of the almighty Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Dispeller of the agony of His devotees), heard of here (in Śrīmad Bhāgavata) as well as in the other scriptures, bids far to attain supreme devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the goal of ascetics of the highest order. (28)

Thus ends the thirty-first discourse in Book Eleven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā, composed by Bhagavān Vedavyāsa and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.

END OF BOOK ELEVEN

* The survivors must have presumably been other than the Yadus, inasmuch as the curse of the Rṣis embraced the entire race of Yadu—women, children and the aged not excepted; for it is stated elsewhere that Vajra was the only exception that had escaped destruction.

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

द्वादशः स्कन्धः

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa

Book Twelve

Discourse I

Lines of kings of Kaliyuga

राजोवाच

स्वधामानुगते कृष्णे यदुवंशविभूषणे । कस्य वंशोऽभवत् पृथ्व्यामेतदाचक्ष्व मे मुने । १ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted: When Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Jewel of Yadu's line, had left for His own realm in Heaven, whose dynasty ruled over the earth ? (Pray) tell me this, O (revered) sage ! (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

योऽन्त्यः पुरञ्जयो नाम भाव्यो बार्हद्रथो नृप । तस्यामात्यस्तु शुनको हत्वा स्वामिनमात्मजम् । २ ।

प्रद्योतसंज्ञं राजानं कर्ता यत् पालकः सुतः । विशाखयूपस्तत्पुत्रो भविता राजकस्ततः । ३ ।

नन्दिवर्धनस्तत्पुत्रः पञ्च प्रद्योतना इमे । अष्टत्रिंशोत्तरशतं भोक्ष्यन्ति पृथिवीं नृपाः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka replied: O Parīkṣit ! Purāṇjaya, who has been spoken of as the last-named (king) in the line of Bṛhadratha*, is yet to come. His minister Śunaka, for his part, will assassinate his master and instal as king his own son, named Pradyota, whose son will be (called) Pālaka. His son will be (known by the name of) Viśakhyūpa and from him will follow Rājaka. (2-3) His son will be (called) Nandivardhana. These five kings, (collectively known as) the Pradyotanas, will rule over the earth for a hundred and thirty-eight years. (4)

शिशुनागस्ततो भाव्यः काकवर्णस्तु तत्सुतः । क्षेमधर्मा तस्य सुतः क्षेत्रज्ञः क्षेमधर्मजः । ५ ।

विधिसारः सुतस्तस्याजातशत्रुर्भविष्यति । दर्भकस्तत्सुतो भावी दर्भकस्याजयः स्मृतः । ६ ।

नन्दिवर्धन आज्ञेयो महानन्दिः सुतस्ततः । शिशुनागा दर्शवैते षष्ठ्युत्तरशतत्रयम् । ७ ।

समा भोक्ष्यन्ति पृथिवीं कुरुश्रेष्ठ कलौ नृपाः । महानन्दिस्ततो राजन् शूद्रीगर्भोद्भवो बली । ८ ।

* Vide IX. xxii. 49, where Purāṇjaya has been referred to under the name of Ripuṇjaya

महापदपतिः कश्चिन्नदः क्षत्रविनाशकृत् । ततो नृपा भविष्यन्ति शुद्रप्रायास्त्वधार्मिकाः । १ ।

Siśunāga will come next and his son will be Kākavarṇa. The latter's son will be Kṣemadharmā and Ksetrajña will be the son of Kṣemadharmā. (5) His son will be Vidhisāra and Vidhisāra's son will be Ajātaśatru. Darbhaka will be his son and Darbhaka's son has been named as Ajāya. (6) Nandivardhana will be the son of Ajāya and Mahānandi will be the son sprung from the loins of Nandivardhana. These ten kings, (collectively known as) the Siśunāgas, alone will rule over the earth for three hundred and sixty years during the age of Kali, O jewel among the Kurus ! Mahānandi's mighty son, who will be born of Śūdra woman, O king, will be a certain Nanda, who will own a huge army or untold riches and will bring about the ruin of the Kṣatriya race, Thenceforward the rulers of men will be mostly Śūdras and unrighteous. (7—9)

स एकच्छत्रां पृथिवीमनुलङ्घितशासनः । शासिष्यति महापदो द्वितीय इव भार्गवः । १० ।

तस्य चाष्टौ भविष्यन्ति सुमाल्यप्रमुखाः सुताः । य इमां भोक्ष्यन्ति महीं राजानः स शतं समाः । ११ ।

नव नन्दान् द्विजः कश्चित् प्रपन्नानुद्धरिष्यति । तेषामभावे जगतीं मौर्या भोक्ष्यन्ति वै कलौ । १२ ।

स एव चन्द्रगुप्तं वै द्विजो राज्येऽभिषेक्ष्यति । तत्सुतो वारिसारस्तु ततश्चाशोकवर्धनः । १३ ।

सुयशः भविता तस्य सङ्गतः सुयशः सुतः । शालिशूकस्ततस्तस्य सोमशर्मा भविष्यति । १४ ।

शतधन्वा ततस्तस्य भविता तद् बृहद्रथः । मौर्या होते दश नृपाः सप्तत्रिंशच्छतोत्तरम् ।

समा भोक्ष्यन्ति पृथिवीं कलौ कुस्कुलोद्भव । १५ ।

हत्वा बृहद्रथं मौर्यं तस्य सेनापतिः कलौ । पुष्यमित्रस्तु शुद्धाह्वः स्वयं राज्यं करिष्यति ।

अग्निमित्रस्ततस्तस्मात् सुयुष्टोऽथ भविष्यति । १६ ।

वसुमित्रो भद्रकश्च पुलिन्दो भविता ततः । ततो घोषः सुतस्तस्माद् वज्रमित्रो भविष्यति । १७ ।

ततो भागवतस्तस्माद् देवभूतिरिति श्रुतः । शुद्धा दशैते भोक्ष्यन्ति भूमिं वर्षशताधिकम् । १८ ।

Like another Paraśurāma (a scion of the sage Bṛghu) the said Mahāpadma will bring the (entire) globe under one sceptre and nobody will (dare) violate his commands. Eight sons with Sumālya as the eldest will be born to him; they will rule over this globe as kings for a hundred years (all told): so the tradition goes. (10-11) A certain Brāhmaṇa (Cāṇakya or Kauṭālya by name and also nicknamed as Vātsyāyana) will uproot (all) the nine Nandas (Mahāpadma and his eight sons) who will be by heomercy. On their destruction it is the Mauryas that will rule the earth during the Kali age. (12) That very Brāhmaṇa will instal Candragupta on the throne. His son indeed will be Vārisāra and Aśokavardhana will be born to the latter. (13) His son will be Suyāśa (14) Śatadhanvā will be born to Somaśarmā and to him, Bṛhadratha. Indeed, these ten* Maurya kings will hold sway over the earth for a hundred and thirty-seven years in the Kali age, O jewel of Kuru's line ! (15) Assassinating Bṛhadratha, the Maurya his generallissimo, Puṣyamitra, bearing the surname of Śunga, will assume the reins of government himself.† Agnimitra will be born to Puṣyamitra and to him again, will be born Sujyeṣṭha. (16) His son will be Vasumitra and Vasumitra's Bhadraka; to him will be born Pulinda. Ghoṣa will be born as a son to Pulinda and from Ghoṣa will follow Vajramitra. (17) To him will be born Bhagavata and to Bhāgavata, a son known by the name of Devabhūti.

* The number of Maurya kings, including Emperors Candragupta, is ten only. The list given in the Viṣṇu and other Purānas includes the name of Śatadhanva as the fifth in order from Candragupta. His name should therefore be taken as included in the list in order to complete the number ten.

† The first two lines of verse 16 have not been recognized by Śridhara and some other commentators too.

These ten Śūṅgas will rule the earth for more than a century. (18)

ततः कण्वानियं भूमिस्यत्यल्पगुणान् नृपः। शुङ्गं हत्वा देवभूतिं कण्वोऽप्यायस्तु कामिनम् । १९।

स्वयं करिष्यते राज्यं वसुदेवो महामतिः। तस्य पुत्रस्तु भूमित्रस्तस्य नारायणः सुतः।

नारायणस्य भविता सुशर्मा नाम विश्रुतः । २०।

काण्वायना इमे भूमिं चत्वारिंशच्च पञ्च च। शतानि त्रीणि भोक्ष्यन्ति वर्षाणां च कलौ युगे । २१।

हत्वा काण्वं सुरार्माणं तद्भृत्यो वृषलो बली। गां भोक्ष्यन्त्यन्धजातीयः कञ्चित् कालमसत्तमः । २२।

कृष्णनामाथ तद्भ्राता भविता पृथिवीपतिः। श्रीशान्तकर्णस्तत्पुत्रः पौर्णमासस्तु तत्सुतः । २३।

लम्बोदरस्तु तत्पुत्रस्तस्माच्चिबिलको नृपः। मेघस्वातिश्चिबिलकादटमनस्तु तस्य च । २४।

अनिष्टकर्मा ह्यालेयस्तलकस्तस्य चात्मजः। पुरीषभीरुस्तत्पुत्रस्ततो राजा सुनन्दनः । २५।

चकोरो बहवो यत्र शिवस्वातिरिन्दमः। तस्यापि गोमतीपुत्रः पुरीमान् भविता ततः । २६।

मेदःशिराः शिवस्कन्दो यज्ञश्रीस्तत्सुतस्ततः। विजयस्तत्सुतो भाव्यश्चन्द्रविज्ञः सलोमधिः । २७।

एते त्रिंशन्नृपतयश्चत्वार्यब्दशतानि च। षट्पञ्चाशच्च पृथिवीं भोक्ष्यन्ति कुरुनन्दन । २८।

Then this earth will pass on to the Kaṇva Kings, though they will be possessed of poor merit, O protector of men ! Having assassinated the lewd Devabhūti of the Śūṅga clan, his very clever minister, Vasudeva of the Kaṇva dynasty, will, as a matter of fact, assume the reins of government himself. Again, Bhūmītra will be his son and Bhūmītra's son will be Nārayaṇa. (And) Nārayaṇa's son will be widely known by the name of Suśarma. (19-20) These kings of Kaṇva's race will rule the earth for three hundred and forty-five years in the Kali age. (21) Assassinating Suśarmā of Kaṇva's line, his (own) servant, Bali, a vile Śūdra of the Andhra race will hold away on the earth for some time. (22) His (own) brother, Kṛṣṇa by name, will succeed him as the ruler of the earth. His son will be Śrī Śāntakarma and the latter's son, Paurṇamāsa. (23) His son will be Lambodara and Cibilaka will succeed him as king. Meghaswati will succeed Cibilaka and Meghaswātī's son will be Aṭamāna. (24) Anīṣṭakarmā and Hāleya will come next and Hāleya's son will be Talaka. His son will be Purīṣabhiru and Sunandana will succeed him as king. (25) Cakora will come next and then (by turn) his (eight) sons, (collectively) known as the Bahus, the last of whom will be Śivaswātī, a chastiser of his foes. His son, again, will be Gomatiputra and Purīman will come next. (26) Medaśśīra and Śivaskanda will come next and Śivaskanda's son will be Yajñaśrī. Vijaya will follow Yajñaśrī and his sons will be Candravijña and Lomadhi. (27) These thirty princes will (successively) rule over the earth for four hundred and fifty-six years. O delight of the Kurus ! (28)

सप्ताभीरा आवभृत्या दश गर्दभिर्नो नृपाः। कङ्काः षोडश भूपाला भवित्यन्यतिलोपुः । २९।

ततोऽष्टौ यवना भाव्याश्चतुर्दश तुरुष्काः। भृत्यो दश गुरुण्डाश्च मौना एकादशैव तु । ३०।

एते भोक्ष्यन्ति पृथिवीं दशवर्षशतानि च। नवाधिकां च नवति मौना एकादश क्षितिम् । ३१।

भोक्ष्यन्त्यब्दशतान्यङ्ग त्रीणि तैः संस्थिते ततः। कलिकलायां नृपतयो भूतनन्दोऽथ वङ्गिरः । ३२।

शिशुनन्दिश्च तद्भ्राता यशोनन्दिः प्रवीरकः। इत्येते वै वर्षशतं भवित्यन्यधिकानि षट् । ३३।

तेषां त्रयोदश सुता भवितारश्च बाह्लिकाः। पुष्पमित्रोऽथ राजन्यो दुर्मित्रोऽस्य तथैव च । ३४।

एककाला इमे भूपाः सप्ताभ्याः सप्त कोसलाः। विदूरपतयो भाव्या निषधास्त एव हि । ३५।

Seven Abhira princes having their capital at Avabhrti, ten Gardabhis and sixteen of the Kaṅka dynasty, (all) most rapacious, will hold sway (one after another) as kings. (29) Then will follow eight Yavanas, fourteen Turuskakas; again, ten Gurundas and then Maunas numbering eleven only. (30) These (Thirty-two) kings (excluding the Maunas) will rule over the earth for one thousand and ninety-nine years, while the eleven Maunas will hold sway over the earth for (another) three hundred years, O dear Parikṣit ! When they cease to be, Bhūtananda and (his son) Vaṅgiri, the latter's (younger) brother, Śiśunandi, (his son) Yaśonandi and (grandson) Praviraka—(all) these will actually reign at (their capital) Kīlikīla for a hundred and six years only. (31—33) They will leave thirteen sons, (collectively) known as the Bāhlikas. Again, there will be Puṣpamitra, a Kṣatriya, and even so his son Durmitra. (34) (All) these will hold sway (over different territories) at one and the same time. Seven (of these) will be kings of Andhra and seven of Kosala. The rulers of Vidūra and Niṣadha indeed will also come out of these (the Bāhlikas). (35)

मागधानां तु भविता विश्वस्फूर्जिः पुरञ्जयः । किरिष्यत्यपरो वर्णान् पुलिन्दयदुमद्रकान् । ३६ ।

प्रजाशास्त्रह्यभूयिष्ठाः स्थापयिष्यति दुर्मतिः । वीर्यवान् क्षत्रमुत्साह पद्मवत्यां स वै पुरि ।

अनुगङ्गामाप्रयागं गुप्तां भोक्ष्यति मेदिनीम् । ३७ ।

सौराष्ट्रावल्याभीराश्च शूरा अर्बुदमालवाः । ब्रात्या द्विजा भविष्यन्ति शूद्रप्राया जनाधिपाः । ३८ ।

सिन्धोस्तदं चन्द्रभागां कौर्त्ती काश्मीरमण्डलम् । भोक्ष्यन्ति शूद्रा ब्रात्याद्या म्लेच्छाश्चाब्रह्मवर्चसः । ३९ ।

Among the rulers of Magadha there will be one Viśvasphūṛji, (also) known as Purañjaya the second, who will convert the higher castes into Pulindas, Yadus and Madrakas (tribes that will be no better than Mlecchas). (36) Being evil-minded and powerful, he will exterminate the Kṣatriya race and settle in the city of Padmavati (his capital) a population consisting mostly of casteless people, ruling over the well-guarded tract of land extending along the banks of the Gaṅgā up to Prayāga (from Haridwāra). (37) (As Kaliyuga advances) the Brāhmaṇas of Saurāṣṭra, Avantī, the Abhira territory and (the principalities of Śūra, Arbuda and Mālawa will become Vratyas or fallen men (because of their giving up the Saṁskāras or purificatory rites, especially the ceremony of investiture with the sacred thread), and the rulers will be mostly of the Śūdra class. (38) Śūdras, fallen Brāhmaṇas and members of other higher castes who have given up the Vedic courses of conduct and Mlecchas will rule over the banks of the Indus and Chandrabhāgā, rivers the city of Kauntī and the territory of Kāśmīra. (39)

तुल्यकाला इमे राजन् म्लेच्छप्रायाश्च भूभुतः । एतेऽधर्मान्तपराः फल्गुदास्तीव्रमन्यवः । ४० ।

स्त्रीबालगोद्विजघ्नाश्च परदारधनादुताः । उदितस्तमितप्राया अल्पसत्त्वाल्पकायुषः । ४१ ।

असंस्कृताः क्रियाहीना रजसा तमसाऽऽवृताः । प्रजास्ते भक्षयिष्यन्ति म्लेच्छा राजन्यरूपिणः । ४२ ।

तन्नाथास्ते जनपदास्तच्छीलाचारवादिनः । अन्योन्यतो राजभिश्च क्षयं यास्यन्ति पीडिताः । ४३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

These kings, O Parikṣit, who will (all) be contemporaries, will be no better than Mlecchas (in their course of conduct) and will be given over to unrighteousness and mendacity, illiberal and furious. (40) They will kill women, children, cows and Brāhmaṇas, covet—others' wives and wealth, experience vicissitudes of fortune in quick succession and will be poor of strength and courage and shortlived (too). (41) They will cease to perform purificatory rites, will be devoid of righteous actions, and dominated by Rajas and Tamas and, being Mlecchas in the garb of Kṣatriyas, will suck the blood of their (own) people. (42) The people ruled over by them too will acquire their habits, ways of life and mode of speech and, oppressed by one another as well as by their rulers, will go to ruin. (43)

Thus ends the first discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known
as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः Discourse II

The Evils of Kaliyuga

श्रीशुक उवाच

ततश्चानुदिनं धर्मः सत्यं शौचं क्षमा दया । कालेन बलिना राजन् नङ्क्ष्यत्यायुर्बलं स्मृतिः । १ ।
वित्तमेव कलौ नृणां जन्माचारमुणोदयः । धर्मन्यायव्यवस्थायां कारणं बलमेव हि । २ ।
दाम्पत्येऽभिरुचिर्हर्तुर्मार्ग्यं व्यवहारिके । स्त्रीत्वे पुंस्ये च हि रतिर्विप्रत्वे सूत्रमेव हि । ३ ।
लिङ्गमेवाश्रमस्यातावन्योन्यापत्तिकारणम् । अवृत्त्या न्यायदौर्बल्यं पाण्डित्ये चापलं वचः । ४ ।
अनादृत्यैवासाधुत्वे साधुत्वे दम्भ एव तु । स्वीकार एव चोद्वाहो ज्ञानमेव प्रसाधनम् । ५ ।
दूरे वार्ययनं तीर्थं लावण्यं केशधारणम् । उदरम्भरता स्वार्थः मत्स्यत्वे धाष्ट्र्यमेव हि । ६ ।
दाक्ष्यं कुटुम्बभरणं यशोऽर्थं धर्मसेवनम् । एवं प्रजाभिर्दुष्टाभिर्गाकीर्णं क्षितिमण्डले । ७ ।
ब्रह्मविदक्षत्रशुद्राणां यो बली भविता नृपः । प्रजा हि लुब्धे गजन्यर्निर्घृणैर्युधैर्मभिः । ८ ।
आच्छिन्नदारद्रविणा यास्यन्ति गिरिकाननम् । शाकमूलाभिषक्षौद्रफलपुष्पाष्टिभोजनाः । ९ ।
अनावृष्ट्या विनङ्क्ष्यन्ति दुर्भिक्षकरपीडिताः । शीतवातातपप्रावृद्धिर्मरन्योन्यतः प्रजाः । १० ।
क्षुत्तृड्यन् व्याधिभिश्चैव सन्तप्यन्ते च चिन्तया । त्रिशद्विंशतिवर्षाणि परमायुः कलौ नृणाम् । ११ ।
क्षीयमाणेषु देहेषु देहिनां कलिदोषतः । वर्णाश्रमवतां धर्मे नष्टे वेदपथे नृणाम् । १२ ।
पाखण्डप्रचुरे धर्मे दस्युप्रायेषु गजसु । चौर्यानुत्तवृथाहिंसानानावृत्तिषु वै नृपु । १३ ।
शूद्रप्रायेषु वर्णेषुच्छागप्रायासु धेनुषु । गृहप्रायेष्वाश्रमेषु यौनप्रायेषु बन्धुषु । १४ ।
अणुप्रायास्वेषधीषु शमीप्रायेषु स्थासुषु । विद्युत्प्रायेषु मेघेषु शून्यप्रायेषु सद्यसु । १५ ।
इत्थं कलौ गतप्राये जने तु खरधर्मिणि । धर्मत्राणाय सत्त्वेन भगवानवतरिष्यति । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again: Thenceforward, day after day, by force of the all-powerful Time, O king, righteousness, veracity, purity (of mind and body), forgiveness, compassion, length of life, bodily strength and keenness of memory will decline. (1) In the Kali age wealth alone will be the criterion of pedigree, morality and merit. Again, might will be the only factor determining righteousness and fairness. (2) (Personal) liking will be the deciding factor in making the choice of a partner in life, and trickery alone will be the motive force in business dealings. Capability of affording sexual delight will be the (only) criterion of masculine or feminine excellence and the sacred thread will be the only mark of Brahmanhood. (3) External marks will be the only means of knowing the Āsrama or stage in life (of an individual) and the (only) guide in determining the mode of greeting which people should adopt when meeting one another. Justice will have every chance of being vitiated because of one's inability to gratify those administering it, and voluble speech will be the (only) criterion of scholarship. (4) Want of riches will be the sole test of impiety and hypocrisy will be the only touchstone of goodness. (Mutual) consent will be the sole determining factor in marriage and toilet alone will be regarded as a sign of bath. (5) A distant tank or pond will be the (only) holy resort for bath etc., and wearing (long) hair will be regarded as the (only) sign of beauty. Filling one's belly will be the (only) end of human pursuit and audacity of speech will be the only criterion of veracity. (6) Skill will consist in supporting one's family; virtuous deeds will be performed (only) with the object of gaining fame; and when in this way the terrestrial globe will be overrun by wicked people, the person who would prove to be the most powerful amongst the Brahmanas, Ksatriyas, Vaiśyas and Sudras will become the ruler. Robbed of their wealth and women by greedy and merciless Kṣatriyas, behaving like robbers, people will resort to mountains and forests and subsist on leaves, roots, meat, honey, fruits, flowers and seeds. (7—9) (Already) oppressed by famine and (heavy) taxation, people will perish through drought, (excessive) cold, storms, (scorching) sunshine, (heavy) rain, snowfall and mutual conflict. (10) In the age of Kali men will be tormented by hunger and thirst, ailments and worry and their maximum age will be only twenty to thirty years. (11) When through the evil effect of Kali the bodies of men get reduced in size and emaciated, the righteous course chalked out by the Vedas for men following the system of Varnas (grades of society) and Āśramas (stages in life) gets lost, when religion is replaced by heresy to a large extent and rulers mostly turn out to be thieves, when men take to various pursuits like theft, mendacity, wanton destruction of life and so on; when members of the three (higher) castes are mostly converted into Śūdras and cows are reduced to the size of she-goats and begin to yield as much milk; when people belonging to the four Āśramas mostly become householders and the conotation of relationship will extend only to the relatives of one's wife; annual plants get stunted in growth and trees are mostly reduced to the size of a Śami (a small tree); clouds will mostly end in flashes of lightning (rather than pour rain) and dwellings will mostly look desolate (for want of hospitality to strangers); in this way when the Kali age, whose career is so severe to the people, is well-nigh past, the Lord will appear in His divine form (consisting of Sattva alone) for the protection of virtue. (12—16)

चराचरगुणैर्विष्णोरीश्वरस्याखिलात्मनः । धर्मत्राणाय साधूनां जन्म कर्मापनुत्वे । १७ ।

सम्भलग्राममुख्यस्य ब्राह्मणस्य महात्मनः । भवने विष्णुयशसः कल्किः प्रादुर्भविष्यति । १८ ।

अश्वमाशुगमारुह्य देवदत्तं जगत्पतिः । असिनामाधुदमनमष्टैश्वर्यगुणान्वितः । १९ ।

विचरन्नाशुना क्षोण्यां हयेनाप्रतिमद्युतिः । नृपालिङ्गच्छदो दस्यून् कोटिशो निहनिष्यति । २० ।

Lord Viṣṇu, adored of the whole animate and inanimate creation, and the Soul of the universe, appears (in this world of matter) for protecting the virtue of the righteous and wiping out (the entire stock of) their Karma (and thereby liberating them). (17) The Lord will appear under the name of Kalki in the house of the high-souled Viṣṇuyaśa—the foremost Brāhmaṇa of the village of Sambhala. (18) Riding a fleet horse named Devadatta (obviously because it will be presented to Him by the gods) and capable of subduing the wicked, the Lord of the universe, wielding (the well-known) eight divine powers (Anima and so on) and possessed of (endless) virtues and matchless splendour, will traverse the globe on that swift horse and exterminate with His sword in tens of millions robbers wearing the insignia of royalty. (19-20)

अथ तेषां भविष्यन्ति मनांसि विशदाणि वै । वासुदेवाङ्गरागातिपुण्यगन्धानिलम्पुशाम् ।

पौरजानपदानां वै हतेषुखिलदस्युषु । २१ ।

तेषां प्रजाविसर्गश्च स्थविष्ठः सम्भविष्यति । वासुदेवे भगवति सत्त्वमूर्ती हृदि स्थिते । २२ ।

यदावतीर्णा भगवान् कल्किर्धर्मपतिर्हरिः । कृतं भविष्यति तदा प्रजासुतिश्च सात्त्विकी । २३ ।

यदा चन्द्रश्च सूर्यश्च तथा तिष्यबृहस्पती । एकगशौ समेष्यन्ति तदा भवति तत् कृतम् । २४ ।

Now when all the robbers are (thus) exterminated, the minds of the people of the cities and the countryside will become pure indeed because of their enjoying the breezes wafting the most sacred fragrance of pigments on the person of Lord Vasudeva. (21) With Lord Vāsudeva, the embodiment of strength, in their heart their progeny will grow exceedingly strong (as before). (22) When Lord Sri Hari, the Protector of Dharma, appears as Kalki, Satyayuga will prevail (once more) at that time and the progeny of the people will be of a Sāttvika (virtuous) disposition. (23) When the moon, the sun and the Jupiter rise together in one zodiacal house and the Pusya constellation is in the ascendant, then it will be (known as) Satyayuga. (24)

येऽतीता वर्तमाना ये भविष्यन्ति च पार्थिवाः । ते त उद्देशतः प्रोक्ता वंशीयाः सोमसूर्ययोः । २५ ।
 आरभ्य भवतो जन्म यावन्नन्दाभिषेचनम् । एतद् वर्षसहस्रं तु शतं पञ्चदशोत्तरम् । २६ ।
 सप्तर्षीणां तु यौ पूर्वा दृश्येते उदितौ दिवि । तयोस्तु मध्ये नक्षत्रं दृश्यते यत् समं निशि । २७ ।
 तेनैत ऋषयो युक्तास्तिष्ठन्त्यब्दशतं नृणाम् । ये त्वदीये द्विजाः काले अधुना चाश्रिता मघाः । २८ ।

Those kings of the solar and lunar dynasties who are no more; who are present and who are (yet) to come have been briefly mentioned to you. (25) The period commencing from your birth and ending with the coronation of Nanda would come to one thousand one hundred and fifteen years. (26) When constellations comprising the Great Bear rise in the heavens, two of them become visible first. Midway between (in the north-western line,) appears at night one of the constellations (from among Āśvini and others). (27) The stars of the Great Bear remain united with that constellation for one hundred human years. The said stars now appear near the constellation known by the name of Maghā during your regime. (28)

विष्णोर्भगवतो भानुः कृष्णाख्योऽसौ दिवं गतः । तदाविशत् कलिलोकं पापे यद् रमते जनः । २९ ।
 यावत् स पादपद्माभ्यां स्पृशन्नास्ते रमापतिः । तावत् कलिवै पृथिवीं पराक्रान्तुं न चाशक्तः । ३० ।
 तदा देवर्षयः सप्त मघासु विचरन्ति हि । तदा प्रवृत्तस्तु कलिर्द्वादशाब्दशतात्मकः । ३१ ।
 यदा मघाभ्यो यास्यन्ति पूर्वाषाढां महर्षयः । तदा नन्दात् प्रभृत्येष कलिर्वृद्धिं गमिष्यति । ३२ ।
 यस्मिन् कृष्णो दिवं यातस्तस्मिन्नेव तदाहनि । प्रतिपन्नं कलियुगमिति प्राहुः पुराविदः । ३३ ।

दिव्याब्दानां सहस्रान्ते चतुर्थे तु पुनः कृतम् । भविष्यति यदा नृणां मन आत्मप्रकाशकम् । ३४ ।

The all-effulgent personality (consisting of pure Sattva) of Lord Viṣṇu (Himself) appeared under the name of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. The moment He ascended to (His divine abode in) Heaven the Kali age entered the world, when people take delight in sin. (29) So long as the aforesaid Lord of Lakṣmī touched the earth, Kali could not prevail over it. (30) When the seven stars constituting the Great Bear enter the constellation of Maghā Kaliyuga embarks on its career of twelve hundred celestial years (or 432,000) human years. (31) When from the Maghas the stars of the Great Bear pass on to the constellation of Purvāṣaḍha, then from the time of King (Mahapadma) Nanda onwards Kali will gain ascendancy. (32) Persons learned in ancient history maintain that the age of Kali set in on the very day, (nay,) the very moment Śrī Kṛṣṇa ascended to (His abode in) heaven. (33) (Parikṣit !) at the end of one thousand celestial years and of the fourth Yuga (Kaliyuga) Kṛtāyuga will prevail again, when the mind of men will reveal (to them the true nature of) the Self. (34)

इत्येष मानवो वंशो यथा संख्यायते भुवि । तथा विद्मूद्रविप्राणां तास्ता ज्ञेया युगे युगे । ३५ ।
 एतेषां नामलिङ्गानां पुरुषाणां महात्मनाम् । कथामात्रावशिष्टानां कीर्तिरेव स्थिता भुवि । ३६ ।
 देवापिः शक्तनोर्ध्वता मरुक्षेत्राकुर्वन् राजः । कलापग्राम आसाते महायोगबलान्वितौ । ३७ ।
 तद्विहृत्य कलेऽन्ते वासुदेवानुशिक्षितौ । वर्णाश्रमयुतं धर्मं पूर्ववत् प्रथयिष्यतः । ३८ ।
 कृतं त्रेता द्वपरं च कलिश्चेति चतुर्व्युगम् । अनेन क्रमयोगेन भुवि प्राणिषु वर्तते । ३९ ।
 राजत्रेते मया प्रोक्ता नरदेवास्तथापरे । भूमौ ममत्वं कृत्वान्ते हित्वेमां निधनं गताः । ४० ।
 कृमिविड्भस्मसंज्ञान्ते राजनाम्नोऽपि यस्य च । भूतधुकु तत्कृते स्वार्थं किं वेद निरयो यतः । ४१ ।
 कथं सेयमखण्डा भूः पूर्वमं पुरुषैर्धृता । मत्पुत्रस्य च पौत्रस्य मत्पूर्वा वंशजस्य वा । ४२ ।
 तेजोऽब्रह्ममयं कार्यं गृहीत्वाऽऽत्मतया बुधाः । महौ ममतया चोभौ हित्वान्तेऽदर्शनं गताः । ४३ ।

ये ये भूपतयो राजन् भुञ्जन्ति भुवमोजसा । कालेन ते कृताः सर्वे कथामात्राः कथासु च । ४४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । २ ।

(Even) as the career of Manu's race on earth has been described (with its ups and downs) the rise and fall, from age to age, of the Vaiśyas, Śūdras and Brāhmaṇas (too) should be similarly understood. (35) Of the high-souled men mentioned heretofore, who are (now) known (merely) by their names and who survive in the form of (their) stories (only), glory alone remains on earth. (36) Devāpi, brother of Śantanu, and Maru of Ikṣvāku's line, both of whom are possessed of great powers of Yoga, are (still) alive in the village of Kalāpa. (37) Instructed (and commanded) by Lord Vasudeva (Kalki), both will appear (once more) on earth at the close of the Kali age, and propagate virtue as before alongwith the institution of Vārṇas (grades of society) and Āśramas (stages of life). (38) The round of the four Yugas, viz., Satya, Tretā, Dwāpara and Kali, runs its course in this order of sequence for (all) living beings on earth. (39) These rulers of men mentioned by me as also others claimed this earth as their own, but they had to leave it in the end and died, O king ! (40) He who perpetrates violence against living beings for the sake of this body, which will be ultimately called by the name of 'worm', 'excrement' or 'ashes', no matter if it enjoys the title of 'king' (now), is not alive to his own interests; for such violence (surely) paves the way to hell. (41) "How may this earth, held (in sovereignty) entirely by my forbears and now enjoyed by me, continue to be in the possession of my son and grandson and posterity ?" Indulging in such (anxious) thoughts rulers wanting in wisdom and looking upon the body, (which is) a product of fire, water and food, as their own self and the earth as their possession, have eventually quitted both and vanished (into nothing). (42-43) All those rulers, O king, who by force of their might enjoyed the sovereignty of the globe have been converted into mere themes of stories narrated in discourses. (44)

Thus ends the second discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

Vanity of kings; righteous conduct for every Yuga; the means to escape the evils of Kaliyuga—loud chanting of the Divine Name

श्रीशुक उवाच

दृष्ट्वाऽऽत्वनि जये व्यग्रान् नृपान् हसति भूरियम् । अहो मा विजिगीषन्ति मृत्योः क्रीडनका नृपाः । १ ।
काम एष नरेन्द्राणां मोघः स्याद् विदुषामपि । येन फेनोपमे पिण्डे येतिविश्रम्भिता नृपाः । २ ।
पूर्वं निर्जित्य षड्वर्गं जेष्यामो राजमन्त्रिणः । ततः सचिवपौराप्तकरीन्द्रानस्य कण्टकान् । ३ ।
एवं क्रमेण जेष्यामः पृथ्वीं सागरमेखलाम् । इत्याशाबद्धहृदया न पश्यन्त्यन्तिकेऽन्तकम् । ४ ।
समुद्रावरणां जित्वा मां विशान्यब्धिमोजसा । कियदात्मजयस्यैतन्मुक्तिरात्मजये फलम् । ५ ।
यां विसृज्यैव मनवस्तत्सुताश्च कुरूद्वह । गता यथागतं युद्धे तां मां जेष्यन्त्यबुद्धयः । ६ ।
मत्कृते पितृपुत्राणां भ्रातॄणां चापि विग्रहः । जायते ह्यसतां राज्ये ममताबद्धचेतसाम् । ७ ।

ममैवेयं मही कृत्स्ना न ते मूढेति वादिनः । स्पर्धमाना मिथो घ्नन्ति प्रियन्ते मत्कृते नृपाः । ८ ।
 पृथुः पुरुरवा गाधिर्नहुषो भरतोऽर्जुनः । मन्थाता सगरो रामः खट्वाङ्गो धुन्धुहा रघुः । ९ ।
 तृणबिन्दुर्ययातिश्च शयातिः शन्तनुर्गयः । भगीरथः कुवल्याश्वः ककुत्स्थो नैषधो नृगः । १० ।
 हिरण्यकशिपुर्वृत्रो रावणो लोकरावणः । नमुचिः शम्बरो भौमो हिरण्याक्षोऽथ तारकः । ११ ।
 अन्ये च बहवो दैत्या राजानो ये महेश्चराः । सर्वे सर्वविदः शूराः सर्वे सर्वजितोऽजिताः । १२ ।
 ममतां मय्यवर्तन्त कृत्वोद्यैर्मर्त्यधर्मिणः । कथावशेषाः कालेन ह्यकृतार्थाः कृता विभो । १३ ।

Srī Śuka began again: Seeing the kings (so) impatient to conquer her, this earth laughs at them (and says):—"How surprising it is that these kings, (mere) playthings (in the hands) of Death, wish to conquer me thoroughly ! (1) Fruitless is this ambition of the kings, by which these rulers of men have been led to repose utter faith in the (human) body, which is (evanescent) like a bubble of water, even though they are aware of this fact. (2) (They say to themselves:—) 'Having at the outset conquered the six Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the mind), we shall then reduce to submission the counsellors and ministers of (hostile) kings as well as their relations and friends, the citizens and drivers of elephants (in fact, the entire army of the enemy); and having removed (all) thorns (in the form of thieves and robbers), we shall thus by degrees bring under subjection the (whole) earth with the oceans as its girdle.' With their hearts held fast by such aspirations they fail to see Death standing at hand. (3-4) Having conquered by their might one Dwipa surrounded by the ocean, they embark on a sea-voyage (in order to conquer other continents). What a poor reward it is for their conquest of the mind and senses (since all this is transient) ! Liberation is the (true) recompense for subduing the self." (5) "These stupid fellows", Mother Earth goes on, O jewel among the Kurus, "hope to conquer through war me, whom (even) the Manus and their sons had only to leave (in the end) and departed as they came ! (6) For my sake indeed springs up a conflict between father and sons as well as between brothers of evil intent, whose mind is held fast by the notion of myness with respect to their kingdom. (7) Contending with one another in the words. This entire globe is mine and not yours, O fool ! rulers of men strike one another and die on my account. (8) Prthu, Pururavā, Gādhi, Nahuṣa, Bharata, (the thousand-armed) Arjuna, Māndhātā, Sagara, Rama, Khaṭvāṅga, Dhundhumāra, Raghu, Tṛṇabindu and Yayāti, Śaryāti, Śantanu, Gaya, Bhāgiratha, Kuvalayaśwa, Kakutstha, Nala (king of the Nisadhas), Nrga, Hiraṇyakaśipu, (the demon) Vṛtra, Ravana who caused people to cry (in terror), Namuci, Śambara, the demon Naraka (son of Earth), Hiraṇyākṣa and Tāraka, and many other demons and kings, who were suzerain rulers (of the world), who understood everything and were all brave and conquerors of all, and were invincible (themselves), claimed me as their own and led an exalted life; but mortal as they were by nature, they were actually converted into (mere) themes of a story by (the cruel hands of) Death, their object remaining unaccomplished." So concluded Mother Earth, O Parikṣit ! (9—13)

कथा इमास्ते कथिता महीयसां विताय लोकेषु यशः परेषुषाम् ।

विज्ञानवैराग्यविवक्षया विभो वचोविभूतीर्न तु पारमार्थ्यम् । १४ ।

यस्तु तमश्लोकगुणानुवादः संगीयतेऽभीक्ष्णममङ्गलम् ।

तमेव नित्यं शृणुयादभीक्ष्णं कृष्णोऽमलां भक्तिमभीप्समानः । १५ ।

These stories of glorious men who, having spread their fame in the worlds, passed away have been narrated to you with intent to impart to you the knowledge of the unsubstantial nature of worldly enjoyments and teach you how to develop a distaste for them, O lord ! They are (however) a mere display of words and have no bearing on the highest truth. (14) The exposition, on the other hand, of the virtues of Lord Viṣṇu (of excellent renown), which is constantly extolled (by the righteous), puts an end to (all) evil. One eager to attain pure devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa should repeatedly hear it everyday. (15)

राजोवाच

केनोपायेन भगवन् कलेर्दोषान् कलौ जनाः । विधमिष्यन्त्युपचित्तास्तमे ब्रूहि यथा मुने । १६ ।

युगानि युगधर्माश्च मानं प्रलयकल्पयोः । कालस्येश्वररूपस्य गतिं विष्णोर्महात्मनः । १७ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted: (Pray,) tell me in detail, O divine sage, the way in which men will (be able to) shake off the accumulated evils of the Kali age in the Kali age (itself). (16) (Also) tell me (something) about the Yugas (aeons), the courses of conduct prescribed for each Yuga, the duration of life of the cosmos as well as of the period of its final dissolution and the course of Kāla (the Time-Spirit), a potency of Lord Viṣṇu, the Supreme Spirit, the Director (even) of the Rulers of the universe (Brahmā, Śiva and so on). (17)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कृते प्रवर्तते धर्मश्चतुष्पातजनैर्धृतः । सत्यं दया तपो दानमिति पादा विभोर्नृप । १८ ।

सन्तुष्टाः करुणा मैत्राः शान्ता दान्तास्तितिक्षवः । आत्मारामाः समदृशः प्रायशः श्रमणा जनाः । १९ ।

त्रेतायां धर्मपादानां तुर्यांशो हीयते शनैः । अधर्मपादैर्नृनृहिंसासन्तोषविग्रहैः । २० ।

तदा क्रियातपोनिष्ठा नातिहिंसा न लम्पटाः । त्रैवर्गिकास्रयीवृद्धा वर्णा ब्रह्मोत्तरा नृप । २१ ।

तपःसत्यदयादनेष्वर्थं हसति द्वापरे । हिंसातुष्ट्यनृत्यैर्धर्मस्याधर्मलक्षणैः । २२ ।

यशस्विनो महाशालाः स्वाध्यायाध्ययने रताः । आढ्याः कुटुम्बिनो हृष्टा वर्णाः क्षत्रद्विजोत्तराः । २३ ।

कलौ तु धर्महेतूनां तुर्यांशोऽधर्महेतुभिः । एधमानैः क्षीयमाणो ह्यन्ते सोऽपि विनश्यति । २४ ।

तस्मिँल्लुब्धा दुराचारा निर्दयाः शृङ्खलैरिणः । दुर्भगा भूरितर्षाश्च शूद्रदाशोत्तराः प्रजाः । २५ ।

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति दृश्यन्ते पुरुषे गुणाः । कालसञ्छोदितस्ते वै परिवर्तन्त आत्मनि । २६ ।

प्रभवन्ति यदा सत्त्वे मनोबुद्धीन्द्रियाणि च । तदा कृतयुगं विद्याज्ञाने तपसि यद् रुचिः । २७ ।

यदा धर्मार्थकामेषु भक्तिर्भवति देहिनाम् । तदा त्रेता रजोवृत्तिरिति जानीहि बुद्धिमन् । २८ ।

यदा लोभस्त्वसन्तोषो मानो दम्भोऽथ मत्सरः । कर्मणां चापि काम्यानां द्वापरं तद् रजस्तमः । २९ ।

यदा मायानृतं तन्द्रा निद्रा हिंसा विषादनम् । शोको मोहो भयं दैन्यं स कलिस्तामसः स्मृतः । ३० ।

यस्मात् क्षुद्रदृशो मर्त्याः क्षुद्रभाग्या महाशानाः । कामिनो वित्हीनाश्च स्वैरिष्यश्च स्त्रियोऽसतीः । ३१ ।

दस्यूक्लृष्टा जनपदा वेदाः पाखण्डदूषिताः । राजानश्च प्रजाभक्षाः शिश्रोदरपरा द्विजाः । ३२ ।

अन्नता वटवोऽशौचा भिक्षवश्च कुटुम्बिनः । तपस्विनो ग्रामवासा न्यासिनोऽन्यथलोलुपाः । ३३ ।

ह्रस्वकाया महाहारा भूर्यपत्या गतह्रियः । शश्वत्कुटुम्भाषिण्यश्चौर्यमायोरुसाहसाः । ३४ ।

पणयिष्यन्ति वै क्षुद्राः किराटाः कूटकारिणः । अनापद्यपि मंस्यन्ते वार्ता साधुजगुप्सिताम् । ३५ ।

पतिं त्यक्ष्यन्ति निर्द्वयं भृत्या अप्यखिलोत्तमम् । भूत्वं विपन्नं पतयः कौलैः गाक्ष्यपयस्विनीः । ३६ ।

Śrī Śuka replied: In the Satyayuga, O protector of men, Dharma (virtue) runs its course on (all) its four feet, and is held fast by the people of the age. Truth, compassion, asceticism and affording protection to all are the (four) feet (of virtue in its integral form). (18) People of that age are mostly contented, compassionate, friendly (to all living beings), tranquil and forbearing. They practise self-control, take delight in the Self, look upon all with an equal eye and take pains for Self-Realization. (19) In the Tretā age a quarter of all the (four) feet of Dharma (virtue) gets gradually encroached upon by falsehood, violence, discontent and discord—the (four) feet of Adharma (unrighteousness). (20) In that age (of Tretā) people remain devoted to the performance of Vedic rites and austerities. They are not given to much violence nor lewd. They pursue the three objects of human endeavour (viz., religious merit, worldly possessions and sense-enjoyment). People are advanced in Vedic rites and among (the four) grades of society the Brāhmaṇas form a majority, O protector of men ! (21) Assailed by the four feet of Adharma, violence, discontent, falsehood and hatred, those of Dharma—compassion, austerity, truthfulness and a charitable disposition—diminish by one half each in the Dwāpara age. (22) The people of that age are fond of glory and given to the performance of great sacrifices, take delight in learning the Vedas, are affluent and happy, and maintain big families. Among the (four) grades of society the Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas are predominant. (23) In the Kali age, however, a quarter (alone) of the (four) feet of Dharma remains. (Nay,) due to the feet of Adharma gaining ground that too steadily declines and ultimately disappears altogether. (24) People in that age turn out to be greedy, immoral and merciless, enter into hostility without cause and are unlucky and extremely covetous. The Sūdras, fishermen and the like take the lead. (25) The qualities of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas are seen (manifested) in men; impelled by force of time they wax or wane in the mind. (26) When the mind, intellect and senses abound in Sattva, and when people are interested in practising asceticism and acquiring wisdom, then one should understand that Satya-yuga prevails. (27) When people are fond of religious merit, earthly possessions and worldly enjoyment, then know that there is Tretā-yuga, when Rajas is active, O intelligent one ! (28) When, however, greed, discontent, pride, hypocrisy and jealousy prevail and man is fond of actions prompted by desire, know that it is Dwāpara, when (both) Rajas and Tamas predominate. (29) When duplicity, mendacity, drowsiness, excessive sleep, violence, dejection, grief, infatuation, fear and wretchedness prevail, that is recognized as the age of Kali, characterized by (the predominance of Tamas, as a result of which people become dull-witted (viz., unable to judge things in their proper perspective) and are unlucky but voracious, voluptuous and destitute. And women (too) turn out to be profligate. And unchaste. (30-31) Countries are infested with robbers; the Vedas stand condemned by heretics; rulers exploit the people; and the Brāhmaṇas remain devoted to the gratification of sexual desires and intent on filling their belly. (32) Religious students will give up the course of conduct prescribed for them and fail to observe purity, and householders will take to begging; hermits will take up their residence in villages and recluses will be seized with an ardent longing for wealth. (33) Women will be short-statured but voracious, prolific and destitute of modesty. They will always speak harsh words and will be given to thieving and wiles and very daring. (34) Low-minded traders will carry on business transactions and practise fraud. Even when they are not in distress people will favour pursuits which are condemned. (35) Servants will leave their masters when reduced to penury, though superior in every (other) respect; and masters too will discharge their servant, when incapacitated for service (through ailment etc.), even though he may be hereditary. (Even so) people will cease to maintain cows when they no longer yield milk. (36)

पितृभ्रातृसहज्जातीन् हित्वा सौरतसौहृदाः । ननान्दृश्यालसंवादा दीनाः स्त्रैणाः कलौ नराः । ३७ ।

शूद्राः प्रतिग्रहीष्यन्ति तपोवेषोपजीविनः । धर्मं वक्ष्यन्त्यधर्मज्ञा अधिग्रहोत्तमासनम् । ३८ ।

नित्यमुद्विग्नमनसो दुर्भिक्षकरकंतिताः । निरन्त्रे भूतले राजन्नरावृष्टिभयातुराः । ३९ ।

वासोऽग्रपानशयनव्यवायन्त्रानभूषणैः । हीनाः पिशाचसन्दर्शा भविष्यन्ति कलौ प्रजाः । ४० ।

कलौ काकिणिकेऽप्यर्थं विगृह्य त्यक्तसौहृदाः । त्यक्ष्यन्ति च प्रियान् प्राणान् हनिष्यन्ति स्वकानपि । ४१ ।

न रक्षिष्यन्ति मनुजाः स्थविरो पितरावपि । पुत्रान् सर्वार्थकुशलान् क्षुद्राः शिशोर्दम्भराः ।४२।

कलौ न राजञ्जगतां परं गुरुं त्रिलोकनाथानतपादपङ्कजम् ।

प्रायेण मर्या भगवन्तमच्युते यक्ष्यन्ति पाखण्डविभिन्नचेतसः ।४३।

यन्नामधेयं प्रियमाण आतुरः पतन् स्वल्न वा विवशो गूणन् पुमान् ।

विमुक्तकर्मांगल उत्तमां गतिं प्राप्नोति यक्ष्यन्ति न तं कलौ जनाः ।४४।

पुंसां कलिकृतान् दोषान् द्रव्यदेशात्मसम्भवान् । सर्वान् हरति चित्तस्थो भगवान् पुरुषोत्तमः ।४५।

श्रुतः सङ्कीर्तितो ध्यातः पूजितश्चादृतोऽपि वा । नृणां धुनोति भगवान् हृत्स्थो जन्मायुताशुभम् ।४६।

यथा हेमि स्थितो वह्निर्दुर्वणं हन्ति धातुजम् । एवमात्मगतो विष्णुर्योगिनामशुभाशयम् ।४७।

विद्यातपःप्राणनिरोधमैत्रीतीर्थाभिषेकव्रतदानजयैः ।

नात्यन्तशुद्धिं लभतेऽन्तरात्मा यथा हृदिस्थे भगवत्यनन्ते ।४८।

तस्मात् सर्वात्मना राजन् हृदिस्थं कुरु केशवम् । प्रियमाणो ह्यवहितस्ततो यासि परां गतिम् ।४९।

प्रियमाणैरभिध्येयो भगवान् परमेश्वरः । आत्मभावं नयत्यङ्गं सर्वात्मा सर्वसंश्रयः ।५०।

कलेदोषनिधे राजन्नस्ति होको महान् गुणः । कीर्तनादेव कृष्णस्य मुक्तसङ्गः परं व्रजेत् ।५१।

कृते यद् ध्यायतो विष्णुं व्रतायां यजतो मखैः । द्वापरे परिचर्यायां कलौ तद्धरिर्कीर्तनात् ।५२।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पागमहंस्यो र्मेहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे तृतीयाध्यायः ।३।

In the age of Kali men will become slaves of women and miserable. Sexual pleasure being the (only) ground of their affection, they will forsake their parents, brothers and (other) relations and kinsfolk and take counsel with their sisters-in-law and brothers-in-law (alone). (37) Sūdras will make their living by putting on the garb of hermits and receive charitable gifts. Those who have no knowledge of religion will occupy high seats and preach religion. (38) Oppressed with famine and (heavy) taxation—land being divested of food-grains—and stricken with fear of droughts, people in the Kali age will ever remain perturbed in mind. Destitute of clothes and ornaments, (nay, even) food and drink, bed and sexual enjoyment, they will go even without a bath and put on the appearance of a fiend. (39-40) Quarrelling even for a very small sum of money equivalent to 20 cowries, having cast (all) goodwill to the winds, people in Kaliyuga will kill even their own people and part with their own dear life. (41) Mean-minded fellows will concern themselves only with the gratification of their lust and satisfaction of their hunger and fail to maintain even their aged parents; while parents will disown their sons, though clever in all matters. (42) With their mind perverted by heretics, O king, mortals in Kaliyuga will not generally worship Viṣṇu (the immortal Lord), the highest object of adoration for the (whole) universe, whose lotus-feet are bowed to by the rulers of the three worlds. (43) People in Kaliyuga will not worship Him by uttering whose name (even) helplessly while dying or afflicted, toppling down or stumbling, man is freed from (all) impediment in the shape of Karma and reaches the highest goal. (44) Enthroned in the mind of men Lord Śrī Hari (the Supreme Person) drives away all evils occasioned by the Kali age and arising from substances, place and mind. (45) Heard of or glorified (by chanting His name or singing His praises), meditated upon and worshipped or even honoured, the Lord stays in men's heart and drives away (all) their sins committed in thousands of lives. (46) Dwelling in the mind of Yogis (strivers) Lord Viṣṇu wipes out the seeds of their evil Karma in the same way as fire applied to gold burns all its impurities caused by (its admixture with other) metals. (47) The mind (of a man) does not attain absolute purity through worship of gods, asceticism, control of breath, friendliness (towards all), a bath in sacred waters, observance of sacred vows, charitable gifts and muttering of prayers as it does when the infinite Lord is enthroned in the heart.(48) Therefore, with all your being O king, instal Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva) in your heart, thinking of Him with a concentrated mind while dying; You will thereby attain the supreme goal. (49) The Lord, who is the Supreme Ruler (of the universe), the Soul and Shelter of all, deserves to be meditated upon at all times; (for) those who are about to die meditate upon Him (as a result of practice incessantly carried on while living) He leads them to the state of oneness with Him, O dear Parīkṣit ! (50) Indeed there is one great virtue possessed by the Kali age, the storehouse of (all) evils, O Parīkṣit ! By merely chanting the names and glories of Śrī Kṛṣṇa one is freed from (all) attachments and reaches the Supreme. (51) What is attained in the Satya-yuga by one contemplating on Lord Viṣṇu, in Tretā by one who propitiates Him through sacrifices, and in Dwāpara through worship (of the Lord), is attained in the Kali age (merely) by chanting the name and singing the praises of Śrī Hari.(52)

Thus ends the third discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

The Fourfold Pralaya

श्रीशुक उवाच

कालस्ते परमाण्वादिद्विपरार्धाविधिर्नृप । कथितो युगमानं च शृणु कल्पलयावपि । १ ।
चतुर्युगसहस्रं च ब्रह्मणो दिनमुच्यते । स कल्पो यत्र मनवश्चतुर्दश विशांपते । २ ।
तदन्ते प्रलयस्तावान् ब्राह्मी रात्रिरुदाहता । त्रयो लोका इमे तत्र कल्पन्ते प्रलयाय हि । ३ ।
एष नैमित्तिकः प्रोक्तः प्रलयो यत्र विश्वसृक् । शेतेऽनन्तासनो विश्वमात्मसात्कृत्य चात्मभूः । ४ ।
द्विपरार्धे त्वत्क्रान्ते ब्रह्मणः परमेष्ठिनः । तदा प्रकृतयः सप्त कल्पन्ते प्रलयाय वै । ५ ।
एष प्राकृतिको राजन् प्रलयो यत्र लीयते । आपण्डकोशस्तु सङ्घातो विघात उपसादिते । ६ ।
पर्जन्यः शतवर्षाणि भूमौ राजन् न वर्षति । तदा निरन्त्रे ह्यन्योन्यं भक्षमाणाः क्षुधादिताः । ७ ।
क्षयं यास्यन्ति शनैः कालेनोपद्रुताः प्रजाः । सामुद्रं दैहिकं भौमं रसं सांवर्तको रविः । ८ ।
रश्मिभिः पिबते घोरैः सर्वं नैव विमुञ्चति । ततः संवर्तको वह्निः सङ्कर्षणमुखोत्थितः । ९ ।
दहत्यनिलवेगोत्थः शून्यान् भूविवरानथ । उपर्यधः समन्ताच्च शिखाभिर्वह्निसूर्ययोः । १० ।
दह्यमानं विभात्यण्डं दग्धगोमयपिण्डवत् । ततः प्रचण्डपवनो वर्षाणामधिकं शतम् । ११ ।
परः सांवर्तको वाति ध्रुवं खं रजसाऽऽवृतम् । ततो मेघकुलान्यङ्गं चित्रवर्णान्यनेकशः । १२ ।
शतं वर्षाणि वर्षन्ति नदन्ति रभसस्वनैः । तत एकोदकं विश्वं ब्रह्माण्डविवरान्तरम् । १३ ।

Śrī Śuka began again: The divisions of Time commencing from a Paramāṇu (its minutest division) and ending with two Parārdhas (comprising the life-time of Brahmā) have already been described to you, as also the duration of the four Yugas (in Discourse XI of Book

Three). Now hear also the extent of a Kalpa (one round of creation) and Laya (the period of final dissolution), O king ! (1) One thousand revolutions of the four Yugas (Satya, Tretā, Dvāpara and Kali) are spoken of as a day of Brahmā. This constitutes a Kalpa, in the course of which fourteen Manus (successively) hold sway, O king ! (2) At the end of a Kalpa an equally long period of Pralaya (Dissolution) follows; it is spoken of as one night of Brahmā; for during that period these three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) remain dissolved. (3) This is called Naimittika (occasional) Pralaya (because it is occasioned by Brahmā's going to bed and is different from the Mahāpralaya or Final Dissolution when Brahmā's career comes to a close). During this Pralaya Lord Nārāyaṇa (the Maker of the universe) withdraws the whole universe into Himself and remains asleep on His couch of Ananta (the serpent-god) and Brahmā (the self-born) follows suit. (4) When the lifetime of Brahmā, the greatest of all (the Jīvas), consisting of two Parārdhas, has expired, all the seven causal principles (viz., Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, Ahaṅkāra or the cosmic Ego and the five Tanmātrās or subtle elements) actually get dissolved (in Prakṛti or Primordial Matter). (5) This constitutes, O king, the Prākṛtika Pralaya, as in this, the occasion for final dissolution having been reached, the aggregate of (all) the (twenty-four) fundamental principles in the form of the cosmic egg gets (finally) dissolved. (6) For one hundred years, O king, the god of rain does not send down any shower on earth. Then, tormented by hunger, the earth being divested of food—grains, people actually begin to eat one another and, persecuted by time, gradually perish. Rendered much brighter by the 'period of final dissolution, the sun sucks up by its fearful rays all the water in the seas, on the earth and in the human bodies, and does not release it. Sprung from the mouth of Lord Śaṅkarṣaṇa (the serpent-god) and rising in flames by the force of the wind, the fire characteristic of the period of dissolution then burns the subterranean regions, already desolate (all their inhabitants having been burnt long before due to their moisture having been sucked up by the rays of the sun). Being burnt above and below as well as on all sides by the rays of the sun and the flames of fire, the cosmic egg now looks like a burnt ball of cowdung. Then a strong and violent wind characteristic of the period of final dissolution blows for (a little) more than a hundred years, so that the sky gets enveloped in dust and assumes a smoky appearance. Next, O dear one, numerous hosts of clouds of various colours pour down showers for a hundred years roaring with violent peals of thunder. Then the universe within the cosmic egg is swept by a single sheet of water. (7—13)

तदा भूमेर्गन्धगुणं ग्रसन्त्याप उदङ्गवे। ग्रस्तगन्धा तु पृथिवी प्रलयत्वाय कल्पते। १४।

अपां रसमथो तेजस्ता लीयन्तेऽथ नीरसाः। ग्रसते तेजसो रूपं वायुस्त्रहितं तदा। १५।

लीयते चानिले तेजो वायोः खं ग्रसते गुणम्। स वै विशति खं राजस्ततश्च नभसो गुणम्। १६।

शब्दं ग्रसति भूतादिर्नभस्तमनुलीयते। तेजसश्चेन्द्रियाण्यङ्गं देवान् वैकारिको गुणैः। १७।

महान् ग्रसत्यहङ्कारं गुणाः सत्त्वादयश्च तम्। ग्रसतेऽध्याकृतं राजन् गुणान् कालेन चोदितम्। १८।

न तस्य कालावयवैः परिणामादयो गुणाः। अनाद्यनन्तमव्यक्तं नित्यं कारणमव्ययम्। १९।

न यत्र वाचो न मनो न सत्त्वं तमो रजो वा महदादयोऽग्नी।

न प्राणबुद्धीन्द्रियदेवता वा न सन्निवेशः खलु लोककल्पः। २०।

न स्वप्नाग्रप्र च तत् सुषुप्तं न खं जलं भूरनिलोऽग्निरर्कः।

संसृप्तवच्छून्यवदप्रतव्यं तन्मूलभूतं पदमामर्शति। २१।

लयः प्राकृतिको ह्येष पुरुषाव्यक्तयोर्यदा। शक्तयः सम्प्रलीयन्ते विवशाः कालविद्रुताः। २२।

Everything being submerged in water, the latter absorbs the (essential) property of the earth, viz., smell; denuded of its smell, the earth then gets dissolved (in water). (14) Fire then absorbs the property of water, viz., taste; and deprived of its taste, the water (too) is forthwith dissolved (in the fire). Then the air absorbs the property of fire, viz., colour; and, divested of colour it loses itself into the air. (Likewise) ether absorbs the property of the air (viz., touch) and gets dissolved (in ether), O Parīkṣit ! Then the Tāmasika aspect of the Cosmic Ego absorbs the property of ether, viz., sound; alongwith it ether (too) gets dissolved (in the Tāmasika Ahaṅkāra); and the Rājasika type of Ahaṅkāra absorbs the Indriyas alongwith their functions. (Similarly) the Sāttvika type of Ahaṅkāra absorbs the gods (presiding over them), O dear Parīkṣit ! (15—17) The Mahat-tattva absorbs the (triple) Ahaṅkāra; while the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), viz., Sattva etc., absorb Mahat. Impelled by Time, the Unmanifest (Prakṛti) reduces the (three) modes of Prakṛti to the state of equilibrium, O king ! (18) Prakṛti is not subject to the (six) states¹⁶ such as modification, brought about by the divisions of time (even as they pass),. it is without beginning or end, unmanifest, constant, the cause (of all) and not subject to decay. (19) In that state, there is no speech, no mind, no (modes of Prakṛti, viz.,) Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, no Mahat and other products of Matter, no breath, no intellect, no senses nor the deities (presiding over them) and no conception, much less location of Lokas (spheres). (20) (Again,) there is no dream nor waking life nor deep slumber; no ether, water, earth, air, fire or sun. It is something like deep sleep or vacuity; nay, beyond conception. The Vedas speak of it as a state which is the root of the universe. (21) This is (what is known as) Prakṛtika Pralaya (the Dissolution of everything into Prakṛti or Primordial Matter), when, impelled by Time, the potencies of the Supreme Person as well as of the Unmanifest (Prakṛti) are completely and helplessly withdrawn (into their substratum). (22)

बुद्धीन्द्रियार्थरूपेण ज्ञानं भाति तदाश्रयम् । दृश्यत्वाव्यतिरेकाभ्यामाद्यन्तवदवस्तु यत् । २३ ।
 दीपश्चक्षुश्च रूपं च ज्योतिषो न पृथग् भवेत् । एवं धीः खानि मात्राश्च न स्युरन्यतमादृतात् । २४ ।
 बुद्धेर्जागरणं स्वप्नः सुषुप्तिरिति चोच्यते । मायामात्रमिदं यजन् नानात्वं प्रत्यागात्मनि । २५ ।
 यथा जलधरा व्योम्नि भवन्ति न भवन्ति च । ब्रह्मणीदं तथा विश्वमवयव्युदयाप्ययात् । २६ ।
 सत्यं ह्यवयवः प्रोक्तः सर्वावयविनामिह । विनार्थेन प्रतीयेरन् पटस्थेवाङ्ग तन्तवः । २७ ।
 यत् सामान्यविशेषाभ्यामुपलभ्येत स भ्रमः । अन्योन्यापाश्रयात् सर्वमाद्यन्तवदवस्तु यत् । २८ ।
 विकारः ख्यायमानोऽपि प्रत्यागात्मानमन्तरा । न निरूप्योऽस्त्यणुरपि स्याच्चेक्षित्सम आत्मवत् । २९ ।
 न हि सत्यस्य नानात्वमद्विद्वान् यदि मन्यते । नानात्वं छिद्रयोर्यद्वज्ज्योतिषोर्वातयोरिव । ३० ।

In the form of the intellect, the senses and their objects it is consciousness alone, their ground or substratum, which shines forth. Whatever has a beginning and an end is unreal, because it is open to perception and has no existence apart from its cause. (23) Light, the eye and colour (which are all modifications of fire) are not distinct from fire. Similarly the intellect, senses and their objects are not distinct from Brahma (the only Reality), which is quite different from them (inasmuch as It exists even when they cease to be, while the reverse is not true). (24) Wakefulness, dream and deep slumber, it is said, are so many states of Buddhi (intellect); the plurality attributed to the pure Self (in the form of Viśva, Taijasa and Prājña, as severally presiding over these states), is mere illusion, O Parīkṣit ! (25) (Just) as clouds appear and disappear in the sky, this universe (too)—because it has a beginning and an end and since it is made up of parts, sometimes appears and sometimes disappears in Brahma. (26) In this world, of all objects consisting of parts, the part alone has been declared (in the Śruti texts) to be real; for the parts are seen to exist (even) in the absence of a composite just as the threads of a cloth can be seen even when the cloth is not there, O dear

¹⁶ The six states are (1) birth, (2) existence, (3) growth, (4) modification, (5) decay and (6) death one ! (27) Whatever is perceived as a cause or an effect is an illusion, because a cause and an effect are correlated to one another. Therefore, all that has a beginning and an end is unreal. (28) Though manifest (to us), the phenomenal world cannot be explained in the least degree independently of the Self. If it were (at all) capable of being so explained, it would turn out to be (self-effulgent) like the conscious Self and (as such) unitary as the Self. (29) There can be no diversity in that which is real. If an ignorant man were to recognize (such) diversity, it would be (unreal) like the distinction between the space enclosed by a pitcher and the infinite (expanse of the) sky, between the sun and its reflection in water, or between the air outside and inside the body. (30)

यथा हिरण्यं बहुधा समीयते नृभिः क्रियाभिर्व्यवहारवत्सु ।

एवं चोभिर्भगवानशोक्षजो व्याख्यायते लौकिकवैदिकैर्जनैः । ३१ ।

यथा घनोऽर्कप्रभवोऽर्कदर्शितो ह्यर्कांशभूतस्य च चक्षुषस्तमः ।

एवं त्वहं ब्रह्मगुणस्तदीक्षितो ब्रह्मांशकस्यात्मन आत्मबन्धनः । ३२ ।

घनो यदार्कप्रभवो विदीर्यते चक्षुः स्वरूपं रविमीक्षते तदा ।

यदा ह्यहङ्कार उपाधिरात्मनो जिज्ञासया नश्यति तर्ह्यनुमरेत् । ३३ ।

यदैवमेतेन विवेकहेतिना मायामयाहङ्कारणात्मबन्धनम् ।

छित्वाच्युतात्मानुभवोऽवतिष्ठते तमाहुरात्यन्तिकमङ्गं सम्प्रवम् । ३४ ।

Even as in practical use gold is found by men wrought in numerous forms (ornaments) according to various processes, so the Lord, who is above sense-perception, is described by (egotistic) men (in different ways) in secular as well as Vedic parlance. (31) (Just) as a cloud, though born of the sun and revealed by (the light of) the sun, prevents the eye, which is a part of the sun, from beholding the sun, so does the ego, which has its source in Brahma and is illumined by Brahma, stand in the way of the Jiva, a particle of Brahma, realizing Brahma; which is the same as the Jiva. (32) As soon as the cloud born of the sun is scattered the eye sees the sun, which is its own self. (Similarly) the moment the ego, which veils (the true nature of) the soul, yields to inquiry (about the Self), the soul realizes its identity with Brahma. (33) When, having torn—in the aforesaid manner with this dagger of wisdom, Ahankāra, a product of Māyā, which veils (the true nature of) the soul, and realized the all-perfect Self, the Jiva stands fulfilled, they call such a state the everlasting Dissolution, O dear Parikṣit ! (34)

नित्यदा सर्वभूतानां ब्रह्मादीनां परंतप । उत्पत्तिप्रलयावेके सूक्ष्मज्ञाः सम्यचक्षते । ३५ ।

कालस्रोतो जवेनाशु द्विगमाणस्य नित्यदा । परिणामिनामवस्थास्ता जन्मप्रलयहेतवः । ३६ ।

अनाद्यत्तत्त्वतानेन कालेश्वरमूर्तिना । अवस्था नैव दृश्यते वियति ज्योतिषामिव । ३७ ।

नित्यो नैमित्तिकश्चैव तथा प्राकृतिको लयः । आत्यन्तिकश्च कथितः कालस्य गतिरीदृशी । ३८ ।

Some men, knowing the subtle state of things, O tormentor of foes ! declare the creation and dissolution of all created beings from Brahmā downward as going on all the time (every moment). (35) The successive stages that are gone through by (all) changing things (such as a stream or the flame of a lamp) serve as an index of the constant appearance and dissolution of the body etc., (of a created being), which are being rapidly worn away (every moment) by force of the stream of Time. (36) The (successive) stages (of growth and decay etc., of created beings) brought about by the aforementioned Time, a manifestation of the Almighty, which has no beginning or end, are certainly not perceived (even) as the stages of movement of luminaries (coursing) in the heavens. (37) (In this way) the Nitya (constant) as well as the Naimittika (occasional), nay, the Prāktika (or final) and Atyantika (everlasting) types of Dissolution have been described (by me). Such is the course of Time. (38)

एताः कुरुश्रेष्ठ जगद्धिधातुर्नारायणस्याखिलसत्त्वधाप्रः ।
लीलाकथास्तो कथिताः समासतः कात्स्न्येन नाजोऽप्यभिधातुमीशः । ३९ ।
संसारसिन्धुमतिदुस्तरमुत्तिरीर्षेर्नान्यः प्लवो भगवतः पुरुषोत्तमस्य ।
लीलाकथारसनियेवणमन्त्रेण पुंसो भवेद् विविधदुःखदवार्दितस्य । ४० ।

पुराणसंहितामेतामुर्षिर्नारायणोऽव्ययः । नारदाय पुरा प्राह कृष्णद्वैपायनाय सः । ४१ ।
स वै मह्यं महाराज भगवान् बादरायणः । इमां भागवतीं प्रीतः संहितां वेदसम्मिताम् । ४२ ।
एतां वक्ष्यत्यसौ सूत ऋषिभ्यो नैमिषालये । दीर्घसत्रे कुरुश्रेष्ठ सम्पृष्टः शौनकादिभिः । ४३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे चतुर्थोऽध्यायः । ४ ।

In this way, O jewel among the Kurus ! have been narrated (by Me) in brief the stories of the sportful activities of Lord Nārāyaṇa, the Maker of the universe and the abode of all living beings as well as of all strength and goodness; (for) not even Brahmā (the birthless creator) is capable of relating them in all their details and entirety. (39) To a man tormented by the wild fire of manifold miseries and seeking to cross the ocean of metempsychosis, (which is) most difficult to cross, there is no vessel other than constantly enjoying the nectar-like stories of the sportful activities of Lord Puruṣottama (the Supreme Person). (40) Of yore (at the beginning of creation) the omniscient and immortal Lord Nārāyaṇa taught the compilation in the form of this (Bhāgavata) Purāṇa (in four verses*) to the sage Nārada (through Brahmā†) and the latter to (my father,) the sage Kṛṣṇadwaipāyana (Vedavyāsa). (41) Full of delight, O great king, the said divine sage Vedavyāsa (who lives in a grove of jujube trees) actually taught me this compilation (consisting of 18000 Ślokas), which is equal (in worth) to the Vedas. (42) Requested by the sage Śaunaka and others, O jewel among the Kurus ! that Sūta (sitting over there) will expound it to the (eighty-eight thousand) Ṛṣis (going to be assembled) in a lengthy sacrificial session at Naimiṣāranya. (43)

Thus ends the fourth discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

The (Final) Teaching (of Śukadeva) concerning Brahma

श्रीशुक उवाच

अत्रानुवर्ण्यतेऽभीक्ष्णं विश्वात्मा भगवान् हरिः । यस्य प्रसादजो ब्रह्मा रुद्रः क्रोधसमुद्भवः । १ ।
त्वं तु राजन् मरिष्येति पशुबुद्धिमिमं जहि । न जातः प्रागभूतोऽष्ट देहवत्त्वं न नृक्ष्यसि । २ ।

* Vide II. ix 31—34.

† Vide II. ix. 43-44.

न भविष्यसि भूत्वा त्वं पुत्रपौत्रादिरूपवान् । बीजाङ्कुरवद् देहादेर्व्यतिरिक्तो यथानलः । ३ ।
 स्वप्ने यथा शिरश्छेदं पञ्चत्वाद्यात्मनः स्वयम् । यस्मात् पश्यति देहस्य तत आत्मा ह्यजोऽमरः । ४ ।
 घटे भिन्ने यथाऽऽकाश आकाशः स्याद यथा पुरा । एवं देहे मृते जीवो ब्रह्म सम्पद्यते पुनः । ५ ।
 मनः सृजति वै देहान् गुणान् कर्माणि चात्मनः । तन्मनः सृजते माया ततो जीवस्य संसृतिः । ६ ।
 स्नेहाधिष्ठानवर्त्यग्निसंयोगो यावदीयते । ततो दीपस्य दीपत्वमेवं देहकृतो भवः ।

रजःसत्त्वतमोवृत्त्या जायतेऽथ विनश्यति । ७ ।

न तत्रात्मा स्वयंज्योतिर्यो व्यक्ताव्यक्तयोः परः । आकाश इव चाधारे ध्रुवोऽनन्तोपमस्ततः । ८ ।

Śrī Sūka began again : In this (Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa) stands celebrated every now and then Lord Śrī Hari, the Soul (Controller) of the universe, of whose exultation and anger were (severally) born Brahmā (the creator) and Rudra (the god of destruction). (1) You for your part, O king, give up this (foolish) notion, characteristic of a brute, that you will die. Unlike the body—which is born at a particular moment while it was non-existent before and, therefore, perishes—you (the soul that you are) were not so born and (therefore) will not die. (2) You were never born (as a father) nor will you be born in the form of a son and again in that of a grandson, and so on as the tree from a seed and (again) a seed from the tree; (for) you are (quite) distinct from the body etc., just as fire (is distinct from the firewood). (3) Since—just as in the dream state a man himself sees his head lopped off—one witnesses the death etc., of one's body (alone, and not of the self, which is the seer and different from those states), the self (within you) is as a matter of fact undying and unborn. (4) (Just) as when an earthen pot is broken the space enclosed by it is (once more) the same as it was before (the pot came into existence), so when the body is (finally) dissolved (as a result of Self-Realization) the individual soul becomes one with Brahma again. (5) The mind alone creates bodies, objects of senses and actions for the soul. It is Māyā that creates the aforesaid mind; and from Māyā proceeds the transmigration of the Jiva. (6) A light maintains its character as light (only) so long as there is found the combination of oil, that which holds the oil, a wick and fire. Even so it is through the action of Rajas, Sattva and Tamas that a body appears and ceases; while transmigration has its root in mistaking the body as one's own self. (7) (Just as with the going out of a light the element of fire does not perish, so) the soul encased in a body does not perish (with the body)—the soul which is self-effulgent and lies beyond the physical no less than the astral body, inasmuch as it is the support of all, immutable and all-pervasive, (nay,) endless and unparalleled like the sky. (8)

एवमात्मानमात्मस्थमात्मनैवाभूश प्रभो । बुद्ध्यानुमानगर्भिण्या वासुदेवानुचिन्तया । ९ ।
 चोदितो विप्रवाक्येन न त्वां धक्ष्यति तक्षकः । मृत्यवो नोपधक्ष्यन्ति मृत्यूनां मृत्युमीश्वरम् । १० ।
 अहं ब्रह्म परं धाम ब्रह्माहं परमं पदम् । एवं समीक्षन्नात्मानमात्मन्याधाय निष्कले । ११ ।
 दशन्तं तक्षकं पादे लेलिहानं विषाननैः । न द्रक्ष्यसि शरीरं च विश्वं च पृथगात्मनः । १२ ।
 एतन्ते कथितं तात यथाऽऽत्मा पृष्ठवान् नृप । हरेर्विश्वात्मनश्चेष्टां किं भूयः श्रोतुमिच्छसि । १३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे ब्रह्मोपदेशो नाम पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Full of constant thought of Lord Vāsudeva, O king, investigate thus (the truth of) the Self encased in your psychophysical organism, by your own effort with the help of syllogistic reasoning. (9) Urged by the curse of a Brāhmaṇa, the serpent Takṣaka will not be able to burn you (the soul within your body, even though it may burn the body). (All) the agents of Death (combined) cannot burn you, who are (no other than) the Death of deaths, the almighty Lord

(Himself). (10) "I am Brahma, the supreme support, and Brahma, the highest goal am I !" Thus identifying yourself with the Absolute (your very Self), and realizing your true nature, you will behold neither the serpent Takṣaka biting you at your feet with its poisonous fangs nor your body nor the universe as apart from you. (11-12) (All) this has been narrated to you (by me), O dear Parikṣit ! in response to what you, my very self, inquired concerning the pastimes of Lord Śrī Hari, the Soul of the universe, O protector of men ! What more do you desire to hear ? (13)

Thus ends the fifth discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

(Parikṣit attains the supreme goal and Janamejaya commences a snake-sacrifice;) Classification of the Vedas into so many Śākhās or schools

सूत उवाच

एतन्निशम्य मुनिनाभिहितं परीक्षिद् व्यासात्मजेन निखिलात्मदृशा समेन ।

तत्पादमूलमुपसृत्य नतेन मूर्ध्ना बद्धाञ्जलिस्तमिदमाह स विष्णुरातः । १ ।

Sūta began again : Having heard this discourse of the sage Śuka (the son of Vyāsa), who beheld the universe within himself and looked upon all with an equal eye, the said Parikṣit, who had been granted his life by the Lord, approached the soles of the sage's feet and with bent head and joined palms spoke thus. (1)

राजोवाच

सिद्धोऽस्म्यनुगृहीतोऽस्मि भवता करुणात्मना । श्रावितो यच्च मे साक्षादनादिनिधनो हरिः । २ ।

नात्यद्भुतमहं मन्ये महतामच्युतात्मनाम् । अज्ञेषु तापतप्तेषु भूतेषु यदनुग्रहः । ३ ।

पुराणसंहितामेतामश्रौष्य भवतो वयम् । यस्यां खलूत्तमश्लोको भगवाननुवर्णयते । ४ ।

भगवंस्तत्क्षकादिभ्यो मृत्युभ्यो न बिभेम्यहम् । प्रविष्टो ब्रह्म निर्वाणमभयं दर्शितं त्वया । ५ ।

अनुजानीहि मां ब्रह्मन् वाचं यच्छाम्यथोक्षजे । मुक्तकामाशयं चेतः प्रवेश्य विसृजाम्यसून् । ६ ।

अज्ञानं च निरस्तं मे ज्ञानविज्ञाननिष्ठया । भवता दर्शितं क्षेमं परं भगवतः पदम् । ७ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : I stand accomplished of purpose and have been favoured by your gracious self in that I have been directly told of Śrī Hari, who has no beginning or end, as well as of the means of attaining Him. (2) I do not consider it surprising that the grace of exalted souls, who have given their mind to Śrī Hari (the immortal Lord), descends on the ignorant creatures tormented by agonies. (3) We have heard from you the compilation in the form of this Purāṇa, in which the most illustrious Lord has been described as a matter of fact. (4) Lord ! I am afraid neither of Takṣaka nor of other agencies of death, since I have (now) entered the fearless and all-blissful state of oneness with Brahma (the Absolute) as shown by you. (5) (Now) give me permission, O Brāhmaṇa sage ! I shall control (all my senses including) speech and, having established my mind, which is free from (all) cravings, in (the thought of) Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception), give up the ghost. (6) My ignorance (nescience) including its seed has been eradicated by firmness in Jñāna (the knowledge of truth) and Vijñāna (its Realization) since the supreme state of the Lord, which rids (one) of all fear, has been revealed (to me) by you. (7)

सूत उवाच

इत्युक्तस्तमनुज्ञाय भगवान् बादरायणिः । जगाम भिक्षुभिः साकं नरदेवेन पूजितः । ८ ।

परीक्षिदपि राजर्षिरात्मन्यात्मानमात्मना । समाधाय परं दध्यावस्पन्दसुर्यथा तरुः । ९ ।

प्राक्काले बर्हिध्यासीनो गङ्गाकूल उड्डमुखः । ब्रह्मभूतो महायोगी निःसङ्गश्छिन्नसंशयः । १० ।

Sūta resumed: Thus addressed and worshipped by the king, the divine Śrī Śuka (son of Vedavyāsa) took leave of him and departed alongwith (other) ascetics. (8) Uniting his mind by force of reason with the Self, the royal sage Parikṣit for his part contemplated on the Supreme Spirit, remaining breathless like (the trunk of) a tree. (9) With (all) his doubts resolved, (nay,) identified with Brahma (the Absolute) and free from attachment, the great Yogi sat down on the bank of the (holy) Gaṇḍā facing the north on blades of Kuśa grass, the ends of which pointed to the east. (10)

तक्षकः प्रहितो विप्राः क्रुद्धेन द्विजसूनुना । हन्तुकामो नृपं गच्छन् ददर्श पथि कश्यपम् । ११ ।

तं तर्पयित्वा द्रविणैर्निवर्त्य विषहारिणम् । द्विजरूपप्रतिच्छत्रः कामरूपोऽदशत्रुपम् । १२ ।

ब्रह्मभूतस्य राजर्षेर्दहोऽहिगरलाग्निना । बभूव भस्मसात् सद्यः पश्यतां सर्वदेहिनाम् । १३ ।

हाहाकारो महानासीद् भुवि खे दिक्षु सर्वतः । विस्मिता ह्यभवन् सर्वे देवासुरनरादयः । १४ ।

देवदन्तुभ्यो नेदुरान्धर्वाप्सरसो जगुः । ववुषुः पुष्पवर्षाणि विबुधाः साधुवादिनः । १५ ।

Directed by the infuriated son of a Brāhmaṇa and going to (see) the king with the intention of biting him to death, O Brāhmaṇas ! Takṣaka met on the way (a Brāhmaṇa named) Kaśyapa. (11) Having gratified Kaśyapa, who knew how to counteract the effect of poison, with gifts of money and sent him back, the serpent, who was capable of assuming any form at will, and came disguised as a Brāhmaṇa (approached and) bit the king. (12) By the action of fire produced by the poison of the snake the body of the royal sage, who had become one with Brahma, was instantly reduced to ashes, while all men looked on. (13) There arose a terrible outcry on earth as well as in the heavens and in all the quarters; while gods and demons as well as men and all others were really struck with wonder. (14) Celestial kettle-drums sounded (of their own accord), Gandharvas and Apsarās (celestial musicians and dancing girls) sang praises; while gods sent down showers of flowers, raising shouts of applause. (15)

जनमेजयः स्वपितरं श्रुत्वा तक्षकभक्षितम् । यथा जुहाव संक्रुद्धो नागान् सत्रे सह द्विजैः । १६ ।

सर्पसत्रे समिद्धाग्नौ दह्यमानान् महोरगान् । दृष्टेन्द्रं भयसंविग्रस्तक्षकः शरणं ययौ । १७ ।

अपश्यंस्तक्षकं तत्र राजा पारीक्षितो द्विजान् । उवाच तक्षकः कस्मात्त दह्येतोर्गाधमः । १८ ।

तं गोपायति राजेन्द्र शक्रः शरणमागतम् । तेन संस्तम्बितः सर्पस्तस्मात्त्राग्नौ पतत्यसौ । १९ ।

पारीक्षित इति श्रुत्वा प्राहत्विज उदारधीः । सहेन्द्रस्तक्षको विप्रा नाम्नो किमिति पात्यते । २० ।

तच्छ्रुत्वाऽऽजुहुर्विप्राः सहेन्द्रं तक्षकं मखे । तक्षकाशु पतस्वहे सहेन्द्रेण मरुत्वता । २१ ।

इति ब्रह्मोदिताक्षेपैः स्थानादिन्द्रः प्रचालितः । बभूवुः सम्भ्रान्तमतिः सविमानः सतक्षकः । २२ ।

तं पतन्तं विमानेन सहतक्षकमम्बरात् । विलोक्यार्हिस्रसः प्राह राजानं तं बृहस्पतिः । २३ ।

नैष त्वया मनुष्येन्द्र वधमर्हति सर्पराट् । अनेन पीतममृतमथ वा अजरामरः । २४ ।
 जीवितं मरणं जन्तोर्गतिः स्वेनैव कर्मणा । राजस्ततोऽन्यो नान्यस्य प्रदाता सुखदुःखयोः । २५ ।
 सर्पचौराग्निविद्युदभ्यः क्षुत्तृड्ब्याध्यादिभिर्नृप । पञ्चत्वमृच्छते जन्तुर्भुङ्क्त आरब्धकर्म तत् । २६ ।
 तस्मात् सत्रमिदं राजन् संस्थीयेताभिचारिकम् । सर्पा अनागसो दग्धा जनैर्दिष्टं हि भुज्यते । २७ ।

Enraged to hear of his father having been consumed by Takṣaka, Janamejaya with the help of Brāhmaṇa priests started in the course of a sacrifice offering snakes in the prescribed manner into the sacrificial fire. (16) Agitated with fear to see great serpents burning in blazing fire at the snake-sacrifice, Takṣaka sought (the presence of) Indra for protection. (17) Not seeing Takṣaka there, King Janamejaya (son of Parīkṣit) inquired of the Brāhmaṇas as to why Takṣaka, the vilest of all snakes, was not being burnt. (18) (They replied,) "Indra, O ruler of kings, protects him as the latter has sought him for protection. The snake has been held back by Indra, hence he does not fall into the fire." (19) Hearing this, Janamejaya (son of Parīkṣit), highly intelligent as he was, said to the priests, "Why should Takṣaka not be invoked by you, O Brāhmaṇas, alongwith Indra to fall into the sacrificial fire?" (20) Hearing this the Brāhmaṇas invoked (the presence of) Takṣaka alongwith Indra in the sacrifice thus: "Takṣaka ! soon fall down here with Indra, who has the (forty-nine) Maruts (wind-gods) for his followers." (21) Indra alongwith his aerial car, Takṣaka and all, was made to move from his abode by the maledictions uttered by the Brāhmaṇas and felt greatly agitated in mind. (22) Brhaspati, the son of Aṅgīrā, expostulated (thus) with the said king (Janamejaya) when he saw Indra falling from the heavens alongwith Takṣaka and the celestial car:—(23) "This kind of serpents cannot be killed by you, O ruler of men; for he has drunk of nectar and is therefore unquestionably immortal and immune from old age. (24) Life and death of a living being as well as its existence in the other world is determined by its own doing, O king ! None else can bring happiness or misery to another than the latter's own doing. (25) When a living being meets (its) death through the medium of a snake, thief, fire or lightning, or through hunger, thirst, disease and the like, O protector of men, it (only) reaps thereby the fruit of such Karma as has begun to bear fruit. (26) Therefore, let this sacrifice, actuated as it is by a malevolent purpose, O king ! be stopped, as serpents burnt through it were (all) innocent. (But you too are not to blame; for) as a matter of fact, it is the fruit of one's own (past) doings that is reaped by living beings." (27)

सूत उवाच

इत्युक्तः स तथेत्याह महर्षेर्मानयन् वचः । सर्पसत्रादुपरतः पूजयामास वाक्पतिम् । २८ ।
 सैषा विष्णोर्महामायाबाध्यालक्षणा यया । मुह्यन्त्यसैवात्मभूता भूतेषु गुणवृत्तिभिः । २९ ।
 न यत्र दम्भीत्यभया विराजिता मायाऽऽत्मवादेऽसकृदात्मवादिभिः ।
 न यद्विवादो विविधस्तदाश्रयो मनश्च सङ्कल्पविकल्पवृत्ति यत् । ३० ।
 न यत्र सुज्यं सुजतोभयोः परं श्रेयश्च जीवन्निभिरन्वितस्त्वहम् ।
 तदेतदुत्सादितबाध्यबाधकं निषिध्य चोर्मीन् विरमेत् स्वयं मुनिः । ३१ ।
 परं पदं वैष्णवमामनन्ति तद् यत्रेति नेतीत्यतदुत्सुक्ष्वः ।
 विसृज्य दौरात्यमनन्यसौहृदा हृदोपगुह्यावसितं समाहितैः । ३२ ।
 त एतदधिगच्छन्ति विष्णोर्यत् परमं पदम् । अहं ममेति दौर्जन्यं न येषां देहेगेहजम् । ३३ ।
 अतिवादास्तितिक्षेत नावमन्येत कञ्चन । न चेमं देहमाश्रित्य वैरं कुर्वीत केनचित् । ३४ ।
 नमो भगवते तस्मै कृष्णायकुण्ठमेधसे । यत्पादाम्बुरुहध्यानात् संहितामध्यागमिनाम् । ३५ ।

Sūta resumed : Thus advised, King Janamejaya said "Amen !" (Nay..) respecting the remonstrance of the great sage, he desisted from the snake-sacrifice, and (duly) worshipped Brhaspati (the master of eloquence). (28) Such is the well-known, though inconceivable, great Māyā (enchanting potency) of Lord Viṣṇu. Due to this Māyā, which cannot be (easily) set aside, living beings, that are His (own) particles, fall foul of their fellow-beings under the force of passions (such as anger, which are the outcome of the three Guṇas). (29) Māyā, which repeatedly flashes on the mind through the notion, 'A is a wily man', does not boldly reveal itself in God when (the nature of) the Self is being inquired into by the exponents of the Self (but is shown to exist somehow like one in great fear without discharging its function of enchanting others). (Nay,) in relation to Him there is no room for wordy warfare of various description originating from Māyā nor does the mind with its functions of ideation and doubt operate with regard to Him. (30) In relation to Him there does not exist any Karma (belonging to the category of virtue or sin) with factors responsible for it nor the fruit (in the shape of joy or sorrow) to be attained through both nor the ego, the adjunct of a Jiva, accompanied by the three above-named (viz., Karma, the factors responsible for it and the fruit of it). Such is the nature of God, who is neither capable of being opposed by nor of opposing anyone. (Therefore) renouncing the ego etc., (which are like so many waves of Māyā), a sage should himself specifically revel in the Self. (31) Yogis who have given up (false) identification with the body and the feeling of meum with regard to those connected with it and are exclusively devoted to God, and who are (therefore) keen to reject everything other than God as "not that", "not that", declare the aforesaid to be the supreme essence of the all-pervading Lord. (Nay,) it has been concluded to be such by those who, having embraced it with their heart (through meditation), have been able to control their mind, senses and body. (32) They (alone) are able to attain this supreme state of Lord Viṣṇu, who are free from the evil notion of 'I' and 'mine' with regard to their body and home (etc., respectively). (33) One should put up with abusive words, and show disrespect to none, nor should one enter into hostility with anyone for the sake of this (perishable) body. (34) Salutation to the illustrious Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of infinite intelligence, through meditation on whose lotus feet I learnt this compilation (in the form of Śrīmad Bhāgavata) ! (35)

शौनक उवाच

पैलादिभिर्व्यासशिष्यैर्वेदाचार्यैर्मातृभिः । वेदाश्च कतिधा व्यस्ता एतत् सौम्याभिधेहि नः । ३६ ।

Saunaka submitted : Into how many schools were the Vedas divided by Paila and other great souls, teachers of the Vedas and pupils of Vedavyāsa ? (Pray) relate this to us. (36)

सूत उवाच

समाहितात्मनो ब्रह्मन् ब्रह्मणः परमेष्ठिनः । हृद्याकाशादभून्नादो वृत्तिरोधाद् विभाव्यते । ३७ ।
यदुपासनया ब्रह्मन् योगिनो मलमात्मनः । द्रव्यक्रियाकारकाख्यं धृत्वा यान्त्यपुनर्भवम् । ३८ ।
ततोऽभूत्त्रिवृद्धागो योऽव्यक्तप्रभवः स्वराद् यत्तल्लिङ्गं भगवतो ब्रह्मणः परमात्मनः । ३९ ।
शृणोति य इमं स्फोटं सुप्तश्रोत्रे च शून्यदक् । येन वाग व्यज्यते यस्य व्यक्तिकाश आत्मनः । ४० ।
स्वधाम्नो ब्रह्मणः साक्षाद् वाचकः परमात्मनः । स सर्वमन्त्रोपनिषद्वेबीजं सनातनम् । ४१ ।

Sūta replied : From the cavity in the heart of Brahman (the creator), who occupies the highest position (in the universe), while his mind was composed (through meditation), O Saunaka ! there arose a sound, which can be distinctly perceived (by all) through control of the function of hearing (by closing one's ears), and by focussing one's mind on which, O

Brāhmaṇa sage, Yogis shake off the impurities of the mind—occasioned by the Adhibhuta (the body), Adhyātma (the organs of action) and Adhidaiva (the senses of perception)—and attain Liberation (cessation of birth and death). (37-38) From that sound emanated (the sacred syllable) OM—consisting of three parts (A, U, M),—whose origin is unmanifest, (nay,) which flashes (in the heart) by itself. It is this syllable which reveals (the true nature of) the almighty and infinite Supreme Spirit—that hears this unmanifest (inarticulate humming) sound (even) when the sense of hearing has ceased to function (due to the ears having been shut) and whose cognition is intact (even) when all the senses are inoperative (as in sound sleep or Samādhi)—by which (sacred syllable) speech (in the form of the Vedas) is manifested and which owes its manifestation in the cavity of the heart to the (Supreme) Spirit. (39-40) That syllable (again) is directly expressive of its origin, the infinite Supreme Spirit; it is the hidden meaning of all Mantras (sacred texts), the eternal seed of the Vedas (being no other than Brahma Itself). (41)

तस्य ह्यासंख्ययो वर्णा अकाराद्या भृगूद्वह । धार्यन्ते यैस्त्रयो भावा गुणनामाभिवृत्तयः । ४२ ।

ततोऽक्षरसमाग्रायमसृजद् भगवानजः । अन्तःस्थोऽप्यस्वरस्पर्शह्रस्वदीर्घादिलक्षणम् । ४३ ।

तेनासौ चतुरो वेदांश्चतुर्भिर्वदनेर्विभुः । सव्याहृतिकान् सोङ्कारांश्चातुर्होत्रविवक्षया । ४४ ।

पुत्रानध्यापयन्तांस्तु ब्रह्मर्षिन् ब्रह्मकोविदान् । ते तु धर्मोपदेशारः स्वपुत्रेभ्यः समादिशन् । ४५ ।

ते परम्परया प्राप्तास्तत्तच्छिष्यैर्धृतव्रतैः । चतुर्युगेष्वथ व्यस्ता द्वापरादौ महर्षिभिः । ४६ ।

क्षीणायुषः क्षीणसत्त्वान् दुर्मैधान् वीक्ष्य कालतः । वेदान् ब्रह्मर्षयो व्यसन् हृदिस्थाच्युतचोदिताः । ४७ ।

The syllable (OM), O jewel of the Bhṛguś ! comprised three letter-sounds— अ, उ, and म्, which (severally) hold (in the form of a seed) sets of three entities (viz.,) the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), the (three) names (R̥k. Yajus and Sāma), the (three) substances (spheres, viz., Bhūh—the terrestrial globe, Bhuvah—the aerial region and Swah—heaven) and the (three) states of consciousness (viz., wakefulness, dream and sound sleep). (42) Out of the aforesaid (three letters) the almighty Brahmā (the birthless creator) evolved the alphabet, comprising Antaḥsthas (semi-vowels), Uṣmas (aspirants), Swaras (vowels), Sparśas (sibilants) and the short, long and prolated measures of sounds. (43) With this alphabet the (mighty) Brahmā gave expression through his four mouths to the four Vedas—alongwith the (three) Vyāhrtis (Bhūh, Bhuvah and Swah) and OM (prefixed to the Gāyatri-Mantra while reciting it)—with the intention of pointing out the duties of the four priests (officiating at a sacrifice, viz., Hotā, Adhvaryu, Udgātā and Brahmā). (44) He then taught them to his (mind-born) sons (Marici and others), who were (all) Brāhmaṇa sages and (accordingly) expert in reciting the Vedas (with proper intonation etc.). The latter in their turn proved to be the promulgators of righteousness and taught the Vedas to their sons (Kāśyapa and others). (45) Received from generation to generation in the course of the four Yugas by the pupils of the various sages—pupils who observed the vow of (lifelong) celibacy (in order to retain them in their memory)—the aforesaid Vedas were later on divided by great seers (into Saṁhitās, Brāhmaṇas and so on) at the end of the Dwāpara age (lit., the period preceded by the Dwāpara age). (46) Perceiving the men to be shortlived, deficient in energy and dull-witted due to the action of Time (in the form of unrighteousness prevailing in it), the Brāhmaṇa seers rearranged the Vedas as directed by the immortal Lord residing in their heart. (47)

अस्मिन्नप्यन्तरे ब्रह्मन् भगवँल्लोकभावनः । ब्रह्मेशाद्यैर्लोकपालैर्याचितो धर्मगुप्तये । ४८ ।

पराशरात् सत्यवत्यामंशांशकलया विभुः । अवतीर्णो महाभाग वेदं चक्रे चतुर्विधम् । ४९ ।

ऋगथर्वयजुःसाग्रं राशीनुद्धृत्य वर्गशः । चतस्रः संहिताश्चक्रे मन्त्रैर्मणिगणा इव । ५० ।

तामां स चतुरः शिष्यानुपाहूय महामतिः । एकैकां संहितां ब्रह्मत्रैकैकस्मै ददौ विभुः । ५१ ।
 पैलाय संहितामाद्यां बह्वृचाख्यामुवाच ह । वैशम्पायनसंज्ञाय निगदाख्यं यजुर्गणम् । ५२ ।
 साप्तां जैमिनये प्राह तथा छन्दोगसंहिताम् । अथवाङ्मिरीं नाम स्वशिष्याय सुमन्तवे । ५३ ।
 पैलः स्वसंहितामूच इन्द्रप्रमितये मुनिः । बाष्कलाय च सोऽप्याह शिष्येभ्यः संहितां स्वकाम् । ५४ ।
 चतुर्धा व्यस्य बोध्याय याज्ञवल्क्याय भार्गव । पराशरायाग्रिमित्रे इन्द्रप्रमितरात्मवान् । ५५ ।
 अध्यापयत् संहितां स्वां माण्डूकेयमुषि कविम् । तस्य शिष्यो देवमित्रः सौभर्यादिभ्य ऊचिवान् । ५६ ।
 शाकल्यस्तत्सुतः स्वां तु पञ्चधा व्यस्य संहिताम् । वात्स्यमुद्गलशालीयगोखल्यशिशिरेषुधात् । ५७ ।
 जातूकर्ण्यश्च तच्छिष्यः सनिरुक्तां स्वसंहिताम् । बलाकपैजवैतालविरजेभ्यो ददौ मुनिः । ५८ ।
 बाष्कलिः प्रतिशाखाभ्यो वालखिल्याख्यसंहिताम् । चक्रे बालायनिर्भज्यः कासारश्चैव तां दधुः । ५९ ।
 बह्वृचाः संहिता ह्येता एभिर्ब्रह्मर्षिभिर्धृताः । श्रुत्वैतच्छ्रुत्वां व्यासं सर्वपापैः प्रमुच्यते । ६० ।

Descended from (the loins of) the sage Parāśara through Satyavati in the form of Vedavyāsa (representing a ray of Sattva, forming part of Māyā, the divine potency) as prayed to by Brahmā, Saṅkara and other guardians of the spheres, for the vindication of righteousness, O Brāhmaṇa sage, in the current Manvantara too, The almighty Lord, the Life-giver of the universe, divided the Veda, O highly blessed one ! into four parts. (48-49) Picking out and classifying in four (distinct) groups the multitudes of Mantras belonging to the categories of Ṛk, Atharva, Yajus and Sāma, (even) as various kinds of gems are assorted into so many groups, the said Mahārṣi compiled four Saṁhitās or collections out of those Mantras. (50) Summoning in his presence four (of his foremost) pupils (Paila and others), the powerful Vyāsa of mighty intellect imparted one of those collections to each, O Śaunaka ! (51) He taught, they say, the very first Saṁhitā under the name of Bahvr̥ca-Saṁhitā (because consisting of a collection of Ṛks or psalms) to Paila and the body of sacred texts in prose, recited during sacrifices and bearing the name of Nigada (prose), to another named Vaiśampāyana. (52) (Even) so he taught the body of Sāmas or songs, going by the name of Chandoga-Saṁhitā (because sung in various metres) to Jaimini and (the fourth called) Atharvāṅgirasi, to his (fourth) pupil Sumantu. (53) The sage Paila taught his own (Bahvr̥ca-) Saṁhitā (in two parts) one each to Indrapramiti and Bāṣkala; the latter too divided his branch into four parts and taught (one each), O scion of Bhṛgu, to the disciples Bodhya, Yājñavalkya, Parāśara and Agnimitra. Indrapramiti, a man of selfcontrol, taught his collection to the learned sage Māṇḍūkeya; and his pupil was Devamitra, who (in his turn) imparted its knowledge to the sages Saubhari and others. (54—56) Māṇḍūkeya's son was Śākalya, who for his part divided his collection into five branches and taught them to (his pupils) Vātsya, Mudgala, Śāfiya, Gokhalya and Śīśira. (57) The sage Jātukarmya, another pupil of Śākalya, imparted the knowledge of his own collection (in three parts), as well as of its Nirukta (explanation of obscure words), to his (four) pupils, Balāka, Pajja, Vaitāla and Viraja. (58) Bāṣkala's son, Bāṣkali, made out of all the (aforesaid) branches the collection bearing the name of Vālakhilya-Saṁhitā. (His pupils) Bālāyani, Bhajya and Kāsara (learnt and) memorized it. (59) By these Brāhmaṇa sages were (learnt and) preserved the Saṁhitās forming part of Ṛgveda. Hearing of the classification of these Mantras of the Veda one is completely absolved from all sins. (60)

वैशम्पायनशिष्या वै चरकाध्वर्यवोऽभवन् । यचेरुर्ब्रह्महत्याहःक्षपणं स्वगुरोर्ब्रतम् । ६१ ।
 याज्ञवल्क्यश्च तच्छिष्य आहाहो भगवन् कियत् । चरितेनाल्पसाराणां चरिष्येऽहं सुदुश्चरम् । ६२ ।
 इत्युक्तो गुरुरप्याह कुपितो याद्वालं त्वया । विप्रावमन्त्रा शिष्येण मदधीतं त्यजाश्रिति । ६३ ।
 देवरातसुतः सोऽपि छर्दित्वा यजुषां गणम् । ततो गतोऽथ मुनयो ददृशुस्तान् यजुर्गणान् । ६४ ।

यजुषि तित्तिरा भूत्वा तल्लोलुपतयाऽऽदुः । तैत्तिरीया इति यजुःशाखा आसन् सुपेशलाः । ६५ ।
 याज्ञवल्क्यस्ततो ब्रह्मन् छन्दांस्यधिगवेषयन् । गुणैरविद्यमानानि सूपतस्थेऽर्कमीश्वरम् । ६६ ।

As is well-known, some pupils of Vaiṣampāyana were known as Carakādhwaryus because they went through on behalf of their teacher a course of penance to expiate the sin of Brahmanicide. (61) (Thereupon) Yājñavalkya, another disciple of Vaiṣampāyana, submitted (to his preceptor), "Oh, of what account, venerable sir, will be the reward obtained through the penance of these pupils (of yours) of poor strength ! I shall undergo a course of penance very difficult to practise." (62) Offended, when addressed thus, the preceptor retorted, "Get away (from here). I have nothing more to do with you, a pupil contemning Brāhmaṇas. Give up at once all that you have learnt from me." (63) Vomiting the portions of Yajurveda (which he had learnt from his preceptor), Yājñavalkya, son of Devarāta, too immediately left the place. Sages beheld those portions of Yajurveda and, greatly enamoured of them, assumed the form of partridges and picked them up. (Thenceforward) that most attractive branch of Yajurveda came to be known by the name of Taittiriya (connected with partridges). (64-65) Seeking to obtain additional Śrutis not known even to his preceptor, Yājñavalkya, O Brāhmaṇa sage, thereupon duly extolled the Sun-god, the Master of the Vedas (as follows). (66)

याज्ञवल्क्य उवाच

ॐ नमो भगवते आदित्यायाखिलजगतामात्मस्वरूपेण कालस्वरूपेण चतुर्विधभूतनिकायानां
 ब्रह्मादिस्तम्बपर्यन्तानामन्तर्हृदयेषु बहिरपि चाकाश इवोपाधिनाव्यवधीयमानो भवानेक एव
 क्षणलवनिमेषावयवोपचितसंवत्सरगणेनापामादानविसर्गाभ्यामिमां लोकयात्रामनुवहति । ६७ ।

यदु ह वाव विबुधर्षभ सवितरदस्तपत्यनुसवनमहरहाराग्रायविधिनोपतिष्ठमानानामखिल-
 दुरितवृजिनबीजावभर्जनं भगवतः समभिधीमहि तपनमण्डलम् । ६८ ।

य इह वाव स्थिरचरनिकाणां निजनिकेतनानां मनइन्द्रियासुगणानानात्मनः स्वयमात्मान्तर्त्यामी
 प्रचोदयति । ६९ ।

य एवेमं लोकमतिकरालवदनाथकारसंज्ञाजगरग्रहगलितं मृतकमिव विचेतनमवलोक्यानु-
 कम्पया परमकारुणिक ईक्षयैवोत्थाप्याहरनुसवनं श्रेयसि स्वधर्माख्यात्मावस्थाने प्रवर्तयत्यवनि-
 पतिरिवासाधूनां भयमुदीरयन्नटति । ७० ।

परित आशापालैस्तत्र कमलकोशाञ्जलिभिरुपहृतार्हणः । ७१ ।

अथ ह भगवंस्त्व चरणनलिनयुगलं त्रिभुवनगुर्भविर्दितमहमयातयामयजुःकाम

उपसरामीति । ७२ ।

Yājñavalkya prayed : Hail to the almighty Sun-god, denoted by the sacred syllable OM ! Dwelling as the very Soul of the universe in the heart of multitudes of created beings—falling under four categories (viz., mammals, oviparous creatures, the sweet-born and those sprouting from the soil), from Brahmā down to a clump of grass—and outside too as (the wheel of) Time revolving in the form of years made up of (minute) parts like an instant, a moment and the twinkling of an eye, yet unlimited by any condition, like the sky, You maintain the progress of the world all alone by sucking (in the hot season) and releasing the moisture (during the monsoon). (This passage explains the meaning of the first foot of the Gāyatri-Mantra.) (67) We duly and devoutly contemplate on that well-known orb of Your venerable Self, O Jewel among the gods, which is burning over there, O Father (of the universe), who burn away all the sins and miseries (resulting from them) as well as their seed (viz., ignorance) of those who wait upon You (with prayers etc.) in the manner prescribed by the Vedas thrice everyday (morning and evening as well as at midday). (This passage explains the meaning of the second foot of the Gāyatrī-Mantra. (68) As the Inner Controller of the multitudes of immobile and mobile creatures in this (visible) universe, which, as is well-known, constitute Your own bodies, You being their very Self, You direct their mind, senses and vital airs, which are (all) material (and therefore inert). (This explains the meaning of the third and last foot of the Gāyatrī-Mantra.) (69) Seeing this world swallowed by the diabolical python bearing the name of darkness and wearing a most dreadful aspect, and (therefore) lying unconscious as though dead, You a lone rouse it by Your mere glance out of compassion, supremely compassionate as You are, and direct it thrice everyday to the adoration of the Supreme Spirit, leading to the highest good under the name of their own sacred duty. Like a king You go about instilling fear in (the heart of) the wicked and waited upon at every point by the guardians of the quarters with offerings of water and lotus buds in their joined palms. (70-71) Obviously for the same reason, O Lord, do I resort to Your lotus-feet, bowed to by those (Indra and others) adored in all the three worlds, desirous as I am of receiving knowledge of the portions of Yajurveda (hitherto) unknown by anyone else. That is all. (72)

सूत उवाच

एवं स्तुतः स भगवान् वाजिरूपधरो हरिः । यजुष्ययातयामानि मुनयेऽदात् प्रसादितः । ७३ ।
यजुर्भिरकरोच्छाखा दशपञ्च शतैर्विभुः । जगद्ब्रह्मजस्यस्ताः काण्वमाध्यन्दिनादयः । ७४ ।
जैमिनेः सामगस्यासीत् सुमन्तुस्तनयो मुनिः । सुन्वास्तु तत्सुतस्ताभ्यामेकैकान् प्राह संहिताम् । ७५ ।
सुकर्मा चापि तच्छिष्यः सामवेदतरोर्महान् । सहस्रसंहिताभेदं चक्रे साग्रं ततो द्विजः । ७६ ।
हिरण्यनाभः कौसल्यः पौष्यश्च सुकर्मणः । शिष्यौ जगद्ब्रह्मज्ञान्य आवन्त्यो ब्रह्मवित्तमः । ७७ ।
उदीच्याः सामगाः शिष्या आसन् पञ्चशतानि वै । पौष्यज्यावन्वयोश्चापि तांश्च प्राच्यन् प्रवक्षते । ७८ ।
लौगाक्षिर्मङ्गलिः कुल्यः कुसीदः कुक्षिरेव च । पौष्यश्चि शिष्या जगद्ब्रह्मज्ञान्य संहितास्य शतं शतम् । ७९ ।
कृतो हिरण्यनाभस्य चतुर्विंशतिसंहिताः । शिष्य ऊचे स्वशिष्येभ्यः शेषा आवन्त्य आस्यवान् । ८० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे वेदशाखाप्रणयने नाम षष्ठोऽध्यायः । ६ ।

Sūta continued : Extolled thus, the celebrated and glorious Sun-god felt (highly) propitiated and, assuming the form of a horse, taught the sage such portions of the Yajurveda as were (hitherto) unknown to anyone else. (73) Out of the countless Mantras of Yajurveda (revealed to him by the Sun-god) the powerful Yājñavalkya compiled (as many as) fifteen Śākhās known by the name of Vājasanī. Sage Kārṇa, Mādhyaṇḍina and others learnt them. (74) Sage Sumantu was the son of Jaimini, the chanter of Sāmaveda (as taught to him by Vedavyāsa—vide verse 53 above) and Sunvān was the son of Sumantu. Jaimini taught one collection to each of them. Then Sukarmā another Brāhmaṇa pupil of Jaimini, who had a mighty intellect, divided the tree of Sāmaveda into a thousand collections of psalms. (75-76) Hiranyanābha of Kośala, and Pausyañji, the two pupils of Sukarmā; and a third pupil, Avantya (by name), the foremost of the knowers of Brahma, learnt them. (77) Pausyañji and Avantya as well as Hiranyanābha had, it is said, five hundred pupils, who hailed from the north (and learnt as many Śākhās of Sāmaveda). (Yet) antiquarians call them Prācyas (perhaps construing this word in the sense of the ancient and not in the sense of easterners). (78) Laugākṣi, Māngali, Kulya, Kusida and Kuṣṣi, (other) pupils of Pausyañji, learnt a hundred collections each. (79) Kṛta, another pupil of Hiraṇyanābha, taught twenty-four collections to his (own) pupils; while Āvantya, (who was) a man of self-control, taught the rest to his. (80)

Thus ends the six discourse entitled "The classification of the Vedas into (so many) Sākhā schools", in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VII

Different Schools of Atharvaveda and the Characteristics of the Purāṇas

सूत उवाच

अथर्ववित् सुमन्तुश्च शिष्यमध्यापयत् स्वकाम् । संहितां सोऽपि पथ्याय वेददर्शाय चोक्तवान् । १ ।

शौक्लायनिर्ब्रह्मबलिर्मंदोषः पिप्पलायनिः । वेददर्शस्य शिष्यास्ते पथ्यशिष्यानथो शृणु । २ ।

कुमुदः शुनको ब्रह्मन् जाजलिश्चाप्यथर्ववित् । बभ्रुः शिष्योऽथाङ्गिरसः सैन्धवायन एव च ।

अधीयेतां संहिते द्वे सावर्ण्याद्यास्तथापरे । ३ ।

नक्षत्रकल्पः शान्तिश्च कश्यपाङ्गिरसादयः । एते आथर्वणाचार्याः शृणु पौराणिकान् मुने । ४ ।

Sūta began again : Sumantu versed in Atharva-Veda, taught his collection to his pupil (Kabandha*) who in his turn taught it (in two parts) to (his pupils) Pathya and Vedadarśa. (1) Śauklāyani, Brahmbali, Modoṣa and Pippalāyani were the pupils of Vedadarśa (who taught them his collection in four parts); now hear the names of Pathya's pupils: Kumuda, Śunaka and Jājali, a master of Atharvaveda, O Brāhmaṇa sage! (were the pupils of Pathya, from whom they received his collection in three parts). Babhru, a pupil of Śunaka (born in the line of Āṅgirā), and Saindhavāyana (another pupil) studied two (separate) collections (at the feet of their master); (while) Sāvarnya and others were the pupils of Babhru and Saindhavāyana. Even so there were others, e. g., Nakṣatrakalpa and Śānti (the authors of Kalpas or tretises of these very names on ritual acts, giving rules for them), Kaśyapa and Āṅgīrasa. These were the teachers of Atharva-Veda; (now) hear of the teachers of the Purāṇas, O Śaunaka ! (2—4)

त्रय्यारुणिः कश्यपश्च सावर्णिकृतव्रणः । वैशम्पायनहारीतौ च वै पौराणिका इमे । ५ ।

अधीयन्त व्यासशिष्यात् संहितां यत्पितुर्मुखात् । एकैकामहमेतेषां शिष्यः सर्वाः समध्यगाम् । ६ ।

कश्यपोऽहं च सावर्णी रामशिष्योऽकृतव्रणः । अधीमहि व्यासशिष्याच्चतस्रो मूलसंहिताः । ७ ।

Trayyarūṇi, Kaśyapa, Sāvarni, Akṛtavraṇa, Vaiśampāyana and Hārīta—these, as a matter of fact, are the six teachers of the Purāṇas. (5) They learnt one collection each from

* Vide Viṣṇu-Purāṇa, which says:-

अथर्ववेदं स मुनिः सुमन्तुर्मितवृत्तिः ।
शिष्यमध्यापयामास कबन्धं सोऽपि च द्विधा ।
कृत्वा तु वेददर्शाय तथा पथ्याय दत्तवान् ।

the mouth of my father (Romaharṣaṇa), the pupil of Vedavyāsa; while I, as their pupil, studied all the collections. (6) Kaśyapa, Sāvarni, Paraśurāma's pupil Akṛtavraṇa and myself (Ugrasravā) learnt four (more) original collections from (my father) Romaharṣaṇa (pupil of Vyāsa). (7)

पुराणलक्षणं ब्रह्मन् ब्रह्मर्षिभिर्निरूपितम् । शृणुष्व बुद्धिमाश्रित्य वेदशास्त्रानुसारतः । ८ ।
 सर्गोऽस्याथ विसर्गश्च वृत्ति रक्षान्तराणि च । वंशो वंशानुचरितं संस्था हेतुराश्रयः । ९ ।
 दशभिरलक्षणैर्युक्तं पुराणं तद्विदो विदुः । केचित् पञ्चविधं ब्रह्मन् महदल्पव्यवस्थया । १० ।
 अव्याकृतगुणक्षोभाभ्यन्तस्त्रिवृतोऽहम् । भूतमात्रेन्द्रियाश्चानां सम्भवः सर्ग उच्यते । ११ ।
 पुरुषानुगृहीतानामेतेषां वासनामयः । विसर्गोऽयं समाहारो बीजाद् बीजं चराचरम् । १२ ।
 वृत्तिर्भूतानि भूतानां चराणामचराणि च । कृता स्वेन नृणां तत्र कामाद्योदनयापि वा । १३ ।
 रक्षाच्युतावतरेहा विश्वस्यानु युगे युगे । तिर्यङ्मूर्त्यपि देवेषु हन्यन्ते यैस्त्रयीद्विषः । १४ ।
 मन्वन्तरं मनुर्देवा मनुष्याः सुरेश्वरः । ऋषयोऽशावतारश्च हरेः षड्विधमुच्यते । १५ ।
 राज्ञां ब्रह्मप्रसूतानां वंशस्त्रैकालिकोऽन्वयः । वंशानुचरितं तेषां वृत्तं वंशधराश्च ये । १६ ।
 नैमित्तिकः प्राकृतिको नित्य आत्यन्तिको लयः । संस्थेति कविभिः प्रोक्ता चतुर्धास्य स्वभावतः । १७ ।
 हेतुर्जीवोऽस्य सगदिरविद्याकर्मकारकः । यं चानुशयिनं प्राहुरव्याकृतमुतापरे । १८ ।
 व्यतिरेकान्वयो यस्य जाग्रत्प्रसुप्तसुषुप्तिषु । मायामयेषु तद् ब्रह्म जीववृत्तिबुधप्राश्रयः । १९ ।
 पदार्थेषु यथा द्रव्यं सन्मात्रं रूपनामसु । बीजादिपञ्चतान्तासु ह्यवस्थासु युतायुतम् । २० ।
 विरपेत यदा चित्तं हित्वा वृत्तित्रयं स्वयम् । योगेन वा तदाऽऽत्मानं वेदेहाया निवर्तते । २१ ।

(Now) hear, O Brāhmaṇa sage ! with a clear mind, the characteristics of the Purāṇas as determined by Brāhmaṇa seers according to (the viewpoint of) the Vedas and Śāstras. (8) Those well-versed in the Purāṇas declare the Purāṇas as distinguished by ten features (discussing the following ten topics), viz., Sarga (creation) of the universe, Visarga, Vṛtti, Rakṣā, the Manvantaras, Varṇśas (dynasties of kings), Varṇśānucarita, Saṁsthā, Hetu and Apāśraya.* Some teachers recognize the features of the Purāṇas as fivefold (only), O Śaunaka ! side by side with the distinction of great and small (according as they deal with ten topics or five† only). (9-10) The evolution of Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence) through the disturbance in the equilibrium of the three Guṇas constituting the Unmanifest (Primordial Matter), of the threefold Ahankāra (from the Mahat-tattva) and (from the threefold Ahankāra) of the five subtle elements, the (eleven) Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs or action and the mind), and their objects (viz., the five gross elements as well as of the deities presiding over the senses) is called Sarga or creation. (11) Visarga is (the name of) this collective creation, both mobile and immobile, of the aforesaid (causal principles) fecundated by the Supreme Person (God), and brought about by the latencies of (past) Karma (of the countless Jivas), proceeding from seed to seed (as a continuum). (12)

* These terms have already been mentioned with some variations in II. x. 3-7. The words 'Vṛtti' and 'Rakṣā' should be taken as synonymous with 'Sthāna' and 'Posana' occurring in that text; what has been referred to here under the name of 'Varṇśānucarita' should be taken to mean 'Śānukathā' the word 'Saṁsthā' should be understood in the sense of 'Nirodha', and also as covering the idea of 'Mukti'; and the word 'Hetu' should be construed to mean 'Uti' a 'Apāśraya' of course is the same as 'Asraya'.

† The five features are:—Sarga and Pratisarga. Varṇśas and the Manvantaras and Varṇśānucaritas, as the following couplet shows:—

सर्गश्च प्रतिसर्गश्च वंशो मन्वन्तराणि च । वंशानुचरितं चैत पुराणं पञ्चलक्षणम् ॥

The other five are understood as included in these.

Immobile creatures (e.g., annual plants and trees etc.) and (in some cases) the mobile too constitute the Vṛtti (means of subsistence) of mobile creatures. There (again) the sustenance of human beings has been determined 1—by their nature, 2—desire or 3—even by scriptural ordinance. (A description contained in Book Five of Śrīmad Bhāgavata, of the terrestrial globe, as the support of the entire creation, both mobile and immobile, thus falls under the category of 'Vṛtti'.) (13) The exploits of the Avatāras of Bhagavān Viṣṇu (the immortal Lord), appearing from age to age according to the needs of every age among birds and beasts, human beings, R̥ṣis and gods—by whom the enemies of the Vedas (such as the demons) are put an end to (for the protection of the righteous)—constitute (what is known as) the "Rakṣā" (protection) of the universe. (14) The period over which (the following six, viz.,) a Manu, the gods, the sons of the Manu, Indra (the ruler of the gods), the (seven) R̥ṣis and the partial manifestation of the Lord preside is what goes by the name of a Manvantara characterized by six elements. (15) "Vamśa" denotes the line, extending over (all) the three divisions of time (viz., the past, present and future), of king of pure descent (as sprung from Brahmā). A connected account of such kings as also of their descendants (upholding the honour and prestige of the line) is (what has been referred to by the name of) Vamśānucarita. (16) The fourfold dissolution of this (visible) universe, manifested by Mayā, viz., 1-occasional, 2-Prākṛitika, 3-constant and 4-radical, has been spoken of by the sage as "Samsṭhā". (17) The "Hetu" (cause) of creation etc., of this (phenomenal) universe is the Jīva (the individual soul), the doer of actions prompted by ignorance, which some people (who stress its spiritual nature) characterize as having to its credit a stock of unrequited Karma; while others (who emphasize its conditioned existence) declare it as nameless and formless. (18) 'Apāśraya' stands for Brahma (the Absolute), which is present in (all) the (three) states undergone by a Jīva (individual soul), viz., wakefulness, dream and deep slumber, as well as in all substances which are products of Māyā (as their cause), and is also distinct from them, (nay,) which actually runs through all the (nine) states undergone by a living organism, from entry into the womb in the form of a seed to death (as their ground or substratum), and is also distinct from them (as their witness) even like the material of which substances are made or as bare existence, underlying names and forms. (19-20) When the mind becomes still of its own accord (through realization of the illusoriness of Sarga etc., as in the case of Vāmadeva and other sages) or through concentration (practised in one's current life, as in the case of mother Devahūti and others), then one realizes the Self (consequent on the cessation of ignorance due to absence of distraction) and, transcending the three states (of consciousness), with-draws from (worldly) activity. (21)

एवं लक्षणलक्ष्याणि पुराणानि पुराविदः । मुनयोऽष्टादश प्राहुः क्षुल्लकानि महान्ति च । २२ ।
 ब्राह्मं पदं वैष्णवं च शैवं लैङ्गं सगारुडम् । नारदीयं भागवतमात्रेयं स्कान्दसंज्ञितम् । २३ ।
 भविष्यं ब्रह्मवैवर्तं मार्कण्डेयं सवामनम् । वाराहं मातस्यं कौर्मं च ब्रह्माण्डाख्यमिति त्रिषद् । २४ ।
 ब्रह्मनिद्रं समाख्यातं शाखाप्रणयनं मुनेः । शिष्यशिष्यप्रशिष्याणां ब्रह्मतेजोविवर्धनम् । २५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे सप्तमोऽध्यायः । ७३ ।

Sages well-versed in the antiquities tell us of eighteen Purāṇas, big and small (in volume), distinguished by the aforesaid characteristics. (22) The eighteen Purāṇas go by the names of Brāhma, Padma, Viṣṇu, Śiva, Liṅga, Garuḍa, Nārada, Bhāgavata, Agni, Skanda, Bhaviṣya, Brahmaparivarta, Mārkaṇḍeya, Vāmana, Varāha, Matsya, Kūrma and Brahmaṇḍa. (23-24) In this way has been duly narrated (by me), O Brahmanā sage, the story as to how the sage Vedavyāsa and his pupils, their own pupils and pupils of their pupils classified the Vedas into (so many) branches—a story which intensifies to a great extent the Brahmanical (spiritual) glory (of those who listen to it). (25)

Thus ends the seventh discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

The sage Mārkaṇḍeya embarks on a course of austerities and receives a boon

शौनक उवाच

सूत जीव चिरं साधो वद नो वदतां वर । तमस्यपारे भ्रमतां नृणां त्वं पारदर्शनः । १ ।
आहुश्चिरायुषमृषिं मूकण्डतनयं जनाः । यः कल्पान्ते उर्वरितो येन ग्रस्तमिदं जगत् । २ ।
स वा अस्मत्कुलोत्पन्नः कल्पेऽस्मिन् भार्गवर्षभः । नैवाधुनापि भूतानां सम्भवः कोऽपि जायते । ३ ।
एक एवाणवे भ्राम्यन् ददर्श पुरुषं किल । वटपत्रपुटे तोकं शयानं त्वेकमद्भुतम् । ४ ।
एष नः संशयो भूयान् सूत कौतूहलं यतः । तं नश्चिन्धि महायोगिन् पुराणेष्वापि सम्मतः । ५ ।

Saunaka said : O Sūta, O good one, may you live long ! (Pray,) tell us one thing, O jewel among speakers ! You (alone) are able to show the way out to men wandering in endless darkness (in the shape of mundane existence). (1) People speak of Mārkaṇḍeya (the son of Mṛkaṇḍa) as a seer blessed with a long life, who remained alive even at the time of Pralaya (marking the close of a day of Brahmā), by which (the whole of) this (visible) universe was swallowed up. (2) The said Mārkaṇḍeya (the foremost of the scions of Bhṛgu), however, was born in this (very) Kalpa and in our own race and (so far as we know) no wholesale destruction of created beings has taken place (during the present Kalpa) even to this day. (3) It is (further) said that while drifting all alone in the single sheet of water (with which the entire world was flooded), he beheld the Supreme Person lying as a matter of fact in the form of an uncommon babe on a leaf of a banyan tree, formed in the shape of a cup. (4) O Sūta, this is a matter for great doubt to us, due to which there is (great) curiosity (in our mind). (Pray,) resolve the aforesaid doubt, O great Yogi, esteemed as you are even for your knowledge of the Purāṇas. (5)

सूत उवाच

प्रश्रस्त्वया महर्षेऽयं कृतो लोकभ्रमापहः । नारायणकथा यत्र गीता कलिमलापहा । ६ ।
प्राप्तद्विजातिसंस्कारो मार्कण्डेयः पितुः क्रमात् । छन्दीस्यधीत्य धर्मेण तपःस्वाध्यायसंयुतः । ७ ।
बृहद्वतधरः शान्तो जटिलो वल्कलाम्बरः । बिभ्रत् कमण्डलुं दण्डमुपवीतं समेखलम् । ८ ।
कृष्णाजिनं साक्षसूत्रं कुशांश्च नियमद्वये । अन्यैर्गुरुविप्रात्मस्वर्चयन् सन्ध्ययोर्हीम् । ९ ।
सायं प्रातः स गुरवे भैक्ष्यमाहृत्य वाग्यतः । बुभुजे गुर्वनुज्ञातः सकृन्नो चेदुपोषितः । १० ।
एवं तपःस्वाध्यायपरो वर्षाणामयुतायुतम् । आराधयन् हृषीकेशं जिग्ये मृत्युं सुदुर्जयम् । ११ ।

ब्रह्मा भृगुर्भवो दक्षो ब्रह्मपुत्राश्च ये परे । नृदेवपितृभूतानि तेनासन्नतिविस्मिताः । १२ ।
 इत्थं बृहद्व्रतधरस्तपःस्वाध्यायसंयमैः । दध्यावधोक्षजं योगी ध्वस्तक्लेशान्तरात्मना । १३ ।
 तस्यैवं युञ्जतश्चित्तं महायोगेन योगिनः । व्यतीयाय महान् कालो मन्वन्तरषड्दशमकः । १४ ।
 एतत् पुरन्दरो ज्ञात्वा सप्तमेऽस्मिन् किलान्तरे । तपोविशङ्कितो ब्रह्मन्नाश्रये तद्विघातनम् । १५ ।

Sūta replied: This inquiry made by you, O great sage, is (surely) intended to dispel a (great) misapprehension lurking in the mind of the people. (Moreover) in replying to this will have to be told the story of Śrī Nārāyaṇa, which (when sung) washes off the impurities of the Kali age. (6) Having gone through at the hands of his father in due course the sacred rite of investiture with the sacred thread (which constitutes the second birth of a boy of the twice-born classes) and studied the Vedas in the righteous way (according to the scriptural ordinance), Mārkaṇḍeya was equipped (in course of time) with asceticism and knowledge of the Veda. (7) Observing the vow of lifelong celibacy, and free from passions, he wore matted locks (on his head) and the sacred thread and a girdle of Mūñja grass (about his person) and used the bark for his clothing. He carried (in his hands) a staff, a handful of (the sacred) Kuśa grass, a Kamaṇḍalu (a vessel made from the shell of a wild cocoanut) and the skin of a black buck and a rosary of Rudrākṣa beads (on his person). For the enhancement of his virtue he worshipped Śrī Hari both morning and evening through the medium of the sacred fire, the sun, the preceptor and (other) Brāhmaṇas, as well as by identifying himself with Him. (8-9) Bringing food by way of alms morning and evening for the sake of his preceptor, he silently partook of it (only) when allowed by his teacher and at times remained without food if not (so) permitted (due to the sudden appearance of an unexpected guest). (10) Remaining devoted to austerities and study of the Vedas as aforesaid and worshipping Śrī Hari (the Ruler of the senses of all) for a crore of years, he conquered death, which is most difficult to conquer. (11) Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), Bhṛgu, Dakṣa and all the other sons of Brahmā, (nay,) men, gods, manes and other created beings were much astonished at that (extraordinary achievement of Mārkaṇḍeya). (12) Observing thus the vow of lifelong celibacy and equipped with asceticism, study of the Vedas and self-control, the Yogī (Mārkaṇḍeya) contemplated on Lord Śrī Hari (who is above sense-perception) with a mind that had turned inward due to (all) hindrances (in the shape of ignorance, egotism, likes and dislikes and fear of death) standing in its way having been completely destroyed. (13) (Even) as the said Yogī was (busy) concentrating his mind through the great Yoga (of meditation on the Lord), a very long period, covering six Manvantaras, elapsed. (14) Coming to know of this and alarmed at (the magnitude of) his (as fear, Indra the lord of paradise), it is said, started interrupting it in this seventh Manvantara (for lack of losing his throne), O Saunaka ! (15)

गन्धर्वाप्सरसः कामं वसन्तमलयानिलौ । मुनये प्रेषयामास रजस्तोकमदौ तथा । १६ ।
 ते वै तदाश्रमं जम्बुहिमाद्रेः पार्श्वं उत्तरे । पुष्पभद्रा नदी यत्र चित्राख्या च शिला विभो । १७ ।
 तदाश्रमपदं पुण्यं पुण्यदुमलताञ्जितम् । पुण्यद्विजकुलाकीर्णं पुण्यामलजलाशयम् । १८ ।
 मत्तभ्रमरसङ्गीतं मत्तकोकिलकूजितम् । मत्तबर्हिन्मृगदोषं मत्तद्विजकुलाकुलम् । १९ ।
 वायुः प्रविष्ट आदाय हिमनिर्झरशीकरान् । सुमनोषिः परिप्लुत्ते ववावुत्तम्भयन् स्मरम् । २० ।
 उद्यच्चन्द्रनिशावक्रः प्रवालस्तम्बकालिभिः । गोपदुमलताजालैस्तत्रासीत् कुसुमाकरः । २१ ।
 अन्वीयमानो गन्धर्वैर्गीतवादित्रयूथकैः । अदृश्यतात्तचापेषुः स्वः स्त्रीयूथपतिः स्मरः । २२ ।

(In order to bring about the sage's downfall) he sent to the sage Gandharvas (heavenly musicians) and Apsarās (celestial nymphs), Kāma (the god of love), (the deities presiding over) the vernal season and the south wind (i.e., a breeze blowing from the Malaya mountain), as well as greed (the pet child of Rajas) and pride. (16) They all repaired, O powerful sage ! to the hermitage of the sage along the northern slopes of the Himalāyas, where flows the river Puṣpabhadra and the rock named Citrā stands. (17) The hallowed site of that hermitage was adorned with sacred trees and creepers, crowded with families of holy Brāhmaṇa sages and studded with sacred pools full of pellucid water. (18) The hermitage was full of the melodious humming of (honey-) intoxicated bees and the notes of joyous cuckoos. It was marked with the ecstasy of dance of blithesome peacocks and teemed with flocks of joyous birds. (19) A breeze bearing the cool spray from waterfalls and embraced by (fragrant) flowers entered the hermitage and (gently) played on it, kindling love (in the hearts of men). (20) There appeared the vernal season with its evenings made charming by the rising moon and with rows of young leaves and bunches of flowers, and trees and creepers in close embrace. (21) The god of love, followed by Gandharvas with bands of musicians expert both in vocal and instrumental music, and leading troops of Apsarās, was (also) seen (there) with bow and arrows in hand. (22)

हुवायिं समुपासीनं ददुः शक्रकिङ्कराः। भीलिताक्षं दुराधर्षं मूर्तिमन्तमिवानलम्। १२३।
 ननुतस्तस्य पुरतः स्त्रियोऽथो गायका जगुः। मृदङ्गवीणापणवैर्वाद्यं चक्रुर्मनोरमम्। १२४।
 सन्दधेऽखं स्वधनुषि कामः पञ्चमुखं तदा। मधुर्धनो रजस्तोक इन्द्रभृत्या व्यकम्पयन्। १२५।
 क्रीडन्त्याः पुञ्जिकस्थल्याः कन्दुकैः स्तनगौरवात्। भृशमुद्विग्नमध्यायाः केशावस्त्रंसितस्तजः। १२६।
 इतस्ततोऽभ्रददृष्टेष्टलल्या अनुकन्दुकम्। वायुर्जहार तद्वासः सूक्ष्मं वृद्धितमेखलम्। १२७।
 विसर्जजं तदा बाणं मत्वा ते स्वजितं स्मरः। सर्वं तत्राभवन्मोघमनोशय यथोद्यमः। १२८।
 त इत्थमपकुर्वन्तो मुनेस्तत्तेजसा मुने। दह्यमाना निववृत्तः प्रबोध्योहिमिवार्धकाः। १२९।
 इतीन्द्रानुचरैर्ब्रह्मन् धर्षितोऽपि महामुनिः। यन्नागादहमो भावं न तच्चित्रं महत्सु हि। १३०।
 दुष्टा निस्तेजसं कामं सगणं भगवान् स्वराट्। श्रुत्वानुभावं ब्रह्मर्षेर्विसर्गं समगात् परम्। १३१।

The servants (emissaries) of Indra saw the sage comfortably seated with closed eyes near the sacred fire after pouring oblations into it and formidable like fire in human form. (23) The damsels danced and the songsters sang, while other Gandharvas played charmingly on clay tomtoms, lutes and small drums before him. (24) Then Love set the five-pointed arrow to his bow; while Spring, Greed (the son of Rajas) and other servants of Indra tried to agitate the sage's mind. (25) (Even) as Puñjikasthālī (the chief of the Apsarās) was sporting with (a number of) balls (in front of the sage) and running after them, her (slender) waist getting very unstable under the weight of her (full) breasts, wreaths of flowers dropping from her braid, and eyes moving this way and that, the breeze blew away the fine garment (about her loins), the waist-band (that held it fast) having given way. (26-27) Taking the sage as won by himself, Love darted his shaft that (very) moment; but, like the undertaking of an unlicky man, all his effort proved futile against the sage. (28) Thus offending against the sage, but being scorched by his glory, O sage, they withdrew like children that would run away after rousing a snake. (29) Though assailed as aforesaid by the servants of Indra, O Brāhmaṇa sage, the great sage (Mārkaṇḍeya) did not fall a prey to egotism. It is indeed no matter for wonder in the case of exalted souls. (30) The glorious Indra (the lord of paradise) was seized with great wonder to see Love and his entourage cheerless and to hear (from their lips) of the glory of the Brāhmaṇa sage. (31)

तस्यैव युञ्जतश्चित्तं तपःस्वाध्यायसंयमैः । अनुग्रहायाविरासीन्नरनारायणो हरिः । ३२ ।
 तौ शुक्लकृष्णौ नवकञ्जलोचनौ चतुर्भुजौ रौरवल्कलाम्बरौ ।
 पवित्रपाणी उपवीतकं त्रिवृत् कमण्डलुं दण्डमृजुं च वैणवम् । ३३ ।
 पद्माक्षमालामुत जन्तुमार्जनं वेदं च साक्षात्प एव रूपिणौ ।
 तपत्तटिद्वर्णापिशङ्गरोचिषा प्रांशू दधानौ विबुधैर्भास्वितौ । ३४ ।
 ते वै भगवतो रूपे नरनारायणावृषौ । दृष्ट्वेत्थायादरेणोच्चैर्ननामाङ्गेन दण्डवत् । ३५ ।
 स तत्सन्दर्शनानन्दनिर्वृतात्पेन्द्रियाशयः । हृष्टरोमाश्रुपूर्णाक्षो न सेहे तावदोक्षितम् । ३६ ।
 उत्थाय प्राञ्जलिः प्रह्व औत्सुक्यादारिलषत्रिव । नमो नम इतीशानौ बभौषे गद्गदाक्षरः । ३७ ।
 तयोरामनमादाय पादयोरवनिज्य च । अहंणेनानुलेपेन धूपमाल्यैरपूजयत् । ३८ ।
 सुखमासनमासीनौ प्रसादाभिमुखौ मुनी । पुनरानम्य पादाभ्यां गरिष्ठाविदमब्रवीत् । ३९ ।

To shower His grace on the sage, who was thus concentrating his mind (on the Lord) through asceticism, study of the Vedas and self-control, Lord Śrī Hari appeared before him in the form of (the divine sages) Nara and Nārāyaṇa. (32) Lords Nara and Nārāyaṇa, the adored (even) of the chief of the gods (Brahmā and others), were (severally) fair and dark-brown of complexion with eyes resembling fresh-blown lotuses, possessed of four arms each and clad in the skin of a black buck and bark (respectively). They wore rings of (the sacred) Kuśa grass and the sacred threefold thread (each consisting of three strands) as well as a string of lotus seeds and carried a Kamaṇḍalu, straight bamboo staff and a broom (made of yarns) for sweeping the ground and clearing it of insects (without killing them) as well as a handful of Kuśa. They were tall (of stature) and by the golden lustre (of Their body) resembling the bright flashes of lightning looked like two direct embodiments of asceticism itself. (33-34) Mārkaṇḍeya rose on seeing the sages Nara and Nārāyaṇa, the two well-known manifestations of the almighty Lord, and greeted Them with great reverence by his body fallen flat like a log (on the ground). (35) With his body, senses and mind exhilarated through joy occasioned by Their sight at close quarters, hair standing on end and eyes filled with tears, the sage could not look at them. (36) With joined palms he stood bent low, as though embracing Them out of longing, and said to the two almighty Lords in faltering tones, "Hail, hail (to You both) !" (37) Fetching Them a seat and washing Their feet, he worshipped Them by offering Them water to wash Their hands with, sandal-paste, incense and garlands. (38) When the two most exalted sages were comfortably seated and looked favourably disposed, the sage bowed at Their feet once more and spoke as follows. (39)

मार्कण्डेय उवाच

किं वर्णये तव विभो यदुदीरितोऽसुः संस्पन्दते तमनु वाङ्मनइन्द्रियाणि ।
 स्पन्दन्ति वै तनुभूतामजशर्वयोश्च स्वस्याप्यथापि भजतामसि भावबन्धुः । ४० ।
 मूर्ती इमे भगवतो भगवन्त्रिलोक्याः क्षेमाय तापविरमाय च मृत्युजित्यै ।
 नाना बिभर्ष्यवितुमन्यतनूर्यथेदं सृष्ट्वा पुनर्ग्रससि सर्वमिवोर्णनाभिः । ४१ ।
 तस्यावितुः स्थिरचरोशितुरङ्घ्रिमूलं यत्स्थं न कर्मगुणकालरुजः स्पृशति ।
 यद् वै स्तुवति निनमन्ति यजन्यभीक्ष्णं ध्यायन्ति वेदहृदया मुनयस्तदाप्त्यै । ४२ ।
 नान्यं तवाङ्घ्र्युपनयादपवर्गमूर्तेः क्षेमं जनस्य परितोभिय ईश विद्यः ।
 ब्रह्मा बिभेत्सलमतो द्विपरार्थधिष्यः कालस्य ते किमुत तत्कृतभौतिकानाम् । ४३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धेऽष्टमोऽध्यायः ॥ ८ ॥

Mārkaṇḍeya prayed : O Lord ! how can I extol You ? For, propelled by You (alone) function the vital air and following it the speech, mind and Indriyas (the senses of perception and the organs of action), not only of (all) embodied beings but even of Brahmā (the birthless creator) and Lord Śiva (the god of destruction) as well as of myself; yet You behave as a friend of the soul (and not only of the body as the parents and others do) of those who worship You (with these) ! (40) These two forms of Your omnipotent Self, O Lord ! stand revealed for the well-being, (nay,) for putting a stop to the (threefold) suffering and for the liberation (lit., subduing the death) of (the denizens of) the three worlds. (But) just as You assume many other forms (such as that of the divine Fish) in order to protect this universe, so (too) do You swallow everything after evolving it (just) like the spider (which produces a web and then swallows it). (41) The impurities incident to actions, the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and Time (and the aforesaid agonies etc.), can never contaminate him who takes refuge in the soles of feet of that Saviour (of the world) and Ruler of the immobile as well as the mobile creation (in You). (Nay,) in order to attain to those feet, as is well-known, sages that have treasured up (the spirit of) the Vedas in their heart extol, devoutly bow to, worship and constantly meditate on them. I resort to those (very) soles. (42) We know no safe retreat, O Lord ! for the Jīva, beset with fear on all sides, other than resorting to the feet of the Lord in You, the Embodiment of final beatitude. (Even) Brahmā, whose realm endures for two Parārdhas, is immensely afraid of Kāla (the Time-Spirit), which is a (mere) play of Your eyebrows; what wonder, then, that it inspires fear in the heart of living beings created by him ? (43) Therefore, turning my back upon (giving up all attachment to) this body and all that is connected with it—which obscures the Self and serves no (real) purpose, is unsubstantial and transient, and (really) no other than the (conscious) Self—I actually take refuge in the soles of feet of the Supreme in You, the Embodiment of true wisdom, the Director of the soul; for if a man resorts to those feet, he bids fair to secure from You every object sought for (by him). (44) Although Rajas, Sattva, and Tamas, O Lord, which are products of Māyā (Prakṛti) and (severally) responsible for the appearance, continuance and dissolution of this (visible) universe, O Befriender of the soul ! have been laid hold of by Yourself for (carrying on) Your pastimes (of creation etc.), Your Sattvika form (alone) is conducive to everlasting peace (in the form of final beatitude) and not the other two, from which proceed suffering, infatuation and fear to men. (45) Therefore, on realizing this truth, O Lord, men of wisdom in this world worship Your manifestation in the form of Lord Nārāyaṇa, (which is made up of Sattva unmixed with Rajas and Tamas and) which is (so) dear to (the heart of) Your devotees; for the followers of the Pāñcarātra school recognize Sattva (alone) and no other Guṇa to be the manifestation of the Supreme Person and through Sattva (alone) is attained (by them) the Lord's realm as well as (the state of) fearlessness and the bliss of Self-Realization. (46) Hail to You, the aforesaid Lord, the Inner Controller (of all), all-pervading as well as existing in the form of the universe, the Preceptor of the universe, the Supreme Deity appearing in the forms of the immaculate Sage Nārāyaṇa and Nara (the foremost of all the Jivas), who have controlled Your speech and promoted the cult of the Vedas. (47) He whose judgment is clouded by Your Māyā (deluding potency) and whose intellect is bewildered in following the paths of the misguiding senses does not, as is well-known, cognize You, even though present in his own senses, vital airs and heart, as well as in the objects of the senses (as the Inner Controller of all). The selfsame man, though ignorant only at the beginning, directly cognizes You on obtaining an insight into the Veda revealed by You, the Preceptor of all! (48) I bow to the Supreme Person (in You), whose vision, that reveals the secret of the Self, can be, obtained (only) through the Veda and about whose true nature (even) sages — the foremost of whom is Brahmā (the birthless creator), feel bewildered, though striving (to realize it through Sāṅkhya and Yoga etc.)—(nay) who assumes (presents Himself in) a character conforming to the conception of all (the various) schools of thought, and whose light (in the form of the Self) is screened by the body (and other limitations). (49)

Thus ends the eighth discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ नवमोऽध्यायः

Discourse IX

The sage Mārkaṇḍeya witnesses the Lord's Māyā

सूत उवाच

संस्तुतो भगवानिच्छं मार्कण्डेयेन धीमता । नारायणो नरसखः प्रीत आह भृगुर्ब्रह्म ॥ १ ॥

Sūta began again: Duly extolled in the aforesaid words by the talented sage Mārkaṇḍeya, Lord Nārāyaṇa, accompanied by Nara, felt (highly) pleased and spoke to that jewel among the Bhṛigus (as follows). (1)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

भो भो ब्रह्मर्षिर्वयांसि सिद्ध आत्मसमाधिना । मयि भक्त्यानपायिन्या तपःस्वाध्यायसंयमैः ॥ २ ॥

वयं ते परितुष्टाः स्म त्वद्बुद्धतत्त्वयया । वरं प्रतीच्छ भद्रं ते वरदेशादभीप्सितम् ॥ ३ ॥

The glorious Lord replied : Hullo ! you have attained perfection, O jewel among the Brāhmaṇa seers ! through concentration of mind, through unceasing devotion to Me as well as through asceticism, study of the Vedas and self-control. (2) We are highly pleased with you on account of your observing the vow of lifelong celibacy. May all be well with you ! (Therefore) receive your coveted boon from (Me,) the Ruler of all those who are capable of granting boons. (3)

ऋषिरुवाच

जितं ते देवदेवेश प्रपन्नार्तिहराच्युत । वरेणैतावतालं नो यद् भवान् समदृश्यत । ४ ।
गृहीत्वाजादयो यस्य श्रीमत्पादाब्जदर्शनम् । मनसा योगपक्वेन स भवान् मेऽक्षगोचरः । ५ ।
अथाप्यम्बुजपत्राक्ष पुण्यश्लोकशिखामणे । द्रक्ष्ये मायां यया लोकः सपालो वेद सद्भिदाम् । ६ ।

The sage submitted : Your (own) exalted nature has been testified to by You, O Ruler (even) of Brahmā, Śiva and others (the adored of the gods), in that You have been directly perceived by us, O Dispeller of the agony of those that have taken refuge in You ! This much of favour (shown by You) is enough (for us), O immortal Lord ! (4) Brahmā (the unborn creator) and others have felt perfectly gratified (even) on obtaining a vision of Your glorious lotus-like feet (only) in their mind purified through (the practice of) Yoga (concentration). The selfsame Lord in You has come within the range of my senses. (What greater boon than this could I have ?) (5) Nevertheless, O Lord with eyes resembling the petals of a lotus ! I would have a vision of Your Māyā, under the influence of which the world including the guardians of the spheres perceives diversity (in the form of this manifold creation) in the (one) Reality (viz., Yourself), O crest-jewel of those enjoying sacred renown ! (6)

सूत उवाच

इतीदितोऽर्चितः काममृषिणा भगवान् मुने । तथेति स सयन् प्रागाद् बर्दाश्रममीश्वरः । ७ ।
तमेव चिन्तयन्नर्थमृषिः स्वाश्रम एव सः । वसन्नन्यर्कसोमान्बुभूवायुवियदात्मसु । ८ ।
ध्यायन् सर्वत्र च हरिं भावद्रव्यैरपूजयत् । क्वचित् पूजां विसस्मार प्रेमप्रसरसम्पुतः । ९ ।

Sūta continued : Extolled in these words and worshipped by the sage according to his wishes, O Śaunaka ! the said almighty Lord replied, "So shall it be !" and withdrew to Badarikāśrama smiling. (7) Thinking (every moment) of the same object (the promised vision of the Lord's Māyā) and continuing in his own hermitage, Mārkaṇḍeya visualized Śrī Hari in the (sacred) fire, the sun, the moon, water, earth, the air, ether and his own self, nay, everywhere (else) and worshipped Him with articles conceived by the mind. At times (however), when overwhelmed with an outburst of emotion, he forgot worshipping the Lord. (8-9)

तस्यैकदा भृगुश्रेष्ठ पुष्पभद्रातटे मुनेः । उपासीनस्य सन्ध्यायां ब्रह्मन् वायुर्भूम्भहान् । १० ।
तं चण्डशब्दं समुदीरयन्तं बलाहका अन्वभवन् करालाः ।
अक्षस्थविष्ठा मुमुक्षुस्तडिद्धिः स्वनन्त उच्चैरभिवर्षधाराः । ११ ।
ततो व्यदृश्यन्त चतुःसमुद्राः समन्ततः क्ष्मातलमाग्रसन्तः ।
समीरवेगोर्मिभिरुग्रनक्रमहाभयावर्तगभीरयोषाः । १२ ।
अन्तर्बहिश्चाद्रितिद्युभिः खरैः शतहृदाभीरुपतापितं जगत् ।
चतुर्विधं वीक्ष्य सहात्मना मुनिर्जलाप्लुतां क्ष्मां विमनाः समप्रसत् । १३ ।
तस्यैवमुद्गीक्षत ऊर्मिभोषणः प्रभञ्जनापूणितवर्महार्णवः ।
आपूर्यमाणो वर्षेन्द्रिगन्धैः क्षमापय्यथाद् द्वीपवर्षाद्रिभिः समम् । १४ ।

सकृन्मन्त्रिर्दिवं सभागां त्रैलोक्यमासीत् सह दिग्भरावृतम् ।
 स एक एवोर्वस्ति महामुनिर्ब्रह्म विक्षिप्य जटा जडान्वत् । १५ ।
 क्षुत्तृपरीतो मकरैस्तिमिङ्गलैरुपद्रुतो वीचिनभस्वता हतः ।
 तमस्यपारे पतितो भ्रमन् दिशो न वेद खं गां च परिश्रमेषितः । १६ ।
 क्वचिद् गतो महावर्ते तरलेस्ताडितः क्वचित् । यादोर्भिक्ष्यते क्वापि स्वयमन्योन्याधातिभिः । १७ ।
 क्वचिच्छोकं क्वचिन्मोहं क्वचिद् दुःखं सुखं भयम् । क्वचिन्मृत्युमवाप्नोति व्याध्यादिभिस्तार्दितः । १८ ।
 अयुतायुतवर्षाणां सहस्राणि शतानि च । व्यतीयुर्भ्रमतस्तस्मिन् विष्णुमायावृतात्मनः । १९ ।

One day, at eventide, O jewel among the Bhṛgu ! while the sage was worshipping the Lord on the bank of the river Puṣpabhadra, O Brāhmaṇa sage ! a furious wind sprang up. (10) Following close upon the blast, that made a terrible noise, appeared frightful clouds attended with flashes of lightning, and poured all round volleys of rain as thick as the axle of a chariot, loudly rumbling. (11) Then there were seen the oceans in the four quarters with most terrible whirlpools, fearful crocodiles and a loud roar, engulfing the earth on all sides with their waves tossed by the fury of the storm. (12) The sage felt perturbed at heart and was dismayed to behold the fourfold creation (as consisting of mammals, oviparous creatures, the sweat-born and those sprouting from the soil) alongwith himself tormented inside as well as outside by waves that rose to the skies as well as by severe blasts and strokes of lightning, and the earth deluged with water. (13) While he was thus looking on, the boundless ocean—that looked terrible with its waves and with its waters tossed about by a violent wind, and was being flooded by the raining clouds—submerged the earth alongwith its Dwīpas (broad divisions) and Varsas (subdivisions) and mountains. (14) The whole universe, comprising the earth and the aerial region and including heaven and the hosts of luminaries, was deluged alongwith the (four) quarters (and the entire living creation). The great sage Mārkaṇḍeya, who was the only living being left alive, drifted along like a stupid and blind creature tossing about his matted looks. (15) Oppressed with hunger and thirst, assailed by alligators and whales, beaten by storm and waves, enveloped in endless darkness and overcome with exhaustion, the sage, while drifting along, could not make out the directions, nor the sky and earth. (16) Now fallen into a great whirlpool, and now buffeted by waves, he was sometimes bitten by the aquatic creatures, themselves killing one another (in their attempt to seize him). (17) Now he fell a prey to grief and now to infatuation; now he experienced sorrow and at other times joy; now he fell a victim to fear and now he suffered death; while at other times he was afflicted with diseases and so on. (18) Millions upon millions of years rolled away in the eyes of the sage, (even) as he remained drifting along in that deluge, his judgment having been clouded by the enchanting potency of Lord Viṣṇu. (19)

स कदाचिद् भ्रमेस्तिस्मिन् पृथिव्याः ककुदि द्विजः । न्यग्रोधपोतं ददृशे फलपल्लवशोभितम् । २० ।
 प्रागुत्तरस्यां शाखायां तस्यापि ददृशे शिशुम् । शयानं पर्णपुटके ग्रसन्तं प्रभया तमः । २१ ।
 महामकरतश्यामं श्रीमद्भद्रपङ्कजम् । कम्बुग्रीवं महोरस्कं सुनासं सुन्दरश्रुवम् । २२ ।
 श्वासैजलकाभातं कम्बुश्रीकर्णाडाडिमम् । विट्प्राधरभासेषच्छेणायितसुधासितम् । २३ ।
 पद्मगर्भांरुपापाङ्गं हृद्यहासावलोकनम् । श्वासैजलसंविग्रनिग्रनाभिदोलदरम् । २४ ।
 चार्वङ्गुलिभ्यां पाणिभ्यामुग्रीय चरणाम्बुजम् । मुखे निधाय विप्रैश्च धयन्तं वीक्ष्य विस्मितः । २५ ।

Rolling about in that deluge, the said Brāhmaṇa once beheld on an elevation of earth a young (and tender) banyan tree adorned with leaves and fruits. (20) On a branch of the tree located in the north-east he saw a babe as well lying in a hollow leaf and swallowing up the darkness by its splendour. Mārkaṇḍeya (the foremost of the Brāhmaṇas) was amazed to behold the babe, which possessed the dark-green hue of a precious emerald, had a beautiful lotus-like countenance, a conch-shaped neck, a broad chest, a shapely nose and charming eyebrows, and was graced with locks waving under the impact of its breaths. Its ears, shaped like the opening of a conch, were decked with the blossoms of pomegranate; its milk-like bright smiles were rendered rosy by the (crimson) lustre of its coral-hued lips. The ends of its eyes were reddish like the interior of a lotus; its glances were enlivened with a smile that captivated one's heart; its deep navel throbbed alongwith the folds of its belly—shaped like a leaf of the sacred fig-tree—that heaved with its breaths. The babe had placed its lotus-like foot into its mouth, lifting it up with its hands, that had charming fingers, and was sucking it. (21—25)

तदर्शनाद् वीतपरिश्रमो मुदा प्रोत्फुल्लहृत्पद्मविलोचनाम्बुजः ।
 प्रहृष्टरोमाद्भुतभावशङ्कितः प्रष्टुं पुरस्तं प्रससार बालकम् । २६ ।
 तावच्छिशोर्वै श्वसितेन भार्गवः सोऽन्तःशरीरं मशको यथाविशत् ।
 तन्नाप्यदो न्यस्तमचष्ट कृत्स्नशो यथा पुरामुह्यदतीव विस्मितः । २७ ।
 खं रोदसी भगणानद्रिसागरान् द्वीपान् सर्वर्षान् ककुभः सुरासुरान् ।
 वनानि देशान् सरितः पुराकरान् खेटान् ब्रजानाश्रमवर्णवृत्तयः । २८ ।
 महान्ति भूतान्यथ भौतिकाऽन्यसौ कालं च नानायुगकल्पकल्पनम् ।
 यत् किञ्चिदन्यद् व्यवहारकारणं ददर्श विश्वं सदिवावभासितम् । २९ ।
 हिमालयं पुण्यहां च तां नदीं निजाश्रमं तत्र ऋषीनपश्यत् ।
 विश्वं विपश्यञ्छ्वसिताच्छिशोर्वै बहिर्निरस्तो न्यपतल्लयाञ्छौ । ३० ।
 तस्मिन् पृथिव्याः ककुदि प्ररूढं वटं च तत्पर्णपटे शयानम् ।
 लोकं च तत्प्रेमसुधास्मितेन निरीक्षितोऽप्याङ्गनिरीक्षणेन । ३१ ।

अथ तं बालकं वीक्ष्य नेत्राभ्यां धिष्ठितं हृदि । अभ्ययादतिस्फिष्टः परिश्रुक्तमधोक्षजम् । ३२ ।
 तावत् स भगवान् साक्षाद् योगाधीशो गुहाशयः । अन्तर्दध ऋषेः सद्यो यथेहानीशनिर्मितः । ३३ ।
 तमन्वथ वटो ब्रह्मन् सलिलं लोकसम्पूवः । तिरोधायि क्षणादस्य स्वाश्रमे पूर्ववत् स्थितः । ३४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवतो महापुराणे फारमहंसा संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे मायादर्शने नाम नवमोऽध्यायः । १९ ।

At the (very) sight of the babe the fatigue of the sage altogether disappeared, the lotuses of his heart and eyes opened for (very) joy, the hair of his body stood on end and the sage headed towards the babe in order to make inquiries of it, though filled with awe at the sight of its wonderful form. (26) Meanwhile, (even) like a mosquito, Mārkaṇḍeya (a scion of Bhrgu) entered into the body of the babe alongwith its breath. There (inside the belly of the babe) too he saw the universe in its entirety (systematically) arranged as before (the deluge) and felt astonished and perplexed. (27) He saw (there) the aerial region, heaven and earth, the hosts of luminaries, the mountains and seas, the broad divisions of the earth including their subdivisions, the quarters, the gods and the demons, forests, countries and rivers, towns and mines, residences of peasants and farmers, stations of herdsmen, the (four) Varnas (grades of society) and Āśramas (stages in life) as well as their functions; the five gross elements as well as their products, Time with the various (divisions such as) Yugas and Kalpas conceived in it, nay, whatever else makes worldly life possible, in short, the whole universe, presented as though real. (28-29) He (further) saw the Himālaya mountain, the same river Puṣṭabhadra, his own hermitage (on its bank) and the sages dwelling there. (Even) while he was perceiving

(thus) the (whole) universe, he was thrown out of the belly of the babe through its breath and fell back, as is well-known, into the sea of deluge. (30) Perceiving there (once more) the banyan tree growing on an elevation of earth and the babe too lying in a hollow leaf, and gazed at (by the babe) with a sidelong glance accompanied by a smile full of the nectar of love, the sage, who was much too afflicted, proceeded to embrace the babe—who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu, and had (already) entered his heart through (the door of) his eyes and taken His seat there. (31-32) That very moment the babe—who was the almighty Lord Himself, the Master of Yoga, Who dwells in the hearts of all—suddenly disappeared, and the effort of the sage (to hug the babe) met the same fate as the undertaking of an unlucky person. (33) Following the Lord, O Brāhmaṇa sage! the banyan tree, the (deluge) water and the dissolution of the universe (also) disappeared in an instant from the sight of the sage, who stood in his hermitage as before. (34)

*Thus ends the ninth discourse entitled "Mārkaṇḍeya witnesses
(the Lord's) Māyā," in Book Twelve of the great and glorious
Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः

Discourse X

Lord Śiva confers a boon on Mārkaṇḍeya

सूत उवाच

स एवमनुभूयेदं नारायणनिर्मितम् । वैभवं योगमायायास्तमेव शरणं ययौ । १ ।

Sūta began again : Realizing in this way the aforesaid glory of Yogamāyā (creative energy) displayed by Lord Nārāyaṇa, the sage Mārkaṇḍeya sought Him alone for protection (in the following words). (1)

मार्कण्डेय उवाच

प्रपन्नोऽस्म्यङ्घ्रिमूलं ते प्रपन्नाभयदं हरे । यन्माययापि विबुधा मुह्यन्ति ज्ञानकाशया । २ ।

Mārkaṇḍeya submitted : I have resorted to the soles of Your feet, which grant security to those who seek them (for protection), O Hari! under the influence of whose Māyā (deluding potency), which assumes the (false) appearance of enlightenment, even the learned fall a prey to delusion (in the shape of egotism, mistaking themselves to be wise). (2)

सूत उवाच

तमेवं निभृतात्मानं वृषेण दिवि पर्यटन् । रुद्राण्या भगवान् रुद्रो ददर्श स्वगणैर्वृतः । ३ ।

अथोमा तमुषि वीक्ष्य गिरिशं समभाषत । पश्येमं भगवन् विप्रं निभृतात्मेन्द्रियाशयम् । ४ ।

निभृतोदङ्गणरातं वातापाये यथार्णवम् । कुर्वस्य तपसः साक्षात् संसिद्धिं सिद्धिदो भवान् । ५ ।

Sūta continued : While journeying through the skies on (the back of) His bull with His Spouse (Goddess Umā), accompanied by His attendants, Lord Rudra (the god of destruction) saw the sage with his mind thus composed and collected. (3) Perceiving the sage in that condition, Umā spoke (as follows) to Lord Śiva (who has His abode on Mount Kailāsa):—

 "(Kindly) look at this Brāhmaṇa, O Lord, whose body, senses and mind have been stilled and who can (as such) be (easily) compared to a sea whose waters and fishes have become motionless due to a storm having passed. (Pray,) manifest the fruit of his asceticism, since You are the Bestower of fruit. (4-5)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

नैवेच्छत्याशिषः क्वपि ब्रह्मर्षिमोक्षमप्युत । भक्तिं परां भगवति लब्धवान् पुस्त्यैऽप्यये । ६ ।

अथापि संवदिष्यामो भवान्येतेन साधुना । अयं हि परमो लाभो नृणां साधुसमागमः । ७ ।

The glorious Lord replied : This Brāhmaṇa sage would not have any blessing under any circumstance, not even final beatitude, inasmuch as he has attained supreme devotion to the Immortal Lord, the Indweller of all hearts. (6) Even then we shall discourse with the saint, O Bhavāni; for it is the greatest gain to meet a pious soul. (7)

सूत उवाच

इत्युक्त्वा तमुपेयाय भगवान् स सतां गतिः । ईशानः सर्वविद्यानामीश्वरः सर्वदेहिनाम् । ८ ।

तयोरागमनं साक्षादीशयोजेगदात्मनोः । न वेद रुद्धधीवृत्तिरात्मानं विश्वमेव च । ९ ।

भगवांस्तदभिज्ञाय गिरीशो योगमायया । आविशत्तद्गुहाकाशं वायुश्छिद्रमिवेश्वरः । १० ।

आत्मन्यपि शिवं प्राप्तं तडित्पिङ्गजटाधरम् । त्र्यक्षं दशभुजं प्रांशुमुद्यन्तमिव भास्करम् । ११ ।

व्याघ्रचर्माम्बरधरं शूलखट्वाङ्गचर्मभिः । अक्षमालाङ्गमस्ककपालासिधनुः सह । १२ ।

बिभ्राणं सहसा भातं विचक्ष्य हृदि विस्मितः । किमिदं कुत एवेति समाधेर्विरतो मुनिः । १३ ।

नेत्रे उन्मील्य ददृशे सगणं सोमयाऽऽगतम् । रुद्रं त्रिलोकैकगुरुं ननाम शिरसा मुनिः । १४ ।

तस्मै सपर्या व्यदधात् सगणाय सहोमया । स्वागतसनपाद्यार्थ्यगन्धस्त्रधूपदीपकैः । १५ ।

आह चात्मानुभावेन पूर्णकामस्य ते विभो । करवाम किमीशान येनेदं निर्वृतं जगत् । १६ ।

नमः शिवाय शान्ताय सत्त्वाय प्रमुखाय च । रजोजुषेऽप्यधोराय नमस्तुभ्यं तमोजुषे । १७ ।

Sūta went on : Having thus observed (to Pārvatī), the aforesaid Lord, the resort of the righteous, the Master of all sciences, the Ruler of all embodied souls, approached the sage. (8) Mārkaṇḍeya (however), who had all his mental faculties suspended, was conscious neither of his own body nor of the (outside) world and (as such) did not perceive (even) the advent of the very Sovereigns of the universe (Śaṅkara and Pārvatī), the Inner Controllers of (all) creation. (9) Knowing his mental condition full well, the almighty Lord Śiva (the Ruler of Kailāsa) entered the cavity of his heart by virtue of His Yogamāyā (wonderful divine power), (even) as the air enters an opening. (10) The sage felt amazed to perceive as having entered into his very being and flashed all of a sudden in his heart Lord Śiva—a tall figure with three eyes and ten arms, wearing matted locks—reddish-brown like streaks of lightning—and effulgent like the rising sun, wrapping a tiger's skin for His loin-cloth and carrying (in His hands) a rosary of Rudrākṣa beads, a Damarū (a sort of small drum shaped like an hour-glass), a begging-bowl (made of skull), a sword and a bow with a trident, a club shaped like the foot of a bedstead and a shield—and, wondering what the vision was and whence, woke up from his trance. (11—13) Opening his eyes, Mārkaṇḍeya beheld Lord Rudra, the one Preceptor of (all) the three worlds, arrived (in his hermitage) alongwith (His Divine Spouse) Umā and His entourage, and saluted Him with his head bent low. (14) He did worship to the Lord alongwith Umā and His attendants—by according them (a hearty) welcome, offering seats, water to wash their feet and hands with, sandal paste and garlands, and burning incense and lights—and submitted (as follows):—"What (service) can I do to You, O omnipresent Lord ! who are sated through realization of Your own blissful nature, and because, of whom the (whole) world feels satisfied ? (15-16) Hail to You, the all-propitious and all-tranquil Lord, the embodiment of Sattva, and (as such) the Delighter of all ! Hail to You, who are never frightful though assuming Rajas, and are never deluded though assuming Tamas ! (17)

सूत उवाच

एवं स्तुतः स भगवानादिदेव सतां गतिः । परितुष्टः प्रसन्नात्मा प्रहसंस्तमभाषत । १८ ।

Sūta continued : Highly pleased, when extolled thus, the aforesaid Lord, the foremost of the gods and the resort of the righteous, heartily laughed, and with a cheerful mind replied to the sage (as follows). (18)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

वरं तृणीषु नः कामं वरदेशा वयं त्रयः । अमोघं दर्शनं येषां मय्यो यद् विन्दतेऽमृतम् । १९ ।

ब्राह्मणाः साधवः शान्ता निःसङ्गा भूतवत्सलाः । एकान्तभक्ता अस्मासु निर्वेराः समदर्शिनः । २० ।

सल्लोका लोकपालास्तान् वन्दन्त्यर्चन्त्युपासते । अहं च भगवान् ब्रह्मा स्वयं च हरिरीश्वरः । २१ ।

न ते मय्यच्युतेऽज्ञे च भिदामण्वपि चक्षते । नात्मनश्च जनस्यापि तद् युष्मान् वयमीमहि । २२ ।

न ह्यम्यानि तीर्थानि न देवाश्चेतनोऽङ्गिताः । ते पुनर्युक्तकालेन यूयं दर्शनमात्रतः । २३ ।

ब्राह्मणेभ्यो नमस्यामो येऽस्मद्वयं त्रयीमयम् । बिभ्रत्यात्मसमाधानतपःस्वाध्यायसंयमैः । २४ ।

श्रवणाद् दर्शनाद् वापि महापातकिनोऽपि वः । शुद्धेरन्नन्यजाक्षापि किमु सम्भाषणादिभिः । २५ ।

The glorious Lord said : Ask of Us a boon of your choice, since We three (viz., Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Myself) are Masters of those who are capable of granting boons. Our sight can never go in vain; it is through us that a mortal can attain immortality. (19) Not only the guardians of the spheres including (the denizens of) those spheres but Myself, the glorious Brahmā and the almighty Śrī Hari Himself salute, worship and wait upon Brāhmaṇas who are pious (by nature), tranquil (free from envy etc.), devoid of attachment, yet affectionate towards (all) created beings, are exclusively devoted to Us and (as such) free from animosity, and look upon all with an equal eye. (20-21) They do not perceive the least difference between Me, Lord Viṣṇu and Brahmā (the birthless creator), nor between themselves and another living being; therefore, We resort to you. (22) Sacred places do not consist of holy waters (alone) nor do lifeless idols alone represent the gods. They (the sacred waters and lifeless idols) purify a man through a long process of time, whereas (saints like) you purify through mere sight. (23) We bow to the Brāhmaṇas, who cherish our (verbal) manifestation in the form of the three Vedas through concentration of the mind, reflection, study and self-control. (24) By merely hearing about you or seeing (people like) you even great sinners and the lowest born too get purified; what wonder, then, that people should get purified by conversing with you and so on. (25)

सूत उवाच

इति चन्द्रललामस्य धर्मगुह्योपबृंहितम् । वचोऽमृतायनमृषिर्नित्यतः कर्णयोः पिबन् । २६ ।

स चिरं मायया विष्णोर्भ्रामितः कश्चितो भृशम् । शिववागमृतध्वस्तकेशपुञ्जस्तमब्रवीत् । २७ ।

Sūta took up the thread again : The sage did not feel sated while drinking in the words of Lord Śiva (who wears the crescent as an ornament on His head), which were full of the secret of Dharma (virtue) and the (very) abode of nectar (as it were) to the ears. (26) Having been made to revolve for long by the Mayā (deluding potency) of Lord Viṣṇu, and subjected to a severe trial, the sage was relieved of all his afflictions by the nectar-like words of Lord Śiva and spoke to Him (as follows). (27)

ऋषिरुवाच

अहो ईश्वरलीलेयं दुर्विभाव्या शरीरिणाम्। यन्नमन्तीशितव्यानि स्तुवन्ति जगदीश्वराः । १८।
 धर्मं ग्राहयितुं प्रायः प्रवक्तारश्च देहिनाम्। आचरन्त्यनुमोदन्ते क्रियमाणं स्तुवन्ति च । १९।
 नैतावता भगवतः स्वमायामयवृत्तिभिः। न दुष्येतानुभावस्तैर्मायिनः कुहकं यथा । २०।
 सुष्टेदं मनसा विश्वमात्मनानुप्रविश्य यः। गुणैः कुर्वद्भिराभाति कर्तेव स्वप्नं यथा । २१।
 तस्मै नमो भगवते त्रिगुणाय गुणात्मने। केवलायाद्वितीयाय गुरवे ब्रह्ममूर्तये । २२।
 कं वृणे नु परं भूमन् वरं त्वद् वरदर्शनात्। यद्दर्शनात् पूर्णकामः सत्यकामः पुमान् भवेत् । २३।
 वरमेकं वृणेश्चापि पूर्णात् कामाभिवर्षणात्। भगवत्यच्युतां भक्तिं तत्परेषु तथा त्वयि । २४।

The sage submitted: Oh, this pastime of the almighty Lord is difficult to conceive for embodied creatures (like us), following which Rulers of the universe bow to and glorify those who deserve to be commanded (by Them) ! (28) In order to teach righteous conduct (to the people at large) those teachers of embodied beings as general rule not only practise such conduct (themselves) but also express approbation of and applaud it when practised (by others). (29) The glory of the almighty Lord (in You) is not (however) marred by such (exemplary) conduct—in the shape of those actions (such as bowing to us), which are (but) the operation of Your Māyā (enchanting potency)—any more than the enchanting power of an enchanter by his conjuring tricks. (30) Hail to that almighty Lord (in You), who, having evolved the universe by His thought (alone) and (then) entered it in the form of the Jīva (individual soul), appears, like a dreaming man, as the doer through the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti)—which are the (real) agents—and who, though (appearing as) endowed with the three Guṇas, is (yet) their Controller absolute and one without a second, and the Preceptor (of all) in the form of the Veda ! (31-32) What greater boon shall I ask (of You), O Perfect One, than Yourself, whose (very) sight is blessed (nay,) through whose sight man bids fair to get sated and become true of resolve ? (33) Nonetheless I ask one boon of You—who are not only self-sufficient (Yourself) but shower blessings (on Your devotees)—viz., unfailing devotion to the almighty Lord (Viṣṇu), and those devoted to Him, as well as to Yourself. (34)

सूत उवाच

इत्यर्चितोऽभिष्टुतश्च मुनिना सूक्तया गिरा। तमाह भगवाञ्छर्वः शर्वया चाभिनन्दितः । २५।
 कामो महर्षे सर्वोऽयं भक्तिर्मास्त्वमधोक्षजे। आकल्पान्ताद् यशः पुण्यमजरामरता तथा । २६।
 ज्ञानं त्रैकालिकं ब्रह्मन् विज्ञानं च विरक्तिमत्। ब्रह्मवर्चस्विनो भूयात् पुराणाचार्यतास्तु ते । २७।

Sūta further said : Thus worshipped and glorified by the sage in sweet words, Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe), supported by His Consort too, addressed him (thus):—(35) "Full of Devotion as you are to Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception), O great sage, let all this desire (of yours) be fulfilled; let your fame endure till the end of the Kalpa; let religious merit and immunity from old age and death be enjoyed by you and let knowledge relating to the past, present and future and Self-Realization coupled with dispassion and the teachership of a Purāṇa fall to your lot, invested as you are with Brahmanical (spiritual) glory." (36-37)

सूत उवाच

एवं वरान् स मुनये दत्त्वागात्र्यक्ष ईश्वरः। देव्यै तत्कर्म कथयन्ननुभूतं पुरामुना । २८।
 सोऽयमात्ममहयोगमहिमा भार्गवोत्तमः। विचरत्यधुनायमद्वा हरावेकान्ततां गतः । २९।
 अनुवर्णितमेतत्ते मार्कण्डेयस्य धीमतः। अनुभूतं भगवतो मायावैभवमद्भुतम् । ३०।

एतत् केचिद्विद्वांसो मायासंसृतिमात्मनः । अनाद्यावर्तितं नृणां कादाचिर्लक्षं प्रचक्षते । ४१ ।
 य एवमेतद् भृगुर्वयं वर्णितं रथाङ्गपाणेऽनुभावभाषितम् ।
 संश्रावयेत् संशृणुयाद् तावुभौ तयोर्न कर्माशयसंसृतिर्भवेत् । ४२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्योऽर्हतायां द्वादशस्कन्धे दशमोऽध्यायः । १० ।

Sūta went on : Having thus granted boons to Mārkaṇḍeya, the three-eyed Lord withdrew, telling His Consort of the sage's deeds (in the form of austerities) as well as what had been experienced by him before. (38) Having realized the glory of Mahāyoga (the Yoga of Jñāna), Mārkaṇḍeya (the foremost of the scions of Bhṛgu) for his part goes about the world at will even now, exclusively devoted as he is to Śrī Hari. (39) This story of the wise Mārkaṇḍeya, as well as the wonderful glory of the Lord's Māyā as experienced by him has been narrated to you. (40) This (glory of the Lord's Māyā, experienced by the sage Mārkaṇḍeya as extending over a period of seven Kalpas according to ancient tradition) was (as a matter of fact but) accidental (and a purely personal experience attributable to Divine Grace and not universal). Some (however), not knowing the appearance and disappearance of men (in the shape of evolution and dissolution) as (nothing but) the Māyā of the Supreme Spirit, declare this experience as (no other than the ordinary process of evolution and dissolution) taking place from time without beginning and repeated (seven times at the end of every thousand revolutions of the four Yugas during the lifetime of Mārkaṇḍeya himself). (41) Both he who duly narrates (to others) and he who attentively hears, O Jewel among the Bhṛgus ! this story (of Mārkaṇḍeya), recounted as aforesaid and enriched with the glory of Lord Viṣṇu (who wields the wheel of Time in the shape of the discus in His hands), are rid of transmigration, brought about by the latencies of Karma. (42)

Thus ends the tenth discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XI

The significance of the Lord's own limbs, attendants and weapons and a description of the retinue of the Sun-god (changing every month in the course of a solar year)

शौनक उवाच

अथेममर्थं पृच्छामो भवन्तं बहुवित्तमम् । समस्ततन्त्राद्भान्ते भवान् भागवततत्त्ववित् । १ ।
 तान्त्रिकाः परिचर्यायां केवलस्य श्रियः पतेः । अङ्गोपाङ्गायुधाकल्पं कल्पयन्ति यथा च वैः । २ ।
 तन्नो वर्णय भद्रं ते क्रियायोगं बुभुक्षताम् । येन क्रियानैपुणेन मर्त्यो यायादमर्त्यताम् । ३ ।

Śaunaka submitted : Now I refer to the following point to you, the foremost among those knowing many subjects, (since) you know the true meaning of the conclusions of all the scriptures dealing with the worship of deities, O (great) devotee of the Lord ! (1) May good betide you ! (Pray,) tell us—who are keen to know the course of active worship, through proficiency in which a mortal bids fair to attain immortality (in the shape of final beatitude)—how those well-versed in the Tantras meditate in the course of worship on the limbs, attendants, weapons and ornaments of Lord Viṣṇu (the Lord of Śrī, the goddess of fortune), who is absolute Consciousness, and of what principles do they conceive them as constituted. (2-3)

सूत उवाच

नमस्कृत्य गुरुन् वक्ष्ये विभूतीर्ब्रह्मवीरपि । याः प्रोक्ता वेदतन्त्राभ्यामाचार्यैः पद्मजदिभिः । ४ ।
मायाहैनवभिस्तत्त्वैः स विकारमयो विराद् । निर्मितो दृश्यते यत्र सचिकले भुवनत्रयम् । ५ ।
एतद् वै पौरुषं रूपं भूः पादौ द्यौः शिरो नभः । नाभिः सूर्योऽक्षणी नासे वायुः कर्णौ दिशः प्रभोः । ६ ।
प्रजापतिः प्रजननमपानो मृत्युरीशितुः । तद्बाहवो लोकपाला मनश्चन्द्रो भुवौ यमः । ७ ।
लज्जोत्तरोऽधरो लोभो दत्ता ज्योत्स्ना सयो भ्रमः । रोमाणि भूर्भ्रो मेधाः पुरुषमूर्धजाः । ८ ।
यावानयं वै पुरुषो यावत्या संस्थया मितः । तावानसावपि महामपुरुषो लोकसंस्थया । ९ ।

Sūta resumed : Bowing to (the feet of) my preceptors, I shall speak (to you all) about the glorious manifestations even of Lord Viṣṇu (which are so difficult to comprehend and) which have been discussed at some length by Brahmā (the lotus-born creator of the universe) and other teachers in the light of the Vedas and the Tantras. (4) The well-known cosmic egg is made up of nine fundamental principles, Māyā (Prakṛti) and (eight) others (viz., Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, Sūtra or the active aspect of Mahat-tattva, Ahankāra or the cosmic ego, and the five Tanmātrās or subtle elements), as well as of the (sixteen) Vikāras (or modifications, viz., the mind, the ten Indriyas and the five gross elements). In that cosmic form as presided over by the Spirit appears the three worlds (viz., heaven, earth and the intervening space). (5) This as a matter of fact constitutes the Puruṣa (Cosmic) form of the Lord. The earth represents His feet; heaven the head; the mid-air region, His navel; the sun, His eyes; the air, His nostrils; the quarters, His ears; Prajāpati (the god presiding over creation), His generative organ; Death constitutes the Lord's anus; the guardians of the spheres, His arms; the moon, His mind and Yama (the god of retribution), His eyebrows; Lajjā (the goddess presiding over modesty), His upper and Lobha (Greed), His lower lip; moonlight, (the brightness of) His teeth; Māyā (the deluding potency), His smile; the trees, the hair on the body of the infinite Lord and clouds, the locks on the head of the Supreme Person. (6—8) Measured with reference to the disposition of the (various) spheres, the said Cosmic Person to actually bears the same proportion as this (mortal) man does when measured with reference to the disposition of his own limbs. (9)

कौस्तुभव्यपदेशेन स्वात्मज्योतिर्बिभर्त्यजः । तत्रभा व्यापिनी साक्षात् श्रीवत्समुरसा विभुः । १० ।
स्वमायां वनमालाख्यां नानागुणमयीं दधत् । वासश्छन्दोमयं पीतं ब्रह्मसूत्रं त्रिवृत् स्वरम् । ११ ।
बिभर्ति सांख्यं योगं च देवो मकरकुण्डले । मौलिं पदं पारमेष्ठ्यं सर्वलोकाभयङ्करम् । १२ ।
अव्याकृतमनन्ताख्यमासत्तं यदधिष्ठितः । धर्मज्ञानादिभिर्युक्तं सत्त्वं पदमिहोच्यते । १३ ।
ओजःसहोबलयुतं मुख्यतत्त्वं गदां दधत् । अपां तत्त्वं दरवरं तेजस्तत्त्वं सुदर्शनम् । १४ ।
नभोनिभं नभस्तत्त्वमसिं चर्म तपोमयम् । कालरूपं धनुः शार्ङ्गं तथा कर्ममयेषुधिम् । १५ ।
इन्द्रियाणि शरानाहुराकूतोरस्य स्यन्दनम् । तन्मूत्राण्यस्याभिव्यक्तिं मुद्रयार्थक्रियातताम् । १६ ।
मण्डलं देवयजनं दीक्षा संस्कार आत्मनः । परिचर्या भगवत आत्मनो दुरितक्षयः । १७ ।

The birthless Lord carries (on His Person) the (pure) consciousness of the Jīva, His own particle, in the form of the Kaustubha gem and it is the diffusive splendour of the latter which the Lord actually wears on His (right) breast as (the mark of) Śrīvatsa. (10) Carrying (on His person) His own Māyā, consisting of various Guṇas (or modes of Prakṛti) in the form of Vanamālā (a garland of sylvan flowers); a golden piece of linen, consisting of the Vedas,

(about His loins) and the (sacred) syllable OM (consisting of three parts अ + उ + म्) in the triple sacred thread. The Lord wears (the philosophical systems of) Sāṅkhya and Yoga as a pair of alligator-shaped ear-rings and the realm of Brahmā (the highest functionary of this universe), promising fearlessness to all its inhabitants, as His diadem. (11-12) The Unmanifest (Primordial Matter) is the seat (couch), going by the name of Śeṣa (the serpent-god), which He remains nestled in; and Sattvagūṇa (the principle of harmony or goodness), characterized by (the six divine) properties such as Dharma (righteousness) and Jñāna (wisdom), (the other four being Aiśwarya or universal dominion, Yaśa or glory, Śrī or affluence and Vairāgya or dispassion, as well as by the divine potencies known by the names of Vimalā, Utkarṣiṇī, Jñānā, Kriyā, Yogā, Prahvī, Satyā, Īśānā and Anugrahā)—is spoken of as the lotus spread on this (seat). (13) He wields Prāṇa or the vital air (the foremost of the five airs existing in the body under the names of Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna and Samāna)—accompanied by organic, mental and bodily strength—in the form of a mace (bearing the name of Kaumodakī); the principle of water, in the form of an excellent conch (Pāñcajanya by name); the principle of fire, as (the discus) Sudarśana; the principle of ether as a sword, clear as the sky; a shield consisting of Tamas (the principle of inertia and ignorance); a bow, made of horns, as representing Kāla (the Time-Spirit) and a quiver consisting of Karma (the principle of activity). (14-15) Knowing persons declare the (ten cosmic) Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) to be His shafts, the (cosmic) mind (characterized by the power of action) to be His chariot, and the (five) Tanmātrās (subtle elements) to be the exterior of the chariot; and He exhibits His serviceability (to His devotees in the shape of conferring boons on and assuring protection to them) through Mudrās (positions of the hands such as Vara and Abhaya). (16) The spot where the deity is worshipped should be visualized as the orb of the sun; the ceremony of initiation (by a Guru) into a certain Mantra (sacred text) should be contemplated as the act of self-consecration (which makes one eligible for the worship of a particular deity) and the worship of the Lord should be conceived as the eradication of (all) one's sins. (17)

भगवान् भगशब्दार्थं लीलाकमलमुद्बहन् । धर्मं यशश्च भगवांश्चामरव्यजनेऽभजत् ॥१८॥

आतपत्रं तु वैकुण्ठं द्विजा धामाकुतोभयम् । त्रिवृद्वेदः सुपर्णाख्यो यज्ञं वहति पूरुषम् ॥१९॥

अनपायिनी भगवती श्रीः साक्षादात्मनो हरेः । विष्णुस्तेनस्तन्मूर्तिर्विदितः पार्षदाधिपः ।

नन्दादयोऽष्टौ द्वाःस्थाश्च तेऽणिमाद्या हरेर्गुणाः ॥२०॥

वासुदेवः सङ्कर्षणः प्रद्युम्नः पुरुषः स्वयम् । अनिरुद्ध इति ब्रह्मन् मूर्तिव्यूहोऽभिधीयते ॥२१॥

स विश्वस्रैजसः प्राज्ञस्तुरीय इति वृत्तिभिः । अर्थेन्द्रियाशयज्ञानैर्भगवान् परिभाव्यते ॥२२॥

अङ्गोपाङ्गायुधाकल्पैर्भगवान्स्तत्तत्तुष्टयम् । बिभर्ति स्म चतुर्भुविर्भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः ॥२३॥

Wielding (in one of His four hands) His six distinguishing attributes (viz., lordship, righteousness, renown, affluence, wisdom and dispassion each in its entirety (denoted by the term 'Bhaga' *) in the form of a lotus carried for the sake of diversion, and thus justifying the name of Bhagavān, the Lord (also) maintains (by His side in the hands of two of His divine attendants) righteousness and renown (two of the aforesaid six attributes) as a chowrie and a fan (respectively). (18) He further bears (over His head) as an umbrella, O Brāhmanas ! His (own divine) realm, viz., Vaikuṇṭha, which has no fear from any quarter. The Vedat†, with its three divisions (Rk, Yajus and Sāma) figures (as His carrier) under the name of Garuḍa

* ऐश्वर्यस्य समग्रस्य धर्मस्य यशसः श्रियः । ज्ञानवैराग्ययोश्चैव यण्णो भग इतीरणा ॥

† The Śruti says:—सुपर्णोऽसि गरुड्याखिवृत्ते शिरः । and supports Yajña* (the institution of sacrifice) as the Supreme Person (Himself). (19) Śrī Hari's own inseparable energy itself appears as Goddess Śrī (the goddess of fortune). The well-known Viṣwakṣena, the chief of His attendants, embodies (in His person) the Tantras (such as the Pañcarātra Āgama, detailing the procedure of His worship). The (eight) celebrated attributes of Śrī Hari, Aṇimā (the capacity to assume an atomic form) etc., stand (at His portals) as the eight porters, Nanda and others. (20) The Supreme Person (Lord Nārāyaṇa) Himself, O Brāhmaṇa sage, is spoken of as manifested in the four (adorable) forms of Vāsudeva, Saṅkarsaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha. (21) The (same) Lord is (philosophically) contemplated upon under the names of Viśva, Taijasa, Prājña and Turiya (respectively) when associated with the (four) states of (individual) consciousness, viz., 1—Wakefulness (in which the objects of sense are perceived through the senses), 2—the dream state (in which the mind alone—the sense par excellence—functions, the other senses remaining dormant), 3—the state of deep sleep (or complete forgetfulness marked by the latent impressions of the states of wakefulness and dream) and 4—the state of Self-Realization (in which the Self stands as the witness of all the three preceding states). (22) Distinguished by His (aforesaid) limbs, attendants (constituting His auxiliary limbs as it were) weapons and ornaments, (nay), possessing His six distinguishing attributes (collectively denoted by the term "Bhaga") and appearing in the four (adorable) forms (Vāsudeva and so on), the almighty Lord Śrī Hari (Himself) assumes these four aspects (Viśva etc.). (23)

द्वित्रयैव स एष ब्रह्मयोनिः स्वयंदृक् स्वमहिमपरिपूर्णो मायया च स्वयैतत् ।

सुजतिं हरति पातीत्याख्ययानावृताक्षो विवृत इव निरुक्तस्तत्परैरात्मलभ्यः । १२४ ।

श्रीकृष्ण कृष्णसरल वृष्णयूषभावनिधुप्राज्यन्ववंशदहनानपवर्गवीर्य ।

गोविन्द गोपवनिताम्रजभूत्यगीततीर्थश्रवः श्रवणमङ्गल पाहि भूयान् । १२५ ।

O jewel among the twice-born ! the aforesaid Lord is the Source of the Vedas, self-effulgent and perfect in His own glory (all-blissful Self); yet He creates, preserves and destroys this (objective) universe by His own Māya (deluding potency consisting of the three Guṇas) under different names (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva respectively), though His consciousness remains uncircumscribed (thereby). Though spoken of (in the Śāstras) as differentiated (in this sense), He is (really one inasmuch as He is) realized by His devotees as their own self. (24) "Friend of Arjuna, jewel among the Vṛṣṇis, O glorious Kṛṣṇa ! who are fire (as it were) to burn the whole race of Kṣatriyas, that are proving hostile to the earth O Govinda (Protector of cows), whose, prowess is (ever) undiminished, whose sanctifying glory is sung by hosts of cowherd women as well as by devotees (like Nārada), and whose names and praises are auspicious to hear, (pray,) protect (us,) Your votaries." (25)

य इदं कल्प्य उच्यते महापुरुषलक्षणम् । तच्चित्तः प्रयतो जप्त्वा ब्रह्म वेद गुहादयम् । १२६ ।

He who, rising (early) in the morning and getting clean (through a bath etc.), repeats this description of the Lord with his mind fixed on Him realizes Brahma enshrined in the heart (of all), by (merely) repeating it. (26)

शौनक उवाच

शुको यदाह भगवान् विष्णुराताय शृण्वते । सौरो गणो मासि मासि नाना वसति सप्तकः । १२७ ।

तेषां नामानि कर्माणि संयुक्तानामधीश्वरैः । ब्रूहि नः श्रद्धधानानां व्यहं सूर्यात्मनो हरेः । १२८ ।

Śaunaka submitted : As the divine Śuka spoke to the listening Parikṣit (the protege

* This is borne out by the Śruti when it says:—यज्ञो वै विष्णुः । of Lord Viṣṇu), a different batch presided over by the Sun-god, consisting of seven* remains on duty month after month. (27) (Pray.) tell us, who are full of reverence, about the (said) entourage of Lord Śrī Hari, appearing in the form of the Sun-god—in other words, the names and functions of those groups (of six pairs) combined with the deities presiding over them. (28) ⁸

सूत उवाच

अनाद्यविद्यया विष्णोरात्मनः सर्वदिहिनाम् । निर्मितो लोकतन्त्रोऽयं लोकेषु परिवर्तते । २९ ।

एक एव हि लोकानां सूर्य आत्माऽऽदिकृद्धरिः । सर्ववेदक्रियामूलमृषिभिर्बहुधोदितः । ३० ।

कालो देशः क्रिया कर्ता करणं कार्यमागमः । द्रव्यं फलमिति ब्रह्मन् नवधोक्तोऽजया हरिः । ३१ ।

मध्वादिषु द्वादशसु भगवान् कालरूपधृक् । लोकतन्त्राय चरति पृथग्द्वादशभिर्गणैः । ३२ ।

Brought into existence by the dateless Māyā of Lord Viṣṇu, the Inner Controller of (all) embodied souls, this (visible) sun, which keeps the world going on, courses through the spheres. (29) Though one without a second, the Sun-god—who is really the same as Śrī Hari, the Soul and first Cause (of the worlds)—has been spoken of by the seers under diverse names inasmuch as He is the source of all Vedic rites. (30) Because of His Māyā (which has no beginning) Śrī Hari has been called, O Brāhmaṇa sage, by nine names as time, place, activity, the doer, an instrument, duty, a sacred text, material substance (rice etc.), and the fruit (heaven etc.). (31) Assuming the form of Time (out of the aforesaid nine), in order to keep the world going on, the Lord (as the Sun-god) runs His course through the twelve months beginning from Caitra, alongwith His twelve different batches of attendants. (32)

धाता कृतस्थली हेतिर्वसुकी रथकुन्नुने । पुलस्त्यस्तुभुरिति मधुमासं नयन्त्यमी । ३३ ।

अर्यमा पुलहोऽथौजाः प्रहेतिः पुञ्जिकस्थली । नारदः कच्छनीरक्ष नयन्त्येते स्म माधवम् । ३४ ।

मित्रोऽग्निः पौरुषेयोऽथ तक्षको मेनका हहाः । रथस्वन इति ह्येते शुक्रमासं नयन्त्यमी । ३५ ।

वसिष्ठो वरुणो रम्भा सहजन्त्यस्तथा हुहूः । शुक्रश्चित्रस्वनश्चैव शुचिमासं नयन्त्यमी । ३६ ।

इन्द्रो विश्वावसुः श्रोता एलापत्रस्तथाङ्गिराः । प्रम्लोचा राक्षसो वर्यो नभोमासं नयन्त्यमी । ३७ ।

विवस्वानुग्रसेनश्च व्याघ्र आसारणो भृगुः । अनुम्लोचा शङ्खपालो नभस्याख्यं नयन्त्यमी । ३८ ।

पूषा धनञ्जयो वातः सुषेणः सुरुचिस्तथा । घृताची गौतमश्चेति तपोमासं नयन्त्यमी । ३९ ।

ऋतुर्वचा भरद्वाजः पर्जन्यः सेनजित् तथा । विश्व ऐरावतश्चैव तपस्याख्यं नयन्त्यमी । ४० ।

अथांशुः करयपस्ताक्षर्यं ऋतसेनस्तथोर्वशी । विद्युच्छत्रमहाशङ्खः सहोमासं नयन्त्यमी । ४१ ।

भगः स्फूर्णोऽरिष्टनेमिरूष्ण आयुश्च पञ्चमः । कर्कोटकः पूर्वचित्तिः पुष्यमासं नयन्त्यमी । ४२ ।

त्वष्टा ऋचीकृतनयः कम्बलश्च तिलोत्तमा । ब्रह्मापेतोऽथ शतजिद् धृतराष्ट्र इषभराः । ४३ ।

विष्णुरश्वतरो रम्भा सूर्यवर्चाश्च सत्यजित् । विश्वाग्निरो मखापेत ऊर्जमासं नयन्त्यमी । ४४ ।

The Sun-god (under the name of Dhātā), Kṛtasthālī (the Apsarā), Heti (the ogre), Vāsuki (the Naga), Rathakṛt (the Yakṣa), Pulastya (the sage) and Tumburu (the Gandharva)—these (seven) run the month of Caitra. (33) Aryamā, Puñjikasthālī, Praheti, Kacchanira, Athaujā, Pulaha and Nārada—these run the month of Vaiśākha. † (34) Mitra, Menakā, Pauruṣeya, Takṣaka, Rathaswana, Atri and Hāhā—these run the month of Jeṣṭha. (35) Varuṇa, Rambhā, Citraswana, Śukra, Sahajanya, Vasiṣṭha and Hūhū—these run the month of

* The group of seven already referred to in Book Five consists of a pair each of sages, Gandharvas, Apsarās, Nāgas, Yakṣas, Rakṣasas, and the sun-god himself as the seventh—Vide V.xx.1. 18.

† The names of the sun-god, Apsara etc., in verse 34 et seq have been arranged in the order followed in verse 33.

Āṣāḍha. (36) Indra, Pramlocā, Varya, Elāpatra, Śrotā, Aṅgīrā and Viśvāvasu—these run the month of Śrāvaṇa. (37) Vivaswān, Anumlocā, Vyāghra, Śaṅkhaṇḍa, Āsāraṇa, Bhṛgu and Ugrasena—these run the month called Bhādrapada. (38) Pūṣā, Ghṛtāci, Vāta, Dhanañjaya, Suruci, Gautama and Suṣeṇa—these run the month of Māgha. (39) Parjanya, Senajit, Varcā, Airāvata, Kratu, Bharadvāja and Viśva—these run the month named Phālguna. (40) Again, Amśu, Urvaśi, Vidyucchatru, Mahāśaṅkha, Tārksya, Kaśyapa and Rtasena—these run the month of Mārgaśīrṣa. (41) Bhaga, Pūrvacitti, Sphūrja, Karkoṭaka, Ūma, Āyu and Ariṣṭanemi—these run the month of Pauṣa. (42) Again, Twaṣṭā, Tilottamā, Brahmāpeta, Kambala, Śatajit, Jamadagni and Dhṛtarāṣṭra are the guardians of the month of Āśvina. (43) Viṣṇu, Rambhā, Makhāpeta, Āswatara, Satyajit, Viśvāmītra and Sūryavarcā—these run the month of Kārtika. (44)

एता भगवतो विष्णोरादित्यस्य विभूतयः । स्मरतां सन्ध्योर्नृणां हरन्त्यहो दिने दिने । ४५ ।
 द्वादशस्वपि मासेषु देवोऽसौ षडभिरस्य वै । चरन् समन्तानुते परत्रेह च सन्मतिम् । ४६ ।
 सामर्थ्यजुर्भिस्तल्लिङ्गैर्द्वययः संस्तुवन्त्यमुम् । गन्धर्वास्तं प्रगायन्ति नृत्यन्त्यप्सरसोऽग्रतः । ४७ ।
 उन्नहन्ति रथं नागा ग्रामण्यो रथयोजकाः । चोदयन्ति रथं पृष्ठे नैर्ऋता बलशालिनः । ४८ ।
 वालखिल्याः सहस्राणि षष्टिर्ब्रह्मर्षयोऽमलाः । पुरतोऽभिमुखं यान्ति स्तुतिभिर्विभुम् । ४९ ।
 एवं ह्यनादिनिधनो भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । कल्पे कल्पे स्वमात्मानं व्यूह्य लोकानवत्यजः । ५० ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे आदित्यव्यूहविवरणं नामैकादशोऽध्यायः । ११ ।

These constitute the glory of the Sun-god, who is none other than Lord Viṣṇu. They take away the sin of those who remember them morning and evening both day after day. (45) Coursing round (the universe) all the twelve months (of a year) alongwith His six attendants (enumerated in the foregoing verses) the said Deity unquestionably awakens good sense in the mind of His votary both here and hereafter. (46) The sages (forming the entourage of the Sun-god) duly extol Him through hymns, of Sāmaveda, R̥gveda and Yajurveda revealing His glory; the Gandharvas sing His praises, while the Apsarās dance before him. (47) The Nāgas serve the purpose of keeping the parts of the chariot together; the Yakṣas make his chariot ready for service, while the mighty Rākṣasas push the chariot from behind. (48) Sixty thousand pure-minded Brāhmaṇa sages, (collectively) known as the Vālakhilyas, walk ahead facing the Sun-god (all the twelve months) and celebrate the Deity through laudatory Mantras. (49) Dividing Himself (into twelve, each form presiding over the sun for one month), the almighty Lord Śrī Hari, who is without beginning or end, and is (therefore) birthless, protects the worlds as aforesaid in every Kalpa. (50)

Thus ends the eleventh discourse entitled "A description of the Sun-god (presiding under different names over the twelve months of a year) with His entourage" in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वादशोऽध्यायः

10

Discourse XII

A Synopsis of (all) the twelve Skandhas (of Śrīmad Bhāgavata)

सूत उवाच

नमो धर्माय महते नमः कृष्णाय वेधसे । ब्राह्मणोऽभ्यो नमस्कृत्य धर्मान् वक्ष्ये सनातनान् । १ ।
 एतद् वः कथितं विप्रा विष्णोश्चरितमद्भुतम् । भवद्विर्यदहं पृष्ठो नराणां पुरुषोचितम् । २ ।
 अत्र सङ्कीर्तितः साक्षात् सर्वपापहरो हरिः । नारायणो हृषीकेशो भगवान् सात्वतां पतिः । ३ ।
 अत्र ब्रह्म परं गुह्यं जगतः प्रभवोऽप्ययम् । ज्ञानं च तदुपाख्यानं प्रोक्तं विज्ञानसंयुतम् । ४ ।
 भक्तियोगः समाख्यातो वैराग्यं च तदाश्रयम् । पारीक्षितमुपाख्यानं नारादाख्यानमेव च । ५ ।
 प्रायोपवेशो राजर्षेर्विप्रशपात् परीक्षितः । शुकस्य ब्रह्मर्षभस्य संवादश्च परीक्षितः । ६ ।

Sūta began again : Hail to the exalted virtue in the shape of devotion to Śrī Hari ! Hail to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Maker of the universe ! Bowing (again) to the Brāhmaṇas (as well), I shall expound the eternal verities (discussed in Śrīmad Bhāgavata). (1) (So) have I narrated to you, O Brāhmaṇa sages ! this wonderful (sublime) story (in the form of Śrīmad Bhāgavata) of Lord Viṣṇu, about which you asked me and which is worth hearing for men in whom there is (any) trace of humanity (left). (2) Here stands duly celebrated Lord Nārāyaṇa Himself, the Ruler of (our) senses, the Protector of devotees, (also) known as Śrī Hari, the Dispeller of all sins. (3) In this has been discussed the mysterious transcendent Brahma, the source and end of (all) creation, (the topic of) spiritual enlightenment cum Realization and the means of awakening them. (4) (In addition to this) there has been discussed at length the discipline of Devotion (both as a means and an end itself) as well as Vairāgya (freedom from passion) hinging on the latter. (Now hear the contents of the twelve Skandhas in a more or less serial order.) The narrative of (the birth etc., of) Parikṣit and (as a prelude to it) the story of (the previous incarnation of) the (celestial) sage Nārada. (5) The vow of the royal sage Parikṣit as a sequel to the curse of a Brāhmaṇa (boy) to fast till death and (the opening of) the dialogue between Parikṣit and Śuka, the foremost of Brāhmaṇas. (6) (Here ends the theme of Book One.)

योगधारणयोत्क्रान्तिः संवादो नारदाजयोः । अवतारानुगीतं च सर्गः प्राधानिकोऽग्रतः । ७ ।

The (process of) ascent (to the higher regions of a departing soul) through Yogic concentration; the dialogue between Nārada and (his father) Brahmā (the birthless creator); an account of the Lord's descents in the order of sequence and (a description of) the cosmic evolution from Prakṛti (Primordial Matter) from the (very) beginning. (7) (Here ends the theme of Book Two.)

विदुरोद्धवसंवादः क्षत्पमैत्रेययोस्ततः । पुराणसंहिताप्रश्नो महापुरुषसंस्थितिः । ८ ।
 ततः प्राकृतिकः सर्गः सप्त वैकृतिकाश्च ये । ततो ब्रह्माण्डसम्भूतिर्वैराजः पुरुषो यतः । ९ ।
 कालस्य स्थूलसूक्ष्मस्य गतिः पद्मसमुद्धवः । भुव उद्धरणोऽम्भोधेरिण्यक्षाक्षवधो यथा । १० ।
 ऊर्ध्वतिर्यग्वाक्सर्गो रुद्रसर्गस्तथैव च । अर्धनारीनरस्याथ यतः स्वायम्भुवो मनुः । ११ ।

शतरूपा च या स्त्रीणामाद्या प्रकृतिरुत्तमा । सन्तानो धर्मपत्नीनां कर्दमस्य प्रजापतेः । १२ ।

अवतारो भगवतः कपिलस्य महात्मनः । देवहूत्याश्च संवादः कपिलेन च धीमता । १३ ।

The dialogue between Vidura and Uddhava and then between Vidura and Maitreya; an inquiry regarding the (Bhāgavata-) Purāṇa; the dormant state of the Supreme Person (during the period of Final Dissolution). (8) Then follows a description of the flowering of Prakṛti (in the form of disturbance caused in the equilibrium of the three Guṇas) and the coming into being of the seven categories which are both of the nature of a cause and an effect (viz., of the Mahat-tattva into the cosmic ego and of the latter into the five Tanmātrās or subtle elements) and the (gradual) crystallization of the (five) Tanmātrās into the (five) gross elements and the eleven Indriyas (viz., the five senses of perception, the five organs of action and the mind, which are all of the nature of an effect only since they do not give rise to any further modification). Then ensues a description of the evolution of the cosmic egg, from which appears Brahmā (the offspring of the Cosmic Person). (9) (Then) follows a description of Time in its subtle and gross states; the sprouting of the fourteen worlds (in the form of a lotus from the navel of the Cosmic Person) and how Hiraṇyākṣa was killed (by the Lord in the form of the divine Boar) in the course of His attempt to lift up the earth from (the bottom of) the ocean. (10) The evolution of the higher (heavenly and aerial), subhuman and subterranean (Āsurika) orders of created beings and the appearance of Rudra (the god of destruction) and subsequently the division of Brahmā in two halves, one constituting a male and the other a female, from which sprang up the Manu named Swāyambhuva (because born of Brahmā, the self-born) and Śatarūpā, the first and foremost pattern of womanhood. (Then) follows the description of the progeny (in the shape of nine daughters) of the revered wife (Devahūti) of the sage Kardama, a lord of creation. (11-12) The descent of the Supreme Spirit as Lord Kapila and the dialogue of Devahūti with Kapila, the embodiment of wisdom. (13) (Here ends the theme of Book Three.)

नवब्रह्मसमुत्पत्तिर्दक्षयज्ञविनाशनम् । ध्रुवस्य चरितं पश्चात्पुत्रोः प्राचीनबर्हिषः । १४ ।

नारदस्य च संवादस्ततः प्रैयव्रतं द्विजाः । नाभेस्ततोऽनुचरितमृषस्य भरतस्य च । १५ ।

द्वीपवर्षसमुद्गाणां गिरिनद्युपवर्णनम् । ज्योतिश्चक्रस्य संस्थानं पातालनरकस्थितिः । १६ ।

The progeny (through the nine daughters of Kardama) of the nine lords of creation (Marici and others); the destruction of the sacrificial performance undertaken by Dakṣa (the tenth lord of creation); the narrative of (the devotee) Dhruva and then of King Prthu; the dialogue between King Prācinabarhi and the (celestial) sage Nārada and next follows the narrative of King Priyavrata, O Brāhmaṇas ! Then follow the stories of Kings Nābhi, Rṣabha and Bharata. (14-15) A description of the Dwipas (the nine broad divisions of the terrestrial plane), Varṣas (subdivisions of the Dwipas) and the oceans (dividing the Dwipas) and (then) of the (principal) mountains and rivers (forming part of the Dwipas); the disposition of the stellar sphere and the location of the (seven) subterranean worlds and the infernal regions (closely followed by the story of Ajāmila, illustrating the means of averting descent into hell, in Book Six). (16) (Here ends the theme of Books Four and Five.)

दक्षजन्म प्रचेतोभ्यस्तपुत्रीणां च सन्ततिः । यतो देवासुरनारतिर्यङ्मनस्रगादयः । १७ ।

त्वाष्टस्य जन्म निधनं पुत्रयोश्च दितेर्द्विजाः । दैत्येश्वरस्य चरितं प्रह्लादस्य महात्मनः । १८ ।

The descent of Dakṣa from the Pracetās; the progeny of his daughters, from whose womb appeared the gods, human beings and demons, animals, the immobile creation (the vegetable kingdom), birds and so on. (17) Then follows an account, O Brāhmaṇa sages, of the birth and fall of the demon Vṛtra (son of Twaṣṭā, the architect of the gods) as well as of Hiranyakaśipu and Hiranyākṣa (the two sons of Diti) and the narrative of the high-souled Prahrāda, the ruler of the Daityas. (18) (This sums up the contents of Books Six and Seven.)

मन्वन्तरानुकथनं गजेन्द्रस्य विमोक्षणम् । मन्वन्तरावताराश्च विष्णोर्हयशिरादयः । १९ ।
 कौर्म धावन्तरं मात्स्यं वामनं च जगत्पतेः । क्षीरोदमथनं तद्ददमूर्तार्थं दिवौकसम् । २० ।
 देवासुरमहायुद्धं राजवंशानुकीर्तनम् । इक्ष्वाकुजन्म तद्वंशः सुद्युमन्स्य महात्मनः । २१ ।
 इलोपाख्यानमत्रोक्तं तारोपाख्यानमेव च । सूर्यवंशानुकथनं शशादाद्या नृगादयः । २२ ।
 सौकन्यं चाथ शयतिः ककुत्स्थस्य च धीमतः । खट्वाङ्गस्य च माथ्यातुः सौभरेः सगरस्य च । २३ ।
 रामस्य कोसलेन्द्रस्य चरितं किल्बिषापहम् । निमेरङ्गपरित्यागो जनकानां च सम्भवः । २४ ।
 रामस्य भार्गवेन्द्रस्य निःक्षत्रकरणं भुवः । ऐलस्य सोमवंशस्य ययातेर्नहुषस्य च । २५ ।
 दौष्यन्तेर्भरतस्यापि शन्तनोस्तत्सुतस्य च । ययातेर्ज्येष्ठपुत्रस्य यदोर्वंशोऽनुकीर्तितः । २६ ।

A connected account of the (fourteen) Manvantaras (divisions of a Kalpa, each presided over by a separate Manu); the deliverance of the king of elephants; the descents of Lord Viṣṇu, the Ruler of the universe, in the form of the divine Tortoise, Lord Dhanvantari, the divine Fish, the divine Dwarf, Hayagrīva (who bore the head of a horse); and others, one in each Manvantara; the churning of the ocean of milk for the sake of nectar by the denizens of heaven (both gods and demons) is likewise told. (19-20) the great war between the gods and the demons; a description of the genealogy of kings; the birth of King Ikṣvāku and his genealogy; the narrative of the high-minded Sudyumna. (21) In this connection is told the story of (Sudyumna having been transformed into) Ilā as well as the narrative of Tārā (wife of the sage Bṛhaspati); an account of the solar dynasty; the story of kings such as Śaśāda and Nṛga etc.; the narrative of Sukanyā (daughter of Saryāti) as well as the stories of kings Śaryāti and the wise Kakutṣtha as also of Khaṭvāṅga and Māndhātā, the sage Saubhari and King Sagara. (22-23) The narrative, which eradicates sin, of Lord Śrī Rāma, the Ruler of (the kingdom of) Kosala; how King Nimi cast off his body and the origin of the line of the Janakas. (24) How Lord Paraśurāma, the foremost of the scions of Bhṛgu, swept the Kṣatriya race off the earth; the stories of King Purūravā (the son of Ilā), the first of the lunar line, as well as of Yayāti and (his father) Nahuṣa. (25) The stories of King Bharata, the son of Duṣyanta, as well as of Santanu and his son (Bhīṣma) and then is delineated the posterity of Yadu, the eldest son of Yayāti. (26) (Here ends the theme of Books Eight and Nine.)

यत्रावतीर्णो भगवान् कृष्णाख्यो जगदीश्वरः । वसुदेवगृहे जन्म ततो वृद्धिश्च गोकुले । २७ ।
 तस्य कर्माण्यपाराणि कीर्तितान्यसुरद्विषः । पूतनासुपयः पानं शकटोद्योतनं शिशोः । २८ ।
 तृणावर्तस्य निषेधस्तथैव बकवत्सयोः । धेनुकस्य सहभ्रातुः प्रलम्बस्य च संक्षयः । २९ ।
 गोपानां च परित्राणं दावाग्नेः परिसर्पतः । दमनं कालियस्याहेर्महाहेर्नन्दपोक्षणम् । ३० ।
 व्रतचर्या तु कन्यानां यत्र तुष्टोऽन्युतो व्रतैः । प्रसादो यज्ञपत्नीभ्यो विप्राणां चानुतापनम् । ३१ ।
 गोवर्धनोद्धारणं च शक्रस्य सुरभेरथ । यज्ञाभिषेकं कृष्णस्य स्त्रीभिः क्रीडा च रात्रिषु । ३२ ।
 शङ्खचूडस्य दुर्बुद्धेर्वधोऽरिष्टस्य केशिनः । अक्रूरागमनं पश्चात् प्रस्थानं रामकृष्णयोः । ३३ ।
 व्रजस्त्रीणां विलापश्च मथुरालोकनं ततः । गजमुष्टिकचाणूरकंसादीनां च यो वधः । ३४ ।
 मृतस्थानयनं सूनोः पुनः सान्दीपनेर्गुरोः । मथुरायां निवसता यदुचक्रस्य यत्प्रियम् ।

कृतमुद्धवराभाभ्यां युतेन हरिणा द्विजाः । ३५ ।

जरासन्धसमानोतसैन्यस्य बहुशो वधः । घातनं यवनेन्द्रस्य कुशास्थल्या निवेशनम् । ३६ ।
 आदानं पारिजातस्य सुधर्मायाः सुरालयात् । रुक्मिण्या हरणं युद्धे प्रमथ्य द्विषतो हरेः । ३७ ।

हरस्य जृम्भणं युद्धे बाणस्य भुजकुल्लनम् । प्राग्न्योतिषपतिं हत्वा कन्यानां हरणं च यत् । ३८ ।

चैद्यपौण्ड्रकशाल्वानां दन्तवक्त्रस्य दुर्मतेः । शम्बरो द्विविदः पीठो मुरः पञ्चजनदयः । ३९ ।

माहात्यं च वधतेषां वाराणस्याश्च दाहनम् । भारवतरणं भूमेर्निमित्तकृत्य पाण्डवान् । ४० ।

It was in this line that the almighty Lord of the universe took His descent under the name of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. His appearance in the house of Vasudeva and then how He was brought up in Gokula. (27) Here are recounted the (many) exploits of that Enemy of the Asuras—which are as a matter of fact) endless (in number as well as in extent)—how He (even) as a babe drank away the (very) life of the demoness Pūtana alongwith the milk of her breasts and upturned a cart (and destroyed the demon Utkaca who had entered the cart in a disembodied state). (28) How (the demon) Trīvarta (who appeared in the form of a whirlwind) was crushed to death as well as the death of (the demons) Baka and Vatsa (who remained disguised as a heron and a calf respectively) and the destruction of Dhenuka (who had assumed the guise of a donkey) alongwith his kindred and that of Pralamba (who came disguised as a cowardly boy). (29) Deliverance of the cowherds from a forest conflagration that came rushing from all sides; subjugation of the serpent Kāliya and the rescue of Nanda (the Lord's own father) from (the grip of) a boa-constrictor. (30) How the maidens (of Vraja) observed a sacred vow (of bathing in the Yamunā in winter and worshipping Goddess Kātyāyanī on its sandy bank for a month in order to scour the Lord for their husband), in the course of which the immortal Lord was pleased with their observances (and conferred on them a boon); the Lord's grace on the wives of certain Brāhmaṇas engaged in a sacrifice and the remorse of the Brāhmaṇas (for their failure to recognize the Lord and pay their homage to Him). (31) The uplifting of Mount Govardhana (in order to save Vraja from the fury of Indra, who sent devastating showers with intent to submerge the tract of Vraja) and how later on (on recognizing His divinity) Indra (the rain-god) and the cow of plenty worshipped the Lord and bathed Him (with milk); His pastimes with the damsels (of Vraja) through (many) nights. (32) The destruction of the evil-minded (Yakṣa) Saṅkhacūḍa (who carried away a number of damsels in the midst of their pastimes with the Lord), as well as of (the demons) Aṣṭa and Keśi (that had assumed the disguise of a bull and a horse respectively); Akṛūr's visit (to Vraja to take Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma to Mathurā under Kāṁsa's invitation) and the subsequent departure of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (for Mathurā). (33) The wailing of the women of Vraja (over their separation from Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and then how the two (divine) Brothers saw Mathurā and killed (at the bow-sacrifice) the elephant (Kuvālayāpīḍa) as well as (the wrestlers) Muṣṭika and Cānūra and (finally) Kāṁsa (the wicked king of Mathurā himself) and others (his eight brothers). (34) How He brought back the dead son of His teacher Sāṇḍipani and the good offices that were rendered to the Yādava clan by Śrī Kṛṣṇa while staying at Mathurā accompanied by Uddhava and Balarāma, O Brāhmaṇa sages ! (35) Extermination of the armies led by Jarāsandha (Kāṁsa's father-in-law and ally) many (seventeen) times; and how the Lord caused the destruction of the king of Yavanas (through Mucukunda) and founded (the city of) Kuśasthali (Dwārakā). (36) How Śrī Hari brought a Pārijāta (a celestial tree) as well as (the council-chamber named) Sudharmā from paradise (the realm of the gods) and carried off Rukmiṇī (the princess of Vidarbha) after crushing the enemies in battle. (37) How, when Lord Śiva (the god of destruction and the protector of Bāṇāsura) began to yawn in battle (when assailed by the Lord with a Jṛmbhaṇāstra during the invasion of Śonitapura, the capital of Bāṇāsura, by the Lord consequent on the capture of His grandson, Aniruddha, at the hands of the demon), the Lord lopped off the arms of Bāṇāsura (thus left unprotected) and, having made short work of the demon Naraka (the ruler of Prāgiyotiṣapura in Assam), took away (and married) the (sixteen thousand and odd) maidens (detained in his palace by the demon). (38) A description of the (redoubtable) might and destruction of King Śiśupāla, Pauṇḍraka and Śālva, of the evil-minded Dantavakra, as well as of Dwivida (a monkey) and the demons Śambara (who stole away the Lord's eldest son, Pradyumna, as soon as born, from the very lying-in-chamber), Piṭha, Mura, Pañcājana and others and how the Lord set (the city of) Vārāṇasī on fire and (further) relieved the earth's burden, making the sons of Pāṇḍu His instruments. (39-40) (Here ends the theme of Book Ten.)

विप्रशापापदेशेन संहारः स्वकुलस्य च। उद्धवस्य च संवादो वासुदेवस्य चाद्भुतः। ४१।
 यत्रात्मविद्या ह्यखिला प्रोक्ता धर्मविनिर्णयः। ततो मर्त्यपरित्याग आत्मयोगानुभावतः। ४२।
 युगलक्षणवृत्तिश्च कलौ नृणामुपप्लवः। चतुर्विधश्च प्रलय उत्पत्तिस्त्रिविधा तथा। ४३।
 देहत्यागश्च राजर्षेर्विष्णुरातस्य धीमतः। शाखाप्रणयनमुषेर्माकण्डेयस्य सत्कथा।

महापुरुषविन्यासः सूर्यस्य जगदात्मनः। ४४।

इति चोक्तं द्विजश्रेष्ठा यत्पृष्टोऽहमिहासि वः। लीलावतारकर्मणि कीर्तितानीह सर्वशः। ४५।

(In Book Eleven we are told) how the destruction of His own race was brought about (by the Lord) under the pretext of the Brāhmaṇas' curse, and the wonderful dialogue between Uddhava and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Son of Vasudeva), in which has been taught as a matter of fact the entire (range of) Self-Knowledge as also the final conclusion about the duties of the various Varnas and Āśramas given and later on is told the story of the Lord's concealing His mortal semblance by dint of His own Yogic power. (41-42) The characteristics of the (four) Yugas and the conduct (of people) conforming to them, and the perversity of men in the Kali age, as well as the fourfold Pralaya (Dissolution) and the threefold creation (viz., Sātvika, Rājāsika and Tamasika). (43) How the wise and saintly King Parīkṣit (the favoured of Lord Viṣṇu) cast off his body; classification of the Vedas into (so many) Śākhās (branches or schools); the holy narrative of the sage Mārkaṇḍeya; the disposition of the limbs and weapons etc., of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person) and the entourage of the Sun-god, the Soul of the universe (during the twelve months of a year). (44) In this way has been stated (by me) in this discourse, O jewel among the Brāhmaṇas ! whatever I was asked by you and something more (too). (And what is more valuable) the exploits of the (various) Avatāras, which are nothing but Their pastimes, have (also) been narrated in all their bearing. (45)

पतितः स्खलितश्चार्तः क्षुत्त्वा वा विवशो ब्रुवन्। हरये नम इत्युच्चैर्मुच्यते सर्वपातकात्। ४६।

सङ्कीर्त्यमानो भगवाननन्तः श्रुतानुभावो व्यसनं हि पुंसाम्।

प्रविश्य चित्तं विधुनोत्यशेषं यथा तमोऽर्कोऽभ्रमिवातिवातः। ४७।

मृषा गिरस्ता ह्यसतीरसत्कथा न कथ्यते यद् भगवानधोक्षजः।

तदेव सत्यं तदुहैव मङ्गलं तदेव पुण्यं भगवद्गुणोदयम्। ४८।

तदेव रम्यं रुचिरं नवं नवं तदेव शश्वन्मनसो महोत्सवम्।

तदेव शोकार्णवशोषणं नृणां यदुत्तमश्लोकयशोऽनुगीयते। ४९।

न तद् वचश्चित्रपदं हरेर्यशो जगत्स्वित्रं प्रगृणीत कर्हिचित्।

तद् ध्वाङ्गतीर्थं न तु हंससेवितं यत्राच्युतस्तत्र हि साधवोऽपलाः। ५०।

स वाग्विसर्गो जनताधसंप्लवो यस्मिन्प्रतिश्लोकमबद्धवत्यपि।

नामान्यनन्तस्य यशोऽङ्कितानि यच्छृण्वन्ति गायन्ति गृणन्ति साधवः। ५१।

नैष्कर्म्यमप्यच्युतभाववर्जितं न शोभते ज्ञानमलं निरञ्जनम्।

कुतः पुनः शश्वदभद्रमीश्वरे न ह्यर्पितं कर्म यदप्यनुत्तमम्। ५२।

यशःश्रियामेव परिश्रमः परो वर्णाश्रमाचारतपःश्रुतादिषु।

अविस्मृतिः श्रीधरपादपद्मयोर्गुणानुवादश्रवणादिभिर्हीः। ५३।

अविस्मृतिः कृष्णपदारविन्दयोः क्षिणोत्यभद्राणि शमं तनोति च।

सत्त्वस्य शुद्धिं परमात्मभक्तिं ज्ञानं च विज्ञानविरागयुक्तम्। ५४।

देवता मुनयः सिद्धाः पितरो मनवो नृपाः । यच्छन्ति कामान् गूणतः शृण्वतो यस्य कीर्तनात् । ६१ ।
 ऋचो यजुषि सामानि द्विजोऽधीत्यानुविन्दते । मधुकुल्या घृतकुल्याः पयःकुल्याश्च तत्फलम् । ६२ ।
 पुराणसंहितामेतामधीत्य प्रयतो द्विजः । प्रोक्तं भगवता यत् तत्पदं परमं ब्रजेत् । ६३ ।
 विप्रोऽधीत्यामुयात् प्रज्ञां राजन्योऽधिमेखलाम् । वैश्यो निधिपतित्वं च शूद्रः शूक्ष्येत पातकात् । ६४ ।

In this way has been recounted to you, O Brāhmaṇa sages, the glory—that is capable of uprooting all evil—of Lord Vāsudeva, whose great exploits are worth narrating. (57) He who repeats this Purāṇa (to others) everyday with an undivided mind (say,) for three hours or (for that matter even) for a second and (in the same way) he who listens to it repeatedly with reverence purifies his very soul. (58) Listening to it on the twelfth or eleventh day of either fortnight of a lunar month, one enjoys a long life; while he who reads it devoutly while remaining without food is thereby rid of (all) sin. (59) Reading this compilation with a calm and collected mind at Puṣkara, Mathurā or Dwārakā while abstaining from food, one is rid of fear (of rebirth). (60) (Pleased) as a result of chanting this Purāṇa, gods, sages, Siddhas, manes, Manus and kings confer desired boons on the man repeating or listening to it. (61) A Brāhmaṇa who reads this Purāṇa attains the same reward which he gets by studying (all the three Vedas,) Ṛgveda, Yajurveda and Sāmaveda, viz., streams of honey, streams of ghee and streams of milk (i.e., all kinds of blessings). (62) Having devoutly studied this collection of verses in the form of a Purāṇa, a member of the twice-born classes attains to that highest goal which has as a matter of fact been extolled by the Lord (on many an occasion in the past). (63) Having studied this Purāṇa a Brāhmaṇa bids fair to attain true insight (into the truth); a Kṣatriya, sovereignty over the (whole) earth with the oceans for its girdle; a Vaiśya, the position of Kubera (the lord of treasures); while a Śūdra is absolved from (all) sins. (64)

कलमलसंहतकालनोऽखिलेशो हरिरितरत्र न गीयते ह्यभीक्ष्णम् ।

इह तु पुनर्भगवानशेषमूर्तिः परिपठितोऽनुपदं कथाप्रसङ्गैः । ६५ ।

तमहमजमनन्तमात्मतत्त्वं जगदुदयस्थितिसंयमात्मशक्तिम् ।

द्युपतिभिरजशक्राङ्गराष्ट्रैर्दुर्वासितसत्त्वमच्युतं नतोऽस्मि । ६६ ।

उपचितनवशक्तिभिः स्व आत्मन्युपरचितस्थिरजङ्गमालयाय ।

भगवत उपलब्धिमात्रधाष्ट्रे सुरऋषभाय नमः सनातनाय । ६७ ।

Śrī Hari, the Ruler of all, who is capable of destroying the (entire) mass of impurities of the Kali age, is not certainly sung elsewhere so frequently. In this work, however, that Lord appearing in all forms stands celebrated at every step through relevant episodes. (65) I bow to that birthless and infinite Lord Viṣṇu, the (true) principle of consciousness, whose own potencies (in the form of Rajas, Sattva and Tamas) are responsible for the appearance, continuance and dissolution of the universe and whose glorification is hardly known (even) to the lords of spheres like Brahmā (the birthless creator), Indra and Lord Śiva ! (66) Hail to the eternal Lord, the foremost of (all) the gods, whose true nature consists of absolute consciousness and who has evolved in His own Self—through the instrumentality of His nine potencies (in the shape of Prakṛti, Puruṣa, the Mahat-tattva, Ahaṁkāra and the five Tanmātrās), strengthened by Himself—an abode (for Himself) in the form of the inanimate and animate creation. (67)

स्वमुखनिभृतचेतास्तद्व्युदस्तान्यभावोऽप्यजितरुचिरलीलाकृष्टसारस्तदीयम् ।

व्यतनुत कृपया यस्तत्त्वदीपं पुराणं तमखिलवृजिनघ्नं व्याससुनुं नतोऽस्मि । ६८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे द्वादशस्कन्धार्थनिरूपणं नाम द्वादशोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

I bow to the (celebrated) sage Śuka the son of Vyāsa, whose mind is (ever) full in

(the realization of) his own blissful character and who has thereby abandoned the thought of another (the notion of diversity), nevertheless whose firmness was shaken by the charming stories of the invincible Lord (Viṣṇu) and who graciously dilated upon the Bhāgavata-Purāṇa connected with Him, which reveals the (highest) truth, and (as such) wiping out the suffering of all. (68)

Thus ends the twelfth discourse entitled "A Synopsis of (all) the twelve Skandhas," in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIII

The extent of the eighteen Purāṇas and the glory of the Bhāgavata

सूत उवाच

यं ब्रह्मा वरुणेन्द्ररुद्रमरुतः स्तुवन्ति दिव्यैः स्तवैर्वैदैः साङ्गपदक्रमोपनिषदैर्गावन्ति यं सामगाः ।
ध्यानावस्थिततद्भूतेन मनसा पश्यन्ति यं योगिनो यस्थान्तं न विदुः सुरासुरगणा देवाय तस्यै नमः । १ ।
पृष्ठे भ्राम्यदमन्दमन्दरगिरिग्रावाग्रकण्डूयनान्निद्रालोः कमठाकृतेर्भगवतः श्वासानिलाः पान्तु वः ।
यत्संस्कारकलानुवर्तनवशाद् वेलनिभेनाम्भसा यातायातमतन्द्रितं जलनिधेर्नद्यापि विश्राम्यति । २ ।

Sūta began again : Hail to the glorious Lord, whom Brahmā (the creator), Varuṇa (the god presiding over the waters), Indra (the chief of gods), Rudra (the god of destruction), the Maruts (the wind-gods) extol through heavenly hymns; whom the chanters of the Sāmaveda glorify by means of the Vedas including the Aṅgas or branches of knowledge auxiliary to the study of the Vedas (viz., phonetics, grammar prosody, astronomy, etymology and Kalpa or the branch of knowledge prescribing the ritual and giving rules for ceremonial and sacrificial acts), their analysis into word marking their sequence and the Upaniṣads; whom the Yogis perceive with their mind fixed on Him through meditation; yet whose whole truth neither the hosts of gods nor of the demons are able to know ! (1) May the (incoming and outgoing breaths of the almighty Lord assuming the form of the divine Tortoise—who felt sleepy as a result of His being scratched (and thereby soothed) by the ends of the rocks (forming part) of the colossal Mount Mandara revolving on His back (while the ocean was being conjointly churned by the gods and the demons for the sake of nectar)—protect you ! Responding to the subtle impetus communicated by those breaths in the guise of the flow-tide and ebb-tide, the constant rise and fall of the waters of the ocean know no rest till now ! (2)

पुराणसंख्यासम्भूतिस्य वाच्यप्रयोजने । दानं दानस्य माहात्म्यं पाठदेश्च निबोधत । ३ ।
ब्राह्मं दशसहस्राणि पादां पञ्चोनषष्टि च । श्रीवैष्णवं त्रयोविंशच्चतुर्विंशति शैवकम् । ४ ।
दशाष्टौ श्रीभागवतं नारदं पञ्चविंशतिः । मार्कण्डेयं नव बाह्वं च दशपञ्च चतुःशतम् । ५ ।
चतुर्दश भविष्यं स्यात्तथा पञ्चशतानि च । दशाष्टौ ब्रह्मवैवर्तं लिङ्गमेकादशैव तु । ६ ।
चतुर्विंशति वाराहमेकाशीतिसहस्रकम् । स्कान्दं शतं तथा चैकं वामनं दश कीर्तितम् । ७ ।
कौर्म सप्तदशाख्यातं मात्स्यं तत्तु चतुर्दश । एकोनविंशत्सौपर्णं ब्रह्माण्डं द्वादशैव तु । ८ ।
एवं पुराणसन्दोहश्चतुर्लक्ष उदाहृतः । तत्राष्टादशसाहस्रं श्रीभागवतमिच्छते । ९ ।

(Now) hear (from me) the number of Ślokas comprised in each Purāṇa as well as their aggregate, the theme and object of this work (Śrīmad Bhāgavata), the procedure to be followed in gifting (a copy of) it, the value of giving it away as well as of reading it and so on. (3) The Brahma-Purāṇa comprises ten thousand Ślokas; the Padma-Purāṇa, fifty-five thousand; the Śrīviṣṇu-Purāṇa, twenty three thousand; the Śiva-Purāṇa, twenty-four thousand. (4) The Śrīmad Bhāgavata consists of eighteen thousand; the Nārada-Purāṇa, of twenty-five thousand; the Mārkaṇḍeya-Purāṇa, of nine thousand and the Agni-Purāṇa, of fifteen thousand and four hundred. (5) (Even) so the Bhaviṣya-Purāṇa consists of fourteen thousand and five hundred Ślokas and Brahmavaivarta-Purāṇa, of eighteen thousand; while the Liṅga-Purāṇa comprises eleven thousand only. (6) The Varāha-Purāṇa comprises twenty-four thousand Ślokas; the Skanda-Purāṇa, eighty-one thousand and one hundred; (and) the Vāmana-Purāṇa is reputed to consist of ten thousand Ślokas. (7) The Kūrma-Purāṇa has been declared as consisting of seventeen thousand Ślokas; the Matsya-Purāṇa, of fourteen thousand; the Garuḍa-Purāṇa of nineteen thousand; while the Brahmāṇḍa-Purāṇa comprises only twelve thousand Ślokas. (8) In this way the extent of (all) the Purāṇas taken together has been declared to be four hundred thousand Ślokas. Of them (as has already been stated) Śrīmad Bhāgavata is recognized as consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas. (9)

इदं भगवता पूर्वं ब्रह्मणे नाभिपङ्कजे । स्थिताय भवभीताय कालण्यात् सम्प्रकाशितम् । १० ।
आदिमध्यासानेषु वैराग्याख्यानसंयुतम् । हरिलीलाकथाव्रातामृतानन्दितसत्सुम् । ११ ।
सर्ववेदान्तसारं यद् ब्रह्मात्मैकत्वलक्षणम् । वस्त्वद्वितीयं तन्निष्ठं कैवल्यैकप्रयोजनम् । १२ ।

The Bhāgavata-Purāṇa was graciously revealed by the almighty Lord for the first time to Brahmā (the creator), seated on the lotus sprung from His navel and afraid of transmigration (and hence earned the title of "Bhāgavata"). (10) It has been enriched at the beginning, in the middle and at the end with legends illustrating the glory of Dispassion and has been delighting the righteous as well as the gods with its nectar-like stories describing the pastimes of Lord Śrī Hari. (11) It has for its theme that one reality without a second—which is the sum and substance of all the Upaniṣads (which are the culmination of the Vedas) and has been characterized as the oneness of Brahma (the Absolute) and the (individual) soul—and has detachment of the Spirit from Matter as its only object. (12)

प्रौष्ठपदां पौर्णमास्यां हेमसिंहसमन्वितम् । ददाति यो भागवतं स याति परमां गतिम् । १३ ।
राजन्ते तावदन्यानि पुराणानि सतां गणे । यावन्न दृश्यते साक्षाच्छ्रीमद्भागवतं परम् । १४ ।
सर्ववेदान्तसारं हि श्रीभागवतमिष्यते । तद्रसामृततृप्तस्य नान्यत्र स्यादिति । क्वचित् । १५ ।
निम्नगानां यथा गङ्गा देवानामच्युतो यथा । वैष्णवानां यथा शम्भुः पुराणानामिदं तथा । १६ ।
क्षेत्राणां चैव सर्वेषां यथा काशी ह्यनुत्तमाः । तथा पुराणव्रातानां श्रीमद्भागवतं द्विजाः । १७ ।
श्रीमद्भागवतं पुराणममलं यद्वैष्णवानां प्रियं यस्मिन् पारमहंस्यमेकममलं ज्ञानं परं गीयते ।
तत्र ज्ञानविरागभक्तिसहितं नैष्कर्म्यमाविष्कृतं तच्छृण्वन् विपठन् विचारणपरो भक्त्या विमुच्येन्नरः । १८ ।

He who, on the full moon of (the month of) Bhādrapada (roughly corresponding to August of the English calendar) gifts (a copy of) the Bhāgavata, placed on a throne of gold, attains the highest goal (after death). (13) The other Purāṇas spread their lustre in an assemblage of the righteous (only) so long as the great and glorious Bhāgavata is not directly visible. (14) The glorious Bhāgavata is surely considered to be the cream of the Upaniṣads. A man sated with its nectarine flavour will not find delight anywhere else. (15) It occupies the same (pride of) place among the Purāṇas as the holy Gaṅgā among the rivers, Viṣṇu (the immortal Lord) among the gods, and Lord Śiva (the Source of all blessings) among the votaries of Lord

Viṣṇu. (16) Again, Śrīmad Bhāgavata is certainly unexcelled among the Puranic collections in the same way, O Brāhmaṇa sages ! as Kāśī is really unsurpassed among holy places. (17) The glorious Bhāgavata is a faultless Purāṇa, which is beloved of the Vaiṣṇavas, (nay,) in which stands celebrated the one supreme Reality, which is all consciousness (as well as all truth and all bliss), free from (all) impurity (in the form of contact with Māyā) and which is the goal of Paramaharīsas (ascetics of the highest order). In this Purāṇa withdrawal from (all) activity, coupled with spiritual enlightenment, dispassion and Devotion, has been expounded. A man devoutly listening to it, carefully reading it and given to pondering it bids fair to get liberated. (18)

कस्मै येन विभासितोऽयमतुलो ज्ञानप्रदीपः पुरा तद्रूपेण च नास्तदाय मुनये कृष्णाय तद्रूपिणा ।
योगीन्द्राय तदात्मनाथ भगवद्वाताय कारुण्यतस्तच्छुद्धिं विमलं विशोकममृतं सत्यं परं धीमहि । ११ ।
नमस्तस्मै भगवते वासुदेवाय साक्षिणे । य इदं कृपया कस्मै व्याचक्षे मुमुक्षवे । २० ।
योगीन्द्राय नमस्तस्मै शुकाय ब्रह्मरूपिणे । संसारसर्पदंष्ट्रं यो विष्णुरातममूचत् । २१ ।
भवे भवे यथा भक्तिः पादयोस्तव जायते । तथा कुरुष्व देवेश नाथस्त्वं नो यतः प्रभो । २२ ।
नामसङ्कीर्तनं यस्य सर्वपापप्रणाशनम् । प्रणामो दुःखशमनस्तं नमामि हरिं परम् । २३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे वैयाक्यामष्टादशसाहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायां द्वादशस्कन्धे त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः । १३ ।

— :: :: —

इति द्वादशः स्कन्धः सम्पूर्णः

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

We meditate on that pure, taintless, immortal and highest Reality which is untouched by sorrow and by which (manifested in the form of Lord Nārāyaṇa) was graciously brought to light at the beginning of creation this matchless lamp of wisdom to Brahmā (the creator) and as Brahmā to (the celestial sage) Nārada, as Nārada to the sage Kṛṣṇa (Vedavyāsa) and as the latter to the sage Śuka (the prince among the Yogīs) and in the form of Śuka, to King Parīkṣit (the favoured of the Lord). (19) Hail to the celebrated Lord Vāsudeva, the Witness (of all), who (for the first time) taught this Purāṇa out of grace to Brahmā, who was keen to get liberated. (20) Hail to the sage Śuka, that prince among the Yogīs, the revealer of Brahma, who redeemed King Parīkṣit (the favoured of Lord Viṣṇu), bitten by the serpent in the form of (fear of) rebirth. (21) (Pray,) so ordain, O Ruler of the gods ! that devotion to Your feet may sprout (in my heart) in every birth (that I may have to take); for You are our protector, O Lord ! (22) I salute Śrī Hari (the Dispeller of all fears and agony), the Supreme Lord, the loud chanting of whose Names is the (most efficacious and easiest) way to wipe out all sin and respectful salutation to whom alleviates (all) suffering. (23)

Thus ends the thirteenth discourse in Book Twelve of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Samhitā, composed by the sage Vedavyāsa and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.

END OF BOOK TWELVE

