* Although the scriptures declare that the dark and bright fortnight of a lunar month constitute a day and night respectively of the manes—a species of living beings inhabiting a part of the aerial region which evidently remains lighted by the sun's rays throughout a dark fortnight and screened from its rays for the whole length of a bright fortnight, the same is not the case with the gods, whose realm—so declare the scriptures—remains lighted by the sun so long as the latter continues to traverse the northern skies, and remains screened from the sun's rays throughout the rest of the year. Thus the period of six months commencing from the day on which the sun enters the sign of the zodiac called Capricornus constitutes the day, and other six months commencing with the sun's entry into the sign of the zodiac called Cancer constitutes the night of the gods. By the statement, therefore, that the moon divides the day and night of the gods and the manes by means of the bright and dark halves of a month, the sage Śuka evidently means that the moon determines by means of the bright and dark fortnights the periods of worship suitable for the gods and the manes respectively; for the Śruti text तस्मादप्यर्चनापक्षे यजन्ते restricts the worship of the gods, to the bright fortnight. Similarly the Śruti text अयमपक्षं चिन्ताम् assigns the dark fortnight to the worship of the manes. It is in this sense that the bright fortnight should be understood to be the day of the gods, and the eight of the manes and the dark fortnight to be the day of the manes and the night of the gods.

† The moon-god has been referred to in the scriptures as 'Oṣadhiśa' (the ruler and protector of herbs and annual plants). Elsewhere he has been spoken of as supplying food to all living beings (vide V. xx. 12). It is in this sense that he should be understood as constituting the food of all.

‡ The Nakṣatras or lunar mansions are ordinarily reckoned as twenty-seven only. Their names are:—Aświni, Bharani, Kṛttikā, Rohiṇi or Brāhmī, Mṛgaśīrā or Agrahāyaṇī, Ārdrā, Punarvasu or Yamaka, Puṣya or Sidhya, Āśleṣa, Maghā, Pūrvā-phālgunī, Uttarāphālgunī, Hasta, Citrā, Swātī Viśākhā or Rādhā, Anurādhā (so-called because it is placed next to Rādhā), Jyēṣṭhā, Mūla, Pūrvāṣāḍhā, Uttarāṣāḍhā, Śravaṇa, Śraviṣṭhā or Dhanīṣṭhā, Śatabhiṣā, Pūrvābhādrapada, Uttarābhādrapada and Revatī. The twenty-eight constellations, viz., Abhijit, is located midway between the two Āśadhā and Śravaṇa, as is borne out by the Śruti text—'अभिजित्नाम नक्षत्रमुपरिष्ठादापादानामधस्तच्छ्रीणायाः'.

fixed as they are to the wheel of time by God. (11) At a height of two lakh Yojanas beyond them is observed Uśanā (Venus), which traverses the heavens in rapid, slow and moderate marches like the sun, (sometimes) going before, (at other times following) in the rear, and (at still other times) keeping pace with, the sun. Bringing showers (in its train) almost invariably, it is ever propitious to (all) living beings and by its flitting (across certain constellations) is concluded to be neutralizing the influence of planets (such as the Mars) obstructing rainfall. (12)

उशनसा बुधो व्याख्यातस्तत उपरिष्ठाद् द्विलक्षयोजनतो बुधः सोमसुत उपलभ्यमानः प्रायेण शुभकृद्यदार्काद् व्यतिरिच्येत तदातिवाताभ्रप्रायानावृष्ट्यादिभयमाशंसते । १३ । अत ऊर्ध्वमङ्गारकोऽपि योजनलक्षद्वितय उपलभ्यमानस्त्रिभिस्त्रिभिः पक्षैरेकैकशो राशीन्द्वादशानुभुङ्क्ते यदि न वक्रेणाभिवर्तते प्रायेणाशुभग्रहोऽघशंसः । १४ । तत उपरिष्ठाद् द्विलक्षयोजनान्तरगतो भगवान् बृहस्पतिरेकैकस्मिन् राशौ परिवत्सरं परिवत्सरं चरति यदि न वक्रः स्यात्प्रायेणानुकूलो ब्राह्मणकुलस्य । १५ ।

By describing (the course of) Venus, (the course of) Budha or Mercury (too) stands described. Observed at a height of two lakh Yojanas beyond Venus, Budha, an offspring of the moon, is generally beneficent (in its influence). When (however) it outstrips the sun, it forebodes storm, a cloudy weather almost throughout (that period), drought and other unwelcome conditions. (13) Beyond Mercury, Aṅgāraka (Mars) too is observed at a height of two lakh Yojanas. It passes through the twelve signs of the zodiac at the rate of one in three fortnights, unless it takes a retrograde course, and is an inauspicious planet, often portending evil. (14) Placed at a height of two lakh Yojanas beyond Mars, the glorious Bṛhaspati (Jupiter) passes through one sign of the zodiac in a whole year unless it takes a retrograde course. It is generally propitious to the Brāhmaṇa race. (15)

तत उपरिष्ठाद्योजनलक्षद्वयात्प्रतीयमानः शनैश्चर एकैकस्मिन् राशौ त्रिंशन्मासान् विलम्बमानः सर्वानेवानुपयैति तावद्विरनुवत्सरैः प्रायेण हि सर्वेषामशान्तिकरः । १६ । तत उत्तरस्मादुष्य एकादशलक्षयोजनान्तर उपलभ्यन्ते य एव लोकानां शमनुभावयन्तो भगवतो विष्णोर्यत्परमं पदं प्रदक्षिणं प्रक्रमन्ति । १७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठमस्कन्धे ज्योतिश्चक्रवर्णने द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः । २२ ।

Observed at a height of two lakh Yojanas beyond Jupiter, and tarrying in each sign of the zodiac for thirty months (two years and a half), the planet Śanaīścara or Saturn (so-called because of its slow moving nature) passes through all (the twelve signs) in exactly the same number of years and is indeed mostly a source of anxiety to all. (16) At a height of eleven lakh Yojanas beyond Saturn are observed the seven Ṛṣis (the seven stars known by the name of the Big Bear or Ursa Major), that move clockwise round what they call the highest abode of Lord Viṣṇu (viz., the pole-star or Dhruvaloka), (ever) contemplating the (unmixed) good of all living beings. (17)

Thus ends the twenty-second discourse, forming part of an account of the stellar sphere, in Book Five of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIII

The disposition of the stellar sphere represented in the form of a dolphin

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ तस्मात्परतस्त्रयोदशलक्षयोजनान्तरतो यत्तद्विष्णोः परमं पदमभिवदन्ति यत्र ह महाभागवतो ध्रुव औत्तानपादिरग्निनेन्द्रेण प्रजापतिना कश्यपेण धर्मेण च समकालयुग्मिभः सबहुमानं दक्षिणतः क्रियमाण इदानीमपि कल्पजीविनामाजीव्य उपास्ते तस्येहानुभाव उपवर्णितः। १। स हि सर्वेषां ज्योतिर्गणानां ग्रहनक्षत्रादीनामनिमिषेणाव्यक्तरंहसा भगवता कालेन भ्राम्यमाणानां स्थाणुरिवावष्टम्भ ईश्वरेण विहितः शश्वदवभासते। २।

Śrī Śuka continued : Now, at a height of thirteen lakh Yojanas beyond the Great Bear, lies (in the form of the pole-star) what they call the highest abode* of Lord Viṣṇu, where indeed resides the great devotee of the Lord, Dhruva, son of Uttānapāda, who is being circumambulated clockwise with great reverence even to this day by Agni (the god of fire), Indra (the chief of the gods), Kaśyapa, a lord of created beings, and Dharma (the god of virtue)—all moving synchronously (in the form of stars)—and who is the mainstay (resort) of (all) those who live (even) at the time of Pralaya (when all the three worlds perish). His glory has (already) been described in (Book Four of) this (holy) book (Śrīmad Bhāgavata). (1) Indeed he shines eternally (in the form of a star), fixed as he is by God, like a post holding together all the multitudes of luminaries, including planets and lunar mansions, that are being made to revolve by the ever-vigilant and all-powerful Time of incomprehensible speed. (2)

यथा मेढीस्तम्भ आक्रमणपशवः संयोजितास्त्रिभिस्त्रिभिः सवनैर्यथास्थानं मण्डलानि चरन्त्येवं भगणा ग्रहादय एतस्मिन् न्तर्वहिर्योगेन कालचक्र आयोजिता ध्रुवमेवावलम्ब्य वायुनोदीर्यमाणा आकल्पान्तं परिचङ्क्रमन्ति नभसि यथा मेघाः श्येनादयो वायुवशाः कर्मसारथयः परिवर्तन्ते एवं ज्योतिर्गणाः प्रकृतिपुरुषसंयोगानुगृहीताः कर्मनिर्मितगतयो भुवि न पतन्ति। ३।

Just as (pairs of) oxen, trampling corn (in order to thresh it) while (remaining) tied to a post in the middle of a threshing-floor, walk round in their respective spheres, in three circles (gradually receding from that post), so the hosts of luminaries including the planets—fastened as they are to the aforesaid wheel (revolving movement) of Time either in the inner circle (remote from the earth) or in the outer one (nearer the earth) and propelled by the wind (called Pravaha and referred to in passage 8 of Discourse XXI)—revolve round the pole-star as the pivot till the end of a Kalpa (the life-time of the three worlds) in three courses (northward, southward and along the equator). (And just) as clouds and birds such as the hawk move about in the sky, suspended in the air and helped by their destiny (which keeps them floating in the air and prevents them from falling down), so the hosts of luminaries (which are no other than particular Jivas appearing in those form)—brought into existence by the union of matter and Spirit (occasioned by the destiny responsible for their assuming such forms) and reaping the fruit yielded by their (past) actions—(move about in the air and) do not fall to the ground. (3)

केचनैतज्ज्योतिरनीकं शिशुमारसंस्थानेन भगवतो वासुदेवस्य योगधारणायामनुवर्णयन्ति। ४। यस्य

* In the region of the pole-star Lord Viṣṇu ever remains manifest. It is in this sense that it has been spoken of here as well as at other places as the highest abode of Lord Viṣṇu. It is surely different from the Lord's own realm, known by the name of Vaikuṇṭha, which lies beyond the material plane.

पुच्छाग्रेऽवाक्शिरसः कुण्डलीभूतदेहस्य ध्रुव उपकल्पितस्तस्य लाङ्गूले प्रजापतिरग्निरिन्द्रो धर्म इति पुच्छमूले धाता विधाता च कर्त्ता सप्तर्षयः । तस्य दक्षिणावर्तकुण्डलीभूतशरीरस्य चान्युदगयनानि दक्षिणपार्श्वे तु नक्षत्राण्युपकल्पयन्ति दक्षिणायनानि तु सव्ये । यथा शिशुमारस्य कुण्डलाभोगसन्निवेशस्य पार्श्वयोर्भयोरप्यवयवाः समसंख्या भवन्ति । पृष्ठे त्वजवीथी आकाशगङ्गा चोदरतः । ५ । पुनर्वसुपुष्यौ दक्षिणवामयोः श्रोण्योराद्राश्लेषे च दक्षिणवामयोः पश्चिमयोः पादयोरभिजिदुत्तराषाढे दक्षिणवामयोर्नासिकयोर्यथासंख्यं श्रवणपूर्वाषाढे दक्षिणवामयोर्लोचनयोर्धनिष्ठा मूलं च दक्षिणवामयोः कर्णयोर्मघादीन्यष्ट नक्षत्राणि दक्षिणायनानि वामपार्श्ववङ्किषु युञ्जीत तथैव मृगशीर्षादीन्युदगयनानि दक्षिणपार्श्ववङ्किषु प्रातिलोम्येन प्रयुञ्जीत शतभिषाज्येष्ठे स्कन्धयोर्दक्षिणवामयोर्न्यसेत् । ६ । उत्तराहनावगस्तिरधराहनौ यमो मुखेषु चाङ्गारकः शनैश्चर उपस्थे बृहस्पतिः ककुदि वक्षस्यादित्यो हृदये नारायणो मनसि चन्द्रो नाभ्यामुशना स्तनयोरश्विनौ बुधः प्राणापानयो राहुर्गले केतवः सर्वाङ्गेषु रोमसु सर्वे तारागणाः । ७ ।

Some people declare the stellar sphere as capable of being meditated upon through deep concentration of mind as a form of Lord Vāsudeva, (existing) in the shape of a dolphin. (4) At the end of the tail of this (divine) dolphin, whose body lies coiled with its head downwards, is allocated the pole-star; at its tail (below the end) are located one after another (the four stars representing) the Prajāpati (the sage Kaśyapa), Agni (the god of fire), Indra (the chief of the gods) and Dharma (the god of piety); at the root of its tail, (the stars representing the gods) Dhātā and Vidhātā; at the hip, the seven stars (of the Great Bear, representing the seven seers); on the right side of the dolphin, whose body lies coiled from left to right, they locate the (fourteen) constellations that mark the northern course (viz., from Abhijit to Punarvasu) and (the other fourteen, viz.,) those marking the southern course (i.e., from Puṣya to Uttarāṣāḍhā) on the left side, (even) as on both sides of a (common) dolphin whose body is disposed in concentric rings, the parts are equally divided. (To mention the limbs separately) at its back is placed the (group of constellations known by the name of) Ajavīthī (consisting of Mūla, Pūrvāṣāḍhā and Uttarāṣāḍhā) and at its belly, the milky way. (5) One should locate Punarvasu and Puṣya at the right and left loins, Ārdrā and Āśleṣā at the right and left hind legs, Abhijit and Uttarāṣāḍhā at the right and left nostrils, Śravaṇa and Pūrvāṣāḍhā at the right and left eyes. Dhaniṣṭhā and Mūla at the right and left ears respectively and the eight constellations from Maghā onwards, marking the southern course, at the ribs on the left side; and even so one should place the (other) eight, marking the northern course, (viz.,) Mṛgaśīrṣa and so on, at the ribs on the right side in the reverse order (i.e., from Pūrvābhādrapada back to Mṛgaśīrṣā), and locate (the remaining two, viz.,) Śatabhiṣā and Jyeṣṭhā at the right and left shoulders. (6) (Again,) at the upper jaw should be placed (the star representing the sage) Agasti (Agastya) and (the star representing) Yama (the god of punishment) at the lower jaw, (the planet) Mars as the mouth, Saturn at the penis, Jupiter at the hump, the sun at the chest, (the star representing the divine sage) Nārāyaṇa at the heart, the moon in the mind, Venus at the navel, (the two stars representing the twin gods) Aświnīkumāras (the celestial physicians) at the breasts, Mercury in the outgoing and incoming breaths, (the planet) Rāhu at the neck, the Ketus (comets) all over the body and all the hosts of (other) stars in the hair (on the body). (7)

एतद्गृहं भगवतो विष्णोः सर्वदेवतामयं रूपमहरहः सन्ध्यायां प्रयतो वाग्यतो निरीक्षमाण उपतिष्ठेत् नमो ज्योतिर्लोकाय कालायनायानिमिषां पतये महापुरुषायभिधीमहीति । ८ ।

ग्रहक्षतारामयमाधिदैविकं पापापहं मन्त्रकृतां त्रिकालम् ।

नमस्यतः स्मरतो वा त्रिकालं नश्येत् तत्कालजमाशु पापम् । ९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां पञ्चमस्कन्धे शिशुमारसंस्थावर्णनं नाम त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः । २३ ।

And actually fixing one's gaze on this very form of Lord Viṣṇu, representing all the gods, in the evening from day to day, one should wait with a concentrated mind upon the same with the following (prayer) silently:—"Hail to the Supreme Person, (manifesting Himself as) the wheel of Time—the backbone of the luminaries—the Ruler of all the gods! (Thus) do we meditate on Him." (8) The form of Lord Viṣṇu (the Ruler of all the gods), consisting of the planets, lunar mansions and other stars, wipes out the sins of those who repeat the foregoing prayer thrice (in the morning and evening and at noon) everyday. (Nay,) the sin committed in the immediate past by him who bows to or even thinks of this form three times (a day) disappears at once. (9)

Thus ends the twenty-third discourse entitled "The disposition of the stellar sphere represented in the form of a dolphin" in Book Five of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIV

The position of Rāhu etc., and the limits of the heavenlike subterranean regions

श्रीशुक उवाच

अधस्तात्सवितुर्योजनायुते स्वर्भानुर्नक्षत्रवच्चरतीत्येके योऽसावमरत्वं ग्रहत्वं चालभत भगवदनुकम्पया स्वयमसुरापसदः सैंहिकेयो ह्यतदहंस्तस्य तात जन्मकर्माणि चोपरिष्ठाद्वक्ष्यामः । १ । यददस्तरणेर्मण्डलं प्रतपतस्तद्विस्तरतो योजनायुतमाचक्षते द्वादशसहस्रं सोमस्य त्रयोदशसहस्रं राहोर्यः पर्वणि तद्व्यवधानकृद्वैरानुबन्धः सूर्याचन्द्रमसावभिधावति । २ । तन्निशम्योभयत्रापि भगवता रक्षणाय प्रयुक्तं सुदर्शनं नाम भागवतं दयितमस्त्रं तत्तेजसा दुर्विषहं मुहुः परिवर्तमानमभ्यवस्थितो मुहूर्तमुद्विजमानश्चकितहृदय आरादेव निवर्तते तदुपरागमिति वदन्ति लोकाः । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Some people (well-versed in the Paurāṇika lore) declare that ten thousand Yojanas below the sun (a heavenly body called) Rāhu moves about like a lunar mansion. The deity presiding over it, who was by birth a vile demon, having been born of (a mother,) Sindhikā (by name), attained by the grace of the Lord immortality and the (exalted) rank of a planet (thus, influencing the destiny of men), though unworthy of these. (The story) of his birth and deeds, O dear son, we shall narrate later on (in Books, VI and VIII). (1) They declare the sphere of the burning sun, that shines yonder, as ten thousand Yojanas, that of the moon as twelve thousand and that of Rāhu as thirteen thousand Yojanas in extent—(the same Rāhu) who assails the sun and the moon on the day when the two dwell together and the day of the full moon (respectively), nursing a grudge against them ever since he interposed himself between them (in the garb of a god to share the feast of nectar, which was being doled out to the gods by the Lord Himself appearing in the form of a bewitching woman, Mohini by name vide Discourse IX of Book VIII—and his identity was disclosed by the sun-god and the moon-god). (2) Seeing the celebrated and favourite missile (discus) of the Lord, Sudarśana by name, placed by Him by the side of both the aforesaid (planets) for their protection—on coming to know their (delicate) plight—and formidable by its splendour, constantly revolving, he (Rāhu) stands facing it for an hour or so (lit., 48 minutes), shaking with fear and bewildered at heart and retreats even from a distance. It is this incident (his proceeding against either of the two planets in a hostile manner and standing awhile in front of it in a menacing attitude) that the people refer to as a (solar or lunar) eclipse (as the case may be). (3)

ततोऽधस्तात्सिद्धचारणविद्याधराणां सदनानि तावन्मात्र एव । ४ । ततोऽधस्ताद्यक्षरक्षः पिशाचप्रेतभूतगणानां विहाराजिरमन्तरिक्षं यावद्वायुः प्रवाति यावन्मेघा उपलभ्यन्ते । ५ । ततोऽधस्ताच्छतयोजनान्तर इयं पृथिवी यावद्धंसभासश्येनसुपर्णादयः पतन्तिप्रवरा उत्पतन्तीति । ६ । उपवर्णितं भूमेर्यथासंनिवेशावस्थानमवनेरप्यधस्तात् सप्त भूविवरा एकैकशो योजनार्धुतान्तरेणायामविस्तारेणोपकल्पिता अतलं वितलं सुतलं तलातलं महातलं रसातलं पातालमिति । ७ । एतेषु हि विलस्वर्गेषु स्वर्गादप्यधिककामभोगैश्चर्यान्न्दभूतिविभूतिभिः सुसमृद्धभवनोद्यानाक्रीडविहारेषु दैत्यदानवकाद्रवेया नित्यप्रमुदिता नुरक्तकलत्रापत्यबन्धुसुहृदनुचरा गृहपतय ईश्वरादप्यप्रतिहतकामा मायाविनोदा निवसन्ति । ८ । येषु महाराज मयेन मायाविना विनिर्मिताः पुरो नानामणिप्रवरप्रवेकविरचितविचित्रभवनप्राकारगोपुरसभाचैत्यचत्वरायतनादिभिर्नागासुरमिथुनपारावतशुकसारिकाकीर्णकृत्रिमभूमिभिर्विवेश्वरगृहोत्तमैः समलङ्कृताश्चकासति । ९ । उद्यानानि चातितरां मनइन्द्रियानन्दिभिः कुसुमफलस्तम्बकुसुमभगिकसलयावनतरुचिरविटपविटपिनां लताङ्गालिङ्गितानां श्रीभिः समिथुनविविधविहङ्गमजलाशयानाममलजलपूर्णानां झषकुलोल्लङ्घनक्षुभितनीरनीरजकुमुदकुवलयकह्लारनीलोत्पललोहितशतपत्रादिवनेषु कृतनिकेतनानामेकविहाराकुलमधुरविविधस्वनादिभिरिन्द्रियोत्सवैरमरलोकश्रियमतिशयितानि । १० । यत्र ह वाव न भयमहोरात्रादिभिः कालविभागैरुपलक्ष्यते । ११ । यत्र हि महाहिप्रवरशिरोमणयः सर्वे तमः प्रबाधन्ते । १२ । न वा एतेषु वसतां दिव्यौषधिरसरसायनान्नपानस्नानादिभिराधयो व्याधयो वलीपलितजरादयश्च देहवैवर्ण्यदौर्गन्ध्यस्वेदकलमलानिरिति वयोऽवस्थाश्च भवन्ति । १३ । न हि तेषां कल्याणानां प्रभवति कुतश्चन मृत्युर्विना भगवत्तेजसश्चक्रापदेशात् । १४ । यस्मिन् प्रविष्टेऽसुरबधूनां प्रायः पुंसवनानि भयादेव स्रवन्ति पतन्ति च । १५ ।

At (a distance of) quite as many (ten thousand) Yojanas (as Rāhu stands below the sun) below Rāhu lie the abodes (realms) of (demigods such as) the Siddhas (a class of beings possessing mystic powers from their very birth), Cāraṇas (celestial bards) and Vidyādhara (celestial artistes). (4) Below these lies the aerial region, the sports-ground (abode) of the hosts of Yakṣas (the attendants of Kubera, the god of riches), Rākṣasas (ogres), Piśācas (goblins), Pretas (spirits) and Bhūtas (ghosts), extending as far (below) as the wind fiercely blows and clouds are met with. (5) At a distance of a hundred Yojanas below that (the aerial region) lies this earth (the terrestrial region), extending as far (high) as the foremost of birds such as the swans, vultures, hawks and eagles (are able to) soar. (6) The situation of the earth as well as the arrangement of its parts has (already) been described as it is. Even below (in the bowels of) the earth there exist seven holes in the earth (subterranean regions)—situated at a distance of ten thousand Yojanas (from one another) and each extending to the (same) length and breadth of ten thousand Yojanas, viz., Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Talātala, Mahātala, Rasātala and Pātāla. (7) In the houses, gardens, pleasure-grounds and stadia in these heavenlike subterranean regions—houses etc., exuberantly rich in sensuous enjoyments, affluence and joy born of power, surpassing even those enjoyed in heaven—live as householders Daityas and Dānavas (two species of superhuman beings noted for their herculean strength and gigantic form) and serpents (born of Kadrū, one of the wives of the sage Kaśyapa), whose wives and children, relations and kinsmen and servants are ever highly delighted and devoted (to them), whose desires are never thwarted even by most powerful gods (like Indra) and who divert themselves with their uncanny skill in (various) arts. (8) In these regions, O great king (Parīkṣit), shine forth cities built by the miraculous architect Maya, and richly adorned with wonderful house, defensive walls, gates, town halls, places of worship, quadrangles and resting-places etc., built of various excellent gems of best type, as well as with grand mansions of the lords of these regions, whose terraces are (ever) crowded with pairs of Nāgas and Asuras (demons), pigeons and parrots and Mainās. (9) The gardens too (in those regions) surpassingly dim the glory of the celestial world by the splendour, delighting the mind and senses (of the spectators), of (their) trees—whose charming boughs are weighed down by bunches of flowers and fruits and lovely young leaves and which are embraced by the body of creepers—(as well as) of their lakes etc., full of limpid water and resorted to by various species of birds living singly as well as in pairs; and (even so) they excel the heavenly world by the sweet and varied notes of birds that have taken up their abode in the beds of lotuses and lilies, Kuvalayas, and Kalhāras, blue and red, lotuses and lotuses with a hundred petals (and so on) in the water of those lakes etc., shaken by the leaping of fish—notes that bring a feast of joy (to the hearers) and are confused by their uninterrupted sport. (10) There indeed, they say, no fear caused by divisions of time such as day and night is observed (among the people since the sun and the moon do not shine there and the denizens of those regions are very long-lived). (11) As a matter of fact, in those regions the gems on the hoods of the foremost of the great serpents (inhabiting them) drive away all darkness. (12) Nor indeed do anxieties and ailments, wrinkles, grey hairs and old age (the root of all these) etc., paleness of the body, foul smell (coming from the body), perspiration, fatigue and langour—these as well as the changes in age (too) do not afflict those residing in these regions because of (their taking) miraculous herbs, saps, elixirs, foods and drinks, baths and so on. (13) In fact, death from no cause except from the might of the Lord going by the name of his discus (Sudarśana) prevails against those blessed souls. (14) (And) the moment that discus enters those regions the embryos (carried in the womb) of the Asura women generally slip out (from the womb) in their earlier or later stages of development through sheer fear (of the discus). (15)

अथातले मयपुत्रोऽसुरो बलो निवसति येन ह वा इह सृष्टाः षण्णवतिर्मायाः काश्चनाद्यापि मायाविनो धारयन्ति यस्य च जृम्भमाणस्य मुखतस्त्रयः स्त्रीगणा उदपद्यन्त स्वैरिण्यः कामिन्यः पुंश्चल्य इति या वै विलायनं प्रविष्टं पुरुषं रसेन हाटकाख्येन साधयित्वा स्वविलासावलोकनानुरागस्मितसंलापोपगूहनादिभिः स्वैरं किल रमयन्ति यस्मिन्पुयुक्ते पुरुष ईश्वरोऽहं सिद्धोऽहमित्ययुतमहागजबलमात्मानमभिमन्यमानः कथ्यते मदन्ध इव । १६ ।

Now, in (the region of) Atala, lives the demon Bala, son of Maya, by whom, indeed, they say, were released ninety-six (varieties of) conjuring tricks, some of which conjurers practise even today. From the mouth of this demon, even as he was yawning (once), sprang up three groups of women, called Swairiṇis (those copulating with men of their class alone), Kāminis (copulating with people of other classes too) and Puṁścalis (the most fickle-minded among the Kāminis). (All) these women render a man, entering this subterranean region, sexually fit by (giving them) an elixir called Hāṭaka and afford them sexual delight at will, so they say, by their (peculiar) dalliances and sportive glances, love-begotten smiles, affectionate talks and embraces etc. When that elixir is taken, a man begins to feel that he is all-powerful, that he is all-perfect and, thinking himself as possessing the strength of ten thousand mighty elephants, brags like one blinded by intoxication. (16)

ततोऽधस्ताद्वितले हरो भगवान् हाटकेश्वरः स्वपार्षदभूतगणावृतः प्रजापतिसर्गोपबृंहणाय भवो भवान्या सह मिथुनीभूत आस्ते यतः प्रवृत्ता सरित्प्रवरा हाटकी नाम भवयोर्वीर्येण यत्र चित्रभानुर्मातरिश्वना समिध्यमान ओजसा पिबति तन्निष्कृतं हाटकाख्यं सुवर्णं भूषणेनासुरेन्द्रावरोधेषु पुरुषाः सह पुरुषीभिर्धारयन्ति । १७ ।

Below that, in (the region of) Vitala, resides Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe), (known by the name of) Hāṭakeśwara, surrounded by troops of ghosts, forming His retinue, and united with His (divine) Spouse (Goddess Pārvatī) under the name of Bhava (the Source of the creation) for multiplying the creation of Brahmā (the lord of creation). From Him has issued the great river Hāṭakī, charged with the energy of both Lord Bhava and Goddess

Bhavānī (His Consort), where fire, kindled by the wind, absorbs with (great) vigour the water (of the river), and the same, thrown out (in the form of froth), is condensed into (the variety of) gold, known by the name of Hāṭaka which both males and females (who are equally strong) in the gynaeceums of the Asura chiefs wear (on their person) in the form of ornaments. (17)

ततोऽधस्तात्सुतले उदारश्रवाः पुण्यश्लोको विरोचनात्मजो बलिर्भगवता महेन्द्रस्य प्रियं चिकीर्षमाणोनादितेर्लब्धकायो भूत्वा वटुवामनरूपेण पराक्षिप्तलोकत्रयो भगवदनुकम्पयैव पुनः प्रवेशित इन्द्रादिष्वविद्यमानया सुसमृद्धया श्रियाभिजुष्टः स्वधर्मेणाराधयंस्तमेव भगवन्तमाराधनीयमपगतसाध्वस आस्तेऽधुनापि । १८ । नो एवैतत्साक्षात्कारो भूमिदानस्य यत्तद्भगवत्पशोषजीवनिकायानां जीवभूतात्मभूते परमात्मनि वासुदेवे तीर्थतमे पात्र उपपन्ने परया श्रद्धया परमादरसमाहितमनसा सम्प्रतिपादितस्य साक्षादपवर्गद्वारस्य यद्विलनिलयैश्वर्यम् । १९ । यस्य ह वाव क्षुत्पतनप्रस्त्रलनादिषु विवशः सकृन्नामाभिगृणन् पुरुषः कर्मबन्धनमञ्जसा विधुनोति यस्य हैव प्रतिबाधनं मुमुक्ष्वोऽन्यथैवोपलभन्ते । २० । तद्भक्तानामात्मवतां सर्वेषामात्मन्यात्मद आत्मतयैव । २१ । न वै भगवान्नूनममुष्यानुजग्राह यदुत पुनरात्मानुस्मृतिमोषणं मायामयभोगैश्वर्यमेवातनुतेति । २२ । यत्तद्भगवतानधिगतान्योपायेन याच्ञाच्छलेनापहतस्वशरीरावशेषितलोकत्रयो वरुणपाशैश्च सम्प्रतिमुक्तो गिरिदर्या चापविद्ध इति होवाच । २३ । नूनं वतायं भगवानर्थेषु न निष्णातो योऽसाविन्द्रो यस्य सचिवो मन्त्राय वृत एकान्ततो बृहस्पतिस्तमतिहायस्वयमुपेन्द्रेणात्मानमयाचतात्मनश्चाशिषो नो एव तदास्यमतिगम्भीरवयसः कालस्य मन्वन्तरपरिवृत्तं कियल्लोकत्रयमिदम् । २४ । यस्यानुदास्यमेवास्मत्पितामहः किल वव्रे न तु स्वपित्र्यं यदुताकुतोभयं पदं दीयमानं भगवतः परमिति भगवतोपरते खलु स्वपितरि । २५ । तस्य महानुभावस्यानुपथममृजितकषायः को वास्मद्विधः परिहीणभगवदनुग्रह उपजिगमिषतीति । २६ । तस्यानुचरितमुपरिष्ठाद्विस्तरिष्यते यस्य भगवान् स्वयमखिलजगद्गुरुं नारायणो द्वारि गदापाणिरवतिष्ठते निजजनानुकम्पितहृदयो येनाङ्गुष्ठेन पदा दशकन्धरो योजनायुतायुतं दिग्विजय उच्चाटितः । २७ ।

Below that, in (the region of) Sutala, resides, free from (all) fear, even to this day (the demon king) Bali of sacred renown, the illustrious son of Virocana. (Once) robbed of (the sovereignty of all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) by the Lord—who in order to please the mighty Indra (the chief of the gods) descended through (the womb of) Aditi (the mother of the gods and a wife of the sage Kaśyapa) and appeared (before him) in the form of a celibate dwarf—he was admitted (into this realm) through the Lord's very grace and endowed once more with overflowing wealth, (the like of) which is not forthcoming even with Indra and others, and continues to worship the same adorable Lord through (the performance of) his duty. (18) The (great) fortune which is enjoyed by Bali in the subterranean region of Sutala is certainly not the direct result of the gift (made by him) of land (in the shape of the sovereignty of the three worlds), inasmuch as it was duly bestowed, with supreme piety and with a calm and composed mind full of highest regard, on the celebrated Lord Vāsudeva (the Abode of the whole universe)—the Supreme Spirit, the very life (animating principle) and Soul (the Inner Controller) of all species of living beings, the holiest recipient presenting Himself (before him)—and was (therefore) directly conducive to final beatitude. (19) A man helplessly (involuntarily) uttering His Name (only) once (even) while sneezing, falling down or stumbling and on other (such) occasions actually shakes off without delay, it is said, the shackles of Karma (that kept him tied down to worldly existence), the means of overcoming which the seekers of liberation find in altogether different processes (courses of spiritual disciplines other than the repetition of the Divine Name, such as Karmayoga, Jñānayoga and Dhyānayoga, which are so difficult to follow). (20) Hence the fortune (referred to above) could not be the fruit of the gift (of land) made—as to one's own self—to the Lord, who is the very Self of all (living beings), (particularly) of those who have attained

Self-Realization, nay, who bestows His own Self on (places Himself at the disposal of) His devotees. (21) Nor indeed can it be said that the Lord showered His grace on Indra in that He bestowed on him only the illusory pleasures of sense and affluence, which, on the other hand, take away the remembrance in relation to the Lord Himself. (22) For, (when) robbed of (the sovereignty of) all the three worlds (and allowed no other possessions) except his mere body and thrown into a mountain-cave, tightly bound with the cords of Varuṇa (the god of water), by the Lord (who did all this) under the pretext of begging for three paces of land) because He found no other means (of depriving him of his glory and possessions), Bali actually uttered the following memorable words:—(23) "Alas! this glorious god who is called Indra is surely not clever in attaining the object of (his) life in that he—whose counsellor is (the celebrated sage) Bṛhaspati, exclusively chosen (by him) for deliberation—ignored that sage and asked me through Lord Vāmana (younger brother of Indra) Himself for (the sovereignty of) the three worlds (the objects of his desire) and on no account the service of that Lord. (After all) of what account are these three worlds, which change hands at the end of a Manvantara (the period of sovereignty of a Manu, extending to a little over seventy-one rounds of the four Yugas), a (minute) fraction of Time, which has an infinite duration. (24) It is well-known that my grandfather (the great devotee Prahlaḍa) asked for His service only, but not the throne of his father (Hiraṇyakaśipu, the suzerain lord of the three worlds), which had (now) no fear from any quarter, even though it was being offered by the Lord on the latter's death, (only) because it was something other than the Lord. (25) What individual like me, whose passions have not been attenuated and who has totally rejected the Lord's grace, can possibly hope to tread in the footsteps of that noble soul?" (26) The narrative of Bali will be told at length later on (in Book Eight), at whose door stays, mace in hand, the divine Nārāyaṇa Himself, the adored of the whole universe—Nārāyaṇa, whose heart is full of compassion for His own devotees and by whom Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) was thrown a hundred million Yojanas away with His toe (when he appeared there) in the course of his (expedition for the) conquest of the quarters. (27)

ततोऽधस्तात्तलातले मयो नाम दानवेन्द्रस्त्रिपुराधिपतिर्भगवता पुरारिणा त्रिलोकीशं चिकीर्षुणा
निर्दग्धस्वपुरत्रयस्तत्प्रादात्तल्लब्धपदो मायाविनामाचार्यो महादेवेन परिरक्षितो विगतसुदर्शनभयो
महीयते । २८ ।

Below that, in (the region of) Talātala, resides the demon chief, Maya by name, the lord of three cities, who had all his three cities (formerly) reduced to ashes by Lord Śiva (thenceforth known as the Destroyer of the enemy's city) in His eagerness to bring happiness (thereby) to all the three worlds, (but) who (later on) secured a footing (in this realm) by His grace. He is the teacher of (all) those who are expert in conjuring tricks, stands protected on sides by that great deity (Lord Śiva) and (therefore) immune from the fear of Sudarśana (the discus of Lord Viṣṇu) and is held in great respect (by the denizens of that region). (28)

ततोऽधस्तान्महातले काद्रवेयाणां सर्पाणां नैकशिरसां क्रोधवशो नाम गणः
कुहकतक्षककालियसुषेणादिप्रधाना महाभोगवन्तः पतत्रिराजाधिपतेः पुरुषवाहादनवरतमुद्विजमानाः
स्वकलत्रापत्यसुहृत्कुटुम्बसङ्गेन क्वचित्प्रमत्ता विहरन्ति । २९ ।

Below that, in (the region of) Mahātala, lives a many-headed brood of serpents, born of Kadrū, called the Krodhavaśas, the chief of them being Kuhaka, Takṣaka, Kāliya, Suśeṇa, and so on. Though possessed of a gigantic form, they are constantly afraid of Garuḍa (the supreme lord of all the rulers of birds)—who carries (on his back) Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person); sometimes they sport recklessly through attachment to their wives, offspring, relations and kinsmen. (29)

ततोऽधस्ताद्रसातले दैतेया दानवाः पणयो नाम निवातकवचाः कालेया हिरण्यपुरवासिन इति
विबुधप्रत्यनीका उत्पत्या महींजसो महासाहसिनो भगवतः सकललोकानुभावस्य हरेरेव तेजसा प्रतिहतबलावलेपा

बिलेशया इव वसन्ति ये वै सरमयेन्द्रदूत्या वाग्भिर्मन्त्रवर्णाभिरिन्द्राद् विभ्यति । ३० ।

Below that, in (the region of) Rasātala, reside (in holes); like serpents, the (notorious) sons of Diti and Danu (two of the many wives of the sage Kaśyapa, the progenitor of the various species of living beings), known as the Paṇis and (further) divided into three classes, viz., the Nivātakavacas, the Kāleyas, and the denizens of Hiranyapura. (Natural) enemies of the gods, they are very powerful and extremely daring by birth, their pride of strength being quelled only by the brilliant weapon (discus) of Śrī Hari, the divine Lord whose glory pervades all the worlds. Thanks to the threats in the form of sacred (Vedic) texts employed by Saramā*, the (canine) female messenger of Indra, they are (terribly) afraid of that ruler of the gods. (30)

ततोऽधस्तात्पाताले नागलोकपतयो वासुकिप्रमुखाः शङ्खकुलिकमहाशङ्खश्वेतधनञ्जयधृतराष्ट्रशङ्खचूड-
कम्बलाश्वतरदेवदत्तादयो महाभोगिनो महामर्षा निवसन्ति येषामु ह वै पञ्चसप्तदशशतसहस्रशीर्षाणां
फणासु विरचिता महामणयो रोचिष्णवः पातालविवरतिमिरनिकरं स्वरोचिषा विधमन्ति । ३१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां पञ्चमस्कन्धे राह्यादिस्थितिविलस्वर्गमर्यादानिरूपणं नाम चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः । २४ ।

Below that, in (the region of) Pātāla, dwell the lords of the realm of the Nāgas (demon-serpents), Śaṅkha, Kulika, Mahāśaṅkha, Śweta, Dhanañjaya, Dhṛtarāṣṭra, Śaṅkhacūḍa, Kambala, Aśwatara, Devadatta and others, (all) provided with extensive hoods an extremely furious (by nature), the chief of whom is Vāsuki. The big and shining gems fixed on the hoods of these serpents—that are possessed of five, seven, ten, hundred and (in some cases even) thousand heads (respectively)—drive away by their splendour the (entire) mass of darkness prevailing in the (nethermost) region of Pātāla. (31)

Thus ends the twenty-fourth discourse entitled "The position of Rāhu etc., and the limits of the heavenlike terrestrial regions" in Book Five of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXV

A supplement to the description of the subterranean system

श्रीशुक उवाच

तस्य मूलदेशे त्रिंशद्योजनसहस्रान्तर आस्ते या वै कला भगवतस्तामसी समाख्यातानन्त इति
सात्वतीया द्रष्टृदृश्ययोः सङ्कर्षणमहमित्यभिमानलक्षणं यं सङ्कर्षणमित्याचक्षते । १ । यस्येदं क्षितिमण्डलं
भगवतोऽनन्तमूर्तेः सहस्रशिरस एकस्मिन्नेव शीर्षणि धियमाणं सिद्धार्थं इव लक्ष्यते । २ । यस्य ह वा इदं
कालेनोपसंजिहीर्षतोऽमर्षविरचितरुचिरभ्रमद्भुवोरन्तरेण साङ्कर्षणो नाम रुद्र एकादशव्यूहस्त्र्यक्षस्त्रिशिखं

* According to a Vedic legend, the Paṇis once stole away the earth and hid it under water. Indra sent down a heavenly bitch (the mother of the canine race), Saramā by name, to trace out the globe. The Paṇis tried to confer with Saramā with a view to compromise; but Saramā spurned their offer and uttered the following words by way of a threat :—'हता इन्द्रेण पणयः शयध्वम्'—(Killed by Indra, lie down on the battle-field, O Paṇis!) The Paṇis are terribly afraid of Indra, the legend further tells us, ever since they heard this threat from the mouth of Saramā.

शूलमुत्तम्भयन्नुदतिष्ठत् । ३ । यस्याङ्घ्रिकमलयुगलारुणविशदनखमणिषण्डमण्डलेष्वहिपतयः सह सात्वतर्षभैरकान्तभक्तियोगेनावनमन्तः स्ववदनानि परिस्फुरत्कुण्डलप्रभामण्डितगण्डस्थलान्यतिमनोहराणि प्रमुदितमनसः खलु विलोकयन्ति । ४ । यस्यैव हि नागराजकुमार्य आशिष आशासानाश्चार्वाङ्गवलघविलसितविशदविपुलधवलसुभगरुचिरभुजरजतस्तम्भेष्वगुरुचन्दनकुङ्कुमपङ्कानुलेपेनावलिम्पमानास्तदभिमर्शनोन्मथितहृदयमकरध्वजावेशरुचिरललितस्मितास्तदनुरागमदमुदितमदविधूर्णितारुणकरुणावलोकनयनवदनारविन्दं सत्रीडं किल विलोकयन्ति । ५ । स एव भगवाननन्तोऽनन्तगुणार्णव आदिदेव उपसंहृतामर्षरोषवेगो लोकानां स्वस्त्य आस्ते । ६ ।

Srī Śuka resumed : At a distance of thirty thousand Yojanas below (the region of) Pātāla, resides that part manifestation of the Lord, presiding over destruction (a function of Tamoguṇa), who is known as Lord Ananta, and whom the followers of the Sātvata (Vaiṣṇava) cult speak of as Saṅkarṣaṇa because it is He who fully draws together (perfectly unites or identifies) the subject—the perceiver—and the object—that which is perceived — by presiding over the ego and is characterized by the I-consciousness (with respect to the body, senses and so on). (1) Being (actually) supported on only one of the heads of the Lord appearing in the form of Ananta (Śeṣa) with a thousand heads, this terrestrial globe looks like a mustard seed. (2) From between the agitated eye-brows—knit in anger, yet possessing a peculiar charm—of the same Lord, when He intends to dissolve this universe at the proper time (the time appointed for its destruction), springs up the god of destruction called Sāṅkarṣaṇa (one born of Saṅkarṣaṇa) appearing in eleven (different) forms, with three eyes and holding up a trident. (3) Bowing (at His feet) alongwith the foremost of devotees with exclusive and intense devotion, the lord of the serpent-demons indeed behold, in the ruddy and spherical nails—bright as rubies—of His pair of lotus-feet, their most charming faces with the cheeks brightened by the sheen of their brilliant ear-rings, the sight of which fills their mind with rapture. (4) Painting with the pigment-like paste of aloe-wood, sandal-wood and saffron the bright, long, snow-white, elegant and charming arm—strikingly set in the lovely sphere of His body like silver pillars—and seeking blessings—(of Him), the unmarried princesses of the serpent-demons, it is said, put on winsome and graceful smiles under the sway of love stealing into their hearts thrilled with the touch of His person, and bashfully look at His lotus-like face, delighted through love and inebriety, with His ruddy eyes swimming through intoxication and casting a merciful look at them. (5) The selfsame Lord Ananta, an ocean of endless virtues, the most ancient deity, resides (there) for the welfare of (all) the worlds, having restrained the force of His indignation and wrath (as appropriate to the occasion of destruction of the world but inopportune at other times). (6)

ध्यायमानः

सुरासुरोरगसिद्धगन्धर्वविद्याधरमुनिगणैरनवरतमदमुदितविकृतविह्वललोचनः

सुललितमुखरिकामृतेनाप्यायमानः स्वपार्श्वदिविबुध्यूथपतीनपरिस्नानरागनवतुलसिकामोदमध्वासवेन माद्यन्मधुकरव्रातमधुरगीतश्रियं वैजयन्तीं स्वां वनमालां नीलवासा एककुण्डलो हलककुदि कृतसुभगसुन्दरभुजो भगवान्माहेन्द्रो वारणेन्द्र इव काञ्चनीं कक्षामुदारलीलो विभर्ति । ७ ।

He is being meditated upon by hosts of gods and demons, Nāgas and Siddhas, Gandharvas and Vidyādharas and hermits, and is ever cheerful through inebriety has rolling and restless eyes, and continues to delight His (own) attendants as well as the leaders of the heavenly hosts (waiting upon Him) with the nectar of His most charming speech. Clad in blue, and having only one ear-ring (in one of His ears), He has one of His graceful and beautiful hands placed on the top of a plough (His favourite weapon) and, (while) like the great elephant (known by the name of Airāvata) of the mighty Indra wearing (its) girth of gold, Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa of beneficent activity wears (on His person) His own sylvan wreath, (called) Vaijayantī, whose elegance is enhanced by the melodious humming (all about it) of swarms of bees drunk with the fragrant and sweet honey of the new Tulasī (basil) blossoms of unfading loveliness. (7)

य एष एवमनुश्रुतो ध्यायमानो मुमुक्षूणामनादिकालकर्मवासनाग्रथितमविद्यामयं हृदयग्रन्थिं
सत्त्वरजस्तमोमयमन्तर्हृदयं गत आशु निर्धनति तस्यानुभावान् भगवान् स्वायम्भुवो नारदः सह तुम्बुरुणा
सभायां ब्रह्मणः संश्लोकयामास । ८ ।

Heard of as aforesaid from the mouth of a preceptor and being contemplated upon (accordingly), Saṅkarṣaṇa enters the heart of the seekers of Liberation and quickly breaks asunder the knot of ignorance formed in their heart as a result of tendencies to action, existing from time without beginning and constituted of (the three modes of Prakṛti, viz.,) Sattva, Rajas and Tamas. The glorious Nārada, son of Brahmā (the self-born) duly extolled (on one occasion) with Tumburu (the celebrated Gandharva) in the court of Brahmā (his father) the glories of the selfsame Lord (as follows):—(8)

उत्पत्तिस्थितिलयहेतवोऽस्य कल्पाः सत्त्वाद्याः प्रकृतिगुणा यदीक्षयाऽऽसन् ।
यद्रूपं ध्रुवमकृतं यदेकमात्मान् नानाधात्कथमु ह वेद तस्य वर्त्म । ९ ।
मूर्तिं नः पुरुकृपया बभार सत्त्वं संशुद्धं सदसदिदं विभाति तत्र ।
यल्लीलां मृगपतिराददेऽनवद्यामादातुं स्वजनमनास्युदारवीर्यः । १० ।
यन्नाम श्रुतमनुकीर्तयेदकस्मादातो वा यदि पतितः प्रलम्भनाद्वा ।
हन्त्यहः सपदि नृणामशेषमन्यं कं शेषाद्भगवत आश्रयेन्मुमुक्षुः । ११ ।
मूर्धन्यर्पितमणुवत्सहस्रमूर्ध्नी भूगोलं सगिरिसरित्समुद्रसत्त्वम् ।
आनन्त्यादनिमितविक्रमस्य भूम्नः को वीर्याण्यधिगणयेत्सहस्रजिह्वः । १२ ।
एवम्प्रभावो भगवाननन्तो दुरन्तवीर्योरुगुणानुभावः ।
मूले रसायाः स्थित आत्मतन्त्रो यो लीलया क्षमां स्थितये विभर्ति । १३ ।

"How can one possibly know in reality the ways (the truth) of that Brahma by whose thought (resolve to create the universe) the modes of Prakṛti, Sattva and so on—which are (severally) responsible for the creation, continuation (preservation) and dissolution of this universe—are able (to function), (nay,) whose character is eternal and uncaused (beginningless) inasmuch as, though one (before creation), it (produced and) bore in itself (this) multiform universe ? (9) The same Brahma (transcendent Reality), in which appears as distinct this manifest (gross) and unmanifest (subtle) creation, assumed out of abounding compassion for us a form—consisting of Sattva (which is) entirely pure (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas)—by which He chose to enact faultless (innocent) sports in order to captivate the minds of His devotees, possessed as He is of unlimited energy like a lion (the king of beasts). (10) (Even) if a fallen man in distress utters His name (as) heard (from the mouth of a preceptor or anyone else) or even by chance, or (even) in a spirit of ridicule, he (not only purifies himself then and there but) wipes out at once all the sin of (even other) men (who merely think of him, much more of those who see him)! Whom other than Lord Śeṣa (who grants the privilege of His service to those who seek refuge in Him) should one seeking Liberation have recourse to? (11) Who can (hope to) exhaust by counting, even if endowed with a thousand tongues, the (list of) exploits of that infinite Lord, whose prowess cannot at all be measured because of its unlimited nature, and on whose (one) head has been placed (by Him of His own free will) the terrestrial globe—with (all its) mountains, rivers, oceans and (numberless) living beings like a (mere) atom, while He is possessed of a thousand (such) heads? (12) Such is the glory of Lord Ananta, possessed of infinite strength and numberless virtues and potencies, who supports the earth (on one of His heads) as a (mere) sport (without any effort) for the maintenance of the entire creation, residing below the earth, Himself supported by (none but) His own Self." (13)

एता ह्येवेह नृभिरुपगन्तव्या गतयो यथाकर्मविनिर्मिता यथोपदेशमनुवर्णिताः कामान् कामयमानैः। १४। एतावतीर्हि राजन् पुंसः प्रवृत्तिलक्षणस्य धर्मस्य विपाकगतय उच्चावचा विसदृशा यथाप्रश्नं व्याचख्ये किमन्यत्कथयाम इति। १५।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां पञ्चमस्कन्धे भूविवरविध्युपवर्णनं नाम पञ्चविंशोऽध्यायः। २५।

These indeed are the only destinations (regions) in this universe to be reached (as a reward for merit) by men—seeking (their) desired blessings—according to (the nature of their) actions, and created (by God). They have been described (by me) as I was taught (by my revered father and preceptor, the sage Vedavyāsa). (14) I have described at length, in response to your queries, the diverse destinies (both) high and low, reached as a reward of virtue in the form of activity practised by man, which are only so many, O king, (Parīkṣit)! What else shall we discourse upon? (15)

Thus ends the twenty-fifth discourse entitled "A supplement to the description of the subterranean system" in Book Five of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षड्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVI

A description of the infernal regions

राजोवाच

महर्ष एतद्वैचित्र्यं लोकस्य कथमिति। १।

The king (Parīkṣit) asked : How is this heterogeneity in the universe (to be accounted for), O great sage? (1)

ऋषिरुवाच

त्रिगुणत्वात्कर्तुः श्रद्धया कर्मगतयः पृथग्विधाः सर्वा एव सर्वस्य तारतम्येन भवन्ति। २। अथेदानीं प्रतिषिद्धलक्षणस्याधर्मस्य तथैव कर्तुः श्रद्धाया वैसादृश्यात्कर्मफलं विसदृशं भवति या ह्यनाद्यविद्यया कृतकामानां तत्परिणामलक्षणाः सूतयः सहस्रशः प्रवृत्तास्तासां प्राचुर्येणानुवर्णयिष्यामः। ३।

The sage (Śrī Śuka) replied : A doer being swayed by (one of) the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), the destinies reached through the various actions (done by him) vary according to the (nature of) faith (by which those actions are prompted, and which is also of three kinds according as it is Sāttvika, Rājasika or Tāmasika in character), and all (those) destinies are attained, more or less, by everyone (at different times). (2) Exactly in the same way, the fruit of action accruing to a perpetrator of sin—which is (only) distinguished by the interdiction attaching thereto—varies according to the diverse types of faith. Accordingly, we shall now describe the more prominent of the thousands of (infernal) states, ordained by God, and resulting from sins committed by those who cherish desires (of various kinds) through (the darkness of) ignorance prevailing (in their heart) from time without beginning. (3)

राजोवाच

नरका नाम भगवन् किं देशविशेषा अथवा बहिस्त्रिलोक्या आहोस्विदन्तराल इति। ४।

The king inquired : Are the infernal regions referred to by you, O divine sage, particular spots on the face of the earth or are they located outside the egg-shaped universe or inside it (between some spheres)? (4)

ऋषिरुवाच

अन्तराल एव त्रिजगत्यास्तु दिशि दक्षिणस्यामधस्ताद्भूमेरुपरिष्ठाच्च जलाद्यस्यामग्निष्वात्तादयः पितृगणा दिशि स्वानां गोत्राणां परमेण समाधिना सत्या एवाशिष आशासाना निवसन्ति । ५ । यत्र ह वाव भगवान् पितृराजो वैवस्वतः स्वविषयं प्रापितेषु स्वपुरुषैर्जन्तुषु सम्प्रेतेषु यथाकर्मावद्यं दोषमेवानुल्लङ्घितभगवच्छासनः सगणो दमं धारयति । ६ । तत्र हैके नरकानेकविंशतिं गणयन्ति अथ तांस्ते राजन्नामरूपलक्षणतोऽनुक्रमिष्यामस्तामिस्त्रोऽन्धतामिस्त्रो रौरवो महारौरवः कुम्भीपाकः कालसूत्रमसिपत्रवनं सूकरमुखमन्धकूपः कृमिभोजनः स्रन्दंशस्तप्तसूर्मिर्वज्रकण्टकशाल्मली वैतरणी पूयोदः प्राणरोधो विशसनं लालाभक्षः सारमेयादनमवीचिरयः पानमिति । किञ्च क्षारकदर्मो रक्षोगणभोजनः शूलप्रोतो दन्दशूकोऽवटनिरोधनः पर्यावर्तनः सूचीमुखमित्यष्टाविंशतिर्नरका विविधयातनाभूमयः । ७ ।

The sage replied : They lie within this universe below the earth and above the water (filling the rest of the space up to the shell of the mundane egg) on the southern side. In that quarter reside the groups of the manes called the Agniṣwāttas and so on, contemplating on the Lord through supreme concentration of mind and invoking only real blessings on their scions (on the earth). (5) There also, it is said, resides the glorious Yama (son of Vivaswān, the sun-god), the ruler of the manes, along with his attendants, and inflicts punishment in the same form as the crime itself on the departed Jivas (embodied souls)—brought to his realm by his servants—strictly in proportion to the sin attaching to their (evil) deeds, taking care not to violate the commands (the penal code) of the almighty Lord (neither showing any favour to the evil-doers by remitting the rigour of his rod nor inflicting a penalty heavier than what they deserve, thus holding the scales even). (6) Some (learned men) actually declare the number of hells (the departments of punishment) in that region as twenty-one. Now, we are going to describe them to you, O king, in order along with reference to their name, appearance (the forms of punishment inflicted in each) and character (the nature of sins that are sought to be expiated through them). They are named as Tāmisra, Andhatāmisra, Raurava, Mahāraurava, Kumbhīpāka, Kālasūtra, Asipatravana, Sūkaramukha, Andhakūpa, Kṛmibhojana, Saṁdamśa, Taptasūrmī, Vajraṇṭakāśālmali, Vaitaraṇī, Pūyoda, Prāṇarodha, Viśasana, Lālābhakṣa, Sārameyādana, Avīci and Ayaḥpāna. Including seven more, viz., Kṣārakardama, Rakṣogaṇabhojana, Śūlaprota, Dandaśūka, Avatānirodhana, Paryāvartana and Sūcimukha, there are (all told) twenty-eight hells, places where tortures of various kinds are gone through (by the sinful). (7)

तत्र यस्तु परवित्तापत्यकलत्राण्यपहरति स हि कालपाशबद्धो यमपुरुषैरतिभयानकैस्तामिस्त्रे नरके बलान्निपात्यते अनशनानुदपानदण्डताडनसंतर्जनादिभिर्यातनाभिर्यात्यमानो जन्तुर्यत्र कश्मलमासादित एकदैव मूर्च्छामुपयाति तामिस्त्रप्राये । ८ । एवमेवान्धतामिस्त्रे यस्तु वञ्चयित्वा पुरुषं दारादीनुपयुङ्क्ते यत्र शरीरी निपात्यमानो यातनास्थो वेदनया नष्टमतिर्नष्टदृष्टिश्च भवति यथा वनस्पतिर्वृक्ष्यमानमूलस्तस्मादन्धतामिस्त्रं तमुपदिशन्ति । ९ ।

Of these, he who takes away (by force or fraud) another's wealth, child or wife is indeed bound with the cords of Death and forcibly thrown by the most dreadful servants of Yama into the hell called Tāmisra. Being tormented in that utterly dark region by being deprived of food and water, belaboured with cudgels, and severely scolded and with other (such) tortures, the Jīva is filled with dismay and falls into a swoon that very moment. (8) Even so he, indeed, who enjoys the wife etc., of another by deceiving the man is cast into (the hell called) Andhatāmisra. (As it is) being thrown into that hell and (while) undergoing the tortures (peculiar to it), the Jīva (embodied soul) is deprived, through agony, of its consciousness and vision, like a tree which is being cut at the root. Hence they call this (particular) hell (by the name of) Andhatāmisra (that which is full of blinding darkness). (9)

यस्त्विह वा एतदहमिति ममेदमिति भूतद्रोहेण केवलं स्वकुटुम्बमेवानुदिनं प्रपुष्णाति स तदिह विहाय

स्वयमेव तदशुभेन रौरवे निपतति । १० । ये त्विह यथैवामुना विहिंसिता जन्तवः परत्र यमयातनामुपगतं त एव रुरवो भूत्वा तथा तमेव विहिंसन्ति तस्माद्रौरवमित्याहू रुरुरिति सर्पादितकूरसत्त्वस्यापदेशः । ११ । एवमेव महारौरवो यत्र निपतितं पुरुषं क्रव्यादा नाम रुरवस्तं क्रव्येण घातयन्ति यः केवलं देहम्भरः । १२ ।

Again, he indeed who fondly nourishes from day to day his own family exclusively through hostility to (other) living beings in this world, regarding the body alone as his self and the objects of this world (viz., his wife, children, house and other belongings) as his own, leaves them (the body and everything else) here and himself alone (accompanied by none) falls into (the hell called) Raurava because of the sin resulting from such hostility. (10) Further, the very creatures that were killed by him here are born as Rurus in the other world (in that hellish region) and kill the same fellow—when he goes through the tortures inflicted by Yama—in the same way as they were killed by him. Hence they speak of that region as Raurava (the abode full of Rurus), Ruru being the name of a creature more ferocious (even) than a snake. (11) Quite similar is (the hell called) Mahāraurava (a class of) Rurus, called Kravyādas (flesh-eaters, so-called because of their being carnivorous by nature) kill for the sake of flesh the man who solely nourishes (here) his own body (hating others), and (consequently) falls into that region. (12)

यस्त्विह वा उग्रः पशून् पक्षिणो वा प्राणत उपरन्धयति तमपकरुणं पुरुषादरपि विगर्हितममुत्र यमानुचराः कुम्भीपाके तप्ततैले उपरन्धयन्ति । १३ । यस्त्विह पितृविप्रब्रह्मधुक् स कालसूत्रसंज्ञके नरके अयुतयोजनपरिमण्डले ताग्रमये तप्तखले उपर्यधस्तादग्न्यर्काभ्यामतितप्यमानेऽभिनविशितः क्षुत्पिपासाभ्यां च दह्यमानान्तर्बहिःशरीर आस्ते शेते चेष्टतेऽवतिष्ठति परिधावति च यावन्ति पशुरोमाणि तावद्वर्षसहस्राणि । १४ ।

Again, in (the hell called) Kumbhīpāka in the region, the servants of Yama fry in boiling oil that merciless fellow, censured even by the Rākṣasas (those feeding on the human flesh), who is actually so cruel as to cook beasts and birds alive. (13) Further, he who is hostile to his (own) father, a Brāhmaṇa, or the Vedas is thrown into the hell called Kālasūtra, (consisting of) a burning level sheet of copper, having a circumference of ten thousand Yojanas and being excessively heated (both) above and below by the sun and fire (respectively); and his mind and body being tormented with hunger and thirst, he continues (there) for as many thousand years as there are hair on the body of a beast (for, in fact, he is no better than a beast)—(now) sitting, (now) lying down and rolling about (restlessly), and (now) springing on his feet and running in every direction. (14)

यस्त्विह वै निजवेदपथादनापद्यपगतः पाखण्डं चोपगतस्तमसिपत्रवनं प्रवेश्य कशया प्रहरन्ति तत्र हासावितस्ततो धावमान उभयतोधारैस्तालवनासिपत्रैश्छिद्यमानसर्वाङ्गो हा हतोऽस्मीति परमया वेदनया मूर्च्छितः पदे पदे निपतति स्वधर्महा पाखण्डानुगतं फलं भुङ्क्ते । १५ ।

Him, again, who actually deviates here from the path chalked out for him by the Vedas, otherwise than in an emergency (warranting such a course) and embraces a heretic creed, the servants of Yama throw into (the hell called) Asipatravana (a cluster of trees having sword-like leaves) and beat with a whip. Actually running there to and fro with all his limbs being torn by the sword-like leaves—sharp-edged on both sides—of the palmyra trees in that grove, and crying 'Ah ! I am finished!' he drops down unconscious at every step through excessive agony and, apostate as he is, reaps the fruit of the sin attaching to heretics. (15)

यस्त्विह वै राजा राजपुरुषो वा अदण्ड्ये दण्डं प्रणयति ब्राह्मणे वा शरीरदण्डं स पापीयान्नरकेऽमुत्र सूकरमुखे निपतति तत्रातिबलैर्विनिषिध्यमाणावयवो यथैवेहेक्षुखण्ड आर्तस्वरेण स्वनयन् क्वचिन्मूर्च्छितः कश्मलमुपगतो यथैवेहादृष्टदोषा उपरुद्धाः । १६ ।

Again, a king or a king's officer who inflicts punishment on one undeserving of punishment or corporal punishment on a Brāhmaṇa—such an atrocious soul falls hereafter into the hell known as Sūkaramukha. With his limbs being crushed by most powerful hands, even as a piece of sugar-cane is crushed (in a cane-crushing machine) here, he is filled with (great) consternation (now) shrieking in a piteous tone and now fainting, even like men who were detained by him here, though not found guilty. (16)

यस्त्विह वै भूतानामीश्वरोपकल्पितवृत्तीनामविविक्तपरव्यथानां स्वयं पुरुषोपकल्पितवृत्तिर्विविक्तपरव्यथो
व्यथामाचरति स परत्रान्धकूपे तदभिद्रोहेण निपतति तत्र हासौ तैर्जन्तुभिः
पशुमुगपक्षिसरीसृपैर्मशकयूकामत्कुणर्मक्षिकादिभिर्ये के चाभिद्रुग्धास्तैः सर्वतोऽभिद्रुहमाणस्तमसि
विहतनिद्रानिर्वृतिरलब्धावस्थानः परिक्रामति यथा कुशरीरे जीवः । १७ ।

Again, he indeed whose mode of life in this world (regulated by a number of injunctions and interdictions based on the division of society into so many Varṇas or grades and Āśramas or stages in life) has been determined by the Cosmic Person Himself (by assigning the different parts of His Body to the four Varṇas—the mouth to the Brāhmaṇas, the arms to the Kṣatriyas, the thighs to the Vaiśyas and the feet to the Śūdras) and by whom the agony of others is (easily) understood (inferred from his own experience) and who (nonetheless) inflicts pain on creatures whose means of living (such as sucking the human blood) have been (similarly) determined by God (appearing as the Creator) and by which the agony of others is not known (inasmuch as they are devoid of reason and as such incapable of drawing conclusions) descends after death into (the hell called) Andhakūpa because of his hatred towards those creatures. Being actually hated on all sides in that region by deer and other beasts, birds and reptiles, mosquitoes and lice, bugs and flies and other living beings—whatsoever were killed by him (here)—he has his sleep and peace of mind disturbed and, finding no rest (anywhere), roams about in darkness just as the Jīva (an embodied soul) remains restless in an unsound (diseased) body. (17)

यस्त्विह वा असंविभज्याश्नाति यत्किञ्चनोपनतमनिर्मितपञ्चयज्ञो वायससंस्तुतः स परत्र कृमिभोजने
नरकाधमे निपतति तत्र शतसहस्रयोजने कृमिकण्डे कृमिभूतः स्वयं कृमिभिरेव भक्ष्यमाणः कृमिभोजनो
यावत्तदप्रज्ञाप्रहृतादोऽनिर्वेशमात्मानं यातयते । १८ । यस्त्विह वै स्तेयेन बलाद्वा हिरण्यरत्नादीनि ब्राह्मणस्य
वापहरत्यन्यस्य वानापदि पुरुषस्तममुत्र राजन् यमपुरुषा अयस्मर्यैरग्निपिण्डैः सन्दंशैस्त्वचि निष्कुषन्ति । १९ ।
यस्त्विह वा अगम्यां स्त्रियमगम्यां वा पुरुषं योषिदभिगच्छति तावमुत्र कशया ताडयन्तस्तिग्मया सूम्यां
लोहमय्या पुरुषमालिङ्गयन्ति स्त्रियं च पुरुषरूपया सूम्या । २० । यस्त्विह वै सर्वाभिगमस्तममुत्र निरये
वर्तमानं वज्रकण्टकशाल्मलीमारोप्य निष्कर्षन्ति । २१ ।

Again, he who eats here whatever comes to him, without sharing* it (with others) and without performing the five (kinds of daily) sacrifices† (obligatory on a householder) has

* It is laid down in our scriptures that a householder should take his meal only after he has fed a stranger waiting at his door, the servants of his household, the young children and the aged of the family, married sisters and daughters and so on.

† The five kinds of daily sacrifices enjoined on a householder are given in a nutshell in the following couplet of the Manusmṛiti :—

अध्यापनं ब्रह्मयज्ञः पितृयज्ञस्तु तर्पणम् । होमो दैवो बलिर्भूतो नृयज्ञोऽतिथिपूजनम् ॥

(III. 70-71)

They are :— (1) Brahmayajña or propitiation of the Ṛsis (to whom we owe all our knowledge, both temporal and spiritual), consisting in teaching and chanting the Vedas and thus sharing with others the benefits of the knowledge bequeathed to us by the Ṛsis; (2) Pitṛyajña or acknowledgment of our debt to the departed ancestors including the eternal Pitṛs in the form of Tarpaṇa or pouring water for their gratification; (3) Daivayajña or propitiation of the gods through Homa or pouring oblations into the sacred fire in their name; (4) Bhūtajajña or acknowledgment of our debt to the sub-human creation by offering a portion of the daily meal to all creatures; and (5) Nṛyajña or worship of our fellow-beings, which consists in offering homage to a stranger who calls at our door by feeding and affording shelter to him.

been likened to a crow and falls hereafter into the worst of (all) hells, called Kṛmibhojana. Born as a worm in a pool full of worms, a hundred thousand Yojanas in extent, the fellow who (thus) ate food a part of which had neither been given to others nor offered as oblation to fire lives there on worms, himself preyed upon (in his turn) by those very worms, and subjects himself to (suffers) tortures for as many years as there are Yojanas constituting the extent of that pool, unless the sin was already expiated by him (during his very lifetime). (18) Again, the servants of Yama, O king (Parīkṣit), tear hereafter (in the hell called Saṁdāṁśa) with red-hot balls of iron or pairs of nippers the skin of the man who actually takes away here by theft or force gold or jewels etc., belonging to a Brāhmaṇa or, otherwise than in an emergency warranting such a course, (even) to another. (19) Again, thrashing with a whip hereafter (in the hell called Taptasūrmī) the man who actually copulates with a woman, unworthy of being so used, and the woman, who unites sexually with a man unworthy of being so approached, the servants of Yama force the man to embrace a red-hot iron image (of a woman) and the woman, a similar image of a male. (20) And him who actually commits here sexual intercourse (indiscriminately) with all (including animals), when he reaches the infernal region (called Vajraṇṭakaśālmali) hereafter, they place on a silk-cotton tree bristling with adamantine thorns and (then) drag him (down along the thorns so as to tear his body). (21)

ये त्विह वै राजन्या राजपुरुषा वा अपाखण्डा धर्मसेतून् भिन्दन्ति ते सम्परेत्य वैतरण्यां निपतन्ति भिन्नमर्यादास्तस्यां निरयपरिखाभूतायां नद्यां यादोगणैरितस्ततो भक्ष्यमाणा आत्मना न विद्युज्यमानाश्चासुभिरुह्यमानाः स्वाधेन कर्मपाकमनुस्मरन्तो विण्मूत्रपूयशोणितकेशनखास्थिमदो-मांसवसावाहिन्यामुपतप्यन्ते । २२ । ये त्विह वै वृषलीपतयो नष्टशौचाचारनियमास्त्यक्तलज्जाः पशुचर्या चरन्ति ते चापि प्रेत्य पूयविण्मूत्रश्लेष्ममलापूर्णार्णवे निपतन्ति तदेवातिबीभत्सितमश्नन्ति । २३ । ये त्विह वै श्वगर्दभपतयो ब्राह्मणादयो मृगयाविहारा अतीर्थे च मृगान्निघ्नन्ति तानपि सम्परेतोल्लक्ष्यभूतान् यमपुरुषा इषुभिर्विध्यन्ति । २४ ।

Again, those Kṣatriyas (men belonging to the ruling class) or officers of a king who transgress here the bounds of piety (as prescribed by the Vedas), even though they have not embraced a heretic creed (and still profess the Vedic religion), fall on their death into (the river called) Vaitaraṇī for having violated restrictions (imposed by religion). Being gnawed in that river—which serves as a most round (the region of) hell and carries in its flood ordure, urine, pus, blood, hair, nails, bones, fat, flesh and marrow—by hosts of aquatic animals here and there, yet not disunited from their body or life and sustained by their own sin, they feel (greatly) distressed by the thought of the (bitter) fruits of their (evil) deeds. (22) Again, they too, who having kept here a low-caste woman (though themselves born of a noble pedigree) and cast to the winds (all) purity, pious conduct and restrictions (about food etc.), lead the life of a beast, abandoning all shame, fall after death into an oceanlike pond (called Pūyoda), full to the brim with pus, faeces, urine, phlegm and dirt, and feed exclusively on that most detestable stuff. (23) Again, the servants of Yama pierce (in the hell called Prāṇanirodha) with arrows, as a target, those Brāhmaṇas and others, on their death, who, rearing dogs and donkeys here and taking delight in chase, actually kill animals otherwise than as enjoined (by the scriptures). (24)

ये त्विह वै दाम्भिका दम्भयज्ञेषु पशून् विशसन्ति तानमुष्मिँल्लोके वैशसे नरके पतितान्निरयपतयो यातयित्वा विशसन्ति । २५ । यस्त्विह वै सवर्णा भार्या द्विजो रेतः पाययति काममोहितस्तं पापकृतममुत्र रेतःकुल्यायां पातयित्वा रेतः सम्पाययन्ति । २६ । ये त्विह वै दस्यवोऽग्निदा गरदा ग्रामान् सार्थान् वा विलुम्पन्ति राजानो राजभटा वा तांश्चापि हि परेत्य यमदूता वज्रदंष्ट्राः श्वानः सप्तशतानि विंशतिश्च सरभसं खादन्ति । २७ । यस्त्विह वा अनृतं वदति साक्ष्ये द्रव्यविनिमये दाने वा कथञ्चित्स वै प्रेत्य नरकेऽवीचिमत्यधःशिरा निरवकाशो योजनशतोच्छ्रायाद् गिरिमूर्ध्नः सम्पात्यते यत्र जलमिव स्थलमश्मपृष्ठमवभासते तदवीचिमत्तिलशो विशीर्यमाणशरीरो न प्रियमाणः पुनरारोपितो निपतति । २८ ।

Again, those in charge of the infernal region (the officers of Yama) put to (great) torture and (then) hack to pieces in the other world those hypocrites who actually slaughter animals here in sacrifices performed for mere show (to deceive others), when they fall into the infernal region called Vaiśasa (Viśasana). (25) Again, they throw into a river of semen (the hell known by the name of Lālābhakṣa), in the other world, that sinful Dwija (a member of the twice-born classes) who, blinded by passion, actually causes his wife, belonging to the same caste (as his own), to drink (his) semen here, and make her drink his fill of that semen. (26) Again, seven hundred and twenty hounds with adamant teeth, which are no other than the messengers of Yama (representing the three hundred and sixty days and the same number of nights constituting a year), indeed voraciously munch in the other world in (the hell called) Sārameyādana, those robbers, kings or soldiers of a king's army who, resorting to arson and poisoning actually loot here villages and companies of merchants travelling together. (27) He, again, who actually tells a lie here while giving evidence (in a law-suit), in bartering (buying and selling) goods or while making a gift, on any account whatsoever, is hurled headlong after death from a (steep) mountain-top, a hundred Yojanas high, in the hell called Avicimat, where there is no support to stand upon (because of the steep nature of the mountain) and where land with a rocky surface appears like water; hence the name 'Avicimat' (having no water*). There the man does not die even though his body continues to be shattered to minute particles, and falls down the moment he is lifted up (to the mountain-top) again. (28)

यस्त्विह वै विप्रो राजन्यो वैश्यो वा सोमपीथस्तत्कलत्रं वा सुरां व्रतस्थोऽपि वा पिबति प्रमादतस्तेषां
निरयं नीतानामुरसि पदाऽऽक्रम्यास्ये वह्निना द्रवमाणं काष्ण्यायसं निषिञ्चन्ति । २९ । अथ च यस्त्विह वा
आत्मसम्भावेन स्वयमधमो जन्मतपोविद्याचारवर्णाश्रमवतो वरीयसो न बहु मन्येत स मृतक एव मृत्वा
क्षारकर्दमे निरयेऽवाकशिरा निपातितो दूरन्ता यातना ह्यश्नुते । ३० ।

Again, if a Brāhmaṇa (a member of the priestly class) or his wife or (for that matter) anyone observing a sacred vow actually drinks wine here due to perversity or if a Kṣatriya (one belonging to the ruling or warrior class) or Vaiśya (one belonging to the trading and agricultural classes) drinks the extract of the Soma plant, the servants of Yama pour iron melted with fire into their mouth when they are taken (after death) to the infernal region (called Ayahpāna), pressing their bosom with their foot. (29) And further he, for one who, (though) himself belonging to the lowest strata of society, indeed refuses through self-esteem to respect here his superiors in pedigree, austerity, learning, pious conduct, Varṇa (grade in society) and Āśrama (stage in life) is as good as dead (though actually living) and indeed suffers in terminable tortures when thrown, head foremost, after death into the hell called Kṣārakardama. (30)

ये त्विह वै पुरुषाः पुरुषमेधेन यजन्ते याश्च स्त्रियो नृपशून् खादन्ति तांश्च ते पशव इव निहता यमसदने यातयन्तो रक्षोगणाः सौनिका इव स्वधितिनावदायासृक् पिबन्ति नृत्यन्ति च गायन्ति च हृष्यमाणा यथेह पुरुषादाः । ३१ । ये त्विह वा अनागसोऽरण्ये ग्रामे वा वैश्रम्भकैरुपसृतानुपविश्रम्भ्य जिजीविषून् शूलसूत्रादिषूपप्रोतान् क्रीडनकतया यातयन्ति तेऽपि च प्रेत्य यमयातनासु शूलादिषु प्रोतात्मानः क्षुत्तृड्भ्यां चाभिहताः कङ्कवटादिभिश्चेतस्ततस्तिग्मतृण्डैराहन्यमाना आत्मशमलं स्मरन्ति । ३२ ।

As regards men who propitiate Goddess Bhadrakālī, the god Bhairava and other deities here by actually sacrificing human beings to them and women who eat (the meat of) such human victims, the men (thus) slaughtered like beasts are reborn as torturing agents in the form of troops of Rākṣasas in the abode of Yama (in the hell known as Rakṣogaṇabhojana) and, cutting up those men and women into slices with their sword like butchers, drink their hot blood and dance and sing in (great) merriment even as those (very) men and women who ate (the meat of) their human victims did here. (31) Again, they who actually torture here (either) in the woods or in their village (itself) innocent creatures, anxious to survive—inspiring them with confidence by allurements (of various kind) when they have come near; and treating them as playthings when they have been transfixed with an iron pin or tied with a thread—recollect their sin when their bodies too are transfixed with stakes etc., in the course of tortures inflicted by Yama (in the hell called Śūlaprota) on their death, and they are further tormented with hunger and thirst and are assailed on every side at every step by buzzards, quails and other birds with pointed bills. (32)

* A sheet of water with a ruffled surface is called 'Vicimat' (having waves or ripples). Therefore, 'Avicimat' means a place where there is no such sheet of water actually present but which only appears to have such a sheet of water.

ये त्विह वै भूतान्युद्वेजयन्ति नरा उल्बणस्वभावा यथा दन्दशूकास्तेऽपि प्रेत्य नरके दन्दशूकाख्ये निपतन्ति यत्र नृप दन्दशूकाः पञ्चमुखाः सप्तमुखा उपसृत्य ग्रसन्ति यथा विलेशयान् । ३३ । ये त्विह वा अन्धावटकुसूलगुहादिषु भूतानि निरुन्धन्ति तथामुत्र तेष्वेवोपवेश्य सगरेण वह्निना धूमेन निरुन्धन्ति । ३४ । यस्त्विह वा अतिथीनभ्यागतान् वा गृहपतिरसकृदुपगतमन्युर्दिधक्षुरिव पापेन चक्षुषा निरीक्षते तस्य चापि निरये पापदष्टेरक्षिणी वज्रतुण्डा गृधाः कङ्ककाकवटादयः प्रसह्योरुबलादुत्पाटयन्ति । ३५ । यस्त्विह वा आढ्याभिमतिरहङ्कृतिस्तिर्यक्प्रेक्षणः सर्वतोऽभिविशङ्की अर्थव्ययनाशचिन्तया परिशुष्यमाणहृदयवदनो निर्वृतिमनवगतो ग्रह इवार्थमभिरक्षति स चापि प्रेत्य तदुत्पादनोत्कर्षणसंरक्षणशमलग्रहः सूचीमुखे नरके निपतति यत्र ह वित्तग्रहं पापपुरुषं धर्मराजपुरुषा वायका इव सर्वतोऽङ्गेषु सूत्रैः परिवयन्ति । ३६ ।

Again, those men who, fierce by nature like serpents, actually molest (other) living beings here, themselves fall after their death into the hell called Dandaśūka, where, O king (Parīkṣit), serpents with five and even seven heads approach and devour them as they would devour rats. (33) As regards these who actually shut up living beings here in dark holes, granaries and caves etc., the servants of Yama likewise thrust them (in their turn) into holes etc., in the other world (in the hell called Avaṭanirodhana) and confine them there with poisonous fire and smoke. (34) Again, vultures, buzzards, crows, quails and other birds with adamant bills forcibly pluck out with great might in the infernal region (called Paryāvartana) the eyes of that sinful-eyed householder himself who, full of wrath, looks on strangers or (other) known visitors here with a malicious eye again and again as if he would actually burn them. (35) Again, he who, proud of his opulence and full of egotism, looks askance at others and distrusts all (including his elders), and who, with his heart and face withering through anxiety about his wealth being exhausted or lost and himself knowing no peace of mind, guards his treasure like a devil, accumulates sin in the process of earning, augmenting and preserving wealth and (consequently) falls after his death into the hell called Sūcimukha, where, it is said, the servants of Yama (the deity presiding over righteousness), like tailors, stitch, all over, the body of the sinful man, clinging to wealth like a demon. (36)

एवंविधा नरका यमालये सन्ति शतशः सहस्रशस्तेषु सर्वेषु च सर्व एवाधर्मवर्तिनो ये केचिदिहोदिता अनुदिताश्चावनिपते पर्यायेण विशन्ति तथैव धर्मानुवर्तिन इतरत्र इह तु पुनर्भवे त उभयशेषाभ्यां निविशन्ति । ३७ ।

There are hundreds and thousands of such infernal spots in the abode of Yama; and all those treading the path of unrighteousness—whosoever have been spoken of here as well as those that have been left unmentioned—enter all these spots one after another, O ruler of the earth. And even so those following the path of virtue enter other regions (heaven etc.); and with the residue of both virtue and sin (when the fruit of the bulk of their stock has been reaped) they both (the virtuous as well as the sinful) return to this land of Bhāratavarṣa (the land of rebirth). (37)

निवृत्तिलक्षणमार्ग आदावेव व्याख्यातः। एतावानेवाण्डकोशो यश्चतुर्दशधा पुराणेषु विकल्पित
उपगीयते यत्तद्भगवतो नारायणस्य साक्षान्महापुरुषस्य स्थविष्ठं रूपमात्ममायागुणमयमनुवर्णितमादृतः पठति
शृणोति श्रावयति स उपगेयं भगवतः परमात्मनोऽग्राह्यमपि श्रद्धाभक्तिविशुद्धबुद्धिर्वेद। ३८।

The path characterized by Nivṛtti or cessation of worldly activity (leading to final beatitude) has been told in detail at the very outset (in II. ii. 24 et seqq.). Of this extent only is the egg-shaped universe, which is depicted in the Purāṇas as divided into fourteen spheres and which is the (most) well-known (and) grossest form of the Supreme Person, Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa Himself, consisting (as it does) of the (three) Guṇas (modes) of His own Māyā (deluding potency known by the name of Prakṛti or matter). He who, full of reverence, reads (all alone), hears (as recited by another) or recites (to another) the account of it (as) told (by me) comes to realize even the incomprehensible (most subtle) aspect of the Supreme Spirit, the theme of the Upaniṣads, his mind being purified through faith and devotion. (38)

श्रुत्वा स्थूलं तथा सूक्ष्मं रूपं भगवतो यतिः। स्थूले निर्जितमात्मानं शनैः सूक्ष्मं धिया नयेदिति। ३९।

भूद्वीपवर्षसरिदद्रिनभःसमुद्रपातालदिङ्नरकभागणलोकसंस्था ।

गीता मया तव नृपाद्भुतमीश्वरस्य स्थूलं वपुः सकलजीवनिकायधाम। ४०।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशसाहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायां पञ्चमस्कन्धे
नरकानुवर्णनं नाम षड्विंशोऽध्यायः। २६।

इति पञ्चमः स्कन्धः समाप्तः

॥ हरिः ॐ तत्सत् ॥

Having heard of the gross as well as of the subtle (incomprehensible) aspect of the Lord, the striver should gradually fix his mind with the help of his subtle intellect on the subtle aspect, when it has been fully concentrated on the gross aspect. (39) In this way has been described by me for you, O king (Parīkṣit), the relative position of the earth with its (various) divisions (Dwīpas) and subdivisions (Varṣas), rivers and mountains, of the aerial region, the (seven) oceans and the (seven) subterranean regions, the (four) quarters and the infernal regions, as well as of the luminaries and the spheres, constituting the wonderful gross (material) Body of the almighty Lord, (and) the abode of all species of living beings. (40)

Thus ends the twenty-sixth discourse entitled "A description of the infernal regions" in Book Five of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā, consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas, composed by the (divine) sage Vedavyāsa.

END OF BOOK FIVE

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

षष्ठः स्कन्धः

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata Mahāpurāṇa

Book Six

Discourse I

The introductory part of the story of Ajāmila

राजोवाच

निवृत्तिमार्गः कथित आदौ भगवता यथा । क्रमयोगोपलब्ध्येन ब्रह्मणा यदसंसृतिः । १ ।
प्रवृत्तिलक्षणश्चैव त्रैगुण्यविषयो मुने । योऽसावलीनप्रकृतेर्गुणसर्गः पुनः पुनः । २ ।
अधर्मलक्षणा नाना नरकाश्चानुवर्णिताः । मन्वन्तरश्च व्याख्यात आद्यः स्वायम्भुवो यतः । ३ ।
प्रियव्रततोत्तानपदोर्वशस्तच्चरितानि च । द्वीपवर्षसमुद्राद्रिनद्युद्यानवनस्पतीन् । ४ ।
धरामण्डलसंस्थानं भागलक्षणमानतः । ज्योतिषां विवरणां च यथेदमसृजद्विभुः । ५ ।
अधुनेह महाभाग यथैव नरकान्नरः । नानोग्रयातनान्नेयात्तन्मे व्याख्यातुमर्हसि । ६ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) said : The path of Nivṛtti (cessation from worldly activity) has been duly delineated by your revered self, following which final beatitude (in the form of non-return to this world) is attained along with Brahmā (the creator) when He (Brahmā) has been reached by gradual stages (such as the attainment of the abode of the fire-god). (1) And the path characterized by worldly activity has also been described (by you in Book III), O (venerable) sage—the path which has for its goal (the attainment of) heavenly and other sense-delights (the product of the three Guṇas) and which leads to repeated embodiment through the (same) Guṇas (for the enjoyment of such pleasures) in the case of the Jīvas on whom Prakṛti has not ceased her hold. (2) The various regions of hell, which are symbolic of unrighteousness, have also been depicted by you. And so has been told at length (by you in Book IV) the story of the first Manvantara, over which presided (the Manu called) Swāyambhuva (son of Brahmā, the self-born), and so the posterity of Priyavrata and Uttānapāda as well as the story of (both) these kings. You have also narrated how the almighty Lord brought into existence the (seven) Dwīpas (the principal divisions of the earth's surface) and (as many) oceans, as well as the mountains and rivers, gardens and trees, the disposition of the terrestrial globe—with (special) reference to its divisions, their distinctive character and extent—and (likewise) of the luminaries and the subterranean regions. (3—5) Now be pleased to explain to me, O highly blessed one, how a man in this world can (manage to) escape from hell, full of various horrible tortures. (6)

श्रीशुक उवाच

न चेदिहैवापचिंति यथांहसः कृतस्य कुर्यान्मन उक्तिपाणिभिः ।
ध्रुवं स वै प्रेत्य नरकानुपैति ये कीर्तिता मे भवतस्तिगमयातनाः । ७ ।
तस्मात्पुरैवाश्चिह पापनिष्कृतौ यतेत मृत्योरविपद्यताऽऽत्मना ।
दोषस्य दृष्ट्वा गुरुलाघवं यथा भिषक् चिकित्सेत रुजां निदानवित् । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : If a man does not atone during his very lifetime and in the proper way (as laid down in the scriptures such as Manusmṛiti) for sins committed (by him) with his mind, speech and hands (body), he inevitably and actually goes after death to the infernal regions, that have already been described by me to you, and which are provide with means of severe torments. (7) Therefore, with a body not (yet) incapacitated (for penance), one should take prompt measures here, even before death, for the atonement of one's sins, after weighing the gravity and lightness of the crime, just as a physician who knows the cause of maladies would adopt prompt remedies before it is too late, duly considering the seriousness or mildness of a complaint. (8)

राजोवाच

दृष्टश्रुताभ्यां यत्पापं जानन्नप्यात्मनोऽहितम् । करोति भूयो विवशः प्रायश्चित्तमथो कथम् । ९ ।
क्वचिन्निवर्ततेऽभद्रात्क्वचिच्चरति तत्पुनः । प्रायश्चित्तमतोऽपार्थं मन्ये कुञ्जरशौचवत् । १० ।

The king said : Since a man, though knowing a sin to be hurtful to his self on the testimony of what is actually seen and heard of by him, repeats it (even after atoning for it), having lost control (over his self), how could there be (any) atonement (for his sins) under the circumstances (so long as the sinful propensity is there)? (9) Now he is absolved from a sin and now he does it again. Such being the case, I account (all) atonement fruitless like the bath of an elephant (which throws dust on its body immediately after it has washed itself). (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कर्मणा कर्मनिर्हारो न ह्यात्यन्तिक इष्यते । अविद्वदधिकारित्वात्प्रायश्चित्तं विमर्शनम् । ११ ।
नाश्रतः पथ्यमेवान्नं व्याधयोऽभिभवन्ति हि । एवं नियमकृद्राजन् शनैः क्षेमाय कल्पते । १२ ।
तपसा ब्रह्मचर्येण शमेन च दमेन च । त्यागेन सत्यशौचाभ्यां यमेन नियमेन च । १३ ।
देहवाग्बुद्धिजं धीरा धर्मज्ञाः श्रद्धयान्विताः । क्षिपन्त्यघं महदपि वेणुगुल्ममिवानलः । १४ ।
केचित्केवलया भक्त्या वासुदेवपरायणाः । अघं धुन्वन्ति कात्स्न्येन नीहारमिव भास्करः । १५ ।
न तथा ह्यघवान् राजन् पूयेत तप आदिभिः । यथा कृष्णार्पितप्राणस्तत्पूरुषनिषेवया । १६ ।
सधौचीनो ह्ययं लोके पन्थाः क्षेमोऽकुतोभयः । सुशीलाः साधवो यत्र नारायणपरायणाः । १७ ।
प्रायश्चित्तानि चीर्णानि नारायणपराङ्मुखम् । न निष्पुनन्ति राजेन्द्र सुराकुम्भमिवापगाः । १८ ।
सकृन्मनः कृष्णपदारविन्दयोर्निवेशितं तद्गुणरागि यैरिह ।
न ते यमं पाशभृत्श्च तद्भटान् स्वप्नेऽपि पश्यन्ति हि चीर्णनिष्कृताः । १९ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Indeed the counteraction of a (sinful) act through (another) action (by way of penance) is not accepted as radical (since there is every possibility of a man's falling back into sin even after the process of expiation has been undergone, so long as he is identified with the body), the ignorant (those identified with the body) alone being qualified for it (the expiatory process). Self-knowledge (alone) is (therefore) the (true) atonement (for it is knowledge alone which eradicates ignorance, the root of sin). (11) Maladies do not actually attack him who eats only wholesome food. In the same way, he who practises self-discipline, O king, gradually becomes qualified for blessedness (final beatitude). (12) Through concentration of mind and continence,* subjugation of the mind and control of the external Indriyas (the senses of perception and the organs of action), charity, truthfulness and purity (of body and mind), the vows of non-violence etc., and sacred observances (such as the muttering of prayers), the wise, who are conversant with (the spirit of) Dharma (righteousness) and full of reverence are able to get rid of even the greatest sin, committed through body, speech and mind, just as fire destroys a (whole) thicket of bamboos. (13-14) A few (rarely blessed) souls, who are devoted to Lord Vāsudeva, destroy (the stock of) their sins completely (with their very root in the form of ignorance) through mere devotion, even as the sun destroys mist in its entirety. (15) Indeed a sinner, O king, is not purified so well through asceticism and other (expiatory) processes as the one who had dedicated his (very) life to Śrī Kṛṣṇa through the constant service of His devotees. (16) For in this world this path (of Devotion) is the best of all, in that it is full of bliss because it has no fear from any quarter. On this path tread pious (desireless) souls who are amiably (kindly) disposed (towards all) and devoted to Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa. (17) (All sorts of) atonements done fail to purify in a thorough way, O King of kings, him who has turned his face away from Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa, even as (a number of) rivers (combined) cannot purify a jar of wine. (18) They who have (but) once in their life fixed on the lotus-feet of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa their mind, that has conceived an attachment for His excellences, never behold even in a dream Yama (the god of retribution) and his servants, carrying a noose (in their hand), since they have actually done (all) atonement. (19)

अत्र बोदाहरन्तीममितिहासं पुरातनम् । दूतानां विष्णुयमयोः संवादस्तं निबोध मे । २० ।

कान्यकुब्जे द्विजः कश्चिद्दासीपतिरजामिलः । नाम्ना नष्टसदाचारो दास्याः संसर्गदूषितः । २१ ।

बन्धक्षकैतवैश्वर्यैर्गर्हिता वृत्तिमास्थितः । बिभ्रत्कुटुम्बमशुचिर्यातयामास देहिनः । २२ ।

एवं निवसतस्तस्य लालयानस्य तत्सुतान् । कालोऽत्यगाम्यहान् राजन्नष्टाशीत्यायुषः समाः । २३ ।

तस्य प्रवयसः पुत्रा दश तेषां तु योऽवमः । बालो नारायणो नाम्ना पित्रोश्च दयितो भृशम् । २४ ।

स बद्धहृदयस्तस्मिन्नर्भके कलभाषिणि । निरीक्षमाणस्तल्लीलां मुमुदे जरठो भृशम् । २५ ।

भुञ्जानः प्रपिबन् खादन् बालकस्त्रेहयन्त्रितः । भोजयन् पाययन्मूढो न वेदागतमन्तकम् । २६ ।

Further, (as an illustration) on this point, the learned narrate the following old legend, in which there occurs a conversation between the messengers of Lord Viṣṇu and Yama, (Now) hear it from me. (20) In (the city of) Kānyakubja (the modern Kannauja) there lived a certain Brāhmaṇa, Ajāmila by name, who had kept a maid-servant (a woman of the servant class) and, polluted by intercourse (cohabitation) with that Śūdra woman, had cast to the winds (all) pious conduct (enjoined on a Brāhmaṇa householder). (21) Making a reproachful living by robbery, gambling, cheating and theft and (thus) maintaining his family, the impious fellow

* Brahmacharya (continence) is declared in our scriptures to comprise eight aspects, which consist in scrupulous abstinence from all of the eight phases of sexual intercourse mentioned below:—

स्मरणं कीर्तनं केलिः प्रेक्षणं गुह्यभाषणम् । संकल्पोऽध्यवसायश्च क्रियानिवृत्तिरेव च ॥
एतन्मैथुनमष्टाङ्गं प्रवदन्ति मनीषिणः । विपरीतं ब्रह्मचर्यमेतदेवाष्टलक्षणम् ॥

"The wise speak of sexual intercourse as consisting of the following eight phases, viz., (1) the recollection of an act of copulation, (2) uttering words denoting it, (3) dallying with a woman, (4) looking at a woman with lustful eyes, (5) holding secret (amorous) talks with a woman, (6) intention to have sexual commerce with a woman, (7) making a firm resolve to have such intercourse and (8) the actual act of copulation. The reverse, i.e., the negation of all these is what they call the eightfold continence.

tortured (and put to death) living beings (and supported his family on their flesh when food could not be got by other means). (22) As he thus maintained (his) existence, fondling the (many) offspring of that Śūdra woman, O king, a considerable period, equivalent to eighty-eight years of his life, rolled by. (23) The old man had ten sons (by that woman); he who was the youngest of them, Nārāyaṇa by name, was yet a child and was (therefore) greatly loved by his parents. (24) Having fastened his heart on that sweetly lisping infant, the old fellow felt extremely delighted while watching its sports. (25) Feeding it while (himself) taking his meals or chewing anything (by way of refreshment), and giving it water to drink while (himself) drinking it, bound as he was by (ties of) love to the child, the silly man did not perceive (the hour of) death, which had (now) arrived. (26)

स एवं वर्तमानोऽज्ञो मृत्युकाल उपस्थिते । मतिं चकार तनये बाले नारायणाह्वये । २७ ।

स पाशहस्तांस्त्रीन्दुष्टा पुरुषान् भृशदारुणान् । वक्रतुण्डानूर्ध्वरोम्णा आत्मानं नेतुमागतान् । २८ ।

दूरे क्रीडनकासक्तं पुत्रं नारायणाह्वयम् । प्लावितेन स्वरेणोच्चैराजुहावाकुलेन्द्रियः । २९ ।

निशम्य प्रियमाणस्य ब्रुवतो हरिकीर्तनम् । भर्तुर्नाम महाराज पार्षदाः सहसाऽपतन् । ३० ।

विकर्षतोऽन्तर्हृदयाहासीपतिमजामिलम् । यमप्रेष्यान् विष्णुदूता वारयामासुरोजसा । ३१ ।

ऊचुर्निषेधितास्तांस्ते वैवस्वतपुरःसराः । के यूयं प्रतिषेद्धारो धर्मराजस्य शासनम् । ३२ ।

कस्य वा कुत आयाताः कस्मादस्य निषेधथ । किं देवा उपदेवा वा यूयं किं सिद्धसत्तमाः । ३३ ।

सर्वे पद्मपलाशाक्षाः पीतकौशेयवाससः । किरीटिनः कुण्डलिनो लसत्पुष्करमालिनः । ३४ ।

सर्वे च नूतनवयसः सर्वे चारुचतुर्भुजाः । धनुर्निषङ्गासिगदाशङ्खचक्राम्बुजश्रियः । ३५ ।

दिशो वितिमिरालोकाः कुर्वन्तः स्वेन रोचिषा । किमर्थं धर्मपालस्य किङ्करान्नो निषेधथ । ३६ ।

Thus continuing, the fool thought of his juvenile son, named Nārāyaṇa, when the hour of death (actually) arrived. (27) Beholding three most terrible male figures with wry faces and hair standing on end, that had come to take him, noose in hand, Ajāmila, (greatly) agitated in mind, called by name his son, named Nārāyaṇa, who was busy with (his) playthings away at (some) distance (from him), in a loud and lengthened tone. (28-29) Hearing the loud utterance of Śrī Hari's (blessed name by the dying man (Ajāmila), who was calling (though unconsciously) the name of their Master (Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa), O great king, His attendants rushed to the spot (there) all of a sudden. (30) The messengers of Lord Viṣṇu stopped by force the servants of Yama, that were (at that moment) tearing (the soul of) Ajāmila, who had kept a maid-servant, from inside his heart. (31) (Thus) forbidden, the servants of Yama said to them: "Who are you that (thus) interfere with the authority of Yama (the deity presiding over righteousness)? (32) Whose representatives are you or whence have you come, and wherefore do you forbid his being taken away (by us)? Are you (some) gods or demigods or some foremost Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers by their very birth)? (33) With eyes resembling the petals of a lotus and clad in yellow silk, you are all adorned with a diadem, a pair of ear-rings and a shining wreath of lotuses! (34) Besides, you are all in the bloom of youth and all possessed of four lovely arms and graced with a bow, quiver, sword, mace, conch, discus and lotus. (35) Driving away the darkness of the quarters and overshadowing (all) other (material) lights by your splendour, what for do you hinder us, the servants of Yama (the protector of virtue)?" (36)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्ते यमदूतैस्तैर्वासुदेवोक्तकारिणः । तान् प्रत्यूचुः प्रहस्येदं मेघनिर्हादया गिरा । ३७ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : In reply to the aforesaid questions asked by those messengers of Yama, the servants of Lord Vāsudeva heartily laughed and addressed the following (words) to them in a voice (deep) as the rumbling of clouds. (37)

विष्णुदूता ऊचुः

यूयं वै धर्मराजस्य यदि निर्देशकारिणः । ब्रूत धर्मस्य नस्तत्त्वं यच्च धर्मस्य लक्षणम् । ३८ ।

कथंस्विद् ध्रियते दण्डः किं वास्य स्थानमीप्सितम् । दण्ड्याः किं कारिणः सर्वे आहोस्वित्कतिचिन्नाम् । ३९ ।

The messengers of Viṣṇu said : If you are really servants of Yama (the deity presiding over righteousness), (please) tell us the true character of virtue and also the means of ascertaining it. (38) How is punishment meted out and who is intended to be its object? Are all the doers subject to punishment or (only) some (doers) of the human species? (39)

यमदूता ऊचुः

वेदप्रणिहितो धर्मो ह्यधर्मस्तद्विपर्ययः । वेदो नारायणः साक्षात्स्वयम्भूरिति शुश्रुम । ४० ।

येन स्वधाम्यमी भावा रजःसत्त्वतमोमयाः । गुणनामक्रियारूपैर्विभाव्यन्ते यथातथम् । ४१ ।

सूर्योऽग्निः खं मरुद्वावः सोमः सन्ध्याहनी दिशः । कं कुः कालो धर्म इति होते दैह्यस्य साक्षिणः । ४२ ।

एतैरधर्मो विज्ञातः स्थानं दण्डस्य युज्यते । सर्वे कर्मानुरोधेन दण्डमर्हन्ति कारिणः । ४३ ।

सम्भवन्ति हि भद्राणि विपरीतानि चानघाः । कारिणां गुणसङ्गोऽस्ति देहवान् न ह्यकर्मकृत् । ४४ ।

येन यावान् यथाधर्मो धर्मो वेह समीहितः । स एव तत्फलं भुङ्क्ते तथा तावदमुत्र वै । ४५ ।

यथेह देवप्रवरास्त्रैविध्यमुपलभ्यते । भूतेषु गुणवैचित्र्यात्तथान्यत्रानुमीयते । ४६ ।

वर्तमानोऽन्ययोः कालो गुणाभिज्ञापको यथा । एवं जन्मान्ययोरेतद्धर्माधर्मनिदर्शनम् । ४७ ।

मनसैव पुरे देवः पूर्वरूपं विपश्यति । अनुमीमांसतेऽपूर्वं मनसा भगवानजः । ४८ ।

यथाज्ञस्तमसा युक्त उपास्ते व्यक्तमेव हि । न वेद पूर्वमपरं नष्टजन्मस्मृतिस्तथा । ४९ ।

पञ्चभिः कुरुते स्वार्थान् पञ्च वेदाथ पञ्चभिः । एकस्तु षोडशेन त्रीन् स्वयं सप्तदशोऽश्रुते । ५० ।

तदेतत् षोडशकलं लिङ्गं शक्तित्रयं महत् । धत्तेऽनुसंसृतिं पुंसि हर्षशोकभयार्तिदाम् । ५१ ।

देहाज्ञोऽजितषड्वर्गो नेच्छन् कर्माणि कार्यते । कोशकार इवात्मानं कर्मणाऽऽच्छाद्य मुह्यति । ५२ ।

न हि कश्चित्क्षणमपि जातु तिष्ठत्यकर्मकृत् । कार्यते ह्यवशः कर्म गुणैः स्वाभाविकैर्बलात् । ५३ ।

लब्ध्वा निमित्तमव्यक्तं व्यक्ताव्यक्तं भवत्युत । यथायोनि यथाबीजं स्वभावेन बलीयसा । ५४ ।

एष प्रकृतिसङ्गेन पुरुषस्य विपर्ययः । आसीत् स एव नचिरादीशसङ्गाद्विलीयते । ५५ ।

The messengers of Yama replied : Dharma (righteousness) is (that which is) enjoined by the Veda and the reverse of it (that which is forbidden by the Veda) is Adharma (unrighteousness). And we have heard (from Yama and others) that the Veda is Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa Himself (from whom it has emanated) and self-born (in the sense that it flows from His nostrils by way of respiration without any conscious effort on His part). (40) It is by Nārāyaṇa that all these existences (living beings) made up of (the three modes of Prakṛti, viz.,) Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, are duly evolved in His own being with (their distinctive) qualities, denominations, activities and forms. (41) The sun, the fire, the sky, the air, the Indriyas (the senses of perception and the organs of action), the moon, the morning and evening twilights, day and night, the (four) quarters, water, the earth, Time and Dharma (the god of piety)—these indeed are the witnesses of (the good and evil actions of) a Jīva (an embodied soul). (42) Unrighteousness as ascertained by (the evidence of) these are determined to be a fit occasion for punishment. And all doers (without distinction) deserve punishment in consideration of their (sinful) actions. (43) For good as well as evil deeds are capable of being done by men given to action, O sinless ones, inasmuch as they are (ever) associated with the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), and no one invested with a body can help doing action (with one's mind, speech or body). (44) He alone by whom a virtuous or sinful act was performed in this world reaps in the other world the fruit of it in the same manner and to the same extent it was actually done. (45) Just as in this world, O jewels among gods, there are found three varieties of living beings (viz., those living a life of ease, those dragging a miserable existence and those who are partly happy and partly miserable, or again those who are tranquil by nature, those who are ferocious and those who are dull, or, according to a third classification, those who are pious by temperament, those who are vicious by nature and those who are of a mixed temperamēt, and as this heterogeneity cannot be explained except by assuming that the said three types of beings severally performed meritorious, sinful and mixed deeds in the past), so from the diversity (in the proportion) of the three Guṇas (manifested in the form of virtuous, sinful and mixed types of actions on the part of men in this world) it is inferred that they will reap the three corresponding types of fruit (in the form of happiness, misery and a mixture of both) in another life. (46) (Again,) just as a current period of time indicates the characteristics of the past as well as the future rounds of the same period, so the current life (of a man) is illustrative of the merits and sins of the past as well as of the future incarnations. (47) (Our master,) the omniscient Yama, who is (another) Brahmā (as it were), clearly perceives (while) at his (own) capital (Sāmyamāni) by his very mind the former state of existence (including the record of virtuous and sinful deeds) of a departed soul and reflects with his mind on his future (destiny) too. (48) (Even) as a man in sleep (the dream state) treats as his self the body revealed in the dream alone and not the one existing before the dream state nor that which will follow the dream state, so the ignorant Jīva (too) identifies itself with its existing psycho-physical organism (the one revealed by its past actions) alone and has no knowledge of the one preceding it nor of the succeeding one, having lost (all) memory of its past incarnation. (49) The Jīva, itself constituting the seventeenth principle (over and above the sixteen constituents of the subtle body, with which it stands identified, viz., the ten Indriyas, the mind and the five objects of senses, viz., the subtle elements), discharges its own functions (of grasping things, locomotion and so on) with the five organs of actions, perceives the five objects of senses with the five senses of perception and experiences with the sixteenth (viz., the mind) the threefold objects of the senses of perception, the organs of action and the mind, all alone. (50) This well-known subtle body, consisting of (the aforesaid) sixteen parts, and a product of the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, endowed with the three potencies of illumination, activity and obscuration respectively) and exceedingly tenacious, subjects the Jīva again and again to transmigration, which is a source of joy and sorrow, fear and affliction. (51) The ignorant Jīva (which stands identified with a body and), that has not subdued the five senses of perception and the mind, is prompted (by that subtle body) to fall back upon action, though unwilling (to do so), and veiling itself with a network of Karma, even as a silk-worm wraps itself in a cocoon, stands bewildered (finding no way out of it). (52) Indeed none remains actionless at any time even for an instant; for everyone is forcibly impelled—by attachment etc.—(born of the three Guṇas—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—and) resulting from the impressions of past actions—to do action against his will. (53) Having found an occasion in the form of merit or sin resulting from one's past actions, a psycho-physical organism (consisting of a gross and a subtle body) actually moulds itself either after the womb (the mother's body) or after the seed (the body of the father) according to the irresistible tendencies of the Jīva (occupying it). (54) This degeneration of the soul (in the shape of loss of its blissful character and its being reduced to a wretched state as a result of identifying itself with a psycho-physical organism) has been due to its association with Prakṛti (Matter). (And) the degeneration ceases before long through devotion to God (and by no other means). (55)

अयं हि श्रुतसम्पन्नः शीलवृत्तगुणालयः । धृतव्रतो मृदुर्दान्तः सत्यवान्मन्त्रविच्छुचिः । ५६ ।
 गुर्वग्न्यतिथिवृद्धानां शुश्रूषुर्निरहङ्कृतः । सर्वभूतसुहृत्साधुर्मितवागनसूयकः । ५७ ।
 एकदासौ वनं यातः पितृसन्देशकृद् द्विजः । आदाय तत आवृत्तः फलपुष्पसमित्कुशान् । ५८ ।
 ददर्श कामिनं कञ्चिच्छूद्रे सह भुजिष्यया । पीत्वा च मधु मैरेयं मदाधूर्णितनेत्रया । ५९ ।
 मत्तया विश्लथन्नीव्या व्यपेतं निरपत्रपम् । क्रीडन्तमनु गायन्तं हसन्तमनयान्तिके । ६० ।
 दृष्ट्वा तां कामलिप्तेन बाहुना परिरम्भिताम् । जगाम हृच्छयवशं सहसैव विमोहितः । ६१ ।
 स्तम्भयन्नात्मनाऽऽत्मानं यावत्सत्त्वं यथाश्रुतम् । न शशाक समाधातुं मनो मदनवेपितम् । ६२ ।
 तन्निमित्तस्मरव्याजग्रह्यस्तो विचेतनः । तामेव मनसा ध्यायन् स्वधर्माद्विरराम ह । ६३ ।
 तामेव तोषयामास पित्र्येणार्थेन यावता । ग्राम्यैर्मनोरमैः कामैः प्रसीदेत यथा तथा । ६४ ।
 विप्रां स्वभार्यामप्रौढां कुले महति लम्बिताम् । विससर्जाचिरात्पापः स्वैरिण्यापाङ्गविद्धधीः । ६५ ।
 यतस्ततश्चोपनिन्ये न्यायतोऽन्यायतो धनम् । बभारास्याः कुटुम्बिन्याः कुटुम्बं मन्दधीरयम् । ६६ ।
 यदसौ शास्त्रमुल्लङ्घ्य स्वैरचार्यार्यगर्हितः । अवर्तत चिरं कालमघायुरशुचिर्मलात् । ६७ ।
 तत एनं दण्डपाणेः सकाशं कृतकिल्बिषम् । नेष्यामोऽकृतनिर्वेशं यत्र दण्डेन शुद्ध्यति । ६८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धेऽजामिलोपाख्याने प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

This fellow (Ajāmīla) was indeed endowed with learning (the knowledge of the Vedas and other scriptures), a (veritable) abode of amiability, good conduct and virtues (like forgiveness), had taken a vow of worship, prayer and so on and controlled his senses, was gentle (and) truthful, well-versed in sacred formulas and pure (in habits). (56) (Nay,) he worshipped the sacred fire (by pouring oblations into it) and served his preceptor, strangers (calling at his house) and elders, was a friend to all living beings, free from egotism, pious, taciturn and uncavilling (by nature). (57) One day, this Brāhmaṇa went to the woods in obedience to his father's command; and as he returned therefrom, taking fruits and flowers, sticks for the sacrificial fire and Kuśa grass, he saw (on the way) a (most) profligate Śūdra, who was a (most) libidinous and shameless fellow, drunk with spirituous liquor distilled from meal, sporting with a harlot of the same class—who was not only (similarly) drunk, with her eyes swimming through intoxication but stood by his side in a half-naked condition (with the knot of her loin-cloth loosened)—and (also) singing and joking with her. (58—60) Seeing her folded in the arm of that Śūdra, which was painted with unguents exciting lust, this man (Ajāmīla) was inspired with extravagant passion and succumbed to (the darts of) love all at once. (61) Though controlling his mind by recourse to reason with all his firmness and by dint of his learning, he could not compose it, agitated as it was with love. (62) Possessed by the devil of love excited by (the sight of) that (lewd) woman, and (thus) deprived of reason and thinking of her alone with his mind, he actually deviated from his duty (neglected all his sacred obligations). (63) With the entire fortune of his father (at his disposal) he indulged her alone through carnal pleasures delightful to her mind so that she might be pleased (with him). (64) The sinful fellow, whose judgement had been crippled by the sidelong glance of that lewd woman, abandoned before long his own wedded wife, a Brāhmaṇa girl, still in the prime of youth and bestowed on him (by her father) in view of his noble pedigree. (65) (Having spent on her all the fortune of his father,) this stupid fellow brought money from here and there by fair and foul means and maintained the family (progeny) of this woman, who was (soon) the mother of many children. (66) Because this fellow—who having violated (the injunctions of) the scriptures, acted according to his own will and was (therefore) censured by (all) worthy men—led a sinful life and lived for a long time in an impure state; eating the food polluted by the touch of a harlot, we shall accordingly take this sinner, who has done no atonement (for his crimes so far), to the presence of Yama (who wields the rod of punishment), where he will be purified through punishment. (67-68)

*Thus ends the first discourse, forming part of the story of Ajāmila, in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse II

The messengers of Lord Viṣṇu expound the Bhāgavata Dharma (the cult of Devotion) and Ajāmila ascends to the Lord's supreme Abode

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं ते भगवद्भूता यमदूताभिभाषितम् । उपधार्याथ तान् राजन् प्रत्याहर्नयकोविदाः । १ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Having thus heard and (duly) followed the dissertation of the messengers of Yama, the aforesaid messengers of the Lord, who were masters of the moral science, now replied to them (as follows), O king (Parīkṣit) ! (1)

विष्णुदूता ऊचुः

अहो कष्टं धर्मदुशामधर्मः स्पृशते सभाम् । यत्रादण्ड्येषुपापेषु दण्डो यैर्ध्नियते वृथा । २ ।

प्रजानां पितरो ये च शास्त्रारः साधवः समाः । यदि स्यात्तेषु वैषम्यं कं यान्ति शरणं प्रजाः । ३ ।

यद्यदाचरति श्रेयानितरस्तत्तदीहते । स यत्प्रमाणं कुरुते लोकस्तदनुवर्तते । ४ ।

यस्याङ्गे शिर आधाय लोकः स्वपिति निर्वृतः । स्वयं धर्ममधर्मं वा न हि वेद यथा पशुः । ५ ।

स कथं न्यर्पितात्मानं कृतमैत्रमचेतनम् । विश्रम्भणीयो भूतानां सघृणो द्रोघुमर्हति । ६ ।

The messengers of Viṣṇu said : Oh, what a pity that unrighteousness should penetrate the court of the knowers of Dharma (the secret of virtue), where punishment is unnecessarily inflicted by those very knowers of Dharma on sinless people who do not deserve any ! (2) If iniquity appears in (the heart of) those who are protectors (like a father) and teachers of the people and are beneficent and even-minded (to all), whom shall the people resort to for protection? (3) Whatever a superior man does, that very thing the common (ignorant) man (also) does. The people (at large) follow that which the former sets up as a standard (to be followed). (4) Like a brute, the common man himself has no knowledge of righteousness or unrighteousness and (generally) sleeps at ease (over this question), resting his head on the lap (utterly depending on the wisdom) of another (his ruler or preceptor). (5) How can it be worthy of the latter, if he is full of compassion and deserves the confidence of (all) living beings, to seek to harm the unwary world that has thrown itself entirely at his mercy, reposing (full) trust on him ? (6)

अयं हि कृतनिर्वेशो जन्मकोट्यंहसामपि । यद् व्याजहार विवशो नाम स्वस्त्यदनं हरेः । ७ ।

एतेनैव ह्यघोनोऽस्य कृतं स्यादधनिष्कृतम् । यदा नारायणायेति जगाद चतुरक्षरम् । ८ ।

स्तेनः सुरापो मित्रधुग्रह्महा गुरुतल्पगः । स्त्रीराजपितृगोहन्ता ये च पातकिनोऽपरे । ९ ।
 सर्वेषामप्यध्वतामिदमेव सुनिष्कृतम् । नामव्याहरणं विष्णोर्यतस्तद्विषया मतिः । १० ।
 न निष्कृतैरुदितैर्ब्रह्मवादिभिस्तथा विशुद्ध्यत्यध्वान् व्रतादिभिः ।
 यथा हरेर्नामपदैरुदाहृतैस्तदुत्तमरलोकगुणोपलम्भकम् । ११ ।
 नैकान्तिकं तद्धि कृतेऽपि निष्कृते मनः पुनर्धावति चेदसत्यथे ।
 तत्कर्मनिर्हारमभीप्सतां हरेर्गुणानुवादः खलु सत्त्वभावनः । १२ ।

This man has actually done atonement (not only for the sins of this life but) even for sins committed (by him) through millions of lives (in the past) in that he uttered, though in a helpless state, the name of Śrī Hari, which (apart from its being the highest atonement for past sins) is a (direct) means to the attainment of (supreme) felicity (final beatitude). (7) The atonement for (all) the sins of this (erstwhile) sinner must have been made by the mere fact that he pronounced a mere semblance of the four-syllabled name of the Lord, 'NĀRĀYAṆA', while exclaiming (calling his son in the words): "Nārāyaṇa, come (here)!" (8) The articulation of a name of Lord Viṣṇu—that is the only thorough atonement for the sins of all classes of sinners, be he a thief, a drinker (of spirituous liquor), one guilty of treachery to a friend, a Brāhmaṇa-slayer, one sharing the bed of a preceptor's wife, a slayer of a woman, a king, one's own parent or a cow and whatever other (types of) sinners there may be; for thereby (by the utterance of the Lord's name) the Lord's (own) mind is directed towards the utterer (who is thenceforward remembered by Him as His protegee). (9-10) A sinner is not purified to that extent (so thoroughly) through fasting and other processes of expiation recommended by the expositors of the Veda (Manu and others) as he is by words standing as names for Śrī Hari, articulated (merely with the tongue); for the utterance of such words puts him in mind of the (divine) attributes of the glorious Lord (and thus qualifies the man for final beatitude by drawing him towards the Lord, the Bestower of Liberation, unlike the other forms of expiation, which exhaust themselves in wiping out the sins). (11) For, the process of expiation is not complete if one's mind runs back to evil ways even after the said process has been gone through. Therefore, in the case of those seeking the eradication of their (stock of) sinful Karma the uttering of the praises of Śrī Hari is the only remedy; for the same undoubtedly purifies the mind. (12)

अथैनं मापनयत कृताशेषाद्यनिष्कृतम् । यदसौ भगवन्नाम प्रियमाणः समग्रहीत् । १३ ।

Therefore, do not take, by a wrong path (the path of the sinners), (the soul of) this man, who has done atonement for all (his) sins in that he articulated the Lord's name in full (while, as a matter of fact, it wipes out one's sins even when uttered in part) and at a time when he was about to die (when there was no possibility of his reverting to the path of sin and thereby incurring any more sin; for one cannot ordinarily be expected to take the Lord's name precisely at the moment of death). (13)

साङ्केत्यं पारिहास्यं वा स्तोभं हेलनमेव वा । वैकुण्ठनामग्रहणमशेषाद्यहरं विदुः । १४ ।
 पतितः स्वलितो भग्नः सन्दष्टस्तप्त आहतः । हरिरित्यवशेनाह पुमान्नाहति यातनाम् । १५ ।
 गुरुणां च लघूनां च गुरुणि च लघूनि च । प्रायश्चित्तानि पापानां ज्ञात्वोक्तानि महर्षिभिः । १६ ।
 तैस्तान्यध्वानि पूयन्ते तपोदानजपादिभिः । नाधर्मजं तद्धृदयं तदपीशाङ्घ्रिसेवया । १७ ।
 अज्ञानादथवा ज्ञानादुत्तमरलोकनाम यत् । सङ्कीर्तितमघं पुंसो दहेद्देधो यथानलः । १८ ।
 यथागदं वीर्यतममुपयुक्तं यदृच्छया । अजानतोऽप्यात्मगुणं कुर्यान्मन्त्रोऽप्युदाहृतः । १९ ।

The learned recognize the articulation of a name of Lord Viṣṇu as capable of eradicating all one's sins, even when it is intended to denote someone else, or when it is uttered jestingly (in love but not jeeringly) or as an interjection in the midst of a song or out of (seeming) disrespect (but not real; for disrespect actually shown to the Lord or a jeer flung at Him constitutes in itself an unpardonable sin). (14) A man who articulates the word 'Hari' (or, for that matter, any other name of the Lord even) involuntarily (without any conscious effort on his part) when fallen down, stumbled, bitten (by a snake or any other poisonous creature) heated (by fever etc.), injured (by a blow) or when he has broken a limb, no longer deserves (to suffer) torment (in hell). (15) Arduous and easy processes of expiation have been thoughtfully prescribed by the great sages (law-givers) in the case of (comparatively) great and small sins. (16) Those sins are (certainly) got rid of by the said processes of expiation such as austere penance, charity and Japa (muttering of prayers), but not the kernel (vestiges in the form of impressions) of those sins, which is (also) traceable to the unrighteous acts. Those impressions too are obliterated through the service of (devotion to) the Lord's feet. (17) Any name of the Lord of excellent renown, which is distinctly pronounced (by a man)—(whether) knowingly (with the consciousness that it wipes out all one's sins) or unknowingly (without such knowledge)—destroys a man's sins (as surely) as a fire consumes the fuel (under all circumstances, no matter whether it has been kindled by a man who knows its burning properties or by an innocent child who is unaware of its burning capacity). (18) Just as a medicine possessing the highest potency is sure to produce its salutary effect even on one who is unaware of its efficacy, though taken by chance, so does the Lord's name (which is as holy as any sacred text or formula) reveal its efficacy (in the shape of wiping out all one's sins) even in the case of him who is unaware of it, when uttered by him (even) casually. (19)

श्रीशुक उवाच

त एवं सुविनिर्णीय धर्मं भागवतं नृप । तं याम्यपाशान्निर्मुच्य विप्रं मृत्योरमूमुचन् । २० ।

इति प्रत्युदिता याम्या दूता यात्वा यमान्तिके । यमराज्ञे यथा सर्वमाचक्षुरर्दिम । २१ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Having thus expounded in a well-reasoned and conclusive way the cult of Devotion to the Lord (with particular reference to the marvellous efficacy of the Divine Name), O king (Parīkṣit), and extricated the said Brāhmaṇa (Ajāmila) from the noose of Yama (the god of punishment), the messengers of Lord Viṣṇu secured his release from (the grip of) Death. (20) Thus foiled in controversy (by the Lord's own messengers), the messengers of Yama returned to the presence of Yama (their master) and faithfully reported everything to king Yama, O subduer of foes. (21)

द्विजः पाशाद्विनिर्मुक्तो गतभीः प्रकृतिं गतः । ववन्दे शिरसा विष्णोः किङ्करान् दर्शनोत्सवः । २२ ।

तं विवक्षुमभिप्रेत्य महापुरुषकिङ्कराः । सहसा पश्यतस्तस्य तत्रान्तर्दधिरेऽनघ । २३ ।

अजामिलोऽप्यथाकर्ण्य दूतानां यमकृष्णयोः । धर्मं भागवतं शुद्धं त्रैविद्यं च गुणाश्रयम् । २४ ।

भक्तिमान् भगवत्याशु माहात्म्यश्रवणाद्धरेः । अनुतापो महानासीत्स्मरतोऽशुभमात्मनः । २५ ।

अहो मे परमं कष्टमभूदविजितात्मनः । येन विप्लावितं ब्रह्म वृषल्यां जायताऽऽत्मना । २६ ।

धिङ्मां विगर्हितं सद्विदुष्कृतं कुलकज्जलम् । हित्वा बालां सतीं योऽहं सुरापामसतीमगाम् । २७ ।

वृद्धावनाथौ पितरौ नान्यबन्धू तपस्विनौ । अहो मयाधुना त्यक्तावकृतज्ञेन नीचवत् । २८ ।

सोऽहं व्यक्तं पतिष्यामि नरके भृशदारुणे । धर्मघ्नाः कामिनो यत्र विन्दन्ति यमयातनाः । २९ ।

Disentangled from the noose (of Yama) and rid of fear, the Brāhmaṇa (Ajāmila) was his former self again (became healthy and pious as before) and, delighted with their sight, bowed his head to the servants of Lord Viṣṇu. (22) Perceiving him eager to speak, the servants of Bhagavān Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person) suddenly disappeared at that (very) spot, even as he looked on, O sinless one! (23) Having heard from the mouth severally of the messengers of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Lord Viṣṇu) and Yama an exposition of the cult of Devotion to the Lord—which is untainted by the three Guṇas (inasmuch as it is concerned from the beginning to the end with the worship of the Lord, who is entirely beyond the realm of the three Guṇas and takes one beyond the world of matter, which is a product of the three Guṇas)—and the path of worldly activity (which is mainly concerned with the world of matter and holds out the promise of heavenly bliss, a product of the three Guṇas, and has been) taught by the three Vedas (which mainly deal with rituals), Ajāmila too now soon conceived devotion to the Lord as a result of hearing the glories of Śrī Hari (the Destroyer of all sins) and great was his repentance as he recollected his (past) sin. (24-25) (He said to himself,) "Oh, it was the worst tragedy for me, who forfeited my Brahmanhood by being born* (reproduced in the form of sons) through a Śūdra woman, because of my being unable to curb my (lower) self (animal passions) ! (26) Fie upon my wicked self, condemned by (all) good men, the blot of my race, who kept an unchaste wench given to drinking, having abandoned a faithful wife who was yet very young. (27) Oh, my aged parents, who were without a protector and had no other relation (such as a son) and were much afflicted (because of me), were forthwith deserted by my ungrateful self as by a vile man. (28) As such I shall surely fall into a most dreadful hell, where lustful men, who have violated Dharma (righteousness) suffer tortures inflicted by Yama. (29)

किमिदं स्वप्न आहोस्वित् साक्षाद्दृष्टमिहाद्भुतम् । क्व याता अद्य ते ये मां व्यकर्षन् पाशपाणयः । ३० ।
 अथ ते क्व गताः सिद्धाश्चत्वारश्चाद्दर्शनाः । व्यमोचयन्नीयमानं बद्ध्वा पाशैरथो भुवः । ३१ ।
 अथापि मे दुर्भगस्य विबुधोत्तमदर्शने । भवितव्यं मङ्गलेन येनात्मा मे प्रसीदति । ३२ ।
 अन्यथा प्रियमाणस्य नाशुचेर्वृषलीपतेः । वैकुण्ठनाम ग्रहणं जिह्वा वक्तुमिहार्हति । ३३ ।
 क्व चाहं कितवः पापो ब्रह्मघ्नो निरपत्रपः । क्व च नारायणेत्येतद्भगवन्नाम मङ्गलम् । ३४ ।
 सोऽहं तथा यतिष्यामि यतचित्तेन्द्रियानिलः । यथा न भूय आत्मानमन्ये तमसि मज्जये । ३५ ।
 विमुच्य तमिमं बन्धमविद्याकामकर्मजम् । सर्वभूतसुहृच्छान्तो मैत्रः करुण आत्मवान् । ३६ ।
 मोचये ग्रस्तमात्मानं योषिन्मय्याऽऽत्ममायया । विक्रीडितो ययैवाहं क्रीडामृग इवाधमः । ३७ ।
 ममाहमिति देहादौ हित्वामिथ्यार्थधीर्मतिम् । धास्ये मनो भगवति शब्दं तत्कीर्तनादिभिः । ३८ ।

"Was (all) this wonder seen by me in a dream or with my own eyes here (in waking life)? Where have they now gone, who proceeded to tear me (my life) from my body, noose in hand? (30) Again, where have those four angelic persons gone, who were (so) good-looking and got me released while I was being taken to the infernal regions (situated below the earth), fastened with nooses? (31) Though I have been so accursed (in my present birth), yet I must have earned (in my previous lives some) extraordinary merit which blessed me with the sight of those foremost gods, as a result of which my mind is so calm and cheerful (today). (32) Otherwise (but for such extraordinary merit) my tongue, the tongue of an impious fellow, who kept a Śūdra woman, was not fit to utter the name of Lord Viṣṇu—the only means of capturing Him—in this helpless state and at a time when I was on the verge of death. (33) The two stood poles asunder—myself, a wicked swindler, lost to (all) shame, who violated his Brahmanhood, and the (most) auspicious name of the Lord, 'Nārāyaṇa'. (34) Having controlled my mind, Indriyas (the senses of perception as well as the organs of action) and breath, I shall as such so endeavour that I may not drown myself in the blinding gloom of transmigration again. (35) Having got rid of the bondage of mundane existence—so well-known (in the shape of ties of attachment to son, wife, house and so on), and resulting from ignorance (manifested in the form of self-identification with the body etc.), and from the craving for the gratification of the senses and activity (in the shape of endeavour to procure such gratification)—benevolent to all living beings, free from craving for the pleasures of sense, friendly and compassionate (to all) and with (my) mind fully controlled, I shall redeem myself, completely dominated as I am by the Lord's Māyā (deluding potency) in the shape of woman, by whom my wretched self has indeed been fully toyed with even as an animal kept for pleasure. (36-37) Giving up the sense of 'I' and 'mine' in relation severally to the body and whatever is connected with it, and with my thought fixed on the real substance (the Spirit), I shall devote my mind to the almighty Lord when it has been purified by chanting His names and praises and other ways of Devotion (such as hearing His praises and remembering Him):" (38)

* There is a Śruti text declaring that a man himself is born for a second time in the form of a son through his wife, thus accounting for the epithet 'Jāyā' used with reference to a wife :—

तज्जायां जाया भवति यदस्यां जायते पुनः ।

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति जातसुनिर्वेदः क्षणसङ्गेन साधुषु । गङ्गाद्वारमुपेयाय मुक्तसर्वानुबन्धनः । ३९ ।
 स तस्मिन् देवसदन आसीनो योगमाश्रितः । प्रत्याहृतेन्द्रियग्रामो युयोज मन आत्मनि । ४० ।
 ततो गुणेभ्य आत्मानं वियुज्यात्मसमाधिना । युयुजे भगवद्वाग्निं ब्रह्मण्यनुभवात्मनि । ४१ ।
 यद्दुर्पारतधीस्तस्मिन्नद्राक्षीत्युरुषान् पुरः । उपलभ्योपलब्धान् प्राग्ववन्दे शिरसा द्विजः । ४२ ।
 हित्वा कलेवरं तीर्थे गङ्गायां दर्शनादनु । सद्यः स्वरूपं जगृहे भगवत्पार्श्ववर्तिनाम् । ४३ ।
 साकं विहायसा विप्रो महापुरुषकिङ्करैः । हैमं विमानमारुह्य ययौ यत्र श्रियः पतिः । ४४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having thus conceived a thorough aversion to the pleasures of sense, thanks to a moment's association with the pious servants of Lord Viṣṇu, and throwing off all fetters (in the shape of affection for his mistress and children), Ajāmila retired to Gaṅgādwāra (the sacred spot where the holy river Gaṅgā descends into the plains, and which is now known by the name of Harikṣetra or Haridwāra). (39) Settling down at that holy place (an eternal abode of the Lord) and betaking himself to the path of Yoga, he withdrew all his senses (from their objects) and fixed his mind on the supreme self. (40) Then, dissociating the mind from the body and senses etc., through concentration of the same, he devoted it to the essence of the Lord, (known by the name of) Brahma, that is all consciousness. (41) When his mind was (thus) irrevocably fixed on the aforesaid Brah̥ma, the Brāhmaṇa beheld in front of him the same (angelic) persons and, recognizing them, as seen before, bowed his head to them. (42) Having quitted his (earthly) body at that sacred place (Gaṅgādwāra) on the bank of the (holy) Gaṅgā (immediately) after their sight, he forthwith assumed a (divine) body similar to the form of the Lord's attendants (dwelling by His side). (43) Mounting an aerial car made of gold, the Brāhmaṇa (Ajāmila) ascended with those servants of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person) through the heavens to the (divine) realm (known by the name of Vaikuṇṭha), where resides the Spouse of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity). (44)

एवं स विप्लावितसर्वधर्मा दास्याः पतिः पतितो गर्हकर्मणा ।
 निपात्यमानो निरये हतव्रतः सद्यो विमुक्तो भगवन्नाम गृह्णन् । ४५ ।
 नातः परं कर्मनिबन्धकृन्तनं मुमुक्षतां तीर्थपदानुकीर्तनात् ।
 न यत्पुनः कर्मसु सज्जते मनो रजस्तमोभ्यां कलिलं ततोऽन्यथा । ४६ ।

In this way that Brāhmaṇa, who, consequent on his having kept a woman of the menial class had transgressed all his sacred duties and broken his vows (of fidelity to his wife and so on) and who had not only fallen (from his Brahmanhood) due to his reprehensible conduct but was going to be cast to hell (by the servants of Yama), was at once completely freed (from the noose of Yama) by uttering the Divine Name. (45) For those seeking liberation there is nothing more efficacious in cutting the root of sin (in the form of identification with the body) than chanting the Name and glories of Lord Viṣṇu (whose feet purify those who resort to them). Thanks to the chanting of His names, the mind does not (ordinarily) get attached to (sinful) actions again, whereas it remains tainted with Rajas and Tamas (even) after purificatory processes other than this have been gone through. (46)

य एवं परमं गुह्यमितिहासमघापहम् । शृणुयाच्छ्रद्धया युक्तो यश्च भक्त्यानुकीर्तयेत् । ४७ ।
 न वै स नरकं याति नेक्षितो यमकिङ्करैः । यद्यप्यमङ्गलो मर्त्यो विष्णुलोके महीयते । ४८ ।
 म्रियमाणो हरेर्नाम गृणन् पुत्रोपचारितम् । अजामिलोऽप्यगाद्धाम किं पुनः श्रद्धया गृणन् । ४९ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धेऽजामिलोपाख्याने द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

He who, full of reverence hears this legend, which is a most profound secret (of the scriptures) and is capable of destroying (all) one's sins, as well as he who repeats it with devotion (after hearing it) never goes to hell nor dare the servants of Yama look at him. However accursed (sinful) he may have been, such a mortal is adored (hereafter) in Vaikuṇṭha (the realm of Lord Viṣṇu). (47-48) Even (a great sinner like) Ajāmīla, who uttered, while dying (in a helpless state without reverence) the name of Śrī Hari and that too in its secondary application as denoting his son, ascended to the Lord's (divine) Abode ! What wonder, then, if one who pronounces it with reverence should attain to His Abode? (49)

*Thus ends the second discourse, forming part of the story of Ajāmīla,
 in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

A dialogue between Yama (the god of retribution) and his messengers

राजोवाच

निशम्य देवः स्वभटोपवर्णितं प्रत्याह किं तान् प्रति धर्मराजः ।
 एवं हताज्ञो विहतात्मुरारेनैदेशिकैर्यस्य वशे जनोऽयम् । १ ।
 यमस्य देवस्य न दण्डभङ्गः कुतश्चनर्षे श्रुतपूर्व आसीत् ।
 एतन्मुने वृश्चति लोकसंशयं न हि त्वदन्य इति मे विनिश्चितम् । २ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) said : What did the god Yama (the deity presiding over righteousness), under whose sway all this (animate) creation is and whose authority was thus obstructed, say in reply to his servants—who had been foiled by the messengers of Lord Viṣṇu (the Slayer of the demon Mura)—on hearing their report ? (1) (Such) supersession of the authority of the glorious Yama at the hands of another was never heard of before, O (holy) sage ! (And) none other than you can resolve the doubt which will arise in the popular mind on this point; that is my conviction. (2)

श्रीशुक उवाच

भगवत्पुरुषै राजन् याम्याः प्रतिहतोद्यमाः । पतिं विज्ञापयामासुर्यमं संयमनीपतिम् । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : The messengers of Yama, whose efforts (to execute the commands of their master) were interrupted by the servants of the Lord, O king, submitted to their master, Yama, the ruler of the (city of) Saṁyamani (as follows). (3)

यमदूता ऊचुः

कति सन्तीह शास्तारो जीवलोकस्य वै प्रभो । त्रैविध्यं कुर्वतः कर्म फलाभिव्यक्तिहेतवः । ४ ।

यदि स्युर्वहवो लोके शास्तारो दण्डधारिणः । कस्य स्यातां न वा कस्य मृत्युश्चामृतमेव वा । ५ ।

किन्तु शास्त्रबहुत्वे स्याद्बहूनामिह कर्मिणाम् । शास्त्रत्वमुपचारो हि यथा मण्डलवर्तिनाम् । ६ ।

अतस्त्वमेको भूतानां सेश्वराणामधीश्वरः । शास्ता दण्डधरो नृणां शुभाशुभविवेचनः । ७ ।

तस्य ते विहतो दण्डो न लोके वर्ततेऽधुना । चतुर्भिर्द्भुतैः सिद्धैराज्ञा ते विप्रलम्बिता । ८ ।

नीयमानं तवादेशादस्माभिर्यातिनागृहान् । व्यमोचयन् पातकिनं छित्त्वा पाशान् प्रसह्य ते । ९ ।

तांस्ते वेदितुमिच्छामो यदि नो मन्यसे क्षमम् । नारायणेत्यभिहिते मा भैरित्याययुर्दुतम् । १० ।

The messengers of Yama said : How many in this world are the rulers of human beings performing actions of three kinds (virtuous, sinful and of a mixed type)—rulers who are responsible for the manifestation (dispensation) of their fruit (in the shape of happiness, misery and a mixture of both)? (4) If there be in the world many a ruler wielding the rod of punishment, who would suffer death (the tortures of hell) and who would enjoy immortality or heavenly bliss (in the event of a split, resulting in a complete deadlock); whereas (in the reverse case, i.e., in the event of harmonious relations, obtaining between them) who would not experience the tortures of hell as well as immortality too (for, while one ruler may ordain hellish tortures in the case of a particular man in view of a grievous sin committed by him, overlooking his meritorious acts, another may condone his faults and reward his virtuous deeds with immortality and the orders of both will be executed as carrying equal force). (5) If there be a plurality of rulers in this world for (the control of) the vast number of men engaged in action, their authority will (no doubt) exist. Such authority (however) would be only secondary like that enjoyed by tributary chiefs (inasmuch as it would extend over a limited section of humanity and would not be absolute and primary, thus rendering it necessary to postulate another ruler exercising primary, and universal authority). (6) Therefore (a plurality of rulers being out of the question), you are (to our mind) the one Supreme Lord and ruler of all living beings—including the guardian deities—capable of distinguishing the merit and sin of men (who alone enjoy freedom of action), and (actually) wielding the rod of punishment (for the evil-doers, and rewarding the virtuous). (7) Such as you are, your authority stands superseded and no longer prevails in the world today, as is evidenced by the fact that your command was set at naught by four wonderful angelic persons ! (8) They forcibly released a sinner who was being taken by us under your order to the infernal regions (the places of suffering), cutting the nooses (with which he had been fastened). (9) We are keen to know them (their particulars) from you, if you deem it good for us (as otherwise by showing disrespect to them through ignorance we may bring harm even to you). The moment the word 'Nārāyaṇa' was uttered (by the sinner) they hastened in saying "Do not be afraid !" (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति देवः स आपृष्टः प्रजासंयमनो यमः । प्रीतः स्वदूतान् प्रत्याह स्मरन् पादाम्बुजं हरेः । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus interrogated the celebrated god Yama, the controller of living beings, was (greatly) delighted and replied to his messengers (as follows), contemplating on the lotus-feet of Śrī Hari. (11)

यम उवाच

परो मदन्यो जगत्स्तस्थुषश्च ओतं प्रोतं पटवद्यत्र विश्वम् ।
 यदंशतोऽस्य स्थितिजन्मनाशा नस्योतवद् यस्य वशे च लोकः । १२ ।
 यो नामभिर्वाचि जनान्निजायां बध्नाति तन्त्यामिव दामभिर्गाः ।
 यस्मै बलिं त इमे नामकर्मनिबन्धबद्धाश्चकिता वहन्ति । १३ ।
 अहं महेन्द्रो निर्ऋतिः प्रचेताः सोमोऽग्निरीशः पवनोऽर्को विरिञ्चः ।
 आदित्यविश्वे वसवोऽथ साध्या मरुद्गणा रुद्रगणाः ससिद्धाः । १४ ।
 अन्ये च ये विश्वसृजोऽमरेश भृग्वदयोऽस्पृष्टरजस्तमस्काः ।
 यस्येहितं न विदुः स्पृष्टमायाः सत्त्वप्रधाना अपि किं ततोऽन्ये । १५ ।
 यं वै न गोभिर्मनसासुभिर्वा हृदा गिरा वासुभृतो विचक्षते ।
 आत्मानमन्तर्हृदि सन्तमात्मनां चक्षुर्यथैवाकृतयस्ततः परम् । १६ ।
 तस्यात्मतन्त्रस्य हरेरधीशितुः परस्य मायाधिपतेर्महात्मनः ।
 प्रायेण दूता इह वै मनोहराश्चरन्ति तद्रूपगुणस्वभावाः । १७ ।
 भूतानि विष्णोः सुरपूजितानि दुर्दर्शल्लिङ्गानि महाद्भुतानि ।
 रक्षन्ति तद्भक्तिमतः परेभ्यो मत्तश्च मर्त्यानथ सर्वतश्च । १८ ।

Yama said : The Supreme Lord of the mobile and immobile creation is other than me (and all other guardians of the spheres—Indra, Varuṇa and others). It is by Him that the whole universe stands pervaded on all sides as a piece of cloth by its warp and woof. (Nay,) it is from His part manifestations (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) that the evolution, maintenance and dissolution of this universe proceed and the (entire) creation is subject to His control even as a bullock tied with a string passed through its nostrils is controlled by the man holding the string. (12) Just as a farmer ties (his) oxen with tethers to a big cord (to keep them together), He binds men with (different) denominations (Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya and so on) to His own Word (the Veda)—allots them different duties as enjoined by the Vedas; and, bound by (these) strong ties in the shape of class, names and obligations (attaching thereto), the aforesaid men meticulously bear offerings (do homage) to Him (through the scrupulous discharge of their duties). (13) Myself (Yama, the guardian of the southern quarter), the mighty Indra (the guardian of the east), Nirṛti (the demon presiding over the south-west), Varuṇa (the god of water, presiding over the western quarter), the moon-god (the guardian of the north), the god of fire (the guardian of the south-east), Lord Śiva (the guardian of the north-east), the god of the air (the guardian of the north-west), the sun-god, Brahmā (the creator), the (twelve) sons of Aditi (presiding by turns month after month, over the sun), (the group of gods known as) the Viśwedevas, the (eight) Vasus (another class of gods) and (the group of gods called) the Sādhyas, the (forty-nine) Maruts (wind-gods), the (eleven) Rudras (the gods presiding over destruction) along with the Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth), the creators of the world like (the sage) Bhṛgu, the rulers (adored) of gods (such as the sage Brhaspati, the preceptor of the gods) and others too who are untainted with Rajas and Tamas and in whom Sattva predominates have no knowledge of His intention—dominated as they are by His Māyā (deluding potency)—much less those other than these. (14-15) Even as colours (the objects of sight) cannot perceive the faculty of vision, which reveals them, the Jīvas cannot grasp or reach with (their) senses of perception, mind or organs of action (which predominantly manifest the activity of the vital airs) nor with (their) intellect or speech Him who is the seer of all living beings, though dwelling in their very heart (as their Inner Controller). (16) Charming messengers of the aforementioned Śrī Hari, the Supreme Person, the absolute and transcendent Lord, the Controller of Māyā (Prakṛti), generally go about in this world (for the good of the Jīvas), endowed as they are with a form, virtues and disposition similar to those of their (divine) Master. (17) Those most wonderful servants of Lord Viṣṇu, who are adored (even) by the gods and whose (transcendental) forms cannot be easily perceived (by earthly beings), protect mortals devoted to the Lord from enemies as well as from myself (Death), yea, from everyone else. (18)

धर्मं तु साक्षाद्भगवत्प्रणीतं न वै विदुर्ऋषयो नापि देवाः ।

न सिद्धमुख्या असुरा मनुष्याः कुतश्च विद्याधरचारणादयः । १९ ।

स्वयम्भून्नरिदः शम्भुः कुमारः कपिलो मनुः । प्रह्लादो जनको भीष्मो बलिवैयासकिर्वयम् । २० ।

द्वादशैते विजानीमो धर्मं भागवतं भटाः । गुह्यं विशुद्धं दुर्बोधं यं ज्ञात्वामृतमश्नुते । २१ ।

एतावानेव लोकेऽस्मिन् पुंसां धर्मः परः स्मृतः । भक्तियोगो भगवति तन्नामग्रहणादिभिः । २२ ।

नामोच्चारणमाहात्म्यं हरेः पश्यत पुत्रकाः । अजामिलोऽपि यैनैव मृत्युपाशादमुच्यत । २३ ।

एतावतालमघनिर्हरणाय पुंसां सङ्कीर्तनं भगवतो गुणकर्मनाम्नाम् ।

विक्रुश्य पुत्रमघवान् यदजामिलोऽपि नारायणेति प्रियमाण इयाय मुक्तिम् । २४ ।

प्रायेण वेद तदिदं न महाजनोऽयं देव्या विमोहितमतिर्बत मायया लम् ।

त्रय्यां जडीकृतमतिर्मधुपुष्पितायां वैतानिके महति कर्मणि युज्यमानः । २५ ।

As a matter of fact, neither seers nor even gods nor the foremost of the Siddhas can precisely know (the secret of) virtue (as) expounded by the Lord Himself; how, then, can the demons, human beings, Vidyādhara (celestial artistes), Cāraṇas (heavenly bards) and others know it? (19) Brahmā (the self-born), the sage Nārada, Lord Śiva (the fountain-head of blessedness), the sage Sanat Kumāra, Lord Kapila, Swāyambhuva Manu, Prahrāda, king Janaka, Bhīṣma, the demon king Bali, the sage Śuka (son of Vyāsa) and myself (Yama)—these twelve (alone) know (the essence of) Dharma (as) taught by the Lord—secret, pure and difficult to understand—by knowing which one enjoys immortality (in the shape of final beatitude). (20-21) To develop loving attachment to the Lord through the utterance of His Name and so on—this alone has been declared to be the paramount duty of (all) men in this world. (22) Realize, my boys, the glory of uttering the name of Śrī Hari, by which alone (pronounced unintentionally once only) even (a vile sinner like) Ajāmila was liberated from the noose of Death! (23) To celebrate duly the virtues and exploits of the Lord and to chant His name—this much is not needed for (merely) wiping out the sins of men ! For even the (most) sinful Ajāmila attained liberation by (simply) calling his son at the pitch of his voice (and not with proper intonation) as Nārāyaṇa (and that too) while on the verge of death (when neither his body nor his mind was in a sound condition). (24) Alas ! the average learned man (well-versed in the scriptures—whose judgement is completely bewildered by the all-powerful (divine) Māyā (deluding potency) and whose thought is focussed on (the teachings of) the three Vedas, full of sweet and attractive encomiums (on the efficacy or rituals as leading to heaven)—generally does not realize the aforesaid glory of the Divine Name, and remains engaged in grand sacrificial undertakings. (25)

एवं विमृश्य सुधियो भगवत्यनन्ते सर्वात्मना विदधते खलु भावयोगम् ।
 ते मे न दण्डमर्हन्त्यथ यद्यमीषां स्यात् पातकं तदपि हत्युरुगायवादः । २६ ।
 ते देवसिद्धपरिगीतपवित्रगाथा ये साधवः समदृशो भगवत्प्रपन्नाः ।
 तान् नोपसीदत हरेर्गदयाभिगुप्तान् नैषां वयं न च वयः प्रभवाम दण्डे । २७ ।
 तानानयध्वमसतो विमुखान् मुकुन्दपादारविन्दमकरन्दरसादजस्रम् ।
 निष्किञ्चनैः परमहंसकुले रसजैर्जुष्टाद् गृहे निरयवर्त्तनि बद्धतृष्णान् । २८ ।
 जिह्वा न वक्ति भगवद्गुणनामधेयं चेतश्च न स्मरति तच्चरणारविन्दम् ।
 कृष्णाय नो नमति यच्छिर एकदापि तानानयध्वमसतोऽकृतविष्णुकृत्यान् । २९ ।
 तत् क्षम्यतां स भगवान् पुरुषः पुराणो नारायणः स्वपुरुषैर्यदसत्कृतं नः ।
 स्वानामहो न विदुषां रचिताञ्जलीनां क्षान्तिर्गरीयसि नमः पुरुषाय भूम्ने । ३० ।

Pondering thus, the wise indeed resort with an undivided mind to the practices (the chanting of the Divine Name and so on) making for loving Devotion to the Lord possessing infinite virtues. They do not merit punishment at my hands (because ordinarily there can be no question of their committing sins). Even if a sin is ever committed by them (through inadvertence), the (very) utterance of the Name of Lord (who is widely sung) obliterates it. (26) The sacred stories of those pious souls who regard all with the same eye and have taken refuge in the Lord are constantly sung even by the gods and Siddhas. Never approach such men, protected as they are by the mace of Śrī Hari. Neither we nor the Time-Spirit has the power to punish them. (27) Bring those impious men (alone to me) who are averse to the joy inhering in the honey-like sweetness of the lotus-feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Bestower of Liberation)—incessantly tasted by flocks of noblest swans in the form of ascetics of the highest order, who have nothing to call their own and who are connoisseurs of sweetness—and have given their heart to the delights of home life, which lead one to hell. (28) (Further,) bring those wicked fellows (for punishment to me) whose tongue neither recounts the virtues nor utters the name of the Lord, whose mind never contemplates on His lotus-feet and whose head does not bow even once to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, and who have never rendered (any) service to Lord Viṣṇu (in their whole life). (29) Ah, may that most ancient Person, Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa, put up with the offence* committed, through the instrumentality of our messengers, by ourselves, His ignorant servants, who crave His forgiveness with joined palms; for forgiveness (alone) becomes the greatest of the great, Hail to the all-pervading Supreme Person ! (30)

तस्मात् सङ्कीर्तनं विष्णोर्जगन्मङ्गलमहंसाम् । महतामपि कौरव्य विद्वद्यैकान्तिकनिष्कृतिम् । ३१ ।

शृण्वतां गुणतां वीर्याण्युद्दामानि हरेर्मुहुः । यथा सुजातया भक्त्या शुद्धयेन्नात्मा व्रतादिभिः । ३२ ।

कृष्णाङ्घ्रिपद्मधुलिङ्गं न पुनर्विसृष्टमायागुणेषु रमते वृजिनावहेषु ।

अन्यस्तु कामहत आत्तरजः प्रमार्ष्टुमीहेत कर्म यत एव रजः पुनः स्यात् । ३३ ।

Therefore, O Parikṣit (a scion of Kuru); know the chanting of the names and praises of Lord Viṣṇu as a source of blessing to the (whole) world and the complete atonement for the greatest sins. (31) The mind is not purified so well through fasting and other means as through Devotion easily engendered in the heart of those who repeatedly hear or narrate

* The messengers of Yama argued with the servants of Lord Viṣṇu and insisted on taking away the soul of Ajāmila to the abode of Yama not with standing their remonstrances. This is evidently regarded by Yama as an offence against the Lord, for which he seeks His forgiveness here.

accounts of the extraordinary exploits of Śrī Hari. (32) He who enjoys like a bee the sweetness of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's lotus-feet (by contemplating on them) delights no more in the enjoyments brought forth by Māyā (Prakṛti), once they have been given up by him as conducive to suffering. The other man (who does not enjoy the sweetness of those feet and) who is (consequently) buffeted by desires takes to action (alone in the shape of an expiatory process) in order to atone for his sin—action which leads only to sin again (inasmuch as it does not purify the mind and thus proves no better than the path of an elephant, which throws dust on its body as soon as it emerges from water after the bath). (33)

इत्थं स्वभर्तृगदितं भगवन्महित्वं संस्मृत्य विस्मितधियो यमकिङ्करास्ते ।

नैवाच्युताश्रयजनं प्रति शङ्कमाना द्रष्टुं च बिभ्यति ततः प्रभृति स्म राजन् । ३४ ।

इतिहासमिमं गुह्यं भगवान् कुम्भसम्भवः । कथयामास मलय आसीनो हरिमर्चयन् । ३५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे यमपुरुषसंवादे तृतीयोऽध्यायः । ३ ।

The servants of Yama were not at all surprised to (hear and) realize as such the greatness of the Lord, depicted by their master (Yama). Afraid of men depending on the immortal Lord (Viṣṇu) they shuddered even to look at them from that moment, O king (Parīkṣit) ! (34) Dwelling on (the summit of) Mount Malaya and worshipping Śrī Hari, the glorious sage Agastya (who was born of a pitcher) narrated (to me) this secret legend. (35)

Thus ends the third discourse, forming part of the dialogue between Yama and his servants, in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

Dakṣa extols the Lord who appears in person before him

राजोवाच

देवासुरनृणां सर्गो नागानां मृगपक्षिणाम् । सामासिकस्त्वया प्रोक्तो यस्तु स्वायम्भुवेऽन्तरे । १ ।

तस्यैव व्यासमिच्छामि ज्ञातुं ते भगवान् यथा । अनुसर्गं यथा शक्त्या ससर्ज भगवान् परः । २ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : The genesis of the gods and demons, human beings and Nāgas (serpent-demons), beasts and birds in the (very first) Manvantara (period covering seventy-one and odd revolutions of the four Yugas), presided over by Swāyambhuva Manu, was described by you in a nutshell (in Book III). (1) I desire to know from you the details of it, O glorious sage, as well as how and with what power the Supreme Lord evolved the subsequent creation (referred to in IV-xxx. 49). (2)

सूत उवाच

इति सम्प्रश्रमाकर्ण्य राजर्षेर्बादरायणिः । प्रतिनन्द्य महायोगी जगद् मुनिसत्तमाः । ३ ।

Sūta continued : Śuka (the son of Bādarāyaṇa), the great contemplative sage ever united with the Lord, welcomed this noble inquiry of Parīkṣit (the royal sage), on hearing it, and replied (as follows), O jewels among sages ! (3)

श्रीशुक उवाच

यदा प्रचेतसः पुत्रा दश प्राचीनबर्हिषः । अन्तःसमुद्रादुन्मन्ना ददृशुर्गा हुमैर्वृताम् । ४ ।

हुमेभ्यः क्रुध्यमानास्ते तपोदीपितमन्यवः । मुखतो वायुमग्निं च ससृजुस्तद्विधक्षया । ५ ।
 ताभ्यां निर्दह्यमानांस्तानुपलभ्य कुरुद्वह । राजोवाच महान् सोमो मन्युं प्रशमयन्निव । ६ ।
 मा हुमेभ्यो महाभागा दीनेभ्यो द्रोघ्युमर्हथ । विवर्धयिषवो यूयं प्रजानां पतयः स्मृताः । ७ ।
 अहो प्रजापतिपतिर्भगवान् हरिरव्ययः । वनस्पतीनोषधीश्च ससर्जोर्जमिषं विभुः । ८ ।
 अन्नं चराणामचरा ह्यपदः पादचारिणाम् । अहस्ता हस्तयुक्तानां द्विपदां च चतुष्पदः । ९ ।
 यूयं च पित्रान्वादिष्टा देवदेवेन चानघाः । प्रजासर्गाय हि कथं वृक्षान् निर्दग्धुमर्हथ । १० ।
 आतिष्ठत सतां मार्गं कोपं यच्छत दीपितम् । पित्रा पितामहेनापि जुष्टं वः प्रपितामहैः । ११ ।
 लोकानां पितरौ बन्धूर्दृशौ पक्ष्म स्त्रियाः पतिः । पतिः प्रजानां भिक्षूणां गृह्यज्ञानां बुधः सुहृत् । १२ ।
 अन्तर्देहेषु भूतानामात्माऽऽस्ते हरिरीश्वरः । सर्वं तद्विषयमीक्षध्वमेवं वस्तोषितो ह्यसौ । १३ ।
 यः समुत्पतितं देह आकाशाच्चन्युमुल्बणम् । आत्मजिज्ञासया यच्छेत् स गुणानतिवर्तते । १४ ।
 अलं दग्धैर्दुर्मदैर्नैः खिलानां शिवमस्तु वः । वार्क्षीं ह्येषा वरा कन्या पत्नीत्वे प्रतिगृह्यताम् । १५ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : When the ten Pracetās, the sons of king Prācinabarhi, emerged from the lake (which was as extensive as an ocean) and saw the earth covered with trees (due to the suspension of all agricultural activity and the state of anarchy that prevailed consequent on the retirement of king Prācinabarhi from active rule at the instance of the celebrated sage Nārada), they got angry with the trees and breathed out wind and fire from their mouths with the intention of burning them, their wrath having been stimulated by asceticism. (4-5) Finding the trees being consumed by (the joint action of) wind and fire, O Parikṣit (a scion of Kuru), Soma (the moon-god), the mighty ruler of (the deity presiding over) the vegetable kingdom spoke to the Pracetās (as follows), as though appearing their anger :— (6) "It is not (quite) becoming of you to bear hostility to the poor trees, since you are declared to be the rulers of created beings and (as such) eager to promote their growth. (7) Oh, the immortal and all-pervading Lord Śrī Hari, the Ruler of (all) Prajāpatis (the lords of creation, Brahmā and others) has brought into existence the (various) trees and annual plants (cereal crops) as the (source of) food of the manes and gods (respectively), (8) (Flowers and fruits etc., the produce of) the immobile creatures (viz., trees and plants) constitute the food of the mobile ones (the winged creatures); the footless (viz., grass and sprout etc.), of those walking on feet (the graminivorous quadruped); (from among the quadruped) the handless (the deer etc.), are the food of those provided with hands (the lion and other carnivorous beasts); while quadrupeds (such as the bovine species and other milch cattle) as well as the annual plants (cereal crops) are the source of food for human beings (the milch cattle supplying them with milk and oxen helping them in their agricultural pursuits and producing their staple food in the shape of cereals). (9) Moreover, how can it be worthy of You—who have been commanded by your father (king Prācinabarhi) as well as by the Lord (the adored even of the gods) to procreate children, O sinless ones—to burn away trees (that sustain all living beings)? (10) (Therefore,) follow the path of the virtuous—trodden by your father, grandfather and great grandfathers—and curb your intensified anger. (11) The parents are the (true) friends of children; the eye-lashes, of an eye; the husband, of a (married) women; the sovereign, of a people (and through them of all living beings including trees); the householder, of mendicants; and a wise man is the friend of a ignorant. (12) The almighty Śrī Hari indwells the hearts of (all) living beings as their Inner Controller. (Therefore,) regard the entire creation (both animate and inanimate) as His abode; in this way He will be really propitiated by you. (13) He who subdues by means of an inquiry into (the true nature of) the Self, violent anger gushing forth from the cavity of the heart in his body is able to transcend the (three) Guṇas (the realm of matter). (14) Add no more to the number of trees (already) burnt, helpless as they are, and let the surviving ones enjoy your protection. Let this excellent maid (Māriṣā by name), brought up by the trees (as their own daughter), be accepted as a wife (by you)." (15)

इत्यामन्त्र्य वरारोहां कन्यामाप्सरसीं नृप । सोमो राजा ययौ दत्त्वा ते धर्मेणोपयेमिरे । १६ ।

तेभ्यस्तस्यां समभवद्दक्षः प्राचेतसः किल । यस्य प्रजाविसर्गेण लोका आपूरितास्त्रयः । १७ ।

यथा ससर्ज भूतानि दक्षो दुहितृवत्सलः । रेतसा मनसा चैव तन्ममावहितः शृणु । १८ ।

Having thus pacified the Pracētās and handed over (to them) the beautiful daughter of Pramlocā (a celestial nymph), king Soma (the moon-god) returned (to his abode) and the Pracētās wedded her consistently with virtue (as this union, though forbidden by the Sāstras as falling under the category of polyandry, had been permitted by the Lord—vide IV. xxx. 15-16—and had thus been more than legalized). (16) From their loins through her was sprung Dakṣa, the Prācetasā (son of the Pracētās, as distinguished from his previous incarnation, which owed its existence to Brahmā himself), by whose progeny* and their descendants all the three worlds were filled on all sides. (17) (Now) hear from me attentively how Dakṣa, who was (extremely) fond of his daughters, procreated beings (both) by his mind (sheer force of will) and by seed. (18)

मनसैवासृजत्पूर्वं प्रजापतिरिमाः प्रजाः । देवासुरमनुष्यादीन्नभःस्थलजलौकसः । १९ ।

तमबृंहितमालोक्य प्रजासर्गं प्रजापतिः । विन्ध्यपादानुपप्रज्य सोऽचरद् दुष्करं तपः । २० ।

तत्राघमर्षणं नाम तीर्थं पापहरं परम् । उपस्पृश्यानुसवनं तपसातोषयद्धरिम् । २१ ।

अस्तौषीद्धंसगुह्येन भगवन्तमधोक्षजम् । तुभ्यं तदभिधास्यामि कस्यातुष्यद् यतो हरिः । २२ ।

Dakṣa (a lord of creation) procreated these beings, dwelling in the air, on land and in water—gods, demons, human beings and so on—by his mind (thought-projection) alone in the first instance (to begin with). (19) Seeing the procreation of his race not multiplying, the said Prajāpati (Dakṣa) proceeded to the hills adjoining the Vindhya mountain and practised austerities (that were) hard to perform. (20) Bathing there thrice a day (in the morning and evening and at midday) in the holy lake called Aghamarṣaṇa (that which washes off one's sins), which was supremely efficacious in destroying one's sins (as could be expected from its very name), he propitiated Śrī Hari through (his) asceticism. (21) He extolled the Lord, who is beyond sense-perception, by means of (the hymn called) Hamsaguhya. I shall (now) repeat to you that hymn through which Śrī Hari was pleased with Dakṣa. (22)

प्रजापतिरुवाच

नमः परायावितथानुभूतये गुणत्रयाभासनिमित्तबन्धवे ।

अदृष्टधात्रे गुणतत्त्वबुद्धिभिर्निवृत्तमानाय दधे स्वयम्भुवे । २३ ।

न यस्य सरल्यं पुरुषोऽवैति सरल्युः सरला वसन् संवसतः पुरोऽस्मिन् ।

गुणो यथा गुणिनो व्यक्तदृष्टस्तस्मै महेशाय नमस्करोमि । २४ ।

* It should be noted here that while this Dakṣa was born in the very first or Swāyambhuva Manvantara of the present Kalpa (round of creation), he begot offspring only in the sixth (Cākṣuṣa) Manvantara, i.e., after a period of five Manvantaras—vide IV. xxx. 49. Thus it will appear that he devoted this inconceivably long period of his life in austerities as a preparation for his momentous role of creation and in order to regain the extraordinary and surpassing splendour and eminence acquired by him in his previous incarnation.

देहोऽसवोऽक्षा मनवो भूतमात्रा नात्मानमन्यं च विदुः परं यत् ।
 सर्वं पुमान् वेद गुणांश्च तज्ज्ञो न वेद सर्वज्ञमनन्तमीडे । २५ ।
 यदोपरामो मनसो नामरूपरूपस्य दृष्टस्मृतिसम्प्रमोषात् ।
 य ईयते केवलया स्वसंस्थया हंसाय तस्मै शुचिसद्गने नमः । २६ ।
 मनीषिणोऽन्तर्हृदि संनिवेशितं स्वशक्तिभिर्नवभिश्च त्रिवृद्धिः ।
 वह्निं यथा दारुणि पाञ्चदश्यं मनीषया निष्कर्षन्ति गूढम् । २७ ।
 स वै ममाशेषविशेषमायानिषेधनिर्वाणसुखानुभूतिः ।
 स सर्वनामा स च विश्वरूपः प्रसीदतामनिरुक्तात्मशक्तिः । २८ ।
 यद्यन्निरुक्तं वचसा निरूपितं धियाक्षभिर्वा मनसा वोत यस्य ।
 मा भूत् स्वरूपं गुणरूपं हि तत्तत् स वै गुणापायविसर्गलक्षणः । २९ ।
 यस्मिन् यतो येन च यस्य यस्मै यद् यो यथा कुल्ले कार्यते च ।
 परावरेषां परमं प्राक् प्रसिद्धं तद् ब्रह्म तद्धेतुरनन्यदेकम् । ३० ।
 यच्छक्तयो वदतां वादिनां वै विवादसंवादभुवो भवन्ति ।
 कुर्वन्ति चैषां मुहुरात्ममोहं तस्मै नमोऽनन्तगुणाय भूम्ने । ३१ ।
 अस्तीति नास्तीति च वस्तुनिष्ठयोरेकस्थयोर्भिन्नविरुद्धधर्मयोः ।
 अवेक्षितं किञ्चन योगसांख्ययोः समं परं ह्यनुकूलं बृहत्तत् । ३२ ।
 योऽनुग्रहार्थं भजतां पादमूलमनामरूपो भगवाननन्तः ।
 नामानि रूपाणि च जन्मकर्मभिर्भेजे स मह्यं परमः प्रसीदतु । ३३ ।
 यः प्राकृतैर्ज्ञानपथैर्जनानां यथाशयं देहगतो विभाति ।
 यथानिलः पार्थिवमाश्रितो गुणं स ईश्वरो मे कुरुतामनोरथम् । ३४ ।

The Prajāpati prayed : I offer salutations to the self-effulgent Supreme of infallible consciousness—the Controller of both the Jīva (the soul as reflected through the three Guṇas or matter) and Prakṛti (the basis of such reflection)—whose true nature is not perceived by those that take the objects of senses (the products of the three Guṇas) to be real, and who is beyond (all) the means of cognition. (23) I make obeisance to that Supreme Lord whose beneficent nature and friendly (helpful) attitude (as the Prompter of the senses and the mind) the Jīva dwelling in this body, His constant companion, does not know—even though the Lord lives with the Jīva as the latter's Friend (in the same body), He being the seer of this visible universe (and therefore not open to perception)—just as an object of perception cannot perceive the illuminating quality of the sense that perceives it. (24) The body, the vital airs, the senses, the internal senses (the mind, understanding, intellect and the ego) and the gross and subtle elements know neither themselves (individually) nor any other (among themselves) nor that which is beyond (all these, viz., the Jīva). The (conscious) Jīva (however) knows all (these, including itself) as well as the (three) Guṇas (the root of all the aforesaid categories except the Jīva); but, though knowing (all) these, it does not know the all-knowing Lord who is infinite (and therefore unknowable). I (hereby) extol Him. (25) Hail to that pure Substance (Brahma), revealed (only) in a pure mind, that is realized through its absolute existence (consisting of consciousness and bliss) when the mind, which manifests this world of names and forms, (altogether) ceases to function (attains the state of Samādhi or complete absorption into the Self) due to the extinction of all cognition and recollection. (26) The wise find Him out by their purified intellect (as distinct from their lower self, referred to as 'I' and) as installed within their heart—though veiled by His nine potencies

(viz., Prakṛti or primordial matter, Puruṣa or the individual soul, Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, Ahankāra or the ego and the five Tanmātrās or subtle elements), consisting of (or dominated by) the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), as well as by the sixteen other principles (viz., the mind and the five senses of perception, the five organs of action and the five gross elements viz., earth, water, fire, air and ether)—(even) as those well-versed in rituals produce the sacrificial fire hidden in (pieces of) wood by reciting the fifteen sacred texts known as the Sāmīdhenī Mantras. (27) Indeed He is realized in the form of the joy of Liberation when Māyā (Prakṛti), the source of all distinctions, has been negated (by the process of elimination). (Yet) it is He who bears all names and assumes all forms, possessed as He is of potencies too numerous to be described and which constitute His very essence. May He shower His grace on me. (28) Whatever is described in words, determined with the intellect, or perceived with the senses or even pondered with the mind cannot be His essential nature. For all that is a manifestation of the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas); while He, as a matter of fact, is (but) indicated by the evolution and dissolution of the universe (which is a product of the Guṇas as being the cause of such evolution and dissolution). (29) Wherever, from whatever motive, by whatever means (or with whatever instrument), for whomsoever (or whatever purpose), whatever, however and whosoever work whoever does (by himself) or is prompted (by someone else) to do, all that is Brahma, which is their cause (and therefore identified with them) inasmuch as It is known to have existed before them (all), and which is the ultimate cause of all (other) causes, both earlier (such as Brahmā) and later, and is without a second, whether of the same category or of a different kind. (30) Hail to that all-pervading Self, possessed of endless virtues, whose manifold potencies (Prakṛti and so on) indeed become the ground of disputation and concurrence between theorists putting forward their claims (with eloquence), and delude their mind now and again. (31) In Yoga (which is primarily a system of religious worship) and Sāṅkhya (the science of Self-Realization), which, though professing faith in the one Reality (viz., God), ascribe two distinct and mutually contradictory attributes to It—the one claiming that (when conceived in the form of the Cosmic Person) It has hands and feet etc., (corresponding to Pātāla and the other Lokas), and the other denying them (and declaring It as without name and form)—and (yet) have a common basis (in the shape of God), that which is found to be common and beyond dispute (the dispute centring on the issue of Its having hands and feet and so on) and which is (equally) acceptable to both (viz., God Himself, whose existence is presupposed by both and who is the ground of all negation) is Brahma (to whom all controversy relates). (32) May that almighty and infinite Supreme be gracious to me—who, though devoid of (material) name and form, manifested from time to time forms (consisting of Sattva unmixed with Rajas and Tamas) through descent (into the world of matter) and names through (various) exploits, in order to shower His grace on those who resort to the soles of His feet (for protection). (33) May that Lord grant my wish, who though dwelling in the body of (all) men (as their formless Inner Controller), appears diversified (in the form of different deities) according to their (individual) tendencies (formed in previous lives) and in consonance with the systems of worship of recent origin (followed by them), even as the air breathes fragrance of various kinds on coming in contact with the odour of different flowers etc., (which is an attribute of earth) or appears dusky-white when the colour of dust is transferred to it. (34)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति स्तुतः संस्तुवतः स तस्मिन्नघमर्षणे । आविरासीत् कुरुश्रेष्ठ भगवान् भक्तवत्सलः । ३५ ।

कृतपादः सुपर्णासे प्रलम्बाष्टमहाभुजः । चक्रशङ्खासिचर्मेषुधनुःपाशगदाधरः । ३६ ।

पीतवासा घनश्यामः प्रसन्नवदनेक्षणः । वनमालानिवीताङ्गो लसच्छ्रीवत्सकौस्तुभः । ३७ ।
 महाकिरीटकटकः स्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलः । काञ्च्यङ्गुलीयवलयनूपुराङ्गदभूषितः । ३८ ।
 त्रैलोक्यमोहनं रूपं बिभ्रत् त्रिभुवनेश्वरः । वृतो नारदनन्दाद्यैः पार्षदैः सुरयूथपैः । ३९ ।
 स्तूयमानोऽनुगायद्भिः सिद्धगन्धर्वचारणैः । रूपं तन्महदाश्चर्यं विचक्ष्यागतसाध्वसः । ४० ।
 ननाम दण्डवद् भूमौ प्रहृष्टात्मा प्रजापतिः । न किञ्चनोदीरयितुमशकत् तीव्रया मुदा ।

आपूरितमनोद्वारैर्हृदिन्य इव निर्झरैः । ४१ ।

तं तथावनतं भक्तं प्रजाकामं प्रजापतिम् । चित्तज्ञः सर्वभूतानामिदमाह जनार्दनः । ४२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus extolled, the celebrated Lord, who is (extremely) fond of His devotees, appeared (in person), O Parikṣit (the foremost of the Kurus), before Dakṣa (even while he was glorifying Him) on the strand of that sacred lake called Aghamarṣaṇa. (35) He had His feet (legs) flung across the shoulders of Garuḍa (the king of the birds) and was possessed of eight mighty and exceptionally long arms, in which He carried a discus, a conch, a sword, a shield, an arrow, a bow, a noose and a mace. (36) Clad in yellow and dark-brown as a cloud, He had a cheerful countenance and eyes sparkling with joy. His body was adorned with a garland of sylvan flowers (extending up to His feet) and bore the brilliant mark of Śrīvatsa (a curl of hair covering the footprint of Bhṛgu) and the (famous) Kaustubha gem. (37) He wore a large crown (on His head) and precious bangles (about His ankles) and a shining pair of illigator-shaped ear-rings, and was (further) adorned with a girdle, rings, bracelets, anklets and armlets. (38) Possessed of a form that captivated (the people of) all the three worlds, the Lord of the whole universe (consisting of the three spheres, viz., earth, heaven and the intermediate region) was surrounded by His (own) attendants—Nārada, Nanda, and so on—as well as by the chief among the gods (the guardians of the spheres) and extolled by Siddhas (a class of demigods possessed of mystic powers from their very birth), Gandharvas (heavenly musicians) and Cāraṇas (celestial bards), who were singing songs (of praise) behind Him. Filled with awe and yet extremely rejoiced at heart to behold that most wonderful beauty, Dakṣa (a lord of created beings) fell prostrate on the ground and could not speak anything because of his senses (the channels for the outflow of the mind) being flooded with intense delight as rivers with mountain-torrents. (39—41) To that Prajāpati, who was a (great) devotee (of the Lord) and desired to be blessed with progeny, and who was (still) crouching as aforesaid, Lord Viṣṇu (who is supplicated by men), the Knower of the mind of all living beings, spoke as follows. (42)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

प्राचेतस महाभाग संसिद्धस्तपसा भवान् । यच्छ्रद्धया मत्परया मयि भावं परं गतः । ४३ ।
 प्रीतोऽहं ते प्रजानाथ यत्तेऽस्योद्बृंहणं तपः । ममैष कामो भूतानां यद् भूयासुर्विभूतयः । ४४ ।
 ब्रह्मा भवो भवन्तश्च मनवो विबुधेश्वराः । विभूतयो मम होता भूतानां भूतिहेतवः । ४५ ।
 तपो मे हृदयं ब्रह्मस्तनुर्विद्या क्रियाऽऽकृतिः । अङ्गानि क्रतवो जाता धर्म आत्मासवः सुराः । ४६ ।
 अहमेवासमेवाग्रे नान्यत् किञ्चान्तरं बहिः । संज्ञानमात्रमव्यक्तं प्रसुप्तमिव विश्वतः । ४७ ।
 मय्यनन्तगुणोऽनन्ते गुणतो गुणविग्रहः । यदाऽऽसीत्तत एवाद्यः स्वयम्भूः समभूदजः । ४८ ।
 स वै यदा महादेवो मम वीर्योपबृंहितः । मेने खिलमिवात्मानमुद्यतः सर्गकर्मणि । ४९ ।
 अथ मेऽभिहितो देवस्तपोऽतप्यत दारुणम् । नव विश्वसृजो युष्मान् येनादावसृजद्विभुः । ५० ।
 एषा पञ्चजनस्याङ्ग दुहिता वै प्रजापतेः । असिक्नी नाम पत्नीत्वे प्रजेश प्रतिगृह्यताम् । ५१ ।
 मिथुनव्यवायधर्मस्त्वं प्रजासर्गमिमं पुनः । मिथुनव्यवायधर्मिण्यां भूरिशो भावयिष्यसि । ५२ ।

त्वत्तोऽथस्तात् प्रजाः सर्वा मिथुनीभूय मायया । मदीयया भविष्यन्ति हरिष्यन्ति च मे बलिम् । ५३ ।

The Lord said : O highly blessed Dakṣa (the son of the Pracetās), you have fully achieved your end through asceticism in that you have developed supreme devotion to Me, thanks to your reverence solely directed towards Me. (43) I am pleased with you, O lord of created beings, inasmuch as your asceticism is conducive to the growth of this creation; (for) it is My wish (too) that all created beings should thrive. (44) Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva (the source of the universe), yourselves (the lord of created beings), the Manus (the progenitors of mankind, presiding over different Manvantaras or periods covering seventy-one and odd revolution of the four Yugas), and the chief of the gods (the guardians of the spheres, Indra and others)—indeed these are My glorious manifestation making for the prosperity of (all) created beings. (45) Asceticism (in the form of contemplation accompanied by the practice of Yamas* and Niyamas) is My (very) heart; worship (in the form of the muttering of prayers with all auxiliary practices, Nyāsa etc.), My body (because it gives a concrete shape to meditation and serves as a protective covering for it even as the body protects the heart); the (mental) activity (preliminary to meditation in the shape of forming a conceptual image of the object to be meditated upon), My exterior; sacrifices well-performed are the (various) members of My body; the merit resulting from such sacrifices, My mind (which has its seat in the heart, i.e., has its source in meditation); and the gods (enjoying a share in the sacrificial oblations) are My vital airs (which are sated through such oblations). (46) Before creation I alone existed and that too in a state of absolute inactivity; there was nothing else in the form of the perceiving subject or the perceived object. I was mere consciousness and unmanifest (too); it seemed as if a state of deep sleep prevailed on all sides. (47) When in My infinite Being, possessed of endless attributes, sprang up through Māyā this cosmos made up of the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), there arose in that very cosmos Brahmā, (the self-born), the cause (creator) of all, not born of a mother's womb. (48) When that great god girded up his loins for the work of creation, he as a matter of fact thought himself unequal to it as it were, though supplemented with My energy. That all-powerful divinity accordingly practised severe austerities as enjoined by Me, by recourse to which he evolved at the very outset nine lords of creation including yourself (your previous incarnation). (49-50) This daughter of Pañcājana, a lord of created beings (like you), Asiknī by name, should (now) be accepted (by you), O dear Dakṣa, as wife. (51) Following the righteous course of sexual intercourse between a (duly) married couple, you shall again beget progeny in large numbers through her, who will (also) follow (like you) the prescribed course of sexual union between a (duly) wedded couple. (52) All created beings (coming) after you will be born (again in the form of their children) (only) by copulating with My Māyā (enchanting potency in the form of woman) and bear offerings to Me. (53)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्त्वा मिषतस्तस्य भगवान् विश्वभावनः । स्वप्नोपलब्धार्थ इव तत्रैवान्तर्दधे हरिः । ५४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे चतुर्थोऽध्यायः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Having spoken thus, Lord Śrī Hari, the Promoter of the universe, disappeared on that very spot, like an object seen in a dream, (even) as Dakṣa looked on. (54)

Thus ends the fourth discourse in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* For the import of the Yamas and Niyamas vide IV. xxii. 24.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

Nārada subjected to an execration (by Dakṣa)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तस्यां स पाञ्चजन्यां वै विष्णुमायोपबृंहितः । हर्यश्चसंज्ञानयुतं पुत्रानजनयद् विभुः । १ ।
 अपृथग्धर्मशीलास्ते सर्वे दाक्षायणा नृप । पित्रा प्रोक्ताः प्रजासर्गे प्रतीचीं प्रययुर्दिशम् । २ ।
 तत्र नारायणसरस्तीर्थं सिन्धुसमुद्रयोः । सङ्गमो यत्र सुमहन्मुनिसिद्धनिषेवितम् । ३ ।
 तदुपस्पर्शनादेव विनिर्धूतमलाशयाः । धर्मे पारमहंसे च प्रोत्पन्नमतयोऽप्युत । ४ ।
 तेपिरे तप एवोग्रं पित्रादेशेन यन्त्रिताः । प्रजाविवृद्धये यत्तान् देवर्षिस्तान् ददर्श ह । ५ ।
 उवाच चाथ हर्यश्वाः कथं स्रक्ष्यथ वै प्रजाः । अदृष्टान्तं भुवो यूयं बालिशा बत पालकाः । ६ ।
 तथैकपुरुषं राष्ट्रं बिलं चादृष्टनिर्गमम् । बहुरूपां स्त्रियं चापि पुमांसं पुंश्चलीपतिम् । ७ ।
 नदीमुभयतोवाहां पञ्चपञ्चाद्भुतं गृहम् । क्वचिद्धंसं चित्रकथं क्षौरपव्यं स्वयं भ्रमिम् । ८ ।
 कथं स्वपितुरादेशमविद्वांसो विपश्चितः । अनुरूपमविज्ञाय अहो सर्गं करिष्यथ । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Indeed energized by Lord Viṣṇu's Māyā (creative power), the aforesaid Dakṣa (a lord of created beings) begot through Pāñcajanī ten thousand sons, known as the Haryaśwas. (1) Alike in conduct and disposition, all those sons of Dakṣa, O king (Parikṣit), proceeded in a westerly direction (to practise austerities) when commanded by their father to beget offspring. (2) There they reached a most extensive and holy lake called Nārāyaṇasara, situated in the area where the river Sindhu (the modern Indus) falls into the sea, and resorted to by sages and Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth). (3) By merely bathing therein they not only had their mind thoroughly cleansed of all impurities (in the shape of likes and dislikes and so on) but also developed an inclination to follow the path of ascetics of the highest order (the path of Renunciation and Self-Knowledge). Yet they practised severe austerities alone, bound as they were by the command of their father. Nārada (the celestial sage), it is said, saw them intent on increasing the population (of the world) and forthwith said, "O Haryaśwas, without having seen the end of the earth how will you actually (be able to) beget progeny? Though protectors (of men), alas ! you are ignorant ! (4—6) Similarly, without fully knowing the country inhabited by a single person, the hole with no visible outlet, the woman assuming different forms (at will) and even so the man who is the husband of a harlot, the river running both ways (both forward and backward), the wonderful house built of twenty-five materials, the swan, at one place, which has a strange story to tell, and something exceptionally sharp and strong (as though made of razors and adamant), independent and revolving, and without having understood the command of your omniscient father, suitable for you, how will you proceed with (the work of) creation?" (7—9)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तन्निशम्याथ हर्यश्वा औत्पत्तिकमनीषया । वाचःकूटं तु देवर्षेः स्वयं विममृशुर्धिया । १० ।
 भूः क्षेत्रं जीवसंज्ञं यदनादि निजबन्धनम् । अदृष्टा तस्य निर्वाणं किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । ११ ।
 एक एवेश्वरस्तुर्यो भगवान् स्वाश्रयः परः । तमदृष्टाभवं पुंसः किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १२ ।
 पुमान् नैवैति यद् गत्वा बिलस्वर्गं गतो यथा । प्रत्यग्यामाविद इह किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १३ ।

नानारूपाऽऽत्मनो बुद्धिः स्वैरिणीव गुणान्विता । तन्निष्ठामगतस्येह	किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १४ ।
तत्सङ्गभ्रंशितैश्वर्यं संसरन्तं कुभार्यवत् । तद्गतीरबुधस्येह	किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १५ ।
सृष्ट्यप्ययकरीं मायां वेलाकूलान्तवेगिताम् । मत्तस्य तामविज्ञस्य	किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १६ ।
पञ्चविंशतितत्त्वानां पुरुषोऽद्भुतदर्पणम् । अध्यात्ममबुधस्येह	किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १७ ।
ऐश्वरं शास्त्रमुत्सृज्य बन्धमोक्षानुदर्शनम् । विविकृतपदमज्ञाय	किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १८ ।
कालचक्रं भ्रमिस्तीक्ष्णं सर्वं निष्कर्षयज्जगत् । स्वतन्त्रमबुधस्येह	किमसत्कर्मभिर्भवेत् । १९ ।
शास्त्रस्य पितुरादेशं यो न वेद निवर्तकम् । कथं तदनुरूपाय	गुणविश्रम्भ्युपक्रमेत् । २० ।
इति व्यवसिता राजन् हर्यश्चा एकचेतसः । प्रययुस्तं परिक्रम्य	पन्थानमनिवर्तनम् । २१ ।
स्वरब्रह्मणि निर्भातहृषीकेशपदाम्बुजे । अखण्डं चित्तमावेश्य	लोकाननुचरन्मुनिः । २२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing these enigmatic words of Nārada (the celestial sage), the Haryaśwas themselves presently pondered over them with their own intellect, which was endowed with innate quickness of perception. (10) (They said to themselves): "The earth (referred to by the celestial sage) is (no other than) the field (in the shape of the subtle body, yielding the crop of merit and sin, happiness and misery etc., and) known as the Jīva (because conditioning it), which has existed from remote antiquity and serves as a fetter for the soul. Without seeing its extinction what is to be gained through useless actions (actions not conducive to Liberation)? (11) The Lord is the sole (almighty) Ruler (of the country in the shape of this universe), the witness of all the three states of the mind (the waking state, the dream state and the state of deep sleep) and hence known as the fourth or transcendent principle, who is supported by (none else than) His own Self and is higher than (the cause of) all. Without seeing Him who is eternally free from birth (and death), what purpose can be achieved by man through useless activities (which are not dedicated to Him)? (12) What is to be achieved in this world through useless acts (serving as a means for the attainment of heavenly bliss and other enjoyments of a transitory nature) by him who has not realized the self-effulgent Brahma, on attaining which a man does not return (to this mortal plane) any more than one who has reached the heaven-like subterranean regions returns to the earth (in the same life). (13) The intellect of a Jīva, which is imbued with the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) and which takes the shape of the various objects of senses (colour, taste and so on) is like a wanton woman appearing in various (attractive) guises and possessed of (many alluring) qualities. What can be gained in this world through useless (feverish) activities by him who has not risen above such a diversified intellect (and attained discrimination)? (14) (Again,) what is to be gained here through useless (indiscriminate) acts by the man who does not recognize himself as having fallen from his greatness through identification with such an intellect and follows, like the husband of an unchaste woman, its courses (in the shape of joy and sorrow and so on)? (15) What can be achieved through useless actions by the man who is so forgetful (under the sway of Māyā) that he fails to recognize the frightfulness of (the river of) Māyā, that (alternately) brings about (both) creation and destruction (thus flowing both forward and backward) and acquires (great) impetuosity (in the shape of an unusual outburst of anger, pride and other undesirable impulses) near the ghats and banks of its stream (in the shape of meditation, worship and other spiritual practices). (16) The Puruṣa (the Lord dwelling in the body of every human being as the Inner Controller) is the wonderful mirror (ground and illuminator) of the twenty-five categories (constituting the human personality, viz., the soul, the Unmanifest or primordial matter, the Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, the ego, the five subtle elements, the mind and the ten Indriyas and the five gross elements). Without knowing Him as presiding over the (aforesaid) collection* of causes and effects, what is to be gained here through useless actions (that are done with the consciousness that the doer is a free agent, and which, therefore, tend to veil one's true nature). (17) Ignoring (refraining from the study of and refusing to follow) the body of teachings establishing the existence of God, which not only distinguishes Spirit from matter (even as a swan, according to the traditional belief, instinctively separates milk from water where the two are mixed), but further enables one to perceive the true nature of bondage and liberation, what can be achieved here through useless actions (that tend to direct one's mind towards the external world)? (18) (Again,) what will be gained here through useless actions (whose fruit is swept away by the ravages of Time) by him who has no knowledge of the wheel of Time, which is (ever) revolving, sharp-edged and independent and destroys the whole creation (and who resorts to various activities under the belief that their fruit is eternal). (19) How can he who does not know the precepts of his (second) father, the Śāstra (which invests him with a second body in the shape of the sacred thread and whose advice is as salutary as that of a father—precepts that turn him away from worldly activity—and who has faith in the path of worldly activity (which has reference to the three Guṇas, i.e., the world of matter), proceed to act in conformity with such precepts ?" (20) Thus resolved, O king (Parikṣit), the Haryaśwas, who were (all) of one mind, went round the sage (from left to right, as a mark of respect) and took to the path (leading to God-Realization) which does not bring one back to the mortal plane. (21) Having fixed his undivided mind on the lotus-feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Controller of the senses) as revealed in the notes of the gamut, which stand as a symbol of the (all-pervading) Brahma (and lead to its realization), the sage (Nārada) went about the spheres. (22)

नाशं निशम्य पुत्राणां नारदाच्छीलशालिनाम् । अन्वतप्यत कः शोचन् सुप्रजास्त्वं शुचां पदम् । २३ ।
 स भूयः पाञ्चजन्यायामजेन परिसान्त्वितः । पुत्रानजनयद् दक्षः शबलाश्वान् सहस्रशः । २४ ।
 तेऽपि पित्रा समादिष्टाः प्रजासर्गे धृतव्रताः । नारायणसरो जग्मुर्वत्र सिद्धाः स्वपूर्वजाः । २५ ।
 तदुपस्पर्शनादेव विनिर्धूतमलाशयाः । जपन्तो ब्रह्म परमं तेपुस्तेऽत्र महत् तपः । २६ ।
 अन्मक्षाः कतिचिन्मासान् कतिचिद्वायुभोजनाः । आराधयन् मन्त्रमिममभ्यस्यन्त इडस्पतिम् । २७ ।
 ॐ नमो नारायणाय पुरुषाय महात्मने । विशुद्धसत्त्वधिष्ण्याय महाहंसाय धीमहि । २८ ।
 इति तानपि राजेन्द्र प्रतिसर्गंधियो मुनिः । उपेत्य नारदः प्राह वाचःकूटानि पूर्ववत् । २९ ।
 दाक्षायणाः संश्रृणुत गदतो निगमं मम । अन्विच्छतानुपदवीं भ्रातॄणां भ्रातृवत्सलाः । ३० ।
 भ्रातॄणां प्रायणं भ्राता योऽनुतिष्ठति धर्मवित् । स पुण्यबन्धुः पुरुषो मरुद्भिः सह मोदते । ३१ ।
 एतावदुक्त्वा प्रययौ नारदोऽमोघदर्शनः । तेऽपि चान्वगमन्मार्गं भ्रातॄणामेव मारिष । ३२ ।

* According to the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy, which recognizes the twenty-five categories enumerated in the above verse, Prakṛti or primordial matter is the cause of all causes. From Prakṛti follows the Mahat-tattva, which in its turn brings forth the ego and the ego gives rise to the five subtle elements, the mind and the ten Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action); and from the five subtle elements are evolved the five gross elements (earth, water, fire, air and ether). Thus it will appear that while Prakṛti is an uncaused cause, the Mahat-tattva, the ego and the subtle elements are both causes and effects—causes in relation to their effects and effects in relation to their causes. The remaining sixteen (besides the Puruṣa or soul), viz., the mind, the ten Indriyas and the five gross elements are mere effects inasmuch as they are causes of no other category; while the Puruṣa or soul is neither a cause nor an effect. This is summed up in the following verse of Īśvara Kṛṣṇa's popular manual on the Sāṅkhya system, known by the name of Sāṅkhya-Kārikā:—

मूलप्रकृतिरविकृतिर्महदाद्याः प्रकृतिविकृतयः सप्त ।
 योऽशकस्तु विकारो न प्रकृतिर्न विकृतिः पुरुषः ॥

It is in this sense that the human body has been spoken of in the above verse as a collection of causes and effects.

सधीचीनं प्रतीचीनं परस्यानुपथं गताः । नाद्यापि ते निवर्तन्ते पश्चिमा यामिनीरिव । ३३ ।

एतस्मिन् काल उत्पातान् बहून् पश्यन् प्रजापतिः । पूर्ववन्नारदकृतं पुत्रनाशमुपाभूणोत् । ३४ ।

चुक्रोध नारदायासौ पुत्रशोकविमूर्च्छितः । देवर्षिमुपलभ्याह रोषाद्विस्फुरिताधरः । ३५ ।

Having heard of the straying of his virtuous sons (from the path of worldly activity) at the instigation of Nārada, Dakṣa fell a sorrowing and felt (much) distressed. (Indeed) it is a source of grief to have good children. (23) Fully consoled by Brahmā (who was not born of a mother's womb), Dakṣa begot through Pāñcajanī (his wife) a thousand sons more, known as the Śabalāśwas. (24) Expressly enjoined by (their) father to beget children, they made a firm resolve to practise austerities and repaired to (the lake) Nārāyaṇasara, where their elder brothers had achieved their object (in the shape of God-Realization or divine love). (25) Their mind thoroughly cleansed of (all) impurities through a mere bath in that lake, they practised great austerity there, muttering the most sacred syllable 'OM' (a symbol or appellation of the highest Reality). (26) Living for some months on water (alone) and subsisting for several months on (nothing but) air, they worshipped Bhagavān Viṣṇu (the Lord of all sacred texts), repeating the following sacred formula : (27) "We make obeisance to Lord Nārāyaṇa (the goal of all the Jīvas), denoted by the mystical syllable OM, the highest Person the Supreme Spirit, appearing in a form made up of Sattva unmixed with Rajas and Tamas, the purest of the pure." (28) The sage Nārada, O Parīkṣit (a King of kings), approached those (other) princes also, who were thus intent on renewing the creation, and addressed to them enigmatic words similar to those addressed (to their elder brothers) before:—(29) "Duly hear from me as I tell you, O sons of Dakṣa, the following precept. (Try to) discover the path trodden by your (elder) brothers, for whom you cherish such (great) affection. (30) A brother who knows his duty (towards his brothers) and follows the exalted path of his brothers, and who is followed (everywhere) by his virtue rejoices (in the realm of the Maruts) along with the Maruts (the forty-nine wind-gods, who are all excessively fond of their brothers)". (31) Saying this much, the sage Nārada, whose sight never fails to bring its reward, withdrew; and they too followed the path of their brothers alone, O noble one ! (32) Having taken to the noble and agreeable path leading to (the realization of) the Supreme—a path which can be reached only by those whose thought is turned onward (away from the world)—they, like the bygone nights, do not return even to this day. (33) Seeing many an evil portent at this time, the Prajāpati (Dakṣa) heard of the ruination of his sons at the hands of the sage Nārada as before. (34) Overpowered with grief for his sons, he got angry with Nārada; and, on meeting with the sage, addressed him (as follows), his lips quivering through rage. (35)

दक्ष उवाच

अहो असाधो साधूनां साधुलिङ्गेन नस्त्वया । असाध्वकार्यर्भकाणां भिक्षोर्मार्गः प्रदर्शितः । ३६ ।

ऋणैस्त्रिभिरमुक्तानाममीमांसितकर्मणाम् । विघातः श्रेयसः पाप लोकयोरुभयोः कृतः । ३७ ।

एवं त्वं निरनुक्रोशो बालानां मतिभिद्धरेः । पार्षदमध्ये चरसि यशोहा निरपत्रपः । ३८ ।

ननु भागवता नित्यं भूतानुग्रहकारताः । ऋते त्वां सौहृदं वै वैरङ्करमवैरिणाम् । ३९ ।

नेत्थं पुंसां विरागः स्यात् त्वया केवलिना मृषा । मन्यसे यद्युपशमं स्नेहपाशनिवृत्तनम् । ४० ।

नानुभूय न जानाति पुमान् विषयतीक्ष्णताम् । निर्विद्येत स्वयं तस्मान्न तथा भिन्नघ्नीः परैः । ४१ ।

यन्नस्त्वं कर्मसन्धानां साधूनां गृहमेधिनाम् । कृतवानसि दुर्मर्षं विप्रियं तव मर्षितम् । ४२ ।

तनुकृन्तनं यन्नस्त्वमभद्रमचरः पुनः । तस्माल्लोकेषु ते मूढ न भवेद् भ्रमतः पदम् । ४३ ।

Dakṣa said : Ah, appearing in the garb of a holy man, O wicked one, you have done a (great) disservice to our youngsters—who were (all) virtuous—in that you showed them the path of a mendicant. (36) You have ruined their interests, O sinful one, in both the worlds (here as well as hereafter), while they had not yet been exonerated from their threefold* obligations, nor had they pondered over the futility of (worldly) activities (and were thus unqualified† for taking to the path of renunciation). (37) Mercilessly unsettling in this way the mind of youngsters (intent on promoting the righteous cause of creation), you have tarnished the fair name of the Lord, and (yet) you shamelessly move in the midst (count as one) of His attendants I (38) Barring you—who have trampled (our) love and actually shown enmity (even) to us, who are not enemies—the votaries of the Lord are undoubtedly ever anxious to shower their grace on (all) living beings. (39) Vairāgya (freedom from attachment to the world) cannot be engendered in the mind of the people in this way by you, who have assumed the guise of an ascetic without true wisdom, even though you regard (Vairāgya as conducive to quietism and) quietism as a means of cutting asunder the bonds of attachment. (40) (For) a man cannot realize the bitterness (painful consequences) of the pleasures of sense without tasting them. (Therefore) he whose mind has been unsettled by others would not feel disgusted with the world so fully as he might of his own accord (through such realization). (41) We (quietly) put up with the wrong which you did to us, householders, vowed to the performance of rituals and intent on achieving heavenly bliss, even though the wrong was such as could not be easily forgotten. (42) (Yet) inasmuch as you have done an offence against us for a second time. O fool responsible for breaking the continuity of our race, therefore, you will have no halt as you wander through the spheres. (43)

श्रीशुक उवाच

प्रतिजग्राह तद्वाढं नारदः साधुसम्मतः । एतावान् साधुवादो हि तितिक्षेतेश्वरः स्वयम् । ४४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे नारदशापो नाम पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : The sage Nārada, who was esteemed (even) by the virtuous, accepted the curse (pronounced by Dakṣa) with the words "Very well !" That he who is himself powerful (enough to retaliate by uttering a counter-curse), should put up with another's offence, this alone entitles a man to the title of a pious soul. (44)

*Thus ends the fifth discourse, entitled "Nārada subjected to an execration", in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

* Every member of twice-born classes is born, so declare the Vedas, with a debt to the Ṛṣis, the manes and the gods. It is (1) by studying the Vedas with a vow of strict celibacy in the prime of his life, (2) by marrying and begetting children after finishing his studies and (3) by performing sacrifices that he discharges these three debts :—

जायमानो वै ब्राह्मणस्त्रिभिरर्हणवान् जायते ब्रह्मचर्येण ऋषिभ्यो यज्ञेन देवेभ्यः प्रजया पितृभ्य एष वा अनृणो यः पुत्री यज्वा ब्रह्मचारी वासि ।

† We read in the Manusmṛiti that a member of the twice-born classes should set his mind on Liberation only after he has discharged the aforementioned threefold debt, and that he who strives for Mokṣa without having discharged these three debts falls in the scale of spiritual evolution

ऋणानि त्रीनपाकृत्य मनो मोक्षे निवेशयेत् ।
अनपाकृत्य मोक्षं तु सेवमानो ब्रजत्यधः ॥

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

The posterity of Dakṣa through his sixty daughters

श्रीशुक उवाच

ततः प्राचेतसोऽसिकन्यामनुनीतः स्वयम्भुवा । षष्टिं सञ्जनयामास दुहितुः पितृवत्सलाः । १ ।
दश धर्माय कायेन्दोर्द्विषद् त्रिणव दत्तवान् । भूताङ्गिरःकृशाश्वेभ्यो द्वे द्वे ताक्ष्याय चापराः । २ ।
नामधेयान्यमूषां त्वं सापत्यानां च मे शृणु । यासां प्रसूतिप्रसवैर्लोका आपूरितास्त्रयः । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Pacified and prevailed upon by Brahmā (the self-born), Dakṣa (the son of the Pracetās) then begot through Asiknī (his wife) sixty daughters, who were (very) affectionate towards their father. (1) He gave away ten (of them) to Dharma (the god of piety), thirteen to the sage Kaśyapa (son of Marīci), thrice nine (twenty-seven) to the moon-god, two each to the sages Bhūta, Aṅgirā and Kṛśāśwa and the rest (again) to Kaśyapa (who is also known by the name of Tārksya). (2) (Now) hear you from me their names as well as of their offspring, by whose children and their descendants (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) were filled on all sides. (3)

भानुर्लम्बा ककुब्जामिर्विश्वा साध्या मरुत्वती । वसुर्मुहूर्ता सङ्कल्पा धर्मपत्न्यः सुतान् शृणु । ४ ।
भानोस्तु देवऋषभ इन्द्रसेनस्ततो नृप । विद्योत आसील्लम्बायास्ततश्च स्तनयित्रवः । ५ ।
ककुभः सङ्कटस्तस्य कीकटस्तनयो यतः । भुवो दुर्गाणि जामेयः स्वर्गो नन्दिस्ततोऽभवत् । ६ ।
विश्वेदेवास्तु विश्वाया अप्रजांस्तान् प्रचक्षते । साध्यो गणस्तु साध्याया अर्थसिद्धिस्तु तत्सुतः । ७ ।
मरुत्वांश्च जयन्तश्च मरुत्वत्यां बभूवतुः । जयन्तो वासुदेवांश्च उपेन्द्र इति यं विदुः । ८ ।
मौहूर्तिका देवगणा मुहूर्तायाश्च जज्ञिरे । ये वै फलं प्रयच्छन्ति भूतानां स्वस्वकालजम् । ९ ।
सङ्कल्पायाश्च सङ्कल्पः कामः सङ्कल्पजः स्मृतः । वसवोऽष्टौ वसोः पुत्रास्तेषां नामानि मे शृणु । १० ।
द्रोणः प्राणो ध्रुवोऽर्कोऽग्निर्दोषो वसुर्विभावसुः । द्रोणस्याभिमतैः पत्न्या हर्षशोकभयादयः । ११ ।
प्राणस्योर्जस्वती भार्या सह आयुः पुरोजवः । ध्रुवस्य भार्या धरणिरसूत विविधाः पुरः । १२ ।
अर्कस्य वासना भार्या पुत्रास्तर्षादयः स्मृताः । अग्नेर्भार्या वसोर्धारा पुत्रा द्रविणकादयः । १३ ।
स्कन्दश्च कृत्तिकापुत्रो ये विशाखादयस्ततः । दोषस्य शर्वरीपुत्रः शिशुमारो हरेः कला । १४ ।
वसोराङ्गिरसीपुत्रो विश्वकर्माऽऽकृतीपतिः । ततो मनुश्चाक्षुषोऽभूद् विश्वे साध्या मनोः सुताः । १५ ।

विभावसोरसूतोषा व्युष्टं रोचिषमातपम् । पञ्चयामोऽथ भूतानि येन जाग्रति कर्मसु । १६ ।

Bhānu, Lambā, Kakubh, Jāmi, Viśwā, Sādhyā, Marutvatī, Vasu, Muhūrtā and Saṅkalpā were (the names of) Dharma's wives; (now) hear (the names) of their sons. (4) Of Bhānu, in the first instance was born Devarṣabha and from (the loins of) Devarṣabha, sprang up Indrasena. (Even so) Vidyota was the son of Lambā and from (the loins of) Vidyota appeared (the spirits presiding over) the clouds. (5) (Again), the son of Kakubh was Saṅkaṭa and Saṅkaṭa's son was Kīkaṭa, from whom appeared (the spirits presiding over) the fortresses on earth. (Similarly) Swarga was the son of Jāmi and from (the loins of) Swarga appeared Nandi. (6) The sons of Viśwā were the Viśwedevas (a group of gods, ten in number); the learned speak of them as issueless. Again, the group (of gods) called the Sādhyas was born of Sādhyā and Arthasiddhi was (the name of) their son. (7) Marutvān and Jayanta were born of Marutvatī; (of these) Jayanta was a part manifestation of Lord Vāsudeva (Viṣṇu); he is (also) known by the name of Upendra. (8) Again, a race of gods called the Mauhūrtikas (the deities presiding over the thirty Muhūrtas—each consisting of 48 minutes—comprised in every twenty-four hours) was born of Muhūrtā. They actually dispense to (all) living beings the fruit (of their actions) appropriate to the division of time presided over by each. (9) Of Saṅkalpā, again, was born Saṅkalpa (the deity presiding over thoughts); (and) Kāma (the god of love) has been declared to be the progeny of Saṅkalpa. The eight Vasus (another group of gods) are the sons of Vasu; (now) hear their names from me;—(10) (They are) Droṇa, Prāṇa, Dhruva, Arka, Agni, Doṣa, Vasu and Vibhāvasu. (And) of Abhimati, the wife of Droṇa, were born Harṣa, Śoka, Bhaya and others (the deities presiding over the emotions of joy, grief, fear and so on). (11) Ūrjaswatī was (the name of) the wife of Prāṇa; and Saha, Āyu and Purojava, his sons. (And) Dhruva's wife, Dharaṇī, bore (the deities presiding over) the various cities and towns. (12) Vāsanā (the deity presiding over latent desires was (the name of) the wife of Arkā and Tarṣa (the deity presiding over excessive longing) and others are known to be his sons. (Similarly) Dhārā is (the name of) the Vasu named Agni and Draviṇaka and others are his sons. (13) Skanda (the god Kārtikeya) was the son of Kṛtikā (the other wife of Agni); while (the gods) Viśākha and others sprang up from (the loins of) Skanda. The son of Doṣa through Śarvarī (the deity presiding over nights) was (known by the name of) Śīsumāra (the deity presiding over the stellar sphere, already described in Book V as resembling a dolphin in shape), a scintillation of Śrī Hari. (14) Viśwakarmā (the architect of the gods), the husband of Ākṛti, was the son of Vasu through Āṅgirasī (a daughter of the sage Āṅgirā). From (the loins of) Viśwakarmā appeared Cākṣuṣa (the sixth) Manu; (the group of gods called) the Viśwedevas and the Sādhyas are the sons of Cākṣuṣa Manu. (15) Uṣā, the wife of Vibhāvasu, gave birth to (three sons,) Vyūṣṭa, Rociṣ and Ātapa. From (the loins of) Ātapa sprang up Pañcayāma* (the deity presiding over the daytime), because of whom (all) living beings remain awake and engaged in (their) activities. (16)

सरूपासूत भूतस्य भार्या रुद्रांश्च कोटिशः । रैवतोऽजो भवो भीमो वाम उग्रो वृषाकपिः । १७ ।

अजैकपादहिर्वुध्यो बहुरूपो महानिति । रुद्रस्य पार्षदाश्चान्ये घोरा भूतविनायकाः । १८ ।

प्रजापतेरङ्गिरसः स्वधा पत्नी पितृनथ । अथर्वाङ्गिरसं वेदं पुत्रत्वे चाकरोत् सती । १९ ।

कृशाश्वोऽर्चिषि भार्यायां धूम्रकेशमजीजनत् । धिषणायां वेदशिरो देवलं वयुनं मनुम् । २० ।

तार्क्ष्यस्य विनता कद्रुः पतङ्गी यामिनीति च । पतङ्ग्यसूत पतगान् यामिनी शलभानथ । २१ ।

सुपर्णासूत गरुडं साक्षाद् यज्ञेशवाहनम् । सूर्यसूतमनूरुं च कद्रूनाङ्गानेकशः । २२ ।

Again, Sarūpā, the (first) wife of Bhūta, brought forth the Rudras (a class of gods presiding over destruction) in crores. Of these, Raivata, Aja, Bhava, Bhīma, Vāma, Ugra, Vṛṣākapi, Ajaikapāda, Ahirbudhnya, Bahurūpa and Mahān were the foremost. And the terrible attendants of Rudra (appearing in the aforesaid eleven principal forms), (viz.,) the Pretas (spirits) and Vināyakas (a class of evil-minded demigods), were distinct from the Rudras (being born of the other wife of Bhūta). (17-18) Again, the wife of Āṅgirā, a lord of created beings, Swadhā (by name), accepted the manes for her sons; while (his other wife) Satī adopted Atharvaveda (the fourth Veda, henceforth known by the name of Atharvāṅgirasā) as her son. (19) Kṛśāśwa begot (a son named) Dhūmrakeśa through his (first) wife Arci, and (four more sons, viz.,) Vedaśirā, Devala, Vayuna and Manu through (his second wife) Dhiṣaṇā. (20) Vinatā, Kadrū, Pataṅgī and Yāminī were the (four other) wives of the sage Kaśyapa (who was also known as Tārṣya because of his father, the sage Marīci, who bore the title of Trkṣa). (Of these) Pataṅgī gave birth to birds, while

* The deity presiding over the daytime is called Pañcayāma because the period of time presided over by him consists on an average of five Yāmas or fifteen hours including Pratyūṣa and Pradoṣa, the morning and evening hours, leaving only three Yāmas or nine hours for the night which is therefore called Triyāmā.

Yāminī brought forth moths. (21) Vinatā (also called Suparṇā) bore Garuḍa, who carries (on his back) Bhagavān Viṣṇu (the Lord of sacrifices) Himself as well as Aruṇa (who is thighless*), the charioteer of the sun-god; while Kadrū brought forth the numerous varieties of Nāgas (serpent-demons). (22)

कृत्तिकादीनि नक्षत्राणीन्दोः पत्न्यस्तु भारत । दक्षशापात् सोऽनपत्यस्तासु यक्षग्रहादितः । १२३ ।
 पुनः प्रसाद्य तं सोमः कला लेभे क्षये दिताः । शृणु नामानि लोकानां मातृणां शङ्कराणि च । १२४ ।
 अथ कश्यपपत्नीनां यत्प्रसूतमिदं जगत् । अदितिर्दितीर्दनुः काष्ठा अरिष्ठा सुरसा इला । १२५ ।
 मुनिः क्रोधवशा ताम्रा सुरभिः सरमा तिमिः । तिमेर्यादोगणा आसन् श्वापदाः सरमासुताः । १२६ ।
 सुरभेर्महिषागावो ये चान्ये द्विशफा नृप । ताम्रायाः श्येनगृध्राद्या मुनेरप्सरसां गणाः । १२७ ।
 दन्दशूकादयः सर्पा राजन् क्रोधवशात्मजाः । इलाया भूरुहाः सर्वे यातुधानाश्च सौरसाः । १२८ ।
 अरिष्ठायाश्च गन्धर्वाः काष्ठाया द्विशफेतराः । सुता दनोरेकषष्टिस्तेषां प्राधानिकान् शृणु । १२९ ।
 द्विमूर्धा शम्बरोऽरिष्टो हयग्रीवो विभावसुः । अयोमुखः शङ्कुशिराः स्वर्भानुः कपिलोऽरुणः । १३० ।
 पुलोमा वृषपर्वा च एकचक्रोऽनुतापनः । धूम्रकेशो विरूपाक्षो विप्रचित्तिश्च दुर्जयः । १३१ ।
 स्वर्भानोः सुप्रभां कन्यामुवाह नमुचिः किल । वृषपर्वणस्तु शर्मिष्ठां ययातिर्नाहुषो बली । १३२ ।
 वैश्वानरसुता याश्च चतस्रश्चारुदर्शनाः । उपदानवी हयशिरा पुलोमा कालका तथा । १३३ ।
 उपदानवीं हिरण्याक्षः क्रतुर्हयशिरां नृप । पुलोमां कालकां च द्वे वैश्वानरसुते तु कः । १३४ ।
 उपयेमेऽथ भगवान् कश्यपो ब्रह्मचोदितः । पुलोमाः कालकेयाश्च दानवा युद्धशालिनः । १३५ ।
 तयोः षष्टिसहस्राणि यज्ञघ्नांस्ते पितुः पिता । जघान स्वर्गतो राजन्नेक इन्द्रप्रियङ्करः । १३६ ।
 विप्रचित्तिः सिंहिकायां शतं चैकमजीजनत् । राहुज्येष्ठं केतुशतं ग्रहत्वं य उपागतः । १३७ ।

Again, (the deities presiding over) the (twenty-seven) lunar mansions, Kṛttikā† and so on, are the wives of Soma (the moon-god), O Parīkṣit (a scion of Bharata) ! Plagued with the devilish disease of consumption due to the curse of Dakṣa (who got enraged with his son-in-law because of his partiality and excessive fondness for one of his twenty-seven wives, viz., Rohiṇī, and consequent neglect of others) however, the moon-god got no issue by (any of) them. (23) Propitiating Dakṣa again, Soma secured (from him the boon of regaining) the digits (of light) intercepted (from the lunar orb) during the waning (dark) fortnight (but no issues even then). Now hear the auspicious names of Kaśyapa's wives, the mothers of (all species of) living beings, by whom (the whole of) this universe was brought forth—(viz.,) Aditi, Diti, Danu, Kāṣṭhā, Ariṣṭā, Surasā, Ilā, Muni, Krodhavaśā, Tāmrā, Surabhi, Saramā and Timi. Of (the last-named,) Timi, were born the (numerous) species of aquatic creatures; while wild animals (the tiger etc.), are the offspring of Saramā. (24—26) Of Surabhi were born the buffaloes, the bovine race and whatever other (ruminant) beasts with cloven hoofs there are, O king ! of Tāmrā, were born the hawk, the vulture and other (carnivorous) birds; while the hosts of celestial nymphs were born of Muni. (27) Reptiles such as the snake, O king (Parīkṣit), are the progeny of Krodhavaśā. From (the womb of) Ilā appeared the whole vegetable kingdom; while the Rākṣasas (ogres) are the offspring of Surasā. (28) The Gandharvas (celestial musicians) are the progeny of Ariṣṭā, and beasts with uncloven hoofs (such as the horse and the donkey), of Kāṣṭhā. The sons of Danu number sixty-one; hear (the names of) the chief of them. (29) They are Dwimūrdhā, Śambarā, Ariṣṭā, Hayagrīva, Vibhāvasu, Ayomukha, Śaṅkuśirā, Swarbhānu (Rāhu), Kapila,

* The tradition goes that the egg that bore Aruṇa was broken before time and hence Aruṇa was in an undeveloped condition without his lower limbs.

† For the names of the lunar mansions vide foot-note below V.xxii. II.

Aruṇa, Pulomā, Vṛṣaparvā and Ekacakra, Anutāpana, Dhūmrakeśa, Virūpākṣa, Vipracitti and Durjaya. (30-31) Namuci, it is said, married Suprabhā, the daughter of Swarbhānu; while the mighty Yayāti,* son of Nahuṣa (a human king), wedded Śarmiṣṭhā, the daughter of Vṛṣaparvā. (32) Now hear (the names) of the four daughters of Vaiśwānara (another son of Danu), who were (all) charming to look at, (viz.) Upadānavī, Hayaśīrā, Pulomā and Kālakā. (33) (Of these,) Hiranyākṣa† espoused Upadānavī; and Kratu, Hayaśīrā, O Parīkṣit! And urged by Brahmā (the creator), the glorious Kaśyapa (a lord of created beings) married the other two daughters of Vaiśwānara, (viz.) Pulomā and Kālakā. Of these (Pulomā and Kālakā), were born sixty thousand Dānavas (great grandsons of Danu), (known as) the Paulomas and Kālakeyas, who distinguished themselves in battle. When in heaven (on a friendly visit), your father's father (Arjuna), O Parīkṣit, slew them (all) single-handed in order to please Indra (the lord of paradise); inasmuch as they wrecked his sacrificial performances. (34—36) Vipracitti begot through (his wife) Śirṃhikā a hundred and one sons, the eldest of whom was Rāhu, who (along with his hundred brothers) attained (through divine grace) to the position of a Graha (the deity presiding over a planet), the other hundred being (called) the Ketūs. (37)

अथातः श्रूयतां वंशो योऽदितेरनुपूर्वशः । यत्र नारायणो देवः स्वांशेनावतरद् विभुः । ३८ ।
विवस्वानर्यमा पूषा त्वष्टाथ सविता भगः । धाता विधाता वरुणो मित्रः शक्र उरुक्रमः । ३९ ।
विवस्वतः श्राद्धदेवं संज्ञासूयत वै मनुम् । मिथुनं च महाभागा यमं देवं यमी तथा ।

सैव भूत्वाथ वडवा नासत्यौ सुषुवे भुवि । ४० ।

छाया शनैश्चरं लेभे सावर्णिं च मनुं ततः । कन्यां च तपतीं या वै वज्रे संवरणं पतिम् । ४१ ।
अर्यम्णो मातृका पत्नी तयोश्चर्षणयः सुताः । यत्र वै मानुषी जातिर्ब्रह्मणा चोपकल्पिता । ४२ ।
पूषानपत्यः पिष्टादो भग्नदन्तोऽभवत् पुरा । योऽसौ दक्षाय कुपितं जहास विवृतद्विजः । ४३ ।
त्वष्टुर्दैत्यानुजा भार्या रचना नाम कन्यका । संनिवेशस्तयोर्जज्ञे विश्वरूपश्च वीर्यवान् । ४४ ।
तं वज्रिरे सुरगणा स्वस्त्रीयं द्विषतामपि । विमतेन परित्यक्ता गुरुणाऽऽङ्गिरसेन यत् । ४५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे षष्ठोऽध्यायः । ६ ।

Now from this point onward hear (from me) in order of sequence (an account) of the race that proceeded from Aditi, in which the almighty Lord Nārāyaṇa Himself appeared by manifesting a part of His own Being (in the form of the divine Dwarf). (38) Vivaswān, Aryamā, Pūṣā, Twaṣṭā, Savitā, Bhaga, Dhātā, Vidhātā, Varuṇa, Mitra, Śakra (Indra) and Vāmana (who took colossal strides after assuming a cosmic form)—these are the (twelve) sons of Aditi (who preside over the sun one after another month by month). (39) The highly blessed Saṃjñā, a wife of Vivaswān, brought forth Śrāddhadeva, who rose to be the Manu (during the present Manvantara), and a son and daughter, born as twins, (viz.) the god Yama (the god of punishment) and Yamī (the deity presiding over the holy river Yamunā). Then appearing as (assuming the form of) a mare on earth, the same (celestial) lady gave birth to the twin born Aświnikumāras (the celestial physicians). (40) (His other wife) Chāyā (who was no other than a shadow of Saṃjñā) got through her husband (a couple of sons, named) Śanaīścara (the deity presiding over the planet Saturn) and Sāvārṇi (another prospective) Manu, as well as a daughter, Tapatī (by name), who indeed chose king Saṃvarāṇa for her husband. (41) Aryamā's wife was Mātṛkā and their sons were called the Carṣaṇis (because they were full of wisdom). It was after them (as endowed with a special aptitude for self-examination) that the human species was evolved by Brahmā (the creator). (42) Pūṣā (the third son of Aditi), who had his teeth broken of yore because he had shown his teeth and laughed at Rudra seeing him angry at Dakṣa (vide IV. v. 21) and consequently lived on flour (vide IV. vii. 4), remained without issue. (43) A girl, Racanā by name, who was a younger sister of the Daityas (the sons of Diti, whose account will follow in Discourse xviii below); became the wife of Twaṣṭā. Of the aforesaid couple, were born (two sons,) Sanniveśa and the powerful Viśwarūpa. (44) The hosts of gods (unanimously) chose Viśwarūpa for their preceptor—even though he was a nephew (sister's son) of their (sworn) enemies (the Daityas)—inasmuch as they had been deserted by their (own) teacher, the sage Bṛhaspati (son of Aṅgīrā), who was insulted by them. (45)

* Vide Discourse xviii of Book VIII.

† The story of Hiranyākṣa has already been told at length in Discourses xvii-xix of Book III.

Thus ends the sixth discourse, in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VII

Deserted by the sage Bṛhaspati, the god choose Viśwarūpa for their preceptor

राजोवाच

कस्य हेतोः परित्यक्ता आचार्येणात्मनः सुराः । एतदाचक्ष्व भगवच्छिष्याणामक्रमं गुरौ । १ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) said : For what reason were the gods forsaken by their own preceptor (the sage Bṛhaspati)? (Kindly tell me, O glorious sage, the transgression made by the disciples with respect to their preceptor, which brought matters to such a pass. (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इन्द्रस्त्रिभुवनैश्चर्यमदोल्लङ्घितसत्पथः । मरुद्भिर्वसुभी रुद्रैरादित्यैर्ऋभुभिर्नृप । २ ।
विश्वेदेवैश्च साध्यैश्च नासत्याभ्यां परिश्रितः । सिद्धचारणगन्धर्वैर्मुनिभिर्ब्रह्मवादिभिः । ३ ।
विद्याधराप्सरोभिश्च किन्नरैः पतंगोरगैः । निषेव्यमाणो मघवान् स्तूयमानश्च भारत । ४ ।
उपगीयमानो ललितमास्थानाध्यासनाश्रितः । पाण्डुरेणातपत्रेण चन्द्रमण्डलचारुणा । ५ ।
युक्तश्चान्यैः पारमेष्ठ्यैश्चामरव्यजनादिभिः । विराजमानः पौलोम्या सहाध्यासनया भृशम् । ६ ।
स यदा परमाचार्यं देवानामात्मनश्च ह । नाभ्यनन्दत संप्राप्तं प्रत्युत्थानासनादिभिः । ७ ।
वाचस्पतिं मुनिवरं सुरासुरनमस्कृतम् । नोच्चालासनादिन्द्रः पश्यन्नपि सभागतम् । ८ ।
ततो निर्गत्य सहसा कविराङ्गिरसः प्रभुः । आचयौ स्वगृहं तूष्णीं विद्वान् श्रीमदविक्रियाम् । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Indra, who had transgressed the path frequented by the virtuous through arrogance caused by the lordship of the worlds, O king (Parīkṣit), was (one day) seated on the throne in his court, surrounded by the Maruts (the forty-nine wind-gods), the (eight) Vasus, the (eleven) Rudras, the (other) Ādityas (sons of Aditi), (the classes of gods known as) the Ṛbhus, the Viśwedevas and the Sādhyas, as well as by the (twin-born) Aświnīkumāras (the celestial physicians). The (great) Maghavā (another name of Indra) was being waited upon and extolled. O Parīkṣit (a descendant of Bharata), by the Siddhas, Cāraṇas, Gandharvas, sages who were (great) expositors of the Vedas, as well as by the Vidyādhara (celestial artistes) and Apsarās (celestial nymphs), Kinnaras (another class of celestial musicians), birds and Nāgas (serpent-demons) and his praises were being sweetly sung. (Duly) provided with a white (royal) umbrella, charming as the orb of the moon, and other insignia of supreme royalty such as chowries and fans, he shone most splendid with (his spouse) Śacī (the daughter of Pulomā), who shared the throne with him. (2—6) When, as would appear from the following account, he did not welcome—by rising (from his throne), offering a seat and other (appropriate) honours—the chief preceptor of (all) the gods including himself, Brhaspati, the foremost of sages, adored (alike) by the gods as well as the demons, as he came in, nay, (when) Indra did not stir from his seat even on seeing the sage (actually) present in the court, the enlightened sage, a (worthy) son of Aṅgīrā, went out of the court at once and quietly returned to his own residence, though powerful (enough to correct his disciple), (fully) aware of the aberration brought about by pride of affluence and power. (7—9)

तर्होव प्रतिबुद्ध्येन्द्रो गुरुहेलनमात्मनः । गर्हयामास सदसि स्वयमात्मानमात्मना । १० ।
 अहो बत ममासाधु कृतं वै दभ्रबुद्धिना । यन्मयैश्वर्यमत्तेन गुरुः सदसि कात्कृतः । ११ ।
 को गृध्येत् पण्डितो लक्ष्मीं त्रिविष्टपपतेरपि । ययाहमासुरं भावं नीतोऽद्य विबुधेश्वरः । १२ ।
 ये पारमेष्ठ्यं धिषणमधितिष्ठन् न कञ्चन । प्रत्युत्तिष्ठेदिति ब्रूयुर्धर्म ते न परं विदुः । १३ ।
 तेषां कुपथदेष्टृणां पततां तमसि ह्यधः । ये श्रद्धयुर्वचस्ते वै मज्जन्त्यश्मप्लवा इव । १४ ।
 अथाहममराचार्यमगाधधिषणं द्विजम् । प्रसादयिष्ये निशठः शीर्ष्णां तच्छरणं स्पृशन् । १५ ।

Realizing that very moment the disrespect shown by him towards his preceptor, Indra spontaneously himself reproached his own self in the court (in the following words):—(10) "Oh, my conduct has been deplorably unrighteous in that the preceptor was slighted in (open) court by me, a creature of poor wits indeed and maddened by power and opulence. (11) What prudent person will covet the fortune even of the lord of paradise, by which I, the ruler of the gods (who are predominantly Sāttvika by nature), have been dragged into (the slough of) egotism (a demoniac propensity)! (12) They do not know the highest (standard of) morality who declare that one occupying the throne of a suzerain lord should not rise (from one's seat) to receive anybody. (13) They that believe the words of the aforesaid misleading guides—who undoubtedly (themselves) fall down into the dark regions of hell—surely sink (into the abysmal depths of hell) like those embarking on a ship of rock. (14) Guilelessly touching his feet with my head (therefore), I shall presently propitiate the (kind-hearted) Brāhmaṇa, the preceptor of (all) the gods, who is endowed with fathomless intelligence. (15)

एवं चिन्तयतस्तस्य मयोनो भगवान् गृहात् । बृहस्पतिर्गतोऽदृष्टां गतिमध्यात्ममायया । १६ ।
 गुरोर्नार्थिगतः संज्ञां परीक्षन् भगवान् स्वराट् । ध्यायन् धिया सुरैर्युक्तः शर्म नालभतात्मनः । १७ ।
 तच्छ्रुत्वासुराः सर्व आश्रित्यौशनसं मतम् । देवान् प्रत्युद्यमं चक्रुर्दुर्मदा आततायिनः । १८ ।
 तैर्विसृष्टेषुभिस्तीक्ष्णैर्निर्भिन्नाङ्गोरुबाहवः । ब्रह्माणं शरणं जग्मुः सहेन्द्रा नतकन्धराः । १९ ।
 तांस्तथाभ्यर्दितान् वीक्ष्य भगवानात्मभूरजः । कृपया परया देव उवाच परिसान्त्वयन् । २० ।

While Indra was pondering thus (even at the court), the all-wise Brhaspati (who knew what was going on in Indra's mind as well as what was in store for him) disappeared from his house by dint of his extraordinary Yogic power. (16) Getting no clue to the whereabouts of his preceptor, though looking for him all round, the glorious Indra reflected by force of reason (how to get the better of his powerful enemies, the demon hosts, in the absence of a wise counsellor), but felt no peace of mind, though united with (closely and devotedly followed by) the gods. (17) As soon as they heard of it (the weakness of Indra) the haughty demons all took up arms and made preparations for war against the gods, following the advice of the sage Śukrācārya (their wise preceptor). (18) With their (foremost) limbs (heads), thighs and arms torn asunder by the sharp-pointed arrows discharged by the demons, the gods, led by Indra, approached Brahmā (the creator) for protection, their heads bent low (with humiliation). (19) Seeing them afflicted on all sides in this way, the glorious and birthless god Brahmā (the self-born) was moved with supreme compassion and spoke comfortingly (as follows): (20)

ब्रह्मोवाच

अहो बत सुरश्रेष्ठा ह्यभद्रं वः कृतं महत् । ब्रह्मिष्ठं ब्राह्मणं दान्तमैश्वर्यान्नाभ्यनन्दत । २१ ।
तस्यायमनयस्यासीत् परेभ्यो वः पराभवः । प्रक्षीणेभ्यः स्ववैरिभ्यः समृद्धानां च यत् सुराः । २२ ।
मघवन् द्विषतः पश्य प्रक्षीणान् गुर्वतिक्रमात् । सम्प्रत्युपचितान् भूयः काव्यमाराध्य भक्तितः ।

आददीरन् निलयनं ममापि भृगुदेवताः । २३ ।

त्रिविष्टपं किं गणयन्त्यभेद्यमन्त्रा भृगूणामनुशिक्षितार्थाः ।
न विप्रगोविन्दगवीश्वराणां भवन्त्यभद्राणि नरेश्वराणाम् । २४ ।
तद् विश्वरूपं भजताशु विप्रं तपस्विनं त्वाष्ट्रमथात्मवन्तम् ।
सभाजितोऽर्थान् स विधास्यते वो यदि क्षमिष्यध्वमुतास्य कर्म । २५ ।

Brahmā said : Alas ! your conduct has really been most unwelcome, O jewels among gods, in that, proud of power and pelf, you did not welcome a Brāhmaṇa who had not only disciplined his self but who had (also) realized (his identity with) Brahma (the Absolute)! (21) It was the fruit of that misbehaviour (on your part) that you suffered defeat at the hands of others (the demons)—who are your (sworn) enemies and had grown very weak—in spite of your being rich and powerful, O gods ! (22) O Indra, look at your enemies, who had (once) grown extremely weak because of the disrespect (shown by them) to their preceptor (Śukrācārya) but who have now gained in strength again by propitiating the sage Kāvya (Śukrācārya) through (their) devotion. (Nay,) devoted as they are to Śukra (a scion of the celebrated sage Bhṛgu), they may (one day) take possession of even my abode (Brahmaloka)! (23) Treasuring the precepts of the Bhṛgus (Śukrācārya and others) as their (only) wealth and their secrets being impenetrable, they hold (the dominion of) heaven as of no account (easy to acquire). (As a matter of fact,) no evil can (ever) befall the kings who look upon the Brāhmaṇas, Lord Viṣṇu (the Protector of cows) and the cows as their masters (Protectors). (24) Therefore, immediately resort (for protection) to Viśvarūpa—son of the god Twaṣṭā—a Brāhmaṇa given to austerities and self-controlled. Treated with respect (by you), he will (surely) accomplish your ends provided, of course, you tolerate what he does (his partiality towards the demons, with whom he is connected by blood on the maternal side—vide, VI. vi. 44). (25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

त एवमुदिता राजन् ब्रह्मणा विगतज्वराः । ऋषिं त्वाष्ट्रमुपब्रज्य परिष्वज्येदमब्रुवन् । २६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus spoken to by Brahmā (the creator), and relieved of (their) anxiety, O king, the gods approached Viśvarūpa (son of Twaṣṭā), the seer, and, embracing him (as a younger kinsman), spoke (as follows). (26)

देवा ऊचुः

वयं तेऽतिथयः प्राप्ता आश्रमं भद्रमस्तु ते । कामः सम्पाद्यतां तात पितृणां समयोचितः । २७ ।

पुत्राणां हि परो धर्मः पितृशुश्रूषणं सताम् । अपि पुत्रवतां ब्रह्मन् किमुत ब्रह्मचारिणाम् । २८ ।
 आचार्यो ब्रह्मणो मूर्तिः पिता मूर्तिः प्रजापतेः । भ्राता मरुत्पतेर्मूर्तिर्माता साक्षात् क्षितेस्तनुः । २९ ।
 दयाया भगिनी मूर्तिर्धर्मस्यात्मातिथिः स्वयम् । अग्रेरभ्यागतो मूर्तिः सर्वभूतानि चात्मनः । ३० ।
 तस्मात् पितृणामातानामार्तिं परपराभवम् । तपसापनयंस्तात सन्देशं कर्तुमर्हसि । ३१ ।
 वृणीमहे त्वोपाध्यायं ब्रह्मिष्ठं ब्राह्मणं गुरुम् । यथाञ्जसा विजेष्यामः सपत्न्यांस्तव तेजसा । ३२ ।
 न गर्हयन्ति हृथेषु यविष्ठाङ्घ्र्यभिवादनम् । छन्दोभ्योऽन्यत्र न ब्रह्मन् वयो ज्यैष्ठ्यस्य कारणम् । ३३ ।

The gods said : We have called at your hermitage as unexpected visitors (deserving your kind attention); may all be well with you. (Now) be pleased, dear son, to fulfil the timely wishes of your uncles (ourselves). (27) Indeed service of parents is the highest duty of virtuous sons—even of those that have been blessed with sons. O holy Brāhmaṇa, much more of celibates. (28) A preceptor (who invests one with the sacred thread and teaches the Vedas) is Veda incarnate; a father (or uncle) is an image of Brahmā (the lord of creation); a brother is an effigy of Indra (the chief of the gods); (and) a mother is a direct incarnation of the goddess Earth. (29) A sister is an embodiment of tenderness; an unexpected visitor is the very incarnation of virtue; a guest is an incarnation of the sacred fire and all living beings are embodiments of the (supreme) Self (Lord Viṣṇu). (30) Therefore, getting rid, by virtue of your asceticism, of the affliction of your parents in the shape of their discomfiture at the hands of their enemies, O dear child, you ought to do our bidding. (31) We choose you, a Brāhmaṇa established in (identity with) Brahma and (therefore) worthy of adoration (for all), as our preceptor, so that we may easily and fully conquer our enemies through your (spiritual) glory. (32) Indeed, as a means of accomplishing one's ends, the wise do not condemn the act of bowing at the feet of the younger. Setting aside (the knowledge of) the Vedas, O (holy) Brāhmaṇa, (mere) age is no criterion of seniority. (33)

ऋषिरुवाच

अभ्यर्थितः सुरगणैः पौरोहित्ये महातपाः । स विश्वरूपस्तानाह प्रसन्नः श्लक्ष्णया गिरा । ३४ ।

The sage (Śrī Śuka) went on : (Thus) importuned by the hosts of gods to accept the office of their priest, the said Viśvarūpa, (who was) a great ascetic, felt delighted and replied to them in soft words (as follows). (34)

विश्वरूप उवाच

विगर्हितं धर्मशीलैर्ब्रह्मवर्च उपव्ययम् । कथं नु मद्विधो नाथा लोकेशैरभियाचितम् ।

प्रत्याख्यास्यति तच्छिष्यः स एव स्वार्थं उच्यते । ३५ ।

अकिञ्चनानां हि धनं शिलोज्जनं तेनेह निर्वर्तितसाधुसत्क्रियः ।

कथं विगर्हं नु करोम्यधीश्वराः पौरोधसं हृष्यति येन दुर्मतिः । ३६ ।

तथापि न प्रतिब्रूयां गुरुभिः प्रार्थितं कियत् । भवतां प्रार्थितं सर्वं प्राणैरर्थैश्च साधये । ३७ ।

Viśvarūpa said : Priesthood has been condemned by the virtuous as involving the loss of the spiritual glory investing a Brāhmaṇa. Yet how shall a person like me, O masters, (venture to) turn down the solicitation of guardians of the spheres (like you), by whom he deserves to be commanded; for obedience alone is declared (in the scriptures) as conducive to his good. (35) Śīla (gleaning grains left in a field after reaping the harvest) and Uñchana (picking up grains lying scattered in a market-place after the piles have been removed from there) are the (only) wealth* of the destitute (Brāhmaṇas). (All) acts (such as pouring oblations into the sacred fire and feeding an unexpected visitor), appropriate to noble souls

* Śīla and Uñchana have been glorified in our scriptures as the best means of livelihood for a Brāhmaṇa.

being accomplished in this household life by me with the aforesaid means, how shall I take, O suzerain lords, to the reproachable vocation of a priest, with which a fool alone remains pleased. (36) Yet I dare not decline what is earnestly asked for by you (my elders), which is of no account. (On the other hand,) I shall (presently) accomplish all that you have solicited, even at the sacrifice of my life and my (highest) interests. (37)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तेभ्य एवं प्रतिश्रुत्य विश्वरूपो महातपाः । पौरोहित्यं वृतश्चक्रे परमेण समाधिना । ३८ ।

सुरद्विषां श्रियं गुप्तामौशनस्यापि विद्यया । आच्छिद्यादान्महेन्द्राय वैष्णव्या विद्यया विभुः । ३९ ।

यया गुप्तः सहस्राक्षो जिग्येऽसुरचमूर्विभुः । तां प्राह स महेन्द्राय विश्वरूप उदारधीः । ४० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे सप्तमोऽध्यायः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Having thus promised them (the gods), Viśwarūpa, (who was) a great ascetic, discharged, as requested, the role of a priest with supreme diligence. (38) Viśwarūpa (who wielded extraordinary power by virtue of the Lord's grace) snatched, by means of a prayer addressed to Lord Viṣṇu (in the form of what is known as the Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca and stands incorporated in Discourse viii below), the fortune of the Asuras (the enemies of the gods)—though protected by means of the prayer taught by Uśanā (Śukrācārya)—and restored it to the great Indra (the lord of paradise). (39) The said Viśwarūpa, noble-minded as he was, taught to the great Indra the above-mentioned prayer, protected by which that mighty god with a thousand eyes was able to conquer the demon hosts. (40)

Thus ends the seventh discourse, in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

The text of the (holy) Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca (a prayer invoking the protection of Lord Nārāyaṇa) taught (to Indra)

राजोवाच

यया गुप्तः सहस्राक्षः सवाहान् रिपुसैनिकान् । क्रीडन्निव विनिर्जित्य त्रिलोक्या बुभुजे श्रियम् । १ ।

भगवंस्तन्ममाख्याहि वर्म नारायणात्मकम् । यथाऽऽततायिनः शत्रून् येन गुप्तोऽजयन्मुधे । २ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : O divine sage, teach me that prayer (serving as a protective armour against all evils and) invoking the succour of Lord Nārāyaṇa (hence spoken of as identical with Him, there being perfect identity between God and the means of realizing Him), protected by which Indra (who is endowed with a thousand eyes) thoroughly and entirely subdued as though in sport the enemy's troops along with their mounts and enjoyed the fortune of all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region); and (further) tell me how, protected by that armour, he was able to conquer the enemies who came to take his life on the field of battle. (1-2)

श्रीशुक उवाच

वृतः पुरोहितस्त्वाष्ट्रो महेन्द्रायानुपृच्छते । नारायणाख्यं वर्माह तदिहैकमनाः शृणु । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Appointed as a priest, Viśwarūpa (son of Twaṣṭā) taught the Kavaca (prayer serving as a protection), named after Lord Nārāyaṇa, to the great Indra, who had inquired about it. Listen to it with undivided attention on this occasion. (3)

विश्वरूप उवाच

धौताङ्घ्रिपाणिराचम्य सपवित्र उदङ्मुखः । कृतस्वाङ्गकरन्यासो मन्त्राभ्यां वाग्यतः शुचिः । ४ ।

नारायणमयं वर्म सन्नह्येद् भय आगते । पादयोजानुनोरुर्वोरुदरे हृद्यथोरसि । ५ ।

मुखे शिरस्यानुपूर्व्यादोङ्कारादीनि विन्यसेत् । ॐ नमो नारायणायेति विपर्ययमथापि वा । ६ ।

करन्यासं ततः कुर्याद् द्वादशाक्षरविद्यया । प्रणवादियकारान्तमङ्गुल्यङ्गुष्ठपर्वसु । ७ ।

न्यसेद्धृदय ओङ्कारं विकारमनु मूर्धनि । षकारं तु भ्रुवोर्मध्ये णकारं शिखया दिशेत् । ८ ।

वेकारं नेत्रयोर्युज्यान्नकारं सर्वसन्धिषु । मकारमस्त्रमुद्दिश्य मन्त्रमूर्तिर्भवेद् बुधः । ९ ।

सविसर्गं फडन्तं तत् सर्वदिक्षु विनिर्दिशेत् । ॐ विष्णवे नम इति । १० ।

आत्मानं परमं ध्यायेद् ध्येयं षट्शक्तिभिर्युतम् । विद्यातेजस्तपोमूर्तिमिमं मन्त्रमुदाहरेत् । ११ ।

Viśwarūpa began : In the face of danger, a devotee who has finished his bath and other purificatory rites (such as Sandhyā) should wash his hands and feet, (thrice) sip a little water (with the Lord's names Keśava, Nārāyaṇa and Mādhava on his lips) and, (thus) purified, squat (on a proper seat) with his face (turned) towards the north and wearing a ring of the sacred Kuśa grass (on the ring finger of each hand). (And) after silently performing (what is known as) the Nyāsa (consecration or spiritualization) of the (various) members of his body and hands with the two Mantras (sacred formulas mentioned hereafter), he should arm himself with the protective covering (in the shape of the following prayer) sacred to Lord Nārāyaṇa. (To commence the rite of Nyāsa or consecration) he should (first of all mentally) locate the syllables of the (eight-syllabled Mantra) "OM̐ Namo Nārāyaṇāya"—OM̐ and so on—in order of sequence in his feet, knee-joints, thighs, belly, region of the heart, chest, mouth and (crown of) the head (thus identifying his body with the Mantra and thereby spiritualizing it and making it fit for putting on the divine armour), or even in the reverse order (known as the Saṁhāra-Nyāsa, as opposed to the Utpatti-Nyāsa, placing the syllables 'YA' and so on—followed by an Anuswāra or nasal sound represented by the letter 'm'—in his head, mouth etc.). (4—6) Thereafter he should perform the Karanyāsa (consecration or spiritualization of the parts of both his hands) with the twelve-syllabled Mantra (OM̐ Namo Bhagavate Vāsudevāya), locating the syllables beginning with OM̐ and ending with 'YA' in his (eight) fingers and (upper and lower) thumb-joints. (7) (Thirdly) he should place the (first) syllable 'OM̐' of the following Mantra "OM̐ Viṣṇave Namaḥ" in his heart, then 'Vi' (the first letter of the second syllable) in the crown of his head, and 'Ṣ' (the second letter of the same syllable) in the middle of his eye-brows, and the (third) syllable 'Na' in the Śikhāṇ (the tuft of hair more or less in the rear of the crown). (8) He should (mentally) unite (identify) the (fourth) syllable 'Ve' with his eyes and the (fifth) syllable 'Na' with all the joints (of his body). Then putting the (last) syllable 'Ma'—followed by a Visarga (a distinct hard aspiration, represented by the letter 'h') and the interjection 'Phaṭ'—to the use of driving away evil spirits, he should assign it to all the (ten) directions (in order to block them against the inroads of evil spirits and demons etc., repeating the formula "Maḥ Astrāya Phaṭ" and snapping the thumb and the middle finger together successively in each direction sought to be so blocked). (In this way) the wise devotee becomes a (very) embodiment (as it were) of the Mantra. (9-10) He should (then) visualize himself as (one with) the Supreme Self, possessed of six divine attributes (viz., power, virtue, fame, affluence, wisdom and aversion to the pleasures of sense, each in its fullest measure), the object of his meditation, manifested in the form of learning, glory and asceticism, and repeat the following prayer:—(11)

ॐ हरिर्विदध्यान्मम सर्वरक्षां न्यस्ताङ्घ्रिपद्मः पतगेन्द्रपृष्ठे ।
 दारारिचर्मासिगदेषुचापपाशान् दधानोऽष्टगुणोऽष्टबाहुः । १२ ।
 जलेषु मां रक्षतु मत्स्यमूर्तिर्यादोगणेभ्यो वरुणस्य पाशात् ।
 स्थलेषु मायावदुवामनोऽव्यात् त्रिविक्रमः खेऽवतु विश्वरूपः । १३ ।
 दुर्गेष्वटव्याजिमुखादिषु प्रभुः पायान्नसिंहोऽसुरयूथपारिः ।
 विमुञ्चतो यस्य महादृहासं दिशो विनेदुर्न्यपतंश्च गर्भाः । १४ ।
 रक्षत्वसौ माध्वनि यज्ञकल्पः स्वदंष्ट्रयोन्नीतधरो वराहः ।
 रामोऽद्रिकूटेष्वथ विप्रवासे सलक्ष्मणोऽव्याद् भरताग्रजोऽस्मान् । १५ ।
 मामुग्रधर्मादखिलात् प्रमदान्नारायणः पातु नरश्च हासात् ।
 दत्तस्त्वयोगादथ योगनाथः पायाद् गुणेशः कपिलः कर्मबन्धात् । १६ ।
 सनत्कुमारोऽवतु कामदेवाद्धयशीर्षा मां पथि देवहेलनात् ।
 देवर्षिवर्यः पुरुषार्चनान्तरात् कूर्मो हरिर्मां निरयादशेषात् । १७ ।
 धन्वन्तरिर्भगवान् पात्वपथ्याद् द्वन्द्वाद् भयादृषभो निर्जितात्मा ।
 यज्ञश्च लोकादवताजनान्ताद् बलो गणात् क्रोधवशादहीन्द्रः । १८ ।
 द्वैपायनो भगवान्प्रबोधाद् बुद्धस्तु पाखण्डगणात् प्रमादात् ।
 कल्किः कलेः कालमलात् प्रपातु धर्मावनायोऽरूक्तावतारः । १९ ।
 मां केशवो गदया प्रातरव्याद् गोविन्द आसङ्गवमात्तवेणुः ।
 नारायणः प्राह्ण उदात्तशक्तिर्मध्यन्दिने विष्णुररीन्द्रपाणिः । २० ।
 देवोऽपराह्णे मधुहोयग्रन्वा सायं त्रिधामावतु माधवो माम् ।
 दोषे हृषीकेश उतार्धरात्रे निशीथ एकोऽवतु पद्मनाभः । २१ ।
 श्रीवत्सधामापररात्र ईशः प्रत्यूष ईशोऽसिधरो जनार्दनः ।
 दामोदरोऽव्यादनुसन्ध्यं प्रभाते विश्वेश्वरो भगवान् कालमूर्तिः । २२ ।

"May Śrī Hari, denoted by (the mystical syllable) OM, afford me protection on all sides as well as from all dangers—Śrī Hari, who has His lotus-feet placed on the back of Garuḍa (the king of the birds), nay, who wields in His eight arms (hands) a conch, discus (lit., that which is provided with a number of spokes), shield, sword, mace, arrow, bow and noose and who is (naturally) possessed of the eight mystic powers (the faculty of assuming an atomic form and so on). (12) (Appearing) in the form of the divine Fish, may He protect me in water from the (various) species of aquatic creatures, representing the noose of Varuṇa (the god of water). May He, who appeared of His own will in the form of a religious student, dwarfish in stature, guard me on land; and may the same Lord, appearing in His cosmic form as Trivikrama (He who measured the entire universe in less than three paces) guard me in the air. (13) May the almighty Lord Nṛsimha (who appeared in a queer form, half man and half lion), the Slayer of Hiranyakaśipu (the leader of the demon hosts), protect me in places full of danger, such as a forest (infested with wild beasts etc.) and the fore-front of a battle—Lord Nṛsiṁha at whose tremendous peals of laughter, when He raised them, the quarters violently echoed and embryos were discharged (from the wombs of Asura women). (14) May the celebrated divine Boar, in whose (sacred) person the (various) sacrifices stand represented, and who lifted up the earth on His tusk, protect me on the road, May Rāma (Lord Paraśurāma) guard up on mountain-peaks and may Śrī Rāma (the elder brother of Bharata), accompanied by (His still younger brother) Lakṣmaṇa, protect us (when we are) away from home. (15) May (the divine sage) Nārāyaṇa keep me aloof from violent religious practices (such as the employment of spells for malevolent purposes) and all (sins of) omission; and the sage Nara, from pride. May Datta (Lord Dattātreya), the Master of Yoga, guard me against (the risk of) abandoning the practice of Yoga and may Lord Kapila, the Lord of Prakṛti (consisting of the three Guṇas), save me from the bondage of actions (prompted by the aforesaid three Guṇas). (16) May (the divine sage) Sanatkumāra guard me against (the shafts of) Love; Lord Hayagrīva (having the head of a horse), from (the sin of) neglecting (omitting to salute) the (images of) gods met with on the way; Nārada (the foremost of celestial sages), against drawbacks in the worship of the Deity (in the shape of the thirty-two transgressions* enumerated in the works on Devotion); and may Śrī Hari manifested as the divine Tortoise keep me away from every description of hell. (17) May Lord Dhanwantari guard me against unwholesome diet and Lord Ṛṣabhadeva, whose mind is perfectly subdued, from the fear of the pairs of opposites. Again, may Lord Yajña save me from public scandal; Lord Balarāma (the elder Brother of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), from death at the hands of a human being and Śeṣa (the lord of serpents), from (the clutches of) the class of serpents known as the Krodhavaśas. (18) May Lord Dwaipāyana (the divine sage Vedavyāsa, so-called because He was born in an island) guard me against ignorance and Lord Buddha, against heretical creeds and neglect of duties. (And) may Lord Kalki, who assumed that glorious manifestation for the preservation of righteousness protect me from (the impurities of) the Kali age, the refuse (dirtiest period) of time. (19) May Lord Keśava (the Supreme Deity the Ruler of even Brahmā and Śiva) protect me with His mace in the morning (the first of the six divisions of the day, each consisting of two hours); Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows), who holds a flute (in His hand), through the Saṅgava hours (the second part of the day); Lord Nārāyaṇa (who has His abode in water and who wield an uplifted javelin), in the forenoon and (the all-pervading) Lord Viṣṇu, carrying Sudarśana (the chief of all discuses) in His hand, at midday. (20) May Lord Madhusūdana (the Slayer of the demon Madhu), who wields a terrible bow, protect me in the afternoon and Lord Mādhava (the

* The thirty-two transgressions to which a worshipper of the Deity is liable are as follows:—(1) To ride into the premises sacred to a deity or to enter a place of worship (even) with wooden sandals under one's feet; (2) failure to celebrate or attend (when invited) sacred festivals such as the Rathayātrā (conducting the Deity in a festive procession on a chariot on the day appointed for the same). Janmāṣṭamī (the Birthday of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and so on; (3) failure to salute an image of the Deity after beholding it; (4) to visit a temple in an impure state; (5) to salute the Deity by raising only one hand; (6) to go on walking round the Lord without pausing a while before Him after every full round, or merely walking round in front of the Lord; (7) to squat with one's legs stretched in front of the Deity; (8) to squat with one's knees up and encircled by one's arms before the Deity; (9) to lie down before the Lord; (10) to dine before the Deity; (11) to tell a lie before the Deity; (12) to speak loudly before the Deity; (13) to talk with another before the Deity; (14) to exclaim in front of the Lord; (15) to quarrel in front of the Deity; (16) to torment another before the Lord; (17) to bless another before the Deity; (18) to speak harsh words to another before the Deity; (19) to cover oneself all over with a blanket before the Deity; (20) to revile another before the Deity; (21) to extol another before the Deity; (22) to utter indecent words before the Deity; (23) to fast before the Deity; (24) to worship the Lord with ordinary materials even when one can afford to offer Him more valuable articles; (25) to eat or drink anything that has not been offered to the Deity; (26) failure to offer to the Lord a fruit peculiar to the season before giving it to anyone else; (27) to offer some fruit or vegetable with its front part removed from it for being cooked as food for the use of the Deity; (28) to sit with one's back over against the Deity; (29) to salute anyone else before the Deity; (30) failure to greet one's preceptor, enquire after his health and extol him; (31) to indulge in self-praise and (32) to revile any Deity whatsoever.

Spouse of Goddess Lakṣmī) manifested in three glorious forms (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva), at dusk. May Lord Hṛṣikeśa guard me in the first part of the night (and) Lord Padmanābha (who has a lotus spring from His navel), alone, during the second part (till midnight) as well as at midnight (during the third part). (21) May the Lord bearing the mark of Śrīvatsa (a white curl of hair representing the foot-print of the sage Bhṛgu) on His chest, protect me in the latter (fourth) part of the night; Lord Janārdana (who is supplicated by men), carrying a sword (in His hand), at the close (during the fifth part) of the night; Dāmodara (Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa as bound at the waist with a string to a wooden mortar used for threshing paddy etc.), by mother Yaśodā as a punishment for His childish pranks), at dawn and Lord Viśveśwara (the Ruler of the universe), manifested as the Time-Spirit (or Death), during both twilights (morning and evening). (22)

चक्रं युगान्तानलतिग्मनेमि भ्रमत् समन्ताद् भगवत्प्रयुक्तम् ।
 दन्दग्धि दन्दग्धरिसैन्यमाशु कक्षं यथा वातसखो हुताशः । २३ ।
 गदेऽशनिस्पर्शनविस्फुलिङ्गे निष्पिण्ड निष्पिण्ड्यजितप्रियासि ।
 कूष्माण्डवैनायकयक्षरक्षोभूतग्रहांश्चूर्णय चूर्णयारीन् । २४ ।
 त्वं यातुधानप्रमथप्रेतमातृपिशाचविप्रग्रहघोरदृष्टीन् ।
 दरेन्द्र विद्रावय कृष्णपूरितो भीमस्वनोऽरेर्हृदयानि कम्पयन् । २५ ।
 त्वं तिग्मधारासिवरारिसैन्यमीशप्रयुक्तो मम छिन्धि छिन्धि ।
 चक्षुषि चर्मञ्छतचन्द्र छादय द्विषामघोनां हर पापचक्षुषाम् । २६ ।

(Addressing Sudarśana, a divine attendant of Lord Viṣṇu, who when commanded by Him, assumes the form of a discus and is employed by Him in destroying His adversaries or the enemies of His devotees,) Revolving all round, (when) hurled by the Lord in the form of a discus with a rim fierce as the fire raging at the time of universal dissolution, (pray,) completely burn, (O) completely burn (my) enemy's host at once, (even) as fire helped by the wind consumes (a pile of) hay. (23) (Similarly addressing the Lord's mace, Kaumodakī in living form,) Beloved as You are of the invincible Lord (whose servant I am), and sending forth sparks whose impact is as deadly as that of a thunderbolt, O mace, (pray), thoroughly crush, (O) completely pound the Kūṣmāṇḍas (a class of imps), Vaināyakas (a class of malevolent demigods who are living obstacles to all noble and benevolent undertakings), Yakṣas (a species of ghosts), Rākṣasas (ogres), Bhūtas (ghosts) and Grahas (a class of evil demons who seize upon children); and pulverize, (O) crumble to dust, (my) adversaries. (24) (Addressing the conch of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, named Pāñcajanya,) Blown by Śrī Kṛṣṇa and shaking the hearts of (my) foes with your terrific blast, O lord of conches, may You (be pleased to) drive away the Yātudhānas (ogres), Pramathas (a class of attendants of Lord Śiva), evil spirits, Mātṛkās (female imps posing as mothers), goblins, Brahmarākṣasas* (the ghosts of Brāhmaṇas who in their lifetime carry away the wives of others and the property of a Brāhmaṇa) and other evil-eyed spirits. (25) Directed by the Lord, O sharp-edged Nandaka (the foremost of all swords), may you (be pleased to) cut down, O mow down, my enemies' host. (Pray,) cover the eyes of (my) wicked foes, O shield with a hundred moon-like buttons! and blind the eyes of the evil-eyed. (26)

यन्नो भयं ग्रहेभ्योऽभूत् केतुभ्यो नृभ्य एव च । सरीसृपेभ्यो दंष्ट्रिभ्यो भूतेभ्योऽहोभ्य एव वा । २७ ।
 सर्वाण्येतानि भगवन्नामरूपास्त्रकीर्तनात् । प्रयान्तु संक्षयं सद्यो ये नः श्रेयःप्रतीपकाः । २८ ।

* परस्य योषितं हत्वा ब्रह्मस्वम्पहत्य च । अरण्ये निजले देशे भवति ब्रह्मराक्षसः ॥

Also cf. Manusmṛiti XII.60.

(Yājñavalkya-Smṛiti III. 212)

गरुडो भगवान् स्तोत्रस्तोभश्छन्दोमयः प्रभुः । रक्षत्वशेषकृच्छ्रेभ्यो विष्वक्सेनः स्वनामभिः । २९ ।
 सर्वापद्भ्यो हरेर्नामरूपयानायुधानि नः । बुद्धीन्द्रियमनःप्राणान् पातु पार्षदभूषणाः । ३० ।
 यथा हि भगवानेव वस्तुतः सदसच्च यत् । सत्येनानेन नः सर्वे यान्तु नाशमुपद्रवाः । ३१ ।
 यथैकात्म्यानुभावानां विकल्परहितः स्वयम् । भूषणायुधलिङ्गाख्या धत्ते शक्तीः स्वमायया । ३२ ।
 तेनैव सत्यमानेन सर्वज्ञो भगवान् हरिः । पातु सर्वैः स्वरूपैर्नः सदा सर्वत्र सर्वगः । ३३ ।
 विदिक्षु दिक्षूर्ध्वमधः समन्तादन्तर्बहिर्भगवान् नारसिंहः ।
 प्रहापयँल्लोकभयं स्वनेन स्वतेजसा ग्रस्तसमस्ततेजाः । ३४ ।

From whatever evil spirits, comets and even men, reptiles and other biting (carnivorous) animals, ghosts or even sins we have had fear, all these and whoever (else) have stood in the way of our welfare may go to complete destruction through the (mere) utterance of the (infallible) weapon of the Divine Name. (27-28) May the glorious and mighty Garuḍa, who is extolled through hymns (of the Sāmaveda, such as the Brhad and Rathantara), nay, who is Veda personified, and (even so) Viṣwakṣena (one of the principal attendants of the Lord) protect me from all dangers with their (very) names. (29) May (all) the names and forms and weapons of Śrī Hari, and whoever carries Him on his back, protect us from all adversities and may the foremost of His attendants guard our intellect, Indriyas (the senses of perception as well as the organs of action), mind and life (itself). (30) "Even as, really speaking, it is the Lord alone who constitutes whatever there is with form and without form, may all our troubles come to an end as a corollary to this truth (since this prayer too is inspired by the Lord and must therefore turn out to be an accomplished fact.) (31) (Nay,) even as the Lord, though undifferentiated in the eye of those who have realized their identity with Him, Himself acquires by (dint of) His own Māyā (creative energy) potencies (of various kinds) as well as forms and names, jewels and weapons, may the same omniscient and all-pervading Lord Śrī Hari protect us on the strength of this very fact by all His manifestations at every place and time. (32-33) (Finally) may Lord Narasimha (the divine Man-Lion) defend us in (all) the quarters as well as in the intervening corners, above and below and all round, inside as well as outside, dispelling the fear of (all) His people (devotees) by His roar and having eclipsed all luminaries by His own (all-absorbing) effulgence." (34)

मघवन्निदमाख्यातं वर्म नारायणात्मकम् । विजेष्यस्यञ्जसा येन दंशितोऽसुरयूथपान् । ३५ ।
 एतद् धारयमाणस्तु यं यं पश्यति चक्षुषा । पदा वा संस्पृशेत् सद्यः साध्वसात् स विमुच्यते । ३६ ।
 न कुतश्चिद् भयं तस्य विद्यां धारयतो भवेत् । राजदस्युग्रहादिभ्यो व्याघ्रादिभ्यश्च कर्हिचित् । ३७ ।
 इमां विद्यां पुरा कश्चित् कौशिको धारयन् द्विजः । योगधारणया स्वाङ्गं जहौ स मरुधन्वनि । ३८ ।
 तस्योपरि विमानेन गन्धर्वपतिरेकदा । ययौ चित्ररथः स्त्रीभिर्वृतो यत्र द्विजक्षयः । ३९ ।
 गगनात्र्यपतत् सद्यः सविमानो हवाक्शिराः । स वालखिल्यवचनादस्थीन्यादाय विस्मितः ।

प्रास्य प्राचीसरस्वत्यां स्नात्वा धाम स्वमन्वगात् । ४० ।

O Indra, this prayer, imbued with the spirit of Lord Nārāyaṇa (and affording protection even as an armour), has been (duly) taught to you. Protected by this, you will easily and completely conquer (all) the generals of the demon troops. (35) Anyone whom the man wearing (protected by) this armour may behold with his eyes or duly touch with his feet, is immediately and completely rid of (all) fear. (36) (And) no fear from a ruler, robbers, evil spirits and so on, nor from a tiger and other ferocious animals nor from any other quarter can ever seize the man who has his mind fixed on this sacred text (prayer). (37) Of yore, a certain Brāhmaṇa, who was a scion of the sage Kuśika and had his mind fixed on this sacred text, cast off his body in a desert through concentration of mind accompanied by retention of breath. (38) Surrounded by ladies, Citraratha, the chief of the Gandharvas once flew in his aerial car over the spot where the Brāhmaṇa had died and instantly fell down with his car, head downwards. Picking up the bones (of the deceased Brāhmaṇa) according to the advice of (the sages known as) the Vālakhilyas (who apprised him of the wonderful efficacy of the Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca and told him that it was impossible for him to proceed further unless and until the bones had been removed from there), he dropped them into the (holy) river Saraswatī, which flew in an easterly direction (close by), bathed (in the sacred stream) and (then) returned to his own abode (the realm of the Gandharvas), amazed (over the incident). (39-40)

श्रीशुक उवाच

य इदं शृणुयात् काले यो धारयति चादृतः । तं नमस्यन्ति भूतानि मुच्यते सर्वतो भयात् । ४१ ।

एतां विद्यामधिगतो विश्वरूपाच्छतक्रतुः । त्रैलोक्यलक्ष्मीं बुभुजे विनिर्जित्य मृधेऽसुरान् । ४२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे नारायणवर्मकथनं नामाष्टमोऽध्यायः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : (All) beings (men) bow to him who listens to this (prayer) at an opportune moment (when he is threatened with some danger) and who fixes his mind on it; nay, he is rid of all fear. (41) Having learnt this prayer from Viśwarūpa, Indra (who performed a hundred sacrifices in his previous life, which entitled him to this rank) completely and decidedly conquered the demons in battle and enjoyed the sovereignty of (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region). (42)

Thus ends the eighth discourse, entitled "The text of the Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca taught" in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ नवमोऽध्यायः

Discourse IX

Indra slays Viśwarūpa; and routed by the demon Vṛtra (the younger brother of Viśwarūpa), the gods call on the sage Dadhīci at the instance of the Lord

श्रीशुक उवाच

तस्यासन् विश्वरूपस्य शिरांसि त्रीणि भारत । सोमपीथं सुरापीथमन्नादमिति शृश्रुम । १ ।

स वै बर्हिषि देवेभ्यो भागं प्रत्यक्षमुच्चकैः । अवदद् यस्य पितरो देवाः सप्रश्रयं नृप । २ ।

स एव हि ददौ भागं परोक्षमसुरान् प्रति । यजमानोऽवहद् भागं मातृस्नेहवशानुगः । ३ ।

तद् देवहेलनं तस्य धर्मालीकं सुरेश्वरः । आलक्ष्य तरसा भीतस्तच्छीर्षाण्यच्छिनद् रुषा । ४ ।

सोमपीथं तु यत् तस्य शिर आसीत् कपिञ्जलः । कलविद्धुः सुरापीथमन्नादं यत् स तित्तिरिः । ५ ।

ब्रह्महत्यामञ्जलिना जग्राह यदपीश्वरः । संवत्सरान्ते तदयं भूतानां स विशुद्धये ।

भूम्यम्बुदुमयोषिद्भ्यश्चतुर्धा व्यभजद्धरिः । ६ ।

भूमिस्तुरीयं जग्राह खातपूरवरेण वै । ईरिणं ब्रह्महत्या रूपं भूमौ प्रदृश्यते । ७ ।

तुर्यं छेदविरोहेण वरेण जगृहूर्दुमाः । तेषां निर्यासरूपेण ब्रह्महत्या प्रदृश्यते । ८ ।

शश्वत्कामवरेणाहस्तुरीयं जगृहः स्त्रियः। रजोरूपेण तास्वंहो मासि मासि प्रदृश्यते। ९।
द्रव्यभूयोवरेणापस्तुरीयं जगृहर्मलम्। तासु बुद्बुदफेनाभ्यां दृष्टं तद्धरति क्षिपन्। १०।

Śrī Śuka resumed : The said Viśwarūpa had three heads (and the same number of mouths), O Parikṣit (a descendant of Bharata), by one of which he drank the sap of the Soma plant (the common drink of the gods, usually offered in sacrifices), by another he drank spirituous liquor and by the third of which he ate food; so we have heard. (1) Indeed with (great) reverence he visibly and loudly proclaimed the oblations poured into the sacrificial fire as the share meant for the gods (इदमिन्द्राय, इदमग्नये and so on), since the gods were his fathers (his father, Twaṣṭā, being one of them), O king! (2) But he secretly offered a share (of the sacrificial oblations) to the demons (as well), as he (somehow) managed to convey the same to them even while pouring oblations into the sacred fire; for he had his sympathies with the Asuras because of the affection his mother (Racanā) bore to them. (3) Coming to know of this behaviour on the part of Viśwarūpa, which amounted to an offence (breach of faith) against the gods (whom he thus deprived of their rightful share) and a religious fraud, and afraid of him (lest he might bring about the destruction of the gods one day), Indra (the ruler of the gods) angrily cut off his heads with (great) expedition. (4) The head by which he drank Soma turned out to be the (bird) Kapiñjala (the francolin); that by which he drank wine became the Kalaviṅka (the common sparrow) and that by which he ate food was converted into the partridge. (5) Indra accepted with joined palms the sin of having assassinated a Brāhmaṇa, even though he was powerful (enough to ward it off). (Remaining tainted with that sin for a year,) Indra divided it at the end of a year into four parts and assigned them (in equal proportions) to the earth, water, trees and women with a view to self-purification in the eyes of (other) beings. (6) The earth accepted a quarter (of the sin) along with the boon (the explicit assurance in return) that a hollow dug into it would be filled (by itself in due course). A barren soil (which is prohibited for all sacred rites) is vividly seen on earth as an external sign of the sin of killing a Brāhmaṇa. (7) The trees assimilated another quarter along with the boon (clear understanding) that their chopped off parts would grow again (in due course by themselves). The sin of killing a Brāhmaṇa is clearly perceived in them in the form of gum (which should not, therefore, be eaten). (8) (Young) women took a third quarter of the sin with the boon of constant sexual urge (capacity for sexual union even during gestation). The sin is clearly perceived in them in the form of the menstrual discharge from month to month. (Hence a woman is regarded as untouchable and unfit for sexual commerce during the period of menstruation). (9) Water absorbed the fourth quarter of the impurity with the boon of an abundant supply of the material (from springs etc.). It is seen in the water in the form of bubbles and foam (which are therefore regarded as impure and unfit for consumption); anyone imbibing these imbibes the impurity*. (10)

हतपुत्रस्ततस्त्वष्टा जुहावेन्द्राय शत्रवे। इन्द्रशत्रो विवर्धस्व माचिरं जहि विद्विषम्। ११।

अथान्वाहार्यपचनादुत्थितो घोरदर्शनः। कृतान्त इव लोकानां युगान्तसमये यथा। १२।

विष्वग्विवर्धमानं तमिषुमात्रं दिने दिने। दग्धशैलप्रतीकाशं सन्ध्याभ्रानीकवर्चसम्। १३।

तप्तताम्रशिखाश्मश्रुं मध्याह्नाकौग्रलोचनम्। १४।

देदीप्यमाने त्रिशिखे शूल आरोप्य रोदसी। नृत्यन्तमुन्नदन्तं च चालयन्तं पदा महीम्। १५।

दरीगम्भीरवक्त्रेण पिबता च नभस्तलम्। लिहता जिह्वयर्क्षाणि ग्रसता भुवनत्रयम्। १६।

महता रौद्रदंष्ट्रेण जृम्भमाणं मुहुर्मुहुः। वित्रस्ता दुदुबुर्लोका वीक्ष्य सर्वे दिशो दश। १७।

Then Twaṣṭā whose son (Viśwarūpa) had been slain (by Indra), poured oblations into the sacred fire (by way of retaliation) in order to procure a mortal enemy for Indra, with the (following) prayer: "O enemy of Indra, may you grow in power to an enormous degree and kill your mighty foe (Indra) without delay." (11) Now from (the sacred fire called)

* This accounts for the practice, prevalent among the orthodox Hindus, of throwing away the bubbles from water before drinking it; and it is therefore that the use of aerated water etc., is prohibited in their eyes.

Anvāhāryapacana (or Dakṣiṇāgni) rose a demon of terrible aspect, who looked like Death appearing (in the form of Kālāgnirudra) at the time of universal dissolution for the destruction of the worlds. (12) He rapidly grew to the extent of an arrow's throw on every side from day to day, presented the appearance of a burnt hill (by his colossal size and dark colour) and possessed the glow of a mass of evening clouds. (13) With a beard and moustaches and hair (too) red as heated copper and eyes as fierce as the midday sun he danced as if holding the vault of heaven on the end of his brilliant trident, gave a loud roar and shook the earth with (the stamp of) his feet. (14-15) Terribly afraid (of him), all created beings ran to and fro (in all directions) as they saw him respiring again and again with his extensive gaping mouth, containing fearful teeth and deep as a cavern, which seemed to imbibe the firmament, lick the stars with the tongue and devour (all) the three worlds. (16-17)

येनावृता इमे लोकास्तमसा त्वाष्ट्रमूर्तिना । स वै वृत्र इति प्रोक्तः पापः परमदारुणः । १८ ।

तं निजघ्नुरभिद्रुह्य सगणा विबुधर्षभाः । स्वैः स्वैर्विव्यास्त्रशस्त्रैर्घैः सोऽयसत्तानि कृत्स्नशः । १९ ।

ततस्ते विस्मिताः सर्वे विषण्णा ग्रस्ततेजसः । प्रत्यञ्जमादिपुरुषमुपतस्थुः समाहिताः । २० ।

That (apparently) sinful and most ferocious demon was rightly named as Vṛtra inasmuch as (all) these worlds were enveloped by that (gigantic mass of) darkness appearing in the form of Twaṣṭā's offspring. (18) Rushing against him with their troops, the generals of the gods assailed him, each with his hosts of celestial missiles and weapons; he (however) swallowed them all. (19) With their splendour eclipsed (his) nay, amazed and dejected (at their discomfiture), they all thereupon composed themselves and (mentally) approached Lord Nārāyaṇa (the most ancient Person), dwelling in their very heart (with the following prayer). (20)

देवा ऊचुः

वाय्वम्बराग्न्यक्षितयस्त्रिलोका ब्रह्मादयो ये वयमुद्विजन्तः ।
हराम यस्मै बलिमन्तकोऽसौ बिभेति यस्मादरणं ततो नः । २१ ।
अविस्मितं तं परिपूर्णकामं स्वेनैव लाभेन समं प्रशान्तम् ।
विनोपसर्पत्यपरं हि बालिशः श्वलाङ्गुलेनातितितर्ति सिन्धुम् । २२ ।
यस्योरुशृङ्गे जगतीं स्वनावं मनुर्यथाऽऽबध्य ततार दुर्गम् ।
स एव नस्त्वाष्ट्रभयाद् दुरन्तात् त्राताऽऽश्रितान् वारिचरोऽपि नूनम् । २३ ।
पुरा स्वयम्भूरपि संयमाश्वस्युदीर्णवातोर्मिरवैः कराले ।
एकोऽरविन्दात् पतितस्ततार तस्माद् भयाद् येन नोऽस्तु पारः । २४ ।
य एक ईशो निजमायया नः ससर्ज येनानुसृजाम विश्वम् ।
वयं न यस्यापि पुरः समीहतः पश्याम लिङ्गं पृथगीशमानिनः । २५ ।
यो नः सपत्नैर्भृशमर्द्यमानान् देवर्षितिर्यङ्मनुषु नित्य एव ।
कृतावतारस्तनुभिः स्वमायया कृत्वाऽऽत्मसात् पाति युगे युगे च । २६ ।
तमेव देवं वयमात्मदैवतं परं प्रधानं पुरुषं विश्वमन्यम् ।
ब्रजाम सर्वे शरणं शरण्यं स्वानां स नो धास्यति शं महात्मा । २७ ।

The gods prayed : May our safety follow from Him (the Supreme Person), of whom is afraid (even) the well-known Death (the Time-Spirit)—Death, to whom (the five elements, viz.,) ether, air, fire, water and earth, the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region, including their inhabitants, the creation of the five elements), nay, Brahmā and others (the rulers of these worlds) and we (gods, who owe our allegiance to these), all pay tribute (homage), trembling (with fear). (21) An ignoramus is he who resorts (for protection) to anyone else than the aforesaid Lord—who is (ever) free from egotism, who is perfectly tranquil (free from likes and dislikes), who has all His desires fully satisfied by the (very) realization of His own (blissful) Self and who is (ever) uniform (unconditioned)—in that he desires to cross the ocean with the help of a dog's tail. (22) The same Lord in the form of the divine Fish—to whose colossal horn king Satyavrata (destined to be the seventh Manu) fastened his boat, which was no other than the earth, and duly got through the peril (in the form of the Deluge)—will surely protect even His dependants, against the danger from (the demon) Vṛtra; which is (so) difficult to get rid of. (23) At the dawn of creation Brahmā (all but) fell from the lotus (sprung from the navel of the Lord) on the water that had submerged everything during the period of universal dissolution and which had assumed a frightful aspect due to the roaring of its billows raised by the fierce winds. May the same Lord be our saviour, with whose help (by whose grace) the same Brahmā—who was all by himself—got over that peril. (24) That (supreme) Lord, though (all) alone, evolved us (gods) by His own Māyā (creative energy); and with His help (by His energy and guidance) we (are enabled to) create the universe already created by Him. Yet, regarding ourselves as independent rulers, we are unable to behold His form although He has been fully active even prior to us (as our inner Controller and Director and the actual Creator of the universe). (25) Though ever existent, yet manifesting Himself through (various) forms among the gods, Ṛṣis (seers), human beings and lower animals by His own Māyā (divine will), He protects us in every Yuga and (sometimes) even more than once in a Yuga, treating us as His own, when He finds us excessively tormented by enemies. (26) We all resort for protection solely to that Shining One, our object of adoration, and (final) Cause manifested in the form of the universe and yet transcending it, appearing (both) as matter and spirit, and affording protection to all. That Supreme Spirit will bring happiness to us, His devotees. (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति तेषां महाराज सुराणामुपतिष्ठताम् । प्रतीच्यां दिश्यभूदाविः शङ्खचक्रगदाधरः । २८ ।

आत्मतुल्यैः षोडशभिर्विना श्रीवत्सकौस्तुभौ । पर्युपासितमुन्निद्रशरदम्बुरुहेक्षणम् । २९ ।

दृष्ट्वा तमवनौ सर्व ईक्षणाह्लादविह्वलाः । दण्डवत् पतिता राजञ्जनैरुत्थाय तुष्टवुः । ३० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : While the aforesaid gods were thus praying, O great king, the Lord appeared (first) in their hearts (in the quarter occupied by the Inner Controller), wielding His conch, discus and mace. (28) (Again,) they beheld Him (before them) being waited upon on all sides by (His) sixteen attendants—who were (exactly) similar to Him but without (the mark of) Śrīvatsa (the curl of hair on the breast, demarcating the foot print of the sage Bhṛgu) and the Kaustubha gem (the two distinctive marks of the Lord)—and with eyes resembling a pair of full-blown autumnal lotuses. Overwhelmed with joy at His sight, they all fell prostrate (like logs) on the ground, O king, and (then) slowly rising, offered (their) praises (thus). (29-30)

देवा ऊचुः

नमस्ते यज्ञवीर्याय वयसे उत ते नमः । नमस्ते ह्यस्तचक्राय नमः सुपुरुहूतये । ३१ ।

यत् ते गतीनां तिसृणामीशितुः परमं पदम् । नार्वाचीनो विसर्गस्य धातर्वेदितुमर्हति । ३२ ।

The gods said : Hail to You, whose power (to confer heavenly bliss and other rewards) stands revealed in the form of sacrificial performances ! Hail to You even as the Time-Spirit (that limits the duration of those rewards)!! Hail to You, who have indeed (on many occasions in the past) hurled Your discus (to destroy the demons that obstruct the performance of sacrifices !!!) Hail to You who have (by virtue of such exploits and glories) acquired numberless blessed names !!! (31) No one born after creation, O Lord, is fit to know Your highest essence (absolute nature), which lies beyond the three courses (of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), You being their Controller. (32)

ॐ नमस्तेऽस्तु भगवन् नारायण वासुदेवादिपुरुष महापुरुष महानुभाव परममङ्गल परमकल्याण परमकारुणिक केवल जगदाधार लोकैकनाथ सर्वेश्वर लक्ष्मीनाथ परमहंसपरिव्राजकैः परमेणात्मयोगसमाधिना परिभाषितपरिस्फुटपारमहंस्यधर्मेणोद्धातितमः कपाटद्वारे चित्तेऽपावृत आत्मलोके स्वयमुपलब्धनिजसुखानुभवो भवान् । ३३ । दुरवबोध इव तवायं विहारयोगो यदशरणोऽशरीर इदमनवेक्षितास्मत्समवाय आत्मनैवाविक्रियमाणेन सगुणमगुणः सृजसि पासि हरसि । ३४ । अथ तत्र भवान् किं देवदत्तवदिह गुणविसर्गपतितः पारतन्त्र्येण स्वकृतकुशलाकुशलं फलमुपाददात्याहोस्विदात्माराम उपशमशीलः समञ्जसदर्शन उदास्त इति ह वाव न विदामः । ३५ । न हि विरोध उभय भगवत्यपरिगणितगुणगणे ईश्वरेऽनवगाह्यामाहात्म्येऽर्वाचीनविकल्पवितर्कविचार-प्रमाणाभासकृतर्कशास्त्रकलिलान्तःकरणाश्रयदुरवग्रहवादिनां विवादानवसर उपरतसमस्तमायामये केवल एवात्ममायामन्तर्धाय को न्वर्थो दुर्घट इव भवति स्वरूपद्वयाभावात् । ३६ । समविषममतीनां मतमनुसरसि यथा रज्जुखण्डः सर्पादिधियाम् । ३७ । स एव हि पुनः सर्ववस्तुनि वस्तुस्वरूपः सर्वेश्वरः सकलजगत्कारणकारणभूतः सर्वप्रत्यगात्मत्वात् सर्वगुणाभासोपलक्षित एक एव पर्यवशेषितः । ३८ । अथ ह वाव तव महिमाभूतसममुद्रविप्रुषा सकृदवलीढया स्वमनसि निष्यन्दमानानवरतसुखेन विस्मारितदृष्टश्रुतविषयसुखलेशाभासाः परमभागवता एकान्तिनो भगवति सर्वभूतप्रियसुहृदि सर्वात्मनि नितरां निरन्तरं निर्वृतमनसः कथमु ह वा एते मधुमथन पुनः स्वार्थकुशला ह्यात्मप्रियसुहृदः साधवस्त्वद्यरणाम्बुजानुसेवां विसृजन्ति न यत्र पुनरयं संसारपर्यावर्तः । ३९ । त्रिभुवनात्मभवन त्रिविक्रम त्रिनयन त्रिलोकमनोहरानुभाव तवैव विभूतयो दितिजदनुजादयश्चापि तेषामनुपक्रम समयोऽयमिति स्वात्ममायया सुरनरमृगमिश्रितजलचराकृतिभिर्यथापराधं दण्डं दण्डधर दधर्थ एवमेनमपि भगवञ्जहि त्वाष्ट्रमुत यदि मन्यसे । ४० । अस्माकं तावकानां तव नतानां तत ततामह तव चरणनलिनयुगलध्यानानुबद्धहृदयनिगडानां खलिङ्गविवरणेनात्मसात्कृतानामनुकम्पानुरञ्जित-विशदरुचिरशिशिरस्मितावलोकेन विगलितमधुरमुखरसामृतकलया चान्तस्तापमनघार्हसि शमयितुम् । ४१ । अथ भगवंस्तवास्माभिरखिलजगदुत्पत्तिस्थितिलयनिमित्तायमानदिव्यमाया-विनोदस्य सकलजीवनिकायानामन्तर्हृदयेषु बहिरपि च ब्रह्मप्रत्यगात्मस्वरूपेण प्रधानरूपेण च यथादेशकालदेहावस्थानविशेषं तदुपादानोपलम्भकतयानुभवतः सर्वप्रत्ययसाक्षिण आकाशशरीरस्य साक्षात्परब्रह्मणः परमात्मनः कियानिह वा अर्थविशेषो विज्ञापनीयः स्याद् विस्फुलिङ्गादिभिरिव हिरण्यरेतसः । ४२ । अत एव स्वयं तदुपकल्पयास्माकं भगवतः परमगुरोस्तव चरणशतपलाशच्छायां विविधवृजिनसंसारपरिश्रमोपशमनीमुपसृतानां वयं यत्कामेनोपसादिताः । ४३ ।

अथो ईश जहि त्वाष्ट्रं ग्रसन्तं भुवनत्रयम् । ग्रस्तानि येन नः कृष्ण तेजांस्यस्त्रायुधानि च । ४४ ।

हंसाय दह्निलयाय निरीक्षकाय कृष्णाय मृष्टयशसे निरुपक्रमाय ।

सत्संग्रहाय भवपान्थनिजाश्रमाप्तावन्ते परीष्टगतये हरये नमस्ते । ४५ ।

Obeisance be to You, denoted by (the mystical syllable) OM, O Lord Nārāyaṇa (dwelling in water), O Vāsudeva (the Abode of the universe), the most ancient Person, the supreme Person, possessed of infinite glory, supremely auspicious, supremely blessed, supremely merciful, One without a second, the Support of the universe, the undisputed Ruler of all the worlds, the universal Lord, the Spouse of Lakṣmī (the goddess of fortune)! You are the same as the realization of the Bliss inherent in the Self and revealed of itself in the region of the Self when the gate leading to it the shape of the mind is opened consequent on the door of ignorance being set aside through the practice of Devotion to the Lord (the religion of the Paramahansas—ascetics of the highest order), which is awakened and realized by ascetics and recluses by means of supreme concentration of mind through meditation on the Self.(33) Devoid of (any) support, bodiless and transcendent as You are, You create, preserve and destroy this qualified universe by Your own Self, undergoing no transformation; and not expecting (any) co-operation from us (the deities presiding over the arm and other organs of action, the seats of strength etc.) ! The course of this pastime of Yours is really something difficult to understand. (34) Moreover, we do not actually know whether, entering (the various) bodies (which are products of the three Guṇas). You (as a Jīva) helplessly reap the good and evil consequences of Your own actions, just as a Devadatta builds a house on his earth and experiences joy and sorrow there, or whether, revelling in Your Self and given to self-control and with an unruffled consciousness You remain (only) a witness. (35) Really speaking, the two alternatives are not incompatible in You, the almighty and absolute Lord, possessing countless varieties of excellences and unfathomable greatness, (nay,) transcending all phenomena (which are the products of Māyā) and (therefore) beyond the range of controversies of theorists holding perverse views due to their mind being bewildered by (so-called) scriptures full of doubts, enquiries, hypotheses, specious arguments and sophisms not even touching the fringe of truth. In fact, what predicate is there which cannot be conveniently applied to You, who stand placing by Your side (as Your handmaid) Your own Māyā (which is capable of bringing even the impossible into the region of possibility), while both (the aforesaid) alternatives are absent in Your (absolute) essence.(36) Just as a piece of rope assumes the shape of a serpent and so on in the eye of those who are prepossessed by the idea of snake and the like, so You appear in Your true perspective (as Brahma, that is Truth, Consciousness and Bliss combined) to those endowed with a balanced (correct) judgment, and what You are not to those of a deluded understanding. Again, You are the only truth in all phenomena, the universal Lord, the cause of causes (viz., Mahat-tattva etc.), of the entire universe. Your presence is clearly indicated by the illuminating power of the intellect, senses and so on (which are products of matter and therefore unable to shed any light except when inspired by You), since You are the Inner Controller of all the Jīvas; (nay,) You are the only entity left over (when everything else has been negated by the Śruti as 'not this', 'not this' and so on). (37-38) Under such circumstances, then, O Slayer of Madhu, how can these saintly and supreme votaries of Yours—who are exclusively devoted to You and look upon You alone as their beloved friend, nay, who are adept in achieving their (highest) object—even think of actually giving up the constant service of your lotus-feet, on clinging to which further revolution in the whirlpool of transmigration ceases. For, due to the never-ceasing (stream of) joy flowing copiously into their mind from a (mere) drop of the sweet ocean of Your nectar-like glory, tasted (but) once, they are made to forget the small bits of seeming delights of sense, whether (actually) enjoyed or heard of (as enjoyed in heaven), their mind finding incessant and excessive delight in (You,) the almighty Lord, the Soul of the universe and (therefore) the beloved friend of all living beings. (39) O Soul and Abode of (all) the three worlds, O Lord who wield Your power over the three worlds and whose glory captivates the mind of (the inhabitants of) the three worlds, O Guide of the three worlds ! (to say nothing of gods, Ṛṣis and other beings,) even the Daityas (the sons of Diti) and Dānavas (the sons of Danu) are Your own glorious manifestations. (Yet,) considering that this is not an (opportune) time for their (nefarious) activities (which are called for only at the time of universal destruction), You have (in the past), O Wielder of the rod of punishment, meted out punishment (to them) according to (the degree of gravity of) their offence, manifesting Yourself through Your own Māyā (will-power) in the form of gods (e.g., that of Vāmana), human being (such as Śrī Rāma and Balarāma), beasts (such as the divine Boar), half men and half beasts (such as Nṛsiṃha and Haṃagrīva) and aquatic creatures (such as the divine Fish and Tortoise). In the same way, O Lord ! (pray,) get rid of the yonder

Vṛtra (son of Twaṣṭā) too, if You deem fit. (40) (Nay,) be pleased, O sinless one, to cure the fever within our heart by your (kind) glances, accompanied with a gracious, artless and charming and refreshing smile, as well as by drops of nectar, in the form of sweet and polite words, cozing from Your mouth, since we, who were (already) Yours, have (now) been accepted (by You) as Your own by revealing Your form (before us), and are bent low before You, O divine father, nay, grandfather, our heart being bound by the chain of love to Your lotus-feet through contemplation on them. (41) Now, as a matter of fact, O Lord, there is no particular purpose to be made known by us to You here any more than sparks, etc., (which depend for their very existence on fire) can bring illumination to fire (their cause), since You divert Yourself with Your divine Māyā (creative will)—that is instrumental as it were in evolving, maintaining and destroying the whole universe—and dwell within the heart of all the multitudes of living beings as Brahma and as their Inner Controller and outside as Prakṛti (primordial matter). As their material cause and revealer it is You that directly know all the Jīvas with (due) regard to the peculiarities of their place, time, body and condition. (Nay,) You are the witness of the (course of) thought of all, taintless by nature as the sky, the unconditioned transcendent Reality and the embodiment of Sattva unmixed with Rajas and Tamas. (42) Therefore, (omniscient as You are,) pray, accomplish Yourself (without awaiting our submission) that object of ours, the hankering for which has prompted us to seek the shade of Your lotus-feet, the (only) means of relieving the toil of transmigration, caused by manifold sins, You being the almighty Lord and supreme Teacher. (43) Hence, O Master, do away with the demon Vṛtra (son of Twaṣṭā), who is devouring (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) and by whom, O Enchanter of all, our glory, missiles and weapons (too) have (already) been swallowed up. (44) Hail to You, the stainless Śrī Hari (the Reliever of agonies), of delightful renown, having Your abode in the cavity of the heart, and without beginning, the Witness (even of the mind, intellect and so on), the embodiment of Bliss*, the wealth of the righteous and the universally approved avenue leading the traveller (drudging) on the path of metempsychosis to his home at the end (of his journey on that path). (45)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथैवमीडितो राजन् सादरं त्रिदर्शहरिः । स्वमुपस्थानमाकर्ण्य प्राह तानभिनन्दितः । ४६ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus extolled, O king (Parīkṣit) with (great) reverence by the gods (who pass through only three stages in life, viz., childhood, adolescence and full manhood, and never grow old), Śrī Hari was highly gratified to hear the prayer offered to Him and addressed them (in the following words). (46)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

प्रीतोऽहं वः सुरश्रेष्ठा मदुपस्थानविद्यया । आत्मैश्वर्यस्मृतिः पुंसां भक्तिश्चैव यया मयि । ४७ ।
किं दुरापं मयि प्रीते तथापि विबुधर्षभाः । मय्येकान्तमतिनान्यन्मतो वाञ्छति तत्त्ववित् । ४८ ।
न वेद कृपणः श्रेय आत्मनो गुणवस्तुदृक् । तस्य तानिच्छतो यच्छेद् यदि सोऽपि तथाविधः । ४९ ।
स्वयं निःश्रेयसं विद्वान् न वक्तव्यज्ञाय कर्म हि । न राति रोगिणोऽप्यथ्यं वाञ्छतो हि भिषक्तमः । ५० ।
मघवन् यात भद्रं वो दध्यङ्गमृषिसत्तमम् । विद्याव्रततपःसारं गात्रं याचत मा चिरम् । ५१ ।
स वा अधिगतो दध्यङ्गश्चिन्त्यो ब्रह्म निष्कलम् । यद् वा अश्वशिरो नाम तयोरमरतां व्यधात् । ५२ ।
दध्यङ्गाथर्वणस्त्वष्ट्रे वर्माभेद्यं मदात्मकम् । विश्वरूपाय यत् प्रादात् त्वष्टा यत् त्वमधास्ततः । ५३ ।

* The word 'Kṛṣṇa' has been etymologically explained as follows in an old couplet given below :—

कृषिर्भवाचकः शब्दो गन्ध निर्वृतिवाचकः । तयोरैक्यं परं ब्रह्म कृष्ण इत्यभिधीयते ॥

The root 'Kṛṣ' implies 'absolute existence', while the syllable 'ṇa' signifies bliss or beatitude. The supreme Reality, which is a combination of these (viz., absolute existence and bliss), is thus spoken of as Kṛṣṇa.

युष्मभ्यं याचितोऽश्विभ्यां धर्मज्ञोऽङ्गानि दास्यति । ततस्तैरायुधश्रेष्ठो विश्वकर्मविनिर्मितः ।

येन वृत्रशिरो हर्ता मत्तेज उपबृंहितः । ५४ ।

तस्मिन् विनिहते यूयं तेजोऽस्त्रायुधसम्पदः । भूयः प्राप्स्यथ भद्रं वो न हिसन्ति च मत्परान् । ५५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे नवमोऽध्यायः । १९ ॥

The Lord said : I am pleased, O jewels among the gods, with the sacred text by which you have offered prayer to Me and by (repeating and revolving) which consciousness of the transcendent nature of the soul as well as devotion to Me will be awakened in (the mind of) men. (47) What is there which cannot be easily attained when I am pleased, O great gods ! Yet, he, who knows the truth and is solely devoted to Me does not seek anything else than Myself. (48) The fool who looks upon the material objects (which are products of the three Guṇas) as real is not alive to his highest good. (And) if anyone bestows those objects on the individual seeking them, such a one is of the same description (no better than a fool). (49) Indeed he who is himself conscious of the highest good (final beatitude) would never tell (show) an ignorant person the path of action (worldly activity). Surely a good doctor would never give unwholesome food to an ailing man longing for it. (50) Indra, may all be well with you; seek ye Dadhyan (more popularly known as Dadhica or Dadhici), the noblest of seers, and beg of him without delay (the gift of) his body, which has grown (exceptionally) strong through the repetition of Mantras (prayers such as the holy Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca), religious observances and asceticism. (51) Having actually realized (his identity with) Brahma (the Absolute), free from (every) tinge (of Māyā), he imparted that knowledge to the two Aświnikumāras (who are twin brothers and are the physicians of the gods)—the knowledge which is named Aśwaśira* (because it was imparted by the sage with the head of a horse) and which contributed to the immortality (liberation during their very life-time) of the aforesaid gods. Dadhīci, the son of the sage Atharvā, (again) taught to the god Twaṣṭā the prayer (serving as a protective cover and therefore known as the Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca), full of My essence and incapable of being superseded (by any other Mantra or prayer), which Twaṣṭā (in his turn) taught to (his son) Viśwarūpa and which you have received from Viśwarūpa. (52-53) Solicited (by you), the sage (who knows the essence of virtue) will part with in your favour and (particularly) in favour of (his disciples,) the two Aświnikumāras (your physicians) his (own) limbs. Then out of (the bones of) those limbs will be produced a thunderbolt (the best of weapons), forged by Viśwakarmā (the artisan of the gods), by means of which and (further) strengthened with My power, (O Indra) you will be able to sever the head of Vṛtra. (54) When he is slain, you will regain your (past) glory, missiles, weapons and riches, and everything will be well with you; for enemies can never destroy those who are devoted to Me. (55)

* Having come to know that the sage Dadhīci was well-versed in Brahmagvidyā (the knowledge relating to the Supreme Spirit), the two Aświnikumāras once approached him and sought from him the knowledge of Brahma. The sage, who was then engaged in some religious rite, politely dismissed them assuring them that he would impart that knowledge to them on some other occasion. No sooner had they left than Indra (the chief of the gods) called on the sage and asked him not to teach Brahmagvidyā to the Aświnikumāras, who were physicians and as such hardly qualified to receive it, and threatened to behead the sage in case he insisted on imparting the said knowledge to them. When the Aświnikumāras approached the sage again and learnt from him of Indra's threat, they offered to cut off the sage's head even before and replace it with the head of a horse, and requested him to teach Brahmagvidyā by the horse's head, so that if Indra actually came and severed the sage's head in the course of the latter's discourse they would easily restore his original head. The sage, who prized his word more than his head, readily agreed and allowed himself to be beheaded by the heavenly physicians and taught them Brahmagvidyā by the horse's head.

Thus ends the ninth discourse, in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः

Discourse X

An account of the conflict between Indra and Vṛtra

श्रीशुक उवाच

इन्द्रमेवं समादिश्य भगवान् विश्वभावनः । पश्यतामनिमेषाणां तत्रैवान्तर्दधे हरिः । १ ।
तथाभियाचितो देवैर्ऋषिराथर्वणो महान् । मोदमान उवाचेदं प्रहसन्निव भारत । २ ।
अपि वृन्दारका यूयं न जानीथ शरीरिणाम् । संस्थायां यस्त्वभिद्रोहो दुःसहश्चेतनापहः । ३ ।
जिजेविषूणां जीवानामात्मा प्रेष्ट इहेप्सितः । क उत्सहेत तं दातुं भिक्षमाणाय विष्णवे । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having thus fully instructed Indra, Lord Śrī Hari, the Protector of the universe, disappeared on that very spot, while the gods (who are noted for their unwinking eyes) kept looking on. (1) Solicited by the gods in the aforesaid manner (as instructed by the Lord), and (greatly) rejoicing, the magnanimous sage Dadhīci (the son of Atharvā) replied as follows, as though jesting, O Parikṣit (a scion of Bharata) :— (2) "O gods, have you no idea of the pain that is actually caused to embodied beings at the time of death—a pain so hard to bear that it robs them (even) of their consciousness ? (3) The body is the dearest object in this life, (particularly) sought after by living beings that are eager to survive. Who would have the courage to part with it even for Lord Viṣṇu, should He ask for it ?" (4)

देवा ऊचुः

किं नु तद् दुस्त्यजं ब्रह्मन् पुंसां भूतानुकम्पिनाम् । भवद्विधानां महतां पुण्यश्लोकेऽयकर्मणाम् । ५ ।
ननु स्वार्थपरो लोको न वेद परसंकटम् । यदि वेद न याचेत नेति नाह यदीश्वरः । ६ ।

The gods replied : Now what is that which is difficult to part with, O (holy) Brāhmaṇa, for magnanimous souls like you, who are compassionate to (all) living beings and whose (noble) deeds are extolled (even) by men of sacred renown? (5) Surely selfish people do not realize the difficulty of the donor; if they know it, they would not ask a gift (of him). And a donor (too) would not say "No", when capable of granting their request. (6)

ऋषिरुवाच

धर्मं वः श्रोतुकामेन यूयं मे प्रत्युदाहताः । एष वः प्रियमात्मानं त्यजन्तं संत्यजाम्यहम् । ७ ।
योऽध्रुवेणात्मना नाथा न धर्मं न यशः पुमान् । ईहेत भूतदयया स शोच्यः स्थावैररपि । ८ ।
एतावानव्ययो धर्मः पुण्यश्लोकैरुपासितः । यो भूतशोकहर्षाभ्यामात्मा शोचति हृष्यति । ९ ।
अहो दैन्यमहो कष्टं पारक्यैः क्षणभङ्गुरैः । यन्नोपकुर्यादस्वार्थैर्मर्त्यैः स्वज्ञातिविग्रहैः । १० ।

The sage (Dadhīci) said : I replied to you (as I have done) only because I wished to hear from you about Dharma (righteousness), Here do I cast off this body, which is (so) dear to you (coveted by you) and which is sure to leave me (one day). (7) The man who fails to earn by means of his transient body, O lords, neither religious merit nor fame through kindness to living beings deserves to be pitied even by immobile creatures (trees, plants and so on, that exist for others). (8) The everlasting virtue practised by men of sacred renown consists merely in this that a man himself grieves and rejoices in sympathy with the grief and joy of his fellow-beings. (9) Oh, what a pity, Oh, how painful it is that a mortal should not serve others with his wealth, sons and other kinsmen and body, which besides being transitory (by nature), are not only of no use to him but (really) belong to others. (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं कृतव्यवसितो दध्यङ्गार्थवर्णस्तनुम् । परे भगवति ब्रह्मण्यात्मानं सन्नयञ्जहौ । ११ ।

यताक्षामुमनोबुद्धिस्तत्त्वदृग् ध्वस्तबन्धनः । आस्थितः परमं योगं न देहं बुबुधे गतम् । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having thus made up his mind and merging his (individual) self in the Lord, the Supreme Reality, the sage Dadhīci, the son of Atharvā, dropped his body. (11) Having controlled his senses, vital airs, mind and intellect, his eyes fixed on the (absolute) Truth and (all) fetters (in the form of virtue and sin) broken, he established himself in supreme Yoga (perfect identity with Brahma), so that he did not know when the body (actually) fell. (12)

अथेन्द्रो वज्रमुद्यम्य निर्मितं विश्वकर्मणा । मुनेः शुक्तिभिरुत्सिक्तो भगवत्तेजसान्वितः । १३ ।

वृतो देवगणैः सर्वैर्गजेन्द्रोपर्यशोभत । स्तूयमानो मुनिगणैस्त्रैलोक्यं हर्षयन्निव । १४ ।

वृत्रमभ्यद्रवच्छेत्तुमसुरानीकयूथपैः । पर्यस्तमोजसा राजन् क्रुद्धो रुद्र इवान्तकम् । १५ ।

ततः सुराणामसुरै रणः परमदारुणः । त्रेतामुखे नर्मदायामभवत् प्रथमे युगे । १६ ।

रुद्रैर्वसुभिरादित्यैरश्विभ्यां पितृवह्निभिः । मरुद्भिर्ऋभुभिः साध्यैर्विश्वेदेवैर्मरुत्यतिम् । १७ ।

दृष्ट्वा वज्रधरं शक्रं रोचमानं स्वया श्रिया । नामृष्यन्नसुरा राजन् मृधे वृत्रपुरःसराः । १८ ।

नमुचिः शम्बरोऽनर्वा द्विर्मूर्धा ऋषभोऽम्बरः । हयग्रीवः शङ्कुशिरा विप्रचित्तिरयोमुखः । १९ ।

पुलोमा वृषपर्वा च प्रहेतिहेतिरुत्कलः । दैतेया दानवा यक्षा रक्षांसि च सहस्रशः । २० ।

सुमालिमालिप्रमुखाः कार्तस्वरपरिच्छदाः । प्रतिषिध्येन्द्रसेनाग्रं मृत्योरपि दुरासदम् । २१ ।

अभ्यर्दयन्नसंभ्रान्ताः सिंहनादेन दुर्मदाः । गदाभिः परिघैर्बाणैः प्रासमुद्गतोमरैः । २२ ।

शूलैः परश्वधैः खड्गैः शतघ्नीभिर्भुशुण्डिभिः । सर्वतोऽवाकिरन् शस्त्रैरस्त्रैश्च विबुधर्षभान् । २३ ।

न तेऽदृश्यन्त संछन्नाः शरजालैः समन्ततः । पुङ्गवानुपुङ्गवपतितैर्ज्योतीर्षीषीव नभोघनैः । २४ ।

न ते शस्त्रास्त्रवर्षाद्या ह्यासेदुः सुरसैनिकान् । छिन्नाः सिद्धपथे देवैर्लघुहस्तैः सहस्रधा । २५ ।

अथ क्षीणास्त्रशस्त्रौघा गिरिशृङ्गद्रुमोपलैः । अभ्यवर्षन् सुरबलं चिच्छिदुस्तांश्च पूर्ववत् । २६ ।

Now, taking up the thunderbolt, forged by Viśwakarmā (the heavenly artisan) out of the bones of the sage Dadhīci, and endowed with the Lord's energy, Indra felt very strong. (13) Surrounded by all the hosts of gods, he was being extolled by crowds of sages and shone on (the back of) Airāvata (the king of the elephants), as though delighting (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region). (14) In order to cut down Vṛtra, who was surrounded by generals of demon cohorts, he assailed the demon with (great) impetuosity and full of wrath, O Parikṣit, even as Rudra (the god presiding over destruction) rushes against Death (at the time of universal destruction). (15) Thereupon ensued a most fierce conflict of the gods with the demons on the bank of the (holy) Narmadā (river) at the beginning of Tretā during the very first round of the four Yugas (of the current Manvantara, the Vaivasvata Manvantara). (16) The demons headed by Vṛtra, O king (Parikṣit), could not bear to see Śakra (Indra), the king of the gods, armed with the thunderbolt and resplendent in his native glory on the field of battle and accompanied by the Rudras (the gods presiding over destruction), the Vasus, the Ādityas (the sons of Aditi), the two Aśvinikumāras (the celestial physicians), the manes, the gods of fire, the Maruts (the wind-gods), the Ṛbhus, the Sādhyas and the Viśwedevas. (17-18) Namuci, Śambarā, Anarvā, Dwimūrdhā (who had a pair of heads), Ṛṣabha, Ambara, Hayagrīva (so-called because he was endowed with a horse's head), Śaṅkuśirā (lit., spear-headed), Vipracitti, Ayomukha (who was endowed with a snout of iron), Pulomā, Vṛṣaparvā, Praheti, Heti and Utkala, and (other) Daityas (sons of Diti) and Dānavas (sons of Danu), Yakṣas and Rākṣasas (ogres)—led by Sumālī and Mālī—who numbered several thousand and were adorned with gold ornaments resisted and harassed the vanguard of Indra's army, which was difficult to approach even for Death. With a lion's roar the furious demons, who were not the least agitated, (virtually) covered the generals of the celestial army on all sides with showers of maces, iron bludgeons, arrows, barbed darts, Mudgaras (a kind of hammer-like weapon), lances, pikes, axes, swords, Śataghnīs* (a cylindrical piece of wood four cubits long and studded with iron spikes), Bhuśuṇḍīs (another similar weapon with iron spikes one exceeding the other in length) and other weapons and missiles. (19—23) Completely screened all round with volleys of arrows, each of which got stuck into the shaft of another, they (the celestial generals) could not be seen like luminaries hidden by clouds in the sky. (24) Torn in thousands of pieces (even) in the air by the gods, who were skilled archers, those volleys of missiles and weapons surely did not reach (touch) the celestial troops at all. (25) Their stock of missiles and weapons being depleted, they now showered mountainpeaks, trees and stones on the celestial host and the gods split them as before. (26)

तानक्षतान् स्वस्तिमतो निशाम्य शस्त्रास्त्रपूगैरथ वृत्रनाथाः ।
 हुमैर्दृष्टवन्निर्विविधाद्रिशङ्खैर्विक्षतांस्तत्रसुरिन्द्रसैनिकान् ॥२७॥
 सर्वे प्रयासा अभवन् विमोघाः कृताः कृता देवगणेषु दैत्यैः ।
 कृष्णानुकूलेषु यथा महत्सु क्षुद्रैः प्रयुक्ता रुशती रुक्षवाचः ॥२८॥
 ते स्वप्रयासं वितथं निरीक्ष्य हरावभक्ता हतयुद्धदर्पाः ।
 पलायनायाजमुखे विसृज्य पति मनस्ते दधुरात्तसाराः ॥२९॥
 वृत्रोऽसुरांस्ताननुगान् मनस्वी प्रधावतः प्रेक्ष्य बभाष एतत् ।
 पलायितं प्रेक्ष्य बलं च भग्नं भयेन तीव्रेण विहस्य वीरः ॥३०॥
 कालोपपन्नां रुचिरां मनस्विनामुवाच वाचं पुरुषप्रवीरः ।
 हे विप्रचित्ते नमुचे पुलोमन् मयानर्वज्जम्बर मे शृणुध्वम् ॥३१॥
 जातस्य मृत्युर्ध्रुव एष सर्वतः प्रतिक्रिया यस्य न चेह क्लृप्ता ।
 लोको यशश्चाथ ततो यदि ह्यमुं को नाम मृत्युं न वृणीत युक्तम् ॥३२॥
 द्वौ संमताविह मृत्यू दुरापौ यद् ब्रह्मसंधारणया जितासुः ।
 कलेवरं योगरतो विजह्याद् यदग्रणीर्वीरशयेऽनिवृत्तः ॥३३॥

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे इन्द्रवृत्रासुरयुद्धवर्णनं नाम दशमोऽध्यायः ॥१०॥

Finding the aforesaid warriors of Indra secure and unhurt by their volleys of weapons and missiles and unscathed even by the trees, stones and peaks of mountains of every description (hurled by them), the demons led by Vṛtra were filled with dismay. (27) All the efforts repeatedly made by the demons (the sons of Diti) against the gods, to whom the all-blissful Lord was favourably disposed, proved entirely infructuous even as the maledictory

* Śrīdhara Swāmī in his well-known commentary on Śrīmad Bhāgavata quotes the following couplet from a lexicon in order to show that a Śataghnī and a Bhuśuṇḍī are almost similar in appearance:—

अतस्मि च चतुर्हस्ता लोहकण्टकसंचिता । भशण्डी सर्वतो लोहकण्टकानक्रमांजिता ॥

and harsh words employed by the vile against exalted souls fail to provoke them. (28) Finding their efforts fruitless, the aforesaid demons, who cherished no devotion to Śrī Hari and had their pride crushed in battle, nay, who had been robbed of their energy (by their enemies), resorted to (the expedient of) fleeing away (from the battle-field) deserting their leader (Vṛtra) in the very initial stages of the conflict. (29) Seeing those Asuras—who had (till then) followed his lead—fleeing away, and (further) observing his ranks (too) broken and run away through intense fear, the valiant and self-possessed Vṛtra heartily laughed and spoke as follows. (30) That heroic personage made the following speech, which was not only appropriate to the occasion but thrilling to the brave—"Hullo Vipraciti, Namuci, Pulomā, Maya, Anarvā and Śambara, (just) listen to me. (31) This death (which is so abhorrent to you) is sure to befall everyone that is born, wherever one may be; and no means (whatsoever) of avoiding it in this world (of matter) has been devised (by the creator). If, therefore, (an abode in) heaven (hereafter) and fame (in this world) could be had from it, who as a matter of fact would not actually court such a desirable death ? (32) The following two modes of death are approved of in the scriptures and do not easily fall to one's lot. viz., (i) that he who is devoted to the practice of Yoga should, after controlling his vital airs and senses, cast off his body through deep concentration of mind on Brahma (the Absolute) and (ii) that, placed in the forefront of a battle, a man should give up the ghost on the battle-field, taking care not to turn his back on the enemy." (33)

Thus ends the tenth discourse entitled "An account of the conflict between Indra (the chief of the gods) and the demon Vṛtra," in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XI

Vṛtra's teaching to Indra

श्रीशुक उवाच

त एवं शंसतो धर्मं वचः पत्युचेतसः । नैवागृह्णन् भयत्रस्ताः पलायनपरा नृप । १ ।
 विशीर्यमाणां पृतनामासुरीमसुरर्षभः । कालानुकूलैस्त्रिदशैः काल्यमानामनाथवत् । २ ।
 दृष्ट्वातप्यत संकुब्ध इन्द्रशत्रुर्मर्षितः । तान् निवार्यौजसा राजन् निर्भर्त्स्येदमुवाच ह । ३ ।
 किं व उच्चरितैर्मातुर्धावद्भिः पृष्टतो हतैः । न हि भीतवधः श्लाघ्यो न स्वर्ग्यः शूरमानिनाम् । ४ ।
 यदि वः प्रधने श्रद्धा सारं वा क्षुल्लका हृदि । अग्रे तिष्ठत मात्रं मे न चेद् ग्राम्यसुखे स्पृहा । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Frantic with fear and robbed of (all) good sense, and intent on flight, the demons paid no heed at all to the advice of their chief, who was thus preaching virtue to them, O king (Parikṣit) ! (1) Roused to indignation and enraged to see the demon host being shattered and put to flight—as though it were masterless—by the gods (who pass through only three stages in life, viz., childhood, adolescence and full manhood and never grow old, and) to whom time (fortune) appeared propitious, Vṛtra (the enemy of Indra), the foremost of the demons, felt agonized (at heart). Warding the gods off by his (own) might, O Parikṣit, and scolding them, he actually addressed the following words to them:—(2-3) "What will be gained by you through these fugitives—who are no better than the excreta of their mother—being struck from behind ? Indeed the slaughter of the terror-stricken is neither praiseworthy nor conducive to heavenly enjoyment for those who account themselves as brave. (4) If you are keen about fighting or if there is courage in your heart, O vile creatures, and (again) if there is no craving (in your heart) for sensuous enjoyments, stand but for a moment before me". (5)

एवं सुरगणान् क्रुद्धो भीषयन् वपुषा रिपून् । व्यनदत् सुमहाप्राणो येन लोका विचेतसः । ६ ।
 तेन देवगणाः सर्वे वृत्रविस्फोटनेन वै । निपेतुर्मूर्च्छिता भूमौ यथैवाशनिना हताः । ७ ।
 ममर्दं पदभ्यां सुरसैन्यमातुरं निमीलिताक्षं रणरङ्गदुर्मदः ।
 गां कम्पयन्नुद्यतशूल ओजसा नालं वनं यूथपतिर्यथोन्मदः । ८ ।
 विलोक्य तं वज्रधरोऽत्यमर्षितः स्वशत्रवेऽभिद्रवते महागदाम् ।
 चिक्षेप तामापततीं सुदुःसहां जग्राह वामेन करेण लीलया । ९ ।
 स इन्द्रशत्रुः कुपितो भृशं तया महेन्द्रवाहं गदयोऽविक्रमः ।
 जघान कुम्भस्थल उन्नदन् मृधे तत्कर्म सर्वे समपूजयन्वृप । १० ।
 ऐरावतो वृत्रगदाभिमृष्टो विघूर्णितोऽद्रिः कुलिशाहतो यथा ।
 अपासरद् भिन्नमुखः सहेन्द्रो मुञ्चन्नसृक् सप्तधनुर्भृशार्तः । ११ ।
 न सन्नवाहाय विषण्णचेतसे प्रायुङ्क्त भूयः स गदां महात्मा ।
 इन्द्रोऽमृतस्यन्दिकराभिर्मर्शवीतव्यथक्षतवाहोऽवतस्थे । १२ ।
 स तं नृपेन्द्राहवकाम्यया रिपुं वज्रायुधं भ्रातृहणं विलोक्य ।
 स्मरंश्च तत्कर्म नृशंसमंहः शोकेन मोहेन हसन्नगाद । १३ ।

Thus threatening the host of gods, his enemies, by his (words as well as by his gigantic) figure, and full of rage, Vṛtra, who was possessed of vast strength, roared in such a way that people fainted (to hear the sound). (6) Rendered unconscious by that (terrible) yell of Vṛtra, all the gods actually dropped on the ground just as they would when struck with lightning. (7) Taking up his spear and shaking the earth by his strength, Vṛtra (whose ardent passion for the pastime of warfare could not be easily repressed) trod down under his feet the troops of the gods—(that were) lying unconscious with their eyes closed—even as a lordly elephant would trample down in its mad fury a bed of lotuses. (8) Indra (the wielder of the thunderbolt) was seized with great indignation to see him and hurled a huge mace at his enemy, who was (now) rushing towards him. The demon (however) sportfully caught that most formidable weapon with his left hand even as it approached him. (9) Roaring in fury, the said enemy of Indra, who was possessed of terrible prowess, struck on the head with that mace the elephant (Airāvata) that bore the mighty Indra on its back. All those present on the battle-field admired this feat of his, O Parīkṣit ! (10) Smitten with the mace hurled by Vṛtra even like a mountain struck with lightning and much afflicted, Airāvata along with Indra (mounted on its back) retreated to a distance of twenty-eight cubits, reeling and vomiting blood, its mouth broken. (11) That noble soul (Vṛtra) did not aim the mace for a second time at Indra, who felt dejected in mind and whose elephant was stunned (with the blow). (Meanwhile,) O king of kings, Indra, whose wounded elephant was rid of its pain by the (very) touch of his hand, that shed drops of nectar, stood (once more) before Vṛtra. (12) Seeing the aforesaid Indra (his own enemy and) the slayer of his (elder) brother (Viśvarūpa), standing (before him) armed with the thunderbolt and seeking a (single) combat with him, O king of kings, Vṛtra was filled with grief and infatuation as he recollected that cruel and sinful deed of his adversary, and spoke laughing (as follows) : (13)

वृत्र उवाच

दिष्ट्या भवान् मे समवस्थितो रिपुर्यो ब्रह्महा गुरुहा भ्रातृहा च ।

दिष्ट्या नृणोऽद्याहमसत्तम त्वया मच्छूलनिर्भिन्नदृषद्दृदाचिरात् । १४ ।
 यो नोऽग्रजस्यात्मविदो द्विजातेर्गुरोरपापस्य च दीक्षितस्य ।
 विश्रब्ध खड्गेन शिरांस्यवृश्चत् पशोरिवाकरुणः स्वर्गकामः । १५ ।
 ह्रींश्रीदयाकीर्तिभिरुज्झितं त्वां स्वकर्मणा पुरुषदैश्च गर्हाम् ।
 कृच्छ्रेण मच्छूलविभिन्नदेहमस्पृष्टवह्निं समदन्ति गृध्राः । १६ ।
 अन्येऽनु ये त्वेह नृशंसमज्ञा ये ह्युद्यतास्त्राः प्रहरन्ति मह्यम् ।
 तैर्भूतनाथान् सगणान् निशातत्रिशूलनिर्भिन्नगलैर्यजामि । १७ ।
 अथो हरे मे कुलिशेन वीर हर्ता प्रमथ्यैव शिरो यदीह ।
 तत्रानृणो भूतबलिं विधाय मनस्विनां पादरजः प्रपत्स्ये । १८ ।
 सुरेश कस्मान्न हिनोषि वज्रं पुरः स्थिते वैरिणि मय्यमोघम् ।
 मा संशयिष्ठा न गदेव वज्रं स्यान्निष्फलं कृपणार्थैव याच्चा । १९ ।
 नन्वेव वज्रस्तव शक्र तेजसा हरेर्दधीचेस्तपसा च तेजितः ।
 तेनैव शत्रुं जहि विष्णुयन्त्रितो यतो हरिर्विजयः श्रीर्गुणास्ततः । २० ।
 अहं समाधाय मनो यथाऽऽह सङ्कर्षणस्तच्चरणारविन्दे ।
 त्वद्वज्ररंहोलुलितग्राम्यपाशो गतिं मुनेर्याम्यपविद्धलोकः । २१ ।
 पुंसां किलैकान्तधियां स्वकानां याः सम्पदो दिवि भूमौ रसायाम् ।
 न राति यद् द्वेष उद्वेग आधिर्मदः कलिर्व्यसनं संप्रयासः । २२ ।
 त्रैवर्गिकायासविधातमस्मत्पतिर्विधत्ते पुरुषस्य शक्र ।
 ततोऽनुमेयो भगवत्प्रसादो यो दुर्लभोऽकिञ्चनगोचरोऽन्यैः । २३ ।

Vṛtra said : Luckily enough (for me) you, who slew a Brāhmaṇa, your (own) preceptor and my brother (all in the person of Viśwarūpa), have firmly stood before me as my adversary. How glad am I that through you, O most wicked one, when your stone-like heart has been pierced through before long by my trident, I shall have discharged my debt (to my brother) today. (14) You ruthlessly lopped off with a sword the heads of my innocent brother—who besides being a Brāhmaṇa and your preceptor, had realized the Self and reposing (full) confidence in you, was (duly) engaged in a sacrifice (on your behalf), (even) as one aspiring to (an abode in) heaven would sever the head of an animal to be sacrificed. (15) When your body has been torn asunder by my trident, vultures will feast (before long) on you—forsaken as you are by shame, grace, compassion and glory and fit to be censured (even) by Rākṣasas (who devour human beings) because of your sinful deeds—since you will get no fire (to burn you). (16) Nay, I shall indeed propitiate the god Bhairava and others (the leaders of ghosts) with their retinue through (the blood of) those other foolish gods who, following (the lead of) your cruel self, have raised their missiles to strike me on this field of battle and whose neck will be (presently) pierced through with my sharpened trident. (17) If, on the other hand, O valiant Indra, you actually succeed in crushing my army and severing my (own) head with your thunderbolt in this encounter, I shall in that case offer my body as a (propitiatory) oblation to birds and beasts (such as vultures and jackals) and (thus) freed from all debts (of Karma), attain to the dust of feet (destiny or abode) of enlightened souls (Nārada and others). (18) O ruler of gods, wherefore do you not hurl your unfailing thunderbolt at me, your enemy, stationed before you? (Pray) do not entertain any misgiving (in your mind). (Rest assured that) the thunderbolt will not prove ineffectual as your mace or as an entreaty seeking its fulfilment from a miser. (19) Surely this thunderbolt of yours, O Indra, has been whetted by the energy of Śrī Hari as well as by the asceticism of the sage Dadhici. Prompted by Lord Viṣṇu, get rid of your enemy (myself) with the selfsame weapon; (for) victory, fortune and virtues lean to that side alone on which stands Śrī Hari. (20) Concentrating my mind on the lotus-feet of Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa (even) as He has instructed me, and with the cords of attachment to the pleasures of sense cut asunder by the force of your thunderbolt, and having (thus) cast off the body, I shall attain to the destiny of a sage given to contemplation. (21) The Lord does not of course bestow on His own people, exclusively devoted to Him, the riches that are available in heaven (the higher worlds), on earth or in the subterranean regions, and from which follow (as a matter of course) hatred, fear, mental anguish, arrogance, discord, suffering and toil. (22) Our Master (on the other hand), O Indra, frustrates the efforts of His servant for the attainment of the three objects of human pursuit (viz., religious merit, worldly riches and sensuous enjoyment). From such frustration is to be inferred the grace of the Lord, which is the lot of (only) those who have nothing (to call their own) and is difficult to attain for others. (23)

अहं हरे तव पादैकमूलदासानुदासो भवितास्मि भूयः ।
 मनः स्मरेतासुपतेर्गुणांस्ते गृणीत वाक् कर्म करोतु कायः । २४ ।
 न नाकपृष्ठं न च पारमेष्ठ्यं न सार्वभौमं न रसाधिपत्यम् ।
 न योगसिद्धीरपुनर्भवं वा समञ्जस त्वा विरहय्य काङ्क्षे । २५ ।
 अजातपक्षा इव मातरं खगाः स्तन्यं यथा वत्सतराः क्षुधार्ताः ।
 प्रियं प्रियेव व्युषितं विषण्णा मनोऽरविन्दाक्ष दिदृक्षते त्वाम् । २६ ।
 ममोत्तमश्लोकजनेषु सरव्यं संसारचक्रे भ्रमतः स्वकर्मभिः ।
 त्वन्माययाऽऽत्मात्मजदारगेहेष्वासक्तचित्तस्य न नाथ भूयात् । २७ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे वृत्रस्येन्द्रोपदेशो नामैकादशोऽध्यायः । ११ ।

(Turning mentally towards the Lord,) May I, O Hari, be born again (after death) as a servant of those devotees who have solely taken refuge in Your (lotus) feet. Let my mind ponder and tongue celebrate the excellences of the Lord of my life (Yourself) and let my body do Your service (alone). (24) O Storehouse of all blessedness and grace ! without You I crave neither the abode of Dhruva (which is placed above Indra's paradise) nor even the realm of Brahmā (the highest heaven) nor the sovereignty of the entire globe nor the lordship of the subterranean regions nor the (superhuman) powers (Aṇimā and so on) attained through Yoga nor Liberation (freedom from rebirth). (25) Even as unfledged birds (left behind in their nest) are eager to see the mother bird, young calves tormented with hunger (and kept away from the mother cow) seek the milk (of its udders) and a beloved wife, depressed in spirits (due to desolation) longs to see her beloved husband, absent from home, my mind, O lotus-eyed one, is keen to behold You. (26) Let there be my friendship with the devotees of the Lord of excellent renown, revolving as I do in the whirligig of transmigration due to my own deeds. And let him whose mind is attached through Your Māyā (deluding potency), to his body, offspring, wife and home, O Lord, have no friendship with me. (27)

*Thus ends the eleventh discourse entitled "Vṛtra's teaching to Indra," in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ द्वादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XII

The demon Vṛtra slain

ऋषिरुवाच

एवं जिहासुर्नृप देहमाजौ मृत्युं वरं विजयान्मन्यमानः ।
 शूलं प्रगृह्याभ्यपतत् सुरेन्द्रं यथा महापुरुषं कैटभोऽप्सु । १ ।
 ततो युगान्ताग्निकठोरजिह्वाविध्य शूलं तरसासुरेन्द्रः ।
 क्षिप्त्वा महेन्द्राय विनद्य वीरो हतोऽसि पापेति रुषा जगाद । २ ।
 ख आपतत् तद् विचलद् ग्रहोल्कवन्निरीक्ष्य दुष्प्रेक्ष्यमजातविक्रवः ।
 वज्रेण वज्री शतपर्वणाच्छिनद् भुजं च तस्योरगराजभोगम् । ३ ।
 छिन्नैकबाहुः परिधेण वृत्रः संरब्ध आसाद्य गृहीतवज्रम् ।
 हनौ तताडेन्द्रमथामरेभं वज्रं च हस्ताभ्यपतन्मघोनः । ४ ।
 वृत्रस्य कर्मातिमहाद्भुतं तत् सुरासुराश्चरणसिद्धसङ्घाः ।
 अपूजयंस्तत् पुरुहूतसंकटं निरीक्ष्य हा हेति विच्युक्कुशुर्भृशम् । ५ ।
 इन्द्रो न वज्रं जगृहे विलज्जितश्च्युतं स्वहस्तादरिसन्निधौ पुनः ।
 तमाह वृत्रो हर आत्तवज्रो जहि स्वशत्रुं न विषादकालः । ६ ।
 युयुत्सतां कुत्रचिदाततायिनां जयः सदैकत्र न वै परात्मनाम् ।
 विनैकमुत्पत्तिलयस्थितीश्वरं सर्वज्ञमाद्यं पुरुषं सनातनम् । ७ ।

लोकाः सपाला यस्येमे श्वसन्ति विवशा वशे । द्विजा इव शिवा बद्धाः स काल इह कारणम् । ८ ।
 ओजः सहो बलं प्राणममृतं मृत्युमेव च । तमज्ञाय जनो हेतुमात्मानं मन्यते जडम् । ९ ।
 यथा दारुमयी नारी यथा यन्त्रमयो मृगः । एवं भूतानि मघवन्नीशतन्त्राणि विद्धि भोः । १० ।
 पुरुषः प्रकृतिर्व्यक्तमात्मा भूतेन्द्रियाशयाः । शक्नुवन्त्यस्य सर्गादौ न विना यदनुग्रहात् । ११ ।
 अविद्वानेवमात्मानं मन्यतेऽनीशमीश्वरम् । भूतैः सुजति भूतानि ग्रसते तानि तैः स्वयम् । १२ ।
 आयुः श्रीः कीर्तिरैश्वर्यमाशेषः पुरुषस्य याः । भवन्त्येव हि तत्काले यथानिच्छोर्विपर्ययाः । १३ ।
 तस्मादकीर्तियशसोर्जयापजययोरपि । समः स्यात् सुखदुःखाभ्यां मृत्युजीवितयोस्तथा । १४ ।
 सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति प्रकृतेर्नात्मनो गुणाः । तत्र साक्षिणमात्मानं यो वेद न स बध्यते । १५ ।
 पश्य मां निर्जितं शक्र वृक्ष्णायुधभुजं मृधे । घटमानं यथाशक्ति तव प्राणजिहीर्षया । १६ ।

प्राणरल्होऽयं समर इष्वक्षो वाहनासनः । अत्र न ज्ञायतेऽमुष्य जयोऽमुष्य पराजयः । १७ ।

The sage (Śrī Śuka) resumed : Thus desiring, O king (Parīkṣit), to drop his body on the field of battle and accounting death preferable to victory, Vṛtra seized his trident and rushed at Indra (the ruler of the gods) even as the demon Kaiṭabha attacked Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person) on (the) water (that flooded the entire universe during the final dissolution). (1) Then whirling his trident, whose prongs were formidable like the flames of the fire that breaks out at the time of universal destruction, and hurling it with great force at the mighty Indra (the lord of paradise), the valiant Vṛtra (the chief of the demons) roared and angrily exclaimed: "You are killed, O wicked one !" (2) Not (at all) perturbed to see the trident—dazzling as a planet or a meteor—darting through the air with a whirling motion, Indra (the wielder of the thunderbolt) cut it down, as well as his arm, round and thick as the body of Vāsuki (the king of serpents) with his thunderbolt, which had a hundred joints. (3) With one of his arms (thus) lopped off, and full of rage, (the demon) Vṛtra approached Indra, who still held his thunderbolt, and smote him as well as Airāvata (the celestial elephant) in the jaws with his iron club and (lo !). the thunderbolt dropped down from Indra's hand. (4) (Both) the gods and the demons as well as the hosts of Cāraṇas (celestial bards) and Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystical powers from their very birth) admired that most marvellous feat of Vṛtra and (at the same time) cried again and again 'Alack ! Alack !!' to see the critical plight of Indra (who is invoked by many). (5) Much ashamed (at his discomfiture), Indra did not pick up again in the presence of his foe the thunderbolt slipped from his hand. To him Vṛtra (now) said, "Taking up your thunderbolt (once more), O Indra, kill your enemy (in my person); this is not the time for despondency. (6) Nowhere does victory invariably woo the bellicose armed with weapons, but only on particular occasions, since they are all subject to their destiny except the Lord (the eternal Person), the all-knowing Cause, the one Controller of creation, preservation and dissolution (of the universe). (7) That Lord alone (in the form of Time, the propeller of all) is responsible for (their) victory and defeat; for it is subject to His control that (all) these worlds along with their guardian deities (Brahmā and others) helplessly carry on their activity like birds caught in a net. (8) Not recognizing the Lord (Time) as the (real) Cause in the shape of the potency of the Indriyas (the senses of perception as well as the organs of action), the power of the mind and bodily strength, life, immortality (final beatitude) and death as well, man looks upon the gross body as the cause (of victory etc.). (9) Just as a wooden puppet or even as a mechanical toy-deer is subject to the control of the showman or the individual winding up the toy, likewise know (all) living beings, O Indra, as subject to the control of God. (10) Without His help (inspiration) the Jīva (individual soul), Prakṛti (primordial matter), Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), the ego, the five elements, the (ten) Indriyas and the mind fail to create, maintain and dissolve the universe. (11) He who is ignorant of this (fact) regards his own incapable (dependent) self as capable (of doing everything independently). (Really speaking,) it is He who evolves beings through other beings (their parents) and devours them Himself through (carnivorous) beings (such as a tiger). (12) Whatever blessings in the form of (long) life, affluence, fame and power are coveted by a man are obtained by him at the time appointed for the same as surely as their contraries (in the shape of death, poverty, infamy and so on), even though he may be unwilling to have them. (13) Therefore, one should remain balanced in joy and sorrow (severally) proceeding from fame and disrepute, victory and defeat and even so from life and death. (14) Sattva, Rajas and Tamas are the (three) modes of Prakṛti (Matter) but not the attributes of the Self. He who recognizes the Self to be a (mere) witness of these is not bound (by them). (15) Look at me, O Indra, exerting to the best of my power with intent to take your life, though (already) vanquished in battle and having my weapon (trident) and arm cut down (by you). (16) This warfare is (after all nothing but) a game of chance, in which life (itself) is staked, arrows are thrown as dice and the animals etc., carrying the warriors are the gaming-boards. It is never known here (till the last) whose lot is victory and whose, defeat." (17)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इन्द्रो वृत्रवचः श्रुत्वा गतालीकमपूजयत् । गृहीतवज्रः प्रहसंस्तमाह गतविस्मयः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : On hearing the guileless speech of Vṛtra, Indra welcomed it. Picking up his thunderbolt and feeling no wonder (at his foe's extraordinary presence of mind and charitable disposition), he laughed heartily and replied to him (as follows). (18)

इन्द्र उवाच

अहो दानव सिद्धोऽसि यस्य ते मतिरीदृशी । भक्तः सर्वात्मनाऽऽत्मानं सुहृदं जगदीश्वरम् । १९ ।

भवानतार्षिन्मायां वै वैष्णवीं जनमोहिनीम् । यद् विहायासुरं भावं महापुरुषतां गतः । २० ।
 खल्विदं महदाश्चर्यं यद् रजःप्रकृतेस्तव । वासुदेवे भगवति सत्त्वात्मनि दृढा मतिः । २१ ।
 यस्य भक्तिर्भगवति हरौ निःश्रेयसेश्वरे । विक्रीडतोऽमृताम्भोधौ किं क्षुद्रैः खातकोदकैः । २२ ।

Indra said : Oh, you have (really) achieved your object, O demon (chief), blessed as you are with such a (catholic, discerning, resolute and devout) mind (even at this critical moment), and devoted with all your being to the Lord (the Ruler of the universe), your (very) Self and (true) Friend ! (19) You have actually reached the end of the (insurmountable) Māyā of Lord Viṣṇu—which deludes people—in that, having shed the demoniac disposition, you have attained to the level of an exalted soul. (20) It is really a great wonder that, though Rājasika by temperament, you have conceived such an unflinching devotion to Lord Vāsudeva, who is Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas) personified ! (21) What use can he have for the shallow ditch-water (in the shape of heavenly and other trivial enjoyments) who sports in an ocean of nectar, blessed as he is with devotion to the almighty Śrī Hari, the Bestower of final beatitude? (22)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति ब्रुवाणावन्योन्यं धर्मजिज्ञासया नृप । युयुधाते महावीर्याविन्द्रवृत्रौ युधाम्पती । २३ ।
 आविध्य परिधं वृत्रः कार्ष्णायसमरिन्दमः । इन्द्राय प्राहिणोद् घोरं वामहस्तेन मारिष । २४ ।
 स तु वृत्रस्य परिधं करं च करभोपमम् । चिच्छेद युगपद् देवो वज्रेण शतपर्वणा । २५ ।
 दोर्भ्यामुत्कृत्तमूलाभ्यां बभौ रक्तस्रवोऽसुरः । छिन्नपक्षो यथा गोत्रः खाद् भ्रष्टो वज्रिणा हतः । २६ ।
 कृत्वाधरां हनुं भूमौ दैत्यो दिव्युत्तरां हनुम् । नभोगम्भीरवज्रेण लेलिहोल्बणजिह्वया । २७ ।
 दंष्ट्राभिः कालकल्पाभिर्घ्नसन्निव जगत्त्रयम् । अतिमात्रमहाकाय आक्षिपंस्तरसा गिरीन् । २८ ।
 गिरिराद् पादचारीव पद्भ्यां निर्जरयन् महीम् । जग्रास स समासाद्य वज्रिणं सहवाहनम् । २९ ।
 महाप्राणो महावीर्यो महासर्प इव द्विपम् । वृत्रग्रस्तं तमालक्ष्य सप्रजापतयः सुराः ।

हा कष्टमिति निर्विण्णाश्चक्रुः समहर्षयः । ३० ।

निगीणोऽप्यसुरेन्द्रेण न ममारोदरं गतः । महापुरुषसन्नद्धो योगमायाबलेन च । ३१ ।
 भित्त्वा वज्रेण तत्कुक्षिं निष्क्रम्य बलभिद् विभुः । उच्चकर्त शिरः शत्रोर्गिरिशृङ्गमिवौजसा । ३२ ।
 वज्रस्तु तत्कन्धरमाशुवेगः कृत्तन् समन्तात् परिवर्तमानः ।
 न्यपातयत् तावदहर्गणेन यो ज्योतिषामयने वार्त्रहत्ये । ३३ ।
 तदा च खे दुन्दुभ्यो विनेदुर्गन्धर्वसिद्धाः समहर्षिसङ्घाः ।
 वार्त्रग्लिङ्गैस्तमभिष्टुवाना मन्त्रैर्मुदा कुसुमैरभ्यवर्षन् । ३४ ।
 वृत्रस्य देहान्निष्क्रान्तमात्मज्योतिरिन्दम । पश्यतां सर्वलोकानामलोकं समपद्यत । ३५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्योऽंशे संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे वृत्रवधो नाम द्वादशोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus talking to each other with a view to ascertaining (the true nature of) Dharma (righteousness), Indra (the chief of the gods) and the demon Vṛtra, who were both endowed with extraordinary prowess and were (great) leaders of warriors, fought on. (23) Whirling his terrible bludgeon made of black (wrought) iron with his left hand, Vṛtra, the chastiser of his foes, hurled it at Indra, O noble Parikṣit ! (24) That (mighty) god (Indra), however, synchronously cut down with his thunderbolt—which had a hundred joints—the bludgeon as well as the hand of Vṛtra that resembled the trunk of an elephant. (25) With both (his) arms cut asunder at the very root, and streaming blood (from the shoulders), the demon (Vṛtra) shone like a mountain struck by Indra (with his thunderbolt) and dropped from the air with both its wings chopped off. (26) The demon, who was possessed of inordinate strength and extraordinary prowess and whose gigantic form was exceedingly tall, (now) stretched his lower jaw to the ground and extended the upper one to heaven; as though devouring (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intervening space) with his mouth, deep as the sky, tongue fearful as the serpent's and teeth fierce as Death, nay, shaking mountains with (great) violence and pounding the earth under his feet like a huge mountain walking about, he went up to Indra (who was armed with his thunderbolt) and swallowed him with Airāvata (that carried him on its back) even as a python would swallow an elephant. Seeing him devoured by Vṛtra, the gods along with the lords of creation (Brahmā and others) and eminent sages were seized with despair and exclaimed, "Ah, what a pity !" (27—30) Though swallowed by Vṛtra (the chief of the demons), and reaching his stomach, Indra did not die, protected as he was by Lord Nārāyaṇa (the Supreme Person in the form of the armour-like Nārāyaṇa-Kavaca) as well as by mystical powers and the powers of conjuration. (31) Ripping up his belly with his thunderbolt, and coming out (in this way), the powerful Indra (the slayer of the demon Bala) with (great) vigour lopped off the enemy's head like the top of a mountain. (32) Though revolving with a quick speed, and cutting on all sides, the thunderbolt (of Indra) felled the neck of Vṛtra in as many (three hundred and sixty) days as are taken by the northward and southward marches of (the sun and other) heavenly bodies, at the time appointed for the death of the demon. (33) At that time drums sounded with a loud noise and the Gandharvas and Siddhas along with hosts of eminent sages joyously showered flowers on him, glorifying him with sacred hymns celebrating the prowess of the slayer of Vṛtra. (34) Issuing forth from the body of Vṛtra in the form of an effulgence, O Parīkṣit (a chastiser of foes), the soul of Vṛtra entered and merged into the Lord (who is beyond all the material worlds, while all the people (present there) looked on (with wonder). (35)

*Thus ends the twelfth discourse entitled "Vṛtra slain," in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise
known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIII

Indra's Victory

श्रीशुक उवाच

वृत्रे हते त्रयो लोका विना शक्रेण भूरिद । सपाला ह्यभवन् सद्यो विज्वरा निर्वृतेन्द्रियाः । १ ।
देवर्षिपितृभूतानि दैत्या देवानुगाः स्वयम् । प्रतिजग्मुःस्वधिष्ण्यानि ब्रह्मेशेन्द्रादयस्ततः । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Vṛtra having (thus) been slain, (all) the three worlds with their guardian deities, excepting, of course, Indra, O munificent Parīkṣit, were immediately rid of anxiety and felt gratified at heart. (1) The gods and sages, manes and spirits, the demons and the attendants of the gods (Gandharvas and others) returned to their (respective) realms of their own accord without taking leave of (Indra) and then Brahmā (the creator), Śiva, Indra and other (great) gods (too) dispersed. (2)

राजोवाच

इन्द्रस्यानिर्वृतेर्हेतुं श्रोतुमिच्छामि भो मुने । येनासन् सुखिनो देवा हरेर्दुःखं कुतोऽभवत् । ३ ।

The king (Parikṣit) said : I long to hear (from you). O (holy) sage, the cause of Indra's unhappiness. Why should there be agony to Indra (the chief of the gods) from something as a result of which the (other) gods felt gratified ? (3)

श्रीशुक उवाच

वृत्रविक्रमसंविप्राः सर्वे देवाः सहर्षिभिः । तद्वधायार्थयन्निन्द्रं नैच्छद् भीतो बृहद्वधात् । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Frightened with the prowess of the demon Vṛtra all the gods along with the sages implored Indra to slay him. He, however, did not feel inclined to do so, afraid as he was of killing a Brāhmaṇa. (4)

इन्द्र उवाच

स्त्रीभूजलद्रुमैरेनो विश्वरूपवधोद्धवम् । विभक्तमनुगृह्णद्भिर्वृत्रहत्यां क्व मान्यहम् । ५ ।

Indra said : The sin caused by the slaughter of Viśwarūpa has (since) been graciously shared by women, the earth, water and the trees. (But) how shall I (be able to) atone for (the sin proceeding from) the slaughter of Vṛtra? (5)

श्रीशुक उवाच

ऋषयस्तदुपाकर्ण्य महेन्द्रमिदमब्रुवन् । याजयिष्याम भद्रं ते हयमेधेन मा स्म भैः । ६ ।

हयमेधेन पुरुषं परमात्मानमीश्वरम् । इष्ट्वा नारायणं देवं मोक्ष्यसेऽपि जगद्वधात् । ७ ।

ब्रह्महा पितृहा गोघ्नो मातृहाऽऽचार्यहाघवान् । श्वादः पुल्कसको वापि शुद्धयेरन् यस्य कीर्तनात् । ८ ।

तमश्वमेधेन महामखेन श्रद्धान्वितोऽस्माभिरनुष्ठितेन ।

हत्वापि सत्रह्य चराचरं त्वं न लिप्यसे किं खलनिग्रहेण । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : On hearing this the sages replied to the mighty Indra as follows:— "We shall get you to propitiate the Lord by means of a horse-sacrifice and all will be well with you. (Pray) too not be afraid. (6) Having worshipped Lord Nārāyaṇa, the Supreme Spirit, the Inner Controller and Ruler of the universe, through a horse-sacrifice you will be absolved even of the sin proceeding from the extermination of the (whole) world. (7) Through the (very) utterance of His Name the murderer of a Brāhmaṇa, the slaughterer of a cow, the slayer of one's father, mother or preceptor and any other sinner, (nay,) one who eats the flesh of a dog and even a man of sinful birth are purified (at once). (8) Propitiating Him with reverence through the great sacrifice, Aśwamedha, which will be performed by us, you will not be touched by sin even after killing the (entire) mobile and immobile creation including the Brāhmaṇa race, much less by the sin that may follow from the subjugation of an evil-doer (like Vṛtra)." (9)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं सञ्चोदितो विप्रैर्मरुत्वानहनद्रिपुम् । ब्रह्महत्या हते तस्मिन्नाससाद वृषाकपिम् । १० ।

तयेन्द्रः स्मासहत् तापं निर्वृतिर्नामुमाविशत् । ह्रीमन्तं वाच्यतां प्राप्तं सुखयन्त्यपि नो गुणाः । ११ ।

तां ददर्शानुधावन्तीं चाण्डालीमिव रूपिणीम् । जरया वेपमानाङ्गीं यक्षमग्रस्तामसृक्पटाम् । १२ ।

विकीर्य पलितान् केशांस्तिष्ठ तिष्ठेति भाषिणीम् । मीनगन्ध्यसुगन्धेन कुर्वतीं मार्गदूषणम् । १३ ।

नभो गतो दिशः सर्वाः सहस्राक्षो विशाम्पते । प्रागुदीचीं दिशं तूर्णं प्रविष्टो नृप मानसम् । १४ ।

स आवसत्पुष्करनालतत्तूनलब्धभोगो यदिहाग्निदूतः ।

वर्षाणि साहस्रमलक्षितोऽन्तः स चिन्तयन् ब्रह्मवधाद् विमोक्षम् । १५ ।

तावत्त्रिणाकं नहुषः शशास विद्यातपोयोगबलानुभावः ।
 स सम्पदैश्वर्यमदायबुद्धिर्नीतस्तिरश्चां गतिमिन्द्रपत्न्या । १६ ।
 ततो गतो ब्रह्मगिरोपहूत ऋतम्भरध्याननिवारिताद्यः ।
 पापस्तु दिग्देवतया हतौजास्तं नाभ्यभूदवितं विष्णुपत्न्या । १७ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus urged by the Brāhmaṇas, Indra killed Vṛtra (his enemy). On his being (thus) slain, the sin of having killed a Brāhmaṇa came upon Indra. (10) Due to (the consciousness of) that sin Indra suffered (untold) agony and no peace of mind returned to him (even for a moment). Even (fortitude and other) virtues fail to bring relief to him who, while endowed with a sense of shame, has incurred obloquy. (11) He saw the aforesaid sin running after him in human form, resembling that of a pariah woman suffering from consumption, clad in blood-stained clothes, her limbs trembling due to old age, and throwing about her grey hair, crying "Stop ! Stop !!" and befouling (the air of) the road with her breaths stinking like (rotten) fish. (12-13) Indra (who is possessed of a thousand eyes located all over his body), O Parikṣit (a ruler of the people), ranged through the sky and (then) in all directions and, (finally) betaking himself to the north-east, O king, quickly entered the Mānasa lake. (14) Pondering within (himself) the means of absolution from the sin of having slain a Brāhmaṇa and getting no subsistence, because he remained under water and had the god of fire (who could not obviously enter water*) for his purveyor (agency conveying sacrificial offerings), Indra lived unperceived (by Brahmahatyā) in the fibres of a lotus-stalk (in the Mānasa lake) for a thousand years. (15) Till then (the famous king) Nahuṣa (of the mortal world)—who had acquired the capacity to rule over Swarga by virtue of (his) worship, asceticism and mystical powers—ruled over (acted as the regent of) the third heaven† (the celestial region). His intellect (however) having been blinded through arrogance caused by opulence and power, he was cast (through an ingenious device‡) into a sub-human species (the serpent race) by Śacī (the virtuous spouse of Indra, whom he claimed as his wife). (16) Called by the invocation of the Brāhmaṇas (sages), Indra—whose sin had (in the meantime) been neutralized through meditation on Śrī Hari (the Upholder of

* A famous commentator of Śrīmad Bhāgavata, however, points out that the god of fire does enter water when carrying oblations to Varuṇa (the god of water residing in water), so that it was not impossible for him to enter the Mānasa lake and purvey food to Indra. The Mānasa lake, however being closely guarded by the attendants of Śrī Rudra, he could not easily enter it without disclosing the secret of Indra's hiding there.

† Swarga (Indra's paradise) is called the third heaven inasmuch as it is the third in order of the seven upper spheres of the universe from the earth onwards, the terrestrial sphere (which has also been declared to be a place of enjoyment of the fruit of one's merits, with the exception of Bhāratavarṣa, which is pre-eminently a place for action—Karmabhūmi—vide V. xvii. II).

‡ Having ascended the throne of Indra, Nahuṣa—who was attracted by the extraordinary charms of the former's spouse, Śacī, claimed her as his legitimate wife and invited her accordingly to live with him. Śacī, who was the wedded wife of Indra and was, therefore, exclusively devoted to him, naturally disdained his invitation and sought the advice of the sage Brhaspati (Indra's preceptor and family priest, who had since returned and resumed his office) how to elude the grasp of Nahuṣa, whom she could not openly defy because of her forlorn condition. The sagacious Brhaspati, who naturally sympathized with the virtuous lady advised her that she should offer to meet Nahuṣa provided he should visit her in a palanquin borne by Brāhmaṇa sages. Nahuṣa, who was blinded with passion, readily agreed and commanded Agastya and other sages to carry him in a palanquin to Śacī's palace. In his eagerness to see the celestial lady, he goaded the bearers to proceed apace, and even touched the venerable sage Agastya with his foot saying "Move on, move on (सर्वे, सर्वे)". Enraged at this insolent behaviour on the part of the arrogant monarch, the sage pronounced a curse against him that he should fall down and be reborn in the serpent race. The execration uttered by the sage could not be otherwise and the king fell down at once from heaven and was transformed into a python and eventually redeemed in the following Dwāpara age by the virtuous king Yudhiṣṭhira.

truth)-returned after that to heaven; and the sin (of having killed a Brāhmaṇa)-that had been deprived of its force by Śrī Rudra (the deity presiding over the north-east)—could not assail him, protected (as he was) by Goddess Lakṣmī (the divine Consort of Lord Viṣṇu, dwelling in the bed of lotuses in the Mānasa lake). (17)

तं च ब्रह्मर्षयोऽभ्येत्य हयमेधेन भारत । यथावदीक्षयाञ्चक्रुः पुरुषाराधनेन ह । १८ ।
 अथेज्यमाने पुरुषे सर्वदेवमयात्मनि । अश्वमेधे महेन्द्रेण वितते ब्रह्मवादिभिः । १९ ।
 स वै त्वाष्ट्रवधो भूयानपि पापचयो नृप । नीतस्तेनैव शून्याय नीहार इव भानुना । २० ।
 स वाजिमेधेन यथोदितेन वितायमानेन मरीचिमिश्रैः ।
 इष्ट्वाधियज्ञं पुरुषं पुराणमिन्द्रो महानास विधूतपापः । २१ ।
 इदं महाख्यानमशेषाप्यनां प्रक्षालनं तीर्थपदानुकीर्तनम् ।
 भक्त्युच्छ्रयं भक्तजनानुवर्णनं महेन्द्रमोक्षं विजयं मरुत्वतः । २२ ।
 पठेयुराख्यानमिदं सदा बुधाः शृण्वन्त्यथो पर्वणि पर्वणीन्द्रियम् ।
 धन्यं यशस्यं निखिलाघमोचनं रिपुञ्जयं स्वस्त्ययनं तथाऽऽयुषम् । २३ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे इन्द्रविजयो नाम त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः । १३ ।

Brāhmaṇa sages (now) approached him, O Parikṣit (a scion of Bharata), and duly consecrated him, they say, for a horse-sacrifice intended to propitiate Śrī Hari (the Supreme Person). (18) Now, while the Supreme Person, who embodies in Himself all the divinities, was being worshipped by the mighty Indra in the course of the (aforesaid) horse-sacrifice elaborately performed through the instrumentality of sages who were (great) expositors of the Vedas, even that huge mass of sin in the shape of the slaughter of the demon Vṛtra (son of the god Twaṣṭā), O king, was actually reduced to nothingness by that very sacrifice just as the hoar-frost is melted by the sun. (19-20) By propitiating the most ancient Person, the Deity presiding over sacrifices, through the (said) horse-sacrifice—which was being elaborately performed according to the scriptural ordinance through the instrumentality of Marīci and other sages—the aforesaid Indra was completely rid of his sins and became great (once more). (21) This great narrative is (decidedly) instrumental in washing off all one's sins and conducive to the growth of Devotion, replete as it is with the praises of the Lord (whose holy feet enable one to ford the vast ocean of metempsychosis), containing an account of His (great) devotee (Vṛtra) as well as of the absolution and decisive victory of the mighty Indra, nicknamed as Marutvān. (22) Therefore, the wise should always recite or hear (at least) on every festival this story relating to Indra, which brings wealth, fame and longevity, is a means of ridding one of all sinful propensities, and a source of (all) blessings and helps one to conquer one's enemies. (23)

*Thus ends the thirteenth discourse entitled "The victory of Indra"
 in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIV

The Lament of Citraketu

परीक्षितुवाच

रजस्तमःस्वभावस्य ब्रह्मन् वृत्रस्य पाप्मनः । नारायणे भगवति कथमासीद् दृढा मतिः । १ ।
 देवानां शुद्धसत्त्वानामृषीणां चामलात्मनाम् । भक्तिर्मुकुन्दचरणे न प्रायेणोपजायते । २ ।
 रजोभिः समसंख्याताः पार्थिवैरिह जन्तवः । तेषां ये केचनेहन्ते श्रेयो वै मनुजादयः । ३ ।
 प्रायो मुमुक्षवस्तेषां केचनैव द्विजोत्तम । मुमुक्षूणां सहस्रेषु कश्चिन्मुच्येत सिध्यति । ४ ।
 मुक्तानामपि सिद्धानां नारायणपरायणः । सुदुर्लभः प्रशान्तात्मा कोटिष्वपि महामुने । ५ ।
 वृत्रस्तु स कथं पापः सर्वलोकोपतापनः । इत्थं दृढमतिः कृष्ण आसीत् संग्राम उल्बणे । ६ ।
 अत्र नः संशयो भूयाञ्छ्रोतुं कौतूहलं प्रभो । यः पौरुषेण समरे सहस्राक्षमतोषयत् । ७ ।

Parīkṣit submitted : How did (such an) unflinching devotion to the almighty Nārāyaṇa appear in the heart of the sinful Vṛtra, whose nature, O holy Brāhmaṇa, was predominated by Rajas and Tamas? (1) Devotion to the feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Bestower of Liberation) does not ordinarily develop in the heart of (even) gods, whose intellect is (generally) pure, and sages, whose mind is untainted by sin. (2) Living beings in this universe are as numerous (innumerable) as there are particles of dust. Of them, only a few human creature and other (higher) beings, as a matter of fact, practise virtue. (3) Of them (again) seekers of liberation are ordinarily only few, O jewel among the Brāhmaṇas ! And among thousands of those seeking release scarce one is completely rid of attachment (to his home etc.) and attains success (in the shape of Self-Realization). (4) Even among tens of millions of those who have been rid of identification with the body etc., and even realized the Self, he whose mind is perfectly serene (entirely free from the craving for sense-gratification) and solely devoted to (the feet of) Lord Nārāyaṇa is most difficult to find. (5) How, then, did the sinful Vṛtra, the tormentor of all the worlds, who gratified by his valour on the battle-field (even) Indra (the thousand-eyed lord of paradise), remain so steadfast in (his) devotion to the Lord (the Attractor of all) in the midst of a fierce combat ? Great is our doubt in this matter and so is our eagerness to hear about it, O Master. (6-7)

सूत उवाच

परीक्षितोऽथ संप्रश्नं भगवान् बादरायणिः । निशम्य श्रद्धानस्य प्रतिनन्द्य वचोऽब्रवीत् । ८ ।

Sūta continued : The glorious Śūta (the son of Bādarāyaṇa, more popularly known as Vedavyāsa) welcomed the relevant enquiry of the devout king Parīkṣit, when he heard it, and then made the following reply. (8)

श्रीशुक उवाच

शृणुष्वावहितो राजत्रितिहासमिमं यथा । श्रुतं द्वैपायनमुखान्तरादादेवलादपि । ९ ।
 आसीद्राजा सार्वभौमः शूरसेनेषु वै नृप । चित्रकेतुरिति ख्यातो यस्यासीत् कामधुङ्गही । १० ।
 तस्य भार्यासहस्राणां सहस्राणि दशाभवन् । सान्त्तानिकश्चापि नृपो न लेभे तासु सन्ततिम् । ११ ।
 रूपौदार्यवयोजन्मविद्यैश्वर्यश्रियादिभिः । सम्यन्नस्य गुणैः सर्वैश्चिन्ता वन्द्यापतेरभूत् । १२ ।
 न तस्य संपदः सर्वा महिष्यो वामलोचनाः । सार्वभौमस्य भूश्चेयमभवन् प्रीतिहेतवः । १३ ।

तस्यैकदा तु भवनमङ्गिरा भगवानृषिः । लोकाननुचरन्नेतानुपागच्छद्यदृच्छया ॥ १४ ॥
 तं पूजयित्वा विधिवत्प्रत्युत्थानार्हणादिभिः । कृतातिथ्यमुपासीदत्सुखासीनं समाहितः ॥ १५ ॥
 महर्षिस्तमुपासीनं प्रश्रयावनतं क्षितौ । प्रतिपूज्य महाराज समाभाष्येदमब्रवीत् ॥ १६ ॥

Śrī Śuka said : Hear attentively, O king, the following legend as heard (by me) from the mouth of (my father,) the sage Vedavyāsa (who was born in an island), as well as from the sages Nārada and Devala. (9) In the Śūrasena country (the tract lying about the city of Mathurā), so-the tradition goes, there was a king, called by the name of Citraketu, O Parikṣit, who ruled over the entire globe and to whom the earth yielded everything sought after (by him). (10) He had a crore wives; but, though capable of procreation, the emperor got no issue by (any of) them. (11) Anxiety now laid hold of Citraketu, who, though (fully) endowed with beauty, generosity, youth, noble lineage, learning, (universal) sovereignty, imperial fortune and all other virtues, was (yet) the husband of barren ladies. (12) All his riches, fair-eyed queens and (even the sovereignty of) this earth did not prove a source of delight to that ruler of the entire globe. (13) Ranging through these worlds, however, the glorious sage Aṅgirā on one occasion came to his house by chance. (14) Having honoured him with due ceremony by rising to greet him and offering him articles of worship etc., the emperor sat with a collected mind near the sage, who was now comfortably seated, having been (fully) entertained as a guest. (15) The great sage (Aṅgirā). O emperor, showed every courtesy and consideration in return to Citraketu, who sat close to him on the (bare) ground, bent low with modesty, and, calling his attention (to him), spoke the following words. (16)

अङ्गिरा उवाच

अपि तेऽनामयं स्वस्ति प्रकृतीनां तथाऽऽत्मनः । यथा प्रकृतिभिर्गुप्तः पुमान् राजापि सप्तभिः ॥ १७ ॥
 आत्मानं प्रकृतिष्वद्धा निधाय श्रेय आप्नुयात् । राज्ञा तथा प्रकृतयो नरदेवाहिताधयः ॥ १८ ॥
 अपि दाराः प्रजामात्या भृत्याः श्रेण्योऽथ मन्त्रिणः । पौरा जानपदा भूपा आत्मजा वशवर्तिनः ॥ १९ ॥
 यस्यात्मानुवशश्चेत्स्यात्सर्वे तद्दशगा इमे । लोकाः सपाला यच्छन्ति सर्वे बलिमतन्द्रिताः ॥ २० ॥
 आत्मनः प्रीयते नात्मा परतः स्वत एव वा । लक्षयेऽलब्धकामं त्वां चिन्तया शबलं मुखम् ॥ २१ ॥
 एवं विकल्पितो राजन् विदुषा मुनिनापि सः । प्रश्रयावनतोऽभ्याह प्रजाकामस्ततो मुनिम् ॥ २२ ॥

Aṅgirā said : Is everything well with your person as well as with your Prakṛtis (the constituent elements of a state, viz., the high priest, the chief minister, the territories, i.e., the people, the fortresses, the treasury, the police and army—that enforce law and order—and the allies) and are you enjoying a sound health—you as well as your Prakṛtis ? (Even) as a Jīva (the embodied soul) is protected by the seven material sheaths (viz., Mahattattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, the ego and the five subtle elements), so the king too is protected by the (aforesaid) seven constituent elements. (17) A king can enjoy the blessings of sovereignty by actually placing himself under the control of his Prakṛtis; (and) the Prakṛtis are likewise enriched by the king (by following his will and carrying out his commands), O ruler of men. (18) Are your wives, subjects, ministers, servants, people following particular trades, counsellors, citizens and inhabitants of the other parts (of your state), tributary chiefs and offspring obedient to your will ? (19) All these (unquestionably) follow the will of the man whose mind is under his control. (Nay,) all the worlds along with their guardian deities dutifully offer tribute to him. (20) (It seems to me that) your mind is not pleased either with others or with your own self. (For) I find your face discoloured with anxiety, and (thereby) conclude that you have not attained the object of your desire. (21) Subjected thus, O Parikṣit, to various presumptions by the sage, even though the latter knew everything (by intuition), Citraketu, who was full of longing for a son, and was bent low with modesty, thereupon replied to the sage (as follows). (22)

चित्रकेतुर्वाच

भगवन् किं न विदितं तपोज्ञानसमाधिभिः । योगिनां ध्वस्तपापानां बहिरन्तः शरीरिषु । २३ ।

तथापि पृच्छतो ब्रूयां ब्रह्मन्नात्मनि चिन्तितम् । भवतो विदुषश्चापि चोदितस्त्वदनुज्ञया । २४ ।

लोकपालैरपि प्रार्थ्याः साम्राज्यैश्वर्यसम्पदः । न नन्दयन्त्यप्रजं मां क्षुत्तृक्काममिवापरे । २५ ।

ततः पाहि महाभाग पूर्वैः सह गतं तमः । यथा तरेम दुस्तारं प्रजया तद् विधेहि नः । २६ ।

Citraketu submitted : O worshipful sage, what is there without or (even) within (in the mind of) embodied beings, which is not known to Yogīs (like you) whose sins have been wiped out through asceticism, spiritual enlightenment and deep concentration of mind ? (23) Yet, prompted by your command. I should speak out, O holy Brāhmaṇa, the thought (which is foremost) in my mind to you, who ask me about it even though you know it. (24) The sovereignty of the entire globe and the power and affluence attending it—which are worthy of being coveted even by the guardians of the spheres—bring no delight to me, issueless as I am, just as other things do not rejoice him who longs for food and drink under pressure of hunger and thirst. (25) Therefore, (be pleased to) protect me, O highly blessed one, and do that for us whereby we may be able with the help of a son to get out of the dark abyss of hell (the lot of those who die issueless) which has (all but) been reached by us along with our forefathers, and which is so difficult to cross over. (26)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यर्थितः स भगवान् कृपालुर्ब्रह्मणः सुतः । श्रपयित्वा चरं त्वाष्ट्रं त्वष्टारमयजद् विभुः । २७ ।

ज्येष्ठा श्रेष्ठा च या राज्ञो महिषीणां च भारत । नाम्ना कृतद्युतिस्तस्यै यज्ञोच्छिष्टमदाद् द्विजः । २८ ।

अथाह नृपतिं राजन् भवितैकस्तवात्मजः । हर्षशोकप्रदस्तुभ्यमिति ब्रह्मसुतो ययौ । २९ ।

सापि तस्माशनादेव चित्रकेतोरधारयत् । गर्भं कृतद्युतिर्देवी कृत्तिकाम्रेरिवात्मजम् । ३० ।

तस्या अनुदिनं गर्भः शुक्लपक्ष इवोदुपः । ववृधे शूरसेनेशतेजसा शनकैर्नृप । ३१ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Implored thus, that glorious, merciful and mighty son of Brāhmā got a special oblation prepared for being offered to the god Twaṣṭā, and propitiated the said god with the same. (27) The (holy) Brāhmaṇa further gave the remainder of the sacrificial offering to the queen known by the name of Kṛtadyuti, who was the eldest and the foremost (in other respects too) of all the king's spouses, O Parīkṣit (a descendant of Bharata) ! (28) The sage Aṅgirā (Brāhmā's son) then said to Citraketu (a ruler of men), "O king ! a son, who will be a source of (both) joy and grief to you, will be born to you !" and left. (29) Merely by eating the remainder of that sacrificial oblation even Kṛtadyuti (who was barren) conceived a child through Citraketu just as the goddess Kṛtikā (the deity presiding over the constellation of that name) conceived a son through the god of fire. (30) The embryo in the womb of that lady, which owed its existence to king Citraketu (the ruler of the Śūrasena territory) gradually developed from day to day, (even) as the moon (the lord of the stars), O king (Parīkṣit), waxes during the bright fortnight. (31)

अथ काल उपावृते कुमारः समजायत । जनयन् शूरसेनानां शृण्वतां परमां मुदम् । ३२ ।

हृष्टो राजा कुमारस्य स्नातः शुचिरलंकृतः । वाचयित्वाऽऽशिषो विप्रैः कारयामास जातकम् । ३३ ।

तेभ्यो हिरण्यं रजतं वासांस्याभरणानि च । ग्रामान् हयान् गजान् प्रादाद् धेनूनामर्बुदानि षट् । ३४ ।

ववर्ष काममन्येषां पर्जन्य इव देहिनाम् । धन्यं यशस्यमायुष्यं कुमारस्य महामनाः । ३५ ।

कृच्छ्रलब्धेऽथ राजर्षेस्तनयेऽनुदिनं पितुः । यथा निःस्वस्य कृच्छ्राग्ने धने स्नेहोऽन्ववर्धत । ३६ ।

मातुस्त्वतितरां पुत्रे स्नेहो मोहसमुद्भवः । कृतद्युतेः सपत्नीनां प्रजाकामज्वरोऽभवत् । ३७ ।
 चित्रकेतोरतिप्रीतिर्यथा दारे प्रजावति । न तथान्येषु सञ्जज्ञे बालं लालयतोऽन्वहम् । ३८ ।
 ताः पर्यतप्यन्नात्मानं गर्हयन्त्योऽभ्यसूयया । आनपत्येन दुःखेन राज्ञोऽनादरणेन च । ३९ ।
 धिगप्रजां स्त्रियं पापां पत्युश्चागृहसम्मताम् । सुप्रजाभिः सपत्नीभिर्दासीमिव तिरस्कृताम् । ४० ।
 दासीनां को नु सन्तापः स्वामिनः परिचर्यया । अभीक्ष्णं लब्धमानानां दास्या दासीव दुर्भगाः । ४१ ।
 एवं सन्दह्यमानानां सपत्न्याः पुत्रसम्पदा । राज्ञोऽसम्मतवृत्तीनां विद्वेषो बलवानभूत् । ४२ ।
 विद्वेषनष्टमतयः स्त्रियो दारुणचेतसः । गरं ददुः कुमाराय दुर्मर्षा नृपतिं प्रति । ४३ ।
 कृतद्युतिरजानन्ती सपत्नीनामघं महत् । सुप्त एवेति सञ्चिन्त्य निरीक्ष्य व्यचरद् गृहे । ४४ ।
 शयानं सुचिरं बालमुपधार्य मनीषिणी । पुत्रमानय मे भद्रे इति धात्रीमचोदयत् । ४५ ।
 सा शयानमुपव्रज्य दृष्ट्वा चोत्तारलोचनम् । प्राणेन्द्रियात्मभित्त्यक्तं हतासीत्यपतद्भुवि । ४६ ।

Now, when the time (of delivery) came, a son was duly born, causing supreme delight to (all) the inhabitants of the Śūrasena territory, who heard of it. (32) The king, who felt (much) delighted (at the news), took his bath and, (thus) purified, he adorned himself with ornaments. Then, getting the Brāhmaṇas to pronounce benedictions (on the babe), he caused the rite called Jātakarma (the ceremony of touching a new-born babe's tongue thrice with ghee after appropriate prayers) to be performed (for the purification of the child). (33) To the Brāhmaṇas he gifted gold and silver, clothes and ornaments, and villages, horses and elephants and sixty million cows. (34) Like a rain-cloud sending down showers according to the will of the people, the generous king (Citraketu) gratified the desire of other men (as well) by making gifts calculated to bring riches, glory and longevity to the babe. (35) The affection of the father, the royal sage (Citraketu), for his son, who had been got after great hardship, constantly grew from day to day like the love of a pauper for his hard-earned money. (36) The attachment of the mother to her son, however, grew to an excessive degree, caused as it was by infatuation; while agony in the shape of longing for a son appeared in the heart of the co-wives of queen Kṛtadyuti. (37) Even as Citraketu fondled the babe everyday, no such type of excessive fondness appeared in his heart for his other wives as he developed for the one who was blessed with a son. (38) Reproaching themselves through jealousy, they felt agonized (in their heart) due to the grief caused by issuelessness and the indifference shown to them by the king (their husband). (39) Fie upon the accursed woman without a child, (who is) not esteemed at home by her husband and is insulted like a maid-servant by her co-wives blessed with good children. (40) What agony can be the lot of maid-servants (who are) constantly honoured because of their service rendered to the master? We wretched women (however) are (no better than) the maid-servant of a maid-servant (worse even than a maid-servant). (41) In this way there sprang up (a feeling of) bitter hatred in the heart of those queens whose life was neglected by the king and who were fully burning with jealousy at the fortune of their co-wife in the shape of a son. (42) The cruel-hearted ladies, who had lost their good sense through deep malice and were full of resentment towards the king, administered poison to the babe. (43) Queen Kṛtadyuti, who had no idea of the grievous misdeed of her co-wives, thought on looking at it that the babe was asleep, and went about in the palace. (44) Perceiving (however) that the babe had been sleeping too long, the wise queen commanded the nurse who suckled the child in the following words: "Bring me the babe, O good woman!" (45) When (however) she went near the babe lying in bed, and found that the pupils of its eyes had turned upwards and that life, the senses and other faculties and the soul (too) had quitted it, she cried "I am finished!" and dropped on the ground. (46)

तस्यास्तदाऽऽकर्ण्य भृशतुरं स्वरं घ्नन्त्याः कराभ्यामु उच्चकैरपि ।
 प्रविश्य राज्ञी त्वरयाऽऽत्मजान्तिकं ददर्श बालं सहसा मृतं सुतम् । ४७ ।
 पपात भूमौ परिवृद्धया शुचा मुमोह विभ्रष्टशिरोरुहाम्बरा । ४८ ।
 ततो नृपान्तःपुरवर्तिनो जना नराश्च नार्यश्च निशम्य रोदनम् ।
 आगत्य तुल्यव्यसनाःसुदुःखितास्ताश्च व्यलीकं रुरुदुः कृतागसः । ४९ ।
 श्रुत्वा मृतं पुत्रमलक्षितान्तकं विनष्टदृष्टिः प्रपतन् स्वलन् पथि ।
 स्नेहानुबन्धैधितया शुचा भृशं विमूर्च्छितोऽनुप्रकृतिर्द्विजैर्वृतः । ५० ।
 पपात बालस्य स पादमूले मृतस्य विस्रस्तशिरोरुहाम्बरः ।
 दीर्घं श्वसन् बाष्पकलोपरोधतो निरुद्धकण्ठो न शशाक भाषितुम् । ५१ ।
 पतिं निरीक्ष्योरुशुचार्षितं तदा मृतं च बालं सुतमेकसन्ततिम् ।
 जनस्य राज्ञी प्रकृतेश्च हृद्रुजं सती दधाना विललाप चित्रधा । ५२ ।
 स्तनद्वयं कुङ्कुमगन्धमण्डितं निषिञ्चती साञ्जनबाष्पविन्दुभिः ।
 विकीर्य केशान् विगलत्स्त्रजः सुतं शुशोच चित्रं कुररीव सुस्वरम् । ५३ ।

Hearing at that time the most painful cry of the nurse, who was violently beating her breast too with both hands, the queen quickly entered into the presence of her child and found her infant son a victim of sudden death. (47) Due to excessive grief she fainted and fell on the ground, her hair flung about and garments thrown out of order. (48) Hearing the wail, the inmates of the royal gynaeceum, both men and women, thereupon came (to the spot) and, sharing the queen's grief and, therefore, much distressed, fell to weeping; (nay), even the queens who had perpetrated the crime shed crocodile tears. (49) Hearing that his son had died, though the cause of his death was (still) unknown, the king lost his vision through grief intensified beyond measure by uninterrupted love. Followed by his ministers and other people and surrounded by the Brāhmaṇas (priests), he (too) came stumbling and falling on the way and, sighing deeply, dropped unconscious near the feet of the dead child, his hair dishevelled and, clothes thrown about in disorder; and, his throat choked due to obstruction caused by tears, he could not utter a word. (50-51) Seeing her husband overwhelmed with excessive grief and the infant son, her only progeny, dead, the virtuous queen then wailed in various ways, (thereby) enhancing the heart-ache of the people as well as of the ministers and others (present there). (52) Bathing her breasts—painted with saffron and sandal paste—with the drops of her tears mixed with collyrium and throwing about her hair with the flowers dropping from them, she mourned (the death of) her child like a female osprey in loud and diverse tones (as follows) :— (53)

अहो विधातस्त्वमतीव बालिशो यस्त्वात्मसृष्ट्यप्रतिरूपमीहसे ।
 परेऽनुजीवत्यपरस्य या मृतिर्विपर्ययश्चेत्त्वमसि ध्रुवः परः । ५४ ।
 न हि क्रमश्चेदिह मृत्युजन्मनोः शरीरिणामस्तु तदाऽऽत्मकर्मभिः ।
 यः स्नेहपाशो निजसर्गवृद्धये स्वयं कृतस्ते तमिमं विवृश्सि । ५५ ।
 त्वं तात नार्हसि च मां कृपणामनाथां त्यक्तुं विचक्ष्व पितरं तव शोकतप्तम् ।
 अञ्जस्तेरेम भवताप्रजदुस्तरं यद् ध्वान्तं न याह्यकरुणेन यमेन दूरम् । ५६ ।
 उत्तिष्ठ तात त इमे शिशवो वयस्यास्त्वामाह्वयन्ति नृपनन्दन संविहर्तुम् ।

सुप्तश्चिरं ह्यशनया च भवान् परीतो भुङ्क्ष्व स्तनं पिब शुचो हर नः स्वकानाम् । ५७ ।
 नाहं तनूज ददुशे हतमङ्गला ते मुग्धस्मितं मुदितवीक्षणमाननाब्जम् ।
 किं वा गतोऽस्यपुनरन्वयमन्यलोकं नीतोऽघृणेन न शृणोमि कला गिरस्ते । ५८ ।

"Alas, O creator, you are extremely foolish in that you act contrary to (the interests of) your own creation. Oh, the death of a youngster while an elder is (still) living points (unmistakably) to this. If (however) you are (just) the reverse (a wise fellow doing all this designedly), you are our constant enemy (and no benefactor). (54) If (it is urged that) there is no (strict) regularity in this world in the matter of death and birth of embodied beings, then let everything happen according to their Karma (independently of you). (It is, however, strange that) you are cutting asunder (by wresting babes from the hands of their parents) this cord of affection, which was produced by yourself for the growth of your creation ! (55) (Addressing her dead child,) and you, dear child, ought not to forsake me, a wretched and helpless woman; (O) look at your father, burning with grief. With you (as our pilot) we could easily cross the dark region of hell, which is difficult to cross for the issueless. (Please) do not go far in the company of cruel Death. (56) Arise, darling! These infant playmates of yours, O prince, are calling you to romp freely (with them). You have slept long and must be seized with hunger. (Therefore,) eat something, suck my breasts and take away the grief of us (all), your near and dear ones. (57) Having lost (all) good fortune, I could not (get to) behold (when I came by your side to see you) your lotus-like countenance with its innocent smile and cheerful glances. Or, taken by the cruel Death, have you gone to the other world, whence you are not going to return ? (For) I no longer hear your sweet words." (58)

श्रीशुक उवाच

विलपन्त्या मृतं पुत्रमिति चित्रविलापनैः । चित्रकेतुर्भृशं तप्तो मुक्तकण्ठो रुरोद ह । ५९ ।
 तयोर्विलपतोः सर्वे दम्पत्योस्तदनुव्रताः । रुरुदुः स नरा नार्यः सर्वमासीदचेतनम् । ६० ।
 एवं कश्मलमापन्नं नष्टसंज्ञमनायकम् । ज्ञात्वाङ्गिरा नाम मुनिराजगाम सनारदः । ६१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे चित्रकेतुविलापो नाम चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Along with the queen, (who was) mourning her departed son through such varied laments, Emperor Citraketu (too) wailed at the top of his voice, extremely agonized as he was. (59) While the couple were (thus) wailing, all those who were devoted to him, men as well as women, wept and everything was lifeless (as it were). (60) Knowing the king to have lost (all) consciousness due to his having given way to despair, and without a guide the sage named Aṅgirā appeared (at the scene) along with Nārada. (61)

*Thus ends the fourteenth discourse entitled "The lament of Citraketu," in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XV Citraketu consoled

श्रीशुक उवाच

ऊचतुर्मृतकोपान्ते पतितं मृतकोपमम् । शोकाभिभूतं राजानं बोधयन्तौ सद्गुक्तिभिः । १ ।
कोऽयं स्यात् तव राजेन्द्र भवान् यमनुशोचति । त्वं चास्य कतमः सृष्टौ पुरेदानीमतः परम् । २ ।
यथा प्रयान्ति संयान्ति स्रोतोवेगेन वालुकाः । संयुज्यन्ते वियुज्यन्ते तथा कालेन देहिनः । ३ ।
यथा धानासु वै धाना भवन्ति न भवन्ति च । एवं भूतेषु भूतानि चोदितानीशमायया । ४ ।
वयं च त्वं च ये चेमे तुल्यकालाश्चराचराः । जन्ममृत्योर्यथा पश्चात् प्राङ् नैवमधुनापि भोः । ५ ।
भूतैर्भूतानि भूतेशः सृजत्यवति हन्त्यजः । आत्मसृष्टैस्वतन्त्रैरनपेक्षोऽपि बालवत् । ६ ।
देहेन देहिनो राजन् देहादेहोऽभिजायते । बीजादेव यथा बीजं देहार्थ इव शाश्वतः । ७ ।
देहदेहिविभागोऽयमविवेककृतः पुरा । जातिव्यक्तिविभागोऽयं यथा वस्तुनि कल्पितः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Enlightening, by means of wise utterances, king Citraketu, who was lying by the side of the dead babe like a dead man, overwhelmed as he was with grief, the sages Aṅgirā and Nārada spoke (as follows):—(1) "In what relation did the boy whom you are lamenting (just now), O king of kings, stand to you in a previous birth, what is he to you at present and what will he be to you hereafter ? Again, what were you to him in a former incarnation, what are you at present and what will you be hereafter ? (2) Just as stands part (from one another) and come together by the current of a stream, so are embodied beings brought together and parted by Time. (3) Just as seeds do spring up from (other) seeds (in some cases), and do not spring up (in other cases), so do living beings prompted by the Lord's Māyā evolve from (other) living beings (in some cases) and do not (in other cases). (4) You and we and all these mobile and immobile creatures belonging to the present time do not (really) exist even now (just) as we did not before birth and shall not be after death, O Citraketu ! (5) It is God (the Lord of created beings) who, though unborn (and imperishable) and (absolutely) unconcerned, creates, protects and destroys living beings (sportfully) as a child through (other) beings evolved by Himself and (therefore) not independent. (6) The body of one embodied being (in the shape of a son), O king, is evolved from the body of another embodied being (in the shape of the mother) united with the body of a third embodied being (in the shape of the father), just as one seed springs up from another seed: while the soul inhabiting all these bodies is eternal like God (the only Reality). (7) The aforesaid distinction of body and soul has existed from eternity and has been conceived through ignorance even as the distinction of the generic property and the individuality of a thing assumed as inhering in the thing itself (although the two are interdependent and cannot therefore be really distinguished)." (8)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमाश्वासितो राजा चित्रकेतुर्द्विजोक्तिभिः । प्रमृज्य पाणिना वक्त्रमाधिम्लानमभाषत । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus consoled by the words of the (holy) Brāhmaṇas (Aṅgirā and Nārada), king Chitraketu wiped his face, withered through mental anguish (caused by his son's death) with his hand and spoke (as follows). (9)

राजोवाच

कौ युवां ज्ञानसम्पन्नौ महिष्ठौ च महीयसाम् । अवधूतेन वेषेण गूढाविह समागतौ । १० ।

चरन्ति ह्यवनौ कामं ब्राह्मणा भगवत्प्रियाः । मादृशां ग्राम्यबुद्धीनां बोधायोन्मत्तलिङ्गिनः । ११ ।
 कुमारो नारद ऋभुरङ्गिरा देवलोऽसितः । अपान्तरतमो व्यासो मार्कण्डेयोऽथ गौतमः । १२ ।
 वसिष्ठो भगवान् रामः कपिलो बादरायणिः । दुर्वासा याज्ञवल्क्यश्च जातूकर्ण्यस्तथाऽऽरुणिः । १३ ।
 रोमशश्च्यवनो दत्त आसुरिः सपतञ्जलिः । ऋषिवेदशिरा बोध्यो मुनिः पञ्चशिरास्तथा । १४ ।
 हिरण्यनाभः कौसल्यः श्रुतदेव ऋतध्वजः । एते परे च सिद्धेशाश्चरन्ति ज्ञानहेतवः । १५ ।
 तस्माद्युवां ग्राम्यपशोर्मम मूढधियः प्रभू । अन्धे तमसि मग्नस्य ज्ञानदीप उदीर्यताम् । १६ ।

The king said : Who are you, rich in wisdom and the most adored of the adorable, that have come here, disguised in the form of ascetics absolutely unconcerned with the world ? (10) Indeed Brāhmaṇas (lit., those identified with Brahma), who are beloved of the Lord, go about the earth at will, disguised as mad men, for admonishing sensually-minded people like me. (11) Sanatkumāra, Nārada, Ṛbhu, Aṅgirā, Devala, Asita, Apāntaratama, Vyāsa, Mārkaṇḍeya and Gautama, Vasiṣṭha, the glorious Paraśurāma, Kapila, Śuka (son of Bādarāyaṇa), Durvāsā and Yājñavalkya, Jātūkarnya and Āruṇi, Romaśa, Cyavana, Dattātreyā, Āsuri with Patañjali, the seer Vedaśirā, the sage Bodhya, Pañcaśirā, Hiraṇyanābha, Kausalya, Śrutadeva, and Ṛtadhwaṇa—these and other lords of Siddhas (enlightened souls) range (over the earth) with the object of imparting wisdom (to qualified souls). (12—15) Therefore, you two are the masters of my stupid self, a sensual brute. (Pray,) hold aloft the lamp of wisdom to me, plunged in blinding darkness (in the shape of ignorance). (16)

अङ्गिरा उवाच

अहं ते पुत्रकामस्य पुत्रदोऽस्म्यङ्गिरा नृप । एष ब्रह्मसुतः साक्षान्नारदो भगवानृषिः । १७ ।
 इत्थं त्वां पुत्रशोकेन मग्नं तमसि दुस्तरे । अतदर्हमनुस्मृत्य महापुरुषगोचरम् । १८ ।
 अनुग्रहाय भवतः प्राप्तावावामिह प्रभो । ब्रह्मण्यो भगवद्भक्तो नावसीदितुमर्हति । १९ ।
 तदेव ते परं ज्ञानं ददामि गृहमागतः । ज्ञात्वान्याभिनिवेशं ते पुत्रमेव ददावहम् । २० ।
 अधुना पुत्रिणां तापो भवतैवानुभूयते । एवं दारा गृहा रायो विविधैश्वर्यसम्पदः । २१ ।
 शब्दादयश्च विषयाश्चला राज्यविभूतयः । मही राज्यं बलं कोशो भृत्यामात्याः सुहज्जनाः । २२ ।
 सर्वेऽपि शूरसेनेमे शोकमोहभयार्तिदाः । गन्धर्वनगरप्रख्याः स्वप्नमायामनोरथाः । २३ ।
 दृश्यमाना विनार्थेन न दृश्यन्ते मनोभवाः । कर्मभिर्ध्यायतो नानाकर्माणि मनसोऽभवन् । २४ ।
 अयं हि देहिनो देहो द्रव्यज्ञानक्रियात्मकः । देहिनो विविधक्लेशसन्तापकृदुदाहतः । २५ ।
 तस्मात् स्वस्थेन मनसा विमृश्य गतिमात्मनः । द्वैते ध्रुवार्थविश्रम्भं त्यजोपशममाविश । २६ ।

The sage Aṅgirā said : I am (the same) Aṅgirā, who blessed you with a son when you longed for one, O king ! (And) here is the divine sage Nārada, son of Brahmā (the creator) himself. (17) Knowing you, a devotee of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person), plunged in (a sea of) despondency—difficult to get through—due to grief caused by the loss of your son, though not fit to be drowned in it, we have come down here to shower our grace on you, O Citraketu ! (For) a votary of the Brāhmaṇas and a devotee of the Lord does not deserve to be despondent. (18-19) I was going to impart the highest wisdom to you even then when I visited your house (for the first time). Coming to know of your insistence on having something else (however), I conferred on you (the boon of) a son alone. (20) Now the agony of those blessed with a son is being directly experienced by you. Even so a wife, house, riches, power and prosperity of various kinds, sound and the other objects of sense, the fleeting glories of sovereignty, lands, kingdom, army, treasury, dependants and ministers and friends and relations—all these, O ruler of the Śūrasena territory, are sources of grief, infatuation, fear and affliction. (Nay,) they are (of a momentary nature) like an imaginary city seen in the sky and are of the nature of (similar in character to) a dream, illusion, and fancy. (21—23) They are (merely) conceptual in that they are perceived without reality and disappear (the very next moment). (If it is urged that the acquisitions mentioned above are rewards of meritorious acts done in a previous life and not merely conceptual), the various actions (too) proceed from the mind of a man thinking of such material possessions under the force of tendencies of action (acquired in former existences). (24) As a matter of fact, this body (alone)—consisting of the gross elements, the senses of perception and the organs of action—has been spoken of (by the knowers of truth) as causing afflictions and agonies of various kinds to the embodied soul who regards it as his own self. (25) Therefore, investigating with a composed mind the true nature of the Self, give up faith in the abiding reality of the objective world (implying duality) and resort to quietism. (26)

नारद उवाच

एतां मन्त्रोपनिषदं प्रतीच्छ प्रयतो मम । यां धारयन् सप्तरात्राद् द्रष्टा सङ्कर्षणं प्रभुम् । २७ ।

यत्पादमूलमुपसृत्य नरेन्द्र पूर्वं शर्वादयो भ्रममिमं द्वितयं विसृज्य ।

सद्यस्तदीयमतुलानधिकं महित्वं प्रापुर्भवानपि परं नचिरादुपैति । २८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे चित्रकेतुसन्त्वनं नाम पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः । १५ ।

Nārada said : Having been purified (through a bath and other purificatory rites after disposing of the dead body), receive from me the following sacred text (quoted in xvi. 18—25) as an abode of the highest blessing. By repeating and fixing your thought on it you will be able to behold Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa (only) after seven nights. (27) By resorting to the soles of His feet, O king of kings, devotees belonging to the (remotest) past—Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) and others—got rid of the illusion of this world (implying duality) and forthwith attained to (oneness with) His unsurpassed, nay, unequalled greatness, and you too will attain before long the same supreme result. (28)

*Thus ends the fifteenth discourse entitled "Citraketu consoled",
in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ षोडशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVI

Citraketu realizes (his oneness with) the Supreme Spirit

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ देवऋषी राजन् सम्परेतं नृपात्मजम् । दर्शयित्वेति होवाच ज्ञातीनामनुशोचताम् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : After that, O Parikṣit, Nārada (the celestial sage) showed (by his Yogic power) to the sorrowing kinsmen (the ghost of) the departed prince (in an aerial body with which the soul is clothed when departing from the physical body and travelling to the other world), and spoke thus as the tradition goes. (1)

नारद उवाच

जीवात्मन् पश्य भद्रं ते मातरं पितरं च ते । सुहृदो बान्धवास्तप्ताः शुचा त्वत्कृतया भृशम् । २ ।

कलेवरं स्वमाविश्य शेषमायुः सुहृद्वृतः । भुङ्क्ष्व भोगान् पितृप्रतानधितिष्ठ नृपासनम् । ३ ।

Nārada said : O embodied soul, may you be blessed. (Just) look at your father and mother. (Your) kinsmen and relations (too) are deeply agonized with grief caused by (separation from) you. (2) Entering your body (again), and surrounded by your kinsmen, enjoy the luxuries provided by your (royal) father, for the rest of your life (which has been apparently cut short by your untimely death), and ascend the imperial throne (when your father is no more). (3)

जीव उवाच

कस्मिञ्छन्मन्यमी मह्यं पितरो मातरोऽभवन् । कर्मभिर्भ्राम्यमाणस्य देवतिर्यङ्नृयोनिषु । ४ ।
बन्धुजात्यरिमध्यस्थमित्रोदासीनविद्विषः । सर्व एव हि सर्वेषां भवन्ति क्रमशो मिथः । ५ ।
यथा वस्तूनि पण्यानि हेमादीनि ततस्ततः । पर्यटन्ति नरेष्वेवं जीवो योनिषु कर्तृषु । ६ ।
नित्यस्यार्थस्य सम्बन्धो ह्यनित्यो दृश्यते नृषु । यावद्यस्य हि सम्बन्धो ममत्वं तावदेव हि । ७ ।
एवं योनिगतो जीवः स नित्यो निरहङ्कृतः । यावद्यत्रोपलभ्येत तावत्स्वत्वं हि तस्य तत् । ८ ।
एष नित्योऽव्ययः सूक्ष्म एष सर्वाश्रयः स्वदृक् । आत्ममायागुणैर्विश्वमात्मानं सृजति प्रभुः । ९ ।
न ह्यस्यातिप्रियः कश्चिन्नाप्रियः स्वः परोऽपि वा । एकः सर्वधियां द्रष्टा कर्तृणां गुणदोषयोः । १० ।
नादत्त आत्मा हि गुणं न दोषं न क्रियाफलम् । उदासीनवदासीनः परावरदृगीश्वरः । ११ ।

The soul replied : In what (particular) incarnation were these people (the souls of Citraketu and his numerous queens) parents to me, who have been revolving by force of Karma (destiny) through the species of gods, lower animals and human beings ? (4) Indeed by turns (during different incarnations) all people actually come to be relatives and kinsmen, adversaries and mediators, friends and neutrals and even bitter enemies in relation to one another. (5) (Even) as gold and other commodities pass from one place to another among (different) men, so does an embodied soul pass through (different) wombs and (different) procreants. (6) The relation with men (even of an) animals (cow etc.) yet living (not torn away by death) is indeed perceived to be temporary (and not abiding). (And) the feeling of mineness with respect to (such) a being really continues only so long as there exists a relation with it. (7) Similarly a Jiva that has found its way into a (particular) womb (and thereby entered into the relation of a son with another embodied soul that has begotten or given birth to it) is (really) unrelated with any inasmuch as it is eternal (birthless) and free from the consciousness of being a son etc. It is only so long as it is seen related to another (as a son) that the other Jiva (that begot or gave birth to it) can claim it as its own (and not after that relation has ceased). (8) (Being essentially the same as Brahma), the Jiva is everlasting, free from decay and unmanifest (free from birth etc.). It is the ground of all (body, mind and so on) and self-illuminating. Being all-powerful, it manifests itself in the form of the universe by means of the Guṇas (Sattva, etc.) of its own Māyā (Prakṛti). (9) Indeed none is very dear and none unwelcome, none is akin and none alien to it. On the other hand, it is the one (dispassionate) witness of the varied minds of friends as well as of foes (those who do a good or ill turn to him). (10) In fact, the Self earns neither virtue nor sin nor does it enjoy the fruit of actions (in the shape of joy and sorrow) and remains (altogether) unconcerned as it were. For it is the witness of both causes and effects and (altogether) independent. (11)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युदीर्य गतो जीवो ज्ञातयस्तस्य ते तदा । विस्मिता मुमुचुः शोकं छित्त्वाऽऽत्मस्नेहशृङ्खलाम् । १२ ।

निर्हृत्य ज्ञातयो ज्ञातेर्देहं कृत्वोचिताः क्रियाः । तत्पुण्यजं स्नेहं शोकमोहभयार्तिदम् । १३ ।
 बालघ्न्यो व्रीडितास्तत्र बालहत्याहतप्रभाः । बालहत्याव्रतं चैर्ब्राह्मणैर्यत्रिरूपितम् ।
 यमुनायां महाराज स्मरन्त्यो द्विजभाषितम् । १४ ।

स इत्थं प्रतिबुद्धात्मा चित्रकेतुर्दिजोक्तिभिः । गृहान्धकूपान्निष्क्रान्तः सरःपङ्कादिव द्विषः । १५ ।
 कालिन्ध्यां विधिवत् स्नात्वा कृतपुण्यजलक्रियः । मौनेन संयतप्राणो ब्रह्मपुत्राववन्दत । १६ ।
 अथ तस्मै प्रपन्नाय भक्ताय प्रयतात्मने । भगवान्नारदः प्रीतो विद्यामेतामुवाच ह । १७ ।
 ॐ नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते वासुदेवाय धीमहि । प्रद्युम्नायानिरुद्धाय नमः सङ्कर्षणाय च । १८ ।
 नमो विज्ञानमात्राय परमानन्दमूर्तये । आत्मारामाय शान्ताय निवृत्तद्वैतदृष्टये । १९ ।
 आत्मानन्दानुभूत्यैव न्यस्तशक्त्यूर्मये नमः । हृषीकेशाय महते नमस्ते विश्वमूर्तये । २० ।
 वचस्युपरतेऽप्राप्य य एको मनसा सह । अनामरूपश्चिन्मात्रः सोऽव्यान्नः सदसत्परः । २१ ।
 यस्मिन्निदं यतश्चेदं तिष्ठत्यप्येति जायते । मृन्मयेष्विव मृज्जातिस्तस्मै ते ब्रह्मणे नमः । २२ ।
 यत्र स्पृशन्ति न विदुर्मनोबुद्धीन्द्रियासवः । अन्तर्बहिश्च विततं व्योमवत्तत्रतोऽस्म्यहम् । २३ ।
 देहेन्द्रियप्राणमनोधियोऽमी यदंशविद्धाः प्रचरन्ति कर्मसु ।
 नैवान्यदा लोहमिवाप्रतप्तं स्थानेषु तद् द्रष्टृपदेशमेति । २४ ।

ॐ नमो भगवते महापुरुषाय महानुभावाय महाविभूतिपतये सकलसात्वतपरिवृद्धनिकर-

कमलकुड्मलोपलालितचरणारविन्दयुगल परम परमेष्ठिन्नमस्ते । २५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having spoken thus, the spirit (of the departed prince) disappeared; and, struck with wonder, those kinsmen of his then gave up mourning (for him), cutting asunder their ties of affection. (12) After cremating the body (of the dead child) and performing the rites appropriate to the occasion, the kinsmen (of the prince) set aside their affection, which is so difficult to get rid of and which is a source of grief, infatuation, fear and agony. (13) Remembering the words of the sage Aṅgirā (which opened their eyes) the queens that had brought about the death of the child (by poisoning it) and had lost their splendour due to (the sin of) child-murder, felt (much) ashamed and performed penance on the bank of the (holy) Yamunā in that city (Mathurā) by way of atonement for infanticide, as prescribed by the Brāhmaṇas, O great king (Parikṣit). (14) Having thus realized the Self through the words of the sages (Aṅgirā and Nārada), Emperor Citraketu rose from the deceptive well of metempsychosis even as an elephant (lit., that which drinks with two organs, viz., the mouth and the proboscis) would from the mire of a lack. (15) Having performed his ablutions in the water of the (holy) Yamunā with due ceremony and gone through other sacred rites accomplished with water, and with his senses entirely subdued, he bowed in silence at the feet of the two (celebrated) sons of Brahmā (the creator). (16) Then the divine sage Nārada joyously taught, it is said, the following prayer to that devotee (Citraketu), who had resorted to him (for protection) and had fully controlled his mind:—(17) "Hail to You, the divine Vāsudeva (presiding over the intellect and) denoted by the mystical syllable OM, and obeisance to You as Pradyumna, Aniruddha and Saṅkarṣaṇa (presiding over reason, the mind and ego respectively). We contemplate on You (in all these four manifestations). (18) Hail to You, who are absolute consciousness and an embodiment of supreme bliss, who revel in Your own Self and are (perfectly) tranquil and whose eye is (ever) turned away from duality (who look upon everything as non-different from Yourself). (19) Hail to You, who have kept aloof by the very realization of Your, blissful character (all) disturbances (in the shape of likes and dislikes) caused by Your Māyā (deluding potency)!

Hail to You, the mighty Controller of the senses, having the cosmos for Your body. (20) May He protect us—He, who is absolute Consciousness without any name or form and lies beyond the cause and the effect, and who shines all by Himself when speech (as well as the other Indriyas) along with the mind has withdrawn, failing to reach (comprehend) Him. (21) Hail to You, the selfsame Brahma, in which this universe stays and (finally) gets merged (at the time of universal dissolution) and from which it evolves (at the time of creation) and that pervades all even as earth pervades all earthen vessels. (22) I bow to that (transcendent Reality) which the organs of action fail to reach (through their active power) and the mind, intellect and the senses of perception fail to comprehend (by their cognitive faculty), and which extends (both) within and without like ether. (23) The body, Indriyas (senses of perception and organs of action), vital airs, mind and intellect—these are stirred into activity only when charged with a ray of the (aforesaid all-conscious) Spirit (viz., during the waking and dream states alone) and not at other times (during deep sleep, unconsciousness etc., when they are not so charged), even as iron which is not fully heated cannot burn. (How, then, can they reach or comprehend that which is the source of their activity ?) And it is Brahma alone that acquires the name of 'subject' (the conscious Self) during the waking and other states (Hence there is no question even of the Jiva's knowing the supreme Brahma). (24) Hail to Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa (the Supreme Person), denoted by (the mystical syllable) OM̐ and possessed of supreme might, the Spouse of Goddess Mahālakṣmī (who embodies in Herself the highest glory and fortune) ! Hail to You, O supreme Ruler of the universe, whose lotus-like feet are fondly and softly kneaded by all the hosts of principal devotees with the lotus-buds of their hands. (25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

भक्तायैतां प्रपन्नाय विद्यामादिश्य नारदः । ययावङ्गिरसा साकं धाम स्वायम्भुवं प्रभो । २६ ।
चित्रकेतुस्तु विद्यां तां यथा नारदभाषिताम् । धारयामास सप्ताहमभक्षः सुसमाहितः । २७ ।
ततश्च सप्तरात्रान्ते विद्यया धार्यमाणया । विद्याधराधिपत्यं स लेभेऽप्रतिहतं नृपः । २८ ।
ततः कतिपयाहोभिर्विद्ययेद्धमनोगतिः । जगाम देवदेवस्य शेषस्य चरणान्तिकम् । २९ ।

मृणालगौरं शितिवाससं स्फुरत्किरीटकेयूरकटित्रकङ्कणम् ।
प्रसन्नवक्त्रारुणलोचनं वृतं ददर्श सिद्धेश्वरमण्डलैः प्रभुम् । ३० ।
तदर्शनध्वस्तसमस्तकिल्बिषः स्वच्छामलान्तःकरणोऽभ्ययान्मुनिः ।
प्रवृद्धभक्त्या प्रणयाश्रुलोचनः प्रहृष्टरोमानमदादिपूरुषम् । ३१ ।
स उत्तमश्लोकपदाब्जविष्टरं प्रेमाश्रुलेशैरुपमेहयन्मुहुः ।
प्रेमोपरुद्धाखिलवर्णनिर्गमो नैवाशक्तं प्रसमीदितुं चिरम् । ३२ ।
ततः समाधाय मनो मनीषया बभाष एतत्प्रतिलब्धवागसौ ।
नियम्य सर्वेन्द्रियबाह्यवर्तनं जगद्गुरुं सात्वतशास्त्रविग्रहम् । ३३ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Having taught the aforesaid prayer to that devotee (Citraketu), who had sought his protection, the (celestial) sage Nārada returned with the sage Aṅgirā, O king (Parikṣit), to the abode of Brahmā (the self-born); while Emperor Citraketu duly repeated that prayer taught by Nārada for seven days (consecutively) with perfect concentration of mind, subsisting on (mere) water. (26-27) And then at the expiry of seven nights the aforesaid king attained the permanent lordship of the Vidyādhara (the artists of heaven) by virtue of the prayer being (still) repeated (by him). (28) After that, in a few days, the course of his mind having been (fully) the illumined through (the repetition of) the same prayer, Citraketu betook himself to the (holy) feet of Lord Śeṣa (the serpent-god), the adored (even) of the gods. (29)

He saw the Lord in a form white as a lotus fibre, clad in blue and adorned with a brilliant diadem, armlets, girdle and wristlets, marked with a cheerful countenance and reddish eyes and surrounded by rings of Siddheśwaras (the chief among those who have attained perfection). (30) All his sins having been wiped out by the (very) sight of the Lord, and his mind clear and rid of all impurities, Citraketu silently approached the most ancient Person with intensified devotion; and with tears of love in his eyes and hair standing on end, he bowed to Him. (31) Repeatedly wetting the support under the lotus-feet of the illustrious Lord with his tear-drops of love, and all utterance having been hindered by (an outburst of) love, he was not at all able for a long time to extol Him properly in a loud voice. (32) Then, having composed his mind by dint of reason and restrained the outgoing tendency of all his senses, he recovered his faculty of speech and addressed in the following words that Preceptor of the universe, whose (divine) Body stands described in scriptures (such as the Pañcarātra) treating of Devotion. (33)

चित्रकेतुर्वाच

अजित जितः सममतिभिः साधुभिर्भवान् जितात्मभिर्भवता ।
 विजितास्तेऽपि च भजतामकामात्मनां य आत्मदोऽतिकरुणः । ३४ ।
 तव विभवः खलु भगवन् जगदुदयस्थितिलयादीनि ।
 विश्वसृजस्तेऽंशांशास्तत्र मृषा स्पर्धन्ते पृथगभिमत्या । ३५ ।
 परमाणुपरममहतोस्त्वमाद्यन्तान्तरवर्ती त्रयविधुरः ।
 आदावन्तेऽपि च सत्त्वानां यद् ध्रुवं तदेवान्तरालेऽपि । ३६ ।
 क्षित्यादिभिरेष किलावृतः सप्तभिर्दशगुणोत्तरैराण्डकोशः ।
 यत्र पतत्यणुकल्पः सहाण्डकोटिकोटिभिस्तदनन्तः । ३७ ।
 विषयतृषो नरपशवो य उपासते विभूतीर्न परं त्वाम् ।
 तेषामाशिष ईश तदनु विनश्यन्ति यथा राजकुलम् । ३८ ।
 कामधियस्त्वयि रचिता न परम रोहन्ति यथा करम्भबीजानि ।
 ज्ञानात्मन्यगुणमये गुणगणतोऽस्य द्वन्द्वजालानि । ३९ ।
 जितमजित तदा भवता यदाऽऽह भागवतं धर्ममनवद्यम् ।
 निष्किञ्चना ये मुनय आत्मारामा यमुपासतेऽपवर्गाय । ४० ।
 विषममतिर्न यत्र नृणां त्वमहमिति मम तवेति च यदन्यत्र ।
 विषमधिया रचितो यः स ह्यविशुद्धः क्षयिष्णुरधर्मबहुलः । ४१ ।
 कः क्षेमो निजपरयोः कियानर्थः स्वपरद्रुहा धर्मेण ।
 स्वद्रोहात् तव कोपः परसम्पीडया च तथाधर्मः । ४२ ।
 न व्यभिचरति तवेक्षा यया ह्यभिहितो भागवतो धर्मः ।
 स्थिरचरसत्त्वकदम्बेषूपृथग्धियो यमुपासते त्वार्याः । ४३ ।
 न हि भगवन्नघटितमिदं त्वदर्शनान्नृणामखिलपापक्षयः ।
 यन्नामसकृच्छ्रवणात् पुलकसकोऽपि विमुच्यते संसारात् । ४४ ।
 अथ भगवन् वयमधुना त्वदवलोकपरिमृष्टाशयमलाः ।
 सुरऋषिणा यदुदितं तावकेन कथमन्यथा भवति । ४५ ।

विदितमनन्तं समस्तं तव जगदात्मनो जनैरिहाचरितम् ।
 विज्ञायं परमगुरोः कियदिव सवितुरिव खद्योतैः । ४६ ।
 नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते सकलजगत्स्थितिलयोदयेशाय ।
 दुःखसितात्मगतये कुयोगिनां भिदा परमहंसाय । ४७ ।
 यं वै श्वसन्तमनु विश्वसृजः श्वसन्ति यं चेकितानमनु चित्तय उच्चकन्ति ।
 भूमण्डलं सर्षपायति यस्य मूर्ध्नि तस्मै नमो भगवतेऽस्तु सहस्रमूर्ध्ने । ४८ ।

Citraketu said : O unconquerable Lord, You stand conquered by the righteous, that have subdued their self and are possessed of an unruffled mind; and they too are conquered by (none else than) You—You, who bestow Your very Self on those that adore You in a disinterested spirit, exceedingly compassionate as You are. (34) The evolution, maintenance and dissolution etc., of the universe, O Lord, are, as a matter of fact, a (mere) sport on Your part. (And) the creators of the universe (Brahmā and the other lords of creation) are (so many) parts of the Cosmic Being (who is only a part manifestation of Yours); yet in vain do they try to outshine one another due to the consciousness of their being an independent lord. (35) You exist before (the appearance of) the atom (the minutest cause) and at the end (after the dissolution) of the infinite universe (the final product) and likewise pervade the intermediate stages (too); while You are without beginning, middle or end. That which is constant at the beginning as well as at the end of phenomenal existences is constant in the middle too. (36) This egg-shaped universe—which further resembles a bud inasmuch as it is enveloped, they say, by seven sheaths in the shape of earth etc., each outer sheath being ten times thicker than the one enclosed by it—is swimming within You like an atom alongwith countless millions of (other similar) eggs. Hence You are (spoken of as) infinite. (37) They are (really) brutes in human form, who in their thirst for the pleasures of sense worship the gods (who represent so many sparks of Your infinite glory) but not You, the Supreme. The blessings enjoyed by them (as gifts from those gods), O Lord, perish (as a matter of course) after (the end of) those gods even as the blessings enjoyed by the dependants of a royal house (automatically) come to an end after (the extinction of) that house. (38) Entreaties made to You—who are possessed of a body which is all consciousness and not a product of the three Guṇas—even for the pleasures of sense, O Supreme Lord, do not make for rebirth any more than fried seeds put forth shoots; for pairs of opposites (such as likes and dislikes, which lead to rebirth) proceed (only) from the (three) Guṇas. (While You are entirely free from them and therefore people adoring You even with an interested motive gradually get rid of the three Guṇas). (39) (Such being the value of adoring You even for the attainment of sensuous enjoyments,) You surpass all (confer an incomparable boon on Your devotees) on such occasions, O unconquerable Lord, when You preach the flawless Bhāgavata Dharma (the easy means of attaining to the Lord as taught by the Lord Himself), which even sages (like the great Sanat Kumāra ever) revelling in the Self and having nothing to call their own resort to for (the attainment of) loving Devotion to the Lord (which transcends all the four objects of human pursuit including Liberation and is therefore known as the fifth object—Pañcama Puruṣārtha). (40) Differential notions such as 'I' and 'You', 'mine' and 'Yours' do not disturb (the mind of) men treading on this path, as they do in the case of (those following) other cults (such as the cult of rituals). (Besides,) a ritual act which is performed by one having a differential outlook is ideed impure (because characterized by likes and dislikes), yields a perishable fruit and is fraught with sin (in the shape of violence etc.). (41) What good can be expected either to oneself or to another and what object can be gained through a ritual which is harmful to one's own self as well as to others? On the other hand, pain is inflicted on You* through self-mortification and sin is also incurred (as well as Your displeasure) through persecution of another. (42) Your point of view (viz., that people should achieve the object of their life through devotion to You), with which as a matter of fact You preached the cult of Devotion—the cult which is exclusively followed by the worthy who regard the multitudes of living beings, both mobile and immobile, as their very self—is never belied. (43) It is not at all impossible, O Lord, that all the sins of men should be wiped out by Your (very) sight, when (it is known that) even an outcaste is freed from (the bondage of) birth and death by hearing Your name (only) once. (44) Therefore, O Lord, we now have (all) the impurities of (our) heart (in the shape of sins and evil proclivities) wiped off by Your (very) sight. How could that which was predicted by the divine sage (Nārada) Your (celebrated) devotee, be otherwise? (45) All that is done by the people in this world, O infinite Lord, is known to You, the Soul of the universe. There is nothing in particular to be revealed to You, the Supreme Preceptor, just as there is nothing to be shown to the sun by fire-flies. (46) Hail to You, the almighty God, the Controller of the creation, maintenance and dissolution of the universe, the purest of the pure, whose true nature cannot easily be understood by the sensually-minded strivers due to their notion of difference. (47) The creators of the universe (Brahmā and the other lords of creation) are active (only) when You (the Cosmic Person) are active (inspire them with activity); the senses of perception are able to perceive their objects (only) when You (their Controller) are disposed to perceive (the objective world); (and) the terrestrial globe appears on one of Your heads like a mustard seed. Obeisance be to You, that (celebrated) Lord with a thousand heads. (48)

श्रीशुक उवाच

संस्तुतो

भगवानेवमनन्तस्तमभाषत । विद्याधरपति

प्रीतश्चित्रकेतुं

कुरुद्रुह ॥४९॥

Śrī Śuka went on : Duly extolled in this way and (highly) pleased, Lord Ananta spoke (as follows) to the said Citraketu, the chief of the Vidyādhara, O Parīkṣit (a scion of Kuru). (49)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यन्नारदाङ्गिरोभ्यां ते व्याहृतं मेऽनुशासनम् । संसिद्धोऽसि तथा राजन् विद्यया दर्शनाच्च मे । ५० ।
अहं वै सर्वभूतानि भूतात्मा भूतभावनः । शब्दब्रह्म परं ब्रह्म ममोभे शाश्वती तनू । ५१ ।
लोके विततमात्मानं लोकं चात्मनि सन्ततम् । उभयं च मया व्याप्तं मयि चैवोभयं कृतम् । ५२ ।
यथा सुषुप्तः पुरुषो विश्वं पश्यति चात्मनि । आत्मानमेकदेशस्थं मन्यते स्वप्न उत्थितः । ५३ ।
एवं जागरणादीनि जीवस्थानानि चात्मनः । मायामात्राणि विज्ञाय तद्दृष्टारं परं स्मरेत् । ५४ ।
येन प्रसुप्तः पुरुषः स्वापं वेदात्मनस्तदा । सुखं च निर्गुणं ब्रह्म तमात्मानमवेहि माम् । ५५ ।
उभयं स्मरतः पुंसः प्रस्वापप्रतिबोधयोः । अन्वेति व्यतिरिच्येत तज्ज्ञानं ब्रह्म तत् परम् । ५६ ।
यदेतद्विस्मृतं पुंसो मद्भावं भिन्नमात्मनः । ततः संसार एतस्य देहादेहो मृतेर्मृतिः । ५७ ।

* The Lord says in Śrīmad Bhagavadgītā :—

कर्शयन्तः शरीरस्थं भूतग्रामचेतसः । मां चैवान्तःशरीरस्थं तान् विद्ध्यसुरनिश्चयान् ॥

(XVII. 6)

"Men who emaciate the elements constituting their body as well as Me, the Supreme Spirit, dwelling in their heart—know these senseless people as having a demoniac disposition."

लब्ध्वेह मानुषो योनिं ज्ञानविज्ञानसम्भवाम् । आत्मानं यो न बुद्ध्येत न क्वचिच्छममाप्नुयात् । ५८ ।
 स्मृत्वेहायां परिक्लेशं ततः फलविपर्ययम् । अभयं चाप्यनीहायां सङ्कल्पाद्विरमेत्कविः । ५९ ।
 सुखाय दुःखमोक्षाय कुर्वति दम्पती क्रियाः । ततोऽनिवृत्तिरप्राप्तिर्दुःखस्य च सुखस्य च । ६० ।
 एवं विपर्ययं बुद्ध्वा नृणां विज्ञाभिमानिनाम् । आत्मनश्च गतिं सूक्ष्मां स्थानत्रयविलक्षणाम् । ६१ ।
 दृष्टश्रुताभिर्मात्राभिर्निर्मुक्तः स्वेन तेजसा । ज्ञानविज्ञानसन्तुष्टो मद्भक्तः पुरुषो भवेत् । ६२ ।
 एतावानेव मनुजैर्योगेनैपुणबुद्धिभिः । स्वार्थः सर्वात्मना ज्ञेयो यत्परार्थैकदर्शनम् । ६३ ।
 त्वमेतच्छ्रद्धया राजन्नप्रपन्नो वचो मम । ज्ञानविज्ञानसम्पन्नो धारयन्नाशु सिध्यसि । ६४ ।

The Lord said : You have fully achieved your purpose through the instruction which was given to you by the sages Nārada and Āngirā about (the means of propitiating) Me and the prayer (taught by Nārada) as well as by My sight. (50) In fact, all created beings are (the same as) I; nay, I am the Self (the Inner Controller) as well the Creator of (all) living beings. The Veda (which, as the Word of God, is identified with the Supreme) and the transcendent Reality (revealed by the same) both are My eternal bodies. (51) A man should recognize his own self as extending through (pervading) the (whole objective) universe (as the subject) and the universe as comprised in his own self (as the object of his experience). Nay, he should regard both (his own self as well as the universe) as pervaded by Me (the Prime Cause) and even so both as conceived in Me. (52) (Just) as a man dreams himself as fast asleep and (also) perceives (in another dream forming part of the first dream) the world (in the form of mountains, forests and so on existing elsewhere) within himself and (again), on waking from the (second) dream, visualizes himself as lying (on a bed) in a part of a room (realizes himself as awake while still dreaming), (even) so, realizing awakeness and the other states of the mind (which is an adjunct of the Jīva) as mere products of the Māyā (deluding potency) of the (Supreme) Self, (one should fix one's mind on the Supreme Spirit, the witness of these states. (53-54) Know Me to be that transcendental Reality, the (real) Self (of a Jīva), identified with which an embodied soul, (that is) fast asleep, is conscious of its deep sleep at that time as well as of the supersensuous gratification (enjoyed by it). (55) The consciousness that runs through (the state of) deep sleep as well as through awakeness and continues (even) beyond the two in the case of the Jīva (embodied soul) that is aware of both is (no other than) that transcendent Brahma (the Absolute). (56) If the aforesaid Brahma—which is My own essence—is forgotten by the Jīva, It comes to be viewed as different from the self; and from this (differentiation) follows the (circuit of) mundane existence of the soul, which consists in passing from one body to another and undergoing one death after another. (57) He who fails to realize his own essential nature (even) after attaining here (birth in) the human species—where one can hope to acquire (both) knowledge (of the Self, based on the scriptures) and wisdom (direct knowledge of the Self)—can get no peace of mind anywhere. (58) Remembering the hardship (involved) in (all) worldly endeavour and the contrary results following from such endeavour, and even so (bearing in mind) the fearlessness consequent on the withdrawal from worldly activity, a wise man should cease from (all) volition in regard to such activity. (59) A husband and wife (generally) undertake activities for (the attainment of) happiness and for freedom from suffering. From such activities (however) ensues neither cessation of suffering nor attainment of happiness. (60) Thus perceiving the contrary results met with by men who think themselves clever, and realizing the subtle nature of the Self—which transcends the three states of the mind (the state of awakeness, the dream state and the state of deep sleep)—nay, rid of (the craving for) the pleasures of sense, both of this world and of the next, through one's faculty of discrimination, and contented with one's knowledge and wisdom, one should cultivate devotion to Me. (61-62) To realize the oneness of the Supreme Spirit and the individual soul—that is the sole interest deserving to be known by every (possible) means by men whose intellect has acquired acuteness through concentration. (63) Carefully bearing in mind and acting up to this exhortation of mine with reverence, O Citraketu, you will soon acquire (true) knowledge and wisdom and attain perfection. (64)

श्रीशुक उवाच

आश्वास्य भगवानित्थं चित्रकेतुं जगद्गुरुः । पश्यतस्तस्य विश्वात्मा ततश्चान्तर्दधे हरिः । ६५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे चित्रकंठोः परमात्मदर्शनं नाम षोडशोऽध्यायः । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having reassured Citraketu in this way, Lord Śrī Hari, who is not only the Preceptor of the world but the soul of the universe (too), disappeared from that place while he stood looking on. (65)

*Thus ends the sixteenth discourse entitled "Citraketu realizes the Supreme Spirit",
in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ सप्तदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVII

Citraketu cursed (by Goddess Pārvatī)

श्रीशुक उवाच

यतश्चान्तर्हितोऽनन्तस्तस्यै कृत्वा दिशे नमः । विद्याधरश्चित्रकेतुश्चचार गगनेचरः । १ ।

स लक्षं वर्षलक्षणामव्याहतबलेन्द्रियः । स्तूयमानो महायोगी मुनिभिः सिद्धचारणैः । २ ।

कुलाचलेन्द्रोणीषु नानासङ्कल्पसिद्धिषु । रेमे विद्याधरस्त्रीभिर्गापयन् हरिमीश्वरम् । ३ ।

एकदा स विमानेन विष्णुदत्तेन भास्वता । गिरिशं ददृशे गच्छन् परीतं सिद्धचारणैः । ४ ।

आलिङ्ग्याङ्गीकृतां देवीं बाहुना मुनिसंसदि । उवाच देव्याः शृण्वत्या जहासोच्चैस्तदन्तिके । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having made obeisance to the quarter in which Lord Ananta had disappeared, Citraketu, the Vidyādhara (chief), went about flying in the air. (1) Panegyricized by sages, Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystical powers from their very birth) and Cāraṇas (celestial bards), and getting Vidyādhara women to sing praises of Lord Śrī Hari, that eminent Yogī (ever united with the Lord) sported for ten thousand million years in the valleys of Mount Sumeru (the chief of the principal mountains of the terrestrial globe)—where one realizes (as a matter of course) the various objects of one's desire—his (physical) strength and organic power not (at all) diminished (through these long ages). (2-3) On one occasion, while flying in a resplendent aerial car bestowed on him by Lord Viṣṇu, he beheld Lord Śiva (who dwells on Mount Kailāsa) surrounded by Siddhas and Cāraṇas, having folded in His arm His divine spouse (Goddess Pārvatī), seated on His lap, in an assembly of sages. Going near them, Citraketu laughed loudly and spoke (as follows) within the hearing of the goddess. (4-5)

चित्रकेतुरुवाच

एष लोकगुरुः साक्षाद्धर्मं वक्ता शरीरिणाम् । आस्ते मुख्यः सभायां वै मिथुनीभूय भार्यया । ६ ।

जटाधरस्तीव्रतपा ब्रह्मादिसभापतिः । अङ्गीकृत्य स्त्रियं चास्ते गतहीः प्राकृतो यथा । ७ ।

प्रायशः प्राकृताश्चापि स्त्रियं रहसि बिभ्रति । अयं महाव्रतधरो बिभर्ति सदसि स्त्रियम् । ८ ।

Citraketu said : Here sits Lord Śiva (the Preceptor of the universe) Himself, the chief figure in this assembly, engaged in expounding (the essence of) righteousness to (all) embodied beings, yet actually embracing His Consort in open assembly ! (6) Wearing matted locks and practising severe austerities, nay, the (recognized) head of assemblies of Brahmvādīs (expositors of the Vedas) He sits hugging a woman shamelessly as an uncultured person ! (7) Even rustics ordinarily embrace a woman only in seclusion, while this (great) god, who has undertaken solemn religious vows, is clasping His Spouse in an open assembly ! (8)

श्रीशुक उवाच

भगवानपि तच्छ्रुत्वा प्रहस्यागाधधीर्नृप । तूष्णीं बभूव सदसि सभ्याश्च तदनुव्रताः । ९ ।

इत्यतद्वीर्यविदुषि ब्रुवाणे बह्वशोभनम् । रुषाऽऽह देवी धृष्टाय निर्जितात्माभिमानिने । १० ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Even on hearing these (critical) remarks, Lord Śiva, whose mind is too deep to be fathomed, heartily laughed, O Parikṣit, and kept quiet; and so did the worthies present in the assembly and devoted to Him. (9) While Citraketu, who was ignorant of Lord Śiva's greatness, was thus uttering much that was unbecoming of Him, Goddess Pārvatī spoke in (great) anger to that impudent Vidyādhara, who (apparently) regarded himself as one that had subdued one's self. (10)

पार्वत्युवाच

अयं किमधुना लोके शास्ता दण्डधरः प्रभुः । अस्मद्विधानां दुष्टानां निर्लज्जानां च विप्रकृत । ११ ।

न वेद धर्मं किल पद्मयोनिर्न ब्रह्मपुत्रा भृगुनारदाद्याः ।

न वै कुमारः कपिलो मनुश्च ये नो निषेधन्त्यतिवर्तिनं हरम् । १२ ।

एषामनुध्येयपदाब्जयुग्मं जगद्गुरुं मङ्गलमङ्गलं स्वयम् ।

यः क्षत्रबन्धुः परिभूय सूरिन् प्रशास्ति धृष्टस्तदयं हि दण्ड्यः । १३ ।

नायमर्हति वैकुण्ठपादमूलोपसर्पणम् । सम्भावितमतिः स्तब्धः साधुभिः पर्युपासितम् । १४ ।

अतः पापीयसीं योनिमासुरीं याहि दुर्मते । यथेह भूयो महतां न कर्ता पुत्र किल्बिषम् । १५ ।

Goddess Pārvatī said : Is this fellow the (only) lord now ruling over the world and wielding the rod of punishment and competent to treat with disrespect wicked and shameless people like us ? (11) Surely neither Brahmā (the lotus-born creator) nor the sons of Brahmā—Bhṛgu, Nārada and so on—nor indeed the sage Sanatkumāra, Lord Kapila and Swāyambhuva Manu know (the essence of) righteousness; for they do not prohibit Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) from violating (the principles of) righteousness. (12) This fellow surely deserves to be punished inasmuch as he, a vile Kṣatriya, is impudent enough to insult (great) sages (assembled here) and teach Lord Śiva (the Preceptor of the universe) Himself, whose lotus-feet are worthy of being contemplated on by the aforementioned, nay, who is the most auspicious of the auspicious. (13) This self-conceited and arrogant fellow is not fit to resort to the soles of feet of Lord Viṣṇu, the very act of approaching which is esteemed by the virtuous. (14) Hence be reborn in the demoniac species—a most wicked species—O evil-minded one, so that you may not perpetrate again in this world, such offence against the exalted souls my son. (15)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं शप्तश्चित्रकेतुर्विमानादवरुह्य सः । प्रसादयामास सतीं मूर्धा नम्रेण भारत । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Thus subjected to an execration, the said Citraketu alighted from his aerial car and propitiated the noble lady (Goddess Pārvatī) with his head bent low (in the following words), O Parikṣit (a scion of Bharata). (16)

चित्रकेतुर्वाच

प्रतिगृह्णामि ते शापमात्मनोऽञ्जलिनाम्बिके । देवैर्मर्त्याय यत्प्रोक्तं पूर्वदिष्टं हि तस्य तत् । १७ ।
 संसारचक्र एतस्मिञ्चतुरङ्गानमोहितः । भ्राम्यन् सुखं च दुःखं च भुङ्क्ते सर्वत्र सर्वदा । १८ ।
 नैवात्मा न परश्चापि कर्ता स्यात् सुखदुःखयोः । कर्तारं मन्यतेऽप्राज्ञ आत्मानं परमेव च । १९ ।
 गुणप्रवाह एतस्मिन् कः शापः को न्वनुग्रहः । कः स्वर्गो नरकः को वा किं सुखं दुःखमेव वा । २० ।
 एकः सृजति भूतानि भगवानात्ममायया । एषां बन्धं च मोक्षं च सुखं दुःखं च निष्कलः । २१ ।
 न तस्य कश्चिद्व्यतिः प्रतीपो न ज्ञातिवन्धुर्न परो न च स्वः ।
 समस्य सर्वत्र निरञ्जनस्य सुखे न रागः कुत एव रोषः । २२ ।
 तथापि तच्छक्तिविसर्गं एषां सुखाय दुःखाय हिताहिताय ।
 बन्धाय मोक्षाय च मृत्युजन्मनोः शरीरिणां संसृतयेऽवकल्पते । २३ ।

अथ प्रसादये न त्वां शापमोक्षाय भामिनि । यन्मन्यसे असाधूक्तं मम तत्क्षम्यतां सति । २४ ।

Citraketu said : I accept Your imprecation (as a welcome and loving gift from You), with my palms joined together O Mother ! For whatever is pronounced by divinities with reference to a mortal is undoubtedly that which was predestined for him. (17) Deluded by ignorance and revolving in this whirligig of mundane existence, an embodied soul experiences joy and sorrow everywhere at every time. (18) Neither oneself nor anyone else is responsible for (one's) joy and sorrow. A fool alone holds himself as well as another responsible for them. (19) In this world of matter (which is a product of the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti) what distinction is there between an imprecation and a blessing, heaven and hell or even joy and sorrow ? (20) The one Lord brings forth living beings by His own Māyā (creative will) and (further) ordains their bondage and liberation as well as their happiness and misery, though free from bondage (Himself). (21) To Him, who is alike to all and free from attachment, none is dear or hateful, none is a kinsman or relation, and none is His own or alien. He has no love for pleasure; how (then) can there be anger (in Him)? (22) Yet action, which (is either virtuous or sinful and) flows from His energy (in the form of Māyā) conduces to the joy and sorrow, welfare and injury, bondage and liberation, birth and death and the circuit of worldly life of embodied souls. (23) Hence I do not propitiate You with a view to being rid of Your imprecation, O noble lady. (Only be pleased to) forgive what You consider as unjustly said by me (even though it was uttered in a purely good spirit), O virtuous lady ! (24)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति प्रसाद्य गिरिशौ चित्रकेतुरिन्दम । जगाम स्वविमानेन पश्यतोः स्मयतोस्तयोः । २५ ।
 ततस्तु भगवान् रुद्रो रुद्राणीमिदमब्रवीत् । देवर्षिदैत्यसिद्धानां पार्षदानां च शृण्वताम् । २६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Having thus appeased Lord Śiva and Goddess Pārvatī (who have their abode on Mount Kailāsa), O Parikṣit (a chastiser of foes), Citraketu went his way by his aerial car, while the aforesaid (divine) Couple looked on wondering. (25) Thereupon Lord Rudra spoke as follows to His Spouse (Goddess Pārvatī) within the hearing of the gods and sages, demons and Siddhas, as well as of His attendants. (26)

श्रीरुद्र उवाच

दृष्टवत्यसि सुश्रोणि हरेरद्भुतकर्मणः । माहात्म्यं भृत्यभृत्यानां निःस्पृहाणां महात्मनाम् । २७ ।

नारायणपराः सर्वे न कुतश्चन बिभ्यति । स्वर्गापवर्गनरकेष्वपि तुल्यार्थदर्शिनः । १२८ ।

देहिनां देहसंयोगाद् द्वन्द्वानीश्वरलीलया । सुखं दुःखं मृतिर्जन्म शापोऽनुग्रह एव च । १२९ ।

अविवेककृतः पुंसो ह्यर्थभेद इवात्मनि । गुणदोषविकल्पश्च भिदेव स्रजिवत्कृतः । १३० ।

वासुदेवे भगवति भक्तिमुद्रहतां नृणाम् । ज्ञानवैराग्यवीर्याणां नेह कश्चिद् व्यपाश्रयः । १३१ ।

नाहं विरिञ्चो न कुमारनारदौ न ब्रह्मपुत्रा मुनयः सुरेशाः ।

विदाम यस्येहितमंशकांशका न तत्स्वरूपं पृथगीशमानिनः । १३२ ।

न ह्यस्यास्ति प्रियः कश्चिन्नाप्रियः स्वः परोऽपि वा । आत्मत्वात्सर्वभूतानां सर्वभूतप्रियो हरिः । १३३ ।

तस्य चायं महाभागश्चित्रकेतुः प्रियोऽनुगः । सर्वत्र समदृक् शान्तो ह्यहं चैवाच्युतप्रियः । १३४ ।

तस्मान्न विस्मयः कार्यः पुरुषेषु महात्मसु । महापुरुषभक्तेषु शान्तेषु समदर्शिषु । १३५ ।

Śrī Rudra said : You have seen (with your own eyes), O fair one, the glory of the high-souled servants of servants of Lord Śrī Hari of marvellous deeds, who are free from craving (of every kind). (27) All those (who are devoted to Lord Nārāyaṇa have no fear from any quarter whatsoever for they find the same use (no use) for heaven, for final beatitude and even for the infernal regions (perceiving as they do the same Reality pervading everywhere). (28) It is (only) through the deluding potency of God that souls are invested with a body and it is due to their connection with a body that pairs of opposites such as joy and sorrow, life and death, execration and benediction are experienced by embodied souls. (29) The notion of desirability and otherwise (with reference to pleasure and pain etc.), too is really the outcome of a man's ignorance (and therefore illusory) just like the distinction of pleasurable and painful experiences etc., with reference to one's own self (in a dream), and has been precisely conceived as the notion of a snake etc., with reference to a wreath of flowers. (30) There is no object in this world worth resorting to in particular for men cherishing devotion to Lord Vāsudeva and equipped with the strength of wisdom and dispassion. (31) Neither myself nor Brahmā (the creator), nor the sages Sanatkumāra and Nārada, nor even the (other) sages (Bhṛgu, Aṅgīrā and so on) begotten by Brahmā nor the rulers of gods (Indra, Yama and others) know His intention. Much less can those accounting themselves independent lords (of the universe), though mere parts of His partial manifestations, know His (true) nature. (32) None indeed is dear and none hateful to Him; none is His own and none alien to Him either. Being the very Self of all living beings, Śrī Hari is the beloved of all creatures. (33) And this highly blessed Citraketu is His beloved servant, looking on all with the same eye and tranquil (by nature); and indeed I too am a devotee of the immortal Lord (and hence did not feel perturbed by his behaviour at all). (34) Therefore, you should have no wonder in regard to (the behaviour of those) high-souled men who are devotees of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person) and tranquil (by nature) and who view all with the same eye. (35)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति श्रुत्वा भगवतः शिवस्योमाभिभाषितम् । बभूव शान्तधी राजन् देवी विगतविस्मया । १३६ ।

इति भागवतो देव्याः प्रतिशप्तुमलन्तमः । मूर्ध्ना सज्जगृहे शापमेतावत्साधुलक्षणम् । १३७ ।

जज्ञे त्वष्टुर्दक्षिणाग्रौ दानवीं योनिमाश्रितः । वृत्र इत्यभिविख्यातो ज्ञानविज्ञानसंयुतः । १३८ ।

एतत्ते सर्वमाख्यातं यन्मां त्वं परिपृच्छसि । वृत्रस्यासुरजातेश्च कारणं भगवन्मतेः । १३९ ।

इतिहासमिमं पुण्यं चित्रकेतोर्महात्मनः । माहात्म्यं विष्णुभक्तानां श्रुत्वा बन्धाद्विमुच्यते । १४० ।

य एतत्प्रातरुत्थाय श्रद्धया वाग्यतः पठेत् । इतिहासं हरिं स्मृत्वा स याति परमां गतिम् । १४१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे चित्रकेतुशापो नाम सप्तदशोऽध्यायः । १७ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : On hearing this speech of Lord Śiva, Goddess Umā (Pārvatī), O king (Parikṣit), was freed from astonishment and felt pacified in mind. (36) Though fully capable of pronouncing a counter-curse, Citraketu (a devotee of the Lord) accepted the curse of the divine lady with reverence. Such (ideal non-violence) is the characteristic of a pious soul. (37) Hurling into the demoniac species, he sprang up from the sacred fire, called Dakṣiṇāgni, of the god Twaṣṭā and became known as Vṛtra, (still) endowed with spiritual knowledge and wisdom. (38) I have thus told you all that you inquired of me, viz., the cause of Vṛtra's birth as a demon and what accounted for his devotion to the Lord. (39) By listening to this sacred episode of the high-souled Citraketu, revealing the glory of the votaries of Lord Viṣṇu, one is completely rid of (the) bondage (of mundane existence). (40) Rising (early) in the morning, he who recites this episode with reverence, remaining silent (refraining from all other talk) and remembering Śrī Hari (all the time), attains the supreme goal. (41)

*Thus ends the seventeenth discourse entitled "Citraketu cursed",
in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथाष्टादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVIII

An account of the birth of the Maruts (the forty-nine wind-gods)

श्रीशुक उवाच

पृश्निस्तु पत्नी सवितुः सावित्री व्याहृति त्रयीम् । अग्निहोत्रं पशुं सोमं चातुर्मास्यं महामखान् । १ ।
सिद्धिर्भगस्य भार्याङ्गं महिमानं विभुं प्रभुम् । आशिषं च वरारोहां कन्यां प्रासूत सुव्रताम् । २ ।
धातुः कुहूः सिनीवाली राका चानुमतिस्तथा । सायं दर्शमथ प्रातः पूर्णमासमनुक्रमात् । ३ ।
अग्नीन् पुरीष्यानाधत्त क्रियायां समनन्तरः । चर्षणी वरुणस्यासीद्यस्यां जातो भृगुः पुनः । ४ ।
वाल्मीकिश्च महायोगी वल्मीकादभवत्किल । अगस्त्यश्च वसिष्ठश्च मित्रावरुणयोर्ऋषी । ५ ।
रेतः सिषिचतुः कुम्भे उर्वश्याः सन्निधौ द्रुतम् । रेवत्यां मित्र उत्सर्गमरिष्टं पिप्पलं व्यधात् । ६ ।
पौलोम्यामिन्द्र आधत्त त्रीन् पुत्रानिति नः श्रुतम् । जयन्तमृषभं तात तृतीयं मीढुषं प्रभुः । ७ ।
उरुक्रमस्य देवस्य मायावामनरूपिणः । कीर्तौ पत्न्यां बृहच्छ्लोकस्तस्यासन् सौभगादयः । ८ ।
तत्कर्मगुणवीर्याणि काश्यपस्य महात्मनः । पश्चाद्बृक्ष्यामहेजदित्यां यथा वावततार ह । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Prṣṇi, the spouse of Savitā (the fifth of the twelve sons of Aditi, the progeny of the first four—viz., Vivaswān, Aryamā, Pūṣā and Twaṣṭā—having already been dealt with in the foregoing discourses), brought forth (three daughters,) Sāvitrī (the deity presiding over the holy Gāyatrī-Mantra), Vyāhṛti (the deity presiding over the three mystical syllables, Bhūḥ, Bhuvaḥ and Swaḥ prefixed to the said Gāyatrī-Mantra while repeating it and severally denoting the three worlds—earth, the intermediate region and heaven) and Trayī (the deity presiding over the rituals, the subject-matter of the three Vedas—R̥gveda, Yajurveda and Sāmaveda) and (nine sons, viz.,) Agnihotra (the deity presiding over the act of offering oblations into the sacred fire), Paśu (the deity presiding over animal sacrifices), Soma (the deity presiding over a Soma sacrifice), Cāturmāsya (the deity presiding over the three sacrifices of the same name performed at the beginning of the three seasons of four months each) and the five deities presiding over the five great daily sacrifices enjoined on every householder of the three twice-born classes (viz., Devayajña, Ṛṣiyajña, Pitṛyajña, Manuṣyayajña and Bhūtajajña)* (And) Siddhi, the spouse of Bhaga (the sixth son of Aditi), dear Parikṣit, bore (three sons,) Mahima, Vibhu and Prabhu and a beautiful and virtuous daughter, Āśiṣa (by name). (1-2) The (four) wives of Dhātā (the seventh son of Aditi)—Kuhū (the deity presiding over the last night of a dark fortnight), Sinīvālī (the deity presiding over the fourteenth night of a dark fortnight), Rākā (the deity presiding over the last night of a bright fortnight) and Anumatī (the deity presiding over the fourteenth night of a bright fortnight) severally gave birth to (four sons) Sāyam (the deity presiding over dusk), Darśa (the deity presiding over the last day of a dark fortnight), Prātaḥ (the deity presiding over the morning) and Pūrṇamāsa (the deity presiding over the last day of a bright fortnight). (3) Vidhātā (the next or eighth son of Aditi) begot through (his wife) Kriyā the (five) deities presiding over the sacred fires bearing the name of Purīṣya. (And) the spouse of Varuṇa (the god of water and the ninth son of Aditi) was Carṣaṇī, of whom was reborn the sage Bhṛgu (a mind-born son of Brahmā). (4) And the great Yogī Vālmiki (another son of Varuṇa and the celebrated author of the Rāmāyaṇa) sprang up, it is said, from an ant-hill (Valmika); while the sages Agastya and Vasiṣṭha (the sons of the sage Pulastya and Brahmā respectively) were reborn as the sons of the gods Mitra (the tenth son of Aditi) and Varuṇa, who discharged in a jar their vital fluid, that had escaped in the presence of (the celestial nymph) Urvaśī. The god Mitra (further) begot through (his spouse) Rewatī (three sons, viz.,) Utsarga, Ariṣṭa and Pippala. (5-6) Indra, the lord of paradise (and the eleventh son of Aditi), procreated through (his wife) Śacī (the daughter of the demon Pulomā) three sons, O dear Parikṣit—Jayanta, Ṛṣabha and Miḍhwān, (who constituted) the third: this is what we have heard. (7) From (the loins of) Lord Upendra (the twelfth and youngest son of Aditi, who took colossal strides in order to measure three paces of land promised to Him by the demon king Bali and) who (originally) assumed the form of the divine Dwarf by His (own) Māyā (creative will), through His spouse Kīrti, sprang up (a son) Bṛhacchloka (by name); and from (the loins of) the latter sprang up Saubhaga and other sons. (8) We shall recount later on (in Book VIII) the distinguished achievements, excellences and deeds of valour of that high-souled son of the sage Kaśyapa and (also) how He actually descended (on the material plane) through Aditi. (9)

अथ कश्यपदायादान् दैतेयान् कीर्तयामि ते । यत्र भागवतः श्रीमान् प्रह्लादो बलिरेव च । १० ।
 दितेर्द्विवेव दायदौ दैत्यदानववन्दितौ । हिरण्यकशिपुर्नाम हिरण्याक्षश्च कीर्तितौ । ११ ।
 हिरण्यकशिपोर्भार्या कयाधुर्नाम दानवी । जम्भस्य तनया दत्ता सुषुवे चतुरः सुतान् । १२ ।
 संह्रादं प्रागनुह्रादं ह्रादं प्रह्लादमेव च । तत्स्वसा सिंहिका नाम राहुं विप्रचितोऽग्रहीत् । १३ ।
 शिरोऽहरद्यस्य हरिश्चक्रेण पिबतोऽमृतम् । संह्रादस्य कृतिर्भार्यासूत पञ्चजनं ततः । १४ ।
 ह्रादस्य धमनिर्भार्यासूत वातापिमिल्वलम् । योऽगस्त्याय त्वतिथये पेचे वातापिमिल्वलः । १५ ।
 अनुह्रादस्य सूर्यायां बाष्कलो महिषस्तथा । विरोचनस्तु प्राह्लादिर्देव्यास्तस्याभवद्वलिः । १६ ।
 बाणज्येष्ठं पुत्रशतमशनायां ततोऽभवत् । तस्यानुभावः सुश्लोक्यः पश्चादेवाभिधास्यते । १७ ।
 बाण आराध्य गिरिशं लेभे तद्गणमुख्यताम् । यत्पार्श्वे भगवानास्ते ह्यद्यापि पुरपालकः । १८ ।
 मस्तश्च दितेः पुत्राश्चत्वारिशत्रवाधिकाः । त आसन्नप्रजाः सर्वे नीता इन्द्रेण सात्मताम् । १९ ।

I now (proceed to) tell you about the scions of the sage Kaśyapa by Diti, among whom was

* A detailed account of these sacrifices has already been given in the foot-note below V. xxvi. 18.

born the illustrious devotee of the Lord, Prahrāda, and even so Bali (Prahrāda's grandson). (10) Diti (at first) had only two sons, adored by the Daityas and the Dānavas (alike), who have (already) been spoken of under the name of Hiranyakaśipu and Hiranyākṣa (in Book III). (11) Hiranyakaśipu's wife, Kayādhu by name, who was a daughter of Jambha by Danu and had been given away by the former (to Hiranyakaśipu), gave birth to four sons—Samhrāda, in the first instance, and (then in order) Anuhrāda, Hrāda and Prahrāda as well. Their sister, Sirhikā by name, got from (her husband, the demon) Vipracitti (a son named) Rāhu, whose head, even while he was drinking nectar (disguised as a god in the assembly of the gods), Śrī Hari lopped off with His discus (vide VIII. ix. 24-25). Kṛti, the wife of Samhrāda (Hiranyakaśipu's eldest son) bore through him (a son named) Pañcājana. (12—14) Dhamani, the wife of Hrāda (Hiranyakaśipu's third son) brought forth (two sons) Vātāpi and Ilwala. It was Ilwala who cooked (his brother) Vātāpi (in the form of a ram) for the sake of his (honoured guest, (the celebrated sage) Agastya. (15) Bāṣkala and Mahiṣa were the two sons of Anuhrāda (Hiranyakaśipu's second son) by (his wife) Sūrmyā; while Virocana was the son of Prahrāda, and Bali was the son of Virocana by (his wife) Devī. (16) From (the loins of) Bali through (his wife) Aśanāyā (the deity presiding over hunger), were born a hundred sons, the eldest of whom was Bāṇa. The glory of Bali, which deserves to be celebrated in beautiful verse, will be recounted only hereafter (in Book VIII). (17) Having propitiated Lord Śiva (who has His abode on Mount Kailāsa), the demon Bāṇa attained the first place among His attendants. As the guardian of his capital, the Lord actually stays near him even today. (18) (Besides Hiranyakaśipu and Hiranyākṣa) Diti had forty-nine more sons, (known as) the Maruts (wind-gods). They all remained issueless and were converted into his own class (godhood) by Indra (the ruler of the gods). (19)

राजोवाच

कथं त आसुरं भावमपोहौत्पत्तिकं गुरो । इन्द्रेण प्रापिताः सात्त्यं किं तत्साधु कृतं हि तैः । १२० ।

इमे श्रद्धयते ब्रह्मवृषयो हि मया सह । परिज्ञानाय भगवंस्तन्नो व्याख्यातुमर्हसि । १२१ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) said : Having rid them of their demoniac disposition, which was innate to them, O (my) preceptor, how were they converted into godhood by Indra? What good offices did they render to him (which prompted him to bring about this change in them)? (20) Even these seers, O (holy) Brāhmaṇa, are keen to know this truth along with me. Therefore, be pleased, O worshipful sage, to explain this to us. (21)

सूत उवाच

तद्विष्णुरातस्य स बादरायणिवचो निशम्यादृतमल्पमर्थवत् ।

सभाजयन् संनिभृतेन चेतसा जगाद सत्रायण सर्वदर्शनः । १२२ ।

Sūta continued : Having heard this reverent, brief and (yet) significant inquiry of king Parīkṣit (who had been protected by Lord Viṣṇu Himself in the form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), and welcoming it with a heart full of joy, the omniscient and well-known sage Śuka (the son of Bādarāyaṇa, more popularly known as Vedavyāsa), spoke (as follows), O Śaunaka (who stand vowed to a long course of sacrifices) ! (22)

श्रीशुक उवाच

हतपुत्रा दितिः शक्रपार्ष्णिग्राहेण विष्णुना । मन्युना शोकदीप्तेन ज्वलन्ती पर्यचिन्तयत् । १२३ ।

कदा नु भ्रातृहन्तारमिन्द्रियाराममुल्बणम् । अङ्गिन्नहृदयं पापं घातयित्वा शये सुखम् । १२४ ।

कृमिविड्भस्मसंज्ञाऽऽसीद्यस्येशाभिहितस्य च । भूतधुक् तत्कृते स्वार्थं किं वेद निरयो यतः । १२५ ।

आशासानस्य तस्येदं ध्रुवमुन्नद्धचेतसः । मदशोषक इन्द्रस्य भूयाद्येन सुतो हि मे । १२६ ।

इति भावेन सा भर्तुराचचारासकृत्त्रियम् । शुश्रूषयानुरागेण प्रश्रयेण दमेन च । २७ ।
 भक्त्या परमया राजन् मनोजैर्वल्युभाषितैः । मनो जग्राह भावज्ञा सुस्मितापाङ्गवीक्षणैः । २८ ।
 एवं स्त्रिया जडीभूतो विद्वानपि विदग्धया । बाढमित्याह विवशो न तच्चित्रं हि योषिति । २९ ।
 विलोक्यैकान्तभूतानि भूतान्यादौ प्रजापतिः । स्त्रियं चक्रे स्वदेहार्धं यया पुंसां मतिर्हता । ३० ।
 एवं शुश्रूषितस्तात भगवान् कश्यपः स्त्रिया । प्रहस्य परमप्रीतो दितिमाहाभिनन्द्य च । ३१ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Diti, whose sons (Hiranyakaśipu and Hiranyākṣa) had been slain by Lord Viṣṇu, the Ally of Indra (the chief of the gods), and who was (consequently) burning with rage kindled by grief, pondered as below :—(23) "When shall I have an undisturbed sleep, having brought about the death of the voluptuous cruel, hard-hearted and sinful Indra (who has been instrumental in causing the death of his own half-brothers) ? (24) He who seeks to hurt (other) beings for the sake of his (own) body—which, though (once) designated as a king (ultimately, when dead) goes by the name of (is transformed into) worms (if buried and thus consumed by worms), or that of excrement (if exposed and devoured by carnivorous beings such as dogs and jackals, vultures and crows), or that of ashes (in cremated)—is he alive to his (highest) interests ? (Certainly not). For damnation (invariably) follows from such hostility to (other) beings. (25) (Therefore) let me devise some means whereby a son may be born to me, that may quell the pride of the aforesaid Indra, who looks upon this (perishable) body as everlasting and whose mind knows no restraint." (26) With this idea (uppermost in her mind) she constantly pleased her husband (the sage Kaśyapa) through (personal) service, affection, humility and self-control. (27) Knowing as she did the heart of her husband, she captivated his mind, O Parīkṣit, by her supreme devotion, charming and sweet words winsome smiles and sidelong glances. (28) Thus infatuated by that clever lady, and powerless (against her womanish charms), the sage, though learned, said, "All right! (Your wish shall be granted.)" Such stupefaction of men by a woman (through her devoted conduct) indeed is not to be wondered at. (29) Finding men (absolutely) unattached at the dawn of creation, Brahmā (the lord of created beings) converted one half of his body into the fair sex, who robbed men of their judgment. (30) Waited upon in this way, O dear son (Parīkṣit) ! by that lady (Diti), the glorious sage Kaśyapa felt highly pleased; and, welcoming her, he laughingly spoke (as follows). (31)

कश्यप उवाच

वरं वरय वामोरु प्रीतस्तेऽहमनिन्दिते । स्त्रिया भर्तरि सुप्रीते कः काम इह चागमः । ३२ ।
 पतिरेव हि नारीणां दैवतं परमं स्मृतम् । मानसः सर्वभूतानां वासुदेवः श्रियः पतिः । ३३ ।
 स एव देवतालिङ्गैर्नामरूपविकल्पितैः । इज्यते भगवान् पुंभिः स्त्रीभिश्च पतिरूपधृक् । ३४ ।
 तस्मात्पतिव्रता नार्यः श्रेयस्कामाः सुमध्यमे । यजन्तेऽनन्यभावेन पतिमात्मानमीश्वरम् । ३५ ।
 सोऽहं त्वयार्चितो भद्रे ईदृग्भावेन भक्तितः । तत्ते सम्पादये काममसतीनां सुदुर्लभम् । ३६ ।

Kaśyapa said : Ask (of me) a boon of your choice, O beautiful one; I am pleased with you, O irreproachable lady. When the husband is fully pleased, what desire of a woman remains unattainable here as well as hereafter ? (32) The husband alone has been declared to be the supreme Deity for women. Although (as a matter of fact,) Lord Vāsudeva, the Consort of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity), dwelling in (presiding over) the mind of all created beings, is the supreme Deity, it is the said Lord alone who is worshipped by men in the guise of (various) divinities diversely conceived under (different) names (Indra and so on) and forms (wielding a thunderbolt and other distinctive weapons); and it is He (again) who is worshipped by women as appearing in the form of their husband. (33-34)

Hence, women devoted to their husband and desirous of blessedness, O fair one, worship their husband as (an image) of God, the Soul of the universe, with undivided loyalty. (35) Therefore, devoutly worshipped by you, O blessed one, with such God-consciousness, I shall forthwith accomplish your desired object, which is something very difficult to attain for unchaste women. (36)

दितिरुवाच

वरदो यदि मे ब्रह्मन् पुत्रमिन्द्रहणं वृणे। अमृत्युं मृतपुत्राहं येन मे घातितौ सुतौ। ३७।

Diti replied : If you would confer on me the boon of my choice, O holy one, I—who have lost my sons—seek (of you) an immortal son capable of slaying Indra, who caused both of my sons (Hiraṇyakaśipu and Hiraṇyākṣa) to be slain (by Lord Viṣṇu). (37)

निशम्य तद्वचो विप्रो विमनाः पर्यतप्यत। अहो अधर्मः सुमहानद्य मे समुपस्थितः। ३८।

अहो अद्येन्द्रियारामो योषिन्मय्येह मायया। गृहीतचेताः कृपणः पतिष्ये नरके ध्रुवम्। ३९।

कोऽतिक्रमोऽनुवर्तन्याः स्वभावमिह योषितः। धिङ् मां बताबुधं स्वार्थे यदहं त्वजितेन्द्रियः। ४०।

शरत्पद्मोत्सवं वक्त्रं वचश्च श्रवणामृतम्। हृदयं क्षुरधाराभं स्त्रीणां को वेद चेष्टितम्। ४१।

न हि कश्चित्प्रियः स्त्रीणामञ्जसा स्वाशिषात्मनाम्। पतिं पुत्रं भ्रातरं वा घ्नन्त्यर्थे घातयन्ति च। ४२।

प्रतिश्रुतं ददामीति वचस्तन्न मृषा भवेत्। वधं नार्हति चेन्द्रोऽपि तत्रेदमुपकल्पते। ४३।

इति संचिन्त्य भगवान्मारीचः कुरुनन्दन। उवाच किञ्चित् कुपित आत्मानं च विगर्हयन्। ४४।

Hearing her prayer, the Brāhmaṇa sage (Kaśyapa) became sad and fell a repenting. (He said to himself,) "Alas ! a very great sin has overtaken me today. (38) Oh, given up to the gratification on my senses, I, a wretched fellow—whose mind has been caught in the grip of the Lord's Māyā (deluding potency) in the form of woman today—shall surely fall into (the abyss of) hell. (39) What fault is there of the woman, who has (but) followed her own nature in this matter ? But fie upon me, ignorant that I am alas ! of my own (real) interests, as (is clear from the fact that) I have not been able to conquer my mind. (40) The face of women is blooming like the autumnal lotus and their speech is nectar (itself) to the ears, while their heart is (cruel) as the blade of a razor. Who can know their ways ? (41) None is truly beloved of women; who have their mind (thought) fixed on the object of their own desire. To serve their (own) end they murder or cause to be murdered their own husband, son and brother. (42) My plighted word, that I shall confer (on her) the boon of her choice, should not prove untrue; and Indra too does not deserve death. Under such circumstances the expedient that I have hit upon is (quite) in the fitness of things". (43) Pondering thus, the glorious sage Kaśyapa (the son of Marīci), O Parikṣit (the delight of the Kurus), spoke a bit angrily, condemning himself at the same time. (44)

कश्यप उवाच

पुत्रस्ते भविता भद्रे इन्द्रहा देवबान्धवः। संवत्सरं व्रतमिदं यद्यज्ञो धारयिष्यसि। ४५।

Kaśyapa said : A son will be born to you. O blessed one, who will slay Indra if you will duly observe this vow for a year, but who will prove to be a friend of the gods if it is not properly observed. (45)

दितिरुवाच

धारयिष्ये व्रतं ब्रह्मन्ब्रूहि कार्याणि यानि मे। यानि चेह निषिद्धानि न व्रतं घ्नन्ति यानि तु। ४६।

Diti replied : I shall (certainly) observe the vow, O holy Brāhmaṇa ! (Kindly) tell me (all) that has to be done by me and all that is prohibited during the period of this vow, and also that which (though not obligatory) may not violate the vow (if done). (46)

कश्यप उवाच

न हिंस्याद्भूतजातानि न शपेन्नानृतं वदेत् । नच्छिन्द्यान्नखरोमाणि न स्पृशेद्यदमङ्गलम् । ४७ ।
 नाप्सु स्नायान्न कुप्येत न सम्भाषेत दुर्जनैः । न वसीताधौतवासः स्नजं च विधृतां क्वचित् । ४८ ।
 नोच्छिष्टं चण्डिकात्रं च सामिषं वृषलाहतम् । भुञ्जीतोदक्यया दृष्टं पिबेदञ्जलिना त्वपः । ४९ ।
 नोच्छिष्टास्पृष्टसलिला सन्ध्यायां मुक्तमूर्धजा । अनर्चितासंयतवाङ्नासंवीता बहिश्चरेद् । ५० ।
 नाधौतपादाप्रयता नार्द्रपात्रो उदक्शिराः । शयीत नापराङ्मान्यैर्न मग्ना न च संध्ययोः । ५१ ।
 धौतवासाः शुचिर्नित्यं सर्वमङ्गलसंयुता । पूजयेत्प्रातराशात्प्राणोविप्रान् श्रियमच्युतम् । ५२ ।
 स्त्रियो वीरवतीश्चार्चेत्स्नग्गन्धबलिमण्डनैः । पतिं चाच्योपतिष्ठेत् ध्यायेत्कोष्ठगतं च तम् । ५३ ।
 सांवत्सरं पुंसवनं व्रतमेतदविष्णुतम् । धारयिष्यसि चेत्तुभ्यं शक्रहा भविता सुतः । ५४ ।

Kaśyapa said : A woman observing this vow must not injure (much less kill any one of) the multitudes of living beings nor curse any one nor should she tell a lie. She must not pare her nails or cut the hair on her person nor should she touch that which is impure. (47) She must not bathe in water (by diving into it) nor should she lose her temper nor talk with wicked people. She must not wear a cloth that has not been (duly) washed (after being used) nor a garland that has (already) been worn on her person. (48) She must not eat the leavings of what has been eaten by someone nor the food offered to Goddess Caṇḍikā (Bhadrakālī) nor (again) that which contains meat nor that fetched by a Śūdra nor that which has been seen by a woman in her menstruation : nor again should she drink water with the hollow of her joined palms. (49) She must not stir out (of her house) with the remnants of food sticking in her mouth (without rinsing her mouth after eating something), nor without washing her hands and feet nor at dusk nor with dishevelled hair nor with her person unadorned and unwrapped (with an outer covering) nor with her speech uncontrolled. (50) She must not retire with her feet unwashed nor in an impure state nor with wet feet nor with her head towards the north or the west nor in the same bed with others nor bare-bodied nor again in the morning and evening. (51) Putting on a pair of clothes that have been (duly) washed, ever pure and decked with all auspicious ornaments, she should worship before breakfast the cow, the Brāhmaṇas, Goddess Śrī (the deity presiding over beauty and prosperity) and (the immortal) Lord Viṣṇu. (52) She should also worship women whose husbands are living, with garlands, sandal-paste, offerings of food and ornaments and, offering worship to her husband, should wait upon him and contemplate on him as having entered her womb (in the form of his vital energy). (53) If you observe this vow, (known as) the Puṁsavana (yielding a son), which is of a year's duration, without violating it, a son will be born to you, who will be able to slay Indra. (54)

बाढमित्यभिप्रेत्याथ दिती राजन् महामनाः । काश्यपं गर्भमाधत्त व्रतं चाञ्जो दधार सा । ५५ ।
 मातृष्वसुरभिप्रायमिन्द्र आज्ञाय मानद । शुश्रूषणेनाश्रमस्थां दितिं पर्यचरत्कविः । ५६ ।
 नित्यं वनात्सुमनसः फलमूलसमित्कुशान् । पत्राङ्कुरमृदोऽप्यथ काले काल उपाहरत् । ५७ ।
 एवं तस्या व्रतस्थाया व्रतच्छिद्रं हरिर्नृप । प्रेप्सुः पर्यचरज्जिह्वो मृगहेव मृगाकृतिः । ५८ ।
 नाध्यगच्छद्व्रतच्छिद्रं तत्परोऽथ महीपते । चिन्तां तीव्रां गतः शक्रः केन मे स्याच्छिवं त्विह । ५९ ।
 एकदा सा तु सन्ध्यायामुच्छिष्टा व्रतकर्षिता । अस्पृष्टवार्यधौताङ्घ्रिः सुष्वाप विधिमोहिता । ६० ।
 लब्ध्वा तदन्तरं शक्रो निद्रापहतचेतसः । दितेः प्रविष्ट उदरं योगेशो योगमायया । ६१ ।
 चकर्त सप्तधा गर्भं वज्रेण कनकप्रभम् । रुदन्तं सप्तधैकैकं मा रोदीरिति तान् पुनः । ६२ ।
 ते तमूचुः पाठ्यमानाः सर्वे प्राञ्जलयो नृप । नो जिघांससि किमिन्द्र भ्रातरो मरुतस्तव । ६३ ।

मा भैष्ट भ्रातरो मह्यं यूयमित्याह कौशिकः । अनन्यभावान् पार्षदानात्मनो मरुतां गणान् । ६४ ।
 न ममार दितेर्गर्भः श्रीनिवासानुकम्पया । बहुधा कुलिशक्षुण्णो द्रौण्यस्त्रेण यथा भवान् । ६५ ।
 सकृदिष्ट्वाऽऽदिपुरुषं पुरुषो याति साम्यताम् । संवत्सरं किञ्चिदूनं दित्या यद्धरिरर्चितः । ६६ ।
 सजूरिन्द्रेण पञ्चाशद्देवास्ते मरुतोऽभवन् । व्यपोह्य मातृदोषं ते हरिणा सोमपाः कृताः । ६७ ।
 दितिरुत्थाय ददृशे कुमाराननलप्रभान् । इन्द्रेण सहितान् देवी पर्यतुष्यदनिन्दिता । ६८ ।
 अथेन्द्रमाह ताताहमादित्यानां भयावहम् । अपत्यमिच्छन्त्यचरं व्रतमेतत्सुदुष्करम् । ६९ ।
 एकः सङ्कल्पितः पुत्रः सप्त सप्ताभवन् कथम् । यदि ते विदितं पुत्र सत्यं कथय मा मृषा । ७० ।

Expressing her willingness (to undertake the vow) in the words "Very well", the strong-willed Diti, O Parīkṣit, then conceived the seed of Kaśyapa and she also duly undertook the (sacred) vow. (55) Having come to know the intention of his mother's sister (Diti), O respectful king, the clever Indra waited upon Diti, who was living in a hermitage (as a hermitess), through (personal) service (of every kind). (56) He fetched everyday from the woods at the proper time flowers, fruits roots, small pieces of wood for the sacrificial fire and blades of (the sacred) Kuśa grass as well as (sacred) leaves and sprouts, earth and water. (57) Keen to discover a slip in the observance on the part of Diti, who had been duly adhering to the vow, O Parīkṣit, the crooked Indra continued to serve her like a hunter disguised as a game (to remove its suspicion). (58) Though intent upon detecting some fault in her observance, O ruler of the earth, Indra did not find any; he was now filled with grave anxiety as to how his welfare could be ensured in that life. (59) One day, however, she fell asleep (even) at dusk with remnants of food still in her mouth and without either rinsing her mouth or washing her feet, enfeebled as she was by her (austere) observance and deluded by (an adverse) fate. (60) Finding that weak point, Indra, the master of Yoga (mystic powers), entered by dint of (his) Yogic power the uterus of Diti, who had been robbed of her consciousness by sleep. (61) By means of his thunderbolt he cut the embryo, brilliant as gold, into seven. Addressing the crying embryo (as though with affection) in the words "Do not cry!" he further cut those pieces each into seven. (62) (Even) while being rent (by Indra), O Parīkṣit, they all submitted to him with joined palms, "Why do you seek to get rid of us, O Indra? We are Maruts (the wind-gods), your (own) half-brothers!" (63) "Do not be afraid; you are (all) brothers to me!"—so did Kauśika (Indra) reply to the (aforesaid seven) groups of the Maruts, his (future) attendants exclusively attached to him. (64) By the grace of Lord Viṣṇu (the Abode of Goddess Śrī, the deity presiding over beauty and prosperity), the embryo in the womb of Diti could not be killed, though cut into numerous (forty-nine) pieces by the thunderbolt (of Indra), any more than you (O Parīkṣit) were killed by the missile discharged by Aśwatthāmā (the son of Droṇa). (65) Worshipping Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person) only once, a man attains a status similar to the Lord's; whereas (in the present case) Śrī Hari was worshipped by Diti for a little less than a year (so that the miracle that happened in the aforesaid case should cause no wonder at all). (66) (Taken) together with Indra (their friend and leader), these Maruts (wind-gods) came to be (known as) fifty gods. The stigma (of demonhood) attaching to them because of their mother was wiped off and they were converted into gods (entitled to a draught of nectar) by Indra. (67) On waking up, the worshipful Diti, who (having now worshipped Śrī Hari for close upon a year) had acquired a disposition absolutely free from reproach, saw the babes, brilliant as fire accompanied by Indra, and felt highly gratified. (68) Then she said to Indra, "Dear son! desirous of obtaining a son that might prove a source of terror to the sons of Aditi (you and your brothers), I observed this vow, which is most difficult to undertake. (69) But, while (only) one son was coveted (by me), how did these forty-nine babes come to be born? Tell me the truth, if known to you; but don't utter a falsehood." (70)

इन्द्र उवाच

अम्ब तेऽहं व्यवसितमुपधार्यागतोऽन्तिकम् । लब्धान्तरोऽच्छिदं गर्भमर्थबुद्धिर्न धर्मवित् । ७१ ।
 कृतो मे सप्तधा गर्भ आसन् सप्त कुमारकाः । तेऽपि चैकैकशो वृक्णाः सप्तधा नापि मन्त्रिरे । ७२ ।
 ततस्तत्परमाश्चर्यं वीक्ष्याध्यवसितं मया । महापुरुषपूजायाः सिद्धिः काप्यनुषङ्गिणी । ७३ ।
 आराधनं भगवत ईहमाना निराशिषः । ये तु नेच्छन्त्यपि परं ते स्वार्थकुशलाः स्मृताः । ७४ ।
 आराध्यात्मप्रदं देवं स्वात्मानं जगदीश्वरम् । को वृणीते गुणस्पर्शं बुधः स्यान्नरकेऽपि यत् । ७५ ।
 तदिदं मम दौर्जन्यं बालिशस्य महीयसि । क्षन्तुमर्हसि मातस्त्वं दिष्ट्या गर्भो मृतोऽस्थितः । ७६ ।

Indra replied : Mother, having come to know of your vow, I sought your presence and, having discovered your fault, cut the child in your womb, bent as I was on achieving my (selfish) end and lost to all sense of righteousness. (71) The embryo was cut by me in seven and there appeared seven children. They too were cut each in seven; yet they would not die. (72) Seeing that great miracle, I at last concluded that it must be some incidental reward of the worship of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person). (73) They alone are declared as clever in accomplishing their object, who while engaged in propitiating the Lord are (entirely) free from desires and do not aspire even to attain final beatitude (as a reward for their worship). (74) Having propitiated the Lord, the ruler of the universe, who is not only the Self of us all but who bestows His very Self on His devotees, what wise man would ask of Him the pleasures of sense, which could be had even in hell ? (75) Therefore, may you be pleased to forgive, O mother, this act of wickedness on my part, foolish as I am, O highly noble lady! Thank God ! the child in your womb has risen to life (as it were) after death. (76)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इन्द्रस्तयाभ्यनुज्ञातः शुद्धभावेन तुष्टया । मरुद्भिः सह तां नत्वा जगाम त्रिदिवं प्रभुः । ७७ ।
 एवं ते सर्वमाख्यातं यन्मां त्वं परिपृच्छसि । मङ्गलं मरुतां जन्म किं भूयः कथयामि ते । ७८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां षष्ठस्कन्धे मरुदुत्पत्तिकथनं नामाष्टादशोऽध्यायः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Permitted by Diti, who was pleased with his sincerity, the powerful Indra bowed to her and left for the third heaven along with the Maruts (wind-gods). (77) In this way I have told you all that you enquired of me, viz., the story of the auspicious birth of the Maruts. What more shall I speak to you about ? (78)

*Thus ends the eighteenth discourse entitled "An account of the birth of the Maruts",
 in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIX

The procedure of observing the sacred vow of Puṁsavana

राजोवाच

व्रतं पुंसवनं ब्रह्मन् भवता यदुदीरितम् । तस्य वेदितुमिच्छामि येन विष्णुः प्रसीदति । १ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) said : I wish to know the procedure of observing the (sacred) vow of Puṁsavana, which has just been mentioned by you, O holy one, and by which Lord Viṣṇu is (easily) propitiated. (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

शुक्ले मार्गशिरे पक्षे योषिर्द्वर्तुर्नुजया । आरभेत व्रतमिदं सार्वकामिकमादितः । २ ।
निशम्य मरुतां जन्म ब्राह्मणाननुमन्त्र्य च । स्नात्वा शुक्लदती शुक्ले वसीतालङ्कृताम्बरे ।

पूजयेत्प्रातराशात्प्राग्भगवन्तं श्रिया सह । ३ ।

अलं ते निरपेक्षाय पूर्णकाम नमोऽस्तु ते । महाविभूतिपतये नमः सकलसिद्धये । ४ ।
यथा त्वं कृपया भूत्या तेजसा महिनौजसा । जुष्ट ईश गुणैः सर्वैस्ततोऽसि भगवान् प्रभुः । ५ ।
विष्णुपति महामाये महापुरुषलक्षणे । प्रीयेथा मे महाभागे लोकमातर्नमोऽस्तु ते । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : A wife should start observing this vow, which is calculated to grant all one's desires, from the very first day of the bright fortnight of (the month of) Mārgaśīrṣa with the permission of her husband. (2) Having listened to the story of the birth of the Maruts (the forty-nine wind-gods) and (duly) consulted the Brāhmaṇas, she should after cleaning her teeth and finishing her bath cover herself with a pair of white pieces of cloth and adorn herself (with ornaments). She should (then) worship the Lord along with His (divine Consort) Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) before her breakfast (and pray:) (3) "Whatever You already have is enough for You, (absolutely) unconcerned as You are, O Lord whose desire is (ever) sated ! My obeisance be to You, the Lord of Mahālakṣmī (who embodies in Herself the highest glory and fortune) ! Hail to You, the Abode of all mystic powers ! (4) You are fully endowed with compassion, fortune, glory, majesty, virility and all other excellences, O Lord; You are therefore the almighty Ruler. (5) O (divine) Consort of Lord Viṣṇu, O Embodiment of marvellous powers, possessing as You do the characteristics of the Supreme Person, may You be pleased with me, O highly blessed one. (My) obeisance be to You, O Mother of the universe !" (6)

ॐ नमो भगवते महापुरुषाय महानुभावाय महाविभूतिपतये सह महाविभूतिभिर्बलि-
मुपहराणीति अनेनाहरहर्मन्त्रेण विष्णोरावाहनार्घ्यपाद्योपस्पर्शनस्नानवासउपवीतविभूषणगन्ध-
पुष्पधूपदीपोपहाराद्युपचारांश्च समाहित उपहरेत् । ७ ।

हविःशेषं तु जुहुयादनले द्वादशाहुतीः ।

ॐ नमो भगवते महापुरुषाय महाविभूतिपतये स्वाहेति । ८ ।

श्रियं विष्णुं च वरदावाशिषां प्रभवानुभौ । भक्त्या सम्पूजयेन्नित्यं यदीच्छेत्सर्वसम्पदः । ९ ।
प्रणमेद्दण्डवद्भूमौ भक्तिप्रवहेण चेतसा । दशवारं जपेन्मन्त्रं ततः स्तोत्रमुदीरयेत् । १० ।

"Hail to Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person), denoted by the mystical syllable OM and possessed of the highest glory, the Spouse of Goddess Mahālakṣmī ! Let me offer worship to You along with Your highest potencies (Goddess Lakṣmī and others) !" While repeating this sacred text the worshipper should offer everyday to Lord Viṣṇu with a concentrated mind (loving) invocation, water to wash His hands and feet and rinse His mouth and water for His bath, a pair of pieces of linen to cover His Body, a sacred thread and ornaments, sandal-paste, flowers, burning incense, light, food and other articles of worship. (7) Out of the food left after being offered to the Lord one should pour twelve oblations into the sacred fire while repeating the following prayer:—"Hail to Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person), denoted by the mystical syllable OM, the Spouse of Goddess Mahālakṣmī ! I offer this oblation to Him-!!" (8) One should duly worship with devotion everyday Goddess Śrī and (Her Consort) Lord Viṣṇu, both of whom are disposed to confer boons (on Their devotees) and yield one's desired blessings in an abundant degree, if one is desirous of having all kinds of fortune. (9) (Nay,) one should fall prostrate on the ground with a mind humble through devotion, repeat the aforementioned sacred text ten times and (then) utter the following hymn:—(10)

युवां तु विश्वस्य विभू जगतः कारणं परम् । इयं हि प्रकृतिः सूक्ष्मा मायाशक्तिर्दुरत्यया । ११ ।
तस्या अधीश्वरः साक्षात्त्वमेव पुरुषः परः । त्वं सर्वयज्ञ इज्येयं क्रियेयं फलभुग्भवान् । १२ ।
गुणव्यक्तिरियं देवी व्यञ्जको गुणभुग्भवान् । त्वं हि सर्वशरीर्यात्मा श्रीः शरीरेन्द्रियाशया ।

नामरूपे भगवती प्रत्ययस्त्वमपाश्रयः । १३ ।

यथा युवां त्रिलोकस्य वरदौ परमेष्ठिनौ । तथा म उत्तमश्लोक सन्तु सत्या महाशिवः । १४ ।

"You are the Sovereigns of the universe as well as the ultimate cause of the world. (And) She (Mahālakṣmī) is undoubtedly the unmanifest Prakṛti (primordial matter), as well as the deluding potency, (so) difficult to overcome. (11) You (O Lord) are no other than the Supreme Person, the very Controller of Prakṛti. You embody all sacrificial performances; while She is an embodiment of faith (that inspires and sustains all human endeavours to carry on such sacrificial activities). While She is (worldly) activity, You are the enjoyer of its fruit. (12) This goddess is the manifestation of the (three) Guṇas (in the form of the universe); while You are the Time-Spirit (that prompts the three Guṇas to manifest themselves in this way) as well as the Cosmic Person (who enjoys the Guṇas so manifested). (Again,) You are the Soul of all embodied beings; while Goddess Śrī represents their body, the senses and the inner sense. (Nay,) the almighty goddess represents the various names and forms (constituting the universe); while You are their illuminator and ground. (13) (Just) as You are the supreme Rulers of (all) the three worlds, conferring boons on Your devotees, so let my lofty aspirations prove true, O Lord of excellent renown." (14)

इत्यभिष्टूय वरदं श्रीनिवासं श्रिया सह । तन्निःसार्योपहरणं दत्त्वाऽऽचमनमर्चयेत् । १५ ।

ततः स्तुवीत स्तोत्रेण भक्तिप्रह्वेण चेतसा । यज्ञोच्छिष्टमवघ्राय पुनरभ्यर्चयेद्धरिम् । १६ ।

पतिं च परया भक्त्या महापुरुषचेतसा । प्रियैस्तैस्तैरुपनमेत् प्रेमशीलः स्वयं पतिः ।

विभूयात् सर्वकर्माणि पत्न्या उच्चावचानि च । १७ ।

कृतमेकतरेणापि दम्पत्योरुभयोरपि । पत्न्यां कुर्याद्विनर्हायां पतिरेतत् समाहितः । १८ ।

विष्णोर्व्रतमिदं विभ्रन्न विहन्यात् कथञ्चन । विप्रान् स्त्रियो वीरवतीः स्रगन्धबलिमण्डनैः ।

अर्चदहरहर्भक्त्या देवं नियममास्थितः । १९ ।

उद्वास्य देवं स्वे धाम्नि तन्निवेदितमग्रतः । अद्यादात्मविशुद्ध्यर्थं सर्वकामर्द्धये तथा । २० ।

एतेन पूजाविधिना मासान् द्वादश हायनम् । नीत्वाथोपचरेत्साध्वी कार्तिके चरमेऽहनि । २१ ।

श्रोभूतेऽप उपस्पृश्य कृष्णमभ्यर्च्य पूर्ववत् । पयःशृतेन जुहुयाच्चरुणा सह सर्पिषा ।

पाकयज्ञविधानेन द्वादशैवाहुतीः पतिः । २२ ।

आशिषः शिरसाऽऽदाय द्विजैः प्रीतैः समीरिताः । प्रणम्य शिरसा भक्त्या भुञ्जीत तदनुज्ञया । २३ ।

आचार्यमग्रतः कृत्वा वाग्यतः सह बन्धुभिः । दद्यात्पत्न्यै चरोः शेषं सुप्रजस्त्वं सुसौभगम् । २४ ।

Having thus extolled Lord Viṣṇu (the Abode of Śrī, the goddess of beauty and prosperity), the Bestower of boons (on His devotees), along with Goddess Śrī, and after removing the food (served before Them) and offering Them water to rinse their mouth, one should (continue to) worship Them (by offering betel leaves etc.). (15) Then with a mind humble through devotion one should extol Him by means of a hymn and, after smelling the remnants of the offerings, should duly worship Śrī Hari once more. (16) The woman should serve her husband too with supreme devotion, offering him his beloved objects and accounting him the Supreme Person (Himself); while the loving husband should personally assist in all the duties of his wife, high and low (alike). (17) A thing done by even one (member) of a married couple is conducive to the benefit of both. (Therefore,) in the event of the wife being unfit (due to illness or menstruation etc.) the husband should do (all) this with a concentrated mind. (18)

A man observing this vow sacred to Lord Viṣṇu should not break it under any circumstance whatsoever. (Thus) observing (strict) discipline, one should worship everyday with devotion the Brāhmaṇas as well as women whose husbands are (still) living by offering them wreaths of flowers, sandal-paste, (articles of) cooked food and ornaments, and should (also) worship the Deity (Lord Viṣṇu). (19) Having requested the Deity (as devoutly as He had been invoked) to retire to His (divine) Abode one should eat what was offered to Him, after feeding in the first instance one's preceptor and others, for the purification of one's mind as well as for the gratification of all one's desires. (20) After spending a year of twelve months (an year other than an intercalary year) according to this (aforementioned) process of worship, a pious wife should observe a fast on the last day of (the month of) Kārtika (the day immediately preceding the bright half of Mārgaśīrṣa). (21) Having bathed at sunrise on the following day and worshipped Lord Viṣṇu (the Enchanter of all) as before, the husband alone should pour into the sacred fire twelve oblations of rice boiled in milk and mixed with clarified butter according to the procedure laid down for a Pākayajña (a variety of sacrificial performances mentioned in the Gṛhya-Sūtras). (22) Receiving with his head bent low the benedictions duly pronounced by the Brāhmaṇas, (highly) pleased with him, and devoutly greeting them with bowed head, he should silently take his meal with their permission along with his kinsmen after feeding his preceptor in the first instance. He should (then) give to his wife the remnant of the sacrificial offering, which ensures a good progeny and the height of good fortune. (23-24)

एतच्चरित्वा विधिवद्भृतं विभोरभीप्सितार्थं लभते पुमानिह ।
 स्त्री त्वेतादास्थाय लभेत सौभागं श्रियं प्रजां जीवपतिं यशो गृहम् । २५ ।
 कन्या च विन्देत समग्रलक्षणं वरं त्ववीरा हतकिल्बिषा गतिम् ।
 मृतप्रजा जीवसुता धनेश्वरी सुदुर्भगा सुभगा रूपमग्र्यम् । २६ ।
 विन्देद् विरूपा विरुजा विमुच्यते य आमयावीन्द्रियकल्पदेहम् ।
 एतत्पठन्नभ्युदये च कर्मण्यनन्ततृप्तिः पितृदेवतानाम् । २७ ।
 तुष्टाः प्रयच्छन्ति समस्तकामान् होमावसाने हुतभुक् श्रीर्हरिश्च ।
 राजन् महन्मरुतां जन्म पुण्यं दितेव्रतं चाभिहितं महते । २८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशाहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायां

षष्ठस्कन्धे पुंसवनव्रतकथनं नामैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः । १९ ।

—:~::~~::~—

इति षष्ठः स्कन्धः समाप्तः

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

Duly observing this vow, sacred to the Lord, a man attains his coveted object during his (very) lifetime; while a wife, undertaking it, should secure good fortune, affluence, progeny, the longevity of her husband, glory and a (comfortable) house. (25) Nay, a maid should secure a match endowed with all good characteristics, while a widow should attain final beatitude after being rid of (all) sins. A woman who has lost her issue should get long-lived progeny; a woman who, though owning a large property, is highly ill-fated is blessed with good fortune; and an ugly-looking girl is endowed with exquisite beauty. He who is suffering from a malady is rid of his acute illness and is blessed with a sound body and healthy Indriyas.

Nay, there ensues the eternal gratification of the souls of the departed ancestors as well as of the tutelary deities of the man who recites this discourse on the occasion of auspicious undertaking (such as a sacrificial performance and Śrāddha). (26-27) (Nay,) pleased with him, the fire-god, Goddess Śrī (the divine Consort of Lord Viṣṇu) as well as Lord Śrī Hari (Himself) confer on him all the objects of his desire at the end of a sacrificial performance. O king (Parikṣit), the highly sacred story of the birth of the Maruts (the wind-gods) as well as of the very sacred vow observed by Diti has (hereby) been related to you. (28)

Thus ends the nineteenth discourse entitled "The procedure of observing the vow of Puṁsavana detailed", in Book Six of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahaṁsa-Saṁhitā, composed by the (divine) sage Vedavyāsa and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.

END OF BOOK SIX

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

सप्तमः स्कन्धः

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata Mahāpurāṇa

Book Seven

Discourse I

A dialogue between Nārada and Yudhiṣṭhira : the story of Jaya and Vijaya

राजोवाच

समः प्रियः सुहृद्ब्रह्मन् भूतानां भगवान् स्वयम् । इन्द्रस्यार्थे कथं दैत्यानवधीद्विषमो यथा । १ ।

न ह्यस्यार्थः सुरगणैः साक्षान्निःश्रेयसात्मनः । नैवासुरेभ्यो विद्वेषो नोद्वेगश्चागुणस्य हि । २ ।

इति नः सुमहाभाग नारायणगुणान् प्रति । संशयः सुमहाज्जातस्तद्भवांश्छेत्तुमर्हति । ३ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : How did the Lord, who is alike to everyone and is the beloved friend of (all) created beings, kill the demons (the sons of Diti) for the sake of Indra like a partial being, O holy one? (1) Indeed He who is the very embodiment of highest bliss could not have any (selfish) end to be served by the hosts of gods and in no case could He who is untainted by the Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) actually have any specific grudge against, much less fear of, the demons. (2) In this way, O exceptionally blessed one, a grave doubt has arisen in our mind with regard to the excellences of Lord Nārāyaṇa, which you should kindly resolve. (3)

श्रीशुक उवाच

साधु पृष्टं महाराज हरेश्चरितमद्भुतम् । यद् भागवतमाहात्म्यं भगवद्भक्तिवर्धनम् । ४ ।

गीयते परमं पुण्यमृषिभिर्नारदादिभिः । नत्वा कृष्णाय मुनये कथयिष्ये हरेः कथाम् । ५ ।

निर्गुणोऽपि ह्यजोऽव्यक्तो भगवान् प्रकृतेः परः । स्वमायागुणमाविश्य बाध्यबाधकतां गतः । ६ ।

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति प्रकृतेर्नात्मनो गुणाः । न तेषां युगपद्राजन् ह्रास उल्लास एव वा । ७ ।

जयकाले तु सत्त्वस्य देवर्षीन् रजसोऽसुरान् । तमसो यक्षरक्षांसि तत्कालानुगुणोऽभजत् । ८ ।

ज्योतिरादिरिवाभाति सङ्घातान्न विविच्यते । विन्दन्त्यात्मानमात्मस्थं मथित्वा कवयोऽन्ततः । ९ ।

यदा सिसृक्षुः पुर आत्मनः परो रजः सृजत्येष पृथक् स्वमायया ।
 सत्त्वं विचित्रासु रिरंसुरीश्वरः शयिष्यमाणस्तम ईरयत्यसौ । १० ।
 कालं चरन्तं सृजतीश आश्रयं प्रधानपुम्भ्यां नरदेव सत्यकृत् ।
 य एष राजन्नपि काल ईशिता सत्त्वं सुरानीकमिवैधयत्यतः ।
 तत्प्रत्यनीकानसुरान् सुरप्रियो रजस्तमस्कान् प्रमिणोत्युरुश्रवाः । ११ ।
 अत्रैवोदाहृतः पूर्वमितिहासः सुरर्षिणा । प्रीत्या महाक्रतौ राजन् पृच्छतेऽजातशत्रवे । १२ ।
 दृष्ट्वा महाद्भुतं राजा राजसूये महाक्रतौ । वासुदेवे भगवति सायुज्यं चेदिभूभुजः । १३ ।
 तत्रासीनं सुरऋषिं राजा पाण्डुसुतः क्रतौ । प्रपच्छ विस्मितमना मुनीनां शृण्वतामिदम् । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Well have you asked, O great king (Parīkṣit), a question relating to the wonderful and most sacred story of Śrī Hari, which is replete with the glory of His devotees (like Prahrāda), nay, which goes to intensify one's devotion to the Lord and which is sung by sages like Nārada. Bowing to (my father,) the sage Kṛṣṇa Dwaipāyana (Vedavyāsa), I shall (accordingly) narrate the story of Śrī Hari. (4-5) Though really transcending Prakṛti and (therefore) beyond the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), unborn and devoid of (a material) form, the Lord assumed the role of a chastiser in relation to those deserving punishment by presiding over the Guṇas of His own Māyā (Prakṛti). (6) Sattva (harmony), Rajas (activity) and Tamas (inertia) are the adjuncts of Prakṛti (Matter) and not of the Spirit. Their decline or growth, O king (Parīkṣit), is not simultaneous as a matter of fact. (7) Conforming to the spirit of the times, He fosters the gods and the Ṛṣis (sages) when (the quality of) Sattva is in the ascendant, the Asuras (demons) when (the quality of) Rajas is predominant, and the Yakṣas (a class of demigods) and the Rākṣasas (ogres) when (the quality of) Tamas preponderates. (8) Like fire and other elements (which, though undifferentiated, appear as differentiated through diverse media), the Lord (though one) appears endowed with various forms (in the shape of the numberless Jīva); yet He is not distinguished from the psychophysical organism (occupied by Him). It is only the discerning that are eventually able to realize the Self dwelling in their own heart after carefully investigating it. (9) When intending to create bodies (as a means of enjoyment) for the Jīva (the individual soul), the aforesaid Supreme evolves (the element of) Rajas as a distinct entity (out of the chaos hitherto prevailing) by His own Māyā (creative energy). (Nay,) keen to sport in the midst of (all) these heterogeneous bodies, the omnipotent Lord evolves the Sattvagūṇa and when about to retire (from His sportful activities), He fosters the element of Tamas. (10) The Lord, who is the infallible Creator (of the universe) in conjunction with Prakṛti and Puruṣa (the grounds of creation), O ruler among men, brings forth the running Time, which stands as the support (an assistant) of Prakṛti and Puruṣa. Now that which goes by the name of Time, O Parīkṣit, fosters the element of Sattva (at the dawn of creation); hence the Lord too, who enjoys an extensive fame, fosters as it were the host of gods as their friend and exterminates their enemies, the Asuras, dominated as they are by Rajas and Tamas. (11) To illustrate this very fact (of the Lord being entirely free from hatred etc.) a legend was lovingly narrated in the past by Nārada (the celestial sage) to the inquiring Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira (in whose eye whom no enemy was ever born) during his great sacrificial performance (of Rājāsūya), O Parīkṣit ! (12) On seeing the most wonderful absorption of Śiśupāla (the ruler of the kingdom of Cedi) into (the divine person of) Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Son of Vasudeva) in the course of the great sacrificial performance called Rājāsūya, the celebrated king Yudhiṣṭhira (son of Pāṇḍu) asked the celestial sage (Nārada)—seated there—with a wondering mind the following question in the presence of (other) sages, who were (all) listening. (13-14)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

अहो अत्यद्भुतं ह्येतदुर्लभैकान्तिनामपि । वासुदेवे परे तत्त्वे प्राप्तिश्चैद्यस्य विद्विषः । १५ ।
एतद्वेदितुमिच्छामः सर्व एव वयं मुने । भगवन्निन्दया वेनो द्विजैस्तमसि पातितः । १६ ।
दमघोषसुतः पाप आरभ्य कलभाषणात् । सम्प्रत्यमर्षी गोविन्दे दन्तवक्त्रश्च दुर्मतिः । १७ ।
शपतोरसकृद्विष्णुं यद्ब्रह्म परमव्ययम् । श्वित्रो न जातो जिह्वायां नास्थं विविशतुस्तमः । १८ ।
कथं तस्मिन् भगवति दुरवग्राहधामनि । पश्यतां सर्वलोकानां लयमीयतुरञ्जसा । १९ ।
एतद् भ्राम्यति मे बुद्धिर्देपाचिरिव वायुना । ब्रूह्येतदद्भुततमं भगवांस्तत्र कारणम् । २० ।

Yudhiṣṭhira said : The absorption into Śrī Kṛṣṇa (son of Vasudeva), the supreme Reality—which could not be easily attained even by those exclusively devoted to Him—of Śīsupāla (the ruler of the kingdom of Cedi), His bitter enemy—Oh, this was indeed most wonderful. (15) We all as a matter of fact wish to know (the reason of) this, O sage; (for we know that) king Vena (the father of Pṛthu) was (all but) hurled into hell by the Brāhmaṇas due to his blaspheming the Lord. (16) The sinful Śīsupāla (the son of Damaghoṣa), as well as the evil-minded Dantavakra, had a grudge against Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) ever since he (Śīsupāla) began to lisp till now (when he was slain by Him). (17) (Patches of) white leprosy (leucoderma) did not appear on their tongue even as they blasphemed more than once Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the all—pervading Lord), who is (no other than) the supreme and imperishable Brahma (the Absolute); nor did they enter the blinding darkness (of hell). (18) How did they attain absorption directly into the aforesaid Lord, whose reality cannot be easily grasped, while all the people (assembled on the spot) stood looking on? (19) My mind is wavering on this point even as the flame of a light is unsteady under the action of wind; (for) this was (something) most wonderful. Omniscient as you are, kindly tell me the cause of it. (20)

श्रीशुक उवाच

राज्ञस्तद्वच आकर्ण्य नारदो भगवानृषिः । तुष्टः प्राह तमाभाष्य शृण्वत्यास्तत्सदः कथाः । २१ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : The divine sage Nārada was pleased to hear this question of king Yudhiṣṭhira and, addressing him, narrated the following stories within the hearing of his courtiers. (21)

नारद उवाच

निन्दनस्तवसत्कारन्यङ्कारार्थं कलेवरम् । प्रधानपरयो राजन्नविवेकेन कल्पितम् । २२ ।
हिंसा तदभिमानेन दण्डपारुष्ययोर्यथा । वैषम्यमिह भूतानां ममाहमिति पार्थिव । २३ ।
यन्निबद्धोऽभिमानोऽयं तद्बुधात्पाणिनां वधः । तथा न यस्य कैवल्यादभिमानोऽखिलात्मनः ।
परस्य दमकर्तृर्हि हिंसा केनास्य कल्प्यते । २४ ।

तस्माद्वैरानुबन्धेन निर्वैरेण भयेन वा । स्नेहात्कामेन वा युज्यात् कथञ्चिन्नेक्षते पृथक् । २५ ।
यथा वैरानुबन्धेन मर्त्यस्तन्मयतामियात् । न तथा भक्तियोगेन इति मे निश्चिता मतिः । २६ ।
कीटः पेशस्कृता रुद्धः कुड्यायां तमनुस्मरन् । संरम्भभययोगेन विन्दते तत्सरूपताम् । २७ ।
एवं कृष्णे भगवति मायामनुज ईश्वरे । वैरेण पूतपाप्मानस्तमापुरनुचिन्तया । २८ ।
कामाद् द्वेषाद्भयात्स्नेहाद्यथा भक्त्येश्वरे मनः । आवश्य तदयं हित्वा ब्रह्मस्तद्गतिं गताः । २९ ।
गोप्यः कामाद्भयात्कंसो द्वेषाच्चैद्यादयो नृपाः । सम्बन्धाद् वृष्णायः स्नेहाद्वयं भक्त्या वयं विभो । ३० ।
कतमोऽपि न वेनः स्यात्पञ्चानां पुरुषं प्रति । तस्मात् केनाप्यपायेन मनः कृष्णे निवेशयेत् । ३१ ।

मातृष्वसेयो वश्रैद्यो दन्तवक्त्रश्च पाण्डव । पार्षदप्रवरौ विष्णोर्विप्रशपात्यदाच्युतौ । ३२ ।

Nārada said : The body is brought into being through lack of discrimination, O king, between Prakṛti (Matter) and Puruṣa (the Spirit, which lies beyond Prakṛti) for (experiencing pleasure and pain through) calumny and eulogy, honour and contumely. (22) Just as due to identification with this body appears in (the mind of) living beings in this world differentiation in the shape of "I" and "mine" and there (also) arises (a feeling of) pain as a result of resort to force and reproachful language, and even as the destruction of living beings is (considered as) non-different from the destruction of the body to which attaches the aforesaid notion (of "I" and "mine"), there is no such notion (of identity) in Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Universal Spirit, because of His being One without a second. On what ground, then, can violence be ascribed to Him, who was indeed the chastiser of His foes (in their own interests)? (23-24) Therefore, one should (anyhow) fix one's mind on Him either through constant enmity or through devotion (which is free from enmity towards any creature whatsoever) or fear or affection or love. By doing so he will in no way perceive anything else (than the Lord). (25) A mortal may not attain such absorption into Him by fixing his mind on Him through devotion as through constant hostility: such is my conclusion. (26) The caterpillar imprisoned by a wasp in (its nest on) a wall and constantly thinking of the latter through (intensity of) hatred and fear attains a form similar to the wasp. (27) With their sins thus washed off by constant contemplation through animosity on the almighty Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who appeared as a human being by His own will, people attained to Him (easily and speedily too). (28) Fixing their mind on the almighty Lord through concupiscence, hatred, fear or attachment as through devotion, and getting rid of their sin standing as a barrier against His realization, many attained union with Him. (29) The cowherd women (of Vraja) attained to Him through concupiscence; Kāṁsa, through fear; Śiśupāla (the ruler of the Cedis) and other kings (like him), through hatred; the Vṛṣṇis (the kinsmen of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa), through kinship; you (the Pāṇḍava brothers), through attachment and we (the sage Nārada and others), through devotion, O lord ! (30) Vena (stood no chance of attaining to the Lord inasmuch as he) did not fall under any of the five categories (mentioned in verse 29) of those contemplating on the Lord. Hence by any means whatsoever one should fix one's mind on Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the all-enchanting Supreme Deity). (31) Śiśupāla (the ruler of the Cedis), your maternal aunt's son, as well as Dantavakra (son of another maternal aunt of yours), O Yudhiṣṭhira (son of Pāṇḍu), were (no other than) the two foremost attendants (Jaya and Vijaya) of Lord Viṣṇu, (that had been) hurled down from their (divine) abode (Vaikuṇṭha) under the curse of the Brāhmaṇa sages. (32)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

कीदृशः कस्य वा शापो हरिदासाभिमर्शनः । अश्रद्धेय इवाभाति हरेरेकान्तिनां भवः । ३३ ।
देहेन्द्रियासुहीनानां वैकुण्ठपुरवासिनाम् । देहसम्बन्धसम्बद्धमेतदाख्यातुमर्हसि । ३४ ।

Yudhiṣṭhira said : What kind of and whose curse was it that prevailed (even) against the servants of Lord Śrī Hari ? The incarnation of those exclusively devoted to Śrī Hari appears as something incredible. (33) Be pleased to narrate the episode connected with the corporeal existence of the denizens of Vaikuṇṭhapura (the abode of Lord Viṣṇu), devoid (as they are) of a (material) body, Indriyas and life-breath. (34)

नारद उवाच

एकदा ब्रह्मणः पुत्रा विष्णोर्लोकं यदृच्छया । सनन्दनादयो जग्मुश्चरन्तो भुवनत्रयम् । ३५ ।
पञ्चषड्वायनार्भाभाः पूर्वेषामपि पूर्वजाः । दिग्वाससः शिशून् मत्वा द्वाः स्थौ तान् प्रत्यषेधताम् । ३६ ।
अशपन् कुपिता एवं युवां वासं न चार्हथः । रजस्तमोभ्यां रहिते पादमूले मधुद्विषः ।

पापिष्ठामासुरीं योनिं बालिशौ यातमाश्रतः । ३७ ।

एवं शप्तौ स्वभवनात् पतन्तौ तैः कृपालुभिः । प्रोक्तौ पुनर्जन्मभिर्वा त्रिभिलोकाय कल्पताम् । ३८ ।

Nārada replied : (While) traversing the three spheres (heaven, earth and the intermediate region), the sage Sanandana and his (three) brothers, sons of Brahmā (the creator), once went to the realm (Vaikuṇṭha) of Lord Viṣṇu by the Lord's (own) will. (35) Though born before the elders (in Brahmā's creation, Marīci and others), they look like children of five to six years of age and have no covering on their body except the quarters. Accounting them infants, the two gate-keepers (Jaya and Vijaya) stopped them. (36) Full of anger, they (the sages) cursed them thus : "You do not even deserve to dwell at the soles of (much less serve) the feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Slayer of the demon Madhu), which are free from (all tinge of) Rajas (passion) and Tamas (ignorance). Therefore, enter you at once, O fools, the most sinful demoniac womb !" (37) Cursed in the aforesaid words, the two gate-keepers (of Vaikuṇṭha) were, while falling down from their abode, addressed once more (as follows) by the merciful sages (Sanaka and others): "Let this imprecation make for your return to your realm at the end of three incarnations." (38)

जज्ञाते तौ दितेः पुत्रौ दैत्यदानववन्दितौ । हिरण्यकशिपुर्ज्येष्ठो हिरण्याक्षोऽनुजस्ततः । ३९ ।
हतो हिरण्यकशिपुर्हरिणा सिंहरूपिणा । हिरण्याक्षो धरोद्धारे बिभ्रता सौकरं वपुः । ४० ।
हिरण्यकशिपुः पुत्रं प्रह्लादं केशवप्रियम् । जिघांसुरकरोन्नाना यातना मृत्युहेतवे । ४१ ।
सर्वभूतात्मभूतं तं प्रशान्तं समदर्शनम् । भगवत्तेजसा स्पृष्टं नाशक्रोद्धन्तुमुद्यमैः । ४२ ।

They were born as Hiranyakaśipu and Hiranyākṣa (the two sons of Diti), the adored of the Daityas and the Dānavas (alike). Hiranyakaśipu was the elder; while Hiranyākṣa, the younger, was born afterwards. (39) Hiranyakaśipu was slain by Śrī Hari, who had taken the form of a lion (Lord Nṛsiṃha); and Hiranyākṣa was killed by Him even as He assumed the body of a boar for the sake of lifting up the earth (from water). (40) Anxious to get rid of his son, Prahrāda, the beloved of Lord Viṣṇu (the Protector of both Brahmā and Śiva), Hiranyakaśipu inflicted on him tortures of various kinds in order to bring about his death, but could not kill with (all) his devices that perfectly tranquil boy, who had identified himself with all living beings, looked upon all with the same eye, and was invested with a divine glory. (41-42)

ततस्तौ राक्षसौ जातौ केशिन्यां विश्रवःसुतौ । रावणः कुम्भकर्णश्च सर्वलोकोपतापनौ । ४३ ।
तत्रापि राघवो भूत्वा न्यहनच्छापमुक्तये । रामवीर्यं श्रोष्यसि त्वं मार्कण्डेयमुखात् प्रभो । ४४ ।
तावेव क्षत्रियौ जातौ मातृषृङ्गात्मजौ तव । अधुना शापनिर्मुक्तौ कृष्णचक्रहतांहसौ । ४५ ।
वैरानुबन्धतीव्रेण ध्यानेनाच्युतसात्मताम् । नीतौ पुनर्हरिः पार्श्वं जग्मतुर्विष्णुपार्षदौ । ४६ ।

Then (in the next birth) they were born as a pair of Rākṣasas (ogres), the tormenters of all the worlds, Rāvaṇa and Kumbhakarna (by name), sons of the sage Viśravā by Keśinī. (43) In order to redeem them from the curse the Lord slew them in that birth too, assuming the form of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). You will hear about the valour of Śrī Rāma from the lips of the sage Mārkaṇḍeya, O king ! (44) Those very Rākṣasas (Rāvaṇa and Kumbhakarna) were born (again) in the Kṣatriya race as Śiśupāla and Dantavakra (sons of your maternal aunts). Their sins (in the shape of their impure bodies that were guilty of offence against the Lord) having been destroyed by the discus (Sudarśana) of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, they have now (at the end of three incarnations) been redeemed from the curse (of Sanaka and his three brothers). (45) Having (first) been exalted to the state of absorption into the immortal Lord (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) through contemplation intensified by constant enmity, they (eventually) returned to the (divine) presence of Śrī Hari as attendants of Lord Viṣṇu. (46)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

विद्वेषो दयिते पुत्रे कथमासीन्महात्मनि । ब्रूहि मे भगवन्नेन प्रह्लादस्याच्युतात्मता । ४७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादचरितोपक्रमे प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

Yudhiṣṭhira submitted : How did intense hatred come to be developed (in the mind of Hiranyakaśipu) towards his high-souled and beloved son (Prahrāda)? (Also) tell me, O glorious sage, the circumstances under which exclusive devotion to the immortal Lord sprang up in the heart of Prahrāda. (47)

Thus ends the first discourse, forming part of the Introduction to the story of Prahrāda, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse II

Hiranyakaśipu rids his mother (Diti) of her grief (caused by the death of his younger brother, Hiranyākṣa)

नारद उवाच

भ्रातर्येवं विनिहते हरिणा क्रोडमूर्तिना । हिरण्यकशिपू राजन् पर्यतप्यद्गुषा शुचा । १ ।
 आह चेदं रुषा घूर्णः सन्दष्टदशनच्छदः । कोपोज्ज्वलद्भ्यां चक्षुर्भ्यां निरीक्षन् धूम्रमम्बरम् । २ ।
 करालदंष्ट्रोऽप्रदृष्ट्या दुष्प्रेक्ष्यभृकुटीमुखः । शूलमुद्यम्य सदसि दानवानिदमब्रवीत् । ३ ।
 भो भो दानवदैतेया द्विमूर्धस्त्र्यक्ष शम्बर । शतबाहो हयग्रीव नमुचे पाक इल्वल । ४ ।
 विप्रचित्ते मम वचः पुलोमन् शकुनादयः । शृणुतानन्तरं सर्वे क्रियतामाशु मा चिरम् । ५ ।
 सपत्नैर्घातितः क्षुद्रैर्भ्राता मे दयितः सुहृत् । पार्ष्णिग्राहेण हरिणा समेनाप्युपधावनैः । ६ ।
 तस्य त्यक्तस्वभावस्य घृणेर्मायावनौकसः । भजन्तं भजमानस्य बालस्येवास्थिरात्मनः । ७ ।
 मच्छूलभिन्नग्रीवस्य भूरिणा रुधरेण वै । रुधिरप्रियं तर्पयिष्ये भ्रातरं मे गतव्यथः । ८ ।
 तस्मिन् कूटेऽहिते नष्टे कृत्तमूले वनस्पतौ । विटपा इव शुष्यन्ति विष्णुप्राणा दिवौकसः । ९ ।
 तावद्यात भुवं यूयं विप्रक्षत्रसमेधिताम् । सूदयध्वं तपोयज्ञस्वाध्यायव्रतदानिनः । १० ।
 विष्णुर्द्विजक्रियामूलो यज्ञो धर्ममयः पुमान् । देवर्षिपितृभूतानां धर्मस्य च परायणम् । ११ ।
 यत्र यत्र द्विजा गावो वेदा वर्णाश्रमाः क्रियाः । तं तं जनपदं यात सन्दीपयत वृश्चत । १२ ।

Nārada replied : On his (younger) brother (Hiranyākṣa) having been slain thus (through seeming partiality towards the gods) by Śrī Hari, who had assumed the form of a boar, Hiranyakaśipu (the elder brother), O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), felt agonized with anger and grief. (1) Whirling with rage, he closely bit his lips; nay, with his eyes burning through anger he gazed intently at the sky, which looked misty (due to the smoke issuing from those fiery eyes as it were) and spoke thus. (2) With a frowning aspect, terrible to look at because of his fearful teeth and fierce glances, and raising up his trident, he spoke as follows to the Dānavas (assembled) in his court. (3) O Dānavas and Daityas, hullo Dwimūrdhā (lit., a two-headed monster), Tryakṣa (a demon with three eyes), Śambara, Śatabāhu (a demon with a hundred arms), Hayagrīva (one endowed with a horse's head), Namuci, Pāka, Ilwala, Vipracitti,

Pulomā, Śakuna and others, listen all to my word and then let it to be carried out at once; there should be no delay. (4-5) My beloved and devoted (younger) brother (Hiraṇyākṣa) has been caused by the petty enemies (the gods) to be slain at the hands of Hari (the god Viṣṇu), who, though impartial, has been won over to their side through services (rendered to Him). (6) With the copious blood of that god—who, though all effulgence (in essence), assumed the semblance of a wild animal (boar) through a deceptive trick and has relinquished his (very) nature (impartial character), nay, who follows anyone who adores him and is (therefore) fickle-minded as a child—when his head has been severed by my spear, I shall gratify (the spirit of) my blood-thirsty brother and be (thus) relieved of my agony. (7-8) When that wily adversary* (in the person of Viṣṇu) has been disposed of, the gods (the denizens of heaven), whose (very) life is Viṣṇu, will wither away like the boughs on a tree whose roots have been cut off. (9) Meanwhile resort you to the earth, made prosperous by the Brāhmaṇas (the sacerdotal class) and the Kṣatriyas (the ruling and warrior class) and exterminate those engaged in austerities, sacrificial performances and the study of the Vedas, observing sacred vows and practising charity. (10) God Viṣṇu depends for his existence on the rituals of the twice-born, being Yajña (worship) personified and an embodiment of righteousness. He is the ultimate resort of the gods, the Ṛsis (seers), the manes and other living beings and the final goal of righteousness. (11) Repair to each such territory where there are Brāhmaṇas (lit., the twice-born), cows, the (four) Varnaṁs (grades of society) and (four) Āśramas (stages in life) and rituals. Set fire to them and cut them (their trees etc.) to pieces. (12)

इति ते भर्तुर्निर्देशमादाय शिरसाऽऽदृताः । तथा प्रजानां कदनं विदधुः कदनप्रियाः । १३ ।

पुरग्रामव्रजोद्यानक्षेत्रारामाश्रमाकरान् । खेटखर्वटघोषांश्च ददधुः पत्तनानि च । १४ ।

केचित्खनित्रैर्बिभुधुः सेतुप्राकारगोपुरान् । आजीव्यांश्चिच्छिदुर्वृक्षान् केचित्परशुपाणयः ।

प्रादहन् शरणान्यन्ये प्रजानां ज्वलितोल्मुकैः । १५ ।

एवं विप्रकृते लोके दैत्येन्द्रानुचरैर्मुहुः । दिवं देवाः परित्यज्य भुवि चेरुरलक्षिताः । १६ ।

Reverently bowing to the aforementioned command of their lord (Hiraṇyakaśipu), the demons (who were fond of bloodshed) began to oppress the people accordingly. (13) They burnt towns and villages, cow-pens and gardens, corn-fields and parks, hermitages and mines, farmers' hamlets, villages at the foot of mountains and stations of herdsmen and (even) cities. (14) Some (of them) demolished with spades bridges, defensive walls and city-gates; while others, with axes in their hands, cut down (fruit-bearing) trees which served as a means of livelihood (to the people). And (still) others burnt down the dwellings of the people with flaming brands. (15) When the people were thus oppressed again and again by the followers of Hiraṇyakaśipu (the lord of the Daityas), the gods deserted heaven and wandered over the earth unperceived (by the demons). (16)

हिरण्यकशिपुर्भ्रातुः सम्प्रेतस्य दुःखितः । कृत्वा कटोदकादीनि भ्रातृपुत्रान्सान्वयत् । १७ ।

शकुनिं शम्बरं धृष्टं भूतसंतापनं वृकम् । कालनाभं महानाभं हरिश्मश्रुमथोत्कचम् । १८ ।

तन्मातरं रुषाभानुं दितिं च जननीं गिरा । श्लक्ष्णया देशकालज्ञ इदमाह जनेश्वर । १९ ।

Having offered water and other oblations to (the spirit of) his deceased (younger) brother (Hiraṇyākṣa), Hiraṇyakaśipu, who felt (very) miserable (himself), comforted his brother's sons—Śakuni, Śambara, Dhṛṣṭa, Bhūtasantāpana, Vṛka, Kālanābha, Mahānābha, Hariśmaśru and Utkaca. (17-18) Knowing as he did what was appropriate to a particular time and place,

* The expression 'कूटहिते' (which has been split up in the above translation as कूट - अहिते) may also be taken as a compound word and interpreted as 'कूटं हितं यस्य सः' (a fellow whose actions are of a puzzling nature).

he addressed the following to (them as also to) their mother (and his own sister-in-law), Ruṣābhānu, as well as to Diti, his (own) mother, in soft words, O lord of men ! (19)

हिरण्यकशिपुर्वाच

अम्बाम्ब हे वधूः पुत्रा वीरं मार्हथ शोचितुम् । रिपोरभिमुखे श्लाघ्यः शूराणां वध ईप्सितः । २० ।
 भूतानामिह संवासः प्रपायामिव सुव्रते । दैवेनैकत्र नीतानामुन्नीतानां स्वकर्मभिः । २१ ।
 नित्य आत्माव्ययः शुद्धः सर्वगः सर्ववित्परः । धत्तेऽसावात्मनो लिङ्गं मायया विसृजन्गुणान् । २२ ।
 यथाश्मसा प्रचलता तरवोऽपि चला इव । चक्षुषा भ्राम्यमाणेन दृश्यते चलतीव भूः । २३ ।
 एवं गुणैर्भ्राम्यमाणे मनस्यविकलः पुमान् । याति तत्साम्यतां भद्रे ह्यलिङ्गो लिङ्गवानिव । २४ ।
 एष आत्मविपर्यासो ह्यलिङ्गे लिङ्गभावना । एष प्रियाप्रियैर्योगो वियोगः कर्मसंसृतिः । २५ ।
 सम्भवश्च विनाशश्च शोकश्च विविधः स्मृतः । अविवेकश्च चिन्ता च विवेकास्मृतिरेव च । २६ ।
 अत्राप्युदाहरन्तीममितिहासं पुरातनम् । यमस्य प्रेतबन्धूनां संवादं तं निबोधत । २७ ।

Hiranyakaśipu said : Mother, O mother, sister-in-law and sons ! You ought not to lament the hero (Hiranyākṣa). The death of the brave in front of their enemy is praiseworthy and (as such) coveted (by them). (20) The dwelling together in this world of created beings (first) collected at one place (under one roof) and (then) separated by Providence on account of their (past) actions, is (just) like the gathering of men in a shed (on the roadside) containing a reservoir of water (for the wayfarers), O virtuous mother ! (21) The soul is eternal (deathless) free from decay, taintless, omnipresent, all-knowing and transcendent. It assumes bodies (of various kinds), procuring the (numerous) objects of senses by its own Māyā (ignorance). (22) (Just) as due to (proximity to) a running stream the trees (standing motionless on its edge and reflected in it) appear as though moving and (even) as due to one's rotating eyes the earth (around) appears to revolve, so when the mind is agitated by the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), the soul, which is really unagitated (free from the morbid feelings of grief etc.), acquires homogeneity indeed with the mind, O blessed one, so that, though (really) detached from body etc., it appears as if endowed with a body and so on. (23-24) To identify with the body the self, which has no connection (whatsoever) with a body—this is the perversion of the soul. (And) it is from such identification that there ensues its union with agreeable objects and separation from disagreeable ones and vice versa, (egoistic) action and (consequent) transition from one embodied state to another, birth and death, grief of various kinds, mentioned in the scriptures, want of discrimination between matter and spirit and so on, anxiety and forgetting the aforementioned distinction (even though having known it once). (25-26) On this subject the wise narrate the following ancient legend too in the form of a dialogue between Yama (the god of retribution) and the relations of a deceased person. (Please) listen to it. (27)

उशीनरेष्वभूद्राजा सुयज्ञ इति विश्रुतः । सपत्नैर्निहतो युद्धे ज्ञातयस्तमुपासत । २८ ।
 विशीर्णरत्नकवचं विभ्रष्टाभरणस्रजम् । शरनिर्भिन्नहृदयं शयानमसृगाविलम् । २९ ।
 प्रकीर्णकेशं ध्वस्ताक्षं रभसा दष्टदच्छदम् । रजःकुण्ठमुखाभोजं छिन्नायुधभुजं मूढे । ३० ।

In the Uśīnara territory there lived an illustrious king Suyajña by name. He was killed by the enemies in a battle and his kith and kin sat around him even as he lay on the field of battle, stained with blood and biting his lips in anger, his jewelled armour smashed, his ornaments and wreaths of flowers fallen off (from his person), his heart pierced through with an arrow, his hair thrown about (in disorder), his eyes sunk deep, his lotus face covered with dust and his weapons and arms cut into pieces. (28—30)

उशीनरेन्द्रं विधिना तथा कृतं पतिं महिष्यः प्रसमीक्ष्य दुःखिताः ।
 हताः स्म नाथेति करैरुरो भृशं घ्नन्त्यो मुहुस्तत्पदयोरुपापतन् । ३१ ।
 रुदत्य उच्चैर्दयिताङ्घ्रि पङ्कजं सिञ्चन्त्य अस्त्रैः कुचकुङ्कुमारुणैः ।
 विस्त्रस्तकेशाभरणाः शुचं नृणां सृजन्त्य आक्रन्दनया विलेपिरे । ३२ ।
 अहो विधात्राकरुणेन नः प्रभो भवान् प्रणीतो दृगगोचरां दशाम् ।
 उशीनराणामसि वृत्तिदः पुरा कृतोऽधुना येन शुचां विवर्धनः । ३३ ।
 त्वया कृतज्ञेन वयं महीपते कथं विना स्याम सुहृत्तमेन ते ।
 तत्रानुयानं तव वीर पादयोः शुश्रूषतीनां दिश यत्र यास्यसि । ३४ ।
 एवं विलपतीनां वै परिगृह्य मृतं पतिम् । अनिच्छतीनां निहार्मकोऽस्तं संन्यवर्तत । ३५ ।
 तत्र ह प्रेतबन्धूनामाश्रुत्य परिदेवितम् । आह तान् बालको भूत्वा यमः स्वयमुपागतः । ३६ ।

Closely observing their husband, the lord of the Uśīnaras, reduced to such a (pitiable) plight by Providence, the queens felt (much) distressed. Violently beating their breast with their hands again and again and exclaiming "We are lost. O lord !" they dropped down beside his feet. (31) Weeping loudly and bathing the lotus-feet of their beloved husband with their tears, tinted reddish with the saffron paste on their breasts, and causing grief in the heart of men, the ladies wailed piteously, their locks and jewels loosened and displaced : (32) "Alas, by the pitiless Providence, O lord, you have been reduced to a state (of existence) beyond the range of our sight ! Once the life-giver (support) of the Uśīnaras (the inhabitants of this land), you have now been made by Him the augments of their woes. (33) How can we, O ruler of the earth, live without you, our dearest friend, who were disposed to appreciate whatever was done to you (by way of service)? (Therefore,) permit us, servants of your feet, O brave one, to follow you to the place where you will go." (34) While they lamented as aforesaid, clutching their dead husband and unwilling to have him carried out for cremation, the sun actually sank below the horizon. (35) On hearing the lament of the relations of the deceased monarch, it is said, Yama (the god of retribution) himself appeared there in the form of a child and addressed them (as follows). (36)

यम उवाच

अहो अमीषां वयसाधिकानां विपश्यतां लोकविधिं विमोहः ।
 यत्रागतस्तत्र गतं मनुष्यं स्वयं सधर्मा अपि शोचन्त्यपार्थम् । ३७ ।
 अहो वयं धन्यतमा यदत्र त्यक्ताः पितृभ्यां न विचिन्तयामः ।
 अभक्ष्यमाणा अबला वृकादिभिः स रक्षिता रक्षति यो हि गर्भे । ३८ ।
 य इच्छयेतः सृजतीदमव्ययो य एव रक्षत्यवलुम्पते च यः ।
 तस्याबलाः क्रीडनमाहुरीशितुश्चराचरं निग्रहसङ्ग्रहे प्रभुः । ३९ ।
 पथि च्युतं तिष्ठति दिष्टरक्षितं गृहे स्थितं तद्विहतं विनश्यति ।
 जीवत्यनाथोऽपि तदीक्षितो वने गृहेऽपि गुप्तोऽस्य हतो न जीवति । ४० ।

Yama said : Oh the infatuation of these, my superiors in age, who clearly perceive the course of the world (the inevitability of death for everyone that is born) ! Though themselves alike in nature (equally mortal), they bewail in vain the man who has returned to the source (the Unmanifest) whence he came ! (37) Ah, most blessed are we that have no anxiety (whatsoever) and who are not being devoured by wolves and other carnivorous animals, though weak and forsaken here (in this world full of woes) by our parents (who were recognized as responsible for our protection) ! For, He alone is the protector (everywhere), who protects us in the (mother's) womb (where there is nobody to look after us excepting the Lord). (38) The wise, O ladies, call the animate and inanimate creation a (mere) plaything in the hands of that (very) Lord who creates it by (sheer) will, who alone, all-powerful as He is, protects it and who, though imperishable (Himself) destroys it. He (alone) is competent to maintain and dissolve it. (39) A thing protected by destiny remains intact even though dropped on the road; while that which is consigned to destruction by (an evil) fate perishes even though staying at home. A forlorn creature watched over by Providence survives (even) in the forest : while he whose doom is decreed by Providence will not survive though guarded at home. (40)

भूतानि तैस्तैर्निजयोनिकर्मभिर्भवन्ति काले न भवन्ति सर्वशः ।
 न तत्र हात्मा प्रकृतावपि स्थितस्तस्या गुणैरन्यतमो निबध्यते ।४१।
 इदं शरीरं पुरुषस्य मोहजं यथा पृथग्भौतिकमीयते गृहम् ।
 यथादकैः पार्थिवतैजसैर्जनः कालेन जातो विकृतो विनश्यति ।४२।
 यथानलो दारुषु भिन्न ईयते यथानिलो देहगतः पृथक् स्थितः ।
 यथा नभः सर्वगतं न सज्जते तथा पुमान् सर्वगुणाश्रयः परः ।४३।

The bodies (of living beings) of every description come into being and perish at the appointed time due to a variety of Karmas determining their species. The spirit, however, which is altogether different (from the body), is not bound by the laws relating to the body even though dwelling in it. (41) This body is born (as something identical with the spirit) due to the ignorance of the Jīva, though (as a matter of fact) it is different (from the Jīva) because it is perceived (as such) and is material (too) as a house. Like an object made up of aqueous, earthy or fiery atoms, the body, which is made up of the atoms of water, earth and fire (put together) gets transformed in course of time and (ultimately) perishes. (42) (Just) as fire (though) existing in pieces of wood is observed to be distinct (from them as having the capacity to burn and illuminate things), nay, (even) as the air, though existing (everywhere) in the body, appears as existing separately (in the different parts of the body such as the mouth and nostrils), and (just) as ether, though pervading everywhere, does not cling to any substance, so the spirit, (which is) the foundation of all products of matter (such as the body and the senses) is distinct (from them). (43)

सुयज्ञो नन्वयं शेते मूढा यमनुशोचथ । यः श्रोता योऽनुवक्तेह स न दृश्येत कर्हिचित् ।४४।
 न श्रोता नानुवक्तायं मुख्योऽप्यत्र महानसुः । यस्त्विहेन्द्रियवानात्मा स चान्यः प्राणदेहयोः ।४५।
 भूतेन्द्रियमनोलिङ्गान् देहानुच्चावचान् विभुः । भजत्युत्सृजति ह्यन्यस्तच्चापि स्वेन तेजसा ।४६।
 यावल्लिङ्गान्वितो ह्यात्मा तावत्कर्म निबन्धनम् । ततो विपर्ययः क्लेशो मायायोगोऽनुवर्तते ।४७।
 वितथाभिनिवेशोऽयं यद् गुणेष्वर्थदृग्बचः । यथा मनोरथः स्वप्नः सर्वमैन्द्रियकं मृषा ।४८।
 अथ नित्यमनित्यं वा नेह शोचन्ति तद्विदः । नान्यथा शक्यते कर्तुं स्वभावः शोचतामिति ।४९।

Indeed, O fools, here lies (the body called) Suyajña, that you lament. He (however) who was the hearer and the speaker in this body could never be seen even before. (44) Nor is the great vital principle—which inspires all the Indriyas and) which is (therefore said to be) the foremost—the hearer or the speaker. As for the soul, which (while remaining) in a body is endowed with the senses (perceives the various sense-objects through the different senses), is (altogether) different from the (said) vital principle as well as from the body (both of which are devoid of consciousness). (45) The (aforementioned) all-pervading spirit, that is different from the body, accepts (as identical with it) bodies (of various kinds)—(both) high and low and characterized by the (five subtle) elements, the Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) and the mind—and (in the long run) even actually gives up such identification by force of its own discrimination. (46) Action proves to be a source of bondage only so long as the soul stands identified with a subtle body. From such identification follow the perversion of the (all-blissful) Soul and (the attendant) misery, which are (however both) conceived in illusion (and not real). (47) To look upon the (three) Guṇas (their products in the shape of pleasure and pain arising from the contact of the senses with their objects) or speak of them as real—this is a false prepossession. Like a fanciful conception or a dream every sensuous pleasure is unreal. (48) Hence the knowers of Truth grieve neither for that which is abiding nor for that which is transient in this world. Nor can the nature of those who are given to grieving be changed. (49)

लुब्धको विपिने कश्चित्पक्षिणां निर्मितोऽन्तकः । वितत्य जालं विदधे तत्र तत्र प्रलोभयन् । ५० ।
कुलिङ्गमिथुनं तत्र विचरत्समदृश्यत । तयोः कुलिङ्गी सहसा लुब्धकेन प्रलोभिता । ५१ ।
सासज्जत शिचस्तन्यां महिषी कालयन्त्रिता । कुलिङ्गस्तां तथाऽऽपन्नं निरीक्ष्य भृशदुःखितः ।

स्नेहादकल्पः कृपणः कृपणां पयदेवयत् । ५२ ।

अहो अकरुणो देवः स्त्रियाऽऽकरुणया विभुः । कृपणं मानुशोचन्त्या दीनया किं करिष्यति । ५३ ।
कामं नयतु मां देवः किमर्थेनात्मनो हि मे । दीनेन जीवता दुःखमनेन विधुरायुषा । ५४ ।
कथं त्वजातपक्षांस्तान् मातृहीनान् विभर्म्यहम् । मन्दभाग्याः प्रतीक्षन्ते नीडे मे मातरं प्रजाः । ५५ ।

एवं कुलिङ्गं विलपन्तमारात् प्रियावियोगातुरमश्रुकण्ठम् ।

स एव तं शाकुनिकः शरेण विव्याध कालप्रहितो विलीनः । ५६ ।

एवं यूयमपश्यन्त्य आत्मापायमबुद्धयः । नैनं प्राप्स्यथ शोचन्त्यः पतिं वर्षशतैरपि । ५७ ।

A certain fowler, who had been created (by God) as a (veritable) death (as it were) for birds, spread his net in a forest and employing (all sorts of) allurements, caught them wherever he could. (50) A pair of fork-tailed shrikes was seen moving about there. Of them the female bird was precipitately allured by the fowler. (51) Subject to the control of Time, the said female bird got entangled in the meshes of the net. Sore afflicted to see her thus involved in (mortal) danger, yet incapable (of doing anything), the helpless male bird bewailed (the lot of) his miserable mate out of affection (as follows):— (52) "Oh, what will the mighty yet merciless Providence do with my wretched wife, pitiable in everyway and grieving for my miserable self ? (53) Rather let the Deity take me (as well); (for) what is the use to me of this wretched half body, surviving miserably and dragging a desolate existence (when the other half in the form of my mate has been snatched away by Him)? (54) My youngs of poor luck (keenly) await in the nest (the return of) their mother. How shall I (be able to) nourish those motherless little ones still unfledged?" (55) Hidden close by and impelled by Death, the same fowler pierced with an arrow the male shrike (too), sore with separation from its beloved mate and wailing thus, its throat choked with tears. (56) Not foreseeing your own death and lamenting your husband in this way, you foolish women will not (be able to) get him back even in hundreds of years. (57)

हिरण्यकशिपुरुवाच

बाल एवं प्रवदति सर्वे विस्मितचेतसः । ज्ञातयो मेनिरे सर्वमनित्यमयथोत्थितम् । ५८ ।
यम एतदुपाख्याय तत्रैवान्तरधीयत । ज्ञातयोऽपि सुयज्ञस्य चक्रुर्यत्साम्पराधिकम् । ५९ ।
ततः शोचत मा यूयं परं चात्मानमेव च । क आत्मा कः परो वात्र स्वीयः पारक्य एव वा ।

स्वपराभिनिवेशेन विनाज्ञानेन देहिनाम् । ६० ।

Hiraṇyakaśipu went on : While the child was thus discoursing, all the relations of king Suyajña felt astonished and realized everything as transient and unreal. (58) Having narrated this (legend), Yama (the god of retribution) disappeared on that very spot. The relations of Suyajña too performed what was conducive to his future (other-worldly) good. (59) Hence don't you grieve for another nor even for yourselves. Apart from the preconceived notion distinguishing one's own self from another, which is nothing but ignorance, what distinction is there between one's own self and another or again between one's own possession and that belonging to another in the eyes of embodied souls in this world ? (60)

नारद उवाच

इति दैत्यपतेर्वाक्यं दितिराकर्ण्य सुसुषा । पुत्रशोकं क्षणान्त्यक्त्वा तत्त्वे चित्तमधारयत् । ६१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे दितिशोकापनयनं नाम द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

Nārada continued : Hearing this speech of Hiraṇyakaśipu (the lord of the Daityas), Diti (his mother) along with her daughter-in-law (the widow of Hiraṇyākṣa, his younger brother) instantly gave up sorrowing for her son (Hiraṇyākṣa) and fixed her mind on the (highest) truth. (61)

*Thus ends the second discourse entitled "Diti rid of her sorrow", in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

Hiraṇyakaśipu asks a number of boons (of Brahmā, who is pleased with his austerities)

नारद उवाच

हिरण्यकशिपू राजन्नजेयमजरामरम् । आत्मानमप्रतिद्वन्द्वमेकराजं व्यधित्सत । १ ।
स तेपे मन्दरद्रोण्यां तपः परमदारुणम् । ऊर्ध्वबाहुर्नभोदृष्टिः पादाङ्गुष्ठाश्रितावनिः । २ ।
जटादीधितिभी रेजे संवर्तार्क इवांशुभिः । तस्मिंस्तपस्तप्यमाने देवाः स्थानानि भेजिरे । ३ ।
तस्य मूर्ध्नः समुद्भूतः सधूमोऽग्निस्तपोमयः । तिर्यगूर्ध्वमधोलोकानतपद्विष्णुगीरितः । ४ ।
चुक्षुभुर्नद्युदन्वन्तः सद्दीपाद्विश्रिचाल भूः । निपेतुः सग्रहास्तारा जज्वलुश्च दिशो दश । ५ ।
तेन तप्ता दिवं त्यक्त्वा ब्रह्मलोकं ययुः सुराः । धात्रे विज्ञापयामासुर्देवदेव जगत्पते । ६ ।
दैत्येन्द्रतपसा तप्ता दिवि स्थातुं न शक्नुमः । तस्य चोपशमं भूमन् विधेहि यदि मन्यसे ।

लोका न यावन्नङ्गुयन्ति बलिहारास्तवाभिभूः । ७ ।

तस्यायं किल सङ्कल्पश्चरतो दुश्चरं तपः । श्रूयतां किं न विदितस्तवाथापि निवेदितः । ८ ।
सृष्ट्वा चराचरमिदं तपोयोगसमाधिना । अध्यास्ते सर्वधिष्येभ्यः परमेष्ठी निजासनम् । ९ ।
तदहं वर्धमानेन तपोयोगसमाधिना । कालात्मनोश्च नित्यत्वात्साधयिष्ये तथाऽऽत्मनः । १० ।
अन्यथेदं विधास्येऽहमयथापूर्वमोजसा । किमन्यैः कालनिर्धूतैः कल्पान्ते वैष्णवादिभिः । ११ ।
इति शुश्रुम निर्वन्धं तपः परममास्थितः । विधत्स्वानन्तरं युक्तं स्वयं त्रिभुवनेश्वर । १२ ।

तवासनं द्विजगवां पारमेष्ठ्यं जगत्पते । भवाय श्रेयसे भूत्यै क्षेमाय विजयाय च । १३ ।

Nārada resumed : Hiranyakaśipu, O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), (now) wished to make himself invincible, free from old age and death and the sole monarch of the three worlds, having no rival. (1) In the valley of Mount Mandara he practised asceticism of the severest type, keeping (both) his arms lifted up and his gaze fixed on the sky, and touching the ground with his great toes. (2) With the (dazzling) splendour of his matted locks he shone as the sun with its rays at the time of final dissolution. While he was (thus) practising austerities, the gods (that had been dislodged from their home took advantage of his absence and) returned to their (respective) abodes. (3) The smoky fire of asceticism sprung from the crown of his head spread on all sides and began to scorch the higher and the lower worlds as well as the intermediate region. (4) The rivers and the oceans swelled; the earth with its (seven) main divisions and mountains shook; stars and planets shot out (from their respective positions) and (all) the ten directions flamed forth. (5) Scorched by that fire, the gods left heaven and went to the realm of Brahmā and submitted to the creator (as follows):—"Tormented by the asceticism of Hiranyakaśipu (the chief of the demons), O god of gods, O lord of the universe, we can no longer stay in heaven. (Pray,) devise some remedy against it, O perfect one, if you think fit, before the worlds that bear tributes to you perish, O universal lord ! (6-7) The following is his avowed purpose in practising the austerities so hard to perform. Although it is not unknown to you, yet listen to what is being submitted (by us). (8) 'Having evolved this mobile (animate) and immobile (inanimate) creation by virtue of his devotion to asceticism and Yoga (contemplation), Brahmā (the supreme deity) occupies his abode (Satyaloka), higher than all (other) spheres. (9) Through increasing devotion to austerities and Yoga (concentration of mind) and because time and the soul are eternal, I shall likewise secure that very position for myself. (10) By (sheer) strength of asceticism I shall change the world order (by exalting sin and depreciating virtue and by driving away the gods and the Ṛsis to the subterranean regions and placing the demons in the higher spheres) so completely as to make it (look altogether) different from what it was before. What shall I do with other spheres such as the realms of Viṣṇu and so on, which are destroyed by Time at the end of a Kalpa* (the period covering the entire life of the three worlds)?' (11) We hear of his resolution in this behalf and it is with this intention that he has undertaken austerities of the severest type. (Kindly) do yourself at once what is advisable (under the circumstances), O lord of the three spheres ! (12) Your supremely exalted position, O lord of the universe, is conducive to the growth, happiness, prosperity, protection and triumph of the Brāhmaṇas and the cows. (If he succeeds in replacing you, there is no hope for the Brāhmaṇas and the cows.)" (13)

इति विज्ञापितो देवैर्भगवानात्मभूर्नृप । परीतो भृगुदक्षाद्यैर्ययौ दैत्येश्वराश्रमम् । १४ ।

न ददर्श प्रतिच्छन्नं वल्मीकतृणकीचकैः । पिपीलिकाभिराचीर्णमेदस्त्वङ्मांसशोणितम् । १५ ।

तपन्तं तपसा लोकान् यथाभ्रापिहितं रविम् । विलक्ष्य विस्मितः प्राह प्रहसन् हंसवाहनः । १६ ।

Thus addressed by the gods, O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), and accompanied by the sage Bhṛgu, Dakṣa and others, the glorious Brahmā (the self-born) went to the hermitage of Hiranyakaśipu (the lord of the Daityas). (14) (At first) he did not find the Daitya, who was covered all over with ant-hills, grass and bamboos and whose fat, skin, flesh and blood had been consumed by ants. (15) Brahmā (who was mounted on a swan) was (later) amazed to see him scorching

* Even though the divine abode of Lord Viṣṇu and other manifestations of the Supreme Deity are all eternal, Hiranyakaśipu regards them as limited by time because of his perverted intellect, which showed him everything upside down.

the worlds with his asceticism, like the sun wholly screened by clouds, and spoke laughingly (as follows). (16)

ब्रह्मोवाच

उत्तिष्ठोत्तिष्ठ भद्रं ते तपःसिद्धोऽसि काश्यप । वरदोऽहमनुप्राप्तो त्रियतामीप्सितो वरः । १७ ।
 अद्राक्षमहमेतत्ते हृत्सारं महदद्भुतम् । दंशभक्षितदेहस्य प्राणा ह्यस्थिषु शेरते । १८ ।
 नैतत्पूर्वर्षयश्चक्रुर्न करिष्यन्ति चापरे । निरम्बुर्धारयेत्प्राणान् को वै दिव्यसमाः शतम् । १९ ।
 व्यवसायेन तेऽनेन दुष्करेण मनस्विनाम् । तपोनिष्ठेन भवता जितोऽहं दितिनन्दन । २० ।
 ततस्तः आशिषः सर्वा ददाम्यसुरपुङ्गव । मर्त्यस्य ते अमर्त्यस्य दर्शनं नाफलं मम । २१ ।

Brahmā said : Arise, arise, O son of Kaśyapa ! May good betide you; you have achieved your purpose through austerities. (It is therefore that) I, the bestower of boons, have come over to you ! Any boon desired by you may (now) be asked. (17) I have witnessed this extraordinary and marvellous stamina of yours, that your body having been eaten away by gnats, your life actually hangs on your bones (alone). (18) Neither did the former sages practise such asceticism nor will the coming ones do it. Indeed, who can support life without water for a hundred celestial years (or 36,000 human years)? (19) Through this perseverance of yours, (which is) hard to practise even for those who have controlled their mind. I have been conquered by you, intent as you are on austerities, O delighter (son) of Diti. (20) Therefore, I bestow on you all your desired blessings, O chief of the demons. My sight, immortal as I am, cannot go in vain for you, a mortal. (21)

नारद उवाच

इत्युक्त्वाऽऽदिभवो देवो भक्षिताङ्गं पिपीलिकैः । कमण्डलुजलेनैक्षद्विव्येनामोघराधसा । २२ ।
 स तत्कीचकवल्मीकात् सहोजोबलान्वितः । सर्वावयवसम्पन्नो वज्रसंहननो युवा ।
 उत्थितस्तप्तहेमाभो विभावसुरिवैधसः । २३ ।
 स निरीक्ष्याम्बरे देवं हंसवाहमवस्थितम् । ननाम शिरसा भूमौ तद्दर्शनमहोत्सवः । २४ ।
 उत्थाय प्राञ्जलिः प्रह्व ईक्षमाणो दृशा विभुम् । हर्षाश्रुपुलकोद्भेदो गिरा गद्गदयाजृणात् । २५ ।

Nārada continued : Having spoken thus, Brahmā (the first-born deity) sprinkled the demon, whose body had been eaten away by ants, with the water of his Kamaṇḍalu (a water-pot made of wood or the hard shell of a coconut)—water which was supernal (in substance and of unfailing virtue). (22) From the ant-hill covered by bamboos, he then emerged like fire from fuel, endowed with potency of mind, keenness of the senses and strength of body, perfect in all limbs, possessed of an adamant frame, youthful and brilliant as molten gold. (23) Perceiving the god Brahmā (who was mounted on a swan) standing in the air, the demon greeted him with his head resting on the ground, transported with joy at his sight. (24) (Then) rising with joined palms in a suppliant posture and gazing at the powerful god with unwinking eyes, he offered (his) praises in faltering words (as follows) with tears of joy (in his eyes) and hair standing on end. (25)

हिरण्यकशिपुरुवाच

कल्पान्ते कालसृष्टेन योऽन्येन तमसाऽऽवृतम् । अभिव्यनग् जगदिदं स्वयंज्योतिः स्वरोचिषा । २६ ।

आत्मना त्रिवृता चेदं सृजत्यवति लुम्पति । रजःसत्त्वतमोधाग्रे पराय महते नमः । १२७ ।
 नम आद्याय बीजाय ज्ञानविज्ञानमूर्तये । प्राणेन्द्रियमनोबुद्धिविकारैर्व्यक्तिमीयुषे । १२८ ।
 त्वमीशिषे जगतस्तस्थुषश्च प्राणेन मुख्येन पतिः प्रजानाम् ।
 चित्तस्य चित्तेर्मनइन्द्रियाणां पतिर्महान् भूतगणाशयेशः । १२९ ।
 त्वं सप्ततन्तून् वितनोषि तन्वा त्रय्या चातुर्होत्रकविद्यया च ।
 त्वमेक आत्माऽऽत्मवतामनादिरन्तपारः कविरन्तरात्मा । १३० ।
 त्वमेव कालोऽग्निमिषो जनानामायुर्लवाद्यावयवैः क्षिणोषि ।
 कूटस्थ आत्मा परमेष्ठ्यजो महांस्त्वं जीवलोकस्य च जीव आत्मा । १३१ ।
 त्वत्तः परं नापरमप्यनेजदेजच्च किञ्चिद् व्यतिरिक्तमस्ति ।
 विद्याः कलास्ते तनवश्च सर्वा हिरण्यगर्भोऽसि बृहत्त्रिपृष्ठः । १३२ ।
 व्यक्तं विभो स्थूलमिदं शरीरं येनेन्द्रियप्राणमनोगुणांस्त्वम् ।
 भुङ्क्षे स्थितो धामनि पारमेष्ठ्ये अव्यक्त आत्मा पुरुषः पुराणः । १३३ ।
 अनन्ताव्यक्तरूपेण येनेदमखिलं ततम् । चिदचिच्छक्तियुक्ताय तस्मै भगवते नमः । १३४ ।
 यदि दास्यस्यभिमतान् वरान्मे वरदोत्तम । भूतेभ्यस्त्वद्विसृष्टेभ्यो मृत्युर्मा भून्मम प्रभो । १३५ ।
 नान्तर्बहिर्दिवा नक्तमन्यस्मादपि चायुधैः । न भूमौ नाप्यरे मृत्युर्न नरैर्न मृगैरपि । १३६ ।
 व्यसुभिर्वासुमद्भिर्वा सुरासुरमहोरगैः । अप्रतिद्वन्द्वतां युद्धे ऐकपत्यं च देहिनाम् । १३७ ।
 सर्वेषां लोकपालानां महिमानं यथाऽऽत्मनः । तपोयोगप्रभावाणां यत्र रिष्यति कर्हिचित् । १३८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे हिरण्यकशिपोर्वरयाचनं नाम तृतीयोऽध्यायः । ३ ।

Hiranyakaśipu said : Hail to the all-pervading Supreme, the Ground of (the three modes of Prakṛti, viz.,) Sattva, Rajas and Tamas (the principles of harmony, activity and inertia respectively), who—self-effulgent as He is—manifests (again) by His native splendour this universe, enveloped at the end of a Kalpa (the life-time of the three worlds) in blinding Tamogūṇa evolved by Time, and who by His own Self—associated with the (aforesaid) three Guṇas—creates, protects and destroys it. (26-27) Salutations to the First Cause, who is an embodiment of both (scriptural) knowledge and wisdom and who has (objectively) manifested Himself in the form of the vital airs, the Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action), the mind and intellect and the (five gross) elements (which are modifications of the five subtle elements). (28) (It is) You (who) rule over the mobile (animate) and immobile (inanimate) creation with the Prāṇa (the life-breath), the foremost of the five vital airs, and are (thus) the lord of created beings. (Nay,) You are the Controller of their reason and consciousness (the modification of reason) as well as of the mind and the Indriyas and are (thus) supreme, being the ruler of the (five gross) elements and their properties (viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell), the internal senses (viz., the mind, intellect, reason and ego) as well as of (their) cravings. (29) Through Your body in the form of the three Vedas and the science of rituals conducted with the help of four officiating priests (viz., Hotā, Adhvaryu, Udgātā and Brahmā) You popularize the seven types of sacrificial performances (namely, Agniṣṭoma, Atyagniṣṭoma, Uktha, Śoḍaśī, Atirātra, Āptoryāma and Vājapeya). You are the Soul as well as the Inner Controller of (all) embodied beings; for You are omniscient, indivisible, without beginning or end and unlimited (in space). (30) You alone are the unwinking Time and (as such) shorten the duration of life of (all) men by Your divisions such as a Lava (the sixteenth part of the twinkling of an eye). (Nay,) You are the immutable Self, occupying the most exalted position, birthless and all-pervading, the Life-giver and Controller of the (entire) animate creation. (31) There is nothing apart from You, cause or effect, mobile or immobile; nay, all the branches of knowledge (such as the Vedas and Upavedas) and sciences auxiliary to the Vedas (Grammar and so on) are Your bodies; for You are (no other than) Brahma (the Infinite) holding the (entire) universe (in the form of a golden egg) within You, existing beyond Prakṛti (consisting of the three Guṇas). (32) This visible universe, O all-pervading Lord, is (nothing but) Your physical Body, with which You enjoy the objects of the senses, the vital airs and the mind, though continuing in Your most exalted state; while You are (as a matter of fact) the unmanifest Spirit and the most ancient Person (the Inner Controller of all). (33) Hail to that almighty Lord (viz., Yourself), endowed with the faculties of illumination and obscuraton (both), by whom in His infinite and unmanifest state all this stands pervaded. (34) If you will confer on me (my) desired blessings, O Chief among the bestowers of boons, let not my death occur at the hands of (any of the) living beings created by You, O Lord. (35) Let there be no (fear of) death (to me) indoors or outdoors, by day or by night, even from anyone else (than those beings of Your creation) and even through weapons, neither on earth nor in the air and neither from men nor from animals. Nor should I meet my death at the hands of animate or inanimate beings, gods, demons or great serpents. (Also be pleased to) grant me the boon of having no adversary in battle as well as undisputed lordship over (all) embodied beings, (towering) glory like Your own in the midst of all the guardians of the spheres and unfailing mystic powers enjoyed by those who have risen to pre-eminence through austerities and concentration of mind. (36—38)

Thus ends the third discourse entitled "Hiraṇyakaśipu asks a number of boons (of Brahmā)", in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

Hiraṇyakaśipu's atrocities and Prahrāda's virtues recounted

नारद उवाच

एवं वृत्तः शतधृतिर्हिण्यकशिपोरथ । प्रादात्तत्तपसा प्रीतो वरांस्तस्य सुदुर्लभान् । १ ।

Nārada began again : Thus solicited and pleased with the asceticism of Hiraṇyakaśipu, Brahmā then conferred on him boons which are most difficult to obtain. (1)

ब्रह्मोवाच

तातेमे दुर्लभाः पुंसां यान् वृणीषे वरान् मम । तथापि वितराम्यङ्ग वरान् यदपि दुर्लभान् । २ ।

Brahmā said : These boons, my child, which you seek of me, cannot be easily secured by living beings. Nevertheless, I confer (on you), O dear one, those very boons though (so) difficult to obtain. (2)

ततो जगाम भगवानमोघानुग्रहो विभुः । पूजितोऽसुरवर्येण स्तूयमानः प्रजेश्वरैः । ३ ।

एवं लब्धवरो दैत्यो विभ्रद्धेममयं वपुः । भगवत्यकरोद् द्वेषं भ्रातुर्वधमनुस्मरन् । ४ ।

स विजित्य दिशः सर्वा लोकांश्च त्रीन् महासुरः । देवासुरमनुष्येन्द्रान् गन्धर्वगरुडोरगान् । ५ ।
 सिद्धचारणविद्याधानृषीन् पितृपतीन् मनून् । यक्षरक्षःपिशाचेशान् प्रेतभूतपतीनथ । ६ ।
 सर्वसत्त्वपतीञ्जित्वा वशमानीय विश्वजित् । जहार लोकपालानां स्थानानि सह तेजसा । ७ ।
 देवोद्यानश्रिया जुष्टमध्यास्ते स्म त्रिविष्टपम् । महेन्द्रभवनं साक्षात्त्रिमितं विश्वकर्मणा ।

त्रैलोक्यलक्ष्म्यायतनमध्युवासारिखलर्द्धिमत् । ८ ।

यत्र विद्रुमसोपाना महामारकता भुवः । यत्र स्फटिककुड्यानि वैदूर्यस्तम्भपङ्क्तयः । ९ ।
 यत्र चित्रवितानानि पद्मारागसनानि च । पयःफेननिभाः शय्या मुक्तादामपरिच्छदाः । १० ।
 कूजद्धिर्नूपुरैर्देव्यः शब्दयन्त्र इतस्ततः । रत्नस्थलीषु पश्यन्ति सुदतीः सुन्दरं मुखम् । ११ ।

तस्मिन्महेन्द्रभवने महाबलो महामना निर्जितलोके एकराट् ।

रेमेऽभिवन्द्याङ्घ्रियुगः सुरादिभिः प्रतापितैरूर्जितचण्डशासनः । १२ ।

तमङ्गं मत्तं मधुनोरुगन्धिना विवृत्तताम्राक्षमशेषधिष्यपाः ।

उपासतोपायनपाणिभिर्विना त्रिभिस्तपोयोगबलौजसां पदम् । १३ ।

जगुर्महेन्द्रासनमोजसा स्थितं विश्वावसुस्तुभुरुरस्मदादयः ।

गन्धर्वसिद्धा ऋषयोऽस्तुवन्बुधुर्विद्याधरा अप्सरसश्च पाण्डव । १४ ।

स एव वर्णाश्रमिभिः क्रतुभिर्भूरदक्षिणैः । इज्यमानो हविर्भागानग्रहीत् स्वेन तेजसा । १५ ।

अकृष्टपच्या तस्यासीत् सप्तद्वीपवती मही । तथा कामदुघा द्यौस्तु नानाश्चर्यपदं नभः । १६ ।

रत्नाकराश्च रत्नौघास्तत्पत्यश्चोहुरुर्मिभिः । क्षारसीधुघृतक्षौद्रदधिक्षीरामृतोदकाः । १७ ।

शैला द्रोणीभिराक्रीडं सर्वर्तुषु गुणान् द्रुमाः । दधार लोकपालानामेक एव पृथग्गुणान् । १८ ।

स इत्थं निर्जितककुबेकराड् विषयान् प्रियान् । यथोपजोषं भुञ्जानो नातृष्यदजितेन्द्रियः । १९ ।

The glorious and mighty Brahmā of unfailing grace thereupon returned (to his abode), worshipped by Hiranyakaśipu (the foremost of the demons) and being (still) extolled by the lords of created beings. (3) Having thus secured boons (desired by him) and acquiring a golden (effulgent) form, the demon (Hiranyakaśipu) nursed a grudge against the Lord, constantly recollecting as he did the death (at His hands) of his (younger) brother (Hiranyākṣa). (4) Having completely subjugated all the (four) quarters as well as the three spheres (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) and having conquered and brought under control the gods and demons, rulers of men, Gandharvas (celestial musicians), birds of the species known by the name of Garuḍa (secretary bird) and serpents, Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth), Cāraṇas (celestial bards) and Vidyādhara (heavenly artistes), Ṛṣis (seers), the chiefs of the manes, Manus (progenitors of mankind, each presiding over a Manvantara), the lords of the Yakṣas (another class of demigods), Rākṣasas (ogres) and Piśācas (goblins), the leaders of the Pretas (evil spirits) and Bhūtas (ghosts) as well as the rulers of all other species of living beings, the great Asura (Hiranyakaśipu), who had (thus) conquered the (whole) universe, now usurped the thrones of guardians of the (various) spheres along with their glory. (5—7) He established himself in heaven, (which is) enriched with the beauty of the celestial garden (known by the name of Nandana), and took up his residence in the palace of the mighty Indra, built by Viśvakarmā (the architect of the gods) himself, the abode of the wealth of all the three worlds and rich in all luxuries, where there are stairs of corals, floors of most precious emeralds, walls of crystals and rows of pillars of cat's-eyes, canopies of various designs and wonderful workmanship, thrones of rubies and beddings white as the foam of milk and fringed with festoons of pearls, and where celestial ladies possessed of charming teeth and producing a sweet sound with their jingling anklets here and there see their pretty faces (reflected) in the pavements of precious stones. (8—11) In that palace of the great Indra revelled the mighty and proud Hiranyakaśipu, who had conquered (all) the worlds and was (now) their sole monarch, (nay,) whose feet were respectfully tended by gods and others severely oppressed by him and who ruled with a strong and iron hand. (12) Upon him, O dear one—who remained inebriate with a strong-smelling wine and whose coppery eyes ever kept rolling (through intoxication), (nay,) who was a reservoir of austerity, Yoga (concentration of mind) and strength of body and acuteness of the senses—waited with presents (of various kinds) in their hands all the protectors of the worlds barring (of course) three (viz., Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva). (13) Him, who had occupied the throne of the great Indra by (sheer) force, glorified (the celebrated Gandharvas) Viśvāvasu and Tumburu and singers such as myself (Nārada). (Nay, other) Gandharvas and Siddhas as well as seers, Vidyādhara and Apsarās (celestial nymphs), O son of Pāṇḍu, extolled him again and again. (14) Propitiated by men belonging to the different Varnas (grades of society) and Āśramas (stages in life) through sacrifices with liberal gifts, he alone appropriated (all) the sacrificial offerings by his own might. (15) The earth consisting of its seven Dwīpas (principal divisions) yielded to him (all) its produce unploughed; even so heaven showered (on him) everything desired; while the sky presented many a wonderful phenomenon. (16) The (seven) oceans (lit., reservoirs of precious stones of various kinds), full of salt water, wine, clarified butter, sugar-cane juice, curds, milk and pure water respectively, as well as the rivers falling into them (which are spoken of as so many wives of the oceans in view of the fact that each of the seven oceans is presided over by a male deity who has a number of wives each presiding over a river) bore (to him) heaps of jewels on their waves. (17) Mountains provided him with a pleasure-ground in the shape of their valleys, while trees bore him (excellent) flowers and fruits in all seasons. (And) he singly possessed (usurped) all the distinctive qualities (functions) of the guardians of the (various) spheres. (18) Having thus conquered (all) the (four) quarters, the demon (who was the undisputed sovereign of all the three worlds) did not feel satiated even though enjoying as he pleased his beloved objects, since he had not been able to subdue his senses and mind. (19)

एवमैश्वर्यमत्स्य दूषस्योच्छास्त्रवर्तिनः । कालो महान् व्यतीयाय ब्रह्मशापमुपेयुषः । २० ।
 तस्योग्रदण्डसंविघ्नाः सर्वे लोकाः सपालकाः । अन्यत्रालब्धशरणाः शरणं ययुरच्युतम् । २१ ।
 तस्यै नमोऽस्तु काष्ठायै यत्रात्मा हरिरीश्वरः । चद्रत्वा न निवर्तन्ते शान्ताः संन्यासिनोऽमलाः । २२ ।
 इति ते संयतात्मानः समाहितधियोऽमलाः । उपतस्थुर्हृषीकेशं विनिद्रा वायुभोजनाः । २३ ।
 तेषामाविरभूद्वाणी अरूपा मेघनिःस्वना । सन्नादयन्ती ककुभः साधूनामभयङ्करी । २४ ।
 मा भैष्ट विदुधश्रेष्ठाः सर्वेषां भद्रमस्तु वः । मदर्शनं हि भूतानां सर्वश्रेयोपपत्तये । २५ ।
 ज्ञातमेतस्य दौरात्त्यं दैतेयापसदस्य च । तस्य शान्तिं करिष्यामि कालं तावत्प्रतीक्षत । २६ ।
 यदा देवेषु वेदेषु गोषु विप्रेषु साधुषु । धर्मे मयि च विद्वेषः स वा आशु विनश्यति । २७ ।
 निर्वैराय प्रशान्ताय स्वसुताय महात्मने । प्रह्लादाय यदा द्रुहोद्धनिष्येऽपि वरोर्जितम् । २८ ।

In this way a considerable time slipped past Hiranyakaśipu, who, having been subjected to an execration by the Brāhmaṇas (Sanaka and his three brothers), was (not only) arrogant and drunk with power and pelf, but violated (the injunctions of) the Sāstras (holy books). (20) Unnerved by his stern rule and finding no shelter elsewhere, the inhabitants of all the worlds along with their guardian deities resorted to the immortal Lord (Viṣṇu) for protection. (21)

(They prayed as follows :-) "Salutation be to that quarter where resides the almighty Śrī Hari, the Universal Spirit, and on reaching which the pure-hearted recluses of tranquil mind do not return (to the mortal plane)." (22) With their mind and intellect (duly) controlled and rid of (all) impurities, they waited upon Lord Viṣṇu (the Controller of the senses) with the aforesaid prayer, remaining without sleep and subsisting on air (alone all the time). (23) A voice without (any trace of the speaker's) form and deep as the rumbling of clouds, was heard by them, filling the quarters with its echo and bringing with it assurances of safety to the righteous : (24) "Do not be afraid, O jewels among gods; may good betide you all ! My sight (as well as the hearing of My voice) is undoubtedly conducive to the attainment of all blessings for created beings. (25) The wickedness (tyranny) of this vile demon is (already) known (to Me) and I shall put an end to it. (Please) wait till then. (26) When hatred develops in the mind of an individual towards the gods, the Vedas, the bovine race, the Brāhmaṇas and (other) pious souls, nay, towards righteousness and Myself, the fellow surely perishes before long. (27) When the demon seeks to harm his own high-souled son, Prahrāda, who is free from animosity and extremely calm, I shall slay him, even though he is powerful by virtue of boons (bestowed on him by Brahmā)." (28)

नारद उवाच

इत्युक्ता लोकगुरुणा तं प्रणम्य दिवौकसः । न्यवर्तन्त गतोद्वेगा मेनिरे चासुरं हतम् । २९ ।

Nārada continued : Thus addressed by Lord Viṣṇu (the Preceptor of the universe), and bowing down to Him, the denizens of heaven, who were (now) free from anxiety, returned and accounted the demon (already) slain. (29)

तस्य दैत्यपतेः पुत्राश्चत्वारः परमाद्भुताः । प्रह्लादोऽभून्महांस्तेषां गुणैर्महदुपासकः । ३० ।

ब्रह्मण्यः शीलसम्यक् सत्यसंशो जितेन्द्रियः । आत्मवत्सर्वभूतानामेकः प्रियसुहृत्तमः । ३१ ।

दासवत्सन्नतार्याङ्घ्रिः पितृवद्दीनवत्सलः । भ्रातृवत्सदृशो म्रिगधो गुरुष्वीश्वरभावनः ।

विद्यार्थरूपजन्माढ्यो मानस्तम्भविवर्जितः । ३२ ।

नोद्विग्नचित्तो व्यसनेषु निःस्पृहः श्रुतेषु दृष्टेषु गुणेष्ववस्तुदृक् ।

दान्तेन्द्रियप्राणशरीरधीः सदा प्रशान्तकामो रहितासुरोऽसुरः । ३३ ।

यस्मिन्महदुणा राजन् गृह्यन्ते कविभिर्मुहुः । न तेऽधुनापिधीयन्ते यथा भगवतीश्वरे । ३४ ।

यं साधुगाथासदसि रिपवोऽपि सुरा नृप । प्रतिमानं प्रकुर्वन्ति किमुतान्ये भवादृशाः । ३५ ।

गुणैरलमसंख्यैर्चर्माहात्यं तस्य सूच्यते । वासुदेवे भगवति यस्य नैसर्गिकी रतिः । ३६ ।

Four most marvellous sons were born to that ruler of the Daityas. Prahrāda, (who was) a votary of exalted souls, was pre-eminent among them (all) in point of virtues. (30) Devoted to the Brāhmaṇas, rich in amiability and true to his word, he had his senses under control and was the unique beloved friend and the greatest well-wisher of all living beings as their own self. (31) Like a servant he bowed low at the feet of the venerable; like a father, he was kind to the poor; he was affectionate like a brother to his equals and looked upon his elders as God Himself. Though endowed with learning, wealth, personal charm and high birth, he was altogether free from pride and arrogance. (32) Always unperturbed at heart in the midst of calamities, he had no craving for sense, objects seen or heard of, since he looked upon them as unreal. He had not only controlled his senses, breath, body and intellect, but he had thoroughly conquered his desires (too); though a demon (by birth), he had relinquished the characteristics of a demon. (33) The qualities of exalted souls (present) in him. O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), are constantly imbibed by the wise and are not obscured even now (at this distant date), any more than the excellences present in the Lord. (34) Even gods, his enemies, O king, treat him as a model (of virtue) in their assemblies holding discourses on the lives of pious souls ! What wonder, then, that others, like you should do it ? (35) It is futile (indeed) to recount his excellences which are innumerable. The greatness of Prahrāda, in whom could be seen a natural affinity for Lord Vāsudeva, is (only) hinted at (in the following words). (36)

न्यस्तक्रीडनको बालो जडवत्तन्मनस्तया । कृष्णग्रहगृहीतात्मा न वेद जगदीदृशम् । ३७ ।
 आसीनः पर्यटन्नश्न शयानः प्रपिबन् ब्रुवन् । नानुसन्धत्त एतानि गोविन्दपरिरम्भितः । ३८ ।
 क्वचिद्ब्रुदति वैकुण्ठचिन्ताशवलचेतनः । क्वचिद्धसति तच्चिन्ताह्लाद उद्गायति क्वचित् । ३९ ।
 नदति क्वचिदुत्कण्ठो विलज्जो नृत्यति क्वचित् । क्वचित्त्वावनायुक्तस्तन्मयोऽनुचकार ह । ४० ।
 क्वचिदुत्पलकस्तूष्णीमास्ते संस्पर्शनिर्वृतः । अस्पन्दप्रणयानन्दसलिलामीलितेक्षणः । ४१ ।
 स उत्तमश्लोकपदारविन्दयोर्निषेवयाकिञ्चनसङ्गलब्धया ।

तन्वन् परां निर्वृतिमात्मनो मुहुर्दुःसङ्गदीनान्यमनःशमं व्यधात् । ४२ ।
 तस्मिन्महाभागवते महाभागे महात्मनि । हिरण्यकशिपू राजन्नकरोदधमात्मजे । ४३ ।

Having laid aside playthings even as a child, Prahrāda, who looked like a dunce by reason of his mind being (fully) absorbed in the Lord, and whose soul was possessed by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa as though by some spirit, did not view the world as such (as it appears to worldly men, but as full of Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (37) Sitting or walking, eating or drinking, lying down or speaking, he was never conscious of these acts, finding himself constantly folded in the arms of Lord Govinda (the Protector of cows). (38) Now he would cry (in agony at the sudden disappearance of the Lord), his mind overwhelmed with the thought of Lord Viṣṇu; now (when the Lord appeared again) he laughed and full of delight at His thought he would now sing His praises at the pitch of his voice. (39) Now he shrieked with open throat and now he would dance casting all bashfulness to the winds (as it were). Now imagining himself to be (none else than) the Lord and completely merged in Him, he imitated His doings. (40) Enraptured by the thought of having become one with Him, he would now sit mute with the hair on his body standing erect and his half-closed eyes brimful with tears of joy brought by constant love. (41) By devoted service to the lotus-feet of the Lord of excellent renown, obtained as a reward of the fellowship of devotees claiming nothing as their own, he not only brought supreme felicity to himself but also soothed the mind of others (other Daitya boys who were his fellow-students), miserable through evil inclination (attachment to the pleasures of sense). (42) It was such an illustrious and high-souled son, a great devotee of the Lord, O Yudhiṣṭhira, that Hiranyakaśipu sought to harm. (43)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

देवर्ष एतदिच्छामो वेदितुं तव सुव्रत । यदात्मजाय शुद्धाय पितादात् साधवे ह्यधम् । ४४ ।
 पुत्रान् विप्रतिकूलान् स्वान् पितरः पुत्रवत्सलाः । उपालभन्ते शिक्षार्थं नैवाधमपरो यथा । ४५ ।
 किमुतानुवशान् साधून्स्तादृशान् गुरुदेवतान् । एतत् कौतूहलं ब्रह्मन्नस्माकं विधम प्रभो ।

पितुः पुत्राय यद् द्वेषो मरणाय प्रयोजितः । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो मंहितायां मत्स्यस्कन्धे प्रह्लादचरिते चतुर्थोऽध्यायः । ४ ।

Yudhiṣṭhira submitted : O celestial sage of excellent vows, we are anxious to know from you wherefore Hiranyakaśipu (Prahrāda's father) actually inflicted suffering on his innocent and righteous son (Prahrāda). (44) Fathers fond of their sons do admonish their refractory sons in order to correct them; but in no case do they persecute them as an enemy would. Much less would they oppress obedient and pious sons like Prahrāda, who look upon their father as a deity. (Pray,) remove this curiosity of ours, O holy one, as to how the hatred of the father for his son was directed towards the latter's death, my lord ! (45-46)

Thus ends the fourth discourse forming part of the narrative of Prahrāda, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

Hiraṇyakaśipu attempts the life of Prahrāda

नारद उवाच

पौरोहित्याय भगवान् वृतः काव्यः किलासुरैः । शण्डामर्कौ सुतौ तस्य दैत्यराजगृहान्तिके । १ ।
तौ राज्ञा प्राप्तं बालं प्रह्लादं नयकोविदम् । पाठयामासतुः पाठ्यानन्यांश्चासुरबालकान् । २ ।
यत्तत्र गुरुणा प्रोक्तं शश्रुवेऽनु पपाठ च । न साधु मनसा मेने स्वपरासदग्रहाश्रयम् । ३ ।
एकदासुराद् पुत्रमङ्कमारोप्य पाण्डव । पप्रच्छ कथ्यतां वत्स मन्यते साधु यद्ववान् । ४ ।

Nārada began again : We are told that the glorious sage Kāvya (Śukrācārya) was chosen by the demons to (fill) the office of their priest. (Hence) his two sons, Śaṇḍa and Amarka, lived close to the palace of Hiraṇyakaśipu (the ruler of the Daityas). (1) They taught (all) subjects that were worth teaching to Prahrāda—who had been sent (to their house) by the king (Hiraṇyakaśipu) and, though (yet) a child, was skilled in reasoning—as well as to other children of the Asuras. (2) He listened to and immediately reproduced what was taught to him by his teacher there; but at heart he did not approve of it, based as it was on the false notion distinguishing a friend from a foe. (3) Placing his son (Prahrāda) on his lap, one day, Hiraṇyakaśipu (the ruler of the Asuras), O Yudhiṣṭhira (son of Pāṇḍu), addressed him :—"Tell me, my child, what you regard as good (for you)." (4)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

तत्साधु मन्येऽसुरवर्चं देहिनां सदा समुद्विग्नधियामसदग्रहात् ।
हित्वाऽऽत्मपातं गृहमन्धकूपं वनं गतो यद्धरिमाश्रयेत् । ५ ।

Prahrāda replied : For (all) embodied souls whose mind is ever disturbed with the false ideas of 'I' and 'mine', I hold this to be good, O chief of demons, that having abandoned one's home, which degrades one's soul, and is just like a well whose mouth is hidden, one should go to the woods and take refuge in Śrī Hari. (5)

नारद उवाच

श्रुत्वा पुत्रगिरो दैत्यः परपक्षसमाहिताः । जहास बुद्धिर्बालानां भिद्यते परबुद्धिभिः । ६ ।
सम्यग्विधार्यतां बालो गुरुगेहे द्विजातिभिः । विष्णुपक्षैः प्रतिच्छन्नैर्न भिद्येतास्य धीर्यथा । ७ ।

Nārada continued : On hearing the words of his son (Prahrāda), full of faith in Lord Viṣṇu (who belonged to the hostile party), the demon (Hiraṇyakaśipu) laughed and said :—"The intellect of youngsters is perverted by the machinations of others. (6) Let the child be properly guarded, so that his intellect may not be perverted by Brāhmaṇas devoted to Viṣṇu and living incognito at the preceptor's residence." (7)

गृहमानीतमाहूय प्रह्लादं दैत्ययाजकाः । प्रशस्य श्लक्ष्णया वाचा समपृच्छन्त सामभिः । ८ ।
 वत्स प्रह्लाद भद्रं ते सत्यं कथय मा मृषा । बालानति कुतस्तुभ्यमेष बुद्धिविपर्ययः । ९ ।
 बुद्धिभेदः परकृत उताहो ते स्वतोऽभवत् । भण्यतां श्रोतुकामानां गुरुणां कुलनन्दन । १० ।

Summoning Prahrāda, who had (now) been brought back (from the royal palace) to their residence, the (family) priests of the Daityas praised him (by way of encouraging him and winning his confidence) and duly questioned him in a soft language and in coaxing words (as follows):—(8) Child Prahrāda, may good betide you: speak the truth and do not tell a lie. Whence this perversion of your intellect, which is not to be found in other boys (your companions)? (9) (Please) tell (us) your teachers, anxious as we are to hear (the truth), O delight of your race, whether the aberration of your mind has been brought about by others or it has come about by itself. (10)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

स्वः परश्चेत्यसद्याहः पुंसां यन्मायया कृतः । विमोहितधियां दृष्टस्तस्मै भगवते नमः । ११ ।
 स यदानुव्रतः पुंसां पशुबुद्धिर्विभिद्यते । अन्य एष तथान्योऽहमिति भेदगतासती । १२ ।
 स एष आत्मा स्वपरेत्यबुद्धिभिर्दुरत्ययानुक्रमणो निरूप्यते ।
 मुह्यन्ति यद्वर्त्मनि वेदवादिनो ब्रह्मादयो ह्येष भिनन्ति मे मतिम् । १३ ।
 यथा भ्राम्यत्ययो ब्रह्मन् स्वयमाकर्षसन्निधौ । तथा मे भिद्यते चेतश्चक्रपाणेर्चदृच्छया । १४ ।

Prahrāda replied : Hail to that almighty Lord, by whose Māyā (delusive potency) has been brought about the false notion that he is one's own and he is another, which is observed (only) in men whose mind is deluded (by that Māyā). (11) When He is propitious, (it is then alone that) the false notion in men, embracing the distinction that "another is he and another am I", which is generally found in beasts, is dispelled. (12) That (supreme) Spirit Itself is described (by the wise) as one whose ways cannot be easily comprehended by those that are labouring under the misapprehension that "he is my own and he is another", and in whose quest even (great) exponents of the Veda such as Brahmā (the creator) get bewildered. Indeed it is He who is responsible for (changing my outlook and making it universal). (13) (Just) as iron, O holy one, moves of itself (without any ostensible cause or purpose) in the vicinity of a magnet, so is my mind unaccountably drawn towards Lord Viṣṇu (who holds the discus, Sudarśana, in one of His four hands). (14)

नारद उवाच

एतावद्ब्राह्मणायोक्त्वा विरराम महामतिः । तं निर्भर्त्याथ कुपितः स दीनो राजसेवकः । १५ ।
 आनीयतामरे वेत्रमस्माकमयशस्करः । कुलङ्गारस्य दुर्बुद्धेश्चतुर्थोऽस्योदितो दमः । १६ ।
 दैतेयचन्दनवने जातोऽयं कण्टकद्रुमः । यन्मूलोन्मूलपरशोर्विष्णोर्नालायितोऽर्भकः । १७ ।
 इति तं विविधोपायैर्भीषयस्तर्जनादिभिः । प्रह्लादं ग्राहयामास त्रिवर्गस्योपपादनम् । १८ ।
 तत एनं गुरुर्ज्ञात्वा ज्ञातज्ञेयचतुष्टयम् । दैत्येन्द्रं दर्शयामास मातृमृष्टमलङ्कृतम् । १९ ।
 पादयोः पतितं बालं प्रतिनन्द्याशिषासुरः । परिष्वज्य चिरं दोर्ध्या परमामाप निर्वृतिम् । २० ।
 आरोप्याङ्गमवघ्राय मूर्धन्यश्रुकलाम्बुभिः । आसिञ्चन् विकसद्वक्त्रमिदमाह युधिष्ठिर । २१ ।

Nārada went on : Having said this much to the Brāhmaṇa (his preceptor), Prahrāda (who was possessed of a lofty mind) stopped speaking. Reprimanding him, that poor Brāhmaṇa (who was a servant of the king) then angrily said :— (15) "O bring (me) a cane! The boy is bringing us into disrepute. The fourth expedient of punishment (alone) has been prescribed (in the Sāstras) for this silly chap, who is proving to be the (very) ruin of his race. (16) He is born a veritable thorny bush in the forest of Diti's sons, who are like so many sandal trees. (Nay,) the urchin has served as a handle to the axe, in the form of Viṣṇu, cutting at the root of that forest." (17) Thus intimidating him with threats and various other expedients, the preceptor taught Prahrāda only texts dealing with the first three objects of human pursuit (viz., earthly possessions, gratification of the senses and religious merit). (18) Thinking that the boy had mastered the four expedients worth knowing (viz., expostulation, gift, coercion and sowing seeds of dissension), the preceptor later on ushered the boy, when he had been washed and adorned by the mother, into the presence of Hiranyakaśipu (the ruler of the Daityas). (19) Greeting with benedictions the child fallen at his feet, the demon kept him folded in his arms for a long time and derived supreme gratification (thereby). (20) (Then) placing the infant on his lap and smelling its head (out of affection) and bathing it with tears (of joy), he spoke as follows to the boy, whose face was beaming (with delight), O Yudhiṣṭhira. (21)

हिरण्यकशिपुर्वाच

प्रह्लादानूच्यतां तात स्वधीतं किञ्चिदुत्तमम् । कालेनैतावताऽऽयुष्मन् यदशिक्षद् गुरोर्भवान् । २२ ।

Hiranyakaśipu said : Prahrāda dear, repeat (to me) something excellent that you have learnt from your teacher all this time, O long-lived one, and which you have fully mastered. (22)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

श्रवणं कीर्तनं विष्णोः स्मरणं पादसेवनम् । अर्चनं वन्दनं दास्यं सख्यमात्मनिवेदनम् । २३ ।

इति पुंसार्पिता विष्णौ भक्तिश्चेन्नवलक्षणा । क्रियते भगवत्यद्धा तन्मन्येऽधीतमुत्तमम् । २४ ।

निश्म्यैतत्सुतवचो हिरण्यकशिपुस्तदा । गुरुपुत्रमुवाचेदं रुषा प्रस्फुरिताधरः । २५ ।

ब्रह्मबन्धो किमेतत्ते विपक्षं श्रयतासता । असारं ग्राहितो बालो मामनादृत्य दुर्मते । २६ ।

सन्ति ह्यसाधवो लोके दुर्मैत्राश्छद्मवेषिणः । तेषामुदेत्यद्यं काले रोगः पातकिनामिव । २७ ।

Prahrāda replied : (1) To hear the names, praises and stories of Lord Viṣṇu and (2) chant them, (3) to remember Him (as well as His names and stories), (4) to wait upon Him, (5) to offer worship and (6) salutation to Him, (7) to dedicate one's actions to Him, (8) to cultivate friendship with Him and (9) to offer one's own body as well as one's dependants and belongings to Him—if Devotion marked by these nine features is practised by a man as something already offered direct to Lord Viṣṇu, I reckon that (such Devotion) to be the highest (form of) learning. (23-24) Hearing this observation of his son (Prahrāda), Hiranyakaśipu then spoke to the son of his preceptor (Śukrācārya) as follows, his lips quivering through rage:— (25) "O vile Brāhmaṇa, having espoused the enemy's cause and disregarding me what is this nonsense that the child has been taught by your wicked self, O fool ? (26) Indeed there are in this world impious souls who have assumed a deceptive garb and whose friendship is of a vicious (most unreliable) type. Like the malady* of the sinful, their mischief comes to light (only) at the proper time." (27)

गुरुपुत्र उवाच

न मत्प्रणीतं न परप्रणीतं सुतो वदत्येष तवेन्द्रशत्रो ।

नैसर्गिकीयं मतिरस्य राजन् नियच्छ मन्युं कददाः स्म मा नः । २८ ।

* We find the following Smṛti-text quoted in the commentary of Śrīdhara Swāmī :-

ब्रह्महा क्षयरोगो स्यात् सुरापः श्यावदन्तकः । स्वर्णहारी तु कुनखौ दुश्चर्मां गुरुतल्पगः ॥

"The murderer of a Brāhmaṇa suffers (in a future incarnation) from the fell disease of consumption; a (habitual) drunkard comes to have discoloured teeth; he who has (ever) stolen gold comes to have diseased nails and he who has violated the bed of his own teacher is afflicted with leprosy (after he has suffered tortures in hell and is born again as a human being)."

The preceptor's son replied : This son of yours, O enemy of Indra, is saying something which has neither been taught by me nor by anyone else. This view is natural with him, O king! (Pray,) curb your anger and do not lay the blame at our door. (28)

नारद उवाच

गुरुणैवं प्रतिप्रोक्तो भूय आहासुरः सुतम् । न चेद्गुरुमुखीयं ते कुतोऽभद्रासती मतिः । २९ ।

Nārada resumed : Thus replied to by the preceptor, the demon addressed his son (Prahṛāda) again: "If this vicious idea of your's has not been imbibed from the mouth of your preceptor, whence has it come, O inauspicious one?" (29)

प्रहाद उवाच

मतिर्न कृष्णे परतः स्वतो वा मिथोऽभिपद्येत गृहव्रतानाम् ।
अदान्तगोभिर्विशतां तमिस्त्रं पुनः पुनश्चर्वितचर्वणानाम् । ३० ।
न ते विदुः स्वार्थगतिं हि विष्णुं दुराशया ये बहिरर्थमानिनः ।
अन्धा यथार्थरूपनीयमाना वाचीशतन्त्यामुद्दामि बद्धाः । ३१ ।
नैषां मतिस्तावदुरुक्रमाङ्घ्रिं स्पृशत्यनर्थापगमो यदर्थः ।
महीयसां पादरजोऽभिषेकं निष्किञ्चनानां न वृणीत यावत् । ३२ ।

Prahṛāda submitted : The mind of those who are devoted to their home (worldly activity), (nay,) who (repeatedly) fall into the hell-like whirlpool of transmigration because of their unsubdued senses and are engaged in enjoying over and over again the pleasures they have already enjoyed (in this as well as in previous lives), does not get attached to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa either by itself or through (the exhortation of) others or (even) through mutual efforts. (30) Indeed they whose mind is impure (attached to the pleasures of sense) and who, like the blind led by another blind man, esteem (only) those regarding the external (worldly) objects as their (only) aim (in life) are unable to realize Lord Viṣṇu, the goal of those who recognize Him as the supreme object. (On the other hand,) through actions (done from interested motives) they remain bound (like so many oxen) to the rope of the Lord, in the shape of His Word (the Veda), with numerous (individual) strings in the shape of different denominations (Brāhmaṇa and so on). (31) The mind of these (people) fails to approach the feet of Lord Viṣṇu (possessed of infinite strength)—the object of approaching which is to get rid of evil (in the form of transmigration)—so long as it does not seek a bath in the dust of feet of exalted souls who claim nothing as their own. (32)

इत्युक्त्वोपरतं पुत्रं हिरण्यकशिपू रुषा । अन्धीकृतात्मा स्वोत्सङ्गान्निरस्यत महीतले । ३३ ।
आहामर्षरुषाविष्टः कषायीभूतलोचनः । वध्यतामाश्वयं वध्यो निःसारयत नैर्ऋताः । ३४ ।
अयं मे भ्रातृहा सोऽयं हित्वा स्वान् सुहृदोऽधमः । पितृव्यहन्तुर्यः पादौ विष्णोर्दासवद्वर्चति । ३५ ।
विष्णोर्वा साध्वसौ किं नु करिष्यत्यसमञ्जसः । सौहृदं दुस्त्यजं पित्रोरहाद्यः पञ्चहायनः । ३६ ।
परोऽप्यपत्यं हितकृद्यथौषधं स्वदेहजोऽप्यामयवत्सुतोऽहितः ।
छिन्द्यात्तदङ्गं यदुतात्मनोऽहितं शेषं सुखं जीवति यद्विवर्जनात् । ३७ ।
सर्वैरुपायैर्हन्तव्यः सम्भोजशयनासनैः । सुहल्लिङ्गधरः शत्रुमुनेर्दुष्टमिवेन्द्रियम् । ३८ ।

Hiranyakaśipu, whose intellect had been blinded by wrath, threw his son (Prahṛāda) from his lap to the ground as soon as the latter stopped after uttering the aforesaid words. (33) Possessed by indignation and anger, and with bloods-shot eyes he exclaimed, "Let this boy be killed at once, deserving of death as he is ! Turn him out, O Rākṣasas ! (34) (Surely) he is responsible for the death of my brother (Hiranyākṣa); (for) it is this vile fellow who, abandoning his own kith and kin, worships like a servant the feet of Viṣṇu, the slayer of his uncle. (35) Indeed, what good turn will this wicked boy do to Viṣṇu either—the boy who yet an infant of five years has spurned the love of his parents, (so) hard to renounce ? (36) Even an enemy (who is) beneficent as a medicine is a (veritable) son; while an inimical son, though begotten by one's own body, should be shunned as a disease. (Nay,) one should amputate even that limb which is injurious to one's body (as a whole) and by removing which the rest of the body may serve in good health. (37) He should (therefore) be got rid of by all (possible) means—through (poisoned) food or (by disposing of him) when he is lying asleep or sitting (unguarded). (For) like the corrupt mind of a hermit he is our enemy, though masquerading as a friend." (38)

नैर्ऋतास्ते समादिष्टा भर्त्रा वै शूलपाणयः । तिग्मदंष्ट्रकरालास्यास्ताम्रश्रुशिरोरुहाः । ३९ ।
 नदन्तो भैरवान्नादांश्छिन्धि भिन्धीति वादिनः । आसीनं चाहन् शूलैः प्रह्लादं सर्वमर्मसु । ४० ।
 परे ब्रह्मण्यनिर्देश्ये भगवत्यखिलात्मनि । युक्तात्मन्यफला आसन्नपुण्यस्येव सत्क्रियाः । ४१ ।
 प्रयासेऽपहते तस्मिन् दैत्येन्द्रः परिशङ्कितः । चकार तद्वधोपायान्निर्वन्धेन युधिष्ठिर । ४२ ।
 दिग्गजैर्दन्तशूकैश्च अभिचारावपातनैः । मायाभिः संनिरोधैश्च गरदानैरभोजनैः । ४३ ।
 हिमवाय्वग्निसलिलैः पर्वताक्रमणैरपि । न शशाक यदा हन्तुमपापमसुरः सुतम् ।
 चिन्तां दीर्घतमां प्राप्स्तत्कर्तुं नाभ्यपद्यत । ४४ ।

एष मे बह्वसाधूक्तो वधोपायाश्च निर्मिताः । तैस्तैर्द्रोहैरसद्भूमैर्मुक्तः स्वेनैव तेजसा । ४५ ।
 वर्तमानोऽविदूरे वै बालोऽप्यजडधीरयम् । न विस्मरति मेऽनार्यं शुनःशेष इव प्रभुः । ४६ ।
 अप्रेमयानुभावोऽयमकुतश्चिद्भयोऽमरः । नूनमेतद्विरोधेन मृत्युमेवं भविता न वा । ४७ ।

Actually commanded by the master (Hiraṇyakaśipu), those demons, who had sharp teeth, fearful faces and coppery beards and hair and had spikes in their hands, struck Prahrāda, who was sitting (still), with spears in all (his) vital parts, emitting hideous yells and shouting "Cut him down ! Rend him asunder !!" (39-40) Like the commendable acts of an unlucky fellow, their blows proved of no avail against Prahrāda, whose mind was en rapport with the immutable and indefinable Supreme Deity, the Soul of the universe. (41) On that effort having been foiled, Hiraṇyakaśipu (the ruler of the demons) felt greatly alarmed and resorted with pertinacity to (various) devices of despatching the boy, O Yudhiṣṭhira ! (42) When (however) the demon failed to get rid of his sinless boy by means of the elephants guarding the (four) quarters, serpents and destructive spells, by hurling him down (from great heights), employing conjuring tricks, confining him (in caves etc.) and administering poison, (nay,) by starving him, exposing him to frost, winds, fire and floods and even crushing him under rocks, and could not lay his hands on any (other) means to dispose of him, he was plunged in the deepest anxiety. (43-44) (He said to himself,) "The boy was reproached by me in a number of ways and devices were (also) employed to kill him. But (lo !) he escaped (unhurt) from all those mischiefs and destructive spells by virtue of his own glory. (45) Though standing close to me and a child yet, the fellow is really undaunted in mind and powerful (too). Like Śunaḥśepa* he will not forget my wrongs (and is sure to retaliate sooner or later). (46) Possessed of infinite glory and fearing none, he is immortal (to all appearance). My death will surely follow as a result of hostility to him. Or else it may not occur (at all). (47)

इति तं चिन्तया किञ्चिन्म्लानश्रियमधोमुखम् । शण्डामर्कावौशनसौ विविक्त इति होचतुः । ४८ ।

*Śunaḥśepa was the second son of a sage, Ajigarta by name. Having been sold by his parents in favour of the famous king Hariścandra, the boy joined his father's enemy, the celebrated Viśvāmitra, and adopted the latter's line as his parentage.

जितं त्वयैकेन जगत्त्रयं भ्रुवोर्विजृम्भणत्रस्तसमस्तधिष्यपम् ।
 न तस्य चित्त्यं तव नाथ चक्ष्महे न वै शिशूनां गुणदोषयोः पदम् । ४९ ।
 इमं तु पाशैर्वरुणस्य बद्ध्वा निधेहि भीतो न पलायते यथा ।
 बुद्धिश्च पुंसो वयसाऽऽयसेवया यावद् गुरुर्भागव आगमिष्यति । ५० ।

To him, who sat with his face downward, his splendour having been blasted to some extent by his anxious thought as aforementioned, Śaṇḍa and Amarka, the sons of the sage Uśanā (Śukrācārya, the preceptor of the demon race), as the tradition goes, spoke thus in private:—(48) "You have conquered single-handed all the three worlds, whose guardians are frightened by the (mere) play of your eyebrows. Such as you are, we see nothing for you to be anxious about, O lord ! Indeed the behaviour of children is no topic for judgment as good or bad. (49) Until, however, your preceptor (and our father), Śukrācārya (son of Bhṛgu), comes back, (please) keep the boy bound with the cords of Varuṇa (the god of water) so that he may not abscond through fear. A man's reason returns with (advanced) age as well as through the service of exalted souls." (50)

तथेति गुरुपुत्रोक्तमनुज्ञायेदमब्रवीत् । धर्मा ह्यस्योपदेष्टव्या राज्ञां ये गृहमेधिनाम् । ५१ ।
 धर्ममर्थं च कामं च नितरां चानुपूर्वशः । प्रह्लादायोचतू राजन् प्रश्रितावनताय च । ५२ ।
 यथा त्रिवर्गं गुरुभिरात्मने उपशिक्षितम् । न साधु मेने तच्छिक्षां द्वन्द्वारामोपवर्णिताम् । ५३ ।
 यदाऽऽचार्यः परावृत्तो गृहमेधीयकर्मसु । वयस्यैर्बालकैस्तत्र सोपहूतः कृतक्षणैः । ५४ ।
 अथ तान् श्लक्ष्णया वाचा प्रत्याहूय महाबुधः । उवाच विद्वांस्तन्निष्ठां कृपया प्रहसन्निव । ५५ ।
 ते तु तद्गौरवात्सर्वे त्यक्तक्रीडापरिच्छदाः । बाला न दूषितधियो द्वन्द्वारामेरितेहितैः । ५६ ।
 पर्युपासत राजेन्द्र तत्र्यस्तहृदयेक्षणाः । तानाह करुणो मैत्रो महाभागवतोऽसुरः । ५७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादानुचरिते पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Having accepted the advice of the sons of his preceptor (Śukrācārya), saying "Let it be so," Hiranyakaśipu spoke as follows : "As a matter of fact, such duties (alone) should be taught to him as are proper to kings leading the life of a householder." (51) To Prahrāda, who was not only modest but meek as well, O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), they always taught in the proper order only Dharma (the code of right conduct), Artha (the ways and means of producing and enhancing wealth), and Kāma (the correct way of enjoying the pleasures of sense). (52) Prahrāda, (however,) did not approve of the (aforesaid) three objects of human pursuit even when properly taught to him by his teachers, much less the teaching imparted by those who feasted their mind upon the objects of sense through feelings of attachment and aversion etc. (53) (One day,) when the preceptor was away (from the school) in connection with his household duties, he (Prahrāda) was called there (for play) by the boys of his own age, who had (now) found time to make merry. (54) Answering their call in sweet words, Prahrāda (who was very wise and) who was aware of their devotion (to himself), then kindly addressed them as though smiling. (55) Laying aside (their) playthings out of respect for him, however, all those boys, whose judgment had not (yet) been vitiated by the precepts and actions of those who delighted in sense-enjoyments through feelings of attachment and aversion etc., sat round him, O king of kings, with their heart and eyes fixed on him; and the Asura (Prahrāda), who was an eminent votary of the Lord and who was (most) compassionate and friendly (towards them), spoke to them (as follows). (56-57)

Thus ends the fifth discourse, forming part of the narrative of Prahārāda, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

Prahārāda's teaching to the demon boys

प्रह्लाद उवाच

कौमार आचरेत्प्राज्ञो धर्मान् भागवतानिह । दुर्लभं मानुषं जन्म तदप्यधुवमर्थदम् । १ ।
यथा हि पुरुषस्येह विष्णोः पादोपसर्पणम् । यदेष सर्वभूतानां प्रिय आत्मेश्वरः सुहृत् । २ ।
सुखमैन्द्रियकं दैत्या देहयोगेन देहिनाम् । सर्वत्र लभ्यते दैवाद्यथा दुःखमयन्नतः । ३ ।
तत्प्रयासो न कर्तव्यो यत आयुर्व्ययः परम् । न तथा विन्दते क्षेमं मुकुन्दचरणाम्बुजम् । ४ ।
ततो यतेत कुशलः क्षेमाय भयमाश्रितः । शरीरं पौरुषं यावन्न विपद्येत पुष्कलम् । ५ ।
पुंसो वर्षशतं ह्यायुस्तदर्थं चाजितात्मनः । निष्फलं यदसौ रात्र्यां शेतेऽन्धं प्रापितस्तमः । ६ ।
मुग्धस्य बाल्ये कौमारे क्रीडतो याति विंशतिः । जरया ग्रस्तदेहस्य यात्यकल्पस्य विंशतिः । ७ ।
दुरापूरेण कामेन मोहेन च बलीयसा । शेषं गृहेषु सक्तस्य प्रमत्तस्यापयाति हि । ८ ।

Prahārāda said: In this (human) life a wise man should practise virtues conducive to God-Realization in his very childhood; (for) birth as a human being alone bestows on us our desired object, (viz., lasting happiness), and (yet) such birth is obtained with (great) difficulty and is transient too. (1) The only course advisable for a man in this world is to betake himself to the feet of Lord Viṣṇu; for He is the ruler and the beloved friend, nay, the very Self of all created beings. (2) Like suffering, sensual pleasure (too), O Daityas, is obtained by embodied beings in every birth by force of destiny without any effort through (mere) connection with a body. (3) No effort for (the acquisition of) such pleasure should (therefore) be made; (for) from such effort follows mere waste of (one's) life. (Moreover,) in that way one does not attain to the lotus-feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Bestower of Liberation), the Source of supreme bliss. (4) Therefore, having fallen into (the whirlpool of) transmigration (the root of all fear), a clever man should strive for (the attainment of) blessedness while the human body is yet sound and does not perish. (5) Indeed a hundred years is reckoned to be the (full) length of a man's life. Half of it (viz., fifty years) is of no use to a man who has not been able to subdue his mind; for, consigned to blinding ignorance (in the form of sleep) he remains lying down (in idleness) during the night. (6) (Out of the remaining fifty years) twenty elapse in (the form of) infancy, when the fellow remains steeped in ignorance, and in (the form of) boyhood, when he remains absorbed in play; and (another) twenty years roll by in (utter) helplessness, when his body is in the grip of senility. (7) The rest (of his life) actually passes away in (gross) negligence, when the man remains attached to his home through desire which cannot be easily sated and through overwhelming infatuation. (8)

को गृहेषु पुमान्सक्तमात्मानमजितेन्द्रियः । स्नेहपाशैर्दृढैर्बद्धमुत्सहेत विमोचितुम् । ९ ।
को न्वर्थतृष्णां विसृजेत् प्राणेभ्योऽपि य ईप्सितः । चं क्रीणात्यसुभिः प्रेष्ठैस्तस्करः सेवको वणिक् । १० ।

कथं प्रियाया अनुकम्पितायाः सङ्गं रहस्यं रुचिरांश्च मन्त्रान् ।
 सुहृत्सु च स्नेहसितः शिशूनां कलाक्षराणामनुरक्तचित्तः । ११ ।
 पुत्रान्स्मरंस्ता दुहितृहृदय्या भ्रातृन् स्वसृवा पितरौ च दीनौ ।
 गृहान् मनोज्ञोरुपरिच्छदांश्च वृत्तींश्च कुल्याः पशुभृत्यवर्गान् । १२ ।
 त्यजेत कोशस्कृदिवेहमानः कर्माणि लोभादवितृप्तकामः ।
 औपस्थजैर्हृद्यं बहु मन्यमानः कथं विरज्येत दुरन्तमोहः । १३ ।
 कुटुम्बपोषाय वियन् निजायुर्न बुध्यतेऽर्थं विहतं प्रमत्तः ।
 सर्वत्र तापत्रयदुःखितात्मा निर्विद्यते न स्वकुटुम्बरामः । १४ ।
 वित्तेषु नित्याभिनिविष्टचेता विद्वांश्च दोषं परवित्तहर्तुः ।
 प्रेत्येह चाथाप्यजितेन्द्रियस्तदशान्तकामो हरते कुटुम्बी । १५ ।
 विद्वानपीत्यं दनुजाः कुटुम्बं पुष्पान्स्वलोकाय न कल्पते वै ।
 यः स्वीयपारव्यविभिन्नभावस्तमः प्रपद्येत यथा विमूढः । १६ ।
 यतो न कश्चित् क्व च कुत्रचिद् वा दीनः स्वमात्मानमलं समर्थः ।
 विमोचितुं कामदृशां विहारक्रीडामृगो यन्निगडो विसर्गः । १७ ।
 ततो विदूरात् परिहृत्य दैत्या दैत्येषु सङ्गं विषयात्मकेषु ।
 उपेत नारायणमादिदेवं स मुक्तसङ्गैरिषितोऽपवर्गः । १८ ।

What man whose senses have not (yet) been conquered can hope to liberate his own self, attached to his home and bound with the powerful cords of affection ? (9) Who indeed can give up the thirst for wealth, which is coveted more than life itself and which a thief as well as a servant and a merchant purchases even in exchange for his most beloved life ? (10) With his mind attached to his relatives and bound by the affection of lisping children, how can a man forgo the private company and sweet friendly counsel of his sympathetic wife ? (11) Remembering his sons and those beloved daughters (living at their father-in-law's place), brothers and sisters as well as his helpless (decrepit) parents, and dwellings provided with abundant articles of attractive furniture, hereditary vocations, animals and servants, how can he renounce them ? (Nay,) pursuing actions (of different categories) out of greed (for rewards of various kinds) like a silk-worm (which builds a nest in which it gets imprisoned due to its leaving no outlet from it) and thinking highly of the pleasures relating to sex and the palate, how can he feel disgusted with them, his desires remaining (still) unsated and his infatuation knowing no bounds ? (12-13) Fond of his family, the careless fellow does not perceive his life wearing away in the endeavour to maintain his family nor his (real) purpose (in the shape of God-Realization) frustrated; and even though his mind remains afflicted by the three kinds of agony everywhere, he never gets sick of them. (14) Though knowing the sin attaching here as well as hereafter to the man misappropriating others' wealth, the householder whose mind is ever intent on (accumulating) riches nevertheless takes away others' wealth, his senses being uncontrolled and his desires unsatisfied. (15) Indeed he who has a differential outlook, regarding this as his own and that as belonging to another, is not able to realize the Self while maintaining his family in the aforesaid manner, Oscions of Danu, even though he may be learned (in the scriptures). (On the other hand,) he is likely to enter the dark region (of hell) even like a deluded person. (16) Since none who is extremely passionate and a (veritable) toydeer for the diversion of lustful women, in whom are forged fetters in the form of offspring, is ever and anywhere capable of liberating his soul, therefore, avoiding from a respectable distance, O Daityas, the company of the Daityas, who have set their mind on the objects of senses, take refuge in Lord Nārāyaṇa, the most ancient Deity; (for) He (alone) is the final beatitude sought for (even) by those who have given up attachment (for everything). (17-18)

न हाच्युतं प्रीणयतो ब्रह्मायासोऽसुरात्मजाः । आत्मत्वात् सर्वभूतानां सिद्धत्वादिह सर्वतः । १९ ।
 परावरेषु भूतेषु ब्रह्मान्तस्थावरादिषु । भौतिकेषु विकारेषु भूतेष्वथ महत्सु च । २० ।
 गुणेषु गुणसाध्ये च गुणव्यतिकरे तथा । एक एव परो ह्यात्मा भगवानीश्वरोऽव्ययः । २१ ।
 प्रत्यगात्मस्वरूपेण दृश्यरूपेण च स्वयम् । व्याप्यव्यापकनिर्देश्यो ह्यनिर्देश्योऽविकल्पितः । २२ ।
 केवलानुभवानन्दस्वरूपः परमेश्वरः । माययान्तर्हितैश्वर्य ईयते गुणसर्गया । २३ ।
 तस्मात् सर्वेषु भूतेषु दयां कुरुत सौहृदम् । आसुरं भावमुन्मुच्य यया तुष्यत्यधोक्षजः । २४ ।

तुष्टे च तत्र किमलभ्यमनन्त आद्ये किं तैर्गुणव्यतिकरादिह ये स्वसिद्धाः ।

धर्मादयः किमगुणेन च काङ्क्षितेन सारंजुषां चरणयोरुपगायतां नः । २५ ।

धर्मार्थकाम इति योऽभिहितस्त्रिवर्ग ईक्षा त्रयी नयदमौ विविधा च वार्ता ।

मन्ये तदेतदखिलं निगमस्य सत्यं स्वात्मारपणं स्वसुहृदः परमस्य पुंसः । २६ ।

ज्ञानं तदेतदमलं दुरवापमाह नारायणो नरसखः किल नारदाय ।

एकान्तिनां भगवत्स्तदकिञ्चनानां पादारविन्दरजसाऽऽप्नुतदेहिनां स्यात् । २७ ।

श्रुतमेतन्मया पूर्वं ज्ञानं विज्ञानसंयुतम् । धर्मं भागवतं शुद्धं नारदाद् देवदर्शनात् । २८ ।

Indeed there is not much exertion to him who is engaged in propitiating the immortal Lord, O children of the Asuras, He being the very Self of all created beings and present everywhere in this world. (19) In (all) created beings, high and low, commencing from the immobile creation (the vegetable kingdom) and culminating in Brahmā (the creator), nay, in (all) material products as well as in the (five) gross elements, in the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), in Prakṛti (Primordial Matter, which is nothing but a state of equilibrium of the three Guṇas) as well as in the Mahat-tattva etc., (which constitute a mixture of the three Guṇas in uneven proportions) exists the one and only one transcendent Spirit, the almighty and imperishable God. (20-21) Though really indescribable and undifferentiated Himself, He can be hinted at as all-pervading in the form of the subject and as pervaded in the form of the objective universe. (22) The supreme Lord consisting of absolute consciousness and bliss, He is realized as having His divinity concealed by Māyā (His deluding potency), which gives rise to the material creation. (23) Therefore, giving up the demoniac disposition, show compassion and friendliness to all created beings, whereby is pleased Lord Viṣṇu (who is beyond sense-perception). (24) When that infinite Being, the Cause of all, is pleased, what is there that cannot be attained? And what is the use of our worrying over religious merit etc., which are attained in this world of their own accord (without any effort) through modification of the three Guṇas (in the form of destiny moulded by one's past actions); and what is the use of hankering after final beatitude (which lies beyond the three Guṇas) to us who enjoy the nectar of His (lotus) feet and are (ever) singing His praises? (25) The triad which has been spoken of (in the Vedas) as the three objects of human pursuit—viz., religious merit, worldly riches and sensuous enjoyment—as well as the science of Self-Realization, the science of rituals, logic and political science and the diverse means of earning one's livelihood—all this subject-matter of the Veda I regard as true, (only) if it enables one to offer one's self to the supreme Person, one's Inner Controller. (26) (The divine sage) Nārāyaṇa, the (eternal) Companion (and Brother) of (the sage) Nara (His divine Counterpart), it is said, taught this well-known and pure wisdom—which cannot be easily attained—to (the sage) Nārada. It can (however) be (easily) attained by (all) embodied beings who have bathed themselves in the dust of the lotus-feet of those exclusively devoted to the Lord, and claiming nothing as their own. (27) This knowledge with the immediate apprehension of truth as well as the pure (innocent) cult of Devotion to the Lord was received by me in the past through hearing from the mouth of the sage Nārada, who has seen the Lord (with his own eyes). (28)

दैत्यपुत्रा ऊचुः

प्रह्लाद त्वं वयं चापि नर्तेऽन्यं विद्यहे गुरुम् । एताभ्यां गुरुपुत्राभ्यां बालानामपि हीश्वरौ । २९ ।
बालस्यान्तःपुरस्थस्य महत्सङ्गो दुरन्वयः । छिन्धि नः संशयं सौम्य स्याद्येद्विश्रम्भकारणम् । ३० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादानुचरिते षष्ठोऽध्यायः । ६ ।

The sons of the Daityas said : Prahrāda, you as well as we know no other teacher except these two sons of Śukra (the preceptor of the Daityas) and indeed these two have been our masters ever since we were mere infants. (29) (And) association with an exalted soul (like Nārada) was (most) difficult when you were an infant (shut up) within (the four walls of) the gynaeceum. Resolve our doubt, O gentle one, if there is any (valid) ground for giving credence to your words. (30)

Thus ends the sixth discourse, forming part of the Narrative of Prahrāda in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VII

(Prahrāda's) teaching to the Daityas' sons

नारद उवाच

एवं दैत्यसुतैः पृष्ठो महाभागवतोऽसुरः । उवाच स्मयमानस्तान्स्मरन् मदनुभाषितम् । १ ।

Nārada resumed : Questioned thus by the Daityas' sons, the Asura (Prahrāda), that great devotee of the Lord, smilingly addressed them (as follows), calling to mind my teaching (to him). (1)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

पितरि प्रस्थितेऽस्माकं तपसे मन्दराचलम् । युद्धोद्यमं परं चक्रुर्विबुधा दानवान्प्रति । २ ।
पिपीलिकैरहिरिव दिष्ट्या लोकोपतापनः । पापेन पापोऽभक्षीति वादिनो वासवादयः । ३ ।
तेषामतिबलोद्योगं निशम्यासुरयूथपाः । वध्यमानाः सुरैर्भीता दुर्दुः सर्वतोदिशम् । ४ ।
कलत्रपुत्रमित्राप्तान्गृहान्यशुपरिच्छदान् । नावेक्षमाणास्त्वरिताः सर्वे प्राणपरीप्सवः । ५ ।
व्यलुम्पन् राजशिविरममरा जयकाङ्क्षिणः । इन्द्रस्तु राजमहिषीं मातरं मम चाग्रहीत् । ६ ।
नीयमानां भयोद्विष्टां रुदतीं कुररीमिव । यदृच्छयाऽऽगतस्तत्र देवर्षिर्ददृशे पथि । ७ ।
प्राह मैनां सुरपते नेतुमर्हस्यनागसम् । मुञ्च मुञ्च महाभाग सतीं परपरिग्रहम् । ८ ।

Prahrāda began : Our father (Hiranyakaśipu) having left for Mount Mandara to practise austerities (and having been eaten away by white ants), Indra and the other gods launched a great military campaign against the Dānavas, saying: "Fortunately (for us) the evil one (Hiranyakaśipu), the scourge of the world, has been eaten away by his own sin as a serpent by ants." (2-3) Perceiving their mighty undertaking and being struck by the gods, the terror-stricken Asura generals, who were all anxious to save their life, hastily fled in every direction, paying no heed to their wife and children, friends and relations, houses, animals and other household goods. (4-5) Desirous of victory, the gods looted the king's residence; while Indra (the ruler of the gods) even seized the queen, my mother. (6) Nārada (the celestial sage), who came there by chance, saw her being taken on the road, trembling with fear and crying like a female osprey. (7) He peremptorily said, "You should not take this innocent lady, O lord of divinities ! Leave, leave, O blessed one, the good woman, who is another's wedded wife." (8)

इन्द्र उवाच

आस्तेऽस्या जठरे वीर्यमविषह्यं सुरद्विषः । आस्यतां यावत्प्रसवं मोक्ष्येऽर्थपदवीं गतः । ९ ।

Indra replied : There is in her womb (in the form of an embryo) the formidable seed of Hiranyakaśipu (the enemy of the gods). Let her (therefore) stay (in my captivity) till (the time of) delivery. I shall let her go when I have achieved my object (by killing the new-born babe). (9)

नारद उवाच

अयं निष्किल्बिषः साक्षाऽन्महाभागवतो महान् । त्वया न प्राप्स्यते संस्थामनन्तानुचरो बली । १० ।
इत्युक्तस्तां विहायेन्द्रो देवर्षेर्मानयन्वचः । अनन्तप्रियभक्त्यैनां परिक्रम्य दिवं ययौ । ११ ।

Nārada said : He (the child in her womb) is not only (absolutely) sinless but a great devotee of the Lord and eminent by his own qualities. This mighty servant of Lord Viṣṇu will not meet his death at your hands. (10) Thus addressed (by Nārada) and accepting the advice of the celestial sage, Indra left her (my mother) and going round her (as a mark of respect) out of devotion to me (the beloved of the eternal Lord), returned to heaven. (11)

ततो नो मातरमृषिः समानीय निजाश्रमम् । आश्रास्येहोष्यतां वत्से यावत् ते भर्तुरागमः । १२ ।
तथेत्यवात्सीद् देवर्षेरन्ति साप्यकुतोभया । यावद् दैत्यपतिर्घोरात् तपसो न न्यवर्तत । १३ ।
ऋषिं पर्यचरत् तत्र भक्त्या परमया सती । अन्तर्वत्नी स्वगर्भस्य क्षेमायेच्छाप्रसूतये । १४ ।

Then the sage took our mother with due honour to his own hermitage and, comforting her, said, "Stay here, my daughter, till the return of your husband." (12) She too signified her assent in the words "So be it !" and lived near the celestial sage, free from all fear, so long as my father (the ruler of the Daityas) did not cease from his terrible austerities. (13) For the well-being of her embryo (myself) and in order to deliver it at the desired moment (after the return of her husband) the virtuous and pregnant lady waited upon the sage in that hermitage with supreme devotion. (14)

ऋषिः कारुणिकस्तस्याः प्रादादुभयमीश्वरः । धर्मस्य तत्त्वं ज्ञानं च मामप्युद्दिश्य निर्मलम् । १५ ।
तत्तु कालस्य दीर्घत्वात् स्त्रीत्वान्मातृस्तिरोदधे । ऋषिणानुगृहीतं मां नाधुनाप्यजहात् स्मृतिः । १६ ।
भवतामपि भूयान्मे यदि श्रद्धधते वचः । वैशारदी धीः श्रद्धातः स्त्रीबालानां च मे यथा । १७ ।
जन्माद्याः षडिमे भावा दृष्टा देहस्य नात्मनः । फलानामिव वृक्षस्य कालेनेश्वरमूर्तिना । १८ ।
आत्मा नित्योऽव्ययः शुद्ध एकः क्षेत्रज्ञ आश्रयः । अविक्रियः स्वदृग् हेतुर्व्यापकोऽसङ्ग्यनावृतः । १९ ।
एतैर्द्वादशभिर्विद्वानात्मनो लक्षणैः परैः । अहं ममेत्यसद्भावं देहादौ मोहजं त्यजेत् । २० ।

स्वर्णं यथा ग्रावसु हेमकारः क्षेत्रेषु योगैस्तदभिज्ञ आप्नुयात् ।

क्षेत्रेषु देहेषु तथाऽऽत्मयोगैरध्यात्मविद् ब्रह्मगतिं लभेत । २१ ।

In order to assuage her grief and for my sake too the compassionate and powerful sage imparted (to her instruction in) both the essence of religion (in the shape of Devotion to the Lord) and pure wisdom (discrimination between the Self and non-Self). (15) That teaching, however, disappeared from the mind of my mother due to (the inordinate) length of time (that has since elapsed) and because of her womanly nature. Its memory has not (however) left me, the favoured of the sage, even to this moment. (16) That devotion and wisdom can take root in you too if you give credence to my words. Through faith such sense as is proficient in uprooting the feeling of identification with the body etc. can appear even in women and children as it has dawned on me. (17) Through the agency of Time, which is by its very nature capable of bringing about transformation, the six well-known states of being commencing with birth (viz., birth, existence, growth, ripeness, decay and destruction) are seen in relation to the body (so long as it is connected with a soul) and not in relation to the soul, just as they are observed in the fruits of a tree (so long as they exist on the tree, and not in the tree itself, which stands comparatively longer). (18) The Spirit is eternal, free from decay, taintless, one (without a second), the knowing subject, the ground (of everything), changeless, self-seeing (self-effulgent), the cause (of the universe), all-pervading, unattached and having no sheath (of Mâyā). (19) With the help of these twelve transcendent characteristics of the Self a wise man should give up the false notion of 'I' and 'mine'—sprung from ignorance—with reference to the body and persons and things connected with the body. (20) Just as a goldsmith acquainted with the process (smelting etc.), of extracting gold from its ore is able through those processes to find gold in the ore existing in gold mines, so is a man well-versed in the science of the Spirit able to discover the (true) nature of Brahma in the bodies (of the various Jivas)—which are so many fields (as it were)—through the (diverse) processes of ascertaining the true nature of the Self. (21)

अष्टौ प्रकृतयः प्रोक्तास्त्रय एव हि तद्गुणाः । विकाराः षोडशाचार्यैः पुमानेकः समन्वयात् । २२ ।

देहस्तु सर्वसंघातो जगत् तस्थुरिति द्विधा । अत्रैव मृग्यः पुरुषो नेति नेतीत्यतत् त्यजन् । २३ ।

अन्वयव्यतिरेकेण विवेकेनोशताऽऽत्मना । सर्गस्थानसमाम्नायैर्विमृशद्भिरसत्वरैः । २४ ।

बुद्धेर्जागरणं स्वप्नः सुषुप्तिरिति वृत्तयः । ता येनैवानुभूयन्ते सोऽध्यक्षः पुरुषः परः । २५ ।

एभिस्त्रिवर्णैः पर्यस्तैर्बुद्धिभेदैः क्रियोद्भवैः । स्वरूपमात्मनो बुध्येद् गन्धैर्वायुमिवान्वयात् । २६ ।

एतद्द्वारो हि संसारो गुणकर्मनिबन्धनः । अज्ञानमूलोऽप्यार्थोऽपि पुंसः स्वप्न इवेष्यते । २७ ।

(Out of the total number of categories into which the entire creation has been ultimately resolved) by teachers (of the science of the Spirit, the sage Kapila and others) eight (viz., Prakṛti or primordial Matter, the Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, the ego and the five subtle elements) have been declared to be the causes; three (viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) are as a matter of fact only modes of Prakṛti (and therefore not distinct from it); sixteen (viz., the five senses of perception, the five organs of action, the mind and the five gross elements) are modifications and the Spirit is spoken of as one because of its connection with all (as their witness). (22) Of course, the body, (which is) a concatenation of all (these), is of two kinds—mobile (animate) and immobile (inanimate). It is here (in the body) that discarding everything else as 'not this', the Spirit, should be sought for by men coolly reflecting on the creation, continued existence and dissolution of the universe with a mind purified (rendered acute) through reasoning (both) on the lines of Anvaya (the all-pervasiveness of the Spirit) and Vyatireka (the distinctness of the Spirit from everything else). (23-24) Wakefulness, dream and deep sleep—these are the (three) functions of the intellect. (And) he alone by whom they are (directly) cognized is the transcendent Spirit, the witness (of all material phenomena). (25) By means of these modifications of the intellect,

(which are) products of the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas respectively) and the result of actions, and which are rejected (as attributes of Matter) one should ascertain the essential character of the Spirit (which is connected with these states) through its association with the intellect (as the very ground of the latter), even as one comes to know (the presence of) the air through the (different) odours (that are borne through it). (26) In fact, metempsychosis, which is perpetuated by the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and actions prompted by them, is brought about through the intellect. Though rooted in ignorance and (therefore) unreal, it is postulated as a dream. (27)

तस्माद्भवद्भिः कर्तव्यं कर्मणां त्रिगुणात्मनाम् । बीजनिर्हरणं योगः प्रवाहोपरमो धियः । २८ ।
 तत्रोपायसहस्राणामयं भगवतोदितः । यदीश्वरे भगवति यथा यैरञ्जसा रतिः । २९ ।
 गुरुशुश्रूषया भक्त्या सर्वलब्धार्पणेन च । सङ्गेन साधुभक्तानामीश्वराराधनेन च । ३० ।
 श्रद्धया तत्कथायां च कीर्तनैर्गुणकर्मणाम् । तत्पादाम्बुरुहध्यानात् तल्लिङ्गैर्क्षार्हणादिभिः । ३१ ।
 हरिः सर्वेषु भूतेषु भगवानास्त ईश्वरः । इति भूतानि मनसा कामैस्तैः साधु मानयेत् । ३२ ।
 एवं निर्जितषड्वर्गैः क्रियते भक्तिरीश्वरे । वासुदेवे भगवति यया संलभते रतिम् । ३३ ।

Therefore, the (very) seed (in the form of nescience) of actions prompted by the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) ought to be burnt by you. This is (what they call) Yoga (the highest achievement), which stops the functioning of the intellect. (28) Of the thousands of devices helpful to it, this alone has been recommended by the Lord, viz., the practice of virtues through which love may be duly and easily developed for the almighty Lord. (29) This can be accomplished by serving one's preceptor and by offering (to him) with devotion all that is got by one, nay, through the fellowship of pious devotees and worship of God, through reverence for stories of the Lord; by celebrating His virtues and exploits, through contemplation on His lotus-feet and through the sight and worship of His images and so on. (30-31) (Nay,) one should (as far as possible) duly gratify (the various) living beings with their objects of desire under the belief that the almighty Lord Śrī Hari is present in all created beings. (32) In this way devotion to the all-powerful Lord Vāsudeva is practised by those who have subdued the six senses (including the mind, the internal sense)—devotion through which one fully develops love (for Him). (33)

निशम्य कर्माणि गुणानतुल्यान् वीर्याणि लीलातनुभिः कृतानि ।
 यदातिहर्षोत्पुलकाश्रुगद्गदं प्रोत्कण्ठ उद्गायति रौति नृत्यति । ३४ ।
 यदा ग्रहग्रस्त इव क्वचिद्धसत्याक्रन्दते ध्यायति वन्दते जनम् ।
 मुहुः श्वसन्वक्ति हरे जगत्पते नारायणेत्यात्ममतिर्गतत्रपः । ३५ ।
 तदा पुमान्मुक्तसमस्तबन्धनस्तद्भावभावानुकृताशयाकृतिः ।
 निर्दग्धबीजानुशयो महीयसा भक्तिप्रयोगेण समेत्यधोक्षजम् । ३६ ।
 अधोक्षजालम्बमिहाशुभात्मनः शरीरिणः संसृतिचक्रशातनम् ।
 तद् ब्रह्म निर्वाणसुखं विदुर्बुधास्ततो भजध्वं हृदये हृदीश्वरम् । ३७ ।
 कोऽतिप्रयासोऽसुरबालका हरेरुपासने स्वे हृदि छिद्रवत् सतः ।
 स्वस्यात्मनः सख्युरशेषदेहिनां सामान्यतः किं विषयोपपादनैः । ३८ ।
 रायः कलत्रं पशवः सुतादयो गृहा मही कुञ्जरकोशभूतयः ।
 सर्वैरर्थकामाः क्षणभङ्गुरायुषः कुर्वन्ति मर्त्यस्य कियत् प्रियं चलाः । ३९ ।

एवं हि लोकाः क्रतुभिः कृता अमी क्षयिष्णवः सातिशया न निर्मलाः ।

तस्माददृष्टश्रुतदूषणं परं भक्त्यैक्येशं भजतात्मलब्धये ।४०।

When, on hearing (accounts) of His (brilliant) achievements, incomparable virtues and heroic deeds wrought through His (various) forms assumed for sport, the devotee sings loudly with an open throat and in a voice choked with tears, shouts and dances, his hair standing on end due to excessive delight, nay, when he, like one possessed by an evil spirit, now laughs, now weeps, now sits in meditation, now greets the people and now, devoid of shame, exclaims: "O Hari ! O Lord of the universe !! O Nārāyaṇa !!!" with his mind fixed on the Lord (his very Self) and heaving a sigh every now and then, all his bonds get loosened at that time and his ignorance and latent desires are burnt; and his mind and body being attuned to Him through contemplation on His pastimes, the man attains to Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception) by recourse to the highest device of Devotion. (34—36) The wise recognize (mental) communion with Lord Viṣṇu as a (sure) means in this world of putting a stop to the cycle of birth and death in the case of an embodied soul of impure mind and they (further) recognize it as identical with the bliss of absorption into Brahma. Therefore, worship that Ruler of your heart in (the very lotus of) your heart. (37) What extraordinary exertion, O demon boys, is involved in the worship of Śrī Hari, one's own Self and friend, (nay) present in one's own heart like the space there? What is to be gained through efforts for the acquisition of objects of senses, such efforts being common to all embodied creatures ? (38) Riches, wife, animals, sons and other relations, houses, land, elephants, treasury and luxuries (of various kinds)—(nay,) all kinds of wealth and enjoyments are momentary and fleeting. What delight can they afford to a mortal? (39) Similarly the well-known (ethereal) worlds earned by means of sacrifices are (also) perishable and excelled by other (higher) worlds and are not free from impurities either (because exciting envy in the minds of others). Therefore, with a view to Self-Realization, worship, with absolute devotion, the supreme Lord, in whom no fault is seen or (even) heard of. (40)

यदध्यर्थेह कर्माणि विद्वन्मान्यसकृन्नरः । करोत्यतो विपर्यासममोघं विन्दते फलम् ।४१।

सुखाय दुःखमोक्षाय सङ्कल्प इह कर्मिणः । सदाऽऽप्नोतीहया दुःखमनीहायाः सुखावृतः ।४२।

कामान्कामयते काम्यैर्यदर्थमिह पूरुषः । स वै देहस्तु पारक्यो भङ्गुरो यात्युपैति च ।४३।

किमु व्यवहितापत्यदारागारधनादयः । राज्यं कोशगजामात्यभृत्याप्ता ममतास्पदाः ।४४।

किमेतैरात्मनस्तुच्छैः सह देहेन नश्वरैः । अनर्थैरर्थसंकाशैर्नित्यानन्दमहोदधेः ।४५।

निरूप्यतामिह स्वार्थः कियान्देहभृतोऽसुराः । निषेकादिष्ववस्थासु क्लिश्यमानस्य कर्मभिः ।४६।

कर्माण्यारभते देही देहेनात्मानुवर्तिना । कर्मभिस्तनुते देहमुभयं त्वविवेकतः ।४७।

तस्मादर्थश्च कामाश्च धर्माश्च यदपाश्रयाः । भजतानीहयाऽऽत्मानमनीहं हरिमीश्वरम् ।४८।

सर्वेषामपि भूतानां हरिरात्मेश्वरः प्रियः । भूतैर्महद्भिः स्वकृतैः कृतानां जीवसंज्ञितः ।४९।

देवोऽसुरो मनुष्यो वा यक्षो गन्धर्व एव च । भजन् मुकुन्दचरणं स्वस्तिमान् स्यादयथा वयम् ।५०।

(Besides) a man accounting himself wise (also) invariably obtains results which are quite the opposite of the object aiming at which he performs actions in this world time and again. (41) The aim of a man given to action here is to secure happiness and freedom from misery. But he who was (formerly) filled with joy due to desirelessness ever reaps misery through desire (afterwards). (42) The very body for which the Jīva (an embodied soul) hankers after enjoyments through actions performed from interested motives actually belongs to others (in that it is sure to be devoured by dogs and jackals, crows and vultures, left uncared for after death) and (is something that) hugs the soul and (having served it for a fixed time) departs (leaves it). (43) How much more so are one's progeny, wife, house, wealth and so on or (in the case of a sovereign) one's kingdom, treasury, elephants, ministers, servants and friends, that are connected with the Jīva only indirectly (through the body) and are treated as one's own (and not the very self) ! (44) Of what avail can these trifling things—which are sure to disappear with the body and are (veritable) evils, though appearing as something worth seeking—be to the soul, the very ocean of eternal bliss ? (45) (Just) consider what interest (enjoyment) can there be in this world, O demon boys, to the embodied soul, suffering through its (past) actions in all the stages commencing from conception (till death)? (46) With the body as its (obedient) servant the embodied soul undertakes actions (of various kinds, both good and evil) and with (the aforesaid) actions moulds a (future) body (and the circle goes on from birth to birth) inasmuch as both (actions as well as the body) proceed from ignorance. (47) Therefore, worship through desirelessness the desireless and almighty Śrī Hari, your very Self, on whom (our) riches, enjoyments and pious acts depend. (48) Lord Śrī Hari is the (very) Self, Ruler, beloved friend and Inner Controller of all living beings (whose bodies have been) fashioned by gross elements evolved (in their turn) by Himself. (49) Taking shelter under the feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Bestower of Liberation), a god, demon, human being or Yakṣa and even a Gandharva (a celestial musician) bids fair to become blessed as I. (50)

नालं द्विजत्वं देवत्वमृषित्वं वासुरात्मजाः । प्रीणनाय मुकुन्दस्य न वृत्तं न बहुज्जता । ५१ ।
 न दानं न तपो नेज्या न शौचं न व्रतानि च । प्रीयतेऽमलया भक्त्या हरिरन्यद् विडम्बनम् । ५२ ।
 ततो हरौ भगवति भक्तिं कुरुत दानवाः । आत्मौपम्येन सर्वत्र सर्वभूतात्मनीश्वरे । ५३ ।
 दैतेया यक्षरक्षांसि स्त्रियः शूद्रा ब्रजौकसः । खगा मृगाः पापजीवाः सन्ति ह्यच्युततां गताः । ५४ ।
 एतावानेव लोकेऽस्मिन् पुंसः स्वार्थः परः स्मृतः । एकान्तभक्तिर्गोविन्दे यत् सर्वत्र तदीक्षणम् । ५५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादानुचरिते दैत्यपुत्रानुशासनं नाम सप्तमोऽध्यायः । ७ ।

Neither birth as a member of the twice-born classes, god or Ṛṣi nor character nor versatility nor charity nor austerity nor the performance of sacrifices nor purity (of mind and body) nor sacred vows are conducive to the pleasure of Lord Mukunda, O Asura boys ! Śrī Hari is propitiated through unalloyed Devotion (alone). All else is empty show. (51-52) Therefore, practise devotion, O Dānavas, to the almighty Lord Śrī Hari, the Soul of all created beings, by treating every creature as though it were your very self. (53) For there are (many) Daityas, Yakṣas and ogres, womenfolk, Śūdras (members of the labouring and artisan classes), cowherds, birds, beasts and those living by sin that have attained immortality (through Devotion). (54) Exclusive devotion to Lord Govinda (the Protector of cows)—which is the same as beholding Him in every creature—this alone has been declared to be the highest interest (goal) of man in this world. (55)

Thus ends the seventh discourse, entitled " (Prahrāda's) Teaching to the Daityas' sons", forming part of the Narrative of Prahrāda, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Sāṃhitā.

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

Lord Nṛsiṃha extolled on the death of the demon king

(at His hands)

नारद उवाच

अथ दैत्यसुताः सर्वे श्रुत्वा तदनुवर्णितम् । जगृहुर्निरवद्यत्वात्रैव गुर्वनुशिक्षितम् । १ ।

अथाचार्यसुतस्तेषां बुद्धिमेकान्तसंस्थिताम् । आलक्ष्य भीतस्त्वरितो राज्ञ आवेदयद् यथा । २ ।

श्रुत्वा तदप्रियं दैत्यो दुःसहं तनयानयम् । कोपावेशचलद्गात्रः पुत्रं हन्तुं मनो दधे । ३ ।

Nārada resumed : On hearing his (Prahārā's) exhortation all the Daityas' sons forthwith accepted it because of its faultlessness, but not the teaching of their preceptor. (1) Alarmed to perceive their mind intent on (the realization of) a single purpose (viz., devotion to the Lord), the preceptor's son thereupon quickly and correctly reported the matter to the king. (2) Hearing of that unwelcome misdemeanour on the part of his son (Prahārā), which was hard to bear, Hiranyakaśipu made up his mind to dispose of his son, his limbs shaking under the impulse of anger. (3)

क्षिप्त्वा परुषया वाचा प्रह्लादमतदर्हणम् । आहेक्षमाणः पापेन तिरश्चीनेन चक्षुषा । ४ ।

प्रश्रयावनतं दान्तं बद्धाञ्जलिमवस्थितम् । सर्पः पदाहत इव श्वसन्नकृतिदारुणः । ५ ।

हे दुर्विनीत मन्दात्मन्कुलभेदकराधम । स्तब्धं मच्छासनोद्धूतं नेष्ये त्वाद्य यमक्षयम् । ६ ।

क्रुद्धस्य यस्य कम्पन्ते त्रयो लोकाः सहेश्वराः । तस्य मेऽभीतवन्मूढ शासनं किम्बलोऽत्यगाः । ७ ।

Reproaching in a harsh language Prahārā—who was not only (thoroughly) disciplined but was bent low with modesty and standing with joined palms and (as such) was (altogether) undeserving of such treatment—and regarding him with a wicked and crooked eye, the demon, who was cruel by nature, spoke (as follows), hissing (all the time) like a serpent struck with the foot:—(4-5) "O unruly, stupid wretch, causing discord in our family, I shall despatch you this (very) day to the abode of Yama (the god of death)—you, who have grown (so) obstinate and have slipped away from my authority ! (6) By whose might, O fool, have you violated, like an undaunted person, the authority of one, viz., myself, before whom, when angry, (all) the three worlds, including their guardians, shake (with fear)?" (7)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

न केवलं मे भवतश्च राजन् स वै बलं बलिनां चापरेषाम् ।

परेऽवरेऽमी स्थिरजङ्गमा ये ब्रह्मादयो येन वशं प्रणीताः । ८ ।

स ईश्वरः काल उरुक्रमोऽसावोजःसहःसत्त्वबलेन्द्रियात्मा ।

स एव विश्वं परमः स्वशक्तिभिः सृजत्यवत्यन्ति गुणत्रयेणः । ९ ।

जह्मासुरं भावमिमं त्वमात्मनः समं मनो धत्स्व न सन्ति विद्विषः ।

ऋतेऽजितादात्मन उत्पथस्थितात् तद्धि ह्यनन्तस्य महत् समर्हणम् । १० ।

दस्यूनपुरा षण्ण विजित्य लुम्पतो मन्यन्त एके स्वजिता दिशो दश ।

जितात्मनो ज्ञस्य समस्य देहिनां साधोः स्वमोहप्रभवाः कुतः परे । ११ ।

Prahārā replied : He is unquestionably the strength not only of mine but yours as well,

O king, nay, of other powerful beings (too). It is He by whom (all) these (creatures), (both) high and low, animate and inanimate, commencing from Brahmā (the creator), have been held under sway. (8) He is the (supreme) Ruler; He, the mighty Kāla (Time-Spirit) and the (very) embodiment of organic and mental powers, physical strength and fortitude. The supreme Controller of the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), it is He alone who creates, protects and devours (dissolves) the universe by means of His potencies (in the form of Rajas, Sattva and Tamas). (9) Abandon you this demoniac disposition of yours and keep your mind equipoised. There are no enemies other than an unsubdued and errant mind. For that (viz., maintaining the poise of the mind) constitutes the eminent and correct procedure of worshipping the Infinite. (10) Some regard the four quarters, the four intermediate points, the sky overhead and the subterranean regions below as conquered by themselves, without first having curbed the six marauding thieves (in the shape of the five senses of perception and the mind). (Indeed) whence can there be enemies, born of one's own ignorance, in the eye of the knowing and pious soul who has conquered his mind and is (thus) alike to all embodied beings ? (11)

हिरण्यकशिपुर्वाच

व्यक्तं त्वं मर्तुकामोऽसि योऽतिमात्रं विकल्थसे । मुमूर्षूणां हि मन्दात्मन् ननु स्युर्विप्लवा गिरः । १२ ।
यस्त्वया मन्दभाग्योक्तो मदन्यो जगदीश्वरः । क्वासौ यदि स सर्वत्र कस्मात् स्तम्भे न दृश्यते । १३ ।
सोऽहं विकल्थमानस्य शिरः कायाद्धरामि ते । गोपायेत हरिस्त्वाद्य यस्ते शरणमीप्सितम् । १४ ।

एवं दुरुक्तैर्मुहुरदयन्कषा सुतं महाभागवतं महासुरः ।
खड्गं प्रगृह्योत्पतितो वरासनात् स्तम्भं तताडातिबलः स्वमुष्टिना । १५ ।
तदैव तस्मिन् निनदोऽतिभीषणो बभूव येनाण्डकटाहमस्फुटत् ।
यं वै स्वधिष्ण्योपगतं त्वजादयः श्रुत्वा स्वधामाप्ययमङ्ग मेनिरे । १६ ।
स विक्रमन् पुत्रवधेषुरोजसा निशम्य निर्हादमपूर्वमद्भुतम् ।
अन्तःसभायां न ददर्श तत्पदं वितत्रसुर्येन सुरारिव्यूथपाः । १७ ।

Hiranyakaśipu replied : "Evidently you are keen to die, now that you are bragging too much. For the words of those who are anxious to die, O slow-witted one, are sure to be incoherent. (12) Where is that Lord of the universe other than me, that has (just) been mentioned by you, O wretched one? If it is urged that he is (present) everywhere, wherefore is he not seen in the pillar (over there)? (13) I being all-in-all, here do I sever your head from your trunk, a braggart that you are. Let Hari, who is the asylum sought for by you, protect you today." (14) Thus tormenting again and again his son (Prahṛāda), that eminent devotee of the Lord, with abusive words (uttered) in anger, the great and mighty demon (Hiranyakaśipu) sprang from his exalted seat, taking his sword, and knocked the pillar with his fist. (15) That very moment there rose in that pillar a most terrific crash, as a result of which the shell of the cosmic egg cracked (as it were) and on hearing which, as it reached the spheres of Brahmā (the creator) and others, they for their part actually suspected the dissolution of their very abodes, O dear Yūdhishṭhira ! (16) Displaying his valour in his anxiety to get rid of his son (Prahṛāda), he heard that unprecedented and weird sound; but he did not descry inside the court the source of that sound, due to which the leaders of the Asuras (the enemies of the gods) had got frightened. (17)

सत्यं विधातुं निजभृत्यभाषितं व्याप्तिं च भूतेष्वखिलेषु चात्मनः ।
अदृश्यतात्यद्भुतरूपमुद्बुहन् स्तम्भे सभायां न मृगं न मानुषम् । १८ ।

स सत्त्वमेनं परितोऽपि, पश्यन् स्तम्भस्य मध्यादनु निर्जिहानम् ।
 नायं मृगो नापि नरो विचित्रमहो किमेतन्नृमृगेन्द्ररूपम् । १९ ।
 मीमांसमानस्य समुत्थितोऽग्रतो नृसिंहरूपस्तदलं भयानकम् ।
 प्रतप्तचामीकरचण्डलोचनं स्फुरत्सटाकेसरजृम्भिताननम् । २० ।
 करालदंष्ट्रं करवालचञ्चलक्षुरान्तजिह्वं भृकुटीमुखोल्बणम् ।
 स्तब्धोर्ध्वकर्णं गिरिकन्द्राद्भुतव्यात्तास्थनासं हनुभेदभीषणम् । २१ ।
 दिविस्पृशत्कायमदीर्घपीवरग्रीवोरुवक्षःस्थलमल्पमध्यमम् ।
 चन्द्रांशुगौरैश्छुरितं तनूरुहैर्विष्वग्भुजानीकशतं नखायुधम् । २२ ।
 दुरासदं सर्वनिजेतरायुधप्रवेकविद्रावितदैत्यदानवम् ।
 प्रायेण मेऽयं हरिणोरुमायिना वधः स्मृतोऽनेन समुद्यतेन किम् । २३ ।

In order to substantiate the utterance of His servant and His presence in all objects, the Lord appeared in the (aforementioned) pillar of the court, assuming a queer form, which was neither of a beast nor of a human being. (18) Thus looking intently on all sides, he (Hiraṇyakaśipu) beheld a being issuing forthwith from the interior of the pillar and said to himself, "He is neither a beast nor a human being. Oh, what may be this strange creature, bearing the form of a man-lion?" (19) Before (the eyes of) Hiraṇyakaśipu, who was (busy) musing on that most terrible figure, visibly stood the Lord in the form of a man-lion. It had fierce eyes shining as molten gold and a face swollen with its dazzling hair and manes. (20) It had fearful teeth and a tongue waving like a sword and sharp as the blade of a razor, and looked (all the more) frightful because of its frowning aspect. It had erect and motionless ears and a gaping mouth and nostrils amazing as a mountain-cave, and excited terror with the parting of its jaws. (21) The body touched the (very) skies and it had a short thick neck, a broad chest and a slender waist; it was covered all over with hair white as moonbeams, was endowed with multitudes of arms extending on all sides and had claws that served as weapons. (22) Hard to approach (because of its terrible aspect), it had driven away the Daityas and the Dānavas with all its own and other choicest weapons (such as the thunderbolt). "Surely enough this is (nothing but) an expedient thought out for my death by Hari, who is adept in many a conjuring trick. But what can be done by him, though fully prepared?" (23)

एवं ब्रुवंस्त्वभ्यपतद् गदायुधो नदन् नृसिंहं प्रति दैत्यकुञ्जरः ।
 अलक्षितोऽग्नौ पतितः पतङ्गमो यथा नृसिंहौजसि सोऽसुरस्तदा । २४ ।
 न तद् विचित्रं खलु सत्त्वधामनि स्वतेजसा यो नु पुरापिबत् तमः ।
 ततोऽभिपद्याभ्यहनन्महासुरो रुषा नृसिंहं गदयोरुवेगया । २५ ।
 तं विक्रमन्तं सगदं गदाधरो महोरगं तार्क्ष्यसुतो यथाग्रहीत् ।
 स तस्य हस्तोत्कलितस्तदासुरो विक्रीडतो यद्वदहिर्गरुत्मतः । २६ ।
 असाध्वमन्यन्त हतौकसोऽमरा घनच्छदा भारत सर्वधिष्ण्यपाः ।
 तं मन्यमानो निजवीर्यशङ्कितं यद्वस्तमुक्तो नृहरिं महासुरः ।
 पुनस्तमासज्जत खड्गचर्मणी प्रगृह्य वेगेन जितश्रमो मृधे । २७ ।
 तं श्येनवेगं शतचन्द्रवर्त्मभिश्चरन्तमच्छिद्रमुपर्यधो हरिः ।
 कृत्वाट्टहासं खरमुत्स्वनोल्बणं निमीलिताक्षं जगृहे महाजवः । २८ ।

विष्वक् स्फुरन्तं ग्रहणातुरं हरिव्यालो यथाऽऽखुं कुलिशाक्षतत्वचम् ।
 द्वार्यूर आपात्य ददार लीलया नखैर्यथाहिं गरुडो महाविषम् । २९ ।
 संरम्भदुष्ट्रेक्ष्यकराललोचनो व्यात्ताननान्तं विलिहन्स्वजिह्वया ।
 असृग्लवाक्त्तारुणकेसराननो यथान्नमाली द्विपहत्यया हरिः । ३० ।
 नखाङ्कुरोत्पाटितहृत्सरोरुहं विसृज्य तस्यानुचरानुदायुधान् ।
 अहन् समन्तान्नखशस्त्रपार्ष्णिभिर्दोर्दण्डयूथोऽनुपथान् सहस्रशः । ३१ ।

Thus murmuring and arming himself with a mace, Hiranyakaśipu (who was a veritable elephant among the Daityas) rushed roaring towards Nṛsimha (the Lord appearing in the form of a man-lion). Fallen into the nimbus of Lord Nṛsimha at that time, the said demon vanished like a moth fallen into a flame. (24) Indeed it was no wonder that the demon (who was darkness personified) should have disappeared into that Embodiment of Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas), who had of yore (at the dawn of creation) actually swallowed up the darkness (in the form of Tamogūṇa, which was responsible for the dissolution of the universe) by His own effulgence. Then, coming near, the mighty demon angrily assailed Nṛsimha with his mace of tremendous force. (25) Nṛsimha (who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu, the Wielder of a mace) seized him even as he paced forward, mace in hand, just as Garuḍa (the son of Tārkaṣya, nicknamed Kaśyapa) would catch hold of a huge serpent. At that time the demon slipped from His hand, even as a serpent would from the clutches of Garuḍa sporting with it. (26) The divinities, including the guardians of all the spheres whose abodes had been usurped (by him) and who stood behind a curtain of clouds, O Yudhiṣṭhira (a scion of Bharata), regarded this as something not good. Believing Lord Nṛsimha, from whose hand he had (just) escaped, to be afraid of his own prowess, the great Asura, who knew no fatigue in battle, encountered Him with vehemence, tightly grasping his sword and buckle. (27) Giving forth a shrill peal of laughter, rendered (more) terrific by a roar (that accompanied it), Śrī Hari, who was possessed of extraordinary impetuosity, seized the demon, who was darting up and down with the swiftness of a hawk, brandishing his sword in many ways so as to leave no weak point, but whose eyes had (now) closed (due partly to his enemy's roar and laughter and partly to His dazzling splendour). (28) Throwing down, at the entrance (of the hall) on His thighs, the demon—who was impatient at having been caught and was wriggling all over, and whose skin had remained unscratched (even) by (Indra's thunderbolt)—(just) as a serpent would knock down a rat, Lord Nṛsimha tore him with His claws in (mere) sport even as Garuḍa (the king of the birds) would tear a most venomous snake. (29) Licking with His tongue the corners of His gaping mouth, the Lord, whose frightful eyes were difficult to gaze at due to fury and whose manes and countenance had turned reddish, stained as they were with drops of blood, and who wore a garland of (the demon's) entrails, shone as a lion would by having killed an elephant. (30) Casting off the demon, whose lotus-like heart had been split open by His pointed claws, the Lord, endowed as He was with a multitude of stout arms, slew with His nails, weapons and heels his bodyguards that had followed Him on every side in thousands with uplifted arms. (31)

सटावधूता जलदाः परापतन् ग्रहाश्च तददृष्टिविमुष्टरोचिषः ।
 अम्भोधयः श्वासहता विचुक्षुर्भिर्हृद्भीता दिगिभा विचुकुशुः । ३२ ।
 द्यौस्तत्सटोत्क्षिप्तविमानसङ्कुला प्रोत्सर्पत क्षमा च पदातिपीडिता ।
 शैलाः समुत्पेतुरमुष्य रंहसा तत्तेजसा खं ककुभो न रेजिरे । ३३ ।

ततः सभायामुपविष्टमुत्तमे नृपासने संभृततेजसं विभुम् ।

अलक्षितद्वैरथमत्यमर्षणं प्रचण्डवक्त्रं न बभाज कश्चन ।३४।

Shaken by His hair, clouds began to scatter away and the planets were robbed of their lustre by His (very) glances. Tossed by His breath, the oceans grew turbulent and, frightened by His roar, the elephants guarding the quarters trumpeted. (32) The firmament was overcrowded with aerial cars thrown up (from below) by His hair and, sore pressed by His feet, the earth was shaken from its foundations. Mountains flew as a result of His rapid movement, while the sky and the quarters were eclipsed by His splendour. (33) Nobody dared approach the almighty Lord, who had then taken His seat on the excellent royal throne in the court and had collected His (consummate) brilliance (in that person), (nay,) who was (yet) furious, even though no adversary was visible, and wore a most dreadful countenance. (34)

निशम्य लोकत्रयमस्तकज्वरं तमादिदैत्यं हरिणा हतं मृधे ।

प्रहर्षवेगोत्कलितानना मुहुः प्रसूनवर्षैर्वृषुः सुरस्त्रियः ।३५।

तदा विमानावलिभिर्नभस्तलं दिदृक्षतां सङ्कुलमास नाकिनाम् ।

सुरानका दुन्दुभयोऽथ जग्निरे गन्धर्वमुख्या ननृतुर्जगुः स्त्रियः ।३६।

तत्रोपब्रज्य विबुधा ब्रह्मेन्द्रगिरिशदयः । ऋषयः पितरः सिद्धा विद्याधरमहोरगाः ।३७।

मनवः प्रजानां पतयो गन्धर्वाप्सरचारणाः । यक्षाः किम्पुरुषास्तात वेतालाः सिद्धकिन्नराः ।३८।

ते विष्णुपार्षदाः सर्वे सुनन्दकुमुदादयः । मूर्ध्नि बद्धाञ्जलिपुटा आसीनं तीव्रतेजसम् ।

ईडिरे नरशार्दूलं नतिदूरचराः पृथक् ।३९।

Hearing that the celebrated Hiraṇyakaśipu (the first and foremost son of Diti), the headache of (all) the three worlds, had been killed in a combat by Lord Śrī Hari, celestial women, whose faces were blooming with an outburst of joy, sent down showers of flowers upon Him again and again. (35) At that time the sky was crammed with rows of aerial cars of heavenly beings eager to have a look (at the Lord). The tabors and drums of the gods were then sounded; while the foremost of the Gandharvas (celestial musicians) sang and their wives (the celestial nymphs) danced. (36) Resorting to that place (the court of Hiraṇyakaśipu), gods like Brahmā (the creator), Indra (the ruler of the gods) and Lord Śiva (who lives on Mount Kailāsa), Ṛṣis (seers), manes, Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth), Vidyādharas (heavenly artistes), mighty Nāgas (serpent-demons, having a human face with a serpent-like lower end), the Manus (progenitors of mankind, each presiding over a whole Manvantara), Prajāpatīs (the lords of creation), Gandharvas, Apsarās and Cāraṇas (heavenly bards), Yakṣas (attendants of Kubera, the god of riches), Kimpuruṣas (another class of demigods), Vetālas (celestial minstrels) and accomplished Kinnaras (a class of demigods with a human figure and the head of a horse and celebrated as musicians), as well as all those attendants of Lord Viṣṇu such as Sunanda and Kumuda severally hymned Lord Nṛsiṃha (the Man-Lion) of dazzling splendour, seated there, with the hollows of their palms joined together on the head and remaining at a short distance (from Him), O dear one ! (37—39)

ब्रह्मोवाच

नतोऽस्म्यनन्ताय दुरन्तशक्तये विचित्रवीर्याय पवित्रकर्मणे ।

विश्वस्य सर्गस्थितिसंयमान् गुणैः स्वलीलया संदधतेऽव्ययात्मने ।४०।

Brahmā said : I bow down to please the infinite Lord of wonderful prowess and holy deeds, whose potency is hard to fathom, (nay,) who duly carries on by way of His sport through the (three) Guṇas (Sattva etc.) the creation, preservation and dissolution of the universe and is (yet) undecaying by nature. (40)

श्रीरुद्र उवाच

कोपकालो युगान्तस्ते हतोऽयमसुरोऽल्पकः । तत्सुतं पाह्युपसृतं भक्तं ते भक्तवत्सल ॥४१॥

Śrī Rudra said : The end of a Kalpa (a thousand revolutions of the four Yugas) is the (proper) time for (venting) Your anger and (if it was directed towards Hiranyakaśipu,) this puny demon has (already) been slain. (Pray,) protect his son (Prahārāda), a devotee of Yours, who has approached You (for shelter), O lover of (Your) devotees ! (41)

इन्द्र उवाच

प्रत्यानीताः परम भवता त्रायता नः स्वभागा दैत्याक्रान्तं हृदयकमलं त्वद्गृहं प्रत्यबोधि ।

कालप्रस्तं कियदिदमहो नाथ शुश्रूषतां ते मुक्तिस्तेषां न हि बहुमता नारसिंहापरैः किम् ॥४२॥

Indra said : It is Your own shares (in the sacrificial offerings) that have been recovered by You, O supreme Lord, while protecting us; (for, seated in the hearts of us gods, it is You who enjoy all sacrificial offerings) ! (Nay,) the lotus of our heart, which is Your abode (You being our Inner Controller), and which had till now been possessed by this demon, has been opened by You. Oh, of what account is this (sovereignty of the three worlds)—which is (soon) going to be devoured by Time—in the eyes of those who are eager to serve You ? (Even) Liberation is not thought much of by them, O Lord Narasimha; of what use (then) are other objects (of human pursuit to them)? (42)

ऋषय ऊचुः

त्वं नस्तपः परममास्थ यदात्मतेजो येनेदमादिपुरुषात्मगतं ससर्ज ।

तद् विप्रलुप्तममुनाद्य शरण्यपाल रक्षागृहीतवपुषा पुनरन्वमंस्थाः ॥४३॥

The Ṛsis said : By this body assumed for the sake of protection (of Your devotees), O Guardian of those needing shelter, You have once more countenanced this day (the practice of) that supreme austerity (in the form of meditation) which You enjoined upon us, (nay,) which is Your own glory and by (recourse to) which, O most ancient Person, You evolved this (cosmos)—that lay merged in You—and which had been stopped by this fellow. (43)

पितर ऊचुः

श्राद्धानि नोऽधिबुभुजे प्रसभं तनूजैर्दत्तानि तीर्थसमयेऽप्यपिबत् तिलाम्बु ।

तस्योदरान्नखविदीर्णवपाद् य आर्च्छत् तस्मै नमो नृहरयेऽखिलधर्मगोप्त्रे ॥४४॥

The manes said : This fellow forcibly appropriated and enjoyed the reverential offerings (in the shape of balls of boiled rice etc.) given by our sons (and their descendants) and even drank the water with sesame seeds offered by them at the time of bath in sacred waters. Hail to that Lord Nṛsimha, the Protector of all righteousness, who recovered those offerings (as it were) from his abdomen, the omentum of which was split open by His claws. (44)

सिद्धा ऊचुः

यो नो गतिं योगसिद्धामसाधुरहारषीद् योगतपोबलेन ।

नानादर्पं तं नखैर्निर्ददार तस्मै तुभ्यं प्रणताः स्मो नृसिंह ॥४५॥

The Siddhas said : You tore with Your claws this demon, proud of his numerous achievements, who, impious as he was, snatched by dint of Yoga (breath-control) and asceticism our mystic powers acquired through concentration of mind. To You as such we reverently bow, O Nṛsimha ! (45)

विद्याधरा ऊचुः

विद्यां पृथग्धारणयानुराद्धां न्यषेधदृजो बलवीर्यदृप्तः ।

स येन संख्ये पशुवद्धतस्तं मायानुसिंहं प्रणताः स्म नित्यम् । ४६ ।

The Vidyādhara said : Proud of his bodily strength and valour, this fool banned (the practice of) our art (of becoming invisible and so on) cultivated (by us) through concentration of mind on diverse objects. We ever bow low to the Lord, appearing in the form of a man-lion by way of sport, by whom the fellow has been killed in an encounter even as a beast. (46)

नागा ऊचुः

येन पापेन रत्नानि स्त्रीरत्नानि हतानि नः । तद्वक्षःपाटनेनासां दत्तानन्द नमोऽस्तु ते । ४७ ।

The Nāgas said : Our salutation be to You, O Lord, who have afforded delight to our wives (who are jewels among women) by splitting open the breast of this wicked fellow, by whom they had been abducted and our jewels (too) wrested ! (47)

मनव ऊचुः

मनवो वयं तव निदेशकारिणो दितिजेन देव पतिभूतसेतवः ।

भवता खलः स उपसंहतः प्रभो करवाम ते किमनुशाधि किङ्करान् । ४८ ।

The Manus said : We are Manus—(ever) disposed to do Your bidding—the bounds of morality fixed by whom were set at nought, O god of gods, by this demon. That wicked fellow has been made short work of by You, O Lord ! What can we do for You (now) ? (Pray,) instruct (us,) Your servants. (48)

प्रजापतय ऊचुः

प्रजेशा वयं ते परेशाभिसृष्टा न येन प्रजा वै सृजामो निषिद्धाः ।

स एष त्वया भिन्नवक्षा नु शेते जगन्मङ्गलं सत्त्वमूर्तेऽवतारः । ४९ ।

The Prajāpatis said : We are Prajāpatis (lords of created beings) evolved by You, O supreme Ruler ! This fellow, prohibited by whom we procreate no more progeny, surely lies (before us) with his bosom split open by You. Your descent, O Embodiment of Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas), is conducive to the good of the world. (49)

गन्धर्वा ऊचुः

वयं विभो ते नटनाट्यगायका येनात्मसाद् वीर्यबलौजसा कृताः ।

स एष नीतो भवता दशमिमां किमुत्पथस्थः कुशलाय कल्पते । ५० ।

The Gandharvas said : We, O almighty Lord, are Your dancers and singers in dramatic performances. This fellow, by whom we were brought into subjection by dint of valour, physical strength and organic power, has been reduced to this plight by You ! Can one who has taken to evil ways attain happiness? (50)

चारणा ऊचुः

हरे तवाङ्घ्रिपङ्कजं भवापवर्गमाश्रिताः । यदेष साधुहृच्छयस्त्वयासुरः समापितः । ५१ ।

The Cāraṇas said : We have (once more freely) taken shelter under Your lotus-feet, which rid one of transmigration, now that this demon a thorn in the heart of pious souls, has been disposed of by You. (51)

यक्षा ऊचुः

वयमनुचरमुख्याः कर्मभिस्ते मनोजैस्त इह दितिसुतेन प्रापिता वाहकत्वम् ।

स तु जनपरितापं तत्कृतं जानता ते नरहर उपनीतः पञ्चविंश । ५२ ।

The Yakṣas said : We, who are well-known as the chief among Your servants by virtue of (our) agreeable actions, had hitherto been reduced to the position of mere palanquin-bearers by Hiranyakaśipu (Diti's son). He, however, has (now) been put to death by You, O Narasimha, the Controller of the twenty-four categories*, knowing as You did the agony caused to the people by him. (52)

किम्पुरुषा ऊचुः

वयं किम्पुरुषास्त्वं तु महापुरुष ईश्वरः । अयं कुपुरुषो नष्टो धिक्कृतः साधुभिर्यदा । ५३ ।

The Kimpuruṣas said : We are Kimpuruṣas (insignificant creatures), while You are the almighty Supreme Person. This wretched fellow was no more (even) when he was reproached by pious souls. (53)

वैतालिका ऊचुः

सभासु सत्रेषु तवामलं यशो गीत्वा सपर्या महतीं लभामहे ।
यस्तां व्यनैषीद् भृशमेष दुर्जनो दिष्ट्या हतस्ते भगवन् यथाऽऽमयः । ५४ ।

The Vaitālikas said : Celebrating as we did Your untarnished glory in assemblies and sacrificial sessions, we used to receive great honours (and handsome fees). This extremely wicked fellow, who had stopped it, has luckily been got rid of by You, O Lord, even as a malady. (54)

किन्नरा ऊचुः

वयमीश किन्नरगणास्तवानुगा दितिजेन विष्टिममुनानु कारिताः ।
भवता हरे स वृजिनोऽवसादितो नरसिंह नाथ विभवाय नो भव । ५५ ।

The Kinnaras said : We, hosts of Kinnaras, (who are) Your servants, O Master, were constantly made to do unpaid labour by this Hiranyakaśipu (son of Diti). That wicked fellow, O Hari, has been slain by You. Make for our prosperity (henceforward), O Lord Narasimha. (55)

विष्णुपार्षदा ऊचुः

अद्यैतद्धरिनररूपमद्भुतं ते दृष्टं नः शरणद सर्वलोकशर्म ।
सोऽयं ते विधिकर ईश विप्रशप्तस्तस्येदं निधनमनुग्रहाय विद्मः । ५६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादानुचरिते दैत्यराजवधे नृसिंहस्तवो नामाष्टमोऽध्यायः । ८ ।

The attendants of Lord Viṣṇu said : It is but today that this weird form of Yours, half lion, half man, which is a source of happiness to all the world, has been beheld by us, O Lord affording protection (to all) ! This demon was (none but) Your servant, cursed by the Brāhmaṇas (Sanaka and others). (Hence) we know this death of his as an instrument of Your grace (on him). (56)

Thus ends the eighth discourse, entitled "Lord Nṛsiṃha extolled on the death of Hiranyakaśipu (the demon king)", forming part of the Narrative of Prahrāda in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* Mūla Prakṛti (Primordial Matter), the Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), Ahaṁkāra (the Ego), the five subtle elements, the ten Indriyas and the mind and the five gross elements: these are the twenty-four categories into which the whole range of objective existence has been broadly divided by the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy. God or the Spirit, who controls all these, is the twenty-fifth. This classification has been followed more or less by the other systems too.

अथ नवमोऽध्यायः

Discourse IX

A Eulogy of the Lord (by Prahrāda)

नारद उवाच

एवं सुरादयः सर्वे ब्रह्मरुद्रपुरःसराः । नोपैतुमशक्नन्संरम्भं सुदुरासदम् । १ ।
 साक्षाच्छ्रीः प्रेषिता देवैर्दृष्ट्वा तन्महदद्भुतम् । अदृष्टश्रुतपूर्वत्वात् सा नोपेयाय शङ्किता । २ ।
 प्रह्लादं प्रेषयामास ब्रह्मावस्थितप्रन्तिके । तात प्रशमयोपेहि स्वपित्रे कुपितं प्रभुम् । ३ ।
 तथेति शनकै राजन्महाभागवतोऽर्भकः । उपेत्य भुवि कायेन ननाम विधृताञ्जलिः । ४ ।
 स्वपादमूले पतितं तमर्भकं विलोक्य देवः कृपया परिप्लुतः ।
 उत्थाप्य तच्छीर्ष्यदधात् कराम्बुजं कालाहिवित्रस्तधियां कृताभयम् । ५ ।
 स तत्करस्पर्शधुताखिलाशुभः सपद्यभिव्यक्तपरात्मदर्शनः ।
 तत्पादपद्मं हृदि निर्वृतो दधौ हृष्यन्तनुः क्लिन्नहृदश्चलोचनः । ६ ।
 अस्तौषीद्धरिमेकाग्रमनसा सुसमाहितः । प्रेमगद्गदया वाचा तत्र्यस्तहृदयेक्षणः । ७ ।

Nārada resumed : (Extolling the Lord) thus all the gods and other (heavenly) beings, led by Brahmā (the creator) and Rudra (Lord Śiva), dared not go near Him, possessed as He was by anger and (hence) most difficult to approach. (1) Śrī (the Lord's own Consort and the goddess of beauty and prosperity) was personally sent by the gods (to appease Him). Perceiving that great wonder and full of misgiving (however), She dared not go near, the form having neither been seen nor heard of (by Her) before. (2) Brahmā (then) sent Prahrāda, standing close by, with the words; "Approach, dear one, and pacify the Lord, who has waxed angry at your father." (3) Uttering the words "So be it", and slowly drawing near, O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), the great child devotee (Prahrāda) bowed down with his body (lying prostrate) on the ground and his palms joined together. (4) Overwhelmed with compassion on seeing the infant fallen at the soles of His feet, and lifting it, the Lord placed on its head His lotus hand, which has (ever) brought security to those whose mind is terribly afraid of the serpent in the shape of Time. (5) All (traces of) evil (in the shape of dormant desires or impressions left on the mind by good or evil actions of past lives) having been wiped out by the (most auspicious and sacred) touch of His hand and direct knowledge of the Supreme Spirit instantly revealed to him, Prahrāda felt (supremely) gratified and with the hair of his body standing on end, his heart moistened (with love) and tears (of joy) in his eyes, he installed (an image of) His lotus-feet in his heart. (6) Perfectly composed, he extolled Śrī Hari with a concentrated mind and in a voice choked with emotion, his heart and eyes fixed on Him. (7)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

ब्रह्मादयः सुरगणा मुनयोऽथ सिद्धाः सत्त्वैकतानमतयो वचसां प्रवाहैः ।
 नाराधितुं पुरुगुणैरधुनापि पिप्रुः किं तोष्टुमर्हति स मे हरिरुग्रजातेः । ८ ।
 मन्ये धनाभिजनरूपतपःश्रुतौजस्तेजःप्रभावबलपौरुषबुद्धियोगाः ।
 नाराधनाय हि भवन्ति परस्य पुंसो भक्त्या तुतोष भगवानाजयूथपाय । ९ ।
 विप्राद् द्विषड्गुणयुतादरविन्दनाभपादारविन्दविमुखाच्छपचं वरिष्ठम् ।
 मन्ये तदर्पितमनोवचनेहितार्थप्राणं पुनाति स कुलं न तु भूरिमानः । १० ।

नैवात्मनः प्रभुरयं निजलाभपूर्णो मानं जनादविदुषः करुणो वृणीते ।
 यद् यज्जनो भगवते विदधीत मानं तच्चात्मने प्रतिमुखस्य यथा मुखश्रीः । ११ ।
 तस्मादहं विगतविक्रव ईश्वरस्य सर्वात्मना महि गृणामि यथामनीषम् ।
 नीचोऽजया गुणविसर्गमनुप्रविष्टः पूयेत येन हि पुमाननुवर्णितेन । १२ ।
 सर्वे ह्यमी विधिकरास्तव सत्त्वधाम्नो ब्रह्मादयो वयमिवेश न चोद्विजन्तः ।
 क्षेमाय भूतय उतात्मसुखाय चास्य विक्रीडितं भगवतो रुचिरावतारैः । १३ ।
 तद् यच्छ मन्युमसुरश्च हतस्त्वयाद्य मोदेत साधुरपि वृश्चिकसर्पहत्या ।
 लोकाश्च निर्वृतिमिताः प्रतियन्ति सर्वे रूपं नृसिंह विभयाय जनाः स्मरन्ति । १४ ।
 नाहं बिभेम्यजित तेऽतिभयानकास्यजिह्वाकनेत्रभृकुटीरभसोऽग्रदंष्ट्रात् ।
 आन्त्रस्त्रजः क्षतजकेसरशङ्कुकर्णात्रिहार्दभीतदिगिभादरिभिन्नखाप्रात् । १५ ।
 त्रस्तोऽस्म्यहं कृपणवत्सल दुःसहोऽग्रसंसारचक्रकदनाद् अग्रतां प्रणीतः ।
 बद्धः स्वकर्मभिरुत्तम तेऽङ्घ्रिमूलं प्रीतोऽपवर्गशरणं ह्यसे कदा नु । १६ ।
 यस्मात् प्रियाप्रियवियोगसयोगजन्मशोकाग्निना सकलयोनिषु दह्यमानः ।
 दुःखौषधं तदपि दुःखमतद्वियाहं भूमन्भ्रमामि वद मे तव दास्ययोगम् । १७ ।
 सोऽहं प्रियस्य सुहृदः परदेवताया लीलाकथास्तव नृसिंह विरिञ्चिगीताः ।
 अञ्जस्तितम्यनुगुणानुणविप्रमुक्तो दुर्गाणि ते पदयुगालयहंससङ्गः । १८ ।
 बालस्य नेह शरणं पितरौ नृसिंह नार्तस्य चागदमुदन्वति मज्जतो नौः ।
 तप्तस्य तत्प्रतिविधिर्य इहाञ्जसेष्टस्तावद् विभो तनुभृतां त्वदुपेक्षितानाम् । १९ ।
 यस्मिन्यतो यर्हि येन च यस्य यस्माद् यस्मै यथा यदुत यस्त्वपरः परो वा ।
 भावः करोति विकरोति पृथक्स्वभावः सञ्जोदितस्तदखिलं भवतः स्वरूपम् । २० ।

Prahrāda said : Hosts of gods headed by Brahmā, contemplative souls and wise men too, whose mind is solely devoted to virtue, knowledge and asceticism (products of Sattva) have not succeeded even to this day in propitiating Śrī Hari through streams of prayers abounding in many qualities. Can He (then) be pleased with me, born of a ferocious race (the demon race)? (8) Wealth, pedigree, comeliness of form, asceticism, learning, keenness of the senses, splendour, glory, bodily strength, self-endeavour, intelligence and Yoga (concentration of mind or breath-control), I believe, are not sufficient for the propitiation of the Supreme Person. For (on the other hand) the Lord was pleased with the leader of a herd of (wild) elephants* through (mere) Devotion. (9) I account a pariah (a Cāṇḍāla)—who has dedicated his mind, speech, actions, wealth and life (itself) to Him—far worthier than a Brāhmaṇa that has turned away his face from (the worship of) the lotus-feet of Lord Viṣṇu (who has a lotus sprung from His navel), though endowed with the (aforesaid) twelve attributes. (For) the former redeems his (whole) race, but not the Brāhmaṇa, (who is) full of inordinate pride (and therefore unable to redeem his own soul, much less his race). (10) This all-merciful Lord (present before me), who is sated with the realization of His own (blissful) nature, does not covet honour (worship) at the hands of His ignorant devotee for His own sake. (But He does it for the sake of the devotee himself.) For whatever honour the devotee offers to the almighty Lord redounds upon himself, (even) as the decoration of one's face is (immediately) reflected on its image (in a mirror, which cannot be decorated otherwise). (11)

* Vide Discourses II to IV of Book Eight.

Therefore, with (all) my fear completely gone, I (hereby) celebrate with all my being and to the best of my understanding the greatness of the almighty Lord, by which, when praised, (even) a mean fellow, who has fallen into (the whirlpool of) mundane existence (a product of the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti) by force of Avidyā (Nescience), is undoubtedly purified. (12) Indeed all these (gods), Brahmā (the creator) and others, are Your devotees (who remember You with faith and love)—although (at present) they are afraid of You, the embodiment of Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas)—but not like us (demons, who though constantly thinking of You, look upon You as their enemy), O Lord ! (Besides,) the sport of the almighty Lord (in You) through (various) delightful descents (manifestations) is (only) conducive to the well-being and prosperity of this world as well as to final beatitude. (13) Therefore, be pleased to hold Your anger, now that the demon (who excited it) has been slain by You (for the gratification of pious souls); (for) even a holy man rejoices over the destruction of a scorpion or a snake (which is conducive to its welfare). Nay, all the worlds, relieved as they are (at the death of Hiraṇyakaśipu), await the withdrawal of Your anger. People will recall this form of Yours, O Nṛsiṃha, for being rid of fear (so that there is no more need of Your retaining this angry mood even for ridding Your devotees of fear hereafter). (14) (As for myself) I am not (at all) afraid, O invincible Lord, of Your (weird) form with a most frightful countenance and tongue, eyes (dazzling) like the sun, an overbearing frown and fierce teeth (jaws), manes crimsoned with blood, ears erect as wedges and claws that tear the enemy—the form which is adorned with a garland of intestines and whose roar terrifies the very elephants guarding the four quarters. (15) I am (certainly) afraid, O Lover of the miserable, of the formidable and terrible suffering involved in the cycle of transmigration, bound as I am with (the fetters in the shape of good and evil) actions of my own and thrown (as a consequence of such actions) in the midst of devouring (blood-thirsty) demons, O most shining One ! Pleased with me, when will You call me to the soles of Your feet, the abode of final beatitude? (16) Since, O infinite Lord, I have been wandering through all wombs (forms of birth), identifying myself with the body and other material sheaths (which are other than the Self) and scorched with the fire of grief born of separation from one's beloved objects and being placed in unpleasant situations, and since that too which is (universally) regarded as a cure for misery entails suffering, (pray,) tell me the method of serving You (which is the only means of ridding oneself of sorrow and of which I am utterly ignorant). (17) Thus instructed (in the art of service and blessed by You with the rare privilege of serving You) and enjoying the fellowship of enlightened souls that have taken shelter in Your feet, and completely and finally rid (through such fellowship) of attachment and other evils (the products of the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti), I shall easily tide over (make light of) obstacles (in the form of worldly calamities), constantly repeating, O Nṛsiṃha, the (soul-enthraling) stories—sung by Brahmā (the creator himself)—of the (innumerable) sports of my beloved Friend and the Supreme Deity in You. (18) The parents are no protectors to a child in this world, O Nṛsiṃha ! a medicine is no remedy for an ailing person; and a vessel is no protection to a person drowning in the ocean (inasmuch as they are all seen to fail in numerous cases). Whatever is approved of here as an easy cure against some evil for an afflicted person proves effective only for the time being (and not forever), O Lord, in the case of embodied beings neglected by You. (19) Whatever being, high or low, and possessing a distinctive nature (Sāttvika and so on), produces or transforms a thing; wherever, from whatever motive, whenever, with whatever instrument, from whatever source and howsoever he does it; (nay,) whatever he produces or transforms, whosoever the thing (produced or transformed) is and by whomsoever he is prompted (to do so)—all that is You (and nothing other than You). (20)

माया मनः सृजति कर्ममयं बलीयः कालेन चोदितगुणानुमतेन पुंसः ।
 छन्दोमयं यदजयार्पितषोडशारं संसारचक्रमज कोऽतितरेत् त्वदन्यः । २१ ।
 स त्वं हि नित्यविजितात्मगुणः स्वधाम्ना कालो वशीकृतविसृज्यविसर्गशक्तिः ।
 चक्रे विसृष्टमजयेश्वर षोडशारे निष्पीड्यमानमुपकर्ष विभो प्रपन्नम् । २२ ।
 दृष्ट्वा मया दिवि विभोऽखिलधिष्यपानामायुः श्रियो विभव इच्छति याञ्जनोऽयम् ।
 येऽस्मात्पितुः कुपितहासविजृम्भितभ्रूविस्फूर्जितेन लुलिताः स तु ते निरस्तः । २३ ।
 तस्मादमूस्तनुभृतामहमाशिषो ज्ञ आयुः श्रियं विभवमैन्द्रियमाविरिञ्चात् ।
 नेच्छामि ते विलुलितानुरुविक्रमेण कालात्मनोपनय मां निजभृत्यपार्श्वम् । २४ ।
 कुत्राशिषः श्रुतिसुखा मृगतृष्णिरूपाः क्रेदं कलेवरमशेषरुजां विरोहः ।
 निर्विद्यते न तु जनो यदपीति विद्वान् कामानलं मधुलवैः शमयन्दुरापैः । २५ ।
 क्राहं रजःप्रभव ईश तमोऽधिकेऽस्मिन् जातः सुरेतरकुले क्व तवानुकम्पा ।
 न ब्रह्मणो न तु भवस्य न वै रमाया यन्मेऽर्पितः शिरसि पद्मकरः प्रसादः । २६ ।
 नैषा परावरमतिर्भवतो ननु स्याज्जन्तोऽर्यथाऽऽत्मसुहृदो जगतस्तथापि ।
 संसेवया सुरतरोरिव ते प्रसादः सेवानुरूपमुदयो न परावरत्वम् । २७ ।
 एवं जनं निपतितं प्रभवाहिकूपे कामाभिकाममनु यः प्रपतन् प्रसङ्गात् ।
 कृत्वाऽऽत्मसात् सुरर्षिणा भगवन् गृहीतः सोऽहं कथं नु विसृजे तव भृत्यसेवाम् । २८ ।
 मत्प्राणरक्षणमनन्त पितुर्वधश्च मन्ये स्वभृत्य ऋषिवाक्यमृतं विधातुम् ।
 खड्गं प्रगृह्य यदवोचदसद्विधित्सुस्त्वामीश्वरो मदपरोऽवतु कं हरामि । २९ ।
 एकस्त्वमेव जगदेतदमुष्य यत् त्वमाद्यन्तयोः पृथगवस्यसि मध्यतश्च ।
 सृष्ट्वा गुणव्यतिकरं निजमाययेदं नानेव तैरवसितस्तदनुप्रविष्टः । ३० ।
 त्वं वा इदं सदसदीश भवांस्ततोऽन्यो माया यदात्मपरबुद्धिरियं ह्यपार्था ।
 यद् यस्य जन्म निधनं स्थितिरीक्षणं च तद् वै तदेव वसुकालवदष्टितर्वोः । ३१ ।

Māyā (Prakṛti or primordial Matter) with her attributes (in the shape of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) thrown into activity by Kāla (the Time-Spirit), representing the creative will of the Cosmic Being (a part manifestation of Yours), evolves the subtle body (chiefly consisting of the mind), which is a product of Karma (activity), is exceedingly powerful (hard to conquer) and full of (endless) latent desires, and constitutes the wheel of transmigration with sixteen spokes (in the shape of the mind, the ten Indriyas and the five subtle elements) provided by Nescience (which has no beginning). Who that is averse (not devoted) to You can cross over this wheel, O birthless One ? (21) As such You, who have by Your own energy (in the shape of Consciousness) ever kept under full control the properties of intellect (e. g., joy and sorrow, attachment and greed and so on) nay, who as Kāla (the Director of Māyā) have exercised full sway over the powers of both the effects and the causes, may (kindly) draw me, O omnipotent Lord, close to You—me who have been thrown by Nescience into this wheel of sixteen spokes and am being crushed thereby (as a sequel), and who have (now) sought Your protection. (22) The (inordinately) long life, riches and glory in heaven of all the guardians of the (different) worlds—which these (earthly) people (generally) crave for, and which were swept away by a mere play of my father's eyebrows, knit in the course of an angry laugh—have been seen by me. But (even) he has been disposed of by You. (23) Therefore, I do not covet those blessings, sought for by embodied beings—long life, wealth, glory and sensuous pleasures, including those enjoyed by Brahmā (the creator)—not even mystic powers, crushed by You in the form of the mighty Kāla (Time-Spirit), knowing as I do their real worth. (Only be pleased to) place me by the side of Your servants. (24) How unsubstantial are the enjoyments (of this world), which are (only) pleasant to hear of and are of the nature of a mirage (tantalizing in character); and on the other hand, how frail is this body, the hotbed of all (kinds of) diseases ! (It is absurd to think of enjoying such pleasures through such a body.) Though knowing this, people do not feel disgusted with them, busy as they are quenching the fire of desire with drops of honey (in the shape of trivial and momentary pleasures), (so) difficult to procure. (25) How undeserving of compassion, O Lord, am I, a creature of Rajas, born in this race of demons, characterized by an excess of Tamoguṇa; and how unsparing (on the other hand) is Your mercy, prompted by which You have placed on my head as a token of favour Your lotus hand, placed (heretofore) neither on Brahmā's nor on Śiva's nor again on Lakṣmī's head. (26) Surely such a notion of superiority and inferiority as that found in a worldly creature could not exist in You, the (disinterested) friend, nay, the very Self of the (entire) universe. Yet Your grace, like that of a celestial (wish-yielding) tree, could be secured only through devoted service; and the fruit (enjoyed by Your devotees) varies according to (the measure of) the service rendered by them, superiority or inferiority (of the devotee) having nothing to do with it. (27) Indeed how can I (afford to) give up the service of Your servants (devotees)—the self-same I, who was, O Lord, favoured by the celestial sage (Nārada), after being accepted as his own, in this way (so as to ensure Your grace even during the period of my gestation) while I was about to fall headlong through excessive fondness into the (deep) well of metempsychosis inhabited by a (deadly) python (in the shape of Death), following the example of people hankering after the pleasures of sense (generally sought after) and (already) fallen into it (in quest of such pleasures). (28) The act of rescuing of my life as well as the slaughter of my father was done by You, O immortal Lord, in order to vindicate the words of the sages (Sanaka and his three brothers), Your devotees, when, taking up his sword, my father (Hiraṇyakaśipu), who sought to do violence (to me), said, "If there is any God other than me, let him save you; I (hereby) sever your head !" (29) Indeed You alone constitute this universe, since it is You who exist apart (from the world) at its beginning (before its creation) as well as at its end (after its dissolution) and (hence) at the middle (in the form of the universe too). Having evolved by Your Māyā (creative will) this cosmos (which is a modification of the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti—viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), and forthwith entered it (as its Inner Controller). You appear as many (as its Creator, Preserver and Destroyer) through (association with) these Guṇas. (30) This universe, consisting of (both) causes and effects, O Lord, is as a matter of fact the same as You; while You are different from it (existing as You do even before and after it). Because it is so, the notion that he is one's own and he is another is indeed meaningless and illusory. A thing is actually the same as that from which it originates and comes to light, in which it lives and into which it gets dissolved, just as a tree is essentially the same as its seed and a seed is identical with (its cause) earth (which is a product of and therefore identical with odour). (31)

न्यस्येदमात्मनि जगद् विलयाम्बुमध्ये शेषेऽत्मना निजसुखानुभवो निरीहः ।

योगेन मीलितदृगात्मनिपीतनिद्रस्तुर्यं स्थितो न तु तमो न गुणांश्च युद्धक्षे । ३२ ।

तस्यैव ते वपुरिदं निजकालशक्त्या सञ्चोदितप्रकृतिधर्मण आत्मगूढम् ।

अम्भस्यनन्तशयनाद् विरमत्समाधेर्नाभेरभूत् स्वकणिकावटवन्महाब्जम् । ३३ ।

तत्सम्भवः कविरतोऽन्यदपश्यमानस्त्वां बीजमात्मनि ततं स्वबहिर्विचिन्त्य ।

नाविन्ददब्दशतमप्सु निमज्जमानो जातेऽङ्कुरे कथमुहोपलभेत बीजम् । ३४ ।

स त्वात्मयोनिरतिविस्मित आस्थितोऽब्जं कालेन तीव्रतपसा परिशुद्धभावः ।
 त्वामात्मनीश भुवि गन्धमिवातिसूक्ष्मं भूतेन्द्रियाशयमये विततं ददर्श । ३५ ।
 एवं सहस्रवदनाद्ग्रिशिरःकरोरुनासास्यकर्णनयनाभरणायुधाढ्यम् ।
 मायामयं सदुपलक्षितसंनिवेशं दृष्ट्वा महापुरुषमाप मुदं विस्त्रिः । ३६ ।
 तस्मै भवान्हयशिरस्तनुवं च बिभ्रद् वेदद्रुहावतिबलौ मधुकैटभाख्यौ ।
 हत्वाऽऽनयच्छ्रुतिगणांस्तु रजस्तमश्च सत्त्वं तव प्रियतमां तनुमामनन्ति । ३७ ।
 इत्थं नृतिर्यगृषिदेवझषावतारैर्लोकान् विभावयसि हंसि जगत्प्रतीपान् ।
 धर्मं महापुरुष पासि युगानुवृत्तं छन्नः कलौ यदभवत्त्रियुगोऽथ स त्वम् । ३८ ।

Withdrawing (dissolving) this cosmos into Yourself by Yourself (of Your own free will), You repose in the Deluge water, enjoying the bliss which is Your very nature, and devoid of (all) activity. Having closed Your eyes (in that state) through Yoga (Self-absorption) and set aside sleep by Self-illumination, and existing in Your absolute nature (transcending the three states of wakefulness, dream and deep sleep), You cognize neither Tamas (ignorance, which is characteristic of deep sleep) nor the objects of senses (which are presented to one's mind during the states of wakefulness and dream). (32) This cosmos is an embodiment of that very Lord in You, who spurred into activity, by Your own energy in the shape of the Time-Spirit, the (three) modes of Prakṛti (viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, which combine to produce this universe). (For) from Your navel—even as You reposed in water on the (cosy) bed of Ananta (the immortal Śeṣa, the serpent-god) and when Your trance came to an end—sprang up, like a banyan tree from a tiny seed, a huge lotus that had lain hidden in You (till then). (33) Sprung from that lotus, Brahmā (the seer)—who failed to perceive anything other than that, and thought You, the seed, though pervading himself, to be outside his body—could not discover You, although he kept diving into the water for a hundred (celestial) years. Oh ! how, on a sprout having shot forth, could one get at the seed ? (34) Utterly amazed (at not finding You) and perched on the lotus (once more), Brahmā (the self-born), whose heart had been thoroughly purified in course of time through intense meditation, eventually discovered You, O Lord, in a most subtle form as pervading his own being—consisting of the (five gross) elements, the (ten) Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) and the inner sense—even as a Yogī would perceive the most subtle odour pervading the earth. (35) Brahmā (the creator) experienced (great) joy on seeing the Lord (in that subtle form) and in the same way on beholding the Supreme Person (the Cosmic Being), a manifestation of His own Māyā (creative will), (who was) endowed with innumerable faces, feet, heads, hands, thighs, noses, mouths, ears, eyes, ornaments and weapons, (and) the disposition of whose (different) limbs was symbolized by (the various spheres of) this (visible) universe. (36) Assuming the form of Lord Hayagrīva (who was endowed with a horse's head) and having slain the two mighty enemies of Veda, Madhu and Kaiṭabha by name, the embodiments of Rajas and Tamas respectively, (who had snatched away the Vedas and were bent upon killing Brahmā,) You restored to Brahmā the Vedic texts, (which are a symbol of Sattva or enlightenment and which taught to him the means of pushing the work of creation). (For) they declare Sattva to be Your most beloved body. (37) In this way You protect the (different) worlds and destroy the enemies of creation through Your (numerous) descents in the form of human beings (such as Śrī Rāma and Śrī Balarāma), beasts (such as the divine Boar), seers (such as the sages Nara and Nārāyaṇa), gods (such as Vāmana, the divine Dwarf), and the (divine) Fish, and maintain (the standards of) virtue prevalent in the various Yugas, O supreme Person ! (And) because You remain hidden (unmanifest) in the Kali age, hence You as such are called Triyuga (the Lord manifest in the first three Yugas, viz., Satya, Tretā and Dwāpara only). (38)

नैतन्मनस्तव कथासु विकुण्ठनाथ सम्प्रीयते दुरितदुष्टमसाधु तीव्रम् ।
 कामातुरं हर्षशोकभयैषणार्तं तस्मिन्कथं तव गतिं विमृशामि दीनः ।३९।
 जिह्वैकतोऽच्युत विकर्षति मावितृप्ता शिश्रोऽन्यतस्त्वगुदरं श्रवणं कुतश्चित् ।
 घ्राणोऽन्यतश्चपलदृक् क्व च कर्मशक्तिर्बह्व्यः सपत्य इव गेहपतिं लुनन्ति ।४०।
 एवं स्वकर्मपतितं भववैतरण्यामन्योन्यजन्ममरणाशनभीतभीतम् ।
 पश्यञ्जनं स्वपरविग्रहवैरमैत्रं हन्तेति पारचर पीपृहि मूढमद्य ।४१।
 को न्वत्र तेऽखिलगुरो भगवन्मयास उत्तारणेऽस्य भवसम्भवलोपहेतोः ।
 मूढेषु वै महदनुग्रह आर्तबन्धो किं तेन ते प्रियजनाननुसेवतां नः ।४२।
 नैवोद्विजे पर दुरत्ययवैतरण्यास्त्वद्वीर्यगायनमहामृतमग्नचित्तः ।
 शोचे ततो विमुखचेतस इन्द्रियार्थमायासुखाय भरमुद्वहतो विमूढान् ।४३।
 प्रायेण देव मुनयः स्वविमुक्तिकामा मौनं चरन्ति विजने न परार्थनिष्ठाः ।
 नैतान्विहाय कृपणान्विमुमुक्षु एको नान्यं त्वदस्य शरणं भ्रमतोऽनुपश्ये ।४४।

This mind (of mine), O Lord of Vaikuṇṭha, does not find sufficient delight in Your stories, vitiated as it is by sins, (nay,) grossly wicked, morbid due to lust and afflicted with joy and grief, fear and (the threefold) craving (for progeny, wealth and fame). With such a mind how can I, a wretched creature, contemplate on Your essential nature ? (39) Not fully gratified, the palate pulls me, O immortal Lord, in one direction (towards dainties); the generative organ drags me in another direction (towards sexual gratification); the tactile sense, the (empty) stomach and the sense of hearing pull me in other directions (viz., towards objects that are pleasant to touch, substantial food and a melodious sound or voice respectively); the olfactory sense drags me in a quite different direction (towards sweet-smelling flowers, scents and so on); while the eyes, which are (very) restless, and the faculties (organs) of action pull me in yet other directions (viz., towards things of beauty and the objects to be attained through the various organs of action). (All) these tear me (even) as a number of co-wives wrench a householder (each to her bedroom). (40) Perceiving (all) these foolish creatures fallen thus in consequence of their own (evil) actions into the Vaitaraṇī* of metempsychosis and exceedingly afraid of birth, death and suffering proceeding from one to another and making friendship with the bodies of their own people and enmity with the bodies of others, (pray,) protect them this very day (by ferrying them across), feeling compassion for them, O Lord (ever) staying on the other side (of that river) ! (41) Oh ! What exertion can there be, O Lord, the Teacher of all, in this work of lifting up (rescuing) these people, to You, who are responsible for the birth, existence (continuance) and dissolution of this universe? Indeed, it is on the ignorant that the grace of the exalted ought to descend, O Befriender of the afflicted ! Such grace will be superfluous to us who are busy serving Your beloved devotees (and will cross the ocean of metempsychosis by serving them). (42) I am not at all afraid, O Supreme, of the (aforesaid) Vaitaraṇī—which is (so) difficult to cross—My mind being immersed in the songs of Your prowess, which are like an extraordinary nectar. I lament (only) those deluded persons whose mind is turned away from such nectar and who are carrying (on their shoulders) the burden of maintaining their family etc., for the illusory delight proceeding from the objects of senses. (43) Ascetics desirous of their own liberation, O Lord, generally practise silent meditation in solitude. They are (however) not devoted to the interest of others. I (of course) do not long to be liberated alone, leaving behind these miserable creatures. (For) I find no haven of rest other than You for these people wandering in the forest of transmigration. (44)

* Vaitaraṇī is the name of a river marking the boundary of the realm of departed spirits, presided over by Yama (the god of retribution). It is described as rushing with great impetuosity, hot, fetid and filled with blood, hair and bones etc.

यन्मैथुनादि गृहमेधिसुखं हि तुच्छं कण्डूयनेन करयोरिव दुःखदुःखम् ।
 तृप्यन्ति नेह कृपणा बहुदुःखभाजः कण्डूतिवन्मनसिजं विषहेत धीरः । ४५ ।
 मौनव्रतश्रुततपोऽध्ययनस्वधर्मव्याख्यारहोजपसमाधय आपवर्ग्याः ।
 प्रायः परं पुरुष ते त्वजितेन्द्रियाणां वार्ता भवन्त्युत न वात्र तु दाम्भिकानाम् । ४६ ।
 रूपे इमे सदसती तव वेदसृष्टे बीजाङ्कुराविव न चान्यदरूपकस्य ।
 युक्ताः समक्षमुभयत्र विचिन्वते त्वां योगेन वह्निमिव दारुषु नान्यतः स्यात् । ४७ ।
 त्वं वायुरग्निरवनिर्वियदम्बुमात्राः प्राणेन्द्रियाणि हृदयं चिदनुग्रहश्च ।
 सर्वं त्वमेव सगुणो विगुणश्च भूमन् नान्यत् त्वदस्यपि मनोवचसा निरुक्तम् । ४८ ।
 नैते गुणा न गुणिनो महदादयो ये सर्वे मनःप्रभृतयः सहदेवमर्त्याः ।
 आद्यन्तवन्त उरुगाय विदन्ति हि त्वामेवं विमृश्य सुधियो विरमन्ति शब्दात् । ४९ ।
 तत् तेऽर्हन्तम नमःस्तुतिकर्मपूजाः कर्म स्मृतिश्चरणयोः श्रवणं कथायाम् ।
 संसेवया त्वयि विनेति षडङ्गया किं भक्तिं जनः परमहंसगतौ लभेत । ५० ।

That which goes by the name of pleasures enjoyed by a householder, such as copulation, is trivial; for it results in suffering after suffering akin to that caused by the scratching of one (itching) hand with another. (But) though undergoing a lot of trouble, the wretched people (given up to sensual gratification) do not feel sated with these pleasures. (Only) some wise man is able (by Your grace) to curb passion like the itching sensation. (45) A vow of silence, fasting, the hearing of scriptures, asceticism, the study of sacred books, discharging one's sacred obligations, exposition of the scriptures, living in seclusion, the muttering of prayers and concentration of mind, conducive as they are to final beatitude, O Inner Controller, generally only prove to be the means of livelihood of those who have not yet been able to conquer their senses (and are prone to sell these for base gain in the shape of money and sensuous pleasures); whereas they may or may not be so in the case of hypocrites (whose pietism may or may not succeed). (46) Like the seed and the sprout (following in unbroken succession), the Unmanifest (primordial Matter) and the manifest (the visible universe)—these are (but) Your two forms (symbols) made known by the Vedas; (for there is nothing other than You, who are devoid of (a material) form. Through Yoga (the process of Devotion) men who have controlled their mind are directly able to perceive You in both these (forms), as fire in pieces of wood (through attrition), which is not possible by any other means. (47) You are the air, fire, earth, ether and water, the (five) objects of senses (viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell), the (five) vital airs (viz., Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna and Samāna), the (ten) Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action), the mind, the intellect and the ego (or, according to another interpretation, the deities presiding over the Indriyas and the mind). That which is qualified (gross or material) and that which is unqualified (subtle or transcendental)—everything is You and You alone, O infinite One ! Whatever is revealed by mind or speech is no other than You. (48) Neither these Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti, viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) nor the deities who preside over the (three) Guṇas (viz., Viṣṇu, Brahmā and Śiva) nor the categories commencing from Mahat-tattva

(and ending with the Indriyas, that is to say, Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence, Ahaṅkāra or the ego, the five subtle and the five gross elements and the ten Indriyas), nor the mind etc. (viz., the mind, intellect and reason), nor (the various) living beings including the gods and human beings, all of whom have a beginning and an end (too), are able to know You in truth, O much-praised One ! Thinking thus, men of good sense desist* from the study of the Vedas and other scriptures (and devote themselves exclusively to meditation). (49) Therefore, can a man develop devotion to You, the goal of ascetics of the highest order; except through whole-hearted service to You, O most worshipful One—service consisting of (the following) six limbs, viz., salutation, glorification, worship in the form of offering one's actions to You, waiting on You, concentrating one's mind on Your feet and listening to Your stories? (50)

नारद उवाच

एतावद्वर्णितगुणो भक्त्या भक्तेन निर्गुणः । प्रह्लादं प्रणतं प्रीतो यतमन्युरभाषत । ५१ ।

Nārada resumed : The Lord, who is beyond the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and whose so many (transcendental) virtues were celebrated with reverence by His devotee (Prahāda), and who had not only controlled His anger but was (highly) pleased (with the latter), spoke (as follows) to Prahāda, who was bent low (with respect). (51)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

प्रह्लाद भद्र भद्रं ते प्रीतोऽहं तेऽसुरोत्तम । वरं वृणीष्वभिमतं कामपूरोऽस्म्यहं नृणाम् । ५२ ।
मामप्रीणत आयुष्मन्दर्शनं दुर्लभं हि मे । दृष्ट्वा मां न पुनर्जन्तुरात्मानं तमुमर्हति । ५३ ।
प्रीणन्ति ह्यथ मां धीराः सर्वभावेन साधवः । श्रेयस्कामा महाभागाः सर्वासामाशिषां पतिम् । ५४ ।
एवं प्रलोभ्यमानोऽपि वरैर्लोकप्रलोभनैः । एकान्तित्वाद् भगवति नैच्छत् तानसुरोत्तमः । ५५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादचरिते भगवत्स्तवो नाम नवमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

The Lord said : O noble Prahāda, may good betide you ! I am pleased with you, O chief of the demons ! Ask any boon liked by you; I am wont to gratify the desires of men. (52) To him who is unable to propitiate Me, O long-lived one, I am difficult of perception. (And) having beheld Me (once), a living being has no longer any reason to bewail itself (to grieve). (53) It is for this reason alone that enlightened and pious souls, who are highly fortunate and desirous of blessedness (endeavour to) propitiate Me, the Lord (bestower) of all boons, with all their being. (54) Even on being thus tempted with boons that are so alluring to the world, Prahāda (the best of the Asuras) did not hanker after them, exclusively devoted as he was to the Lord. (55)

Thus ends the ninth discourse entitled "A Eulogy of the Lord", forming part of the story of Prahāda, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* This is borne out by the Lord Himself when He says in the Bhagavadgītā:—

यदा ते मोहकलिलं बुद्धिर्व्यतितरिष्यति । तदा गन्तासि निर्वेदं श्रोतव्यस्य श्रुतस्य च ॥ (II. 52)

"When your mind will have fully crossed the mire of delusion, you will then grow indifferent to what has been heard and what is yet to be heard about this world and the next."

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः

Discourse X

(The story of) the conquest of Tripura

नारद उवाच

भक्तियोगस्य तत् सर्वमन्तरायतयार्भकः । मन्यमानो हृषीकेशं स्मयमान उवाच ह । १ ।

Nārada began again : Regarding all that (asking boons and so on) as an impediment to the practice of Devotion, the infant (Prahṛāda) smilingly addressed Lord Nṛsiṃha (the Ruler of the senses) as follows. (1)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

मा मां प्रलोभयोत्पत्त्याऽऽसक्तं कामेषु तैर्वरैः । तत्सङ्गभीतो निर्विण्णो मुमुक्षुस्त्वामुपाश्रितः । २ ।
भृत्यलक्षणजिज्ञासुर्भक्तं कामेष्वचोदयत् । भवान् संसारबीजेषु हृदयग्रन्थिषु प्रभो । ३ ।
नान्यथा तेऽखिलगुरो घटेत करुणात्मनः । यस्त आशिष आशास्ते न स भृत्यः स वै वणिक् । ४ ।
आशासानो न वै भृत्यः स्वामिन्याशिष आत्मनः । न स्वामी भृत्यतः स्वाम्यमिच्छन् यो राति चाशिषः । ५ ।
अहं त्वकामस्त्वद्धक्तस्त्वं च स्वाम्यनपाश्रयः । नान्यथेहावयोरथो राजसेवकयोरिव । ६ ।
यदि रासीश मे कामान् वरांस्त्वं वरदर्षभ । कामानां हृद्यसंगोहं भवतस्तु वृणे वरम् । ७ ।
इन्द्रियाणि मनः प्राण आत्मा धर्मो धृतिर्मतिः । ह्रीः श्रीस्तेजः स्मृतिः सत्यं यस्य नश्यन्ति जन्मना । ८ ।
विमुञ्चति यदा कामान्मानवो मनसि स्थितान् । तर्ह्येव पुण्डरीकाक्ष भगवत्त्वाय कल्पते । ९ ।
नमो भगवते तुभ्यं पुरुषाय महात्मने । हरयेऽद्भुतसिंहाय ब्रह्मणे परमात्मने । १० ।

Prahṛāda said : Pray, do not tempt me, attached as I am to the pleasures of sense by birth, with boons in the form of those (very) pleasures. Afraid of attachment to them and fed up with them, I have approached You for protection, anxious to secure freedom (from the shackles of birth and death). (2) Eager to ascertain (make known to the world) the characteristics of a (true) devotee, You directed me to the pleasures of sense, the seeds of transmigration, serving as so many knots to bind the heart, O Lord ! (3) Otherwise such a thing would not be possible for You, who are (so) kind-hearted, O Preceptor of the universe! He who seeks (worldly) blessings from You is no servant (of Yours). He is only a business man. (4) One desiring blessings for oneself from a master is no servant in the true sense of the word. And (likewise) he is no master, who grants (such) gifts expecting the recognition of his mastership from his servant. (5) I, however, am Your devotee without any craving; while You are my master having no axe to grind. Unlike the interests of a king and his servant here, our interest (in each other) is not governed by any other (selfish) motive. (6) If You (are inclined to) bestow on me, O Lord, boons sought after by me, O Chief of the bestowers of boons, I solicit from You this boon alone that no more desires may (ever) sprout in my heart. (7) With the (very) appearance of desire the Indriyas (the senses of perception as well as the organs of action), the mind, vital energy, the body, righteousness, firmness, understanding, modesty, wealth, glory, memory and truthfulness disappear. (8) (On the other hand,) when a man gets rid of the desires rooted in the heart, then alone, O lotus-eyed One, he becomes qualified for (attaining) divine glory.* (9) Hail to You, the almighty and high-souled Śrī Hari, the Inner Controller, the Absolute, the Supreme Spirit, appearing in the form of an extraordinary lion ! (10)

* This is corroborated by the following Śruti text:—

नृसिंह उवाच

नैकान्तिनो मे मयि जात्विहाशिष आशासतेऽमुत्र च ये भवद्विधाः ।
 अथापि मन्वन्तरमेतदत्र दैत्येश्वराणामनुभुङ्क्ष्व भोगान् । ११ ।
 कथा मदीया जुषमाणः प्रियास्त्वमावेश्य मामात्मनि सन्तमेकम् ।
 सर्वेषु भूतेष्वधियज्ञमीशं यजस्व योगेन च कर्म हिन्वन् । १२ ।
 भोगेन पुण्यं कुशलेन पापं कलेवरं कालजवेन हित्वा ।
 कीर्तिं विशुद्धां सुरलोकगीतां विताय मामेष्यसि मुक्तबन्धः । १३ ।

य एतत् कीर्तयेन्मह्यं त्वया गीतमिदं नरः । त्वां च मां च स्मरन्काले कर्मबन्धात् प्रमुच्यते । १४ ।

Lord Nṛsiṃha replied : Those like you, who are exclusively devoted to Me, never seek (even) from Me benefits in this or the next world. Nevertheless enjoy here during (the whole of) this Manvantara continuously the luxuries of the lords of the Daityas. (11) Taking (great) pleasure in My delightful stories and enthroning in Your heart Me, the one Lord presiding over sacrifices and (equally) present in all creatures, worship you Me, renouncing (all) action by offering it to Me. (12) Exhausting (your) merit by means of enjoyment (of pleasures) and sin by meritorious actions and casting off (your) body in course of time and spreading (in this world) an unsullied fame which will be sung (even) in the celestial regions, you will (eventually) attain to Me, all your bonds being loosened. (13) A man who recites this hymn addressed to Me by you, thinking of you and Me as well as of this narrative will in course of time be completely freed from the bondage of actions. (14)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

वरं वरय एतत् ते वरदेशान्महेश्वर । यदनिन्दत् पिता मे त्वामविद्वांस्तेज ऐश्वरम् । १५ ।
 विद्वांमर्षाशयः साक्षात् सर्वलोकगुरुं प्रभुम् । भ्रातृहेति मृषादृष्टिस्त्वद्भक्ते मयि चाघवान् । १६ ।
 तस्मात् पिता मे पूयेत दुरन्ताद् दुस्तरादघात् । पूतस्तेऽपाङ्गसंदृष्टदा कृपणवत्सल । १७ ।

Prahrāda submitted : I solicit this boon from You, the Ruler of (all) bestowers of boons, O supreme Lord, that inasmuch as my father, who was ignorant of Your divine glory and whose heart was stung with indignation, spoke ill of You—who are no other than the almighty Lord, the Preceptor of the whole universe—labouring under the false notion that You had been the slayer of his brother (Hiraṇyākṣa), and (further) bore ill-will to me, a devotee of Yours, he, my father, may (kindly) be absolved from that sin, which is so difficult to get rid of and so difficult to cross over, although (I am sure) he was purged (of it) the moment he was compassionately regarded with the outer corner of Your eye, O lover of the afflicted ! (15—17)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

त्रिःसप्तभिः पिता पूतः पितृभिः सह तेऽनघ । यत् साधोऽस्य गृहे जातो भवान्वै कुलपावनः । १८ ।
 यत्र यत्र च मद्भक्ताः प्रशान्ताः समदर्शिनः । साधवः समुदाचारास्ते पूयन्त्यपि कीकटाः । १९ ।

यदा सर्वे प्रमुच्यन्ते कामा येऽस्य हृदि त्रिताः । अथ मर्त्योऽमृतो भवत्यत्र ब्रह्म समश्नुते ॥

(Kāthopaniṣad II. iii. 14)

"When all the desires rooted in one's heart are got rid of, a mortal forthwith becomes immortal and attains oneness with Brahma (the Absolute) in this (very) life."

सर्वात्मना न हिंसन्ति भूतग्रामेषु किञ्चन । उच्चावचेषु दैत्येन्द्र मद्भावेन गतस्पृहाः । २० ।
भवन्ति पुरुषा लोके मद्भक्तास्त्वामनुव्रताः । भवान्मे खलु भक्तानां सर्वेषां प्रतिरूपधृक् । २१ ।
कुरु त्वं प्रेतकार्याणि पितुः पूतस्य सर्वशः । मदङ्गस्पर्शनेनाङ्ग लोकान्यास्यति सुप्रजाः । २२ ।
पित्र्यं च स्थानमातिष्ठ यथोक्तं ब्रह्मवादिभिः । मय्यावेश्य मनस्तात कुरु कर्माणि मत्परः । २३ ।

The Lord said : Your father, O sinless one, was purified along with (as many as) twenty-one past generations* by the very fact that you, the sanctifier of your race, were born in his house, O pious soul ! (18) Wherever there are My devotees, perfectly tranquil, pious and extremely noble in character, viewing all with the same eye, (all) those tracts of land get hallowed, (the desecrated land of) Kikaṭa (and other such territories including their inhabitants) not excepted. (19) Those whose hankering has (totally) disappeared through devotion to Me, O ruler of the Daityas, persecute none among the multitudes of living beings, high and low, by any means (whatsoever). (20) (Even) persons following your way of life in this world will become My devotees. Indeed you will serve as a model for all My devotees. (21) (Now) perform you the obsequies with respect to your father (Hiraṇyakaśipu), though he has been purified in every way by the touch of My Person, O beloved one. Having been blessed with a noble son (like you), he will attain to the higher worlds. (22) (Also) occupy the throne of your father (as the ruler of the Daityas) and, fixing your mind on Me, dear son, and (completely) devoted to Me, perform your duties as directed by the exponents of the Vedas. (23)

नारद उवाच

प्रह्लादोऽपि तथा चक्रे पितुर्यत्साम्परायिकम् । यथाऽऽह भगवान् राजन्नभिषिक्तो द्विजोत्तमैः । २४ ।
प्रसादसुमुखं दृष्ट्वा ब्रह्मा नरहरिं हरिम् । स्तुत्वा वाग्भिः पवित्राभिः प्राह देवादिभिर्युतः । २५ ।

Nārada continued : Prahrāda too did what was due to his (deceased) father by way of funeral rites in the same way as the Lord had commanded him (to do), O king (Yudhiṣṭhira)! He was (then) crowned (as king) by the foremost of the Brāhmaṇas. (24) Finding Śrī Hari, who was disguised as a man-lion, wearing a serene look as a token of grace, Brahmā, who was surrounded by gods and others, (first) extolled Him by means of sacred hymns and (then) submitted (as follows). (25)

ब्रह्मवाच

देवदेवाखिलाध्यक्ष भूतभावन पूर्वज । दिष्ट्या ते निहतः पापो लोकसन्तापनोऽसुरः । २६ ।
योऽसौ लब्धवारो मत्तो न वध्यो मम सृष्टिभिः । तपोयोगबलोन्नद्धः समस्तनिगमानहन् । २७ ।
दिष्ट्यास्य तनयः साधुर्महाभागवतोऽर्भकः । त्वया विमोचितो मृत्योर्दिष्ट्या त्वां समितोऽधुना । २८ ।
एतद् वपुस्ते भगवन् ध्यायतः प्रयतात्मनः । सर्वतो गोप्त्र संत्रासान्मृत्योरपि जिघांसतः । २९ ।

Brahmā said : O god of gods, supreme Ruler of all, Protector of (all) created beings, my Father ! fortunately (for us) the wicked demon (Hiranyakaśipu), the tormentor of the world, has been slain by You. (26) He is the same fellow who having secured a boon from me (to this effect) was not to be killed by living beings of my creation and, proud of his strength derived from austerities and Yoga (concentration of mind), stamped out all virtues inculcated by the Vedas. (27) Luckily enough his son, a pious soul and an eminent devotee, though (yet) an infant, has been delivered by You from (the jaws of) death and it is good that he has now

* Sprung from the loins of the sage Kaśyapa, son of Marīci, a mind-born son of Brahmā (the creator), Hiranyakaśipu was in the third generation from Brahmā. By alleging that he was purified along with twenty-one past generations, the Lord, therefore, evidently refers to the twenty-one generations of his parentage in his previous incarnation (in the preceding Kalpa).

duly attained to You. (28) This (divine) form of Yours, O Lord, is capable of protecting from all dangers, nay, even from Death bent on destruction, anyone who contemplates on It and whose mind is completely subdued. (29)

नृसिंह उवाच

मैवं वरोऽसुराणां ते प्रदेयः पद्मसम्भव । वरः कूरनिसर्गाणामहीनाममृतं यथा । ३० ।

Lord Nṛsiṃha said : No more boon of this kind ought to be bestowed by you on the Asuras, O Brahmā (sprung from a lotus). A boon conferred on those who are cruel by nature proves harmful as milk given to serpents. (30)

नारद उवाच

इत्युक्त्वा भगवान् राजस्तत्रैवान्तर्दधे हरिः । अदृश्यः सर्वभूतानां पूजितः परमेष्ठिनः । ३१ ।

ततः सम्पूज्य शिरसा ववन्दे परमेष्ठिनम् । भवं प्रजापतीन्देवान्प्रह्लादो भगवत्कलाः । ३२ ।

ततः काव्यादिभिः सार्धं मुनिभिः कमलासनः । दैत्यानां दानवानां च प्रह्लादमकरोत् पतिम् । ३३ ।

प्रतिनन्द्य ततो देवाः प्रयुज्य परमाशिषः । स्वधामानि ययू राजन्ब्रह्माद्याः प्रतिपूजिताः । ३४ ।

Nārada went on : Having spoken thus, O Yudhiṣṭhira, and worshipped by Brahmā (the highest god), Lord Śrī Hari, who cannot (ordinarily) be seen by all created beings disappeared on that very spot. (31) Then, duly worshipping Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), the lords of creation (Marici and others) and the gods (Indra and others), who are (so many) rays (as it were) of the Lord, Prahārāda made obeisance (to them) with his head (bent low). (32) After that, along with the sages headed by Kāvya (the sage Śukra, the preceptor of the demon race), Brahmā (who has his seat on a lotus) installed Prahārāda as the ruler of the Daityas and the Dānavas. (33) Then, felicitating Prahārāda and invoking the choicest blessings (on him), and honoured (by him) in return, the gods, headed by Brahmā, returned to their (respective) abodes, O king (Yudhiṣṭhira) ! (34)

एवं तौ पार्षदौ त्रिष्णोः पुत्रत्वं प्रापितौ दितेः । हृदि स्थितेन हरिणा वैरभावेन तौ हतौ । ३५ ।

पुनश्च विप्रशापेन राक्षसौ तौ बभूवतुः । कुम्भकर्णदशग्रीवौ हतौ तौ रामविक्रमैः । ३६ ।

शयानौ युधि निर्भिन्नहृदयौ रामसायकैः । तच्चित्तौ जहदुर्देहं यथा प्राक्तनजन्मनि । ३७ ।

ताविहाथ पुनर्जातौ शिशुपालकरूपजौ । हरौ वैरानुबन्धेन पश्यतस्ते समीयतुः । ३८ ।

एनः पूर्वकृतं यत् तद् राजानः कृष्णवैरिणः । जहृस्त्वन्ते तदात्मानः कीटः पेशस्कृतो यथा । ३९ ।

यथा यथा भगवतो भक्त्या परमयाभिदा । नृपाश्चैद्यादयः सात्यं हरेस्तच्चिन्तया ययुः । ४० ।

In this way those two attendants of Lord Viṣṇu (viz., Jaya and Vijaya) were reduced to the state of Daityas (sons of Diti) under the imprecation of the Brāhmaṇas (the sages Sanaka and his three brothers). (And) due to their hostile feeling they were slain by Śrī Hari, present in their heart. Again they appeared as a pair of Rākṣasas (ogres), Kumbhakarna (one having ears as big as jars) and Rāvaṇa (a ten-headed monster). They were disposed of by the prowess of Śrī Rāma. (35-36) Lying on the battle-field with their heart torn open by the arrows of Śrī Rāma, they shed their body as in their previous birth, their mind fixed on Him. (37) Further, reborn as Śiśupāla and Dantavakra (the son of Karuṣa) in this life, the two got merged in Śrī Hari by virtue of their deep-rooted enmity as you have seen (for yourself). (38) Becoming one with Him at the last moment (by fixing their mind on Him), even as a caterpillar gets transformed into a wasp through contemplation on the wasp, princes inimical to Śrī Kṛṣṇa got rid (through such meditation) of whatever sin had been committed (by them) before (their death). (39) Even as devotees attained similarity of form with the Lord (by contemplating on Him) through supreme Devotion characterized by a feeling of identity (with Him), so did kings such as Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi) attain similarity of form with Śrī Hari through contemplation on Him (as their enemy). (40)

आख्यातं सर्वमेतत् ते यन्मां त्वं परिपृष्टवान् । दमघोषसुतादीनां हरेः सात्त्व्यमपि द्विषाम् । ४१ ।

एषा ब्रह्मण्यदेवस्य कृष्णस्य च महात्मनः । अवतारकथा पुण्या वधो यत्रादिदैत्ययोः । ४२ ।

प्रह्लादस्यानुचरितं महाभागवतस्य च । भक्तिर्ज्ञानं विरक्तिश्च याथात्म्यं चास्य वै हरेः । ४३ ।

सर्गस्थित्यप्येषस्य गुणकर्मानुवर्णनम् । परावरेषां स्थानानां कालेन व्यत्ययो महान् । ४४ ।

धर्मो भागवतानां च भगवान्येन गम्यते । आख्यानेऽस्मिन्समाप्नातमाध्यात्मिकमशेषतः । ४५ ।

य एतत् पुण्यमाख्यानं विष्णोर्वीर्योपबृंहितम् । कीर्तयेच्छ्रद्धया श्रुत्वा कर्मपाशैर्विमुच्यते । ४६ ।

एतद् य आदिपुरुषस्य मृगेन्द्रलीलां दैत्येन्द्रयूथपवधं प्रयतः पठेत् ।

दैत्यात्मजस्य च सतां प्रवरस्य पुण्यं श्रुत्वानुभावमकुतोभयमेति लोकम् । ४७ ।

All that you asked me in detail has (thus) been related to you, namely, the attainment as aforesaid of similarity of form with Śrī Hari by kings such as Śiśupāla (the son of Damaghoṣa), even though His enemies; the sacred story, just told by me, of the descent (in the form of a man-lion) of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme person, a votary of the Brāhmaṇas, in which has been described the death of the two most ancient Daityas (Hiraṇyākṣa and Hiraṇyakaśipu); the narrative of Prahrāda, a great devotee of the Lord, as well as (an account of) his Devotion, spiritual enlightenment and dispassion and as a matter of fact the true nature of Śrī Hari, who is responsible for the creation, existence and dissolution of the universe; an account of His excellences and exploits as well as of the great change of abodes, in course of time, of the higher and lower orders of creation (such as the gods and demons and so on), and the cult of the Bhāgavatas (votaries of the Lord), by means of which the Lord is (easily and speedily) reached. (Further) in this chronicle has been discussed at length in all (its) bearings the topic of the Spirit. (41—45) Whoever, on hearing with reverence this sacred narrative, enriched with an account of the prowess of Lord Viṣṇu, recites it (to others) is completely freed from the bonds of Karma. (46) (And) whosoever reads with a concentrated mind this story of the pastime of Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person) figuring as a lion, (mainly) consisting of the destruction of Hiraṇyakaśipu (the ruler of the Daityas), who resembled a mighty elephant (the leader of a herd of elephants), after hearing of the hallowed glory of Prahrāda (the son of Hiraṇyakaśipu), the foremost of virtuous souls, attains to the realm (of Lord Viṣṇu) where there is no fear from any quarter. (47)

यूयं नृलोके वत भूरिभागा लोकं पुनाना मुनयोऽभियन्ति ।

येषां गृहानावसतीति साक्षाद् गूढं परं ब्रह्म मनुष्यलिङ्गम् । ४८ ।

स वा अयं ब्रह्म महद्विमृग्यकैवल्यनिर्वाणसुखानुभूतिः ।

प्रियः सुहृद् वः खलु मातुलेय आत्मारहणीयो विधिकृद् गुरुश्च । ४९ ।

न यस्य साक्षाद् भवपद्मजादिभी रूपं धिया वस्तुतयोपवर्णितम् ।

मौनेन भक्त्योपशमेन पूजितः प्रसीदतामेष स सात्वतां पतिः । ५० ।

स एष भगवान्राजन्व्यतनोद् विहृतं यशः । पुरा रुद्रस्य देवस्य मयेनानन्तमायिना । ५१ ।

Oh, exceedingly fortunate (far more fortunate than Prahrāda) on earth (this world of human beings) are you (the Pāṇḍavas and the Yadus), to whose residences flock from all quarters sages sanctifying the (whole) world, inasmuch as the supreme Brahma bodily stays there disguised in the form of a human being. (48) This very Śrī Kṛṣṇa, your well-known beloved friend and cousin (son of your maternal uncle, Vasudeva), (nay,) your very self (body), worthy of your adoration, obedient servant (ambassador and charioteer) and preceptor (all in one), is Brahma, the realization of absolute (unconditioned) supreme Bliss diligently sought after (even) by the great. (49) May this Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the well-known Protector of devotees, be gracious to us—Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose essential character has not (so far) been depicted in its true colours with the help of reason (even) by Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), Brahmā (the lotus-born) and others, and who is adored (by us) through silent meditation and enquiry, Devotion and control of one's senses and so on (unlike you, who are on such intimate terms with Him and on whom He lavishes His affection, a privilege which even Prahrāda never enjoyed). (50) He is that very Lord, who spread (revived) of yore, O king, the renown of Lord Rudra, which had been marred by (the demon) Maya, who possessed an endless store of conjuring tricks. (51)

राजोवाच

कस्मिन् कर्मणि देवस्य मयोऽहञ्जगदीशितुः । यथा चोपचिता कीर्तिः कृष्णोनानेन कथ्यताम् । ५२ ।

The king (Yudhiṣṭhira) submitted : (Pray) relate (to me) in what (particular) achievement Maya marred the glory of Lord Śiva (the Ruler of the universe) and the way in which it was enhanced by yonder Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (52)

नारद उवाच

निर्जिता असुरा देवैर्युध्यनेनोपबृंहितैः । मायिनां परमाचार्यं मयं शरणायायुः । ५३ ।
स निर्माय पुरस्तिष्ठो हैमिरौप्यायसीर्विभुः । दुर्लक्ष्यापायसंयोगा दुर्वितर्क्यपरिच्छदाः । ५४ ।
ताभिस्तेऽसुरसेनान्यो लोकांस्त्रीन् सेश्वरान् नृप । स्मरन्तो नाशयाञ्चक्रुः पूर्ववैरमलक्षिताः । ५५ ।
ततस्ते सेश्वरा लोका उपासाद्येश्वरं विभो । त्राहि नस्तावकान्देव विनष्टांस्त्रिपुरालयैः । ५६ ।

Nārada replied : Utterly defeated in battle (once) by the gods, fostered by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Asuras sought as their protector (the demon) Maya, the supreme teacher of those skilled in conjuring tricks. (53) Having built three cities (flying fortresses) of gold, silver and steel (respectively)—whose coming and going could not be easily detected and which were furnished with articles too numerous to conceive—the powerful demon handed them over to the Asura chiefs. (54) Remembering their old enmity (with the gods), the aforesaid Asura generals set about devastating by means of these the three worlds with their rulers, O Yudhiṣṭhira, themselves remaining unperceived. (55) Approaching Lord Śiva, the denizens of these worlds with their rulers then prayed to Him: "O Lord, protect us, Your own people, (well-nigh) destroyed by the demons ensconced in the three (flying) cities." (56)

अथानुगृह्य भगवान्मा भैष्टेति सुरान्विभुः । शरं धनुषि सन्धाय पुरेष्वस्त्रं व्यमुञ्चत । ५७ ।
ततोऽग्निवर्णा इषव उत्पेतुः सूर्यमण्डलात् । यथा मयूखसंदोहा नादृश्यन्त पुरो यतः । ५८ ।
तैः स्पृष्टा व्यसवः सर्वे निपेतुः स्म पुरौकसः । तानानीय महायोगी मयः कूपरसेऽक्षिपत् । ५९ ।
सिद्धामृतरसस्पृष्टा वज्रसारा महौजसः । उत्तस्थुर्मैघदलना वैद्युता इव वह्नयः । ६० ।

Reassuring the gods in the words "Do not be afraid !" the almighty Lord then fitted to His bow an arrow surcharged with mystic power and discharged it at the three cities. (57) From that arrow, like streams of rays from the orb of the sun, issued forth (many more) fiery shafts, screened by which the cities could no longer be seen. (58) Struck by these, all the occupants of the cities fell down dead. Maya, a great adept in conjuring tricks, fetched and put them into the nectar-like water of a well (built by himself within the cities). (59) Touched by that nectar-like fluid endowed with the property of restoring the dead to life, they emerged with an adamant frame and possessed of extraordinary strength like fires in the form of lightning tearing the clouds. (60)

विलोक्य भगवत्कल्पं विमनस्कं वृषध्वजम् । तदायं भगवान्विष्णुस्तत्रोपायमकल्पयत् । ६१ ।
 वत्स आसीत्तदा ब्रह्मा स्वयं विष्णुरयं हि गौः । प्रविश्य त्रिपुरं काले रसकूपामृतं पपौ । ६२ ।
 तेऽसुरा ह्यपि पश्यन्तो न न्यषेधन्विमोहिताः । तद् विज्ञाय महायोगी रसपालानिदं जगौ । ६३ ।
 स्वयं विशोकः शोकार्तान्स्मरन्दैवगतिं च ताम् । देवोऽसुरो नरोऽन्यो वा नेश्वरोऽस्तीह कश्चन । ६४ ।
 आत्मनोऽन्यस्य वा दिष्टं दैवेनापोहितुं द्वयोः । अथासौ शक्तिभिः स्वाभिः शम्भोः प्राधानिकं व्यधात् । ६५ ।
 धर्मज्ञानविरक्त्युद्धितपोविद्याक्रियादिभिः । रथं सूतं ध्वजं वाहान्यनुर्वर्म शरादि यत् । ६६ ।
 सन्नद्धो रथमास्थाय शरं धनुरुपाददे । शरं धनुषि सन्धाय मुहूर्तेऽभिजितीश्वरः । ६७ ।
 ददाह तेन दुर्भेदा हरोऽथ त्रिपुरो नृप । दिवि दुन्दुभयो नेदुर्विमानशतकुलाः । ६८ ।
 देवर्षिपितृसिद्धेशा जयेति कुसुमोत्करैः । अवाकिरङ्गगुह्यं ननृत्तुश्चाप्सरोगणाः । ६९ ।
 एवं दग्ध्वा पुरस्त्रिणो भगवान्पुरहा नृप । ब्रह्मादिभिः स्तूयमानः स्वधाम प्रत्यपद्यत । ७० ।

एवंविधान्यस्य हरेः स्वमायया विडम्बमानस्य नृलोकमात्मनः ।

वीर्याणि गीतान्यृषिभिर्जगद्गुरोर्लोकान् पुनानान्यपरं वदामि किम् । ७१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे युधिष्ठिरनारदसंवादे त्रिपुरविजयो नाम दशमोऽध्यायः । १० ।

Finding Lord Śiva (who bears the device of a bull on His banner) depressed in spirits because of His will having been crossed, the aforesaid Lord Viṣṇu (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) then contrived a plan for drying up the immortalizing fluid. (61) On that occasion Brahmā (the creator) took the form of a calf, while the aforesaid Viṣṇu Himself actually assumed the semblance of a cow and, entering the three cities at midday, drank off the immortalizing fluid of that well of nectar. (62) Though watching this, the demons in charge of the well did not forbid them, greatly bewildered as they were (by the deluding potency of the Lord). Coming to know of this, and reflecting on the course of destiny working in that (miraculous) way, the demon Maya (a past master in conjuring tricks), himself destitute of grief, addressed the following (words) to the demons guarding the fluid, who were stricken with grief :—"No one in this world—be he a god, demon, human being or anyone else—is capable of setting aside what has been ordained by fate with regard to oneself or another or both." After that, by means of His own (divine) potencies in the form of Righteousness, Wisdom, Dispassion, Affluence, Asceticism, Learning, Activity and so on, He (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) created the requisites for war for the use of Lord Śiva (the Source of blessedness), viz., a chariot, a charioteer, an ensign, horses, a bow, armour, arrows etc. (respectively). (63—66) Clad in armour and mounting the chariot, the almighty Lord (Śiva) then took up the bow and an arrow; and, fitting the arrow to the bow during the Muhūrta known as Abhijit, Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) burnt with it (all) the three cities, which were (so) difficult to penetrate, O Yudhiṣṭhira ! Drums began to sound in heaven; while gods, Ṛṣis (seers), manes and the lords of Siddhas (a class of demigods) endowed with mystic powers from their very birth—with their hundreds of aerial cars crowded together (in the heavens)—showered heaps of flowers on the Lord, crying "May You be victorious !" And hosts of Apsarās (celestial nymphs) sang and danced, full of joy. (67—69) Having burnt the three cities in this way, O king, Lord Śiva (who henceforward became known as the Destroyer of the three cities) returned to His abode (Mount Kailāsa), being glorified by Brahmā and others. (70) There are similar (other) exploits—the accounts of which purify (all) the three worlds—celebrated by seers, of the aforesaid Śrī Hari, the Preceptor of the universe, who by His own deluding potency imitates (the ways of) His human world. What else shall I say (to you)? (71)

Thus ends the tenth discourse entitled "The (story of) the conquest of the three cities", forming part of the dialogue between Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira and the sage Nārada, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XI

An inquiry into right conduct :

श्रीशुक उवाच

श्रुत्वेहितं साधुसभासभाजितं महत्तमाग्रण्य उरुक्रमात्मनः ।
युधिष्ठिरो दैत्यपतेर्मुदा युतः पप्रच्छ भूयस्तनयं स्वयम्भुवः । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having heard the narrative—celebrated (even) by assemblies of pious souls—of Prahāda (the ruler of the Daityas), the leader of most exalted souls, whose mind was fixed on the almighty Lord Viṣṇu, Yudhiṣṭhira, full of joy, further inquired (as follows) of Nārada (son of Brahmā, the self-born). (1)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

भगवज्ज्ञेयुमिच्छामि नृणां धर्मं सनातनम् । वर्णाश्रमाचारयुतं यत् पुमान्विन्दते परम् । २ ।
भवान्नजापतेः साक्षादात्मजः परमेष्ठिनः । सुतानां सम्मतो ब्रह्मन्तपोयोगसमाधिभिः । ३ ।
नारायणपरा विप्रा धर्मं गुह्यं परं विदुः । करुणाः साधवः शान्तास्त्वद्विधा न तथापरे । ४ ।

Yudhiṣṭhira said : O divine personage, I am anxious to hear (from you) about the eternal Dharma (course of right conduct) prescribed for men, along with the ethical code governing the (four) Varnas (or grades of society) and Āśramas (stages in life), by following which a human being (eventually) reaches the Supreme (either through devotion or spiritual enlightenment). (2) You are a (mind-born) son of no other than Brahmā (the lord of created beings), the highest deity—(nay) the most beloved of (all) his sons, O holy one, by virtue of (your) asceticism, concentration of mind and deep meditation. (Hence he must have revealed to you the secret of Dharma, of which he is the first and foremost exponent). (3) (Only) kind-hearted, pious and tranquil Brāhmaṇas like you, devoted to Lord Nārāyaṇa, know the highest (conception of) virtue, which is a (guarded) secret; not so others (the so-called law-givers, the compilers of the various Smṛtis). (4)

नारद उवाच

नत्वा भगवतेऽजाय लोकानां धर्महेतवे । वक्ष्ये सनातनं धर्मं नारायणमुखाद्भुतम् । ५ ।
योऽवतीर्यात्मनोऽंशेन दाक्षायण्यां तु धर्मतः । लोकानां स्वस्तयेऽध्यास्ते तपो बदरिकाश्रमे । ६ ।
धर्ममूलं हि भगवान्सर्ववेदमयो हरिः । स्मृतं च तद्विदां राजन्येन चात्मा प्रसीदति । ७ ।

Nārada resumed : Bowing (my head) to gain the favour of the birthless Lord (Nārāyaṇa), the Promoter of righteousness among the people, I shall expound the eternal Law as learnt from the lips of (the divine sage) Nārāyaṇa, who, taking His descent along with His part manifestation (the sage Nara) from Dharma (the god of piety) through (his wife) Mūrti (daughter of Dakṣa) is, as a matter of fact, practising austerities (even to this day) in His hermitage at Badrīnātha for the good of the people. (5-6) The source of and the authority on

Dharma (righteousness) really are Lord Śrī Hari, the embodiment of all the (four) Vedas, the body of Codes handed down by those well-versed in the Vedas, O Yudhiṣṭhira, and the feeling of self-satisfaction (that by which the mind derives real satisfaction) as well as the conduct (example) of the virtuous*. (7)

सत्यं दया तपः शौचं तितिक्षेक्षा शमो दमः । अहिंसा ब्रह्मचर्यं च त्यागः स्वाध्याय आर्जवम् । ८ ।

सन्तोषः समदृक् सेवा ग्राम्येहोपरमः शनैः । नृणां विपर्ययेहेक्षा मौनमात्मविमर्शनम् । ९ ।

अन्नाद्यादेः संविभागो भूतेभ्यश्च यथार्हतः । तेष्वात्मदेवताबुद्धिः सुतरां नृषु पाण्डव । १० ।

श्रवणं कीर्तनं चास्य स्मरणं महतां गतेः । सेवेज्यावनतिर्दास्यं सख्यमात्मसमर्पणम् । ११ ।

नृणामयं परो धर्मः सर्वेषां समुदाहृतः । त्रिशल्लक्षणवात्राजन्सर्वात्मा येन तुष्यति । १२ ।

The highest virtue of all men, by which the Lord (the Soul of the universe) is pleased, has been duly proclaimed, O king, as consisting of the following thirty features, viz., (1) truthfulness, (2) compassion, (3) austerity (fasting etc.), (4) purity (of body), (5) endurance (of heat and cold etc.) (6) discrimination (the power of distinguishing right from wrong), (7-8) control of mind and the senses, (9) non-violence, (10) continence, (11) charity, (12) muttering prayers, (13) straightforwardness, (14) contentment, (15) service of those who look upon all with the same eye, (16) gradually withdrawing from (all) mundane activity, (17) pondering the contrary result of men's (egotistic) actions, (18) refraining from useless talk, (19) inquiry into the Self (as distinguished from body etc.), (20) equitable distribution among created beings, according to their worth, of rice and other eatables etc., (21) and regarding them, particularly human beings, as one's own self or deity, O Yudhiṣṭhira (son of Pāṇḍu), (22) the hearing and (23) chanting of and (24) dwelling on the names and glories of, (25) waiting upon, (26) worshipping, and (27) bowing to, (28) offering the fruit of one's action performed in the spirit of service to, (29) treating as one's bosom friend, and (30) dedicating oneself (one's body and all) to, the Lord, the goal of exalted souls. (8—12)

संस्कारा यदविच्छिन्नाः स द्विजोऽजो जगाद यम् । इज्याध्ययनदानानि विहितानि द्विजन्मनाम् ।

जन्मकर्मविदातानां क्रियाश्चाश्रमचोदिताः । १३ ।

विप्रस्याध्ययनादीनि षडन्यस्याप्रतिग्रहः । राज्ञो वृत्तिः प्रजागोपुरविप्राद् वा करादिभिः । १४ ।

वैश्यस्तु वार्तावृत्तिश्च नित्यं ब्रह्मकुलानुगः । शूद्रस्य द्विजशुश्रूषा वृत्तिश्च स्वामिनो भवेत् । १५ ।

A Dwija† or twice-born (a member of the first three classes of Hindu society, viz., the Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas and the Vaiśyas, so-called because of their investiture with the sacred thread, which is said to constitute their second birth or regeneration) is he in whose family the (sixteen) purificatory rites (accompanied by the recitation of Mantras or sacred texts) have been performed in unbroken succession and whom Brahmā (the birthless creator) has denominated as such (through the Vedas and other scriptures). Performance of sacrifices, study (of the Vedas and other sacred books) and charity as well as the duties prescribed for the (four) Āśramas (stages in life, viz., Brahmacharya or student life, Gārhasthya or the life of a householder, Vānaprastha or the life of an anchorite and Saṁnyāsa or the life of a recluse) have been enjoined on the twice-born that are pure by birth and conduct. (13)

* A similar idea is brought out in the following verse of the Manusmṛiti :—

वेदोऽखिलो धर्ममूलं स्मृतिशीले च तद्विदाम् । आचारश्चैव साधूनामात्मनस्तुष्टिरेव च ॥

† The authority on Dharma are the entire body of the Vedas and the Codes of law handed down by those well-versed in the latter as well as their natural way of living, and the conduct of the virtuous as well as one's own satisfaction."

† A Śūdra is not called upon to undergo any such purificatory rite other than the nuptial rites as the Smṛiti says :—

विवाहमात्रसंस्कारं शूद्रोऽपि लभतां सदा ।

Study (of the scriptures and so on (viz., performance of sacrifices and charity, which along with study are of an obligatory nature; and three more—viz., teaching, officiating as a priest at sacrifices, and receiving gifts from those whose earnings are free from blemish—which are recommended as a means of subsistence and are therefore not obligatory*) are the six duties of a Brāhmaṇa. Non-acceptance of gifts is the rule for the other one (viz., the Kṣatriya, or a member of the warrior class, who comes next in order to the Brāhmaṇa and is allowed to earn his livelihood by the other two means, viz., teaching and officiating as a priest at sacrifices in distress†. Of course, he is free to practise these otherwise than as a means of subsistence). Maintenance is to be sought by a Kṣatriya, protecting the people, optionally‡ by recovering taxes and fines from his subjects other than a Brāhmaṇa (who is ordinarily exempted from such taxes and fines). (14) A Vaiśya (a member of the trading and agricultural classes) as a matter of fact should make his living by agriculture, breeding of cattle, trade and usury[§] and should always follow the lead of the Brāhmaṇa race. Service to the twice-born classes has been enjoined upon the Śūdra (a member of the labouring and artisan classes) and service to his master has been ordained as his means of subsistence too. (15)

वार्ता विचित्रा शालीनयायावरशिलोञ्जनम् । विप्रवृत्तिश्चतुर्थेयं श्रेयसी चोत्तरोत्तरा । १६ ।
जघन्यो नोत्तमां वृत्तिमनापदि भजेन्नरः । ऋते राजन्यमापत्सु सर्वेषामपि सर्वशः । १७ ।
ऋतामृताभ्यां जीवेत् मृतेन प्रमृतेन वा । सत्यानृताभ्यां जीवेत् न श्ववृत्त्या कथञ्चन । १८ ।
ऋतमुञ्छशिलं प्रोक्तममृतं यदयाचितम् । मृतं तु नित्ययाच्चा स्यात् प्रमृतं कर्षणं स्मृतम् । १९ ।
सत्यानृतं तु वाणिज्यं श्ववृत्तिर्नीचसेवनम् । वर्जयेत् तां सदा विप्रो राजन्यश्च जुगुप्सिताम् ।
सर्ववेदमयो विप्रः सर्वदेवमयो नृपः । २० ।

(1) Occupation of various kinds (such as agriculture, breeding of cattle, trade and so on as enumerated in verse 15), (2) accepting gifts without the impudence of asking, (3) begging foodgrains daily (lit., the life of a vagrant mendicant) and (4) gathering ears of corn left by the owner while reaping the harvest or gleaning foodgrains lying scattered in a grain-market after the heaps have been sold off or removed—this is the fourfold means of livelihood sanctioned for a Brāhmaṇa (one belonging to the priestly class). (Of these four,) again, each succeeding one is preferable (to the preceding). (16) With the exception of a Kṣatriya, a man belonging to a lower grade should not adopt a higher vocation except in distress. (Of course, a Kṣatriya may adopt[§] the means of livelihood of a Brāhmaṇa other than accepting gifts made by another.) In (times of) distress, however, all sorts of vocations are open to all without distinction. (17) One may live by (what are known as) Ṛta and Amṛta or (even) by Mṛta and Pramṛta. One may (also) live by Satyāṇṛta, but under no circumstance by Śwavr̥tti (a dog's

* Vide Manusmṛti, which says :—

पण्णां तु कर्मणामस्य त्रीणि कर्माणि जीविका । यजनाध्यापने चैव विशुद्धाच्च प्रतिग्रहः ॥

† Vide verse 17 below.

‡ A king is entitled to receive voluntary presents from his subjects and to collect periodically tributes from feudatory chiefs as an acknowledgment of submission on their part or as price of peace or protection. He is also regarded as perfectly justified in extending his dominion by conquering other territories as a preliminary for the performance of a Rājāsūya sacrifice. If he is unable to meet his expenditure from these sources, he has been allowed the alternative of filling his coffers by recovering taxes from his subjects and fines by way of penalty from offenders. This is the force of the particle 'वा' in the above verse, which has accordingly been translated as 'optionally'. An ordinary Kṣatriya is also permitted to live by use of arms.

§ The significance of the term 'Vārta', has been explained elsewhere in the following couplet :—

कृषिवाणिज्यगोरक्षाः कुसीदं तुर्यमुच्यते । वार्ता चतुर्विधा तत्र — ॥

§ Vide verse 14 above.

living). (18) Gathering ears of corn left by the owner while reaping a harvest or gleaned foodgrains lying scattered in a grain-market after the heaps have been sold off or removed is called Ṛta (lit., right or true); that which is got unasked is called Amṛta (nectar). Daily begging (of foodgrains) is Mṛta (death); while agriculture is called Pramṛta (lit., greater death, so-called because it involves the destruction of many living beings). (19) Trade is (what goes by the name of) Satyāṇṛta (a mixture of truth and falsehood); while service rendered to those belonging to a lower grade is (what is meant by) a dog's living. A Brāhmaṇa as well as a Kṣatriya should always shun this detested calling. (For) a Brāhmaṇa is an embodiment of all the (four) Vedas, while a Kṣatriya (lit., a ruler of men) is the personification of all the gods. (20)

शमो दमस्तपः शौचं संतोषः क्षान्तिरार्जवम् । ज्ञानं दयाच्युतात्मत्वं सत्यं च ब्रह्मलक्षणम् । २१ ।

शौर्यं वीर्यं धृतिस्तेजस्त्याग आत्मजयः क्षमा । ब्रह्मण्यता प्रसादश्च रक्षा च क्षत्रलक्षणम् । २२ ।

देवगुर्वच्युते भक्तिस्त्रिवर्गपरिपोषणम् । आस्तिक्यमुद्यमो नित्यं नैपुणं वैश्यलक्षणम् । २३ ।

शूद्रस्य संनतिः शौचं सेवा स्वामिन्यमायया । अमन्त्रयज्ञो ह्यस्तेयं सत्यं गोविप्ररक्षणम् । २४ ।

Control of mind and the senses, austerity (fasting etc.), purity (of body), contentment, forgiveness, straightforwardness, wisdom (discrimination), compassion, devotion to the immortal Lord (Viṣṇu) and veracity are the characteristics of a Brāhmaṇa. (21) A martial spirit, valour, fortitude, audacity, liberality, self-control, forgiveness, devotion to the Brāhmaṇa race, benignity and protection (of the weak) constitute the characteristics of a Kṣatriya. (22) Devotion to the gods, to one's preceptor and to the immortal Lord (Viṣṇu); promotion of the three objects of human pursuit (viz., religious merit, worldly riches and sensual enjoyment); belief in the existence of God, in life after death, and so on; constant exertion (for the acquisition of wealth) and dexterity (in acquiring it) are the characteristics of a Vaiśya. (23) (And) submissiveness, purity, guilelessly ministering to one's master, performance of (the five daily) sacrifices* unaccompanied by (the recitation of) Mantras (sacred texts), non-thieving, truthfulness and protection of cows and the Brāhmaṇas are indeed the characteristics of a Śūdra. (24)

स्त्रीणां च पतिदेवानां तच्छुश्रूषणुकूलता । तद्वन्धुषु नुवृत्तिश्च नित्यं तद्व्रतधारणम् । २५ ।

संमार्जनोपलेपाभ्यां गृहमण्डलवर्तनैः । स्वयं च मण्डिता नित्यं परिमृष्टपरिच्छदा । २६ ।

कामैरुच्चावचैः साध्वी प्रश्रयेण दमेन च । वाक्यैः सत्यैः प्रियैः प्रेम्णा काले काले भजेत् पतिम् । २७ ।

संतुष्टालोलुपा दक्षा धर्मज्ञा प्रियसत्यवाक् । अप्रमत्ता शुचिः स्निग्धा पतिं त्वपतितं भजेत् । २८ ।

या पतिं हरिभावेन भजेच्छीरिव तत्परा । हर्यात्मना हरेर्लोके पत्या श्रीरिव मोदते । २९ ।

And the duty of women devoted to their husband (lit., looking upon their husband as a deity) is to serve him, to do good offices to him, to humour his relations and constantly to observe his sacred vows. (25) Herself remaining adorned and keeping her utensils etc., well-scoured at all times, a virtuous wife should serve her husband by thoroughly sweeping her house and plastering it (with cow-dung etc.), by drawing auspicious diagrams and spherical designs (on the floor with colours), through sense-objects—great and small—desired by him, through modesty and control of the senses, through truthful and agreeable words and (above all) through love at opportune moments. (26-27) Contented (with her resources) and

* The Śāstras have made it obligatory for a Śūdra to perform the five daily sacrifices, reciting the name of the gods etc., to whom oblations are offered in the dative case and adding the word 'Namah (Hail !)' instead of 'Swāhā' after it (as 'Agnaye Namah', (Hail to the god of fire!)). Says the law-giver Yājñavalkya :— नमस्कारेण मन्त्रेण पञ्चयज्ञान् न हापयेत् । not coveting even that which is available (to her), diligent, conversant with Dharma (what is right), agreeable and truthful of speech (not only to her husband but to all), vigilant, pure (of body) and full of affection, she should gratify her husband unless he is fallen* (guilty of any of the five major sins). (28) A wife who serves her husband, regarding him as an image of Śrī Hari (Lord Viṣṇu) and devoted to him as Goddess Lakṣmī is to Her Consort, rejoices in Vaikuṇṭha (the realm of Śrī Hari) like Śrī (Lakṣmī) in the company of her husband, who (by virtue of her devotion) is sure to attain a form similar to that of Śrī Hari (Himself). (29)

वृत्तिः सङ्करजातीनां तत्तत्कुलकृता भवेत्। अचौराणामपापानामन्यजान्तेऽवसायिनाम् । ३०।
 प्रायः स्वभावविहितो नृणां धर्मो युगे युगे। वेददुग्भिः स्मृतो राजन्नेत्ये चेह च शर्मकृत् । ३१।
 वृत्त्या स्वभावकृतया वर्तमानः स्वकर्मकृत्। हित्वा स्वभावजं कर्म शनैर्निर्गुणतामियात् । ३२।
 उप्यमानं मुहुः क्षेत्रं स्वयं निर्वीर्यतामियात्। न कल्पते पुनः सूत्या उष्ट्रं बीजं च नश्यति । ३३।
 एवं कामाशयं चित्तं कामानामतिसेवया। विरज्येत यथा राजन्नाश्रिवत् कामबिन्दुभिः । ३४।
 यस्य यल्लक्षणं प्रोक्तं पुंसो वर्णाभिव्यञ्जकम्। यदन्यत्रापि दृश्येत तत् तेनैव विनिर्दिशेत् । ३५।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे युधिष्ठिरनारदसंवादे सदाचारनिर्णयो नामैकादशोऽध्यायः । ११।

The calling of mixed† races such as the Antyajās ‡ (those belonging to the lowest grade in society) and Antevāsāyis[§] (lit., those living at the end of a town or village), other than those who are thieves and given to (other) sinful pursuits, should be the same as has been (hereditarily) followed in their respective families. (30) Generally the course of conduct determined by the innate disposition (according as it is Sāttvika, Rājasiks or Tāmasika) of men (belonging to the various grades of society and stages in life) in all ages has been declared by men whose eye is the Veda as conducive to happiness both here and hereafter, O Yudhiṣṭhira ! (31) A man following a vocation determined by his natural disposition (as revealed by his birth) and (scrupulously) discharging his duties bids fair to attain by degrees the state of a Guṇātīta (one who has transcended the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti), relinquishing (later on) his natural pursuits (as well). (32) Being repeatedly sown (with seeds), a field will automatically become sterile (one day). It will no more be capable of yielding any crops; may, (even) the seed sown (in it) will perish. (33) (Even) so by over-indulgence in the objects of senses the mind, the seat of desires (in their latent form) is sure to get fully disgusted (with them), O king, but not so by dribblets of enjoyment, like fire (that is extinguished by pouring large quantities of ghee but not so by drops of it)[§]. (34) If what

* The five major sins are :— (1) killing a Brāhmaṇa, (2) drinking intoxicating liquors, (3) thieving, (4) committing adultery with the wife of one's preceptor and (5) fellowship with anyone guilty of one or more of these crimes.

† Mixed races are of two kinds : (1) Pratilomajas or those sprung from the union of a female of a higher caste with a male belonging to a lower grade in society, which is considered as quite the reverse of the natural order; and (2) Anulomajas or those sprung from the union of a male belonging to a higher caste with a female of a lower grade, which is not considered so bad. The former are naturally regarded as the most low-born in society.

‡ (1) Washermen, (2) Carmakāras (workers in leather), (3) Naṭas (rope-dancers) (4) Buruḍas (basket-makers), (5) Kaivartas (fishermen), (6) Medas (those living by any degrading profession) and (7) Bhillas (Bhils, a wild mountain race)—these are the seven tribes known by the name of Antyajās.

§ The Antevāsāyis are regarded as even lower than the Antyajās and comprise the Cāṇḍālas, the Pulkasas, the Mātaraṅgas and so on. All these minute details show to what inconceivable lengths the science of ethnology was developed by the Hindus and what great value they attached to racial purity, which is so very essential for moral and spiritual evolution.

§ Possessed as he is by innumerable cravings of a latent type is not possible for a man to conquer his desires all at once. If, however, he enjoys a variety of sensuous pleasures according to the restriction laid down in the Vedas, he is likely to get disgusted with them in course of time even as his mind gets purified by the performance of obligatory and other incidental has been declared to be a characteristic of the grade in society of a (particular) man is perceived even in another (a man belonging to a different class), the latter should be distinctively called by that very denomination (caste).* (35)

Thus ends the eleventh discourse entitled "An inquiry into right conduct," forming part of the dialogue between Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira and the sage Nārada, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XII

An inquiry into right conduct (continued)

नारद उवाच

ब्रह्मचारी गुरुकुले वसन्दान्तो गुरोर्हितम् । आचरन्दासवन्नीचो गुरौ सुदृढसौहृदः । १ ।
 सायं प्रातरुपासीत गुर्वग्न्यर्कसुरोत्तमान् । उभे सन्ध्ये च यतवाग् जपन्ब्रह्म समाहितः । २ ।
 छन्दांस्यधीयीत गुरोराहूतश्चेत् सुयन्त्रितः । उपक्रमेऽवसाने च चरणौ शिरसा नमेत् । ३ ।
 मेखलाजिनवासांसि जटादण्डकमण्डलून् । विभृयादुपवीतं च दर्भपाणिर्यथोदितम् । ४ ।
 सायं प्रातश्चरेद्भैक्षं गुरवे तन्निवेदयेत् । भुञ्जीत यद्यनुज्ञातो नो चेदुपवसेत् क्वचित् । ५ ।
 सुशीलो मितभुग् दक्षः श्रद्धधानो जितेन्द्रियः । यावदर्थं व्यवहरेत् स्त्रीषु स्त्रीनिर्जितेषु च । ६ ।
 वर्जयेत् प्रमदागाथामगृहस्थो बृहद्व्रतः । इन्द्रियाणि प्रमाथीनि हरन्त्यपि यतेर्मनः । ७ ।
 केशप्रसाधनोन्मर्दस्नपनाभ्यञ्जनादिकम् । गुरुस्त्रीभिर्युवतिभिः कारयेन्नात्मनो युवा । ८ ।
 नन्वग्निः प्रमदा नाम घृतकुम्भसमः पुमान् । सुतामपि रहो जह्यादन्यदा यावदर्थकृत् । ९ ।
 कल्पयित्वाऽऽत्मना यावदाभासमिदमीश्वरः । द्वैतं तावन्न विरमेत् ततो ह्यस्य विपर्ययः । १० ।

Nārada began again : Dwelling in the house of his teacher, humble as a servant, with his senses (fully) controlled, and doing him good offices and bearing the strongest affection for him, a Brahmacārī (a celibate student) should worship in the evenings and mornings his teacher, the sacred fire, the sun-god and Lord Viṣṇu (the Chief of the gods) as well as (the deities presiding over) both the twilights (and noontide), silently muttering the holy Gāyatri-Mantra with a concentrated mind. (1-2) Well-regulated (in life), he should learn (take his lessons in) the Vedas from his teacher if (and when) called (by him) and should (invariably) bow (to him), touching the latter's feet with his head at the beginning as well as at the end (of his lessons). (3) Carrying (blades of) the (sacred) Kuśa grass in his hands, he should wear duties and he realizes the futility of his pursuit after pleasure even like Emperor Yayāti and the sage Saubhārī, whose accounts find place in Discourses XVIII. XIX and VI respectively of Book-Nine.

* What is sought to be conveyed by this assertion is evidently this that if a man belonging to a lower grade in society evinces the characteristics of a higher grade, he should be accorded the same honour as is due to the members of that higher caste. But this should in no case be taken to mean he should adopt the vocation of a higher grade, as such deviation will create confusion.

a gridle (of a species of rush known by the name of Muñja), deerskin and (two pieces of) cloth, the sacred thread and unkempt hair, and should (also) carry a staff and a Kamaṇḍalu (a water-pot generally made of cocoanut-shell) as enjoined by the scriptures.* (4) (Every) evening and morning he should go about begging for food and offer it to the teacher. He should partake of it, (only) if allowed; if not permitted on any day (e.g., on the Ekādaśī day, when everybody is expected to observe a fast or live only on fruits etc., or on any other day by way of penalty for some transgression or even as a test as to what effect it is likely to have on his mind), he should fast. (5) Possessing a good moral character, moderate in (his) diet, active, reverent and exercising control over his senses, he should deal with women as well as with those enslaved by women only as much as it is (absolutely) necessary. (6) Anyone other than a householder, who has undertaken the great vow of continence, should shun (all) talk of women; (for) the senses, which are very turbulent (by nature), forcibly carry away (with them) the mind (even of one who is fully controlled). (7) An adult student should never have (such personal service as) the combing of his hair, massaging and washing his body and inunction etc., done by the young wives of his teachers (even if they offer their services out of pure motherly love, treating him as their own son). (8) It is a truism indeed that a young woman is (like) fire and a man is (akin to) a jar full of ghee (clarified butter). One should avoid (the presence of) even one's daughter when (she is) all by herself; (nay,) at other times (too) one should remain with her (only) so long as it is (absolutely) necessary. (9) Until one has mastered his self, having (clearly) apprehended through self-realization that (all) this (the body, the senses and so on) is (only) illusory, the sense of duality (the feeling that woman is an object of enjoyment and I am the enjoyer) does not cease. (And) from that (sense of duality) indeed follows the perversity of the embodied soul (through identification with the body and other material things). (10)

एतत् सर्वं गृहस्थस्य समाप्राप्तं यतेरपि । गुरुवृत्तिर्विकल्पेन गृहस्थस्यर्तुगामिनः । ११ ।
 अञ्जनाभ्यञ्जनोन्मर्दस्न्यवलेखामिषं मधु । स्रग्गन्धलेपालंकारांस्त्यजेयुर्धृतव्रताः । १२ ।
 उषित्वैवं गुरुकुले द्विजोऽधीत्यावबुध्य च । त्रयीं साङ्गोपनिषदं यावदर्थं यथाबलम् । १३ ।
 दत्त्वा वरमनुज्ञातो गुरोः कामं यदीश्वरः । गृहं वनं वा प्रविशेत् प्रव्रजेत् तत्र वा वसेत् । १४ ।
 अग्नौ गुरावात्मनि च सर्वभूतेष्वधोक्षजम् । भूतैः स्वधामभिः पश्येदप्रविष्टं प्रविष्टवत् । १५ ।
 एवंविधो ब्रह्मचारी वानप्रस्थो यतिर्गृही । चरन्विदितविज्ञानः परं ब्रह्माधिगच्छति । १६ ।

All this (whatever has been stated in verse 6 above) has been enjoined upon a householder (too), (nay,) even on a recluse (much more on an anchorite). Service to one's preceptor (also) is optionally laid down in the case of a householder, who is (ordinarily) expected to approach his wedded wife during the period favourable for procreation (sixteen days after menstruation). (11) Those who have undertaken a vow of continence should give up (the use of) collyrium, inunction, massaging the body, (fellowship with) women, drawing, meat, spirituous liquor (in the case of those who are ordinarily allowed to drink it or honey in the case of others), garlands, perfumes, unguents and ornaments. (12) Having thus lived in a teacher's house and studied and grasped the import of (all) the three Vedas (R̥gveda, Yajurveda and Sāmaveda) along with the (six) sciences auxiliary to them and the Upaniṣads (philosophical treatises forming part, nay, the quintessence of the Vedas) according to his eligibility and capacity, and having made available to the teacher, if capable of doing so, the object of his desire, and (duly) permitted by him, he should enter (according to his

* For example, it is laid down in the scriptures that a Brāhmaṇa student should carry a staff of the Palāśa tree alone 'पालाशो दण्डो ब्राह्मणस्य' etc.

predilections and fitness) the life of a householder (marry and beget children) or retire to the woods (take to the life of an anchorite) or renounce the world and wander forth as an ascetic mendicant (recluse) or continue there (in the teacher's house as a lifelong celibate). (13-14) He should visualize Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception) as having entered (taken up His abode in) the sacred fire, the teacher, his own self as well as all the (five) elements (viz., earth, water, fire, air and ether)—including the (diverse orders of) living beings dwelling in them—as their Inner Controller, even though He has not (really) entered them (having been already present in them by virtue of His pervading all as their very Cause). (15) Following the rules of conduct laid down for his Āśrama, and having (thereby) come to know that which ought to be known, a Brahmachārī (religious student), anchorite, recluse or householder of this type (visualizing the Lord as present in all) realizes the transcendent Absolute. (16)

वानप्रस्थस्य वक्ष्यामि नियमान्मुनिसम्मतान् । यानातिष्ठन् मुनिर्गच्छेदृषिलोकमिहाञ्जसा । १७ ।
 न कृष्टपच्यमश्रीयादकृष्टं चाप्यकालतः । अग्निपक्वमथामं वा अर्कपक्वमुताहरेत् । १८ ।
 वन्यैश्चरुपुरोडाशान् निर्वपेत् कालचोदितान् । लब्धे नवे नवेऽन्नाद्ये पुराणं तु परित्यजेत् । १९ ।
 अग्न्यर्थमेव शरणमुटजं वाद्रिकन्दराम् । श्रयेत हिमवाय्वग्निवर्षार्कातिपषाद् स्वयम् । २० ।
 केशरोमनखश्मश्रुमलानि जटिलो दधत् । कमण्डल्वजिने दण्डवल्कलाग्निपरिच्छदान् । २१ ।
 चरेद् वने द्वादशाब्दान्वाग्रा वा चतुरो मुनिः । द्वावेकं वा यथाबुद्धिर्न विपद्येत कृच्छ्रतः । २२ ।

I shall (now) tell (you) the rules of conduct prescribed for a Vānaprastha (anchorite) and approved of by sages, by following which in this life an ascetic bids fair to ascend easily (after death) to Maharloka (the realm of the Ṛṣis and then attain Mukti in due course). (17) An anchorite must not eat anything which ripens on cultivated soil (viz., the products of agriculture) and not even the products of uncultivated land before time. He should neither eat food cooked on fire nor anything raw, but only that which has ripened under (the rays of) the sun (in season). (18) He should prepare Caru (an oblation of rice, barley and pulse boiled with butter and milk) and Puroḍāśa (a mass of ground rice rounded into a kind of cake and usually divided into pieces placed on separate receptacles), enjoined at different times (for being offered to the gods through the sacred fire), with wild corns. Each time a fresh (natural) supply of cereals and other eatables is obtained, he should, however, reject the old stock. (19) Himself enduring (remaining exposed to) snow, winds, fire, rain and the heat of the sun, he should betake himself to a shelter in the form of a hut of leaves or a mountain-cave only for the sake of (preserving) the sacred fire. (20) Wearing matted locks (on his head), preserving the (other) hair (such as those in the arm-pits and other private parts), as well as the hair on his body, nails, moustaches and beard, and the dirt* (on his skin) and keeping (with him) a Kamaṇḍalu (a water-pot made of cocoanut-shell or gourd etc.), deerskin (to be wrapped about his loins), a staff, the bark of (the birth and other) trees (as a covering for his body) and the accessories of fire-worship (alone), a hermit should practise austerities in the woods for (a period of) twelve, eight, four or two years or (only) one year (as the case may be) lest his reason should get perverted through hardship. (21-22)

यदाकल्पः स्वक्रियायां व्याधिभिर्जरयाथवा । आन्वीक्षिक्यां वा विद्यायां कुर्यादनशनादिकम् । २३ ।

* This should not be taken to mean that an anchorite is forbidden to take his bath or that he is asked to remain positively unclean or allow dirt to accumulate on his body. What is sought to be conveyed by all these restrictions is simply this that he should be unmindful of his exterior, that he should not devote particular attention to cleanliness etc., that his bodily needs should be reduced to the minimum and that he should completely subordinate his physical self to the higher self.

आत्मन्यग्रीन् समारोप्य संन्यस्याहंममात्मताम् । कारणेषु न्यसेत् सम्यक् संघातं तु यथार्हतः । २४ ।
 खे खानि वायौ निःश्वासांस्तेजस्यूष्माणमात्मवान् । अप्सवसूक्श्लेषपूयानि क्षितौ शेषं यथोद्धवम् । २५ ।
 वाचमग्नौ सधक्तव्यामिन्द्रे शिल्पं करावपि । पदानि गत्या वयसि रत्योपस्थं प्रजापतौ । २६ ।
 मृत्यौ पायुं विसर्गं च यथास्थानं विनिर्दिशेत् । दिक्षु श्रोत्रं सनादेन स्पर्शमध्यात्मनि त्वचम् । २७ ।
 रूपाणि चक्षुषा राजन् ज्योतिष्यभिनिवेशयेत् । अप्सु प्रचेतसा जिह्वां घ्रेयैर्घ्राणं क्षितौ न्यसेत् । २८ ।
 मनो मनोरथैश्चन्द्रे बुद्धिं बोध्यैः कवौ परे । कर्माण्यध्यात्मना रुद्रे यदहंममताक्रिया ।

सत्त्वेन चित्तं क्षेत्रज्ञे गुणैर्वैकारिकं परे । २९ ।

अप्सु क्षितिमपो ज्योतिष्यदो वायौ नभस्यमुम् । कूटस्थे तच्च महति तदव्यक्तेऽक्षरे च तत् । ३० ।
 इत्यक्षरतयाऽऽत्मानं चिन्मात्रमवशेषितम् । ज्ञात्वाद्द्वयोऽथ विरमेद् दग्धयोनिरिवानलः । ३१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे युधिष्ठिरनारदसंवादे सदाचारनिर्णयो नाम द्वादशोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

When incapable through ailments or old age of performing his (religious) duties and even of pursuing the knowledge of the Spirit, he should resort to fasting etc.* (23) Withdrawing the sacred fires into himself and giving up the feeling of identification with the body as well as the feeling that the body etc., are 'mine', he should (mentally) merge his psychopnysical organism in its causes, assigning each constituent to its proper place (as explained in the following verses). (24) A wise man should merge the apertures of his body (viz., the two eyes, the two ears, the two nostrils, the mouth and the organs of urination and defecation) in ether, the (five) vital airs in the (cosmic) air, the heat (of his body) in (the element of) fire; the blood, phlegm and pus (etc.) into water and the rest (viz., solid matter such as bones, flesh and so on) in earth, everything being consigned to its origin. (25) (Again,) he should merge his (organ of) speech along with the function of speaking in Agni (the god of fire), the two hands as well as the function of grasping and releasing things in Indra, the feet along with (the function of) locomotion in Lord Viṣṇu (conceived in the form of the Time-Spirit), the faculty of procreation along with sexual enjoyment in Prajāpati (the god presiding over procreation) and the organ of defecation as well as the act of voiding excrements in Mṛtyu (the god of death), directing each organ and its function to its proper place (the deity presiding over it). (Likewise) he should merge the sense of hearing along with sound (the object of hearing) in the (deities presiding over) the quarters, the tactile sense as well as touch in the wind-god and the (various) colours along with the faculty of vision in the sun-god (the source of light), O Yudhiṣṭhira. He should (further) merge the palate along with (the different) tastes (towards which the mind feels excessively drawn) in (the deity presiding over) water, the olfactory sense along with the various smells (the objects of the olfactory sense) into (the goddess presiding over) the earth, Manas (the mind) along with the (various) projects (indulged in by the mind) in the moon-god, Buddhi (understanding) along with the objects capable of being understood in Brahmā (the highest and the earliest seer,) (his) actions along with self-consciousness in Rudra, from whom proceeds (all) action prompted by egotism and self-interest, Citta (reason) along with Sattva (consciousness) in Lord Vāsudeva (the deity presiding over Citta) and the Jiva (who is tainted with the morbid feeling that I am the enjoyer and so on) along with the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti, which are responsible for the aforesaid morbid feeling) in the transcendent Brahma (the Absolute). (26—29) (Then) he should merge earth in water, water in fire, the latter in the air, that (again) in ether, the last-named in Ahaṅkāra (the principle of self-consciousness), the latter in Mahattattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), that in the Unmanifest (Prakṛti or primordial Matter) and the last-named in the Indestructible (Brahma). (30) (And) recognizing the Self—left (as a residue) in the form of absolute Consciousness by this process (of eliminating all its vestures)—as (no other than) the Indestructible (Brahma) and thus remaining without a second, he should cease functioning even like fire that has consumed its own support (in the shape of wood). (31)

* It is laid down in Discourse XIII that even after completing the maximum period of twelve years an anchorite should continue to practise austerities in the woods if he is still able-bodied and fit to perform his religious duties, or that he should enter the fourth stage and lead the life of a recluse (Sāhnyāsi) if he is no longer fit for austerities but is intellectually fit and mentally alert enough to pursue the knowledge of the Spirit. When, however, he finds himself both physically and mentally unfit, he is advised to adopt the course suggested in this and the following verses.

Thus ends the twelfth discourse, entitled "An inquiry into right conduct (continued)" forming part of the dialogue between Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira and the sage Nārada in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIII

The course of conduct prescribed for a Saṁnyāsī and a dialogue between an Avadhūta and Prahrāda

नारद उवाच

कल्पस्त्वेवं परिव्रज्य देहमात्रावशेषितः । ग्रामंकरात्रविधिना निरपेक्षश्चरेन्महीम् । १ ।
 बिभृयाद् यद्यसौ वासः कौपीनाच्छादनं परम् । त्यक्तं न दण्डलिङ्गादेरन्यत् किञ्चिदनापदि । २ ।
 एक एव चरेद् भिक्षुरात्मारामोऽनपाश्रयः । सर्वभूतसुहृच्छान्तो नारायणपरायणः । ३ ।
 पश्येदात्मन्यदो विश्वं परे सदसतोऽव्यये । आत्मानं च परं ब्रह्म सर्वत्र सदसन्मये । ४ ।
 सुप्तप्रबोधयोः सन्धावात्मनो गतिमात्मदृक् । पश्यन्बन्धं च मोक्षं च मायामात्रं न वस्तुतः । ५ ।
 नाभिनन्देद् ध्रुवं मृत्युमध्रुवं वास्य जीवितम् । कालं परं प्रतीक्षेत भूतानां प्रभवाप्ययम् । ६ ।
 नासच्छास्त्रेषु सज्जेत नोपजीवेत जीविकाम् । वादवादांस्त्यजेत् तर्कान्यक्षं कं च न संश्रयेत् । ७ ।
 न शिष्याननुबध्नीत ग्रन्थान्नैवाभ्यसेद् बहून् । न व्याख्यामुपयुञ्जीत नारम्भानारभेत् क्वचित् । ८ ।
 न यतेराश्रमः प्रायो धर्महेतुर्महात्मनः । शान्तस्य समचित्तस्य बिभृयादुत वा त्यजेत् । ९ ।
 अव्यक्तलिङ्गो व्यक्तार्थो मनीष्यन्मत्तबालवत् । कविर्मूकवदात्मानं स दृष्ट्या दर्शयेन्नृणाम् । १० ।

Nārada began again : He, however, who is (intellectually and mentally) fit should enter the life of a recluse (by renouncing everything) in the aforesaid manner; and, with the body alone left to him (as his possession), and free from all desires, he should roam about on the globe, (strictly) observing the rule of staying only one night in a (particular) village. (1) If (at all) he should put on any covering, he should wear only a strip of cloth to cover the privy parts and should not except in times of distress, carry (about him) anything (already) renounced by him, other than the distinguishing marks of a Saṁnyāsī, viz., a staff and a Kamaṇḍalu. (2) Living on alms, delighting in his own Self (indulging in no other delights), shelterless, friendly to all living beings, tranquil and devoted to Lord Nārāyaṇa, he should go about all alone (without any companion). (3) He should view this (objective) universe (as dwelling) in his immutable Self transcending (both) cause and effect, and himself as the transcendent

Brahma, interpenetrating the whole universe, consisting of (both) cause and effect. (4) With his eyes turned towards the Self, he should discover the true nature of the Self at the point of contact between deep sleep and waking life and look upon (both bondage and release as a mere illusion and not real. (5) He should neither welcome death which is inevitable, nor life which is uncertain. He should only await (the course of) Time, which is responsible for the birth and death of created beings. (6) He should never indulge in profane literature (books not treating of spiritual subjects), nor should he make his living by any profession (such as medicine, astronomy and so on). He should avoid (all) controversial reasoning and should never espouse any (particular) cause (in a partisan spirit). (7) He should not attach (a number of) disciples to himself nor should he study many a book (that may divert his mind from the object of his pursuit, viz., spiritual enlightenment). He should neither take to discoursing nor should he engage in undertakings (such as the construction of a monastery and so on) on any account. (8) In the case of a high-souled recluse, tranquil (by nature) and equable of mind, (observance of the rules of conduct prescribed for) the (particular) Āśrama (stage in life) is not generally intended to secure (any) religious merit. (When spiritual enlightenment is attained,) he may continue to observe such conduct (and retain the emblems of his Āśrama) or may give it up. (9) Though no (outward) sign (of his greatness or of his being a Saṁnyāsi) may be visible (to others), his object (in life) should be (quite) evident. Though intelligent, he should show himself (behave) as though he were a madman or a fool and, though wise (eloquent), he should show himself as dumb in the eyes of the people. (10)

अत्राप्युदाहरन्तीमितिहासं पुरातनम् । प्रह्लादस्य च संवादं मुनेराजगरस्य च । ११ ।

तं शयानं धरोपस्थे कावेर्यां सद्यसानुनि । रजस्वलैस्तनूदेशैर्निगूढामलतेजसम् । १२ ।

ददर्श लोकान्विचरँल्लोकतत्त्वविवित्सया । वृतोऽमात्यैः कतिपयैः प्रह्लादो भगवत्प्रियः । १३ ।

कर्मणाऽऽकृतिभिर्वाचा लिङ्गैर्वर्णाश्रमादिभिः । न विदन्ति जना यं वै सोऽसाविति न वेति च । १४ ।

तं नत्वाभ्यर्च्य विधिवत् पादयोः शिरसा स्पृशन् । विवित्सुरिदमप्राक्षीन्महाभागवतोऽसुरः । १५ ।

बिभर्षि कायं पीवानं सोद्यमो भोगवान्यथा । वित्तं चैवोद्यमवतां भोगो वित्तवतामिह ।

भोगिनां खलु देहोऽयं पीवा भवति नान्यथा । १६ ।

न ते शयानस्य निरुद्यमस्य ब्रह्मन् नु हार्थो यत एव भोगः ।

अभोगिनोऽयं तव विप्र देहः पीवा यतस्तद्वद नः क्षमं चेत् । १७ ।

कविः कल्पो निपुणदृक् चित्रप्रियकथः समः । लोकस्य कुर्वतः कर्म शेषे तद्वीक्षितापि वा । १८ ।

On this very point (the conduct of a recluse as recommended in the above verses) the wise narrate (by way of an illustration) the following old legend (mainly) consisting of a dialogue between Prahrāda (the demon king) and the ascetic (Lord Dattātreya*) who was (then) following the mode of life of a python†. (11) Going about the (various) worlds with intent to ascertain the truth concerning the people and accompanied by a few ministers (alone),

* We have been told in I. iii. 11 that the Lord appeared in the form of Dattātreya (son of Atri through Anasūyā) and taught the science of the Spirit to king Alarka, Prahrāda and others. From this it may be safely concluded that the ascetic referred to here was no other than Dattātreya.

† A python is represented to be an unwieldy creature capable of little or no locomotion and catching its prey with its jaws and devouring only when it falls within its easy reach. Anyone following its mode of life is, therefore, expected to remain lying down on the bare ground in an open space all the time, stirring on no account and making no effort even to pick up food if offered. He is supposed to answer the calls of nature in that very posture and would accept food only when it is thrown into his mouth. He is practically dead to the world and drags his existence only to work out the Prārabdha or destiny responsible for his birth. Only a Jñāni of the highest order, who has lost all consciousness of the body and to whom life and death are alike, can think of following this mode of life.

Prahrāda, the beloved of the Lord, saw him lying on the (bare) ground on the sloping side of the Sahyādri hills (now known as the Western Ghats), along the bank of the Kāverī, his spotless (spiritual) glory concealed by his limbs covered (all over) with dust. (12-13) By his conduct, appearance (gestures), speech and marks indicative of grade in society and stage in life etc., people could not be sure about him that he was so and so, nor that he was not so and so. (14) Having greeted and duly worshiped him and touching his feet with his head, Prahrāda (the demon king), the eminent devotee of the Lord, who was eager to know the truth (about him), asked the following question:—(15) "You carry a robust body like one given to exertion and enjoying the comforts of life. Wealth is the lot of only those who exert themselves; while enjoyment in this world falls to the lot of the moneyed (alone). (And) indeed the corporeal frame of (only) those who are given to luxuries grows fat, not otherwise. (16) Lying supine as you do, O holy one ! you surely and obviously own no riches, from which alone follows (all enjoyment). (Pray,) tell us, if you deem fit, O Brāhmaṇa, the reason why this body of yours is (so) corpulent; even though you indulge in no luxury. (17) Learned able-bodied, endowed with a penetrating vision and possessing a wonderful and charming eloquence, you remain lying down undisturbed while the world is (actively) doing work, even though you perceive everything clearly. (18)

नारद उवाच

स इत्थं दैत्यपतिना परिपृष्टो महामुनिः । स्मयमानस्तमभ्याह तद्वागमृतयन्त्रितः । ११ ।

Nārada continued : Directly questioned thus by Prahrāda (the ruler of the Daityas) and captivated by his nectar like speech, the great ascetic (Lord Dattātreya) smilingly addressed him (as follows). (19)

ब्राह्मण उवाच

वेदेदमसुरश्रेष्ठ भवान् नन्वार्यसम्मतः । ईहोपरमयोर्नृणां पदान्यध्यात्मचक्षुषा । २० ।
यस्य नारायणो देवो भगवान् हृतः सदा । भक्त्या केवलयाज्ञानं धुनोति ध्वान्तमर्कवत् । २१ ।
अथापि ब्रूमहे प्रश्नांस्तव राजन्यथाश्रुतम् । सम्भावनीयो हि भवानात्मनः शुद्धिमिच्छताम् । २२ ।
तृष्णया भववाहिन्या योग्यैः कार्मैरपूरया । कर्माणि कार्यमाणोऽहं नानायोनिषु योजितः । २३ ।
यदृच्छया लोकमिमं प्रापितः कर्मभिर्भ्रमन् । स्वर्गापवर्गयोर्द्वारं तिरश्चां पुनरस्य च । २४ ।
अत्रापि दम्पतीनां च सुखायान्यापनुत्तये । कर्माणि कुर्वतां दृष्ट्वा निवृत्तोऽस्मि विपर्ययम् । २५ ।

The Brāhmaṇa replied : Esteemed as you are of the righteous (wise), O chief of the demons, you undoubtedly know by your spiritual insight (all) this, viz., the consequences of men's activity and cessation from activity. (20) Ever present in your heart by virtue of your absolute (motiveless) devotion, the glorious (self-effulgent) Lord Nārāyaṇa dispels your ignorance even as the sun disperses (external) darkness. (21) Nevertheless, O king, we (proceed to) answer your questions in the light of what we have heard (on the subject from the wise). For, you deserve to be respected by (all) those seeking the purification of (their) heart. (22) Impelled to actions by the stream of Avidity, which brings in its train a succession of births (and deaths) and which cannot be sated with adequate enjoyments I have been thrown into various wombs (states of existence). (23) Wandering about (from one species of life to another) by force of actions I have been luckily endowed with this (human) body, which leads to heaven (through virtuous deeds), to final beatitude (through spiritual enlightenment or Devotion), to (birth in) the lower order of beings (through unrighteousness) and to this (human) life again (through a mixed type of actions). (24) Perceiving in this life too the frustration of married couples undertaking pursuits (of various kinds) for (securing) happiness and driving away calamities, I have ceased from all activity. (25)

सुखमस्यात्मनो रूपं सर्वहोपरतिस्तनुः । मनः संस्पर्शजान् दृष्ट्वा भोगान्स्वप्स्यापि संविशन् । २६ ।
 इत्येतदात्मनः स्वार्थं सन्तं विस्मृत्य वै पुमान् । विचित्रामसति द्वैते घोरामाप्नोति संसृतिम् । २७ ।
 जलं तदुद्भवैश्छन्नं हित्वाज्ञो जलकाम्यया । मृगतृष्णामुपाधावेद् यथान्यत्रार्थदृक् स्वतः । २८ ।
 देहादिभिर्देवतन्त्रैरात्मनः सुखमीहतः । दुःखात्ययं चानीशस्य क्रिया मोघाः कृताः कृताः । २९ ।
 आध्यात्मिकादिभिर्दुःखैरविमुक्तस्य कर्हिचित् । मर्त्यस्य कृच्छ्रेऽपनतैरर्थैः कामैः क्रियेत किम् । ३० ।
 पश्यामि धनिनां क्लेशं लुब्धानामजितात्मनाम् । भयादलब्धनिद्राणां सर्वतोऽभिविशङ्किनाम् । ३१ ।
 राजतश्चोरतः शत्रोः स्वजनात्पशुपक्षितः । अर्थिभ्यः कालतः स्वस्मान्नित्यं प्राणार्थवद्भयम् । ३२ ।
 शोकमोहभयक्रोधागक्लैर्व्यश्रमादयः । यन्मूलाः स्युर्नृणां जह्यात् स्पृहां प्राणार्थयोर्बुधः । ३३ ।

Bliss constitutes the (very) essence of this Self and cessation from all activity is the medium of its manifestation. Realizing (all) enjoyments to be the creation of fancy (alone), I remain lying down (supine), reaping the fruit of destiny. (26) Thus forgetting the object of its pursuit, viz., happiness, which is the (very) essence of its being and is eternally dwelling in it, the Jiva (embodied soul) actually undergoes transmigration—consisting of diverse states of existence (such as gods, human beings and the lower orders of creation) and (so) terrible (being characterized by birth, death, old age and so on)—through duality, which is (really) non-existent. (27) (Even) as an ignorant man impelled by the longing for water may run after a mirage, leaving (actual) water covered with duck weeds etc., sprung from (that very) water, a man seeking happiness (the object of his pursuit) elsewhere than his own Self runs after the objects of senses. (28) Fruitless are the actions repeatedly done by him who, though unaided by Providence, seeks through his body etc.,—which are controlled by Fate—happiness and cessation of suffering for himself. (29) (Even if they bear fruit,) what (good) will be done by riches and objects of desire (enjoyments sought after by men and procured by wealth), got with (great) hardship, to a mortal who is never free from bodily and other affliction ? (30) I perceive (everyday) the torment of moneyed men, who are (often) avaricious, (nay) whose mind is uncontrolled and who get no (sound) sleep for fear, greatly apprehensive as they are of everybody. (31) To those possessed of (anxious to preserve) life (virility) and wealth there is (constant) apprehension (of danger) from the king, thieves, the enemy, kinsmen, beasts and birds, beggars, death and (even) their own self (lest such wealth may be squandered given away or misplaced by themselves). (32) A wise man should (therefore) give up the craving for life (virility) and wealth, from which follow grief, infatuation, fear, anger, attachment, unmanliness and exertion etc., to men. (33)

मधुकारमहासर्पौ लोकेऽस्मिन्नो गुरुत्तमौ । वैराग्यं परितोषं च प्राप्ता यच्छिक्षया वयम् । ३४ ।
 विरागः सर्वकामेभ्यः शिक्षितो मे मधुव्रतात् । कृच्छ्राप्तं मधुवद् वित्तं हत्वाप्यन्यो हरेत्पतिम् । ३५ ।
 अनीहः परितुष्टात्मा यदृच्छोपनतादहम् । नो चेच्छये बह्वहानि महाहिरिव सत्त्ववान् । ३६ ।
 क्वचिदल्पं क्वचिद् भूरि भुञ्जेऽन्नं स्वाद्वस्वादु वा । क्वचिद् भूरिगुणोपेतं गुणहीनमुत क्वचित् । ३७ ।
 श्रद्धयोपाहतं क्वापि कदाचिन्मानवर्जितम् । भुञ्जे भुक्त्वाथ कस्मिंश्चिद् दिवा नक्तं यदृच्छया । ३८ ।
 क्षौमं दुकूलमजिनं चीरं वल्कलमेव वा । वसेऽन्यदपि सम्प्राप्तं दिष्टभुक् तुष्टधीरहम् । ३९ ।
 क्वचिच्छये धरोपस्थे तृणपर्णाश्मभस्मसु । क्वचित् प्रासादपर्यङ्के कशिपौ वा परेच्छया । ४० ।
 क्वचित् स्नातोऽनुलिप्ताङ्गः सुवासाः स्रग्व्यलंकृतः । रथेभाश्चैश्वरे क्वापि दिग्वासा ग्रहवद् विभो । ४१ ।
 नाहं निन्दे न च स्तौमि स्वभावविषमं जनम् । एतेषां श्रेय आशासे उतैकात्म्यं महात्मनि । ४२ ।

The very best among our teachers in this world are the bee and the python, by (following) whose example we have acquired (first) dispassion and (then) contentment. (34) Killing the

(rightful) owner, another may usurp even his hard-earned wealth like the honey that has been collected (by the bee) with great pains. (In this way) aversion from all objects of desire has been learnt by me from the bee. (35) (Just) like a python I remain effortless and contented in mind with whatever is got by chance. (Even) if I get nothing, I remain lying (without food) for many days, depending on my own strength (power of resistance). (36) Now I eat a scanty fare and now plentiful, no matter whether it is delicious or tasteless; now I partake of a meal rich in many qualities and now gulp worthless provender. (37) Sometime I eat food offered with reverence, while at other times I (am compelled to) eat food which is served without (any tinge of) honour. At some places I eat even after having eaten (once); while (at other places) I eat by day or by night according to chance. (38) Enjoying what is ordained by fate and contented in mind I put on silk or linen, deerskin or rags, the bark of trees or even (any) other fabric that may be easily obtained. (39) Now I lie down on the earth's surface (bare ground) and now on straws, leaves a slab of stone or ashes. (And) now I repose on a quilt stretched on a bedstead inside a palace in compliance with another's will. (40) Sometimes having bathed and besmeared my body with sandal-paste and finely dressed, nay, wearing a garland and decked with jewels, I drive in a chariot, or ride on horse-back or on an elephant; while at other times, O king, I roam (about) stark-naked like an evil spirit. (41) I neither revile nor eulogize men who are diverse of disposition (due to the predominance of any one of the three modes of Prakṛti, viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas). On the other hand, I (only) wish them welfare in the shape of (their) unity of being with Lord Viṣṇu (the supreme Spirit). (42)

विकल्पं जुहुयाच्चित्तौ तां मनस्यर्थविभ्रमे । मनो वैकारिके हुत्वा तन्मायायां जुहोत्यनु । ४३ ।

आत्मानुभूतौ तां मायां जुहुयात् सत्यदृङ्मुनिः । ततो निरीहो विरमेत् स्वानुभूत्याऽऽत्मनि स्थितः । ४४ ।

स्वात्मवृत्तं मयेत्थं ते सुगुप्तमपि वर्णितम् । व्यपेतं लोकशास्त्राभ्यां भवान् हि भगवत्परः । ४५ ।

(In order to attain such a state) one should (mentally) merge the notion of diversity in the mental faculty of perceiving such diversity and that faculty (itself) in the mind, which is responsible for our misconception of things (mistaking the body for the Self). (Again) merging the mind in the Sāttvika aspect of the Ego, he should then merge the latter (through the Mahat-tattva) into the Māyā (Prakṛti or primordial Matter). (43) A contemplative soul should merge the said Māyā in the (Self-conscious) Brahma and then, fixing his eyes on the (supreme) Reality and established in that self-conscious (supreme) Spirit and devoid of effort, he should become actionless. (44) In this way, since you are beloved of the Lord, I have told you about my own conduct, although it is very mysterious and repugnant to (all) secular and Vedic (religious) canons. (45)

नारद उवाच

धर्मं पारमहंस्यं वै मुनेः श्रुत्वासुरेश्वरः । पूजयित्वा ततः प्रीत आमन्त्र्य प्रययौ गृहम् । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे युधिष्ठिरनारदसंवादे यतिधर्मं त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः । १३ ।

Nārada went on : Having (thus) attentively heard from (the lips of) the sage (Dattātreya) an account of the course of conduct prescribed for ascetics of the highest order and after (duly) worshipping him and taking his permission, Prahrāda (the lord of the Asuras) returned thence to his home, full of delight. (46)

Thus ends the thirteenth discourse, forming part of the dialogue between Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira and the sage Nārada and bearing on the course of conduct prescribed for a recluse, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIV

An inquiry into right conduct (continued)

युधिष्ठिर उवाच

गृहस्थ एतां पदवीं विधिना येन चाञ्जसा । याति देवऋषे ब्रूहि मादृशो गृहमूढधीः । १ ।

Yudhiṣṭhira submitted : O celestial sage, (pray) tell me the method (course of conduct) by which a householder like me, whose mind is excessively attached to his household, may easily attain the said state (final beatitude). (1)

नारद उवाच

गृहेष्ववस्थितो राजन्क्रियाः कुर्वन् गृहोचिताः । वासुदेवार्पणं साक्षादुपासीत महामुनीन् । २ ।

शृण्वन्भगवतोऽभीक्ष्णमवतारकथामृतम् । श्रद्धधानो यथाकालमुपशान्तजनावृतः । ३ ।

सत्सङ्गाच्छनकैः सङ्गमात्मजायात्मजादिषु । विमुच्येन्मुच्यमानेषु स्वयं स्वप्नवदुत्थितः । ४ ।

यावदर्थमुपासीनो देहे गेहे च पण्डितः । विरक्तो रक्तवत् तत्र नृलोके नरतां न्यसेत् । ५ ।

ज्ञातयः पितरौ पुत्रा भ्रातरः सुहृदोऽपरे । यद् वदन्ति यदिच्छन्ति चानुमोदेत निर्ममः । ६ ।

दिव्यं भौमं चान्तरिक्षं वित्तमच्युतनिर्मितम् । तत् सर्वमुपभुञ्जान एतत् कुर्यात् स्वतो बुधः । ७ ।

यावद् श्रियेत जठरं तावत् स्वत्वं हि देहिनाम् । अधिकं योऽभिमन्येत स स्तेनो दण्डमर्हति । ८ ।

मृगोष्ट्रखरमर्काखुसरीसृपवगमक्षिकाः । आत्मनः पुत्रवत् पश्येत्तैरैषामन्तरं कियत् । ९ ।

त्रिवर्गं नातिकृच्छ्रेण भजेत गृहमेध्यपि । यथादेशं यथाकालं यावदैवोपपादितम् । १० ।

आश्वाघान्तेऽवसायिभ्यः कामान्संविभजेद् यथा । अप्येकामात्मनो दारां नृणां स्वत्वग्रहो यतः । ११ ।

जह्याद् यदर्थं स्वप्राणान्हन्याद् वा पितरं गुरुम् । तस्यां स्वत्वं स्त्रियां जह्याद् यस्तेन ह्यजितो जितः । १२ ।

कृमिविड्भस्मनिष्ठान्तं वेदं तुच्छं कलेवरम् । क्व तदीयरतिर्भार्या क्वायमात्मा नभश्छदिः । १३ ।

Nārada replied : Staying in his house, O king (Yudhiṣṭhira), and (duly) performing the duties proper to the life of a householder as an offering to Lord Viṣṇu Himself for His pleasure alone (expecting no reward for them), a man should wait upon great sages (devotees of the Lord). (2) Surrounded by (associating with) men who are tranquil (by nature) and reverently hearing again and again according to his leisure the nectar-like stories of the Lord's descents, he should gradually give up through the fellowship of saints attachment to his body, wife, progeny, etc., who are themselves going to be severed (from him), (even) as he who has woke up (from a dream) gives up attachment to (the objects seen in) a dream. (3-4) Serving his body and household only to the extent it is (absolutely) necessary to do so and (outwardly) appearing like one attached to them, though (inwardly) disgusted (with them), a wise man should exhibit (his) humanity (behave like ordinary men) in the midst of men. (5) And not recognizing anything as his own, he should give his assent to whatever his kinsmen, parents, sons, brothers and other relations say and whatever they desire (so that there may be no occasion for tussle with them). (6) A wise man (aware of the infinite resources of the Lord) should do (all) this (the duties enjoined on a householder) while enjoying the wealth acquired by the grace of the Lord as well as that obtained from the earth, nay, (even) that got as a windfall, everything having been produced by Viṣṇu (the immortal Lord). (7) That much (and not more) constitutes the (rightful) due of living beings (men), with which their belly may be filled (their body and soul may be kept together). He who claims more is a thief and deserves punishment. (8) He should look upon deer, camels, donkeys, monkeys, rats, reptiles, birds and flies as though they were their (own) children What is that which distinguishes these from those (children)? (They deserve his fostering care as much as his own children). (9) Even a householder should not seek after the (first) three objects of human pursuit (viz., religious merit, worldly possessions and sensuous enjoyment) with great pains, but (only) as much (of them) as has been assigned (to him) by fate and (that too) with due regard to place and time. (10) He should unsparingly divide in due proportion (all) objects of enjoyment among all including dogs, sinful creatures and those belonging to the lowest strata of society (lit., those living at the end of a town or village); (nay, not minding his own inconvenience,) he should allow those deserving of service the (legitimate) use (unobjectionable services) even of his only wife, whom people regard as their (sole) possession. (11) The Lord (who is conquered by none) is veritably conquered by him who (inwardly) relinquishes his claim on that (his) wife for whose sake a man is prone to lay down his own life or (even) to kill his (own) father and teacher (in the event of their being suspected to have illicit connection with her). (12) How despicable (on the one hand) is this worthless body, which is sure to be reduced in the end (after death) to the state of worms (on getting decomposed if interred) or converted into ordure (if left unprotected and devoured by carnivorous animals) or into ashes (if cremated) and equally despicable is (the body of) a wife, who is loved for the sake of such a body; and how exalted (on the other hand) is this soul (our real Self), which is all-pervading (lit., covers the entire space by its glory) ! (13)

सिद्धैर्यज्ञावशिष्टार्थैः कल्पयेद् वृत्तिमात्मनः । शेषे स्वत्वं त्यजन्नाज्ञः पदवीं महतामियात् । १४ ।
 देवानृषीन् नृभूतानि पितृनात्मानमन्वहम् । स्ववृत्त्यागतवित्तेन यजेत पुरुषं पृथक् । १५ ।
 यद्वात्मनोऽधिकाराद्याः सर्वाः स्युर्यज्ञसम्पदः । वैतानिकेन विधिना अग्निहोत्रादिना यजेत् । १६ ।
 न ह्यग्निमुखतोऽयं वै भगवान्सर्वयज्ञभुक् । इज्येत हविषा राजन्यथा विप्रमुखे हुतैः । १७ ।
 तस्माद् ब्राह्मणदेवेषु मर्त्यादिषु यथार्हतः । तैस्तैः कामैर्यजस्वैर्न क्षेत्रज्ञं ब्राह्मणाननु । १८ ।
 कुर्यादापरपक्षीयं मासि प्रौष्ठपदे द्विजः । श्राद्धं पित्रोर्यथावित्तं तद्वन्धूनां च वित्तवान् । १९ ।
 अयने विषुवे कुर्याद् व्यतीपाते दिनक्षये । चन्द्रादित्योपरागे च द्वादशीश्रवणेषु च । २० ।
 तृतीयायां शुक्लपक्षे नवम्यामथ कार्तिके । चतसृष्वष्टकासु हेमन्ते शिशरे तथा । २१ ।
 माघे च सितसप्तम्यां मघाराकासमागमे । राक्या चानुमत्या वा मासर्क्षाणि युतान्यपि । २२ ।
 द्वादश्यामनुराधा स्याच्छ्रवणस्तिस्र उत्तराः । तिसृष्वेकादशी वाऽऽसु जन्मर्क्षश्रौणयोगयुक् । २३ ।
 त एते श्रेयसः काला नृणां श्रेयोविवर्धनाः । कुर्यात् सर्वात्मनैतेषु श्रेयोऽमोघं तदायुषः । २४ ।
 एषु स्नानं जपो होमो व्रतं देवद्विजार्चनम् । पितृदेवनृभूतेभ्यो यद् दत्तं तद्व्यनश्चरम् । २५ ।
 संस्कारकालो जायाया अपत्यस्यात्मनस्तथा । प्रेतसंस्था मृताहश्च कर्मण्यभ्युदये नृप । २६ ।

A householder should sustain himself with (live on) articles (of food etc.) obtained by force of destiny and left after (the performance of) the five great sacrifices (respectful offerings to the animal kingdom, human beings, manes, Ṛṣis and gods). Forgoing his claim on everything else, a wise man bids fair to attain the position of exalted souls (ascetics of the highest order). (14) With the wherewithal earned through one's own vocation he should daily worship the (highest) Puruṣa (the Inner Controller of all) separately in the form of the gods (the divine intelligences presiding over the various departments of Nature), Ṛṣis (seers), human beings, the animal kingdom, manes (the spirits of the departed) and his own self. (15) When all the requisites for (the performance of) a sacrifice including his eligibility for it are forthcoming, he should worship the Deity by means of oblations poured into the (sacred) fire and other sacrificial rites in accordance with the procedure laid down in the sacred texts detailing such procedure, (16) Indeed the said almighty Lord, the enjoyer of all sacrifices is not (so) fully propitiated by oblations offered through the (sacrificial) fire, O Yudhiṣṭhira, as by offerings (in the shape of morsels of cooked food) dropped into the mouth of a Brāhmaṇa (a member of the priestly class). (17) Therefore, worship the aforesaid Lord (the Inner Controller of all) through the Brāhmaṇas and the gods, as well as through other human beings and other living creatures, (of course) after the Brāhmaṇas, according to their respective worth, through various objects of enjoyment. (18) A Dwija (a member of the twice-born classes) possessed of the wherewithal should perform, in the (lunar) month of Prauṣṭhapada (i.e., Bhādrapada, if a month is taken to commence with the bright fortnight, or Āśvina if it is taken to commence with the dark fortnight) according to his means, the Śrāddha pertaining to the dark fortnight (and known by the name of Mahālaya) in honour of his (deceased) parents as well as of their relations and others. (19) He should (similarly) perform their Śrāddha at the time of the summer and winter solstices and the vernal and autumnal equinoxes; during the particular (seventeenth) astronomical division of time called Vyatipāta; on the day when a Tithi (a lunar day begins and ends without one sunrise or between two sunrises; during a lunar or solar eclipse; on a twelfth lunar day as well as during the period when the constellations known by the name of Śravaṇa, Dhaniṣṭhā and Satabhiṣā are ascendant; on the third (lunar day) of the bright half of Vaiśākha as well as on the ninth (lunar day) of the bright half of Kārtika; on the four Aṣṭakās (the eighth lunar days of the dark fortnight) during the seasons known by the name of Hemanta and Śiśira (the months of Mārgaśīrṣa, Pauṣa, Māgha and Phālguna); on the seventh (lunar day) of the bright fortnight of the month of Māgha; on the full-moon day (of Māgha) when the constellation called Maghā is ascendant; (nay,) even when the constellations associated with (and accounting for the names of) the (other) lunar months (also) appear on a full moon or even when the moon rises one digit less than the full on that day; on any twelfth lunar day when (the constellations of) Anurādhā, Śravaṇa and (any of) the three constellation associated with the name of Uttarā (namely, Uttarā Phālgunī, Uttarāṣāḍhā and Uttarā Bhādrapadā) are ascendant; or when the eleventh lunar day (of any month) is conjoined with (any of) these (constellations); (and lastly) on any day when the constellation under which one was born or (the constellation of) Śravaṇa is ascendant. (20—23) These aforesaid periods are suitable (not only for Śrāddha but) for all virtuous acts to be performed by men inasmuch as they enhance to a large extent the merit of the performer. One should practise virtue (in any form or shape) on (all) these days with all one's being; (for) there lies the fruitfulness of one's life. (24) Ablution, Japa (the muttering of prayers), Homa (offering oblations into the sacred fire), any sacred vow and worship of the gods and the Brāhmaṇas that may be undertaken, and any gift that may be made to the manes, gods, human beings and (other) living beings on these occasions surely become imperishable (bring everlasting good). (25) (Nay,) one should undertake such acts of virtue (even) when the time comes for (the performance of) any purificatory rite for the benefit of one's wife or son, nay, of one's own self, the cremation of a dead body and the death anniversary of one's parents and others and (also) on the occasion of any (other) ceremony intended to promote one's welfare, O Yudhiṣṭhira ! (26)

अथ देशान्नवक्ष्यामि धर्मादिश्रेयआवहान् । स वै पुण्यतमो देशः सत्पात्रं यत्र लभ्यते । २७ ।

विष्णुं भगवतो यत्र सर्वमेतच्छराचरम् । यत्र ह ब्राह्मणकुलं तपोविद्यादयान्वितम् । २८ ।

यत्र यत्र हरेर्चा स देशः श्रेयसां पदम् । यत्र गङ्गादयो नद्यः पुराणेषु च विश्रुताः । २९ ।

सरांसि पुष्करादीनि क्षेत्राण्यर्हाश्रितान्युत । कुरुक्षेत्रं गयशिरः प्रयागः पुलहाश्रमः । ३० ।

नैमिषं फाल्गुनं सेतुः प्रभासोऽथ कुशस्थली । वाराणसी मधुपुरी पम्पा बिन्दुसरस्तथा । ३१ ।
 नारायणाश्रमो नन्दा सीतारामाश्रमादयः । सर्वे कुलाचला राजन्महेन्द्रमलयादयः । ३२ ।
 एते पुण्यतमा देशा हरेरर्चाश्रिताश्च ये । एतान्देशान् निषेवेत श्रेयस्कामो ह्यभीक्ष्णशः ।
 धर्मो ह्यत्रेहितः पुंसां सहस्राधिफलोदयः । ३३ ।

Now I shall fully enumerate the places conducive to religious merit and other good. That is unquestionably the most sacred tract where can be found a worthy man, the (very) likeness of the almighty Lord—in whom dwells the whole of this creation, animate as well as inanimate—and where stays the Brāhmaṇa race endowed with austerity, learning and compassion. (27-28) (Again,) that area is the abode of (all) blessings, wherever there is an image of Śrī Hari, and where there are rivers like the (holy) Gaṅgā celebrated in the Purāṇas and other sacred works. (29) Lakes such as Puṣkara and sacred spots inhabited by venerable souls Kurukṣetra, Gayā (the spot where fell the head of the demon Gaya), Prayāga (the confluence of the Gaṅgā and the Yamunā rivers), the hermitage (known by the name of Śālagrāma-Kṣetra) of the sage Pulaha, (the forest of) Naimiṣa (the modern Nimsār or Misrikh), Phālguna (the Kanyātirtha, now known as Cape Comerin), the (holy) bridge (attributed to Śrī Rāma and existing at Rāmeśwaram), Prabhāsa (also known by the name of Śaṅkhoddhāra and famous for its historical shrine of Somanātha) and Kuśasthali (Dwārakā), Vārāṇasī (the modern Banaras), Mathurā (the capital of the demon chief Madhu, killed by Śatrughna, Śrī Rāma's youngest brother, and the birth-place of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa), lake Pampā and Bindusara (on whose strand stood the hermitage of the sage Kardama, father of Lord Kapila), Badarikāśrama (the modern Badrinātha, the hermitage of the sage Nārāyaṇa), the river Nandā (better known as Alakanandā), Citrakūṭa (the hermitage of Sītā and Rāma) and so on, O king, and all the principal mountain-ranges such as Mahendra and Malaya and places which are consecrated by the (fixed) idols of Śrī Hari—these are (by far) the holiest tracts. Surely one desirous of blessedness should repeatedly sojourn in these places. For virtue practised here yields fruit a thousand times more than at other places. (30—33)

पात्रं त्वत्र निरुक्तं वै कविभिः पात्रवित्तमैः । हरिरेवैक उर्वीश यन्मयं वै चराचरम् । ३४ ।
 देवर्ष्यर्हत्सु वै सत्सु तत्र ब्रह्मात्मजादिषु । राजन्यदग्रपूजायां मतः पात्रतयाच्युतः । ३५ ।
 जीवराशिभिराकीर्णं आपडकोशाङ्घ्रिपो महान् । तन्मूलत्वादच्युतेज्या सर्वजीवात्मतर्पणम् । ३६ ।
 पुराण्यनेन सृष्टानि नृतिर्यगृषिदेवताः । शेते जीवेन रूपेण पुरेषु पुरुषो ह्यसौ । ३७ ।
 तेष्वेषु भगवान्राजंस्तारतम्येन वर्तते । तस्मात् पात्रं हि पुरुषो यावानात्मा यथेयते । ३८ ।

By the seers standing foremost among the judges of worthy souls, indeed, Śrī Hari and Śrī Hari alone, of whom the mobile and immobile creation is surely constituted, O ruler of the earth, has been concluded to be really worthy of honour in this world. (34) For in that (Rājasūya) sacrifice (performed by you the other day), in the presence even of gods, Ṛṣis (seers) and adepts (in austerity and Yoga etc.) such as Sanaka and his (three) brothers (the mind-born sons of Brahmā, the creator), O king, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) was recognized as worthy of being adored in the first instance. (35) The great tree in the shape of the egg-shaped universe is crowded with multitudes of Jivas (embodied souls). He being the root of this tree, to worship Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) is to gratify all living beings as well as one's own self. (36) The (varied) dwellings in the form of (the bodies of) human beings, animals, Ṛṣis (the mind-born sons of Brahmā, the creator) and gods have been evolved by Him. He is (known as) the Puruṣa (the dweller in these habitations) inasmuch as He dwells in these abodes in the form of the embodied soul (and also as their Inner Controller). (37)

In these aforementioned bodies, O king, the Lord is present in different degrees (according to the proportion of intelligence, power etc., manifest in them). Hence (because according to this principle, a human soul manifests divinity in a greater degree than the sub-human creation,) a human being (alone) is really deserving of honour. (Even) human beings are worthy of respect more or less in proportion to the degree of self-consciousness manifest in each (individual case)*.(38)

दृष्ट्वा तेषां मिथो नृणामवज्ञानात्मतां नृप। त्रेतादिषु हरेर्चा क्रियायै कविभिः कृता । ३९।
ततोऽर्चायां हरिं केचित् संश्रद्धाय सपर्यया। उपासत उपास्तापि नार्थदा पुरुषद्विषाम् । ४०।
पुरुषेष्वपि राजेन्द्र सुपात्रं ब्राह्मणं विदुः। तपसा विद्यया तुष्ट्या धत्ते वेदं हरेस्तनुम् । ४१।
नन्वस्य ब्राह्मणा राजन्कृष्णस्य जगदात्मनः। पुनन्तः पादरजसा त्रिलोकीं दैवतं महत् । ४२।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे सदाचारनिर्णयो नाम चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः । १४।

Perceiving the inclination among the aforesaid human souls to despise one another, O Yudhiṣṭhira, the image of Śrī Hari was instituted by the wise for worship in Tretā and the following Yugas. (39) Thenceforward some people began to worship Śrī Hari in images with (various) articles of worship, viewing them with great reverence. Though (reverently) worshipped, an image does not yield the desired result to misanthropes. (40) Even among men, O king of kings, the wise recognize a Brāhmaṇa (a member of the priestly class) as eminently worthy of respect. (For) by virtue of (his) asceticism, learning and contentment he preserves the Veda, constituting the body of Śrī Hari. (41) Sanctifying the three worlds (heaven, earth and the aerial region) with the (very) dust of their feet, the Brāhmaṇas, O king are indeed worthy of great adoration even in the eyes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Soul of the universe.(42)

*Thus ends the fourteenth discourse entitled "An inquiry into right conduct (continued)", in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XV

An inquiry into right conduct (concluded)

नारद उवाच

कर्मनिष्ठा द्विजाः केचित् तपोनिष्ठा नृपापरे। स्वाध्यायेऽन्ये प्रवचने ये केचिज्ज्ञानयोगयोः । १।
ज्ञाननिष्ठाय देयानि कव्यान्यानन्यमिच्छता। दैवे च तदभावे स्यादितरेभ्यो यथार्हतः । २।
द्वौ दैवे पितृकार्यं त्रीनेकैकमुभयत्र वा। भोजयेत् सुसमृद्धोऽपि श्राद्धे कुर्यान्न विस्तरम् । ३।
देशकालोचितश्रद्धाद्रव्यपात्रार्हणानि च। सम्यग् भवन्ति नैतानि विस्तरात् स्वजनार्पणात् । ४।
देशे काले च सम्प्राप्ते मुन्यन्नं हरिदैवतम्। श्रद्धया विधिवत् पात्रे न्यस्तं कामधुगक्षयम् । ५।
देवर्षिपितृभूतेभ्य आत्मने स्वजनाय च। अन्नं संविभज्यन्त्येत् सर्वं तत् पुरुषात्मकम् । ६।

* This is corroborated by the Śruti text 'तुभ्यस्मै चरितदयान्ता' (the self is manifest in a greater degree in human kind).

Nārada began again : Some Brāhmaṇas are devoted to rituals (laid down in the scriptures as pertaining to their grade in society and stage in life), while others, O ruler of men, are intent on (the practice of) austerities. (Still) others are those that have pinned their faith in the study and teaching of the Vedas and other scriptures; while (yet) others are given to the pursuit of Jñāna (spiritual enlightenment) and Yoga or Devotion (each succeeding class being regarded as superior to the preceding one). (1) By one seeking immortality (for oneself or for the departed soul), oblations of food etc., intended for the spirit of a deceased relation (on the occasion of a Śrāddha) as well as for gods in a ritual intended to propitiate the gods should be offered to one devoted to the pursuit of spiritual enlightenment. In the absence of such a Brāhmaṇa (of course) the offering may be given to others (those devoted to rituals etc.) according to their merit (giving preference to the higher types if a choice has to be made). (2) One should feed (only) two Brāhmaṇas in the course of a rite intended to propitiate the gods and three in a ceremony (Śrāddha) in the interest of a deceased relative or (only) one on either occasion. Though very rich, a householder should not invite a large number (of Brāhmaṇas) during a Śrāddha feast. (3) (For) due to (his) feeding a large number and offering food to his relatives, (the amount of) reverence befitting the place and time (of the ceremony) the (quality of) materials (of food etc, used on the occasion), a worthy recipient (for the offerings) and (the correct procedure of) worship—(all) these cannot be adequately ensured. (4) When a (proper) place and time are available, food fit for (the consumption of) hermits (such as wild rice), offered (in the first instance) to Śrī Hari and (then) served with (due) reverence and in accordance with the scriptural ordinance to a worthy recipient yields the desired fruit (to those who crave for it) and proves (to be a source of) everlasting (good to a seeker of blessedness). (5) Duly distributing the food (cooked on such occasions) among the gods, the Ṛṣis (the seers), the manes and other living beings, one's own self and one's relatives, one should look upon all these as (so many) forms of the Supreme Person. (6)

न दद्यादामिषं श्राद्धे न चाद्याद् धर्मतत्त्ववित् । मुन्यन्नैः स्यात्परा प्रीतिर्यथा न पशुहिंसया । ७ ।
 नैतादृशः परो धर्मो नृणां सद्धर्ममिच्छताम् । न्यासो दण्डस्य भूतेषु मनोवाक्कायजस्य यः । ८ ।
 एके कर्ममयान् यज्ञान् ज्ञानिनो यज्ञवित्तमाः । आत्मसंयमनेऽनीहा जुह्वति ज्ञानदीपिते । ९ ।
 द्रव्ययज्ञैर्यक्ष्यमाणं दृष्ट्वा भूतानि बिभ्यति । एष माकरुणो हन्यादतज्ज्ञो ह्यसुतृब्धुवम् । १० ।
 तस्माद् दैवोपपन्नेन मुन्यन्नेनापि धर्मवित् । सन्तुष्टोऽहरहः कुर्यान्नित्यनैमित्तिकीः क्रियाः । ११ ।
 विधर्मः परधर्मश्च आभास उपमा छलः । अधर्मशाखाः पञ्चेमा धर्मज्ञोऽधर्मवत् त्यजेत् । १२ ।
 धर्मबाधो विधर्मः स्यात् परधर्मोऽन्यचोदितः । उपधर्मस्तु पाखण्डो दम्भो वा शब्दभिच्छलः । १३ ।
 यस्त्विच्छया कृतः पुम्भिराभासो ह्याश्रमात् पृथक् । स्वभावविहितो धर्मः कस्य नेष्टुः प्रशान्तये । १४ ।

One who knows the essence of piety should not offer meat (to the manes) in a Śrāddha ceremony nor should he eat it (himself). The type of supreme gratification caused (to the manes as well as to the Lord Himself) through cereals fit for (the consumption of) anchorites (because involving no destruction of life) is never brought about through (meat etc., obtained by) the killing of animals. (7) For men seeking true piety there is no other such virtue as abstinence from violence to living beings, perpetrated through mind, speech and body. (8) (That is why) some wise men, (who are) foremost among the knowers of the truth about sacrifices and free from desire offer sacrifices consisting of rituals into the fire of self-control kindled by Knowledge (of the Self). (That is to say, they completely withdraw themselves from external rituals.) (9) Seeing one proceeding to propitiate the Lord through sacrifices conducted with material substances, animals grow apprehensive lest the merciless fellow, who is ignorant of the truth of the Spirit and is (therefore) given to the (mere) gratification of his self, will surely kill them. (10) Therefore, (remaining ever) contented, he who knows what is right should perform from day to day (his) obligatory and occasional duties even with the cereals fit for (the consumption of) hermits and obtained by force of destiny (rather than undertake big sacrifices involving destruction of life). (11) He who knows (what is) piety should give up Vidharma, Paradharma, Ābhāsa, Upamā (Upadharmā) and Chala—these five offshoots of Adharma (vice) (even) as vice (itself, which is directly prohibited). (12) Vidharma is that which interferes with (the pursuit of) one's own prescribed conduct even though practised as a virtue; while Paradharma is that which is prescribed for another (and not for one's own self). A course of conduct recommended in a scripture opposed to the Vedas or intended to deceive another is Upadharmā (or Upamā) whereas Chala is that course of conduct which is justified by distorting the sacred texts, (13) (And) that which has been originated by men according to their own whim as apart from the (four established) Āśramas or stages in life is (known by the name of) Ābhāsa. (The aforesaid five surely lead to frustration.) And in whose case has a course of conduct enjoined by one's own innate disposition (on the other hand) not proved capable of alleviating distress? (14)

धर्मार्थमपि नेहेत यात्रार्थं वाधनो धनम् । अनीहानीहमानस्य महाहरिम् वृत्तिदा । १५ ।
 सन्तुष्टस्य निरीहस्य स्वात्मारामस्य यत् सुखम् । कुतस्तत् कामलोभेन धावतोऽर्थेहया दिशः । १६ ।
 सदा सन्तुष्टमनसः सर्वाः सुखमया दिशः । शर्कराकण्टकादिभ्यो यथोपानत्पदः शिवम् । १७ ।
 सन्तुष्टः केन वा राजन्न । वर्तेतापि वारिणा । औपस्थजैह्वयकार्पण्याद् गृहपालायते जनः । १८ ।
 असन्तुष्टस्य विप्रस्य तेजो विद्या तपो यशः । स्रवन्तीन्द्रियलौल्येन ज्ञानं चैवावकीर्यते । १९ ।
 कामस्यान्तं च क्षुचूडभ्यां क्रोधस्यैतत्फलोदयात् । जनो याति न लोभस्य जित्वा भुक्त्वा दिशो भुवः । २० ।
 पण्डिता बहवो राजन्बहुजाः संशयच्छिदः । सदसस्पतयोऽप्येके असन्तोषात् पतन्त्यधः । २१ ।

An indigent man should not endeavour to obtain wealth even for the sake of piety or for maintenance. Effortlessness proves to be a means of subsistence to a man who ceases to strive (even) as it does in the case of a python. (15) How can that (supreme and lasting) happiness which falls to the lot of a contented and effortless man delighting in his own self be enjoyed by one running in all directions in quest of wealth out of greed for objects of sense? (16) To a man ever contented in mind all directions are full of happiness, (just) as there is (complete) security from gravel and thorns etc., for him whose feet are protected by shoes. (17) With what cannot a contented man get on, O Yudhiṣṭhira, say, even with water? It is (only) due to (his) longing for the delights of sex and the palate that a man behaves (knocks about from door to door) like a dog. (18) The glory, learning, austerity and fame of a discontented Brāhmaṇa disappear and his wisdom gets dissipated due to the vagrancy of his senses. (19) A man reaches the end of (is able to conquer) passion through hunger and thirst, and the end of wrath on the appearance of its sequel (in the shape of violence); but he fails to reach the end of greed (even) after conquering the (four) quarters and enjoying the sovereignty of (many) lands. (20) Many a learned man, possessing extensive knowledge and capable of dispelling (others') doubts, O king, and even some heads of assemblies descend into depths of hell through discontent. (21)

असङ्कल्पाजयेत् कामं क्रोधं कामविवर्जनात् । अर्थार्थेक्षया लोभं भयं तत्त्वावमर्शनात् । २२ ।
 आन्वीक्षिक्या शोकमोहौ दम्भं महदुपासया । योगान्तरायान् मौनेन हिंसां कायाद्यनीहया । २३ ।
 कृपया भूतजं दुःखं दैवं जह्यात् समाधिना । आत्मजं योगवीर्येण निद्रां सत्त्वनिषेवया । २४ ।
 रजस्तमश्च सत्त्वेन सत्त्वं चोपशमेन च । एतत् सर्वं गुरौ भक्त्या पुरुषो ह्यञ्जसा जयेत् । २५ ।

यस्य साक्षाद् भगवति ज्ञानदीपप्रदे गुरौ । मर्त्यासद्धीः श्रुतं तस्य सर्वं कुञ्जरशौचवत् । २६ ।

एष वै भगवान्साक्षात् प्रधानपुरुषेश्वरः । योगेश्वरैर्विमृग्याद्घ्निल्लोको यं मन्यते नरम् । २७ ।

One should conquer desire through lack of determination to gratify it, wrath by eschewing desire, greed by looking upon wealth as an evil, fear by pondering the true nature of things (unity of life), grief and infatuation by distinguishing matter from Spirit, hypocrisy through service to exalted souls, impediments (such as worldly gossip) in the path of Yoga (concentration of mind) through (a vow of) silence, violence (to others) through inactivity of body etc., (giving up all efforts for securing religious merit, worldly riches and sensuous enjoyment). (22-23) He should get rid of pain resulting from (other) living beings through compassion (friendly behaviour to those very beings), suffering brought about by divine agencies (natural phenomena) by recourse to composure of mind (calm resignation to the divine will), bodily distemper by dint of Yogic practices (such as breath-control and so on) and sleep by recourse to Sāttvika food etc. (24) (Again,) a man should conquer Rajas (passion) and Tamas (inertia) by dint of Sattva and Sattva through freedom from attachment and indeed all these (the evils enumerated above) with ease through devotion to one's preceptor. (25) Analogous to the bath of an elephant (which throws dust on its body immediately after washing it) is all sacred knowledge possessed by a man who entertains the perverted notion about the teacher—who has conferred on him the light of wisdom and (as such) is no other than the Lord—that he is a mortal (like himself). (26) Just as Śrī Kṛṣṇa, present before you, is the ruler of (both) Prakṛti (primordial Matter), and Puruṣa (the individual soul), and His feet are worthy of being sought after even by masters of Yoga (like Śiva), and yet the world looks upon Him as a human being, so is the case with the preceptor, who is (invariably) the same as the Lord. (27)

षड्वर्गसंयमैकान्ताः सर्वा नियमचोदनाः । तदन्ता यदि नो योगानावहेयुः श्रमावहाः । २८ ।

यथा वार्तादयो ह्यर्था योगस्यार्थं न विभ्रति । अनर्थाय भवेयुस्ते पूर्वमिष्टं तथासतः । २९ ।

All precepts of the nature of an ordinance (such as those enjoining sacrifices and works of public utility etc.) solely aim at the subjugation of the five senses and the mind. (Even) though aiming at this, they entail (only) fruitless labour if they do not bring in their train the (three) stages of contemplation on the Lord (in the shape of Dhāraṇā, Dhyāna and Samādhi). (28) (Just) as (vocational) pursuits like agriculture (and their rewards in the shape of a bumper crop and so on) do not evidently contribute to Liberation (the object of Yoga or concentration of mind), (on the other hand,) they make for transmigration (which is a positive evil), so do sacrifices and works of public utility (such as digging of wells, tanks and so on) under-taken by him who has his face turned away from God lead to metempsychosis (alone rather than to Liberation). (29)

यश्चित्तविजये यतः स्यान्निःसङ्गोऽपरिग्रहः । एको विविक्षरणो भिक्षुर्भिक्षामिताशनः । ३० ।

देशे शुचौ समे राजसंस्थाप्यासनमात्मनः । स्थिरं समं सुखं तस्मिन्नासीतर्ज्वङ्ग ओमिति । ३१ ।

प्राणापानौ सन्निरुद्ध्यात् पूरकुम्भकरेचकैः । यावन्मनस्यजेत् कामान् स्वनासाग्रनिरीक्षणः । ३२ ।

यतो यतो निःसरति मनः कामहतं भ्रमत् । ततस्तत उपाहृत्य हृदि रुद्ध्याच्छनैर्बुधः । ३३ ।

एवमभ्यसतश्चित्तं कालेनाल्पीयसा यतेः । अनिशं तस्य निर्वाणं यात्यनिन्धनवह्निवत् । ३४ ।

कामादिभिरनाविद्धं प्रशान्ताखिलवृत्ति यत् । चित्तं ब्रह्मसुखस्पृष्टं नैवोत्तिष्ठेत् कर्हिचित् । ३५ ।

He who is intent upon the subjugation of (his) mind should become a recluse (renounce the world) and live alone in a secluded place, free from attachment and devoid of possession and subsisting on scanty fare obtained by begging. (30) Arranging his seat (consisting of a mat of Kuśa grass, covered by deerskin with a piece of cloth spread on it), O king, on a clean and level ground, one should squat on it with his body erect in a steady, straight and easy pose, repeating (the mystic syllable) OM. (31) Fixing his gaze on the tip of his nose, he should thoroughly control his expiration and inspiration by (first) inhaling the air, (then) suspending the breath and (finally) exhaling the air (and repeating the process in the same order) till his mind gives up (indulging in diverse desires). (32) A wise man should gradually hold in the heart his roving mind, smitten with desires, withdrawing it from all those objects towards which it goes. (33) The mind of that striver, constantly exerting himself in this way, attains quiescence in a very short time, (even) as a fire without fuel goes out before long. (34) A mind which is no longer agitated by lust etc., (nay,) all whose operations have been completely set at rest and which is immersed in the bliss of absorption into Brahma (the Absolute) will never feel distracted (again). (35)

यः प्रव्रज्य गृहात् पूर्वं त्रिवर्गावपनात् पुनः । यदि सेवेत तान्भिक्षुः स वै वान्ताश्यपत्रपः । ३६ ।

यैः स्वदेहः स्मृतो नात्मा मर्त्यो विदूकमिभस्मसात् । त एनमात्मसात्कृत्वा श्लाघयन्ति ह्यसत्तमाः । ३७ ।

गृहस्थस्य क्रियात्यागो व्रतत्यागो वटोरपि । तपस्विनो ग्रामसेवा भिक्षोरिन्द्रियलोलता । ३८ ।

आश्रमापसदा होते खल्वाश्रमविडम्बकाः । देवमायाविमूढांस्तानुपेक्षेतानुकम्पया । ३९ ।

आत्मानं चेद् विजानीयात् परं ज्ञानधुताशयः । किमिच्छन्कस्य वा हेतोर्देहं पुष्पाति लम्पटः । ४० ।

आहुः शरीरं रथमिन्द्रियाणि हयानभीषून् मन इन्द्रियेशम् ।

वर्तमानि मात्रा धिषणां च सूतं सत्त्वं बृहद् बन्धुरमीशसृष्टम् । ४१ ।

अक्षं दशप्राणमधर्मधर्मौ चक्रेऽभिमानं रथिनं च जीवम् ।

धनुर्हि तस्य प्रणवं पठन्ति शरं तु जीवं परमेव लक्ष्यम् । ४२ ।

रागो द्वेषश्च लोभश्च शोकमोहौ भयं मदः । मानोऽवमानोऽसूया च माया हिंसा च मत्सरः । ४३ ।

रजः प्रमादः क्षुत्रिद्रा शत्रवस्त्वेवमादयः । रजस्तमः प्रकृतयः सत्त्वप्रकृतयः क्वचित् । ४४ ।

यावन्नृकायरथमात्मवशोपकल्पं धत्ते गरिष्ठचरणार्चनया निशातम् ।

ज्ञानासिमच्युतवलो दधदस्तशत्रुः स्वराज्यतुष्ट उपशान्त इदं विजह्यात् । ४५ ।

नो चेत् प्रमत्तमसदिन्द्रियवाजिसूता नीत्वोत्पथं विषयदस्युषु निक्षिपन्ति ।

ते दस्यवः सहयसूतममुं तमोऽप्ये संसारकूप उरुमृत्युभये क्षिपन्ति । ४६ ।

If a recluse, having first retired from (taken leave of) his home—a field for the culture of religious merit, worldly riches and sensuous enjoyment (the first three objects of human pursuit)—seeks after them again, he is indeed a shameless fellow and (virtually) eats what has been vomited. (36) Those very fools who (once) thought of their body as not-self, mortal and sure to be converted into ordure (if left unprotected and allowed to be consumed by carnivorous animals), reduced to the state of worms (if interred and thus allowed to rot) or reduced to ashes (if cremated), treat it (once more) as their (very) self and get others to extol it. (37) Neglect of religious duties on the part of a householder, violation of the vow of chastity etc., on the part of a Brahmacārī (religious student), reversion to a village life on the part of an anchorite and lack of self-restraint on the part of a recluse (are most blame-worthy;—men guilty of these (aberrations) are indeed the vilest among those embracing (any of) the (four) Āśramas (stages in life). They actually bring their Āśrama to ridicule; out of compassion (for them) one should ignore such men, infatuated (as they are) by the deluding potency of the Lord. (38-39) If a man has come to recognize his self as (one with) the Supreme, he must have (all) his cravings uprooted by this knowledge. Seeking what (gain) and for what purpose should he (then) remain addicted to sensual pleasures and nourish his body ? (40) They

(figuratively) speak of the body as a chariot,* the senses as the horses (drawing the chariot), the mind—the ruler of the senses—as the reins (guiding the horses), the objects of senses (sound, etc.) as the paths (to be traversed by the horses), reason (or understanding) as the charioteer and the intellect as his capacious seat, (all) made by God. (41) They actually refer to the ten† vital airs as the axletree, (past) virtue and sin (responsible for the existence and functioning of the body) as the two wheels, the Jīva (embodied soul) identifying itself with the body as the owner (occupant) of the chariot, (the mystic syllable) OM as his bow, the (pure) Self as the shaft and the Supreme Itself as the mark. (42) Attachment and aversion and cupidity, grief and infatuation, fear, vanity, the feelings of pride and ignominy and a carping spirit, deceitfulness, violence and jealousy, instinctive clinging to worldly life and bodily enjoyments, negligence, hunger and sleep and so on are the enemies (to be conquered). They are (all) born of Rajas (passion) and Tamas (ignorance); (while) sometimes propensities (such as compassion) born of Sattva (the principle of goodness too) prove to be our enemies (as they did in the case of Emperor Bharata—vide V. viii). (43-44) While (yet) the Jīva retains the chariot in the shape of a human body with (all) its appurtenances (in the shape of the senses etc.) under his control, he should body with (all) its appurtenances (in the shape of the senses etc.) under his control, he should get rid of (all the aforesaid) enemies, wielding the sword of wisdom sharpened with the worship of the feet of most exalted souls and finding his strength in (depending on) Lord Acyuta (alone). (Then,) sated with the bliss which constitutes His very being and tranquil (of mind), he should cast off the chariot (too). (45) Otherwise the unruly horses in the shape of the senses inclined towards the world as well as the charioteer (in the shape of a feeble understanding) lead the unwary occupant of the chariot astray (put him on the path of worldly activity) and betray him to robbers in the shape of the objects of senses. (And) these robbers hurl him, horses, charioteer and all, into the pit of transmigration, dark with ignorance and beset with the great fear of death. (46)

प्रवृत्तं च निवृत्तं च द्विविधं कर्म वैदिकम् । आवर्तेत प्रवृत्तेन निवृत्तेनाश्रुतेऽमृतम् । ४७ ।
 हिंस्रं द्रव्यमयं काम्यमग्निहोत्राद्यशान्तिदम् । दर्शश्च पूर्णमासश्च चातुर्मास्यं पशुः सुतः । ४८ ।
 एतदिष्टं प्रवृत्ताख्यं हुतं प्रहुतमेव च । पूर्तं सुरालयारामकूपाजीव्यादिलक्षणम् । ४९ ।
 द्रव्यसूक्ष्मविपाकश्च धूमो रात्रिरपक्षयः । अयनं दक्षिणं सोमो दर्श ओषधिवीरुधः । ५० ।
 अन्नं रेत इति क्षमेश पितृयानं पुनर्भवः । एकैकश्येनानुपूर्वं भूत्वा भूत्वेह जायते । ५१ ।
 निषेकादिश्मशानात्तैः संस्कारैः संस्कृतो द्विजः । इन्द्रियेषु क्रियायज्ञान् ज्ञानदीपेषु जुह्वति । ५२ ।
 इन्द्रियाणि मनस्यूर्ध्वं वाचि वैकारिकं मनः । वाचं वर्णसमाम्नाये तमोङ्कारे स्वरे न्यसेत् ।

ओङ्कारं बिन्दौ नादे तं तं तु प्राणे मह्यमुम् । ५३ ।

अग्निः सूर्यो दिवा प्राहुः शुक्लो राकोत्तरं स्वराद् । विश्वश्च तैजसः प्राज्ञस्तुर्य आत्मा समन्वयात् । ५४ ।
 देवयानमिदं प्राहुर्भूत्वा भूत्वानुपूर्वशः । आत्मयाज्युपशान्तात्मा ह्यात्मस्थो न निवर्तते । ५५ ।

Action recommended in the Vedas is of two kinds : Pravṛtta Karma (that which turns the mind towards worldly objects) and Nivṛtta Karma (that which draws the mind away from the external world and turns it inwards). By means of Pravṛtta Karma one is likely to return to mundane existence (in order to enjoy its fruit); while through Nivṛtta Karma one enjoys immortality (final beatitude). (47) A ritual (such as Śyena-Yāga or hawk-sacrifice) having for

* Compare the following verses of the Kāthopaniṣad:

आत्मानं च रश्मिर्न विद्धि शरीरं च रथमेव तु । बुद्धिं तु सारथिं विद्धि मनः प्रग्रहमेव च ॥

इन्द्रियाणि हयानाहुर्विपया च स्तेषु गोचरान् । (I. iii. 3-4)

† For the names and respective functions of the vital airs vide footnote below III. vi. 9.

its object the destruction of an enemy, or that conducted by means of material substances, such as Agnihotra (the daily offering of oblations into the sacred fire), as well as Darśa (a fortnightly sacrifice performed on every Amāvasyā, the last day of a dark fortnight when the sun and the moon dwell together) and Pūrṇamāsa (another fortnightly sacrifice performed on the full moon), Cāturmāsya (one of the three sacrifices performed at the beginning of every four months), an animal sacrifice, a Soma sacrifice, Vaiśwadeva (a rite which must be performed by every householder both morning and evening and especially before the midday meal and consists in homage paid to the Viśwadevas) and even so Balikarma (offering, before the daily meal, morsels of cooked food such as rice, bread etc., to certain gods, semi-divine beings, household divinities, spirits, men, birds, other animals and all creatures including even lifeless objects)—(collectively) known as Iṣṭa (sacrificial acts)—and Pūrta (works of public utility) such as the construction of a temple, a garden, a well or a place where water is supplied to wayfarers, cattle and so on—(both) these are designated as Pravṛtta Karma, if they are undertaken from interested motives, and bring uneasiness (of mind) in their train (accompanied as they are by excessive attachment). (48-49) The subtle modification of material substances (thrown into the fire as oblations, and entering into the constitution of an ethereal body), (the deities presiding over) smoke, the night-time, the dark fortnight, the winter half-year (representing the sun's progress south of the equator) and (the sphere of) the moon, (which mark the gradual ascent of the departed soul, and dissolution of the ethereal body (as illustrated by Amāvasyā, when the moon altogether ceases to appear), annual plants and creepers, foodgrains and vital fluid (which mark its gradual descent)—these, O ruler of the earth, make the path* of Pravṛtta Karma (known by the name

* The idea is that the soul of one devoted to Pravṛtta Karma here is invested after death with an ethereal body made up of the subtle modifications of material substances thrown by him during his lifetime as oblations into the sacred fire; and, united with this body, the soul gradually ascends to the sphere of the moon, being escorted on the way one after another by the deities presiding over smoke, the night-time, the dark fortnight and the winter half-year. Having enjoyed the pleasures of the moon-world (which is a part of heaven) and thus exhausted the merit responsible for its stay there, the soul takes a downward course. As the soul falls from heaven, the ethereal body with which it was clothed in heaven gets dissolved even as the orb of the moon ceases to be visible on an Amāvasyā. Descending on earth with a rain-drop, it enters an annual plant or creeper and appears in the form of a grain. Then, finding its way and getting absorbed into the system of a male human being, it is transformed by stages into the generative fluid, which, on entering the uterus and getting united with the ovum during the process of conception is gradually developed into a male or female embryo. This process of ascent and descent of a human soul devoted to Pravṛtta Karma has been outlined in the verses translated above and is corroborated by the following Śruti text :—

अथ य इमे ग्राम इष्टापूर्ते दत्तमित्युपासते ते धूममभिसम्भवन्ति धूमाद्रात्रिं रात्रेरपरपक्षमपरपक्षाद्यान् दक्षिणैति मासास्तात्रैते संवत्सरमभिप्राप्नुवन्ति ॥ ३ ॥

मासेभ्यः पितृलोकं पितृलोकादाकाशमाकाशच्चन्द्रमसमेध सोमो राजा तद्देवानामन्नं तं देवा भक्षयन्ति ॥ ४ ॥

तस्मिन्यावत्संपातमुषित्वाथैतमेवाध्वानं पुनर्निवर्तन्ते यथेतमाकाशमाकाशाद्वायुं वायुर्भूत्वा धूमो भवति धूमो भूत्वाध्रं भवति ॥ ५ ॥

अध्रं भूत्वा मेघो भवति मेघो भूत्वा प्रवर्षति त इह ब्राह्मिण्यवा ओषधिवनस्पतयस्तिलमाषा इति जायन्तेऽतो वै खलु दुर्मिच्छपतरं यो यो ह्यन्नमति यो रेतः

सिञ्चति तद्भूय एव भवति ॥ ६ ॥

(Chāndogya Upaniṣad V. x. 3-6)

Also compare the following verse of the Bhagavadgītā:—

धूमो रात्रिस्तथा कृष्णः षण्मासा दक्षिणायनम् । तत्र चान्द्रमसं न्यौतियोगी प्राप्य निवर्तते ॥

The other path is that in which are stationed the gods presiding over smoke, night, the dark fortnight and the six months of the southward course of the sun; the Yogī (devoted to action with an interested motive and) taking to this path, after death, is led by the above-said gods, one after another, and attaining to the lustre (region) of the moon (and enjoying the fruit of his meritorious deeds in heaven) returns to this mortal world.

of Pityāna or Dhūmamārga, the Dark Path), characterized by rebirth. Having gone through each one of these stages in the order mentioned above, the soul is reborn on this earth. (50-51) (Only) a member of the twice-born classes (duly) consecrated by (all) the purificatory rites from Garbhādhāna (the ceremony of impregnation performed before conception) down to Antyeṣṭi (the funeral rites performed at the crematory) follows this course. Those devoted to Nivṛtta Karma (on the other hand) offer sacrifices in the form of ritual acts (themselves) into (the fire of) the senses lighted by Knowledge (of the Self). (In other words, they look upon the functions of the senses-as the manifestation of the senses themselves). (52) (Again,) such a man merges his senses in the mind, representing the thinking faculty; the mind, full of morbid thoughts, in speech (because it is speech in the form of scriptural ordinance etc, that propels the mind to pose as the doer and so on, which is truly speaking only an aberration); speech, in the body of articulate sounds (because it is in these specific forms that speech reveals itself); the latter, in the compound vowel sound OM; (the mystical sound) OM, in (what is known by the name of) Bindu (the nasal sound); the latter (again) in Nāda (the echo); Nāda, in Prāṇa (the Jīva as associated with the vital air); and the last-named, in Brahma (the all-pervading Spirit). (53) (The deities presiding over) fire, the sun, the day-time, the close of day (eventide), the bright fortnight, the full moon (the closing day of a bright fortnight), the summer half-year (representing the progress of the sun to the north of the equator) and Brahmā* (that mark the ascent of the departed soul to Brahmaloaka, the realm of Brahmā, the uppermost and the subtlest sphere of this material universe and representing the climax of material enjoyment), the Viśva (the soul identifying itself with gross matter), Taijasa (the soul identified with subtle matter), the Prājña (the soul identified with the causal matter), the Turya (the soul standing as a witness of all these states), so-called because of its being associated with each of these states (as its witness), and Ātmā (the pure Spirit)—the Vedas speak of these as (marking) the path of the gods (also known by the name of Arcimārga or the Bright Path, which culminates in Liberation). Going through (all) these stages one after another, the tranquil-minded votary of the (supreme) Spirit (God), established in the Self, never returns (to this world). (54-55)

* Verse 54 likewise delineates the path of the human soul devoted to Nivṛtta Karma. Here the soul of the deceased gradually ascends to the abode of Brahmā (the creator), being conducted on the way by the deities presiding over fire, the sun, the day-time, eventide, the bright fortnight, the full moon and the summer half-year. There it enjoys the luxuries of that realm and finally attains Liberation along with Brahmā. The latter half of this verse outlines the process of Liberation, which commences with the soul, which was till now known by the name of Viśva, merging its physical body in the astral and remaining identified with the latter, when it is designated as Taijasa. The Taijasa merges its astral body in the causal sheath and enjoys the title of Prājña so long as it remains identified with the causal frame. Then, merging the causal sheath in the all-witnessing Self, which is united with all bodies, it assumes the title of Turya; and finally casting off the role of a witness too, it remains in its primary state as the pure Self or Absolute. In other words, it is shorn of all adjuncts and gets liberated.

This is corroborated by the following texts of the Chāndogya Upaniṣad :—

तद्य इत्थं विदुः। ये चे मेऽरण्ये श्रद्धा तप इत्युपासते तेऽर्चिषमभिसम्भवन्त्यर्चियोऽहरहृ आपूर्यमाणपक्षमापूर्यमाणपक्षाद्यान्वडुदङ्ङेति मासांस्तान् ॥ १ ॥
मासेभ्यः संवत्सरं संवत्सरादादित्यमादित्याच्चन्द्रमसं चन्द्रमसो विद्युतं तत्पुरुषोऽमानवः स एनान्ब्रह्म गमयत्येष देवयानः पन्था इति ॥ २ ॥

Also compare the following couplet of the Bhagavadgītā:—

अग्निर्ज्योतिरहः शुक्लः यन्मासा उत्तरायणम् । तत्र प्रयाता गच्छन्ति ब्रह्म ब्रह्मविदो जनाः ॥

(VIII.24)

"(Of the two paths) the one is that in which are stationed the all-efulgent fire-god and the deities presiding over daylight, the bright fortnight and the six months of the northward course of the sun respectively, proceeding along it after death Yogis, who have known Brahma, being successively led by the above gods, finally reach Brahma."

य एते पितृदेवानामयने वेदनिर्मिते । शास्त्रेण चक्षुषा वेद जनस्थोऽपि न मुह्यति । ५६ ।
 आदावन्ते जनानां सद् बहिरन्तः परावरम् । ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं वचो वाच्यं तमो ज्योतिस्त्वयं स्वयम् । ५७ ।
 आबाधितोऽपि ह्याभासो यथा वस्तुतया स्मृतः । दुर्यटत्वादैन्यिकं तद्वदर्थविकल्पितम् । ५८ ।
 क्षित्यादीनामिहार्थानां छाया न कतमापि हि । न संघातो विकारोऽपि न पृथङ्नान्वितो मृषा । ५९ ।
 धातवोऽवयवित्वाच्च तन्मात्रावयवैर्विना । न स्युर्ह्यसत्यवयवित्यसन्नवयवोऽन्ततः । ६० ।
 स्यात् सादृश्यभ्रमस्तावद् विकल्पे सति वस्तुनः । जाग्रत्स्वापौ यथा स्वप्ने तथा विधिनिषेधता । ६१ ।

(Even) he who discerns these two paths presided over by the manes and the gods (respectively)—conclusively and distinctly made known by the Vedas—with the eye of scriptural knowledge never gives way to infatuation even though remaining in (this) body. (56) (For) as a matter of fact, he (the knower of these two paths) himself comprises what exists before (as the cause of) and after (as the background of), outside (viz., the objective universe) and inside (viz., the subject or the ego) all bodies; and he is the high and the low. (Again,) he is the understanding (the cognitive faculty) as well as that which is worth knowing, the word and the thing denoted by it, darkness as well as light. (In other words, there is nothing other than him, which may infatuate him). (57) Even as a reflection is taken to be real, even though (logically) disproved in everyway, so all objective existence (impinging on our senses as material) is (only) fancied to be real (though not real), being difficult to be reconciled with reason. (58) The psycho-physical organism, which is (popularly believed to be) a combination of the (five gross) elements, earth and so on, is indeed none of the following possibilities : it is neither their collection nor compound nor even modification; (for) it is neither distinct from them nor pervaded by them. Hence it is illusory. * (59) The (five gross) elements (the constituent of the body) too cannot exist apart from their finer components (in the shape of the subtle elements) because of their being compounds themselves (whose existence as apart from their components has already been disproved). (And) indeed, in the event of a compound as such being (proved to be) non-existent, a component too ultimately proves to be non-entity; (for there is no proof for the existence of a component other than the fact that the appearance of a compound cannot be otherwise accounted for). (60) (It may be asked here : how do you account for the identity of an individual at different periods if you deny the existence of an individual ? (Our reply to this is that) the delusion about the identity of an individual (whose existence as apart from his limbs along with that of the limbs has just been shown to be a mere illusion) persists (only) so long as we attribute diversity to

* The body of an embodied soul is believed to be a combination of the five elements. Now, that which is supposed to be a combination of two or more units falls under one of the following categories: (1) It may be a mere collection of those units as, for instance, what is known as a thicket is nothing but a collection of shrubs, trees etc., growing close together. (2) Or it may be a compound, i. e., a combination of elements just as water is declared to be a combination of hydrogen and oxygen (3) Or again it may be a modification of two or more substances as, for instance, curds is a modification of milk combined with an acid. An organism falls under none of these three categories. It is neither a mere collection of the five elements of which it is believed to be constituted, as a thicket is of shrubs, trees and so on. For, the shrubs etc., of which a thicket is constituted do not cohere in the same way as the elements do in the case of an organism. Nor can an organism be said to be a compound or modification of the elements. For, a compound or modification of substances must be either distinct from or pervaded by those substances; and an organism cannot in the first place be conceived as altogether different from the elements. If, on the other hand, it is believed to be pervaded by the elements, the question arises: does the whole pervade every part of it in its entirety or only partially ? If it pervades every part in its entirety, even a finger will pass for the entire body. And if it is urged that it pervades every part only partially, there will be no end to the process of partition. Hence the existence of a whole as apart from its parts is only illusory and not real. And since every part is a whole in relation to its own parts the separate existence of the parts too is similarly disproved and thus the whole range of objective existence is proved to be a colossal hoax.

God (the one Reality). The injunctive and interdictory force of the sacred texts (also) remains intact in the same way as the distinction of waking life and sleep persists (even) in the course of a dream. (61)

भावाद्वैतं क्रियाद्वैतं द्रव्याद्वैतं तथाऽऽत्मनः । वर्तयन्त्वानुभूत्येह त्रीन्स्वप्नांशुनृते मुनिः । ६२ ।
कार्यकारणवस्त्वैक्यमर्शनं पटतन्तुवत् । अवस्तुत्वाद् विकल्पस्य भावाद्वैतं तदुच्यते । ६३ ।
यद् ब्रह्मणि परे साक्षात् सर्वकर्मसमर्पणम् । मनोवाक्तनुभिः पार्थ क्रियाद्वैतं तदुच्यते । ६४ ।
आत्मजायासुतादीनामन्येषां सर्वदेहिनाम् । यत् स्वार्थकामयोरैक्यं द्रव्याद्वैतं तदुच्यते । ६५ ।

Pondering the unity of thought, action and material substances, a contemplative soul shakes off through Self-Realization in this (very) life his three dreams (in the shape of the three states of waking life, dream and deep sleep). (62) To contemplate the substantial unity of causes and effects—on the analogy of (the unity of) cloth and its warp and woof—their diversity being unreal: this is called Bhāvādwaita (unity of thought). (63) To resign with mind, speech and body all (one's) actions to the supreme Spirit directly (without expecting any fruit for one-self), O son of Pṛthā (Kuntī)—this is what is called Kriyādwaita (unity of action). (64) To identify one's own interests and enjoyment with those of one's wife, progeny and other relations as well as of all other embodied souls—this is what is called Dravyādwaita (unity of material substances). (65)

यद् यस्य वानिषिद्धं स्याद् येन यत्र यतो नृप । स तेनेहेत कर्माणि नरो नान्यैरनापदि । ६६ ।
एतैरन्यैश्च वेदोक्तैर्वर्तमानः स्वकर्मभिः । गृहेऽप्यस्य गतिं यायाद् राजंस्तद्भक्तिभाङ्गनरः । ६७ ।
यथा हि यूयं नृपदेव दुस्त्यजादापद्गणादुत्तरतात्मनः प्रभोः ।
यत्पादपङ्केरुहसेवया भवानहर्षीन्निर्जितदिगाजः क्रतून् । ६८ ।

By whatever means, at whatever place and time and from whatever source a (particular) material is permitted to be acquired by a particular man, O protector of men, he should perform (his allotted) duties (sacrifices etc.), with that material and no other materials except when in distress. (66) Making his living by his own (vocational) duties enjoined by the Vedas and enumerated before and (similar) other duties, a man blessed with Devotion can attain the realm or state of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is present before you), even (though staying) at home, O king. (67) Even as you and your brothers, O king of kings, have been able to get over a series of calamities, (so) difficult to get rid of, by the grace of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the supreme Spirit, by serving whose lotus-feet you (duly) performed a number of (big) sacrifices (such as Rājasūya and Aśwamedha), having entirely subdued (all opponents including) the elephants guarding the quarters, so shall you cross the ocean of mundane existence also by the grace of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (68)

अहं पुराभवं कश्चिद् गन्धर्व उपवर्हणः । नाम्नातीते महाकल्पे गन्धर्वाणां सुसम्मतः । ६९ ।
रूपपेशलमाधुर्यसौगन्ध्यप्रियदर्शनः । स्त्रीणां प्रियतमो नित्यं मत्तस्तु पुरुलम्पटः । ७० ।
एकदा देवसत्रे तु गन्धर्वाप्सरसां गणाः । उपहृता विश्वसृग्भिर्हरिगाथोपगायने । ७१ ।
अहं च गायंस्तद्विद्वान् स्त्रीभिः परिवृतो गतः । ज्ञात्वा विश्वसृजस्तन्मे हेलनं शेषुरोजसा ।

याहि त्वं शूद्रतामाशु नष्टश्रीः कृतहेलनः । ७२ ।

तावद्वास्यामहं जज्ञे तत्रापि ब्रह्मवादिनाम् । शृश्रूषयानुषङ्गेण प्राप्तोऽहं ब्रह्मपुत्रताम् । ७३ ।
धर्मस्ते गृहमेधीयो वर्णितः पापनाशनः । गृहस्थो येन पदवीमञ्जसा न्यासिनामियात् । ७४ ।

Formerly, in the previous round of creation (the regime of the previous Brahmā), I was (once) born as a Gandharva (celestial musician), Upabarhaṇa by name, highly respected among the Gandharvas. (69) (Most) pleasing to the eye by virtue of (my) comeliness of form, grace, sweet voice and fragrance, I was most beloved of women and was constantly drunk and excessively fond of women. (70) Once in a sacrificial session commenced by the gods, parties of Gandharvas and Apsarās (celestial dancing girls) were invited by the creators of the universe (Dakṣa, Marīci and others) for (the purpose of) singing the stories of Śrī Hari. (71) Coming to know of that invitation and surrounded by women, I too went there singing (profane songs even on the way without permission). Taking it to be an offence on my part, the creators of the universe cursed me by dint of their ascetic power, saying : "Shorn of (all) splendour, attain you at once the state (body) of a Śūdra, since you have behaved disrespectfully (towards us)." (72) At once I was born of a maid-servant and through service even in that life to sages who were (all) expounders of the Vedas, and thanks to their fellowship I attained the (present) state of a (mind-born) son of Brahmā. (73) I have (thus) explained to you the (course of) conduct prescribed for a married man which is capable of destroying (all) sin, and by (following) which a householder (too) can speedily attain the goal of recluses (viz., final beatitude). (74)

यूयं नृलोके बत भूरिभागा लोकं पुनाना मुनयोऽभियन्ति ।
 येषां गृहानावसतीति साक्षाद् गूढं परं ब्रह्म मनुष्यलिङ्गम् । ७५ ।
 स वा अयं ब्रह्म महद्विमृग्यं कैवल्यनिर्वाणसुखानुभूतिः ।
 प्रियः सुहृद् वः खलु मातुलेय आत्मार्हणीयो विधिकृद् गुरुश्च । ७६ ।
 न यस्य साक्षाद्भवपद्मजादिभी रूपं धिया वस्तुतयोपवर्णितम् ।
 मौनेन भक्त्योपशमेन पूजितः प्रसीदतामेष स सात्वतां पतिः । ७७ ।

Oh, exceedingly fortunate (far more fortunate than Prahrāda) on earth (this world of human beings) are you (the Pāṇḍavas and the Yadus), to whose residences flock from all quarters sages sanctifying the (whole) world, inasmuch as the Supreme Brahma bodily stays there disguised in the form of a human being. (75) This very Śrī Kṛṣṇa, your well-known beloved friend and cousin (son of your maternal uncle Vasudeva), (nay,) your very self (body), worthy of your adoration, obedient servant (ambassador and charioteer) and preceptor (all in one), is Brahma, (that may be described as) the realization of absolute (unconditioned) supreme Bliss and which is diligently sought after (even) by the great. (76) May this Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the well-known Protector of devotees, be gracious to us—Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose essential character has not (so far) been depicted in its true colours with the help of reason (even) by Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), Brhamā the (lotus-born) and others, and who is adored (by us) through silent meditation and enquiry, Devotion and control of senses and so on (unlike you, who are on such intimate terms with Him and on whom He lavishes His affection, a privilege which even Prahrāda never enjoyed). (77)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति देवर्षिणा प्रोक्तं निशम्य भरतर्षभः । पूजयामास सुप्रीतः कृष्णं च प्रेमविह्वलः । ७८ ।
 कृष्णपार्थबुपामन्य पूजितः प्रययौ मुनिः । श्रुत्वा कृष्णं परं ब्रह्म पार्थः परमविस्मितः । ७९ ।
 इति दाक्षायणीनां ते पृथग्वंशाः प्रकीर्तिताः । देवासुरमनुष्याद्या लोका यत्र चराचराः । ८० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशसाहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायां सप्तमस्कन्धे प्रह्लादानुचरिते

युधिष्ठिरनारदसंवादे सदाचारनिर्णयो नाम पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः । १५ ।

इति सप्तमः स्कन्धः समाप्तः

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

Śrī Śuka went on : Hearing the discourse of the celestial sage (Nārada) as reproduced in the foregoing verses, Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira (the foremost of the Bharatas) felt much delighted and, overwhelmed with love, (duly) worshipped him as well as Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was present there). (78) Taking leave of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Yudhiṣṭhira (son of Pṛthā) and honoured by them, the (celestial) sage left (for his abode). (And) Yudhiṣṭhira felt highly amazed to hear of Śrī Kṛṣṇa as (no other than) the supreme Reality. (79) In this way I have related to you separately the accounts of the posterity of the daughters of Dakṣa in which are comprised (the various) orders of animate and inanimate creation, such as gods, demons and human beings. (80)

Thus ends the fifteenth discourse entitled "An inquiry into right conduct (concluded)", forming part of the dialogue between Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira and the sage Nārada, narrating the story of Pahrāda, in Book Seven of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā, composed by the sage Vedavyāsa and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.

END OF BOOK SEVEN

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

अष्टमः स्कन्धः

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata Mahāpurāṇa

Book Eight

Discourse I

The Manvantaras described

राजोवाच

स्वायम्भुवस्येह गुरो वंशोऽयं विस्ताराच्छ्रुतः । यत्र विश्वसृजां सर्गो मनूनन्यान्वदस्व नः । १ ।
यत्र यत्र हरेर्जन्म कर्माणि च महीयसः । गृणन्ति कवयो ब्रह्मांस्तानि नो वद शृण्वताम् । २ ।
यद्यस्मिन्नन्तरे ब्रह्मन्भगवान्विश्वभावनः । कृतवान्कुरुते कर्ता ह्यतीतेऽनागतेऽद्य वा । ३ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted: I have heard at length in this context, O preceptor, (an account) of the line (daughters' children) of Swāyambhuva Manu (just narrated by you), in which figured the posterity (sons and grandsons) of Marīci and others (the creators of the universe). (Pray,) speak to us (now) about the other Manus (as well). (1) Tell us who are listening (with rapt attention), O holy one, (an account especially) of those Manvantaras with which the learned associate any (particular) descent and exploits of Śrī Hari, the greatest of the great. (2) Relate to us, O holy Brāhmaṇa, what the Lord, (who is) the Protector of the universe, actually did in which past Manvantara, what He is doing now or what He is going to accomplish in which future Manvantara. (3)

ऋषिरुवाच

मनवोऽस्मिन्व्यतीताः षट् कल्पे स्वायम्भुवादयः । आद्यस्ते कथितो यत्र देवादीनां च सम्भवः । ४ ।
आकृत्यां देवहूत्यां च दुहित्रोस्तस्य वै मनोः । धर्मज्ञानोपदेशार्थं भगवान्पुत्रतां गतः । ५ ।
कृतं पुरा भगवतः कपिलस्यानुवर्णितम् । आख्यास्ये भगवान्यज्ञो यच्चकार कुरूद्वह । ६ ।

The sage (Śukadeva) replied: In the current Kalpa (cycle or Brahmā's day) six Manus (Manvantaras), Swāyambhuva and others, have (already) passed. Of these, an account of the first (viz., that presided over by Swāyambhuva Manu) has been narrated to you as well as the story of the creation of gods and other (orders of) creatures such as demons and human beings. (4) (I have told you how) the Lord actually assumed the role of a son to (the blessed) Ākūti and Devahūti, daughters of the aforesaid (Swāyambhuva) Manu, in order to teach (the former) piety (in the person of Yajña) and (to the latter spiritual) wisdom (in the person of the sage Kapila) respectively. (5) (Of these) I have already related* (to you) the achievement of Kapila (in the shape of instruction in Devotion and spiritual wisdom imparted to Devahūti, which led her to renounce everything and, fixing her thought exclusively on the Lord, attain final beatitude). I shall (now) recount, O chief of the Kurus what Lord Yajña did. (6)

विरक्तः कामभोगेषु शतरूपापतिः प्रभुः । विसृज्य राज्यं तपसे सभार्यो वनमांविशत् । ७ ।

सुनन्दायां वर्षशतं पदैकेन भुवं स्मृशन् । तप्यमानस्ततो घोरमिदमन्वाह भारत । ८ ।

Fed up with the enjoyment of sense-objects and having relinquished his kingship, Emperor Swāyambhuva Manu (the spouse of Śatarūpā) withdrew to the forest for (practising) austerities along with his consort. (7) Practising rigid asceticism on the bank of the (river) Sunandā for a hundred years and touching the ground with (only) one foot, he repeated the following (prayer), O scion of Bharata ! (8)

मुरुवाच

येन चेतयते विश्वं विश्वं चेतयते न यम् । यो जागर्ति शयानेऽस्मिन्नायं तं वेद वेद सः । ९ ।

आत्मावात्मिदं विश्वं यत् किञ्चिज्जगत्यां जगत् । तेन त्यक्तेन भुञ्जीथा मा गृधः कस्यस्विद्धनम् । १० ।

यं न पश्यति पश्यन्तं चक्षुर्यस्य न रिष्यति । तं भूतनिलयं देवं सुपर्णमुपधावत । ११ ।

न यस्याद्यन्तौ मध्यं च स्वः परो नान्तरं बहिः । विश्वस्यामूनि यद् यस्माद् विश्वं च तदृतं महत् । १२ ।

स विश्वकायः पुरुहूत ईशः सत्यः स्वयंज्योतिरजः पुराणः ।

धत्तेऽस्य जन्माद्यजयाऽऽत्मशक्त्या तां विद्ययोदस्य निरीह आस्ते । १३ ।

अथाग्रे ऋषयः कर्माणीहन्तेऽकर्महेतवे । ईहमानो हि पुरुषः प्रायोऽनीहां प्रपद्यते । १४ ।

ईहते भगवानीशो न हि तत्र विषजते । आत्मलाभेन पूर्णार्थो नावसीदन्ति येऽनु तम् । १५ ।

तमीहमानं निरहङ्कृतं बुधं निराशिषं पूर्णमनन्यचोदितम् ।

नृच्छिक्षयन्तं निजवर्त्मसंस्थितं प्रभुं प्रपद्येऽखिलधर्मभावनम् । १६ ।

Manu prayed: Oh, how strange (that) the individual soul does not know Him—although He knows the individual soul—because of whom (whose presence) the world (of matter, viz., the body, senses, mind and so on) is endowed with consciousness but to whom the world does not lend consciousness (He being conscious by His very nature), and who keeps awake (as the witness) while the world is asleep. (9) Whatever animate (or inanimate) creation there exists in the world, all that is pervaded by the (cosmic) Spirit (who not only sustains it but also enlivens it). (Therefore,) live upon what has been assigned (to you) by Him (or what has been consecrated to Him); do not covet the wealth of anyone (else). (10) Flee (for protection) to that self-effulgent Lord, the abode (Inner Controller) of (all) created beings, (and who has been figuratively depicted in the Upaniṣads as) a bird with beautiful wings (dwelling on the tree of this body as an unconcerned witness along with the Jīva, represented as its companion attached to the tree), whom, as the Perceiver (of all), the world (or the sense of sight) cannot perceive (because He is above sense-perception and because the knower cannot be known by the means of knowledge) and whose perception (knowledge) never fails (inasmuch as it constitutes His very being, unlike the consciousness of the finite Jīva, which disappears with the disappearance of its object). (11) The all-pervading Brahma (alone) is that (supreme) Reality to which neither beginning nor end nor middle can be attributed, nay, in whose eye there is neither friend nor foe. (It being the Self of all), neither inside nor outside (because of Its pervading all), to which (all) these stages (viz., the beginning, middle and end) of the universe are attributable and which is (manifested in the form of) the universe. (12) The aforesaid Lord has the universe for His body and bears innumerable names; He (alone) is true, self-effulgent, unborn and (most) ancient. By His own (creative) Energy (called Mâyā, which is unborn like Himself; because Śakti and Śaktimān are identical in essence). He undertakes the creation etc., (namely, maintenance and dissolution as well) of this universe and, having set aside the said Mâyā by His (other) Energy (in the shape of consciousness) He remains actionless (in His primary state of Brahmahood). (13) (Because the Lord Himself first undertakes and then withdraws from action in the form of creation etc., of the universe,) therefore, the sages (too likewise) undertake actions (consecrated to the Lord) in the first instance for the sake of actionlessness (Liberation). For a man performing (his) duties (as an offering to the Lord) generally attains liberation (which exonerates one from all duties). (14) The almighty Lord does engage in action, but does not get attached to it inasmuch as He has all His objects accomplished through the realization of His own (blissful) character. (Hence) they who follow in His footsteps never suffer (bondage). (15) I (therefore) take refuge in that Lord, who, though engaging in action is yet (altogether) free from egotism, being all-wise, perfect (in Himself) and (therefore) above (all) cravings and is (absolutely) independent (lit., not impelled by others), (nay,) who teaches humanity (by His own example), (Himself remaining) steadfast to the course of conduct prescribed by Himself because of His being the protector and upholder of righteousness. (16)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति मन्त्रोपनिषदं व्याहरन्तं समाहितम् । दृष्ट्वा सुरा यातुधाना जग्धुमभ्यद्रवन् क्षुधा । १७ ।

तांस्तथावसितान् वीक्ष्य यज्ञः सर्वगतो हरिः । यामैः परिवृतो देवैर्हत्वाशासत् त्रिविष्टपम् । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Finding him repeating (as though in a dream in spite of himself) the aforesaid mystical prayer consisting of sacred texts* (based on the Īśāvāsyopaniṣad, forming part of Yajurveda-Saṁhitā), (though) absorbed in profound and abstract meditation, (and therefore oblivious of himself), demons and ogres, impelled by hunger, assailed him on all sides with intent to devour him. (17) Seeing them thus resolved, the all-pervading Śrī Hari, in the form of Lord Yajña (the deity presiding over sacrifices and born of Dharma and Ākūti†), surrounded by (His sons) the gods known as the Yāmas, (appeared there and) slew them and ruled in heaven (as Indra‡, the Lord of paradise). (18)

स्वारोचिषो द्वितीयस्तु मनुजैः सुतोऽभवत् । द्युमत्सुषेणरोचिष्मत्प्रमुखास्तस्य चात्मजाः । १९ ।

तत्रेन्द्रो रोचनस्त्वासीद् देवाश्च तुषितादयः । ऊर्जस्तम्भादयः सप्त ऋषयो ब्रह्मवादिनः । २० ।

* The Upaniṣads, referred to as the crown of the Vedas, have been classified under two heads, viz., (1) Mantropaniṣads (those forming part of the Saṁhitā portion, consisting of hymns) and (2) Brāhmaṇopaniṣads or those forming part of the Brāhmaṇas or exegetic texts giving rules for the employment of the hymns at particular sacrifices and so on. The Īśāvāsyā, the Śwetāśvatara and the Muṇḍaka, Upaniṣads forming part of the Śūkla and Kṛṣṇa Yajurveda and Atharvaveda respectively, are thus classed as Mantropaniṣads; while all the rest fall under the category of Brāhmaṇopaniṣads.

† Vide verses 4 and 5 above.

‡ We find it mentioned in Book XII. vii. 15 that every Manvantara is presided over by a body of divine administrators consisting of a Manu as its head, a group of gods, the Manu's sons, an Indra ruling over the three worlds, the seven Ṛṣis (seers) and a part manifestation of God Himself. In the first Manvantara of the present Kalpa, known as the Swāyambhuva Manvantara after the name of the Manu presiding over it, the Manu was known as Swāyambhuva (born of Brahmā the creator himself); Priyavrata and Uttānapāda (whose accounts are given in Books V and IV respectively) were his two sons; the gods were known by the name of Yamas; Lord Yajña (a part manifestation of the Lord) Himself held the office of Indra; while Marīci, Atri, Aṅgīrā, Pulaha, Kratu, Pulastya, and Vasiṣṭha were the seven seers—vide Book IV.

ऋषेस्तु वेदशिरसस्तुषिता नाम पत्न्यभूत् । तस्यां जज्ञे ततो देवो विभुरित्यभिविश्रुतः । २१ ।
अष्टाशीतिसहस्राणि मुनयो ये धृतव्रताः । अन्वशिक्षन्त्रतं तस्य कौमारब्रह्मचारिणः । २२ ।

Now Swārociṣa was (the name of) the second Manu, (who was) a son of Agni (the god of fire); while Dyumān, Suṣeṇa, and Rociṣmān were the chief among his sons. (19) In that (Swārociṣa) Manvantara, of course, the Indra was known by the name of) Rocana; while Tusita and others (viz., Toṣa, Pratoṣa, Santoṣa Bhadra, Sānti, Iḍaspati, Idhma, Kavi, Vibhu, Swahna and Sudeva) were the gods. Ūrja (son of Vasiṣṭha) Stambha (son of Kaśyapa, a lord of created beings) and others (namely, Prāṇa, Bṛhaspati, Atri, Datta, also known as Dattātreyā, son of Atri, and Cyavana) were the seven seers, (all) expositors of the Vedas. (20) Again, the wife of the sage Vedaśīrā was named Tuṣitā. Through her from (the loins of) that sage appeared the Lord Himself, known all over by the name of Vibhu. (21) Eighty-eight thousand sages, who had (all) undertaken a vow of austerity, followed the example of the aforesaid Lord, who had remained a bachelor since His (very) boyhood. (22)

तृतीय उत्तमो नाम प्रियव्रतसुतो मनुः । पवनः सृज्यो यज्ञहोत्राद्यास्तत्सुता नृप । २३ ।
वसिष्ठतनयाः सप्त ऋषयः प्रमदादयः । सत्या वेदश्रुता भद्रा देवा इन्द्रस्तु सत्यजित् । २४ ।
धर्मस्य सूनृतायां तु भगवान्पुरुषोत्तमः । सत्यसेन इति ख्यातो जातः सत्यव्रतैः सह । २५ ।
सोऽनृतव्रतदुःशीलानसतो यक्षराक्षसान् । भूतद्रुहो भूतगणांस्त्ववधीत् सत्यजित्सखः । २६ ।

The third Manu, son of (the celebrated Emperor) Priyavrata, was known as Uttama. Pavana, Sṛñjaya, Yajñahotra and others were his sons, O Parikṣit ! (23) Pramada and others, sons of Vasiṣṭha, were the seven seers. The Satyas, he Vedaśrutās and the Bhadrās were the (names of the three groups of) gods; while the Indra was (known by the name of) Satyajit. (24) Again, from (the loins of) Dharma (the god of piety) through (his wife) Sūnṛtā appeared along with (the class of gods known as) the Satyavratas, the Supreme Person (Himself) celebrated by the name of Lord Satyasena. (25) And with Satyajit (the then Indra) as His helpmate. He killed the wicked Yakṣas and Rākṣasas, who were vowed to mendacity and given to evil ways, as well as hosts of evil spirits who were enemies of created beings. (26)

चतुर्थ उत्तमभ्राता मनुर्नाम्ना च तामसः । पृथुः ख्यातिर्नरः केतुरित्याद्या दश तत्सुताः । २७ ।
सत्यका हरयो वीरा देवास्त्रिशिख ईश्वरः । ज्योतिर्धामादयः सप्त ऋषयस्तामसेऽन्तरे । २८ ।
देवा वैधृतयो नाम विधृतेस्तनया नृप । नष्टाः कालेन यैर्वेदा विधृताः स्वेन तेजसा । २९ ।
तत्रापि जज्ञे भगवान्हरिण्यां हरिमेधसः । हरिरित्याहतो येन गजेन्द्रो मोचितो ग्रहात् । ३० ।

The fourth Manu, Tāmāsa by name, was a brother of Uttama. Prthu, Khyāti, Nara, Ketu and others were his ten sons. (27) The Satyakas, the Haris and the Vīras were (the three groups of) the gods; Trīśikha was (the name of) their ruler (Indra); while Jyotirdhāma and others (viz., Pṛthu, Kāvya or Śukrācrāya, Caitra, Agni, Dhanada and Pivara) were the seven seers in that Manvantara, which went by the name of Tāmāsa. (28) The (other) gods (in that Manvantara), Vaidhṛtis by name, were the sons of Vidhṛti, by whom the Vedas, that had been lost (forgotten) in course of time, were preserved (retained in their memory) by their own intellectual calibre, O king ! (29) In that Manvantara the Lord too was born through Hariṇī from (the loins of) the sage Harimedhā (her husband) and was named Śrī Hari, by whom the (celebrated) leader of (a herd of) elephants was extricated from (the grip of) an alligator. (30)

राजोवाच

बादरायण एतत् ते श्रोतुमिच्छामहे वयम् । हरिर्यथा गजपतिं ग्राह्यस्तममूचत् । ३१ ।

तत्कथां सुमहत् पुण्यं धन्यं स्वस्वयनं शुभम् । यत्र यत्रोत्तमश्लोको भगवानीयते हरिः । ३२ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : O son of Bādarāyaṇa (the sage Vedavyāsa, so-called because he had his abode in a thicket of jujube trees), we long to hear from you the story as to how Śrī Hari delivered the (said) king of elephants, seized by an alligator. (31) That (alone) of (all) stories is highly sacred, praiseworthy, conducive to blessedness and auspicious, in which Lord Śrī Hari of excellent renown is celebrated. (32)

सूत उवाच

परीक्षितैवं स तु बादरायणिः प्रायोपविष्टेन कथासु चोदितः ।

उवाच विप्राः प्रतिनन्द्य पार्थिवं मुदा मुनीनां सदसि स्म शृण्वताम् । ३३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे मन्वन्तरानुवर्ति प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

Sūta went on : Thus urged by Parīkṣit, who sat determined to die (of starvation to make amends for the indignity offered by him to a holy sage absorbed in meditation by throwing a dead serpent on his person), to continue his discourses (on the pastimes of the Lord), the sage Śukadeva (son of Bādarāyaṇa,) O Brāhmaṇas, congratulated the emperor and joyously spoke (as follows) in that assembly of sages who were (all) listening (with rapt attention). (33)

Thus ends the first discourse, forming part of the story of the (various) Manvantaras, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse II

The lord of elephants is caught in the grip of an alligator

श्रीशुक उवाच

आसीद् गिरिवरो राजंस्त्रिकूट इति विश्रुतः । क्षीरोदेनावृतः श्रीमान्योजनायुतमुच्छ्रितः । १ ।

तावता विस्तृतः पर्यक् त्रिभिः शृङ्गैः पयोनिधिम् । दिशः खं रोचयन्नास्ते रौप्यायसहिरण्यमयैः । २ ।

अन्यैश्च कुकुभः सर्वा रत्नधातुविचित्रितैः । नानाद्रुमलतागुल्मैर्निर्घोषैर्निर्झराम्भसाम् । ३ ।

स चावनिज्यमानाङ्घ्रिः समन्तात् पयऊर्मिभिः । करोति श्यामलां भूमिं हरिन्मरकताश्मभिः । ४ ।

सिद्धचारणगन्धर्वविद्याधरमहोरगैः । किन्नरैरप्सरोभिश्च क्रीडद्भिर्जुष्टकन्दरः । ५ ।

यत्र संगीतसन्नादैर्नन्ददग्धुहममर्षया । अभिगर्जन्ति हरयः श्लाघिनः परशङ्कया । ६ ।

नानारण्यपशुव्रातसङ्कुलद्रोण्यलङ्कृतः । चित्रद्रुमसुरोद्यानकलकण्ठविहङ्गमः । ७ ।

सरित्सरोभिरच्छोदैः पुलिनैर्मणिवालुकैः । देवस्त्रीमज्जनामोदसौरभाम्बुनिलैर्युतः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : There was a great mountain, celebrated by the name Trikūṭa, (which was) encircled by the ocean of milk rich in mineral wealth and was ten thousand Yojanas (or eighty thousand miles) high, O Parīkṣit ! (1) Wide to the same extent (as its height) on all sides, it stood illuminating the ocean (around), the (four) cardinal points as well as the sky with (its) three (principal) peaks of silver, steel and gold (respectively), and lending charm to all the quarters with (its) other peaks rendered picturesque by (their wealth of) precious stones and minerals (of diverse colours), by (their) trees, creepers and shrubs of various description as well as by the murmuring sound of the water of their cascades. (2-3) With its foot being (constantly) washed by the waves of the ocean on every side, the mountain made the lowlands (enclosing it) look dark green (as if covered by turf) by its emeralds scattered on all sides (by the corrosive action of the waves). (4) Its caves were frequented by sporting Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth), Cāraṇas (celestial bards), Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Vidyādhara (celestial artistes) and great Nāgas (serpent-demons having a human face and serpent-like body) as well as by Kinnaras (another class of celestial musicians with a human figure and the head of a horse or vice versa), and Apsarās (celestial nymphs). (5) There haughty lions roared in indignation aroused by the suspected presence of another lion, with their face turned towards the part where the caves echoed with the music (of the Kinnaras etc.). (6) The mountain looked charming with (its) valleys infested by herds of wild beasts of various description. And birds sweetly warbled in (its) celestial gardens rich in a variety of trees. (7) It was adorned with rivers and lakes of limpid water and banks carpeted with the sands of gems and fanned by breezes charged with drops of water scented with the fragrance lent to it by the bathing of celestial ladies. (8)

तस्य द्रोण्यां भगवतो वरुणस्य महात्मनः । उद्यानमृतुमन्नाम आक्रीडं सुरयोषिताम् । ९ ।
 सर्वतोऽलङ्कृतं दिव्यैर्नित्यं पुष्पफलद्रुमैः । मन्दारैः पारिजातैश्च पाटलाशोकचम्पकैः । १० ।
 चूतैः प्रियालैः पनसैराग्रैराप्रातकैरपि । क्रमुकैर्नालिकैरैश्च खजूरैर्वीजपूरकैः । ११ ।
 मधुकैः सालतालैश्च तमालैरसनाजुनैः । अरिष्टोदुम्बरप्लक्षवटैः किंशुकचन्दनैः । १२ ।
 पिचुमन्दैः कोविदारैः सरलैः सुरदारुभिः । द्राक्षेक्षुरम्भाजम्बूभिर्बदयक्षाभयामलैः । १३ ।
 बिल्वैः कपिलैश्चैर्म्बोरैर्वृतो भल्लातकादिभिः । तस्मिन्सरः सुविपुलं लसत्काञ्चनपङ्कजम् । १४ ।
 कुमुदोत्पलकह्लारशतपत्रश्रियोजितम् । मत्तषट्पदनिर्घुष्टं शकुन्तैश्च कलस्वनैः । १५ ।
 हंसकारण्डवाकीर्णं चक्राह्वैः सारसैरपि । जलकुक्कुटकोयष्टिदात्यहकूलकूजितम् । १६ ।
 मत्स्यकच्छपसञ्चारचलत्पद्मराजः पयः । कदम्बवेतसनलनीपवञ्जुलकैर्वृतम् । १७ ।
 कुन्दैः कुरवकाशोकैः शिरीषैः कुटजेजुदैः । कुब्जकैः स्वर्णयूथीभिर्नागपुत्रागजातिभिः । १८ ।
 मल्लिकाशतपत्रैश्च माधवीजालकादिभिः । शोभितं तीरजैश्चान्यैर्नित्यतुर्भिरलं द्रुमैः । १९ ।

In a (particular) valley of that mountain there existed a garden belonging to the glorious and high-souled Varuṇa (the god of water), which bore the name of R̥tumān and was the sporting-ground of celestial ladies. (9) On all sides it was graced with celestial trees ever full of flowers and fruits and was fenced with Mandāras (acacias), Pārijātas (coral trees), Pāṭalas, Aśokas and Campakas, different species of mangoes, Priyālas and Panasas (bread-fruit trees) as well as with Āmrātakas (hog-plum trees), Kramukas (arecas) and cocoanut-trees, date-palms and Bijapūras (citrons), Madhūkas, Śālas, Palmyras, Tamālas, Asanas, Arjunas, Ariṣṭas (soap-berries), Udumbaras, Plakṣas, banyan trees, Kīmśukas and sandal-trees, Nimba-trees, Kovidāras, Saralas (a species of pine trees), deodars, vines, sugar-canes, plantains and rose-apples, plum-trees, Akṣas, the yellow myrobalan and myrobalan trees, Bilvas (wood-apples), Kapitthas and Jambīras (lemons), as well as by Bhallātakas (the marking-nut trees) and so on. In that garden there existed a very extensive lake studded with splendid golden lotuses. (10—14) It looked grand with the splendour of lilies and lotuses of various species (such as Utpalas, Kalhāras and Śatapatras) and was resonant with the humming of intoxicated bees as well as by sweetly warbling birds. (15) It was swarmed by swans and Kāraṇḍavas (a variety of ducks) as well as by Cakravākas (ruddy geese) and cranes, and resounded with the noise of swarms of water-fowls, Koyaṣṭis (paddy-birds) and Cātakas. (16) Its water was overlaid with the pollen of lotuses shaking with the movements of fishes and tortoises and was hemmed in with Kadambas, canes, Nalas (a species of reeds), Nīpas (a variety of Kadambas) and Vañjulas. (17) It looked most charming with its Kundas (a species of jasmine), Kurabakas (red amaranths), Aśokas, Śirīṣas, Kuṭājas, Ingudis, Kubjakas, Swaṃyāyūthīs (yellow jasmīnes), Nāgas, Punnāgas and Jātis, Mallikās and Śatapatras, Mādhavīs (spring-flowers), Jālakas etc., as well as with other trees growing on its margin and bearing flowers and fruits during all the seasons. (18-19)

तत्रैकदा तद्विरिकाननाश्रयः करेणुभिर्वारणयूथपश्वरन् ।
 सकण्टकान् कीचकवेणुवेत्रवद् विशालगुल्मं प्रजन्वन्स्पतीन् । २० ।
 यद्गन्धमात्राद्भरयो गजेन्द्रा व्याघ्रादयो व्यालमृगाः सखद्गाः ।
 महोरगाश्चापि भयाद् द्रवन्ति सगौरकृष्णाः शरभाश्चमर्यः । २१ ।
 वृका वराहा महिषर्क्षशल्या गोपुच्छसालावृकमर्कटाश्च ।
 अन्यत्र क्षुद्रा हरिणाः शशादयश्चरन्त्यभीता यदनुग्रहेण । २२ ।
 स घर्मतप्तः करिभिः करेणुभिर्वृतो मदच्युत्कलभैरनुद्रुतः ।
 गिरि गरिम्णा परितः प्रकम्पयन् निषेव्यमाणोऽलिकुलैर्मदाशनैः । २३ ।
 सरोऽनिलं पङ्कजरेणुरूषितं जिघ्रन्विदूरान्मदविह्वलेक्षणः ।
 वृतः स्वयूथेन तृषार्दितेन तत् सरोवराभ्याशमथागमद् द्रुतम् । २४ ।
 विगाह्य तस्मिन्नमृताम्बु निर्मलं हेमारविन्दोत्पलरेणुवासितम् ।
 पपौ निकामं निजपुष्करोद्धृतमात्मानमद्भिः स्त्रपयन्नातङ्गमः । २५ ।
 स्वपुष्करेणोद्धृतशीकराम्बुभिर्निपाययन्संस्त्रपयन्त्यथा गृही ।
 घृणी करेणूः कलभांश्च दुर्मदो नाचष्ट कृच्छ्रं कृपणोऽजमायया । २६ ।

In that garden, one day, the leader of a herd of elephants, that had its abode in the forest of that mountain, was roaming about with (a number of) female elephants, breaking (its) thorny trees and a large thicket consisting of various types of bamboos (such as Kīcakas) and canes. (20) Perceiving it by scent alone, lions and (other) leaders of elephants, tigers and other beasts of prey, including rhinoceroses, and even huge serpents, black and white Śarabhas (eight-footed animals, now extinct, represented as stronger than the lion and the elephant) and Camarīs (female yaks) took to flight out of fear. (21) The weaker animals, viz., wolves, boars, bisons, bears, porcupines, baboons, hyenas and monkeys as well as antelopes, hares etc., fearlessly roamed about elsewhere (outside the range of its sight) by its sufferance. (22) Surrounded by (other) elephants (of its herd) and female elephants (too) and followed by their youngs, the elephant, that was emitting temporal fluid (all along) and was consequently being dogged by swarms of black-bees that fed on that fluid, was shaking the mountain on every side by its (huge) weight. Scenting from a long distance the breeze blowing from the lake—charged as it was with the pollen of lotuses—and accompanied by its herd, which was (likewise) oppressed with thirst, the elephant now swiftly made to the vicinity of the lake, afflicted as it was by heat, its eyes rolling under the influence of that temporal fluid. (23-24) Making its way into the lake, bathing itself with its water, and thus relieved of fatigue, it drank to its satisfaction the clear and nectar-like water perfumed with the pollen of golden and blue lotuses with the tip of its proboscis. (25) Spraying the female elephants as well as their youngs with drops of water drawn by its own trunk and making them drink it, full of compassion (as it was for its herd), like a householder, the proud elephant, infatuated by the deluding potency of the eternal Lord, did not foresee the (impending) peril.(26)

तं तत्र कश्चिन्नृप दैवचोदितो ग्राहो बलीयांश्चरणे रुषाग्रहीत् ।
 यदृच्छयैवं व्यसनं गतो गजो यथाबलं सोऽतिबलो विचक्रमे । २७ ।
 तथाऽऽतुरं यूथपतिं करेणवो विकृष्यमाणं तरसा बलीयसा ।
 विचुकुशुर्दीनधियोऽपरे गजाः पार्ष्णिग्रहास्तारयितुं न चाशक्नु । २८ ।
 नियुध्यतोरेवमिभेन्द्रनक्रयोर्विकर्षतोरन्तरतो बहिर्मिथः ।
 समाः सहस्रं व्यगमन् महीपते सप्राणयोश्चित्रममंसतामराः । २९ ।

Directed by destiny, O protector of men, some very powerful alligator indignantly seized the elephant by the foot in that lake. Thus fallen into adversity by the will of Providence, that mighty elephant struggled to the utmost of its strength (to shake off the enemy's hold). (27) Perceiving the leader of their herd being thus forcibly dragged by the mighty foe, and unable to help itself, the female elephants, whose mind was (greatly) perplexed, (merely) shrieked; while the other elephants, even though they tried (their utmost) to help their leader (from behind), could not liberate it. (28) While the lord of elephants and the alligator were thus contending and pulling each other, the one outside and the other inside, both remaining alive, a thousand years rolled by, O ruler of the earth. The gods (too) looked upon this (event) as (something) strange. (29)

ततो गजेन्द्रस्य मनोबलौजसां कालेन दीर्घेण महानभूद् व्ययः ।
 विकृष्यमाणस्य जलेऽवसीदतो विपर्ययोऽभूत् सकलं जलौकसः । ३० ।
 इत्थं गजेन्द्रः स यदाऽऽप संकटं प्राणस्य देही विवशो यदृच्छया ।
 अपारयन्नात्मविमोक्षणे चिरं दध्याविमां बुद्धिमथाभ्यपद्यत । ३१ ।
 न मामिमे ज्ञातय आतुरं गजाः कुतः करिण्यः प्रभवन्ति मोचितुम् ।
 ग्राहेण पाशेन विधातुरावृतोऽप्यहं च तं यामि परं परायणम् । ३२ ।
 यः कश्चनेशो बलिनेऽन्तकोरगात् प्रचण्डवेगादभिधावतो भृशम् ।
 भीतं प्रपन्नं परिपाति यद्भयान्मृत्युः प्रधावत्यरणं तमीमहि । ३३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे मन्वन्तरानुवर्णने गजेन्द्रोपाख्याने द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । २ ।

After this (due to lack of nourishment, however,) there came about a great depletion of spirit, strength and vitality of the king of elephants, as it was being dragged in water for (such) a long time and was now languishing; while in the case of the alligator (that had its abode in water and derived its nourishment from water) all this (strength etc.), turned out to be otherwise (came to be redoubled). (30) When the lord of elephants, that looked upon the body (alone) as its self, unexpectedly came face to face with this danger to life and felt (absolutely) powerless, and incapable of liberating itself (from the hold of its enemy), it pondered for a long time and presently arrived at the following conclusion. (31) (The elephant said to itself,) "These, my kith and kin, have no power to extricate me, fallen in distress (as I am); how (then) can the female elephants do it? (Therefore,) entrapped as I am in the snare of Providence in the shape of the alligator, even I (a beast) flee (for protection) to the Supreme, the ultimate refuge (of all). (32) Whosoever being the almighty Lord Protects on every side a suppliant very much afraid of the powerful serpent in the form of Death, possessed of terrible speed and advancing in every direction, and from fear of whom Death (himself) runs to and fro (to devour living beings), let us approach Him as our asylum." (33)

Thus ends the second discourse, hinging on the legend of the king of elephants forming part of the story of the Manvantaras, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

The leader of the elephants extols the Lord and is rescued from the dangerous situation

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं व्यवसितो बुद्ध्या समाधाय मनो हृदि । जजाप परमं जाप्यं प्राग्जन्मन्यनुशिक्षितम् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Having thus resolved by force of reason and steadied the mind in the region of the heart, the king of elephants proceeded (mentally) to repeat the (following) excellent prayer (worth repeating again and again), learnt by heart in its previous incarnation (as king Indradyumna). * (1)

गजेन्द्र उवाच

ॐ नमो भगवते तस्मै यत एतच्छिदात्मकम् । पुरुषायादिबीजाय परेशायाभिधीमहि । २ ।

यस्मिन्निदं यतश्चेदं येनेदं य इदं स्वयम् । योऽस्मात् परस्माच्च परस्तं प्रपद्ये स्वयम्भुवम् । ३ ।

यः स्वात्मनीदं निजमाययार्पितं क्वचिद् विभातं क्व च तत् तिरोहितम् ।

अविद्धदृक् साक्ष्युभयं तदीक्षते स आत्ममूलोऽवतु मां परात्परः । ४ ।

कालेन पञ्चत्वमितेषु कृत्स्नशो लोकेषु पालेषु च सर्वहेतुषु ।

तमस्तदाऽऽसीद् गहनं गभीरं यस्तस्य पारेऽभिविराजते विभुः । ५ ।

न यस्य देवा ऋषयः पदं विदुर्जन्तुः पुनः कोऽर्हति गन्तुमीरितुम् ।

यथा नटस्याकृतिभिर्विचेष्टतो दुरत्ययानुक्रमणः स मावतु । ६ ।

दिदृक्ष्वो यस्य पदं सुमङ्गलं विमुक्तसङ्गा मुनयः सुसाधवः ।

चरन्त्यलोकव्रतमव्रणं वने भूतात्मभूताः सुहृदः स मे गतिः । ७ ।

न विद्यते यस्य च जन्म कर्म वा न नामरूपे गुणदोष एव वा ।

तथापि लोकाप्ययसंभवाय यः स्वमायया तान्यनुकालमृच्छति । ८ ।

तस्मै नमः परेशाय ब्रह्मणेऽनन्तशक्तये । अरूपायोरूपाय नम आश्चर्यकर्मणे । ९ ।

नम आत्मप्रदीपाय साक्षिणे परमात्मने । नमो गिरां विदूराय मनसश्चेतसामपि । १० ।

सत्त्वेन प्रतिलभ्याय नैष्कर्म्येण विपश्चिता । नमः कैवल्यनाथाय निर्वाणसुखसंविदे । ११ ।

नमः शान्ताय घोराय मूढाय गुणधर्मिणे । निर्विशेषाय साम्याय नमो ज्ञानधनाय च । १२ ।

क्षेत्रज्ञाय नमस्तुभ्यं सर्वाध्यक्षाय साक्षिणे । पुरुषायात्ममूलाय मूलप्रकृतये नमः । १३ ।

सर्वेन्द्रियगुणद्रष्टे

सर्वप्रत्ययहेतवे । असताच्छाययोक्ताय सदाभासाय ते नमः । १४ ।

नमो

नमस्तेऽखिलकारणाय

निष्कारणायानुत्तकारणाय ।

सर्वागमाग्रायमहार्णवाय

नमोऽपवर्गाय

परायणाय । १५ ।

गुणारणिच्छत्रचिदुष्मपाय

तत्क्षोभविस्फूर्जितमानसाय ।

नैष्कर्म्यभावेन

विवर्जितागमस्वयंप्रकाशाय

नमस्करोमि । १६ ।

The king of elephants (mentally) prayed: We mentally offer (our) salutation to that all-powerful supreme Lord—denoted by the mystical syllable Om—because of whom (animated by whom) this (psycho-physical) organism appears as conscious and who enters the (various) bodies (as their causes) in the shape of Prakṛti (primordial Matter) and Puruṣa (the Spirit). (2) I (mentally) approach (for protection) that self-existent Lord in whom (as its ground) this universe rests, from whom it has emanated, by whom and by whose instrumentality it is brought into existence, (nay,) who Himself constitutes this universe, and (yet) who is beyond this phenomenal existence as well as its unmanifest Cause (Prakṛti). (3) May that self-revealed Lord protect me—He who transcends (reveals) even the revealing agencies (the eye, mind and so on), and who because of His unobstructed vision regards as a (disinterested) witness this aforesaid universe, projected (evolved) in His own Self by His creative energy, both when sometimes (at the time of creation) it becomes manifest, and when at other times it likewise gets screened from view (at the time of dissolution being merged in Prakṛti). (4) (At the time of final dissolution) when (all) the (fourteen)* spheres and (the bodies of) their guardians (Brahmā and others) are reduced to the state of (their causes,) the five (gross) elements (earth, water, fire, air and ether) and all the causes (viz., the five gross elements, the five subtle elements, the five senses of perception, the five organs of action, the mind, the ego and the Mahat-tattva or the principle of Cosmic Intelligence) get dissolved (into their ultimate Cause, Prakṛti or primordial Matter) by lapse of time (to the extent of two Parārdhas, the lifetime of a Brahmā), impenetrable (incomprehensible) and fathomless darkness (ignorance in the shape of the Unmanifest) prevails at that time. May that all-pervading Lord protect me, who sheds His lustre all round (even) beyond that darkness, nay, whose reality (even) gods and seers cannot comprehend—any more than an ordinary spectator can discover the identity of an actor acting differently in diverse appearances—much less can any (other ordinary and ignorant) creature know or describe it, His course of conduct being hard to fathom. (5-6) He alone is my refuge, whose most auspicious nature (even) contemplative souls that have completely shaken off (all) attachment and are identified with, and benevolently disposed towards, (all) created beings and exceedingly pious (in character) are eager to perceive, for which they scrupulously observe in the woods (away from the bustle of worldly life) sacred vows (of continence etc.), beyond the capacity of ordinary people. (7) Hail, hail to that all perfect supreme Lord of infinite potencies and wonderful activity, devoid of form, yet possessed of innumerable forms, for whom there is neither birth (brought about by past Karma) nor actions (inspired by the sense of doership), neither name nor form (when He is conceived of as devoid of attributes), and

* The fourteen worlds comprise the seven higher worlds, viz., (1) Bhūloka (the earth); (2) Bhuvāloka (the space between the earth and the sun, inhabited by Munis, Siddhas and so on); (3) Svarloka (Indra's heaven above the sun or between the sun and the pole-star); (4) Maharloka (a region above the pole-star and inhabited by Bhṛgu and the other sages who survive the destruction of the three lower worlds); (5) Janaloka (inhabited by the sage Sanaka and his three brothers—Sanandana, Sanātana and Sanātkumāra); (6) Tapoloka (inhabited by ascetic sages) and (7) Brahmaloka (the realm of Brahmā, the creator, ascent to which exempts one from rebirth); and the seven lower worlds called in the order of their descent below the earth as (1) Atala, (2) Vitala, (3) Sutala, (4) Tālātala, (5) Mahātala, (6) Rasātala and (7) Pātāla, which have already been described in detail in Book V (Discourse 24).

in whom there is neither merit nor demerit, nevertheless who assumes (all) these from time to time (according to the exigencies of time) by His own Māyā (will-power) for the destruction and creation of the world. (8-9) Salutations to the supreme Spirit who is revealed by His own Self (requires no other light to reveal Himself) and stands as the witness (of all) ! Greetings to Him who is entirely beyond (the ken of) speech and mind and the (diverse) faculties of mind !! (10) (My) bow to Him who is attainable by a wise man through purity of mind acquired by means of cessation from worldly activity (and by means of devotional practices), who is the Lord (Bestower) of final beatitude and (also) constitutes the realization of the bliss of final beatitude. (11) Hail to Him who having adopted the characteristics of the (three) modes of Prakṛti, (severally) appears as serene, dreadful and infatuated, but who is (really) destitute of (all) difference and uniform (in every respect). Hail to Him who is wisdom crystallized (as distinguished from Prakṛti, which, though undifferentiated and uniform like Him, is devoid of consciousness). (12) (My) bow to You, the Knower of (all) psycho-physical organisms, the Ruler and Witness of all ! Salutations to the Source of all Jivas (embodied souls) as well as of Prakṛti (the ultimate cause of the universe), because existent before them all. (13) (My) greetings to You, the Perceiver of all the senses of perception as well as of their objects, the Source of all (the varieties of) cognitions, who are indicated (even as a material body by its reflection) by the phenomenal existence (in the shape of the psycho-physical organism) as well as by Nescience (the root of all phenomena) inasmuch as it is You who are reflected in the shape of existence (in every phenomena). (14) Hail, hail to You, the Cause of all (effects), Yours If without a cause, and a wondrous cause (in the sense that unlike other causes You remain unchanged even though assuming the form of the universe). Salutations to You, constituting the great ocean to which all Tantras (such as the Pāñcarātra) and Vedas (like so many streams) are directed, the embodiment of final beatitude, the refuge of the great !! (15) I bow to the Lord, who is the fire of Consciousness hidden in the Aranīs (pieces of wood used for kindling fire by attrition) of the Guṇas (the modes of Prakṛti), whose creative will is aroused when the equilibrium of the Guṇas is disturbed, and who reveals Himself of His own accord to (the mind of) those (enlightened souls) who have kept at a distance (the injunctions and interdictions of) the Śāstras by dint of contemplation on the truth of the Spirit. (16)

मादृक्प्रपन्नपशुपाशविमोक्षणाय मुक्ताय भूरिकरुणाय नमोऽलयाय ।

स्वांशेन सर्वतनुभृन्मनसि प्रतीतप्रत्यग्दृशे भगवते बृहते नमस्ते । १७ ।

आत्मात्मजाप्तगृहवित्तजनेषु सक्तैर्दुष्प्रापणाय गुणसङ्गविवर्जिताय ।

मुक्तात्मभिः स्वहृदये परिभाविताय ज्ञानात्मने भगवते नम ईश्वराय । १८ ।

यं धर्मकामार्थविमुक्तिकामा भजन्त इष्टां गतिमाप्नुवन्ति ।

किं त्वाशिषो रात्यपि देहमव्ययं करोतु मेऽदभ्रदयो विमोक्षणम् । १९ ।

एकान्तिनो यस्य न कञ्चनार्थं वाञ्छन्ति ये वै भगवत्प्रपन्नाः ।

अत्यद्भुतं तच्चरितं सुमङ्गलं गायन्त आनन्दसमुद्रमग्न्याः । २० ।

तमक्षरं ब्रह्म परं परेशमव्यक्तमाध्यात्मिकयोगगम्यम् ।

अतीन्द्रियं सूक्ष्ममिवातिदूरमनन्तमाद्यं परिपूर्णमीडे । २१ ।

(My) bow to the Lord of boundless compassion who is not only ever free (Himself) but is also capable of finally undoing the cords (of ignorance) binding the beast-like (ignorant) souls akin to me fallen at His mercy, nay, who knows no weariness (in doing this work) ! (My greetings to You, the almighty and infinite Lord, who by a part of Your being appear as the Inner Controller in the mind of all embodied souls !! (17) Hail to the all-powerful Lord Who,

being entirely free from attachment to the objects of senses, is (consequently) unattainable by those attached to their body, children, friends, house, wealth and kinsmen and Who, being consciousness itself, is constantly contemplated upon by emancipated souls in their own heart. (18) May that Lord of unbounded mercy bring about my complete deliverance (from the clutches of this monster as well as from the bondage of worldly existence), by worshipping Whom those seeking religious merit, objects of sensuous enjoyment, (worldly) riches and final beatitude attain their desired goal, nay, Who grants them other (unexpected) boons (too) as well as an undecaying (divine) body (in which they sport with Him). (19) I glorify that imperishable, all-pervading, (most) subtle (mysterious), infinite and absolutely perfect Supreme, the (very) First principle, the Ruler (even) of the greatest (Brahmā, Śiva and so on), Who, though unmanifest (to those who do not worship Him) is attainable (by His worshippers) through Yoga (concentration of mind) directed towards the supreme Spirit (Himself), Who is beyond the (range of the material) senses and (though near at hand, being our very self) appears as though exceedingly remote (being veiled by His deluding potency), and from whom people exclusively devoted to Him, (nay,) even those who have sought shelter in the Lord do not seek any boon (in the shape of religious merit and so on), but are immersed in an ocean of bliss while singing His most marvellous and highly auspicious stories. (20-21)

यस्य ब्रह्मादयो देवा वेदा लोकाश्चराचराः । नामरूपविभेदेन फलव्या च कलया कृताः । २२ ।

यथार्चिषोऽग्नेः सवितुर्गभस्तयो निर्यान्ति संयान्त्यसकृत् स्वरोचिषः ।

तथा यतोऽयं गुणसंप्रवाहो बुद्धिर्मनः खानि शरीरसर्गाः । २३ ।

स वै न देवासुरमर्त्यतिर्यङ् न स्त्री न षण्ढो न पुमान् न जन्तुः ।

नायं गुणः कर्म न सन्न चासन्निषेधशेषो जयतादशेषः । २४ ।

जिजीविषे नाहमिहामुया किमन्तर्बहिश्चावृतयेभ्योन्या ।

इच्छामि कालेन न यस्य विप्लवस्तस्यात्मलोकावरणस्य मोक्षम् । २५ ।

सोऽहं विश्वसृजं विश्वमविश्वं विश्ववेदसम् । विश्वात्मानमजं ब्रह्म प्रणतोऽस्मि परं पदम् । २६ ।

योगरन्धितकर्माणो हृदि योगविभाषिते । योगिनो यं प्रपश्यन्ति योगेशं तं नतोऽस्यहम् । २७ ।

नमो नमस्तुभ्यमसह्यवेगशक्तित्रयायाखिलधीगुणाय ।

प्रपन्नपालाय दुरन्तशक्तये कदिन्द्रियाणामनवाप्यवर्त्मने । २८ ।

नायं वेद स्वमात्मानं यच्छक्त्याहंधिया हतम् । तं दुरत्ययमाहात्म्यं भगवन्तमितोऽस्यहम् । २९ ।

The Lord by whose minutest ray (all) the gods with Brahmā as their head, the (four) Vedas and (both) the animate and inanimate worlds have been created with an infinite variety of names and forms and from whom, the self-luminous One, this phenomenal world—which is (nothing but) a modification of the three Guṇas, consisting as it does of the intellect, the mind, the (ten) Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action), the bodies with which a Jīva is invested in the course of its mundane existence—emanates and into Whom it returns in the same way as flames emanate again and again from fire and rays from the sun, and then return (into the fire and the sun respectively)—that Lord is, really speaking, neither a god nor a demon nor a human being nor again an animal; He is neither a female nor a male nor a person of neither sex nor is He an asexual creature, He is neither an attribute nor an action, neither an effect nor a cause. He is that which remains (as the basis of negation) after everything else has been negated, and (yet) constitutes all. May He reveal Himself (for bringing about my release) ! (22—24) I do not long to survive (by being extricated from the grip of this alligator); what have I to do here (in this mortal world) with this elephant-life, enveloped as it is with ignorance in and out ? I (for my part only) seek the lifting of the veil (of ignorance) that screens the light (knowledge) of the Spirit, and the tearing of which is not possible by (the destructive influence of) time (but by spiritual enlightenment alone). (25) Such as I am, I (simply) bow to that all-pervading Spirit which not only creates the universe but (also) constitutes the universe and is yet other than the universe, (nay), which toys with the universe and is the Soul (Inner Controller) of the universe, which is devoid of birth (etc.), and is the supreme goal (of all). (26) (Again), I do homage to that Master of Yoga (supernatural Powers) whom Yogīs, (mystics or those practising concentration of mind), that have burnt the (entire stock of) their Karma (past actions) by means of Devotion, directly perceive in their heart purified through (the practice of) Yoga (concentration of mind). (27) Hail, hail to You of endless potency, the protector of those who have taken refuge in You, the force (in the shape of passion etc.,) of whose threefold energy (in the form of the three Guṇas—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) is irresistible, who manifest Yourself as the objects of all the senses of perception and whose (very) path is unattainable by those whose senses are directed towards the (outside) world. (28) I have sought that Lord whose glory cannot be easily surpassed and due to whose Māyā (deluding potency) this Jīva is unable to know its own self (essential character), obscured (as it is) by the ego-sense (a product of that Māyā). (29)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं गजेन्द्रमुपवर्णितनिर्विशेषं ब्रह्मादयो विविधलिङ्गभिदाभिमानाः ।
 नैते यदोपससृपुर्निखिलात्मकत्वात् तत्राखिलामरमयो हरिराविरासीत् । ३० ।
 तं तद्वर्तमानमुपलभ्य जगन्निवासः स्तोत्रं निशम्य दिविजैः सह संस्तुवद्भिः ।
 छन्दोमयेन गरुडेन समुद्यमानश्चक्रायुधोऽभ्यगमदाशु यतो गजेन्द्रः । ३१ ।
 सोऽन्तःसरस्युत्खलेन गृहीत आर्तो दृष्ट्वा गरुत्पतिं हरिं ख उपात्तचक्रम् ।
 उत्क्षिप्य साम्बुजकरं गिरमाह कृच्छ्रन्नारायणाखिलगुरो भगवन् नमस्ते । ३२ ।
 तं वीक्ष्य पीडितमजः सहसावतीर्य संग्राहमाशु सरसः कृपयोजहार ।
 ग्राहाद् विपाटितमुखादरिणा गजेन्द्रं संपश्यतां हरिरमूचदुस्त्रियाणाम् । ३३ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे गजेन्द्रमोक्षणे तृतीयोऽध्यायः । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: When these (aforementioned) gods, Brahmā (the creator) and others, who are identified with their respective distinctive forms, did not approach the king of the elephants, that had referred to (glorified) the Lord as devoid of any particular form as 'aforesaid, Śrī Hari, (who had taken His descent from the loins of Harimedhā through his wife, Harinī * and) who embodies all the gods (in His person) because of His being the Soul of all, manifested Himself on that (very) spot. (30) Finding the elephant distressed like that † and having heard the hymn (mentally recited by it and reproduced in the preceding verses), the Lord who wields the discus (Sudarśana) as His (characteristic) weapon and is the Abode of the universe, forthwith arrived where the king of the elephants was, being swiftly borne (on his back) by Garuḍa (the king of the birds)—possessed of a speed that depends on his will—and accompanied by celestial beings who were duly extolling Him. (31) Beholding Śrī Hari (mounted) on (the back of) Garuḍa in the air with the discus uplifted (in one of His arms), and holding up its trunk with a lotus (plucked by way of an offering ‡), the elephant, (that had been)

* Vide VIII. i. 30.

† See Discourse II.

‡ The Indian tradition is that one should never approach a king, deity or preceptor empty-handed (without a present)—

'रिद्धस्तेन नोपेयाद् राजानं दैवतं गुह्यम्' seized inside the lake by the mighty alligator and felt (much) distressed, uttered with (great) difficulty (on account of pain) the words "Hail to You, O Lord Nārāyaṇa, the Preceptor of the universe !" (32) Perceiving the elephant afflicted and alighting all at once (from the back of Garuḍa) out of (extreme) compassion, the birthless Śrī Hari speedily pulled the king of the elephants (by its trunk) along with the alligator out of the lake and, (even) while the gods stood looking on, extricated it from (the hold of) the alligator, whose jaws had been rent open with the discus. (33)

Thus ends the third discourse, bearing on the deliverance of the king of the elephants, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

Deliverance of the lord of the elephants

श्रीशुक उवाच

तदा देवर्षिगन्धर्वा ब्रह्मेशानपुरोगमाः । मुमुचुः कुसुमासारं शंसन्तः कर्म तद्धरेः । १ ।
नेदुर्दुन्दुभयो दिव्या गन्धर्वा ननृतुर्जगुः । ऋषयश्चारणाः सिद्धास्तुष्टुवुः पुरुषोत्तमम् । २ ।
योऽसौ ग्राहः स वै सद्यः परमाश्चर्यरूपधृक् । मुक्तो देवलशापेन हूहूर्नन्धर्वसत्तमः । ३ ।
प्रणम्य शिरसाधीशमुत्तमश्लोकमव्ययम् । अगायत यशोधाम कीर्तन्यगुणसत्कथम् । ४ ।
सोऽनुकम्पित ईशेन परिक्रम्य प्रणम्य तम् । लोकस्य पश्यतो लोकं स्वमगान्मुक्तकिल्बिषः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Applauding the aforesaid feat of Lord Śrī Hari, the gods, Ṛṣis (seers) and Gandharvas (present there), headed by Brahmā (the creator) and Lord Śiva, discharged (from the air) a shower of flowers (on the person of the Lord by way of felicitation). (1) Heavenly drums sounded; the Gandharvas (celestial musicians) danced and sang (songs of praise); while Ṛṣis, Cāraṇas (celestial bards) and Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth) glorified the supreme Person. (2) That which was (till now) an alligator due to the curse of the sage Devala* has been (in his previous incarnation) the foremost of the Gandharvas, Hūhū (by name). Redeemed (from that curse by the Lord), it forthwith assumed a really most wonderful form. (3) Bowing with his head (bent low), he hymned the supreme immortal Lord of excellent renown, the Abode of (all) glory, whose (innumerable) virtues and sacred stories (alone) are worth celebrating. (4) (Thus) favoured by the Lord, he had (all) his sins washed away; and, walking round Him (as a token of reverence) from left to right and greeting Him, he returned to his home (the realm of the Gandharvas) while the (whole) assembly (of gods and seers present there) stood gazing (with wonder). (5)

गजेन्द्रो भगवत्स्पर्शाद् विमुक्तोऽज्ञानबन्धनात् । प्राप्नो भगवतो रूपं पीतवासाश्चतुर्भुजः । ६ ।

स वै पूर्वमभूद् राजा पाण्ड्यो द्रविडसत्तमः । इन्द्रद्युम्न इति ख्यातो विष्णुव्रतपरायणः । ७ ।

* We are told that this Gandharva was once sporting in a lake along with a number of women. The sage Devala too entered the lake for a bath at that precise hour. Seeing him enter the lake, the haughty Gandharva pulled him by the leg under water. The sage, who at once knew who had played the prank, cursed Hūhū that he would be thrown into the womb of an alligator.

स एकदाऽऽराधनकाल आत्मवान् गृहीतमौनव्रत ईश्वरं हरिम् ।
जटाधरस्तापस आप्तोऽच्युतं समर्चयामास कुलाचलाश्रमः । ८ ।
यदृच्छया तत्र महायशा मुनिः समागमच्छिष्यगणैः परिश्रितः ।
तं वीक्ष्य तूष्णीमकृताह्णनादिकं रहस्युपासीनमृषिश्चकोप ह । ९ ।
तस्मा इमं शापमदादसाधुरयं दुरात्माकृतबुद्धिरय ।
विप्रावमन्ता विशतां तमोऽयं यथा गजः स्तब्धमतिः स एव । १० ।

Freed for ever from the bondage of ignorance through the touch of the Lord, the leader of (the herd of) elephants (in his turn) attained a form similar to the Lord's, being clad in yellow and endowed with four arms. (6) Indeed the elephant was in its previous birth a Pāṇḍya king,* known by the name of Indradyumna, the foremost of the people of the Draviḍa country (now known by the name of Tamilnadu), and devoted to the worship of Lord Viṣṇu. (7) The monarch, who had turned an ascetic, wearing matted locks on his head, and having his hermitage on the Kulācala mountain, nay, who had taken a vow of silence and subjugated his mind (too) once proceeded to worship the almighty and immortal Lord Śrī Hari with due ceremony at the hour appointed for devotions, having finished his bath (beforehand). (8) By chance there arrived on the spot the sage Agastya of surpassing glory, accompanied by hosts of (his) pupils. Finding him mute (lacking even in polite words) and waiting upon the Lord in seclusion, and perceiving that the king had neglected to offer (him) water to wash his hands with and other articles of worship (to which he was entitled as a venerable newcomer), the sage grew indignant as the story goes. (9) On Indradyumna he pronounced the following imprecation: "This impious, evil-minded and uncultured fellow has insulted a Brāhmaṇa (in me) at this moment. Let him (therefore) be steeped in blinding ignorance; and since he is dull-minded like an elephant, let him be born as an elephant." (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं शप्त्वा गतोऽगस्त्यो भगवान् नृप सानुगः । इन्द्रद्युम्नोऽपि राजर्षिर्दिष्टं तदुपधारयन् । ११ ।
आपन्नः कौञ्जर्री योनिमात्मस्मृतिविनाशिनीम् । हर्षार्चनानुभावेन यद्गजत्वेऽप्यनुस्मृतिः । १२ ।
एवं विमोक्ष्य गजयूथपमब्जनाभस्तेनापि पार्षदगतिं गमितेन युक्तः ।
गन्धर्वसिद्धविबुधैरुपगीयमानकर्माद्भुतं स्वभवनं गरुडासनोऽगात् । १३ ।
एतन्महाराज तवेरितो मया कृष्णानुभावो गजराजमोक्षणम् ।
स्वर्ग्यं यशस्यं कलिकल्मषापहं दुःस्वप्ननाशं कुरुवर्य शृण्वताम् । १४ ।
यथानुकीर्तयन्त्येतच्छ्रेयस्कामा द्विजातयः । शुचयः प्रातरुत्थाय दुःस्वप्नाद्युपशान्तये । १५ ।
इदमाह हरिः प्रीतो गजेन्द्रं कुरुसत्तम । शृण्वतां सर्वभूतानां सर्वभूतमयो विभुः । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Having cursed Indradyumna as aforesaid, the glorious Agastya went his way along with his followers, O Parikṣit ! Taking the curse to be a freak of (his own) destiny, the royal sage Indradyumna too entered the womb of an elephant, that obliterates the consciousness of the Self. It was by virtue of (his) adoration of Śrī Hari that God-remembrance was awakened in him at the right moment even in the body of an elephant. (11-12) Having thus liberated once for all the leader of the herd of elephants and accompanied even by that elephant—(immediately) transformed into the state of a divine attendant—and

* The Pāṇḍyas were a race of Kṣātrīyas that ruled over the land called Draviḍa Deśa in South India.

taking His seat on (the back of) Garuḍa (the king of birds), Lord Śrī Hari (who has a lotus sprung from His navel) withdrew to His transcendent realm (Vaikuṇṭha), His feat (viz., the deliverance of the elephant) being celebrated by Gandharvas, Siddhas and gods. (13) The glory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Lord Śrī Hari), O great king, has (thus) been narrated to you by me in the form of the aforementioned deliverance of the king of elephants, (the story of) which leads to heaven, is conducive to renown, wipes out the impurities of the Kali age and eliminates (the possibility of) bad dreams in the case of those who listen to this story. O chief of the Kurus ! (14) Rising (early) in the morning, and getting purified, members of the twice-born classes, seeking (their own) welfare, duly recite this story for neutralizing (the evil effects of) a bad dream and so on. (15) full of joy, the all-pervading Śrī Hari, who embodies all created beings, told the (quondam) king of elephants as follows, O jewel of the Kurus, all living beings (present there) listening. (16)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

ये मां त्वां च सरश्चेदं गिरिकन्दरकाननम् । वेत्रकीचकवेणूनां गुल्मानि सुरपादपान् । १७ ।
 शृङ्गाणीमानि धिष्ण्यानि ब्रह्मणो मे शिवस्य च । क्षीरोदं मे प्रियं धाम श्वेतद्वीपं च भास्वरम् । १८ ।
 श्रीवत्सं कौस्तुभं मालां गदां कौमोदकीं मम । सुदर्शनं पाञ्चजन्यं सुपर्णं पतगेश्वरम् । १९ ।
 शेषं च मत्कलां सूक्ष्मां श्रियं देवीं मदाश्रयाम् । ब्रह्माणं नारदमृषिं भवं प्रह्लादमेव च । २० ।
 मत्स्यकूर्मवराहाद्यैरवतारैः कृतानि मे । कर्माण्यनन्तपुण्यानि सूर्यं सोमं हुताशनम् । २१ ।
 प्रणवं सत्यमव्यक्तं गोविप्रान् धर्ममव्ययम् । दाक्षायणीधर्मपत्नीः सोमकश्यपयोरपि । २२ ।
 गङ्गां सरस्वतीं नन्दां कालिन्दीं सितवारणम् । ध्रुवं ब्रह्मऋषीन्सप्त पुण्यश्लोकांश्च मानवान् । २३ ।
 उल्थायापररात्रान्ते प्रयताः सुसमाहिताः । स्मरन्ति मम रूपाणि मुच्यन्ते ह्येनसोऽखिलात् । २४ ।
 ये मां स्तुवन्त्यनेनाङ्गं प्रतिबुध्य निशात्यये । तेषां प्राणात्यये चाहं ददामि विमलां मतिम् । २५ ।

The Lord said: Rising at the close of the third watch of the night (that immediately following midnight), nay purified and fully composed (in mind), they who remember Me and yourself as well as this lake, the yonder mountain (Trikūṭa) with (its) caves and the forest (clothing it), the clusters of canes and bamboos, (both) of the hollow and solid types, the celestial trees (comprised in this forest), these (three) peaks (of the Trikūṭa mountain), the realms of Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva and Myself, the ocean of milk and the resplendent (transcendent) Śwetadwīpa, each being My favourite abode, Śrīvatsa (the curl of hair on My breast), the Kaustubha gem (on my bosom) as well as My garland of sylvan flowers or My necklace of pearls (known by the name of Vaijayantī), My mace, Kaumodakī, (My discus) Sudarśana, (My conch) Pāñcajanya, (My mount) Garuḍa (possessed of beautiful wings), the king of birds, Śeṣa (the serpent-god), who is My subtle emanation, Goddess Śrī (Lakṣmī, the goddess presiding over beauty and prosperity), who has Her abode in Me (on My very bosom), Brahmā (the creator), the sage Nārada, Lord Śiva (the Source of prosperity) as well as (My eminent devotee) Prahārāda, the (numerous) deeds performed through My (various) descents such as the (divine) Fish, Tortoise and Boar, (the very stories of) which yield an inexhaustible store of merit (to the listeners), the sun-god, the moon-god, the god of fire (the consumer of oblations), Praṇava (the mystical syllable OM), truth, the Unmanifest (primordial Matter), the cow and the Brāhmaṇas, the immortal religion (the cult of devotion to the Lord), the daughters of Dakṣa who are the wives of Dharma (the god of piety) as well as of the moon-god and Kaśyapa, the (rivers) Gaṅgā, Saraswatī, Nandā (Alakanandā) and Kālindī (Yamunā), the white elephant (Airāvata, the mount of Indra, the lord of paradise), (My immortal devotee) Dhruva, the seven Brāhmaṇa sages and men of sacred renown (such as Nala, Yudhiṣṭhira and Janaka), (that are all) My (glorious) manifestations, are actually freed from all sin. (17—24) And to them who, waking at the close of night (the commencement of the period known as the Brahma Muhūrta, which extends over two hours and twenty-four minutes before sunrise), extol Me by means of this hymn (mentally recited by you), O dear one, I vouchsafe unclouded memory (of Myself) at the moment of death. (25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यादिश्य हृषीकेशः प्रध्माय जलजोत्तमम् । हर्षयन्विबुधानीकमारुरोह खगाधिपम् । २६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे गजेन्द्रमोक्षणं नाम चतुर्थोऽध्यायः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Having spoken thus and blowing His excellent conch (Pāñcajanya) and (thereby) delighting the host of gods, Śrī Hari (The Controller of the senses) mounted Garuḍa (the king of birds). (26)

Thus ends the fourth discourse entitled "The deliverance of the king of elephants" in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

The gods resort to Brahmā and the latter glorifies the Lord

श्रीशुक उवाच

राजश्रुदितमेतत् ते हरेः कर्माघनाशनम् । गजेन्द्रमोक्षणं पुण्यं रैवतं त्वन्तरं शृणु । १ ।

पञ्चमो रैवतो नाम मनुस्तामससोदरः । बलिविन्ध्यादयस्तस्य सुता अर्जुनपूर्वकाः । २ ।

विभुरिन्द्रः सुरगणा राजभूतरयादयः । हिरण्यरोमा वेदशिरा ऊर्ध्वबाह्वादयो द्विजाः । ३ ।

पत्नी विकुण्ठा शुभ्रस्य वैकुण्ठैः सुरसत्तमैः । तयोः स्वकलया जज्ञे वैकुण्ठो भगवान्स्वयम् । ४ ।

वैकुण्ठः कल्पितो येन लोको लोकनमस्कृतः । रमया प्रार्थ्यमानेन देव्या तस्मिन्निष्काम्यया । ५ ।

तस्यानुभावः कथितो गुणाश्च परमोदयाः । भौमान् रेणून्स विममे यो विष्णोर्वर्णयेद् गुणान् । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: O king ! the sacred account of the aforesaid exploit of Śrī Hari in the shape of deliverance of the king of elephants, which wipes out one's sins, has (just) been narrated to you. Now hear the story of the Manvantara presided over by Raivata. (1) The fifth Manu, Raivata by name, was a co-uterine brother of Tāmasa (the fourth Manu, son of Priyavrata). Bali, Vindhya and others, the eldest of whom was Arjuna, were his sons. (2) Vibhu was the Indra (the lord of paradise); while the Bhūtarayas and others were the hosts of gods, O Parīkṣit ! (And) Hiraṇyaroṁā, Vedaśirā, Ūrdhvabāhu and others* were the (seven) Brāhmaṇa seers. (3) Vikuṇṭhā was the wife of the sage Śubhra; from the union of these two appeared in His partial being the Lord Himself under the name of Vaikuṇṭha along with the foremost of the gods known by the name of the Vaikuṇṭhas. (4) It was by Him as requested by (His divine Spouse) Goddess Rāmā (Lakṣmī) and with the intention of pleasing Her that the (divine) region of Vaikuṇṭha, the adored of (all) the worlds, was brought into existence

* The names of the other four seers, as gathered from the Harivamśa, are:— Devabāhu, Sudhāma, Parjanya and Mahāmuni.

(revealed). (5) His glory and excellences (such as devotion to the Brāhmaṇas) as well as (His) supreme elevation have(already) been recounted * He who would (undertake to) exhaust the virtues of Lord Viṣṇu might (as well) count the particles of dust of the (entire) globe. (6)

षष्ठश्च चक्षुः पुत्रश्चाक्षुषो नाम वै मनुः । पूरूपुरुषसुद्युम्नप्रमुखाश्चाक्षुषात्मजाः । ७ ।

इन्द्रो मन्त्रद्रुमस्तत्र देवा आप्यादयो गणाः । मुनयस्तत्र वै राजन्हविष्मद्वीरकादयः । ८ ।

तत्रापि देवः सम्भूत्यां वैराजस्याभवत् सुतः । अजितो नाम भगवानंशेन जगतः पतिः । ९ ।

पयोधिं येन निर्मथ्य सुराणां साधिता सुधा । भ्रममाणोऽम्भसि धृतः कूर्मरूपेण मन्दरः । १० ।

Indeed, the sixth Manu was son of Cakṣu, Cakṣuṣa by name; while Pūru, Puruṣa, Sudyumna and others were the sons of Chākṣuṣa. (7) Mantradruma was (the name of) the Indra during the Cākṣuṣa Manvantara; while Āpyas and others were the hosts of the gods. Similarly Haviṣmān, Viraka and others† were the (seven) seers in that Manvantara, O king! (8) In that very Manvantara the divine Lord, the Protector of the universe, appeared in His partial being as the son of Vairāja through the latter's wife, Sambhūti, under the name of Ajita, by whom nectar was made available to the gods after churning the ocean (of milk) and by whom, in the form of the (divine) Tortoise, Mount Mandara revolving in the water was supported (on His back). (9-10)

राजोवाच

यथा भगवता ब्रह्मन्मथितः क्षीरसागरः । यदर्थं वा यतश्चाद्रिं दधराम्बुचरात्मना । ११ ।

यथामृतं सुरैः प्राप्तं किञ्चान्यदभवत् ततः । एतद् भगवतः कर्म वदस्व परमाद्भुतम् । १२ ।

त्वया सङ्कथ्यमानेन महिम्ना सात्वतां पतेः । नातितृप्यति मे चित्तं सुचिरं तापतापितम् । १३ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : (Pray). describe (to me) that most marvellous feat of the almighty Lord, how and what for the ocean of milk was churned by the Lord, O (holy) Brāhmaṇa; wherefore He, in the form of an aquatic animal (tortoise), propped up Mount Mandara (on His back); how nectar was obtained by the gods and what else than this happened (on the said occasion). (11-12) My mind, afflicted by (the threefold) agony for a pretty long time, does not feel sated with the glory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of the Yadus), which is being told at length by you (and which is so charming). (13)

सूत उवाच

सम्पृष्टो भगवानेवं द्वैपायनसुतो द्विजाः । अभिनन्द्य हरेर्वीर्यमभ्याचष्टुं प्रचक्रमे । १४ ।

Sūta went on : Implored thus (by Parīkṣit), O Brāhmaṇas, and welcoming his inquiry, the omniscient sage Śuka (son of Dwaipāyana), proceeded to describe in detail (as follows) the feat of Śrī Hari (in the form of the churning of the ocean). (14).

श्रीशुक उवाच

यदा युद्धेऽसुरैर्देवा बाध्यमानाः शितायुधैः । गतासवो निपतिता नोत्तिष्ठेरन्म भूयशः । १५ ।

यदा दुर्वाससः शापात् सेन्द्रा लोकास्त्रयो नृप । निःश्रीकाश्चाभवंस्तत्र नेशुरिज्यादयः क्रियाः । १६ ।

निशाम्यैतत् सुरगणा महेन्द्रवरुणादयः । नाध्यगच्छन्स्वयं मन्त्रैर्मन्त्रयन्तो विनिश्चयम् । १७ ।

ततो ब्रह्मसभां जग्मुर्मैरोर्मूर्धनि सर्वशः । सर्वं विज्ञापयाञ्चक्रुः प्रणताः परमेष्ठिने । १८ ।

स विलोक्येन्द्रवाय्वादीन् निःसत्त्वान्विगतप्रभान् । लोकानमङ्गलप्रायानसुरानयथा विभुः । १९ ।

* Vide Book III.

† The names of the other five seers, as gathered from the Harivamśa, are: Sumedhā, Uttama, Madhu, Atināma and Sahiṣṇu.

समाहितेन मनसा संस्मरन्पुरुषं परम् । उवाचोत्फुल्लवदनो देवान्स भगवान्परः । २० ।

अहं भवो यूयमथोऽसुरादयो मनुष्यतिर्यग्द्रुमधर्मजातयः ।

यस्यावतारांशकलाविसर्जिता ब्रजाम सर्वे शरणं तमव्ययम् । २१ ।

न यस्य वध्यो न च रक्षणीयो नोपेक्षणीयादरणीयपक्षः ।

अथापि सर्गस्थितिसंयमार्थं धत्ते रजःसत्त्वतमांसि काले । २२ ।

अयं च तस्य स्थितिपालनक्षणः सत्त्वं जुषाणस्य भवाय देहिनाम् ।

तस्माद् ब्रजामः शरणं जगद्गुरुं स्वानां स नो धास्यति शं सुरप्रियः । २३ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : When, pressed hard on the field of battle with sharp-edged weapons, the gods fell dead in large numbers and did not rise again, and when as a result of the imprecation pronounced by the sage Durvāsā*, O ruler of men, (all) the three worlds. (viz., earth, heaven and the intermediate region) along with Indra (their lord) were divested of their splendour, (all) sacrificial and other (sacred) performances disappeared (fell into desuetude). (15-16) Observing this (state of things), the great Indra (the lord of paradise), Varuṇa (the god presiding over water and the western quarter) and other hosts of gods, though deliberating (among themselves) through (mutual) consultations, did not arrive by themselves at any definite conclusion (regarding the course of action to be followed by them). (17) Thereupon they all went to the court of Brahmā (the creator) on the summit of Mount Meru and submissively made everything fully known to that supreme ruler. (18) Seeing Indra, Vāyu (the wind-god) and others destitute of (all) strength and shorn of splendour, the worlds devoid of auspiciousness as it were, and the demons full of strength and splendour unlike the gods, the all-powerful Brahmā began contemplating on the supreme Person with a fully concentrated mind. With a cheerful countenance that supreme lord (Brahmā) spoke to the gods (as follows): (19-20) "Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), myself, you (gods) as well as the demons and other (species of ethereal) beings, human beings and animals, the vegetable kingdom and the sweat-born creatures (bugs and so on) have (all) been evolved (either) by His (very first) manifestation (the Puruṣa or the cosmic Being) or by a fraction of the latter (viz., myself) or (lastly) by my own rays (Marīci and the other lords of creation). Let us all (therefore) seek refuge in that immortal Being. (21) There is none deserving of death or protection at His hands and no side worthy of neglect or respect in His eyes; yet, for the purposes of creation, continuance and dissolution of the universe, He severally assumes at the proper time the qualities of Rajas, Sattva and Tamas. (22) And the present is the time for maintaining the equilibrium (proper functioning) of the universe on the part of the Lord, who is embracing (at present) the quality of Sattva for the welfare of embodied souls. We, therefore, seek shelter in the (said) preceptor of the universe. The beloved of the gods, He will ensure the well-being of us, His own people. (23)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्याभाष्य सुरान्वेधाः सह देवैररिंदम । अजितस्य पदं साक्षाज्जगाम तमसः परम् । २४ ।

तत्रादृष्टस्वरूपाय श्रुतपूर्वाय वै विभो । स्तुतिमब्रूत दैवीभिर्गीर्भिस्त्ववहितेन्द्रियः । २५ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Having thus addressed the gods, O chastiser of foes, the creator

* The sage Durvāsā was once returning from Vaiṣṇava (the divine realm of Lord Viṣṇu). He wore on his bosom a wreath of flowers bestowed on him by the Lord as a token of His pleasure. On the way he met Indra riding his elephant, Airāvata. The sage, in his turn, gifted the garland to Indra, who in his pride disdainfully threw it on the head of the elephant and the latter playfully tore it from its head and trampled it under foot. At this the sage grew indignant and pronounced the curse that Indra as well as the three worlds ruled over by him would soon be divested of their splendour.

along with the gods went to the realm of Lord Ajita Himself, that lies beyond the darkness of Māyā (ignorance). (24) There, indeed, with a collected mind, O lord, he uttered (the following) hymn, of course, in divine (Vedic) language, intended to propitiate the Lord, whose essential nature had not been perceived but about whom he had already heard (much). (25)

ब्रह्मोवाच

अविक्रियं सत्यमनन्तमाद्यं गुहाशयं निष्कलमप्रतर्क्यम् ।
मनोऽग्रयानं वचसानिरुक्तं नमामहे देववरं वरेण्यम् । २६ ।
विपश्चितं प्राणमनोधियात्मनामर्थेन्द्रियाभासमनिद्रमव्रणम् ।
छायातपौ यत्र न गृध्रपक्षौ तमक्षरं खं त्रियुगं ब्रजामहे । २७ ।
अजस्य चक्रं त्वजयेर्यमाणं मनोमयं पञ्चदशारमाशु ।
त्रिणाभि विद्युच्चलमष्टनेमि यदक्षमाहुस्तमृतं प्रपद्ये । २८ ।
य एकवर्णं तमसः परं तदलोकमव्यक्तमनन्तपारम् ।
आसाञ्चकारोपसुपर्णमेनमुपासते योगरथेन धीराः । २९ ।
न यस्य कश्चातितितर्ति मायां यया जनो मुह्यति वेद नार्थम् ।
तं निर्जितात्मात्मगुणं परेशं नमाम भूतेषु समं चरन्तम् । ३० ।
इमे वयं यत्प्रिययैव तन्वा सत्त्वेन सृष्टा बहिरन्तराविः ।
गतिं न सूक्ष्मामृषयश्च विद्महे कुतोऽसुराद्या इतरप्रधानाः । ३१ ।
पादौ महीयं स्वकृतैव यस्य चतुर्विधो यत्र हि भूतसर्गः ।
स वै महापूरुष आत्मतन्त्रः प्रसीदतां ब्रह्म महाविभूतिः । ३२ ।
अम्भस्तु यद्रेत उदारवीर्यं सिध्यन्ति जीवन्त्युत वर्धमानाः ।
लोकास्त्रयोऽथाखिललोकपालाः प्रसीदतां ब्रह्म महाविभूतिः । ३३ ।
सोमं मनो यस्य समामनन्ति दिवौकसां वै बलमन्ध आयुः ।
ईशो नगानां प्रजनः प्रजानां प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ३४ ।
अग्निर्मुखं यस्य तु जातवेदा जातः क्रियाकाण्डनिमित्तजन्मा ।
अन्तःसमुद्रेऽनुपचन्वधातून् प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ३५ ।
यच्चक्षुरासीत् तरणिर्देवयानं त्रयीमयो ब्रह्मण एष धिष्यम् ।
द्वारं च मुक्तेरमृतं च मृत्युः प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ३६ ।
प्राणादभूद् यस्य चराचराणां प्राणः सहो बलमोजश्च वायुः ।
अन्वास्म सप्राजमिवानुगा वयं प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ३७ ।
श्रोत्राद् दिशो यस्य हृदश्च खानि प्रजज्ञिरे खं पुरुषस्य नाभ्याः ।
प्राणेन्द्रियात्मासुशरीरकेतं प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ३८ ।
बलान्महेन्द्रस्त्रिदशाः प्रसादान्मन्योर्गिरीशो धिषणाद् विरिञ्चः ।
खेभ्यश्च छन्दांसृषयो मेढूतः कः प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ३९ ।
श्रीर्वक्षसः पितरश्छाययाऽऽसन् धर्मः स्तनादितरः पृष्ठतोऽभूत् ।
द्यौर्यस्य शीर्ष्णोऽप्सरसो विहारात् प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः । ४० ।
विप्रो मुखं ब्रह्म च यस्य गुह्यं राजन्य आसीद् भुजयोर्बलं च ।

ऊर्वोर्विडोजोऽङ्घ्रिरवेदशूद्रौ प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः ।४१।

लोभोऽधरात् प्रीतिरुपर्यभूद् द्युतिर्नस्तः पशव्यः स्पर्शेन कामः ।

भ्रुवोर्यमः पक्ष्मभवस्तु कालः प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः ।४२।

द्रव्यं वयः कर्म गुणान्विशेषं यद्योगमायाविहितान्वदन्ति ।

यद् दुर्विभाव्यं प्रबुधापवाधं प्रसीदतां नः स महाविभूतिः ।४३।

नमोऽस्तु तस्मा उपशान्तशक्तये स्वाराज्यलाभप्रतिपूरितात्मने ।

गुणेषु मायारचितेषु वृत्तिभिर्न सज्जमानाय नभस्वदूतये ।४४।

Brahmā prayed : We, O Lord, bow to You, the foremost (of all), true (at all times), changeless, infinite, most ancient, dwelling in the heart (of all), unconditioned, incomprehensible through reasoning, quicker than the mind, indescribable through speech and worthy of being sought for (as one's protector). (26) We resort (for protection) to that all-perfect One, the power of the vital airs, the mind, the intellect and the ego, and appearing as the senses of perception and their objects, who is devoid of sleep (ignorance), bodiless and all-pervading (as ether), in whom (both) nescience (which is compared to shade or darkness) and saving knowledge (which is compared to sunshine)—the attributes of a Jīva characterized by attachment etc.—are absent and who manifests Himself (only) in the first)three Yugas (the Kali age being unfavourable to His manifestation). (27) The Vedas declare that the fast rotating wheel (in the shape of the body etc., which are constantly changing) owned by the Jīva (who is as a matter of fact devoid of birth and death both), which is being set in motion by Māyā (the beginningless energy or will-power of the Lord), consists chiefly) of the mind and is provided with fifteen spokes (in the shape of the ten Indriyas and the five vital airs), three naves (in the shape of the three modes of Prakṛti), eight felloes (in the shape of the five gross elements, the mind, intellect and the ego), is fleeting as lightning, and has God (Himself) for its axle. To Him, the (only) Truth, I fly (for protection). (28) Being the same as that imperceptible and undifferentiated Reality which is of the nature of absolute Consciousness, beyond (the realm of) Prakṛti (ignorance) and unlimited in time and space, it is He who (as the inner Controller and constant companion and friend) dwells (in every heart) by the side of the Jīva and (again) it is Him that the wise seek through the discipline of Yoga (concentration of mind). (29) Let us bow to that Ruler of the highest gods, moving equally in all created beings, whose Māyā (deluding potency) nobody can overpass—that Māyā due to which men get bewildered and are unable to know the truth (their reality)—but who has completely subdued that Māyā-Śakti of His own and its properties (in the shape of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas). (30) Though created by means of Sattva (the quality of goodness) constituting) His favourite body, (even) we, the gods, and the Rṣis (seers) are unable to know His subtle essence, manifest within (as the inner light) as well as outside (in the shape of existence). How much less can the demons and others, in whom the other qualities namely, Rajas and Tamas) predominate, do so ? (31) Evolved by Himself, this earth—on which indeed dwells the fourfold living creation (consisting of the viviparous, the oviparous, the sweat-born and the vegetable kingdoms)—constitutes His feet ! May that supreme Person—who is surely self-dependent and possessed of infinite power, nay, who is the same as Brahma (the Absolute)—be gracious (to us) ! (32) Similarly water, possessed of vast strength—from which proceed the three worlds (earth, heaven and the intermediate region) as well as the guardians of all the spheres and on which they (all) subsist and flourish—constitutes His generative fluid. May that Lord possessed of immense glory, who is the same as Brahma, be gracious (to us) ! (33) (In the same way) the Vedas declare the moon—which actually constitutes the food of the gods and (therefore the source of) their strength and life, (nay,) which is the ruler (protector) of plants (inasmuch as it nourishes them by its nectarean rays) and the father of created beings (in that it is favourable to the growth of corn etc., which contain the germ of life)—as His mind. May that Lord possessed of boundless power be gracious to us. (34) Again, fire—which conveys (to the gods, for whom it is intended) whatever is poured into it (by way of oblation), nay, which was brought into existence for the sake of rituals alone (mentioned in the part of the Veda bearing on the same) and which (in the form of gastric fire) constantly assimilates digestible substances (thrown into it and in the form of submarine fire ever consumes the water of the ocean)—came to be His mouth (in the cosmic Body). May that Lord possessed of infinite power be gracious to us ! (35) (Again,) the celebrated sun-god—who figures on the path of the gods (or the bright path, leading gradually to the divine Abode of the Lord), whose body is constituted of the three Vedas (Ṛk, Yajus and Sāma), (nay,) who is (recognized as) a seat of Brahma (in relation to whom Brahma is contemplated upon), who (figuring as he does on the path of the gods) not only represents the door to Liberation, but (as a manifestation of the supreme Deity) is immortality itself and who (being a symbol or Kāla or the god of destruction) is characterized as Death (as well)-constitutes His eye. May that Lord possessed of infinite glory be gracious to us. (36) May He propitious to us, the Lord possessed of infinite splendour, from whose life-breath proceeded the air, which, (when manifested) as Prāṇa (the vital air) in relation to the mobile and immobile creation constitutes their strength of mind and body and potency of the Indriyas, and which we (Brahmā and others, the deities presiding over the intellect etc.) have (always) followed as servants would follow an emperor. (37) May He be favourably disposed towards us—the supreme Person possessed of unbounded power, from whose auditory sense sprang up the (four) quarters, (nay,) from (the cavity of whose heart emanated the (various) apertures in the body and from whose navel issued forth the (fivefold) vital air, the (ten) Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action), the inner sense, the (other five) airs* functioning in the body (viz., Nāga, Kūrma, Kṛkālā Devadatta and Dhanañjaya), the body (itself) as well as the ground of (all) these, the ether. (38) May He be favourably inclined towards us—the Lord possessed of unbounded glory, from whose strength sprang up the mighty Indra (the lord of paradise); from whose grace, the gods; from whose wrath, Lord Śiva (the Lord of Mount Kailāsa); from whose intellect, Brahmā (the creator); from whose apertures in the body, the (various Vedic) metres (Gāyatrī and so on) as well as the Ṛṣis (seers) and from whose membrum virile, emanated Prajāpati (the deity presiding over procreation). (39) May He be propitious to us—the Lord possessed of infinite glory, from whose bosom issued forth Śrī (the goddess of fortune and beauty); by whose shadow were brought forth the manes; from whose breast sprang up Dharma (the god of piety), from whose back, Adharma (the spirit presiding over unrighteousness), from whose head, heaven; and from whose recreation, proceeded the Apsarās (celestial nymphs). (40) May He be gracious to us—the Lord possessed of infinite power, from whose mouth sprang up the Brāhmaṇa (the sacerdotal class) as well as the Veda treating of subjects falling beyond the scope of the senses; from whose arms, the Kṣatriya (the martial class) as well as the strength (the capacity to rule); from whose thighs, the Vaiśya (the trading and agricultural class) and the skill in business; and from whose feet emanated (the vocation of) service (which has been excluded from the range of the study of the Vedas) and the Śūdra (the labouring and the artisan class, which has been declared fit for this vocation). (41) May He be favourably inclined to us—the Lord possessed of infinite glory, from whose lower lip emanated greed; from whose upper lip, love; from whose nose, splendour, by whose touch was engendered concupiscence, which is (so) agreeable to animals and those akin to them; from whose eyebrows, sprang up Yama (the god of retribution); and from whose eyelashes came forth Kāla (the Time-Spirit). (42) The learned declare the (five gross) elements, Time, destiny (of the Jīvas), the (three) modes of Prakṛti (viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) and the material universe—which (being products of Māyā) are not only difficult to comprehend but are (totally) disregarded by the wise—as brought about by His Yogamāyā (wonderful creative energy). May that Lord possessed of boundless power be favourably disposed towards us. (43) (My) salutation be to Him in whom (all) energies (in the shape of the three Guṇas—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) have become dormant, whose mind (ever) remains sated with the enjoyment of supreme Bliss (which is His very nature), who never gets attached to the (aforesaid three) Guṇas, created by Māyā, through His faculties (of sight etc.), and whose role is (thus) similar to that of the air (which, though moving everywhere, does not get attached anywhere). (44)

* For a detailed description of the ten vital airs vide foot-note to III. vi. 9.

स त्वं नो दर्शयात्मानमस्मत्करणगोचरम् । प्रपन्नानां दिदृक्षूणां सस्मितं ते मुखाम्बुजम् । ४५ ।
 तैस्तैः स्वेच्छाधृतै रूपैः काले काले स्वयं विभो । कर्म दुर्विषहं यन्नो भगवांस्तत् करोति हि । ४६ ।
 क्लेशभूर्यल्पसाराणि कर्माणि विफलानि वा । देहिनां विषयार्तानां न तथैवार्पितं त्वयि । ४७ ।
 नावमः कर्मकल्पोऽपि विफलायेश्वरार्पितः । कल्पते पुरुषस्यैष स ह्यात्मा दयितो हितः । ४८ ।
 यथा हि स्कन्धशारवानां तरोर्मूलावसेचनम् । एवमाराधनं विष्णोः सर्वेषामात्मनश्च हि । ४९ ।
 नमस्तुभ्यमनन्ताय दुर्वितर्क्यात्मकर्मणे । निर्गुणाय गुणेशाय सत्त्वस्थाय च साम्प्रतम् । ५० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धेऽमृतमथने पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Such as You are, be pleased to reveal Yourself—in such a way as to come within the range of our senses (of perception)—to us, that have resorted to You (for protection) and are eager to behold Your smiling lotus-like countenance. (45) For, through diverse forms assumed at His own sweet will from time to time, O Lord, the Almighty Himself (in You) does that work which is beyond our capacity. (46) The actions of embodied souls who are attached to the pleasures of sense involve much hardship and are of little consequence. Nay, (more often than not) they prove (altogether) futile. Action (however) which has been resigned to You is never like that (It involves little exertion, yields very substantial results and is never futile). (47) Even a poor semblance of action resigned to God (Yourself) can never lead to frustration; for, being the (very) Self of the Jīva, that (celebrated) Lord is beloved of and friendly to the latter. (Anything resigned to a beloved friend should never cause disappointment). (48) Even as watering the roots of a tree is nourishing its trunk and boughs as well, so indeed to propitiate Lord Viṣṇu is to propitiate all as well as oneself. (49) Hail to You, the infinite Lord, whose spontaneous movements are hard to comprehend, who, while transcending the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), are their Ruler (too) and are now established in Sattva (the quality of goodness, essential for the preservation of the world). (50)

Thus ends the fifth discourse, forming part of the story relating to the churning of the ocean for the sake of nectar, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

Transportation of Mount Mandara (to serve as a churn-staff for stirring the ocean of milk)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं स्तुतः सुरगणैर्भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । तेषामाविरभूद् राजन्सहस्राकौन्दयद्युतिः । १ ।
तेनैव महसा सर्वे देवाः प्रतिहतेक्षणाः । नापश्यन्त्वं दिशः क्षोणिमात्मानं च कुतो विभुम् । २ ।
विरिञ्चो भगवान्दृष्ट्वा सह शर्वेण तां तनुम् । स्वच्छां मरकतश्यामां कज्जगभारुणेक्षणाम् । ३ ।
तप्तहेमावदातेन लसत्कौशेयवाससा । प्रसन्नचारुसर्वाङ्गीं सुमुखीं सुन्दरभ्रुवम् । ४ ।
महामणिकिरीटेन केयूराभ्यां च भूषिताम् । कर्णाभरणनिर्भातकपोलश्रीमुखाम्बुजाम् । ५ ।
काञ्चीकलापवलयहारनूपुरशोभिताम् । कौस्तुभाभरणां लक्ष्मीं बिभ्रतीं वनमालिनीम् । ६ ।
सुदर्शनादिभिः स्वास्त्रैर्मूर्तिमद्भिरुपासिताम् । तुष्टाव देवप्रवरः सशर्वः पुरुषं परम् ।
सर्वामरगणैः साकं सर्वाङ्गैरवनि गतैः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Thus extolled by the hosts of gods, the almighty Lord Śrī Hari appeared before them, O king, with the effulgence of a thousand suns rising together. (1) All the gods had their eyes dazzled by that very effulgence, so that they could not perceive the sky, the quarters, the earth and even themselves; how (then) could they perceive the Lord ? (2) The glorious Brahmā (the creator) along with Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) beheld that very spotless form, dark green as the emerald, with Its eyes ruddy as the interior of a lotus. (3) Clad in a shining silk piece, yellow as burning gold, It was graceful and charming in every limb, had a lovely countenance and beautiful eyebrows. (4) It was adorned with a crown set with precious gems and a pair of armlets (one on each arm); and Its cheeks, illumined by (brilliant) ear-rings, added to the charm of Its lotus-like face. (5) It was (also) decked with a girdle, a pair of wristlets, a (pearl) necklace and a pair of anklets, and was (further) adorned with the (famous) Kaustubha gem and a wreath of sylvan flowers (about Its neck). (Nay,) It bore (on Its bosom) Goddess Lakṣmī (in the form of a golden streak) and was waited upon by His own weapons, Sudarśana and others, endowed with a personal form. Accompanied by Lord Śiva and all the hosts of gods, who fell prostrate with all (their) limbs on the ground, Brahmā (the foremost of the gods) hymned the supreme Person (as follows). (6-7)

ब्रह्मोवाच

अजातजन्मस्थितिसंयमायागुणाय निर्वाणसुखार्णवाय ।
अणोरणिघ्नेऽपरिगण्यधात्रे महानुभावाय नमो नमस्ते । ८ ।
रूपं तवैतत् पुरुषर्षभेज्यं श्रेयोऽर्थिभिर्वैदिकतान्त्रिकेण ।
योगेन धातः सह नस्त्रिलोकान् पश्याम्यमुष्मिन् नु ह विश्वमूर्तौ । ९ ।
त्वय्यग्र आसीत् त्वयि मध्य आसीत् त्वय्यन्त आसीदिदमात्मतन्त्रे ।
त्वमादिरन्तो जगतोऽस्य मध्यं घटस्य मृत्त्रेव परः परस्मात् । १० ।
त्वं माययाऽऽत्माश्रयया स्वयेदं निर्माय विश्वं तदनुप्रविष्टः ।
पश्यन्ति युक्ता मनसा मनीषिणो गुणव्यवायेऽप्यगुणं विपश्चितः । ११ ।

यथाग्निमेधस्यमृतं च गोषु भुव्यन्नमम्बूद्वयमने च वृत्तिम् ।
 यौगैर्मनुष्या अधियन्ति हि त्वां गुणेषु बुद्ध्या कवयो वदन्ति । १२ ।
 तं त्वां वयं नाथ समुज्जिहानं सरोजनाभातिचिरेप्सितार्थम् ।
 दृष्ट्वा गता निर्वृतिमद्य सर्वे गजा दवार्ता इव गाङ्गमम्भः । १३ ।
 स त्वं विधत्स्वाखिललोकपाला वयं यदर्थस्तव पादमूलम् ।
 समागतास्ते बहिरन्तरात्मन् किं वान्यविज्ञाप्यमशेषसाक्षिणः । १४ ।
 अहं गिरित्रश्च सुरादयो ये दक्षादयोऽग्रेरिव केतवस्ते ।
 किं वा विदामेश पृथग्विभाता विधत्स्व शं नो द्विजदेवमन्त्रम् । १५ ।

Brahmā prayed: Hail, hail to You, the ocean of (unmixed) bliss in the form of final beatitude, of whom birth, continuance and destruction have never been predicated, who transcends the (three) Guṇas, who is subtler than the subtle (most difficult to comprehend), (the extent of) whose form cannot be actually measured and whose glory is inconceivable. (8) This (divine) form of Yours, O supreme Person, deserves to be worshipped by (all) seekers of blessedness through methods laid down in the Vedas and the Tantras (such as the Pāñcarātra). Oh, in this form (of Yours), which embraces the (whole) universe, O Maker (of all), I clearly perceive all at once ourselves (the gods) as well as (all) the three worlds. (9) In You, who are (absolutely) independent, existed this universe at the beginning (before its creation); in You (alone) it continued in the middle (of its existence) and in You (again) it will get merged in the end (after its dissolution). (Nay,) You (alone) are the beginning, the middle and the end of this cosmos, even as clay is in relation to a jar, since You are higher than the highest (Prakṛti). (10) Having created this universe by Your own Māyā (creative energy), depending on You, You have subsequently entered it (as its inner Controller). (Hence) the wise, who are well-versed in the scriptures and have (duly) controlled their mind, perceive You, with their mind, as unaffected by the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) even (though You stand projected) in the universe (which is a product of those Guṇas). (11) Even as (the common run of) men obtain by proper means fire in a pair of wooden pieces, milk in (the udders of) cows, foodgrains and water in the soil and livelihood through (personal) exertion, so do the wise realize You in the (various) objects of the senses by (their purified) intellect through the (various) means of God-Realization and (then) describe You (in terms of their realization). (12) Having seen You as such, the object sought for (by us) very long since, appearing in person (before us) today, O Lord with a lotus sprung from Your navel, we have all attained supreme bliss similar to the one which elephants oppressed by a forest conflagration do on perceiving the water of the (holy) Gaṅgā. (13) Accomplish You as such the object for which we, the guardians of all the worlds, have duly sought the soles of Your feet. O inner Self, what is there to be made known outside by others to You, the all-witnessing Lord ? (14) Appearing as distinct from You, like the sparks of a fire from the fire itself, how can Lord Śiva (the protector of mountains), myself (Brahmā), the gods and other ethereal beings, Dakṣa and other lords of created beings and whoever (else) there may be, know (where lies) our welfare, O Lord ! (Therefore, pray,) impart to us the counsel that may be beneficial to the Brāhmaṇas and the gods (on whom depends the welfare of all others). (15)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं विरिञ्चादिभरीडितस्तद् विज्ञाय तेषां हृदयं तथैव ।
 जगाद जीमूतगभीरया गिरा बद्धाञ्जलीन्संवृतसर्वकारकान् । १६ ।
 एक एवेश्वरस्तस्मिन्सुरकायै सुरेश्वरः । विहर्तुकामस्तानाह समुद्रोन्मथनादिभिः । १७ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Thus extolled by Brahmā (the creator) and others and having fully known their heart just as it was, the Lord spoke, in a voice deep as the rumbling of clouds, to the gods, who stood with joined palms and had fully controlled their senses (to receive His command). (16) Though capable of accomplishing the purpose of the gods all alone, Lord Viṣṇu, (the supreme Ruler of the gods) addressed them (as follows), eager as He was to divert Himself with the churning of the ocean (of milk) and other sports. (17)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

हन्त ब्रह्मन्नहो शम्भो हे देवा मम भाषितम् । शृणुतावहिताः सर्वे श्रेयो वः स्याद् यथा सुराः । १८ ।
यात दानवदैतेयैस्तावत् सन्धिविधीयताम् । कालेनानुगृहीतैस्तैर्यावद् वो भव आत्मनः । १९ ।
अरयोऽपि हि सन्धेयाः सति कार्यार्थगौरवे । अहिमूषकवद् देवा ह्यर्थस्य पदवीं गतैः । २० ।
अमृतोत्पादने यत्नः क्रियतामविलम्बितम् । यस्य पीतस्य वै जन्तुर्मृत्युस्तोऽमरो भवेत् । २१ ।
क्षिप्त्वा क्षीरोदधौ सर्वा वीरुत्तृणलतौषधीः । मन्थानं मन्दरं कृत्वा नेत्रं कृत्वा तु वासुकिम् । २२ ।
सहायेन मया देवा निर्मन्थध्वमतन्द्रिताः । क्लेशभाजो भविष्यन्ति दैत्या यूयं फलग्रहाः । २३ ।
यूयं तदनुमोदध्वं यदिच्छन्त्यसुराः सुराः । न संरम्भेण सिध्यन्ति सर्वेऽर्थाः सान्त्वया यथा । २४ ।
न भेतव्यं कालकूटाद् विषाजलधिसम्भवात् । लोभः कार्यो न वो जातु रोषः कामस्तु वस्तुषु । २५ ।

The Lord said: Hullo Brahmā, Oh Lord Śiva (the Source of (all) blessings), O gods and (other) heavenly beings (Gandharvas and others) ! listen you all attentively to My word, so that good may come to you. (18) Go forth and let peace be concluded with (your cousins) the Dānavas and Daityas (the sons of Danu and Diti), who are favoured by time (the tide of fortune), till prosperity returns to you of its own accord. (19) In the event of the object to be accomplished being of great moment, enemies too must be won over (through alliance). Once you have achieved your purpose, O gods, you may certainly behave with your enemies even as a serpent does with a rat. (20) Efforts should be put forth without delay for producing nectar, by drinking which even one who is in the jaws of Death would become immortal. (21) Casting into the ocean of milk all (kinds of) plants, grasses, creepers and herbs and making Mount Mandara a churn-dasher and Vāsuki (the king of serpents) as a cord for whirling it round, churn the said ocean unweariedly, O gods, with Myself as your helper. The Daityas will (only) reap (fruitless), toil while you shall, enjoy its fruit. (22-23) Approve you heartily of that which the Asuras want, O gods. All one's objects are not accomplished well by anger as through kind words. (24) You should not be afraid of the poison, called Kālakūṭa, that will come out of the ocean (of milk). Nor should you ever evince covetousness or greed with respect to the objects (that may be churned out of the ocean) nor give vent to anger (if they are coveted or even taken by force by the demons). (25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति देवान्समादिश्य भगवान्युरुषोत्तमः । तेषामन्तर्दधे राजन्स्वच्छन्दगतिरीश्वरः । २६ ।
अथ तस्मै भगवते नमस्कृत्य पितामहः । भवश्च जग्मतुः स्वं स्वं धामोपेयुर्वलिं सुराः । २७ ।
दृष्ट्वरीनप्यसंयत्ताज्ञातक्षोभान्स्वनायकान् । न्यपेधद् दैत्यराद् श्लोक्यः सन्धिविग्रहकालवित् । २८ ।
ते वैरोचनिमासीनं गुप्तं चासुरयूथपैः । श्रिया परमया जुष्टं जिताशेषमुपागमन् । २९ ।
महेन्द्रः श्लक्ष्णया वाचा सान्त्वयित्वा महामतिः । अभ्यभाषत तत् सर्वं शिक्षितं पुरुषोत्तमात् । ३० ।
तदरोचत दैत्यस्य तत्रान्ये येऽसुराधिपाः । शम्बरोऽरिष्टनेमिश्च ये च त्रिपुरवासिनः । ३१ ।
ततो देवासुराः कृत्वा संविदं कृतसौहृदाः । उद्यमं परमं चक्रुरमृतार्थं परन्तप । ३२ ।
ततस्ते मन्दरगिरिमोजसोत्पाद्य दुर्मदाः । नदन्त उदधिं निन्युः शक्ताः परिघवाहवः । ३३ ।

दूरभारोद्ध्रान्ताः

शक्रवैरोचनादयः । अपारयन्तस्तं वोढुं विवशा विजहुः पथि । ३४ ।

निपतन्स

गिरिस्तत्र

बहूनमरदानवान् । चूर्णयामास महता भरेण कनकाचलः । ३५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having thus duly instructed the gods, the almighty Lord Śrī Hari (the supreme Person), whose movements are (altogether) guided by His own free will, vanished out of their sight, O Parīkṣit ! (26) Bowing to the Lord, Brahmā (the father of the lords of creation) as well as Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) then returned each to His own realm, while the gods (headed by Indra) called on Bali. (27) King Bali (the ruler of the Daityas), who was praiseworthy (in everyway) and knew when to wage war and when to come to terms (with the enemy), kept under restraint his own generals, who got excited at the (very) sight of the enemy (the gods), even though the latter were not (at all) prepared for action. (28) The gods (now) approached Bali (son of Virocana), who sat (on his throne) guarded by leaders of Asura troops and, having conquered all (the three worlds), was invested with the highest (royal) splendour. (29) Having conciliated Bali with his polished language, the highly talented Indra told him all that he had received instruction in from Lord Viṣṇu (the supreme Person). (30) The proposal found favour with the Daitya king (Bali) as well as with whosoever were present there, viz., Śambara, Ariṣṭanemi and other demon chiefs and denizens of Tripura. (31) Having arrived at a (mutual) understanding, the gods and the Asuras (demons), who had (now) cultivated friendship, thereupon put forth their best energies for (obtaining) nectar, O chastiser of foes ! (32) Then, uprooting Mount Mandara by their might and roaring (like lions), the arrogant gods and demons, who were (all) full of energy and whose arms were strong as bludgeons, proceeded to take it to the seashore. (33) Exhausted by carrying their load to a long distance and unable to carry it (any) further, Indra, Bali (son of Virocana) and others helplessly dropped it on the way. (34) While falling down, that mountain, which resembled Mount Sumeru (the mountain of gold), crushed under its huge weight numerous gods and demons on that spot. (35)

तांस्तथा भग्नमनसो भग्नबाहूस्कन्धरान् । विज्ञाय भगवांस्तत्र बभूव गरुडध्वजः । ३६ ।

गिरिपातविनिष्पिष्टान्विलोक्यामरदानवान् । ईक्षया जीवयामास निर्जरान् निर्ब्रणान्यथा । ३७ ।

गिरिं चारोष्य गरुडे हस्तेनैकेन लीलया । आरुह्य प्रययावब्धिं सुरासुरगणैर्वृतः । ३८ ।

अवरोष्य गिरिं स्कन्धात् सुपर्णः पततां वरः । ययौ जलान्त उत्सृज्य हरिणा स विसर्जितः । ३९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवतं महापुराणं पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धेऽमृतमथने मन्दराचलनयने नाम षष्ठोऽध्यायः । ६ ।

Finding them disheartened and with their arms, thighs and necks broken, the Lord appeared there on the back of Garuḍa (the king of birds). (36) Perceiving the gods and demons badly squeezed by the falling down of the mountain, He revived the gods by His (mere) look as though they were (quite) unhurt. (37) Nay, placing the mountain on (the back of) Garuda with one hand by way of sport and mounting the bird (Himself), He flew to the seashore, surrounded by the gods and demons. (38) Taking down the mountain from his shoulder and placing it on the seaside, the celebrated Garuḍa (possessed of beautiful wings), the foremost of winged creatures, withdrew, when discharged by Śrī Hari (so as to make room for Vāsuki, the king of serpents, who was too much afraid of Garuḍa, his mortal enemy, to arrive in the latter's presence). (39)

Thus ends the sixth discourse, entitled "The transportation of Mount Mandara", comprised in the story of the churning of the ocean for nectar, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

॥

Discourse VII

The gods and demons proceed to churn the ocean and Lord Śiva drinks the poison appearing out of it

श्रीशुक उवाच

ते नागराजमामन्त्र्य फलभागेन वासुकिम् । परिवीय गिरौ तस्मिन् नेत्रमब्धिं मुदान्विताः । १ ।
 आरेभिरे सुसंयत्ता अमृतार्थं कुरुद्वह । हरिः पुरस्ताज्जगृहे पूर्वं देवास्ततोऽभवन् । २ ।
 तन्नैच्छन् दैत्यपतयो महापुरुषचेष्टितम् । न गृहीमो वयं पुच्छमहेरङ्गममङ्गलम् । ३ ।
 स्वाध्यायश्रुतसम्पन्नाः प्रख्याता जन्मकर्मभिः । इति तूष्णीं स्थितान्दैत्यान् विलोक्य पुरुषोत्तमः ।
 समयमानो विसृज्याग्रं पुच्छं जग्राह सामरः । ४ ।

कृतस्थानविभागास्त एवं कश्यपनन्दनाः । ममन्थुः परमायत्ता अमृतार्थं पयोनिधिम् । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Summoning Vāsuki, the king of serpents, by assuring him of his (due) share in the rewards (in the form of nectar) and twining him round that mountain as a cord (for whirling it round), the gods and the demons, full of joy, commenced churning the ocean (of milk) for the sake of nectar, fully prepared (for the uphill task), O scion of Kuru ! Śrī Hari, first of all, grasped the serpent in the fore part (at its head) and the gods (too) ranged on that side. (1-2) The Daitya generals did not like this act of the Supreme Person. " (Surely) we, who are enriched with a study of the Vedas and other scriptures and renowned for (our) birth and deeds, are not going to hold the tail, the inauspicious limb of a serpent. " Perceiving the Daityas standing quiet (motionless) after uttering these words, and leaving the fore part (of the serpent), with a smile, the Supreme Person along with the gods caught hold of the tail. (3-4) With their position thus defined, the sons of the sage Kaśyapa (the gods and the demons) began to churn the ocean for the sake of nectar, exerting their utmost. (5)

मध्यमानेऽर्णवे सोऽद्विरनाधारो ह्यपोऽविशत् । ध्रियमाणोऽपि बलिभिर्गौरवात् पाण्डुनन्दन । ६ ।
 ते सुनिर्विण्णमनसः परिप्लानमुखश्रियः । आसन् स्वपौरुषे नष्टे दैवेनातिबलीयसा । ७ ।
 विलोक्य विघ्नेशविधिं तदश्वरो दुरन्तवीर्योऽवितथाभिसन्धिः ।
 कृत्वा वपुः काच्छपमद्भुतं महत् प्रविश्य तोयं गिरिमुज्जहार । ८ ।
 तमुत्थितं वीक्ष्य कुलाचलं पुनः समुत्थिता निर्मथितुं सुरासुराः ।
 दधार पृष्ठेन स लक्षयोजनप्रस्तारिणा द्वीप इवापरो महान् । ९ ।
 सुरासुरेन्द्रैर्भुजवीर्यवेपितं परिभ्रमन्तं गिरिमङ्गं पृष्ठतः ।
 बिभ्रत् तदावर्तनमादिकच्छपो मेनेऽङ्गकण्डूयनमप्रमेयः । १० ।
 तथासुरानाविशदासुरेण रूपेण तेषां बलवीर्यमीरयन् ।
 उद्दीपयन् देवगणांश्च विष्णुर्द्वेन नागेन्द्रमबोधरूपः । ११ ।
 उपर्यगेन्द्रं गिरिराडिवान्य आक्रम्य हस्तेन सहस्रबाहुः ।
 तस्थौ दिवि ब्रह्मभवेन्द्रमुख्यैरभिष्टुवद्भिः सुमनोऽभिषृष्टः । १२ ।
 उपर्यधश्चात्मनि गोत्रनेत्रयोः परेण ते प्राविशता समेधिताः ।
 ममन्थुरब्धिं तरसा मदोत्कटा महाद्रिणा क्षोभितनक्रचक्रम् । १३ ।

अहीन्द्रसाहस्रकठोरदृडमुखश्चासाग्निधूमाहतवर्चसोऽसुराः ।

पौलोमकालेयबलील्वलादयो दवाग्निदग्धाः सरला इवाभवन् । १४ ।

देवांश्च तच्छ्वासशिखाहतप्रभान् धूम्राम्बरस्त्रग्वरकञ्चुकाननान् ।

समभ्यवर्षन्भगवद्दशा घना ववुः समुद्रोर्मुपगूढवायवः । १५ ।

On the ocean being churned, the aforesaid mountain(Mount Mandara), which had nothing to support it, sank into the ocean due to its (heavy) weight, even though it was held by the mighty gods and Asuras, O scion of Pāṇḍu ! (6) Their effort having been frustrated by a much more powerful destiny, they felt much dejected at heart and their faces too grew pale.(7) Perceiving (behind this setback) the hand of Vighneśa (the god ruling over the agencies that interrupt ambitious undertakings), and assuming the wonderful and gigantic form of a tortoise, the Lord of unlimited prowess and unfailing resolve then plunged into the water (of the ocean) and bore up the mountain.(8) On seeing the great mountain rising, the gods and the demons girded their loins once more to proceed with the churning. Like another great division of the globe, the Lord (in the form of a tortoise) bore the mountain on His back, which was one lakh Yojanas or 8,00,000 miles in extent. (9) Supporting on His back, O dear Parīkṣit, the mountain shaken by the might of arms of the principal gods and demons and (consequently) set revolving, the infinite Lord, manifested as the First Tortoise regarded its revolution as the (mere) scratching of His back. (10) Stimulating the strength and energy of the demons, Viṣṇu (the all-pervading Lord) entered the demons in His demoniac aspect (Rājasika nature); and animating the hosts of gods, He entered the divinities in His godly aspect (Sāttvika character). (Again,) He entered Vāsuki (the king of serpents) in the form of suspended consciousness (so as to deaden him to the pain that he would have otherwise felt as a result of his being pulled and rubbed against the rugged surface of the mountain).(11) Pressing Mount Mandara (the chief of the mountains) with one hand (in order to prevent the mountain from springing up), the Lord, who was endowed with a thousand arms, stood on its summit, like another huge mountain, under a shower of flowers by gods headed by Brahmā, Lord Śiva and Indra (the lord of paradise) singing His praises in heaven. (12) Strengthened by the Supreme—as pressing the mountain from above (in His thousand-armed form) and supporting it below (in the form of a huge tortoise) and entering the body of the gods and the demons (in the form of His Sāttvika and Rājasika nature), the mountain (in the form of stubbornness), and the serpent (in the form of suspended consciousness)—and intoxicated with pride, the gods and the demons began to churn the ocean with the help of the great mountain (Mandara) with such violence as to cause a (great) stir among the hosts of crocodiles (and other aquatic creatures living in the ocean).(13) With their brightness marred by the breath, fire and smoke issuing from the thousand fearful eyes and mouths of Vāsuki (the king of serpents), the demons, headed by the Paulomas and Kāleyas, Bali and Ilwala, looked like (a row of) Sarala (a species of) trees scorched by a forest conflagration.(14) On the gods, however—whose splendour had been obscured by his flaming breaths and whose raiment, excellent wreaths of flowers, coats and faces had been soiled with smoke-clouds under the (direct) command of the Lord poured down copious showers, and breezes moistened by the waves of the ocean fanned them.(15)

मथ्यमानात् तथा सिन्धोर्देवासुरवरूथपैः । यदा सुधा न जायेत निर्ममन्थाजितः स्वयम् । १६ ।

मेघश्यामः कनकपरिधिः कर्णविद्योतविद्युन्मूर्ध्नि भ्राजद्विलुलितकचः स्रग्धरो रक्तनेत्रः ।

जैत्रैर्दोर्भिर्जगदभयदैर्दन्द्शूकं गृहीत्वा मथन् मथा प्रतिगिरिनिवाशोभताथो धृताद्रिः । १७ ।

निर्मथ्यमानादुदधेरभूद्विषं महोल्बणं हालहलाह्वमग्रतः ।

सम्भ्रान्तमीनोन्मकराहिकच्छपात् तिमिद्विपग्राहतिमिङ्गिलाकुलात् । १८ ।

तदुग्रवेगं दिशि दिश्युपर्यधो विसर्पदुत्सर्पदसह्यमप्रति ।
 भीताः प्रजा दुद्रुवुरङ्गं सेश्वरा अरक्ष्यमाणाः शरणं सदाशिवम् । १९ ।
 विलोक्य तं देववरं त्रिलोक्या भवाय देव्याभिमतं मुनीनाम् ।
 आसीनमद्रावपवर्गहितोस्तपो जुषाणं स्तुतिभिः प्रणेमुः । २० ।

When nectar (however) did not appear from the ocean (of milk), being churned in the aforesaid manner by the commanders of the heavenly and Asura forces, Lord Ajita Himself took up the churning. (16) Holding the serpent (Vāsuki) with His (four) triumphant arms vouchsafing protection to the world, and agitating the ocean with the churn-dasher (in the form of Mount Māndara), the Lord—who was dark-brown like a cloud, had a cloth of golden hue wrapped about His loins, was adorned with a garland (of sylvan flowers) and a pair of ear-rings that flashed like lightning, wore glossy and wavy locks on His head and was possessed of reddish eyes, and who (in the form of the divine Tortoise) bore Mount Mandara (on His back), now shone like a rival mountain. (17) From the ocean—which was teeming with Timis (a fish of enormous size), sea-elephants, sharks and whales (big enough to devour even Timis) and which when it was being churned, disturbed the fishes and agitated the alligators, snakes and tortoises—first issued a most deadly poison called Hālāhala. (18) Seeing that effervescent, unbearable and irresistible poison possessing tremendous force and spreading in all quarters, as well as above and below, and finding no protection (anywhere), living beings along with their leaders got (much) frightened and flew for protection to Lord Sadāśiva (the ever-auspicious), O dear one ! (19) Beholding the aforesaid Chief of the gods—seated (dwelling) on Mount Kailāsa with His divine Spouse for the welfare of the three worlds and practising austerities, so dear to ascetics, (in order to set an example before them) for their emancipation—they greeted Him with hymns. (20)

प्रजापतय ऊचुः

देवदेव महादेव भूतात्मन् भूतभावन । त्राहि नः शरणापन्नं त्रैलोक्यदहनाद् विधात् । २१ ।
 त्वमेकः सर्वजगत ईश्वरो बन्धमोक्षयोः । तं त्वामर्चन्ति कुशलाः प्रपन्नार्तिहरं गुरुम् । २२ ।
 गुणमय्या स्वशक्त्यास्य सर्गस्थित्यप्ययान्विभो । धत्से यदा स्वदृग् भूमन्ब्रह्मविष्णुशिवाभिधाम् । २३ ।
 त्वं ब्रह्म परमं गुह्यं सदसद्भावभावनः । नानाशक्तिभिराभातस्त्वमात्मा जगदीश्वरः । २४ ।

त्वं शब्दयोनिर्जगदादिरात्मा प्राणेन्द्रियद्रव्यगुणस्वभावः ।
 कालः क्रतुः सत्यमृतं च धर्मस्त्वय्यक्षरं यत् त्रिवृदामनन्ति । २५ ।
 अग्निर्मुखं तेऽखिलदेवतात्मा क्षितिं विदुर्लोकभवाङ्घ्रिपङ्कजम् ।
 कालं गतिं तेऽखिलदेवतात्मनो दिशश्च कर्णौ रसनं जलेशम् । २६ ।
 नाभिर्नभस्ते श्वसनं नभस्वान् सूर्यश्च चक्षूषि जलं स्म रेतः ।
 परावरात्माश्रयणं तवात्मा सोमो मनो द्यौर्भगवज्छिरस्ते । २७ ।
 कुक्षिः समुद्रा गिरयोऽस्थिसङ्घा रोमाणि सर्वौषधिवीरुधस्ते ।
 छन्दांसि साक्षात् तव सप्त धातवस्त्रयीमयात्मन् हृदयं सर्वधर्मः । २८ ।
 मुखानि पञ्चोपनिषदस्तवेश यैस्त्रिंशदष्टोत्तरमन्त्रवर्गः ।
 यत् तच्छिवारख्यं परमार्थतत्त्वं देव स्वयंज्योतिरवस्थितिस्ते । २९ ।

छाया त्वधर्मोर्षिषु यैर्विसर्गो नेत्रत्रयं सत्त्वरजस्तमांसि ।
 सांख्यात्मनः शास्त्रकृतस्तवेक्षा छन्दोमयो देव ऋषिः पुराणः ।३०।
 न ते गिरित्राखिललोकपालविरिञ्चवैकुण्ठसुरेन्द्रगम्यम् ।
 ज्योतिः परं यत्र रजस्तमश्च सत्त्वं न यद् ब्रह्म निरस्तभेदम् ।३१।
 कामाध्वरत्रिपुरकालगराष्टनेकभूतद्रुहः क्षपयतः स्तुतये न तत् ते ।
 यस्त्वन्तकाल इदमात्मकृतं स्वनेत्रवह्निस्फुलिङ्गशिखया भसितं न वेद ।३२।
 ये त्वात्परामगुरुभिर्हृदि चिन्तिताद्घ्निद्वन्द्वं चरन्तमुमया तपसाभितप्तम् ।
 कथ्यन्त उग्रपरुषं निरतं श्मशाने ते नून मूतिमविदंस्तव हातलज्जाः ।३३।
 तत् तस्य ते सदसतोः परतः परस्य नाञ्जः स्वरूपगमने प्रभवन्ति भूम्नः ।
 ब्रह्मादयः किमुत संस्तवने वयं तु तत्सर्गसर्गविषया अपि शक्तिमात्रम् ।३४।
 एतत् परं प्रपश्यामो न परं ते महेश्वर । मृडनाय हि लोकस्य व्यक्तिस्तेऽव्यक्तकर्मणः ।३५।

The lords of created beings prayed: O god of gods, O supreme Deity, the Protector, nay, the very Self of (all) created beings, save us, that have sought refuge in You, from this poison, which is burning (all) the three worlds. (21) You are the one Lord competent to enthrall and liberate the whole world. Such as You are, the wise worship You, the Preceptor (of the universe), capable of relieving the agony of those who have sought refuge in You. (22) (It is only) when You undertake through Your own energy (Māyā), consisting of the three Guṇas, the (work of) creation, maintenance and dissolution of this universe, O self-seeing Lord, (that) You (severally) assume the title of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva, O perfect One ! (23) You are the supreme, mysterious Brahma (the Absolute), the Creator of all beings, (the gods, beasts and so on), high and low. It is You, the (supreme) Spirit, that stand manifested as the universe by virtue of (Your) manifold energies (in the form of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas) and are its Ruler (too). (24) You are the Source of the Word (the Veda); the cause of the universe (in the form of the Mahat-tattva or the principle of cosmic intelligence); the (cosmic) Ego—characterized by the (three) Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), that bring forth the (eleven) Indriyas (the five senses of perception, the five organs of action and the mind), the (five) vital airs and the (five) subtle elements (respectively); the intrinsic nature of everything (which brings about transformation); the Time-Spirit (which disturbs the equilibrium of the three Guṇas) and Kratu (the creative will) as well as Dharma (piety), consisting of Satya (truthfulness) and Rta (polite speech). The wise (further) declare that which is known as the Indestructible (primordial Matter), consisting of the three Guṇas, as depending on You. (25) Fire, which represents all the gods, is Your mouth; the wise conceive the earth to be Your lotus-like feet, O Source of the universe; Time, to be Your movement, while You are conceived of as representing all the gods in Your person; the quarters as (representing) Your ears, and the god Varuṇa (the ruler of the waters) as Your palate. (26) The sky is Your navel; the air, Your respiration; the sun, Your eyes; and water is Your generative fluid, Your ego is the support of all the Jīvas (embodied souls), (both) high and low (from Brahmā down to the minutest creature); the moon embodies Your mind; and heaven, Your head, O Lord ! (27) The oceans represent Your abdomen; the mountains, Your framework of bones; all the annual plants and creepers, the hair on Your body; the (seven Vedic) metres (viz., Gāyatrī, Trīṣṭubh, Anuṣṭubh, Bṛhatī, Pañkti, Jagatī, and Uṣṇik), no other than the (seven) constituents (viz., chyle, blood, flesh, fat bone, marrow and the generative fluid) of Your body; and the entire range of Dharma (piety as enjoined by the Vedas), Your heart, O Lord with a body constituted of the three Vedas (Rk, Yajus and Sāma) ! (28) The five sacred (Vedic) texts (known by the names of Tatpuruṣa, Aghora, Sadyojāta, Vāmadeva and Īśāna), O Lord, from (the thirty-eight parts of) which the thirty-eight fragmentary Mantras came into existence, constitute Your (five) faces (bearing the same names as the sacred texts themselves). Again, that self-effulgent Principle, constituting the supreme Reality, which is known by the name of Śiva, O Deity, is (nothing but) Your absolute state. (29) Your shadow is seen in waves of unrighteousness (greed, manifested in the form of hypocrisy and so on), by which destruction is wrought; while Sattva, Rajas and Tamas constitute Your three eyes. (And) the eternal Veda, mainly consisting of metrical compositions, O Lord, represents a glance from You, the all-wise originator of the sacred lore. (30) Brahma (the Absolute)—which is not accessible to the guardians of all the spheres, nay, not even to Brahmā (the creator), Viṣṇu and Indra (the ruler of the gods), O Protector of mountains, (nay,) in which Rajas and Tamas and Sattva (too) find no place and which has all differences cast away from it—is (nothing but) Your supreme effulgence. (31) The act of Your destroying many an enemy of living beings—such as the god of love, the sacrificial performance undertaken by Dakṣa, the three (flying) cities (built by the demon Maya), the god of death and the poison (Hālāhala)—is no matter for praise on Your part, who (remain so deeply absorbed in meditation that You) do not even perceive this universe, created by Yourself, as having been reduced to ashes by the sparks and flames of fire shot by Your own (middle) eye at the time of (universal) dissolution ! (32) They, on the other hand, that revile You as living in the company (excessively fond) of Goddess Umā (Your divine Spouse)—even though Your feet are contemplated upon in the heart by teachers (of mankind) revelling in their Self—and as fierce and violent and particularly fond of the cremation-ground, even though You stand thoroughly disciplined by austerities, have surely not understood Your pastimes and have cast (all) shame to the winds (as otherwise they would not have the impudence to rail at You in this way). (33) (Even) Brahmā and others are not capable of correctly comprehending Your essential nature, much less extolling properly You, the perfect One, who are (so mysterious and) higher (even) than that (Prakṛti or primordial Matter) which lies beyond both causes and effects. How can, therefore, we, who (are very recent in that we) have been created by Marīci and others (the creation of Brahmā), feel equal to it ? Yet, we have tried to extol You according to our barest capacity. (34) We clearly perceive this (visible form of Yours) alone and not Your transcendent reality, O supreme Lord ! As a matter of fact, Your manifestation is intended (only) to gladden the world, even though Your activities are not (always) open (to the world). (35)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तद्वीक्ष्य व्यसनं तासां कृपया भृशपीडितः । सर्वभूतसुहृद् देव इदमाह सतीं प्रियाम् । ३६ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Perceiving the aforesaid distress of theirs and sore stricken with mercy, the Lord, who is the Friend of all living beings, told Satī, His beloved Consort, as follows:—(36)

शिव उवाच

अहो बत भवान्येतत् प्रजानां पश्य वैशसम् । क्षीरोदमथनोद्धृतात् कालकूटादुपस्थितम् । ३७ ।

आसां प्राणपरीप्सूनां विधेयमभयं हि मे । एतावान् हि प्रभोरर्थो यद् दीनपरिपालनम् । ३८ ।

प्राणैः स्वैः प्राणिनः पान्ति साधवः क्षणभङ्गुरैः । बद्धवैरेषु भूतेषु मोहितेष्व्वात्ममायया । ३९ ।

पुंसः कृपयतो भद्रे सर्वात्मा प्रीयते हरिः । प्रीते हरौ भगवति प्रीयेऽहं सचराचरः ।

तस्मादिदं गरं भुञ्जे प्रजानां स्वस्तिरस्तु मे । ४० ।

Śrī Śiva observed: Oh, how distressing it is ! Observe, O Bhavānī (Consort of Lord Śiva, the Source of the universe), this calamity that has come upon these creatures from (the poison called) Kālakūṭa, produced by the churning of the ocean of milk. (37) Security must be vouchsafed by me to these people, anxious (as they are) to preserve their life. For, to protect the afflicted, this much is the concern (duty) of a great one (who is endowed with power). (38) The virtuous protect (other) living beings by (sacrificing) their own transient life. Śrī Hari, the Soul of the universe, O good lady, is pleased with a man who shows mercy to created beings that are bewildered by the deluding potency of the Supreme Spirit and have contracted enmity with one another. (And) when Lord Śrī Hari is pleased, I (too) feel gratified along with the (whole) mobile (animate) and immobile (inanimate) creation. Therefore, I (hereby) swallow this poison. May a happy (prosperous) life be assured to (all) created beings through Me. (39-40)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमामन्य भगवान्भवानीं विश्वभावनः । तद् विषं जग्धुमारेभे प्रभावज्ञान्वमोदत । ४१ ।
ततः करतलीकृत्य व्यापि हालाहलं विषम् । अभक्षयन्महादेवः कृपया भूतभावनः । ४२ ।
तस्यापि दर्शयामास स्ववीर्यं जलकल्मषः । यच्चकार गले नीलं तच्च साधोर्विभूषणम् । ४३ ।
तप्यन्ते लोकतापेन साधवः प्रायशो जनाः । परमाराधनं तद्धि पुरुषस्याखिलात्मनः । ४४ ।
निशम्य कर्म तच्छम्भोर्देवदेवस्य मीढुषः । प्रजा दाक्षायणी ब्रह्मा वैकुण्ठश्च शशंसिरे । ४५ ।
प्रस्कन्नं पिबतः पाणेर्यत् किञ्चिज्जगृहुः स्म तत् । वृश्चिकाहिविषौषधयो दन्दशूकाश्च येऽपरे । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धेऽमृतमथने सप्तमोऽध्यायः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Having thus sought leave of Bhavānī, Lord Śiva (the Delighter of the universe) proceeded to swallow that poison. And Satī, who was aware of His greatness, heartily gave Her consent. (41) Then, squeezing into (the cavity of) His palm the Hālāhala, which was spreading all round, Lord Śiva (the supreme Deity), the Protector of (all) living beings, swallowed it out of compassion. (42) The poison (which was the concentrated impurity of the oceanic water) showed its power even on His person in that it made Him (look) blue at the throat, although the spot became a special ornament to that benevolent Soul. (43) Generally noble souls are afflicted at the agony of the world. For, that (viz., sharing the affliction of others) constitutes the highest worship of the supreme Person, the Soul of the universe. (44) Observing that (benevolent) act of Lord Śiva (the Source of blessedness), the god of gods, who showers blessings on His devotees, the created beings (who had approached Him), as well as Satī (Dakṣa's Daughter), Brahmā and Lord Viṣṇu (too) applauded it. (45) Scorpions, snakes and poisonous herbs as well as what other biting creatures (dogs, jackals and so on) there were took in what little (of the poison) leaked from the palm of Lord Śiva (even) while He drank it. (46)

Thus ends the seventh discourse, forming part of the story of the churning of the ocean for (obtaining) nectar, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

The manifestation (in a personal form) of the Lord's
(own) enchanting potency

श्रीशुक उवाच

पीते गरे वृषाङ्गेण प्रीतास्तेऽमरदानवाः । ममन्युस्तरसा सिन्धुं हविर्धानी ततोऽभवत् । १ ।
तामग्निहोत्रीमृषयो जगृहुर्ब्रह्मवादिनः । यज्ञस्य देवयानस्य मेधाय हविषे नृप । २ ।
तत उच्चैःश्रवा नाम हयोऽभूच्चन्द्रपाण्डुरः । तस्मिन्बलिः स्पृहां चक्रे नेन्द्र ईश्वरशिक्षया । ३ ।
तत ऐरावतो नाम वारणेन्द्रो विनिर्गतः । दन्तैश्चतुर्भिः श्वेताद्रेर्हरन्भगवतो महिम् । ४ ।
कौस्तुभाख्यमभूद् रत्नं पद्मरागो महोदधेः । तस्मिन्हरिः स्पृहां चक्रे वक्षोऽलङ्करणे मणौ । ५ ।
ततोऽभवत् पारिजातः सुरलोकविभूषणम् । पूरयत्यर्थिनो योऽर्थैः शश्वद् भुवि यथा भवान् । ६ ।
ततश्चाप्सरसो जाता निष्ककण्ठ्यः सुवाससः । रमण्यः स्वर्गिणां वल्गुगतिलीलावलोकनैः । ७ ।
ततश्चाविरभूत् साक्षाच्छ्री रमा भगवत्परा । रञ्जयन्ती दिशः कान्त्या विद्युत् सौदामनी यथा । ८ ।
तस्यां चक्रुः स्पृहां सर्वे ससुरासुरमानवाः । रूपौदार्यवयोवर्णमहिमाक्षिप्तचेतसः । ९ ।
तस्या आसनमानिन्ये महेन्द्रो महदद्भुतम् । मूर्तिमत्यः सरिच्छ्रेष्ठा हेमकुम्भैर्जलं शुचिः । १० ।
आभिषेचनिका भूमिराहरत् सकलौषधीः । गावः पञ्च पवित्राणि वसन्तो मधुमाधवौ । ११ ।
ऋषयः कल्पयाञ्चक्रुरभिषेकं यथाविधि । जगुर्भद्राणि गन्धर्वा नट्यश्चननृत्यजंगुः । १२ ।
मेधा मृदङ्गपणवमुरजानकगोमुखान् । व्यनादयञ्छृङ्खलेणुवीणास्तुमुलनिःस्वनान् । १३ ।
ततोऽभिषिषिचुर्देवीं श्रियं पद्मकरां सतीम् । दिगिभाः पूर्णकलशैः सूक्तवाक्यैर्द्विजेरितैः । १४ ।
समुद्रः पीतकौशेयवाससी समुपाहरत् । वरुणः स्रजं वैजयन्तीं मधुना मत्तषट्पदाम् । १५ ।
भूषणानि विचित्राणि विश्वकर्मा प्रजापतिः । हारं सरस्वती पद्ममजो नागाश्च कुण्डले । १६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: On the poison having been drunk by Lord Śiva (who bears the emblem of a bull) the aforesaid gods and demons, full of joy, churned the ocean (of milk) with (redoubled) vigour; and from the said act of churning came forth the cow of plenty (the store-house of milk, ghee and so on, the principal substances fit for being offered as oblation into the sacred fire). (1) Seers who were exponents of the Vedas (and engaged in sacrificial performances) took that cow (the source of milk etc., fit for being poured as oblations into the sacred fire) for (obtaining) sacred material (milk, ghee and so on) to be used in sacrificial performances capable of taking (the sacrificer) to the path of gods (leading to Brahmaloka and so on), O king ! (2) Next sprang forth the (celebrated) horse, Uccaiṣṛavā by name, which was white as the moon. Bali longed for (took) it and not Indra because of the admonition given by the Lord. (3) Then issued forth the (moon-white) king of elephants, Airāvata by name, which by its four tusks (resembling the four peaks of a mountain) obscured the splendour of Kailāsa (the white mountain forming the abode) of Lord Śiva. (4) Next rose from the ocean (of milk) a jewel of the ruby type, bearing the name of Kaustubha. Śrī Hari (Himself) longed for (took) that gem as an adornment for His breast. (5) Then appeared (the tree known by the name of) Pārijāta, the ornament of the celestial world, which incessantly gratifies petitioners with the objects sought for, even as you (Parīkṣit) do it on earth. (6) Then came forth the Apsarās (celestial nymphs) adorned with gold necklaces and clad in excellent robes, who delight the denizens of heaven with their charming gait and playful glances. (7) Then, again, appeared Goddess Ramā (Lakṣmī), who is Affluence personified and is devoted to the Lord, and who illumined the quarters with Her splendour like (a streak of) lightning flashing against the crystalline mountain-range called Sudāmā. (8) All including gods, demons and men conceived a longing for Her*, their mind overpowered (through astonishment) by the glory of Her comeliness, nobility, (young) age and (fair) complexion. (9) The great Indra (the lord of paradise) brought for Her a most wonderful throne, while the principal rivers (Gaṅgā and so on) in their personal form brought sacred water (for Her ablutions) in jars of gold. (10) (Mother) Earth gave (Her) all (kinds of) herbs required for Her ablutions. The cows yielded to Her their five sacred products (viz., milk, curds, ghee, excrement and urine); and Spring yielded (Her) the produce of the two vernal months (in the shape of flowers and fruits appropriate to that season). (11) Ṛṣis (seers) laid down the procedure of Her ablutions according to the scriptural ordinance. Gandharvas (celestial musicians) sang auspicious songs and their wives (too) danced and sang. (12) (Spirits presiding over) clouds sounded with great force clay tomtoms, tabors, drums, double drums and clarionets, that produced a tumultuous fanfare—as well as conchs, flutes and lutes. (13) Then the elephants guarding the (four) quarters bathed Goddess Śrī, who held a lotus in one of Her hands and was an embodiment of virtue, with (gold) jars full of water to the accompaniment of hymns chanted by Brāhmaṇas. (14) (The god presiding over) the ocean offered Her two pieces of yellow silk (one for being wrapped round Her loins and lower body and the other round Her upper limbs). Varuṇa (the god of water) gave Her a garland called Vāijayanti, accompanied by black bees drunk with the honey of its flowers. (15) Viśvakarmā, a lord of created beings, offered Her wonderful ornaments; Saraswatī (the goddess presiding over speech and learning), a necklace of pearls; Brahmā (the birthless creator), a lotus; and Nāgas (serpent-demons) a pair of ear-rings. (16)

ततः कृतस्वस्त्यनोत्पलस्रजं नदद्विरेफां परिगृह्य पाणिना ।
 चचाल वक्त्रं सुकपोलकुण्डलं सत्रीडहासं दधती सुशोभनम् । १७ ।
 स्तनद्वयं चातिकृशोदरी समं निरन्तरं चन्दनकुङ्कुमोक्षितम् ।
 ततस्ततो नूपुरवल्गुशिञ्जितैर्विसर्पती हेमलतेव सा बभौ । १८ ।
 विलोकयन्ती निरवद्यमात्मनः पदं ध्रुवं चाव्यभिचारिसद्गुणम् ।
 गन्धर्वयक्षासुरसिद्धचारणत्रैविष्टपेयादिषु नान्वबिन्दत । १९ ।
 नूनं तपो यस्य न मन्युनिर्जयो ज्ञानं क्वचित् तद्य न सङ्गवर्जितम् ।
 कश्चिन्महास्तस्य न कामनिर्जयः स ईश्वरः किं परतोव्यपाश्रयः । २० ।
 धर्मः क्वचित् तत्र न भूतसौहृदं त्यागः क्वचित् तत्र न मुक्तिकारणम् ।
 वीर्यं न पुंसोऽस्त्यजवेगनिष्कृतं न हि द्वितीयो गुणसङ्गवर्जितः । २१ ।
 क्वचिच्चिरायुर्न हि शीलमङ्गलं क्वचित् तदप्यस्ति न वेद्यमायुषः ।
 यत्रोभयं कुत्र च सोऽप्यमङ्गलः सुमङ्गलः कश्च न काङ्क्षते हि माम् । २२ ।

Holding in one of Her hands a wreath of lotuses with (a swarm of) black bees humming about it, and wearing a most charming face with a bashful smile playing on it and (brilliant) ear-rings hanging against Her lovely cheek, Goddess Śrī, who (in the form of a golden streak)

* Here it should be noted, as a learned and saintly commentator points out, that all those present in that assembly coveted Goddess Lakṣmī only because they knew that, She being the deity presiding over fortune, Her grace would make them masters of fortune. Otherwise they were all great devotees, as is evident from the fact that they all offered presents to Her as a token of reverence and homage (vide verses 10 to 16).

had (already) taken Her (permanent) abode in the auspicious bosom of Śrī Hari, moved about (in search of a match of Her choice). (17) Having a pair of symmetrical and closely set breasts, painted with sandal-paste and saffron, and marked with an exceedingly slender waist and moving hither and thither (in that distinguished assemblage) accompanied by the sweet jingling of anklets, She shone like a (mobile) creeper of gold. (18) Looking out among the Gandharvas, Yakṣas, Asuras, Siddhas, Cāraṇas, gods (lit., the denizens of heaven) and others for a husband for Her—a husband free from blemish, eternal and possessed of everlasting virtues, She did not find any. (19) (She said to Herself:—)"There is no full control of anger in him of whom asceticism can be surely predicated. (Likewise) wisdom is found in some individuals; but it is not free from attachment. A third one is great (no doubt); but there is no complete mastery of concupiscence in him. And how can he be a lord, who depends (for his existence and power) on another ? (20) There is righteousness in some; but there is no love for living beings in them. (Again) there is liberality in some individuals; but in their case it is not conducive to Liberation (their liberality being actuated by some interested motives). (Similarly) there is prowess in a certain individual; but it is not immune from the ravages of Time. (And) surely he who is (entirely) free from attachment to the objects of senses cannot be a (fit) companion (inasmuch as he will choose to remain absorbed in abstract meditation and will have nothing to do with me). (21) There is long life in some; but there is no amiability nor auspiciousness (of the kind coveted by women). In some (others) there is amiability and auspiciousness too; but the duration of their life cannot be (easily) known. In some rare individual both these qualities (longevity as well as amiability) exist; but he too is inauspicious (in outward conduct). (Of course) there is one who is very auspicious too (besides being long-lived and amiable); but he does not long for me." (22)

एवं विमृश्याव्यभिचारिसद्गुणैर्वरं निजैकाश्रयतागुणाश्रयम् ।
 वव्रे वरं सर्वगुणैरपेक्षितं रमा मुकुन्दं निरपेक्षमीप्सितम् । १२३ ।
 तस्यांसदेश उशर्ती नवकञ्जमालां माद्यन्मधुव्रतवरूथगिरोपघुष्टाम् ।
 तस्थौ निधाय निकटे तदुरः स्वधाम सव्रीडहासविकसन्नयनेन याता । १२४ ।
 तस्याः श्रियस्त्रिजगतो जनको जनन्या वक्षोनिवासमकरोत् परमं विभूतेः ।
 श्रीः स्वाः प्रजाः सकरूपेन निरीक्षणेन यत्र स्थितैधयत साधिपतीस्त्रिलोकान् । १२५ ।

शङ्खतूर्यमृदङ्गानां वादित्राणां पृथुः स्वनः । देवानुगानां सस्त्रीणां नृत्यतां गायतामभूत् । १२६ ।
 ब्रह्मरुद्राङ्गिरोमुख्याः सर्वे विश्वसृजो विभुम् । ईडिरेऽवितथैर्मन्त्रैस्तलिङ्गैः पुष्पवर्षिणः । १२७ ।
 श्रिया विलोकिता देवाः सप्रजापतयः प्रजाः । शीलादिगुणसम्पन्ना लेभिरे निर्वृतिं पराम् । १२८ ।
 निःसत्त्वा लोलुपा राजन् निरुद्योगा गतत्रपाः । यदा चोपेक्षिता लक्ष्म्या बभूवुर्देवदानवाः । १२९ ।

Having thus deliberated, Goddess Ramā (Lakṣmī) chose for Her husband (none other than) Lord Viṣṇu (the Bestower of Liberation), the most worthy of all from the point of view of His everlasting virtues (such as righteousness and wisdom) and (absolute) independence, who is beyond the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) and was coveted by Her, nay, who is wooed by all excellences, even though He does not feel interested in anyone. (23) Placing on His shoulders the charming wreath of fresh lotuses resonant with the humming of swarms of maddening black-bees, and having attained to His bosom, Her own (permanent) abode, through Her (lotus-like) eyes blooming with a bashful smile, she stood by His side (awaiting His grace as it were). (24) Lord Viṣṇu (the Father of the three worlds) made His bosom the permanent abode of Goddess Śrī, the Mother of the three worlds and the Source of (all) riches. Ensconced there, Lakṣmī promoted (the welfare of) Her creation, the three worlds and their rulers, by Her benignant look. (25) A great noise issued forth from conchs, clarionets and clay tomtoms and other musical instruments, as well as from Gandharvas (attendants of the gods) and their wives singing (on that occasion). (26) All the creators of the world, headed by Brahmā, Rudra (the god of destruction) and the sage Aṅgirā, celebrated the Lord by means of sacred texts purporting to describe Him and representing the bare truth, and showered flowers on Him. (27) Looked at by Śrī, the gods and other created beings including the lords of creation became rich in amiability and other qualities and attained supreme felicity. (28) The Daityas and Dānavas (on the other hand) became dispirited, rapacious, effortless and devoid of shame, O Parīkṣit, when they were overlooked by Lakṣmī. (29)

अथासीद् वारुणी देवी कन्या कमललोचना । असुरा जगृहुस्तां वै हरेरनुमतेन ते । ३० ।
 अथोदधेर्मथ्यमानात् काश्यपैरमृतार्थिभिः । उदतिष्ठन्महाराज पुरुषः परमाद्भुतः । ३१ ।
 दीर्घपीवरदोर्दण्डः कम्बुग्रीवोरुणेक्षणः । श्यामलस्तरुणः स्त्रग्वी सर्वाभरणभूषितः । ३२ ।
 पीतवासा महोरस्कः सुमृष्टमणिकुण्डलः । स्निग्धकुञ्चितकेशान्तः सुभगः सिंहविक्रमः । ३३ ।
 अमृतापूर्णकलशं बिभ्रद् वलयभूषितः । स वै भगवतः साक्षाद्विष्णोरंशांशसम्भवः । ३४ ।
 धन्वन्तरिरिति ख्यात आयुर्वेददृगिज्यभाक् । तमालोक्यासुराः सर्वे कलशं चामृताभृतम् । ३५ ।
 लिप्सन्तः सर्ववस्तूनि कलशं तरसाहरन् । नीयमानेऽसुरैस्तस्मिन्कलशेऽमृतभाजने । ३६ ।
 विषण्णमनसो देवा हरिं शरणमाचयुः । इति तदैन्यमालोक्य भगवान्भृत्यकामकृत् ।

मा खिद्यत मिथोऽर्थं वः साधयिष्ये स्वमायया । ३७ ।

Then appeared the goddess presiding over the wine called Vāruṇī, in the form of a maiden with lotus-like eyes. The aforesaid Asuras (Daityas and Dānavas) caught hold of her, of course, with the approval of Śrī Hari. (30) Next arose from the ocean even as it was being churned by gods and Asuras (the sons of the sage Kaśyapa), seeking nectar, O great king, a most wonderful personage with long and plump arms, a conch-shaped neck and reddish eyes, dark-brown (of hue), youthful (in age), wearing a wreath of flowers and adorned with all (kinds of) ornaments. (31-32) He was clad in yellow, had a broad chest, was graced with a pair of very bright ear-rings made of gems, wore glossy and curly hair-tips (on his head) was charming (of every limb) and possessed of the gait of a lion. (33) He carried (in his hands) a jar full of nectar and was decked with a pair of bracelets. Indeed he had emanated from a minute ray of Lord Viṣṇu Himself. (34) He was known by the name of Dhanvantari; (it was) he (who) revealed (to the world) the science of medicine and he enjoys a share in the sacrificial offerings. Perceiving him as well as the jar brimful with nectar, all the Asuras, who were eager to secure everything (churned out of the ocean), quickly snatched away the (precious) jar. On the aforesaid jar containing nectar being carried away by the Asuras, the gods felt dejected at heart and resorted for protection to Śrī Hari. Noticing their helplessness as aforesaid, the Lord, who grants the wishes of His servants (devotees), said, "Do not feel depressed; I shall accomplish your purpose by stirring up feud among them as well as through My own deluding potency (in the form of a bewitching damsel). (35—37)

मिथः कलिरभूत्तेषां तदर्धे तर्षचेतसाम् । अहं पूर्वमहं पूर्वं न त्वं न त्वमिति प्रभो । ३८ ।
 देवाः स्वं भागमर्हन्ति ये तुल्यायासहेतवः । सत्रयाग इवैतस्मिन्नेष धर्मः सनातनः । ३९ ।
 इति स्वान्नत्यषेधन्वै दैतेया जातमत्सराः । दुर्बलाः प्रबलान् राजन् गृहीतकलशान् मुहुः । ४० ।
 एतस्मिन्नन्तरे विष्णुः सर्वोपायविदीश्वरः । योषिद्रूपमनिर्देश्यं दधार परमाद्भुतम् । ४१ ।

प्रेक्षणीयोत्पलश्यामं सर्वावयवसुन्दरम् । समानकर्णाभरणं सुकपोलोन्नसाननम् । ४२ ।
 नवयौवननिर्वृत्तस्तनभारकृशोदरम् । मुखामोदानुरक्तलिङ्गङ्कारोद्विग्नलोचनम् । ४३ ।
 बिभ्रत् स्वकेशभारेण मालामुफुल्लमल्लिकाम् । सुग्रीवकण्ठाभरणं सुभुजाङ्गदभूषितम् । ४४ ।
 विरजाम्बरसंवीतनितम्बद्वीपशोभया । काञ्च्या प्रविलसद्दल्लुचलच्चरणनूपुरम् । ४५ ।
 सत्रीडस्मितविक्षिप्तभ्रूविलासावलोकनैः । दैत्ययूथपचेतःसु काममुद्दीपयन् मुहुः । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे भगवन्मायोपलम्भनं नामाष्टमोऽध्यायः । ८ ।

A quarrel arose in their ranks inter se, O king, their mind being seized with a thirst for nectar. "I shall have it first, I shall have it first; not you, not you !" This is what they said to one another. (38) "The gods, who have equally contributed to this consummation through (their) exertion, deserve their share in this prize as much as in (the merit resulting from) a sacrificial performance* undertaken by a community for common weal: such is the eternal law". (39) In these words indeed did the weaker Daityas, in whom jealousy was aroused (by the selfishness of the usurpers) repeatedly protest against the stronger ones, that had taken possession of the jar, O Parīkṣit. (40) In the meantime Lord Viṣṇu, who knows (all) expedients, assumed the most amazing form of a damsel, which could not be described (in words). (41) It was worth looking at intently, blue as an Utpala (a variety of lotuses) and comely of every limb. Its well-matched ears were decked with ornaments (ear-rings); its face was marked with lovely cheeks and a prominent nose. (42) It had a waist slender (as it were) due to the weight of breasts fully developed as a mark of budding youth. Its eyes looked frightened by the humming of black bees attracted by the fragrance of its mouth. (43) It bore on its head of hair a wreath of full-blown Mallikās (a species of jasmine); its neck was embellished with a necklace and the form was (further) graced with a pair of armlets worn round its shapely arms. (44) (Nay,) it looked exceptionally charming due to its girdle that added to the beauty of its broad hips covered by a loin-cloth which was spotless white; and a pair of anklets adorned its feet that walked in a winsome manner. (45) (Again,) it incessantly kindled passion in the breast of Daitya generals by its bashful smiles, dancing brows and amorous glances. (46)

Thus ends the eighth discourse entitled "The manifestation (in a personal form) of the Lord's (own) enchanting potency", in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa- Saṁhitā.

अथ नवमोऽध्यायः

Discourse IX

Appearing in the form of Mohinī (an enchanting damsel), the Lord deals out nectar among the gods

श्रीशुक उवाच

तेऽन्योन्यतोऽसुराः पात्रं हरन्तस्त्यक्तसौहृदाः । क्षिपन्तो दस्युधर्माण आयान्तीं ददृशुः स्त्रियम् । १ ।

* A Satrayāga has been defined as below:—

कर्तारो बहवो यत्र हीन्यन्ते बहवस्तथा । बहुभ्यो दायन्ते यत्र तत् सत्रमभिधीयते ॥

"A Satra is that in which there are a number of sacrificers and a number of deities to be worshipped and in which gifts are bestowed on many."

अहो रूपमहो धाम अहो अस्या नवं वयः । इति ते तामभिद्रुत्य पप्रच्छुर्जातहृच्छयाः । २ ।
 का त्वं कञ्जपलाशाक्षि कुतो वा किं चिकीर्षसि । कस्यासि वद वामोरु मधन्तीव मनांसि नः । ३ ।
 न वयं त्वामरैर्द्वैतैः सिद्धगन्धर्वचारणैः । नास्पृष्टपूर्वा जानीमो लोकेशैश्च कुतो नृभिः । ४ ।
 नूनं त्वं विधिना सुभूः प्रेषितासि शरीरिणाम् । सर्वेन्द्रियमनःप्रीतिं विधातुं सघृणेन किम् । ५ ।
 सा त्वं नः स्पर्धमानानामेकवस्तुनि मानिनि । ज्ञातीनां बद्धवैराणां शं विधत्स्व सुमध्यमे । ६ ।
 वयं कश्यपदायादा भ्रातरः कृतपौरुषाः । बिभजस्व यथान्यायं नैव भेदो यथा भवेत् । ७ ।
 इत्युपामन्त्रितो दैत्यैर्मायायोषिद्वपुर्हरिः । प्रहस्य रुचिरापाङ्गैर्निरीक्षन्निदमब्रवीत् । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Having taken leave of (all) amity and adopted the ways of the robbers, and snatching the jar (of nectar) from and abusing one another, the Asuras caught sight of the approaching damsel. (1) Running up to her with the words "Marvellous beauty! Amazing splendour !! Charming is her youthful age !!!" they questioned her (as follows), passion having been kindled (in their heart); (2) Tell us, who are you with eyes resembling the petals of a lotus? Where do you hail from? (Already) churning our hearts as it were, what do you intend doing (further) and whose daughter are you, O lovely one ? (3) It is not that we do not know you as untouched (undefiled) before by immortals and Daityas, by Siddhas, Gandharvas and Cāraṇas, (nay,) not even by the guardians of the spheres, much less by human beings. (4) Have you been sent (here) by the merciful creator, O pretty one, in order to afford delight to the senses and mind of (all) embodied souls ? Certainly it is so. (5) Such as you are, (pray,) bring peace (of mind) to us, who are contending for a common object and have (consequently) contracted enmity (with one another), even though we are kins, O proud lady with a slender waist ! (6) Being sons of the sage Kaśyapa, we are (all) brothers and have exerted (our) strength (for the common good). (Pray,) divide the prize equitably, so that there may be no more quarrel (among us). (7) Thus urged by the Daityas, Lord Śrī Hari, who had assumed a feminine form through (His) Māyā (deluding potency), beautifully laughed and spoke as follows, looking at them through the lovely corners of His eyes. (8)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

कथं कश्यपदायादाः पुंश्चल्यां मयि सङ्गताः । विश्वासं पण्डितो जातु कामिनीषु न याति हि । ९ ।

सालावृकाणां स्त्रीणां च स्वैरिणीनां सुरद्विषः । सख्यान्याहुरनित्यानि नूलं नूलं विचिन्वताम् । १० ।

The Lord observed: How, O sons of Kaśyapa, have you reposed trust in me, a wanton woman ? Indeed a wise man would never put faith in lustful women. (9) The wise declare the ties of friendship of wolves and wanton women, who are looking out for newer and newer delights, O enemies of gods, as inconstant. (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति ते क्ष्वेलितैस्तस्या आश्वस्तमनसोऽसुराः । जहसुर्भाविगम्भीरं ददुश्चामृतभाजनम् । ११ ।

ततो गृहीत्वामृतभाजनं हरिर्बभाष ईषत्सितशोभया गिरा ।

यद्यभ्युपेतं क्व च साध्वसाधु वा कृतं मया वो विभजे सुधामिमाम् । १२ ।

इत्यभिव्याहृतं तस्या आकर्ण्यसुरपुङ्गवाः । अप्रमाणविदस्तस्यास्तत् तथेत्यन्वमंसत । १३ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: The Asuras, whose mind felt reassured by these jocular expressions of her, laughed a significant laugh, which was too deep (for the common man) to comprehend, and entrusted the jar of nectar to her. (11) Having taken possession of the jar of nectar, Lord Śrī Hari then said in a voice brightened with a gentle smile, "If you accept whatever is done by me, whether right or wrong, in any wise, I am prepared to divide this nectar among you (but not otherwise)." (12) Hearing this utterance of that (divine) maiden, the leaders of the Asuras, who had no idea of Her greatness, agreed to Her condition, saying "Be it so". (13)

अथोपोष्य कृतस्नाना हुत्वा च हविषानलम् । दत्त्वा गोविप्रभूतेभ्यः कृतस्वस्त्ययना द्विजैः । १४ ।
 यथोपजोषं वासांसि परिधायाहतानि ते । कुशेषु प्राविशन्सर्वे प्रागग्रेषुभिभूषिताः । १५ ।
 प्राङ्मुखेषूपविष्टेषु सुरेषु दितिजेषु च । धूपामोदितशालायां जुष्टायां माल्यदीपकैः । १६ ।
 तस्यां नरेन्द्र करभोरुरुशङ्कुलश्रोणीतटालसगतिर्मदविह्वलाक्षी ।
 सा कूजती कनकनूपुरशिञ्जितेन कुम्भस्तनी कलशपाणिरथाविवेश । १७ ।
 तां श्रीसखीं कनककुण्डलचारुकर्णनासाकपोलवदनां परदेवतारव्याम् ।
 संवीक्ष्य सम्मुमुहुरुत्स्मितवीक्षणेन देवासुरा विगलितस्तनपट्टिकान्ताम् । १८ ।
 असुराणां सुधादानं सर्पाणामिव दुर्नयम् । मत्वा जातिनृशंसानां न तां व्यभजदच्युतः । १९ ।
 कल्पयित्वा पृथक् पङ्क्तीरुभयेषां जगत्पतिः । तांश्चोपवेशयामास स्वेषु स्वेषु च पङ्क्तिषु । २० ।
 दैत्यान्गृहीतकलशो वञ्चयन्नुपसञ्चरैः । दूरस्थान् पाययामास जरामृत्युहरां सुधाम् । २१ ।
 ते पालयन्तः समयमसुराः स्वकृतं नृप । तूष्णीमासन्कृतस्नेहाः स्त्रीविवादजुगुप्सया । २२ ।
 तस्यां कृतातिप्रणयाः प्रणयापायकातराः । बहुमानेन चाबद्धा नोचुः किञ्चन विप्रियम् । २३ ।
 देवलिङ्गप्रतिच्छन्नः स्वर्भानुर्देवसंसदि । प्रविष्टः सोममपिबच्चन्द्रार्काभ्यां च सूचितः । २४ ।
 चक्रेण क्षुरधारेण जहार पिबतः शिरः । हरिस्तस्य कबन्धस्तु सुधयाप्लावितोऽपतत् । २५ ।
 शिरस्त्वमरतां नीतमजो ग्रहमचीकृपत् । यस्तु पर्वणि चन्द्रार्कावभिधावति वैरधीः । २६ ।
 पीतप्रायेऽमृते देवैर्भगवाँल्लोकभावनः । पश्यतामसुरेन्द्राणां स्वं रूपं जगृहे हरिः । २७ ।
 एवं सुरासुरगणाः समदेशकालहेत्वर्थकर्ममतयोऽपि फले विकल्पाः ।
 तत्रामृतं सुरगणाः फलमञ्जसाऽऽपूर्यत्पादपङ्कजरजःश्रयणान्न दैत्याः । २८ ।
 यद् युज्यतेऽसुवसुकर्मनोवचोभिर्देहात्मजादिषु नृभिस्तदसत् पृथक्त्वात् ।
 तैरेव सद् भवति यत् क्रियतेऽपृथक्त्वात् सर्वस्य तद् भवति मूलनिषेचनं यत् । २९ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धेऽमृतमथने नवमोऽध्यायः । १९ ।

Then, having fasted (for a day) and finished (their) bath, (nay,) propitiated the fire through sacrificial offerings and bestowed (appropriate) gifts on cows and the Brāhmaṇas as well as on (other) living beings, they had auspicious rites (such as the recitation of benedictory prayers) performed (for their success) by Brāhmaṇas. (14) (Again,) putting on a set of clothes altogether new according to their pleasure, and graced with ornaments in every limb, they all squatted on blades of Kuśa grass that had their ends pointing to the east. (15) When the gods as well as the Daityas (the sons of Diti) had taken their seat, with their faces turned towards the east, in a hall scented with fragrant fumes and adorned with wreaths of flowers and lights; that beautiful damsel, slow of gait due to her bulky hips, that were covered over with a charming piece of linen, with eyes swimming (as if) under intoxication and breasts resembling a pair of (small) vases, forthwith made her way into that chamber, jar in her hands, and warbling (as it were) through the jingling of her gold anklets, O ruler of men ! (16-17) Looking intently at her, who was no other then the supreme Deity and a counterpart of Goddess Śrī (Beauty personified), (nay,) who was adorned with a pair of gold ear-rings and had charming ears, nose, cheeks and mouth and from over whose breasts the end of the strip of cloth covering them had slightly slipped (thus partially exposing them), the gods and Asuras felt completely enchanted (particularly) by her glances accompanied with a smile. (18)

Thinking it unwise to offer nectar to the Asuras—as milk to serpents—both of whom are ferocious by nature, Lord Acyuta did not give a share of it to them. (19) Providing separate rows of seats for the two races, Lord Viṣṇu (the Ruler of the universe) seated them in those rows, each race in the midst of their own people. (20) Beguiling the Daityas by His winning attentions, polite words and movements beside them with the jar held in His hands, He gave the gods sitting at a distance to drink the nectar that prevents old age and death. (21) Respecting the promise made by them (that they would accept whatever might be done by the girl), O king, the Asuras, who had bestowed their love on Her, kept quiet (also) because they abhorred (the very idea of) wrangling with a woman. (22) Cherishing the utmost affection for Her and afraid of losing it, and restrained by excessive regard (shown to them by Her), they uttered nothing unpalatable. (23) Disguised in the garb of gods, and entering the row of the gods, Swarbhānu (Rāhu) drank the nectar and was pointed out by the moon-god and the sun-god (between whom he had surreptitiously placed himself). (24) Śrī Hari chopped off his head by His discus (Sudarśana), which was sharp-edged as a razor, even while he was drinking the nectar, with the result that the not trunk, which had been touched by nectar, dropped down (dead). (25) The head (of the demon), however, which was raised to the position of an immortal (by coming in touch with nectar), Brahmā (the birthless creator) made a deity presiding over a planet, who actually assails the sun-god and the moon-god on the new moon and the full moon respectively, cherishing enmity (towards them). (26) When the nectar was well-nigh consumed by the gods, Lord Śrī Hari, the Protector of the universe, assumed His original form (once more), while the Asura generals looked on. (27) In this way the hosts of gods and demons differed in their result even though they worked at the same place and time, with the same means (Mount Mandara and the serpent Vāsuki) and material (herbs and plants), and though (the nature of) their activity and intention (too) were (just) the same. Of the two parties, the gods easily obtained the reward in the shape of nectar due to their resorting to the dust of His lotus-feet, but not the Daityas (who did not resort to that dust). (28) Whatever is done by men with (their) life, wealth, organs of action, mind and speech with reference to (their) body, progeny and others having an eye to their instinctive character is futile. That (however) which is done by those very means with an eye to their identity (divine nature) becomes fruitful; and it redounds to the benefit of all, even as watering of the roots (of a tree) tends to the nourishment of all its limbs. (29)

Thus ends the ninth discourse, comprised in the story of the churning of the ocean for the sake of nectar, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः

Discourse X

Outbreak of hostilities between the gods and the Asuras

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति दानवदैतेया नाविन्दन्नमृतं नृप । युक्ताः कर्मणि यत्ताश्च वासुदेवपराङ्मुखाः । १ ।
साधयित्वा मृतं राजन्याययित्वा स्वकान्सुरान् । पश्यतां सर्वभूतानां ययौ गरुडवाहनः । २ ।
सपत्नानां परामृद्धिं दृष्ट्वा ते दितिनन्दनाः । अमृध्यमाणा उत्पेतुर्देवान्प्रत्युद्यतायुधाः । ३ ।
ततः सुरगणाः सर्वे सुधया पीतयैधिताः । प्रतिसंयुयुधुः शस्त्रैर्नारायणपदाश्रयाः । ४ ।

तत्र देवासुरो नाम रणः परमदारुणः । रोधस्युदन्वतो राजंस्तुमुलो रोमहर्षणः । ५ ।
 तत्रान्योन्यं सपत्नास्ते संरब्धमनसो रणे । समासाद्यासिभिर्बाणैर्निजघ्नुर्विविधायुधैः । ६ ।
 शङ्खतूर्यमृदङ्गानां भेरीडमरिणां महान् । हस्त्यश्वरथपत्तीनां नदतां निःस्वनोऽभवत् । ७ ।
 रथिनो रथिभिस्तत्र पत्तिभिः सह पत्तयः । हया हयैरिभाश्चेभैः समसज्जन्त संयुगे । ८ ।
 उष्ट्रैः केचिदिभैः केचिदपरे युयुधुः खरैः । केचिद् गौरमृगैर्ऋक्षैर्द्वीपिभिर्हरिभिर्भटाः । ९ ।
 गृध्रैः कङ्कैर्बकैरन्ये ज्येनभासैस्तिमिङ्गिलैः । शरभैर्महिषैः खड्गैर्गोवृषैर्गव्यारुणैः । १० ।
 शिवाभिराखुभिः केचित् कृकलासैः शशैर्नरैः । बस्तैरेके कृष्णसारैर्हंसैरन्ये च सूकरैः । ११ ।
 अन्ये जलस्थलखगैः सत्त्वैर्विकृतविग्रहैः । सेनयोरुभयो राजन्विविशुस्तोऽग्रतोऽग्रतः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: In this way the Dānavas and the Daityas could not obtain nectar, O ruler of men—even though they stood united and had been intent on doing (their) work (of churning the ocean)—because they had turned their back on Lord Vāsudeva. (1) Having caused nectar to be obtained, O king, and made His devotees, the gods, drink of it, the Lord mounted on (the back of) Garuḍa (the king of birds) and departed, while all living beings stood gazing. (2) Observing the highest good fortune (success) of their enemies and jealous of it, the Daityas (sons of Diti) marched against the gods with uplifted weapons. (3) Reinvigorated by the nectar drunk by them and having taken shelter in the feet of Lord Nārāyaṇa, all the gods thereupon offered a united resistance with their weapons. (4) There on the seashore raged a most dreadful, thrilling and hand-to-hand fight, known by the name of a conflict between the gods and the demons, O king! (5) With a mind full of rage, the aforesaid enemies met at close quarters on that battle-field and struck one another with swords, arrows and various (other) weapons. (6) Tremendous was the flourish of conchs and clarionets and the noise of clay tomtoms, tabors and Damaris (a kind of drum) as well as of the trumpeting elephants, neighing horses, rattling chariots and roaring foot-soldiers. (7) In that battle car-warriors closed with car-warriors, infantrymen with infantrymen, horses with horses and elephants with elephants. (8) Some warriors fought on the back of camels, some on elephants and others on donkeys, (still) others fought on the back of Gauramṛgas, bears, panthers and lions. (9) Others fought on (the back of) vultures, buzzards, herons, hawks and Bhāsas (a bird of prey soaring very high in the skies), Timingilas (whales), Śarabhas (an eight-footed animal said to be stronger than a lion, the species of which has now become extinct), bisons, rhinoceroses, bulls, Gayals and Aruṇas. (10) Some (more) fought on (the back of) jackals, rats, chameleons, hares and men; others, on goats, black antelopes and swans and still others on boars. (11) Some (again) fought on (the back of) birds of land and water and (other) animals with deformed bodies. The warriors of both the armies, O king, penetrated farther and farther (in their effort to worst their opponents). (12)

चित्रध्वजपटै राजन्नातपत्रैः सितामलैः । महाधनैर्वज्रदण्डैर्व्यजनैर्बार्हचामरैः । १३ ।
 वातोद्भूतोत्तरोष्णीषैरर्चिर्बिर्मभूषणैः । स्फुरद्भिर्विशदैः शस्त्रैः सुतरां सूर्यरश्मिभिः । १४ ।
 देवदानववीराणां ध्वजिन्यां पाण्डुनन्दन । रेजतुर्वीरमालाभिर्यादसामिव सागरौ । १५ ।
 वैरोचनो बलिः संख्ये सोऽसुराणां चमूपतिः । यानं वैहायसं नाम कामगं मयनिर्मितम् । १६ ।
 सर्वसाङ्ग्रामिकोपेतं सर्वाश्चर्यमयं प्रभो । अप्रतर्क्यमनिर्देश्यं दृश्यमानमदर्शनम् । १७ ।
 आस्थितस्तद् विमानाग्र्यं सर्वानीकाधिपैर्वृतः । वालव्यजनछत्राग्र्यै रेजे चन्द्र इवोदये । १८ ।
 तस्यासन्सर्वतो यानैर्यूथानां पतयोऽसुराः । नमुचिः शम्बरो बाणो विप्रचित्तिरयोमुखः । १९ ।

द्विमूर्धा कालनाभोऽथ प्रहेतिहेतिरिल्वलः । शकुनिभूतसंतापो वज्रदंष्ट्रो विरोचनः । २० ।
 हयग्रीवः शङ्कुशिराः कपिलो मेघदुन्दुभिः । तारकश्चक्रदक् शुम्भो निशुम्भो जम्भ उत्कलः । २१ ।
 अरिष्टोऽरिष्टनेमिश्च मयश्च त्रिपुराधिपः । अन्ये पौलोमकालेया निवातकवचादयः । २२ ।
 अलब्धभागाः सोमस्य केवलं क्लेशभागिनः । सर्व एते रणमुखे बहुशो निर्जितामराः । २३ ।
 सिंहनादान्विमुञ्चन्तः शङ्खान्धुर्महारवान् । दृष्ट्वा सपत्नानुत्सिक्तान्वलभित् कुपितो भृशम् । २४ ।
 ऐरावतं दिक्करिणमारूढः शुशुभे स्वराद् । यथा स्रवत्प्रस्रवणमुदयाद्रिमहर्षतिः । २५ ।
 तस्यासन्सर्वतो देवा नानाबाह्वज्जायुधाः । लोकपालाः सह गणैर्वाय्वग्निवरुणादयः । २६ ।
 तेऽन्योन्यमभिसंसृत्य क्षिपन्तो मर्मभिर्मिथः । आह्वयन्तो विशन्तोऽग्रे युयुधुर्द्वन्द्वयोधिनः । २७ ।
 युयोध बलिरिन्द्रेण तारकेण गुह्येस्यत । वरुणो हेतिनायुध्यन्मित्रो राजन्प्रहेतिना । २८ ।
 यमस्तु कालनाभेन विश्वकर्मा मयेन वै । शम्बरो युयुधे त्वष्ट्रा सवित्रा तु विरोचनः । २९ ।
 अपराजितेन नमुचिरश्चिनौ वृषपर्वणा । सूर्यो बलिसुतैर्देवो बाणज्येष्ठैः शतेन च । ३० ।
 राहुणा च तथा सोमः पुलोमो युयुधेऽनिलः । निशुम्भशुम्भयोर्देवी भद्रकाली तरस्विनी । ३१ ।
 वृषाकपिस्तु जम्भेन महिषेण विभावसुः । इल्वलः सह वातापिर्ब्रह्मपुत्रैरिन्दम । ३२ ।
 कामदेवेन दुर्मर्ष उत्कलो मातृभिः सह । बृहस्पतिश्चोशनसा नरकेण शनैश्चरः । ३३ ।
 मरुतो निवातकवचैः कालेयैर्वसवोऽमराः । विश्वेदेवास्तु पौलोमै रुद्राः क्रोधवशैः सह । ३४ ।

With the ranks of warriors distinguished by (their) ensigns of various colours, spotless white costly umbrellas with handles of diamond, fly-flappers of peacock feathers and the bushy tail of Camaris (a species of deer found in the Himalayan region), turbans and pieces of cloth used as upper garment waved by the wind, brilliant coats of mail and ornaments and burnished weapons shining brightly under the rays of the sun, O king, the armies of the celestial and Asura heroes shone like two oceans with rows of sea-monsters. (13—15) In that battle the celebrated Bali, son of Virocana, was the commander-in-chief of the Asura forces. Seated in his famous vehicle, Vaihāyasa by name, the foremost of (all) aerial cars— which had been manufactured by (the demon) Maya and could fly at will, (nay,) which was equipped with all implements of warfare and full of all wonders, O lord, which was incomprehensible by reason and could not be precisely located (because of its uncertain and wonderfully swift movements) and which, though perceived (now and then), defied perception (because of its dazzling splendour)— and surrounded by all troop-commanders, he shone in the midst of a pair of chowries (which were being waved on his right and left) and under an exquisite umbrella like the moon on the eastern hill (while rising). (16—18) On all his sides appeared in (their respective) aerial cars (other) Asuras, the commanders of the (various) squadrons— Namuci, Śambara, Bāṇa, Vipracitti, Ayomukha (steel-mouthed), Dwimūrdhā (possessed of a pair of heads), Kālanābha and Praheti, Heti, Ilwala, Śakuni, Bhūtasantāpa (the torment of created beings), Vajradamṣṭra (possessed of adamant teeth), Virocana (shining brightly), Hayagrīva (having the head and neck of a horse), Śaṅkuśīrā (spear-headed), Kapila (tawny of hue), Meghadundubhi, Tāraka, Cakradṛk (having wheel-like eyes), Śumbha, Niśumbha, Jambha, Utkala, Ariṣṭa, Ariṣṭanemi, Maya, the lord of the three (flying) cities, and others, viz., the Paulomas and Kāleyas, the Nivātakavacas and so on. (19—22) Having not received any share in the nectar (churned out of the ocean of milk), they had only suffered hardship (in toiling for the nectar). All these (however) had on many an occasion utterly defeated the immortals at the very commencement of the operations. (23) Sending forth the roars of a lion, they blew loud-sounding conchs. Seeing his foes puffed up with pride, Indra (the destroyer of the demon Bala), got highly enraged. (24) Mounted on Airāvata, an elephant guarding the (eastern) quarter (with the temple-juice streaming from its temples), Indra shone like the sun (lit., the ruler of the day) appearing on the eastern hill with cascades falling down (its sloping sides). (25) All round him stood the (other) gods, mounted on their diverse mounts and carrying different ensigns and weapons, as well as the guardians of the (various) worlds—Vāyu (the wind-god), Agni (the god of fire), Varuṇa (the god of water) and others—with their retinue. (26) Rushing violently towards and reproaching one another with words that cut to the quick, (nay,) challenging one another and rushing forward, they fought in pairs. (27) Bali contended with Indra; Guha (the younger son of Lord Śiva) cast his lot with Tāraka; Varuṇa fought with Heti and Mitra with Praheti, O Parīkṣit! (28) Similarly Yama tried his strength with Kālanābha; Viśwakarmā (the architect of heaven), indeed with Maya (the architect of the demons); Śambara, with Twaṣṭā (a lord of created beings) and Virocana (Bali's father and son of Prahrāda) with Savitā. (29) Namuci crossed arms with Aparājita, the Aświns (the twin-born physicians of the gods) with Vṛṣaparvā, and the god Sūrya (the sun-god) with the hundred sons of Bali, of whom the eldest was Bāṇa. (30) Soma (the moon-god) likewise fought with Rāhu; Anila (the wind-god) with Pulomā, and the powerful Goddess Bhadrakālī with Niśumbha and Śumbha. (31) Vṛṣākapi (Lord Śiva) for His part closed with Jambha; Vibhāvasu (the god of fire), with Mahiṣa and Ilwala, accompanied by Vātāpi, with the sage Marici and others (the sons of Brahmā), O chastiser of foes! (32) Durmarṣa (one hard to withstand) had an encounter with Kāmadeva (the god of love); Utkala with the Mātṛkās (the divine mothers or personified energies of the principal deities); the sage Bṛhaspati (the preceptor of the gods), with Uśanā (Śukrācārya, the preceptor of the demons) and Śanaīścara (the deity presiding over the planet Saturn and a son of the sun-god) with Naraka (the demon born of the union of the Lord manifested in the form of the divine Boar with Mother Earth). (33) The (forty-nine) Maruts (wind-gods) entered into a conflict with the Nivātakavacas; the (group of the eight) gods known as the Vasus with the Kāleyas; the (gods called) Viśwedevas, with the Paulomas and the (eleven) Rudras (the gods of destruction), with the Krodhavaśas (a class of serpents, extremely ferocious by nature, residing in the lower regions). (34)

[564] B. M. 27—

त एवमाजावसुराः सुरेन्द्रा द्वन्द्वेन संहत्य च युध्यमानाः ।
 अन्योन्यमासाद्य निजघ्नुरोजसा जिगीषवस्तीक्ष्णशरासितोमरैः । ३५ ।
 भुशुण्डिभिश्चक्रगदष्टिपट्टिशैः शक्त्युल्मुकैः प्रासपरश्वधैरपि ।
 निखिंशभल्लैः परिघैः समुद्रैः सभिन्दिपालैश्च शिरांसि चिच्छिदुः । ३६ ।
 गजास्तुरङ्गाः सरथाः पदातयः सारोहवाहा विविधा विखण्डिताः ।
 निकृत्तबाहूशिरोधराङ्घ्र्यश्छिन्नध्वजेष्वासतनुत्रभूषणाः । ३७ ।
 तेषां पदाघातरथाङ्गचूर्णितादायोधनादुल्बण उत्थितस्तदा ।
 रेणुदिशः खं द्युमणिं च छादयन् न्यवर्ततासृक्स्त्रुतिभिः परिप्लुतात् । ३८ ।
 शिरोभिरुद्धूतकिरीटकुण्डलैः संरम्भदृग्भिः परिदष्टदच्छदैः ।
 महाभुजैः साभरणैः सहायुधैः सा प्रास्तृता भूः करभोरुभिर्बभौ । ३९ ।

कबन्धास्त्र चोत्पेतुः पतितस्वशिरोऽक्षिभिः । उद्यतायुधदोर्दण्डैराधावन्तो भयन् मृधे । ४० ।

Fighting in pairs as well as collectively on the battle-field in the aforesaid manner and approaching one another, the Asuras as well as the leaders of the gods violently struck one another with sharp arrows, swords and iron clubs in their eagerness to win. (35) And they lopped off the heads of one another with Bhuṣuṇḍis (a kind of weapon perhaps of the nature of fire-arms), discusses, maces, lances and sharp-edged spears, darts and firebrands, Prāsas (a barbed missile) and axes, scimitars and Bhallas (a kind of arrow with a point of a particular shape), bludgeons as well as with Mudgaras (a kind of hammer-shaped weapon) and Bhindipālas (catapults). (36) Elephants and horses (as well as those riding on them), car-warriors and footmen and various (other) mounts with (their) riders were cut to pieces. They had (their) arms, thighs, necks and feet chopped off; while their ensigns, bows, coats of mail and ornaments were torn in pieces. (37) From the battle-ground pounded by their tread and (the impact of their) wheels rose at that time a thick cloud of dust enveloping the quarters as well as the heavens including the sun; it (however) disappeared due to the ground having been drenched by the spouts of blood (discharged from the wounds of the warriors). (38) Thickly strewn with heads—from which diadems and ear-rings had been knocked off, (nay,) which had anger in (their) eyes and whose lips were (still) closely clasped (in anger)—as well as with long and stout arms, (still) decked with ornaments and holding weapons, and with shapely thighs (resembling the trunk of an elephant, which is thick at the upper end and grows less and less thicker below)—the said battle-ground looked (very) attractive. (39) Headless trunks sprang on their feet on that battle-field and rushed towards the (hostile) warriors with (their) stout arms (still) holding uplifted weapons and perceiving (recognizing) them with the eyes in their fallen heads. (40)

बलिमहेन्द्रं दशभिस्त्रिभिरैरावतं शरैः । चतुर्भिश्चतुरो वाहानेकेनारोहमार्च्छयत् । ४१ ।
 स तानापततः शक्रस्तावद्भिः शीघ्रविक्रमः । चिच्छेद निशितैर्भल्लैरसम्प्राप्तान्हसन्निव । ४२ ।
 तस्य कर्मोत्तमं वीक्ष्य दुर्मर्षः शक्तिमाददे । तां ज्वलन्तीं महोल्काभां हस्तस्थामच्छिन्दद्भिः । ४३ ।
 ततः शूलं ततः प्रासं ततस्तोमरमृष्टयः । यद् यच्छस्त्रं समादद्यात्सर्वं तदच्छिन्द विभुः । ४४ ।
 ससर्जार्थासुरीं मायामन्तर्धानगतोऽसुरः । ततः प्रादुरभूच्छैलः सुरानीकोपरि प्रभो । ४५ ।
 ततो निपेतुस्तरवो दह्यमाना दवाग्निना । शिलाः सटङ्कशिखराशूर्णयन्त्यो द्विषद्वलम् । ४६ ।
 महोरगाः समुत्पेतुर्दन्दशूकाः सवृश्चिकाः । सिंहव्याघ्रवराहाश्च मर्दयन्तो महागजान् । ४७ ।
 यातुधान्यश्च शतशः शूलहस्ता विवाससः । छिन्धि भिन्धीति वादिन्यस्तथा रक्षोगणाः प्रभो । ४८ ।
 ततो महाघना व्योम्नि गम्भीरपरुषस्वनाः । अङ्गारान्मुमुचुर्वतैराहताः स्तनयित्त्वः । ४९ ।
 सृष्टो दैत्येन सुमहान्वह्निः श्वसनसारथिः । सांवर्तक इवात्युग्रो विबुधध्वजिनीमधाक् । ५० ।
 ततः समुद्र उद्वेलः सर्वतः प्रत्यदृश्यत । प्रचण्डवातैरुद्धूततरङ्गावर्तभीषणः । ५१ ।
 एवं दैत्यैर्महामाघैरलक्ष्यगतिभीषणैः । सृज्यमानासु मायासु विषेदुः सुरसैनिकाः । ५२ ।
 न तत्प्रतिविधिं यत्र विदुरिन्द्रादयो नृप । ध्यातः प्रादुरभूत् तत्र भगवान्विश्वभावनः । ५३ ।
 ततः सुपर्णासकृताङ्घ्रिपल्लवः पिशङ्गवासा नवकञ्जलोचनः ।
 अदृश्यताष्टायुधबाहुल्लसच्छ्रीकौस्तुभानर्घ्यकिरीटकुण्डलः । ५४ ।
 तस्मिन्प्रविष्टेऽसुरकूटकर्मजा माया विनेशुर्महिना महीयसः ।
 स्वप्नो यथा हि प्रतिबोध आगते हरिस्मृतिः सर्वविपद्विमोक्षणम् । ५५ ।
 दृष्ट्वा मृधे गरुडवाहमिभारिवाह आविध्य शूलमहिनोदथ कालनेमिः ।
 तल्लीलय गुरुदमूर्ध्नि पतद् गृहीत्वा तेनाहननृप सवाहमरिं त्र्यधीशः । ५६ ।
 माली सुमाल्यतिबलौ युधि पेततुर्यचक्रेण कृतशिरसावथ माल्यवांस्तम् ।
 आहत्य तिग्मगदयाहनदण्डजेन्द्रं तावच्छिरोऽच्छिन्दरेर्नदतोऽरिणाऽऽद्यः । ५७ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे देवासुरसंग्रामे दशमोऽध्यायः । १० ।

Bali assailed the mighty Indra with ten arrows, Airāvata (his elephant) with three, the four guards of Airāvata with four (each with one) and its driver with one. (41) Quick in showing his valour, Śakra (Indra) cut them with the same number of (eighteen) sharp Bhallas, as though smiling, as they came flying (towards him), even before they reached him. (42) Observing his superb feat, Bali, who could not easily tolerate this discomfiture, took up a dart glowing like a mighty firebrand. Indra (however) cut it while it was (yet) in Bali's hand (before he was able to discharge it). (43) Bali thereupon took up a spear, then a Prāsa and then (again) a Tomara (iron club) and double-edged swords. (But) whatever weapon he took in his hand (the powerful) Indra cut down all of them (in no time). (44) Going out of sight, the demon (Bali) next let loose his demoniacal Māyā (illusion) and thereupon came into view a mountain over (the heads of) the celestial forces, O king! (45) From that mountain fell down trees burning with forest fire and rocks with (their) tops sharp as (the edge of) a chisel, pulverizing the enemy's forces. (46) Further (from that mountain) rused forth large serpents and (other) snakes with scorpions, as well as lions, tigers and boars crushing gigantic elephants. (47) There also appeared in hundreds nude ogresses with pikes in (their) hands, exclaiming "Cut down", "Break asunder!" and ogres too, O lord! (48) Then large thundering clouds, buffeted by winds, rained live coals with a deep and terrific roar. (49) Conjured up by the demon, a very extensive and most formidable fire, helped by the winds, began to burn the celestial army like the fire appearing at the time of final dissolution of the universe. (50) Then was observed on all sides an ocean that transgressed (all) limits and looked terrible on account of (its) whirlpools and waves tossed up by fierce winds. (51) In the midst of illusions that were being likewise created by other Daityas (too), who were great adepts in conjuring tricks and were (most) formidable because of their imperceptible movements, the celestial warriors grew despondent. (52) When Indra and others, O protector of men, did not know how to counteract this evil, the almighty Lord, who is the Protector of the universe and was called to mind (by the gods), manifested Himself there. (53) Presently there appeared the Lord, clad in yellow robes and endowed with eight arms wielding (different) weapons, with eyes resembling a pair of budding lotuses and His feet, tender as young leaves, placed across the shoulders of Garuḍa (who had a pair of beautiful wings), and on whose person shone forth Goddess Śrī (in the form of a golden streak on His bosom), the Kaustubha gem, a priceless crown and a pair of invaluable ear-rings. (54) The moment He entered the battle-field the illusions created by the conjuring tricks of the demons yielded to the glory of that mighty Lord even as a dream is broken the moment wakefulness returns (to a sleeping man). For, (to say nothing of the Lord's actual presence), the (very) thought of Śrī Hari is the (only) radical cure for all ills. (35) Perceiving Lord Viṣṇu (the Rider of Garuḍa) on the field of battle, and revolving his dart, (the demon) Kālanemi (who was reborn as Kaṁsa in his next incarnation and) who rode on a lion (the enemy of an elephant) presently flung it (at Him). Seizing it by way of sport as it was about to descend on Garuḍa's head, Viṣṇu (the Lord of the three worlds) despatched with it, O protector of the people, the enemy (Kālanemi) along with his mount (the lion). (56) Encountering the Lord, by whose discus (Sudarśana) the mighty Mālī and Sumālī (too) had their heads lopped off and fell on the battle-field, Mālyavān (another general of the Āsurika forces) was just going to strike Garuḍa (the king of birds) with a pointed mace when Śrī Hari (the most ancient Person) severed the head of the roaring enemy with the same discus. (57)

Thus ends the tenth discourse, forming part of the story of the war between the gods and the demons in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XI

Conclusion of the conflict between the gods and the demons

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथो सुराः प्रत्युपलब्धचेतसः परस्य पुंसः परयानुकम्पया ।

जघ्नुर्भृशं शक्रसमीरणादयस्तांस्तान् रणे यैरभिसंहताः पुरा । १ ।

वैरोचनाय संरब्धो भगवान्पाकशासनः । उदयच्छद् यदा वज्रं प्रजा हाहेति चुक्रुशुः । २ ।

वज्रपाणिस्तमाहेदं तिरस्कृत्य पुरःस्थितम् । मनस्विनं सुसम्पन्नं विचरन्तं महामृधे । ३ ।

नटवन्मूढ मायाभिर्मायेशान् नो जिगीषसि । जित्वा बालान् निबद्धाक्षान् नटो हरति तद्धनम् । ४ ।

आरुरुक्षन्ति मायाभिरुत्सिसृप्सन्ति ये दिवम् । तान्दस्यून्विधुनोम्यज्ञानपूर्वस्माच्च पदादधः । ५ ।

सोऽहं दुर्मायिनस्तेऽद्य वज्रेण शतपर्वणा । शिरो हरिष्ये मन्दात्मन्धटस्व ज्ञातिभिः सह । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Having regained (their) presence of mind by the supreme grace of Lord Viṣṇu (the supreme Person), the gods headed by Indra (the ruler of the gods) and Samīraṇa (the wind-god), now struck hard each one of those (Asuras) by whom they had been jointly assailed before. (1) When the glorious Indra (the chastiser of the demon Pāka), full of anger, took up his thunderbolt in order to strike Bali (the son of Virocana), his subjects cried "Alas !" "Alas !" (2) Reproaching the heroic Bali, who was well-equipped (with arms) and was ranging fearlessly before Indra in that great conflict, Indra (who wielded a thunderbolt in his hand), addressed him as follows:—(3) Conquering fools whose eyes have been enchanted, a conjurer takes away their money. (Even so,) though no better than a conjurer, O fool, you seek to overpower us, lords of Māyā, by means of incantations ! (4) Those foolish robbers who seek to ascend to heaven, nay, rise (even) beyond heaven (to still higher regions) by means of spells, I cast still lower down than their former abode. (5) As such I shall lop off your head today with (my) thunderbolt having a hundred joints, even though (I know) you are an adept in the use of malevolent spells. Exert yourself with (all) Your kinsfolk, O dull-witted one ! (6)

बलिरुवाच

संग्रामे वर्तमानानां कालचोदितकर्मणाम् । कीर्तिर्जयोऽजयो मृत्युः सर्वेषां स्युरनुक्रमात् । ७ ।

तदिदं कालरशनं जनाः पश्यन्ति सूरयः । न हृष्यन्ति न शोचन्ति तत्र यूयमपण्डिताः । ८ ।

न वयं मन्यमानानामात्मानं तत्र साधनम् । गिरो वः साधुशोच्यानां गृहीमो मर्मताडनाः । ९ ।

Bali replied: Fame, triumph, discomfiture and death fall in succession to the lot of all who are engaged in hostilities and whose actions are impelled by (a propitious or unpropitious) Time (Destiny). (7) Therefore, wise men view (all) this (fame etc.), at determined by Time; they neither exult nor grieve over it. You are (however) ignorant of this truth. (8) We (for our part) do not take to the heart your words that sting one to the quick, since you deserve to be pitied by pious souls in that you account your own self instrumental in bringing fame and so on. (9)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्याक्षिप्य विभुं वीरो नाराचैर्वीरमर्दनः । आकर्णपूर्णैरहनदाक्षेपैराहतं पुनः । १० ।

एवं निराकृतो देवो वैरिणा तथ्यवादिना । नामृष्यत् तदधिक्षेपं तोत्राहत इव द्विपः । ११ ।

प्राहरत् कुलिशं तस्मा अमोघं परमर्दनः । सयानो न्यपतद् भूमौ छिन्नपक्ष इवाचलः । १२ ।
 सखायं पतितं दृष्ट्वा जम्भो बलिसखः सुहृत् । अभ्ययात् सौहृदं सख्युर्हतस्यापि समाचरन् । १३ ।
 स सिंहवाह आसाद्य गदामुद्यम्य रंहसा । जत्रावताडयच्छक्रं गजं च सुमहाबलः । १४ ।
 गदाप्रहारव्यथितो भूशं विह्वलितो गजः । जानुभ्यां धरणीं स्पृष्ट्वा कश्मलं परमं ययौ । १५ ।
 ततो रथो मातलिना हरिभिर्दशशतैर्वृतः । आनीतो द्विपमुत्सृज्य रथामारुह्ये विभुः । १६ ।
 तस्य तत् पूजयन् कर्म यन्तुर्दानवसत्तमः । शूलेन ज्वलता तं तु समयमानोऽहनन्मृधे । १७ ।
 सेहे रुजं सुदुर्मर्षा सत्त्वमालम्ब्य मातलिः । इन्द्रो जम्भस्य संक्रुद्धो वज्रेणापाहरच्छिरः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Having thus twitted the powerful god (Indra) the valiant Bali, the vanquisher of heroes (in battle), struck him again with arrows pulled (right) up to the ear—him who had (already) been stung with taunts. (10) Thus reproached by the enemy, who spoke the truth (all the same), the god (Indra) could not bear his insulting speech any more than an elephant pricked with a goad. (11) Indra (the vanquisher of foes) hurled (his) unfailing thunderbolt against him so that, like a mountain that had its wings * clipped, Bali fell to the ground, car and all. (12) Finding his friend (Bali) fallen (in battle), the demon Jambha, a (great) friend and well-wisher of Bali, assailed Indra, (thus) rendering good offices even to his fallen friend. (13) Riding on a lion, Jambha, who was possessed of great might, approached Indra and, lifting his mace, struck him with (great) impetuosity on the collar-bone, as well as his elephant (Airāvata). (14) Tormented by the stroke of the mace and utterly confounded, the elephant touched the ground with its knees and fell into a deep swoon. (15) Thereupon was brought by Mātali (Indra's charioteer) a chariot drawn by a thousand horses; and, leaving the elephant, the mighty god mounted the chariot. (16) Admiring that (prompt) action of the charioteer and smiling too, Jambha (the foremost of the Dānavas) struck the latter with a burning dart in battle. (17) Taking recourse to fortitude, Mātali bore the pain (caused by the dart), which was most difficult to endure; and (greatly) enraged, Indra severed Jambha's head by means of his thunderbolt. (18)

जम्भं श्रुत्वा हतं तस्य ज्ञातयो नारदादृषेः । नमुचिश्च बलः पाकस्तत्रापेतुस्त्वरान्विताः । १९ ।
 वचोभिः परुषैरिन्द्रमर्दयन्तोऽस्य मर्मसु । शरैरवाकिरन् मेघा धाराभिरिव पर्वतम् । २० ।
 हरीन्द्रशशतान्याजौ हर्यश्चस्य बलः शरैः । तावद्भिरर्दयामास युगपल्लघुहस्तवान् । २१ ।
 शताभ्यां मातलिं पाको रथं सावयवं पृथक् । सकृत्सन्धानमोक्षेण तदद्भुतमभूद् रणे । २२ ।
 नमुचिः पञ्चदशभिः स्वर्णपुङ्खैर्महेषुभिः । आहत्य व्यनदत्संख्ये सतोय इव तोयदः । २३ ।
 सर्वतः शरकूटेन शक्रं सरथसारथिम् । छादयामासुरसुराः प्रावृद्सूर्यमिवाम्बुदाः । २४ ।
 अलक्षयन्तस्तमतीव विह्वला विचुक्रुशुर्देवगणाः सहानुगाः ।
 अनायकाः शत्रुबलेन निर्जिता वणिक्पथा भिन्ननवो यथार्णवे । २५ ।
 ततस्तुराषाडिषुबद्धपञ्जराद् विनिर्गतः साश्वरथध्वजाग्रणीः ।
 बभौ दिशः खं पृथिवीं च रोचयन् स्वतेजसा सूर्य इव क्षपात्यये । २६ ।
 निरीक्ष्य पृतनां देवः परैरभ्यर्दितां रणे । उदयच्छद् रिपुं हन्तुं वज्रं वज्रधरो रुषा । २७ ।
 स तेनैवाष्टधारेण शिरसी बलपाकयोः । ज्ञातीनां पश्यतां राजञ्जहार जनयन्भयम् । २८ ।

* We read in the Purāṇas that mountains had wings in the earliest times and could fly and settle down wherever they would. Finding them a great menace to organic life, Indra clipped their wings and thus rendered them incapable of motion for all times.

Hearing from (the lips of) the sage Nārada about Jambha having been slain (by Indra), his kinsmen, Namuci, Bala and Pāka, arrived there in (great) haste. (19) Stinging Indra to the quick with their pungent words, they struck him repeatedly with arrows even as clouds would assail a mountain with torrents. (20) The swift-handed Bala simultaneously struck in battle (all) the thousand horses of Haryaśwa (Indra) with as many arrows. (21) With a hundred arrows each (the demon) Pāka struck separately Mātali (the charioteer) and the chariot with (all) its parts by fitting to the bow and discharging (all) the arrows at one and the same time. That was (indeed) a (great) marvel in that battle. (22) Piercing Indra with fifteen large arrows furnished with hilts of gold, (the demon) Namuci roared on the field of battle like a cloud charged with water. (23) The demons covered Śakra (Indra) including his chariot and charioteer on all sides with a network of arrows (even) as clouds would obscure the sun in the rains. (24) Not perceiving him (on the battle-field) and extremely perturbed, the celestial troops with their retinue, who were (now) left without a leader and were utterly vanquished by the enemy, uttered a plaintive cry like merchants whose ship had been wrecked in mid-ocean. (25) Presently Indra (who was capable of overpowering the mighty) issued out of the cage of arrows along with the horses, chariot, flag and charioteer. Illuminating the quarters, sky and earth with his splendour, he shone like the sun at the close of night. (26) Observing his army overpowered by the enemies (the demons) in battle, the god (Indra), the wielder of the thunderbolt, lifted his thunderbolt in anger with intent to slay his enemy. (27) With the same eight-edged weapon he severed the heads of (both) Bala and Pāka, inspiring terror in (the heart of) their kinsfolk, who stood looking on, O Parīkṣit ! (28)

नमुचिस्तद्वधं दृष्ट्वा शोकामर्षरुषान्वितः । जिघांसुरिन्द्रं नृपते चकार परमोद्यमम् । २९ ।

अश्मसारमयं शूलं घण्टावद्धेमभूषणम् । प्रगृह्याभ्यद्रवत् क्रुद्धो हतोऽसीति वितर्जयन् ।

प्राहिणोद् देवराजाय निनदन् मृगराडिव । ३० ।

तदापतद् गगनतले महाजवं विचिच्छिदे हरिरिषुभिः सहस्रधा ।

तमाहननृप कुलिशेन कन्धरे रुषान्वितस्त्रिदशपतिः शिरो हरन् । ३१ ।

न तस्य हि त्वचमपि वज्र ऊर्जितो विभेद यः सुरपतिर्नौजसेरितः ।

तदद्भुतं परमतिवीर्यवृत्रभित् तिरस्कृतो नमुचिशिरोधरत्वचा । ३२ ।

तस्मादिन्द्रोऽबिभेच्छत्रोर्वज्रः प्रतिहतो यतः । किमिदं दैवयोगेन भूतं लोकविमोहनम् । ३३ ।

येन मे पूर्वमद्रीणां पक्षच्छेदः प्रजात्यये । कृतो निविशतां भारैः पतत्रैः पततां भुवि । ३४ ।

तपःसारमयं त्वाष्ट्रं वृत्रो येन विपाटितः । अन्ये चापि बलोपेताः सर्वस्त्रैरक्षयत्वचः । ३५ ।

सोऽयं प्रतिहतो वज्रो मया मुक्तोऽसुरेऽल्पके । नाहं तदाददे दण्डं ब्रह्मतेजोऽयकारणम् । ३६ ।

इति शक्रं विषीदन्तमाह वागशरीरिणी । नायं शुष्कैरथो नार्द्रैर्वधमर्हति दानवः । ३७ ।

मयास्मै यद् वरो दत्तो मृत्युर्नैवार्द्रशुष्कयोः । अतोऽन्यश्चिन्तनीयस्ते उपायो मघवन् रिपोः । ३८ ।

तां दैवीं गिरमाकर्ण्य मघवान्सुसमाहितः । ध्यायन् फेनमथापश्यदुपायमुभयात्मकम् । ३९ ।

न शुष्केण न चाद्रेण जहार नमुचेः शिरः । तं तुष्टुवुर्मुनिगणा माल्यैश्चावाकिरन् विभुम् । ४० ।

गन्धर्वमुख्यौ जगदुर्विश्रावसुपरावसू । देवदुन्दुभयो नेदुर्नर्तक्यो ननृतुर्मुदा । ४१ ।

अन्येऽप्येवं प्रतिद्वन्द्वान्वाय्वग्रिवरुणादयः । सूदयामासुरस्त्रौघैर्मृगान्केसरिणो यथा । ४२ ।

ब्रह्मणा प्रेषितो देवान्देवर्षिर्नारदो नृप । वारयामास विबुधान्दृष्ट्वा दानवसंक्षयम् । ४३ ।

Perceiving their death, Namuci was filled with grief, indignation and rage; and in his eagerness to kill Indra, O ruler of men, he put forth his best energy. (29) Taking up a lance of steel, furnished with bells and adorned with gold ornaments he darted, full of rage, threatening in the word "You are slain!" and flung it at Indra (the ruler of the gods), roaring like a lion (the king of beasts).(30) Hari (Indra) cut it with (his) arrows into a thousand pieces (even) as it flew towards him through the air with great speed. Full of anger, the ruler of the gods (then) struck him (Namuci) with his thunderbolt in the neck, aiming to chop off the latter's head.(31) The powerful thunderbolt which was hurled with (great) force by Indra (the king of the gods) did not as a matter of fact pierce even the skin of Namuci. This was most wonderful that the weapon which smashed the mighty Vṛtra was baffled by the skin on Namuci's neck.(32) Indra (now) got afraid of that enemy (Namuci) from whom the thunderbolt had been repelled. (He said to himself,) "through a conspiracy of Fate what has this happened, that has bewildered the world? " (33) By means of this (very) thunderbolt, in old days, I clipped the wings of mountains, that flew with (those) wings and settled down on earth on account of their (huge) weight, thus conducing to the destruction of created beings.(34) (Nay,) by this was rent asunder (the demon) Vṛtra, the vigorous austerity (personified) of Twaṣṭā (a lord of created beings), and others too, who were endowed with (extraordinary) strength and whose skin could not (even) be scratched with all the missiles.(35) (When) hurled by me at this puny Asura, the same thunderbolt has been rendered ineffectual! A (mere) staff, I shall no more handle it; though embodying the (spiritual) energy of a Brāhmaṇa (the sage Dadhīci), it is unavailing (now)."(36) To Śakra, who was thus sorrowing, an incorporeal voice said, "This demon can be killed neither with dry nor with wet things, since a boon has been conferred on him by Me to the effect that death will surely not come to him through any wet or dry substance. Hence any other contrivance should be thought of by you for (the death of) this enemy, O Maghavā (Indra) ! (37-38) Hearing that ethereal voice, Indra fully composed his mind and contemplated; and presently he discovered a means in the shape of foam (of the sea), which combined both (the aforesaid) attributes and could not therefore be called exclusively dry or wet). (39) With that foam, which was neither dry nor wet, he severed the head of Namuci; (and) hosts of sages glorified him and showered flowers on the mighty Indra. (40) Viśvāvasu and Parāvasu, the chief among the Gandharvas (heavenly musicians), sang songs, the celestial drums sounded and (heavenly) dancing girls danced with joy. (41) Similarly other gods too, headed by Vāyu (the wind-god), Agni (the god of fire) and Varuṇa (the god of water), destroyed their rivals with volleys of missiles just as lions would kill deer.(42) Perceiving the extermination of the Dānavas, the celestial sage Nārada was sent by Brahmā (the creator) to the gods, O protector of men, and he remonstrated with the gods (in the following words).(43)

नारद उवाच

भवद्विरमृतं प्राप्तं नारायणभुजाश्रयैः । श्रिया समेधिताः सर्व उपारमत विग्रहात् । ४४ ।

Nārada said: Nectar has been secured by you by resorting to the arms of Lord Nārāyaṇa and (besides) all (of You) have been blessed by Goddess Śrī (His divine Spouse). (Therefore,) cease you (now) from hostilities.(44)

श्रीशुक उवाच

संयम्य मन्युसंरम्भं मानयन्तो मुनेर्वचः । उपगीयमानानुचरैर्ययुः सर्वे त्रिविष्टपम् । ४५ ।

येऽवशिष्टा रणे तस्मिन् नारदानुमतेन ते । बलिं विपन्नमादाय अस्तं गिरिमुपागमन् । ४६ ।

तत्राविनष्टावयवान् विद्यमानशिरोधरान् । उशाना जीवयामास संजीविन्या स्वविद्यया । ४७ ।

बलिश्चोशनसा स्पृष्टः प्रत्यापन्नेन्द्रियस्मृतिः । पराजितोऽपि नाखिद्यल्लोकतत्त्वविचक्षणः । ४८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे देवासुरसंग्रामे एकादशोऽध्यायः । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Accepting the advice of the sage (Nārada), the gods gave up anger as well as the zeal for fighting; and being glorified by their attendants, all returned to heaven. (45) Those who survived in that conflict took with the concurrence of Nārada the lifeless (body of their leader) Bali and made for the western hill (the mountain where the sun is believed to set). (46) There Uśanā (Śukrācārya, the preceptor of the demons) restored to life, by his (secret) science of reviving the dead, those whose limbs were intact and whose neck was (still) whole. (47) Bali too had his senses of perception and consciousness restored the moment he was touched by the sage Uśanā. Though vanquished (in battle), he did not feel sorry, fully conversant as he was with the truth relating to the world (viz., that victory and defeat etc., depended on one's good or evil destiny). (48)

Thus ends the eleventh discourse, forming part of the story relating to the war between the gods and the demons, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XII

Infatuation of Lord Śaṅkara

श्रीबादरायणिरुवाच

वृषध्वजो निशप्येदं योषिद्रूपेण दानवान् । मोहयित्वा सुरगणान्हरिः सोममपाययत् । १ ।
वृषमारुह्य गिरिशः सर्वभूतगणैर्वृतः । सह देव्या ययौ द्रष्टुं यत्रास्ते मधुसूदनः । २ ।
सभाजितो भगवता सादरं सोमया भवः । सूपविष्ट उवाचेदं प्रतिपूज्य स्मयन्हरिम् । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka (son of Bādarāyaṇa) resumed: Having heard that, enchanting the Dānavas by assuming the form of a (bewitching) damsel, Śrī Hari had given nectar to drink to the hosts of heaven, Lord Śiva (who bears the device of a bull on His ensign and) who dwells on Mount Kailāsa, mounted His bull along with His divine consort (Goddess Pārvatī) and, surrounded (accompanied) by all the multitudes of evil spirits (forming His retinue), went to the region (Vaikuṇṭha) where Lord Viṣṇu (the Destroyer of the demon Madhu) has His (permanent) abode, in order to see Him. (1-2) Received by the Lord (Viṣṇu) with (due) reverence along with Umā (Goddess Pārvatī) and comfortably seated, the aforesaid Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) smilingly spoke to Śrī Hari as follows, paying homage to Him in return. (3)

श्रीमहादेव उवाच

देवदेव जगद्व्यापिञ्जगदीश जगन्मय । सर्वेषामपि भावानां त्वमात्मा हेतुरीश्वरः । ४ ।
आद्यन्तावस्य यन्मध्यमिदमन्यदहं बहिः । यतोऽव्ययस्य नैतानि तत् सत्यं ब्रह्म चिद् भवान् । ५ ।
तवैव चरणाभ्योजं श्रेयस्कामा निराशिषः । विसृज्योभयतः सङ्गं मुनयः समुपासते । ६ ।
त्वं ब्रह्म पूर्णममृतं विगुणं विशोकमानन्दमात्रमविकारमनन्यदन्यत् ।
विश्वस्य हेतुरुदयस्थितिसंयमानामात्मेश्वरश्च तदपेक्षतयानपेक्षः । ७ ।
एकस्त्वमेव सदसद् द्वयमद्वयं च स्वर्णं कृताकृतमिवेह न वस्तुभेदः ।
अज्ञानतस्त्वयि जनैर्विहितो विकल्पो यस्माद् गुणैर्व्यतिकरो निरुपाधिकस्य । ८ ।

त्वां ब्रह्म केचिदवयन्त्युत धर्ममेक एके परं सदसतोः पुरुषं परेशम् ।
 अन्येऽवयन्ति नवशक्तियुतं परं त्वां केचिन्महापुरुषमव्ययमात्मतन्त्रम् । १ ।
 नाहं परायुर्ब्रूष्यो न मरीचिमुख्या जानन्ति यद्विरचितं खलु सत्त्वसर्गाः ।
 यन्मायया मुषितचेतस ईश दैत्यमर्त्यादयः किमुत शश्वदभद्रवृत्ताः । १० ।
 स त्वं समीहितमदः स्थितिजन्मनाशं भूतेहितं च जगतो भवबन्धमोक्षौ ।
 वायुर्यथा विशति खं च चराचराख्यं सर्वं तदात्मकतयावगमोऽव्रन्स्ते । ११ ।

अवतारा मया दृष्टा रममाणस्य ते गुणैः । सोऽहं तद् द्रष्टुमिच्छामि यत् ते योषिद्वपुर्धृतम् । १२ ।
 येन सम्मोहिता दैत्याः पायिताश्चामृतं सुराः । तद् दिदृक्ष्व आयाताः परं कौतूहलं हि नः । १३ ।

Śrī Mahādeva (the great god) prayed: O god of gods, O Lord pervading and constituting the universe, O Ruler of the universe ! You are the Cause as well as the Controller of all substances, the (universal) Spirit. (4) You are that Brahma which is all truth and all consciousness; from which are traceable the beginning (appearance) and end (dissolution) as well as what they call the middle (life) of this (objective) universe, and (yet) to which—unchangeable as it is—(all) these (states) cannot be attributed; (nay,) which constitutes this (the visible universe) as well as the ego (the subject), that which lies outside (is enjoyed with the senses) as well as the other (the enjoyer). (5) Sages seeking blessedness and devoid of all (other) aspirations duly worship Your lotus-feet alone, giving up attachment to both (this and the other world). (6) You are the all-perfect, immortal, attributeless and immutable Brahma (Infinite), which is not only devoid of sorrow but is also of the nature of absolute bliss, and which, though without a second, is (yet) distinct (from everything else). You are (at the same time) the Cause of the appearance, continuance and dissolution of the universe, and the Ruler of all Jivas (embodied souls)—sought after by them (all), though seeking nothing (Yourself). (7) You alone are both cause and effect and neither of the two (being the ultimate cause of both). Gold moulded (into the shape of an ornament) and unmoulded (too) is gold (alone); there is no difference of substance between the two. It is through ignorance (of Your essential nature) that diversity has been attributed to You by men. For, diversity in You, who are free from (all) adjuncts, is due (only) to (Your association with) the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti). (8) Some (viz., the Vedāntis) know You to be Brahma (the Absolute); while others (the Mīmāṃsakas) recognize You as Dharma (virtue). Some (viz., the followers of the Sāṅkhya school of philosophy) regard You, the supreme Lord, as transcending both Prakṛti (matter) and Puruṣa (spirit); while others (the followers of the Pāñcarātra school of the Vaiṣṇavas) know You to be the Supreme endowed with the nine divine potencies (viz., Vimalā, Utkarṣiṇī, Jñāna, Kriyā, Yoga, Prahvī, Satyā, Isānā and Anugrahā) and (still) others (viz., the followers of the Yoga system of philosophy) recognize You to be the foremost Puruṣa, changeless and independent. (9) Neither I (Siva) nor Brahmā (whose life extends to a couple of Parārdhas or 31, 10, 40, 00, 00, 00, 000 human years) nor indeed sages headed by Marīci (one of the mind-born sons of Brahmā)—who are (all) creations of Sattva, (yet) whose understanding is obscured by Your Māyā— are able to know (the true nature of) the universe created by You (much less Your own essential nature), O Lord ! How, then, can the demons, human beings and others—who are ever engaged in activities of a Rājasika or Tāmasika character—know it ? (10) As such You, who are consciousness (itself), know Your own activity as well as that of (all) created beings, the appearance, continuance and dissolution of this universe, the bondage of mundane existence and release from it. (Nay, even) as the air pervades the multitudes of mobile and immobile beings as well as the sky, so do You pervade the whole universe, You being its very Soul. (11) Your descents (in the world of matter) when You carried on (Your) sport with the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti) have been seen by me. As such I long to behold that (bewitching) form of a damsel which was assumed by You (the other day). (12) Eager to behold that form by which the Daityas were greatly enchanted and the gods given nectar to drink, we have come (to You); for great is our curiosity (with regard to that). (13)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमर्थ्यर्थितो विष्णुर्भगवान् शूलपाणिना । प्रहस्य भावगम्भीरं गिरिशं प्रत्यभाषत । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Thus entreated by Rudra (the Wielder of a trident), Lord Viṣṇu heartily laughed a laugh which was pregnant with meaning and replied (as follows) to Lord Śiva (who has His abode on Mount Kailāsa). (14)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

कौतूहलाय दैत्यानां योषिद्वेषो मया कृतः । पश्यता सुरकार्याणि गते पीयूषभाजने । १५ ।

तत्तेऽहं दर्शयिष्यामि दिदृक्षोः सुरसत्तम । कामिनां बहु मन्तव्यं सङ्कल्पप्रभवोदयम् । १६ ।

The Lord said: The jar of nectar having disappeared (passed into the hands of the Daityas), the form of a (bewitching) damsel was assumed by me—for (exciting) wonder in the minds of the Daityas—having regard to the interests of the (outraged) gods (which could best be served in that way alone, woman being the most effective and appropriate means of infatuating and beguiling the treacherous and greedy Daityas, who had wrested the jar of nectar from the hands of Dhanvantari and thus deprived the fair-minded gods of their rightful share). (15) To You, O chief of the gods, who are eager to behold it, I shall (presently) reveal that form, which excites passion (in the hearts of males) and (as such) is (so) valuable in the eyes of libidinous souls. (16)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति ब्रुवाणो भगवांस्तत्रैवान्तरधीयत । सर्वतश्चारयंश्चक्षुर्भुव आस्ते सहोमया । १७ ।

ततो ददर्शोपवने वरस्त्रियं विचित्रपुष्पारुणपल्लवद्भुमे ।

विक्रीडतीं कन्दुकलीलया लसदुकूलपर्यस्तनितम्बमेखलाम् । १८ ।

आवर्तनोद्धर्तनकम्पितस्तनप्रकृष्टहारोरुभरैः पदे पदे ।

प्रभज्यमानामिव मध्यतश्चलत्पदप्रवालं नयतीं ततस्ततः । १९ ।

दिक्षु भ्रमत्कन्दुकचापलैर्भुशं प्रोद्विग्नतारायतलोललोचनाम् ।

स्वकर्णविभ्राजितकुण्डलोल्लसत्कपोलनीलालकमण्डिताननाम् । २० ।

श्लथद् दुकूलं कबरीं च विच्युतां सन्नह्यतीं वामकरेण वल्गुना ।

विनिघ्नतीमन्यकरेण कन्दुकं विमोहयन्तीं जगदात्ममायया । २१ ।

तां वीक्ष्य देव इति कन्दुकलीलयेषद्व्रीडास्फुटस्मितविसृष्टकटाक्षमुष्टः ।

स्त्रीप्रेक्षणप्रतिसमीक्षणविह्वलात्मा नात्मानमन्तिक उमां स्वगणांश्च वेद । २२ ।

तस्याः कराग्रात् स तु कन्दुको यदा गतो विदूरं तमनुव्रजत्स्त्रियाः ।

वासः ससूत्रं लघु मारुतोऽहरद् भवस्य देवस्य किलानुपश्यतः । २३ ।

एवं तां रुचिरापाङ्गीं दर्शनीयां मनोरमाम् । दृष्ट्वा तस्यां मनश्चक्रे विषज्जन्त्यां भवः किल । २४ ।

तयापहतविज्ञानस्तत्कृतस्मरविह्वलः । भवान्या अपि पश्यन्त्या गतहीस्तत्पदं ययौ । २५ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Saying thus, the Lord vanished on that very spot; while Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) waited (there) with Goddess Umā, casting (His) look all round. (17)

Presently, in a garden (before Him) full of trees rich in blossoms of various kinds and rosy leaves, He beheld a most beautiful damsel with a girdle lying about her hips, that were wrapped with a brilliant piece of linen, delightfully sporting with the movements of a ball. (18) She was so delicate that at every step she was getting broken as it were at the waist by the heavy weight of her (full) breasts, shaken by her bending and rising (with the downward and upward movements of the bounding ball), as well as of her exquisite (and solid) necklaces, and was taking her nimble feet—tender as young leaves—to and fro. (19) The pupils of her big and restless eyes looked very much agitated due to the unsteadiness of the ball, which was moving in every direction, and her countenance made lovelier by cheeks resplendent with a pair of ear-rings shining in her ears, as well as by dark tresses. (20) Tightening her loosening garment and disturbed braid with her lovely left hand and striking the ball with the other, she was enchanting the world by her own Māyā (ravishing power). (21) Looking intently at her, the divinity was seduced by her glances flung at Him with a covert smile induced by slight bashfulness because of her playing with the ball as aforesaid. His mind being overpowered by His gazing at her and being gazed on by her in return, He lost (all) consciousness of Himself, of (His Consort) Umā standing close by as well as of His own attendants. (22) When, in the meanwhile, the ball escaped from her fingers to a long distance, lo! the wind blew off the fine texture (wrapped about her loins) girdle and all, (even) as she ran after the ball, while the god Śiva (the Source of the universe) stood looking on. (23) Beholding that fair-eyed and soul-ravishing girl, (so) beautiful to look at, in such a condition, Lord Bhava actually gave His heart to her, who gazing at Him with sidelong glances (and thus appeared to be enamoured of Him). (24) Deprived by her of His good sense and overpowered with love evoked by her, He sought her presence unabashed even while Goddess Pārvatī (His own divine Spouse) stood looking on. (25)

सा तमायान्तमालोक्य विवस्त्रा ब्रीडिता भृशम् । निलीयमाना वृक्षेषु हसन्ती नान्वतिष्ठत् । २६ ।

तामन्वगच्छद् भगवान् भवः प्रमुषितेन्द्रियः । कामस्य च वशं नीतः करेणुमिव यूथपः । २७ ।

सोऽनुव्रज्यातिवेगेन गृहीत्वानिच्छतीं स्त्रियम् । केशबन्ध उपानीय बाहुभ्यां परिष्वजे । २८ ।

सोपगूढा भगवता करिणा करिणी यथा । इतस्ततः प्रसर्पन्ती विप्रकीर्णशिरोरुहा । २९ ।

आत्मानं मोचयित्वाङ्गं सुरर्षभभुजान्तरात् । प्राद्रवत्सा पृथुश्रोणी माया देवविनिर्मिता । ३० ।

तस्यासौ पदवीं रुद्रो विष्णोरद्भुतकर्मणः । प्रत्यपद्यत कामेन वैरिणेव विनिर्जितः । ३१ ।

तस्यानुधावतो रेतश्चस्कन्दामोघरेतसः । शुष्मिणो यूथपस्येव वासितामनु धावतः । ३२ ।

यत्र यत्रापतन्मह्यां रेतस्तस्य महात्मनः । तानि रूप्यस्य हेमश्च क्षेत्राण्यासन्महीपते । ३३ ।

सरित्सरस्सु शैलेषु वनेषूपवनेषु च । यत्र क्व चासन्नृषयस्तत्र संनिहितो हरः । ३४ ।

स्कन्ने रेतसि सोऽपश्यदात्मानं देवमायया । जडीकृतं नृपश्रेष्ठ संन्यवर्तत कश्मलात् । ३५ ।

अथावगतमाहात्म्य आत्मनो जगदात्मनः । अपरिज्ञेयवीर्यस्य न मेने तदु हान्द्रुतम् । ३६ ।

तमविक्रवमब्रीडमालक्ष्य मधुसूदनः । उवाच परमप्रीतो बिभ्रत् स्वां पौरुषीं तनुम् । ३७ ।

The girl, stripped as she was of her cloth, felt much ashamed when she beheld Śiva drawing near. Hiding behind the trees, she kept laughing, but did not tarry (anywhere). (26) The almighty Śiva, whose mind had been stolen (by that girl) and who was swayed by passion, followed her (even) as the leader of a herd of elephants would follow a she-elephant. (27) Pursuing the damsel with great speed and seizing her by braid, He brought her close to Him and folded her in His arms (even) though she was unwilling. (28) Hugged by the Lord (even) as a she-elephant is covered by an elephant, she wriggled on this side and that (in order to escape from His grip), her hair getting dishevelled (in that attempt). (29)

(Eventually) extricating herself from the embrace of Lord Śiva (the foremost of the gods), O dear one, the said girl, who was no other than Māyā (the deluding potency) conjured up by the Lord, ran away, even though she had large hips. (30) As though completely overpowered by Love, His enemy, the aforesaid Rudra followed the steps of Lord Viṣṇu of wonderful deeds in that form. (31) Even as He pursued her, as the ruttish leader of a herd of elephants would run after a she-elephant desiring copulation, the seed of Lord Śiva, possessed as He was of unfailing procreative energy, escaped. (32) The spots on earth where dropped the seed of that great soul came to be fields of silver and gold, O ruler of the globe! (33) (In the course of His pursuit of that girl) Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) was (found) present (near her) on the margin of rivers and lakes, on hill-tops, in forests and groves and wherever (else) sages dwelt*. (34) The seed having escaped, He perceived Himself befooled by the Lord's Māyā, O jewel among kings, and (now) completely recovered from infatuation. (35) Having forthwith realized the glory of Lord Viṣṇu, the Soul of the universe, (nay,) His very Self, whose power cannot be fully known, He did not consider the event (of His being befooled by the Lord's Māyā) as actually wonderful in any way. (36) Lord Viṣṇu (the Destroyer of the demon Madhu) was supremely delighted to find Lord Śiva unperturbed and unabashed and, resuming His (original) masculine form, spoke (as follows). (37)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

दिष्ट्या त्वं विबुधश्रेष्ठ स्वां निष्णामात्मना स्थितः । यन्मे स्त्रीरूपया स्वैरं मोहितोऽप्यङ्ग मायया । ३८ ।

को नु मेऽतितरेन्मायां विषक्तस्त्वदृते पुमान् । तांस्तान्विसृजतीं भावान्दुस्तरामकृतात्मभिः । ३९ ।

सेयं गुणमयी माया न त्वामभिभविष्यति । मया समेता कालेन कालरूपेण भागशः । ४० ।

The glorious Lord said: I am glad, O jewel among the gods, that You have by Yourself regained Your (unruffled) natural state even though, O dear one, You were easily duped by My Māyā (deluding potency). (38) Indeed what male, other than You, can, when (once) caught in it, overcome My Māyā, which creates various objects (of attraction) and cannot be easily got over by those who have not been able to control their mind. (39) This aforesaid Māyā, consisting of the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), which gets united with Me—appearing in the form of the Time-Spirit—in time (at the time of creation, preservation and dissolution of the universe) by parts (in the form of Rajas, Sattva and Tamas respectively) shall no longer overpower You. (40)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं भगवता राजन् श्रीवत्साङ्केन सत्कृतः । आमन्त्र्य तं परिक्रम्य सगणः स्वालयं ययौ । ४१ ।

आत्मांशभूतां तां मायां भवानीं भगवान्भवः । शंसतामृषिमुख्यानां प्रीत्याऽऽचम्य भारत । ४२ ।

अपि व्यपश्यस्त्वमजस्य मायां परस्य पुंसः परदेवतायाः ।

अहं कलानामृषभो विमुह्ये ययावशोऽन्ये किमुतास्वतन्त्राः । ४३ ।

यं मामपृच्छस्त्वमुपेत्य योगात् समासहस्रान्त उपारतं वै ।

स एष साक्षात् पुरुषः पुराणो न यत्र कालो विशते न वेदः । ४४ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Thus kindly treated (embraced) by Lord Viṣṇu (bearing the mark of Śrīvatsa—in the shape of white curly hair—on His bosom), O king, and asking His leave and walking round Him (as a mark of respect), Lord Śiva, accompanied by His retinue, returned to His own abode (Kailāsa). (41) Presently, in the midst of the foremost of seers,

* By visiting in the form of that bewitching girl the hermitages of saints and sages while being pursued by Lord Śiva, Lord Viṣṇu indirectly showed to the sages how difficult it is to conquer the charms of a woman, which even Śaṅkara, the crown-jewel of Yogis, failed to resist, much less others, who are an easy prey to lust.

who stood glorifying Him, Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) lovingly spoke to His Spouse (as follows) about the aforesaid Māyā, the (divine) energy of Lord Viṣṇu (His own self). (42) "Did you behold with your own eyes the deluding potency of Lord Viṣṇu (the birthless One), the highest Person, the supreme Deity, under whose influence (even) I, the foremost of His rays, helplessly fell a prey to delusion! What wonder, then, that others, who are not masters of their self, should do so. (43) He is actually the same eternal Person about whom you inquired, approaching me when I had just ceased from deep meditation at the end of a thousand (celestial) years, (nay,) whom Time cannot set bounds to nor can the Veda comprehend. (44)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति तेऽभिहितस्तात विक्रमः शार्ङ्गधन्वनः । सिन्धोर्निर्मथने येन धृतः पृष्ठे महाचलः । ४५ ।

एतन्मुहुः कीर्तयतोऽनुशृण्वतो न रिष्यते जातु समुद्यमः क्वचित् ।

यदुत्तमश्लोकगुणानुवर्णनं समस्तसंसारपरिश्रमापहम् । ४६ ।

असदविषयमङ्गिं भावगम्यं प्रपन्नानमृतममरवर्यानाशयत् सिन्धुमथ्यम् ।

कपटयुवतिवेषो मोहयन्त्यः सुरारीस्तमहमुपसृतानां कामपूरं नतोऽस्मि । ४७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे शङ्करमोहनं नाम द्वादशोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: In this way has been narrated to you, O dear one, the story of the exploits of Lord Viṣṇu (the Wielder of the Śārṅga bow), by whom (in the form of the divine Tortoise) was supported on His back the huge mountain (called Mandara) during the churning of the ocean (of milk). (45) The exertion of a man reciting or listening to this story again and again never goes in vain anywhere. For, a narration of the virtues of Lord Viṣṇu, enjoying excellent renown, relieves the entire fatigue of birth and death. (46) I bow to Him who grants the wishes of those that approach Him for shelter and who, having assumed by His illusive power the form of a (bewitching) damsel and deluding the demons (the enemies of the gods), gave nectar, churned out of the ocean (of milk), to drink to the foremost of the gods, that had sought refuge in His feet—inaccessible to the vile and attainable through devotion (alone). (47)

Thus ends the twelfth discourse entitled "The Infatuation of Lord Śaṅkara" in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIII

An account of the (concluding eight) Manvantaras

श्रीशुक उवाच

मनुर्विवस्वतः पुत्रः श्राद्धदेव इति श्रुतः । सप्तमो वर्तमानो यस्तदपत्यानि मे शृणु । १ ।

इक्ष्वाकुर्नभगश्चैव धृष्टः शर्यातिरेव च । नरिष्यन्तोऽथ नाभागः सप्तमो दिष्ट उच्यते । २ ।

करुषश्च पृषधश्च दशमो वसुमान्मृतः । मनोर्विवस्वतस्यैते दश पुत्राः परन्तप । ३ ।

आदित्या वसवो रुद्रा विश्वेदेवा मरुद्गणाः । अश्विनावृभवो राजन्निन्द्रस्तेषां पुरन्दरः । ४ ।

कश्यपोऽत्रिर्वसिष्ठश्च विश्वामित्रोऽथ गौतमः । जमदग्निर्भरद्वाज इति सप्तर्षयः स्मृताः । ५ ।
 अत्रापि भगवज्जन्म कश्यपाददितेरभूत् । आदित्यानामवरजो विष्णुर्वामिनरूपधृक् । ६ ।
 संक्षेपतो मयोक्तानि सप्त मन्वन्तराणि ते । भविष्याण्यथ वक्ष्यामि विष्णोः शक्त्यान्वितानि च । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka began again: The seventh, the present Manu is a son of Vivaswān (the sun-god), who is known by the name of Śrāddhadeva. (Now) hear from me (the names) of his sons. (1) They are Ikṣwāku and Nabhaga, Dhṛṣṭa and Śaryāti, Nariṣyanta and Nābhāga; and the seventh is called Diṣṭa. (2) Add to them Karuṣa and Pṛṣadhra and the tenth is remembered by the name of Vasumān. These are the ten sons of the Vaivaswata Manu, O tormentor of foes! (3) The (twelve) Ādityas (the sons of Aditi, the gods successively presiding over the sun month after month), the (eight) Vasus, the (eleven) Rudras, the (ten) Viśwedevas, the (forty-nine) Maruts (wind-gods), the two Aświns (the twin physicians of the gods) and the (three) Ṛbhus are the (seven orders of) gods (in office), O Parikṣit, Purandara being (the name of) their Indra (ruler). (4) Kaśyapa, Atri and Vasiṣṭha, Viśwāmitra, Gautama, Jamadagni and Bharadwāja are recognized as the seven (principal) seers. (5) In this (the present) Manvantara too the descent of the Lord took place from the sage Kaśyapa (a lord of the created beings) and (his spouse) Aditi. The youngest of the Ādityas, who assumed the form of a dwarf, is Lord Viṣṇu (Himself). (6) Thus (the first) seven Manvantaras have been briefly described by me to you. I shall presently tell you of the coming (seven) as well, which are (likewise) connected with the descents of the Lord. (7)

विवस्वतश्च द्वे जाये विश्वकर्मसुते उभे । संज्ञा छाया च राजेन्द्र ये प्रागभिहिते तव । ८ ।
 तृतीयां वडवामेके तासां संज्ञासुतास्त्रयः । यमो यमी श्राद्धदेवश्छायायाश्च सुताञ्छृणु । ९ ।
 सावर्णिस्तपती कन्या भार्या संवरणस्य या । शनैश्चरस्तृतीयोऽभूदश्विनौ वडवात्मजौ । १० ।
 अष्टमेऽन्तर आयाते सावर्णिर्भविता मनुः । निर्मोकविरजस्काद्याः सावर्णितनया नृप । ११ ।
 तत्र देवाः सुतपसो विरजा अमृतप्रभाः । तेषां विरोचनसुतो बलिरिन्द्रो भविष्यति । १२ ।
 दत्त्वेमां याचमानाय विष्णवे यः पदत्रयम् । राद्धमिन्द्रपदं हित्वा ततः सिद्धिमवाप्स्यति । १३ ।
 योऽसौ भगवता वद्धः प्रीतेन सुतले पुनः । निवेशितोऽधिके स्वर्गाद्धनुःस्ते स्वराडिव । १४ ।
 गालवो दीप्तिमान् रामो द्रोणपुत्रः कृपस्तथा । ऋष्यशृङ्गः पितास्माकं भगवान्बादरायणः । १५ ।
 इमे सप्तर्षयस्तत्र भविष्यन्ति स्वयोगतः । इदानीमासते राजन् स्वे स्व आश्रममण्डले । १६ ।
 देवगुह्यात्सरस्वत्यां सार्वभौम इति प्रभुः । स्थानं पुरन्दराद्धत्वा बलये दास्यतीश्वरः । १७ ।

Now, there were two wives of Vivaswān, both daughters of Viśwakarmā (the architect of heaven), Saṁjñā and Chāyā (by name), O king of kings, that have already* been spoken of (by me) to you. (8) Some refer to Vaḍavā as the third.† Of these (three), Yama (the god of retribution), Yamī (sister of Yama, the deity presiding over the river Yamunā and married‡ by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and Śrāddhadeva are the three progeny of Saṁjñā. Also hear (the names) of the sons of Chāyā. (9) They are Sāvarṇi (a future Manu) and a daughter, Tapatī (by name), who became the wife of Saṁvaraṇa and Śanaiścara (the deity presiding over the planet of the same name, now known as Saturn) came to be the third; while the two Aświns are the sons of Vaḍavā. (10) When the eighth Manvantara will have commenced Sāvarṇi will

* Vide VI. Vi. 40-41.

† According to Śuka, however, it was Saṁjñā herself who took the form of a Vaḍavā (mare) and gave birth to the two Aświns—vide VI. vi. 40.

‡ Vide. X. 58. 17—23, 29.

become the Manu (in relation to that Manvantara); and Nirmoka, Virajaska and others will be the sons of Sāvārṇi, O protector of human beings! (11) In that (the eighth) Manvantara, the Sutapās, (the Virajas and the Amṛtaprabhas will be the (three orders of) gods (in office); and the demon Bali, the son of Virocana (Pahrāda's son) will be their Indra (ruler). (12) Having (already) gifted (in the current Manvantara the whole of) this earth to Lord Viṣṇu (in the form of the divine Dwarf) when the latter asked for land measuring (not more than) three paces, and relinquishing the office of Indra (which will be) attained by him (through the grace of the Lord in the next Manvantara), he will then achieve perfection (in the form of final beatitude). (13) He is the same Bali who was (first) bound by the Lord as a token of pleasures and then installed in (the subterranean region of) Sutala, which is (even) richer than heaven, and where he continues to this day like (another) Indra.* (14) Gālava, Dīptimān, Rāma (Parasūrāma), Aśwatthāmā (the son of Droṇācārya, a preceptor of the Kauravas), Kṛpācārya (another preceptor of the Kauravas), Ṛṣyaśṛṅga (who officiated at the sacrifice performed by Emperor Daśaratha for obtaining progeny) and our father, the divine Vedavyāsa (who has his abode in a grove of jujube trees)—these will be the seven seers in that (the eighth) Manvantara by virtue of their Yogic attainments. At present they are (all) living each in his own hermitage. (15-16) Sprung from the loins of Devaguhyā through Sarasvatī, the Lord will be known as Sārvabhauma. Wreathing the throne (of heaven) from Purandara (the present Indra), the all-powerful Lord will bestow it on Bali. (17)

नवमो दक्षसावर्णिर्मनुर्वरुणसम्भवः । भूतकेतुर्दक्षकेतुरित्याद्यास्तत्सुता नृप । १८ ।

पारा मरीचिगर्भाद्या देवा इन्द्रोऽद्भुतः स्मृतः । द्युतिमत्प्रमुखास्त्र भविष्यन्त्यृषयस्ततः । १९ ।

आयुष्मतोऽम्बुधारायामृषभो भगवत्कला । भविता येन संराद्धां त्रिलोकीं भोक्ष्यतेऽद्भुतः । २० ।

Dakṣasāvarṇi, son of Varuṇa (the god of water) will be the ninth Manu. Bhūtaketu, Dīptaketu and others will be his sons, O protector of human beings. (18) The Pāras, the Marīcigarbhas and so on will be the (orders of) gods and Adbhuta has been declared to be their Indra (ruler). Again, Dyutimān and others† will be the (seven) seers in that Manvantara. (19) Sprung from (the loins of) Āyusmān through Ambudhārā, an emanation of the Lord will appear under the name of Ṛṣabha. (And) Adbhuta will rule over the three worlds conquered (on his behalf) by (the said) Ṛṣabha. (20)

दशमो ब्रह्मसावर्णिरुपश्लोकसुतो महान् । तत्सुता भूरिषेणाद्या हविष्मत्प्रमुखा द्विजाः । २१ ।

हविष्मान्सुकृतिः सत्यो जयो मूर्तिस्तदा द्विजाः । सुवासनविरुद्धाद्या देवाः शम्भुः सुरेश्वरः । २२ ।

विष्वक्सेनो विषूच्यां तु शम्भोः सख्यं करिष्यति । जातः स्वांशेन भगवान्गृहे विश्वसृजो विभुः । २३ ।

The great Brahmasāvarṇi, son of Upaśloka, will be the tenth Manu. Bhūrīṣeṇa and others will be his sons and Haviṣmān and so on will be the (seven) Brāhmaṇa sages. (21) Haviṣmān, Sukṛti, Satya, Jaya and Mūrti will be (the names of some of) the Brāhmaṇa sages in that Manvantara. The Suvāsanās and the Viruddhas will be the (orders of) gods (in office) and Śambhu will be the Indra (the ruler of the gods). (22) Born with a part of His divine essence in the house of Viśvasṛk through Viśūcī under the name of Viṣwakṣeṇa, the almighty Lord will actually make friends with Śambhu (the then Indra). (23)

मनुर्वै धर्मसावर्णिरिकादशम आत्मवान् । अनागतास्तत्सुताश्च सत्यधर्मादयो दश । २४ ।

विहङ्गमाः कामगमा निर्वाणरुचयः सुराः । इन्द्रश्च वैधृतस्तेषामृषयश्चारुणादयः । २५ ।

* A reference to the story of Bali's overthrow, told at length in Discourses XIX to XXIII below, will show that the Lord divested Bali of his sovereignty of the three worlds only in order to shower His grace on him.

† According to the Harivaṁśa, Savana, Dyutimān, Harvya, Vasu, Medhātithi, Jyotiṣmān and Satya are the names of the seven seers holding office in the ninth Manvantara.

आर्यकस्य सुतस्तत्र धर्मसेतुरिति स्मृतः । वैधृतायां हरेरंशस्त्रिलोकीं धारयिष्यति । २६ ।

The high-minded Dharmasāvarṇi will be the eleventh Manu; while Satyadharmā and others are going to be his ten sons. (24) the Vihaṅgamas, the Kāmagamas and the Nirvāṇarucis are going to be the (orders of) gods (in office) and Vaidhṛta will be their Indra (ruler); while Aruṇa and others * will be the seers. (25) A part manifestation of Śrī Hari, born of Vaidhṛtā through Aryaka, and known by the name of Dharmasetu, will maintain the three worlds. (26)

भविता रुद्रसावर्णी राजन् द्वादशमो मनुः । देववानुपदेवश्च देवश्रेष्ठादयः सुताः । २७ ।

ऋतधामा च तत्रेन्द्रो देवाश्च हरितादयः । ऋषयश्च तपोमूर्तिस्तपस्व्याग्नीध्रकादयः । २८ ।

स्वधामारव्यो हरेरंशः साधयिष्यति तन्मनोः । अन्तरं सत्यसहसः सूनृतायाः सुतो विभुः । २९ ।

Rudrasāvarṇi, O king, will be the twelfth Manu; and Devavān, Upadeva, Devaśreṣṭha and others will be his sons. (27) Again, Ṛtadhāmā will be (the name of) the Indra and the Haritas and so on will be the (orders of) gods. And Tapomūrti, Tapaswi, Āgnīdhṛaka and others will be the (seven) seers. (28) The almighty son of Satyasahā and Sūnṛtā, Swadhām by name, a part manifestation of Śrī Hari, will protect that Manvantara. (29)

मनुस्त्रयोदशो भाव्यो देवसावर्णिरात्मवान् । चित्रसेनविचित्राद्या देवसावर्णिदिहजाः । ३० ।

देवाः सुकर्मसुत्रामसंज्ञा इन्द्रो दिवस्पतिः । निर्मोकतत्त्वदर्शाद्या भविष्यन्त्यृषयस्तदा । ३१ ।

देवहोत्रस्य तनय उपहर्ता दिवस्पतेः । योगेश्वरो हरेरंशो बृहत्यां सम्भविष्यति । ३२ ।

The high-souled Devasāvarṇi will be the thirteenth Manu; (and) Citrasena, Vicitra and others will be the sons of Devasāvarṇi. (30) The (orders of) gods bearing the names of Sukarmās and Sutrāmās will remain in office, while Diwaspati will hold the office of Indra (Even so) Nirmoka, Tattvadarśa, and so on will be the (seven) Ṛṣis † in that Manvantara. (31) A part manifestation of Śrī Hari, Yogeśvara (by name), will be born of Bṛhatī as the son of Devahotra and will (prove to) be the benefactor of Indra (the ruler of heaven). (32)

मनुर्वा इन्द्रसावर्णिश्चतुर्दशम एष्यति । उरुगम्भीरबुद्ध्याद्या इन्द्रसावर्णिवीर्यजाः । ३३ ।

पवित्राश्चाक्षुषा देवाः शुचिरिन्द्रो भविष्यति । अग्निर्बाहुः शुचिः शुद्धो मागधाद्यास्तपस्विनः । ३४ ।

सत्रायणस्य तनयो बृहद्भानुस्तदा हरिः । वितानायां महाराज क्रियातनून्वितायिता । ३५ ।

Indeed Indrasāvarṇi will come to be the fourteenth Manu; while Uru, Gambhīrabuddha and so on will be the sons of Indrasāvarṇi. (33) The Pavitras and the Cākṣuṣas will be the (orders of) gods and Śuci will be (the name of) the Indra. (Even so) Agnibāhu, Śuci, Śuddha, Magadha and so on will be the (seven) ascetics (sages ‡ in office). (34) Born as the son of Satrāyaṇa, Bṛhadbhānu (by name), through Vitānā, O great king, Śrī Hari will propagate the rituals. (35)

राजंश्चतुर्दशैतानि त्रिकालानुगतानि ते । प्रोक्तान्येभिर्मितः कल्पो युगसाहस्रपर्ययः । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे मन्वन्तरानुवर्णनं नाम त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः । १३ ।

O king, these fourteen Manvantaras—covering the past, present and future—have been

* The Harivaṁśa mentions the following as the seven Ṛṣis holding office in the eleventh Manvantara: Haviṣmār, Vapuṣmān, Aruṇa, Anagha, Urudhī, Niścara and Agnītejā.

† Nirmoka, Tattvadarśī, Niṣkampa, Nirutsuka, Dhṛtīmān, Avyaya and Sutapā are the names of the seven Ṛṣis of the thirteenth Manvantara according to the Harivaṁśa.

‡ The seven seers in the fourteenth Manvantara, according to the Harivaṁśa, are: Āgnīdhṛa, Māgadha, Agnibāhu, Śuci, Mukta, Śuddha and Ajita.

described to you. It is by these that a Kalpa—consisting of a thousand revolutions of the (four) Yugas (Satya, Tretā, Dwāpara and Kali)—is measured. (36)

Thus ends the thirteenth discourse entitled "A description of the (concluding eight) Manvantaras", in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIV

Functions of a Manu and other functionaries holding office in his administration

राजोवाच

मन्वन्तरेषु भगवन् यथा मन्वादयस्त्वमे । यस्मिन्कर्मणि ये येन नियुक्तास्तद्वदस्व मे । १ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : (Pray,) tell me this, O worshipful one, as to how and which of these, Manu and others, are employed in what work and by whom in the (various) Manvantaras. (1)

ऋषिरुवाच

मनवो मनुपुत्राश्च मुनयश्च महीपते । इन्द्राः सुरगणाश्चैव सर्वे पुरुषशासनाः । २ ।
यज्ञादयो याः कथिताः पौरुष्यस्तनवो नृप । मन्वादयो जगद्यात्रां नयन्त्याभिः प्रचोदिताः । ३ ।
चतुर्युगान्ते कालेन ग्रस्ताञ्छ्रुतिगणान्यथा । तपसा ऋषयोऽपश्यन्त्यतो धर्मः सनातनः । ४ ।
ततो धर्मं चतुष्पादं मनवो हरिणोदिताः । युक्ताः सञ्चारयन्त्यद्वा स्वे स्वे काले मही नृप । ५ ।
पालयन्ति प्रजापाला यावदन्तं विभागशः । यज्ञभागभुजो देवा ये च तत्रान्विताश्च तैः । ६ ।
इन्द्रो भगवता दत्तां त्रैलोक्यश्रियमूर्जिताम् । भुञ्जानः पाति लोकांस्त्रीन् कामं लोके प्रवर्षति । ७ ।
ज्ञानं चानुयुगं ब्रूते हरिः सिद्धस्वरूपधृक् । ऋषिरूपधरः कर्म योगं योगेशरूपधृक् । ८ ।
सर्गं प्रजेशरूपेण दसून्हन्त्यात् स्वराड्वपुः । कालरूपेण सर्वेषामभावाय पृथग्गुणः । ९ ।
स्तूयमानो जनैरेभिर्मायया नामरूपया । विमोहितात्मभिर्नानादर्शनैर्न च दृश्यते । १० ।

The sage Śuka replied : The Manus and the sons of a Manu, the sages and the Indras, as well as the (diverse) orders of gods, O ruler of the earth, are all under the (direct) command of the supreme Person (in the form of His part manifestations in each Manvantara). (2) Whatever forms (part manifestations) of the supreme Person, Lord Yajña and so on, have been mentioned (by me before), O protector of men—directed by these, the Manu and others carry on the administration of the universe. (3) At the end of (each round of) the four Yugas, the seers by virtue of their asceticism discover as they are (and teach) the collections of the Vedic texts, swallowed by Time, with (the help of) which (the truth of) the eternal religion is perceived. (4) Instructed by Śrī Hari (dwelling in their heart) and (fully) alert (in their mind), the Manus then directly propagate on the earth in their own time piety with (all) its four limbs (asceticism, purity of mind and body, compassion and truth), O protector of human beings! (5)

The protectors of created beings (viz., the sons of a Manu along with their descendants from generation to generation) protect religion (as well as the earth) till the end (of a Manvantara) by parts (each generation carrying on the work of protection for a part of the Manvantara alone). And the gods along with those (others, viz., the Ṛṣis, the Pitṛs, human beings and other living beings) that are connected with the Performance of (the five great) sacrifices enjoy a share in the sacrificial offerings (and thus they too protect religion). (6) Enjoying the limitless wealth of (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region), conferred (on him) by the Lord, Indra protects those three worlds and sends down profuse showers in the world according to his will. (7) Nay, assuming the form of Siddhas (perfect beings like the sage Sanaka and his three brothers—Sanandana, Sanātana and Sanatkumāra) Śrī Hari imparts wisdom in every Yuga; taking the form of Ṛṣis (seers like the sage Yājñavalkya) He preaches (the cult of) rituals and, appearing in the form of Masters of Yoga (like Dattātreya) it is He who teaches (the methods of) Yoga (to the world). (8) (Appearing) in the form of lords of created beings (like the sage Marīci), He carries on creation; taking the form of an independent ruler, He destroys robbers; (and) assuming diverse characteristics (such as heat and cold) in the form of Time, it is He who makes for the disappearance of all. (9) Though depicted (diversely) by these (so-called learned) people— whose understanding is (as a matter of fact) deluded by Māyā, consisting of (so many) names and forms— through different systems of philosophy, the Lord is (actually) not perceived (by them). (10)

एतत् कल्पविकल्पस्य प्रमाणं परिकीर्तितम् । यत्र मन्वन्तराण्याहुश्चतुर्दश पुराविदः । ११ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः । १४ ।

The aforesaid has been precisely declared to be the duration of a minor Kalpa (covering a day of Brahmā and) forming part of a Mahākalpa (covering the whole lifetime of Brahmā). In this Kalpa, those well-versed in the ancient lore say, are comprised fourteen Manvantaras. (11)

Thus ends the fourteenth discourse in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XV

Conquest of heaven by Bali

राजोवाच

बलेः पदत्रयं भूमेः कस्माद्भरिरयाचत । भूत्वेश्वरः कृपणवल्लब्धार्थोऽपि बबन्ध तम् । १ ।

एतद् वेदितुमिच्छामो महत् कौतूहलं हि नः । यज्ञेश्वरस्य पूर्णस्य बन्धनं चाप्यनागसः । २ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted: (Himself) being the almighty Lord, wherefore did Śrī Hari ask, like a miserable person, three paces of land of the demon Bali? (And) why did He bind him even though He had attained the object sought for (by Him)? (1) This we desire to know (from you); for the very fact that the Lord of sacrifices, who is perfect (in Himself), should have asked something of Bali and then bound the innocent demon is a great wonder to us. (2)

श्रीशुक उवाच

पराजितश्रीरसुभिश्च हापितो हीन्द्रेण राजन् भृगुभिः स जीवितः ।
 सर्वात्मना तानभजद् भृगून्बलिः शिष्यो महात्मार्यनिवेदनेन । ३ ।
 तं ब्राह्मणा भृगवः प्रीयमाणा अयाजयन्विश्वजिता त्रिणाकम् ।
 जिगीषमाणं विधिनाभिषिच्य महाभिषेकेण महानुभावाः । ४ ।
 ततो रथः काञ्चनपट्टनद्धो हयाश्च हर्यश्चतुरङ्गवर्णाः ।
 ध्वजश्च सिंहेन विराजमानो हुताशनादास हविर्भिरिष्टात् । ५ ।
 धनुश्च दिव्यं पुरटोपनद्धं तूणावरिक्तो कवचं च दिव्यम् ।
 पितामहस्तस्य ददौ च मालामम्लानपुष्पां जलजं च शुक्रः । ६ ।
 एवं स विप्रार्जितयोधनार्थस्तैःकल्पितस्वस्त्ययनोऽथ विप्रान् ।
 प्रदक्षिणीकृत्य कृतप्रणामः प्रह्लादमामन्त्र्य नमश्चकार । ७ ।

अथारुह्य रथं दिव्यं भृगुदत्तं महारथः । सुस्त्रग्धरोऽथ संनह्य धन्वी खड्गी धृतेषुधिः । ८ ।
 हेमाङ्गदलसद्बाहुः स्फुरन्मकरकुण्डलः । राज रथमारूढो धिष्यस्थ इव हव्यवाद् । ९ ।
 तुल्यैश्वर्यबलश्रीभिः स्वयूथैर्देत्ययूथपैः । पिबद्भिरिव खं दृग्भिर्दहद्भिः परिधीनिव । १० ।
 वृतो विकर्षन् महीमासुरीं ध्वजिनीं विभुः । ययाविन्द्रपुरीं सृद्धां कम्पयन्निव रोदसी । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka replied: Since Bali, who had been worsted (in battle) and (thus) divested of (his royal) splendour (nay,) even deprived of (his) life by Indra, O Parīkṣit, was brought back to life by the Bhṛguṣ (Śukrācārya and other descendants of the sage Bhṛgu), that high-souled demon, their disciple, served the Bhṛguṣ with all his being by offering (them) all that they desired. (3) Having consecrated him with a grand ablution (appropriate to Indra) conducted with due ceremony (as laid down in the Bahvrca Brāhmaṇa of the Ṛgveda), those Brāhmaṇas of the Bhṛgu race, (who were all) possessed of extraordinary power and favourably disposed (towards their disciple), helped him propitiate the Lord by means of a Viśwajit sacrifice (in the course of which one is required to give away all one's possessions), anxious as he was to conquer (the dominion of) heaven. (4) Thereupon arose from the fire, worshipped by means of sacrificial offerings, a chariot covered all over with plates of gold as well as horses of the same colour as those of Indra (viz., green) and an ensign adorned with the emblem of a lion, also an ethereal bow plated with gold, a pair of quivers containing an inexhaustible stock of arrows and an ethereal coat of mail (too). Again, his grandfather (Pahrāda) gave him a wreath of never-fading flowers and Śukra (his preceptor), a conch. (5-6) Thus equipped with the necessities of war procured (for him) by the Brāhmaṇas (the Bhṛguṣ) and having the (necessary) auspicious rites performed (for him) by them, Bali forthwith went round the Brāhmaṇas keeping them (always) to his right (as a mark of respect); and, having bowed low to them, he asked leave of Pahrāda and saluted him. (7) Presently mounting the ethereal chariot bestowed (on him through the sacrifice) by the Bhṛguṣ, Bali (the great car-warrior) wore the excellent garland (offered to him by Pahrāda); and putting on the armour, he then armed himself with a bow and sword and (further) equipped himself with a quiver. (8) Mounted on the chariot with His arms resplendent with gold armlets, and adorned with radiant alligator-shaped ear-rings, he shone like a fire burning in the sacrificial pit. (9) Surrounded by his own retinue in the person of Daitya generals—generals who were equal to him in wealth, strength and splendour and were drinking in the sky and burning the quarters as it were with their eyes—and leading a huge army of the Asuras, the powerful Bali marched against the most prosperous capital of Indra (in heaven), shaking as it were earth and heaven (both). (10-11)

रम्यामुपवनोद्यानैः श्रीमद्भिर्नन्दनादिभिः । कूजद्विहङ्गमिथुनैर्गायन्तमधुव्रतैः । १२ ।

प्रवालफलपुष्पोरुभारशाखामरद्रुमैः । हंससारसचक्राह्वकारण्डवकुलाकुलाः । १३ ।

नलिन्यो यत्र क्रीडन्ति प्रमदाः सुरसेविताः । १३ ।

आकाशगङ्गा देव्या वृतां परिखभूतया । प्राकारेणाग्निवर्णेन साङ्गालेनोन्नतेन च । १४ ।

रुक्मपट्टकपाटैश्च द्वारैः स्फटिकगोपुरैः । जुष्टां विभक्तप्रपथां विश्वकर्मविनिर्मिताम् । १५ ।

सभाचत्वररथ्याढ्यां विमानैर्न्यर्बुदैर्युताम् । शृङ्गाटकैर्मणिमयैर्व्रविद्रुमवेदिभिः । १६ ।

यत्र नित्यवयोरूपाः श्यामा विरजवाससः । भ्राजन्ते रूपवन्नायों ह्यर्चिर्भिरिव वह्नयः । १७ ।

सुरस्त्रीकेशविभ्रष्टनवसौगन्धिकस्रजाम् । यत्रामोदमुपादाय मार्ग आवाति मारुतः । १८ ।

हेमजालाक्षनिर्गच्छद्भूमेनागुरुगन्धिना । पाण्डुरेण प्रतिच्छन्नमार्गे यान्ति सुरप्रियाः । १९ ।

मुक्तावितानैर्मणिहेमकेतुभिर्नापताकावलभीभिरावृताम् । १९ ।

शिखण्डिपारावतभृङ्गनादितां वैमानिकस्त्रीकलगीतमङ्गलाम् । २० ।

मृदङ्गशङ्खानकदुन्दुभिस्वनैः सतालवीणापुरजष्टिवेणुभिः । २० ।

नृत्यैः सवाद्यैरुपदेवगीतकैर्मनोरमां स्वप्रभया जितप्रभाम् । २१ ।

यां न व्रजन्त्यधर्मिष्ठाः खला भूतद्रुहः शठाः । मानिनः कामिनो लुब्धा एभिर्हीना व्रजन्ति यत् । २२ ।

तां देवधानीं स वरुथिनीपतिर्बहिः समन्ताद् रुद्धे पृतन्यया । २२ ।

आचार्यदत्तं जलजं महास्वनं दध्मौ प्रयुञ्जन्भयमिन्द्रयोषिताम् । २३ ।

The city looked charming with (its) splendid orchards and gardens, such as Nandana, crowded with warbling pairs of birds and black bees humming in intoxication, and full of celestial trees whose boughs were overloaded with leaves, fruits and flowers. (In those gardens) there were (a number of) lotus ponds—abounding with swans, cranes, Cakrawākas (ruddy geese) and Kāraṇḍavas (ducks)—in which sport celestial women accompanied by gods. (12-13) It is hemmed in by the worshipful heavenly Gaṅgā (Mandākinī) by way of a moat, as well as by a high fortification wall of gold furnished with watch-towers (here and there). (14) Built by Viśwakarmā (the architect of heaven), it is provided with entrances (of houses) whose doors are plated with gold, and with city gates made of crystal, and has its roads well-arranged. (15) It is rich in public halls, quadrangles and streets and is full of numberless mansions as well as of cross roads paved with gems and containing platforms of diamonds and corals at the centre. (16) Lovely women of everlasting youth and unfading beauty, clad in spotless raiment and decked with jewels, shine there as fires with flames. (17) Through every pathway in that city blow breezes wafting the fragrance of fresh wreaths of white water-lilies dropped from the locks of celestial ladies. (18) Celestial nymphs there walk through paths covered with yellowish fume escaping through air-holes of gold and bearing the fragrance of (burning) aloe-wood. (19) It is shaded (here and there) with canopies of pearls, flags with staffs of gems and gold and balconies with smaller flags of various colours fixed in them; is resonant with the noise of peacocks, pigeons and black bees and wears a gala appearance due to the sweet songs of celestial ladies. (20) (Nay,) it delights the mind of the people by the sound of clay tomtoms, conchs, drums and kettledrums; by (the musical sound of) lutes, wooden tomtoms, Ṛṣṭis (another musical instrument) and flutes accompanied with (that of) cymbals, as well as by dances and the songs to the accompaniment of musical instruments of demigods (Gandharvas and others); and outshines the deity presiding over splendour by its brilliance. (21) Those who are extremely unrighteous, wicked, fraudulent, proud, lustful and greedy and are enemies of created beings cannot enter it:

(only) those who are free from these defects find access to it.(22) Bali, the (supreme) commander of his forces, besieged the aforesaid city of the gods on all sides by his army from without and blew his sonorous conch given (to him) by his preceptor (Śukra), infusing fear into the ladies (of the household) of Indra. (23)

मघवांस्तमभिप्रेत्य बलेः परममुद्यमम् । सवदेवगणोपेतो गुरुमेतदुवाच ह । २४ ।

भगवन्नुद्यमो भूयान्बलेनः पूर्ववैरिणः । अविषह्यमिमं मन्ये केनासीत्तेजसोर्जितः । २५ ।

नैनं कश्चित् कुतो वापि प्रतिव्योढुमधीश्वरः । पिबन्निव मुखेनेदं लिहन्निव दिशो दश ।

दहन्निव दिशो दृग्भिः संवर्ताग्निरिवोत्थितः । २६ ।

ब्रूहि कारणमेतस्य दुर्धर्षत्वस्य मद्विप्रोः । ओजः सहो बलं तेजो यत एतत्समुद्यमः । २७ ।

Perceiving it to be the supreme effort of Bali, Maghavān (Indra), accompanied by all the heavenly hosts, approached the sage Brhaspati (his preceptor) and spoke as follows:— (24) "The undertaking of Bali, our old enemy, is great, O worshipful one ! (To tell you the truth,) I account him irresistible; by what power has he become so strong? (25) (In fact,) none is able on any account whatsoever to beat him back. As though drinking in this (universe) with his mouth and licking the ten directions (with his tongue) and burning the (four) quarters with his (fire-shot) eyes, he has sprung (upon us) like the fire of final dissolution.(26) (Pray,) point out (to me) the cause of such formidableness of my foe, from which have proceeded the strength of his organs, mind and body as well as his glory, whence this thorough effort (on his part) has been possible. (27)

गुरुवाच

जानामि मघवच्छत्रोन्नतेरस्य कारणम् । शिष्यायोपभृतं तेजो भृगुभिर्ब्रह्मवादिभिः । २८ ।

भवद्विधो भवान्वापि वर्जयित्वेश्वरं हरिम् । नास्य शक्तः पुरः स्थातुं कृतान्तस्य यथा जनाः । २९ ।

तस्मान्निलयमुत्सृज्य यूयं सर्वे त्रिविष्टपम् । यात कालं प्रतीक्षन्तो यतः शत्रोर्विपर्ययः । ३० ।

एष विप्रबलोदकः सम्प्रत्यूर्जितविक्रमः । तेषामेवापमानेन सानुवन्धो विनश्यति । ३१ ।

एवं सुमन्त्रितार्थास्ते गुरुणार्थानुदर्शिना । हित्वा त्रिविष्टपं जग्मुर्गीर्वाणाः कामरूपिणः । ३२ ।

देवेष्वथ निलीनेषु बलिवैरोचनः पुरीम् । देवधानीमधिष्ठाय वशं निन्ये जगत्त्रयम् । ३३ ।

तं विश्वजयिनं शिष्यं भृगवः शिष्यवत्सलाः । शतेन हयमेधानामनुव्रतमयाजयन् । ३४ ।

ततस्तदनुभावेन भुवनत्रयविश्रुताम् । कीर्तिं दिक्षु वितन्वानः स रेज उडुराडिव । ३५ ।

बुभुजे च श्रियं स्वृद्धां द्विजदेवोपलम्बिताम् । कृतकृत्यमिवात्मानं मन्यमानो महामनाः । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः । १५ ।

The preceptor (the sage Brhaspati) replied: I know, O Indra, the cause of the rise of yonder enemy of yours. (Surely) by the Bhṛguś (Śukrācārya and the other scions of the sage Bhṛgu), who are (all) exponents of the Vedas, (their own spiritual) energy has been infused into their disciple (in return for his having surrendered his all to the Bhṛguś). (28) Barring (of course) the almighty Śrī Hari, none like you nor even you can stand before him any more than created beings can stand before Death.(29) Therefore, quitting heaven, go you all out of sight, awaiting a (favourable) time which may bring a reverse (of fortune) for your enemy. (30) Rising more and more by the (spiritual) strength of the Brāhmaṇas, he is at the height of power today. By insulting those very Brāhmaṇas (the Bhṛguṣ) he will perish with (all) his wealth and so on.(31) Having thus been offered a wise counsel about their (course of) conduct by the preceptor (the sage Bṛhaspati), who could foresee things in their reality, the said gods went out of paradise, capable as they were of assuming any shape at will. (32) The gods having disappeared, Bali, the son of Virocana, forthwith occupied the city of Amarāvati (the city of the gods) and brought under subjection all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region). (33) Full of affection for their disciples, the Bhṛguṣ got their aforesaid disciple (Bali), who had (now) conquered the universe and was (fully) devoted to them, to propitiate the Lord by means of a hundred horse-sacrifices (in order to stabilize his dominion). (34) Diffusing virtue of those sacrifices in (all) the quarters (even beyond the three worlds) his renown, already well-known all over the three worlds, Bali now shone like the moon (the lord of the stars). (35) And, considering himself as having accomplished all his objects as it were, the high-minded Bali enjoyed the overflowing wealth (most prosperous kingdom) bestowed on him by the Brāhmaṇas (the adored among the twice-born). (36)

Thus ends the fifteenth discourse, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā

अथ षोडशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVI

The procedure of (observing the vow of) Payovrata disclosed to Aditi

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं पुत्रेषु नष्टेषु देवमातादिस्तिता । हते त्रिविष्टपे दैत्यैः पर्यतप्यदनाथवत् । १ ।
एकदा कश्यपस्तस्या आश्रमं भगवानगात् । निरुत्सवं निरानन्दं समाधेर्विरतश्चिरात् । २ ।
स पत्नीं दीनवदनां कृतासनपरिग्रहः । सभाजितो यथान्यायमिदमाह कुरुद्वह । ३ ।
अप्यभद्रं न विप्राणां भद्रे लोकेऽधुनाऽऽगतम् । न धर्मस्य न लोकस्य मृत्योश्छन्दानुवर्तिनः । ४ ।
अपि वाकुशलं किञ्चिद् गृहेषु गृहमेधिनि । धर्मस्यार्थस्य कामस्य यत्र योगो ह्ययोगिनाम् । ५ ।
अपि वातिथयोऽभ्येत्य कुटुम्बासक्तया त्वया । गृहादपूजिता याताः प्रत्युत्थानेन वा क्वचित् । ६ ।
गृहेषु येष्वतिथयो नार्चिताः सलिलैरपि । यदि निर्यान्ति ते नूनं फेरुराजगृहोपमाः । ७ ।
अप्यग्नयस्तु वेलायां न हुता हविषा सति । त्वयोद्विग्नधिया भद्रे प्रोषिते मयि कर्हिचित् । ८ ।
यत्पूजया कामदुघान्याति लोकान्गृहान्वितः । ब्राह्मणोऽग्निश्च वै विष्णोः सर्वदेवात्मनो मुखम् । ९ ।

अपि सर्वे कुशलिनस्तव पुत्रा मनस्विनि । लक्षयेऽस्वस्थमात्मानं भवत्या लक्षणैरहम् । १० ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: On her sons having disappeared and on the (sphere of) heaven having been taken possession of by the Daityas (the sons of Diti), Aditi, the mother of the gods, now felt much distressed like a helpless woman. (1) Having risen from Samādhi (abstract meditation) after a long time, the glorious sage Kaśyapa (her husband) visited her hermitage, which was cheerless and bereft of joy. (2) Suitably welcomed (by his wife, according to place and occasion) and having accepted a seat (offered by her), he spoke as follows to his wife (Aditi), who wore a melancholy aspect, O jewel among the Kurus ! (3) I hope no harm has come to the Brāhmaṇas in the world at present, O good lady, nor to (the cause of) righteousness nor (again) to the people, who (have to) follow the whims of Death. (4) Or is there any hindrance, O mistress of the house, in the pursuit of piety, wealth or enjoyment, (experienced) in the life of a householder, where God-Realization can be attained (through the mere disinterested discharge of one's sacred duties) even by those who fail to practise Yoga, (contemplation on God)? (5) Or did strangers, having unexpectedly called at your door on any occasion, return from your house unhonoured by you even with (the courtesy of) rising from your seat, while you remained engrossed in the duties and cares of your family? (6) These houses are undoubtedly no better than the den of a leader of jackals if newcomers calling at their door go away unentertained even with water. (7) May be the sacred fires were not fed with oblations at the proper time on some occasion, O good lady, by you, perturbed as you were in mind, O blessed one, due to my being away from home. (8) The Brāhmaṇa and the (sacred) fire, by whose worship a householder attains to worlds that yield all one's desired objects, actually represent the mouth of Lord Viṣṇu, the Soul of all the gods. (9) Are all your sons faring well, O proud lady ? From outward signs (your facial expression etc.) I perceive your mind not at ease. (10)

अदितिरुवाच

भद्रं द्विजगवां ब्रह्मन्धर्मस्यास्य जनस्य च । त्रिवर्गस्य परं क्षेत्रं गृहमेधिनृणां इमे । ११ ।

अग्रयोऽतिथयो भृत्या भिक्षवो ये च लिप्सवः । सर्वं भगवतो ब्रह्मन्नुद्यानात् रिष्यति । १२ ।

को नु मे भगवन्कामो न सम्पद्येत मानसः । यस्या भवान्प्रजाध्यक्ष एवं धर्मान्प्रभाषते । १३ ।

तवैव मारीच मनःशरीरजाः प्रजा इमाः सत्त्वरजस्तमोजुषः ।

समो भवांस्तास्वसुरादिषु प्रभो तथापि भक्तं भजते महेश्वरः । १४ ।

तस्मादीश भजन्या मे श्रेयश्चिन्तय सुव्रत । हतश्रियो हतस्थानान्सपत्नैः पाहि नः प्रभो । १५ ।

परैर्विवासिता साहं मग्ना व्यसनसागरे । ऐश्वर्यं श्रीर्यशः स्थानं हतानि प्रबलैर्मम । १६ ।

यथा तानि पुनः साधो प्रपद्येन् ममात्मजाः । तथा विधेहि कल्याणं धिया कल्याणकृत्तम । १७ ।

Aditi replied: All is well with the twice-born (the Brāhmaṇas) and the cows, O holy sage; and so is virtue prospering, as well as this servant of yours. (And) this house (the life of a householder), O master of the house, is the best field for (the culture of all) the three objects of human pursuit—viz., religious merit, worldly possessions and gratification of the senses (and everything regarding them is going on smoothly). (11) The sacred fires, strangers, servants, beggars and whoever else expect anything (from us) have (all) been (properly) fed by me. (In fact,) nothing is (found) lacking by virtue of my incessant thought of your worshipful self, O holy Brāhmaṇa ! (12) Indeed what desire of my mind, O holy one, would not be fulfilled, to whom you, O lord of created beings, teach my duties in this way ? (13) (All) these created beings, (mainly) partaking as they do of Sattva (goodness), Rajas (passion) and Tamas (ignorance), are born of your mind and body alone, O son of the sage Marīci ! (Although) you are alike to them, the Asuras and others, yet (even) the supreme Lord is (particularly) attached to His devotees (alone). (14) Therefore, O lord of holy vows, (pray,) consider what is good to me, your servant. (Kindly) protect us, whose wealth has been usurped and whose abode has been taken possession of by the enemy, O my master ! (15) Having been exiled by the foes, I, Aditi, am plunged in an ocean of misery. My fortune, splendour, glory and abode have (all) been usurped by the mighty ones. (16) (Therefore,) by your (sound) judgment, O most beneficent one, (kindly) devise some salutary means by which my sons (the gods) may (be enabled to) retrieve them (their fortune and so on), O pious soul ! (17)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमभ्यर्थितोऽदित्या कस्तामाह स्मयन्निव । अहो मायाबलं विष्णोः स्नेहबद्धमिदं जगत् । १८ ।
 क्व देहो भौतिकोऽनात्मा क्व चात्मा प्रकृतेः परः । कस्य के पतिपुत्राद्या मोह एव हि कारणम् । १९ ।
 उपतिष्ठस्व पुरुषं भगवन्तं जनार्दनम् । सर्वभूतगुहावासं वासुदेवं जगद्गुरुम् । २० ।
 स विधास्यति ते कामान् हरिर्दीनानुकम्पनः । अमोघा भगवद्भक्तिर्नरेति मतिर्मम । २१ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Thus entreated by Aditi, the sage Kaśyapa said to her as though smiling, "Wonderful is the might of the delusive potency of Lord Viṣṇu, due to which this animate creation is bound by (ties of) affection ! (18) How widely divergent are the material body, which is other than the Spirit, and the Spirit, which lies beyond (the realm of) Prakṛti (Matter)! Who and whose are the husband, son and others? Ignorance alone is the root of (one's) attachment to them. (19) (Therefore,) worship Lord Vāsudeva (the all-pervading Viṣṇu), the supreme Person, solicited by (all) the people, and dwelling in the heart of all created beings, the Preceptor of the universe. (20) The selfsame Lord Śrī Hari, who, compassionates the miserable, will fulfil your desires. Devotion to the Lord (alone) is unfailing in its results, but not so devotion to others: such is my conviction." (21)

अदितिरुवाच

केनाहं विधिना ब्रह्मन्पस्थास्ये जगत्पतिम् । यथा मे सत्यसङ्कल्पो विदध्यात् स मनोरथम् । २२ ।
 आदिश त्वं द्विजश्रेष्ठ विधिं तदुपधावनम् । आशु तुष्यति मे देवः सीदन्त्याः सह पुत्रकैः । २३ ।

Aditi submitted: By what method, O holy Brāhmaṇa, shall I wait upon the Ruler of the universe, so that the said Lord of true resolve may accomplish my object ? (22) (Pray,) tell me, O chief of the Brāhmaṇas, the method of propitiating Him, whereby the Lord may be quickly pleased with me, suffering as I am with my darlings. (23)

कश्यप उवाच

एतन्मे भगवान्पृष्ठः प्रजाकामस्य पद्मजः । यदाह ते प्रवक्ष्यामि व्रतं केशवतोषणम् । २४ ।
 फाल्गुनस्यामले पक्षे द्वादशाहं पयोव्रतः । अर्चयेदरविन्दाक्षं भक्त्या परमयान्वितः । २५ ।
 सिनीवाल्यां मृदाऽऽलिप्य स्नायात् क्रोडविदीर्णया । यदि लभ्येत वै स्रोतस्येतं मन्त्रमुदीरयेत् । २६ ।
 त्वं देव्यादिवराहेण रसायाः स्थानमिच्छता । उद्धृतासि नमस्तुभ्यं पाप्मानं मे प्रणाशय । २७ ।
 निर्वर्तितात्मनियमो देवमर्चेत् समाहितः । अर्चायां स्थण्डिले सूर्ये जले वह्नौ गुरावपि । २८ ।

The sage Kaśyapa replied: I shall (presently) speak to you about the following sacred vow, intended to propitiate Lord Keśava (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva), of which the worshipful Brahmā (the lotus-born) told me when questioned by me, desirous of progeny. (24) Full of supreme devotion and subsisting on milk (alone), one should worship Lord Viṣṇu (of lotus eyes) for twelve days during the bright fortnight of (the month of) Phālguna. (25) Besmearing his body with the earth turned by a boar, if actually available, on the Amāvāsyā (the last day of the dark fortnight), the devotee should, while standing in the middle of a stream, recite the following prayer: "O goddess ! you were lifted up from the bottom of the deluge water by (the Lord appearing in the form of) the very first Boar, who sought a footing (for living beings). Hail to You ! (Pray,) wipe out (all) my sin ! " and then bathe (in that stream). (26-27) Having finished his (daily) routine (of duties both of the obligatory and occasional types), he should worship the Lord with a concentrated mind in an image, altar, the sun, water, fire or even his preceptor (invoking Him by reciting the following prayer): (28)

नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते पुरुषाय महीयसे । सर्वभूतनिवासाय वासुदेवाय साक्षिणे । २९ ।

नमोऽव्यक्ताय सूक्ष्माय प्रधानपुरुषाय च । चतुर्विंशद्गुणज्ञाय गुणसंख्यानहेतवे । ३० ।
 नमो द्विशीर्षे त्रिपदे चतुःशृङ्गाय तन्त्रवे । सप्तहस्ताय यज्ञाय त्रयीविद्यात्मने नमः । ३१ ।
 नमः शिवाय रुद्राय नमः शक्तिधराय च । सर्वविद्याधिपतये भूतानां पतये नमः । ३२ ।
 नमो हिरण्यगर्भाय प्राणाय जगदात्मने । योगैश्वर्यशरीराय नमस्ते योगहेतवे । ३३ ।
 नमस्त आदिदेवाय साक्षिभूताय ते नमः । नारायणाय ऋषये नराय हरये नमः । ३४ ।
 नमो मरकतश्यामवपुषेऽधिगतश्रिये । केशवाय नमस्तुभ्यं नमस्ते पीतवाससे । ३५ ।
 त्वं सर्ववरदः पुंसां वरेण्य वरदर्षभ । अतस्ते श्रेयसे धीराः पादरेणुमुपासते । ३६ ।
 अन्ववर्तन्त यं देवाः श्रीश्च तत्पादपद्मयोः । स्पृहयन्त इवामोदं भगवान्मे प्रसीदताम् । ३७ ।

"Hail to You, Lord Vāsudeva, the supreme Person, the greatest of the great, the abode of all created beings, the Witness. (29) Salutation to the Lord who is unmanifest and most subtle, who is (both) Pradhāna (primordial Matter) and Puruṣa (Spirit), the Knower of the twenty-four categories (besides) the Puruṣa, the twenty-fifth, recognized in the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy), the founder of the Sāṅkhya philosophy (which enumerates the twenty-five categories or ultimate principles into which the entire range of existence can be reduced). (30) Hail to You as the deity presiding over sacrifices—endowed with a couple of heads (in the form of the rites known as the Prāyaṇīya and Udayanīya, which are performed at the beginning and the end of a sacrifice respectively), three feet (in the form of Savana or the pressing out of the Soma juice, which is done thrice a day, viz., in the morning, at midday and in the evening), four horns (in the form of the four Vedas, Ṛk, Sāma, Yajus and Atharva) and seven arms (in the form of the seven Vedic metres, Gāyatrī, Triṣṭubh, Anuṣṭubh, Bṛhatī, Pañkti, Jagatī and Uṣṇik)—the Bestower of rewards of sacrifices, whose essential nature has been described in the three Vedas (treating mainly of rituals). (31) Salutation to You as (the all-blissful) Lord Śiva and Rudra (the Destroyer of the universe), the Wielder of (all) power! Hail, hail to the Master of all sciences, the Ruler of ghosts!! (32) Salutation to You as Hiraṇyagarbha (Brahmā), the Sūtrātmā (consciousness identifying itself with the cosmic subtle body), the Soul of the universe! Hail to You, who are an embodiment of the mystic powers acquired through (the practice of) Yoga, nay, who are the very Source of (all) Yoga!! (33) Salutation to You, the first Deity! Hail to You standing as a witness!! Hail to Śrī Hari appearing as the (divine) sage Nārāyaṇa and (His younger brother) Nara!!! (34) Salutation to You, who are endowed with a body dark green as the emerald, and have won (for Your Spouse) Śrī (the goddess of prosperity and beauty)! Hail to You as Lord Keśava (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva)!! Salutation to You who are clad in yellow!!! (35) You are the Granter of all boons to the people, O Lord who are sought after by all, Chief of the bestowers of boons! It is therefore that the wise adore the dust of Your feet for (attaining) blessedness. (36) May that Lord be gracious to me, whom the gods as well as Śrī have (all along) served as though seeking the fragrance of His lotus-feet." (37)

एतैर्मन्त्रैर्हृषीकेशमावाहनपुरस्कृतम् । अर्चयेच्छुद्धया युक्तः पाद्योपस्पर्शनादिभिः । ३८ ।

अर्चित्वा गन्धमाल्याद्यैः पयसा स्नपयेद् विभुम् । वस्त्रोपवीताभरणपाद्योपस्पर्शनैस्ततः ।

गन्धधूपादिभिश्चार्चेद् द्वादशाक्षरविद्यया । ३९ ।

शृतं पयसि नैवेद्यं शाल्यन्नं विभवे सति । ससर्पिः सगुडं दत्त्वा जुहुयान्मूलविद्यया । ४० ।

निवेदितं तद् भक्ताय दद्याद् भुञ्जीत वा स्वयम् । दत्त्वाऽऽचमनमर्चित्वा ताम्बूलं च निवेदयेत् । ४१ ।

जपेदष्टोत्तरशतं स्तुवीत स्तुतिभिः प्रभुम् । कृत्वा प्रदक्षिणं भूमौ प्रणमेद् दण्डवन्मुदा । ४२ ।

कृत्वा शिरसि तच्छेषां देवमुद्वासयेत् ततः । ह्यवरान्भोजयेद् विप्रान्यायसेन यथोचितम् । ४३ ।

भुञ्जीत तैरनुज्ञातः शेषं सेष्टः सभाजितैः । ब्रह्मचार्यथ तद्रात्र्यां श्रोभूते प्रथमेऽहनि । ४४ ।
 स्नातः शुचिर्यथोक्तेन विधिना सुसमाहितः । पयसा स्नापयित्वाचर्चेद् यावद्व्रतसमापनम् । ४५ ।
 पयोभक्षो व्रतमिदं चरेद् विष्णुवर्चनादृतः । पूर्ववज्जुहुयादग्निं ब्राह्मणांश्चापि भोजयेत् । ४६ ।
 एवं त्वहरहः कुर्याद् द्वादशाहं पयोव्रतः । हरेराराधनं होममर्हणं द्विजतर्पणम् । ४७ ।

Imbued with reverence, he should wait upon Lord Viṣṇu (the Controller of the senses) with water for washing the feet and rinsing the mouth with and other articles of worship, after His presence has been secured through invocation by (reciting) the aforesaid Mantras (sacred texts). (38) Having decorated the Lord with sandal-paste, flowers and so on, he should bathe Him with milk. Then he should deck Him with raiment, a sacred thread and ornaments and wait upon Him (once more) with water for washing His feet and rinsing His mouth with, sandal-paste, burnt incense and so on, reciting the twelve-syllabled Mantra (while offering all these articles of worship). (39) Offering (to the Deity), by way of repast, rice boiled in milk with clarified butter and jaggery, if there is wealth enough (to do so and if not, any simple diet), he should pour it into the sacred fire (as well), uttering the Mantra sacred to the Lord (the twelve-syllabled Mantra). (40) He should give the food (thus) offered (entirely) to some devotee or take (a part of) it himself (at the end of the worship after distributing the rest among those present at the (function). And (then) giving water for rinsing the mouth with, he should offer betel-leaves after seasoning them (with areca-nut parings, catechu, lime, cardamom seeds, dried cloves and so on). (41) He should (now) mutter the Mantra one hundred and eight times, glorify the Lord by means of (the aforesaid and other) praises and, circumambulating Him clock-wise, should fall prostrate on the ground (before Him) with delight. (42) Placing on his head (as a mark of reverence) the offerings (flowers etc.), kept before the Deity, he should then (respectfully) allow the Deity to retire. He should (afterwards) properly feed at least a couple of Brāhmaṇas with rice boiled in milk with sugar etc. (43) Permitted by those Brāhmaṇas, (duly) honoured (by him by offering a wreath of flowers, betel-leaves, gift of money and so on), he should share the remnant (of food) with his beloved ones and observe (strict) continence on that night. Having taken his bath the following morning, (viz.,) on the first day (of the bright half), and remaining undefiled and fully composed, he should bathe the Deity with milk and worship Him according to the procedure mentioned before* (and should continue to do so from day to day) till the end of the vow. (44-45) Full of reverence for the worship of Lord Viṣṇu, he should observe this vow, subsisting on milk (alone). As before (on the previous day) he should pour oblations into the (sacred) fire and feed the Brāhmaṇas as well. (46) (Strictly) observing the vow of a milk diet, he should in this way daily practise for full twelve days adoration of Lord Śrī Hari (in the form of extolling Him, bowing to Him and muttering prayers to Him), offer oblations into the sacred fire, worship His image and feed the Brāhmaṇas. (47)

प्रतिपदिनमारभ्य यावच्छुक्लत्रयोदशी । ब्रह्मचर्यमधःस्वप्नं स्नानं त्रिषवणं चरेत् । ४८ ।
 वर्जयेदसदालापं भोगानुच्चावचांस्तथा । अहिंस्रः सर्वभूतानां वासुदेवपरायणः । ४९ ।
 त्रयोदश्यामथो विष्णोः स्नपनं पञ्चकैर्विभोः । कारयेच्छास्त्रदृष्टेन विधिना विधिकोविदैः । ५० ।
 पूजां च महतीं कुर्याद् वित्तशक्त्यविवर्जितः । चरुं निरूप्य पयसि शिपिविष्टाय विष्णावे । ५१ ।
 श्रुतेन तेन पुरुषं यजेत सुसमाहितः । नैवेद्यं चातिगुणवद् दद्यात्पुरुषतुष्टिदम् । ५२ ।
 आचार्यं ज्ञानसम्पन्नं वस्त्राभरणधेनुभिः । तोषयेदृत्विजश्चैव तद्विद्याराधनं हरेः । ५३ ।
 भोजयेत् तान् गुणवता सदन्नेन शुचिस्मिते । अन्यांश्च ब्राह्मणाञ्छक्त्या ये च तत्र समागताः । ५४ ।

दक्षिणां गुरवे दद्यादृत्विभ्यश्च यथार्हतः । अन्नाद्येनाश्वपाकांश्च प्रीणयेत्समुपागतान् । ५५ ।
 भुक्तवत्सु च सर्वेषु दीनान्धकृपणेषु च । विष्णोस्तत्प्रीणनं विद्वान्भुञ्जीत सह बन्धुभिः । ५६ ।
 नृत्यवादित्रगीतैश्च स्तुतिभिः स्वस्तिवाचकैः । कारयेत्तत्कथाभिश्च पूजां भगवतोऽब्रह्मम् । ५७ ।

From the first day till the thirteenth of the bright fortnight (of Phālguna) he should observe (a vow of strict) continence, sleep on the ground and bathe thrice (everyday, viz., in the morning, at midday and in the evening). (48) Harmless to all living beings and devoted to Lord Vāsudeva, he should avoid talking with the vile as well as on unholy topics and abstain from luxuries (of every description), whether great or small. (49) Now, on the thirteenth he should arrange a bath of Lord Viṣṇu with five substances (viz., milk, curds, clarified butter, honey and sugar) according to the procedure found in the scriptures, under the direction of those conversant with such procedure. (50) And absolutely free from (the fault of) niggardliness, he should perform a grand worship of the Lord. Preparing an oblation (intended) for Lord Viṣṇu, (who is encircled by rays of light), he should with a fully concentrated mind propitiate the supreme Person by means of that oblation boiled in milk (and poured into the sacred fire) and (also) Offer to Him by way of repast excellent food that may be gratifying to the Lord (by its appetizing flavour and freedom from impure ingredients such as animal food). (51-52) He should (then) gratify the learned and wise Ācārya (preceptor conducting the worship) as well as the other priests with (gifts of) raiment, jewels and cows. (For) know their gratification to be the propitiation of Śrī Hari (Himself). (53) He should (also) entertain them as well as the other Brāhmaṇas and whoever else might have gathered there with delicious and pure food according to his means, O (good) lady with innocent smiles ! (54) (Nay,) he should offer according to merit Dakṣiṇā (sacrificial fees) to the preceptor and the priests and gratify with cooked and other articles of food all those assembled including Cāṇḍālas (those who cook the flesh of dogs). (55) All including the destitute, blind and miserable having taken their food, and knowing their gratification to be the propitiation of Lord Viṣṇu Himself, he should partake of that food (himself) along with his relatives and friends. (56) (In this way) he should have the worship of the Lord conducted everyday with dances and music, (both) instrumental and vocal, as well as with the recitation of hymns, performance of auspicious rites and the narration of His stories. (57)

एतत्पयोव्रतं नाम पुरुषाराधनं परम् । पितामहेनाभिहितं मया ते समुदाहृतम् । ५८ ।
 त्वं चानेन महाभागे सम्यक्चीर्णनं केशवम् । आत्मना शुद्धभावेन नियतात्मा भजाव्ययम् । ५९ ।
 अयं वै सर्वयज्ञारख्यः सर्वव्रतमिति स्मृतम् । तपःसारमिदं भद्रे दानं चेश्वरतर्पणम् । ६० ।
 त एव नियमाः साक्षात् एव च यमोत्तमाः । तपो दानं व्रतं यज्ञो येन तुष्यत्यधोक्षजः । ६१ ।
 तस्मादेतद्व्रतं भद्रे प्रयता श्रद्धया चर । भगवान्परितुष्टस्ते वरानाशु विधास्यति । ६२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धेऽदितिपयोव्रतकथने नाम षोडशोऽध्यायः । १६ ।

This supreme vow known by the name of Payovrata, which is intended to propitiate the supreme Person, was revealed (to me) by Brahmā (my grandfather) and has (now) been made known to you in detail by me. (58) And, having fully controlled your mind, adore you the immortal Lord Keśava (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva) with an intellect full of pure Devotion by means of this vow duly observed, O noble lady. (59) This is known as a universal sacrifice (yielding the fruit of all sacrifices) and is further called a universal vow (ensuring the reward of all vows). It is the quintessence of all austerities, O good lady, and a gift conducive to the gratification of God (Himself). (60) They alone are real religious observances and they alone are the best of all disciplines; (nay,) that alone is austerity, gift, vow, and sacrifice (worth the name), by means of which Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception) is gratified. (61)

Therefore, fully disciplined, observe this vow with reverence, O blessed one ! Highly gratified (through this), the Lord will speedily grant (all) the objects of your desire. (62)

Thus ends the sixteenth discourse entitled "The procedure of (observing the vow of) Payovrata disclosed to Aditi" in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVII

The Lord manifests Himself before Aditi and grants her desired boon

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्ता सादिती राजन्वभर्त्रा कश्यपेन वै । अन्वतिष्ठद् व्रतमिदं द्वादशाहमतन्द्रिता । १ ।
चिन्तयन्त्येकया बुद्ध्या महापुरुषमीश्वरम् । प्रगृह्णेन्द्रियदुष्टाश्चान्मनसा बुद्धिसारथिः । २ ।
मनश्चैकाग्रया बुद्ध्या भगवत्यखिलात्मनि । वासुदेवे समाधाय चचार ह पयोव्रतम् । ३ ।
तस्याः प्रादुरभूतात भगवानादिपूरुषः । पीतवासाश्चतुर्बाहुः शङ्खचक्रगदाधरः । ४ ।
तं नेत्रगोचरं वीक्ष्य सहस्रोत्थाय सादरम् । ननाम भुवि कायेन दण्डवत् प्रीतिविह्वला । ५ ।
सोत्थाय बद्धाञ्जलिरीडितुं स्थिता नोत्सेह आनन्दजलाकुलेक्षणा ।
वभूव तूष्णीं पुलकाकुलाकृतिस्तद्दर्शनात्युत्सवगात्रवेपथुः । ६ ।
प्रीत्या शनैर्गद्गदया गिरा हरिं तुष्टाव सा देव्यदितिः कुरुद्वह ।
उद्वीक्षती सा पिबतीव चक्षुषा रमापति यज्ञपति जगत्पतिम् । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Thus instructed by her husband, the sage Kaśyapa, the celebrated Aditi unweariedly and duly observed the aforesaid vow for twelve days consecutively, contemplating (all the time) on the almighty Lord, the supreme Person, with undivided intellect. Curbing the unruly horses in the shape of the senses with (the rein of) her mind and focussing the mind with her one-pointed reason on Lord Vāsudeva, the Soul of all, Aditi, who had reason for her charioteer (guide), duly observed the vow of Payovrata. (1—3) Before her (eyes) appeared, O dear Parīkṣit, (at the conclusion of her vow) the almighty Lord, the most ancient Person, who was clad in yellow, was endowed with four arms and bore a conch, a discus and a mace (in three of them). (4) Seeing Him suddenly before her (very) eyes and overwhelmed with joy, resulting from love, she rose (from her seat) and reverently bowed (to Him) with her body lying prostrate on the ground. (5) Rising (once again), she stood up with joined palms to glorify Him, but could not, her eyes flooded with tears of joy, and remained quiet, her body bristling all over with hair standing on end and her limbs shaking with excessive joy at His sight. (6) In a faltering voice, O jewel of the Kurus, that heavenly lady, Aditi, (who had in the meantime recovered a bit) lovingly and slowly extolled Śrī Hari (While doing so) she stood looking up (Śrī Hari evidently standing in the air before her) as though drinking with her eyes the (said) Spouse of Rāmā (Goddess Lakṣmī), the Lord (bestowing the fruit) of sacrifices and the Ruler of the universe. (7)

अदितिरुवाच

यज्ञेश यज्ञपुरुषाच्युत तीर्थपाद तीर्थश्रवः श्रवणमङ्गलनामधेय ।
 आपन्नलोकवृजिनोपशमोदयाद्य शं नः कृधीश भगवन्नसि दीननाथः । ८ ।
 विश्वाय विश्वभवनस्थितिसंयमाय स्वैरं गृहीतपुरुशक्तिगुणाय भूम्ने ।
 स्वस्थाय शश्वदुपबृंहितपूर्णबोधव्यापादितात्मतमसे हरये नमस्ते । ९ ।
 आयुः परं वपुरभीष्टमतुल्यलक्ष्मीर्द्यौर्भूरसाः सकलयोगगुणास्त्रिवर्गः ।
 ज्ञानं च केवलमनन्त भवन्ति तुष्टात्त्वतो नृणां किमु सपत्नजयादिराशीः । १० ।

Aditi prayed: O Bestower of the fruit of sacrifices, O Soul of sacrifices, O immortal, most ancient and almighty Lord, whose (very) feet enable one to cross the ocean of mundane existence, (nay,) whose glory (itself) sanctifies the world, whose name is (most) auspicious to hear and who manifests Himself in order to relieve the distress of those that take refuge in Him, (pray,) bring happiness to us; for You are the Protector of the distressed. (8) Hail to You, Śrī Hari, the infinite Lord, who for the coming into existence, continuance and dissolution of the universe assume of Your own accord the Guṇas of Māyā (wielding infinite power), (nay,) who constitute the universe (itself) and are established in Your own Self and in whose being (the darkness of) ignorance stands dispersed by perfect and evershining wisdom. (9) From You, when You are pleased, O infinite Lord, are got by men the longest life (the life of Brahmā, extending to 31, 10, 40, 00, 00, 00, 000 human years), a body of the desired type, unequalled wealth, (dominion of) heaven, earth and the nether worlds, all the powers of Yoga, (all) the three objects of human pursuit (viz., religious merit, worldly possessions and gratification of the senses) as well as immediate perception of the truth, to say nothing of such (trivial) blessings as the subjugation of enemies. (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

आदित्यैवं स्तुतो राजन् भगवान् पुष्करेक्षणः । क्षेत्रज्ञः सर्वभूतानामिति होवाच भारत । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Thus hymned by Aditi, O king, Lord Viṣṇu (the lotus-eyed One), the inner Controller of all created beings, actually replied as follows, O scion of Bharata. (11)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

देवमातर्भवत्या मे विज्ञातं चिरकाङ्क्षितम् । यत् सपत्नैर्हृतश्रीणां च्यावितानां स्वधामतः । १२ ।
 तान्विनिर्जित्य समरे दुर्मदानसुरर्षभान् । प्रतिलब्धजयश्रीभिः पुत्रैरिच्छस्युपासितुम् । १३ ।
 इन्द्रज्येष्ठैः स्वतनयैर्हृतानां युधि विद्विषाम् । स्त्रियो रुदन्तीरासाद्य द्रष्टुमिच्छसि दुःखिताः । १४ ।
 आत्मजान्सुसमृद्धांस्त्वं प्रत्याहृतवशः श्रियः । नाकपृष्ठमधिष्ठाय क्रीडतो द्रष्टुमिच्छसि । १५ ।
 प्रायोऽधुना तेऽसुरयूथनाथा अपारणीया इति देवि मे मतिः ।
 यत्तेऽनुकूलेश्वरविप्रगुप्ता न विक्रमस्तत्र सुखं ददाति । १६ ।
 अथाप्युपायो मम देवि चिन्त्यः सन्तोषितस्य व्रतचर्यया ते ।
 ममार्चनं नार्हति गन्तुमन्यथा श्रद्धानुरूपं फलहेतुकत्वात् । १७ ।
 त्वयार्चितश्चाहमपत्यगुप्तये पयोव्रतेनानुगुणं समीडितः ।
 स्वांशेन पुत्रत्वमुपेत्य ते सुतान् गोप्तास्मि मारीचतपस्यधिष्ठितः । १८ ।

उपधाव पतिं भद्रे प्रजापतिमकल्मषम् । मां च भावयती पत्यावेवंरूपमवस्थितम् । १९ ।

नैतत् परस्मा आख्येयं पृष्टयापि कथंचन । सर्वं सम्पद्यते देवि देवगुह्यं सुसंवृतम् । २० ।

The glorious Lord said: O mother of gods, your long-cherished desire is thoroughly known to Me, which relates to (the welfare of) your sons, whose wealth has been usurped

by their enemies (the Asuras), (nay,) who have been driven away from their home. (12) You wish to live with your sons when they have retrieved their triumphal glory after utterly and finally defeating those vainglorious Asura chiefs. (13) (Nay,) you long to approach and behold (with your own eyes) the sorrowful and bewailing wives of your enemies when the latter have been slain by your sons, the eldest of whom is Indra. (14) You (further) desire to see your sons highly prosperous, with their glory and splendour restored and diverting themselves after regaining mastery over heaven. (15) Those Asura generals are for the most part invincible at present ; that is My conviction, O celestial lady! For, they are protected by Brāhmaṇas to whom (the all-powerful) Time is propitious. (Hence) heroic valour against them will not yield happiness. (16) Nevertheless, O heavenly lady, some expedient must be thought of by Me, propitiated by your observance of a sacred vow. (For) My worship ought not to prove fruitless, bringing as it does its reward according to the desire of the worshipper. (17) Worshipped in the proper way for the protection of your sons through (the observance of the vow called) Payovrata and duly extolled by you, I shall assume the role of a son to you, entering by a part of My Being the procreative energy of the sage Kaśyapa (son of Marīci), and protect your progeny. (18) (Therefore,) seek your consort, the faultless Kaśyapa (a lord of created beings), O blessed lady, visualizing Me as present in this (very) form (standing before you) in the person of your husband. (19) This (secret) should on no account be disclosed to another by you, even when questioned. (For) all secret plans of the gods, O celestial lady, succeed (only) when scrupulously guarded. (20)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एतावदुक्त्वा भगवांस्तत्रैवान्तरधीयत् । अदितिर्दुर्लभं लब्ध्वा हरेर्जन्मात्मनि प्रभोः । २१ ।
उपाधावत् पतिं भक्त्या परया कृतकृत्यवत् । स वै समाधियोगेन कश्यपस्तदबुध्यत । २२ ।
प्रविष्टमात्मनि हरेरंशं ह्यवितथेक्षणः । सोऽदित्यां वीर्यमाधत्त तपसा चिरसंभृतम् ।
समाहितमना राजन्दारुण्यग्निं यथानिलः । २३ ।

अदितेर्धिष्ठितं गर्भं भगवन्तं सनातनम् । हिरण्यगर्भो विज्ञाय समीडे गुह्यनामभिः । २४ ।

Śrī Śuka went on: Saying this much, the Lord disappeared on that very spot. Having secured the rare boon of Lord Śrī Hari's birth through her, Aditi waited upon her husband with supreme devotion like one who has accomplished her purpose. By power of concentration he said Kaśyapa of true insight actually perceived a part of Śrī Hari having entered his mind. Having (fully) concentrated his mind, O Parikṣit, the sage Kaśyapa (who was alike to the gods and the Asuras) placed (mentally) in Aditi his seed long conserved through asceticism (even) as the wind (which equally pervades everywhere) places (a spark of) fire in firewood. (21—23) Perceiving the eternal Lord having entered the womb of Aditi, Irāṇyagarbha (Brahmā) proceeded to praise Him with mysterious epithets (as follows). (24)

ब्रह्मोवाच

जयोरुगाय भगवन्नुरुक्रम नमोऽस्तु ते । नमो ब्रह्मण्यदेवाय त्रिगुणाय नमो नमः । २५ ।
नमस्ते पृश्निगर्भाय वेदगर्भाय वेधसे । त्रिनाभाय त्रिपृष्ठाय शिपिविष्टाय विष्णवे । २६ ।
त्वमादिरन्तो भुवनस्य मध्यमनन्तशक्तिं पुरुषं यमाहुः ।
कालो भवानाक्षिपतीश विश्वं स्रोतो यथान्तःपतितं गभीरम् । २७ ।
त्वं वै प्रजानां स्थिरजङ्गमानां प्रजापतीनामसि सम्भविष्णुः ।
दिवौकसां देव दिवश्च्युतानां परायणं नौरिव मज्जतोऽप्सु । २८ ।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे वामनप्रादुर्भावे सप्तदशोऽध्यायः । १७ ।

Brahmā prayed : May You triumph, O Lord hymned by many ! Let my salutation be to You, O Lord of mighty valour!! My greetings to the Lord who is friendly to the Brāhmaṇas ! Hail, hail to the Controller of the three Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti)!! (25) Salutations to You, the Maker (of all), who were born of Pr̥śni (the previous incarnation of Aditi) and are revealed in the Vedas, who hold the three worlds (earth, heaven and the middle region) in Your navel, and (at the same time) stand above the three worlds; (nay,) who have entered all embodied beings as their Inner Controller and are all-pervading. (26) You, whom the Vadas refer to as the supreme Person of unlimited powers, are the beginning, end and middle of the universe. As the Time-Spirit, O Lord, You draw the universe (after You) even as a deep stream draws (after it) whatever has fallen into it. (27) Indeed You are the Creator of (all) created beings, (both) immobile (inanimate) and mobile (animate), as well as of the lords of creation. (Hence) You are the supreme refuge, O Lord, of heavenly beings (lit., the denizens of heaven) fallen from heaven, even as a boat is for one about to be drowned in water.(28)

Thus ends the seventeenth discourse, hinging on the story of the descent of Lord Vāmana, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVIII

The Lord appears as the divine Dwarf and visits the sacrificial performance of Bali

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थं विरिञ्चस्तुतकर्मवीर्यः प्रादुर्बभूवामृतभूरदित्याम् ।
 चतुर्भुजः शङ्खगदाब्जचक्रः पिशङ्गवासा नलिनायतेक्षणः । १ ।
 श्यामावदातो झषराजकुण्डलत्विल्लसच्छ्रीवदनाम्बुजः पुमान् ।
 श्रीवत्सवक्षा वलयाङ्गदोल्लसत्किरीटकाञ्चीगुणचारुनूपुरः । २ ।
 मधुव्रतव्रातविघ्नुष्टया स्वया विराजितः श्रीवनमालया हरिः ।
 प्रजापतेर्वैश्वतमः स्वरोचिषा विनाशयन् कण्ठनिविष्टकौस्तुभः । ३ ।
 दिशः प्रसेदुः सलिलाशयास्तदा प्रजाः प्रहृष्टा ऋतवो गुणान्विताः ।
 द्यौरन्तरिक्षं क्षितिर्मिजिह्वा गावो द्विजाः संजहृषुर्नगाश्च । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : The Lord, whose exploits and glory were thus celebrated by Brahmā (the creator) and who is the Fountain-head of immortality (final beatitude), took His descent from Aditi. He was endowed with four arms—in which He carried a conch, a mace, a lotus and a discus—was clad in yellow and had eyes big as a pair of lotuses.(1) Bright dark-brown of hue, the supreme Person bore the mark of Śrīvatsa (a white curl of hair) on His bosom. The lustre of His lotus countenance was augmented by the brilliance of His alligator-shaped ear-rings; and a diadem, girdle strings and a charming pair of anklets shone (on His person) along with a pair each of wristlets and armlets. (2) Adorned with His (characteristic and) splendid wreath of sylvan flowers deeply resonant with the humming of swarms of black bees and with the (celebrated) Kaustubha gem suspended from His neck, Śrī Hari dispersed the gloom of the house of Kaśyapa (a lord of created beings) by His own radiance. (3) At that time the quarters brightened up and the lakes and ponds etc., became clear, created beings felt much delighted, and (all the six) seasons exhibited their (own) characteristics (in the shape of fruits and flowers of every description). Heaven, earth and the aerial region, the gods (having the flames of fire for their tongues), the cows and the Brāhmaṇas as well as mountains were transported with joy. (4)

श्रोणायां श्रवणद्वादश्यां मुहूर्तेऽभिजिति प्रभुः । सर्वे नक्षत्रताराद्याश्चक्रस्तज्जन्म दक्षिणम् । ५ ।
द्वादश्यां सवितातिष्ठन्मध्यंदिनगतो नृप । विजया नाम सा प्रोक्ता यस्यां जन्म विदुर्हरेः । ६ ।
शङ्खदुन्दुभयो नेदुर्मदङ्गपणवानकाः । चित्रवादित्रतूयाणां निर्वोषस्तुमुलोऽभवत् । ७ ।
प्रीताश्चाप्सरसोऽनृत्यन्गन्धर्वप्रवरा जगुः । तुष्टुवुर्मुनयो देवा मनवः पितरोऽग्नयः । ८ ।
सिद्धविद्याधरगणाः सकिम्पुरुषकिन्नराः । चारणा यक्षरक्षांसि सुपर्णा भुजगोत्तमाः । ९ ।
गायन्तोऽतिप्रशंसन्तो नृत्यन्तो विबुधानुगाः । आदित्या आश्रमपदं कुसुमैः समवाकिरन् । १० ।

The Lord appeared on the Śravaṇa-Dwādaśī (the twelfth day of the bright half of Bhādrapada) when the moon happened to be in the mansion called Śroṇā (Śravaṇa) and in an hour known by the name of Abhijit (which is conducive to victory on all sides); (nay,) all the lunar mansions and other stars as well as the planets (the sun and so on) rendered His birth (most) propitious (by their benign influence). (5) The sun happened to be at the meridian (the point reached by it at midday), O protector of men ! The twelfth day (of the bright half of Bhādrapada), on which the learned know the birth of Śrī Hari to have taken place is called by the name of Vijayā-Dwādaśī. (6) Conchs and kettledrums (as well as) clay tomtoms, tabors and double drums sounded. (And) there arose a tumultuous din of various wind-instruments and other musical instruments. (7) Full of joy, Apsarās danced and the chief of the Gandharvas sang; while sages and gods, the Manus, the manes and the fire-gods, hosts of Siddhas and Vidyādhara along with Kimpuruṣas and Kinnaras, as well as Cāraṇas, Yakṣas and Rākṣasas, Suparṇas (the secretary birds) and the foremost of Nāgas (too) uttered praises. (8-9) (And) attendants of gods covered the hermitage of Aditi including the surrounding grounds with showers of flowers, singing and dancing and loud in their praises. (10)

दृष्ट्वादितिस्तं निजगर्भसम्भवं परं पुमांसं मुदमाप विस्मिता ।
गृहीतदेहं निजयोगमायया प्रजापतिश्चाह जयेति विस्मितः । ११ ।
यत् तद् वपुर्भाति विभूषणायुधैरव्यक्तचिद् व्यक्तमधारयद्धरिः ।
बभूव तेनैव स वामनो वदुः संपश्यतोर्दिव्यगतिर्यथा नटः । १२ ।

Astonished to see that supreme Person having assumed a personality by His wonderful creative energy and sprung from her own womb, Aditi experienced (abundant) joy and the lord of created beings (the sage Kaśyapa too) was filled with (great) wonder and exclaimed: "May You be victorious !" (11) In that very form which Lord Śrī Hari—who is unembodied consciousness—had assumed and which (only a short while ago) was obviously resplendent with jewels and weapons, He, like an actor of wonderful movements, became a short-statured Brāhmaṇa boy, (even) while the couple stood gazing. (12)

तं वदुं वामनं दृष्ट्वा मोदमाना महर्षयः । कर्माणि कारयामासुः पुरस्कृत्य प्रजापतिम् । १३ ।
तस्योपनीयमानस्य सावित्री सविताब्रवीत् । बृहस्पतिर्ब्रह्मसूत्रं मेखलां कश्यपोऽददात् । १४ ।
ददौ कृष्णाजिनं भूमिर्दण्डं सोमो वनस्पतिः । कौपीनाच्छादनं माता द्यौश्छत्रं जगतः पतेः । १५ ।

कमण्डलुं वेदगर्भः कुशान्सप्तर्षयो ददुः । अक्षमालां महाराज सरस्वत्यव्ययात्मनः । १६ ।
 तस्मा इत्युपनीताय यक्षराद् पात्रिकामदात् । भिक्षां भगवती साक्षादुमादादम्बिका सती । १७ ।
 स ब्रह्मवर्चसेनैवं सभां संभावितो वदुः । ब्रह्मर्षिगणसञ्जुष्टामत्यरोचत मारिषः । १८ ।
 समिद्धमाहितं वह्निं कृत्वा परिसमूहनम् । परिस्तीर्य समभ्यर्च्य समिद्धिरजुहोद् द्विजः । १९ ।

(Greatly) rejoicing to see (the Lord in the form of) that dwarfish Brāhmaṇa boy, eminent sages placed the lord of created beings (the sage Kaśyapa) at their head and had (all) sacred rites (with respect to that divine Boy) performed (with due ceremony). (13) To Him, when being invested with the sacred thread, Savitā (the sun-god, the deity presiding over and invoked through the sacred Gāyatrī-Mantra) taught the (famous) Gāyatrī-Mantra (a prayer to the sun-god, which every Dwija is acquired to learn and mutter everyday without fail); the sage Bṛhaspati (the preceptor of the gods) gave Him the sacred thread (to be worn baldric wise at all times) and the sage Kaśyapa (His own father), a sacred cord made of Muñja grass (which every Brahmācārī is expected to wear round his waist all the time and from which is suspended the strip of cloth covering his privy parts). (14) Goddess Earth gave to the Lord of the universe a deerskin and Soma (the moon-god), the lord of the vegetable kingdom, the sacred staff (which a Brahmācārī must always carry in his hand). His mother (Aditi) gave Him a strip of cloth to cover His privy parts with as well as a piece of cloth (to be wrapped about His loins) and Dyauḥ (the deity presiding over the sky), an umbrella. (15) Brahmā (the repository of Veda) gave to the immortal lord a Kamaṇḍalu (a vessel of wood or cocoanut-shell for carrying water); the seven seers, blades of the (sacred) Kuśa grass and Sarasvatī (the goddess of speech and learning), a rosary of Akṣa seeds, O great king ! (16) To Him, when invested with the sacred thread, Kubera (the lord of the Yakṣas) gave a small vessel for (receiving and holding alms); while the all-virtuous Goddess Umā, the Mother of the universe, Her-self gave Him alms*. (17) Thus honoured (by all those assembled in the hermitage of the sage Kaśyapa), that most worthy Brāhmaṇa Boy outshone by His Brahmanical glory the assembly graced by hosts of Brāhmaṇa sages. (18) Having swept the Vedī (raised ground for placing the sacred fire) with blades of Kuśa grass (in order to drive away insects) and installing the sacred fire, and having strewn (other) blades of Kuśa round it (in the prescribed manner by way of protection against evil spirits) and (then) fully lighting the fire, the Brāhmaṇa (boy) duly worshipped it in every way and fed it by means of sacrificial sticks (daubed with clarified butter). (19)

श्रुत्वाश्वमेधैर्यजमानमूर्जितं बलिं भृगूणामुपकल्पितैस्ततः ।
 जगाम तत्राखिलसारसंभृतो भारेण गां सन्नमयन्पदे पदे । २० ।
 तं नर्मदायास्तट उत्तरे बलेर्य ऋत्विजस्ते भृगुकच्छसंज्ञके ।
 प्रवर्तयन्तो भृगवः क्रतूत्तमं व्यचक्षतारादुदितं यथा रविम् । २१ ।
 त ऋत्विजो यजमानः सदस्या हतत्विषो वामनतेजसा नृप ।
 सूर्यः किलायात्युत वा विभावसुः सनत्कुमारोऽथ दिदृक्षया क्रतोः । २२ ।
 इत्थं सशिष्येषु भृगुष्वनेकधा वितर्क्यमाणो भगवान्स वामनः ।
 छत्रं सदण्डं सजलं कमण्डलुं विवेश विभ्रद्ध्यमेधवाटम् । २३ ।

मौञ्ज्या मेखलया वीतमुपवीताजिनोत्तरम् । जटिलं वामनं विप्रं मायामाणवकं हरिम् । २४ ।

* A Brahmācārī (religious student) is enjoined to beg his food daily from the mothers of a number of families of the twice-born classes and begins this routine from the very day he is invested with the sacred thread, when he receives his very first round of alms from an elderly and respectable female relation whose husband is alive.

प्रविष्टं वीक्ष्य भृगवः सशिष्यास्ते सहाग्निभिः । प्रत्यगृह्णन्समुत्थाय संक्षिप्तास्तस्य तेजसा । २५ ।
यजमानः प्रमुदितो दर्शनीयं मनोरमम् । रूपानुरूपावयवं तस्मा आसनमाहरत् । २६ ।
स्वागतेनाभिनन्द्याथ पादौ भगवतो बलिः । अवनिज्यार्चयामास मुक्तसङ्गमनोरमम् । २७ ।
तत्पादशौचं जनकल्मषापहं स धर्मविन्मूर्ध्वदधात् सुमङ्गलम् ।
यद् देवदेवो गिरिशश्चन्द्रमौलिर्दधार मूर्ध्ना परया च भक्त्या । २८ ।

Having heard of the mighty Bali propitiating the Lord by means of horse-sacrifices conducted by the Bhṛgu, Lord Vāmana, who was rich in all strength, proceeded thence (from the hermitage of Aditi) to that place (the sacrificial hall of Bali), causing the earth by His (huge) weight to bend low at every step. (20) The celebrated Bhṛgu, who were conducting as the priests of Bali a horse-sacrifice (the best of all sacrifices) at the (holy) spot bearing the name of Bhṛgu-Kaccha on the northern bank of the (sacred) Narmadā (the modern Narmadā river), keenly observed Him (resplendent) as the sun risen close to them. (21) Eclipsed by the splendour of the divine Dwarf, O protector of human beings, the said priests including the sacrificer (King Bali himself) and the superintending priests thereupon speculated whether the sun-god or Vibhāvasu (the god of fire) or again the (divine) sage Sanatkumāra was actually coming (there) with a desire to witness the sacrificial performance. (22) Thus speculated about by the Bhṛgu and their disciple (Bali) in ways more than one, the said Lord Vāmana (forthwith) entered the enclosure of the horse-sacrifice, bearing the umbrella along with the sacred staff (in one of his hands) and the Kamaṇḍalu full of water (in the other). (23) Observing Lord Śrī Hari as having entered the sacrificial grounds in the form of a short-statured Brāhmaṇa religious student—encircled by a cord of Muñja grass (at His waist), with a deerskin placed baldric-wise after the manner of a sacred thread by way of a covering for the upper part of His body, and having matted hair on His head—and completely overpowered by His lustre, the Bhṛgu along with their disciple (Bali) as well as with the gods of fire welcomed Him by rising from their (respective) seats. (24-25) Overjoyed to see Lord Vāmana, charming and worth seeing with limbs (quite) in proportion to His (diminutive) form, the sacrificer (himself) fetched Him a (suitable) seat. (26) Greeting Him with an enquiry after His health, and then washing the feet of the Lord, Bali worshipped Him who sported in the mind (even) of those that had given up (all) attachment. (27) Bali, who knew what was right, placed on his head (as a mark of respect) the water in which His feet had been washed and which had (thus) been rendered most auspicious, (nay,) which was capable of wiping off the sins of the people, and which (no less a personage than) Lord Śiva (who has His abode on Mount Kailāsa, nay), who is adored by (all the) gods and bears the crescent on His head, bore on His head with supreme devotion. (28)

वलिरुवाच

स्वागतं ते नमस्तुभ्यं ब्रह्मन्किं करवाम ते । ब्रह्मर्षीणां तपः साक्षान्मन्ये त्वाऽऽर्यं वपुर्धरम् । २९ ।
अद्य नः पितरस्तृप्ता अद्य नः पावितं कुलम् । अद्य स्विष्टः क्रतुरयं यद् भवानागतो गृहान् । ३० ।
अद्याग्रयो मे सुहुता यथाविधि द्विजात्मज त्वच्चरणावनेजनैः ।
हतांहसो वार्धिरियं च भूरहो तथा पुनीता तनुभिः पदैस्तव । ३१ ।
यद् यद् वटो वाञ्छसि तत्प्रतीच्छ मे त्वामर्थिनं विप्रसुतानुतर्कये ।
गां काञ्चनं गुणवद् धाम मृष्टं तथान्नपेयमुत वा विप्र कन्याम् ।
ग्रामान् समृद्धांस्तुरगान् गजान् वा रथांस्तथार्हतम् सम्प्रतीच्छ । ३२ ।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे वामनप्रादुर्भावे बलिवामनसंवादेऽष्टादशोऽध्यायः । १८ ।

Bali submitted: I (hereby) extend my (hearty) welcome to you ! May salutations be to you, O (holy) Brāhmaṇa ! What can I do for you? I look upon you, O noble one, as the austerity incarnate of Brāhmaṇa seers.(29) Today the spirits of our deceased forefathers are (fully) sated; today our (entire) race is hallowed and today (alone) this sacrifice (of ours) is successfully performed in that you have visited my house.(30) Today my (sacred) fires stand properly fed according to the scriptural ordinance, O son of a (holy) Brāhmaṇa ! And lo ! this land as well of mine—whose sins have been destroyed by the waters used in washing your feet—has been consecrated by your tiny feet. (31) (Pray,) take from me whatever you desire, O Brahmacārī; (for) I infer you, O son of a (holy) Brāhmaṇa, to be one who seeks for something. (Therefore,) duly accept (from me), O most worthy one, a cow, gold, a house provided with (all) luxuries and comforts, as well as delicious food and drink or even a maid, O (holy) Brāhmaṇa, prosperous villages, horses or elephants and chariots.(32)

Thus ends the eighteenth discourse, bearing on the descent of the divine Dwarf and comprising the dialogue between King Bali and Lord Vāmana, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIX

The Lord asks three paces of land of Bali, who gives his word; while Śukra remonstrates with him against this course

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति वैरोचनेर्वाक्यं धर्मयुक्तं ससूनृतम् । निशम्य भगवान्प्रीतः प्रतिनन्द्येदमब्रवीत् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: The Lord was delighted to hear the aforesaid speech of Bali (the son of Virocana), which was not only just but agreeable and full of truth (as well); and welcoming it, He spoke as follows. (1)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

वचस्तवैतज्जनदेव सूनृतं कुलोचितं धर्मयुतं यशस्करम् ।

यस्य प्रमाणं भृगवः साम्पराये पितामहः कुलवृद्धः प्रशान्तः । २ ।

न होतस्मिन्कुले कश्चिन्निःसत्त्वः कृपणः पुमान् । प्रत्याख्याता प्रतिश्रुत्य यो वादाता द्विजातये । ३ ।

न सन्ति तीर्थे युधि चार्थिनार्थिताः पराङ्मुखा ये त्वमनस्विनो नृपाः ।

युष्मत्कुले यद्यशसामलेन प्रह्लाद उद्भाति यथोद्भुपः खे । ४ ।

यतो जातो हिरण्याक्षश्चरन्नेक इमां महीम् । प्रतिवीरं दिग्विजये नाविन्दत गदायुधः । ५ ।

यं विनिर्जित्य कृच्छ्रेण विष्णुः क्ष्मोद्धार आगतम् । नात्मानं जयिनं मेने तद्वीर्यं भूर्यनुस्मरन् । ६ ।

निशम्य तद्वधं भ्राता हिरण्यकशिपुः पुरा । हन्तुं भ्रातृहणं क्रुद्धो जगाम निलयं हरेः । ७ ।

तमायान्तं समालोक्य शूलपाणिं कृतान्तवत् । चिन्तयामास कालज्ञो विष्णुर्मायाविनां वरः । ८ ।

यतो यतोऽहं तत्रासौ मृत्युः प्राणभृतामिव । अतोऽहमस्य हृदयं प्रवेक्ष्यामि परागदृशः । ९ ।

एवं स निश्चित्य रिपोः शरीरमाधावतो निर्विचिंशोऽसुरेन्द्र ।
 श्वासानिलान्तर्हितसूक्ष्मदेहस्तत्प्राणरन्ध्रेण विविग्रचेताः । १० ।
 स तन्निकेतं परिमृश्य शून्यमपशमानः कुपितो ननाद ।
 क्ष्मां द्यां दिशः खं विवरान् समुद्रान् विष्णुं विचिन्वन् न ददर्श वीरः । ११ ।
 अपश्यन्निति होवाच मयान्विष्टमिदं जगत् । भ्रातृहा मे गतो नूनं यतो नावर्तते पुमान् । १२ ।
 वैरानुबन्धं एतावानामृत्योरिह देहिनाम् । अज्ञानप्रभवो मन्युरहं मानोपबृंहितः । १३ ।
 पिता प्रह्लादपुत्रस्ते तद्विद्वान्द्विजवत्सलः । स्वमायुर्द्विजलिङ्गेभ्यो देवेभ्योऽजात् स याचितः । १४ ।
 भवानाचरितान्धर्मानास्थितो गृहमेधिभिः । ब्राह्मणैः पूर्वजैः शूरैरन्यैश्चोदामकीर्तिभिः । १५ ।
 तस्मात् त्वत्तो महीमीषद् वृणेऽहं वरदर्षभात् । पदानि त्रीणि दैत्येन्द्र संमितानि पदा मम । १६ ।
 नान्यत् ते कामये राजन्वदान्याज्जगदीश्वरात् । नैनः प्राप्नोति वै विद्वान्यावदर्थप्रतिग्रहः । १७ ।

The gracious Lord replied: This speech of yours, O ruler of men, is (both) agreeable and full of truth and just (too), and (thus) not only worthy of your race but conducive to your (own) glory. For your authority in secular matters are the Bhṛgu; whereas in the course of duty relating to the other world your guide is Prahrāda (your grandfather), the eldest of your race and altogether free from passions. (2) Indeed there has never been in this race (of yours) any man who was so lacking in goodness (charity) as to refuse a Brāhmaṇa (waiting at the door for alms) or so niggardly as not to give a thing (even) after promising it. (3) In your race—wherein like the moon in the firmament shines forth by his untarnished glory Prahrāda—there have never been kings who were so low-minded as to turn away their face when requested (for a charitable gift) by a mendicant on an occasion of gift or (for a combat) by one seeking an encounter on the battle-field. (4) Born in this race, Hiraṇyākṣa could not find a rival while traversing this earth (all) alone, armed with a mace, for the conquest of the quarters. (5) Even though Viṣṇu killed him with great difficulty when he appeared (before Viṣṇu) at the time of (the latter's) rescuing the earth (from the bottom of the ocean), Viṣṇu did not account himself victorious recalling Hiraṇyākṣa's superior valour again and again (even after his death). (6) Hearing of his death, his (elder) brother, Hiraṇyakaśipu (Prahrāda's father), full of rage, went of yore to the abode of Hari in order to kill the slayer of his brother. (7) On observing him approaching, spear in hand, like Death (himself), Viṣṇu, who knows what is opportune and is the foremost of those practising conjuring tricks, reflected (thus within himself):— (8) "(Even) as Death dogs the footsteps of living beings (wherever they go), he (Hiraṇyakaśipu) is sure to follow wherever I go. Hence I shall enter his heart (and hide there), his eye being turned to the outer world (alone)". (9) Having concluded thus, Viṣṇu—who was greatly agitated in (his) mind and who hid his body, reduced to a subtle state, in the ingoing breath of Hiraṇyakaśipu—stealthily entered, through the latter's nostril, O ruler of the Asuras, the body of the enemy (Hiraṇyakaśipu), who was rushing towards him. (10) Ransacking his abode, which was devoid of Viṣṇu, yet not perceiving him, Hiraṇyakaśipu roared in rage. The hero (then) searched heaven and earth, the (four) quarters, the aerial region, the (seven) subterranean regions as well as the (seven) oceans, but could not find Viṣṇu (anywhere). (11) Not perceiving Viṣṇu, he actually spoke as follows:— "(The whole of) this universe has been (thoroughly) searched by me (but in vain). The slayer of my brother has (therefore) surely reached the realm (of Death) from which man does not return. (12) The persistence in enmity of embodied souls in this world goes only so far, viz., till (the adversary's) death. And so does their wrath (the father of enmity), which has its root in ignorance (about the true nature of the Spirit, something distinct from the body) and which is nourished by egotism. (13) Your father, the celebrated Virocana (son of Prahrāda), who was (so) fond of the Brāhmaṇas, gave away his own life to the gods (his enemies), appearing in the guise of Brāhmaṇas, when requested (by them), even though he knew their real character. (14) You (too) have observed the rules of conduct followed by Brāhmaṇa householders (like Śukrācārya), your (own) forbears (such as Virocana) and other heroes of wide renown. (15) Of you as such, the foremost of the bestowers of boons, I ask a small strip of land, three paces long, as measured by my stride, O ruler of the Daityas ! (16) I seek nothing else from your magnanimous self, the ruler of the world. Indeed a learned man receiving (by way of a gift only) as much as it is (actually) wanted by him incurs no sin (otherwise attaching to the man who accepts a donation). (17)

बलिरुवाच

अहो ब्राह्मणदायाद वाचस्ते वृद्धसंमताः । त्वं बालो बालिशमतिः स्वार्थं प्रत्यबुधो यथा । १८ ।

मां वचोभिः समाराध्य लोकानामेकमीश्वरम् । पदत्रयं वृणीते योऽबुद्धिमान् द्वीपदाशुषम् । १९ ।

न पुमान् मामुपब्रज्य भूयो याचितुमर्हति । तस्माद् वृत्तिकरिं भूमिं वदो कामं प्रतीच्छ मे । २० ।

Bali submitted : Oh, son of a holy Brāhmaṇa ! your words are commendable in the eyes of elders, although you are (yet) a body of puerile intellect, not properly alive to your own interest, in that you who, having won over by (your) words me, the undisputed ruler of (all) the worlds and (thus) capable of gifting a (whole) continent, ask (of me only) three paces (of land), unwise as you are ! (18-19) Having approached (solicited) me, a man must not beg again. Therefore, O Brāhmaṇa boy, accept at will from me land enough to afford (you) a (decent) living. (20)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

यावन्तो विषयाः प्रेष्टास्त्रिलोक्यामजितेन्द्रियम् । न शक्नुवन्ति ते सर्वे प्रतिपूरयितुं नृप । २१ ।

त्रिभिः क्रमैरसंतुष्टो द्वीपेनापि न पूर्यते । नववर्षसमेतेन सप्तद्वीपवरेच्छया । २२ ।

सप्तद्वीपाधिपतयो नृपा वैन्यगयादयः । अर्थैः कामैर्गता नान्तं तृष्णाया इति नः श्रुतम् । २३ ।

यदृच्छयोपपन्नेन संतुष्टो वर्तते सुखम् । नासंतुष्टस्त्रिभिलोकैरजितात्मोपसादितैः । २४ ।

पुंसोऽयं संसृतेर्हेतुरसंतोषोऽर्थकामयोः । यदृच्छयोपपन्नेन संतोषो मुक्तये स्मृतः । २५ ।

यदृच्छालाभतुष्टस्य तेजो विप्रस्य वर्धते । तत् प्रशाम्यत्यसंतोषादम्भसेवाशुशुक्षणिः । २६ ।

तस्मात् त्रीणि पदान्येव वृणे त्वद् वरदर्शभात् । एतावतैव सिद्धोऽहं वित्तं यावत्प्रयोजनम् । २७ ।

The Lord said : All the dearest objects (or territories) in the three worlds, whatever they are, cannot satiate one who has not been able to subdue his senses and mind, O protector of men. (21) He who is not satisfied with three paces (of land) cannot be sated even with a (whole) continent, consisting of nine Varṣas (sub-continents), as he will be seized with a longing for (all) the seven Dwīpas (main divisions of the globe). (22) Pṛthu (the son of Vena), Gaya and other kings, suzerain lords of (all) the seven Dwīpas, could not reach the end of (their) thirst following from riches and (other) objects of desire: so have we heard. (23) A contented person subsists with ease on whatever is got by luck; (whereas) a discontented fellow of uncontrolled mind does not lead a happy life (even) with (the sovereignty of) the three worlds acquired by him. (24) This discontentment with wealth and sense-enjoyment is responsible for the transmigration of a soul; (while) contentment with whatever is obtained by chance has been declared as conducive to Liberation. (25) The glory of a Brāhmaṇa, contented with whatever is got by chance, grows; through discontent (however) it disappears (even) as fire gets extinguished with water. (26) Therefore, only three paces (of land) do I ask of you, the foremost of the bestowers of boons. I shall have accomplished my purpose with this much alone; (for) wealth is desirable only to the extent of one's (bare) need. (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्तः स हसन्नाह वाञ्छातः प्रतिगृह्यताम् । वामनाय महीं दातुं जग्राह जलभाजनम् । २८ ।

विष्णवे क्ष्मां प्रदास्यन्तमुशना असुरेश्वरम् । जानंश्चिकीर्षितं विष्णोः शिष्यं प्राह विदां वरः । २९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus spoken to, he (Bali) laughingly said, "Take as much as you will." He (then) took up a pot of water* in order to (make a solemn vow to) give (three paces of) land to the divine Dwarf. (28) (The sage) Uśanā (Śukrācārya, the preceptor of the demons), the foremost of the learned, who knew the object of Lord Viṣṇu, warned his disciple, Bali (the ruler of the Asuras)—who was bent on gifting land to the same Lord—(in the following words). (29)

शुक उवाच

एष वैरोचने साक्षाद् भगवान्विष्णुरव्ययः । कश्यपाददितेर्जातो देवानां कार्यसाधकः । ३० ।

प्रतिश्रुतं त्वयैतस्मै यदनर्थमजानता । न साधु मन्ये दैत्यानां महानुपगतोऽनयः । ३१ ।

एष ते स्थानमैश्वर्यं श्रियं तेजो यशः श्रुतम् । दास्यत्याच्छिद्य शक्राय मायामाणवको हरिः । ३२ ।

त्रिभिः क्रमैरिमाँल्लोकान्विश्वकायः क्रमिष्यति । सर्वस्वं विष्णवे दत्त्वा मूढ वर्तिष्यसे कथम् । ३३ ।

क्रमतो गां पदैकेन द्वितीयेन दिवं विभोः । खं च कायेन महता तार्तयिष्य कुतो गतिः । ३४ ।

निष्ठां ते नरके मन्ये ह्यप्रदातुः प्रतिश्रुतम् । प्रतिश्रुतस्य योऽनीशः प्रतिपादयितुं भवान् । ३५ ।

न तद्दानं प्रशंसन्ति येन वृत्तिर्विपद्यते । दानं यज्ञस्तपः कर्म लोके वृत्तिमतो यतः । ३६ ।

धर्माय यशसेऽर्थाय कामाय स्वजनाय च । पञ्चधा विभजन्वित्तमिहामुत्र च मोदते । ३७ ।

अत्रापि बह्वैर्गीतं शृणु मेऽसुरसत्तम । सत्यमोमिति यत् प्रोक्तं यत्रेत्याहानृतं हि तत् । ३८ ।

सत्यं पुष्पफलं विद्यादात्मवृक्षस्य गीयते । वृक्षेऽजीवति तत्र स्यादनृतं मूलमात्मनः । ३९ ।

तद् यथा वृक्ष उन्मूलः शुष्यत्युद्धर्ततेऽचिरात् । एवं नष्टानृतः सद्य आत्मा शुष्येन्न संशयः । ४० ।

पराग् रिक्तमपूर्णं वा अक्षरं यत् तदोमिति । यत् किञ्चिदोमिति ब्रूयात् तेन रिच्येत वै पुमान् ।

भिक्षवे सर्वमोङ्कुर्वन्नालं कामेन चात्मने । ४१ ।

अथैतत् पूर्णमभ्यात्मं यच्च नेत्यनृतं वचः । सर्वं नेत्यनृतं ब्रूयात् स दुष्कीर्तिः श्वसन्मृतः । ४२ ।

स्त्रीषु नर्मविवाहे च वृत्त्यर्थे प्राणसंकटे । गोब्राह्मणार्थे हिसायां नानृतं स्याज्जगुप्सितम् । ४३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे वामनप्रादुर्भावे एकोनविंशोऽध्यायः । १९ ।

Śukra said: Sprung from the loins of the sage Kaśyapa through Aditi, O son of Virocana, this dwarf is no other than the immortal Lord Viṣṇu, who is bent upon accomplishing the purpose of the gods. (30) I do not approve of what you have promised to Him, ignorant as you are of the harm that will follow (from it). A great calamity has surely befallen the Asuras. (31) Appearing as a Brahmacārī (religious student) through (His) Māyā (deluding potency), this Hari will snatch your throne, dominion, fortune, splendour and glory (so) widely known, and bestow it on (His own brother) Śakra (Indra). (32) Assuming a form co-extensive

* It is customary among the Hindus to make a solemn vow or declaration of purpose before actually undertaking any religious act of austerity, sacrifice or gift. The way to do it is to take some water with flowers in the hollow of one's right palm, to mention the time and place of the undertaking and the personal as well as the family name of the person undertaking it, as well as of the Brāhmaṇa on whom a gift is proposed to be bestowed or whose services as an officiating priest are going to be engaged for the occasion, and then to declare the purpose itself. This being done, the water in the hollow of one's palm is discharged on the ground, thus solemnizing the vow.

with the universe, He will cover (all) these (three) worlds (viz., heaven, earth and the intermediate region) in three strides. Giving away (your) all to Viṣṇu, how will you (be able to) keep your body and soul together, O fool? (33) Where will place be found for the third stride of the all-pervading Lord, who will cover the (whole) earth with one colossal stride, heaven with the second and the intervening space with His gigantic person ? (34) For yourself, who will (thus) prove unable to redeem your promise, and fail to make the promised gift, I foresee a firm footing in the infernal region (alone). (35) The wise do not commend that gift (on the part of a donor) through which one's (own) living is lost. For in this world charity, sacrificial performances, austerity and other (righteous) acts are possible for him (alone) who has a means of subsistence. (36) A householder dividing his income into five parts (and utilizing it) for the purposes of (1) (acquiring) religious merit and (2) celebrity, (3) (earning more) wealth, (4) enjoying pleasures and (5) maintaining his own people rejoices in this as well as in the life beyond. (37) On this point (viz., the question of truth and falsehood) too hear from me, O chief of the Asuras, the verdict of the Bahvṛcas (the seers of Ṛgveda): "Whatever is expressed in terms of 'yes' (with reference to the prayer of a petitioner) is truth; (while) that which one utters in terms of 'no' is indeed untruth. (38) One should understand truth to be the flower and fruit of the tree of the body; for it is declared as such (by the Śruti texts). In the event of the tree (itself) not surviving, the fruit and flower (too) will vanish. (And) falsehood (refusal to part with one's possessions) is the secret of preserving one's body (life). (39) Therefore, (just) as a tree that has been uprooted withers up and falls to the ground not long afterwards, so does a body that has lost its support in the shape of falsehood soon dry up: there is no doubt about it. (40) That which is expressed by the syllable 'Om' (yes) (really) takes away wealth to a long distance and (therefore) leaves one devoid of wealth and unsatiated (too). For a man is certainly deprived of that (much of) wealth which—however little it may be—he agrees to part with, saying 'yes'. And he who consents to give everything to a mendicant does not find adequate enjoyment for himself. (41) Therefore, the false statement saying "No" not only keeps one full but also attracts the wealth of others to oneself. But he who utters the falsehood that he has nothing at all (to give) incurs a bad reputation and is (virtually) dead, though breathing. (42) (Uttering) falsehood is not (so) blameworthy (1) in relation to women (while courting them), (2) in jest, (3) during a wedding (while extolling the bridegroom etc.), (4) for the sake of keeping one's body and soul together, (5) in the face of danger to one's life, (6) in the interest of cows and the Brāhmaṇas and (7) where violence (to another) is apprehended." (43)

Thus ends the nineteenth discourse, in continuation of the story of the descent of Lord Vāmana (the divine Dwarf) in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XX

A vision of the Cosmic Body (of the Lord)

श्रीशुक उवाच

बलिरेवं गृहपतिः कुलाचार्येण भाषितः । तूष्णीं भूत्वा क्षणं राजनुवाचावहितो गुरुम् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus spoken to by the sage Śukra (the preceptor of the demon race), Bali, the sacrificer (lit., master of the house or head of his family) kept quiet for a moment and (then) with a concentrated mind submitted to his teacher (as follows). (1)

बलिरुवाच

सत्यं भगवता प्रोक्तं धर्मोऽयं गृहमेधिनाम् । अर्थं कामं यशो वृत्तिं यो न बाधेत कर्हिचित् । २ ।

स चाहं वित्तलोभेन प्रत्याचक्षे कथं द्विजम् । प्रतिश्रुत्य ददामीति प्राह्मादिः कितवो यथा । ३ ।

न ह्यसत्यात् परोऽधर्म इति होवाच भूरियम् । सर्वं सोढुमलं मन्ये ऋतेऽलीकपरं नरम् । ४ ।

नाहं बिभेमि निरयान्नाधन्यादसुखार्णवात् । न स्थानच्यवनान्मृत्योर्यथा विप्रप्रलम्भनात् । ५ ।

यद् यद्धास्यति लोकेऽस्मिन्संपरेतं धनादिकम् । तस्य त्यागे निमित्तं किं विप्रस्तुष्येन्न तेन चेत् । ६ ।

श्रेयः कुर्वन्ति भूतानां साधवो दुस्त्यजासुभिः । दध्यङ्गिबिप्रभृतयः को विकल्पो धरादिषु । ७ ।

यैरियं बुभुजे ब्रह्मन्दैत्येन्द्रैरनिवर्तिभिः । तेषां कालोऽग्रसील्लोकान् न यशोऽधिगतं भुवि । ८ ।

सुलभा युधि विप्रर्षे हनिवृत्तास्तनुत्यजः । न तथा तीर्थं आयाते श्रद्धया ये धनत्यजः । ९ ।

मनस्विनः कारुणिकस्य शोभनं यदर्थिकामोपनयेन दुर्गतिः ।

कुतः पुनर्ब्रह्मविदां भवादृशां ततो वटोरस्य ददामि वाञ्छितम् । १० ।

यजन्ति यज्ञक्रतुभिर्यमादृता भवन्त आम्नायविधानकोविदाः ।

स एव विष्णुर्वरदोऽस्तु वा परो दास्याम्यमुष्मै क्षितिमीप्सितां मुने । ११ ।

यदप्यसावधर्मेण मां बध्नीयादनागसम् । तथाप्येनं न हिंसिष्ये भीतं ब्रह्मतनुं रिपुम् । १२ ।

एष वा उत्तमश्लोको न जिहासति यद् यशः । हत्वा मैनां हरेद् युद्धे शयीत निहतो मया । १३ ।

Bali said : Truly has it been observed by your worshipful self that such (alone) is the duty of householders, as does not at any time interfere with his wealth, enjoyment, fame and livelihood. (2) But, having promised (once) that I shall give, how can I, the celebrated Bali (a scion of Prahrāda) refuse, like a cheat, through greed of wealth, a (holy) Brāhmaṇa? (3) This Earth (once) clearly said: "Indeed there is no unrighteousness greater than falsehood. I regard myself capable of sustaining all other than a man given to lying." (4) I am not afraid (so much) of (the tortures of) hell, poverty and (even) an ocean of misery nor of falling from my position and death (itself) as of playing a Brāhmaṇa false. (5) Whatever wealth etc., there is in this world will (surely) abandon a deceased person. (Why, then, should one not give it away oneself during one's very lifetime?) (And) what apology is there for parting with (only a portion of) such wealth if a Brāhmaṇa is not satisfied with that (much)? Pious souls like the sage Dadhici and king Śibi minister to living beings with their life (itself), (so) difficult to part with. What scruple can there be (under such circumstances) in giving away land etc., (external to the self)? (6-7) Time swallowed the enjoyments of those lords of the Daityas by whom, O holy Brāhmaṇa, (the whole of) this globe was ruled over and who never retreated (in battle), but not (so) the celebrity acquired by them on earth (which still survives). (8)

Warriors not turning back and laying down their lives on the field of battle, O Brāhmaṇa sage, are indeed easy to find, but not so those (liberal souls) who give away (their) fortune with reverence when a worthy recipient comes. (9) It is (rather) graceful for a magnanimous and compassionate soul that poverty should overtake him in consequence of (his) gratifying the desire of (ordinary) petitioners, much more of knowers of Brahma like you. Hence I shall (presently) confer the desired boon on this Brahmācārī. (10) Be he the selfsame Lord Viṣṇu, the Bestower of boons, whom you, well-versed in the Vedic rituals, worship with reverence through Kratus (sacrificial performances in which the use of the Soma plant is indispensable and Yajñas (those in which the Soma plant is not used), or be he an enemy, I shall bestow on him the land sought for, O holy sage! (11) Even if he unrighteously puts me— even though faultless—in bonds, yet I shall not hurt him, my enemy disguised as a Brāhmaṇa, and (therefore) afraid (of me). (12) If he is really Lord Viṣṇu (of excellent fame), he would not forfeit his fair name (by playing me false) and might (as well) wrest the earth (from me, even if I were loth to part with it) after killing me in battle; or, being slain by me, he might lie in (eternal) sleep (if he is an impostor). (13)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमश्रद्धितं शिष्यमनादेशकरं गुरुः । शशाप दैवप्रहितः सत्यसन्धं मनस्विनम् । १४ ।
 दृढं पण्डितमान्यज्ञः स्तब्धोऽस्यस्मदुपेक्षया । मच्छासनातिगो यस्त्वमचिराद् भ्रश्यसे श्रियः । १५ ।
 एवं शप्तः स्वगुरुणा सत्यान्न चलितो महान् । वामनाय ददावेनामर्चित्वोदकपूर्वकम् । १६ ।
 विन्ध्यावलिस्तदाऽऽगत्य पत्नी जालकमालिनी । आनित्ये कलशं हैमवनेजन्यपां भृतम् । १७ ।
 यजमानः स्वयं तस्य श्रीमत् पादयुगं मुदा । अवनिज्यावहन्मूर्ध्नि तदपो विश्वपावनीः । १८ ।
 तदाऽसुरेन्द्रं दिवि देवतागणा गन्धर्वविद्याधरसिद्धचारणाः ।
 तत्कर्म सर्वेऽपि गृणन्त आर्जवं प्रसूनवर्षैर्वृषुर्मुदान्विताः । १९ ।
 नेदुर्मुहुर्दुभयः सहस्रशो गन्धर्वकिंपुरुषकिन्नरा जगुः ।
 मनस्विनानेन कृतं सुदुष्करं विद्वानदाद् यद् रिपवे जगत्त्रयम् । २० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Impelled by Providence, Śukrācārya (the preceptor) cursed (in the following words) his high-minded disciple (Bali), who, being true to his promise, had thus grown (apparently) irreverent (towards his preceptor) and refused to obey him:— (14) "You, who have grown so arrogant as to violate my command, a highly conceited fool that you are, will soon fall from your high position through disregard shown to us." (15) Though imprecated in this way by his own teacher, the great soul did not deviate from truth and gifted the land (asked by Him) to the divine Dwarf after (duly) worshipping Him and pouring water (from his right palm in order to solemnize the gift). (16) His wife, Vindhyāvali, who was adorned with a pearl necklace, then came and brought a pitcher of gold, full of water to wash His feet with. (17) The sacrificer (Bali) himself washed with delight the glorious feet of the Lord and bore on his head that water, which was capable of consecrating the (whole) universe. (18) Applauding that action (of Bali) as well as his guilelessness, all the hosts of gods in heaven, as well as Gandharvas, Vidyādharas, Siddhas and Cāraṇas, full of joy, greeted the lord of the demons at that time with showers of flowers, even though they were his enemies. (19) Kettledrums were sounded in thousands again and again; while Gandharvas, Kimpuruṣas and Kinnaras sang (in the following strain):—"A most difficult task has been done by this noble soul in that he has knowingly given away all the three worlds to his enemy." (20)

तद् वामनं रूपमवर्धताद्भुतं हरेरनन्तस्य गुणत्रयात्मकम् ।
 भूः खं दिशो द्यौर्विवराः पयोधयस्तिर्यङ् नृदेवा ऋषयो यदासत । २१ ।

काये बलिस्तस्य महाविभूतेः सहर्त्विगाचार्यसदस्य एतत् ।
 ददर्श विश्वं त्रिगुणं गुणात्मके भूतेन्द्रियार्थाशयजीवयुक्तम् । २२ ।
 रसामचष्टाङ्घ्रितलेऽथ पादयोर्महीं महीध्रान्पुरुषस्य जङ्घयोः ।
 पतत्रिणो जानुनि विश्वमूर्तेरूर्वोर्गणं मारुतमिन्द्रसेनः । २३ ।
 सन्ध्यां विभोर्वाससि गुह्य ऐक्षत् प्रजापतीञ्जघने आत्ममुख्यान् ।
 नाभ्यां नभः कुक्षिषु सप्तसिन्धूनुक्रमस्योरसि चर्क्षमालाम् । २४ ।
 हृद्यङ्गं धर्मं स्तनयोर्मुरारेर्ऋतं च सत्यं च मनस्येन्दुम् ।
 श्रियं च वक्षस्यरविन्दहस्तां कण्ठे च सामानि समस्तरेफान् । २५ ।
 इन्द्रप्रधानानमरान्भुजेषु तत्कर्णयोः ककुभो द्यौश्च मूर्ध्नि ।
 केशेषु मेघाञ्चसनं नासिकायामक्ष्णोश्च सूर्यं वदने च वह्निम् । २६ ।
 वाण्यां च छन्दांसि रसे जलेशं भुवोर्निषेधं च विधिं च पक्ष्मसु ।
 अहश्च रात्रिं च परस्य पुंसो मन्युं ललाटेऽधर एव लोभम् । २७ ।
 स्पर्शं च कामं नृप रेतसोऽम्भः पृष्ठे त्वधर्मं क्रमणेषु यज्ञम् ।
 छायासु मृत्युं हसिते च मायां तनूरुहेष्वोषधिजातयश्च । २८ ।
 नदीश्च नाडीषु शिला नखेषु बुद्धावजं देवगणानूर्ध्वं च ।
 प्राणेषु गात्रे स्थिरजङ्गमानि सर्वाणि भूतानि ददर्श वीरः । २९ ।

(In the meantime) that diminutive form of Śrī Hari, the infinite Lord, which comprised in itself the three Guṇas (as well as their product, the universe) grew to such a wonderful extent that the earth, the sky (the aerial region), the (four) quarters, heaven, the subterranean regions and the (seven) oceans as well as (the various species of living beings such as) human beings, gods, Ṛṣis, and the subhuman creation (all) found their place in it. (21) In the body of that Lord (of extraordinary powers), which is the Ground of the three Guṇas (of which his universe is constituted), Bali along with the priests (officiating at the sacrifice), the preceptor and the superintending priests beheld (the whole of) this universe, made up of the (aforesaid) three Guṇas, including the five (gross) elements, the (ten) Indriyas (the five senses of perception as well as the five organs of action), the (five) objects of the senses (viz., sound, touch, colour, taste and smell), the mind (in its four aspects) and the Jīva (the embodied soul). (22) Bali (who had an army as strong and equipped as that of Indra, whose throne he was now occupying) saw the (seven) subterranean regions at the sole of the feet of the Supreme Person, appearing in His cosmic form, the earth in His feet, mountains in His hands, (the realm of) the feathered kingdom (viz., the atmosphere) in His knees and the host of gods (forty-nine in number) presiding over the air in His thighs. (23) He (further) beheld Sandhyā (the deity presiding over the morning and evening twilights) in the loin-cloth of the universal Lord, the Asuras headed by himself (Bali) in His anus, the sage Marīci and others the lords of created beings in His genitals, the firmament in His navel, the seven oceans in His sides and the host of stars in the chest of the Lord of wide strides. (24) Again, he saw Dharma (the god of piety), O dear Parikṣit, in the heart of Lord Viṣṇu (the Slayer of the demon Hura), (the gods presiding over) Ṛta (truthful and polite language) and Satya (seeing all with the same eye) in His breasts, and the moon-god in His mind, Śrī (the goddess presiding over riches and beauty) with a lotus in Her hand in His bosom and the Sāmas (sacred texts forming part of Sāmaveda) as well as all sounds in His throat. (25) He also beheld the immortals with Indra as their head in His arms and the (four) quarters in His ears, heaven in His crown, clouds in His looks, the air in His nostrils, the sun in His eyes and fire in His mouth. (26) He further witnessed the Vedas in the speech of the Supreme Person. Varuṇa (the god of water) in His palate, the interdictory as well as the injunctive part of the sacred texts in His eyebrows, the day and the night in (the two rows of) His eyelashes, and Anger in His forehead and Greed precisely in His lips. (27) And He saw Love in His tactile sense, O protector of men, water in His generative fluid and Unrighteousness in His back, sacrificial activity in His strides, Death in His shadow and Māyā (creative energy) in His laughter and the (innumerable) species of herbs and annual plants in the hair on His body. (28) The hero (Bali) beheld rivers in His arteries, rocks in His nails, Brahmā (the birthless) in His intellect, hosts of gods (presiding over the Indriyas) as well as Ṛṣis in His Indriyas and all created beings—(both) immobile and mobile—in His person. (29)

सर्वात्मनीदं भुवनं निरीक्ष्य सर्वेऽसुराः कश्मलमापुरङ्ग ।
 सुदर्शनं चक्रमसह्यतेजो धनुश्च शार्ङ्गं स्तनयितुघोषम् । ३० ।
 पर्जन्यघोषो जलजः पाञ्चजन्यः कौमोदकी विष्णुगदा तरस्विनी ।
 विद्याधरोऽसिः शतचन्द्रयुक्तस्तूणोत्तमावक्षयसायकौ च । ३१ ।
 सुनन्दमुख्या उपतस्थुरीशं पार्षदमुख्याः सहलोकपालाः ।
 स्फुरत्किरीटाङ्गदमीनकुण्डलश्रीवत्सरत्नोत्तममेखलाम्बरैः । ३२ ।
 मधुव्रतस्त्रग्वनमालया वृतो रराज राजन्भगवानुरुक्रमः ।
 क्षिति पदैकेन बलेर्विचक्रमे नभः शरीरेण दिशश्च बाहुभिः । ३३ ।
 पदं द्वितीयं क्रमतस्त्रिविष्टपं न वै तृतीयाय तदीयमण्वपि ।
 उरुक्रमस्याङ्घ्रिरुपर्युपर्यथो महर्जनाभ्यां तपसः परं गतः । ३४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे विश्वरूपदर्शनं नाम विंशतितमोऽध्यायः । २० ।

Observing this universe in the all-sustaining (person of the) Lord, all the demons were seized with fear, O dear one ! His (well-known) discus, Sudarśana, possessing an effulgence (the sight of) which was unbearable, and the (famous) Śārṅga bow (made of horn and), of thunder-like twangs, His conch, Pāñcajanya (by name), which roared like thunder, Kaumodakī, the mighty mace of Lord Viṣṇu, His sword, Vidyādhara (also known by the name of Nandaka), pairing with (the shield called) Śatacandra (so-called because it is adorned with a hundred studs resplendent as the moon) and the two excellent quivers containing an inexhaustible stock of arrows, and His chief attendants with Sunanda as their head, accompanied by the guardians of the (various) worlds, waited on the Lord all (in a living form). With a diadem, armlets and a pair of alligator-shaped ear-rings glistening (on His person) and adorned with (the mark of) Śrīvatsa (a white curl of hair on His bosom) and the Kaustubha gem (the foremost of all jewels), and encircled by a girdle, clad in yellow and decked with a wreath of sylvan flowers hovered about by a swarm of black bees, the Lord of wide strides shone brightly, O king ! With a single stride He measured the earth, which (entirely) belonged to Bali, and covered the sky (aerial region) with His person (trunk) and the (four) quarters with His arms. (30—33) To Him as He took a second stride heaven proved of no account (covering only a negligible part of His stride), so that indeed not an atom (of space) was left for a third. (For,) extending higher and higher, the foot of the Cosmic Person presently reached beyond Maharloka and Janaloka as well as beyond Tapoloka (as far as Satyaloka, the realm of Brahmā). (34)

Thus ends the twentieth discourse entitled "A vision of the Cosmic Form (of the Loro)", in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXI

Bali put in bonds

श्रीशुक उवाच

सत्यं समीक्ष्याब्जभवो नखेन्दुभिर्हतस्वधामद्युतिरावृतोऽभ्यगात् ।
 मरीचिमिश्रा ऋषयो बृहद्वृताः सनन्दनाद्या नरदेव योगिनः । १ ।
 वेदोपवेदा नियमान्विता यमास्तर्केतिहासाङ्गपुराणसंहिता ।
 ये चापरे योगसमीरदीपितज्ञानाग्निना रन्धितकर्मकल्मषाः ।
 ववन्दिरे यत्स्मरणानुभावतः स्वायम्भुवं धाम गता अकर्मकम् । २ ।
 अथाङ्घ्रये प्रोन्नमिताय विष्णोरुपाहरत् पद्मभवोऽर्हणोदकम् ।
 समर्च्य भक्त्याभ्यगुणाच्छुचिश्रवा यन्नाभिपङ्केरुहसंभवः स्वयम् । ३ ।
 धातुः कमण्डलुजलं तदुरुक्रमस्य पादावनेजनपवित्रतया नरेन्द्र ।
 स्वर्धन्यभूत्रभसि सा पतती निमार्ष्टि लोकत्रयं भगवतो विशदेव कीर्तिः । ४ ।
 ब्रह्मादयो लोकनाथाः स्वनाथाय समादृताः । सानुगा बलिमाजहुः संक्षिप्तात्मविभूतये । ५ ।
 तोयैः समर्हणैः स्त्रग्भिर्दिव्यगन्धानुलेपनैः । धूपैर्दीपैः सुरभिर्भिलांजाक्षतफलाङ्कुरैः । ६ ।
 स्तवनैर्जयशब्दैश्च तद्द्वैर्यमहिमाङ्कितैः । नृत्यवादित्रगीतैश्च शङ्खदुन्दुभिनिःस्वनैः । ७ ।
 जाम्बवानृक्षराजस्तु भेरीशब्दैर्मनोजवः । विजयं दिक्षु सर्वासु महोत्सवमघोषयत् । ८ ।
 महीं सर्वा हतां दृष्ट्वा त्रिपदव्याजयाच्चया । ऊचुः स्वभर्तुस्सुरा दीक्षितस्यात्यमर्षिताः । ९ ।
 न वा अयं ब्रह्मबन्धुर्विष्णुर्मायाविनां वरः । द्विजरूपप्रतिच्छन्नो देवकार्यं चिकीर्षति । १० ।
 अनेन याचमानेन शत्रुणा वदुरुपिणा । सर्वस्वं नो हतं भर्तुर्न्यस्तदण्डस्य बर्हिषि । ११ ।
 सत्यव्रतस्य सततं दीक्षितस्य विशेषतः । नानृतं भाषितुं शक्यं ब्रह्मण्यस्य दयावतः । १२ ।
 तस्मादस्य वधो धर्मो भर्तुः शुश्रूषणं च नः । इत्यायुधानि जगृहुर्बलेरनुचरासुराः । १३ ।
 ते सर्वे वामनं हन्तुं शूलपट्टिशपाणयः । अनिच्छतो बले राजन् प्राद्रवज्जातमन्यवः । १४ ।
 तानभिद्रवतो दृष्ट्वा दितिजानीकपान् नृप । प्रहस्यानुचरा विष्णोः प्रत्यषेधन्नुदायुधाः । १५ ।
 नन्दः सुनन्दोऽथ जयो विजयः प्रबलो बलः । कुमुदः कुमुदाक्षश्च विष्टवस्तेनः पतत्रिराद । १६ ।
 जयन्तः श्रुतदेवश्च पुष्पदन्तोऽथ सात्वतः । सर्वे नागायुतप्राणाश्चमूं ते जघ्मुरासुरीम् । १७ ।
 हन्यमानान् स्वकान् दृष्ट्वा पुरुषानुचरैर्बलिः । वारयामास संरब्धान् काव्यशापमनुस्मरन् । १८ ।
 हे विप्रचित्ते हे राहो हे नेमे श्रूयतां वचः । मा युध्यत निवर्तध्वं न नः कालोऽयमर्थकृत् । १९ ।
 यः प्रभुः सर्वभूतानां सुखदुःखोपपत्तये । तं नातिवर्तितुं दैत्याः पौरुषैरीश्वरः पुमान् । २० ।
 यो नो भवाय प्रागासीदभवाय दिवौकसाम् । स एव भगवानद्य वर्तते तद्विपर्ययम् । २१ ।

बलेन सचिवैर्बुद्ध्या दुर्गैर्मन्त्रौषधादिभिः । सामादिभिरुपायैश्च कालं नात्येति वै जनः । २२ ।
 भवद्विर्निर्जिता ह्येते बहुशोऽनुचरा हरेः । दैवेनर्द्धैस्त एवाद्य युधि जित्वा नदन्ति नः । २३ ।
 एतान् वयं विजेष्यामो यदि दैवं प्रसीदति । तस्मात् कालं प्रतीक्षध्वं यो नोऽर्थत्वाय कल्पते । २४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Observing the Lord's foot as having reached Satyaloka, Brahmā (the lotus-born), who was (now) encircled by (the lustre of) the moon-like nails (of that foot) and whose (very) realm was eclipsed by them, went forth to greet the foot. So did Marīci and the other seers, lifelong celibates (like the celestial sage Nārada) and Yogis (united with the Lord through perception of identity), headed by Sanandana, O ruler among men, (deities presiding over) the (four) Vedas as well as the (four) Upavedas,* the (twelve) Yamas † (forms of self-discipline) along with the (twelve) Niyamas ‡ (religious vows), (the science of) logic, Itihāsas (works on history such as the Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki and the Mahābhārata), the (six) Vedāṅgas (classes of works regarded as auxiliary to the Vedas and designed to aid in the correct pronunciation and interpretation of the text and the right employment of the Mantras in ceremonials), the (eighteen) Purāṇas and Saṁhitās (methodically arranged collections of sacred texts or verses, such as the Pañcarātra-Saṁhitā, Brahma-Saṁhitā, Sūta-Saṁhitā and Garga-Saṁhitā) and whoever else had their impurities in the shape of Karma burnt up with the fire of wisdom kindled by the breeze of Yoga (contemplation on God), and bowed to that foot, by virtue of whose contemplation they had ascended to the realm of Brahmā (the self-born), (which is) not accessible through rituals. (1-2) Now Brahmā of unsullied fame offered water as an act of worship to the upraised foot of Lord Viṣṇu, from the lotus at whose navel he had himself emerged; and having duly worshipped the foot (in other ways too), he sang His praises with devotion. (3) That water poured from the water-pot of Brahmā (the creator) came to be the (holy) Gaṅgā (the heavenly river) because of its being hallowed by washing the aforesaid foot of Lord Viṣṇu (of wide strides), O ruler of men. Falling through the heavens, the stream purifies (all) the three worlds (through which it courses) as the Lord's untarnished fame does. (4) Full of great reverence, Brahmā and other guardians of the (various) worlds along with their followers offered worship to their own Ruler—who had (now) contracted His dimensions (once more resumed His diminutive form)—with water (to wash His hands and feet, rinse His mouth, and bathe Him with), presents (of various kinds), fragrant wreaths of flowers, ethereal perfumes and sandalpaste etc., to daub His person with, incense (of various kinds), lights, parched grains of paddy, unbroken rice, fruits and sprouts, songs of praise and shouts of victory marked by the glory of His power, dances and music—both instrumental and vocal—and the sound of conchs and kettledrums. (5—7) Jāmbavān, the king of the bears[§], who ran swift as thought, actually proclaimed (while running) by (repeated) sounds of drum in all the (four) quarters the triumph (of Lord Vāmana), (which was) marked with great festivity. (8) Enraged at finding the whole earth, which was till now in the possession of their master—who had taken a solemn undertaking to perform a sacrifice (and to abstain in consequence from all forms of violence till the end of the

* A class of writings subordinate to the Vedas, viz., Āyurveda or the science of medicine, Dhanurveda or the military science, Gandharvaveda or the science of music and Sthāpatyaveda or the science of architecture which are attached in order to Rgveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda and Atharvaveda.

† & ‡ For a list of the Yamas and Niyamas vide translation of IV. xxii. 24.

§ He is the same Jāmbavān who subsequently figured so prominently in the expedition of Śrī Rāma against Lankā in the Tretā age and also unwittingly fought with Śrī Kṛṣṇa in the Dwāpara age—vide X.55 of Śrīmad Bhāgavata.

sacrifice)—snatched away (from him) by recourse to a deceitful prayer for three paces of land, the Asuras said (to one another):— (9) "He is certainly not a begging Brāhmaṇa but Viṣṇu (himself), the foremost of (all) conjurers, who—concealed (as he is) under the guise of a Brāhmaṇa—seeks to accomplish the purpose of the gods. (10) By this fellow, (who is no other than) an enemy disguised as a Brāhmaṇa boy, stands wrested, under pretext of begging, everything belonging to our master (king Bali), who has relinquished (all forms of) violence by reason of his sacrificial activity. (11) Falsehood is not possible for our master, who is ever vowed to truthfulness, particularly so long as he is consecrated for sacrificial activity, (nay,) who is devoted to the Brāhmaṇas and full of compassion (to all). (12) Therefore, it is our sacred duty and a (distinct) service to our lord to kill this fellow." Saying so, the Asuras forming the retinue of Bali took up (their) arms. (13) Their anger having been roused, they all ran forward, Śūla (an ancient spear-like steel weapon) and Paṭṭiśa (a kind of sharp-edged spear) in hand, to strike the divine Dwarf, even though Bali did not desire it, O Parikṣit ! (14) Seeing those Daitya generals attacking the divine Dwarf, the attendants of Lord Viṣṇu heartily laughed and stopped them, their weapons uplifted (to meet their onslaught). (15) Nanda and Sunanda, Jaya, Vijaya, Prabala, Bala, Kumuda and Kumudākṣa, Viṣwakṣena, Garuḍa (the ruler of the feathered kingdom), Jayanta and Śrutadeva, Puṣpadanta and Sātvaṭa, each possessing the strength of ten thousand elephants—they all proceeded to extirpate the Asura army. (16-17) Finding his own people being slain by the attendants of Lord Viṣṇu (the supreme Person), and recollecting the imprecation pronounced by the sage Kāvya (Śukrācārya), Bali stopped them (in the following words), enraged as they were:—(18) "O Vipracitti, Hullo Rāhu, O Nemi, listen to my word. (Pray,) do not make war, but retreat; (for) the present time is not conducive to our advantage. (19) No individual is able to prevail through (personal) prowess, O Daityas, over Him (the Time-Spirit) who is capable of bringing joy and sorrow to all created beings. (20) The same Lord who was formerly favourable to our growth and conducive to the decline of the gods (lit., the denizens of heaven), is proving the reverse of that (i.e., favourable to the growth of the divinities and conducive to our decline). (21) Indeed no created being can override the Time-Spirit through physical strength, (expert) counsellors, (a penetrating) intellect, fortifications, spells and medicines and through conciliation and other expedients. (22) These attendants of Hari were actually routed by you several times when you were fostered by fate. Having conquered us in battle, the very same people are roaring today. (23) We shall utterly vanquish them if fate turns out to be propitious (again). Therefore, await a time which may redound to our advantage. (24)

श्रीशुक उवाच

पत्युर्निगदितं श्रुत्वा दैत्यदानवयूथपाः । रसां निविविधू राजन् विष्णुपार्षदताडिताः । २५ ।
 अथ तार्क्ष्यसुतो ज्ञात्वा विराट्प्रभुचिकीर्षितम् । बबन्ध वारुणैः पाशैर्बलिं सौत्येऽहनि क्रतौ । २६ ।
 हाहाकारो महानासीद् रोदस्योः सर्वतोदिशम् । गृह्यमाणेऽसुरपतौ विष्णुना प्रभविष्णुना । २७ ।
 तं बद्धं वारुणैः पाशैर्भगवानाह वामनः । नष्टश्रियं स्थिरप्रज्ञमुदारयशसं नृप । २८ ।
 पदानि त्रीणि दत्तानि भूमेर्मह्यं त्वयासुर । द्वाभ्यां क्रान्ता मही सर्वा तृतीयमुपकल्पय । २९ ।
 यावत् तपत्यसौ गोभिर्यावदिन्दुः सहोडुभिः । यावद् वर्षति पर्जन्यस्तावती भूरियं तव । ३० ।
 पदैकेन मया क्रान्तो भूर्लोकः खं दिशस्तनोः । स्वर्लोकस्तु द्वितीयेन पश्यतस्ते स्वमात्मना । ३१ ।
 प्रतिश्रुतमदातुस्ते निरये वास इष्यते । विश त्वं निरयं तस्माद् गुरुणा चानुमोदितः । ३२ ।
 वृथा मनोरथस्तस्य दूरे स्वर्गः पतत्यधः । प्रतिश्रुतस्यादानेन योऽर्थिनं विप्रलम्बते । ३३ ।

विप्रलब्धो ददामीति त्वयाहं चाढ्यमानिना । तद् व्यलीकफलं भुङ्क्व निरयं कतिचित् समाः । ३४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे वामनप्रादुर्भावे बलिनिग्रहे नामैकविंशोऽध्यायः । १२१ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing the (aforesaid) speech of their master (Bali), the Daitya and Dānava generals, beaten by the attendants of Lord Viṣṇu, withdrew to the nether world, O king ! (25) Thereupon Garuḍa (the ruler of the feathered kingdom), son of Tārksya (the sage Kaśyapa), knowing (as he did) the intention of his Master, bound Bali with cords of Varuṇa (the god of water) on the day fixed for extracting the juice of the Soma plant in the course of that sacrificial performance. (26) On Bali (the lord of the Asuras) being taken prisoner by the all-powerful Lord Viṣṇu, there was a loud wailing on earth and in heaven as well as in all the (four) quarters. (27) The divine Dwarf (then) spoke (as follows) to Bali, of wide renown, who had (in this way) lost his fortune and was bound with the cords of Varuṇa, yet whose presence of mind was unshaken, O protector of human beings ! (28) "Three paces of land were alienated by you in My favour, O Asura. In two strides the whole earth (including heaven) has been covered; (now) show Me ground for the third. (29) The entire extent of this earth, which the sun warms with its rays, (nay,) which the moon along with the lunar mansions illuminates and which the god of rain pours showers upon, was yours. (30) In one footstep has been covered by Me (the whole of) the terrestrial region; the sky (the aerial region) as well as the (four) quarters, by My body (because the land granted by you must include space enough to allow My whole body to stand on it) and the celestial region, in the second footstep. In this way before your (very) eyes whatever was yours has been occupied by My all-pervading Self. (31) A place is (accordingly) decreed in the infernal region for you, who have failed to give what was promised by you. For this reason as well as because you have been recommended (for it) by your preceptor (too), enter you the infernal region. (32) His aspirations (for happiness here) fall to the ground, and heaven remains a far cry for him; (on the other hand,) he descends into hell, who plays a petitioner false by failing to give the promised gift. (33) I too have (likewise) been deceived by you—proud as you were of being rich—with the words "I shall give (you the desired land)." Therefore, reap the fruit of uttering a falsehood in the shape of damnation for some years. (34)

Thus ends the twenty-first discourse entitled "Bali put in bonds", bearing on the story of the descent of the divine Dwarf, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXII

A dialogue between king Bali and Lord Vāmana

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं विप्रकृतो राजन् बलिर्भगवतासुरः । भिद्यमानोऽप्यभिन्नात्मा प्रत्याहाविक्रवं वचः । १ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus subjected to contumely by the Lord, O Parikṣit, Bali, the demon chief—who remained unagitated in mind, even though the Lord tried to unnerve him (in order to demonstrate to the world his strength of resolution and thereby enhance his reputation)—gave the following calm reply. (1)

वलिरुवाच

यद्युत्तमश्लोक भवान् ममेरितं वचो व्यलीकं सुरवर्यं मन्यते ।

करोम्यृतं तन्न भवेत् प्रलम्भनं पदं तृतीयं कुरु शीर्ष्णि मे निजम् । २ ।

बिभेमि नाहं निरयात् पदच्युतो न पाशबन्धाद् व्यसनाद् दुरत्ययात् ।

नैवार्थकृच्छ्राद् भवतो विनिग्रहादसाधुवादाद् भृशमुद्विजे यथा । ३ ।

पुंसां श्लाघ्यतमं मन्ये दण्डमर्हत्तमार्पितम् । यं न माता पिता भ्राता सुहृदश्चादिशन्ति हि । ४ ।

त्वं नूनमसुराणां नः पारोक्ष्यः परमो गुरुः । यो नोऽनेकमदान्धानां विभ्रंशं चक्षुरादिशत् । ५ ।

यस्मिन् वैरानुबन्धेन रूढेन विबुधेतराः । बहवो लेभिरे सिद्धिं यामु हैकान्तयोगिनः । ६ ।

तेनाहं निगृहीतोऽस्मि भवता भूरिकर्मणा । बद्धश्च वारुणैः पाशैर्नातिव्रीडे न च व्यथे । ७ ।

पितामहो मे भवदीयसंमतः प्रहाद आविष्कृतसाधुवादः ।

भवद्विपक्षेण विचित्रवैशसं संप्रापितस्त्वत्परमः स्वपित्रा । ८ ।

किमात्मनानेन जहाति योऽन्ततः किं रिक्थहारैः स्वजनाख्यदस्युभिः ।

किं जायया संसृतिहेतुभूतया मर्त्यस्य गेहैः किमिहायुषो व्ययः । ९ ।

इत्थं स निश्चित्य पितामहो महानगाधबोधो भवतः पादपद्मम् ।

ध्रुवं प्रपेदे ह्यकुतोभयं जनाद् भीतः स्वपक्षक्षपणस्य सत्तमः । १० ।

अथाहमप्यात्मरिपोस्तवान्तिकं दैवेन नीतः प्रसभं त्याजितश्रीः ।

इदं कृतान्तान्तिकवर्ति जीवितं ययाध्रुवं स्तब्धमतिर्न बुध्यते । ११ ।

Bali submitted : O illustrious One, if You consider the vow made by me to be untrue, O chief of the gods, I shall (presently) justify it, inasmuch as it was not intended to deceive You. I pray, place Your third footstep on my head (which is certainly more valuable than my possessions taken together). (2) Fallen as I (already) am from my position (sovereignty of the three worlds), I am not so very afraid of damnation nor of being bound with cords nor again of a calamity which cannot be easily got rid of, much less of a financial crisis, (nay,) not (even) of punishment at Your hands, as of being called ignoble. (3) I regard, as most valuable for persons, punishment inflicted by the most worthy, (which is a blessing in disguise and) which as a matter of fact no mother, father, brother or friends can mete out. (4) Disguised as an enemy, you are indeed the greatest benefactor to us, Asuras—You, who have vouchsafed vision in the shape of a fall (from power) to us, (who were) blinded with arrogance from manifold causes, and by nursing (a feeling of) deep-rooted enmity towards whom many an Asura has actually attained perfection (in the form of final beatitude), which only those possessed of exclusive devotion could attain. (5-6) By You as such of manifold activity have I been taken prisoner and bound with the cords of Varuṇa (the god of water). Yet I feel neither much ashamed nor afflicted (thereby). (7) My grandfather, Prahrāda, who is esteemed by Your devotees and whose reputation as a pious soul is manifest, was subjected to a variety of tortures by his own father (Hiranyakaśipu), Your (sworn) enemy, only because he was devoted to You. (8) "What purpose of a mortal will be served through his body, which will ultimately abandon him? What will be gained (by him) through robbers passing under the name of kinsfolk and carrying away his wealth? What object (of his) will be accomplished through a wife either, who is instrumental in bringing him transmigration, and what useful purpose of his will be served through houses? In (love for) these is involved (mere) waste of one's lifetime." (9) Having concluded thus, the aforesaid Prahārāda (my grandfather); an exalted soul possessed of unfathomable wisdom and the foremost of the virtuous, took shelter in Your lotus-feet—which are eternal and have no fear from any quarter (whatsoever), even though You destroyed his own kinsmen (the demons)—afraid as he was of (the company of) worldly people. (10) And I too have been brought to Your presence by (a propitious) fate, even though You pose as my enemy, and have been forcibly robbed of my fortune; for a man whose understanding has been rendered obtuse by wealth does not recognize this life, which is (always) within easy reach of Death, as uncertain. (11)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तस्येत्थं भाषमाणस्य प्रह्लादो भगवत्प्रियः । आजगाम कुरुश्रेष्ठ राकापतिरिवोत्थितः । १२ ।

तमिन्द्रसेनः स्वपितामहं श्रिया विराजमानं नलिनायतेक्षणम् ।

प्रांशुं पिशङ्गाम्बरमञ्जनत्विषं प्रलम्बबाहुं सुभगं समैक्षत । १३ ।

तस्मै बलिर्वारुणपाशयन्त्रितः समर्हणं नोपजहार पूर्ववत् ।

ननाम मूर्ध्नाश्रुविलोललोचनः सत्रीडनीचीनमुखो बभूव ह । १४ ।

स तत्र हासीनमुदीक्ष्य सत्पतिं सुनन्दनन्दाद्यनुगैरुपासितम् ।

उपेत्य भूमौ शिरसा महामना ननाम मूर्ध्ना पुलकाश्रुविक्रवः । १५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: While he was thus speaking, Prahārāda, the beloved of the Lord, appeared (there), O chief of the Kurus, as the moon above the horizon. (12) Indrasena (Bali) observed Prahārāda (his own grand-father)—tall and handsome, though dark as collyrium, clad in yellow, with eyes big as (a pair of) lotuses and pretty long arms, and shining brightly with (his native) glory. (13) Bound with the cords of Varuṇa, Bali could not offer due worship to him as he used to do before. He (simply) bowed with his head (bent low), his eyes confounded with tears (brought by the thought of the insolent language used by him with reference to the Lord), and remained with his head hung down evidently with shame. (14) Seeing the Lord (who is the Protector of the virtuous) sitting there and waited upon by His attendants, Sunanda, Nanda and others, the high-minded Prahārāda was overwhelmed with tears and a thrill (of joy). He approached Him with head bent low and bowed with his head placed on the ground. (15)

प्रह्लाद उवाच

त्वयैव दत्तं पदमैन्द्रमूर्जितं हृतं तदेवाद्य तथैव शोभनम् ।

मन्ये महानस्य कृतो ह्यनुग्रहो विभ्रंशितो यच्चिह्न्य आत्ममोहनात् । १६ ।

यया हि विद्वानपि मुह्यते यतस्तत् को विचष्टे गतिमात्मनो यथा ।

तस्मै नमस्ते जगदीश्वराय वै नारायणाद्याखिललोकसाक्षिणे । १७ ।

Prahārāda submitted: It was by You alone that this exalted position of Indra (the lord of paradise) was conferred (on him as a reward for the Viśwajit sacrifice performed by him to propitiate You) and it has likewise been taken away by You today. (In other words You have only accepted what was Yours). I consider that alone (which You have been pleased to do) to be good (for him). Indeed a great favour has been done to him in that he has been deprived of (his) fortune, which is (so) instrumental in infatuating the soul. (16) Who can truly perceive the essential nature of his self despite such wealth, under the influence of which even a learned and self-controlled man falls a prey to delusion. Hail to that Lord in You, the Lord who has His abode in water, the undisputed Ruler of the universe and the Witness of all the worlds. (17)

श्रीशुक उवाच

तस्यानुशृण्वतो राजन् प्रह्लादस्य कृताञ्जलेः । हिरण्यगर्भो भगवानुवाच मधुसूदनम् । १८ ।

बद्धं वीक्ष्य पतिं साध्वी तत्पत्नी भयविह्वला । प्राञ्जलिः प्रणतोपेन्द्रं बभाषेऽवाङ्मुखी नृप । १९ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Within the hearing, O king, of the aforesaid Prahāda, who stood with joined palms, the glorious Brahmā (who had at the beginning of creation emerged from a golden egg) proceeded to speak to Lord Viṣṇu (the Slayer of the demon Madhu). (18) (But before he opened his lips) the virtuous wife of Bali (Vindhyāvali by name), who was overwhelmed with fear to see her husband bound, submitted (as follows) to Lord Vāmana (the youngest Brother of Indra), with joined palms and a drooping face, bending low in supplication. (19)

विन्ध्यावलिरुवाच

क्रीडार्थमात्मन इदं त्रिजगत् कृतं ते स्वाम्यं तु तत्र कुधियोऽपर ईश कुर्युः ।

कर्तुः प्रभोस्तव किमस्यत आवहन्ति त्यक्तह्रियस्त्वदवरोपितकर्तृवादाः । २० ।

Vindhyāvali prayed : This universe consisting of three spheres (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) has been created by You for the purpose of Your diversion. Over such a universe (which is Your plaything), however, others (like Bali) of perverse understanding, who have cast (all) shame to the winds and in whom the notion of their being free agents has been planted by You (through Your Māyā), recognize their proprietorship (right to alienate it), O Lord ! (But, as a matter of fact, when there is nothing which they can rightfully call their own), what can they offer (as a gift) to You, the Creator, Preserver and Destroyer (of the universe)? (20)

ब्रह्मोवाच

भूतभावन भूतेश देवदेव जगन्मय । मुञ्चैनं हतसर्वस्वं नायमर्हति निग्रहम् । २१ ।

कृत्स्ना तेऽनेन दत्ता भूर्लोकः कर्माजिताश्च ये । निवेदितं च सर्वस्वमात्माविक्लवया धिया । २२ ।

यत्पादयोरशठधीः सलिलं प्रदाय दूर्वाङ्कुरैरपि विधाय सतीं सपर्याम् ।

अप्युत्तमां गतिमसौ भजते त्रिलोकीं दाश्वानविक्लवमनाः कथमार्तिमुच्छेत् । २३ ।

Brahmā submitted : O Creator of living beings, O Inner Controller (and Protector) of (those) created beings, O god (even) of gods, O Cosmic Being, (pray,) release this demon, who has been stripped of everything; (as such) he no longer deserves punishment (in the form of bondage). (21) The entire globe has been gifted by him to You, as well as the worlds (heaven and the aerial region) that were acquired (by him) in virtue of his (meritorious) actions. (Further) all that he owned, nay, his (very) self (body) has been offered to You with an unflinching mind. (22) Having given away with an unwincing mind (all) the three worlds to You—by pouring (mere) water at whose feet with a guileless intellect and offering harmless worship even with sprouts of panic grass one can attain even the highest goal (final beatitude or residence in Your divine realm)—how can he reap affliction? (23)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

ब्रह्मन् यमनुगृह्णामि तद्विशो विधुनोम्यहम् । यन्मदः पुरुषः स्तब्धो लोकं मां चावमन्यते । २४ ।

यदा कदाचिज्जीवात्मा संसरन् निजकर्मभिः । नानायोनिष्वनीशोऽयं पौरुषीं गतिमाब्रजेत् । २५ ।

जन्मकर्मवयोरूपविद्यैश्वर्यधनादिभिः । यद्यस्य न भवेत् स्तम्भस्तत्रायं मदनग्रहः । २६ ।

मानस्तम्भनिमित्तानां जन्मादीनां समन्ततः । सर्वश्रेयःप्रतीपानां हन्त मुह्येन्न मत्परः । २७ ।

एष दानवदैत्यानामग्रणीः कीर्तिवर्धनः । अजैषीदजयां मायां सीदन्नपि न मुह्यति । २८ ।

क्षीणरिक्थश्च्युतः स्थानात् क्षिप्तो बद्धश्च शत्रुभिः । ज्ञातिभिश्च परित्यक्तो यातनामनुयापितः । २९ ।
 गुरुणा भर्त्सितः शप्तो जहौ सत्यं न सुव्रतः । छलैरुक्तो मया धर्मो नायं त्यजति सत्यवाक् । ३० ।
 एष मे प्रापितः स्थानं दुष्प्रापममरैरपि । सावर्णेन्तरस्यायं भवितेन्द्रो मदाश्रयः । ३१ ।
 तावत् सुतलमध्यास्तां विश्वकर्मविनिर्मितम् । यन्नाधयो व्याधयश्च क्लमस्तन्द्रा पराभवः ।

नोपसर्गा निवसतां सम्भवन्ति ममेक्षया । ३२ ।

इन्द्रसेन महाराज याहि श्रो भद्रमस्तु ते । सुतलं स्वर्गिभिः प्रार्थ्य ज्ञातिभिः परिवारितः । ३३ ।
 न त्वामभिभविष्यन्ति लोकेशः किमुतापरे । त्वच्छासनातिगान् दैत्यांश्चक्रं मे सुदयिष्यति । ३४ ।
 रक्षिष्ये सर्वतोऽहं त्वां सानुगं सपरिच्छदम् । सदा सन्निहितं वीर तत्र मां द्रक्ष्यते भवान् । ३५ ।
 तत्र दानवदैत्यानां सङ्गात् ते भाव आसुरः । दृष्ट्वा मदनुभावं वै सद्यः कुण्ठो विनङ्क्ष्यति । ३६ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे वामनप्रादुर्भावे बलिवामनसंवादो नाम द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः । २२ ।

The glorious Lord replied : I take away the fortune (and power etc.) of whomsoever I show My grace to, O Brahmā! For, intoxicated with wealth (and power etc.) a person becomes stiff (with pride) and disregards the world and (even) Myself. (24) Passing through diverse wombs (states of existence) according to its actions, this Jīvātmā (individual soul), dependent as it is, seldom attains to the human state. (25) On the part of him (however) in whom pride does not appear in consequence of pedigree, (meritorious) actions, youth, comeliness of form, learning, power, affluence and so on, this (absence of pride) should be regarded as (a token of) My grace (and in that exceptional case I am not reduced to the painful necessity of stripping him of his possessions). (26) Of course, one devoted to Me does not get infatuated in spite of (his) high birth and so on, which are not only conducive to pride and vanity but are in everyway opposed to (the attainment of) all forms of blessedness. (27) This Bali, the leader of the Dānavas and Daityas and the promoter of their glory, has (already) conquered My invincible Māyā (deluding potency). (That is why) though in distress, he does not feel perplexed: (28) Though impoverished and fallen from his position, (nay,) reproached and tied down by his enemies, forsaken by his kinsfolk (who have fled to Rasātala*) and subjected to (bodily) torture (by being tied down), and though twitted and cursed by his preceptor (Śukrācārya), this demon of firm resolve did not abandon truth (retract his promise). (Even) when taught Dharma (righteousness) by recourse to ambiguous expressions by Me, he would not give up righteousness, truthful as he is. (29-30) He has been all but sent to My (divine) realm, difficult of access even to gods. (But before he is sent there) he will be Indra (the Lord of paradise) under My protection during the Manvantara presided over by (the Manu called) Sāvārṇi (because he wished to enjoy the position of Indra). (31) Till then let him occupy (rule over) the (subterranean) region of Sutala, whose (artificial) beauty has been enhanced by Viśwakarmā (the architect of heaven). Agonies and ailments, fatigue, drowsiness, mortification and troubles (of various kinds) will never overtake the denizens of that region due to My (gracious) look. (32) Indrasena, O great king, may good betide you; surrounded by (your) kinsfolk, go to Sutala, which is worthy of being sought after (even) by gods. (33) Not even the guardians of the (various) worlds, much less others, will (be able to) overpower you. (And) My discus (Sudarśana) will put an end to the Daityas that may violate your commands. (34) I shall protect from all dangers you as well as your followers and possessions (too). (Nay,) you will ever find Me present there, O heroic

* Vide verse 25 of Discourse XXI above.

king ! (35) Any demoniac idea suggesting itself to you there due to the company of Dānavas and Daityas will be undoubtedly checked at once at the sight of My glory and die out. (36)

Thus ends the twenty-second discourse entitled "A dialogue between king Bali and Lord Vāmana", comprised in the story of the descent of the divine Dwarf, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIII

Freed from bondage, Bali enters the region of Sutala

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्तवन्तं पुरुषं पुरातनं महानुभावोऽखिलसाधुसंमतः ।

बद्धाञ्जलिर्बाष्पकलाकुलेक्षणो भक्त्युद्ग्लो गद्गदया गिराब्रवीत् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : To Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person in the disguise of a dwarf), who had spoken thus, the magnanimous Bali, who was esteemed by all pious souls, submitted with joined palms and in a faltering voice (as follows), his eyes dimmed with drops of tears and his throat choked (with emotion). (1)

बलिर्वाच

अहो प्रणामाय कृतः समुद्यमः प्रपन्नभक्तार्थविधौ समाहितः ।

यल्लोकपालैस्त्वदनुग्रहोऽमरैरलब्धपूर्वोऽपसदेऽसुरेऽर्पितः

। २ ।

Bali said : Oh, a (mere) sincere effort made to bow low (at Your feet) is (found) intent on (capable of) securing (even to people like me, who can never claim to be Your devotees) the boon sought for by devotees that have sought You (for protection). For by that (very) endeavour has been vouchsafed to a vile demon (full of Rajas like me) that (unique) favour of Yours which was never obtained before (even) by the guardians of the (various) worlds and (other) gods (who are eminently Sāttvika by nature). (2)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्त्वा हरिमानस्य ब्रह्माणं सभवं ततः । विवेश सुतलं प्रीतो बलिर्मुक्तः सहासुरैः । ३ ।

एवमिन्द्राय भगवान् प्रत्यानीय त्रिविष्टपम् । पूरयित्वादितेः काममशासत् सकलं जगत् । ४ ।

लब्धप्रसादं निर्मुक्तं पौत्रं वंशधरं बलिम् । निशाम्य भक्तिप्रवणः प्रहाद इदमब्रवीत् । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having spoken thus and bowed low to Śrī Hari (disguised as a dwarf) and then to Brahmā (the creator) along with Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), Bali, who was (now) free (from bondage) and full of delight, got ready to retire to Sutalā (the third region below the earth), accompanied by the (other) demons (too). (3) Having thus restored (the kingdom of) heaven to Indra and fulfilled the desire of Aditi (Indra's mother as well as His own), the Lord ruled over the (whole) universe (as a younger brother and protector of Indra). (4) Seeing his grandson, Bali, who maintained the thread of his line, free from all bondage and a recipient of the Lord's grace, Prahrāda, who was steeped in Devotion, spoke (to the Lord) as follows. (5)

प्रहाद उवाच

नेमं विरिञ्चो लभते प्रसादं न श्रीर्न शर्वः किमुतापरे ते ।
 यन्नोऽसुराणामसि दुर्गपालो विश्वाभिवन्द्यैरपि वन्दिताङ्घ्रिः । ६ ।
 यत्पादपद्मकरन्दनिषेवणेन ब्रह्मादयः शरणदाश्रुवते विभूतीः ।
 कस्माद् वयं कुसृतयः खलयोनयस्ते दाक्षिण्यदृष्टिपदवीं भवतः प्रणीताः । ७ ।
 चित्रं तवेहितमहोऽमितयोगमायालीलाविसृष्टभुवनस्य विशारदस्य ।
 सर्वात्मनः समदृशो विषमः स्वभावो भक्तप्रियो यदसि कल्पतरुस्वभावः । ८ ।

Prahrāda submitted : To think that You, whose feet are adored even by those (Brahmā, Śiva and others) that deserve the adoration of the universe, should play the governor * of a fort to us demons ! Neither Brahmā (the creator) nor Śrī (Your divine Spouse) nor (even) Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) has (ever) won such (unique) grace; how, then, could those others (Indra and so on) do so? (6) (It is) by virtue of (their) addiction to the honey of Your lotus-feet (that guardians of the various worlds such as) Brahmā and others enjoy opulence and powers (of various kinds), O Lord affording shelter to all ! (Such being the case,) we are at a loss to understand wherefore we, those born of a wicked race and following evil ways should have been made the recipients of Your gracious look (kindness). (7) Oh, in Your case—who have released the (different) worlds through the sportful activity of Your inconceivable creative energy, are omniscient, nay, the (very) Self of all and (therefore) regard all with the same eye—a discriminating disposition, in the sense that You are fond of Your devotees (alone), is a wonderful gesture. (But) You (only) exhibit (thereby) the essential characteristic of a wish-yielding tree (which fulfils the desire of only those who betake themselves to it and cannot therefore be justly accused of partiality). (8)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

वत्स प्रहाद भद्रं ते प्रयाहि सुतलालयम् । मोदमानः स्वपौत्रेण ज्ञातीनां सुखमावह । ९ ।
 नित्यं द्रष्टासि मां तत्र गदापाणिमवस्थितम् । महर्शनमहाह्लादध्वस्तकर्मनिबन्धनः । १० ।

The glorious Lord replied : Prahrāda dear, may all be well with you ! Depart to (the subterranean region of) Suṭāla and, rejoicing (there) with your grandson (Bali), bring delight to your kinsfolk. (9) You will always behold Me stationed there, mace in hand; (and) you will have your ignorance (the root of all Karma) wiped out by the infinite joy induced by My sight. (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

आज्ञां भगवतो राजन् प्रह्लादो बलिना सह । बाढमित्यमलप्रज्ञो मूर्ध्न्याधाय कृताञ्जलिः । ११ ।
 परिक्रम्यादिपुरुषं सर्वसुरचमूपतिः । प्रणतस्तदनुज्ञातः प्रविवेश महाबलिम् । १२ ।
 अथाहोशनसं राजन् हरिर्नारायणोऽन्तिके । आसीनमृत्विजां मध्ये सदसि ब्रह्मवादिनाम् । १३ ।
 ब्रह्मन् संतनु शिष्यस्य कर्मच्छिद्रं वितन्वतः । यत् तत् कर्मसु वैषम्यं ब्रह्मदृष्टं समं भवेत् । १४ ।

Śrī Suka went on : Accepting the Lord's command in the word 'A men, and bowing down to Him with joined palms, O Parikṣit, Prahrāda of sinless mind, the generalissimo of all the Asura forces, walked round the most ancient Person (as a mark of reverence) and, permitted

* Vide verse 35 of Discourse XXII supra.

by Him, withdrew to the subterranean world along with Bali. (11-12) Thereupon Lord Viṣṇu (who takes away the sins of His devotees and) who has His abode in water, O king, spoke (as follows) to the sage Uśanā (Śukrācārya, the preceptor of Bali), sitting near at hand in the midst of (other) priests in the assembly of seers (exponents of the Veda):— (13) "O (holy) Brāhmaṇa, (please) accomplish whatever has been left incomplete by your disciple while performing the ritual (sacrifice). (For) whatever is found lacking in rituals is made up (even) when noticed by a Brāhmaṇa (and much more when it is actually completed by a Brāhmaṇa)." (14)

शुक्र उवाच

कुतस्तत्कर्मवैषम्यं यस्य कर्मेश्वरो भवान्। यज्ञेशो यज्ञपुरुषः सर्वभावेन पूजितः। १५।
मन्त्रतस्तन्त्रतश्छिद्रं देशकालार्हवस्तुतः। सर्वं करोति निश्छिद्रं नामसंकीर्तनं तव। १६।
तथापि वदतो भूमन् करिष्याम्यनुशासनम्। एतच्छ्रेयः परं पुंसां यत् तवाज्ञानुपालनम्। १७।

Śukra replied: How could there be any defect in the sacrificial performance of one by whom You, the Prompter of (all) actions and the Lord (the Bestower of the fruit) of sacrifices, nay, the deity presiding over sacrifices, have been propitiated with all his substance (in all devotion)? (15) The very chanting of Your Name neutralizes all defects relating to (the correct intonation of) Mantras (sacred texts employed in a sacrifice), procedure, time and place (of sacrifices) as well as those relating to (the qualifications of) the priests (officiating at the sacrifice or receiving gifts on that occasion) or the material (or money) used. (16) Nevertheless, since it is You who are saying so, O infinite Lord, I shall do Your bidding. (For) to obey Your command—this constitutes the highest good of men. (17)

श्रीशुक्र उवाच

अभिनन्द्य हरेराज्ञामुशना भगवानिति। यज्ञच्छिद्रं समाधत्त बलेर्विप्रर्विभिः सह। १८।
एवं बलेर्महीं राजन् भिक्षित्वा वामनो हरिः। ददौ भ्रात्रे महेन्द्राय त्रिदिवं यत् परैर्हतम्। १९।
प्रजापतिपतिर्ब्रह्मा देवर्षिपितृभूमिपैः। दक्षभृग्वङ्गिरोमुख्यैः कुमारेण भवेन च। २०।
कश्यपस्यादितेः प्रीत्यै सर्वभूतभवाय च। लोकानां लोकपालानामकरोद् वामनं पतिम्। २१।
वेदानां सर्वदेवानां धर्मस्य यशसः श्रियः। मङ्गलानां व्रतानां च कल्पं स्वर्गापवर्गयोः। २२।
उपेन्द्रं कल्पयाञ्चक्रे पतिं सर्वविभूतये। तदा सर्वाणि भूतानि भृशं मुमुदिरे नृप। २३।
ततस्त्विन्द्रः पुरस्कृत्य देवयानेन वामनम्। लोकपालैर्दिवं निन्ये ब्रह्मणा चानुमोदितः। २४।
प्राप्य त्रिभुवनं चेन्द्र उपेन्द्रभुजपालितः। श्रिया परमया जुष्टो मुमुदे गतसाध्वसः। २५।
ब्रह्मा शर्वः कुमारश्च भृगवाद्या मुनयो नृप। पितरः सर्वभूतानि सिद्धा वैमानिकाश्च ये। २६।
सुमहत् कर्म तद् विष्णोर्गायन्तः परमाद्भुतम्। धिषण्यानि स्वानि ते जग्मुर्दिति च शशंसिरे। २७।

Śrī Śuka continued: Gladly accepting in these words the behest of Śrī Hari, the glorious sage Uśanā with the help of other Brāhmaṇa sages accomplished what was wanting in the sacrificial performance of Bali. (18) Having thus begged the earth (as well as heaven), that had been usurped by his enemies (the demons), Lord Śrī Hari, disguised as a dwarf, gave them (back) to His (elder) brother, the mighty Indra. (19) For the gratification of the sage Kaśyapa and Aditi (his wife) as well as for the welfare of all created beings Brahmā, the lord of Prajāpatis, together with the gods, seers, manes and the Manus (the protector of the earth) as well as with Dakṣa, Bhṛgu, Aṅgirā and others, the sage Sanatkumāra and Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) made the divine Dwarf the (suzerain) Lord of (all) the worlds and their guardians. (20-21) (Nay,) for the prosperity of all he further made Lord Vāmana (the younger Brother of Indra), the custodian of the Vedas as well as of all the gods, of righteousness, wealth and fame, of (all) blessings and sacred vows, nay, of heaven and final beatitude (too), capable as He was to protect them (all). On that occasion all created being rejoiced much, O protector of human beings ! (22-23) Then, permitted by Brahmā (the creator), Indra along with the (other) guardians of the (different) worlds placed the divine Dwarf before him and actually took Him in a heavenly car to heaven. (24) Having recovered (the sovereignty of) all the three worlds, Indra, whose fear was (now) gone, protected as he was by the arms of Lord Vāmana (his younger Brother), was invested with supreme glory and rejoiced. (25) Brahmā, Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) and Sanatkumāra, sages headed by Bhṛgu, O protector of men, the manes and all (other) created beings, the Siddhas and whatever (other) heavenly beings (moving about in aerial cars) there were, (all) returned each to his own sphere, celebrating the aforesaid extraordinary and most wonderful deed of Lord Viṣṇu, and extolled Aditi (as well). (26-27)

सर्वमेतन्मयाऽऽख्यातं भवतः कुलनन्दन । उरुक्रमस्य चरितं श्रोतृणामघमोचनम् । २८ ।

पारं महिम्न उरु विक्रमतो गृणानो यः पार्थिवानि विममे स रजांसि मर्त्यः ।

किं जायमान उत जात उपैति मर्त्य इत्याह मन्त्रदृगृषिः पुरुषस्य यस्य । २९ ।

य इदं देवदेवस्य हरेरद्भुतकर्मणः । अवतारानुचरितं शृण्वन् याति परां गतिम् । ३० ।

क्रियमाणे कर्मणीदं दैवे पित्र्येऽथ मानुषे । यत्र यत्रानुकीर्त्येत तत् तेषां सुकृतं विदुः । ३१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे वामनावतारचरिते त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः । २३ ।

All the story of Lord Viṣṇu of wide strides, which takes away the sins of those who listen to it, has been narrated to you, O delight of your race ! (28) The mortal who presumes to describe the fullest extent of the glory of Lord Viṣṇu (who took long strides as aforementioned) must as well (be said to) have counted the particles of dust of the (entire) globe (which is impossible). Can any mortal (already) born or going to be born (hereafter) reach the end of the glory of that perfect Person?—so says the seer Vasiṣṭha. (29) Whosoever hears (or recites or remembers) this story of the descent (as Vāmana) of Śrī Hari, the god of gods, of marvellous deeds attains the highest (divine) state. (30) In the course of whatever religious performance, intended to propitiate the gods, the manes or any human being (such as one's own preceptor) this story will be repeatedly recited by the performers, the wise declare that performance of theirs as well-executed. (31)

Thus ends the twenty-third discourse, comprised in the story of the descent of the divine Dwarf, in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIV

The story of the descent of the divine Fish recounted

राजोवाच

भगवञ्छ्रोतुमिच्छामि हरेरद्भुतकर्मणः । अवतारकथामाद्यां मायामत्स्यविडम्बनम् । १ ।
 यदर्थमदधाद् रूपं मात्स्यं लोकजुगुप्सितम् । तमःप्रकृतिं दुर्मर्षं कर्मग्रस्तं इवेश्वरः । २ ।
 एतन्नो भगवन् सर्वं यथावद् वक्तुमर्हसि । उत्तमलोकचरितं सर्वलोकसुखावहम् । ३ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : O divine sage, I (now) wish to hear (from your lips) the story of the (very) first descent of Śrī Hari—whose exploits are marvellous (indeed)—in which He appeared and behaved as a fish by His wonderful creative energy. (1) Be pleased to tell us precisely the reason why, like one subject to (the wheel of) Karma, the almighty Lord assumed the form of a fish—(so) detested in the world, because of its being (predominantly) Tāmasika by nature and (therefore so) fierce (lit., difficult to resist)—and everything connected with that descent, O venerable sage. (For) the stories of Lord Viṣṇu of excellent renown are conducive to the happiness of the worlds. (2-3)

सूत उवाच

इत्युक्तो विष्णुरातेन भगवान् बादरायणिः । उवाच चरितं विष्णोर्मत्स्यरूपेण यत् कृतम् । ४ ।

Sūta resumed : Requested thus by Parīkṣit (protege of Lord Viṣṇu manifested in the form of Śrī Kṛṣṇa*) the all-knowing sage Suka (the son of Vedavyāsa, nicknamed Bādarāyaṇa, so-called because he has his abode in a grove of jujube trees) recounted (as follows) the deeds of Lord Viṣṇu, performed by Him as manifested in the form of a fish. (4)

श्रीशुक उवाच

गोविप्रसुरसाधूनां छन्दसामपि चेश्वरः । रक्षामिच्छंस्तनूधत्ते धर्मस्यार्थस्य चैव हि । ५ ।
 उद्यावचेषु भूतेषु चरन् वायुरिवेश्वरः । नोद्यावच्चवं भजते निर्गुणत्वाद्विद्यो गुणैः । ६ ।
 आसीदतीतकल्पान्ते ब्राह्मो नैमित्तिको लयः । समुद्रोपप्लुतास्तत्र लोका भूरादयो नृप । ७ ।
 कालेनागतनिद्रस्य धातुः शिशयिषोर्बली । मुखतो निःसृतान् वेदान् हयग्रीवोऽन्तिकेऽहरत् । ८ ।
 ज्ञात्वा तद् दानवेन्द्रस्य हयग्रीवस्य चेष्टितम् । दधार शफरीरूपं भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : The almighty Lord actually assumes (various) forms (only) when seeking the protection of cows, the Brāhmaṇas, the gods and the righteous and the Vedas too, as well as of righteousness and whatever (else) is worth seeking (in the world). (5) (Though) functioning in (all) creatures, high and low, (as their Inner Controller), the Lord, like the air, does not acquire a high or low status occasioned by the modes of Prakṛti, because of His being devoid of the (three) Guṇas. (6) At the end of the previous Kalpa (covering a day of Brahmā or a thousand revolutions of the four Yugas) there came about an occasional dissolution of the universe consequent on Brahmā's retiring to bed (at the end of the day's work). At that time (all) the (three) worlds including the earth were washed away by the ocean, O protector of men ! (7) The powerful (demon) Hayagrīva (so-called because of his having the head of a horse), who was near by, stole away (by dint of Yoga or concentration of mind) the Vedas, which (while being unconsciously repeated by him) had (automatically) escaped (as usual) from the mouths of Brahmā (the creator), who was inclined to go to bed, overcome as he was by sleep under the influence of time (the close of the day). (8) Perceiving that action of Hayagrīva, the Dānava chief, the almighty Lord Śrī Hari assumed the form of a fish. (9)

तत्र राजऋषिः कश्चिन्नाम्ना सत्यव्रतो महान् । नारायणपरोऽतप्यत् तपः स सलिलाशनः । १० ।
 योऽसावस्मिन् महाकल्पे तनयः स विवस्वतः । श्राद्धदेव इति ख्यातो मनुत्वे हरिणार्पितः । ११ ।
 एकदा कृतमालायां कुर्वतो जलतर्पणम् । तस्याञ्जल्युदके काचिच्छफर्येकाभ्यपद्यत । १२ ।

सत्यव्रतोऽञ्जलिगतां सह तोयेन भारत । उत्सर्जं नदीतोये शफरीं द्रविडेश्वरः । १३ ।
तमाह सातिकरुणं महाकारुणिकं नृपम् । यादोभ्यो ज्ञातिघातिभ्यो दीनां मां दीनवत्सल ।
कथं विसृजसे राजन् भीतामस्मिन् सरिजले । १४ ।

तमात्मनोऽनुग्रहार्थं प्रीत्या मत्स्यवपुर्धरम् । अजानन् रक्षणार्थाय शफर्याः स मनो दधे । १५ ।
तस्या दीनतरं वाक्यमाश्रुत्य स महीपतिः । कलशाप्सु निधायैनां दयालुर्नित्य आश्रमम् । १६ ।
सा तु तत्रैकरात्रेण वर्धमाना कमण्डलौ । अलब्ध्वाऽऽत्मावकाशं वा इदमाह महीपतिम् । १७ ।
नाहं कमण्डलावस्मिन् कृच्छ्रं वस्तुमिहोत्सहे । कल्पयौकः सुविपुलं यत्राहं निवसे सुखम् । १८ ।
स एनां तत आदाय न्यधादौदञ्चनोदके । तत्र क्षिप्त्वा मुहूर्तेन हस्तत्रयमवर्धत । १९ ।
न म एतदलं राजन् सुखं वस्तुमुदञ्चनम् । पृथु देहि पदं मह्यं यत् त्वाहं शरणं गता । २० ।
तत आदाय सा राज्ञा क्षिप्त्वा राजन् सरोवरे । तदावृत्यात्मना सोऽयं महामीनोऽन्ववर्धत । २१ ।
नैतन्मे स्वस्तये राजन्नुदकं सलिलौकसः । निधेहि रक्षायोगेन हृदे मामविदासिनि । २२ ।
इत्युक्तः सोऽनयन्मत्स्यं तत्र तत्राविदासिनि । जलाशये संमितं तं समुद्रे प्राक्षिपन्झाषम् । २३ ।
क्षिप्यमाणस्तमाहेदमिह मां मकरादयः । अदन्त्यतिबला वीर मां नेहोत्सृष्टमर्हसि । २४ ।

In that (very) Kalpa (the Kalpa that had just ended) there was a certain royal sage, Satyavrata by name, an exalted soul devoted to Lord Nārāyaṇa. He was practising austerities, subsisting on water (alone). (10) That very king who was called Satyavrata (in the previous Kalpa) was known as Śrāddhadeva, son of Vivaswān (the sun-god) in the present Kalpa and was exalted to the position of Manu by Śrī Hari. (11) One day an unknown fish appeared in the water held in the hollow of the palms of Satyavrata, who was offering handfuls of water (to the manes) on the bank of the Kṛtamālā river (in South India). (12) Satyavrata, who ruled over the Draviḍa territory, proceeded to drop along with the water the fish (as well) contained in the hollow of his palms into the water of the river, O scion of Bharata! (13) The fish most pitifully said to that monarch, highly compassionate as he was, "Wherefore do you throw me in the water of this river, O king who are so kind to the afflicted, helpless as I am and afraid (too) of aquatic creatures that kill their own species? (14) Not knowing the Lord, who had lovingly assumed the form of a fish in order to shower His grace on himself, Satyavrata made up his mind to protect the fish. (15) On hearing the very pitiful appeal of the fish, the said merciful king (lit., the ruler of the earth) put it in the water of the vessel (he had brought with him) and took it to his hermitage. (16) Growing in that Kamaṇḍalu (a water-pot made of wood or the shell of a cocoanut) in the course of a single night, however, and not finding (enough) space for itself in it, the fish actually said to the king as follows:—(17) "I am not able to live in this Kamaṇḍalu (even) with difficulty. (Therefore, kindly) find (for me) a sufficiently extensive abode, in which I may comfortably live." (18) Removing it from the Kamaṇḍalu, he placed it in the water of a pitcher. (Even when) thrown into it, the fish grew to a size of three cubits in the course of less than an hour (and said:—) (19) "(Even) this water-jar is not sufficient for me to live in at ease, O king! (Therefore, kindly) let me have spacious accommodation, since I have sought you as my refuge. (20) Having been removed from the water-jar, the fish was thrown by the king into a good (extensive) pond, O Parikṣit! The same fish (however, instantly) grew to be a monstrous fish and covered the (whole) lake with its body. (21) (The fish said:) "The water of this lake (too), O king, is not to my comfort. (Therefore, please) put me in a (large and deep) lake containing (an) inexhaustible (store of) water with adequate arrangements for my sustenance during the transit." (22) Thus spoken to, the king took the fish by turns to a number of lakes of inexhaustible water (each succeeding one being larger than the previous one); but, finding it equal in size to each (such) lake, (eventually) transferred it to the ocean. (23) While being led (into the ocean), the fish spoke to him as follows: "Mighty alligators and other (aquatic) creatures in this ocean may eat me, O valiant monarch! You should not (therefore) leave me here." (24)

एवं विमोहितस्तेन वदता वल्गुभारतीम् । तमाह को भवानस्मान् मत्स्यरूपेण मोहयन् । २५ ।

नैवंवीर्यो जलचरो दृष्टोऽस्माभिः श्रुतोऽपि च । यो भवान् योजनशतमह्नाभिव्यानशे सरः । २६ ।

नूनं त्वं भगवान् साक्षाद्धरिर्नारायणोऽव्ययः । अनुग्रहाय भूतानां धत्से रूपं जलौकसाम् । २७ ।

नमस्ते पुरुषश्रेष्ठ स्थित्युत्पत्त्यप्ययेश्वर । भक्तानां नः प्रपन्नानां मुख्यो ह्यात्मगतिर्विभो । २८ ।

सर्वे लीलावतारास्ते भूतानां भूतिहेतवः । ज्ञातुमिच्छाम्यदो रूपं यदर्थं भवता धृतम् । २९ ।

न तेऽरविन्दाक्ष पदोपसर्पणं मृषा भवेत् सर्वसुहृत्प्रियात्मनः ।

यथेतेरेषां पृथगात्मनां सता मदीदृशो यद् वपुरद्भुतं हि नः । ३० ।

Thus deluded by the fish, that spoke (such) charming words, the king said (to it): "Who are You, bewitching us (as You do) in the form of a (gigantic) whale (25) No aquatic creature possessed of such (wonderful) power as You has (ever) been seen or (even) heard of by us—You, who have grown in a day large enough to cover the whole lake, eight hundred miles in extent. (26) You are undoubtedly the immortal Lord Nārāyaṇa Himself, the Destroyer of sins, who have assumed the form of aquatics (whales) in order to shower Your grace on (all) created beings. (27) Hail to You, O supreme Person, controlling the (cosmic) functions of creation, maintenance and dissolution! You are the true Self as well as the goal of us, Your devotees, that have sought You (for protection). (28) (Although, generally speaking,) all Your sportful descents are conducive to the welfare of (all) living beings, I wish to know (in particular) the purpose for which this form (of a whale) has been assumed by You. (29) It is not futile to take shelter under Your feet, O lotus-eyed Lord, as it is to approach the feet of those who are identified with the body, You being the disinterested friend, nay, the beloved Self of all, (as is evident from the fact that) You have revealed Your wonderful form to us, Your devotees. (30)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति ब्रुवाणं नृपतिं जगत्पतिः सत्यव्रतं मत्स्यवपुर्युगक्षये ।

विहर्तुकामः प्रलयार्णवेऽब्रवीच्चिकीर्षुरेकान्तजनप्रियः प्रियम् । ३१ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : To king Satyavrata, who had spoken thus, the Lord of the universe—who desired to sport in the ocean for the dissolution of the universe at the end of the Kalpa (which was imminent) and had accordingly assumed the form of a fish, (nay,) who sought to do a good turn to the king, fond to He is of those exclusively devoted to Him—said (as follows). (31)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

सप्तमेऽद्यतनादूर्ध्वमहन्येतदरिन्दम् । निमङ्गल्यत्ययाम्भोधौ त्रैलोक्यं भूर्भुवादिकम् । ३२ ।

त्रिलोक्यां लीयमानायां संवर्ताम्भसि वै तदा । उपस्थास्यति नौः काचिद् विशाला त्वां मयेरिता । ३३ ।

त्वं तावदोषधीः सर्वा बीजान्युद्यावचानि च । सप्तर्षिभिः परिवृतः सर्वसत्त्वोपबृंहितः । ३४ ।

आरुह्य बृहतीं नावं विचरिष्यस्यविक्रवः । एकार्णवे निरालोके ऋषीणामेव वर्चसा । ३५ ।

दोध्यमानां तां नावं समीरेण बलीयसा । उपस्थितस्य मे शृङ्गे निबद्धीहि महाहिना । ३६ ।

अहं त्वामृषिभिः साकं सहनावमुदन्वति । विकर्षन् विचरिष्यामि यावद् ब्राह्मी निशा प्रभो । ३७ ।

मदीयं महिमानं च परं ब्रह्मेति शब्दितम् । वेत्स्यस्यनुगृहीतं मे संप्रश्रैर्विवृतं हृदि । ३८ ।

The glorious Lord said : "On the seventh day following this day, O subduer of foes, (all) these three worlds—Bhūloka (the terrestrial region), the Bhuvarloka (the aerial region) and heaven—will be submerged in the ocean rising for the dissolution of the universe. (32) When the three worlds are actually going to be submerged in the deluge water, a mysterious and spacious boat, sent by Me, will approach you. (33) Take (with you) in the meanwhile all the herbs and annual plants as well as seeds of all types (both great and small) and, surrounded by the seven seers, and accompanied by all (varieties of) animals, you shall board that commodious vessel and sail about undaunted in that undivided expanse of water devoid of light, guided by the effulgence of the Ṛṣis alone. (34-35) Attach that vessel—tossed about by a mighty gale—by means of the great serpent (Vāsuki) to My horn as I shall be present by your side (at that time). (36) Pulling you, boat and all, along with the (seven) seers, I shall roam about in the vast expanse of water as long as the night of Brahmā (which is of the same duration as his day) lasts, O king!" (37) And (at that time) you will (come to) realize My glory—designated by the name of Para Brahma (the transcendent Reality)—revealed by Me in your heart through (answer to) your questions, though (actually) imparted by My grace. (38)

इत्थमादिश्य राजानं हरिरन्तरधीयत । सोऽन्वैक्षत तं कालं यं हृषीकेश आदिशत् । ३९ ।

आस्तीर्य दर्भान् प्राकूलान् राजर्षिः प्रागुदङ्मुखः । निषसाद् हरेः पादौ चिन्तयन् मत्सरूपिणः । ४० ।

ततः समुद्र उद्वेलः सर्वतः प्लावयन् महीम् । वर्धमानो महामेघैर्वर्षद्भिः समदृश्यत । ४१ ।

ध्यायन् भगवदादेशं ददृशे नावमागताम् । तामारुरोह विप्रेन्द्रेः रादायौषधिवीरुधः । ४२ ।

तमूचुर्मुनयः प्रीता राजन् ध्यायस्व केशवम् । स वै नः संकटादस्माद्विता शं विधास्यति । ४३ ।

सोऽनुध्यातस्ततो राज्ञा प्रादुरासीन्महार्णवे । एकशृङ्गधरो मत्स्यो हैमो नियुतयोजनः । ४४ ।

निबध्य नावं तच्छृङ्गे यथोक्तो हरिणा पुरा । वरत्रेणाहिना तुष्टस्तुष्टाव मधुसूदनम् । ४५ ।

Having thus instructed the king (Satyavrata), Śrī Hari disappeared; (while) the former awaited the time which Lord Viṣṇu (the Controller of our senses) had already told him*. (39) Spreading (on the ground) blades of (the sacred) Kuśa grass with their ends pointing towards the east, the royal sage sat down with his face turned towards the north-east, contemplating on the feet of Lord Śrī Hari disguised as the divine Fish. (40) Then was the ocean clearly seen rising high on account of huge clouds pouring down (heavy) rain and (consequently) overflowing its limits and inundating the earth on all sides. (41) Revolving in his mind the command of the Lord, the king perceived the vessel arrived (by his side). Taking the herbs and plants (collected by him), he boarded it along with the great sages. (42) The sages lovingly said to him, "Meditate on Lord Viṣṇu (the Ruler of Brahmā and Lord Śiva as well), O (good) king! He will surely deliver us from this calamity and bring happiness (to us)." (43) Thought of uninterruptedly by the king, the Lord then appeared in that vast expanse of water in the form of a golden (effulgent) whale, possessed of a horn and extending over an area of one lakh Yojanas (or eight lakh miles). (44) Fastening the boat to the horn of the divine whale with the king of serpents for a rope, as already enjoined by Śrī Hari, king Satyavrata, full of joy, hymned (in the following words) Lord Viṣṇu (the Slayer of the demon Madhu). (45)

राजोवाच

अनाद्यविद्योपहतात्मसंविदस्तन्मूलसंसारपरिश्रमातुराः ।

यदृच्छयेहोपसृता यमाप्नुयुर्विमुक्तिदो नः परमो गुरुर्भवान् । ४६ ।

जनोऽबुधोऽयं निजकर्मबन्धनः सुखेच्छया कर्म समीहतेऽसुखम् ।

यत्सेवया तां विधुनोत्यसन्मतिं ग्रन्थिं स भिन्द्याद्दृढयं स नो गुरुः । ४७ ।

* Vide verse 32 above.

यत्सेवयाग्रेखि रुद्रोदनं पुमान् विजह्यान्मलमात्मनस्तमः ।
 भजेत वर्णं निजमेष सोऽव्ययो भूयात् स ईशः परमो गुरोर्गुरुः । ४८ ।
 न यत्प्रसादायुतभागलेशमन्ये च देवा गुरवो जनाः स्वयम् ।
 कर्तुं समेताः प्रभवन्ति पुंसस्तमीश्वरं त्वां शरणं प्रपद्ये । ४९ ।
 अचक्षुरन्धस्य यथाग्रणीः कृतस्तथा जनस्याविदुषोऽबुधो गुरुः ।
 त्वमर्कदृक् सर्वदृशां समीक्षणो वृतो गुरुर्नः स्वगतिं बुभुस्तताम् । ५० ।
 जनो जनस्यादिशतेऽसतीं मतिं यया प्रपद्येत दुरत्ययं तमः ।
 त्वं त्वव्ययं ज्ञानममोघमञ्जसा प्रपद्यते येन जनो निजं पदम् । ५१ ।
 त्वं सर्वलोकस्य सुहृत् प्रियेश्वरो ह्यात्मा गुरुर्ज्ञानमभीष्ट सिद्धिः ।
 तथापि लोको न भवन्तमन्धधीर्जानाति सत्तं हृदि बद्धकामः । ५२ ।
 तं त्वामहं देववरं वरेण्यं प्रपद्ये ईशं प्रतिबोधनाय ।
 छिन्त्यर्थदीपैर्भगवन् वचोभिर्ग्रन्थीन् हृदय्यान् विवृणु स्वमोकः । ५३ ।

The king prayed : People whose true knowledge of their own self stands obscured by dateless ignorance and who are exhausted by the toils (and turmoils) of worldly existence, traceable to that nescience, realize You here (only) when they take shelter in You by Your unaccountable grace. Such as You are, may You act as our highest preceptor and prove to be the Bestower of final beatitude (on us). (46) This ignorant Jiva (human soul), bound (as it is) by its own (previous) Karma, performs actions with great pains in the hope of (attaining) happiness and is able to get rid of that hope as well as of its wrong notion (in the shape of identification with body etc.), through Your worship (alone). May that Lord, who is our (true) guide, snap our knot (of ignorance) existing in the heart. (47) Through His worship (alone) can an embodied soul shake off its impurity in the shape of ignorance and regain its essential (blissful) character, (even) as silver and gold* shed their impurity and regain their native brilliance through contact with fire (alone). May that immortal Lord, who is (even) higher than a Guru, be our (real) preceptor. (48) Gods, preceptors and other people joined together cannot by themselves show to a worshipper grace which is equivalent to one out of ten thousand parts of His. It is that almighty Lord in You whom I seek as my refuge. (49) An unenlightened soul chosen as a preceptor in relation to an ignorant person is of the same worth as a sightless person appointed as a guide in relation to another blind man. By us (however), who are eager to know the truth relating to the Self, You have been elected as our preceptor—You who are not only self-illuminated like the sun but also impart light to all the senses of perception. (50) A worldly soul (that is subject to birth and death) imparts to another unwise counsel (showing him the way to worldly riches and gratification of the senses alone), (following) which he is sure to enter darkness (in the shape of transmigration or what is still worse, viz., hell) which is hard to overcome. You, however, impart (to the Jiva) undecaying and unfailing wisdom (knowledge of the Self), through which the Jiva easily realizes its essential (blissful) character. (51) Indeed to the whole world You are the disinterested friend, beloved and inner Controller, the (very) Self, the teacher, wisdom and the realization of (all) desired objects. Yet, having deep-rooted desires and possessed of an undiscerning intellect, the world does not know You, though present in the heart (itself). (52) Such as You are, I approach You—the almighty Lord, adorable (even) to gods, and worthy

*The Śruti tells us that the tears shed by Rudra (the god of destruction, so-called because he cried as soon as he appeared—vide I. iii. 8—10) were converted into gold and silver:

‘यदरोदीत् तद् रुद्रस्य रुदत्वं यदब्रवशीर्यत् तद् रजतं हिरण्यमभवत्’.

of being sought for (by all)—for instruction. (Kindly, therefore,) cut asunder, O Lord, with Your words throwing light on the (highest) truth, the knots (in the shape of egotism and so on) existing in the heart and reveal Your own Self (to me).(53)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्तवन्तं नृपतिं भगवानादिपूरुषः । मत्स्यरूपी महाम्बोधौ विहरंस्तत्त्वमब्रवीत् । ५४ ।
 पुराणसंहितां दिव्यां सांख्ययोगक्रियावतीम् । सत्यव्रतस्य राजर्षेरात्मगुह्यमशेषतः । ५५ ।
 अश्रौषीदृषिभिः साकमात्मतत्त्वमसंशयम् । नाव्यासीनो भगवता प्रोक्तं ब्रह्म सनातनम् । ५६ ।
 अतीतप्रलयापाय उत्थिताय स वेधसे । हत्वासुरं हयग्रीवं वेदान् प्रत्याहरद्धरिः । ५७ ।
 स तु सत्यव्रतो राजा ज्ञानविज्ञानसंयुतः । विष्णोः प्रसादात् कल्पेऽस्मिन्नासीद् वैवस्वतो मनुः । ५८ ।
 सत्यव्रतस्य राजर्षेर्मायामत्स्यस्य शार्ङ्गिणः । संवादं महदाख्यानं श्रुत्वा मुच्येत किल्बिषात् । ५९ ।
 अवतारो हरेर्योऽयं कीर्तयेदन्वहं नरः । सङ्कल्पास्तस्य सिध्यन्ति स याति परमां गतिम् । ६० ।
 प्रलयपयसि धातुः सुप्तशक्तेर्मुखेभ्यः श्रुतिगणमपनीतं प्रत्युपादत्त हत्वा ।
 दितिजमकथयद् यो ब्रह्म सत्यव्रतानां तमहमखिलहेतुं जिह्यमीनं नतोऽस्मि । ६१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे वैयासिक्यामष्टादशसाहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायामष्टमस्कन्धे

मत्स्यावतारचरितानुवर्णने नाम चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः । २४ ।

इत्यष्टमः स्कन्धः समाप्तः

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

—::x::—

Śrī Śuka went on : Sporting in that vast expanse of water in the form of a whale, Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person) taught the (highest) truth to the king, when he had thus prayed. (54) He (further) revealed to the royal sage Satyavrata in its entirety the mystery of His own Self in the form of a divine collection of Paurāṇika lore (called Matsyapurāṇa), (a book) dealing with Sāṅkhya philosophy (which teaches us how to differentiate between Prakṛti and Puruṣa (Matter and Spirit), Yoga (union with the Lord through Devotion) and rituals.(55) Seated on board the vessel with the (seven) seers, the king listened to the discourse on the truth of the Self, (which is the same as) the eternal Brahma (the Infinite), delivered by the Lord (in the form of the divine Fish), so (attentively) as to leave no doubt (in his mind).(56) Having (already) killed the demon Hayagrīva (and recovered the Vedas), He restored the Vedas to Brahmā (the creator) when the latter rose (from his slumber) at the end of the Pralaya (dissolution) that (immediately) preceded the current Kalpa (known as the Śweta-Vārāha Kalpa).(57) The same king Satyavrata, who was (thus) endued (both) with spiritual knowledge (as derived from the scriptures) and wisdom (Self-Realization) by the grace of Lord Viṣṇu, figured in the present Kalpa as the Vaivaswata Manu (so-called because he was born as a son of the sun-god, and was also known by the name of Śrāddhadeva).(58) A man is (surely) rid of (all) sin by hearing this great story consisting of the (foregoing) dialogue between the royal sage Satyavrata and Lord Viṣṇu (the Wielder of a bow made of horn), disguised as a fish through His creative energy. (59) He who recites from day to day the story of that which is spoken of as the descent of Śrī Hari in the form of a whale attains

(after death) to the supreme state (final beatitude) and (all) his desired objects are (surely) accomplished (during his lifetime). (60) I bow to that Lord, the Cause of all, disguised in the form of a whale, who, (while roaming about) of the deluge waters, restored (to Brahmā) the (entire) body of Śruti texts stolen away from the mouths of the Creator—whose powers (of creation etc.), lay dormant (because of his being overpowered by sleep)—after slaying the demon (Hayagrīva), and, who taught the Purāṇa dealing with Brahma to king Satyavrata and the (seven) seers. (61)

Thus ends the twenty-fourth discourse entitled "The story of the Descent of the divine Fish recounted" in Book Eight of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahamṣa-Saṁhitā, composed by the sage Vedavyāsa, and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.

END OF BOOK EIGHT

Śrīmad Bhāgavata Mahāpurāṇa

Contents

Book Nine

Number of Discourses

1. The story of King Sudyumna, son of Vaivaswata Manu	1
2. The posterity of Karuṣa and other four sons of Vaivaswata Manu	5
3. The story of the sage Cyavana and his wife Sukanyā; the posterity of King Śaryāti.	8
4. The stories of Nābhāga and King Ambarīṣa	12
5. The story of Ambarīṣa (Concluded)	19
6. The posterity of Ikṣvāku: the stories of Māndhātā and the sage Saubhari	22
7. The story of the King Hariścandra	28
8. The story of King Sagara	31
9. The story of King Bhagīratha: the descent of the holy Gaṅgā	35
10. An account of Śrī Rāma's pastimes	39
11. The other pastimes of Śrī Rāma	46
12. The genealogy of (the remaining kings of) Ikṣvāku's line	50
13. The posterity of Nimi described	51
14. A brief survey of the Lunar Dynasty	54
15. The stories of Ṛcika, Jamadagni and Paraśurāma	58
16. Extermination of the Kṣatriyas by Paraśurāma: an account of the posterity of the sage Viśvāmitra	62
17. The posterity of Kings Kṣatravṛddha, Rājī and others of the Lunar Dynasty	66
18. The story of Yayāti	67
19. Yayāti's Renunciation	72
20. The posterity of Pūru and the stories of Duśyanta and Bharata	75
21. The posterity of Bharata and the story of Rantideva	79
22. The genealogy of the Pañcālas, the Kurus and the kings of Magadha	82
23. An account of the posterity of Anu, Druhyu, Turvasu and Yadu	87
24. An account of the posterity of Yadu	91

Book Ten (First Half)

1. The Lord reassures Mother Earth; Vasudeva marries Devakī and Kaṁsa despatches the six sons of Devakī	97
2. The Lord enters the womb of Devakī and is extolled by the gods	104
3. Advent of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa	109

4. Slipping from the grip of Kāṁsa, Yogamāyā ascends to the heavens and utters a prophecy	115
5. Festivities connected with the Birth of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa at Gokula	120
6. Deliverance of Pūtana	123
7. Deliverance of the demon Tṛṇāvarta	128
8. The Naming Ceremony of the Lord and His Infantile Sports	132
9. Grace (showered) on Yaśoda	138
10. The imprecation pronounced (on Kubera's sons) by Nārada (and their consequent redemption)	141
11. Destruction of Vatsāsura and Bakāsura	145
12. Deliverance of Aghāsura	150
13. Brahmā is seized with and ultimately rid of infatuation	156
14. Brahmā extols the Lord	163
15. The demon Dhenuka slain	171
16. The Deliverance of Kālīya	176
17. The Lord rescues the inhabitants of Vraja from a wild fire	184
18. The Lord slays the demon Pralamba	186
19. The Lord swallows up a wild fire (again)	189
20. A description of the Rains and Autumn	191
21. The Song Inspired by the Flute	195
22. The Lord steals away the garments of cowherd maids	199
23. Redemption of the wives of some Brāhmaṇas engaged in a sacrifice	203
24. The Lord stops the sacrifice to Indra	208
25. The Lord lifts up Mount Govardhana	212
26. Nanda's conversation with the cowherds about Śrī Kṛṣṇa's glory	215
27. Indra extols Śrī Kṛṣṇa	217
28. Śrī Kṛṣṇa rescues His father from the realm of Varuṇa	220
29. A description of the (celebrated) Rāsa Play (of the Lord)	223
30. The Gopis' Quest for Śrī Kṛṣṇa during the Rāsa Play	229
31. The Gopis' Song (at the Lord's disappearance) during the Rāsa Play	233
32. The Lord comforts the Gopis during the Rāsa Play	236
33. A Description of the Rāsa Play	239
34. The Lord makes short work of Śaṅkhacūḍa	244
35. The Gopis' song in pairs of verses	247
36. Kāṁsa sends Akrūra to Vraja to bring Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma to Mathurā	251
37. The demon Vyoma slain (by the Lord)	255
38. Akrūra's arrival (in Vraja)	258
39. Departure of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma for Mathurā	263
40. Akrūra's eulogy (of the Lord)	269
41. Entry into Mathurā (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma)	273

42. A description of the amphitheatre for wrestlers (set up by Kaṁsa)	278
43. The elephant Kuvalayāpiḍa killed (by the Lord)	282
44. Kaṁsa slain (by the Lord)	286
45. The Lord brings back His preceptor's son (from the abode of Death)	291
46. The Lord relieves the agony of Nanda (by despatching Uddhava to Vraja with a message of endearment)	296
47. Dialogue between Uddhava and Gopis and ode to a black bee	301
48. The Lord pays a visit to Kubjā (the hunchbacked woman) and Akrūra at their respective places	310
49. Akrūra's visit to Hastināpura	314

Book Ten (Latter Half)

50. The Lord ensconces Himself in a fortress (built by Him in the western sea under the name of Dwārakā)	318
51. (Kālayavana gets burnt and) King Mucukunda glorifies the Lord	324
52. Śrī Kṛṣṇa's withdrawal to Dwārakā; Balarāma's marriage; Rukmiṇī sends a Brāhmaṇa with a message to Śrī Kṛṣṇa	331
53. Śrī Kṛṣṇa carries away Rukmiṇī	336
54. Discomfiture of Śiṣupāla's allies and Rukmī and the Espousal of Rukmiṇī by Śrī Kṛṣṇa solemnized	342
55. The story of Pradyumna's birth (and the destruction of the demon Śambara)	347
56. The story of the Syamantaka gem; Śrī Kṛṣṇa weds Jāmbavatī and Satyabhāmā	351
57. Syamantaka stolen; Śatadhanvā killed and Akrūra recalled to Dwārakā	355
58. Śrī Kṛṣṇa's espousal with (the rest of) His eight principal Spouses	359
59. The Lord snatches away (by force) a Pārjāta tree (from Indra's paradise) and kills the demon Naraka (the son of Mother Earth)	365
60. A dialogue between Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Rukmiṇī	371
61. (A description of the Lord's progeny;) Rukmī killed (by Balarāma) during Aniruddha's wedding	378
62. Aniruddha made captive	382
63. Aniruddha brought back (to Dwārakā)	386
64. The story of king Nrga	391
65. Baladeva triumphantly diverts the river Yamunā from its course	395
66. Pauṇḍraka and others killed	398
67. Dwivida killed (by Balarāma)	402
68. Triumph of Saṅkarṣaṇa—in the form of dragging Hastināpura	404
69. A Glimpse into the household life of Śrī Kṛṣṇa	409
70. Śrī Kṛṣṇa's Daily Routine; Kings taken captive by Jarāsandha send their messenger to Śrī Kṛṣṇa	413
71. Śrī Kṛṣṇa goes to Indraprastha	418

72. Jarāsandha killed	423
73. Śrī Kṛṣṇa and others return to Indraprastha	427
74. Śiṣupāla killed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa)	430
75. Duryodhana's Humiliation	435
76. Śālva's Encounter with the Yādavas	439
77. Śālva's Deliverance	442
78. Deliverance of Dantavakra and Vidūratha; Sūta killed by Śrī Balarāma during His Pilgrimage	445
79. An account of Balarāma's Pilgrimage	449
80. Śrī Kṛṣṇa's Reception of Sudāmā	452
81. The story of parched rice brought as a Present (for Śrī Kṛṣṇa) by Sudāmā	456
82. Meeting of the Vṛṣṇis with the Gopas and Gopīs (of Vṛndāvana)	460
83. Conversation between Bhagavān Śrī Kṛṣṇa's consorts and Draupadī	465
84. An account of the pilgrimage (undertaken by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa)	471
85. The Lord brings back (from the abode of Death) His (six) elder brothers (throttled by Kāṁsa)	478
86. (Subhadrā carried away by Arjuna;) the Lord's Grace on Śrutadeva	484
87. A Song of Praise uttered by the Vedas (in their living form)	489
88. Lord Rudra rescued (from trouble)	499
89. (The three chief gods put to test by the sage Bhṛgu;) the Lord brings back the (dead) sons of a Brāhmaṇa	503
90. The Story of (the amorous sports of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa narrated	509

Book Eleven

1. The curse of the Ṛṣis invoking the destruction of Yadu's race	516
2. Nārada visits Vasudeva and reproduces the dialogue between King Janaka and the nine Yogīśwaras	518
3. A Description of Māyā and the means of transcending it; an exposition of Brahma and the Path of Action	524
4. A description of the Lord's Descents	530
5. The Fate of non-devotees; different methods of the Lord's worship according to the different Yugas	533
6. The gods entreat the Lord to return to His divine realm and Uddhava approaches Him on the eve of the Yadus' departure for Prabhāsa	538
7. The Legend of an Ascetic—the Story of eight (out of twenty-four) preceptors (from the earth to the pigeon) recognized by him	544
8. What the Avadhūta learnt from the nine preceptors	551
9. Story of the seven preceptors, the osprey and others; and the end of the Avadhūta's discourse	554

10. The emptiness of earthly and other-worldly enjoyments exposed.....	557
11. The characteristics of bound and liberated souls as well as of devotees	560
12. The Glory of Satsaṅga; how to perform one's prescribed duty and how to relinquish it ?	566
13. The teaching imparted by the Lord in the form of the Divine Swan to the sage Sanaka and his three brothers	570
14. Glory of the Path of Devotion and the Process of Meditation described	575
15. Names and characteristics of the various Siddhis (mystic powers) acquired through Yoga	580
16. Glorious manifestations of the Lord enumerated	584
17. The duties pertaining to the four Varnas and four Āśramas	589
18. The Duties of anchorites and recluses	595
19. A Dissertation on Devotion, Spiritual Enlightenment and Yogic disciplines in the form of the five Yamas, the (five) Niyamas and so on	601
20. Jñānayoga, Karmayoga and Bhaktiyoga analysed	606
21. The process of determining what is good and what is evil and the secret underlying it	610
22. Categories enumerated; Distinction between Prakṛti and Puruṣa	616
23. The Episode of a forbearing Brāhmaṇa	623
24. A Dissertation on Sāṅkhya-Yoga	631
25. The operation of the three Guṇas described	634
26. The Utterance of Purūravā bearing on Aversion for the pleasures of sense	638
27. The Yoga of Formal Worship	642
28. The Highest Truth Discussed	648
29. Courses of conduct pleasing to the Lord; Uddhava's departure for Badarikāśrama	654
30. Holocaust of Yadu's Race	660
31. The Lord's Ascent to His Divine Realm	664

Book Twelve

1. Lines of kings of Kaliyuga	668
2. The Evils of Kaliyuga	672
3. Vanity of kings; righteous conduct for every Yuga; the means to escape the evils of Kaliyuga—loud chanting of the Divine Name	675
4. The Fourfold Pralaya	680
5. The (Final) Teaching (of Śukadeva) concerning Brahma	684
6. (Parikṣit attains the supreme goal and Janamejaya commences a snake-sacrifice;) Classification of the Vedas into so many Śākhās or schools	686
7. Different Schools of Atharvaveda and the Characteristics of the Purāṇas	694
8. The sage Mārkaṇḍeya embarks on a course of austerities and receives a boon	697

9. The sage Mārkaṇḍeya witnesses the Lord's Māyā	702
10. Lord Śiva confers a boon on Mārkaṇḍeya	706
11. The significance of the Lord's own limbs, attendants and weapons and a description of the retinue of the Sun-god (changing every month in the course of a solar year)	710
12. A Synopsis of (all) the twelve Skandhas (of Śrīmad Bhāgavata)	716
13. The extent of the eighteen Purāṇas and the glory of the Bhāgavata	723

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

नवमः स्कन्धः

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa Book Nine

Discourse I

The story of King Sudyumna, son of Vaivaswata Manu

राजोवाच

मन्वन्तराणि सर्वाणि त्वयोक्तानि श्रुतानि मे । वीर्याण्यनन्तवीर्यस्य ह्येस्तत्र कृतानि च । १ ।
योऽसौ सत्यव्रतो नाम राजर्षिर्द्रविडेश्वरः । ज्ञानं योऽतीतकल्पान्ते लेभे पुरुषसेवया । २ ।
स वै विवस्वतः पुत्रो मनुरासीदिति श्रुतम् । त्वत्तत्तस्य सुताश्चोक्ता इक्ष्वाकुप्रमुखा नृपाः । ३ ।
तेषां वंशं पृथग् ब्रह्मन् वंश्यानुचरितानि च । कीर्तयस्व महाभाग नित्यं शृश्रूतां हि नः । ४ ।
ये भूता ये भविष्याश्च भवन्त्यद्यतनाश्च ये । तेषां नः पुण्यकीर्तिनां सर्वेषां वद विक्रमान् । ५ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : The accounts of all the (six) Manvantaras (divisions of a Kalpa or day of Brahmā, presided over by a Manu), as well as of the heroic deeds performed in them by Śrī Hari of unlimited prowess have been heard by me as told by you. (1) I have (further) heard from you that the same royal sage, Satyavrata by name, the (then) ruler of the Draviḍa territory (in South India), who attained spiritual enlightenment through devotion to Śrī Hari (the supreme Person) at the end of the previous Kalpa was, born as (Śrāddhadeva) a son of Vivaswān (the sun-god) and became Manu (in the present Manvantara). The names of his sons, Ikṣvāku and other kings, told by you, have also been heard. (2-3) To us, who are indeed ever eager to hear you, O holy Brāhmaṇa, (pray,) narrate their line as well as the doings of those belonging to that line, O highly blessed one ! (4) (Kindly) recount to us the deeds of valour of all those kings of sacred renown—those who have gone by, those who will follow and those who are ruling at present. (5)

सूत उवाच

एवं परीक्षिता राजा सदसि ब्रह्मादिनाम् । पृष्ठः प्रोवाच भगवाञ्छुकः परमधर्मवित् । ६ ।

Sūta resumed : Thus requested by King Parikṣit in that assembly of (great) exponents of the Vedas, the divine Śuka, who was well-versed in the cult of Devotion (the highest religion of mankind), proceeded to speak (as follows). (6)

श्रीशुक उवाच

श्रूयतां मानवो वंशः प्राचुर्येण परंतप । न शक्यते विस्तरतो वक्तुं वर्षशतैरपि । ७ ।
 परावरेषां भूतानामात्मा यः पुरुषः परः । स एवासीदिदं विश्वं कल्पान्तेऽन्यत्र किञ्चन । ८ ।
 तस्य नाभेः समभवत् पद्मकोशो हिरण्यः । तस्मिञ्जले महाराज स्वयंभूश्चतुराननः । ९ ।
 मरीचिर्मनसस्तस्य जज्ञे तस्यापि कश्यपः । दाक्षायण्यां ततोऽदित्यां विवस्वानभवत् सुतः । १० ।
 ततो मनुः श्राद्धदेवः संज्ञायामास भारत । श्रद्धायां जनयामास दश पुत्रान् स आत्मवान् । ११ ।
 इक्ष्वाकुनृगशर्यातिदिधृष्टकृषकुरुषकान् । नरिष्यन्तं पृषधं च नभगं च कविं विभुः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Hear an account of the posterity of (Vaivasvata) Manu in its important aspects, O chastiser of foes! It cannot be narrated in extenso even in the course of hundreds of years. (7) During the period of (final) dissolution Lord Nārāyaṇa (the supreme Person) alone, the inner Controller and Sustainer of (all) created beings (high and low), represented this universe; nothing else existed (at that time). (8) From His navel sprang up the calyx of a golden lotus and in that calyx, O great king, appeared the four-faced Brahmā (the self-born). (9) From the latter's mind came forth Marīci and from (the loins of) Marīci, again, appeared the sage Kaśyapa. And of Kaśyapa by Aditi, a daughter of Dakṣa, was born a son, Vivaswān (the sun-god). (10) Of the latter by his wife, Saṁjñā, O scion of Bharata, was born Śrāddhadeva, the Manu (presiding over the current Manvantara); and through (his wife) Śraddhā, the high-minded King Śraddhadeva begot ten sons—Ikṣvāku, Nṛga, Śaryāti, Diṣṭa, Dhṛṣṭa, Karuṣaka, Nariṣyanta, Pṛṣadhra, Nabhaga and Kavi. (11-12)

अप्रजस्य मनोः पूर्वं वसिष्ठो भगवान् किल । मित्रावरुणयोरिति प्रजार्थमकरोत् प्रभुः । १३ ।
 तत्र श्रद्धा मनोः पत्नी होतारं समयाचत । दुहितृमुपागम्य प्रणिपत्य पयोव्रता । १४ ।
 प्रेषितोऽध्वर्युणा होता ध्यायंस्तत् सुसमाहितः । हविषि व्यचरत् तेन वषट्कारं गृणद्भिजः । १५ ।
 होतुस्तद्व्यभिचारेण कन्येला नाम साभवत् । तां विलोक्य मनुः प्राह नातिहृष्टमा गुरुम् । १६ ।
 भगवन् किमिदं जातं कर्म वो ब्रह्मवादिनाम् । विपर्ययमहो कष्टं मैवं स्याद् ब्रह्मविक्रिया । १७ ।
 यूयं मन्त्रविदो युक्तास्तपसा दग्धकिल्बिषाः । कुतः संकल्पवैषम्यमनृतं विबुधेष्विव । १८ ।
 तन्निशम्य वचस्तस्य भगवान् प्रपितामहः । होतुर्व्यतिक्रमं ज्ञात्वा बभाषे रविनन्दनम् । १९ ।
 एतत् संकल्पवैषम्यं होतुस्ते व्यभिचारतः । तथापि साधयिष्ये ते सुप्रजास्त्वं स्वतेजसा । २० ।
 एवं व्यवसितो राजन् भगवान् स महायशाः । अस्तौषोदादिपुरुषमिलायाः पुंस्त्वकाप्यया । २१ ।
 तस्मै कामवरं तुष्टो भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । ददविलाभवत् तेन सुदुष्टः पुरुषर्षभः । २२ ।

In the beginning (before Ikṣvāku and others were born) the glorious and powerful sage Vasiṣṭha (the preceptor of the solar race), it is said, conducted a sacrifice in propitiation of the gods Mitra and Varuṇa* for the sake of a son to the Manu, who was (yet) issueless. (13) During that sacrificial performance the Manu's wife, Śraddhā, who was subsisting on milk alone, approached the priest invoking the gods and reciting the Rgveda and, falling prostrate before him, humbly requested him to conduct the sacrifice in such a way as to ensure the birth of a daughter. (14) On the oblation to be poured into the sacred fire having been taken in the hand (for being thrown), the Brāhmaṇa officiating as the Hotā, who was thinking (all the time of the request made by the queen) and repeating the mystic word 'Vasat', propitiated the fire with a fully controlled mind by means of that oblation, as directed by the Adhvaryu. (15) Due to the aforesaid deviation made by the Hotā the offspring turned out to

* The Śruti recommends the performance of a sacrifice in honour of the gods Mitra and Varuṇa for those desiring to have a son in the following words :— 'मैत्रावरुणमिति कुर्यात् पुत्रकायः' । be a daughter, who was named as Ilā. Not much pleased at heart so see her, the Manu submitted (as follows) to his preceptor (the sage Vasīṣṭha) :—(16) "O glorious sage, how has this ritual conducted by you, exponents of the Veda, yielded such a contrary result ? Oh, what a pity ! Such a reversal of the fruit of the Vedic Mantras should not have taken place. (17) You are (all) well-versed in the (proper use of) the Mantras and (thoroughly) disciplined and have (all) your impurities burnt by austerities. How (then) could this frustration of your purpose be expected as untruth in gods (which is impossible) ?" (18) On hearing this question of Vāivasvata Manu the glorious sage Vasīṣṭha (the grandfather of my grandfather*) came to know of the deviation made by the Hotā and replied (as follows) to Śrāddhadeva (son of the sun-god). (19) "This frustration of your purpose has been brought about by the contrary intention of the Hotā. Yet by virtue of my own spiritual glory I shall confer on you the privilege of having a good (male) progeny." (20) Thus resolved, O king, the glorious sage (Vasīṣṭha) of extraordinary fame, extolled Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person) with the desire of transforming Ilā into a male child. (21) Pleased with him, the almighty Lord Śrī Hari bestowed on the sage Vasīṣṭha the desired boon (of manhood for Ilā). (And) thereby Ilā (the daughter of Vāivasvata Manu) became Sudyumna, the foremost of men. (22)

स एकदा महाराज विचरन् मृगायां वने। वृतः कतिपयामात्यैरश्वमारुह्य सैन्धवम्।२३।

प्रागृह्य रुचिरं चापं शराश्च परमाद्भुतान्। दंशितोऽनुमृगं वीरो जगाम दिशमुत्तराम्।२४।

स कुमारो वनं मेरोरधस्तात् प्रविवेश ह। यत्रास्ते भगवाञ्छर्वो रममाणः सहोमया।२५।

तस्मिन् प्रविष्ट एवासौ सुदुर्गः परवीरहा। अपश्यत् स्त्रियमात्मानमश्वं च वडवां नृप।२६।

तथा तदनुगाः सर्वे आत्मलिङ्गविपर्ययम्। दृष्ट्वा विमनसोऽभूवन् वीक्षमाणाः परस्परम्।२७।

Taking up a charming bow and most wonderful arrows and protected by an armour, and surrounded (accompanied) by a few followers, the hero (Sudyumna) rode a hunting on one occasion, O great king, through a forest on (the back of) a horse of the Saindhava breed (peculiar to Sindha) and proceeded in pursuit of a game in a northerly direction. (23-24) The aforesaid prince, it is said, entered a forest at the foot of Mount Meru, where Lord Rudra was carrying on (amorous) sports with (His divine Spouse) Goddess Umā (Pārvatī). (25) The moment Sudyumna, the slayer of hostile warriors, made his way into that forest, he found himself (turned into) a woman and his horse (into) a mare, O protector of human beings. (26) Similarly all his followers felt disconcerted to see the transformation of their sex, and stared at one another. (27)

राजोवाच

कथमेवंगुणो देशः केन वा भगवन् कृतः। प्रश्नमेनं समाचक्ष्व परं कौतूहलं हि नः।२८।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : How could there be a land possessed of such a (wonderful) potency (of changing the sex of an individual as soon as one entered it) and by whom was it rendered such O worshipful sage? (Kindly) answer fully this question (of ours); (for) great is our curiosity (about it). (28)

* The pedigree of the sage Śuka has been clearly delineated in the following well-known couplet in praise of Vedavyāsa :—

आर्यं ब्रह्मवतारं शङ्कः श्रीत्रयकल्पमयम् । परमशरात्मजं वन्दे शुकतानं तपोनिधिम् ॥

"I bow to that storehouse of asceticism, the sinless Vedavyāsa, the great grandson of the sage Vasīṣṭha, grandson of Śakti (Vasīṣṭha's son), son of Parāśara (son of Śakti) and father of Śuka."

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदा गिरिशं द्रष्टुमृषयस्तत्र सुव्रताः । दिशो वितिमिराभासाः कुर्वन्तः समुपागमन् । २९ ।
 तान् विलोक्याम्बिका देवी विवासा व्रीडिता भृशम् । भर्तुङ्क्तात् समुत्थाय नीवीमाश्वथ पर्यधात् । ३० ।
 ऋषयोऽपि तयोर्वीक्ष्य प्रसङ्गं रममाणयोः । निवृत्ताः प्रययुस्तस्मात्तरनारायणाश्रमम् । ३१ ।
 तदिदं भगवानाह प्रियायाः प्रियकाम्यया । स्थानं यः प्रविशेदेतत् स वै योषिद् भवेदिति । ३२ ।
 तत ऊर्ध्वं वनं तद् वै पुरुषा वर्जयन्ति हि । सा चानुवरसंयुक्ता विचचार वनाद् वनम् । ३३ ।
 अथ तामाश्रमाभ्याशे चरन्ती प्रमदोत्तमाम् । स्त्रीभिः परिवृतां वीक्ष्य चकमे भगवान् बुधः । ३४ ।
 सापि तं चकमे सुभूः सोमराजसुतं पतिम् । स तस्यां जनयामास पुरुरवसमात्मजम् । ३५ ।
 एवं स्त्रीत्वमनुप्राप्तः सुद्युम्रो मानवो नृपः । सस्मार स्वकुलार्चायै वसिष्ठमिति शुश्रुम । ३६ ।
 स तस्य तां दशां दृष्ट्वा कृपया भृशपीडितः । सुद्युम्रस्याशयन् पुंस्त्वमुपाधावत शङ्करम् । ३७ ।
 तुष्टस्तस्यै स भगवानुषधे प्रियमावहन् । स्वां च वाचमृतां कुर्वन्निदमाह विशाम्यते । ३८ ।
 मासं पुमान् स भवित्ता मासं स्त्री तव गोत्रजः । इत्थं व्यवस्थया कामं सुद्युम्रोऽवतु मेदिनीम् । ३९ ।
 आचार्यानुग्रहात् कामं लब्ध्वा पुंस्त्वं व्यवस्थया । पालयामास जगतीं नाभ्यनन्दन् स तं प्रजाः । ४० ।
 तस्योत्कलो गयो राजन् विमलश्च सुतास्त्रयः । दक्षिणापथराजानो बभूवुर्धर्मवत्सलाः । ४१ ।
 ततः परिणते काले प्रतिष्ठानपतिः प्रभुः । पुरुरवस उत्सृज्य गां पुत्राय गतो वनम् । ४२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे इलोक्यान्वये प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Once upon a time sages of sacred vows repaired to that land (of Ilāvṛta) in order to see Lord Śiva (who ordinarily lives on Mount Kailāsa), driving away darkness as well as (all other) light from the quarters (by their superior splendour). (29) Much abashed to see them, Goddess Pārvatī (the Mother of the universe), who was uncovered (at that time) sprang immediately from the lap of Her Consort (Lord Śiva) and put on Her raiment at once. (30) Observing the fond union of the (divine) Couple, engaged in (amorous) sports, the sages too withdrew from that forest and proceeded to the hermitage of (the divine sages) Nara and Nārāyaṇa (which is altogether free even from such outward display of sexuality, the very sight of which is tabooed in the eyes of celibates and ascetics). (31) Thereupon, in His eagerness to please His beloved in Spouse (who was greatly disturbed in mind by having been seen in dishabille by other males), Lord Śiva uttered the following (words):—"Whatever male enters this reserve shall (forthwith) become a woman." (32) From that time onward indeed males shun that forest. Sudyumna, for his part, who was (now) transformed into a (young) woman, roamed about from forest to forest in the company of her attendants (also likewise transformed). (33) Perceiving that excellent young woman roaming in the precincts of his hermitage, surrounded (accompanied) by (other young) women, the glorious god Budha (son of the moon-god, presiding over the planet of the same name, now known as Mercury) conceived a passion for her. (34) That pretty damsel (of charming brows) also (in her turn) coveted the said son of King Soma for her husband. (And) he begot a son, (known as) Purūravā through her. (35) Having thus attained the form of a woman, King Sudyumna, son of Vaivasvata Manu, remembered the sage Vasiṣṭha, the preceptor of his race: so have we heard. (36) (Thought of by her and instantly appearing in person before her by dint of Yoga,) the sage was sore oppressed with pity to see that (changed) condition of Sudyumna and desiring the latter's (restoration to) manhood, (mentally) approached (prayed to) Lord Śaṅkara. (37) Pleased with the sage (Vasiṣṭha) and in order to secure his gratification and (at the same time) to justify (maintain the truth of)

His utterance*, the Lord (Śaṅkara) spoke as follows, O protector of the people:—(38) "Sudyumna, born in the family of your proteges (the solar race) shall be a male for one month and a female during another (by turns). Let him protect the earth with pleasure according to this arrangement." (39) Having regained manhood, the object of his desire, (of course subject to this condition) by the grace of his preceptor, Sudyumna protected the earth (as its ruler). (Since, however, he remained in hiding out of shame every other month,) the people did not approve of him. (40) Three sons—Utkala, Gaya and Vimala—were born to him, O Parīkṣit ! They became rulers of the southern region (the Deccan) and were (great) lovers of virtue. (41) Then, in the ripeness of time King Sudyumna, the ruler of Pratiṣṭhāna (the modern Jhūsi, a town situated near the confluence of the holy Gaṅgā and Yamunā, on the left bank of the Gaṅgā, opposite to Allahabad) retired to the forest, relinquishing (the sovereignty of) the earth in favour of his son Purūravā (begotten by Budha through his feminine form). (42)

Thus ends the first discourse, forming part of the story of Ilā, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse II

The posterity of Karuṣa and other four sons of Vaivasvata Manu

श्रीगुरु उवाच

एवं गतेऽथ सुद्युम्ने मनुर्वैवस्वतः सुते । पुत्रकामस्तपस्तेपे यमुनायां शतं समाः । १ ।
ततोऽयजन्मनुर्देवमपत्यार्थं हरिं प्रभुम् । इक्ष्वाकुपूर्वजान् पुत्रैर्ललेभे स्वसदृशान् दश । २ ।
पृषधस्तु मनोः पुत्रो गोपालो गुरुणा कृतः । पालयामास गा यत्तो रात्र्यां वीरासनव्रतः । ३ ।
एकदा प्राविशद् गोष्ठं शार्दूलो निशि वर्षति । शयाना गाव उन्धाय भीतास्ता बभ्रुमर्कजे । ४ ।
एकां जग्राह बलवान् सा चुक्रोश भयातुरा । तस्यास्तत् क्रन्दितं श्रुत्वा पृषधोऽभिससार ह । ५ ।
खड्गमादाय तरसा प्रलीनोडुगणे निशि । अजानन्नहनद् बभ्रोः शिरः शार्दूलशङ्कुया । ६ ।
व्याधोऽपि वृक्षप्रवणो निस्त्रिंशप्राहतस्ततः । निश्चक्राम भृशं भीतो रक्तं पथि समुत्सृजन् । ७ ।
मन्यमानो हतं व्याधं पृषधः परवीरहा । अद्राक्षीत् स्वहतां बभ्रुं व्युश्रयां निशि दुःखितः । ८ ।
तं शशाप कुलाचार्यः कृतागसमकामतः । न क्षत्रबन्धुः शूद्रस्त्वं कर्मणा भवितामुना । ९ ।
एवं शप्तस्तु गुरुणा प्रत्यगृह्णात् कृताञ्जलिः । अधारयद् व्रतं वीर ऊर्ध्वरेता मुनिप्रियम् । १० ।
वासुदेवे भगवति सर्वात्मनि परेऽमले । एकान्तित्वं गतो भक्त्या सर्वभूतसुहृत् समः । ११ ।
विमुक्तसङ्गः शान्तात्मा संयताक्षोऽपरिग्रहः । यदृच्छयोपपन्नेन कल्पयन् वृत्तिमात्मनः । १२ ।
आत्मन्यात्मनमाधाय ज्ञानतृप्तः समाहितः । विचचार महीमेतां जडान्यबधिराकृतिः । १३ ।
एवंवृत्तो वनं गत्वा दृष्ट्वा दावाग्निमुत्थितम् । तेनोपयुक्तकरणो ब्रह्म प्राप परं मुनिः । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : On his (only) son, Sudyumna, having thus left (for the forest), Vaivaswata Manu, desirous of (getting) a son, practised asceticism on the banks of the Yamunā for a hundred years. (1) Then the (said) Manu worshipped the almighty Lord Śrī Hari for the sake of progeny and got (in consequence of that worship) ten sons, resembling himself, the eldest being Ikṣvāku. (2) (Of these,) the Manu's son, Pṛṣadhra, however, who had been made a cowherd by his preceptor (the sage Vasiṣṭha), tended cows at night, full of vigilance and keeping awake as a rule in a standing posture, sword in hand. (3) On one occasion at night, while it was raining, a tiger entered the cowpen and the cows, that were (all) resting, started up and, full of panic, ran about in the pen. (4) The powerful beast seized one (of them) and, stricken with fear, the cow uttered a piercing cry. Hearing that scream of the cow, Pṛṣadhra, it is said, rushed forth with impetuosity, taking his sword, and unwittingly cut off the head of the red-brown cow, mistaking it for the tiger, in that dark night (when the stars had totally disappeared due to clouds). (5-6) The tiger too, that had been struck with the end of the sword and had one of its ears severed, escaped from that place in extreme fear, dropping blood on the way. (7) Pṛṣadhra, the slayer of hostile warriors, who believed the tiger to be dead, was filled with grief when he saw at the close of night the cow killed by himself. (8) On him, even though he had unintentionally committed the sin (of slaying a cow and ought to have in the ordinary course been asked to undergo an expiatory rite), the sage Vasiṣṭha (the preceptor of his race) uttered the following curse:—"Due to this (sinful act) you shall no longer remain (even) a vile Kṣatriya, but shall become a Śūdra (outright)." (9) Cursed by his preceptor in these words, the hero (Pṛṣadhra) silently accepted the imprecation with joined palms and, remaining a lifelong celibate, observed a vow of (strict) continence, which is (so) dear to ascetics. (10) Friendly and alike to all created beings, he exclusively fixed his mind through devotion on the supreme Lord Vāsudeva, the universal Spirit, (who is) free from all blemish. (11) Having entirely given up attachment (to all sorts of enjoyments) and fully controlled his senses, nay, having no possession worth the name (beyond the bare necessities of life) and maintaining his body by means of food etc., got by chance, he fixed his mind on the Self, and roamed about on this earth, tranquil of mind, sated through wisdom and fully composed though presenting the appearance of a stupid, blind or deaf fellow. (12-13) Conducting himself in this manner and withdrawing to a forest (one day), Pṛṣadhra (who had taken a vow of strict silence) saw a wild fire raging. (Entering it,) he allowed his body to be consumed by it and attained oneness with the transcendent Absolute. (14)

कविः कनीयान् विषयेषु निःस्पृहो विसृज्य राज्यं सह वसुधैर्विबन्धम् ।

निवेश्य चित्ते पुरुषं स्वोच्छिषं विवेश कैशोरवयाः परं गतः । १५ ।

करूषान्मानवादासन् कारूषाः क्षत्रजातयः । उत्तरापथगोप्रारो ब्रह्मण्या धर्मवत्सलाः । १६ ।

धृष्टाद् धार्ष्टमभूत् क्षत्रं ब्रह्मभूयं गतं क्षितौ । नृगस्य वंशः सुमतिर्भूतज्योतिस्ततो वसुः । १७ ।

वसोः प्रतीकस्तस्युत्र ओघवानोघवत्पिता । कन्या चौघवती नाम सुदर्शन उवाह ताम् । १८ ।

चित्रसेनो नरिष्यन्तादृक्षस्तस्य सुतोऽभवत् । तस्य मीढ्वांस्ततः कूर्चं इन्द्रसेनस्तु तत्सुतः । १९ ।

वीतिहोत्रस्त्रिन्दसेनात् तस्य सत्यश्रवा अभूत् । उरुश्रवाः सुतस्तस्य देवदत्तस्ततोऽभवत् । २० ।

ततोऽप्रिविश्यो भगवानग्निः स्वयमभूत् सुतः । कानीन इति विख्यातो जातृकर्ण्यो महानृषिः । २१ ।

ततो ब्रह्मकुलं जातमाप्रिवेश्यायनं नृप । नरिष्यन्तान्वयः प्रोक्तो दिष्टवंशमतः शृणु । २२ ।

Kavi, the youngest (son of Vaivaswata Manu), who was free from (all) craving for the pleasures of sense, quitted his kingship as well as his kinsfolk while tender of age; and, installing in his mind on the self-efulgent supreme Person, he retired into the forest and entered the Supreme. (15) From Karūṣa, (another) son of Vaivaswata Manu, the families of the Kṣatriyas known as the Kārūṣas took their descent. Devoted to the Brāhmaṇas and (themselves great) lovers of righteousness, they became rulers of the northern regions. (16) From Dhṛṣṭa sprang up the Kṣatriya clan called the Dhārṣṭas, who attained Brahmanhood on (this very) earth (during their lifetime). Nṛga's son was Sumati and Sumati's son was Bhūtajyoti and from (the loins of) Bhūtajyoti Vasu was born. (17) From (the loins of) Vasu sprang up Pratika and Pratika's son was Oghavān, who was the father of (a son of the same name,) Oghavān. A daughter (too), Oghavati by name, was born of Oghavān. (A certain) Sudarśana married her. (18) Citrasena sprang up from (the loins of) Nariṣyanta and Dakṣa was the son of Citrasena. The son of Dakṣa was (one) Mīdhvān, of whom Kūrcā was born; and Indrasena was the son of Kūrcā. (19) (Again,) Vitihoṭra was born of Indrasena, whose son was Satyaśravā. Uruśravā was the son of Satyaśravā and Devadatta was born of Uruśravā. (20) From (the loins of) Devadatta sprang up a son Agniveśya (by name), who was no other than the glorious Agni (the god of fire). It was he who came to be known (afterwards) as the great seer Kānina or Jātūkarnya. (21) From Agniveśya originated the race of the Brāhmaṇas called the Āgniveśyāyanas (scions of Agniveśya), O protector of men! The posterity of Nariṣyanta has (thus) been told; now hear (an account) of the line of Diṣṭa. (22)

नाभागो दिष्टपुत्रोऽयः कर्मणा वैश्यतां गतः। भलन्दनः सुतस्तस्य वत्सप्रीतिर्भलन्दनात्। १२३।
वत्सप्रीतेः सुतः प्रांशुस्तत्सुतं प्रमतिं विदुः। खनित्रः प्रमतेस्तस्माच्छुभोऽथ विविंशतिः। १२४।
विविंशतिसुतो रम्भः खनिनेत्रोऽयं धार्मिकः। कन्धमो महाराज तस्यासीदात्मजो नृप। १२५।
तस्यावीक्षितः सुतो यस्य मस्तश्चक्रवर्त्यभूत्। संवतोऽयानयद् यं वै महायोग्यङ्गिरःसुतः। १२६।
मस्तस्य यथा यज्ञो न तथान्यस्य कश्चन। सर्वं हिरण्यं त्वासीद् यत् किञ्चिद्यास्य शोभनम्। १२७।
अमाद्यदिन्द्रः सोमेन दक्षिणाभिर्द्विजातयः। मस्तः परिवेष्टारो विश्वेदेवाः सभासदः। १२८।

Diṣṭa's son Nābhāga, who is other than the one going to be mentioned hereafter, was degraded to the position of a Vaiśya on the ground of his pursuits (such as agriculture etc.). His son was Bhalandana, of whom Vatsapriṭi was born. (23) Vatsapriṭi's son was Prāmśu; the learned remember his son as Pramati. Of Pramati Khanitra was born; from (the loins of) Khanitra sprang up Cākṣuṣa and from Cākṣuṣa, Vivimśati. (24) Vivimśati's son was Rambha, whose son was the virtuous Khaninetra. (And) Karandhama, O great king, was the son of the last-named, O protector of human beings. (25) His son was Avikṣit, whose son, Marutta, became an emperor—the same Marutta whom the great Yogi Saṁvarta, son of the sage Āngirā, helped to perform a sacrifice. (26) No sacrificial performance of anyone else was so grand as that of Marutta. Every utensil etc., was actually of gold and whatever else there was in his sacrifice was commendable. (27) (In that sacrifice) Indra (the ruler of the gods) felt inebriated by (draughts of) the Soma juice and the Brāhmaṇas were sated with gifts of money. The (forty-nine) Maruts (wind-gods) performed the duty of serving up food (to the invitees), while (the class of gods known as) the Viśvedevas (actually) took part in the deliberations of the assemblies. (28)

मस्तस्य दमः पुत्रस्तस्यासीद् राज्यवर्धनः। सुधुतिस्तत्सुतो जज्ञे सौधुतेयो नरः सुतः। १२९।
तत्सुतः केवलस्तस्माद् बन्धुमान् वेगवांस्ततः। बन्धुस्तस्याभवद् यस्य तृणबिन्दुर्नहीपतिः। १३०।
तं भेजेऽलम्बुषा देवी भजनीयगुणालयम्। वराप्सरा यतः पुत्राः कन्या चेडविडाभवत्। १३१।
तस्यामुत्पादयामास विश्रवा धनदं सुतम्। प्रादाय विद्यां परमामृषिर्वागेश्वरात् पितुः। १३२।
विशालः शून्यबन्धुश्च धूम्रकेतुश्च तत्सुताः। विशालो वंशकृद् राजा वैशालीं निर्ममे पुरीम्। १३३।
हेमचन्द्रः सुतस्तस्य धूम्राक्षस्तस्य चात्मजः। तत्पुत्रात् संयमादासीत् कुशाश्वः सहदेवजः। १३४।

कुशाश्वात् सोमदत्तोऽभूत् योऽश्वमेधैरिडस्पतिम् । इष्ट्वा पुरुषमापाग्र्यां गतिं योगेश्वराश्रितः । ३५ ।
 सौमदत्तिस्तु सुमतिस्तत्सुतो जनमेजयः । एते वैशालभूपालास्तृणबिन्दोर्यशोधराः । ३६ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । २ ।

Dama was the son of Marutta and Rājyavardhana, of the former. Sudhṛti was born as the son of Rājyavardhana and the son of Sudhṛti was Nara, (also) called Saudhṛteya (son of Sudhṛti). (29) His son was Kevala, of whom Bandhumān was born; and from (the loins of) the latter sprang up Vegavān. His son was Bandhu, of whom (the famous) King Tṛṇabindu was born. (30) A heavenly damsel, Alambuṣā, the foremost of celestial nymphs, chose for her husband Tṛṇabindu, who was a repository of qualities worth acquiring. From their union were born a number of sons as well as a girl. Iḍaviḍā (by name). (31) Through her the sage Viśravā begot a son in the person of the god Kubera (the lord and bestower of riches) after receiving the highest knowledge (of the Self or of Brahma) from his father, the sage Pulastya (a mind-born son of Brahmā and a master of Yoga). (32) Viśāla, Śūnyabandhu and Dhūmraketu were the sons of Tṛṇabindu, (Of these,) Viśāla, who became a king and continued the ancestral line, built the (famous) city of Vaiśālī. (33) Hemacandra was the son of Viśāla and Dhūmrākṣa, the son of Hemacandra. (And) of Dhūmrākṣa's son, Saṁyama, was born Kṛśāśwa alongwith (his younger brother) Devaja. (34) From (the loins of) Kṛśāśwa sprang up Somadatta, who, having propitiated the supreme Person the Lord (Bestower of the fruit) of sacrifices, through (a number of) horse-sacrifices and depending on the Lord (the Master of all Yogas), attained the highest goal (viz., the divine state). (35) Sumati was the son of Somadatta and Sumati's son was Janamejaya. These were the kings born in the line of Viśāla, who preserved the glory of Tṛṇabindu. (36)

Thus ends the second discourse, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa Saṁhitā.

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

The story of the sage Cyavana and his wife Sukanyā;
 the posterity of King Śaryāti

श्रीशुक उवाच

शर्यातिर्मानवो राजा ब्रह्मिष्ठः स बभूव ह । यो वा अङ्गिरसां सत्रे द्वितीयमह ऊचिवान् । १ ।
 सुकन्या नाम तस्यासीत् कन्या कमललोचना । तया सार्धं वनगतो ह्यगमच्यवनाश्रमम् । २ ।
 सा सखीभिः परिवृता विचिन्वन्त्यङ्घ्रिपान् वने । वल्मीकरन्ध्रे ददृशे खद्योते इव ज्योतिषी । ३ ।
 ते दैवचोदिता बाला ज्योतिषी कण्ठकेन वै । अविविधन्मुग्धभावेन सुखावासुकं ततो बहु । ४ ।
 शकुन्मूत्रनिरोधोऽभूत् सैनिकानां च तत्क्षणात् । राजर्षिस्तमुपालक्ष्य पुरुषान् विस्मितोऽब्रवीत् । ५ ।
 अप्यभद्रं न युष्माभिर्भार्गवस्य विबोद्धितम् । व्युक्तं केनापि नस्तस्य कृतमाश्रमदूषणम् । ६ ।

सुकन्या प्राह पितरं भीता किञ्चित् कृतं मया । द्वे ज्योतिषी अजानन्त्या निर्भिन्ने कण्ठकेन वै । ७ ।
 दुहितुस्तद् वचः श्रुत्वा शर्यातिर्जातसाध्वसः । मुनिं प्रसादयामास बल्मीकान्तर्हितं शनैः । ८ ।
 तदभिप्रायमाज्ञाय प्रादाद् दुहितरं मुनेः । कृच्छ्रान्मुक्तस्तमामन्य पुरं प्रायात् समाहितः । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : King Śaryāti, another son of Vaivaswata Manu, they say, was a master of the (highest) Truth, forming the subject-matter of the Vedas. It was he who authoritatively advised the ritualistic course of the second day at the sacrifice performed by the scions of the sage Aṅgirā. (1) His daughter, Sukanyā by name, had eyes beautiful as a pair of lotuses. Gone to the forest (one day) with that girl indeed, he happened to visit the hermitage of the sage Cyavana. (2) (While) remarking the trees in a grove (of the hermitage), surrounded (accompanied) by her girl companions, she perceived in the hole of an ant-hill a pair of bright things like two fire-flies. (3) Impelled by destiny, the girl in her childish innocence actually pricked the two bright things with a thorn and (lo!) a good deal of blood flowed from them. (4) That very moment there ensued on this side the obstruction of stool and urine among the troops (that had escorted the king to that place). Astonished to discover this (phenomenon) the royal sage spoke to his men (as follows):—(5) "Has any injury been wrought by you to the sage Cyavana (son of Bhrgu) ? Obviously his hermitage has been profaned by someone amongst us." (6) Seized with fear, Sukanyā (Śaryāti's daughter) submitted to her father, "Something (wrong) has been done by me. Ignorant as I was, two bright things have certainly been pierced by me with a thorn." (7) Fear having been roused in him, on hearing that report (confession of his daughter), King Śaryāti gradually propitiated the sage buried underneath an ant-hill. (8) Coming to know (from the drift of the sage's talk) of the latter's mind, the king gave away (the hand of) his daughter to the sage. Saved from the scrape (thereby), he asked leave of the sage and returned to his capital more cautious than before. (9)

सुकन्या च्यवनं प्राप्य पतिं परमकोपनम् । प्रीणयामास चित्तज्ञा अप्रमत्तानुवृत्तिभिः । १० ।
 कस्यचित् त्वथ कालस्य नासत्यावाश्रमागतौ । तौ पूजयित्वा प्रोवाच वयो मे दत्तमीश्वरौ । ११ ।
 ग्रहं ग्रहीष्ये सोमस्य यज्ञे वामप्यसोमपोः । क्रियतां मे वयो रूपं प्रमदानां यदीप्सितम् । १२ ।
 बाढमित्यूचतुर्विप्रमभिनन्द्य भिषक्तमौ । निमज्जतां भवानस्मिन् हृदे सिद्धविनिर्मिते । १३ ।
 इत्युक्त्वा जरया ग्रस्तदेहो धमनिसन्ततः । हृदं प्रवेशितोऽश्विभ्यां बलीपलितविप्रियः । १४ ।
 पुरुषास्त्रय उत्तस्थुरीषीच्या वनिताप्रियाः । पद्मस्रजः कुण्डलिनस्तुल्यरूपाः सुवाससः । १५ ।
 तान् निरीक्ष्य वरारोहा सरूपान् सूर्यवर्चसः । अजानन्ती पतिं साध्वी अश्विनौ शरणं ययौ । १६ ।
 दर्शयित्वा पतिं तस्यै पतिव्रत्येन तोषितौ । ऋषिमामन्य ययतुर्विमानेन त्रिविष्टपम् । १७ ।

Having obtained the most irascible sage Cyavana for her husband, Princess Sukanyā, who had come to know his mind, and was (very) careful (too), tried to please him with her services. (10) After the lapse of some time hence, the two Aświnikumāras (the celestial physicians) called at his hermitage. Receiving them with respect, the sage submitted, "Capable as you are, (pray) bestow youth on me. (11) I shall bear you both a cup of that juice, even though (I know) you are not entitled to a potation of the Soma juice in a sacrifice. Be pleased (therefore) to make my age and exterior such as may be coveted by young women." (12) Gladly accepting his prayer with the word "Amen" the two foremost physicians (of the gods) said to the Brāhmaṇa (the sage Cyavana) "Plunge you into this pool created by the Siddhas." (13) Cyavana, whose body was stricken with old age and who was covered all over with (protuberant) veins, (nay) who was forbidding on account of his wrinkles and grey hair, was made to enter the pool by the twin Aświnikumāras, after they had spoken in these words. (14) (Presently) there emerged (from the pool) three very lovely males of like appearance, captivating to women, adorned with wreaths of lotuses and ear-rings (of gold) and finely dressed. (15) Finding them possessed of similar forms and a lustre resembling that of the sun, and failing to recognize her husband, that virtuous lady (Sukanyā) of charming limbs sought the two Aświns as her refuge (invoked their help in distinguishing her husband by standing apart). (16) Pleased with her vow of fidelity, the two gods showed to her her husband and, asking leave of the sage, returned by their aerial car to heaven. (17)

यक्ष्यमाणोऽथ शर्यातिश्च्यवनस्याश्रमं गतः । ददर्श दुहितुः पार्श्वे पुरुषं सूर्यवर्चसम् । १८ ।

राजा दुहितरं प्राह कृतपादाभिवन्दनाम् । आशिषश्चाप्रयुञ्जानो नातिप्रीतमना इव । १९ ।

चिकीर्षितं ते किमिदं पतिस्त्वया प्रलम्बितो लोकनमस्कृतो मुनिः ।

यत् त्वं जराग्रस्तमसत्यसम्मतं विहाय जारं भजसेऽमुमध्वगम् । २० ।

कथं मतिस्तेऽवगतान्यथा सतां कुलप्रसूते कुलदूषणं त्विदम् ।

विभर्षिं जारं यदपत्रपा कुलं पितुश्च भर्तुश्च नयस्यधस्तमः । २१ ।

एवं ब्रुवाणं पितरं स्मयमाना शुचिस्मिता । उवाच तात जामाता तवैष भृगुनन्दनः । २२ ।

शशंस पित्रे तत् सर्वं वयोरूपाभिलम्बनम् । विस्मितः परमप्रीतस्तनयां परिष्वजे । २३ ।

Intending to perform a sacrifice, King Śaryāti visited the hermitage of the sage Cyavana (once more) some time afterwards and saw by the side of her daughter (Sukanyā) a male possessing the effulgence of the sun. (18) When she bowed at his feet, the king, who was not much pleased at heart as it were (to see her) and did not pronounce (on her in return for her salutation) his benedictions either, reproached his daughter (in the following pungent words):—(19) "What is it that you intended to achieve, O vile lass (by this unworthy behaviour of yours)? Your husband, a sage adored by the (whole) world, has been betrayed by you in that, having deserted him, stricken as he is with old age and (therefore) not liked by you, you wait upon this vagabond as a lover! (20) How has your reason embraced a wrong conclusion in that bereft of (all) shame, you (have taken it into your head to) harbour a paramour? This is indeed a stain on your family, O girl of noble pedigree! (By this reprehensible conduct of yours) you will (surely) hurl the family of your father as well as that of your husband into hell." (21) To the father, who was talking in this strain, that girl of innocent smiles smilingly replied, "Dear father, he is (no other than) your son-in-law, the delight of the sage Bhrgu." (22) She (then) related to her father the whole story—the way in which her husband had regained his youth and acquired a charming appearance. Astonished and supremely gratified (at this), the king (lovingly) hugged his daughter. (23)

सोमेन याजयन् वीरं ग्रहं सोमस्य चाग्रहीत् । असोमपोरप्यश्विनोऽश्च्यवनः स्वेन तेजसा । २४ ।

हन्तुं तमादे वज्रं सद्योमन्युरमर्षितः । सवज्रं स्तम्भयामास भुजमिन्द्रस्य भार्गवः । २५ ।

अन्वजानस्ततः सर्वे ग्रहं सोमस्य चाश्विनोः । भिषजाविति यत् पूर्वं सोमाहुत्या बहिष्कृतौ । २६ ।

The sage Cyavana (then) enabled the heroic king (Śaryāti) to propitiate the Lord through a Soma sacrifice and by dint of his ascetic power bore a cup of the Soma juice to the two Aświnikumāras, even though they were not entitled to drink it. (24) Full of indignation, Indra (who gets enraged in no time) took up his thunderbolt to kill the sage. (But) Cyavana (son of the sage Bhrgu) paralyzed the arm of Indra, holding the thunderbolt. (25) From that time forward all (the gods and others) consented to a cup of the Soma juice being given to the two Aświns, who being physicians had heretofore been precluded from a share in the offerings of Soma juice. (26)

उत्तानबर्हिःरानतो भूरिषेण इति त्रयः । शयतिरभवन् पुत्रा आनर्ताद् रेवतोऽभवत् । २७ ।
 सोऽन्तःसमुद्रे नगरी विनिर्माय कुशस्थलीम् । आस्थितोऽभुङ्क्त विषयानानर्तादीनरिन्दम् । २८ ।
 तस्य पुत्रशतं जज्ञे ककुद्मिष्येभ्यमुत्तमम् । ककुद्मी रेवती कन्यां स्वामादाय विभुं गतः । २९ ।
 कन्यावरं परिप्रष्टुं ब्रह्मलोकमपावृतम् । आवर्तमाने गान्धर्वे स्थितोऽलब्धक्षणाःक्षणम् । ३० ।
 तदन्त आद्यमानस्य स्वभिप्रायं न्यवेदयत् । तच्छ्रुत्वा भगवान् ब्रह्मा प्रहस्य तमुवाच ह । ३१ ।
 अहो राजन् निरुद्धस्ते कालेन हृदि ये कृताः । तत्पुत्रपौत्रनमूणां गोत्राणि च न शृणुमहे । ३२ ।
 कालोऽभियातस्त्रिणवच्चतुर्युगविकल्पितः । तद् गच्छ देवदेवांशो बलदेवो महाबलः । ३३ ।
 कन्यारत्नमिदं राजन् नरन्नाय देहि भोः । भुवो भारवताराय भगवान् भूतभावनः । ३४ ।
 अवतीर्णो निजांशेन पुण्यश्रवणकीर्तनः । इत्यादिष्टोऽभिबन्धाजं नृपः स्वपुरमागतः ।
 त्यक्तं पुण्यजनत्रासाद् भ्रातृभिर्दिक्ष्ववस्थितैः । ३५ ।
 सुतां दत्त्वा नवद्याङ्गीं बलाय बलशालिने । बदर्याख्यं गतो राजा तप्तं नारायणाश्रमम् । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भगवतं महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे तृतीयोऽध्यायः । ३ ।

Uttānabharhi, Ānarta and Bhūrīṣeṇa—these were the three sons of Śaryāti; from (the loins of) Ānarta sprang up Revata. (27) Having built a city called Kuśasthali (Dwārakā), in the heart of the ocean, and ensconced in it, the latter ruled the Ānarta (the modern Gujarat) and other territories, O subduer of enemies ! (28) A hundred excellent sons, of whom Kakudmī was the eldest, were born of Revata. Taking his daughter, Revatī (with him) Kakudmī went to Brahmā (the highest heaven), which is uncovered by the sheaths of Rajas (passion) and Tamas (ignorance), in order to ask Brahmā (the highest ruler of this material world) about a (suitable) match for the girl. As (however) music was going on (there), Kakudmī failed to get an opportune moment (to broach the matter) and tarried a while. (29-30) At the end of the performance he bowed low to Brahmā (the first created being) and spoke out his mind (to the latter). Hearing his submission, the glorious Brahmā (the creator) heartily laughed and spoke to him as follows:—(31) "Oh, (dear) king, whoever might have been thought of (by you when you placed your foot here) have (all) been swept off by Time. We hear no more even of the races of their sons, grandsons and great grandsons. (32) Time computed at (the figure of) thrice nine (twenty-seven) revolutions of (all) the four Yugas (Satya, Tretā, Dvāpara and Kali) has (since) rolled by. Therefore, go; there is (now) the mighty Baladeva, a part manifestation of the supreme Deity. (33) Give away this jewel of a girl, O Kakudmī, to that jewel among men. For removing the burden of the earth, the almighty Lord, the Protector of created beings, the very hearing and chanting of whose glories and names is sanctifying, has (Himself) descended (on earth) alongwith His (aforesaid) part manifestation (Lord Balarāma)." Thus instructed by and bowing to Brahmā (the birthless one), the king (Kakudmī) returned to his capital (Kuśasthali), deserted (already) for fear of Yakṣas by his brothers, staying here and there (in various quarters). (34-35) Giving away his daughter (Revatī) of faultless limbs to the powerful Balarāma, the king retired to the hermitage of the (divine) sage Nārāyaṇa, known by the name of Badarikāśrama, in order to practise austerities. (36)

Thus ends the third discourse, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

The stories of Nābhāga and King Ambarīṣa

श्रीगुरु उवाच

नाभागो नभगापत्यं यं ततं भ्रातरः कविम् । यविष्ठं व्यभजन् दायं ब्रह्मचारिणमागतम् । १ ।
भ्रातरोऽभाङ्क्त किं मह्यं भजाम पितरं तव । त्वां ममार्यास्तताभाङ्क्षुर्मा पुत्रक तदादृथाः । २ ।
इमे अङ्गिरसः सत्रमासतेऽद्य सुमेधसः । षष्ठं षष्ठमुपेत्याह कवे मुह्यन्ति कर्मणि । ३ ।
तांस्त्वं शंसय सूक्ते द्वे वैश्वदेवे महात्मनः । ते स्वयन्तो धनं सत्रपरिशेषितमात्मनः । ४ ।
दास्यन्ति तेऽथ तान् गच्छ तथा स कृतवान् यथा । तस्मै दत्त्वा ययुः स्वर्गं ते सत्रपरिशेषितम् । ५ ।

Srī Śuka resumed: A son of Nabhaga (another son of Vaivaswata Manu) was Nābhāga, to whom, the youngest (of his brothers) and (most) learned—(just) returned (from the house of his preceptor after an unusually long period) as a religious student—his (elder) brothers assigned (the maintenance of their (aged) father (Nabhaga) for his share of the ancestral property (which they had already divided among themselves, leaving nothing for Nābhāga, who they thought would remain a lifelong celibate). (1) "Brothers, what have you set apart for me ?" (he said.) "We (hereby) allot our father to you," (they replied). (Nābhāga then approached his father and said,) "The elder brothers have given you as my share, O dear father !" "Pay no heed to their word, dear child !" (he replied). (2) "These (neighbouring) Brāhmaṇas, scions of the sage Aṅgirā, are performing at present a (big) sacrifice. Coming (however) to the ritualistic course for every sixth day, the wise ones commit errors in that course, my learned son ! (3) Teach those noble souls a couple of Sūktas (hymns) in propitiation of (the gods called) the Viśvedevas. While ascending to heaven (on the completion of the sacrifice) they will bestow on you (all) their wealth that may be left after the sacrifice. Therefore, approach them." Then he did in the same way as he was told and the (said) Brāhmaṇas rose to heaven having bestowed on him whatever was left after the sacrifice. (4-5)

तं कश्चित् स्वीकरिष्यन्तं पुरुषः कृष्णदर्शनः । उवाचोत्तरतोऽभ्येत्य ममेदं वास्तुकं वसु । ६ ।

Coming up from the north, a certain dark-looking person (who was no other than Rudra, the god of destruction) said to Nābhāga while he was about to appropriate that wealth, "(All) this wealth left on the sacrificial grounds is mine." (6)

ममेदमृषिभिर्दत्तमिति तर्हि स्म मानवः । स्यान्नो ते पितरि प्रश्नः पृष्ठवान् पितरं तथा । ७ ।

यज्ञवास्तुगतं सर्वमुच्छिष्टमुषयः क्वचित् । चक्रुर्विभागं रुद्राय स देवः सर्वमर्हति । ८ ।

नाभागस्तं प्रणम्याह तवेश किल वास्तुकम् । इत्याह मे पिता ब्रह्मञ्छिरसा त्वां प्रसादये । ९ ।

यत् ते पितावदद धर्मं त्वं च सत्यं प्रभाषसे । ददामि ते मन्त्रदृशे ज्ञानं ब्रह्म सनातनम् । १० ।

गृहाण द्रविणं दत्तं मत्सत्रे परिशेषितम् । इत्युक्त्वान्तर्हितो रुद्रो भगवान् सत्यवत्सलः । ११ ।

य एतत् संस्मरेत् प्रातः सायं च सुसमाहितः । कविर्भवति मन्त्रज्ञो गतिं चैव तथाऽऽत्मनः । १२ ।

नाभागादम्बरिषोऽभ्युपगम्य नाभागवतः कृती । नास्पृशद् ब्रह्मशापोऽपि यं न प्रतिहतः क्वचित् । १३ ।

Nābhāga (the scion of Vaivaswata Manu) thereupon returned:—"This is mine, (inasmuch as it has been) vouchsafed to me by the sages (who performed this sacrifice)." "Let our question be referred to your father !" (Rudra rejoined.) Nābhāga (approached and) asked his father (Nabhaga) accordingly. (7) (Nabhaga said,) "At some sacrifice (performed of yore by Dakṣa a lord of created beings) the sages determined everything left on the sacrificial grounds as a share meant for Rudra; hence that god deserves all that wealth." (8) (Returning and) bowing low to Rudra, Nābhāga said, "The wealth left on the sacrificial grounds is undoubtedly yours, O lord: so says my father, O holy one ! With my head bent low (therefore) I pray for Your grace (apologize to You)." (9) "Since your father", (replied Rudra), "has spoken what is right and you too have uttered the truth, I (hereby) impart to you, the seer of Vedic Mantras, knowledge which is the same as the eternal Brahma (the Absolute). (10) (Please also) accept (for your subsistence) the wealth left after the sacrifice as a gift from Me." Saying so, Lord Rudra, who is (so) fond of truth, disappeared. (11) He who with a fully concentrated mind reverently remembers (mentally repeats) this story (both) morning and evening becomes a learned man as well as a knower of (the meaning of) Vedic Mantras and attains his goal (in the shape of final beatitude or God-Realization). (12) From (the loins of) Nābhāga sprang up Ambarīṣa, an eminent devotee of the Lord and (highly) virtuous (too), on whom even the punishment (in the form of the magical fire known as the Kṛtyā) inflicted by a Brāhmaṇa (the sage Durvāsā)—a punishment that was not frustrated anywhere before—had no effect. (13)

राजोवाच

भगवज्ज्ञेयमुमिच्छामि राजर्षेस्तस्य धीमतः । न प्राभूद् यत्र निर्मुक्तो ब्रह्मदण्डो दुरत्ययः । १४ ।

The king (Parikṣit) submitted : I long to hear the story of that royal sage, (so) full of wisdom, against whom the scourge fully released by a Brāhmaṇa—which is (so) difficult to avert—did not prove effectual. (14)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अम्बरीषो महाभागः सप्तद्वीपवतीं महाम् । अव्ययां च श्रियं लब्ध्वा विभवं चातुलं भुवि । १५ ।

मेनेऽतिदुर्लभं पुंसां सर्वं तत् स्वप्नसंस्तुतम् । विद्वान् विभवनिर्वाणो तमो विशति यत् पुमान् । १६ ।

वासुदेवे भगवति तद्वक्तेषु च साधुषु । प्राप्तो भावं परं विश्वं येनेदं लोष्टवत् स्मृतम् । १७ ।

स वै मनः कृष्णपदारविन्दयोर्वचांसि वैकुण्ठगुणानुवर्णने ।

करौ हरेर्मन्दिरमार्जनादिषु श्रुतिं चकाराच्युतसत्कथोदये । १८ ।

मुकुन्दलिङ्गालयदर्शने दुर्शौ तद्भृत्यगात्रस्पर्शेऽङ्गसङ्गमम् ।

घ्राणं च तत्पादसरोजसौरभे श्रीमत्तुलस्या रसनो तदर्पिते । १९ ।

पादौ हरेः क्षेत्रपदानुसर्पणे शिरो हृषीकेशपदाभिवन्दने ।

कामं च दास्ये न तु कामकाम्यया यथोत्तमश्लोकजनाश्रया रतिः । २० ।

एवं सदा कर्मकलापमात्मनः परेऽधियज्ञे भगवत्यथोक्षजे ।

सर्वात्मभावं विदधन्महीमिमां तन्निष्ठविप्राभिहितः शशसास ह । २१ ।

ईजेऽश्वमेधैरधियज्ञमीश्वरं महाविभूत्योपचिताङ्गदक्षिणः ।

ततैर्वसिष्ठसितगौतमादिभिर्धन्वन्वभिस्रोतमसौ ससखतीम् । २२ ।

यस्य क्रतुषु गीर्वाणैः सदस्या ऋत्विजो जनाः । तुल्यरूपाश्चानिमिषा व्यदृश्यन्त सुवाससः । २३ ।

स्वर्गो न प्रार्थितो यस्य मनुजैरमरप्रियः । शृण्वद्भिरुपगायद्भिरुत्तमश्लोकचेष्टितम् । २४ ।

समर्द्धयन्ति तान् कामाः स्वाराज्यपरिभाविताः । दुर्लभा नापि सिद्धानां मुकुन्दं हृदि पश्यतः । २५ ।

स इत्थं भक्तियोगेन तपोयुक्तेन पार्थिवः । स्वधर्मेण हरिं प्रीणन् सङ्गान् सर्वाङ्गैर्जहौ । २६ ।

गृहेषु दारेषु सुतेषु बन्धुषु द्विपोत्तमस्यन्दनवाजिपतिषु ।

अक्षय्यरत्नाभरणायुधादिष्वनन्तकोटोद्भक्तोदसन्मतिम् ।

। २७ ।

तस्मा अदाह्निश्चक्रं प्रत्यनीकभयावहम् । एकान्तभक्तिभावेन प्रीतो भृत्याभिरक्षणम् । २८ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Having inherited (the dominion of) the (entire) globe with its seven divisions (Dwīpas) and (alongwith it) an inexhaustible store of wealth and unequalled power and luxuries, the highly blessed Ambarīṣa regarded all that as equal in value to (no more valuable than) objects seen in a dream—even though it was most difficult to attain in the eyes of men (of the world—knowing as he did the perishableness of (all) wealth, through which man falls a prey to infatuation. (15-16) He had attained that supreme devotion to Lord Vāsudeva and His pious devotees by virtue of which (all) this (untold) wealth was regarded by him as (no better than) a clod of earth. (17) He fixed his mind exclusively on the lotus-feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Enchanter of all); he employed his words (eloquence) in recounting the virtues of Lord Vaikuṇṭha, his hands in sweeping the temple of Śrī Hari and so on, (and) his auditory sense in hearing the excellent stories of the immortal Lord. (18) He employed his eyes in seeing the idols and temples of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) and his tactile sense (pervading all the parts of his body) in touching the limbs of His servants (devotees); he devoted his olfactory sense to the fragrance of the blessed Tulasī leaves derived from (the contact of) His lotus-feet and his sense of taste to the food etc., offered to Him. (19) (Nay,) he employed his feet in repairing on foot to the tracts of land (Mathurā and so on) consecrated to Śrī Hari and his head in bowing to the feet of Lord Viṣṇu (the Controller of our senses) and coveted the offerings (such as wreaths of flowers, sandal-paste, scents and dainties) made to the Lord not with a desire to gratify his senses (only) but with a view to (attaining) His service (as a token of His grace). And he did all this (merely) in order that attachment may be conceived (in his mind) for the servants (devotees) of Lord Viṣṇu (enjoying excellent renown). (20) Thus resigning from day to day all his round of duties to the supreme Lord, who is above (all) sense-perception and whose worship excels all other sacred observances, and practising devotion to Him with his entire being, he ruled the earth, it is said, as instructed by Brāhmaṇas (like the sage Vasiṣṭha) devoted to Him. (21) He propitiated the almighty Lord presiding over sacrifices through (a number of) horse-sacrifices conducted by Vasiṣṭha, Asita, Gautama and other sages in a desert land facing the stream of the Sarasvatī river—sacrifices that had all their limbs as well as sacrificial fees (paid to the priests and other Brāhmaṇas) supplemented by abundant riches. (22) In his sacrifices the superintending priests as well as the priests officiating at the sacrifice and other men (assembled there), who were (all) richly dressed (and adorned too) and were gazing with unwinking eyes* (in wonder), looked alike in appearance with the gods (present there). (23) (Even) the celestial region, beloved of immortals, was never solicited by his men (much less by the king himself—), who (constantly) heard and chanted the stories of Lord Viṣṇu (of excellent renown). (24) (Nay,) pleasures of sense which were not easily attainable even to the Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth) did not delight the aforesaid men—who (always) perceived Lord Mukunda in their heart—eclipsed as they were by the bliss of Self-Realization (enjoyed by them). (25) Thus propitiating Śrī Hari through the practice of Devotion coupled with asceticism, as well as through (the performance of) his (sacred) duties, the aforesaid king gradually gave up all attachments. (26) With respect to his houses, wife, children and (other) relations, excellent

* The gods too are believed to possess eyes which never wink.

elephants, chariots, horses and foot-soldiers, inexhaustible (store of) jewels, ornaments and weapons etc., as well as regarding his endless treasures he developed the notion that they were (all) unreal. (27) Pleased with his exclusive devotion and love, Śrī Hari delivered to him His own discus (Sudarśana), the terror of His adversaries and the protector of his servants. (28)

आरिराधयिषुः कृष्णं महिष्या तुल्यशील्या। युक्तः सांवत्सरं वीरो दधार द्वादशीव्रतम्। २९।
 व्रतान्ते कार्तिके मासि त्रिरात्रं समुपोषितः। स्नातः कदाचित् कालिन्ध्या हरिं मधुवनेऽज्ययत्। ३०।
 महाभिषेकविधिना सर्वोपस्करसम्पदा। अभिषिच्याम्बराकल्पैर्गन्धमाल्याह्णादिभिः। ३१।
 तद्गतान्तरभावेन पूजयामास केशवम्। ब्राह्मणांश्च महाभागान् सिद्धार्थानपि भक्तितः। ३२।
 गवां रुक्मविषाणीनां रुष्याङ्घ्रीणां सुवाससाम्। पयःशीलवयोरुपवत्सोपस्करसम्पदाम्। ३३।
 प्राहिणोत् साधुविप्रेभ्यो गृहेषु न्यर्बुदानि षट्। भोजयित्वा द्विजानग्रे स्वाह्वानं गुणवत्तमम्। ३४।
 लब्धकामैरनुज्ञातः पारणावोपचक्रमे। तस्य तर्ह्यतिथिः साक्षाद् दुर्वासा भगवानभूत्। ३५।

Intending to please (the all-enchanting) Lord Viṣṇu, the heroic king (Ambariṣa) undertook (in right earnest) alongwith his wife, who had a similar disposition, a vow to fast on every Dwādaśī (the twelfth day of either fortnight of a lunar month) for a whole year.* (29) On one Dwādaśī day (the day following the fast) during the month of Kārtika, the king, who had duly fasted for three (previous) nights† and bathed in the river Kālinḍī (Yamunā), worshipped Śrī Hari in the (sacred) forest of Madhuvana (on the site of which was built the city of Mathurā later on). (30) Having bathed Lord Viṣṇu (the Ruler even of Brahmanā and Śiva) according to the procedure (laid down in the scriptures) for a royal bath, requiring a rich variety of accessories (such as sandal-paste and flowers for scenting the water with), he worshipped Him with his mind absorbed in Him by offering raiment and ornaments as well as sandal-paste, flowers, water for washing the hands with and other articles of worship, and (similarly) honoured with reverence the highly blessed (devoted) Brāhmaṇas even though they had (all) their objects accomplished (and thus did not seek any honour). (31-32) He (then) gifted so pious Brāhmaṇas and sent to their houses sixty crores of cows endowed with (abundant) milk, good disposition, young age and a good appearance and accompanied by their calves and (necessary) appendages (which are usually given alongwith a cow, such as a vessel for holding milk while milking a cow) and which had their horns plated with gold and hoofs with silver and were covered with excellent pieces of cloth. He first gave the Brāhmaṇas delicious and most excellent food to eat and, permitted by them, when they had received all their desired objects (such as presents of money), he set about concluding the fast (by taking his meal). That very moment there appeared before him an unexpected guest in the person of no less a personage than the glorious sage Durvāsā. (33—35)

तमानर्चातिथिं भूपः प्रत्युत्थानासनार्हणैः। ययाचेऽभ्यवहाराय पादमूलसुपागतः। ३६।
 प्रतिनन्द्य स तद्याच्छां कर्तुमावश्यकं गतः। निममज्ज बृहद् ध्यायन् कालिन्दीसलिले शुभे। ३७।
 मुहूर्तार्थाविशिष्टायां द्वादश्यां पारणं प्रति। चिन्तयामास धर्मज्ञो द्विजैस्तद्धर्मसङ्कटे। ३८।
 ब्राह्मणातिक्रमे दोषो द्वादश्यां यदपारणो। यत् कृत्वा साधु मे भूयादधर्मो वा न मां स्पृशेत्। ३९।

* Although every Vaiṣṇava or votary of the Lord Viṣṇu is enjoined to fast on the eleventh day of either fortnight of each lunar month throughout his life, Ambariṣa obviously took this vow for a period of one year only and that too in Madhuvana in order to impress on the people the advisability of fasting on this day.

† Anyone observing a fast on the Ekādaśī day is expected to have one meal only on the preceding as well as on the following day and to observe a total fast, abstaining from all food and drink including water, on the Ekādaśī. It is in this sense alone that King Ambariṣa should be taken to have fasted on three consecutive nights.

अम्भसा केवलेनाथ करिष्ये व्रतपारणम् । प्राहुरब्धक्ष्णं विप्रा ह्यशितं नाशितं च तत् । ४० ।
 इत्यपः प्राश्य राजर्षिश्चित्तयन् मनसाच्युतम् । प्रत्यचष्ट कुरुश्रेष्ठ द्विजागमनमेव सः । ४१ ।
 दुर्वासा यमुनाकूलात् कृतावश्यक आगतः । राज्ञाभिनन्दितस्तस्य बुबुधे चेष्टितं धिया । ४२ ।
 मन्थुना प्रचलद्वात्रो भृकुटीकुटिलाननः । बुभुक्षितश्च सुतरां कृताञ्जलिमभाषत । ४३ ।
 अहो अस्य नृशंसस्य श्रियोन्मत्तस्य पश्यत । धर्मव्यतिक्रमं विष्णोरभक्तस्येशमानिनः । ४४ ।
 यो मामतिथिमायातमातिथ्येन निमन्य च । अदत्त्वा भुक्तवांस्तस्य सद्यस्ते दर्शये फलम् । ४५ ।
 एवं ब्रुवाण उत्कृत्य जटां रोषविदीपितः । तया स निर्ममे तस्मै कृत्यां कालानल्लोपमाम् । ४६ ।
 तामापतन्तीं ज्वलतीमसिहस्तां पदा भुवम् । वेपयन्तीं समुद्रीक्ष्य न चचाल पदानृपः । ४७ ।
 प्राग्दिष्टं भृत्यरक्ष्यां पुरुषेण महात्मना । ददाह कृत्यां तां चक्रं क्रुद्धाहिमिव पावकः । ४८ ।
 तदभिद्रवदुद्रीक्ष्य स्वप्रयासं च निष्फलम् । दुर्वासा दुद्रुवे भीतो दिक्षु प्राणपरीप्सया । ४९ ।
 तमन्धवाद् भगवद्रथाङ्गं दावाभिरुद्धूतशिखो यथाहिम् ।
 तथानुषक्तं मुनिरीक्षमाणो गुहां विविक्षुः प्रससार मेरोः । ५० ।
 दिशो नभः क्ष्मां विवरान् समुद्राल्लोकान् सपालांस्त्रिदिवं गतः सः ।
 यतो यतो धावति तत्र तत्र सुदर्शनं दुष्प्रसहं ददर्श । ५१ ।
 अलब्धनाथः स यदा कुतश्चित् संत्रस्तचित्तोऽरण्यमेषमाणः ।
 देवं विरिञ्चं समगाद् विधातस्त्राह्यात्मयोनेऽजिततेजसो माम् । ५२ ।

(Putting off his meal,) the king honoured the newcomer by rising from his seat, offering a (high) seat and other articles of worship and, approaching (bowing at) the soles of his feet, prayed him to dine. (36) Having gladly accepted his prayer, the sage went (out) to finish his routine work (for midday, viz., bathing and devotions) and, fixing his mind on the Infinite, plunged into the sacred water of the Kāṇḍī (for a bath). (37) Since (only) half a Muhūrta (or twenty-four minutes) was left of the twelfth day (and it was necessary to conclude the fast during the hours of the Dwādaśī itself), Ambariṣa (who knew what was right) began to deliberate with the Brāhmaṇas on the question of concluding the fast in the face of such a moral crisis (conflict of duties). (38) (He said:) "Since there is sin in showing disrespect to a Brāhmaṇa (by inviting him to a dinner in the first instance and then taking one's meal before feeding him) and there is (also) sin in not concluding one's fast (for the Ekādaśī day) within (the hours of) the (following) Dwādaśī, pray, tell me a course of action consequent upon which good may betide me and sin may not touch me. (39) (Then, arriving at a conclusion in consultation with the Brāhmaṇas, he said to himself,) Since to take water—so declare the Brāhmaṇas—that is as good as taking food (for the purpose of breaking one's fast) and at the same time it is no eating, hence I shall break my fast with water alone." (40) Having thus taken water and contemplating on the immortal Lord with his mind, that royal sage (Ambariṣa) only awaited, O jewel of the Kurus, the return of the Brāhmaṇa (the sage Durvāsā). (41) Having gone through his (midday) routine, the sage Durvāsā (too) returned (in the meanwhile) from the bank of the Yamunā and, (even when) greeted by the king, came to know his act (of drinking water) by intuition. (42) With (all) his limbs shaking through rage and with a face (looking) curved due to a frown, the sage, who was (feeling) extremely hungry too, spoke (as follows) with reference to the emperor, who stood with joined palms (before the sage):—(43) 'Oh, look at the violation of Dharma (the principles of righteousness) on the part of this cruel monarch, intoxicated with fortune and lacking in devotion to Lord

* The Śruti also says:—'अप्योऽयमाति तन्नेवाशितं नैवानशितम्' ।

Viṣṇu, and looking upon himself as all-powerful, in that having invited me, arrived (at his door) as a newcomer, to accept his hospitality, has broken his fast without offering food to me ! (Turning to the king himself,) I shall forthwith show you as such the consequences (of your unrighteous act)." (44-45) Speaking thus and pulling a matted lock (from his head), the sage, who was inflamed with anger, created by means of it a female evil spirit (Kṛtyā), akin to the fire seen at the time of universal dissolution, in order to get rid of Ambarīṣa. (46) Though clearly perceiving her overhead, emitting flames and rushing (toward him), sword in hand, making the earth quake under her feet, the emperor did not stir from his place. (47) Already* told off by Lord Viṣṇu (the supreme Person), the universal Spirit, for the protection of His devotee (King Ambarīṣa), the discus (Sudarśana) burnt the aforesaid Kṛtyā (even) as fire would burn an angry serpent. (48) Frightened to see over his head the discus rushing towards himself (after burning the Kṛtyā) and his own endeavour (to kill Ambarīṣa) infructuous, the sage ran in his anxiety to save his life in different directions. (49) Sudarśana (the discus of the Lord) pursued him (even) as a wild fire with its flames thrown upwards (by the wind) would chase a serpent. Observing the discus close upon his heels as aforesaid, the sage fled in his eagerness to enter a cave of Mount Meru. (50) (Flying in this way) Duvāsā betook himself to (all) the quarters, the sky (the aerial region), (the various parts of) the terrestrial world, the subterranean regions, the (seven) oceans, the (different) spheres as well as their guardians and heaven (too). (But) Whithersoever he fled, he saw (at his back) in each such region the formidable Sudarśana. (51) When (however) no protector was found by him anywhere, he got frightened at heart and, seeking an asylum, approached the glorious Brahmā (the creator) and prayed (as follows): "O maker (of the universe), O Brahmā (the self born), protect me from the might (in the form of the discus) of Lord Viṣṇu (who is conquered by none)." (52)

ब्रह्मोवाच

स्थानं मदीयं सहविश्वमेतत् क्रीडावसाने द्विपरार्धसंज्ञे ।
 भूभङ्गमात्रेण हि संदिग्धक्षोः कालात्मनो यस्य तिरोभविष्यति । ५३ ।
 अहं भवो दक्षभृगुप्रधानाः प्रजेशभूतेशसुरेशमुख्याः ।
 सर्वे वयं यन्नियमं प्रपन्ना मूर्ध्यर्पितं लोकहितं वहामः । ५४ ।

प्रत्यारख्यातो विरिञ्चेन विष्णुचक्रोपतापितः । दुर्वासाः शरणं यातः शर्वं कैलासवासिनम् । ५५ ।

Brahmā observed : After a period of two Parārdhas, when the pastime (of the Lord in the shape of creation etc., of the universe) is over, my sphere alongwith (the rest of) the universe will surely vanish as a result of the mere contraction of brows on the part of the Lord in the form of the Time-Spirit, eager to burn away (all) this (objective universe). (53) Myself, Lord Śiva (the source of the universe) and others with Dakṣa and Bhṛgu at their head—the foremost of Prajāpatis (lords of created beings), Bhūtāpatis (the lords of ghosts and other evil spirits) and the chief of the gods (such as Indra)—we all submissively obey His Law, beneficial to the (whole) world, as a burden placed on our head. (Hence we are unable to protect you against His wrath). (54) (Thus) refused by Brahmā (the creator) and scorched by Sudarśana (the discus of Lord Viṣṇu), the sage Duvāsā sought as his shelter Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe), who lives on Mount Kailāsa. (55)

श्रीरुद्र उवाच

वयं न तात प्रभवाम भूमिं यस्मिन् परेऽन्येऽप्यजजीवकोशाः ।
 भवन्ति काले न भवन्ति हीदृशाः सहस्रशो यत्र वयं भ्रमामः । ५६ ।

अहं सनत्कुमारश्च नारदो भगवानजः । कपिलोऽपान्तरतमो देवलो धर्म आसुरिः । ५७ ।
 मरीचिप्रमुखाश्चान्ये सिद्धेशाः पारदर्शनाः । विदाम न वयं सर्वे यन्मायां माययाऽऽवृताः । ५८ ।
 तस्य विश्वेश्वरस्तेदं शस्त्रं दुर्विषहं हि नः । तमेव शरणं याहि हरिस्ते शं विधास्यति । ५९ ।
 ततो निराशो दुर्वासाः पदं भगवतो ययौ । वैकुण्ठाख्यं यदध्यास्ते श्रीनिवासः श्रिया सह । ६० ।
 संदह्यमानोऽजितशस्त्रवह्निना तत्पादमूले पतितः सवेपथुः ।
 आहाच्युतानन्त सदीप्सित प्रभो कृतागसं माव हि विश्वभावन । ६१ ।
 अजानता ते परमानुभावं कृतं मयाद्यं भवतः प्रियाणाम् ।
 विधेहि तस्यापचिति विधातमुच्येत यन्नाम्न्युदिते नारकोऽपि । ६२ ।

Śrī Rudra remarked : "We have no power, O dear son, over the infinite (all-pervading) Supreme, in whom indeed other universes too—as vast as this—forming the body of Jivas (embodied souls) in the person of Brahmā (the birthless creator) appear in thousands at the appointed time (the time of creation) and (then) cease (merge in Him at the time of final dissolution)—universes in which we (Brahmā and Myself) are being tossed about (like tiny insects). (56) Myself, the sages Sanat Kumāra and Nārada, the glorious Brahmā (the creator), Lord Kapila, the sages Apāntaratama and Devala, Dharma (the god of piety), the sage Āsuri and other omniscient lords of Siddhas (inspired seers) headed by the sage Marīci—we are all unable to penetrate (the veil of) His Māyā (deluding potency), enveloped as we are by that Māyā. (57-58) Since this is a weapon of that Lord of the universe and therefore hard to resist for us, (please) seek Him alone as Your protector. (I am sure) Śrī Hari will bring you security." (59) Having no hope (of help from any other quarter) left, the sage Durvāsā went from there to the Lord's (own) realm, called Vāikuṇṭha, in which resides Lord Viṣṇu (the Abode of Śrī) alongwith (His divine Spouse) Śrī (the goddess of fortune). (60) Being scorched by the fire of Sudarśana (the missile of Lord Viṣṇu, who is conquered by none), the sage fell shuddering at the soles of the Lord's feet and said, "O immortal and infinite Lord, sought for by the righteous, O Protector of the universe, (kindly) do protect me, an offender (that I am). (61) An offence has been committed by me against those beloved of You, ignorant as I was of Your supreme glory. (Pray,) wipe off that sin, O Director (of the universe)! By the (very utterance of Your Name even a denizen of hell gets liberated." (62)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अहं भक्तपराधीनो ह्यस्वतन्त्र इव द्विज । साधुभिर्ग्रस्तहृदयो भक्तैर्भक्तजनप्रियः । ६३ ।
 नाहमात्मानमाशासे मद्भक्तैः साधुभिर्विना । श्रियं चात्यन्तिकीं ब्रह्मन् येषां गतिरहं परा । ६४ ।
 ये दारागारपुत्राप्तान् प्राणान् वित्तमिमं परम् । हित्वा मां शरणं याताः कथं तांस्त्यक्तुमुत्सहे । ६५ ।
 मयि निर्बद्धहृदयाः साधवः समदर्शनाः । वशीकुर्वन्ति मां भक्त्या सत्स्रियः सत्पति यथा । ६६ ।
 मत्सेवया प्रतीतं च सालोक्यादिचतुष्टयम् । नेच्छन्ति सेवया पूर्णाः कुतोऽन्यत् कालविद्वत्तम् । ६७ ।
 साधवो हृदयं मह्यं साधूनां हृदयं त्वहम् । मदन्यत् ते न जानन्ति नाहं तेभ्यो मनागपि । ६८ ।
 उपायं कथयिष्यामि तव विप्र शृणुष्व तत् । अयं ह्यात्माभिचारस्ते यतस्तं यातु वै भवान् ।

साधुषु प्रहितं तेजः प्रहर्तुः कुस्तेऽशिवम् । ६९ ।

तपो विद्या च विप्राणां निःश्रेयसकरे उभे । त एव दुर्विनीतस्य कल्पते कर्तुमन्यथा । ७० ।
 ब्रह्मंस्तद् गच्छ भद्रं ते नाभागतनयं नृपम् । क्षमापय महाभागं ततः शान्तिर्भविष्यति । ७१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धेऽन्वरीषचरिते चतुर्थोऽध्यायः । १४ ।

The glorious Lord said : My heart having been (completely) taken possession of by My pious devotees, I am really subject to the control of such devotees like one who is not self-dependent, O Brāhmaṇa. And I am the (only) beloved of My devotees. (63) As apart from My pious devotees, to whom I am the highest goal, I covet neither Myself nor Goddess Śrī (My Consort), who is eternal (like Myself), O holy sage ! (64) How dare I forsake them who, having renounced (all attachments for) their wife, house, children and relations, (nay,) their (very) life and wealth and (their welfare in) this and the other world, have sought Me as their protector? (65) Pious souls who have fastened their heart on Me and look upon all with the same eye enthrall Me by (their) devotion (even) as virtuous ladies enthrall their virtuous husband. (66) (Feeling) satiated through Devotion, they do not desire even the four types of final beatitude, beginning with Śālokya or residence in the same heaven with the Lord (the other three types being Sāmīpya or close proximity with the Lord, Sārūpya or similarity of form with the Lord and Sāyujya or absorption into the Lord), though attained (actually) through service rendered to Me. How (then) can they covet anything else (such as the position of Indra) which is subject to the ravages of Time? (67) Pious souls (devotees) are My (very) heart (most beloved of Me), while I am the (very) heart (the most beloved) of the righteous. They do not cognize anything else (dearer) than Me nor do I know in the least anyone else (dearer) than them. (68) I shall (however) point out to you a means of escape (from this calamity), O Durvāsā ! (Please) hear it Seek him alone because of whom this violence perpetrated by you has actually (recoiled on you and thus) proved to be an act of self-immolation. Force employed against the righteous brings harm to the striker (himself). (69) Asceticism and worship (offered to a deity) are both conducive to the highest good (final beatitude) for Brāhmaṇas (endowed with humility and other virtues). In the case (however) of a doer who is lacking in modesty, those very practices lead to contrary results (prove harmful). (70) Therefore, O Brāhmaṇa, may good betide you; approach King Ambarīṣa (the son of Nābhāga) and seek the forgiveness of that highly blessed soul. Then (alone) will peace (of mind) come (to you). (71)

Thus ends the fourth discourse, forming part of the story of Ambarīṣa, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Samhitā.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

The story of Ambarīṣa (Concluded)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं भगवताऽऽदिष्टो दुर्वासाश्चक्रतापितः । अश्वरीषमुपावृष्य तत्पादौ दुःखितोऽग्रहीत् । १ ।
तस्य सोऽग्रमनं वीक्ष्य पादस्पर्शविलज्जितः । अस्तावीत् तद्धरेरस्त्रं कृपया पीडितो भूशम् । २ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus directed by the Lord and scorched by His discus (Sudarśana), Durvāsā came back to Ambarīṣa and, full of sorrow, clasped the latter's feet. (1) Observing the endeavour on the part of the sage (to seek his forgiveness), Ambarīṣa, who was much ashamed at the sage's touching his feet and sore stricken with compassion, began to extol the aforesaid missile of Śrī Hari (in the following words). (2)

अम्बरीष उवाच

त्वमग्निर्भगवान् सूर्यस्त्वं सोमो ज्योतिषां पतिः । त्वमापस्त्वं क्षितिर्व्योम वायुमत्रिन्द्रियाणि च । ३ ।
सुदर्शनं नमस्तुभ्यं सहस्राचार्युतप्रिय । सर्वास्त्रघातिन् विप्राय स्वस्ति भूया इडस्यते । ४ ।
त्वं धर्मस्त्वमृतं सत्यं त्वं यज्ञोऽखिलयज्ञभुक् । त्वं लोकपालः सर्वात्मा त्वं तेजः पौरुषं परम् । ५ ।

नमः सुनाभाखिलधर्मसेतवे ह्यधर्मशीलासुरधूमकेतवे ।
त्रैलोक्यगोपाय विशुद्धचर्चसे मनोजवायाद्भुतकर्मणे गुणे । ६ ।
त्वत्तेजसा धर्ममयेन संहतं तमः प्रकाशश्च धृतो महात्मनाम् ।
दुरत्ययस्ते महिमा गिरां पते त्वद्रूपमेतत् सदसत् परावरम् । ७ ।
यदा विसृष्टस्त्वमनञ्जनेन वै बलं प्रविष्टोऽजित दैत्यदानवम् ।
बाहूदरोर्वङ्गिप्रशिरोधराणि वृक्कात्रजस्रं प्रधने विराजसे । ८ ।
स त्वं जगन्नाथ खलप्रहाणये निरूपितः सर्वस्सहो गदाभृता ।
विप्रस्य चास्मत्कुलदैवहेतवे विधेहि भद्रं तदनुग्रहो हि नः । ९ ।

यद्यस्ति दत्तमिष्टं वा स्वधर्मो वा स्वनृष्टितः । कुलं नो विप्रदेवं चेद् द्विजो भवतु विज्वरः । १० ।
यदि नो भगवान् प्रीत एकः सर्वगुणाश्रयः । सर्वभूतात्मभावेन द्विजो भवतु विज्वरः । ११ ।

Ambarīṣa prayed : You are Agni (the god of fire) and the glorious sun-god; You are Soma (the moon-god), the lord of the (other) luminaries (lunar mansions). You are water, You are the earth and the sky, the air, the (five) objects of senses (viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell) and the senses (themselves). (3) Hail to You, O Sudarśana, endowed with a thousand spokes and beloved of the immortal Lord ! O Destroyer of all (other) missiles, may You be propitious to the Brāhmaṇs (the sage Duvāsā), O Protector of the earth ! (4) You are righteousness; You are truthful and polite speech as well as the faculty of regarding all with the same eye; You are the Deity presiding over (all) sacrificial performances as well as the Enjoyer of all sacrifices. You are the Protector of the worlds and the Soul of the universe; (nay,) You are the transcendent effulgence of the supreme Person. (5) (Altogether unable to glorify You,) O Sunābha (a discus with a beautiful nave), I simply address the exclamation "Hail" to You, the Upholder of all virtues, a veritable fire to destroy demons given to unrighteousness, the protector of (all) the three worlds, possessed of purest effulgence, quick as thought and credited with marvellous deeds. (6) By Your splendour, consisting of righteousness, the darkness (obscuring the vision) of great souls is dispelled and their light preserved. (Nay,) this (entire) creation, (both) manifest and unmanifest, high and low, is illuminated by You (in the form of the sun, the moon and so on). Unfathomable is Your glory, O Ruler of speech ! (7) When, hurled by the Lord, who is (wholly) tainted (by ignorance etc.), You actually enter the force of the Daityas and the Dānavas, O invincible One, You shine brightly in battle while unceasingly lopping off their arms, trunks, thighs, feet and necks. (8) As such You, O Shield of the world, have been detailed by Lord viṣṇu (the Wielder of a mace) for the extermination of the wicked, capable as You are of resisting all. Therefore, in order to bring good-luck to our race, (kindly) grant safety to this Brāhmaṇa (the sage Duvāsā); for that would be an act of grace to us (in that it would save us from the sin of being an instrument in the death of a Brāhmaṇa). (9) If gift was (ever) made (by us) or a sacrifice (duly) performed or our allotted duty satisfactorily performed, and if our race has looked upon the Brāhmaṇa as a deity, let the Brāhmaṇa be relieved of his distress (as a reward for such a gift, sacrifice or the due performance of a duty). (10) (Nay,) if the Lord, (who is) the one abode of all excellences, is pleased with us by virtue of our looking on all living beings as His own embodiments, let the Brāhmaṇa be rid of his trouble. (11)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति संस्तुवतो राज्ञो विष्णुचक्रं सुदर्शनम् । अशाम्यत् सर्वतो विप्रं प्रदहद् राजयाच्चया । १२ ।

स मुक्तोऽस्त्राश्रितापेन दुर्वासाः स्वस्तिमांस्ततः । प्रशंस तमुर्वीशं युञ्जानः परमाशिषः । १३ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : While the emperor (Ambarīṣa) was thus hymning Sudarśana, the said discus of Lord Viṣṇu, which had (hitherto) been scorching the Brāhmaṇa (Durvāsā) on all sides, cooled down at the king's entreaty. (12) Rid of the (burning) heat of the fire of the missile (Sudarśana), Durvāsā now felt relieved and applauded the emperor (in the following words), pronouncing the highest blessings on him. (13)

दुर्वासा उवाच

अहो अनन्तदासानां महत्त्वं दृष्टमद्य मे । कृतागसोऽपि यद् राजन् मङ्गलानि समीहसे । १४ ।

दुष्करः को नु साधूनां दुस्त्यजो वा महात्मनाम् । यैः संगृहीतो भगवान् सात्वतामूषधो हरिः । १५ ।

यन्नामश्रुतिमात्रेण पुमान् भवति निर्मलः । तस्य तीर्थपदः किं वा दासानामवशिष्यते । १६ ।

राजन्ननुगृहीतोऽहं त्वयातिकरुणात्मना । मधये पृष्ठतः कृत्वा प्राणा यन्मेऽभिरक्षिताः । १७ ।

Durvāsā observed : Ah, the glory of servants (votaries) of the infinite Lord has been witnessed by me today in that you, O emperor, strive for the good even of him (myself) who has wronged you. (14) Indeed what is there hard to accomplish for benevolent souls and what is there difficult to forswear in the eyes of the high-souled, by whom Lord Śrī Hari, the Guardian of devotees, has been lovingly installed in their heart? (15) What could there be wanting on the part of servants (votaries) of that Lord of hallowed feet, through the very hearing of whose Name a person is rid of all impurities? (16) O king, I have been (greatly) favoured by you, an extremely kind-hearted soul, in that my life has been saved by you, overlooking my offence. (17)

राजा तमकृताहारः प्रत्यागमनकाङ्क्षया । चरणावुपसंगृह्य प्रसाद्य समभोजयत् । १८ ।

सोऽश्लिवाऽदृतमानीतमातिथ्यं सार्वकामिकम् । तृप्तात्मा नृपतिं प्राह भुज्यतामिति सादरम् । १९ ।

प्रीतोऽस्यनुगृहीतोऽस्मि तव भागवतस्य वै । दर्शनस्पर्शनालपैरातिथ्येनात्ममेधसा । २० ।

कर्माविदात्तमेतत् ते गायन्ति स्वःस्त्रियो मुहुः । कीर्तिं परमपुण्यां च कीर्तयिष्यति भूरियम् । २१ ।

The emperor, who had not (yet) taken his meal (ever since) in the hope of the sage's return, sumptuously fed him after gratifying him (in the first instance) by clasping his feet. (18) Sated at heart after partaking of the (rich) fare (appropriate to a guest) brought to him with reverence and gratifying every wish (suitsing every taste), Durvāsā politely said to the king, "(Please) take your food, (19) I am really pleased and obliged by the sight, touch and talk as well as by the hospitality—offered with a mind fixed on the supreme Self—of a (great) devotee of the Lord in you. (20) Celestial ladies will repeatedly celebrate this blemishless deed of yours. Nay, this earth (itself) will loudly proclaim Your most sacred glory." (21)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं संकीर्त्य राजानं दुर्वासाः परितोषितः । ययौ विहायसाऽऽमन्य ब्रह्मलोकमहैतुकम् । २२ ।

संवत्सरोऽज्यगात् तावद् यावता नागतो गतः । मुनिस्तद्दर्शनाकाङ्क्षो राजाऽब्रक्षो बभूव ह । २३ ।

गते च दुर्वाससि सोऽम्बरीषो द्विजोपयोगातिपवित्रमाहत् ।

ऋषेर्विमोक्षं व्यसनं च बुद्ध्वा मेने स्ववीर्यं च परानुभावम् । २४ ।

एवंविधानेकगुणः स राजा परात्मनि ब्रह्मणि वासुदेवे ।
 क्रियाकलापैः समुवाह भक्तिं यथाऽऽविशिष्यान् निरयाश्चकार । २५ ।
 अथाभ्वरीषस्तनयेषु राज्यं समानशीलेषु विसृज्य धीरः ।
 वनं विवेशात्मनि वासुदेवे मनो दधद् ध्वस्तगुणप्रवाहः । २६ ।
 इत्येतत् पुण्यमाख्यानमभ्वरीषस्य भूपतेः । संकीर्तयन्ननुध्यायन् भक्तो भगवतो भवेत् । २७ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धेऽभ्वरीषचरितं नाम पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Having thus acclaimed the king and asking leave of him, Durvāsā, who was highly gratified, rose through the heavens to Brahmāloka (the region of Brahṁā), attainable (only) through disinterested action. (22) A (whole) year had elapsed before the sage, who had gone out (in search of a quarter to Brahmāloka and other regions), returned (to the capital of Ambarīṣa). And, longing for a sight of the sage, the king—so the tradition goes—subsisted on (mere) water (all these months). (23) And, when Durvāsā left, the said Ambarīṣa ate the (remnant of) food that had been rendered most holy by being partaken of by a Brāhmaṇa (the sage Durvāsā). And perceiving the evil plight and (ultimate) redemption of the seer (Durvāsā), as well as his own firmness in remaining without any food for a whole year, he thought it (all) to be a glory of the Supreme. (24) Possessed of many such qualities, the said emperor (Ambarīṣa) practised devotion to Lord Vāsudeva, the supreme Spirit and the ultimate Reality, through his multifarious duties (that stood offered to Him)—by virtue of which (devotion) he regarded (all) blessings including the position of Brahṁā (the creator) as (no better than so many) forms of damnation. (25) Now, leaving his kingdom to the care of his sons, who were (all) possessed of a disposition similar to his own, the wise Ambarīṣa retired to a forest. (And) fixing his mind on Lord Vāsudeva, his own self, he (eventually) had his round of births and deaths brought to a close. (26) Anyone reciting and repeatedly musing on this aforesaid sacred story of Emperor Ambarīṣa bids fair to become a devotee of the Lord. (27)

Thus ends the fifth discourse entitled "The story of Ambarīṣa," in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

The posterity of Ikṣvāku : the stories of Māṇdhātā and the sage Saubhari

श्रीशुक उवाच

विरूपः केतुमाञ्छभुरभ्वरीषसुताख्यः । विरूपात् पृषदश्चोऽभूत् तत्पुत्रस्तु रथीतरः । १ ।
 रथीतरस्याप्रजस्य भार्यायां तन्तवेऽर्थितः । अङ्गिरा जनयामास ब्रह्मवर्चस्विनः सुतान् । २ ।
 एते क्षेत्रे प्रसूता वै पुनस्त्वाङ्गिरसाः स्मृताः । रथीतराणां प्रवराः क्षत्रोपेता द्विजातयः । ३ ।
 क्षुवतस्तु मनोजङ्गे इक्ष्वाकुर्ग्राणतः सुतः । तस्य पुत्रशतज्येष्ठा विकुक्षिनिमिदण्डकाः । ४ ।

तेषां पुरस्तादभवन्नायावर्ते नृपा नृपः पञ्चविंशतिः पश्चाच्च त्रयो मध्ये परेऽन्यतः । ५ ।
 स एकदाष्टकाश्रान्दे इक्ष्वाकुः सुतमादिशत् । मांसमानीयतां मेध्यं विकुक्षे गच्छ माचिरम् । ६ ।
 तथेति स वनं गत्वा मृगान् हत्वा क्रियार्हणान् । श्रान्तो बुभुक्षितो वीरः शशं चाददपस्मृतिः । ७ ।
 शेषं निवेदयामास पित्रे तेन च तद्गुरुः । चोदितः प्रोक्षणायाह दुष्टमेतदकर्मकम् । ८ ।
 ज्ञात्वा पुत्रस्य तत् कर्म गुरुणाभिहितं नृपः । देशात्रिःसारयामास सुतं त्यक्तविधिं रुषा । ९ ।
 स तु विप्रेण संवादं जापकेन समाचरन् । त्यक्त्वा कलेवरं योगी स तेनावप यत् परम् । १० ।
 पितर्युपरेतेऽभ्येत्य विकुक्षिः पृथिवीमिमाम् । शासदीजे हरिं यज्ञैः शशद इति विश्रुतः । ११ ।
 पुञ्जयस्तस्य सुत इन्द्रवाह इतीरितः । ककुत्स्थ इति चाप्युक्तः शृणु नामानि कर्मभिः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Virūpa, Ketumān and Śambhu were the three sons of Ambarīṣa.

From (the loins of) Virūpa (the eldest of the three) sprang up Prṣādaśwa and the latter's son was Rathītara. (1) Prayed to for progeny (to continue the thread of Rathītara's line), the (celebrated) sage Aṅgīrā (a mind-born son of Brahman) begot through the wife of Rathītara, who was issueless, (a number of) sons invested with a glory resulting from the knowledge of the Vedas. (2) Though born of the wife of Rathītara (and therefore deserving the family name of Rathītaras), they actually became known as Aṅgīrasas (those sprung from the loins of Aṅgīrā). They were (recognized as) the foremost of the Rathītaras (the other progeny of Rathītara and their posterity), being Brāhmaṇas endowed with the (martial) qualities of Kṣatriyas. (3) From the nostrils of Vāivasvata Manu, even while he was sneezing, sprang up a son (called) Ikṣvāku. Of his hundred sons, Vikukṣi, Nimi and Daṇḍaka were the eldest. (4) Of those (hundred sons) twenty-five became rulers (of small provinces) in the eastern quarter of Āryāvarta (the sacred* tract of land lying between the Vindhya range and the Himalayas), O Parīkṣit, and as many (another twenty-five) in the western region; three (eldest, named above) in the centre, and the rest in other parts (viz., in the north and south). (5) Once on the occasion of a Śrāddha (a rite performed in honour of the departed spirits of one's deceased relations) during the Aṣṭakas (the seventh, eighth, ninth and thirteenth days of either fortnight of a lunar month) Ikṣvāku peremptorily said to his son (Vikukṣi), "Vikukṣi, go and bring (me some) flesh fit for being offered to the manes. (Please) do not tarry." (6) Saying "Be it so!" the heroic prince (Vikukṣi) went to the forest and, having killed (some) animals fit for (being used in) a religious rite (Śrāddha ceremony), thoughtlessly ate of (the flesh of) a hare (after roasting it), fatigued and hungry as he was. (7) He gave the rest (of the flesh) to (his father) Ikṣvāku; but the latter's preceptor (the sage Vasiṣṭha), when requested to sprinkle it with water (and thus consecrate it) said, "This has been contaminated (by being eaten of beforehand) and is (thus) unfit for Śrāddha." (8) Having come to know of the aforesaid (sacrilegious) act of his son as told by his preceptor, the king (Ikṣvāku) in an angry mood exiled from his country his son (Vikukṣi), who had abandoned the practice of good men. (9) The king then held a talk (on the ultimate Truth) with the sage (Vasiṣṭha), his preceptor. As a result of such talk he became established in Jñānayoga (the path of knowledge or realization of one's identity with the ultimate Reality) and on casting off the body attained (oneness with) that which is higher than all. (10) His father (Ikṣvāku) being (now) dead, Vikukṣi returned (home) and, while ruling this earth, propitiated Śrī Hari through (a number of) sacrifices and became known as Saśāda (the devourer of a hare). (11) His son Puraṇjaya (the conqueror of a city), was nicknamed as Indravāha (the rider of Indra) and also as Kakutstha (one who rides the hump of a bull). (Now) hear by (virtue of) what deeds he earned these (three) names. (12)

कृतान्त आसीत् समरो देवानां सह दानवैः । पाष्णिग्राहो वृतो वीरो देवैर्दैन्यपराजितैः । १३ ।
वचनाद् देवदेवस्य विष्णोर्विश्वात्मनः प्रभोः । वाहनत्वे वृतस्तस्य बभूवेत्रो महावृषः । १४ ।
स संनद्धो धनुर्दिव्यमादाय विशिखाञ्छितान् । स्तूयमानः समारुह्य युयुत्सुः ककुदि स्थितः । १५ ।
तेजसाऽऽप्यायितो विष्णोः पुरुषस्य परात्मनः । प्रतीच्यां दिशि दैत्यानां न्यरुणत् त्रिदशैः पुरम् । १६ ।
तैस्तस्य चाभूत् प्रधानं तुमुलं लोमहर्षणम् । यमाय भल्लैर्नयद् दैत्यान् येऽभिययुर्मूढे । १७ ।
तस्येषुपाताभिमुखं युगान्ताग्रिमिवोल्बणम् । विसृज्य दुद्रुवुर्दैत्या हन्यमानाः स्वमालयम् । १८ ।
जित्वा पुरं धनं सर्वं सश्रीकं वज्रपाणये । प्रत्ययच्छत् स राजर्षिरिति नामभिराहृतः । १९ ।

(In those very days) there was a conflict of the gods with the demons—a conflict which (all but) wiped out the (entire) creation. The hero (in the person of Purañjaya) was enlisted as an ally by the gods, (that had been) vanquished by the Daityas. (13) Desired (by Purañjaya) for the role of a mount to him, Indra assumed the form of a gigantic bull at the instance of Lord Viṣṇu, the god of gods and the soul of the universe. (14) Protected by an armour and taking a celestial bow and sharp arrows, Purañjaya, who was eager to fight, rode on the back of the bull, while being praised (by the gods), and took his seat on its hump. (15) Invigorated by the strength of Lord Viṣṇu, the most ancient Person and the supreme Spirit, he besieged with the help of the gods the city of the Daityas in the west. (16) His fight with the Daityas was very close and thrilling and he despatched with his arrows to (the abode of) Yama (all) the Daityas that encountered him on the battle-field. (17) Quitting the range of flight of his shafts, which was hot as the fire at the time of final dissolution, the Daityas, who were being (severely) struck (all the time), fled to their home (Pātāla). (18) Having conquered the town (of the Daityas), (so) full of splendour, as well as all the wealth (contained in it), that royal sage made it over to Indra (the wielder of the thunderbolt). It was for these reasons that he was called by a number of names (Indravāha, Kakutstha and Purañjaya). (19)

पुञ्जयस्य पुत्रोऽभूदनेनास्तत्सुतः पृथुः । विश्वरश्मिस्ततश्चन्द्रो युवनाश्वश्च तत्सुतः । २० ।
शाबस्तस्तत्सुतो येन शाबस्ती निर्ममे पुरी । बृहदश्वस्तु शाबस्तिस्ततः कुबलयाश्वकः । २१ ।
यः प्रियार्थमुत्तङ्कस्य धुन्धुनामासुरं वली । सुतानामेकविंशत्या सहलैरहनद् वृतः । २२ ।
धुन्धुमार इति ख्यातस्तत्सुतास्ते च जज्वल्ः । धुन्धोर्मुखाग्निना सर्वे त्रय एवावशेषिताः । २३ ।
दृढाश्वः कपिलाश्वश्च भद्राश्व इति भारत । दृढाश्वपुत्रो हर्यश्चो निकुम्भस्तत्सुतः स्मृतः । २४ ।
बर्हणाश्वो निकुम्भस्य कृशाश्वोऽथास्य सेनजित् । युवनाश्वोऽभवत् तस्य सोऽनपत्यो वनं गतः । २५ ।
भार्याशतेन निर्विण्ण ऋषयोऽस्य कृपालवः । इष्टिं स्म वर्तयाञ्चकुरैर्द्रीं ते सुसमाहिताः । २६ ।
राजा तद् यज्ञसदनं प्रविष्टो निशि तर्षितः । दृष्ट्वा शयानान् विप्रांस्तान् पपौ मन्त्रजलं स्वयम् । २७ ।
उत्थितास्ते निशाम्याथ व्युदकं कलशं प्रभो । पप्रच्छुः कस्य कर्मदं पीतं पुंसवनं जलम् । २८ ।
राज्ञा पीतं विदित्वाथ ईश्वरप्रहितेन ते । ईश्वराय नमश्चकुरहो दैवबलं बलम् । २९ ।
ततः काल उपावृते कुक्षिं निर्भिद्य दक्षिणम् । युवनाश्वस्य तनयश्चक्रवर्ती जजान ह । ३० ।
कं धास्यति कुमारोऽयं सत्यं रोक्ष्यते भृशम् । मां धाता वत्स मा रोदीरितीन्द्रो देशिनीमदात् । ३१ ।
न ममार पिता तस्य विप्रदेवप्रसादतः । युवनाश्वोऽथ तत्रैव तपसा सिद्धिमन्वगात् । ३२ ।
त्रसद्दस्युरितीन्द्रोऽङ्ग विदधे नाम तस्य वै । यस्मात् त्रसन्ति ह्युद्विग्रा दस्यवो रावणादयः । ३३ ।
यौवनाश्वोऽथ मान्धाता चक्रवर्त्यवनीं प्रभुः । सप्तद्वीपवतीमेकः शशासाच्युतेजसा । ३४ ।
ईजे च यज्ञं क्रतुभिरात्मविद् भूरिदक्षिणैः । सर्वदेवमयं देवं सर्वात्मकमतीन्द्रियम् । ३५ ।

राजा भगीरथकी प्रार्थनापर भगवान् शिवका गङ्गाको अपने सिरपर धारण करना
 Entreated by Bhagīratha Lord Śiva holds Gaṅgā on his head

मर्यादापुरुषोत्तम भगवान् श्रीराम
Lord Rāma the Maryādāpuruṣottama

भगवान् श्रीकृष्णके बालचरित्र (क)
Childly pranks of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (A)

भगवान् श्रीकृष्णके बालचरित्र (ख)
Childly pranks of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (B)

जरासन्धके कारागारसे राजाओंकी मुक्ति
 The release of kings from the prison of Jarāsandha

शाल्व-संग्राम

Battle with Śālva

दन्तवक्र और विदूरथाका उद्धार
Liberation of Dantavakra and Vidūratha

माता देवकीके मृत पुत्रोंको वापस लाना

Restoration of dead sons of Devaki

यदुकुलके विनाशका शाप

Curse for the annihilation of Yadu dynasty

गीताप्रेस, गोरखपुर

परमधाम-गमनके पूर्वकी झाँकी
The glimpse of final departure of Lord

द्वयं मन्त्रो विधिर्यज्ञो यजमानस्तथर्विजः । धर्मो देशश्च कालश्च सर्वमेतद् यदात्मकम् । ३६ ।
यावत् सूर्य उदेति स्म यावच्च प्रतितिष्ठति । सर्वं तद् यौवनाश्रय मायातुः क्षेत्रमुच्यते । ३७ ।

The son of Purañjaya was Anenā (the sinless) and Pṛthu was the son of Anenā. From (the loins of) Pṛthu sprang up Viśvarandhī and Candra was born of Viśvarandhī; and Yuvanāśwa was the son of Candra. (20) The son of Yuvanāśwa was Śābasta, by whom the town of Śābastī was built; while Brhadaśwa was the son of Śābasta and of the former, Kuvalayaśwa was born. (21) With a view to obliging the sage Utaṅka, the powerful Kuvalayaśwa, surrounded (accompanied) by his twenty-one thousand sons, killed a demon; Dhundhu by name, and (thereby) became known as Dhundhumāra (the slayer of Dhundhu). (Almost) all the aforesaid sons of Dhundhumāra, however, were burnt up by the fire that issued from the mouth of Dhundhu; only three, viz., Dṛghāśwa, Kapilaśwa and Bhadrāśwa were left (alive), O Parikṣit (a scion of Bharata)! Haryaśwa was the son of Dṛghāśwa, while that of Haryaśwa was called Nikumbha. (224) Barhaṇāśwa was the son of Nikumbha; Kṛśāśwa, of Barhaṇāśwa; and Senajit was the son of Kṛśāśwa. senajit's son was Yuvanāśwa. Being issueless and (therefore) full of despair, the latter (however) retired to a forest (hermitage) alongwith his hundred wives. The sages (of that hermitage) were (very) compassionate by nature. Lo! with (great) concentration of mind they conducted on his behalf a sacrifice intended to propitiate Indra (the Lord of paradise). (25-26) Feeling thirsty at night, the king (Yuvanāśwa) entered their sacrificial hut and, finding the Brāhmaṇas (in charge of the sacrifice) asleep, drank the water (that had been) consecrated with Mantras (and reserved for the principal queen) himself. (27) Seeing the (sacrificial) pitcher without water when they got up (in the early hours), O king, the priests now enquired (of the king) whose work it was that the water capable of producing a male child had been quaffed. (28) Having presently come to know that the water had been drunk by the king (himself) as impelled by Providence, they offered salutation to the Almighty Lord, saying: "Oh, the power of destiny (alone) is (the real) strength!" (29) Then, when the time came (i. e., after a period of nine months) a son, (who was) destined to be a ruler of (the entire) globe, was born, splitting open, it is said, the right pelvic region of king Yuvanāśwa. (30) When the babe cried much (for being suckled) and the Brāhmaṇas anxiously inquired: "Whom will this prince suck?", Indra put into the babe's mouth his index finger (dripping with nectar), saying "The babe will suck me (Mām Dhātā); do not cry, my child!" (Hence the babe became known as Māndhātā). (31) The father of the babe did not die by the grace of the Brāhmaṇas and the gods (even though he had his pelvic region split up). (Nay,) he forthwith attained perfection (final beatitude) in that very hermitage through asceticism. (32) Indra for his part gave him, O dear Parikṣit, the name of Trasaddasyu (the terror of miscreants) inasmuch as villains like Rāvaṇa (the demon king of Laṅkā, who was subsequently killed by Lord Śrī Rāma, born in that very line) were (much) afraid of him and felt (greatly) agitated (because of him). (33) Powerful through the might of the immortal Lord, Māndhātā, son of Yuvanāśwa, ruled the (entire) globe consisting of the seven Dvīpas (main divisions) as its one supreme Lord. (34) Although a knower of the Self, he propitiated Lord Viṣṇu (the Deity presiding over sacrifices)—who not only represents all the gods (on His person*) but embodies all and is above sense-perception by means of (a number of) sacrifices in which liberal Dakṣiṇās (or presents of money) were given (to the Brāhmaṇas). (35) (As a matter of fact,) the material (to be used in a sacrificial performance), the sacred texts (uttered in the course of a sacrifice), the procedure (laid down for conducting it), the sacrifice (itself), the sacrificer as well as the priests (officiating at the sacrifice), Dharma (religious merit resulting from a virtuous deed), the place as well as the time of a sacrificial performance—in fact, the whole universe represents His body. (It was such a Lord whom Māndhātā worshipped through the aforesaid sacrifices). (36) The whole extent of land from the point where the sun rises to the point where it sets is called the territory of Māndhātā, the son of Yuvanāśwa. (37)

शशबिन्दोर्दुहितरि बिन्दुमत्यामधावृषः । पुरुकुत्समम्बरीषं मुचुकुन्दं च योगिनम् ।

तेषां स्वसारः पञ्चाशत् सौभरि वत्रिरे पतिम् । ३८ ।

यमुनान्तर्जले मयस्तप्यमानः परंतपः । निर्वृतिं मीनराजस्य वीक्ष्य मैथुनधर्मिणः । ३९ ।

जातस्पृहो नृपं विप्रः कन्यामेकामयाचत । सोऽय्याह गृह्यतां ब्रह्मन् कामं कन्या स्वयंवरे । ४० ।

स विचिन्त्याप्रियं स्त्रीणां जर्जटोऽयमसम्मतः । वलीपलित एजत्क इत्यहं प्रत्युदाहृतः । ४१ ।

साधयिष्ये तथाऽऽत्मानं सुरस्त्रीणामपीप्सितम् । किं पुनर्मुजेन्द्राणामिति व्यवसितः प्रभुः । ४२ ।

मुनिः प्रवेशितः क्षत्रा कन्यान्तःपुरमृद्धिमत् । वृत्तश्च राजकन्याभिरेकः पञ्चाशता वरः । ४३ ।

तासां कलिरभूद् भूयांस्तदर्थेऽपोह्य सौहृदम् । मयानुरूपो नायं च इति तद्वत्चेतसाम् । ४४ ।

The emperor (Māndhātā) begot through (his queen) Bindumatī, the daughter of Śaśabindu, (three sons, viz.,) Purukutsa, Ambariṣa and Mucukunda, (who turned out to be) a mystic. (All) the fifty sisters of these (princes) chose (the sage) Saubhari for their husband. (38) Submerged in the water of the (holy) Yamunā and practising supreme asceticism (there), the Brāhmaṇa (Saubhari) conceived a longing for conjugal delight on seeing the happiness of a leader of fish pairing with other fish of the opposite sex, and (accordingly approached and) asked the king (Māndhātā) for a girl (in marriage). The emperor too said (in reply), "Let a girl be gladly taken by you in the event of your being chosen by her of her own will, O holy Brāhmaṇa !" (39-40) The sage (Saubhari) thought within himself—"I have been (indirectly) refused by the emperor, thinking me to be unwelcome to women, knowing (as he does) that I am disliked by them, being old, covered with wrinkles and grey-haired with my head shaking (all the time). (41) I shall (therefore) make myself so perfect (faultless of limbs) as to be coveted even by celestial women, much more by human princesses." Thus resolved, the powerful sage was ushered by the chamberlain into the gynaeceum set apart for the princesses, which was full of luxuries (of every description), And (lo !) that one individual was desired by (all) the fifty princesses to be their husband. (42-43) (Nay,) there arose a great quarrel over him among those girls, so that casting sisterly affection to the winds, they said to one another, "He is fit for me and not for (that of) you," their heart being set on him. (44)

स बह्वृचस्ताभिरपारणीयतपःश्रियानर्घ्यपरिच्छेदेषु ।

गृहेषु नानोपवनामलाम्भःसरस्सु सौगन्धिककाननेषु । ४५ ।

महार्हशय्यासनवस्त्रभूषणस्नानानुलेपाभ्यवहारमाल्यकैः ।

स्वलंकृतस्त्रीपुरुषेषु नित्यदा रेमेऽनुगायद्विजभृङ्गवन्दिषु । ४६ ।

यद्गार्हस्थ्यं तु संवीक्ष्य सप्तद्वीपवतीपतिः । विस्मितः स्तम्भमजहात् सार्वभौमश्रियावितम् । ४७ ।

एवं गृहेष्वभिरतो विषयान् विविधैः सुखैः । सेवमानो न चातुष्यदाज्यस्तोकैरिवानलः । ४८ ।

The said sage Saubhari (who, being a student of Ṛgveda, was a master of powerful Mantras) revelled with them everyday in mansions that were equipped with invaluable appendages by his inexhaustible wealth of saceticism, and which were not only crowded with men and women (servants and maid-servants) well-decked with ornaments but were also full of singing birds and bees and panegyrists—as well as on the margin of lakes of limpid water studded with beds of Kalhāras and in parks of every description, using valuable beds and seats, costly wearing apparel and precious jewels and taking delight in baths, pigments, eatables and flowers. (45-46) Observing the (luxurious) household life of Saubhari (even) Māndhātā (the ruler of the entire globe consisting of the seven Dvīpas),

* The Śruti says:—“स आत्मा अङ्गान्यन्मा देवताः” (He is the body of which the other gods are (so many) limbs).

felt (greatly) amazed and gave up (all) pride accompanying the fortune of a universal monarch. (47) Thus fully attached to his household life and enjoying sense-objects (of various kinds), Saubhari did not feel satiated with manifold delights (of sense) any more than a fire would with drops of clarified butter. (48)

स कदाचिदुपासीन आत्मापह्नवमात्मनः । ददर्श बह्वृचाचार्यो मीनसङ्गसमुत्थितम् । ४९ ।
 अहो इमं पश्यत मे विनाशं तपस्विनः सच्चरितव्रतस्य ।
 अन्तर्जले वारिचरप्रसङ्गात् प्रच्यावितं ब्रह्म चिरं धृतं यत् । ५० ।
 सङ्गं त्यजेत मिथुनव्रतिनां मुमुक्षुः सर्वात्मना न विसृजेद् बहिरिन्द्रियाणि ।
 एकश्चरन् रहसि चित्तमनन्त ईशे युञ्जीत तद्व्रतिषु साधुषु चेत् प्रसङ्गः । ५१ ।
 एकस्तपस्यहमथाम्भसि मत्स्यसङ्गात् पञ्चाशदासमुत् पञ्चसहस्रसर्गः ।
 नान्तं ब्रजाम्युभयकृत्यमनोरथानां मायामुणैर्हृतमतिर्विषयेऽर्थभावः । ५२ ।
 एवं वसन् गृहे कालं विरक्तो न्यासमास्थितः । वनं जगामानुययुस्तपत्यः पतिदेवताः । ५३ ।
 तत्र तप्त्वा तपस्तीक्ष्णमात्मकं दर्शनमात्मवान् । सहैवाग्निभिरात्मानं युयोज परमात्मनि । ५४ ।
 ताः स्वपत्युर्महाराज निरीक्ष्याध्यात्मिकीं गतिम् । अन्वीयुस्तत्प्रभावेण अग्निं शान्तमिवाचिषः । ५५ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे सौभर्याख्ये षष्ठोऽध्यायः । ६ ।

On a certain occasion, while sitting (at ease), that teacher of those professing R̥gveda, perceived his fall from asceticism, brought about by his association with the fish through the agency of his own mind. (49) (He said to himself, "Ah, look at this fall of mine, a saintly ascetic who had observed (sacred) vows (till recently), but whose asceticism, (though) maintained for long, has been swept away thanks to (a moment's) close association with aquatic creatures under water ! (50) He who seeks liberation (from the trammels of worldly existence) should (therefore) eschew with one's mind, body and senses the company of those who have taken to a married life, and should never allow his senses to move out (in the midst of sense-objects). Living (all) alone (without any companion) in seclusion. He should concentrate his mind on the infinite Lord and betake himself (only) to pious souls devoted to Him, if at all company is desired. (51) I was a companionless ascetic (till recently). Thanks to the company of fish under water (however), I later on became fifty (as it were by marrying as many wives), and again (by begetting a hundred sons through each) I became divided into five thousand parts (in the form of as many sons). Now that my judgment has been obscured by infatuation etc., (the adjuncts of Māyā or Prakṛti) and I have begun to look upon the objects of senses as worth seeking, I find no limit to desires relating to the duties of both husband and wife. (52) Thus, staying at home for a long time, he (eventually) got disgusted (with it) and, having embraced the life of an anchorite, retired to the forest; and his wives (too), who (all) looked upon their husband as a deity, followed suit. (53) Having practised there severe asceticism, that emaciated his body, the sage (who had now mastered his self) merged his soul along with the sacred fires in the supreme Spirit (attained final beatitude in the form of oneness with the Absolute). (54) Observing the absorption of their husband into the supreme Spirit, O great king, his wives (too) followed him (reached the same goal) by virtue of his spiritual glory even as flames get extinguished with the fire that has cooled down (for want of fuel). (55)

*Thus ends the sixth discourse, hinging on the story of Saubhari,
 in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VII

The story of the King Hariścandra

श्रीशुक उवाच

मान्धातुः पुत्रप्रवरो योऽम्बरीषः प्रकीर्तितः। पितामहेन प्रवृत्तो यौवनाश्च तत्सुतः।

हारीतस्तस्य पुत्रोऽभून्मान्धातुप्रवरा इमे। १।

नर्मदा भ्रातृभिर्दत्ता पुरुकुत्साय योगैः। तया रसातलं नीतो भुजगेन्द्रप्रयुक्तया। २।

गन्धर्वानवधीत् तत्र वध्यान् वै विष्णुशक्तिधृक्। नागाल्लब्धवरः सर्पादिभयं स्मरतामिदम्। ३।

त्रसद्दस्युः पौरुकुत्सो योऽनरण्यस्य देहकृत्। हर्यश्चस्तत्सुतस्तस्मादरुणोऽथ त्रिबन्धनः। ४।

तस्य सत्यव्रतः पुत्रत्रिशङ्कुरिति विश्रुतः। प्राप्ताश्चाण्डालतां शापाद् गुरोः कौशिकतेजसा। ५।

सशरीरो गतः स्वर्गमद्यापि दिवि दृश्यते। पातितोऽवाक् शिरा देवैस्तेनैव स्तम्भितो बलात्। ६।

Śrī Śuka resumed : The foremost of the (three) sons (Purukutsa and others) of Māndhātā, who was celebrated by the name of Ambarīṣa, was adopted (as a son) by his grandfather (Yuvanāśwa) and Yauvanāśwa was the son of Ambarīṣa. Hārīta was the son of Yauvanāśwa. These (three) turned out to be the foremost of Māndhātā's line (and the first of three branches of this line). (1) Purukutsa (the eldest of the three* sons of Māndhātā) was taken to Rasātala (the sixth of the subterranean spheres from above) by Narmadā, as directed by Vāsukī (the king of serpents)—the same Narmadā who had been given to him in marriage by his brothers, the serpent-demons. (2) There indeed Purukutsa (who wielded the power infused into him by Lord Viṣṇu) killed (a number of) Gandharvas who (being enemies of the Nāgas and wicked too) deserved to be slain. (In recognition of this service) he secured from Vāsukī (the chief of the Nāgas) the boon of security from the serpent race for those who remember this anecdote. (3) Purukutsa's son (named after his grandfather† was Trasaddasyu, who was the father of Anarāṇya. Anarāṇya's son was Haryaśwa and of Haryaśwa, Aruṇa was born; while from (the loins of) the latter sprang up Tribandhana. (4) Tribandhana's son, Satyavrata, became celebrated under the name of Triśaṅku.‡ Having got the rank of a Cāṇḍāla (pariah) under a curse from his father, he bodily ascended to heaven by virtue of the extraordinary might of the sage Viśvāmitra (a scion of Kuśika) and can be seen in the heavens (in the form of a star of that name) even to this day, having been forcibly stopped (in mind air) by the same seer when hurled, head downward, by the gods (from heaven). (5-6)

त्रैशङ्कुवो हरिश्चन्द्रो विश्वामित्रवसिष्ठयोः। यन्निमित्तमभूद् युद्धं पक्षिणोर्बहुवर्षिकम्। ७।

सोऽनपत्यो विषण्णात्मा नारदस्योपदेशतः। वरुणं शरणं यातः पुत्रो मे जायतां प्रभो। ८।

* Vide verse 38 of Discourse VI.

† It will be remembered that Māndhātā, father of Purukutsa, was also given the name of Trasaddasyu by Indra—vide verse 33 of Discourse VI.

‡ Triśaṅku was guilty of three offences, which tormented him like as many darts or spikes. In the first place he displeased his father and invited his curse by forcibly carrying away a Brāhmaṇa girl who was just being married. Secondly he killed a cow belonging to his preceptor (the sage Vasīṣṭha) and thirdly, he ate meat without having consecrated it by sprinkling it with water.

The Harivarṇśa says:—

पितृधापरितोषेण गुरोर्दोषावधेन च। अप्रोक्षितोपयोगाच्च त्रिविधस्ते व्यतिक्रमः॥

यदि वीरो महाराज तेनैव त्वां यजे इति । तथेति वरुणेनास्य पुत्रो जातस्तु रोहितः । १ ।
जातः सुतो ह्यनेनाङ्गं मां यजस्वेति सोऽब्रवीत् । यदा पशुर्निर्दशः स्यादथ मेध्यो भवेदिति । १० ।
निर्दशे च स आगत्य यजस्वेत्याह सोऽब्रवीत् । दन्ताः पशोर्यजायेरत्रथ मेध्यो भवेदिति । ११ ।
जाता दन्ता यजस्वेति स प्रत्याहाथ सोऽब्रवीत् । यदा पतन्त्यस्य दन्ता अथ मेध्यो भवेदिति । १२ ।
पशोर्निपतिता दन्ता यजस्वेत्याह सोऽब्रवीत् । यदा पशोः पुनर्दन्ता जायन्तेऽथ पशुः शुचिः । १३ ।
पुनर्जाता यजस्वेति स प्रत्याहाथ सोऽब्रवीत् । सात्राहिको यदा राजन् राजन्योऽथ पशुः शुचिः । १४ ।
इति पुत्रानुरागेण स्नेहयन्त्रितचेतसा । कालं वञ्चयता तं तमुक्तो देवस्तमैक्षत । १५ ।
रोहितस्तदभिज्ञाय पितुः कर्म चिकीर्षितम् । प्राणप्रेषुर्धनुष्याणिररण्यं प्रत्यपद्यत । १६ ।
पितरं वरुणग्रस्तं श्रुत्वा जातमहोदरम् । रोहितो ग्राममेयाय तमिन्द्रः प्रत्यषेधत । १७ ।
भूमेः पर्यटनं पुण्यं तीर्थक्षेत्रनिषेधवर्णः । रोहितायादिशच्छक्रः सोऽय्यरण्येऽवसत् समाम् । १८ ।
एवं द्वितीये तृतीये चतुर्थे पञ्चमे तथा । अभ्येत्याभ्येत्य स्थविरो विप्रो भूत्वाऽह वृत्रह । १९ ।
षष्ठं संवत्सरं तत्र चरित्वा रोहितः पुरीम् । उपब्रजन्नजीगर्तादक्रीणान्मध्यमं सुतम् । २० ।
शुनःशेपं पशुं पित्रे प्रदाय समबन्दत । ततः पुरुषमेधेन हरिश्चन्द्रो महायशः । २१ ।
मुक्तोदरोऽयजद् देवान् वरुणादीन् महत्कथः । विश्वामित्रोऽभवत् तस्मिन् होता चाध्वर्युरात्मवान् । २२ ।
जमदग्निरभूद् ब्रह्मा वसिष्ठोऽयास्यसामगः । तस्मै तुष्टो ददाविन्द्रः शातकौशमयं रथम् । २३ ।

Triśaṅku's son was Hariścandra, because of whom there raged a fight, lasting for many years, between the sages Viśvāmitra and Vasiṣṭha, who (having been mutually cursed) had been transformed into two birds*. (7) Devoid of (any) issue and (therefore) sad at heart, Hariścandra sought, under the instructions of (the sage) Nārada, Varuṇa (the god of water) as his protector with the following prayer:—"Let a son be born to me, O lord ! (8) If he turns out to be a hero, O great lord, I shall propitiate you by sacrificing him (to you)." Varuṇa granted his prayer, saying "Be it so ! and through the agency of Varuṇa a son, Rohita (by name), was born to Hariścandra. (9) "Now that a son has been born (to you), propitiate me, dear king, by sacrificing him to me," Varuṇa (appeared and) said (to Hariścandra, who replied): "A prospective victim is (considered) fit for being sacrificed only when it has passed the age of ten days." (10) On the child having crossed (the limit of) ten days, the god appeared (before him again) and said, "(Please) sacrifice the child now." Hariścandra (however) replied, "A prospective victim is (deemed) fit for being sacrificed only when it has teethed." (11) After the dentition of the child, Varuṇa (approached and) said once more, "The teeth have (already) appeared; (please) propitiate me (now)." Thereupon the king replied, "When its (first) teeth have fallen, the victim will be fit for being sacrificed (only) then." (12) (On the teeth having fallen,) Varuṇa (appeared once more and) said, "The teeth of the prospective victim have (already) fallen, (please) worship me (now)." (To this) Hariścandra replied, "When the teeth of the prospective victim sprout again, then (alone) is the prospective victim (regarded as)

*It is well-known that under the pretext of demanding the Dakṣiṇā due to himself for the Rājāsūya sacrifice conducted by him on behalf of king Hariścandra, the sage Viśvāmitra not only stripped him of his all but persecuted him in many other ways too; but Hariścandra remained true to his word and firm under the most trying circumstances. The sage Vasiṣṭha, the king's preceptor, flew into a rage when he heard this and uttered on him the curse that he would be transformed into an Aṅgī (a species of cranes). Viśvāmitra too pronounced a counter-curse on Vasiṣṭha to the effect that he would be changed into a heron.

sacred." (13) (On the child having teethed again) the god of water (appeared and) said once more, "The teeth have grown again, (please) sacrifice the child (now)." Thereupon Hariścandra replied, "A prospective victim belonging to the Kṣatriya race is (recognized as) sacred (fit to be sacrificed) only when he is able to put on his armour, O lord!" (14) In this way the god (of water) waited for the time he was asked to wait by Hariścandra, whose mind was bound with ties of affection and who was gaining time due to love for his son. (15) Having come to know of the aforesaid sacrifice intended to be performed by his father (Hariścandra), Rohita (who had now grown in years as well as in understanding) betook himself to the woods) bow in hand, anxious to save his life. (16) Hearing that, visited by (angry) Varuṇa (the god of water), his father had developed the disease of dropsy, Rohita was about to return to his home when Indra stopped him (saying that he would certainly be sacrificed to Varuṇa if he returned home). (17) Indra (further) counselled Rohita to undertake a holy tour over the earth by visiting sacred lakes and rivers and other places of pilgrimage (in order to atone for the offence of his father against Varuṇa and thereby rid him of his malady) and Rohita too (accordingly) tarried in the forest for a year (going from place to place as advised by Indra). (18) Likewise during the second, third, fourth and fifth years as well Indra (the slayer of the demon Vṛtra) came to him, disguised as an aged Brāhmaṇa, and repeated the same advice. (19) Having roamed about in the woods during the sixth year (as well), Rohita purchased from Ajigarta (a descendant of the celebrated sage Bhṛgu) his middle (second) son, Śunaḥśepa (by name), while returning to the city (in order to see his father); and, handing him over to Hariścandra (his own father) as a (prospective) victim (to be sacrificed to Varuṇa) bowed low to him (his father). Thereupon the highly-renowned Hariścandra, whose stories were sung by the great, propitiated Varuṇa (the god of water) and the other gods by means of a human sacrifice and was (consequently) relieved of his dropsy (stomach disease). At that sacrifice the sage Viśvāmitra officiated as the Hotā; the sage Jamadagni, who had (duly) controlled his mind, as the Adhvaryu; the sage Vasiṣṭha as the Brahmā and the sage Agastya as the Udgātā* (the chanter of Sāmaveda). Pleased with him, Indra give him a chariot of gold. (20—23)

शुनःशेषस्य माहात्म्यमुपरिष्ठात् प्रचक्ष्यते। सत्यसारां धृतिं दृष्ट्वा सभार्यस्य च भूपतेः। २४।

विश्वामित्रो भृशं प्रीतो ददावविहतां गतिम्। मनः पृथिव्यां तामद्विस्तेजसापोऽनिलेन तत्। २५।

खे वायुं धारयन्तश्च भूतादौ तं महात्मनि। तस्मिन् ज्ञानकलां ध्यात्वा तयाज्ञानं विनिर्दहन्। २६।

ह्रित्वा तां स्वेन भावेन निर्वाणसुखसंविदा। अनिर्देश्याप्रतर्क्येण तस्यौ विध्वस्तबन्धनः। २७।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे हरिश्चन्द्रोपाख्यानं नाम सप्तमोऽध्यायः। ७।

The glory of Śunaḥśepa (who was not eventually sacrificed but attained liberation during his very lifetime) will be recounted later (in connection with the story of Viśvāmitra's son)† And highly gratified to perceive (on another occasion) the firmness of the king (Hariścandra) as well as of his wife (Śaibya)‡—firmness which derived its strength from his veracity—the sage Viśvāmitra vouchsafed to him (as a boon) unobstructed knowledge (of the Self). (Mentally) merging his mind (which is said to be a modification of the food^s that one takes) in earth (the source of all food), he identified the earth with water, water with fire and the latter

* For the respective function of these priests vide foot-note below l.v. 19.

† Vide discourses XIV below.

‡ Vide foot-note below verse 7 above.

^s The Śruti says:—“अन्नमयं हि सौम्यं मनः”।

with the air; and (again) merging the air in ether, the latter in the Tāmasika aspect of the Ego and the said Tāmasika Ego in the Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), and laying aside its objective character, he contemplated its knowledge aspect as his very self and through such contemplation he finally and thoroughly burnt his ignorance (that veiled the nature of the Self). (24—26) (Again,) giving up that contemplation (too) through consciousness consisting of unmixed bliss, and with (all) his bondage (in the shape of self-identification with the body and so on) shaken off he stood in his essential character, which is beyond the range of description and reasoning. (27)

*Thus ends the seventh discourse, entitled the "Story of Hariścandra," in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

The story of King Sagara

श्रीशुक उवाच

हरितो रोहितसुतश्चम्पस्तस्माद् विनिर्मिता । चम्पापुरी सुदेवोऽजो विजयो यस्य चात्मजः । १ ।
भरुकस्तस्तुतस्तस्माद् वृकस्तस्यापि बाहुकः । सोऽरिभिर्हृतभू राजा सभार्यो वनमाविशत् । २ ।
वृद्धं तं पञ्चतां प्राप्तं महिष्यन् मरिष्यती । और्वेण जानताऽत्मानं प्रजावन्तं निवारिता । ३ ।
आज्ञायास्यै सपत्नीभिर्गरो दतोऽन्धसा सह । सह तेनैव संजातः सगराख्यो महायशः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed: Harita was the son of Rohita and from (the loins of) Harita sprang up Campa, by whom was built the city of Campā. And of Campa was born Sudeva, whose son was Vijaya. (1) Vijaya's son was Bharuka; and from (the loins of) Bharuka sprang up Vrka, whose son again was Bāhuka. His land having been usurped by the enemies, King Bharuka retired to the forest alongwith his wife. (2) Intending to follow (ascend the funeral pile of) the aged king, who died (in the forest), the queen was stopped by the sage Aurva, who knew her to be enceinte. (3) By her co-wives, who came to know this, poison was administered to her with her food (through jealousy); but (no harm came to her. On the other hand,) a highly renowned son was born of her alongwith that poison and (thus) came to be known by the name of Sagara (one born with poison). (4)

सगरश्चक्रवर्त्यासीत् सागरो यत्सुतैः कृतः । यस्तालजङ्घान् यवनाञ्छकान् हैहयवर्बान् । ५ ।
नावधीदं गुरुवाक्येन चक्रे विकृतवेषिणः । मुण्डाञ्छमश्रुधरान् कांश्चिन्मुक्तकेशार्थमुण्डितान् । ६ ।
अनन्तवाससः कांश्चिदवहिर्वाससोऽपरान् । सोऽश्वमेधैरयजत सर्ववेदसुरात्मकम् । ७ ।
और्वोपदिष्टयोगेन हरिमात्मानमीश्वरम् । तस्योत्सृष्टं पशुं यज्ञे जहाराशं पुरन्दरः । ८ ।
सुमत्यास्तनया दृष्ट्वाः पितुरादेशकारिणः । हयमन्त्रेषमाणास्ते समन्तात्रयस्त्रयन् महीम् । ९ ।
प्रागुदीच्यां दिशि हयं ददृशुः कपिलान्तिके । एष वाजिह्रश्चौर आस्ते मीलितलोचनः । १० ।
हन्यतां हन्यतां पाप इति षष्टिसहस्रिणः । उदायुधा अभिययुर्गन्मिषे तदा मुनिः । ११ ।
स्वशरीराग्निना तावन्महेन्द्रहृत्चेतसः । महद्व्यतिक्रमहता भस्मसादभवन् क्षणात् । १२ ।

न साधुवादो मुनिकोपभर्जिता नृपेन्द्रपुत्रा इति सत्त्वधामनि ।
 कथं तमो रोषमयं विभाव्यते जगत्पवित्रात्मनि खे रजो भुवः ।१३।
 यस्येतिता सांख्यमयी दृढेह नौर्यया मुमुक्षुस्तरते दुस्त्ययम् ।
 भवार्णवं मृत्युपथं विपश्चितः परात्पभूतस्य कथं पृथङ्कतिः ।१४।

Sagara turned out to be a universal monarch, and by his sons was dug out the ocean (which was thenceforward named after them as Sāgara). (5) In deference to the advice of his preceptor (the sage Aurva) he did not kill (even though he conquered) the Tālajaṅghas, Yavanas (Ionians), Śakas (Scythians), Haihayas and Barbaras (Barbarians), but only caused them to be disfigured. Some he had thoroughly shaved, while others he left with beards and moustaches (alone); some he left with dishevelled hair (alone, causing their moustaches and beards to be removed), while others he left with their heads half-shaven. (6) Some he caused to be stripped of their under-garment, while he had others shorn of their outer garment. In the manner pointed out by the sage Aurva he (then) propitiated by means of (a number of) Aśwamedha sacrifices Lord Śrī Hari, his (very) Self, manifested in the form of all the Vedas and the divinities. Indra (the destroyer of his enemies' towns) stole away his consecrated horse released as a prelude to the sacrifice. (7-8) Looking for the horse in obedience to their father's command, the proud sons of Sumati (one of the two wives of Sagara), numbering sixty thousand, excavated the earth down to the sea-level on all sides. (While carrying on their excavation) in a north-easterly direction they perceived the horse by the side of the (divine) sage Kapila. "Here is the thief, who stole the horse, sitting with his eyes closed. Let this wicked fellow be killed and killed (at once)!" Shouting thus, they (all) rushed (towards Him) with uplifted weapons. At that moment the sage opened His eyes. (9—11) Deprived of their (good) sense by the powerful Indra and already killed by (the sin of) their having offended against an exalted soul (like the divine Kapila), they were instantly reduced to ashes by the fire of their own body. (12) It is not correct to say that the sons of Sagara (the king of kings) were burnt by the wrath of the sage (Kapila). How can Tamoguṇa (ignorance) in the form of anger be conceived in Him who is an embodiment of pure Sattva (Sattva unmixed with Rajas and Tamas), and whose (divine) person is capable of purifying the (whole) universe, any more than (particles of) dust belonging to the earth can be conceived as attaching to the sky (which is absolutely unattached)? (13) How could there be a sense of difference (as between a friend and a foe) in the omniscient Lord Kapila, who is the same as the supreme Spirit, and by whom has been launched in (the ocean of) this world the strong vessel in the form of Sāṅkhya (philosophy), with the help of which a seeker after Liberation is able to cross the ocean—so difficult to cross of worldly existence, the pathway to death? (14)

योऽसमञ्जस इत्युक्तः स केशिन्या नृपात्मजः । तस्य पुत्रोऽंशुमान् नाम पितामहहिते रतः ।१५।
 असमञ्जस आत्मानं दर्शयन्नसमञ्जसम् । जातिस्मरः पुरा सङ्गादयोगी योगाद् विचालितः ।१६।
 आचरन् गर्हितं लोके ज्ञातीनां कर्म विप्रियम् । सरख्यां क्रीडतो बालान् प्रास्यदुद्वेजयन्नम् ।१७।
 एवंवृत्तः परित्यक्तः पित्रा स्नेहमपोह्य वै । योगैश्वर्येण बालांस्तान् दर्शयित्वा ततो ययौ ।१८।
 अयोध्यावासिनः सर्वे बालकान् पुनरागतान् । दृष्ट्वा विसिस्मिरे राजन् राजा चाप्यन्वतप्यत ।१९।
 अंशुमांशेदितो राज्ञा तुरङ्गान्वेषणे ययौ । पितृव्यखातानुपथं भस्मान्ति ददृशे हयम् ।२०।
 तत्रासीन् मुनिं वीक्ष्य कपिलाख्यमथोक्षजम् । अस्तौत् समाहितमनाः प्राञ्जलिः प्रणतो महान् ।२१।

He who is referred to (by the ignorant) under the name of Asamañjasa (i.e., not good, although—really speaking—he was exceedingly good) was another son of Emperor Sagara, born of Keśini (another wife of the emperor). And Asamañjasa's son, who was devoted to the interests of his grandfather (King Sagara), was named Amśumān. (15) Asamañjasa—who was given to contemplation in his previous birth, but had strayed from the path of Yoga through evil association, although he (still) remembered his previous birth—showed himself as a wicked fellow. (16) He did what was reproachful (in the eyes of the world) and (as such) unpalatable to his relations (too). (For example) he hurled forth playing children into the (river) Sarayū, (thus) frightening the people. (17) Conducting himself in this way, he was actually forsaken (exiled) by his father, who set aside his (parental) affection. Showing (to his father as alive) the children (that had been drowned in the river and taken for dead) by virtue of his Yogic power, Asamañjasa departed from that place (Ayodhyā). (18) Seeing their (lost) children as having returned (to life), all the residents of Ayodhyā felt (much) amazed, O Parīkṣit; and the king (Sagara) too was filled with (great) remorse. (19) Commanded by the emperor, Amśumān (Asamañjasa's son) went out in search of the (sacrificial) horse by the path dug out by his uncles, and discovered the horse near (a number of) heaps of ashes. (20) Beholding Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception) seated in the garb of a sage bearing the name of Kapila, the great Amśumān glorified the Lord with a collected mind (in the following words) bowing down (to Him) with joined palms. (21)

अंशुमानुवाच

न पश्यति त्वां परमात्मनोऽज्जो न बुध्यतेऽद्यापि समाधियुक्तिभिः ।
 कुतोऽपरे तस्य मनःशरीरधीविसर्गसृष्टा वयमप्रकाशाः । १२१ ।
 ये देहभाजस्त्रिगुणप्रधाना गुणान् विपश्यन्त्युत वा तमश्च ।
 यन्माद्यया मोहितचेतसस्ते विदुः स्वसंस्थं न बहिःप्रकाशाः । १२३ ।
 तं त्वामहं ज्ञानघनं स्वभावप्रध्वस्तमायागुणभेदमोहैः ।
 सनन्दनाद्यैर्मृनिभिर्विभाव्यं कथं हि मूढः परिभावयामि । १२४ ।
 प्रशान्तमायागुणकर्मलिङ्गमनामरूपं सदसद्विमुक्तम् ।
 ज्ञानोपदेशाय गृहीतदेहं नमामहे त्वां पुरुषं पुराणम् । १२५ ।
 त्वन्मायारचिते लोके वस्तुबुद्ध्या गृहादिषु भ्रमन्ति कामलोभेर्ध्यामोहविभ्रान्तचेतसः । १२६ ।

अद्य नः सर्वभूतात्मन् कामकर्मन्द्रियाशयः । मोहपाशो दृढश्छिन्नो भगवंस्तव दर्शनात् । १२७ ।

Amśumān prayed : (Even) Brahṁā (who is not born like us) is unable even to this day to perceive (directly) through Samādhi (abstract meditation of self-absorption) or (even) to comprehend through reasoning of various kinds You, who are higher than his own self. How (then) could other living beings—belonging to various species (such as gods, men and sub-human creatures), evolved (severally) by his mind, body and intellect (the products of Sattva, Tamas and Rajas respectively), much less we (youngsters altogether) devoid of light (wisdom), perceive or know You ? (22) They who are identified with a body and are (consequently) dominated by the (aforesaid) three Guṇas, (nay,) whose intellect is bewildered by Your Māyā (deluding potency) and whose light (of wisdom) illuminates (only) the objects of senses (which are external to the mind), perceive (only such) objects of senses (during their waking and dream states) and (sheer) darkness (total lack of knowledge) in the other case (during deep sleep). They (however) are unable to realize You (who transcend the three Guṇas), even though You (ever) dwell in them (as their very Self and Inner Controller too). (23) Such that You are, how can I, an ignorant person, (even) investigate You, who are knowledge personified (and hence incapable of being known) and are (only) fit to be contemplated upon by sages like Sanandana, who have by their very birth got rid of the notion of difference and infatuation, born of the attributes of Māyā (modes of Prakṛti, viz., Rajas and Tamas respectively)? (24) O Lord, let us (therefore, simply) bow to You, the most ancient Person, in whom the (aforesaid) attributes of Māyā (Prakṛti), actions prompted by them as well as bodies engendered by such actions are altogether absent, who have no (material) name or form, who are entirely free from merit and sin, (yet) who have (by Your own independent will) assumed (revealed) a (divine) form in order to teach wisdom (to Your devotees)! (25) In this world evolved by Your Māyā (creative will) people revolve (are born again and again) in the midst of houses and other objects of senses, taking them to be real, their intellect being deluded by lust, greed, jealousy and infatuation. (26) Today, O Lord, the (very) Self of all created beings, by your sight (alone) the strong cord of our ignorance (in the shape of identification with the body and so on)—the root of all craving (for sensuous enjoyment), as well as of actions (prompted by such craving) and the Indriyas (the instruments of such actions)—has been cut asunder. (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थंगीतानुभावस्तं भगवान् कपिलो मुनिः। अंशुमन्तमुवाचेदमनुगृह्य धिया नृप। २८।

Śrī Śuka went on : The Divine sage Kapila, whose glory was thus sung (by Prince Aṁśumān), mentally blessed the said Aṁśumān and spoke (to him) as follows, O protector of men ! (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

अश्वोऽयं नीयतां वत्स पितामहपशुस्तव। इमे च पितरो दद्याद्गङ्गाभ्योर्हन्ति नेतरत्। २९।

तं परिक्रम्य शिरसा प्रसाद्य हयमानयत्। सगरस्तेन पशुना क्रतुरोषं समापयत्। ३०।

राज्यमंशुमति न्यस्य निःस्पृहो मुक्तबन्धनः। और्वोपदिष्टमार्गेण लेभे गतिमनुत्तमाम्। ३१।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे सगरोपाख्यानेऽष्टमोऽध्यायः। ८।

The glorious Lord replied : This horse, the animal to be sacrificed by your grandfather (Emperor Sagara), may be taken away (by you), dear child. And these uncles of yours, that lie burnt (here) stand in need of the water of the (holy) Gaṅgā (for being redeemed) and nothing else." (29) Walking round Him (from left to right as a mark of respect) and bowing to Him with his head (bent low), the prince brought (back) the horse. And with that animal Emperor Sagara concluded the sacrifice, which had remained uncompleted (all these days). (30) Having entrusted the kingdom to Prince Aṁśumān, Sagara, who was (now) free from (all) craving and had thrown off his fetters (in the shape of identification with the body etc.), reached the highest goal (viz., final beatitude) by following the course recommended by (his preceptor) the sage Aurva. (31)

*Thus ends the eighth discourse, hinging on the story of Sagara,
in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ नवमोऽध्यायः

Discourse IX

The story of King Bhagīratha: the descent of the holy Gaṅgā

श्रीशुक उवाच

अंशुमांश्च तपस्तेपे गङ्गानयनकाम्यया । कालं महान्तं नाशक्रोत् ततः कालेन संस्थितः । १ ।
दिलीपस्तत्सुतसाद्वदशक्तः कालमेयिवान् । भगीरथस्तस्य पुत्रस्तेपे स सुमहत् तपः । २ ।
दर्शयामास तं देवी प्रसन्ना वरदास्मि ते । इत्युक्तः स्वमभिप्रायं शशंसावनतो नृपः । ३ ।
कोऽपि धारयिता वेगं पतन्त्या मे महीतले । अन्यथा भूतलं भित्त्वा नृप यास्ये रसातलम् । ४ ।
किं चाहं न भुवं यास्ये नरा मय्यामृजन्त्यघम् । मृजामि तदघं कुत्र राजंस्तत्र विचिन्त्यताम् । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : (Even like Sagara, who renounced his kingdom,) Arhsumān too (abdicated the throne in favour of his son and) practised asceticism for a long time with a desire to bring down (from heaven) the holy Gaṅgā, but did not succeed. Then, in course of time he passed away. (1) His son, Dilipa (too) was unsuccessful like him and met his death (in the course of his efforts). Dilipa's son was Bhagīratha and he (too) performed very great Tapas. (2) The goddess (presiding over the holy river) got pleased (with his devotion) and revealed herself (in person) to him, saying; "I am prepared to confer a boon on you." Thus spoken to (by the goddess), the king (Bhagīratha), bent low (with humility) and submitted (to her) his object (in carrying on his austerities). (3) Somebody must sustain my force (even) as I descend on earth. Piercing the (hard) crust of the earth, otherwise, O protector of men. I shall penetrate into Rasātala (the sixth subterranean sphere from above). (4) Further, I am not inclined to go down to the terrestrial region; (for) people would wash away their sin into me. Where shall I wash off that sin (myself), O Bhagīratha? Let some thought be bestowed on this point. (5)

भगीरथ उवाच

साधवो न्यासिनः शान्ता ब्रह्मिष्ठा लोकपावनाः । हस्त्यघं तेऽङ्गसङ्गात् तेष्वास्ते ह्यघभिक्षरिः । ६ ।
धारयिष्यति ते वेगं रुद्रस्त्वात्मा शरीरिणाम् । यस्मिन्नेतमिदं प्रोतं विश्वं शाटीव तन्नुषु । ७ ।
इत्युक्त्वा स नृपो देवं तपसातोषयच्छिवम् । कालेनाल्पीयसा राजंस्तस्येशः समतुष्यत । ८ ।
तथेति राज्ञाभिहितं सर्वलोकहितः शिवः । दधारावहितो गङ्गां पादपूतजलां हरेः । ९ ।
भगीरथः स राजर्षिर्निन्दे भुवनपावनीम् । यत्र स्वपितृणां देहा भस्मीभूताः स्म शोभते । १० ।
रथेन वायुवेगेन प्रयात्तमनुधावती । देशान् पुनन्ती निर्दग्धानासिञ्चत् सगरात्मजान् । ११ ।
यज्जलस्पर्शमात्रेण ब्रह्मदण्डहता अपि । सगरात्मजा दिवं जग्मुः केवलं देहभस्मभिः । १२ ।
भस्मीभूताङ्गसङ्केन स्वर्याताः सगरात्मजाः । किं पुनः श्रद्धया देवीं ये सेवन्ते धृतव्रताः । १३ ।
न ह्येतत् परमाश्चर्यं स्वर्धन्या यदिहोदितम् । अनन्तचरणाभ्योजप्रसूताया भवच्छिदः । १४ ।
संनिवेश्य मनो यस्मिञ्छ्रद्धया मुनयोऽमलाः । त्रैगुण्यं दुस्त्यजं हित्वा सद्यो यातास्तदात्मताम् । १५ ।

King Bhagīratha submitted : Pious souls who have given up attachment to actions as well as to their fruit, are pure of mind, (nay,) foremost among the knowers of Brahma and capable of purifying the (whole) world, shall wash off your sin through the (very) contact of their body (while bathing in your water); for in them (in their heart) dwells Śrī Hari, the Destroyer of sins. (6) Again, Lord Rudra, the (very) Self of embodied souls—into whom this universe is woven, warp and woof, as a piece of cloth into its threads—will bear your force. (7) Having spoken thus, the said king (Bhagīratha) proceeded to propitiate Lord Śiva by means of his austerities. (And) after a very short time, O Parīkṣit, the Lord (Śiva) became highly pleased (with him). (8) Having accepted the king's prayer, saying, "So be it!" Lord Śiva, the Friend of the whole world, cautiously bore (on His head) the Gaṅgā, whose water stands hallowed by (the touch of) Śrī Hari's foot. (9) The said royal sage, Bhagīratha, led the Gaṅgā (which is capable of purifying the whole universe) to the spot where the bodies of his great granduncles lay reduced to ashes. (10) (Closely) following Bhagīratha, who rode in advance in a chariot swift as the wind, and hallowing the lands on its way, the Gaṅgā bathed the burnt-up sons of Sagara. (11) Though destroyed by their own offensive behaviour towards a (holy) Brāhmaṇa, the sons of Sagara ascended to heaven through the mere touch of its waters with their ashes alone! (12) When the (aforesaid) sons of Sagara rose to heaven through the (mere) contact of its waters with their body converted into ashes, what need be said about them who make use of this heavenly stream with reverence (everyday), having taken a vow to this effect? (13) That which has been said here with regard to this heavenly river—emanated (as it is) from the lotus-feet of the infinite Lord (Viṣṇu) and (therefore) capable of ending transmigration—is not something which should excite great wonder. (14) (For) by fully concentrating their mind on those feet with reverence pure-hearted sages have speedily attained oneness with the Lord, shaking off their identification with the body (a product of the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti)—identification with which is (so) difficult to give up. (15)

श्रुतो भगीरथाञ्जले तस्य नाभोऽपरोऽभवत् । सिन्धुद्वीपस्ततस्तस्मादयुतयुस्ततोऽभवत् । १६ ।

ऋतुपर्णो नलसखो योऽश्वविद्यामयात्रलात् । दत्त्वाक्षहृदयं चास्मै सर्वकामस्तु तत्सुतः । १७ ।

ततः सुदासस्त्युत्रो मदयन्तीपतिर्नृप । आहुर्मित्रसहं यं वै कल्पाषाड्भिमुत क्वचित् ।

वसिष्ठशापाद् रक्षोऽभूदनपत्यः स्वकर्मणा । १८ ।

From (the loins of) Bhagīratha sprang up Śrūta, whose son was Nābha. Of the latter was born Sindhudwīpa; of Sindhudwīpa, Ayutāyu; and from him sprang up Ṛtuparṇa a friend of Nala, who received the knowledge of training horses from Nala, imparting to him (in return) the secret of winning the game of dice. And Ṛtuparṇa's son was Sarvakāma. (16-17) From (the loins of) Sarvakāma sprang up Sudāsa and his son, O king, was Saudāsa (the husband of Madayanti), whom people actually called Mitrāsaha, while in some places they referred to him as Kalmāṣapāda. Due to the curse pronounced by the sage Vasiṣṭha (his preceptor) he turned out to be an ogre and had no issue (sprung from his own loins) in consequence of his own action. (18)

राजोवाच

किं निमित्तो गुरोः शपः सौदासस्य महात्मनः । एतद् वेदितुमिच्छामः कथ्यतां न रहो यदि । १९ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : What was the occasion for the curse pronounced by the preceptor (the sage Vasiṣṭha) on the high-souled Saudāsa? We desire to know this, which may (kindly) be pointed out (to us) unless it is a secret. (19)

श्रीशुक उवाच

सौदासो मृगायां कञ्चिच्चरन् रक्षो जघान ह । मुमोच भ्रातरं सोऽथ गतः प्रतित्चिकीर्षया । २० ।

स चिन्तयन्नग्रं राज्ञः सुदरूपधरो गृहे । गुरवे भोक्तुकामाय पक्त्वा नित्ये नरामिषम् । २१ ।

परिवेक्ष्यमाणं भगवान् विलोक्याभक्ष्यमञ्जसा । राजानमशपत् क्रुद्धो रक्षो ह्येवं भविष्यसि । २२ ।

रक्षःकृतं तद् विदित्वा चक्रे द्वादशवार्षिकम् । सोऽप्यपोऽञ्जलिनाऽऽदाय गुरुं शप्तुं समुद्यतः । २३ ।

वारितो मदयन्त्यापो रुशतीः पादयोज्ज्वलौ । दिशः खमवनीं सर्वं पश्यन्नीवमयं नृपः । २४ ।

राक्षसं भावमापन्नः पादे कल्माषतां गतः । व्यवायकाले ददृशे वनौकोदम्पती द्विजौ । १२५ ।
 क्षुधातोर् जगृहे विप्रं तत्पत्न्याहाकृतार्थवत् । न भवान् राक्षसः साक्षादिक्षाकृणां महारथः । १२६ ।
 मदयन्त्याः पतिर्वीरं नाधर्मं कर्तुमर्हसि । देहि मेऽपत्यकामाया अकृतार्थं पतिं द्विजम् । १२७ ।
 देहोऽयं मानुषो राजन् पुरुषस्याखिलार्थदः । तस्मादस्य वधो वीर सर्वार्थवध उच्यते । १२८ ।
 एष हि ब्राह्मणो विद्वांस्तपःशीलगुणान्वितः । आरिराधयिषुर्ब्रह्म महापुरुषसंज्ञितम् ।

सर्वभूतात्मभावेन भूतेष्वन्तर्हितं गुणैः । १२९ ।

सोऽयं ब्रह्मर्षिर्वयस्ते राजर्षिप्रवराद विभो । कथमर्हति धर्मज्ञं वधं पितुरिवात्मजः । १३० ।
 तस्य साधोरपापस्य भूणस्य ब्रह्मवादिनः । कथं वधं यथा बभ्रोर्मन्यते सन्मतो भवान् । १३१ ।
 यद्ययं क्रियते भक्षस्तर्हि मां खाद पूर्वतः । न जीवष्ये विना येन क्षणं च मृतकं यथा । १३२ ।
 एवं करुणभाषिण्या विलपन्त्या अनाथवत् । व्याघ्रः पशुमिवाखादत् सौदासः शापमोहितः । १३३ ।
 ब्राह्मणी वीक्ष्य दिधिषु पुरुषादेन भक्षितम् । शोचन्त्यात्मानमुर्वीशमशपत् कुपिता सती । १३४ ।
 यस्मान्मे भक्षितः पाप कामार्तायाः पतिस्त्वया । तवापि मृत्युराधानादकृतप्रज्ञं दर्शितः । १३५ ।
 एवं मित्रसहं शप्त्वा पतिलोकपरायणा । तदस्थीनि समिद्धेऽग्नौ प्राप्य भर्तुर्गतिं गता । १३६ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : While roaming in pursuit of game, so the tradition goes, Saudāsa (son of Sudāsa) killed a certain ogre and let go his brother, who immediately left with the intention of retaliating. (20) Contemplating harm to the king (Saudāsa), he assumed the form of the latter's cook at his palace and, having dressed human flesh, took it to his preceptor (the sage Vasiṣṭha), who had called at the palace with intent to dine. (21) Immediately perceiving human flesh (which is ever prohibited as food) about to be served to him, the glorious sage flew into a rage and uttered an imprecation on the king saying, "You will surely turn an ogre through this (improper) conduct of yours." (22) Learning (in the meantime) that it was the work of an ogre, the sage limited (the operation of) the curse to (a period of) twelve years (only); (while) Saudāsa too (in his turn) took water in the hollow of his joined palms, fully prepared to utter a (counter) curse on his preceptor (who had cursed him for no fault of his). (23) Stopped by (his wife) Madayanti, and finding the (four) quarters, the sky and the earth all instinct with life, the king (Saudāsa) dropped that harmful water (burning with the fire of his wrath) on his own feet (lest it might injure any other living being, thus justifying his appellation, Mitrasaha, which means he who is indulgent towards his friends and well-wishers). (24) Blackened in his feet (by the action of the water thrown by him and hence named as Kalmāṣapāda) and having acquired an ogre-like disposition, Saudāsa saw (one night) a Brāhmaṇa couple dwelling in a forest at the time of copulation. (25) Pinched by hunger, Saudāsa seized the Brāhmaṇa (with the intention of devouring him), whereupon his wife pleaded like one afflicted:—"You are no ogre as such; you are (on the other hand) a great car-warrior among the scions of Ikṣvāku and the husband of Madayanti, O valiant monarch! You ought not to do what is unrighteous. (Pray,) restore (to me—eager as I am to have a son—my husband, who is a Brāhmaṇa and has not yet attained his object (in the form of a son). (26-27) This human body, O king, is capable of yielding all the objects sought after by a Jīva. Therefore, the destruction of this body, O heroic king, is spoken of as the frustration of all one's objects. (28) Indeed this Brāhmaṇa is not only learned but endowed with asceticism, an amiable disposition and other virtues. (Nay,) he seeks to worship Brahma (the Absolute), known by the name of Lord Viṣṇu (the supreme Person)—which, though present in (all) created beings is screened by ego etc., (the products of) the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti—by looking upon all living beings as his (very) self. (29) As such how can he, the foremost of Brāhmaṇa sages, deserve death, O lord knowing what is right, at the hands of the foremost of royal sages in you, any more than a son at the hands of his father ? (30) How can you, esteemed of the righteous, approve of the death (at your own hands) of this pious and sinless Brāhmaṇa, an expositor of the Vedas even when unborn, any more than you would the slaughter of a cow? (31) If (in spite of my protests) this Brāhmaṇa—without home I shall not survive even for a moment—is to be made a victim by you, then first devour me, as good as dead." (32) In spite of her pleading pitifully in this way and crying like a helpless woman, King Saudāsa, who was deluded by the curse (of his preceptor, the sage Vasiṣṭha) devoured the Brāhmaṇa even as a tiger would devour a beast. (33) Finding her husband (lit., impregnator) eaten up by Saudāsa (who behaved like an ogre), and lamenting herself, the chaste Brāhmaṇa woman, full of anger, cursed the king (in the following words):—(34) "Since my husband, O wicked soul, has been devoured by you while I was stricken with love, your death too, O foolish one, will be shown by me to follow from sexual intercourse." (35) Having cursed King Mitrasaha in the aforesaid words and consigning his husband's bones to a flaming fire, the lady—who looked upon the world of her husband (the region to which the soul of her husband had gone) as her ultimate destination—followed the course of her husband (burnt herself to death). (36)

विशापो द्वादशाब्दान्ते मैथुनाय समुद्यतः । विज्ञाय ब्राह्मणीशापं महिष्या स निवारितः । ३७ ।
तत ऊर्ध्वं स तत्याज स्त्रीसुखं कर्मणाप्रजाः । वसिष्ठस्तदनुज्ञातो मदयन्त्यां प्रजामधात् । ३८ ।
सा वै सप्त समा गर्भमविभ्रन्न व्यजायत । जग्नेऽश्मनोदरं तस्याः सोऽश्मकस्तेन कथ्यते । ३९ ।
अश्मकान्मूलको जज्ञे यः स्त्रीभिः परिरक्षितः । नारीकवच इत्युक्तो निःक्षेत्रे मूलकोऽभवत् । ४० ।
ततो दशरथस्तस्मात् पुत्र एडविडस्ततः । राजा विश्वसहो यस्य खट्वाङ्गश्चक्रवर्त्यभूत् । ४१ ।
यो देवैरर्थितो दैत्यानवधीद् युधि दुर्जयः । मुहूर्तमायुर्जातैव स्वपुरं संदधे मनः । ४२ ।
न मे ब्राह्मकुलात् प्राणाः कुलदैवान्न चात्मजाः । न श्रियो न मही राज्यं न दाराश्चातिवल्लभाः । ४३ ।
न बाल्येऽपि मतिर्महामयमे रमते क्वचित् । नापश्यमुत्तमश्लोकादन्यत् किञ्चन वस्तुहम् । ४४ ।
देवैः कामवरो दत्तो मह्यं त्रिभुवनेश्वरैः । न वृणे तमहं कामं भूतभावनभावनः । ४५ ।
ये विश्वेन्द्रियधियो देवास्ते स्वहृदि स्थितम् । न विन्दन्ति प्रियं शश्वदात्मानं किमुतापरे । ४६ ।
अथेशमायारचितेषु सङ्गं गुणेषु गन्धर्वपुरोपमेषु ।
रूढं प्रकृत्याऽऽत्मनि विश्वकर्तुर्भावेन हित्वा तमहं प्रपद्ये । ४७ ।
इति व्यवसितो बुद्ध्या नारायणगृहीतया । हित्वान्यभावमज्ञानं ततः स्वं भावमाश्रितः । ४८ ।
यत् तद् ब्रह्म परं सूक्ष्मपरशून्यं शून्यकल्पितम् । भगवान् वासुदेवेति यं गुणंति हि सात्वताः । ४९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे सूर्यवंशानुवर्णने नवमोऽध्यायः । ९ ।

Rid of the curse (of his preceptor) at the end of twelve years, and fully intent upon copulation, he was stopped by his wife (Madayanti), who had come to know of the curse pronounced on him by the (aforesaid) Brāhmaṇa lady. (37) Thenceforth he gave up the pleasures of sex and (consequently) did not have any issue due to his (own) action (of devouring a Brāhmaṇa). Entreated by him, the sage Vasiṣṭha begot an issue through Madayanti. (38) She actually bore the child in her womb for seven years; the boy (however) did not see the light (yet). Vasiṣṭha (thereupon) hit her abdomen with a stone; and the boy (who thus emerged from the womb) was for that reason called Āsmaka. (39) From (the loins of) Āsmaka sprang up Mūlaka, who was effectively protected (against the wrath of Paraśurama) by women (who actually shielded his body as an armour). (Hence) he was called by the name of Nārīkavaca. When not a single Kṣatriya was left (after the extermination of the Kṣatriya race by Paraśurāma), it was he who served as the stock of the regenerated Kṣatriya race. (Hence he became known as Mūlaka). (40) Of Mūlaka, Daśaratha was born and from (the loins of) the latter sprang up a son, Aīdaviḍa (by name). Of Aīdaviḍa (again) was born Viśwasaha, whose son, Khaṭvāṅga, turned out to be a universal monarch. (41) Hard to conquer (himself), he slew demons in battle at the entreaty of the gods. On coming to know (at the conclusion of the battle) that (only) an hour's life was left (to him), he forthwith returned to his capital (by an aerial car lent to him by the gods) and concentrated his mind (on-God). (42) (He said to himself,) "Neither life nor sons nor riches nor earth nor kingship nor wife is dearer to me than the Brāhmaṇa race, the adored of my family. Even during my childhood my mind never took delight under any circumstance in unrighteousness. Nor did I (ever) find any other reality than the Lord of excellent renown. (43-44) Although a boon of my choice was offered to me by the gods, the rulers of (all) the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region), I did not hanker after such enjoyment, engrossed as I was in the thought of Lord Viṣṇu (the Maker and Protector of all beings). (45) (Even) the aforesaid gods, whose senses and mind (too) are bewildered (by the objects of senses) fail to discover their beloved Lord, ever present in their own heart as their very self; how, then, could others know Him? (46) Therefore, shaking off, by means of Devotion to the Maker of the universe, the attachment, rooted by the very nature of things in the mind, for the objects of senses (which are products of the three Guṇas or modes of Prakṛti), produced by the Māyā (creative energy) of the Lord and no more real than a fanciful project, I (hereby) betake myself to Him." (47) Having thus resolved by force of his reason, which was drawn towards Himself by Lord Viṣṇu (who has His abode in water), and shedding his ignorance in the form of identification with the body and so on (which are other than the self), Khaṭvāṅga forthwith regained his essential character (divine state), which is the same as that transcendent Absolute, which, though not unsubstantial, is conceived as intangible (because lying beyond the range of speech and other organs) and is (very) subtle (too), (nay,) which devotees of God undoubtedly refer to as the almighty Lord Vāsudeva. (48-49)

*Thus ends the ninth discourse, forming part of an account of the solar dynasty,
in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ दशमोऽध्यायः

Discourse X

An account of Śrī Rāma's pastimes

श्रीशुक उवाच

खट्वाङ्गाद् दीर्घबाहुश्च रघुस्तस्मात् पृथुश्रवाः । अजस्ततो महाराजस्तस्माद् दशरथोऽभवत् । १ ।

तस्यापि भगवानेष साक्षाद् ब्रह्ममयो हरिः । अंशांशेन चतुर्धागात् पुत्रत्वं प्रार्थितः सुरैः ।

रामलक्ष्मणभरतशत्रुघ्ना इति संज्ञया । २ ।

तस्यानुचरितं राजशुषिभिस्तत्त्वदर्शिभिः । श्रुतं हि वर्णितं भूरि त्वया सीतापतेर्महोः । ३ ।

गुर्वर्थं त्यक्तराज्यो व्यचरदनुवं पद्मपद्मं प्रियायाः

पाणिस्पृक्षाभ्यां मृजितपथरुजो यो हरीन्द्रानुजाभ्याम् ।

वैरूप्याच्छूर्पणख्याः

प्रियविरहरूषाऽऽरोपितभूविजृम्भ-

त्रस्ताब्धिर्बद्धसेतुः

खलददवहनः

कोसलेन्द्रोऽवतात्रः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : From (the loins of) Khaṭvāṅga sprang up Dirghabāhu (the long-armed one), of whom was born Raghu of wide renown. From (the loins of) the latter sprang up the great king Aja, of whom Daśaratha was born. (1) Again entreated by the gods, Lord Śrī Hari Himself (who has already been seen by you in your mother's womb and) who is (entirely) constituted of Brahma (the Absolute), assumed the role of a son to (the blessed) Daśaratha—appearing in (as many as) four forms under the names of Śrī Rāma, Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna—Himself in His entirety and His brothers as His part manifestation. (2) The story in the form of a chronicle of the aforesaid Śrī Rāma (the Spouse of Sitā) has (already) been narrated in detail, O Parīkṣit, by seers (like Vālmiki) who had realized the truth, and has undoubtedly been heard by you time and again. (I shall accordingly content myself with reproducing it only in a nutshell.) (3) Having abandoned for the sake of (redeeming the pledge of) His father (King Daśaratha) (His title to) kingship, He roamed about from forest to forest by His lotus-feet, which were too soft (even) for the touch of the (petal-like) hands of His beloved Consort (Sitā), His fatigue from the journey being relieved (now and again) by (the blessed) Hanumān (the monkey chief) and His own younger brother (Lakṣmaṇa, who accompanied Him to the forest and kneaded His feet and other limbs along with Hanumān). (The deity presiding over) the ocean was terrified by the (very) display of His brows knit in anger excited by the (grievous) separation from His Darling (Sitā), which had been brought about by the mutilation of Śūrpaṅkhā (sister of Rāvaṇa, the demon king of Lāṅkā, so-called because she had nails as big as a winnowing basket, nay, whose nose and ears were chopped off by Lakṣmaṇa at the instance of Śrī Rāma, an incident which provoked Rāvaṇa to steal away Sitā in the absence of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa). May that Lord of Kosala (Oudh)—who (subsequently) caused a bridge to be built across the sea and exterminated the host of wicked demons (including Rāvaṇa) even as a wild fire consumes a (whole) forest—protect us! (4)

विश्वामित्राध्वरे येन मारीचाद्या निशाचराः । पश्यतो लक्ष्मणस्यैव हता नैर्मृतपुङ्गवाः । ५ ।

यो लोकवीरसमितौ धनुरैशमुग्रं सीतास्वयंवरगृहे त्रिशतोपनीतम् ।

आदाय बालगजलील इवेक्षुयष्टिं सजीकृतं नृप विकृष्य बभञ्ज मध्ये । ६ ।

जिवानुरूपगुणशीलवयोऽङ्गरूपां सीताभिधां श्रियमुरस्यभिलष्यमानाम् ।

मार्गे ब्रजन् भृगुपतेर्व्यनयत् प्ररुढं दर्पं महीमकृत यत्स्निराजबीजाम् । ७ ।

यः सत्यपाशपरिवीतपितुर्निदेशं स्त्रैणस्य चापि शिरसा जगृहे सभार्यः ।

राज्यं श्रियं प्रणयिनः सुहृदो निवासं त्यक्त्वा ययौ वनमसूनिव मुक्तसङ्गः । ८ ।

रक्षःस्वसर्वकृत रूपमशुद्धबुद्धेस्तस्याः खरत्रिशिरदूषणमुख्यबन्धून् ।

जघ्ने चतुर्दशसहस्रमपारणीयकोदण्डपाणिरटमान उवास कृच्छ्रम् । ९ ।

सीताकथाश्रवणदीपितहृच्छयेन सृष्टं विलोक्य नृपते दशकन्धरेण ।

जघ्नेऽद्भुतैवपुषाऽऽश्रमतोऽपकृष्टो मारीचमाशु विशिखेन यथा कमुग्रः । १० ।

रक्षोऽधमेन वृकवद् विपिनेऽसमक्षं वैदेहराजदुहितर्यपयापितायाम् ।

भ्रात्रा वने कृपणवत् प्रियया वियुक्तः स्त्रीसङ्गिनां गतिमिति प्रथयंश्चचार । ११ ।

दग्धाऽऽत्मकृत्यहतकृत्यमहन् कबन्धं सरथ्यं विधाय कपिभिर्दयितागतिं तैः ।

बुद्ध्याथ वालिनि हते प्लवगेन्द्र सैन्यैर्वैलामगात् स मनुजोऽजभवाचिताङ्घ्रिः । १२ ।

यद्गोषविभ्रमविवृतकटाक्षपातसंभ्रान्तनक्रमकरो भयगीर्णघोषः ।
 सिन्धुः शिरस्यर्हणं परिगृह्य रूपी पादारविन्दमुपगम्य बभौष एतत् । १३ ।
 न त्वां वयं जडधियो नु विदाम भूमन् कूटस्थमादिपुरुषं जगतामधीशम् ।
 यत्सत्त्वतः सुरगणा रजसः प्रजेशा मन्योश्च भूतपतयः स भवान् गुणेशः । १४ ।
 कामं प्रयाहि जहि विश्रवसोऽवमेहं त्रैलोक्यरावणमवाप्नुहि वीर पत्नीम् ।
 बद्धीहि सेतुमिह ते यशसो वितत्यै गायन्ति दिग्विजयिनो यमुपेत्य भूपाः । १५ ।
 बद्धोदधौ रघुपतिर्विविधाद्रिकूटैः सेतुं कपीन्द्रकरकम्पितभूरुहाङ्गैः ।
 सुग्रीवनीलहनुमत्प्रमुखैरनीकेलङ्कां विभीषणदुशाऽऽविशदप्रदग्धाम् । १६ ।
 सा वानरेन्द्रबलरुद्रविहारकोष्ठश्रीद्वारगोपुरसदोदलभीविटङ्का ।
 निर्भज्यमानधिषणध्वजहेमकुम्भशृङ्गाटका गजकुलैर्हृदिनीव घूर्णा । १७ ।
 रक्षःपतिस्तद्वलोक्य निकुम्भकुम्भधूप्राक्षदुर्मुखसुगन्तनरान्तकादीन् ।
 पुत्रं प्रहस्तपतिकायविकम्पनादीन् सर्वानुगान् समहिरोदध कुम्भकर्णम् । १८ ।
 तां यातुधानपुतनामसिशूलचापप्रासष्टिं शक्तिशतोमरखड्गदुर्गाम् ।
 सुग्रीवलक्ष्मणमरुत्सुगन्धमादनीलाङ्गदक्षपनसादिभिरन्वितोऽगात् । १९ ।
 तेऽनीकपा रघुपतेरभिपत्य सर्वे द्वन्द्वं वरूथमिभपत्तिरथाश्रयोधैः ।
 जघ्नुर्मैर्गिरिगदेषुभिरङ्गदाद्याः सीताभिर्मर्शहतमङ्गलरावणेशान् । २० ।

(Earlier) in the course of a sacrificial performance of the sage Viśvāmītra, Mārīca and other demon chiefs, who roamed about (and carried on their nefarious activities) at night, were beaten by Him (all alone), Lakṣmaṇa standing (aloof) as a mere spectator. (5) Picking up in the midst of an assembly of world-renowned heroes the formidable bow of Lord Śiva, lying in a hall (specially) built for the choice-marriage of Princess Sītā and brought (conjointly) by three hundred men, He strung it and, (then) drawing it, broke it in the middle, O protector of men, as sportfully as an immature elephant would snap a stick of sugar-cane! (6) Having won (as the prize for his feat of valour). Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity)—whose virtues, disposition, age, limbs and appearance (eminently) matched His, (nay,) who (in the form of a golden streak) had (already) secured an honourable place on His bosom and who (now) bore the name of Sītā—He tamed, while on His way (back to Ayodhyā) the overgrown pride of Paraśurāma (the chief of the Bhṛgu), who had thrice seven times swept the earth clean (even) of the seed of the Kṣatriya race. (7) The Lord accepted with His head bent low the command of even His uxorious father (King Daśaratha), who was bound by the cords of truthfulness, and, relinquishing (His claim to) the throne, (of Ayodhyā), the (imperial) fortune, His loving relations (mother and so on), friends and dwelling-place—even as an ascetic (who has shaken off all attachment) would give up the ghost, left for the woods along-with His (divine) Spouse (Sītā). (8) (While in the forest) He mutilated the features of Śūrpaṇakhā (the sister of the demon king) a woman of unclean mind, slew her kinsmen, numbering (not less than) fourteen thousand, Khara, Dūṣaṇa and Trisīrā being the foremost (of them), and, roaming about with an irresistible bow in His hand, led a hard life (in order to teach a lesson to humanity). (9) Observing the demon Mārīca deputed in the form of a weird (golden) deer, O protector of men, by Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster)—whose passion had been kindled on hearing a description of Sītā (from the lips of Śūrpaṇakhā)—and drawn away from His hermitage (by the aforesaid deer), He forthwith killed Mārīca with an arrow

(even) as Virābhadrā (who was no other than Lord Śiva) slew Dakṣa* (a lord of created beings). (10) On Sitā (the Daughter of Janaka, the ruler of the Videha country, now known as Tirhut in north Bihar) having been (forcibly) carried away in the forest during His absence by Rāvaṇa (the vilest of the demons), even as (a sheep is snatched away by a wolf), the Lord, who was (thus) disunited from His beloved Consort, wandered in that forest alongwith His (younger) brother (Lakṣmaṇa) like a forlorn creature, exemplifying in that way the (sad) plight of those attached to women. (11) Having cremated (like a devoted son) Jaṭāyu (the king of vultures)—who had (all) his (stock of) Karma wiped out through his (heroic) action (in the shape of a duel with the mighty Rāvaṇa) for His own sake (for the deliverance of His beloved Spouse from the clutches of that tyrant)—the Lord slew the demon Kabandha (who had stretched his arms to seize Him). (Then,) cultivating friendship with the monkeys (Sugrīva, Hanumān and others) and ascertaining through them, when Vālī had been killed, the whereabouts of His Darling, the Lord—who behaved as a human being even though His feet are worshipped (even) by Brahmā (the birthless creator) and Lord Śiva (the Source of creation)—marched with the forces of Sugrīva (the ruler of the monkeys) to the seashore. (12) The deity presiding over the ocean found the crocodiles and alligators in it agitated by a fierce glance cast by Him in seeming anger (provoked by his failure to appear before the Lord in spite of His waiting for him for three days without food and water), nay, its very roar silenced through fear. (Therefore,) assuming a living form and taking articles of worship on his head, he approached the Lord's lotus-feet and spoke as follows:—(13) "Dull-witted as we are, O infinite Lord, we ate unable to know You, the most ancient Person, the immutable supreme Ruler of (all) the worlds. (Surely) You are (no other than) that Lord of Prakṛti (consisting of the three Guṇas) from whose Sātvika aspect sprang up hosts of divinities, from whose Rājāsika aspect, the (various) lords of created beings and from whose Tāmasika aspect appeared the lords of ghosts. (14) (Be pleased now to) march (across the ocean) at Your will; slay Rāvaṇa (the refuse of his father, the sage Viśravā), who (by his atrocities) makes the three worlds weep; recover Your Spouse, O valiant One; (and) for the expansion of Your fame construct here a bridge, reaching which monarchs intent on the conquest of the (four) quarters may sing Your glory." (15) Having (accordingly) constructed across the sea a bridge with mountain-peaks of every description—full of trees the boughs of which were shaken by the hands of monkey chiefs (who handled them)—the Lord, accompanied by armies (of monkeys) led by Sugrīva, Nila and Hanumān, entered under the guidance of Vibhiṣaṇa (the fortress of) Laṅkā, already burnt (by Hanumān in course of his quest for Sitā). (16) With its sports grounds, granaries, treasuries, doorways, city-gates, council-chambers, porticos and pigeon-cots occupied by the army of monkey chiefs and its platforms, flags, jars of gold (placed on both sides of its entrances) and crossroads being destroyed, the city shook like a river churned by herds of elephants. (17) Perceiving this (calamity), Rāvaṇa (the lord of the demons) deputed Nikumbha, Kumbha, Dhūmrākṣa, Durmukha, Surāntaka, Narāntaka and others, his son (Meghanāda), Prahasta, all his followers headed by Atikāya and Vikampana and afterwards (his younger brother) Kumbhakarna (to meet the invading army). (18) Accompanied by Sugrīva (the lord of the monkeys), Lakṣmaṇa (His own younger brother), Hanumān (son of the wind-god), Gandhamādana, Nila, Prince Aṅgada (Sugrīva's nephew and heir-apparent), Jāmbavān (the king of the bears), Panasa and others, Śrī Rāma (too) marched against that army of the demons, which was difficult to penetrate, armed as it was with cutlasses, Śūlas (sharp-pointed steel weapons), bows, Prāsas (darts), Rṣṭis (double-edged swords), javelins, Tomaras (iron clubs) and swords. (19) Meeting in a single combat

* Vide IV.V. 24.

the hostile army (consisting of elephants, foot-soldiers, chariots and cavalry, all the aforesaid generals of Śrī Rāma (the Lord of the Raghus)—Āṅgada and others—struck with trees, rocks, maces and arrows the demons whose Lord, Rāvaṇa, had (all) his good luck wiped off by the abduction of Sītā. (20)

रक्षःपतिः स्वबलनष्टमवेक्ष्य रुष्ट आरुह्य यानकमथाभिससार रामम् ।

स्वःस्यन्दने द्युमति मातलिनोपनीते विभ्राजमानमहनत्रिशितैः क्षुभ्रैः । २१ ।

- रामस्तमाह पुरुषादपुरीष यत्रः कान्तासमक्षमसतापहता श्रवत् ते ।

त्यक्तत्रपस्य फलमद्य जुगुप्सितस्य यच्छामि काल इव कर्तुरलङ्घ्यवीर्यः । २२ ।

एवं क्षिपन् धनुषि संधितमुत्ससर्ज बाणं स वज्रमिव तद्धृदयं बिभेद ।

सोऽसृग् वमन् दशमुखैर्यपतद् विमानाद्वाहेति जल्पति जने सुकृतीव रिक्तः । २३ ।

Enraged to see the destruction of his army and mounting the aerial car (viz., Puṣpaka that had been snatched away by him from Kubera, the god of riches), Rāvaṇa (the lord of the demons) forthwith marched against Śrī Rāma—shining brightly in a splendid heavenly car brought by Mātali (the charioteer of Indra)—and struck Him with sharpened arrows having crescent-shaped heads. (21) Śrī Rāma said to him, "O refuse of ogres, I, whose prowess cannot be prevailed against, shall award this very day to you, who have cast (all) shame to the winds—(even) as Kāla does to a perpetrator of sin—the fruit of your detested action consisting in the fact that our beloved spouse was stolen away during our absence by your wicked self, who behaved like a dog." (22) Scolding him thus, the Lord discharged (at him) an arrow fitted (by Him) to His bow and it split his heart, hard as adamant. Like a virtuous soul whose stock of merit is exhausted, he fell from his aerial car, vomiting blood through his ten mouths, in the midst of his people crying "Dear me! Dear me!!" (23)

ततो निष्क्रम्य लङ्काया यातुधान्यः सहस्रशः । मन्दोदर्या समं तस्मिन् प्ररुदय उपाद्रवन् । २४ ।

स्वान् स्वान् बन्धून् परिष्वज्य लक्ष्मणेषुभिरदितान् । रुरुदुः सुखरं दीना घ्नन्त्य आत्मानमात्मना । २५ ।

हा हताः स्म वयं नाथ लोकरावण रावण । कं यायाच्छरणं लङ्का त्वद्विहीना परार्दिता । २६ ।

नैवं वेद महाभाग भवान् कामवशं गतः । तेजोऽनुभावं सीताया येन नीतो दशमिमाम् । २७ ।

कृतैषा विधवा लङ्का वयं च कुलनन्दन । देहः कृतोऽन्नं गृध्राणामात्मा नरकहेतवे । २८ ।

Issuing forth from Lankā in (their) thousands, with Mandodarī (the principal consort of Rāvaṇa), Rākṣasa women now rushed, weeping bitterly, to the spot (where Rāvaṇa lay dead). (24) Hugging each her own relations struck down by the shafts of Lakṣmaṇa (Śrī Rāma's younger brother), they helplessly wailed in loud tones (as follows), beating their person with their own hands:—(25) "Alas, undone we are, O lord! O Rāvaṇa, who made the (whole) world weep (by your tyranny)!! Bereft of you and overrun by the enemy, whom should Lankā seek as its protector? (26) Swayed by passion, you did not realize, O highly blessed one, such (extraordinary) power of Sītā's glory, by which you have been reduced to this (miserable) plight! (27) Widowed is this Lankā as well as we, O delight of your race! (Nay,) your body has been made the food of vultures and your soul rendered fit for hell. (28)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स्वानां विभीषणश्चक्रे कोसलेन्द्रानुमोदितः । पितृमेधविधानेन यदुक्तं साम्प्रतयिकम् । २९ ।

ततो ददर्श भगवानशोकवनिकाश्रमे । क्षामां स्वविरहव्याधिं शिंशपामूलमास्थिताम् । ३० ।

रामः प्रियतमां भार्यां दीनां वीक्ष्यान्यवकम्पत । आत्मसंदर्शनाह्लादविकसन्मुखपङ्कजाम् । ३१ ।

आरोप्यारुहे यानं भ्रातृभ्यां हनुमद्युतः । विभीषणाय भगवान् दत्त्वा रक्षोगणेशताम् । ३२ ।

लङ्कामायुश्च कल्पान्तं ययौ चीर्णव्रतः पुरीम् । अवकीर्यमाणः कुसुमैर्लेकपालार्पितैः पथि । ३३ ।
 उपगीयमानचरितः शतधृत्यादिभिर्मुदा । गोमूत्रयावकं श्रुत्वा भ्रातरं वल्कलाम्बरम् । ३४ ।
 महाकारुणिकोऽतप्यजटिलं स्थण्डिलेशयम् । भरतः प्राप्तमाकर्ण्य पौरामात्यपुरोहितैः । ३५ ।
 पादुके शिरसि न्यस्य रामं प्रत्युद्यतोऽग्रजम् । नन्दिग्रामात् स्वशिविराद् गीतवादित्रनिःस्वनैः । ३६ ।
 ब्रह्मघोषेण च मुहुः पठद्भिर्ब्रह्मादिभिः । स्वर्णकक्षपताकभिर्हैमैश्चित्रध्वजै रथैः । ३७ ।
 सदशै रुक्मसन्त्राहभैरैः पुरटवर्मभिः । श्रेणीभिर्वारमुख्याभिर्भृत्यैश्चैव पदानुरैः । ३८ ।
 पारमेष्ठ्यानुपादाय पण्यानुद्यावचानि च । पादन्योऽप्यतत् प्रेम्णा प्रङ्क्तिर्ब्रह्मदयेक्षणः । ३९ ।
 पादुके न्यस्य पुरतः प्राञ्जलिर्वाष्पलोचनः । तमार्लिष्य चिरं दोर्था स्नापयन् नेत्रजैर्जलैः । ४० ।
 रामो लक्ष्मणसीताभ्यां विप्रेभ्यो येऽर्हसत्तमाः । तेभ्यः स्वयं नमश्चक्रे प्रजाभिश्च नमस्कृतः । ४१ ।
 धुन्वन्त उत्तरासङ्गान् पतिं वीक्ष्य चिरागतम् । उत्तराः कोसला माल्यैः किरन्तो ननुतुमुदा । ४२ ।
 पादुके भरतोऽगृह्णाद्यामरव्यजनोत्तमे । विभीषणः ससुग्रीवः श्वेतच्छत्रं मरुत्सुतः । ४३ ।
 धनुर्निषङ्गाञ्छत्रघ्नः सीता तीर्थकमण्डलुम् । अबिभ्रदङ्गदः खड्गं हैमं चर्मक्षराण् नृप । ४४ ।
 पुष्पकस्थोऽन्वितः स्त्रीभिः स्तूयमानश्च वन्दिभिः । विरेजे भगवान् राजन् ग्रहैश्चन्द्र इवोदितः । ४५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Encouraged (commanded) by Śrī Rāma (the uncrowned King of Kosala), Vibhiṣaṇa (the youngest brother of Rāvaṇa) performed for the benefit of his Kinsmen (Rāvaṇa and others) whatever is ordained (in the scriptures) by way of obsequies according to the procedure laid down for a sacrifice intended to propitiate the manes. (29) The Lord then saw in a retreat in the Aśoka garden His most beloved Spouse (Sītā) emaciated due to the disease of separation from Him and seated at the foot of a Śirīśāpā (Aśoka) tree. Observing Her in that wretched plight Śrī Rāma was filled with compassion. Bestowing on Vibhiṣaṇa the rulership of the Rākṣasa hordes, (the city of) Laṅka and longevity extending to the end of the Kalpa, and (first) helping Sītā—the lotus of whose countenance was now blooming with joy caused by His full vision—to mount the aerial car (Puṣpaka), the Lord, who had (now) completed His vow of residing in a forest (for fourteen years), stepped into the car (Himself) along with His two brothers (His half-brother Lakṣmaṇa and His adopted brother Sugrīva) and, (further) accompanied by Hanumān, flew (back) to His capital (Ayodhyā), showered over on the way with flowers offered by the guardians of the (various) worlds, His (heroic) deeds being joyfully celebrated (all along) by Brahmā (the creator) and others. The highly merciful Lord (however) felt (much) pained to learn about His (younger) brother (Bharata), who, covering himself with the bark of trees, was living on barley boiled in the urine of cows, wore matted locks (on his head) and slept on the ground strewn with blades of (the sacred) Kuśa grass. Hearing of Śrī Rāma having arrived, Prince Bharata placed on his head the latter's wooden sandals (lent to him by the Lord as a token of love) and, accompanied by the citizens (of Ayodhyā), his ministers and family priests, proceeded from Nandigrāma—where he was camping (with a vow not to enter Ayodhyā till Śrī Rāma's return)—to meet his elder Brother in the midst of songs and sounds of musical instruments and (further) accompanied by (great) exponents of the Vedas, repeatedly chanting in loud tones (sacred texts from) the Vedas, by flags with gilded edges, chariots of gold decked with flags of various colours, noble horses with trappings of gold, warriors protected by gold armours, traders (of every description), courtezans and servants following on foot, and (also) taking with him royal insignia (in the shape of an umbrella, chowries and so on) and (valuable) commodities (jewels etc.), of every description (great and small by way of presents). Placing the sandals before Śrī Rāma, he dropped down at His feet, his heart and eyes moistened with love, and stood with joined palms and eyes full of tears. Keeping him folded in His arms for a long time and bathing him with tears flowing from His eyes, Śrī Rāma Himself alongwith Lakṣmaṇa and Sitā offered His greetings to the Brāhmaṇas as well as to those (others) who were most deserving of honour and was (in His turn) saluted by the people. (30—41) Observing their lord returned (home) after a long time, the inhabitants of north Kosala joyfully danced, waving their upper cloths and showering flowers on Him. (42) Bharata took His pair of wooden sandals; Vibhīṣaṇa alongwith Sugrīva (who stood severally on His right and left), a chowrie and an excellent fan (respectively); and Hanumān (son of the wind-god, who stood behind the Lord) held the white umbrella (over Him). (43) Śatrughna (the youngest brother of Śrī Rāma) bore His bow and the pair of quivers; Sitā held the Kamaṇḍalu (water-pot of cocoanut-shell) containing the water of sacred lakes and rivers; Aṅgada carried His sword and Jāmbavān (the king of the bears), His shield of gold, O protector of men! (44) Seated in (the aerial car named) Puṣpaka, attended by (the aforesaid dancing) women and panegyriized by bards, the Lord shone brightly, O king, like the rising moon in the midst of minor planets. (45)

भ्रातृभिर्नन्दितः सोऽपि सोत्सवां प्राविशत् पुरीम् । प्रविश्य राजभवनं गुरुपत्नीः स्वमातरम् । ४६ ।
गुरून् वयस्यावरजान् पूजितः प्रत्यपूजयत् । वैदेही लक्ष्मणश्चैव यथावत् समुपेयतुः । ४७ ।
पुत्रान् स्वमातरस्तास्तु प्राणास्तन्व इवोत्थिताः । आरोग्याङ्गैर्भविष्यन्त्यो बाष्पैर्यैर्विजहृः शुचः । ४८ ।
जटा निर्मुच्य विधिवत् कुलवृद्धैः समं गुरुः । अभ्यषिञ्चद् यथैवेन्द्रं चतुःसिन्धुजलादिभिः । ४९ ।
एवं कृतशिरःस्नानः सुवासः स्रग्व्यलङ्कृतः । खलङ्कृतैः सुवासोभिर्भ्रातृभिर्भार्यया बभौ । ५० ।
अग्रहीदासनं भ्रात्रा प्रणिपत्य प्रसादितः । प्रजाः स्वधर्मनिरता वर्णाश्रमगुणान्विताः ।
जुगोप पितृवद् रामो मेनिरे पितरं च तम् । ५१ ।

ब्रेतायां वर्तमानायां कालः कृतसमोऽभवत् । रामे राजनि धर्मज्ञे सर्वभूतसुखावहे । ५२ ।
वनानि नद्यो गिरयो वर्षाणि द्वीपसिन्धवः । सर्वे कामदुघा आसन् प्रजानां भरतर्षभ । ५३ ।
नाथिव्याधिजरागलानिदुःखशोकभयक्लमाः । मृत्युश्चानिच्छतां नासीद् रामे राजन्यधोक्षजे । ५४ ।
एकपत्नीव्रतधरो राजर्विचरितः शुचिः । स्वधर्मं गृहमेधीयं शिक्षयन् स्वयमाचरत् । ५५ ।
प्रेम्णानुवृत्त्या शीलेन प्रश्रयावनता सती । धिया ह्रिया च भावज्ञा भर्तुः सीताहरम्नः । ५६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे रामचरिते दशमोऽध्यायः । १० ।

Welcomed by His (younger) brothers, the Lord too entered the festive city and, on entering the royal palace, duly honoured His stepmothers (Kaikeyī and so on), His own mother (the blessed Kausalyā), preceptors (Vasiṣṭha and others), His equals in age as well as those younger than He, and was honoured (in return) by them. (Likewise) Sitā and Lakṣmaṇa too met them in a befitting manner. (46-47) Rising (from their seats), like dead bodies returning to life, the aforesaid mothers of these princes placed their sons on their lap and, bathing them all over with a flood of tears, shed their grief (of separation from them). (48) Causing the matted locks (of Śrī Rāma) to be unravelled, the sage Vasiṣṭha (His preceptor) alongwith the elders of His race (the Raghus) bathed Him with the water of (all) the four oceans (in the four quarters) and other (sacred) waters (even) as the sage Brhaspati (the preceptor of the gods) bathed Indra (the ruler of the gods). (49) Having thus washed His whole body including His head, nay, clad in beautiful attire and adorned with wreaths of flowers and ornaments, the Lord shone with His (younger) brothers (Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna) and (divine) Consort (Sitā), who were (all) well-adorned (with jewels) and elegantly dressed. (50) Won over by His brother (Bharata) through prostrations, Śrī Rāma accepted the throne (of Ayodhyā) and like a father protected the people (of His kingdom), who were (all) devoted to their respective duties and endowed with the characteristics of their (own) Varṇa (grade in society) and Āśrama (stage in life); while they (in their turn) recognized Him as their father. (51) So long as Śrī Rāma—who knew what is right and brought happiness to all created beings—reigned as king, time was like Kṛtayuga (Satyayuga, the first Yuga) though (actually) Tretā (the second Yuga) prevailed. (52) Forests, rivers, mountains, Varṣas (subdivisions of a Dwīpa), Dwīpas (principal divisions of the globe) and oceans, all yielded the desired objects of the people, O chief of the Bharatas! (53) While Śrī Rāma—who is the same as Lord Viṣṇu—ruled as king, mental and bodily ailments, old age, self-disparagement, sorrow, grief, fear and fatigue were non-existent. (Nay,) death too did not overtake the unwilling. (54) (Strictly) observing the vow of having (only) one wife (throughout His life) and conducting Himself like a sage even though a king, the pious Lord Himself (scrupulously) performed His household duties (just) in order to give a lesson (to the world). (55) By Her affection, obedience, amiable disposition, intelligence and bashfulness, Sītā, who was not only virtuous but meek through humility and knew His intention, captivated the mind of Her (divine) Spouse. (56)

Thus ends the tenth discourse, forming part of the Narrative of Śrī Rāma, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XI

The other pastimes of Śrī Rāma

श्रीशुक उवाच

भगवानात्मनाऽऽत्मानं राम उत्तमकल्पकैः । सवदेवमयं देवमीज आचार्यवान् मखैः । १ ।
 होत्रेऽदवाद दिशं प्राचीं ब्रह्मणे दक्षिणां प्रभुः । अध्वर्यवे प्रतीचीं च उदीचीं सामगाय सः । २ ।
 आचार्याय ददौ शेषां यावती भूस्तदन्तरा । मन्यमान इदं कृत्स्नं ब्राह्मणोऽर्हति निःस्पृहः । ३ ।
 इत्ययं तदलङ्कारवासोभ्यामवशेषितः । तथा राज्ञयपि वैदेही सौमङ्गल्यावशेषिता । ४ ।
 ते तु ब्रह्मण्यदेवस्य वात्सल्यं वीक्ष्य संस्तुतम् । प्रीताः क्लिन्नधियस्तस्मै प्रत्यर्प्येदं बभूवुरे । ५ ।
 अप्रतं नस्त्वया किं नु भगवन् भुवनेश्वर । यन्नोऽन्तर्हृदयं विश्य तमो हंसि स्वरोचिषा । ६ ।
 नमो ब्रह्मण्यदेवाय रामायकुण्ठमेधसे । उत्तमश्लोकधुर्याय न्यस्तदण्डार्पिताङ्घ्रये । ७ ।

Śrī Suka resumed: Guided by His preceptor (the sage Vasiṣṭha), the divine Śrī Rāma Himself propitiated—by means of sacrificial performances conducted with excellent material—His own Self in the form of Lord Viṣṇu, representing all the gods on His person. (1) (At the conclusion of the sacrifices) the Lord gave away (by way of sacrificial fees) the eastern quarter to the Hotā, the southern quarter to the Brahmā, the western quarter to the Adhwaryu and the northern quarter to the Udgātā (the chanter of Sāmaveda). (2) To His preceptor He gave away the entire land that remained at the centre, recognizing (as He did) that the Brāhmaṇa (alone) was entitled to the whole of this earth, Himself being free from (all) craving. (3) In this way Śrī Rāma (who had given away His valuables and cash too) was left with the ornaments and the two pieces of cloth He had (on His person); and Empress Sītā (Daughter of Janaka, the ruler of the Videha country) too was left (only) with Her Maṅgala-Sūtra* (every other ornament even on Her person having been given away by Her to Brāhmaṇa ladies). (4) Delighted to witness the most praiseworthy parental affection of the Lord, who is (so) fond of the Brāhmaṇas, they however returned (all) that to Him and spoke as follows, their mind moistened with affection—(5) "As a matter of fact what has not been given to us by You, O Lord, O Ruler of the universe, when (we know that), entering our innermost heart, You wipe out our ignorance by Your (divine) splendour? (6) Hail to Lord Śrī Rāma, a votary of the Brāhmaṇas, the foremost of those enjoying excellent renown, whose wisdom knows no obstruction and whose (holy) feet are cherished by those who have given up (all forms of) violence. (7)

कदाचिल्लोकजितासुरौ लोका रात्र्यामलक्षितः । चरन्वाचोऽश्रुणोद् रामो भार्यामुद्दिश्य कस्यचित् । ८ ।

नाहं बिभर्मि त्वां दृष्टामसतीं परवेशमगाम् । स्त्रीलोभी बिभृयात् सीतां रामो नाहं भजे पुनः । ९ ।

इति लोकाद् बहुमुखाद् दुराराध्यादसंविदः । पत्या भीतेन सा त्यक्ता प्राप्ता प्राचेतसाश्रमम् । १० ।

अन्तर्वत्यागते काले यमौ सा सुषुप्ते सुतौ । कुशो लव इति ख्यातौ तयोश्चक्रे क्रिया मुनिः । ११ ।

अङ्गदक्षिप्रकेतुश्च लक्ष्मणस्यात्मजौ स्मृतौ । तक्षः पुष्कल इत्यास्तां भरतस्य महीपते । १२ ।

सुबाहुः श्रुतसेनश्च शत्रुघ्नस्य बभूवतुः । गन्धर्वान् कोटिशो जग्ने भरतो विजये दिशाम् । १३ ।

तदीयं धनमानीय सर्वं राज्ञे न्यवेदयत् । शत्रुघ्नश्च मधोः पुत्रं लवणं नाम राक्षसम् ।

हत्वा मधुवने चक्रे मधुरां नाम वै पुरीम् । १४ ।

मुनौ निक्षिप्य तनवौ सीता भर्त्रा विवासिता । ध्यायन्ती रामचरणौ विवरं प्रविवेश ह । १५ ।

तच्छ्रुत्वा भगवान् रामो रुध्ररूपि धिया शुचः । स्मरन्तस्या गुणांस्तांस्तान्नाशकरोद् रोदधुमिश्चर । १६ ।

स्त्रीपुं प्रसङ्ग एतादृक्सर्वत्र त्रासमावहः । अपीश्वराणां किमुत प्रायस्य गृहचेतसः । १७ ।

On a certain night, while moving about incognito and unperceived (in the capital) with the intention of knowing the mind of the people, Śrī Rāma overheard the (following) remarks of someone concerning His own Spouse (Sītā):—(8) "I would have you no more, a wicked and unchaste woman that you are, since you have lived in the house of another. King Rāma, who is excessively fond of his wife, may retain Sītā (in his house); (but) I am not going to accept you again (in any case)." (9) Forsaken by Her (divine) Consort (Śrī Rāma), who was afraid of the ignorant and myriad-mouthed world, which could not be easily placated, Sītā reached the hermitage of the sage Vālmīki (son of Pracetā, the god of water). (10) Being enceinte, She gave birth, when the time came, to twins who became (severally) known as Kuśa and Lava. The sage (Vālmīki) performed the (purificatory) rites concerning them. (11) The two sons of Lakṣmaṇa were called Aṅgada and Citraketu; while Takṣa and Puṣkala were the two sons of Bharata, O lord of the earth! (12) (Further) Subāhu and Śrutasena were the two sons of Śatrughna. In the course of his conquest of the (four) quarters Bharata slew Gandharvas (celestial musicians) in tens of millions and, bringing their wealth (to Ayodhyā), presented it all to the King (Śrī Rāma). Again, getting rid of the demon, Lavaṇa by name, son of Madhu, Śatrughna for his part founded on the site of (the forest of) Madhuvana a city known as Mathurā (13-14) Having committed Her sons (Kuśa and Lava) to the care of the sage (Vālmīki) and contemplating on Śrī Rāma's feet—so the tradition goes—Sītā, who had been exiled by Her (divine) Spouse (and could no longer bear separation from Him) found Her way into the bowels of the earth (that parted asunder to take Her). (15) Hearing of this and

* The auspicious thread with a piece of gold at the centre worn by married women round their neck as long as their husband lives.

recalling Her manifold virtues, Śrī Rāma, the almighty Lord, could not restrain His grief, even though He tried to suppress it by force of reason. (16) Excessive fondness of men and women for each other is always such as brings fear (and grief in its train) even to powerful souls, and much more to a voluptuary whose thoughts are riveted on his household ! (17)

तत ऊर्ध्वं ब्रह्मचर्यं धारयन्नजुहोत् प्रभुः । त्रयोदशाब्दसाहस्रमग्निहोत्रमखण्डितम् । १८ ।

स्मरतां हृदि विन्यस्य विद्वं दण्डककण्टकैः । स्वपादपल्लवं राम आत्मज्योतिरगात् ततः । १९ ।

नेदं यशो रघुपतेः । सुरयाच्चयाऽऽत्तलीलातनोरधिकसाम्यवियुक्तधाम्नः ।

रक्षोवधो जलधिबन्धनमन्त्रपूगैः किं तस्य शत्रुहनेन कपयः सहायाः । २० ।

यस्यामलं नृपसदस्सु यशोऽधुनापि गायन्त्यघन्नमृषयो दिगिभेन्द्रपट्टम् ।

तं नाकपालवसुपालकिरीटजुष्टपादाम्बुजं रघुपतिं शरणं प्रपद्ये । २१ ।

स वैः स्पृष्टोऽभिदृष्टो वा संविष्टोऽनुगतोऽपि वा । कोसलास्ते ययुः स्थानं यत्र गच्छन्ति योगिनः । २२ ।

पुरुषो रामचरितं श्रवणैरुपधारयन् । आनुशंस्यपरो राजन् कर्मबन्धैर्विमुच्यते । २३ ।

Since then for (a period of) thirteen thousand years without interruption the Lord poured oblations into the sacred fire, observing (a strict vow of) celibacy (throughout). (18) Leaving, in the heart of those who remember Him, an impression of His feet—tender as a pair of young leaves—pierced (earlier) by the thorns of the Daṇḍaka forest, Śrī Rāma then left for His own effulgent (divine) realm. (19) Extirpation of demons through the instrumentality of multitudes of missiles and the bridging of the ocean—this is no praise to Śrī Rāma (the Lord of the Raghus), who assumed a form for the sake of sport at the entreaty of the gods and whose glory is absolutely matchless and unsurpassed. Did monkeys (actually) serve as His helpmates in disposing of the enemy? (No, not at all, Destruction of demons was as good a sport on His part as enlisting the help of monkeys for that purpose.) (20) I seek as my protector the aforesaid Lord of Raghus, whose unsullied glory—which is capable of destroying (all) sins and serves as an adornment for the elephants guarding the (four) quarters (pervades all the quarters)—sages sing in royal courts even to this day, and whose lotus-feet are touched by the crowns of (even) rulers of heaven (like Indra) and custodians of wealth (like Kubera, the god of riches). (21) (All) those people of the Kosala country by whom He was lovingly touched or fully observed or seated by their side or even followed (while moving about) reached the goal which Yogis (those adept in Yoga or deep meditation) attain to. (22) A man treasuring up (in his mind) the narrative of Śrī Rāma through the repeated process of hearing, and pledged to (a vow of) tenderness (cessation from violence), O Parīkṣit, is freed from the shackles of Karma (in the shape of virtue and sin, which make for transmigration). (23)

राजोवाच

कथं स भगवान् रामो भ्रातृन् वा स्वयमात्मनः । तस्मिन् वा तेज्ज्वलन्तं प्रजाः पौराश्च ईश्वरे । २४ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : How did the said Lord Śrī Rāma conduct Himself and how did He behave towards His (younger) brothers (Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa and Śatrughna), who were His own selves (part manifestations)? How, again, did they (Bharata and others) as well as His subjects and residents of Ayodhyā (in particular) behave in their turn towards Him, their (almighty) lord ? (24)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथादिशद् दिग्विजये भ्रातृन्निभुवनेश्वरः । आत्मानं दर्शयन् स्वानां पुरीमैक्षत सानुगः । २५ ।

आसिक्तमार्गा गन्धोदैः करिणां मदशीकरैः । स्वामिनं प्राप्तमालोक्य मत्तां वा सुतरामिव । २६ ।

प्रासादगोपुरसभाचैत्यदेवगृहादिषु । विन्यस्तहेमकलशैः पताकाभिश्च मण्डिताम् । २७ ।

पूर्वैः सवृन्तै रम्भाभिः पट्टिकाभिः सुवाससाम् । आदर्शैरिशुकैः स्त्रग्भिः कृतकौतुकतोरणाम् । २८ ।

तमुपेयुस्तत्र तत्र पौरा अर्हणपाणयः । आशिषो युयुजुदेवं पाहीमां प्राक् त्वयोद्धृताम् । २९ ।

ततः प्रजा वीक्ष्य पतिं चिरागतं दिदृक्षयोत्सृष्टगृहाः स्त्रियो नराः ।

आरुह्य हर्ष्याण्यरविन्दलोचनमत्तुप्तेनैत्राः कुसुमैरवाकिरन् । ३० ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Śrī Rāma (the Ruler of the three worlds) now charged His (younger) brothers with the conquest of the (four) quarters, and Himself looked round the city with His followers (attendants), allowing Himself to be seen by His people. (25) With its roads sprinkled all over with perfumed water and (fragrant) drops of temporal fluid (emitted by elephants in rut), the city looked highly inebriated (exhilarated) as it were to see her lord arrived. (26) It was adorned with domes of gold set on the top of palaces, city gates, council-chambers, sanctums and temples, as well as with flags. (27) It had festal arches erected by means of (fresh) arecā-nuts joined with their foot-stalks and banana trees (fixed in the ground), strips of beautiful cloths, mirrors, tapestries and wreaths of flowers. (28) With articles of worship in their hands citizens met Him at various points and pronounced their benedictions (on Him) with the prayer, "Protect, O Lord, this (earth), lifted up of yore by Yourself (in the form of the divine Boar)!" (29) On learning that their lord had arrived (there) after a long interval, the people—both men and women—forthwith climbed up to the top of their mansions with intent to see Him, leaving their household (duties), and showered flowers on the lotus-eyed Lord, their eyes (still) unsated. (30)

अथ प्रविष्टः स्वगृहं जुष्टं स्वैः पूर्वराजभिः । अनन्ताखिलकोशाढ्यमन्योरुपरिच्छदम् । ३१ ।

विद्वमोदुस्वरद्वारैर्वैदूर्यस्तम्भपङ्क्तिभिः । स्थलैर्मार्कतैः स्वच्छैर्भातस्फटिकभित्तिभिः । ३२ ।

चित्रस्त्रग्भिः पट्टिकाभिर्वासोमणिगणांशुकैः । मुक्ताफलैश्चिदुल्लासैः कान्तकामोपपत्तिभिः । ३३ ।

धूपदीपैः सुरभिर्भिमण्डितं पुष्पमण्डनैः । स्त्रीपुम्भिः सुरसंकाशैर्जुष्टं भूषणभूषणैः । ३४ ।

तस्मिन् स भगवान् रामः स्निग्धया प्रिययेष्टया । रेमे स्वारामधीराणामृषभः सीतया किल । ३५ ।

बुभुजे च यथाकालं कामान् धर्ममपीडयन् । वर्षपृष्ठान् बहून् नृणामभिध्याताङ्घ्रिपल्लवः । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे श्रीरामोपाख्याने एकादशोऽध्यायः । ११ ।

The Lord then returned to His palace occupied (in the past) by His own predecessors, rich in unlimited treasures of every kind and equipped with an invaluable variety of articles of household use. (31) It was graced with entrances having thresholds of coral, rows of pillars of cat's-eye, transparent floors of emerald and walls of shining crystals, wreaths of various colours, flags, cloths, gems and canopies, pearls effulgent as consciousness and (all) luxuries coveted by men, fragrant incenses and lights and decorations of flowers, and attended by men and women akin to gods and lending charm to ornaments themselves (32—34) In that palace the said Lord Śrī Rāma, the foremost of wise men revelling in the Self, enjoyed life, so the tradition goes, with His beloved and affectionate Spouse, Sītā. (35) Nay, the Lord, whose feet—tender as young leaves—are contemplated upon by men, enjoyed pleasures of sense each at its proper time for very many years, taking care not to twist (the principles of) righteousness. (36)

Thus ends the eleventh discourse, forming part of the Narrative of Śrī Rāma, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XII

The genealogy of (the remaining kings of) Ikṣvāku's line

श्रीशुक उवाच

कुशस्य चातिथिस्तस्माग्निषधस्तत्सुतो नभः । पुण्डरीकोऽथ तत्पुत्रः क्षेमधन्वाभवत्ततः । १ ।
देवानीकस्ततोऽनीहः पारियात्रोऽथ तत्सुतः । ततो बलस्थलस्तस्माद् वज्रनाभोऽर्कसम्भवः । २ ।
खगणस्तत्सुतस्तस्माद् विधृतिश्चाभवत् सुतः । ततो हिरण्यनाभोऽभूद् योगाचार्यस्तु जैमिनेः । ३ ।
शिष्यः कौसल्य आध्यात्मं याज्ञवल्क्योऽध्यगाद् यतः । योगं महोदयमुपिर्हृदयग्रन्थिभेदकम् । ४ ।
पुष्यो हिरण्यनाभस्य ध्रुवसन्धिस्ततोऽभवत् । सुदर्शनोऽथाग्निवर्णः शीघ्रस्तस्य मरुः सुतः । ५ ।
योऽसावास्ते योगसिद्धः कलापग्राममाश्रितः । कलेरन्ते सूर्यवंशं नष्टं भावयिता पुनः । ६ ।
तस्मात् प्रसुश्रुतस्तस्य सन्धिस्तस्याप्यमर्षणः । महस्वास्तत्सुतस्तस्माद् विश्वसाहोऽन्वजायत । ७ ।
ततः प्रसेनजित् तस्मात् तक्षको भविता पुनः । ततो बृहद्बलौ यस्तु पित्रा ते समरे हतः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Now, Kuśa's son was Atithi, of whom was born Niṣadha and the latter's son was Nābha. Then came Puṇḍarika, whose son was Kṣemadhanva; and from (the loins of) the latter sprang up Devānika. Of Devānika was born Aniha and his son was Pāriyātra. From (the loins of) the latter sprang up Balasthala and of the latter was born Vajranābha, who emanated from (a ray of) the sun-god. (1-2) His son was Khagaṇa and of the latter was born a son, Vidhṛti (by name). From (the loins of) Vidhṛti sprang up Hiraṇyanābha, a teacher of Yoga and a pupil of the sage Jaimini. From him the sage Yājñavalkya of Kosala received instruction in Yoga relating to the Spirit, (which is) conducive to great elevation and capable of snapping the knot of ignorance existing in the heart. (3-4) Hiraṇyanābha's son was Puṣya, of whom Dhruvasandhi was born. Then came Sudarśana; from Sudarśana, Agnivarṇa and from the latter sprang up Śighra, whose son was Maru. He is the same (Maru) who, having attained perfection through Yoga, stays (even to this day) as an inhabitant of Kalāpagrāma (a famous colony of Yogis in an obscure part of the Himālayas), and will revive the solar dynasty, when extinct, at the end of the Kali age. (5-6) From (the loins of) Maru sprang up Prasusṛta, whose son was Sandhi and the son of Sandhi, again, was Amarśaṇa. The latter's son was Mahaswān, of whom Viśwasāhva was born. (7) Of him was born Prasenajit and from (the loins of) the latter sprang up Takṣaka; and of the latter was born Bṛhadbala, who was slain in battle (O Parikṣit!) by your father (Abhimanyu). (8)

एते हीक्ष्वाकुभूपाला अतीताः शृण्वनागतान् । बृहद्बलस्य भविता पुत्रो नाम बृहद्रणः । ९ ।
उत्क्रियस्ततस्तस्य वत्सवृद्धो भविष्यति । प्रतिव्योमस्ततो भानुर्दिवाको वाहिनीपतिः । १० ।
सहदेवस्ततो वीरो बृहदश्वोऽथ भानुमान् । प्रतीकाश्वो भानुमतः सुप्रतीकोऽथ तत्सुतः । ११ ।
भविता मरुदेवोऽथ सुनक्षत्रोऽथ पुष्करः । तस्यान्तरिक्षस्तत्पुत्रः सुतपास्तदमित्रजित् । १२ ।
बृहद्राजस्तु तस्यापि बर्हिस्तस्मात् कृतञ्जयः । रणञ्जयस्तस्य सुतः सञ्जयो भविता ततः । १३ ।
तस्माच्छाक्योऽथ शुद्धोदो लाङ्गलस्तत्सुतः स्मृतः । ततः प्रसेनजित् तस्मात् क्षुद्रको भविता ततः । १४ ।
रणको भविता तस्मात् सुरथस्तनयस्ततः । सुमित्रो नाम निष्ठान्त एते बार्हद्बलान्वयाः । १५ ।

इक्ष्वाकूनामयं वंशः सुमित्रान्तो भविष्यति । यतस्तं प्राप्य राजानं संस्थां प्राप्स्यति वै कलौ । १६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे इक्ष्वाकूवंशवर्णनं नाम द्वादशोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

These are all the past kings of Ikṣvāku's line; (now) hear (the names) of the coming ones. Brhadbala's son will be named Brhadrāja, of whom will be born urukriya and from (the loins of) the latter will spring up Vatsavṛddha. Of the latter will be born Prativyoma; from Prativyoma Bhānu and from him will follow Divāka, a (great) general. (9-10) Of him will be born the valiant Sahadeva. Brhadaśwa will be the son of Sahadeva and Bhānumān, of Brhadaśwa. Bhānumān's son will be Pratikāśwa and the latter's son will be Supratika. (11) Then will follow Marudeva; from Marudeva, Sunakṣatra and Sunakṣatra's son will be Puṣkara, Puṣkara's son will be Antarikṣa; Antarikṣa's son will be Sutapā and the latter's Amitrajit. (12) Again, Brhadrāja will be the son of Amitrajit; Barhi of Brhadrāja and from the latter will follow Kṛtañjaya. His son will be Raṇaṇjaya and from (the loins of) Raṇaṇjaya will spring up Sañjaya. (13) From the latter will follow Śākya; from Śākya, Śuddhoda and his son will be called Lāṅgala. Of him will be born Prasenajit and from Prasenajit will follow Kṣudraka. (14) From (the loins of) Kṣudraka will spring up Raṇaka and of the latter will be born a son, Suratha (by name). From Suratha will follow a son, Sumitra by name, who will be the last of his line. These are (all) the scions of Brhadbala. (15) This race of the Ikṣvākus will have its end in Sumitra; for, having reached this king, the line will actually terminate in the Kali Yuga. (16)

Thus ends the twelfth discourse, "A genealogy of (the remaining kings of) Ikṣvāku's line" in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIII

The posterity of Nimi described

श्रीशुक उवाच

निमिरिक्ष्वाकूतनयो वसिष्ठमवृत्तवर्जम् । आरभ्य सत्रं सोऽप्याह शक्रेण प्रावृत्तोऽस्मि भोः । १ ।
तं निर्वर्त्यागमिष्यामि तावन्मां प्रतिपालय । तूष्णीमासीद् गृहपतिः सोऽपीन्द्रत्याकरोन्मखम् । २ ।
निमिश्चलमिदं विद्वान् सत्रमारभतात्सवान् । ऋत्विग्भिरपरिस्तावन्नामद् यावता गुरुः । ३ ।
शिष्यव्यतिक्रमं वीक्ष्य निर्वर्त्य गुरुरागतः । अशपत् पतताद् देहो निमिः पण्डितमानिनः । ४ ।
निमिः प्रतिदौ शापं गुरवेऽधर्मवर्तिने । तवापि पतताद् देहो लोभाद् धर्ममजानतः । ५ ।
इत्युत्ससर्ज स्वं देहं निमिरध्यात्मकोविदः । मित्रावरुणयोरङ्गे उर्वश्यां प्रपितामहः । ६ ।
गन्धवस्तुषु तद्देहं निधाय मुनिसत्तमाः । समाप्ते सत्रयागेऽथ देवानूचुः समागतान् । ७ ।
राज्ञो जीवतु देहोऽयं प्रसन्नाः प्रभवो यदि । तथेत्युक्ते निमिः प्राह मा भून्मे देहबन्धनम् । ८ ।
यस्य योगं न वाञ्छन्ति वियोगभयकातराः । भजन्ति चरणाम्भोजं मुनयो हरिमेष्वरः । ९ ।
देहं नावरुत्सेजं दुःखशोकभयावहम् । सर्वत्रास्य यतो मृत्युर्मत्स्यानामुदके यथा । १० ।

Śrī Śuka began again : After commencing a sacrificial session King Nimi, son of Ikṣvaku, invited the sage Vasiṣṭha to be the (chief) priest. He too replied, "I have already been invited by Indra (to conduct his sacrifice), O king ! (1) I shall (therefore) return after concluding that; (please) what for me till then". The householder (sacrificer, King Nimi) kept silent and the sage too (left for heaven and) conducted the sacrificial performance of Indra. (2) Knowing all this (his life and everything connected with it) to be evanescent, the thoughtful Nimi proceeded with the sacrificial session with the help of other priests and continued it till his preceptor (the sage Vasiṣṭha) did not return. (3) Coming back after concluding the sacrifice and perceiving the indecorum on the part of his disciple (King Nimi), the sage Vasiṣṭha cursed the latter (in the following words):—"Let the body of Nimi, who regards himself (very) learned, fall !" (4) Nimi (as well) pronounced a counter-curse on his preceptor, who had acted unrighteously (in the eyes of Nimi), saying:—"Let your body too fall because of your not knowing what is right on account of greed." (5) With these words, Nimi, (who was) well-versed in spiritual lore, gave up his ghost; while the sage (my ancestor) was reborn of the gods Mitra and Varuṇa through Urvaśī (a celestial nymph). (6) Placing the body of Nimi in balms (with a view to preserving it), the foremost of the sages (who were conducting the sacrificial session on behalf of Nimi) said to the gods assembled there, after the conclusion of the sacrificial session (as follows):—" (7) "Let this (dead) body of King Nimi come back to life, if you are pleased, O gods !" When the gods said 'Amen', (the spirit of) Nimi spoke aloud, "Let me not be imprisoned in a body (again). (8) Stricken with the fear of separation, sages do not long for union with a body and worship the lotus-feet of Śrī Hari (devotion to whom dispels the fear of transmigration). (9) I (too therefore) am not eager to get (back) a body, which brings in its train suffering, grief and fear and because of which death threatens the Jīva everywhere, as it follows the fish in water." (10)

देवा ऊचुः

विदेह उष्यतां कामं लोचनेषु शरीरिणाम् । उन्मेषणनिमेषाभ्यां लक्षितोऽध्यात्वसंस्थितः । ११ ।

अराजकभयं नृणां मन्यमाना महर्षयः । देहं ममन्युः स निमेषः कुमारः समजायत । १२ ।

जन्मना जनकः सोऽभूद् वैदेहस्तु विदेहजः । मिथिलो मथनाजातो मिथिला येन निर्मिता । १३ ।

The gods replied : "Bereft of a body, may you reside at will in the eyes of embodied souls." (In this way) Nimi took up his abode in the body (of all the Jīvas), being indicated by the opening and closing of eyes. (11) Perceiving the risk of anarchy for the people; the great sages (who officiated as priests at the sacrificial performance of Nimi) churned the body of the king, whence a son was born (to him). (12) By virtue of his extraordinary birth (or by reason of his being the progenitor of a new line of Kṣatriya kings) the prince was called Janaka; born in the line of king Nimi (who remained without a body), again, he became known as Vaideha (son of Videha). Sprung from the process of churning and further because (the city of) Mithilā was built by him, he came to be known as Mithila. (13)

तस्मादुदावसुस्तस्य पुत्रोऽभून्नन्दिवर्धनः । ततः सुकेतुस्तस्यापि देवरातो महीपते । १४ ।

तस्माद् बृहद्व्रतस्तस्य महावीर्यः सुधृत्पिता । सुधृतेर्धृष्टकेतुर्वै हर्यश्चोऽथ मरुस्ततः । १५ ।

मरोः प्रतीपकस्तस्माजातः कृतिरथो यतः । देवमीढस्तस्य सुतो विश्वतोऽथ महाधृतिः । १६ ।

कृतिरातस्ततस्तस्मान्महारोमाथ तत्सुतः । स्वर्णरोमा सुतस्तस्य ह्रस्वरोमा व्यजायत । १७ ।

ततः सीरध्वजो जज्ञे यज्ञार्थं कर्षतो महीम् । सीता सीराग्रतो जाता तस्मात् सीरध्वजः स्मृतः । १८ ।

कुशध्वजस्तस्य पुत्रस्ततो धर्मध्वजो नृपः । धर्मध्वजस्य द्वौ पुत्रौ कृतध्वजमितध्वजौ । १९ ।

कृतध्वजात् केशिध्वजः खाण्डिवस्तु मितध्वजात् । कृतध्वजस्तो राजन्नात्मविद्याविशारदः । २० ।
 खाण्डिवः कर्मतत्त्वज्ञो भीतः केशिध्वजाद् द्रुतः । भानुमांस्तस्य पुत्रोऽभूच्छतद्व्युप्रस्तु तत्सुतः । २१ ।
 शुचिस्तत्तनयस्तस्मात् सनद्वाजस्ततोऽभवत् । ऊर्ध्वकेतुः सनद्वाजादजोऽथ पुरजित्सुतः । २२ ।
 अरिष्टनेमिस्तस्यापि श्रुतायुस्तत्पुण्ड्रकः । ततश्चित्ररथो यस्य क्षेमधिमिथिलाधिपः । २३ ।
 तस्मात् समरथस्तस्य सुतः सत्यरथस्ततः । आसीदुपगुरुस्तस्मादुपगुप्तोऽग्रिंसंभवः । २४ ।
 वस्वनन्तोऽथ तत्पुत्रो युयुधो यत् सुभाषणः । श्रुतस्ततो जयस्तस्माद् विजयोऽस्मादृतः सुतः । २५ ।
 शुनकस्तत्सुतो जज्ञे वीतहव्यो धृतिस्ततः । बहुलाश्वो धृतेस्तस्य कृतिरस्य महावशी । २६ ।
 एते वै मैथिला राजन्नात्मविद्याविशारदाः । योगेश्वरप्रसादेन द्वन्द्वैर्मुक्ता गृहेष्वपि । २७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे निमिर्वंशानुवर्णनं नाम त्रयोदशोऽध्यायः । १३ ।

Of Janaka was born Udāvasu, whose son was Nandivardhana. From Nandivardhana followed Suketu and his son, again, was Devarāta, O protector of the earth! (14) From (the loins of) Devarāta sprang up Brhadratha, whose son Mahāvīrya was the father of Sudhṛt (Sudhṛti). Sudhṛti's son indeed was Dhṛṣṭaketu. Then came Haryaśwa, of whom was born Maru. (15) Maru's son was Pratipaka, of whom was born Kṛtiratha. From (the loins of) Kṛtiratha sprang up Devamīḍha, whose son was Viśruta, and then came Mahādṛti. (16) Of him was born Kṛtirāta, from whom followed Mahārōma. Again, his son was Swarnarōmā, and Hrasvarōmā was born as his son. (17) Of Hrasvarōmā was born Siradhwaia. (The divine) Sitā (the Spouse of Śrī Rāma) appeared from his ploughshare while he was ploughing the earth for the purpose of a sacrifice; hence he is remembered as Siradhwaia (who owed his celebrity to a plough). (18) His son was Kuśadhwaia, of whom was born King Dharmadhwaia; and Dharmadhwaia had two sons, Kṛtadhwaia and Mitadhwaia (by name). (19) From (the loins of) Kṛtadhwaia sprang up Keśidhwaja and from Mitadhwaia (Kṛtadhwaia's younger brother) followed Khāṇḍikya. (Of these) Keśidhwaja (the son of Kṛtadhwaia), O king, was well-versed in the science of the Spirit. (20) Khāṇḍikya (on the other hand) was proficient in the science of rituals and fled (left his kingdom) for fear of Keśidhwaja. Keśidhwaja's son was Bhānumān, whose son was Śatadyumna. Śatadyumna's son was Śuci, of whom was born Sanadwāja; and from the said Sanadwāja followed Ūrdhvaketu. From Ūrdhvaketu followed Aja and his son was Purujit. (21-22) His son, again, was Aṣṭanemi. From the latter followed Śrutāyu and his son was Supārśwaka. Of the latter was born Citraratha, whose son was Kṣemadhi, the (famous) king of Mithilā. (23) From (the loins of) Kṣemadhi sprang up Samaratha, whose son was Satyaratha. Of Satyaratha was born Upaguru and from him followed Upagupta, who emanated from (a ray of) the god of fire (Agni). (24) Then came Vasvananta and his son was Yuyudha, from whom followed Subhāṣaṇa. Then came Śruta, from whom followed Jaya and from (the loins of) the latter sprang up Vijaya, of whom was born a son, Rta (by name). (25) Then came Śunaka, of whom was born a son Vīṭahavya by name and from him followed Dhṛti. Dhṛti's son was Bahulāśwā, of whom Kṛti was born and from (the loins of) Kṛti sprang up Mahāvaśi. (26) (All) these kings of Mithilā, O king, were really proficient in the knowledge of the Spirit. By the grace of masters of Yoga (like the sage Yājñavalkya) they were rid of pairs of opposites (such as joy and sorrow) even in their household life. (27)

Thus ends the thirteenth discourse entitled "The posterity of Nimi described",
 in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIV

A brief survey of the Lunar Dynasty

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथातः श्रूयतां राजन् वंशः सोमस्य पावनः । यस्मिन्नैलादयो भूपाः कीर्त्यन्ते पुण्यकीर्तयः । १ ।
सहस्रशिरसः पुंसो नाभिहृदसरोरुहात् । जातस्यासीत् सुतो धातुरत्रिः पितृसमो गुणैः । २ ।
तस्य दृग्भ्योऽभवत् पुत्रः सोमोऽमृतमयः किल । विप्रौषध्युगणानां ब्रह्मणा कल्पितः पतिः । ३ ।
सोऽयजद् राजसूयेन विजित्य भुवनत्रयम् । पत्नीं बृहस्पतेर्दर्पात् तारां नामाहरद् बलात् । ४ ।
यदा स देवगुरुणा याचितोऽभीक्ष्णशो मदात् । नात्यजत् तत्कृते जज्ञे सुरदानवविग्रहः । ५ ।
शुक्रो बृहस्पतेर्द्वैपादग्रहीत् सासुरोऽपम् । हरो गुरुसुतं स्नेहात् सर्वभूतगणावृतः । ६ ।
सर्वदेवगणोपेतो महेन्द्रे गुरुमन्वयात् । सुरासुरविनाशोऽभूत् समरस्तारकामयः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Now hereafter hear, O king, of the hallowed race of Soma (the moon-god), in which are mentioned kings of sacred renown such as Aila (King Purūrāvā, the son of Ilā). (1) Of Brahmā (the creator), sprung of the lotus (in the form of the cosmos) evolved out of the pool-like navel of the (supreme) Cosmic person possessed of countless heads, there was a son, Atri (by name), who was a replica of his father in point of excellences. (2) Out of his tears of joy, so the tradition goes, sprang up a son, Soma (by name), who is an embodiment of nectar. He was appointed by Brahmā as the lord of the Brāhmaṇas, herbs and annual plants, as well as of the hosts of stars. (3) Having completely subdued all the three worlds, he worshipped the Lord by means of a Rājāsūya sacrifice and out of arrogance he forcibly carried away the wife of the sage Brhaspati, Tārā (by name). (4) Though solicited time and again by the sage Brhaspati (the preceptor of the gods), he did not leave her through vanity. On that account there ensued a war between the gods and the demons. (5) Due to jealousy towards Brhaspati, Śukrācārya (the preceptor of the demons) together with the Asuras took the side of the moon-god (the ruler of the stars); while Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the Universe), surrounded (accompanied) by all the hosts of ghosts espoused the cause of Brhaspati (son of the sage Ṇgirā, the teacher of Lord Śiva) due to his affection (for Brhaspati). (6) Accompanied by all the hosts of heaven, the mighty Indra followed Brhaspati. (In this way) there raged a battle for the sake of Tārā, which caused the annihilation of (both) the gods and the Asuras. (7)

निवेदितोऽथाङ्गिरसा सोमं निर्भर्त्य विश्वकृत् । तारां स्वभर्त्रे प्रायच्छदन्तर्वत्नीमवैत् पतिः । ८ ।
त्यज त्यजाशु दुष्मज्ञे मक्षेत्रादाहितं परैः । नाहं त्वां भस्मसात् कुर्यां स्त्रियं सान्त्वानिकः सति । ९ ।
तत्याज व्रीडिता तारा कुमारं कनकप्रभम् । स्पृहामाङ्गिरसश्चक्रे कुमारे सोम एव च । १० ।
ममायं न तवेत्युच्चैस्तस्मिन् विवदमानयोः । पप्रच्छुर्ऋषयो देवा नैवोचे व्रीडिता तु सा । ११ ।
कुमारो मातरं प्राह कुपितोऽलीकलजया । किं न वोचस्यसद्वृते आत्मावद्यं वदाशु मे । १२ ।
ब्रह्मा तां रह आहूय समप्राक्षीच्च सान्वयन् । सोमस्येत्याह शनैः सोमस्तं तावदग्रहीत् । १३ ।
तस्यात्मनोऽनिरकृतं बुध इत्यभिधां नृप । बुद्ध्या गम्भीरया येन पुत्रेणापोऽङ्गारमुदम् । १४ ।
ततः पुरुषा जज्ञे इलायां य उदाहृतः । तस्य रूपगुणौदार्यशीलद्रविणविक्रमान् । १५ ।
श्रुत्वोर्वशीन्द्रभवने गीयमानान् सुरर्षिणा । तदन्तिकमुपेयाय देवी स्मरशरादिता । १६ ।

मित्रावरुणयोः शापादापन्ना नरलोकताम्। निशम्य पुरुषश्रेष्ठं कन्दर्पमिव रूपिणम्।

धृतिं विष्टभ्य ललना उपतस्थे तदन्तिके। १७।

स तां विलोक्य नृपतिर्हिणोत्फुल्ललोचनः। उवाच श्लक्ष्णया वाचा देवीं हृष्टनूरुहः। १८।

Now, apprised of the (whole) situation by the sage Aṅgirā, Brahmā (the creator of the universe) harshly rebuked Soma and had Tārā restored to her husband, who perceived her to be enceinte. (8) (He said to her), "Cast away, cast away at once from my soil, O evil-minded one! the seed sown by others. I am not going to burn you a woman, O good lady, anxious as I am to have children (through you)." (9) Full of shame, Tārā brought forth a son effulgent as gold. The sage Brhaspati (son of Aṅgirā) as well as Soma conceived a longing for the boy. (10) While the two were hotly disputing with regard to the child, each saying, "It is mine, not yours!" sages and gods questioned her (as to whose progeny it was). She, however, said nothing, overcome as she was by shame. (11) Full of wrath the child said to the mother, "Why do you out of false modesty not speak (the truth), O immoral woman! (Therefore) tell me of your sin at once." (12) Calling her aside and reassuring her, Brahmā gently interrogated her. She (then) gradually intimated that the child belonged to Soma, on which Soma took possession of the child. (13) Brahmā (the self-born) gave him the name of Budha (the wise one), in virtue of his profound wisdom, O protector of men! From this son, the moon-god (the king of the stars) derived (great) joy. (14) Of Budha was born, through Ilā, Purūravā, who has already been referred to." Smitten with shafts of jove to hear of his personal charm, excellences, liberality, amiable disposition, affluence and valour, which were being extolled by the celestial sage (Nārada), in the court of Indra (the lord of paradise), the celestial nymph Urvaśī sought his presence. (15-16) Having developed a human disposition, thanks to the curse of the gods Mitra and Varuna, that charming damsel saw Purūravā (the foremost of men), who was as handsome as Love, and, controlling herself, arrived in his presence. (17) Seeing that celestial nymph, Purūravā spoke to her in a polite language (as follows), his eyes blooming with delight and the hair of his body standing on end. (18)

राजोवाच

स्वागतं ते वराग्रेहे आस्यतां करवाम किम्। संरम्य मया साकं रतिर्नो शाश्वतीः समाः। १९।

The king said : I welcome you, O charming one, let yourself be (comfortably) seated. What shall we do for you ? Revel with me here. Let our enjoyment extend over numberless years. (19)

उर्वश्युवाच

कस्यास्त्वयि न सजेत मनो दृष्टिश्च सुन्दर। यदङ्गान्तरमासाद्य च्यवते ह रिरंसया। २०।

एतावुरणको राजन् न्यासौ रक्षस्व मानद। संरम्ये भवता साकं श्लाघ्यः स्त्रीणां वरः स्मृतः। २१।

धृतं मे वीर भक्ष्यं स्यान्नेक्षे त्वान्यत्र मैथुनात्। विवाससं तत् तथेति प्रतिपेदे महामनाः। २२।

अहो रूपमहो भावो नरलोकविमोहनम्। को न सेवेत मनुजो देवीं त्वां स्वयमागताम्। २३।

तया स पुरुषश्रेष्ठो रमयन्त्या यथार्हतः। रेमे सुरविहारेषु कामं चैत्ररथादिषु। २४।

रममाणस्तया देव्या पद्मकिञ्चल्कगन्धया। तन्मुखामोदमुषितो मुमुदेऽर्हणान् बहून्। २५।

अपश्यन्नुर्वशीमिन्द्रो गन्धर्वान् समचोदयत्। उर्वशीरहितं मह्यमास्थानं नतिशोभते। २६।

त उपेत्य महारात्रे तमसि प्रत्युपस्थिते। उर्वश्या उरणीं जह्व्यस्तौ राजनि जायया। २७।

निशम्याक्रन्दितं देवी पुत्रयोर्नीयमानयोः। हतास्यहं कुनाथेन नपुंसा वीरमानिना। २८।

यद्विश्रम्भादहं नष्टा हतापत्या च दस्युभिः । यः शेते निशि संरस्तो यथा नारी दिवा पुमान् । २९ ।
 इति वाक्सायकैर्विद्धः प्रतोत्रैरिव कुञ्जरः । निशि निखिंशमादाय विबल्लोऽभ्यव्रदं रुषा । ३० ।
 ते विसृज्योरणौ तत्र व्यद्योतन्त स्म विद्युतः । आदाय मेधावायान्तं नम्रमैक्षत सा पतिम् । ३१ ।

Urvaśī replied : Whose mind and eyes will not be riveted on you, O handsome prince? Lo! on (mentally) reaching your bosom, my presence of mind leaves me, seized as I am with a longing to enjoy life with you. (20) Please take care, O king showing honour to others, of these two rams as my pledges. (Till then) I shall revel with you; (for) he who is praiseworthy (from the point of view of comeliness and other virtues) has been declared as acceptable to women. (21) Ghee (alone) will be my food, O valiant one, and I should not see you unclothed except during coition. Full of great joy, the king accepted (all) these conditions, saying, "Amen"! (22) "What wonderful beauty, what lovely gesture, that ravish humanity! What human being would not accept you, a celestial lady, come of her own accord?" (23) Along-with her, who delighted him (in everyway) in a befitting manner that jewel among men revelled at will in the pleasure-gardens of the gods such as the Caitraratha (the garden of Kubera). (24) Revelling with that celestial nymph emitting the fragrance of lotus filaments and captivated by the (sweet) odour of her mouth, Purūravā rejoiced for many years. (25) Not finding Urvaśī (in his court) Indra earnestly urged the Gandharvas to look for her, saying:—"Bereft of Urvaśī, my court does not look very charming." (26) Approaching at dead of night, when darkness fully prevailed, they stole away the two rams pledged with the king by his wife Urvaśī. (27) Hearing the scream of the two rams (who were dear as sons), while they were being carried away, Urvaśī (the celestial lady) exclaimed:—"I am robbed of my life (as it were) by my unworthy husband, lacking in manliness though accounting himself a (great) hero. (28) By putting faith in him, I am ruined and have been despoiled by robbers of my rams (who were dear as my own progeny). At night he sleeps in fright like a woman and behaves as a man during the day time." (29) Thus pierced with arrows in the form of pungent words as an elephant with goads, and seizing a sword, Purūravā angrily rushed forth in (that dark) night with no clothes on. (30) Leaving the rams on that (very) spot, the Gandharvas shone brightly like flashes of lightning, so that (in the light shed by them) Urvaśī saw her husband coming back in state of nature taking the rams (with him) and left for heaven. (31)

ऐलेोऽपि शयने जायामपश्यन् विमना इव । तच्चित्तो विह्वलः शोचन् बभ्रामोन्मत्तवन्महीम् । ३२ ।

स तां वीक्ष्य कुरुक्षेत्रे सरस्वत्यां च तत्सखीः । पञ्च प्रहृष्टवदनाः प्राह सुक्तं पुरुरवाः । ३३ ।

अहो जाये तिष्ठ तिष्ठ घोरे न त्यक्तुमर्हसि । मां त्वमद्याप्यनिर्वृत्य वचांसि कृणवावहै । ३४ ।

सुदेहोऽयं पतत्यत्र देवि दूरं हतस्त्वया । खादत्येनं वृका गुध्रास्त्वत्प्रसादस्य नास्पदम् । ३५ ।

Not finding his wife in the bed, Purūravā (the son of Ilā) appeared like one out of wits, his mind being fixed on her. Restless and grieving for her, he ranged over the globe like a madman. (32) Seeing her as well as her five female companions with their faces lit with keen delight (on one occasion) at Kurukṣetra on the bank of the Sarasvatī, Purūravā uttered the (following) adaptation of a famous Vedic text:—(33) Oh! my darling, Stop! Stop!! Having remained ungratified (yourself) till now, you ought not to consign me (as well) to misery. Let us have a (heart-to-heart) talk. (34) Drawn away too far, this charming body of mine will fall here, O celestial lady! (Nay,) wolves and vultures will devour it since it is no longer the recipient of your favour. (35)

उर्वर्युवाच

मा मृधाः पुरुषोऽसि त्वं मा स्म त्वाद्युर्वका इमे । क्वापि सरथं न वै स्त्रीणां वृकाणां हृदयं यथा । ३६ ।

स्त्रियो ह्यकरुणाः क्रूरा दुर्भारः प्रियसाहसाः । ग्रन्थ्यल्पार्थेऽपि विश्रब्धं पतिं भ्रातरमप्युत । ३७ ।

विधायालीकविश्रमभ्रमज्ञेषु त्यक्तसौहृदाः । नवं नवमभीप्सन्त्यः पुंश्चल्यः स्वैरवृत्तयः । ३८।

संवत्सरान्ते हि भवानेकरात्रं मयेश्वर । वत्स्यत्यपत्यानि च ते भविष्यन्त्यपराणि भोः । ३९।

Urvaśī replied : Do not die, a man that you are; nor let these wolves (in the form of the turbulent senses) eat you up. Indeed there is no friendly feeling for anyone in women, their heart being akin to that of wolves. (36) Women kill for the sake of even a trifle their trusting husband or even a brother; for they are merciless, cruel, not easily forgiving, (and) ready to take great risks for their beloved objects. (37) Having cast away (all) friendly feeling after inspiring confidence in ignorant people through deceit and ever longing newer and newer lovers, immoral women lead a wanton life. (38) At the end of a year you will cohabit with me for a single night, O powerful lord; and you will have other issues too (in addition to the one already conceived by me through union with you). (39)

अन्तर्वत्नीमुपालक्ष्य देवीं स प्रययौ पुरम् । पुनस्तत्र गतोऽद्धान्त उर्वशीं वीरमातरम् । ४०।

उपलभ्य मुदा युक्तः समुवास तया निशाम् । अर्थैनमुर्वशीं प्राह कृपणं विरहातुरम् । ४१।

गन्धर्वानुपधावेमांस्तुभ्यं दास्यन्ति मामिति । तस्य संस्तुवतस्तुष्टा अग्निस्थालीं ददुर्नुप ।

उर्वशीं मन्यमानस्तां सोऽबुध्यत चरन् वने । ४२।

स्थालीं न्यस्य वने गत्वा गृहानाध्यायतो निशि । त्रेतायां संप्रवृत्तायां मनसि त्रय्यवर्तत । ४३।

स्थालीस्थानं गतोऽश्वत्थं शमीगर्भं विलक्ष्य सः । तेन द्वे अरणी कृत्वा उर्वशीलोककाम्यया । ४४।

उर्वशीं मन्त्रतो ध्यायन्नधरारणिमुत्तराम् । आत्मानमुभयोर्मध्ये यत् तत् प्रजननं प्रभुः । ४५।

तस्य निर्मन्थनाजातो जातवेदा विभावसुः । त्रय्या स विद्यया राजा पुत्रत्वे कल्पितस्त्रिवृत् । ४६।

तेनायजत यज्ञेशं भगवन्तमधोक्षजम् । उर्वशीलोकमन्विच्छन् सर्वदेवमयं हरिम् । ४७।

एक एव पुरा वेदः प्रणवः सर्ववाङ्मयः । देवो नारायणो नान्य एकोऽग्निर्वर्ण एव च । ४८।

पुरूरवस एवासीत् त्रयी त्रेतामुखे नृप । अग्निना प्रजया राजा लोकं गान्धर्वमेयिवान् । ४९।

इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो सहितायां नवमस्कन्धे ऐलोपाख्याने चतुर्दशोऽध्यायः । १४।

Perceiving Urvaśī (the celestial lady) to be gravid, Purūrāvā returned to his capital. Going there (to Kurukṣetra) once more at the end of a year, he found Urvaśī the mother of a hero and, full of joy, cohabited with her for the night. Finding him impatient at his separation from her and (therefore) afflicted, (the next day), Urvaśī lovingly said to him as follows:—"Propitiate these Gandharvas (by means of prayer and so on) and they will hand me over to you." (40-41) Pleased with him (even) while he was glorifying them, they bestowed on him, O protector of men, a vessel holding fire (for the purpose of propitiating it and thereby attaining to the realm of Urvaśī). Thinking the vessel to be Urvaśī (blinded as he was with passion), and roaming about in the forest with that vessel, he discovered the reality of the vessel (when he was just going to embrace it sexually, taking it to be Urvaśī). (42) Leaving the vessel in the forest, he returned home and began contemplating on Urvaśī at night. (In the meantime) when the Tretā age commenced (at the end of Satyayuga), the knowledge of the science of rituals (as represented by the three Vedas—Ṛk, Yajus and Sāma), dawned on his mind. (43) Going to the spot where he had left the vessel, and perceiving (there) a peepul tree sprouting from inside a Śāmi tree, he hewed out of it a pair of Araṇis (churning sticks) for kindling fire by attrition. (44) (Then) visualizing the lower Araṇi to be Urvaśī, and the upper one as his own self and the piece that intervened the two as their son, the king churned them with a longing to reach the realm of Urvaśī, uttering sacred texts (detailing the procedure of producing fire through such churning). (45) As a result of his churning was produced a flame of fire, which is known by the name of Jātaavedā (that which has everything created in this universe by way of its property or food). Through the ceremony of consecration (as enjoined by the three Vedas) it was adopted by the king (Purūravā) in three forms (viz., the Āhavanīya, the Gārhapatya and the Dākṣiṇāgni) as his son (because leading to sacred regions above). (46) Seeking after the realm of Urvaśī, Purūravā worshipped by means of that fire Lord Śrī Hari, the Ruler of sacrifices (the Bestower of their fruit), who is above sense-perception and represents all the gods in His person. (47) Of yore (before the time of Purūravā) there was but one Veda in the form of Praṇava (the mystical syllable OM), the seed of all speech; there was one deity, Nārāyaṇa, and no other; there was but one fire (and not three) and only one caste known as the Harisās. (48) The three Vedas (the cult of rituals expounded by them) came into being from Purūravā alone at the dawn of the Tretā age, O protector of men, and the king attained (after death) to the realm of the Gandharvas by means of the sacred fire, adopted by him as his son. (49)

Thus ends the fourteenth discourse bearing (inter alia) on the story of Purūravā (the son of Ilā), in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XV

The stories of Ṛcika, Jamadagni and Paraśurāma

श्रीशुक उवाच

ऐलस्य चोर्वशीर्भातु षडासन्नात्मजा नृप । आयुः श्रुतायुः सत्यायू रयोऽथ विजयो जयः । १ ।
श्रुतायोर्वसुमान् पुनः सत्यायोश्च श्रुतज्ञयः । रयस्य सुत एकश्च जयस्य तनयोऽमितः । २ ।
भीमस्तु विजयस्याथ काञ्चनो होत्रकस्ततः । तस्य जह्नुः सुतो गङ्गां गण्ढीकृत्य योऽपिबत् ।
जह्नुस्तु पूरुस्तत्पुत्रो बलाकश्चात्मजोऽजकः । ३ ।

ततः कुशः कुशस्यापि कुशाम्बुस्तनयो वसुः । कुशनाभश्च चत्वारो गाधिरासीत् कुशाम्बुजः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Purūravā (the son of Ilā), again, O protector of men, had by Urvaśī six sons, Āyu, Śrutāyu, Satyāyu, Raya, Vijaya and Jaya. (1) Vasumān was the son of Śrutāyu and Śrutāñjaya, of Satyāyu. Raya's son was Eka and Jaya's son was Amita. (2) Again, Bhīma was the son of Vijaya; from Vijaya followed Kāñcana and of Kāñcana was born Hotra. Hotra's son was Jahnu, who took the (holy) Gaṅgā in the hollow of his palms and quaffed it. Again, Jahnu's son was Pūru, whose son was Balāka, and the latter's son was Aja. (3) Then came Kuśa; from (the loins of) Kuśa, again, sprang up four sons—Kuśāmbu, Tanaya, Vasu and Kuśanābha. Gādhī was the son of Kuśāmbu. (4)

तस्य सत्यवतीं कन्यामृचीकोऽयाचत द्विजः । वरं विसदृशं मत्वा गाधिर्भागवमब्रवीत् । ५ ।
एकतः श्यामकर्णानां हयानां चन्द्रवर्चसाम् । सहस्रं दीयतां शुल्कं कन्यायाः कुशिका वयम् । ६ ।
इत्युक्तस्तन्यतं ज्ञात्वा गतः स वरुणान्तिकम् । आनीय दत्त्वा तानद्यानुपवेमे वराननाम् । ७ ।
स ऋषिः प्रार्थितः पत्न्या श्वश्रवा चापत्यकाम्यया । श्रपयित्वोभयैर्मन्त्रैश्चरुं स्नातुं गतो मुनिः । ८ ।
तावत् सत्यवतीं मात्रा स्वचरं याचिता सती । श्रेष्ठं मत्वा तयायच्छन्मात्रे मातुर्दत्तं स्वयम् । ९ ।

तद् विज्ञाय मुनिः प्राह पत्नीं कष्टमकारषीः । घोरो दण्डधरः पुत्रो भ्राता ते ब्रह्मवित्तमः । १० ।
 प्रसादितः सत्यवत्या मेवं भूदिति भार्गवः । अथ तर्हि भवेत् पौत्रो जमदग्निस्ततोऽभवत् । ११ ।
 सा चाभूत् सुमहापुण्या कौशिकी लोकपावनी । रेणोः सुतां रेणुकां वै जमदग्निरुवाह याम् । १२ ।
 तस्यां वै भार्गवऋषेः सुता वसुमदादयः । यवीयाञ्जल एतेषां राम इत्यभिषिञ्चतः । १३ ।
 यमाहुर्वासुदेवांश्च हहयानां कुलान्तकम् । त्रिःसप्तकृत्वो य इमां चक्रे निःक्षत्रियां महीम् । १४ ।
 दुष्टं क्षत्रं भुवो भारमब्रह्मण्यमनीनशत् । रजस्तमोवृत्तमहन् फल्गुन्यपि कृतोऽहसि । १५ ।

A Brāhmaṇa, the sage R̥cika, asked in marriage Gādhi's daughter, Satyavatī. Considering him to be an unworthy match, Gādhi spoke to R̥cika (a scion of the sage Bhṛgu, as follows):— (5) "Let a thousand horses, white as the moon, (each) having one black ear, be given as the price of the girl; (for) we belong to the race of Kuśika (renowned for our noble pedigree)." (6) Thus spoken to and having come to know his mind, the sage sought the presence of Varuṇa (the god of water) and, having brought and delivered the horses of the aforesaid description, married that lovely princess. (7) Entreated by his wife (Satyavatī) as well as by his mother-in-law, each of whom was desirous of (having) a son, he prepared a Caru (an oblation of rice, barley and pulse boiled with butter and milk for presentation to the gods), uttering both kinds of Mantras (those invoking the birth of a Brāhmaṇa for his wife and that of a Kṣatriya for his mother-in-law), and went out to bathe. (8) Meanwhile, being solicited by her aforesaid mother, who (naturally) thought the Caru prepared for her daughter as superior (because of the sage's affection for her), Satyavatī (the sage's wife) gave the Caru meant for herself to her mother and herself ate that intended for her mother. (9) The sage having understood this (exchange of Caru between his wife and mother-in-law) politely said to his wife, "You have committed a grave blunder. Your son will be a cruel chastiser (of foes); (while) your brother will be one foremost among the knowers of Brahma." (10) Implored by Satyavatī in the words "Let this not be", the sage R̥cika (a scion of the sage Bhṛgu) said, "If so, then your grandson will be such. Accordingly Jamadagni was born (of Satyavatī). (11) And Satyavatī became transformed into the most sacred river Kauśiki (Kosī), capable of sanctifying the (whole) world. Indeed, of the sage Jamadagni were born through Reṇukā, the daughter of Reṇu—whom the aforesaid sage had duly married—(a number of) sons, Vasumān and others. The youngest of these became widely celebrated under the name of Rāma (Paraśurāma), whom the learned speak of as a part manifestation of Lord Vāsudeva (Viṣṇu) and the destroyer of the race of the Haihayas, (nay) who divested this earth of the Kṣatriya race thrice seven (twenty-one) times and struck and exterminated the wicked Kṣatriyas, that had turned hostile to the Brāhmaṇas and constituted a (veritable) burden on the earth—enveloped (overcome) as they were by the (element of) Rajas (passion) and Tamas (ignorance)—even though they committed the slightest offence. (12—15)

राजोवाच

किं तदहो भगवतो राजन्यैरजितात्मभिः । कृतं येन कुलं नष्टं क्षत्रियाणामभीक्ष्णशः । १६ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : What was that offence which was committed against the glorious sage (Paraśurāma) by Kṣatriyas of uncontrolled mind, for which (the entire) race of the Kṣatriyas was wiped out (by him) time and again ? (16)

श्रीशुक उवाच

हहयानामधिपतिरजुनः क्षत्रियर्षभः । दत्तं नारायणस्यांशमाराध्य परिकर्मभिः । १७ ।
 बाहून् दशशतं लेभे दुर्धर्षत्वमरातिषु । अव्याहतेन्द्रियौजःश्रीतेजोवीर्यशोबलम् । १८ ।
 योगेश्वरत्वमैश्वर्यं गुणा यन्नाणिमादयः । चक्षाराव्याहतगतिलोकेषु पवनो यथा । १९ ।

स्त्रीरत्नेरावृतः क्रीडन् रेवाम्भसि मदोत्कटः । वैजयन्तीं स्रजं बिभ्रद् रुरोध सरितं भुजैः । १२० ।
 विप्लावितं स्वशिबिरं प्रतिक्षोतेःसरिजलैः । नामृष्यत् तस्य तद् वीर्यं वीरमानी दशाननः । १२१ ।
 गृहीतो लीलया स्त्रीणां समक्षं कृतकिल्बिषः । माहिषत्यां संनिरुद्धो मुक्तो येन कपिर्यथा । १२२ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Having propitiated Lord Datta (better known as Dattātreyā), a part manifestation of Lord Nārāyaṇa, through acts of worship, Arjuna, the jewel among the Kṣatriyas and the then ruler of the Haihayas, had secured a thousand arms, formidableness in the eyes of foes, uninterrupted soundness of the senses and organs of action, affluence, glory, prowess, fame and bodily strength, mastery of Yoga and superhuman power which was characterized by virtues such as the capacity to assume an atomic form. His movement being unimpeded (everywhere), he went about the worlds like the wind. (17—19) Sporting in the water of the Revā (Narmadā), surrounded by jewels among women and intoxicated with excessive pride, King Arjuna, who wore a necklace made of precious stones of the (well-known) nine varieties, obstructed (the stream of) the river with his (thousand) arms. (20) Finding his (military) encampment inundated by the water of the river flowing upwards, Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), who thought himself to be a (great) hero, did not brook this (show of) valour (on the part) of Arjuna. (21) Having offended against Arjuna, Rāvaṇa was seized by way of sport in the presence of those women (by Arjuna) and was imprisoned in Māhiṣmatī (his capital) like a monkey and (eventually) set free. (22)

स एकदा तु मृगयां विचरन् विपिने वने । यदृच्छयाऽऽश्रमपदं जमदग्नेरुपाविशत् । १२३ ।
 तस्मै स नरेदेवाय मुनिर्हणमाहरत् । ससैन्यामात्यवाहाय हविष्यत्या तपोधनः । १२४ ।
 स वीरस्तत्र तद् दृष्ट्वा आत्मैश्वर्यातिशायनम् । तन्नाद्रियतामिहोत्र्यां साभिलाषः स हैहयः । १२५ ।
 हविर्धानीमृषेर्दोषांश्चरान् हर्तुमचोदयत् । ते च माहिषतीं निन्युः सवत्सां क्रन्दतीं बलात् । १२६ ।
 अथ राजनि नियतिं राम आश्रम आगतः । श्रुत्वा तत् तस्य दोरात्म्यं चुक्रोधाहिरिवाहतः । १२७ ।
 घोरमादाय परशुं सत्तुणं चर्मं कार्मुकम् । अन्वधावत् दुर्धर्षो मृगेन्द्र इव यूथपम् । १२८ ।

Ranging in a dense forest in pursuit of game, on one occasion, Arjuna for his part found his way perchance into the precincts of the hermitage of the sage Jamadagni. (23) By the good offices of Kāmadhenu (the cow of plenty) the sage, rich in asceticism, extended his hospitality to that ruler of men including his army, ministers and animals carrying them. (24) Seeing that affluence (of the sage), which surpassed his own, in that hermitage, and full of longing for the cow of plenty (which was so useful for Agnihotra or pouring oblations into the sacred fire, and which was responsible for all the affluence displayed by the sage), the hero (Arjuna) including the (other) Haihayas (his kinsmen that had accompanied him in his hunting expedition) did not make much of that hospitality. (25) In his arrogance the king (did not think it necessary to seek the permission of the sage and) commanded his men to take away the cow of plenty (lit., a storehouse of milk, ghee and so on, fit for being poured as oblation into the sacred fire). And they (in their turn) forcibly took away to Māhiṣmatī the screaming cow along with its calf. (26) Now, on the king having gone away Rāma (who had been out) returned to the hermitage and, having heard of his aforesaid wickedness, flew into a rage like a serpent that had been hit. (27) Taking his terrible axe, shield and bow with a quiver, the formidable hero pursued the king like a lion (the king of beasts) chasing the leader of a herd of elephants. (28)

तमापतन्तं भृगुवर्यमोजसा धनुर्धरं बाणपरश्वधायुधम् ।
 ऐणेयचर्माम्बरमर्कधामभिर्युतं जटाभिर्ददुशे पुरीं विशन् । १२९ ।
 अचोदयद्धृत्तिरथाश्वपत्तिभिर्गदासिबाणश्रितशक्तिभिः ।

अक्षौहिणीः सप्तदशतिभीषणास्ता राम एको भगवान्सूदयत् । ३० ।
 यतो यतोऽसौ प्रहरत्परश्वधो मनोऽनिलौजाः परचक्रसूदनः ।
 ततस्ततश्छिन्नभुजोरुक्कथरा निपेतुरुर्व्या हतसूतवाहनाः । ३१ ।
 दुष्टा स्वसैन्यं रुधिरौघकदम्बे रणाजिरे रामकुठारसायकैः ।
 विवृक्कचर्मध्वजचापविग्रहं निपातितं हैहय आपतद् रुषा । ३२ ।
 अथार्जुनः पञ्चशतेषु बाहुभिर्धनुःषु बाणान् युगपत् स सन्दधे ।
 रामाय रामोऽस्त्रभृतां समग्रणीस्तान्येकधन्वेषुभिराच्छिनत्समम् । ३३ ।
 पुनः स्वहस्तैरचलान् मृधेऽङ्घ्रिपानुत्क्षिप्य वेगादभिधांवतो युधि ।
 भुजान् कुठारेण कठोरनेमिना चिच्छेद रामः प्रसभं त्वहेरिम् । ३४ ।

कृतबाहोः शिरस्तस्य गिरेः शृङ्गमिवाहरत् । हते पितरि तस्युत्रा अस्युतं दुष्टदुर्भयात् । ३५ ।

(Even) while entering his capital, Arjuna saw rushing with (great) vehemence Paraśurāma (the foremost of the Bhṛgu), wielding a bow and armed with an arrow and an axe, clad in the skin of a black antelope and marked with matted locks brilliant as (the rays of) the sun. (29) Arjuna sent forth (against the intruder) seventeen most formidable Akṣauhīṇis* characterized by elephants, chariots, horses and foot-soldiers and armed with maces, swords, arrows, javelins, Śataghnis (a stone or cylindrical piece of wood studded with iron spikes) and darts. The glorious Rāma destroyed them (all) single-handed. (30) In whatever direction appeared Rāma (the destroyer of hostile armies), quick as mind and the wind, whose axe was (ever) prone to strike, there fell down to the ground warriors with their arms, thighs and necks severed and their charioteers and animals slain. (31) Seeing his army laid low in the battle-field—rendered miry with streams of blood—with their shields, ensigns, bows and bodies cut to pieces by the axe and shafts of Rāma, Arjuna (the chief of the Haihayas) rushed forward in rage. (32) Now, with his (one thousand) arms the celebrated Arjuna synchronously fitted arrows to his five hundred bows in order to pierce Rāma. Rāma (however), who was by far the foremost of those that (ever) wielded missiles and who had (only) one bow, simultaneously cut them down with his arrows. (33) Again, with his hard-edged axe Rāma, for his part, violently lopped off, like the hoods of a serpent, (all the thousand) arms of Arjuna, who came rushing forward in battle with (terrible) speed uprooting with his (numerous) hands rocks and trees on the battle-field. (34) Rāma severed, like the peak of a mountain, the head of Arjuna, whose arms had (thus) been lopped off. On the father having been killed, his ten thousand sons ran away out of fear. (35)

अग्निहोत्रीमुपावर्त्य सवत्सां परवीरहा । समुपेत्याश्रमं पित्रे परिक्लिष्टां समर्पयत् । ३६ ।
 स्वकर्म तत्कृतं रामः पित्रे भ्रातृभ्य एव च । वर्णयामास तच्छ्रुत्वा जमदग्निराषात । ३७ ।
 राम राम महाबाहो भवान् पापमकारषीत् । अवधीन्नरदेवं यत् सर्वदिवयं वृथा । ३८ ।
 वयं हि ब्राह्मणास्तात क्षमयार्हणतां गताः । यया लोकगुर्द्धेवः पारमेष्ठ्यमागत् पदम् । ३९ ।
 क्षमया रोचते लक्ष्मीर्ब्राह्मी सौरी यथा प्रभा । क्षमिणामाशु भगवांस्तुष्यते हरिरीश्वरः । ४० ।
 राज्ञो मूर्धाभिषिक्तस्य वधो ब्रह्मवधाद् गुरुः । तीर्थसंसेवया चाहो जहङ्गाच्युतचेतनः । ४१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे पञ्चदशोऽध्यायः । १५ ।

Bringing back the cow of plenty—sore distressed (at its having been removed by force from the hermitage)—together with her calf, and returning safe to his hermitage, Rāma (the slayer of hostile warriors) duly made her over to his father (sage Jamadagni). (36) Rāma recounted to his father as well as to his (elder) brothers his own achievement and also that which was done by Arjuna. Having heard the account, Jamadagni spoke (as follows):—(37) "Rāma, O Rāma of mighty arms you have committed a (great) sin in that you slew for no purpose a ruler of men, who represented all the gods (in his person). (38) We, Brāhmaṇas, O dear child, have earned a title to adoration through forgiveness alone, by virtue of which Brahmā, the adored of the (whole) world, attained to the position of the supreme ruler (of the universe). (39) Through forgiveness the glory of a Brāhmaṇa shines forth like the brilliance of the sun. (Nay,) with the forgiving the almighty Lord Śrī Hari is quickly pleased. (40) Slaying a king whose head has been (duly) consecrated (at the time of coronation) is more sinful than the killing of a Brāhmaṇa. Therefore, O dear one, atone for the sin by reverently visiting the holy places with your mind fixed on Śrī Viṣṇu (the immortal Lord). (41)

* For the strength of an Akṣauhīṇī see foot-note below I. viii, 48.

Thus ends the fifteenth discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षोडशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVI

Extermination of the Kṣatriyas by Paraśurāma : an account of the posterity of the sage Viśvāmitra

श्रीशुक उवाच

पित्रोपशिक्षितो रामस्तथेति कुरुनन्दन। संवत्सरं तीर्थयात्रां चरित्वाऽऽश्रममाव्रजत् । १ ।
कदाचिद् रेणुका याता गङ्गायां पद्ममालिनम्। गन्धर्वराजं क्रीडन्तमप्सरोभिरपश्यत् । २ ।
विलोकयन्ती क्रीडन्तमुदकार्थं नदीं गता। होमवेलां न सस्मार किञ्चिच्चित्ररथस्पृहा । ३ ।
कालात्ययं तं विलोक्य मुनेः शापविशङ्किता। आगत्य कलशं तस्थौ पुरोधाय कृताञ्जलिः । ४ ।
व्यभिचारं मुनिज्ञात्वा पत्न्याः प्रकृपितोऽब्रवीत्। घ्नतैनां पुत्रकाः पापामित्युक्तास्ते न चक्रिरे । ५ ।
रामः सञ्जोदितः पित्रा भ्रातॄन् मात्रा सहावधीत्। प्रभावज्ञो मुनेः सम्यक् समाधेस्तपसश्च सः । ६ ।
वरेणच्छन्दयामास प्रीतः सत्यवतीसुतः। वव्रे हतानां रामोऽपि जीविनं चास्मृतिं वधे । ७ ।
उत्तस्थुस्ते कुशलिनो निद्रापाय इवाञ्जसा। पितुर्विद्वान्स्तपोवीर्यं रामश्चक्रे सुहृद्बन्धम् । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Admonished by his father (as aforesaid)* and saying "So be it", Paraśurāma returned to his hermitage (only) after having performed pilgrimage for a year, O delight of the Kurus! (1) On a certain day, having gone to the Gaṅgā, Reṇukā (Paraśurāma's mother saw (there) Citraratha (the king of the Gandharvas)—adorned with a lotus garland—sporting with celestial nymphs. (2) It was for water that she had gone to the river. (But) gazing at the sporting Gandharva, she did not remember the time scheduled for offering oblations into the sacred fire (when the water was required by her husband), her heart being seized with a slight longing for Citraratha. (3) Perceiving the delay thus caused, and terribly afraid of the sage's (her husband's) curse, she returned (forthwith) and, placing the pitcher before him, stood with joined palms. (4) Enraged to know (through Yoga) the (mental) lapse of his wife, the sage exclaimed, "My sons! do away with this sinful woman." Though enjoined thus, they did not carry out his command. (5) Peremptorily urged by the father, Paraśurāma, who knew well the power of the sage's deep concentration of mind and austerities killed his brothers alongwith the mother. (6) The gratified Jamadagni (the son of Satyavati) asked him to seek a boon. Rāma for his part requested that those despatched by himself might be restored to life and forget their having been killed (by him). (7) They instantly rose (quite) whole (again) as if after sleep. Paraśurāma put his dear ones to death (only) because he knew the power of his father's austerities. (8)

* Vide verses 38—41 of Discourse XV above.

येऽर्जुनस्य सुता राजन् स्मरन्तः स्वपितुर्वधम् । रामवीर्यपराभूता लेभिरे शर्म न क्वचित् । १ ।
एकदाऽऽश्रमतो रामे सभ्रातरि वनं गते । वैरं सिसाधयिषवो लब्धच्छिद्रा उपागमन् । १० ।
दृष्ट्वान्यगार आसीनमावेशिताधियं मुनिम् । भगवत्युत्तमश्लोके जयुते पापनिश्चयाः । ११ ।
याच्यमानाः कृपणया राममात्रातिदारुणाः । प्रसह्य शिर उक्कृत्य निन्युते क्षत्रबन्धवः । १२ ।
रेणुका दुःखशोकार्ता निघ्नन्त्याऽऽत्मानमात्मना । राम रामेहि तातेति विचुक्रोशोष्कैः सती । १३ ।
तदुग्रश्रुत्य दूरस्थो हा रामेत्यातवत्त्वनम् । त्वरयाऽऽश्रममासाद्य ददृशे पितरं हतम् । १४ ।
तद् दुःखरोषामर्षातिशोकवेगविमोहितः । हा तात साधो धर्मिष्ठ त्वयत्वात्मान्स्वर्गतो भवान् । १५ ।
विलयैवं पितुर्दहं निधाय भ्रातृषु स्वयम् । प्रगृह्य परशुं रामः क्षत्रान्ताय मनो दधे । १६ ।

Those sons of Arjuna that had been vanquished by Rāma's valour found peace nowhere, recollecting as they did the death of their father (at the hands of Paraśurāma), O king! (9) One day, when Paraśurāma, alongwith his (elder) brothers, had gone to the woods from his hermitage, Arjuna's sons (who were anxious to repay their grudge) came to the hermitage, finding a suitable opportunity (to accomplish their object). (10) Perceiving the sage seated in the hut consecrated to the sacrificial fire, with his mind fixed on the Lord of sacred renown, they of sinful resolve made short work of him. (11) Though entreated by the helpless mother of Paraśurāma (to spare her husband), those vile and extremely heartless Kṣatriyas forcibly lopped off the sage's head and took it away (with them). (12) Stricken with agony and grief and violently beating herself with her hands, the virtuous Reṇukā loudly and plaintively cried, "Rāma ! O Rāma !! Come, dear child !!!" (13) Attentively hearing that cry of "Oh Rāma!" uttered as though by one in distress, Paraśurāma, who was at a distance, hastily returned to the hermitage and beheld his father done to death. (14) Utterly confounded with an outburst of agony, anger, indignation, affliction and grief, Paraśurāma then cried:—"Ah noble and most virtuous father, leaving us, you have ascended to heaven!" (15) Wailing thus, he himself tightly gripped his battle-axe and, entrusting the father's dead body to the care of his brothers, made up his mind to extirpate the Kṣatriya race". (16)

गत्वा माहिषतीं रामो ब्रह्मघ्नविहतश्रियम् । तेषां स शीर्षभी राजन् मध्ये चक्रे महागिरिम् । १७ ।
तद्रक्तेन नदीं घोरामब्रह्मण्यभयावहाम् । हेतुं कृत्वा पितृवधे क्षत्रेऽमङ्गलकारिणि । १८ ।
त्रिःसप्तकृत्वः पृथिवीं कृत्वा निःक्षत्रियां प्रभुः । समन्तपङ्कके चक्रे शोणितोदानं हृदान् नृप । १९ ।
पितुः कायेन सन्धाय शिर आदाय बर्हिषि । सर्वदेवमयं देवमात्मानमयजन्मरैः । २० ।
ददौ प्राचीं दिशं होत्रे ब्रह्मणे दक्षिणां दिशम् । अध्वर्यवे प्रतीचीं वै उद्गत्रे उत्तरां दिशम् । २१ ।

* Tradition says that in her deep agony caused by her husband's brutal murder Rāma's mother beat her breast twenty-one times. In order to pacify her, Paraśurāma too wiped out the Kṣatriya race as many times.

अन्येभ्योऽजान्तरदिशः कश्यपाय च मध्यतः । आर्यावर्तमुपद्रष्टे सदस्येभ्यस्ततः परम् । २२ ।
 ततश्चावभृथस्नानविधुताशेषकिल्बिषः । सरस्वत्यां ब्रह्मनद्यां रेजे व्यभ्र इवांशुमान् । २३ ।
 स्वदेहं जमदग्निस्तु लब्ध्वा संज्ञानलक्षणम् । ऋषीणां मण्डले सोऽभूत् सप्तमो रामपूजितः । २४ ।
 जामदग्न्योऽपि भगवान् रामः कमललोचनः । आगामिन्यन्तरे राजन् वर्तयिष्यति वै बृहत् । २५ ।
 आसेऽद्यापि महेन्द्राद्रौ न्यस्तदण्डः प्रशान्तधीः । उपगीयमानचरितः सिद्धगन्धर्वचारणैः । २६ ।
 एवं भृगुषु विश्वात्मा भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । अवतीर्य परं भारं भुवोऽहन् बहुशो नृपान् । २७ ।

Going to Māhiṣmatī (that had been) completely robbed of its splendour by the (sin of the) murderers of a Brāhmaṇa (sage), Paraśurāma raised in the heart of the city a huge mountain of their heads and with their blood created a ghastly river that inspired terror into (the heart of) Brāhmaṇa-haters. Making the murder of his father an excuse—on the Kṣatriyas having taken to unrighteous ways—the mighty Paraśurāma rid the globe of the Kṣatriyas thrice seven times and (from their blood) created at Samantapañcaka (Kurukṣetra) tanks filled with blood instead of water, O protector of men ! (17—19) Having brought (back) the head of his father, Paraśurāma joined it to his trunk and, placing his body on (blades of) the sacred Kuśa grass, propitiated through (a number of) sacrifices the (supreme) Deity, his own Self, who represents all the gods in His person. (20) (At the end of these sacrifices) he actually gave away the eastern quarter to the Hotā, the southern to the Brahṃā, the western to the Adhvaryu (and) the northern to the Udgātā. (21) He bestowed the intermediate corners on the other priests, the central region on the sage Kaśyapa, the Āryāvarta (the tract of land bounded on the north by the Himālayas and on the south by the Vindhya mountains), on the Upadraṣṭā (the supervisor) and the region beyond (viz., that lying to the south of the Vindhya range) on the Sadasyas (superintending priests). (22) And then, having washed off his entire sin (incurred by killing numberless Kṣatriyas) through a bath, taken at the conclusion of the sacrifices in (the waters of) the Sarasvatī, a river representing the Vedas, he shone like the cloudless sun. (23) Having regained his own body (which was now completely) spiritualized (consisting as it did of consciousness alone), Jamadagni too, the adored of Paraśurāma, became the seventh in the group of the seven seers (looking after the welfare of the universe). (24) Indeed, Jamadagni's son, the worshipful Paraśurāma too, who has eyes beautiful as a pair of lotuses, will propagate the Vedas (as one of the seven seers), O king, in the ensuing Manvantara. (25) He stays even to this day on Mount Mahendra, having renounced (all forms of) violence and with a perfectly serene mind, his exploits being sung by Siddhas, Gandharvas and Cāraṇas. (26) Descending in the midst of the Bhrgus, the almighty Lord Śrī Hari, the Soul of the universe, thus slew several times kings (Kṣatriyas) who constituted a great burden on the (bosom of the) earth. (27)

गाधेरभूमहातेजाः समिद्ध इव पावकः । तपसा क्षात्रमुत्सृज्य यो लेभे ब्रह्मवर्चसम् । २८ ।
 विश्वामित्रस्य जैवासन् पुत्रा एकशतं नृप । मध्यमस्तु मधुच्छन्दा मधुच्छन्दस एव ते । २९ ।
 पुत्रं कृत्वा शुनःशेषं देवरातं च भार्गवम् । आजीगर्तं सुतानाह ज्येष्ठ एष प्रकल्प्यताम् । ३० ।
 यो वै हरिश्चन्द्रमखे विक्रीतः पुरुषः पशुः । स्तुत्वा देवान् प्रजेशादीन् मुमुषे पाशबन्धनात् । ३१ ।
 यो रातो देवयजने देवैर्गाधिषु तापसः । देवरात इति ख्यातः शुनःशेषः स भार्गवः । ३२ ।
 ये मधुच्छन्दसो ज्येष्ठाः कुशलं मेनिरे न तत् । अशपत् तान्मुनिः क्रुद्धो म्लेच्छा भवत दुर्जनाः । ३३ ।
 स होवाच मधुच्छन्दाः सार्धं पञ्चाशता ततः । यन्नो भवान् संजानीते तस्मिंस्तिष्ठामहे वयम् । ३४ ।
 ज्येष्ठं मन्त्रदृशं चक्रुस्त्वामन्वञ्चो वयं स्म हि । विश्वामित्रः सुतानाह वीरवन्तो भविष्यथ ।

ये मानं येऽनुगृह्णन्तो वीरवन्तमकर्तं माम् । ३५ ।

एष वः कुशिका वीरो देवरातस्तमन्वित । अन्ये चाष्टकहारीतजयक्रतुमदादयः । ३६ ।

एवं कौशिकगोत्रं तु विश्वामित्रैः पृथग्विधम् । प्रवरात्तरमापन्नं तद्धि चैवं प्रकल्पितम् । ३७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे षोडशोऽध्यायः । १६ ।

Gādhī's son was (the celebrated sage) Viśwāmītra possessed of extraordinary effulgence, like a blazing fire, who, shedding his Kṣatriyahood, attained Brahmanical glory through (his) asceticism. (28) And Viśwāmītra had one hundred and one sons, O protector of men! The fifty-first son (who formed the middle of the whole lot, was (named) Madhucchandā; (hence) they (all) came to be known as Madhucchandās. (29) Adopting Ajigarta's son Śunaḥśepa, also known as Devarāta, a scion of the sage Bhṛgu, as his own son, the sage Viśwāmītra said to his sons, "Let this boy be treated as the eldest (of you all)." (30) He was the same Śunaḥśepa (a descendant of Bhṛgu) who was sold (by his parents) to be used as a human victim in the sacrificial performance of King Hariścandra.* (Having sought the protection of Viśwāmītra,) he was freed from bond in the shape of a cord by extolling (as instructed by Viśwāmītra) gods such as the lords of creation. (Thus) saved by the gods (Varuṇa and others) in a sacrificial performance meant to propitiate the god Varuṇa, the ascetic boy became celebrated among the scions of Gādhī by the name of Devarāta. (31-32) The (fifty) sons of Viśwāmītra, older than Madhucchandā, did not approve of Śunaḥśepa being treated as the eldest. Full of anger, the sage (Viśwāmītra) cursed them, "Become Mlecchas (barbarians), O evil ones!" (33) Along with his fifty (younger) brothers—so the tradition goes—Madhucchandā then said: "We shall abide by whatever you enjoin on us." (34) They (accordingly) took Śunaḥśepa, a seer of Vedic Mantras, as the eldest (of them all) and said to him, "Indeed we are (all) your followers (younger brothers)." (Gratified at this) Viśwāmītra said to these (latter) sons, "You will be blessed with sons—you who have made me a father of worthy sons by conceding my superiority (accepting my command). (35) This valiant Devarāta is one of you (as good a scion of Kuśika as you), O scions of Kuśika! (Hence) follow him (as an elder brother)." There were other sons too of Viśwāmītra—Aṣṭaka, Hārīta, Jaya, Kratumān and so on. (36) Thus, of course, the line of Kuśika was ramified into various off-shoots due to the sons of Viśwāmītra. And it acquired a different Pravara (branch name, viz., that of Devarāta) inasmuch as it was given a new shape (with Devarāta as the eldest son of Viśwāmītra). (37)

Thus ends the sixteenth discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* Vide verses 20 and 21 of Discourse VII above.

आत्मानमर्पयामास प्रह्लादाद्यरिशङ्कितः । पितर्युपरते पुत्रा याचमानाय नो ददुः । १४ ।
 त्रिविष्टपं महेन्द्राय यज्ञभागान् समददुः । गुरुणा हूयमानेऽग्नौ बलभित् तनयान् रजेः । १५ ।
 अवधीद् भ्रंशितान् मार्गान् कश्चिद्वशेषितः । कुशात् प्रतिः क्षात्रवृद्धात् सञ्जयस्तत्सुतो जयः । १६ ।
 ततः कृतः कृतस्यापि जज्ञे हर्यवनो नृपः । सहदेवस्ततो हीनो जयसेनस्तु तत्सुतः । १७ ।
 सङ्कतस्तस्य च जयः क्षत्रधर्मा महारथः । क्षत्रवृद्धान्वया भूपाः शृणु वंशं च नाहुषात् । १८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे चन्द्रवंशानुवर्णने सप्तदशोऽध्यायः । १७ ।

(All) these aforesaid kings in the line of Kṣātravṛddha were the descendants of Kāśi. Rambha's son was Rabhasa, whose son (again) was Gambhira and from him followed Akriya. (10) Through his wife was sprung a line of Brāhmaṇas; (now) listen to the posterity of Anenā. From (the loins of) Anenā sprang up Śuddha, from whom followed Śuci. Of him was born Trikakud, alias Dharmasārathi. (11) Of him was born Śantaraya, who had his object (in the shape of final beatitude) accomplished and was enlightened (too so that he did not beget any child). Rāji had five hundred sons, who were (all) possessed of immense strength. (12) Solicited by the gods, he slew the demons and restored (the kingdom of) heaven to Indra. Returning it to him (Rāji) and clasping his feet, Indra placed himself in his hands, afraid as he was of Prahāda and other enemies. On the death of their father, the sons of Rāji did not return to the great Indra, even though he asked for it, (the sovereignty of) heaven and (even) fully appropriated the sacrificial offerings. When oblations were being poured by the preceptor (the sage Bṛhaspati) into the sacred fire (according to the procedure laid down for the employment of spells for a malevolent purpose), Indra (the slayer of the demon Bala) slew (all) the sons of Rāji, who had strayed from the path of virtue, and none (of them) was left alive. From (the loins of) Kuśa, the grandson of Kṣātravṛddha, sprang up Prati; then came Sañjaya, whose son was Jaya. (13—16) From Jaya followed Kṛta and of Kṛta, again, was born King Haryavana. Next came Sahadeva and from Sahadeva followed Hina; while Hina's son was Jayasena. Then came Saṅkṛti and the latter's son was Jaya, a great car-warrior devoted to the course of conduct of a Kṣātriya. These are all the kings born in the line of Kṣātravṛddha; now hear of the line which originated from King Yayāti (the son of Nahuṣa). (17-18)

Thus ends the seventeenth discourse, forming part of an account of the lunar dynasty, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टादशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XVIII

The story of Yayāti

श्रीशुक उवाच

यतिर्ययातिः संयातिरायतिर्वियतिः कृतिः । षडिमे नहुषस्यासन्निद्रियाणीव देहिनः । १ ।
 राज्यं नैच्छद् यतिः पित्रा दत्तं तत्परिणामवित् । यत्र प्रविष्टः पुरुष आत्मानं नावबुध्यते । २ ।
 पितरि भ्रंशिते स्थानादिन्द्राण्या धर्षणाद् द्विजैः । प्रापितेऽजगरत्वं वै ययातिरभवन्नृपः । ३ ।
 चतसृञ्चादिशद् दिक्षु भ्रातृन् भ्राता यवीयसः । कृतदारो जुगोपोर्वी काव्यस्य वृषपर्वणः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Like the six senses (including the mind) of an embodied soul, the following six were the sons of Nahuṣa—Yati, Yayāti, Saṁyāti, Āyati, Viyati and Kṛti. (1) Yati (the eldest) did not desire the sovereignty, offered by his father, since he knew the end of sovereignty, having entered which one is no longer able to realize the Self. (2) On his father (Nahuṣa) having been hurled from heaven and transformed into a python by the (curse of) the Brāhmaṇas (the sage Agastya and others) due to the former's impudence towards Indra's wife, therefore, (it was) Yayāti (who) became the king. (3) Yayāti (the elder brother) appointed (his four) younger brothers (Saṁyāti and others) as governors in the four quarters (each in one quarter) and, having taken to wife the daughters of Śukrācārya and Vṛṣaparvā, ruled over the globe (as its suzerain lord). (4)

राजोवाच

ब्रह्मर्षिर्भगवान् काव्यः क्षत्रबन्धुश्च नाहुषः । राजन्यविप्रयोः कस्माद् विवाहः प्रतिलोमकः । ५ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) submitted : The glorious Śukrācārya was a Brāhmaṇa sage and Yayāti (the son of Nahuṣa), a mere Kṣatriya. How did the irregular marriage of a Kṣatriya king with a Brāhmaṇa girl take place ? (5)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदा दानवेन्द्रस्य शर्मिष्ठा नाम कन्यका । सरस्वीसहस्रसंयुक्ता गुरुपुत्र्या च भामिनी । ६ ।
देवयान्या पुरोद्याने पुष्पितद्रुमसङ्कुले । व्यचरत् कलगीतालिनलिलीपुलिनेज्वला । ७ ।
ता जलाशयमासाद्य कन्याः कमललोचनाः । तीरे न्यस्य दुकूलानि विजहुः सिञ्चतीर्मथः । ८ ।
वीक्ष्य व्रजन्तं गिरिशं सह देव्या वृषस्थितम् । सहस्रोतीर्य वासांसि पर्यधुर्व्रीडिताः स्त्रियः । ९ ।
शर्मिष्ठाजानती वासो गुरुपुत्र्याः समव्ययत् । स्वीयं मत्वा प्रकुपिता देवयानीदमब्रवीत् । १० ।
अहो निरीक्ष्यतामस्या दास्याः कर्म ह्यसाम्प्रतम् । अस्मद्धार्यं धृतवती शुनीव हविरध्वरे । ११ ।
यैरिदं तपसा सृष्टं मुखं पुंसः परस्य ये । धार्यते यैरिह ज्योतिः शिवः पन्थाश्च दर्शितः । १२ ।
यान् वन्दन्त्युपतिष्ठन्ते लोकनाथाः सुरेश्वराः । भगवानपि विश्वात्मा पावनः श्रीनिकेतनः । १३ ।
वयं तत्रापि भृगवः शिष्योऽस्या नः पितासुरः । अस्मद्धार्यं धृतवती शूद्रे वेदमिवावसती । १४ ।
एवं शपन्ती शर्मिष्ठा गुरुपुत्रीमभाषत । रुषा श्वसन्सुरङ्गीव धर्षिता दष्टदच्छदा । १५ ।
आत्मवृत्तमविज्ञाय कथ्यसे बहु भिक्षुकि । किं न प्रतीक्षसेऽस्माकं गृहान् बलिभुजो यथा । १६ ।
एवंविधैः सुपरुधैः क्षिप्त्वाऽऽचार्यसुतां सतीम् । शर्मिष्ठा प्राक्षिपत् कूपे वास आदाय मन्युना । १७ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Accompanied by a thousand girl companions as well as by Devayānī, the daughter of Śukrācārya (the preceptor of the Dānavas), Śarmisthā, the virgin daughter of Vṛṣaparvā (the celebrated Dānava chief)—who, though belonging to the weaker sex, was (yet) very proud—was strolling, on one occasion, in the city garden, full of flowering trees and adorned with the sandy strands of a lotus pond swarming with sweetly humming bees. (6-7) Arriving at the pond and leaving their clothes on the margin, those maidens with eyes beautiful as a pair of lotuses sported in it, sprinkling one another with water. (8) Observing Lord Śaṅkara, mounted on a bull alongwith His divine Consort (Goddess Pārvatī) passing (that way), the damsels felt abashed and put on their clothes, coming out of the pond at once. (9) Śarmisthā unwittingly put on the raiment of the preceptor's daughter, regarding it as her own. Getting enraged (at this), Devayānī spoke thus:—(10) "Oh I just look at the indecorum of this servant-maid in that like a bitch snatching away the oblation in a sacrifice she has put on the clothing which was meant to be put on by us. (11) Even among the Brāhmaṇas—by whom this world has been created by dint of (their) asceticism, who represent the mouth of the supreme Person (in the sense that they emanated from the mouth of the Cosmic Person and also because it is by feeding them that the Lord is easily propitiated) and by whom is cherished (as the object of their worship) the (transcendent) Brahma (that is all effulgence), by whom has been revealed the way to blessedness (in the shape of the Vedic religion), whom hail and extol the guardians of the spheres and the rulers of the gods, (nay,) even the almighty Lord, the Soul of the universe, the Purifier (of all) and the abode of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity)—we are the descendants of Bhṛgu ! Her (Śarmiṣṭhā's) father, a demon chief, is a disciple of ours. (Yet) like a Śūdra who has learnt by heart the Veda, this wench has put on the garment which was to be worn by us !" (12—14) Hissing like a female serpent and biting her lips in anger, the ill-treated Śarmiṣṭhā spoke (as follows) to the preceptor's daughter, who was thus abusing her:—(15) "Not knowing your own status, O beggar-maid, you brag much ! Do you not (all) wait at our door like a swarm of crows (the eaters of crumbs offered to them as representatives of the feathered kingdom)?" (16) Reproaching in such exceedingly harsh words the preceptor's daughter, who was worthy of respect, Śarmiṣṭhā violently dashed her into a well after snatching her clothes through anger. (17)

तस्यां गतायां स्वगृहं ययातिर्मृगयां चरन् । प्राप्तो यदुच्छ्रया कूपे जलार्थी तां ददर्श ह । १८ ।

दत्त्वा स्वमुत्तरं वासस्तस्यै राजा विवाससे । गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणिमुजहार दयापरः । १९ ।

तं वीरमाहौशनसी प्रेमनिर्भरया गिरा । राजंस्त्वया गृहीतो मे पाणिः परपुरङ्गय । २० ।

हस्तग्राहोऽपरो मा भूद् गृहीतायास्त्वया हि मे । एष ईशकृतो वीर सम्बन्धो नौ न पौरुषः ।

यदिदं कूपलग्नाया भवतो दर्शनं मम । २१ ।

न ब्राह्मणो मे भविता हस्तग्राहो महाभुज । कचस्य बाह्विस्पत्यस्य शापाद् यमशपं पुरा । २२ ।

ययातिरनभिप्रेतं दैवोपहृतमात्मनः । मनस्तु तद्गतं बुद्ध्या प्रतिजग्राह तद्वचः । २३ ।

When Śarmiṣṭhā had left for her home, Yayāti, who had been wandering in search of game, arrived there by chance. Being desirous of water, he looked into the well and descried her (Devayāni)—so the tradition goes. (18) Giving to the naked girl the piece of cloth covering the upper part of his body, the kind-hearted king lifted her out, grasping (her) hand by his own. (19) Devayāni, (the daughter of the sage Uśanā) spoke to the hero in a language full of love (as follows):—"O king, the conqueror of (your) enemy's cities ! my hand has been accepted by you. (20) Indeed, let none else take my hand, now that I have been accepted by you. This union of ours, O valiant king, has been brought about by Providence and is not man-made inasmuch as this sight of yours has been vouchsafed to me while I was clinging to a well. (21) A Brāhmaṇa is not destined to be my husband, thanks to the imprecation of Kaca (the son of the sage Bṛhaspati)—Kaca, whom I had cursed* on a former occasion, O long-armed one !" (22) Recognizing the connection as having been pre-ordained by fate, even though it was not (at all) acceptable to him (inasmuch as it was against the recognized code of ethics), and perceiving his mind too (which could not lean towards unrighteousness) drawn towards her, Yayāti agreed to her proposal. (23)

गते राजनि सा वीरे तत्र स्म रुदती पितुः । न्यवेदयत् ततः सर्वमुक्तं शर्मिष्ठया कृतम् । २४ ।

* Kaca was receiving instruction in the science of reviving the dead from Śukrācārya at the latter's house. While he was returning home after finishing his course of instruction, Devayāni wooed him, but was refused by Kaca on the ground of her being like a sister to him. Devayāni thereupon pronounced an imprecation on him that the instruction received by him would bear no fruit. Kaca too uttered a counter-curse on Devayāni, saying that no Brāhmaṇa would take her to wife.

दुर्मना भगवान् काव्यः पौरौहित्यं विगर्हयन् । स्तुवन् वृत्तिं च कापोतीं दुहित्रा स ययौ पुरात् । २५ ।
 वृषपर्वा तमाज्ञाय प्रत्यनीकविवक्षितम् । गुरुं प्रसादयन् मूर्ध्ना पादयोः पतितः पथि । २६ ।
 क्षणार्धमन्युर्भगवान् शिष्यं व्याचष्ट भार्गवः । कामोऽस्याः क्रियतां राजन् जैनां त्यक्तुमिहोत्सहे । २७ ।
 तथेत्यवस्थिते प्राह देवयानी मनोगतम् । पित्रा दत्ता यतो यास्ते सानुगा यातु मामनु । २८ ।
 स्वानां तत् सङ्कटं वीक्ष्य तदर्धस्य च गौरवम् । देवयानीं पर्यवरत् स्त्रीसहस्रेण दासवत् । २९ ।
 नाहुषाय सुतां दत्त्वा सह शर्मिष्ठयोश्ना । तमाह राजञ्छर्मिष्ठामाधास्तल्पे न कर्हिचित् । ३० ।
 विलोक्यौशनसी राजञ्छर्मिष्ठा सप्रजां ब्रुवित् । तमेव वज्रे रहसि सरख्याः पतिमृतौ सती । ३१ ।
 राजपुत्र्यार्थितोऽपत्ये धर्मं चावेक्ष्य धर्मवित् । स्वरञ्जुक्रवचः काले दिष्टमेवाभ्यपद्यत । ३२ ।
 यदुं च त्वत्सुं चैव देवयानी व्यजायत । द्रुह्युं चानुं च पूं च शर्मिष्ठा वार्षपर्वणी । ३३ ।
 गर्भसम्भवामासुर्या भर्तुर्विज्ञाय मानिनी । देवयानी पितुर्गहं ययौ क्रोधविमूर्च्छिता । ३४ ।
 प्रियामनुगतः कापी वचोभिरुपमन्त्रयन् । न प्रसादयितुं शेके पादसंवाहनादिभिः । ३५ ।
 शुकस्तमाह कुपितः स्त्रीकामानृतपुरुष । त्वां जरा विशतां मन्द विरूपकरणी नृणाम् । ३६ ।

On the valiant king having departed, Devayānī (too) repaired from the garden to her father, weeping (all the way), and forthwith related to him all that had been said and done by Śarmiṣṭhā. (24) Condemning the vocation of a priest and praising the way of life of a pigeon (that gleans grains of corn lying scattered in a field where the harvest has been reaped and lives on such gleanings alone), that glorious sage, Kāvya (Śukrācārya), went out of the city (the capital of Vṛṣaparvā), sad at heart, alongwith his daughter (Devayānī). (25) Concluding him to have hostile intentions (of bringing victory to the gods), and anxious to placate the preceptor, Vṛṣaparvā fell (prostrate) at his feet on the road. (26) The worshipful Śukrācārya (a scion of Bhṛgu), whose anger lasts but half a moment, gently said to his disciple, "Let Devayānī's wish (condition) be fulfilled, O king ! I am unable to ignore her". (27) When Vṛṣaparvā remained standing, (even) after uttering the words, "So be it !", Devayānī declared what was in her mind, saying, "Given away by my father, whithersoever I go, let Śarmiṣṭhā follow me with (all) her companions." (28) Perceiving the danger to her own people from the exit of Śukrācārya and the magnitude of good expected from his staying over, Śarmiṣṭhā waited upon Devayānī like a menial alongwith her thousand female companions. (29) Giving away to Yayāti (son of Nahuṣa) his daughter alongwith Śarmiṣṭhā, the sage Uśanā (Śukrācārya) said to him, "O king ! let not Śarmiṣṭhā ever share your bed." (30) Perceiving on a certain occasion Devayānī (Uśanā's daughter) blessed with a son. Śarmiṣṭhā (too) who was leading a chaste life, sought during the period favourable for conception the bed in seclusion of the very husband of her friend (Devayānī), (with a longing to be similarly blessed with progeny). (31) Solicited by the princess for progeny and considering it a sacred duty (to grant her prayer), Emperor Yayāti (who knew what was right) sought her embrace as something ordained by destiny itself (and not through concupiscence), even though recollecting in time the warning of Śukrācārya. (32) Devayānī duly gave birth to Yadu and Turvasu as well, while Śarmiṣṭhā, the daughter of Vṛṣaparvā, bore Druhyu and Anu and Pūru. (33) Overwhelmed with rage on concluding that Śarmiṣṭhā (the daughter of the Asura king) too had conceived through her (own) husband, the haughty Devayānī went away to her father's house. (34) Having followed his darling, the uxorious Yayāti tried to reconcile her with blandishments, as well as by kneading her feet and other such devices, but could not please her. (35) The angry Śukrācārya said to the king, "O fool ! O liar, hankering after women !! Let old age, which disfigures a man, overtake you." (36)

ययातिरुवाच

अतृप्तोऽस्म्यथ कामानां ब्रह्मन् दुहितरि स्म ते । व्यत्यस्यतां यथाकामं वयसा योऽभिधास्यति । ३७ ।

इति लब्धव्यवस्थानः पुत्रं ज्येष्ठमवोचत । यदो तात प्रतीच्छेमां जरां देहि निजं वयः । ३८ ।

मातामहकृतां वत्स न तृप्तो विषयेष्वहम् । वयसा भवदीयेन रस्ये कतिपयाः समाः । ३९ ।

Yayāti submitted : I am unsated till today with sensuous enjoyments in the company of your daughter, O holy Brāhmaṇa! (Śukrācārya replied) "Old age may be exchanged (by you) at will with the youth of any other who may voluntarily accept it." (37) Having obtained a solution (of his problem) in this form, Yayāti (returned to his capital and) said to his eldest son, "Yadu dear, take this old age (of mine), brought about by (the curse of) your grandfather (mother's father, Śukrācārya) and part with your own youth, my darling ! (for) I am not yet satiated with the pleasures of sense and intend to revel some (more) years with (the help of) your youth. (38-39)

यदुरुवाच

नोत्सहे जरसा स्थातुमन्तरा प्राप्ताया तव । अवित्ता सुखं ग्राम्यं वैतृष्यं नैति पूरुषः । ४० ।

तुवंसुश्रोतः पित्रा द्रुह्यश्वानुश्रुतं भारत । प्रत्याचख्युरधर्मज्ञा ह्यनित्ये नित्यबुद्धयः । ४१ ।

अपृच्छत् तनयं पूरु वयसोऽनं गुणाधिकम् । न त्वमग्रजवद् वत्स मां प्रत्याख्यातुमर्हसि । ४२ ।

Yadu replied : I have no courage to (accept and) live with your old age, got (by you) in the middle of your life. (For,) having not (actually) tasted the vulgar pleasures a man does not attain to desirelessness. (40) Though urged by their father, Turvasu and Druhyu and Anu too declined, O scion of Bharata, since they did not know what was right and looked upon the transient (body etc.) as eternal. (41) (Now) Yayāti asked his son, Pūru—who, though youngest in age, was superior in point of virtues—and added, "Dear one ! like your elder brothers you should not refuse me." (42)

पूरुवाच

को नु लोके मनुष्येन्द्र पितुरात्मकृतः पुमान् । प्रतिकर्तुं क्षमो यस्य प्रसादाद् विन्दते परम् । ४३ ।

उत्तमश्चिन्तितं कुप्रात् प्रोक्तकारी तु मध्यमः । अधमोऽश्रद्धया कुर्यादकतोऽचरितं पितुः । ४४ ।

Pūru replied : As a matter of fact, what man in this world, O ruler of men ! can requite his father, the procreator of his body, by whose grace he can attain the highest (object of his life)? (43) The best son is he who accomplishes (in anticipation) whatever is expected by his father (without waiting to be told what is wanted by him). A mediocre son is he who does (only) that which he is (expressly) told to. The lowest is he who does his father's bidding with irreverence; while he who refuses to do his bidding is (no more than) the refuse of his father. (44)

इति प्रमुदितः पूरुः प्रत्यगृह्णाज्जरां पितुः । सोऽपि तद्वयसा कामान् यथावज्जुषे नृप । ४५ ।

सप्तदीपपतिः सम्यक् पितृवत् पालयन् प्रजाः । यथोपजोषं विषयाञ्जुषेऽव्याहतेन्द्रियः । ४६ ।

देवान्यप्यनुदिनं मनोवाग्देहवस्तुभिः । प्रेयसः परमां प्रीतिमुवाह प्रेयसी रहः । ४७ ।

अयजद् यज्ञपुरुषं क्रतुभिर्भूरिदक्षिणैः । सर्वदेवमयं देवं सर्ववेदमयं हरिम् । ४८ ।

यस्मिन्निदं विरचितं व्योम्नीव जलदावलिः । नानेव भाति नाभाति स्वप्नमायामनोरथः । ४९ ।

तमेव हृदि विन्यस्य वासुदेवं गुहाशयम् । नारायणमणीयांसं निराशीरयजत् प्रभुम् । ५० ।

एवं वर्षसहस्राणि मनःषष्ठैर्मनःसुखम् । विदधानोऽपि नातृष्यत् सार्वभौमः कदिन्द्रियैः । ५१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां नवमस्कन्धेऽष्टादशोऽध्यायः । १८ ।

Saying so, Pūru most gladly accepted his father's old age. The latter too, O protector of men, enjoyed the pleasures of sense with (the help of) his (Pūru's) youth, as enjoined by the scriptures. (45) Duly protecting his subjects like a father, Yayāti (the ruler of all the seven divisions of the globe) enjoyed the sense-objects according to his pleasure, his senses remaining unimpaired. (46) Devayānī too, the beloved of her husband, afforded supreme delight in private to her beloved husband from day to day with mind, speech, body and (various) articles (of enjoyment). (47) Yayāti (also) propitiated through sacrifices with liberal gifts of money Lord Śrī Viṣṇu (the Destroyer of sins), the Deity presiding over sacrifices, the embodiment of all the Vedas, who represents all the gods in His Person. (48) Like a mass of clouds in the sky, this world—which is (no better than) a dream, a hoax and a fancy—is superimposed on God; it now appears as different (in the shape of numberless names and forms) and now disappears (during deep sleep as well as at the time of final dissolution). (49) Installing in his heart the selfsame Lord Vāsudeva, the Indweller of all hearts, who has His abode in water and is subtler than the subtle, Yayāti, who had no desire (left) in him, worshipped Him there. (50) Though enjoying the pleasures of sense—which are only conceptual—with his (five) wicked senses as well as with the mind, which is the sixth, for thousands of years, Yayāti (the ruler of the entire globe) did not feel sated. (51)

Thus ends the eighteenth discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIX

Yayāti's Renunciation

श्रीशुक उवाच

स इत्थमाचरन् कामान् स्त्रैणोऽपह्वमत्पनः । बुद्ध्वा प्रियायै निर्विण्णो गाथामेतामगायत । १ ।
शृणु भार्गव्यमुं गाथां मद्दिवाचरितं भुवि । धीरा यस्यानुशोचन्ति वने ग्रामनिवासिनः । २ ।
बस्त एको वने कश्चिद् विचिन्वन् प्रियमात्मनः । ददर्श कूपे पतितं स्वकर्मवशगमजाम् । ३ ।
तस्या उद्धरणोपायं बस्तः कामी विचिन्तयन् । व्यधत् तीर्थमुदधृत्य विषाणाप्रेण रोधसी । ४ ।
सोत्तीर्य कूपात् सुश्रोणी तमेव चकमे किल । तया वृत्तं समुद्रीक्ष्य बह्व्योऽजाः कान्तकामिनीः । ५ ।
पीवान् श्मश्रुलं प्रेष्ठं मीढ्वांसं याभकोविदम् । स एकोऽजवृषस्तासां बह्वीनां रतिवर्धनः ।

रेमे कामग्रहस्त आत्मानं नावबुध्यत । ६ ।

तमेव प्रेषुतमया रममाणमजान्यया । विलोक्य कूपसंविन्ना नामृष्यद् बस्तकर्म तत् । ७ ।
तं दुर्हदं सुहृद्वपं कामिनं क्षणसौहृदम् । इन्द्रियाराममुत्सृज्य स्वामिनं दुःखिता ययौ । ८ ।
सोऽपि चानुगतः स्त्रैणः कृपणस्तां प्रसादितुम् । कुर्वन्निडविडाकारं नाशक्नोत् पथि संधितुम् । ९ ।
तस्यास्त्र द्विजः कश्चिदजास्वायच्छिन्द रुषा । लम्बन्तं वृषणं भूयः सन्दधेऽर्थाय योगवित् । १० ।
सम्बद्धवृषणः सोऽपि ह्यजया कूपलब्धया । कालं बहुतिथं भद्रे कामैर्नाद्यापि तुष्यति । ११ ।

तथाहं कृपणः सुष्ठु भवत्याः प्रेमयन्त्रितः। आत्मानं नाभिजानामि मोहितस्त्व मायया । १२ ।
 यत् पृथिव्यां ब्रीहियवं हिरण्यं पशवः स्त्रियः । न दुहन्ति मनःप्रीतिं पुंसः कामहतस्य ते । १३ ।
 न जातु कामः कामानामुपभोगेन शाम्यति । हविषा कृष्णवर्त्मव भूय एवाभिवर्धते । १४ ।
 यदा न कुस्ते भावं सर्वभूतेष्वमङ्गलम् । समदृष्टेस्तदा पुंसः सर्वा सुखमया दिशः । १५ ।
 या दुस्त्यजा दुर्मतिभिर्जीर्यते या न जीर्यते । ता तूष्णा दुःखनिवहां शर्मकामो द्रुतं त्यजेत् । १६ ।
 मात्रा स्वस्रा दुहित्रा वा नाविधित्तासनो भवेत् । बलवानिन्द्रियग्राभो विद्वांसमपि कर्षति । १७ ।
 पूर्णं वर्षसहस्रं मे विषयान् सेवतोऽसकृत् । तथापि चानुसवनं तूष्णा तेषूपजायते । १८ ।
 तस्मादेतामहं त्यक्त्वा ब्रह्मण्याधाय मानसम् । निर्द्वन्द्वो निरहंकारश्चरिष्यामि मृगैः सह । १९ ।
 दृष्टं श्रुतमसद् बुद्ध्या नानुध्यायेन्न संविशेत् । संसृतिं चात्मनाशं च तत्र विद्वान्स आत्मदृक् । २० ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus enjoying the pleasures of sense, Yayāti, who had been enslaved by his wife, woke up to his spiritual fall and, disgusted with the world narrated the following (story in the form of a) parable to Devayāni (his beloved wife). (1) "Listen, O Devayāni (a scion of the sage Bhr̥gu), the true story of one on this earth who had a conduct similar to mine and who was full of lust (lit., lived in a village), yet for whom (and others like him) the wise residing in the woods constantly grieve. (2) Hunting for his beloved object in a forest all alone, a certain goat saw a she-goat fallen in a well, subject (as she was) to her own destiny. (3) Intently thinking of a means of rescuing the she-goat, the passionate goat created an outlet (for her) by digging out the earth at the brim with the end of his horns. (4) Coming out of the well, that beautiful she-goat, it is said, fell in love with that very goat. Observing him selected by her—stout, mature, most lovable, capable of procreation and expert in the art of copulation as he was—many more she-goats, who longed for a beloved companion, also conceived a passion for the goat. Enhancing the delight of those numerous she-goats, that king of goats revelled with them alone and ceased to think of himself, possessed as he was by the devil of concupiscence. (5-6) Perceiving that very goat enjoying himself with another most beloved she-goat, the one that had fallen into the well and (consequently) got bewildered, could not brook that act of the goat. (7) Deserting that lustful goat, who though disguised as a friend had played her false and whose love was (only) momentary, given as he was to the gratification of his senses, the she-goat returned full of agony to her owner. (8) The goat too, a slave of his beloved she-goat, felt (very) wretched and followed her, uttering a bleat all the way in order to pacify her, but could not reconcile her. (9) There (in her owner's house) a certain Brāhmaṇa, who was her owner, amputated, in anger, his dangling scrotum and rejoined it in the interest of the she-goat (herself), proficient as he was in (all) such expedients. (10) With his scrotum restored, the goat too revelled for a long time indeed with the she-goat that had been found (by him) in the well, O dear one! But he does not feel satiated with sense-enjoyments till this day. (11) Bound in the same way with the cords of your love and deluded by your charm, O pretty one, I fail to recognize my own self, wretched as I am. (12) (All) the rice and barley, gold, animals and women that exist on earth—they cannot yield satisfaction to the mind of a man who is buffeted by lust. (13) The craving for sense-gratification never ceases with the enjoyment of sense-objects. On the other hand it grows stronger and stronger like fire fed by ghee. (14) When a man does not entertain the notion of diversity (in the form of likes and dislikes, which are undesirable,) with regard to any living being, then to such a man, looking upon all with the same eye, all the quarters turn blissful. (15) One desirous of happiness should speedily get rid of the thirst for pleasure, which is productive of sorrow, nay, which cannot be easily given up by the evil-minded and which does not get worn out even though one's body grows old. (16) A man should not sit close (even) to his mother, sister or daughter. (For) the powerful senses lead astray even a learned man. (17) Full one thousand years have slipped by while I have been busy repeatedly enjoying the pleasures of sense. And yet each time (I enjoy them) my thirst for them is renewed. (18) Therefore, giving up this (thirst for pleasure) and fixing my mind on the Absolute, I shall roam about with deer, being rid of the pairs of opposites (such as joy and sorrow) and free from egotism. (19) Knowing both that is seen and heard of as unreal and foreseeing transmigration and the degradation of his soul to follow from their thought (etc.), he who neither thinks of nor enjoys them is the knower of his self." (20)

इत्युक्त्वा नाहुषो जायां तदीयं पूरवे वयः। दत्त्वा स्वां जरसं तस्मादाददे विगतस्पृहः। १२१।
 दिशि दक्षिणपूर्वस्यां ब्रह्मं दक्षिणतो यदुम्। प्रतीच्यां तुर्वसुं चक्र उदीच्यामनुमीश्वरम्। १२२।
 भूमण्डलस्य सर्वस्य पूरुमर्हत्तमं विशाम्। अभिविच्याग्रजांस्तस्य वशे स्थाप्य वनं ययौ। १२३।
 आसेवितं वर्षपूरान् षड्वर्गं विषयेषु सः। क्षणेन मुमुचे नीडं जातपक्ष इव द्विजः। १२४।
 स तत्र निर्मुक्तसमस्तसङ्ग आत्मानुभूत्या विधुतत्रिलिङ्गः।
 परेऽमले ब्रह्मणि वासुदेवे लेभे गतिं भागवतीं प्रतीतः। १२५।
 श्रुत्वा गाथां देवयानी मेने प्रत्तोभमात्मनः। स्त्रीपुंसोः स्नेहवैकल्यात् परिहासमिवेरितम्। १२६।
 सा संनिवासं सुहृदां प्रपायामिव गच्छताम्। विज्ञायेश्वरतन्त्राणां मायाविरचितं प्रभोः। १२७।
 सर्वत्र सङ्गमुत्सृज्य स्वप्नोपम्येन भार्गवी। कृष्णे मनः समावेश्य व्यधुनोल्लिङ्गमात्मनः। १२८।
 नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते वासुदेवाय वेधसे। सर्वभूताधिवासाय शान्ताय बृहते नमः। १२९।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे एकोनविंशोऽध्यायः। १९९।

Having spoken thus to his wife (Devayāni) and returned Pūru's youth to him, Yayāti received (back) his own old age (from him), all craving for enjoyment having left him for good. (21) He appointed Druhyu as the ruler in the south-eastern quarter, Yadu in the south, Turvasu in the west and Anu in the north. (22) Having duly installed (on the throne) Pūru, the worthiest, (though the youngest, of all his sons) as the suzerain lord of the entire globe and master of its wealth, and placing his elder brothers (Yadu and others) under his control, Yayāti retired to the forest. (23) He renounced in a moment the pleasures of the six senses (including the mind), constantly enjoyed (by him) for very many years through their objects, (even) as a bird leaves its nest when fledged. (24) Having totally shaken off all attachment (to the body and whatever is connected with it) and dissociated himself from his subtle body (a product of the three Guṇas), by virtue of his self-realization in that forest, the celebrated Yayāti attained absorption into the supreme Brahma, known by the name of Vāsudeva, which is free from the taint of Māyā—a state which is obtainable (only) through devotion to the Lord. (25) Hearing the (aforesaid) parable, Devayāni took it as a taunt to herself; (nay) she thought it to be a joke uttered (by her husband) in the agony of love subsisting between a husband and a wife. (26) Realizing the association of near and dear ones, who are (all) subject to the control of the Lord, as akin to the gathering of travellers in a place where water is supplied to the passers-by, and as having been brought about by the Lord's will (guided by their past Karma), Devayāni (a scion of Bhṛgu) renounced attachment to everything, regarding all to be as unreal as a dream, and focussing her mind on Śrī Kṛṣṇa, gave up her subtle body (attained Liberation like her husband). (27-28) Hail, hail to You, the all-tranquil and all-pervading Lord Vāsudeva, the Maker of this universe, the Indweller of all created beings. (29)

Thus ends the nineteenth discourse, in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XX

The posterity of Pūru and the stories of Duṣyanta and Bharata

श्रीशुक उवाच

पूरोर्वंशं प्रवक्ष्यामि यत्र जातोऽसि भारत । यत्र राजर्षयो वंश्या ब्रह्मवंश्याश्च जज्ञिरे । १ ।
जनमेजयो ह्यभूत् पूरोः प्रचिन्वांस्तत्सुतस्ततः । प्रवीरोऽथ नमस्युर्वं तस्माद्धारुपदोऽभवत् । २ ।
तस्य सुद्युर्भूत् पुत्रस्तस्माद् बहुगवस्ततः । संयातिस्तस्याहंयाती रौद्राश्चस्तसुतः स्मृतः । ३ ।
ऋतेयुस्तस्य कुक्षेयुः स्थण्डिलेयुः कृतेयुकः । जलेयुः सन्ततेयुश्च धर्मसत्यव्रतेयवः । ४ ।
दशैतेऽप्सरसः पुत्रा वनेयुश्चावमः स्मृतः । घृताच्यामिन्द्रियाणीव मुख्यस्य जगदात्मनः । ५ ।
ऋतेयो रन्तिभारोऽभूत् त्रयस्तस्यात्मजा नृप । सुमतिर्ध्रुवोऽप्रतिरथः कण्वोऽप्रतिरथात्मजः । ६ ।
तस्य मेधातिथिस्तस्मात् प्रस्कण्वाद्या द्विजातयः । पुत्रोऽभूत् सुमते रैभ्यो दुष्यन्तस्तस्युतो मतः । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : I shall (now) give a detailed account of the line of Pūru, in which you were born, O scion of Bharata, and in which (many) royal sages and Brāhmaṇas, each propagating his line, appeared. (1) Now, Janmejaya was born of Pūru and Janmejaya's son was Pracinvān, from whose loins appeared Pravira. From him indeed followed Namasyu (and) to him was born Cārupada. (2) From his loins appeared a son named Sudyu, of whom was born Bahugava, and from him followed Saṁyāti. His son was Ahaṁyāti, whose son was called Raudrāśwa. (3) R̥teyu, Kuṣeyu, Sṭhaṇḍileyu, K̥teyu, Jaleyu and Santateyu, Dharmeyu, Satyeyu, Vrateyu and the youngest known as Vaneyu—these ten were the sons of Raudrāśwa, born of the celestial nymph Ghṛtācī, (even) as the ten Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) are evolved from Prāṇa, the chief of the five vital airs (viz., Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna and Samāna), the life of the microcosm. (4-5) R̥teyu's son was Rantibhāra, who had three sons—Sumati, Dhruva and Apratiratha, O protector of men ! Apratiratha's son was Kaṇva. (6) His son was Medhātithi, from whom originated the Brāhmaṇas, Praskaṇva and others. Sumati's son was Raibhya; (and) Duṣyanta is held to be his son. (7)

दुष्यन्ते मृगायां यातः कण्वाश्चमपदं गतः । तत्रासीनां स्वप्रभया मण्डयन्तीं रमांमिव । ८ ।

विलोक्य सद्यो मुमुहे देवमायामिव स्त्रियम् । बभाषे तां वरासोऽहं भटैः कतिपयैर्वृतः । ९ ।

तद्दर्शनप्रमुदितः संनिवृत्तपरिश्रमः । पत्रच्छ कामसन्तप्तः प्रहसन् श्लक्ष्णया गिरा । १० ।

का त्वं कमलपत्राक्षि कस्यासि हृदयङ्गमे । किं वा चिकीर्षितं त्वत्र भवत्या निर्जमे वने । ११ ।

व्यक्तं राजन्यतनवां वेदस्यहं त्वां सुमध्यमे । न हि चेतः पौरवाणामधर्मे रमते क्वचित् । १२ ।

(One day,) surrounded (accompanied) by a few bodyguards, Duṣyanta, who had gone a hunting, arrived at the hermitage of Kaṇva. He saw sitting there a charming damsel, who was a compeer of Rāmā (the goddess presiding over beauty and prosperity) and a personification of it as it were of the enchanting potency of the Lord, and was illuminating the hermitage with her effulgence. The king instantly fell in love with her and spoke to her. (8-9) Greatly rejoiced at her sight and sore stricken with love, he questioned her in soft words (as follows), gracefully smiling, his fatigue having completely disappeared:—(10) "Who are you with eyes resembling the petals of a lotus? Whose daughter are you, O charming one? And what is the purpose of your staying in this lovely forest? (11) I clearly perceive you to be the daughter of a Kṣatriya, O pretty one! For, nowhere does the mind of the scions of Pūru find delight in (leans towards) unrighteousness." (12)

शकुन्तलोवाच

विश्वामित्रात्मजैवाहं त्यक्ता मेनकया वने । वेदैतद् भगवान् कण्वो वीर किं करवाम ते । १३ ।

आस्यतां ह्यारविन्द्राक्ष गृह्णतामर्हणं च नः । धृज्यतां सन्ति नीवारा उष्यतां यदि रोचते । १४ ।

Śakuntalā replied : Certainly I am the daughter of Viśvāmītra, forsaken by Menakā in the forest. The worshipful sage Kaṇva knows this (life-history of mine). What may we do for you, O hero? (13) Have your seat, O lotus-eyed one, and indeed let our hospitality be accepted (by you). There is (enough of) wild rice, which may (kindly) be partaken of; (and) stay (here) if it pleases you. (14)

दुष्यन्त उवाच

उपपन्नमिदं सुधु जातायाः कुशिकान्वये । स्वयं हि वृणते राज्ञां कन्यकाः सदृशं वरम् । १५ ।

ओमित्युक्ते यथाधर्ममुपयेमे शकुन्तलाम् । गान्धर्वविधिना राजा देशकालविधानवित् । १६ ।

अमोघवीर्यो राजर्षिर्महिष्यां वीर्यमादधे । श्रोभूते स्वपुत्रं यातः कालेनासूत सा सुतम् । १७ ।

कण्वः कुमारस्य वने चक्रे समुचिताः क्रियाः । बद्ध्वा मृगेन्द्रांस्तरसा क्रीडति स्म स बालकः । १८ ।

Duśyanta replied : What you say is (quite) becoming of you, born (as you are) in the line of Kuśika, O beautiful one! For, princesses choose a suitable partner by themselves. (15) The king, who knew what was enjoined at a particular time and place, married, consistently with the ethical code, Śakuntalā—who had (tacitly) expressed her consent—according to the Gāndharva system (which is based on mutual consent alone). (16) The royal sage, who was possessed of unfailing procreative energy, deposited his seed (at night) in the womb of his wedded wife (Śakuntalā). The next morning he went (back) to his capital. (And) in course of time she gave birth to a son. (17) The sage Kaṇva performed the appropriate (purificatory) rites relating to the (new-born) prince (commencing from Jātakarma, the rite performed at the time of the birth of a child), in the forest. While (yet) an infant, he used to play with lions, binding them with his superior strength. (18)

तं दुरत्ययविक्रान्तमादाय प्रमदोत्तमा । हरेरंशांशसम्भूतं भर्तुरन्तिकमागमत् । १९ ।

यदा न जगृहे राजा भार्यापुत्रावनिन्दितौ । शृण्वतां सर्वभूतानां खे वागाहाशरीरिणी । २० ।

माता भस्त्रा पितुः पुत्रो येन जातः स एव सः । भस्त्र पुत्रं दुष्यन्त मावमंस्थाः शकुन्तलाम् । २१ ।

रेतोधाः पुत्रो नयति नरदेव यमक्षयात् । त्वं चास्य धाता गर्भस्य सत्यमाह शकुन्तला । २२ ।

Śakuntalā (the jewel among young women) sought the presence of her (royal) husband (Emperor Duśyanta), taking along with her that boy of formidable prowess, born with a minute ray (of the divine essence) of Śrī Hari. (19) When the king (Duśyanta) did not accept (as his own) Śakuntalā (his wife) and her son, who were (both) irreproachable, an ethereal voice in the heavens spoke (as follows), all living beings listening:—(20) "Mother is but a leathern bag (to hold and develop the seed). The son belongs to his father (alone); nay, he is the same as his father" (of whom he was born). (Therefore,) O Duśyanta! have† your son

* This is corroborated by the Śruti, which says:—'आत्मा वै पुत्रनामावि'.

† The command of the ethereal voice asking Duśyanta to accept the child (भस्त्र) was responsible for the child being given the name of Bharata.

(and) do not spurn Śakuntalā (your wedded wife). (21) A son who procreates (and thus propagates his line) leads (his father) out of the abode of Yama, O ruler among men! Śakuntalā truly says that you are the procreator of this child." (22)

पितर्युपरे सोऽपि चक्रवर्ती महायशः। महिमा गीयते तस्य हरेश्शुभो भुवि । २३।

चक्रं दक्षिणहस्तेऽस्य पद्मकोशेऽस्य पादयोः। ईजे महाभिषेकेण सोऽभिषिक्तोऽधिपराद् विभुः । २४।

पञ्चपञ्चाशता मेधैर्गङ्गायामनु वाजिभिः। सामतेयं पुरोधाय यमुनायामनु प्रभुः । २५।

अष्टसप्ततिमेध्याश्चान् बबन्ध प्रदद वसु। भरतस्य हि दौष्यन्तेरभिः साध्वीगुणे चितः ।

सहस्रं बद्धशो यस्मिन् ब्राह्मणा गा विभेजिरे । २६।

त्रयस्त्रिंशच्छतं ह्यश्चान् बद्ध्वा विस्मापयन् नृपान्। दौष्यन्तिरत्यगाम्नायां देवानां गुरुमाययौ । २७।

मृगाञ्छुक्लदतः कृष्णान् हिरण्येन परीवृत्तान्। अदात् कर्मणि मण्यारे नियुतानि चतुर्दश । २८।

भरतस्य महत् कर्म न पूर्वं नापरे नृपाः। नैवापुर्नैव प्राप्स्यन्ति बाहुभ्यां त्रिदिवं यथा । २९।

किरातहूणान् यवनानश्चान् कङ्कान् खशाञ्छकान्। अब्रह्मण्यान् नृपांश्चान् म्लेच्छान् दिक्विजयेऽखिलान् । ३०।

जित्वा पुरासुरा देवान् ये रसौकांसि भेजिरे। देवस्त्रियो रसां नीताः प्राणिभिः पुनराहरत् । ३१।

सर्वकामान् दुदुहतुः प्रजानां तस्य रोदसी। समास्त्रिणवसाह्वीर्दिक्षु चक्रमवर्तयत् । ३२।

स सम्राड् लोकपालाख्यमैश्वर्यमधिपराद् श्रियम्। चक्रं चासत्त्वलितं प्राणान् मृषेत्युपराम ह । ३३।

After his father's death Bharata too became a universal monarch of great renown. The glory of the said monarch, born with a ray of Śrī Hari, is sung on earth (even to this day). (23) He bore the mark of a discus in his right palm and that of a lotus-bud on (the soles of both) his feet. Having been (duly installed on the throne after being) consecrated by means of a grand (religious) bath, the powerful emperor performed (as many as) fifty-five horse-sacrifices on the banks of the (holy) Gaṅgā in order of sequence (from the source to the mouth) and seventy-eight sacrifices (lit., he tied seventy-eight holy horses) along the Yamunā in the same order, choosing Dirghatamā (the son of Mamatā) as his priest and freely gifting (ample) wealth. The sacrificial fire of Bharata, the son of Duṣyanta, was set up on an exceedingly excellent (most sacred) site where a thousand Brāhmaṇas divided among themselves cows (gifted by Bharata)—each getting as his share a Badva (thirteen thousand and eighty four*). (24—26) Having (thus) performed one hundred and thirty-three horse-sacrifices (lit., having tied to the sacrificial post 133 horses) to the (great) wonder of (other) kings, Bharata (the son of Duṣyanta) not only overcame the Lord's Māyā (the deluding potency) but (also) attained to Lord Śrī Hari (the adored of the gods). (27) In the sacrificial function called 'Maṣṇāra' Bharata gave away (to the Brāhmaṇas) fourteen lakhs of dark elephants of excellent breed with white tusks—all adorned with gold. (28) Neither did kings that have gone by nor will future kings emulate the great example of Bharata any more than one can touch heaven with one's hands. (29) In the course of his conquest of the (four) quarters he crushed all the Kirātas, Hūnas, Yavanas, Andhras, Kaṅkas, Khaśas, Śakas and Mlecchas as well as kings who despised the Brāhmaṇas and the Vedas. (30) He (Further) recovered wives of gods that had been carried away to Rasātala (the sixth subterranean region from above) by the demons, who having conquered the gods in the past had occupied (various) parts of Rasātala. (31) (During his reign) heaven as well as the earth yielded to his subjects all the objects of their desire. (In this way) he held sway in all the (four) quarters for thrice nine millenniums. (32) Realizing his sovereignty, that had carried his fame (even) to the guardians of the spheres, imperial fortune, his authority, which was unobstructed

(everywhere), nay, (his) life (itself) to be unreal, the aforesaid emperor withdrew himself from the world. (33)

तस्यासन् नृप वैदर्भ्यः पत्न्यस्तिस्रः सुसम्मताः । जघ्रस्त्यागभयात् पुत्रान् नानुरूपा इतीरिते । ३४ ।
 तस्यैवं वितथे वंशे तदर्थं यजतः सुतम् । मरुत्तोमेन मरुतो भरद्वाजमुपाददुः । ३५ ।
 अन्तर्वत्न्यां भ्रातृपत्न्यां मैथुनाय बृहस्पतिः । प्रवृत्तो वारितो गर्भं शप्त्वा वीर्यमवासुजत् । ३६ ।
 तं त्यक्तुकामां ममतां भर्तृत्यागविशङ्किताम् । नामनिर्वचनं तस्य श्लोकमेनं सुरा जगुः । ३७ ।
 मूढे भरद्वाजमिमं भरद्वाजं बृहस्पते । यातौ यदुक्त्वा पितरौ भरद्वाजस्ततस्त्वयम् । ३८ ।
 चोद्यमाना सुरैरेवं मत्वा वितथमात्मजम् । व्यसृजन् मरुतोऽविभ्रन् दत्तोऽयं वितथेऽन्वये । ३९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे विंशोऽध्यायः । २० ।

Bharata had three beloved wives, (all of them) daughters of the king of Vidarbha, O protector of men ! They disposed of their own sons for fear of being forsaken by their husband, because it was remarked (by him) that the sons were not after him. (34) On his race being thus threatened with extinction, the Maruts (wind-gods) handed over a son, Bharadwāja by name, to the emperor, who was propitiating them through (a sacrifice known by the name of) Marutstoma. (35) Proceeding to copulate with his brother's wife (Mamatā), who was (already) pregnant, Brhaspati forcibly discharged his seed (in her womb), cursing the foetus* by which he was stopped. (36) Addressing Mamatā (as well as Brhaspati), who was inclined to abandon the child (into which the seed was immediately transformed), terribly afraid as she was of being forsaken by her husband (Utathya), the gods uttered the following couplet, explaining the etymology of the child's name (and giving utterance to a disputation between Brhaspati and Mamatā):—(37) (Says Brhaspati to Mamatā): "O foolish one, nourish (Bhara) this child, born of two, (viz., my brother and myself, because begotten by me through my brother's wife)." (Mamatā replied:) "O Brhaspati ! nourish this child (yourself), born (as it is) of us two (and particularly because I was forcibly impregnated by you)." Since, having spoken thus, the two (father and mother) went away (leaving the child), hence this child is (named) Bharadwāja. (38) (Though) urged by the gods in this way (in order to absolve Mamatā of guilt in the eyes of her husband and thus disarm her fear of being forsaken by her husband), Mamatā (as well as Brhaspati) abandoned the son (Bharadwāja), regarding him as useless (because born of an illicit union and hence a source of infamy). The Maruts (however) brought him up and (by them) he was handed over to Bharata on the latter's line being threatened with extinction. (39)

Thus ends the twentieth discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* This forcible impregnation resulted firstly in the child in the womb (named afterwards as Dīrghatāmā) getting blind through the curse of Brhaspati and secondly in the seed discharged by the latter being kicked out by the foetus and assuming the form of a fully developed male child as soon as it dropped on the ground.

अथैकविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXI

The posterity of Bharata and the story of Rantideva

श्रीशुक उवाच

वितथस्य सुतो मन्युर्बृहत्क्षत्रो जयस्ततः । महावीर्यो नरो गर्गः सङ्कृतिस्तु नरात्मजः । १ ।
गुरुश्च रन्तिदेवश्च सङ्कृतेः पाण्डुनन्दन । रन्तिदेवस्य हि यश इहामुत्र च गीयते । २ ।
वियद्वित्तस्य ददतो लब्धं लब्धं बुभुक्षतः । निष्किञ्चनस्य धीरस्य सकुटुम्बस्य सीदतः । ३ ।
व्यतीयुरष्टत्वारिंशदहान्यपिब्रतः किल । घृतपायससंयावं तोयं प्रातरुपस्थितम् । ४ ।
कृच्छ्रग्रामकुटुम्बस्य क्षुत्तृड्भ्यां जातवेपथोः । अतिथिर्ब्राह्मणः काले भोक्तुकामस्य चागमत् । ५ ।
तस्मै संव्यभजत् सोऽन्नमादृत्य श्रद्धयान्वितः । हरिं सर्वत्र संपश्यन् स भुक्त्वा प्रययौ द्विजः । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : The son of Vitatha (Bharadvāja) was Manyu, of whom were born Brhatkṣatra, Jaya, Mahāvīrya, Nara and Garga; and Nara's son was Saṅkṛti. (1) Saṅkṛti's sons were Guru and Rantideva, O delight of Pāṇḍu ! The glory of Rantideva is, as a matter of fact, sung both in this world and the world beyond. (2) In the case of Rantideva, who subsisted on whatever was obtained without any effort and who, though feeling hungry (himself), gave away all that was got, and was thus rendered (utterly) destitute (having no provision even for the evening much less for the next day), and therefore suffering terrible hardship, alongwith his family—who were reduced to (great) straits—(nay), trembling due to (excessive) hunger and thirst, yet calm, passed (not less than) forty-eight days—so the tradition goes—without his taking (even) water. In the morning (of the forty-ninth day) there came to him (by chance) ghee, rice cooked in milk with sugar, Saṁyāva* (a kind of porridge made of wheat flour with ghee and) milk, as well as water. And when he was intending to partake of it, there arrived, at that (very) time, a newcomer in the person of a Brāhmaṇa. (3—5) Viewing Śrī Hari everywhere and (therefore) full of reverence, Rantideva welcomed him and gave to him a proportionate share (of those dishes). (And) the Brāhmaṇa went away after taking that food. (6)

अथान्यो भोक्ष्यमाणस्य विभक्तस्य महीपते । विभक्तं व्यभजत् तस्मै वृषलाय हरि स्मरन् । ७ ।
याते शूत्रे तमन्योऽगादतिथिः श्वभिरावृतः । राजन् मे दीयतामन्नं सगणाय बुभुक्षते । ८ ।
स आदृत्यावशिष्टं यद् बहुमानपुरस्कृतम् । तच्च दत्त्वा नमश्चक्रे श्वस्थः श्वपतये विभुः । ९ ।
पानीयमात्रमुच्छेष्टं तच्चैकपरितर्पणम् । पात्यतः पुल्कसोऽभ्यागादपो देहशुभस्य मे । १० ।
तस्य तां करुणां वाचं निशम्य विपुलश्रमात् । कृपया भृशसन्तप्त इदमाहामृतं वचः । ११ ।
न कामयेऽहं गतिमीश्वरात् परामष्टर्द्धियुक्तामपुनर्भवं वा ।
आर्तिं प्रपद्येऽखिलदेहभाजामन्तःस्थितो येन भवन्त्यदुःखाः । १२ ।
क्षुत्तृड्भ्यो गात्रपरिश्रमश्च दैन्यं क्लमः शोकविषादमोहाः ।
सर्वे निवृत्ताः कृपणस्य जन्तोर्जीविषोर्जीवजलार्पणान्मे । १३ ।

* संयावस्तु घृतक्षारगुडनोभूमपाकजः ।

इति प्रभाष्य पानीयं प्रियमाणः पिपासया । पुल्कसायाददाद्दीरो निसर्गकरुणो नृपः । १४ ।
 तस्य त्रिभुवनाधीशः फलदाः फलमिच्छताम् । आत्मानं दर्शयाद्भक्तुर्माया विष्णुविनिर्मिताः । १५ ।
 स वै तेभ्यो नमस्कृत्य निःसङ्गो विगतस्पृहः । वासुदेवे भगवति भक्त्या चक्रे मनः परम् । १६ ।
 ईश्वरालम्बनं चित्तं कुर्वतोऽनन्यराधसः । माया गुणमयी राजन् स्वप्रवृत्तं प्रयत्नीयत । १७ ।
 तत्प्रसङ्गानुभावेन रन्तिदेवानुवर्तिनः । अभवन् योगिनः सर्वे नारायणपरायणाः । १८ ।

In the meantime, O ruler of the earth, while he was going to eat, having divided the remaining fare among themselves, yet another stranger came. Remembering Śrī Hari, he gave away to the newcomer, who was a Śūdra, a share of the food (already) divided (among themselves). (7) When the Śūdra had left, there came to him another stranger surrounded (followed) by dogs. He said, "O king, let food be given to me, seized (as I am) with hunger alongwith my followers (the dogs)." (8) Receiving the newcomer kindly, the king gave away with great reverence whatever was left to the dogs as well as to their master and bowed to them (as so many manifestations of the Lord). (9) There was but some water left, which was barely sufficient to slake the thirst of (only) one individual. When he was about to drink it, there unexpectedly came a Cāṇḍāla (one belonging to the lowest rank in Hindu society) saying, "(Kindly) give the water to me, an unlucky fellow." (10) Hearing that pitiful request, uttered with great effort (due to exhaustion), the king, who was sore stricken with pity, spoke the following nectar-like words:—(11) "I do not seek from the Lord the highest position attended with the eightfold Yogic power (Animā and so on) or even final beatitude (cessation of rebirth). Dwelling in their heart (as the sufferer) I would (rather) undergo the suffering of all embodied souls, so that (through such vicarious suffering of mine) they may be relieved of misery. (12) My exhaustion due to hunger and thirst, the weariness of my limbs, low spirits, langour, grief, despondency and infatuation have all disappeared on account of my giving away the water, which meant life to this miserable fellow, anxious to survive." (13) Having expressed such noble sentiments, the king, who was full of fortitude and merciful by nature, gave the water to the Cāṇḍāla, though himself dying of thirst. (14) The Lords of the three spheres (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva), who bestow rewards on those who seek them, and who appeared (a short while ago) in (three) illusory forms (viz., those of a Brāhmaṇa, Śūdra and a Cāṇḍāla) created by Lord Viṣṇu (in order to test the fortitude of Rantideva), (now) revealed themselves (in their own form) in his (Rantideva's) presence (15) Greeting them (all), Rantideva, who was (entirely) free from attachment and whose craving had altogether ceased, simply fixed his mind on Lord Vāsudeva with (great) devotion (and did not ask anything of them). (16) Māyā (the Lord's deluding potency)—consisting of the three Guṇas (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas)—dissolved like a dream into (its own source, viz.,) the Spirit, O king, in the case of Rantideva, who concentrated his mind on God and sought no other boon from Him (than Devotion to His feet). (17) By virtue of their close association with him, all that followed in the footsteps of Rantideva became Yogis exclusively devoted to Lord Nārāyaṇa. (18)

गर्गाच्छिन्तिस्तो गार्ग्यः क्षत्राद् ब्रह्म ह्यवर्तत । दुरितक्षयो महावीर्यात् तस्य त्रय्यारुणिः कविः । १९ ।
 पुष्करारुणिरित्यत्र ये ब्राह्मणगतिं गताः । बृहन्क्षत्रस्य पुत्रोऽभूदस्ती यद्धस्तिनापुरम् । २० ।
 अजमीढो द्विमीढश्च पुरुमीढश्च हस्तिनः । अजमीढस्य वंश्याः स्युः प्रियमेधादयो द्विजाः । २१ ।
 अजमीढाद् बृहद्विशुस्तस्य पुत्रो बृहद्भुजः । बृहत्कायस्ततस्तस्य पुत्र आसीज्यव्रथः । २२ ।
 तत्सुतो विशदस्तस्य सेनजित् समजायत । रुचिराश्वो दृढहनुः काश्यो वत्सश्च तत्सुताः । २३ ।
 रुचिराश्वसुतः पारः पृथुसेनस्तदात्मजः । पारस्य तनयो नीपस्तस्य पुत्रशतं त्वभूत् । २४ ।

स कृत्वां शुक्लकन्यायां ब्रह्मदत्तमजीजनत् । स योगी गवि भार्यायां विष्णुक्सेनमधात् सुतम् । १५ ।
जैगीषव्योपदेशेन योगतन्त्रं चकार ह । उदक्स्वनस्ततस्तस्माद् भल्लादो बार्हदीषवाः । १६ ।

From (the loins of) Garga sprang up Śini, of whom was born Gārgya. From him, indeed, even though he was a Kṣatriya, started a line of Brāhmaṇas. From Mahāvīrya appeared Duritakṣaya, whose sons were Trayyāruṇi, Kavi and Puṣkarāruṇi, who attained to Brahmanhood though born in a line of Kṣatriyas. Brhatkṣatra's son was Hastī, by whom was built (the city of) Hastināpura. (19-20) Hastī's sons were Ajamiḍha, Dwimiḍha and Purumiḍha. Priyamedha and other Brāhmaṇas were the progeny of Ajamiḍha. (21) From (the loins of) Ajamiḍha sprang up (another son) Bṛhadiṣu, whose son was Bṛhaddhanwā. Of the latter was born Bṛhatkāya, whose son was Jayadratha. (22) His son was Viśāda, to whom was born in course of time Senajit, Rucirāśwa, Dṛghahanu, Kāśya and Vatsa were the (four) sons of Senajit. (23) Rucirāśwa's son was Pāra, whose son (again) was (named) Pṛthusena. There was (another) son of Pāra, Nipa by name, who had no less than a hundred sons. (24) Through Kṛtvī, the daughter of Śuka* Nipa begot (another son) Brahmadatta. The latter, (who was) a Yogi, begot through his wife Gau (Saraswatī), (a son named) Viṣwakṣena. (25) Inspired by the teachings of Jaigīṣavya, it is said, he produced a work on Yoga. From (the loins of) Viṣwakṣena sprang up Udaḥswana and from him followed Bhallāda. These are the descendants of Bṛhadiṣu. (26)

यवीनरो द्विमीढस्य कृतिमांस्तसुतः स्मृतः । नाम्ना सत्यधृतिर्यस्य दुद्धनेमिः सुपार्श्वकृत् । १७ ।
सुपार्श्वत् सुमतस्तस्य पुत्रः सन्नतिमांस्ततः । कृतिर्हिण्यनाभाद् यो योगं प्राप्य जगौ स्रष्टुः । १८ ।
संहिताः प्राच्यसाम्नां वै नीपो ह्युग्रायुधस्ततः । तस्य क्षेप्यः सुवीरोऽथ सुवीरस्य रिपुञ्जयः । १९ ।
ततो बहुदुथो नाम पुरुमीढोऽप्रजोऽभवत् । नलिन्यामजमीढस्य नीलः शान्तिः सुतस्ततः । २० ।
शान्तेः सुशान्तिस्तसुत्रः पुरुजोऽर्कस्ततोऽभवत् । भर्माश्चिस्तनयस्तस्य पञ्चासन्मुद्गलादयः । २१ ।
यवीनरो बृहदिषुः कामिल्यः संजयः सुताः । भर्माश्चः प्राह पुत्रा मे पञ्चानां रक्षणाय हि । २२ ।
विषयाणामलमिमे इति पञ्चालसंज्ञिताः । मुद्गलाद् ब्रह्म निर्वृत्तं गोत्रं मौद्गल्यसंज्ञितम् । २३ ।

Dwimiḍha's son was Yavinara, whose son is remembered by the name of Kṛtimān. His son was Satyadhṛti by name, whose son, Dṛghanemi, begot Supārśwa. (27) From Supārśwa followed Sumati, whose son was Sannatimān. From (the loins of) the latter appeared Kṛti, who having received instruction in Yoga from Hiranyanābha taught (separately) indeed the six Saṃhitās (or collections of sacred texts) known as Prācyasāmas. His son to be sure was Nipa, from whom followed Ugrāyudha. His son was Kṣemya, of whom was born Suvīra, whose son was Ripuñjaya. (28-29) From (the loins of) the latter appeared a son named Bahuratha. (Dwimiḍha's younger brother) Purumiḍha remained issueless. Ajamiḍha's son, through his (second) wife Nalinī, was Nila, of whom was born a son, Śānti (by name). (30) Śānti's son was Suśānti, and Suśānti's son was Puruḥ, of whom was born Arka. His son was Bharmyāśwa, who had five sons (viz.,) Mudgala, Yavinara, Bṛhadiṣu, Kāmpilya and Sañjaya. Bharmyāśwa said, "These five sons of mine are competent enough to protect five lands." Hence, they were known as the Pañcālas. From Mudgala sprang up a line of Brāhmaṇas called the Maudgalyas. (31—33)

मिश्रुने मुद्गलाद् भार्याद् दिवोदासः पुमानभूत् । अहल्या कन्यका यस्यां शतानन्दस्तु गौतमात् । ३४ ।

* Although Śuka (the son of Vedavyāsa) renounced his father's home even without being invested with the sacred thread, and remained a celibate ever afterwards, he is said to have left for the solace of his disconsolate father a shadow-form of his, known by the name of Chāyāśuka, who lived as a householder and begot children.

तस्य सत्यधृतिः पुत्रो धनुर्वेदविशारदः । शरद्वांस्तत्सुतो यस्मादुर्वशीदर्शनात् किल । ३५ ।
 शरस्तम्बेऽपतद् रेतो मिथुनं तदभूच्छुभम् । तद् दृष्ट्वा कृपयागृह्णाच्छन्तनुर्मृगायां चरन् ।
 कृपः कुमारः कन्या च द्रोणपत्न्यभवत् कृपी । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे एकविंशोऽध्यायः । ३१ ।

From (the loins of) Mudgala, son of Bhārmyāśwa, appeared a pair (a son and a daughter), of whom the male was (named) Divodāsa and the girl became known as Ahalyā; of the latter through the sage Gautama (her husband) was born Śātānanda. (34) His son, Satyadhṛti, was an adept in archery. His son was Śaradvān, so-called because his seed, it is said, fell at the sight of Urvaśī on a clump of reeds (Śaras). The seed (however) assumed the form of a blessed pair. Seeing that pair, King Śāntanu, who was wandering in pursuit of game, picked it up out of compassion. The boy came to be Kṛpa, (a teacher of the Kauravas) and the girl Kṛpī, who (later on) became Droṇācārya's wife. (35-36)

Thus ends the twenty-first discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXII

The genealogy of the Pañcālas, the Kurus and the kings of Magadha

श्रीशुक उवाच

मित्रेयुश्च दिवोदासाच्च्यवनस्तत्सुतो नृप । सुदासः सहदेवोऽथ सोमको जन्तुजन्मकृत् । १ ।
 तस्य पुत्रशतं तेषां यवीयान् पृषतः सुतः । द्रुपदो द्रौपदी तस्य धृष्टद्युम्नादयः सुताः । २ ।
 धृष्टद्युम्नाद् धृष्टकेतुर्भार्म्याः पञ्चालका इमे । योजमीडसुतो हन्य ऋक्षः संवरणस्ततः । ३ ।
 तपत्यां सूर्यकन्यायां कुरुक्षेत्रपतिः कुरुः । परीक्षित् सुधनुर्जङ्घनिषथाश्चः कुरोः सुताः । ४ ।
 सुहोत्रोऽभूत् सुधनुषश्च्यवनोऽथ ततः कृती । वसुस्तस्योपरिचरो बृहद्रथमुखास्ततः । ५ ।
 कुशाब्जमत्स्यप्रत्यग्रचेदिपाद्याश्च चेदिपाः । बृहद्रथात् कुशाग्रोऽभूत्पुषभस्तस्य तत्सुतः । ६ ।
 जज्ञे सत्यहितोऽपत्यं पुष्यवांस्तत्सुतो जहुः । अन्यस्यां चापि भार्यायां शकले द्वे बृहद्रथात् । ७ ।
 ते मात्रा बहिरुत्सृष्टे जरया चाभिसन्धिते । जीव जीवेति क्रीडन्त्या जरासन्धोऽभवत् सुतः । ८ ।
 ततश्च सहदेवोऽभूत् सोमापिर्यच्छुतश्रवाः । परीक्षिद्वनपत्योऽभूत् सुरथो नाम जाह्नवः । ९ ।
 ततो विदूरथस्तस्मात् सार्वभौमस्ततोऽभवत् । जयसेनस्तत्तनयो राधिकोऽतोऽयुतो ह्यभूत् । १० ।
 ततश्च क्रोधनस्तस्माद् देवातिथिरमुष्य च । ऋष्यस्तस्य दिलीपोऽभूत् प्रतीपस्तस्य चात्मजः । ११ ।
 देवापिः शन्तनुस्तस्य बाह्लीक इति चात्मजाः । पितृराज्यं परित्यज्य देवापिस्तु वनं गतः । १२ ।
 अभवच्छन्तू राजा प्राङ्महाभिषसंज्ञितः । यं यं कराभ्यां स्पृशति जीर्णं यौवनमेति सः । १३ ।
 शान्तिमाप्नोति चैवाग्र्यां कर्मणा तेन शन्तनुः । समा द्वादश तद्राज्ये न ववर्ष यदा विभुः । १४ ।

शन्तनुर्ब्राह्मणैरुक्तः परिवेत्तायमग्रभुक् । राज्यं देहप्रजायाशु पुराष्ट्रविवृद्धये । १५ ।
 एवमुक्तो द्विजैर्येष्टं छन्दयामास सोऽब्रवीत् । तन्मन्त्रिप्रहितैर्विप्रेर्वेदाद् विभ्रशितो गिरा । १६ ।
 वेदवादातिवादान् वै तदा देवो बवर्ष ह । देवापियोगमास्थाय कलापग्राममाश्रितः । १७ ।
 सोमवंशे कलौ नष्टे कृतादौ स्थापयिष्यति । बाह्मीकात् सोमदत्तोऽभूद् धूरिधूरिश्रिवास्ततः । १८ ।
 शलश्च शन्तेनोरासीद् गङ्गायां धीम आत्मवान् । सर्वधर्मविदां श्रेष्ठो महाभागवतः कविः । १९ ।
 वीर्यूथाग्रणीयेन रामोऽपि युधि तोषितः । शन्तनोर्दाशकन्यायां जज्ञे चित्राङ्गदः सुतः । २० ।
 विचित्रवीर्यश्चावरजो नाम्ना चित्राङ्गदो हतः । यस्यां पराशरात् साक्षादवतीर्णो हरेः कला । २१ ।
 वेदगुप्तो मुनिः कृष्णो यतोऽहमिदमध्यगाम् । हित्वा स्वशिष्यान् पैलादीन् भगवान् बादरायणः । २२ ।
 मह्यं पुत्राय शान्ताय परं गृह्यमिदं जगौ । विचित्रवीर्योऽथोवाह काशिराजसुते बलात् । २३ ।
 स्वयंवरादुपानीते अम्बिकाम्बालिके उभे । तयोरासक्तहृदयो गृहीतो यक्ष्मणा मृतः । २४ ।
 क्षेत्रेऽग्रजस्य वै भ्रातुर्मात्रोक्तो बादरायणः । धृतराष्ट्रं च पाण्डुं च विदुरं चाय्यजीजन्त । २५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : From (the loins of) Divodāsa appeared Mitreyu; and his sons, O protector of men, were Cyavana, Sudāsa, Sahadeva and Somaka, the father of Jantu. (In fact,) Somaka had a hundred sons, of whom Prṣata was the youngest. His son was Drupada, whose sons (again) were Dhṛṣṭadyumna and others; while Draupadī was his daughter. (1-2) From (the loins of) Dhṛṣṭadyumna appeared Dhṛṣṭaketu. These are the scions of Bharmyāśwa, also known as the Pañcalas. From (the loins of) Ṛkṣa, who was another son of Ajamiḍha, appeared Saṁvaraṇa. (3) From his loins appeared, through Tapatī, a daughter of the sun-god, Kuru, the lord of Kurukṣetra. Parīkṣit, Sudhanvā, Jahnu and Niṣadhaśwa were the sons of Kuru. (4) Sudhanvā's son was Suhotra, from whom followed Cyavana; and of Cyavana was born Kṛti. His son was Uparicara Vasu, of whom were born Bhadratha and others. (5) (Of them) Kuśāmba, Matsya, Pratyagra, Cedipa and others were the rulers of the kingdom of Cedi. From (the loins of) Bhadratha sprang up Kuśāgra. His son was Rṣabha. Of the latter was born a son, Satyahita (by name) whose son was Puṣpavān and the son of the last-named was Jahu. From (the loins of) Bhadratha through another wife appeared two halves (of a fully developed human foetus). (6-7) They were thrown away by the mother and were sportingly joined together by (an ogress named) Jarā, uttering the words "Live ! Live !!" and there appeared the son, Jarāsandha (united by Jarā) (by name). (8) Of him was born Sahadeva, and from (the loins of) Sahadeva appeared Somāpi, from whom appeared Śrutaśravā. (Of the four sons of Kuru,) Parīkṣit, (the eldest) remained issueless, while Jahu's son was named Suratha. (9) From the loins of the latter sprang up Vidūratha, of whom Sārvabhauma was born; and from Sārvabhauma followed Jayasena, whose son was Rādhika and from (the loins of) the last-named indeed appeared Ayuta. (10) From (the loins of) Ayuta, again, sprang up Krodhana, of whom was born Devātīthi; and his son was Rṣya. The son of Rṣya was Dilīpa whose son, again, was Pratīpa. (11) Devāpi, Śantanu and Bāhlika—these were the sons of Pratīpa. Relinquishing his (claim to the) ancestral kingdom, Devāpi, for his part, retired to the forest. (12) (Hence his younger brother) Śantanu, who was called by the name of Mahābhīṣa (a great physician) in his previous birth, became the king. (Even in that life) whatever old man he touched with his hands would regain his youth and also experience great relief. Through this act of his he came to be known as Śantanu (affording relief to one's body). (Once upon a time) when Indra (the god of rain) did not send down showers in his kingdom for a period of twelve years, Śantanu (on approaching and seeking the advice of Brāhmaṇas) was replied to by the Brāhmaṇas (as follows):—He (too) who (like you) enjoys sovereignty first (in the presence of his elder brother) falls under the category of Parivettā* (and is therefore a sinner in the eyes of the Śāstras). (Hence) return the kingdom at once to your elder brother (Devāpi) for the prosperity of the city as well as of the state (which depends on a good rainfall, the latter having been obstructed by your aforesaid sin)." (13—15) Thus exhorted by the Brāhmaṇas, Śantanu (approached and) tried to persuade his elder brother (Devāpi) to accept the throne. Having (already) been led away from (the path of) the Vedas by Brāhmaṇas—sent (to him in advance) by Śantanu's minister (Aśmarātā)—through their speech (expressing heretical views), Devāpi, however, spoke words blaspheming the teachings of the Vedas. It is then that the god of rain released showers (because Devāpi now became disqualified for the throne due to his apostasy and Śantanu ceased to be guilty any more). Devāpi (who was eventually disillusioned) took to (the practice of) Yoga and took up his abode in Kalāpagrāma (where he is still residing). (16-17) When the lunar dynasty gets extinct in Kaliyuga, he will revive it at the dawn of (the following) Satyayuga. From (the loins of) Bāhlika (Śantanu's younger brother) appeared Somadutta, from whom followed Bhūri, Bhūriśravā and Śala. Śantanu's son by (the goddess presiding over the holy) Gaṅgā (who under a curse from Brahmā got a human form and chose Śantanu for her husband) was Bhīṣma, a man of (perfect) self-control, the foremost among those who knew what is right, a great devotee of the Lord (and) spiritually enlightened (too). (18-19) He was a (recognized) leader of troops of heroes, by whom even Paraśurāma (his own Guru and a world-renowned warrior) was pleased in battle. From (the loins of) Śantanu through (his other wife) Satyawatī (the foster-daughter of a chief† of Dāsas or ferrymen) appeared a son (named) Citrāṅgada, and (also) a younger son, Vicitravīrya (by name). Citrāṅgada was killed in battle, (while he was still unmarried, by a Gandharva of the same name). Through the same Satyawatī (before she was married to Śantanu) appeared, from the loins of Parāśara, a ray of Śrī Hari Himself in the person of the sage Kṛṣṇa (better known as Kṛṣṇa-Dwaipāyana), by whom the Vedas have been (duly) preserved (by being divided into four books viz., Ṛk, Yajus, Sāma and Atharva) and from whom I learnt this (Śrīmad Bhāgavata Mahāpurāṇa, which I am reciting to you). In preference to his own pupils, Paila and others,‡ the divine Bādarāyaṇa taught this supremely esoteric poem (embodying the quintessence of all the Vedas and Itihāsas) to me, his son, tranquil (by nature) as I was. Now, Vicitravīrya married Ambikā and Ambālikā, the two daughters of the king of Kāśī (the modern Banaras), both of whom were carried away by force from the gathering of princes convened (by their father) to give them an opportunity to elect their husband. (With his heart strongly attached to them) Vicitravīrya was caught in the grip of phthisis and died (very young). (20—24) Enjoined by the mother (Satyawatī), the sage Bādarāyaṇa begot through the wives of his half-brother (Vicitravīrya) Dhṛtarāṣṭra and Pāṇḍu (the former through Ambikā and the latter through Ambālikā) as well as Vidura (through a maid-servant). (25)

* The Smṛti says:—

दायगिहोत्सवोऽयं कुर्वते योऽग्रे स्थिते।
परिवेत्ता स विज्ञेयः परिवित्तस्तु पूर्वजः॥

"He who marries or installs the sacred fire (offering oblations to it thrice everyday) in the presence of (before) an elder brother should be recognized as a Parivettā and the elder brother so ignored should be called a Parivitti."

† Satyawatī (also known as Matsyagandhā or Yojanagandhā) was really a daughter of Uparicara Vasu (mentioned in verse 5 above), whose seed was swallowed by a fish and ultimately developed into a human foetus, which was cut out of the belly of the fish by the aforesaid ferrymen and presented to their chief, who brought it up as his own child.

‡ For their names vide I. iv. 21-22.

गान्धार्या धृतराष्ट्रस्य जज्ञे पुत्रशतं नृप । तत्र दुर्योधनो ज्येष्ठो दुःशला चापि कन्यका । २६ ।

शापान्मैथुनरुद्धस्य पाण्डोः कुन्त्यां महारथाः । जाता धर्मानिलेन्द्रेभ्यो युधिष्ठिरमुखास्त्रयः । २७ ।

A hundred sons were born to Dhṛtarāṣṭra by (his wife) Gāndhārī (a princess of Gāndhāra, the modern Afghanistan), O protector of men ! Of them Duryodhana was the eldest and there was a Daughter also, Duḥśalā (by name). (26) Through Kunti, the (elder) wife of Pāṇḍu, who was prevented from copulation due to a curse (pronounced by some sage who had been shot dead with an arrow by Pāṇḍu while pairing with his wife in the form of a pair of deer), three car-warriors—Yudhiṣṭhira and others (viz., Bhīma and Arjuna)—appeared (severally) from the loins of Dharma (the god of piety), Anila (the wind-god) and Indra (the lord of paradise). (27)

नकुलः सहदेवश्च माद्र्यां नासत्यदस्त्रयोः । द्रौपद्यां पञ्च पञ्चभ्यः पुत्रास्ते पितरोऽभवन् । २८ ।

युधिष्ठिरात् प्रतिविन्द्याः श्रुतसेनो वृकोदरात् । अर्जुनाच्छ्रुतकीर्तिस्तु शतानीकस्तु नाकुलिः । २९ ।

सहदेवसुतो राजञ्जुतकर्मा तथापरे । युधिष्ठिरात् तु पौरव्यां देवकोऽथ घटोत्कचः । ३० ।

भीमसेनाड्डिम्बायां काल्यां सर्वगतस्ततः । सहदेवात् सुहोत्रे तु विजयासूत पार्वती । ३१ ।

करेणुमत्यां नकुलो निरमित्रं तथार्जुनः । इरावन्तमुलूयां वै सुतायां बभ्रुवाहनम् ।

मणिपूरपतेः सोऽपि तत्पुत्रः पुत्रिकासुतः । ३२ ।

तव तातः सुभद्रायामभिमन्युरजायत । सर्वातिरथजिद् वीर उत्तरायां ततो भवान् । ३३ ।

परिक्षीणेषु कुरुषु द्रौणैर्ब्राह्मस्त्रतेजसा । त्वं च कृष्णानुभावेन सजीवो मेचितोऽन्तकात् । ३४ ।

(And) through (his second wife) Mādrī appeared Nakula and Sahadeva from (the loins of) Nāsatiya and Dasra (the two Aświnikumāras). Of these, five sons, (all) your uncles, were born (one of each) through Draupadī. (28) Prativindhya was born of Yudhiṣṭhira; Śrutasena from Bhīmasena, (who was voracious as a wolf) and Śrutakīrti, from Arjuna. Again, Śatānīka was the son of Nakula; while Sahadeva's son, O Parīkṣit, was Śrutakarmā. Besides (these) there were other sons (too). From (the loins of) Yudhiṣṭhira through (his other wife) Pauravi appeared Devaka; from Bhīmasena through Hidimbā (an ogress) sprang up Ghaṭotkaca, and from (the selfsame) Bhīma through Kālī (his third wife) appeared Sarvagata. And through Sahadeva, (his second wife) Vijayā, the daughter of Parvata, bore Suhotra. (29—31) Nakula begot Niramitra through (his second wife) Kareṇumatī and Arjuna begot Irāvān indeed through Ulūpī; while through the daughter of the king of Maṇipūra (the modern Manipur in Assam), he begot Babhruvāhana, who though sprung from the loins of Arjuna was recognized as the son of his maternal grandfather (inasmuch as the princess of Manipur was given in marriage to Arjuna on the express understanding that the son born of her would be taken in adoption by her father). (32) Of Subhadrā (the last wife of Arjuna and the younger sister of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa) was born your father, the valiant Abhimanyu, who conquered all the Atrirathas* (great car-warriors who encountered him on the battle-field). And from him through Uttarā appeared you (O Parīkṣit!). (33) (All) the Kurus (with the exception of the five Pāṇḍava brothers) having perished, you too had (almost) been burnt by the (fierce) blaze of the mystic missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator), released by Aśwatthāmā (the son of Droṇācārya). But by the (supreme) might of Śrī Kṛṣṇa you were rescued alive from (the jaws of) death. (34)

* A car-warrior who encounters numberless adversaries on the battle-field is known as an Atriratha: 'अमितात् योभयेद् यस्तु सः' स्यात्कीर्तिरथस्तु सः'

तवेमे तनयास्तात जनमेजयपूर्वकाः । श्रुतसेनो भीमसेन उग्रसेनश्च वीर्यवान् । ३५ ।
 जनमेजयस्त्वां विदित्वा तक्षकान्निधनं गतम् । सर्पान् वै सर्पयागाग्नौ स ह्येष्विति रुषाञ्चितः । ३६ ।
 कावषेयं पुरोधाय तुरं तुरगमेधयाद् । समन्तात् पृथिवीं सर्वां जित्वा यक्ष्यति चाध्वरैः । ३७ ।
 तस्य पुत्रः शतानीको याज्ञवल्क्यात् त्रयीं पठन् । अस्त्रज्ञानं क्रियाज्ञानं शौनकात् परमेष्यति । ३८ ।
 सहस्रानीकस्तत्पुत्रस्ततश्चैवाश्वमेधजः । असीमकृष्णस्तस्यापि नेमिक्रस्तु तत्सुतः । ३९ ।
 गजाह्वये हते नद्या कौशाम्ब्यां साधु वत्स्यति । उक्तस्ततश्चित्रथस्तस्मात् कविरथः सुतः । ४० ।
 तस्माच्च वृष्टिमांस्तस्य सुषेणोऽथ महीपतिः । सुनीथस्तस्य भविता नृचक्षुर्यत् सुखीनलः । ४१ ।
 परिप्लवः सुतस्तस्मान्मेधावी सुनयात्मजः । नृपञ्जयस्ततो दूर्वास्तिमितस्तस्याजनिष्यति । ४२ ।
 तिमेर्बृहद्रथस्तस्माच्छतानीकः । सुदासजः । शतानीकाद् दुर्दमनस्तस्यापत्यं बहीनरः । ४३ ।
 दण्डपाणिर्निमित्तस्य क्षेमको भविता नृपः । ब्रह्मक्षत्रस्य वै प्रोक्तो वंशो देवर्षिसत्कृतः । ४४ ।
 क्षेमकं प्राप्य राजानं संस्थां प्राप्स्यति वै कलौ । अथ मागधराजानो भवितारो वदामि ते । ४५ ।

Here are your (own) sons, O dear Parikṣit—Janamejaya and others following him, (viz.,) Śrutasena, Bhimasena and Ugrasena; each of them possessed of (great) valour. (35) Perceiving you to have met your death through (the serpent) Takṣaka, the said Janamejaya, full of rage, will (attract by means of spells and) actually offer serpents as an oblation to the flames in a serpent-sacrifice. Having conquered the entire globe on all sides and appointing Tura, the son of Kavaṣa, as his priest, Janamejaya, (who will be celebrated as) a performer of horse-sacrifices, will propitiate the Lord through a number of (such) sacrifices. (36-37) His son, Śatānika, will learn the three Vedas and receive the knowledge of rituals from the sage Yājñavalkya and acquire knowledge of (the use of) missiles (from Kṛpācārya) and will attain the highest knowledge (knowledge of the Self) from the sage Śaunaka. (38) Śatānika's son will be Sahasrānika, and of him will be born Aśwamedhaja. His son, again, will be Asimakṛṣṇa, whose son on the other hand will be Nemicakra. (39) On Hastināpura being washed away by the river (Gaṅgā) he will duly settle down in (the city of) Kauśāmbī. The son sprung from his loins is called Citraratha, and of him will be born a son named Kaviratha. (40) From him, again, will follow Vṛṣṭimān, whose son, Suṣeṇa, of course will be a king. His son will be Sunitha and Sunitha's son will be Nṛcakṣu, from whom will follow Sukhīnala. (41) His son will be Pariplava, from whom will follow Sunaya and his son will be Medhāvi. Medhāvi's son will be Nṛpañjaya, of whom will be born Dūrva and from (the loins of) the latter will appear Timi. (42) Timi's son will be Bṛhadratha, from whom will follow Sudāsa, and his son will be Śatānika. From (the loins of) Śatānika will appear Durdama, whose son will be Vahinara. (43) From Vahinara will follow Daṇḍapāṇi and of Daṇḍapāṇi will be born Nimi, whose son Kṣemaka will be a ruler of men. An account of the line of Pūru, from which sprang up races of (both) Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas, and which is esteemed by gods and Ṛṣis (alike), has indeed been told (by me). (44) Having reached up to Kṣemaka, this line as a matter of fact will come to an end in (the age of) Kali. Now, I shall enumerate the future kings of Magadha (South Bihar). (45)

भविता सहदेवस्य मार्जारिर्यच्छुतश्रवाः । ततोऽयुतायुस्तस्यापि निरमित्रोऽथ तत्सुतः । ४६ ।
 सुनक्षत्रः सुनक्षत्राद् बृहत्सेनोऽथ कर्मजित् । ततः सुतञ्जयाद् विप्रः शुचिस्तस्य भविष्यति । ४७ ।
 क्षेमोऽथ सुव्रतस्तस्माद् धर्मसूत्रः शमस्ततः । द्युमत्सेनोऽथ सुपतिः सुबलो जिनिता ततः । ४८ ।
 सुनीथः सत्यजिदथ विश्वजिद् यद् रिपुञ्जयः । बार्हद्रथाश्च भूपाला भाव्याः साहस्रवत्सरम् । ४९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः । १२१ ।

The son of Sahadeva (Jarāsandha's son) will be Mārjāri, of whom will be Śrutaśravā. From him will follow Ayutāyu. His son, again, will be Niramitra and his son will be Sunakṣatra. From (the loins of) Sunakṣatra will appear Brhatsena, and from him will follow Karmajit. Then will come Sṛtañjaya and (from the loins of) the latter will spring up Vipra, whose son will be Śuci. Then will come Kṣema, from whom will follow Suvrata. From (the loins of) Suvrata will appear Dharmasūtra, from whom will follow Śama. Then will appear Dyumatsena, and from Dyumatsena will follow Sumati, of whom will be born Subala. (46—48) Then will come Sunitha, of whom will be born Satyajit. His son will be Viśwajit, from whom will follow Ripuñjaya. And the (said) Brhadratha's line will rule for a thousand years. (49)

*Thus ends the twenty-second discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise
known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIII

An account of the posterity of Anu, Druhyu, Turvasu and Yadu

श्रीशुक उवाच

अनोः सभानरश्चक्षुः परोक्षश्च त्रयः सुताः । सभानरात् कालनरः सृज्यस्तत्सुतस्ततः । १ ।
जनमेजयस्तस्य पुत्रो महाशीलो महामनाः । उशीनरस्तितिक्षुश्च महामनस आत्मजौ । २ ।
शिबिर्वनः शर्मिर्दक्षश्चत्वारोऽशीनरात्मजाः । वृषादर्धः सुवीरश्च मद्रः कैकेय आत्मजाः । ३ ।
शिबेश्चत्वार एवासंस्तितिक्षोश्च रुद्रश्च । ततो हेमोऽथ सुतपा बलिः सुतपसोऽभवत् । ४ ।
अङ्गवङ्गकलिङ्गाद्याः सुहृदपुण्ड्राश्चसंज्ञिताः । जज्ञिरे दीर्घतमसो बलैः क्षेत्रे महीक्षितः । ५ ।
चक्रुः खनाम्ना विषयान् षडिमान् प्राच्यकांश्च ते । खनपानोऽङ्गतो जज्ञे तस्माद् दिविरथस्ततः । ६ ।
सुतो धर्मरथो यस्य जज्ञे चित्ररथोऽप्रजाः । रोमपाद इति ख्यातस्तस्मै दशरथः सखा । ७ ।
शान्तां स्वकन्यां प्रायच्छदृष्यशङ्क उवाह ताम् । देवेऽवर्षति च रामा अनिन्युर्हीरणीसुतम् । ८ ।
नाट्यसङ्गीतवादित्रैर्विभ्रमालिङ्गनार्हणैः । स तु राज्ञोऽनपत्यस्य निरूप्येष्टि मरुत्वतः । ९ ।
प्रजामदाद् दशरथो येन लेभेऽप्रजाः प्रजाः । चतुरङ्गो रोमपादात् पृथुलाक्षस्तु तत्सुतः । १० ।
बृहद्रथो बृहत्कर्मा बृहद्भानुश्च तत्सुताः । आद्याद् बृहन्मनास्तस्माज्ययत्र उदाहृतः । ११ ।
विजयस्तस्य सम्भृत्यां ततो धृतिरजायत । ततो धृतिव्रतस्तस्य सत्कर्माधिरथस्ततः । १२ ।
योऽसौ गङ्गातटे क्रीडन् मञ्जुपान्तर्गतं शिशुम् । कुन्त्यपविद्धं कानीनमनपत्योऽकरोत् सुतम् । १३ ।
वृषसेनः सुतस्तस्य कर्णस्य जगतीपतेः । द्रुह्योश्च तनयो बभूवुः सेतुस्तस्यात्मजस्ततः । १४ ।
आरव्यस्तस्य गाथारस्तस्य धर्मस्ततो धृतः । धृतस्य दुर्मनास्तस्मात् प्रचेताः प्राचेतसं शतम् । १५ ।
प्लेच्छाधिपतयोऽभूवन्नुदीचीं दिशमाश्रिताः । तुर्वसोश्च सुनो बह्विर्वहेर्भगोऽथ भानुमान् । १६ ।
त्रिभानुस्तत्सुतोऽस्यापि कश्यप उदारधीः । मरुतस्तत्सुतोऽपुत्रः पुत्रं पौरवमन्वभूत् । १७ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Sabhānara, Cakṣu and Parokṣa were the three sons of Anu. From (the loins of) Sabhānara appeared Kālanara and his son was Śrñjaya. From him followed Janamejaya, whose son was Mahāśīla and his son was Mahāmanā. Uśīnara and Titikṣu were the sons of Mahāmanā. (1-2) Śibi, Vana, Śamī and Dakṣa—were the four sons of Uśīnara. (Similarly) Vṛṣādarbha, Śuvīra, Madra and Kaikeya were the only four sons of Śibi. And Titikṣu's son was Ruśadratha, of whom was born Hema; and then came Sutaṭā, whose son was Bali. (3-4) Through the wife of Bali (who evidently remained issueless) appeared from (the loins of) the sage Dirghatamā (six) sons—all rulers of the earth—bearing the names of Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kaliṅga, Suhma, Puṇḍra and Andhra, the first three being the foremost of them. (5) They founded after their own names six principalities, (all) lying in the east. Of Aṅga (the eldest of them) was born Khanapāna, from whom followed Diviratha; and from Diviratha followed his son Dharmaratha, of whom was born Citraratha, who had no issue and was (better) known as Romapāda. To him, his friend, the (celebrated) King Daśaratha (the father of Lord Śrī Rāma) gave in adoption his own daughter Śāntā: the sage Ṛṣyaśṛṅga married her. On Indra (the god of rain) withholding showers, courtezans drew (to the Aṅga territory) the sage Ṛṣyaśṛṅga (born of a deer) by their dance and music, (both) vocal and instrumental, as well as by their coquetry, (loving) embrace and presents (of various kinds), Conducting a sacrifice in honour of Indra, the sage also secured progeny for the issueless king (Romapāda). And through a similar sacrifice conducted by him the issueless Emperor Daśaratha (too) got (four celebrated) sons. Of Romapāda was born Caturaṅga and his son was Pṛthulākṣa. (6—10) Pṛthulākṣa's sons were Bṛhadratha, Bṛhatkarmā and Bṛhadbhānu. From (the loins of) the eldest (Bṛhadratha) appeared Bṛhanmanā, the son born of whom was called Jayadratha. (11) His son by (his wife) Sambhūtī was Vijaya, of whom was born Dhṛti. From Dhṛti followed Dhṛtavrata, whose son was Satkarmā and from (the loins of) the latter appeared Adhiratha. (12) While sporting on the bank of the (holy) Gaṅgā, the latter, who was issueless, (caught hold of and) adopted as his son the baby (Karma) born of Kuntī (while she was still unmarried) and (therefore) abandoned by her (for fear of obloquy), enclosed in a box. (13) Vṛṣasena was the son of the aforesaid Karma, who (eventually) became a king. Again, Babhru was the son of Druhyu and Babhru's son was Setu. Of him was born Ārabdhā, whose son was Gāndhāra and Gāndhāra's son was Dharma. From him followed Dhṛta and Dhṛta's son was Durmanā. From (the loins of) the latter appeared Pracetā. The hundred sons of Pracetā became the rulers of Mlecchas (barbarians) and settled in the northern quarter. Again Vahni was the son of Turvasu and Vahni's son was Bharga, from whom followed Bhānumān. (14—16) His son was Tribhānu and Tribhānu's son, again, was the generous-minded Karandhama. His son was Maruta, who, being issueless, adopted as his son Duṣyanta (a scion of Pūru). (17)

दुष्यन्तः स पुनर्भेजे स्वं वंशं राज्यकामुकः। ययातेज्यैष्ठ्यपुत्रस्य यदोर्वीशं नरर्षभ॥१८॥
 वर्णयामि महापुण्यं सर्वपापहरं नृणाम्। यदोर्वीशं नरः श्रुत्वा सर्वपापैः प्रमुच्यते॥१९॥
 यत्रावतीर्णो भगवान् परमात्मा नराकृतिः। यदोः सहस्रजित्क्रोष्टा नलो रिपुरिति श्रुताः॥२०॥
 चत्वारः सूनवस्तत्र शतजित् प्रथमात्मजः। महाहयो वेणुहयो हैहयश्चेति तत्सुताः॥२१॥
 धर्मस्तु हैहयसुतो नेत्रः कुन्तेः पिता ततः। सोहज्जिरभवत् कुन्तेर्महिष्मान् भद्रसेनकः॥२२॥
 दुर्मदो भद्रसेनस्य धनकः कृतवीर्यसूः। कृताग्रिः कृतवर्मा च कृतौजा धनकात्मजाः॥२३॥
 अर्जुनः कृतवीर्यस्य सप्तद्वीपेश्वरोऽभवत्। दत्तात्रेयाद्ध्वरोऽंशात् प्राप्तयोगमहागुणः॥२४॥
 न नूनं कार्तवीर्यस्य गतिं यास्यन्ति पार्थिवाः। यज्ञदानतपोयोगश्चतुर्वीर्यजयादिभिः॥२५॥

पञ्चाशीतिसहस्राणि ह्यव्याहतबलः समाः । अनष्टवितस्मरणो बुभुजेऽक्षय्ययड्वसु । २६ ।
तस्य पुत्रसहस्रेषु पञ्चैवोर्वरिता मृधे । जयध्वजः शूरसेनो वृषभो मधुरूर्जितः । २७ ।

Longing for the (imperial) throne, however, the said Duṣyanta reverted to his own line. (Now,) O jewel of men, I (proceed to) give an account of the posterity of Yadu, the eldest son of Yayāti, which is productive of extraordinary religious merit and capable of wiping out all the sins of men. A man is completely rid of all sins by listening to an account of Yadu's line, in which the almighty Lord, the supreme Spirit, took His descent in the semblance of a man. Sahasrajit, Kroṣṭā, Nala and Ripu were the four celebrated sons of Yadu. Of these (four), the son of the eldest was Śatajit; and Mahāhaya, Veṇuhaya and Haihaya were the sons of Śatajit. (18—21) Haihaya's son again was Dharma and from him followed Netra, the father of Kunti. From (the loins of) Kunti sprang up Sohañji. Then followed Māhiṣmān, whose son was Bhadrāsena. (22) Durmada and Dhanaka were the (two) sons of Bhadrāsena, the latter of whom was the father of Kṛtavīrya. Kṛtāgni, Kṛtavarmā and Kṛtauja were the (other) sons of Dhanaka. (23) Arjuna, the son of Kṛtavīrya, became the ruler of (all) the seven divisions of the globe. He (further) attained from Lord Dattātreyā, a part manifestation of Śrī Hari, proficiency in Yoga (concentration of mind) as well as great achievements (in the form of the eight mystic powers). (24) Surely, no (other) kings (iit, rulers of the earth) will attain to the level of Arjuna (the son of Kṛtavīrya, in point of sacrificial performances, munificence, asceticism, Yogic power, learning, valour, victory and so on.) (25) Indeed for eighty-five thousand years he enjoyed the objects of the six senses, which could not be exhausted, his strength (of body, mind and senses too) remaining unimpaired and his very thought proving (for the people who remembered him) a security against loss of wealth. (26) Of thousands of his sons, only five survived in battle (with Paraśurāma)—Jayadhwaja, Śūrasena, Vṛṣabha, Madhu and Ūrjita. (27)

जयध्वजात् तालजङ्घस्तस्य पुत्रशतं त्वभूत् । क्षत्रं यत् तालजङ्घाख्यमौर्वतजोपसंहृतम् । २८ ।
तेषां ज्येष्ठो वीतिहोत्रो वृष्णिः पुत्रो मधोः स्मृतः । तस्य पुत्रशतं त्वासीद् वृष्णिज्येष्ठं यतः कुलम् । २९ ।
माधवा वृष्णयो राजन् यादवाश्चेति संज्ञिताः । यदुपुत्रस्य च क्रोष्टोः पुत्रो वृजिनवांस्ततः । ३० ।
श्राहिस्ततो रुरोकुर्वे तस्य चित्ररथस्ततः । शशविन्दुर्महायोगी महाभोजो महानभूत् । ३१ ।
चतुर्दशमहारत्नश्चक्रवर्त्यपराजितः । तस्य पत्नीसहस्राणां दशानां सुमहायशाः । ३२ ।
दशलक्षसहस्राणि पुत्राणां तास्वजीजन्त । तेषां तु षट्प्रधानानां पृथुश्रवस आत्मजः । ३३ ।
धर्मो नामोऽज्ञा तस्य हयमेघशतस्य याद । तत्सुतो रुचकस्तस्य पञ्चासत्रात्मजाः शृणु । ३४ ।
पुर्निद्रुक्मरुमेवपुपुषुज्यामघसंज्ञिताः । ज्यामघस्त्वप्रजोऽव्यन्यां भार्या शैब्यापतिर्भार्या । ३५ ।
नाविन्दच्छत्रुभवनार्थं भोज्यां कन्यामहारषीत् । रथस्थां तां निरीक्ष्याह शैब्या पतिममर्षिता । ३६ ।
केयं कुहक मत्स्थानं रथमारोपितेति वै । स्त्रुषा तवेत्यभिहिते स्मयन्ती पतिमब्रवीत् । ३७ ।
अहं वन्ध्यासपत्नी च स्त्रुषा मे युज्यते कथम् । जनयिष्यसि यं राज्ञि तस्येयमुपयुज्यते । ३८ ।
अन्वमोदन्त तद्विश्वेदेवाः पितर एव च । शैब्या गर्भमधात् काले कुमारं सुपुत्रं शुभम् ।

स विदर्भं इति प्रोक्त उपपेमे स्त्रुषां सतीम् । ३९ ।

इति श्रीमद्रामायणे महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे यदुर्वशानुवर्णने त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः । २३ ।

From (the loins of) Jayadhwaja (the eldest of Arjuna's sons) appeared Tālajaṅgha, of whom again were born a hundred sons. The race of Kṣatriyas known by the name of the Tālajaṅghas (sons of Tālajaṅgha) was exterminated by King Sagara (strengthened by the glory of the sage Aurva). (28) The eldest of Tālajaṅgha's sons was Vitihotra, whose son was Madhu and Madhu's son was called Vṛṣṇi. In fact he had a hundred sons, of whom Vṛṣṇi was the eldest. It was to these (viz., Yadu, Madhu and Vṛṣṇi) that the Yādava race owed its existence and (again) it was due to them that their descendants became known as the Yādavas, the Mādhavas and the Vṛṣṇis (as time went on), O king ! The son of Kroṣṭu, the (second) son of Yadu was Vṛjīnavān, of whom was born Śwāhi. From the latter indeed followed Ruṣeku, whose son was Citraratha and from the (loins of the) latter sprang up Śaśabindu, a great mystic, who had extensive enjoyments and was exalted (in point of virtues). (29—31) He was possessed of (all) the fourteen* varieties of excellent jewels, ruled over the entire globe and was invincible. Through his ten thousand wives that exceedingly renowned emperor begot a thousand million sons (a lakh through each). Of those (thousand million) sons, of whom six (viz., Prthuśravā and others) were the foremost. The son of Prthuśravā was Dharma by name, whose son was Uśanā, who performed a hundred horse-sacrifices. His son was Rucaka, who had five sons. (Please) hear of them. (32—34) They bore the names of Purujit, Rukma, Rukmeṣu, Prthu and Jyāmagha. Even though issueless, Jyāmagha, the husband of Śaibyā, dared not take another woman to wife for (sheer) fear (of Śaibyā). On one occasion (however, having conquered his enemies) he brought as a booty from the enemy's house a princess of the Bhoja dynasty (called Bhojyā).† Observing her seated in the (king's) chariot, Śaibyā indignantly spoke to her husband straight in the following words:—(35-36) "O traitor, who is this girl made to occupy this chariot meant for me?" When the reply came, "She is your daughter-in-law," she smilingly rejoined, "I am a barren woman and have no co-wife either; how could there be a daughter-in-law to me?" The king replied, "She will prove a suitable match, O queen, for the boy whom you will bear." (37-38) The Viśwedevas as well as the manes (took pity on Jyāmagha, who was shaking and perspiring too all over through fear of his wife, and) heartily approved of his words so that Queen Śaibyā conceived not long afterwards and gave birth to a handsome male child. He was called by the name of Vidarbha and married that chaste girl, who had already been accepted as a daughter-in-law (by his parents). (39)

Thus ends the twenty-third discourse in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

* In the Mārkaṇḍeya-Purāṇa, we find mention of the following fourteen varieties of jewels, viz., the elephant, horse, chariot, woman, arrow, treasury, a wreath of flowers, raiment, a tree, Śakti (a javelin), noose, gem, umbrella and an aerial car:—
गजवाजिरथस्त्रीषुनिधिमात्स्यान्द्रुमाः । शक्तिपाशमणिच्छत्रविमानानि चतुर्दश ॥

† Among the Kṣatriyas it has been customary to call a married woman in the house of her husband by the family name of her father.

अथ चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIV

An account of the posterity of Yadu

श्रीशुक उवाच

तस्यां विदर्भोऽजनयत् पुत्रौ नाम्ना कुशक्रथौ । तृतीयं रोमपादं च विदर्भकुलनन्दनम् । १ ।
रोमपादसुतो बभ्रुर्बभ्रोः कृतिरजायत । उशिकस्तसुतस्ताचेदिश्रैद्यादयो नृप । २ ।
क्रथस्य कुन्तिः पुत्रोऽभूद् धृष्टिस्तस्याथ निर्वृतिः । ततो दशार्हो नाम्नाभूत् तस्य व्योमः सुतस्ततः । ३ ।
जीमूतो विकृतिस्तस्य यस्य भीमरथः सुतः । ततो नवरथः पुत्रो जातो दशरथस्ततः । ४ ।
करम्भिः शकुनेः पुत्रो देवरातस्तदात्मजः । देवक्षत्रस्ततस्तस्य मधुः कुरुवशादनु । ५ ।
पुरुहोत्रस्त्वनोः पुत्रस्तस्यायुः सात्वतस्ततः । भजमानो भजिर्दिव्यो वृष्णिर्देवावधोऽन्धकः । ६ ।
सात्वतस्य सुताः सप्त महाभोजश्च मारिष । भजमानस्य निम्लोचिः किङ्किणो धृष्टिरेव च । ७ ।
एकस्यामात्मजाः पत्न्यामन्यस्यां च त्रयः सुताः । शताजिच्च सहस्राजिदयुताजिदिति प्रभो । ८ ।
बभ्रुर्देवावधसुतस्तयोः श्लोकां पठन्त्यमू । यथैव शृणुमो दूरात् सम्पश्यामस्तथान्तिकात् । ९ ।
बभ्रुः श्रेष्ठो मनुष्याणां देवैर्देवावधः समः । पुरुषाः पञ्चषष्टिश्च षट् सहस्राणि चाष्ट च । १० ।
येऽमृतत्वमनुप्राप्ता बभ्रोर्देवावधादपि । महाभोजोऽपि धर्मात्मा भोज आसंस्तदन्वये । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Through Bhojyā, Vidarbha begot two sons, Kuśa and Kratha by name, and (also) a third, called Romapāda, who was the delight of Vidarbha's family. (1) Romapāda's son was Babhru and of Babhru was born Kṛti. His son was Uśika, of whom Cedi was born. And from (the loins of) the latter appeared Damaghoṣa (the son of Cedi) and so on, O protector of men ! (2) Kratha's son was Kunti, whose son was Dhṛṣṭi; and then came Nirvṛti. From (the loins of) Nirvṛti appeared a son, Daśārha by name, whose son was Vyoma. From Vyoma followed Jimūta, and his son was Vikṛti, whose son was Bhimaratha. From (the loins of) the latter sprang up a son Navaratha (by name). And from him followed Daśaratha. (3-4) (Daśaratha's son was Śakuni; Śakuni's son was Karambhi and Karambhi's son was Devarāta, from whom followed Devakṣatra; Devakṣatra's son was Madhu and Madhu's son was Kuruvaśa, of whom was born Anu. (5) Anu's son again was Puruhotra, whose son was Āyu; and of the latter was born Sātva, Bhajamāna, Bhaji, Divya, Vṛṣṇi, Devāvṛdha, Andhaka and Mahābhoja were the (seven) sons of Sātva, O worthy King ! Nimloci, Kiṅkiṇa and even so Dhṛṣṭi were the sons of Bhajamāna by his one wife; and Śatājiti, Sahasrājiti and Ayutājiti—these were his three sons by the other, O lord ! (6—8) Devāvṛdha's son was Babhru; of these two (father and son) they recite the following two couplets:—"As we heard from a distance, so do we observe from near. Babhru is the foremost of men, (while) Devāvṛdha compares with the gods. Men who attained immortality (freedom from birth and death) through (the precepts of) Babhru and Devāvṛdha too numbered fourteen thousand and sixty-five." Mahābhoja (the seventh son of Sātva) too had given his mind to piety, and those born in his line came to be (known as) the Bhojas. (9—11)

वृणोः सुमित्रः पुत्रोऽभूद् युधाजिच्च परंतप । शनिस्तस्यानमित्रश्च निम्नोऽभूत्तनमित्रतः । १२ ।
सत्राजितः प्रसेनश्च निम्नस्याप्यासतुः सुतौ । अनमित्रसुतो योऽन्यः शनिस्तस्याथ सत्यकः । १३ ।
युयुधानः सात्यकिर्वै जयस्तस्य कुणिस्ततः । युगन्धरोऽनमित्रस्य वृष्णिः पुत्रोऽपरस्ततः । १४ ।

श्वफल्कश्चित्रशश्च गान्दिन्यां च श्वफल्कतः । अक्रूरप्रमुखा आसन् पुत्रा द्वादश विश्रुताः । १५ ।
 आसङ्गः सारमेयश्च मृदुरो मृदुविद् गिरिः । धर्मवृद्धः सुकर्मा च क्षेत्रोपेक्षोऽरिमर्दनः । १६ ।
 शत्रुघ्नो गन्धमादश्च प्रतिबाहुश्च द्वादश । तेषां स्वसा सुचीराख्या द्वावक्रूरसुतावपि । १७ ।
 देववानुपदेवश्च तथा चित्ररथात्मजाः । पृथुर्विदूरथाद्याश्च बहवो वृष्णिनन्दनाः । १८ ।
 कुकुरो भजमानश्च शुचिः कम्बलबर्हिषः । कुकुरस्य सुतो वह्निर्विलोमा तनयस्ततः । १९ ।
 कपोतरोमा तस्यानुः सखा यस्य च तुम्बुरुः । अन्धको दुन्दुभिस्तस्मादरिद्योतः पुनर्वसुः । २० ।
 तस्याहुकश्चाहुकी च कन्या चैवाहुकात्मजौ । देवकश्चोयसेनश्च चत्वारो देवकात्मजाः । २१ ।
 देववानुपदेवश्च सुदेवो देववर्धनः । तेषां स्वसारः सप्तासन् धृतदेवादयो नृप । २२ ।
 शान्तिदेवोपदेवा च श्रीदेवा देवरक्षिता । सहदेवा देवकी च वसुदेव उवाह ताः । २३ ।
 कंसः सुनामा न्यग्रोधः कङ्कः शङ्कुः सुहूस्तथा । राष्ट्रपालोऽथ सृष्टिश्च तुष्टिमानौग्रसेनयः । २४ ।
 कंसा कंसवती कङ्का शूरभू राष्ट्रपालिका । उग्रसेनदुहितरो वसुदेवानुजस्त्रियः । २५ ।

Sumitra was the son of Vṛṣṇi and (so) Yudhājit too, O chastiser of foes ! Yudhājit's sons were Śini and Anamitra and Nimna was born of Anamitra. (12) Again, Satrājī and Prasena were born of Nimna; and Satyaka was the son of Śini, who has been shown above to be the other son of Anamitra. The son of Satyaka indeed was Yuyudhāna (also known as Sātyaki), whose son was Jaya, from whom followed Kuṇi; and of him was born Yugandhara. (Yet) another son of Anamitra was Vṛṣṇi, of whom were born Śwaphalka and Citraratha. From (the loins of) Śwaphalka through Gāndīnī were born twelve celebrated sons (besides Akrūra), Akrūra being the foremost of them all. (13—15) The twelve sons were Āsaṅga and Sārameya, Mr̥dura, Mr̥duvid, Giri, Dharmavarddha and Sukarmā, Kṣetropekṣa, Arimardana and Śatrugghna, Gandhamāda and Pratibāhu. They had a sister (also), bearing the name of Sucirā. Again, Devavān and Upadeva were the two sons of Akrūra. Similarly, Pṛthu, Vidūratha and many others were the sons of Citraratha (the younger brother of Śwaphalka), (all) scions of Vṛṣṇi. (16—18) Kukura, Bhajamāna, Śuci and Kambalabārhiṣa were the sons of Andhaka*. Kukura's son was Vahnī, whose son was Vilomā and from Vilomā followed Kapotaromā. His son was Anu, whose friend was (the famous Gandharva) Tumburu, a master of music. Anu's son was Andhaka, of whom was born Dundubhi. Then came Aridyota, whose son was Punarvasu. (19-20) The latter had a son. Āhuka, as well as a daughter, Āhuki. Again, Devaka and Ugrasena were the two sons of Āhuka. Devavān, Upadeva, Sudeva and Devavardhana were the four sons of Devaka. They had seven sisters, the eldest of whom was Dhṛtadevā, O protector of men ! (21-22) They were (besides Dhṛtadevā) Śāntidevā, Upadevā, Śrīdevā, Devarakṣitā, Sahadevā and Devakī. Vasudeva (the father of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) married them (all). (23) Kaṁsa, Sunāmā and Nyagrodha, Kaṁka and Saṅku, Suhū, Rāṣṭrapāla, Sṛṣṭi and Tuṣṭimān were the (nine) sons of Ugrasena. (24) Kaṁsā, Kaṁsavatī, Kaṁkā, Śūrabhū and Rāṣṭrapālikā were the daughters of Ugrasena, (all) wives of Vasudeva's younger brothers (Devabhāga and others). (25)

शूरो विदूरथादासीद् भजमानः सुतस्ततः । शिनिस्तस्मात् स्वयम्भोजो हृदीकस्तसुतो मतः । २६ ।
 देवबाहुः शतधनुः कृतवर्मति तत्सुताः । देवमीडस्य शूरस्य मारिषा नाम पत्न्यभूत् । २७ ।

* The Viṣṇupurāṇa says:—

कुकुरभजमानशुचिकम्बलबर्हिषाख्यास्तथान्यकस्य चत्वारः पुत्राः । (IV. XIV 12)

It is on the authority of this passage in the Viṣṇupurāṇa that Kukura and others have been concluded to be the sons of Andhaka, although the latter's name has not been mentioned in the text here.

तस्यां स जनयामास दश पुत्रानकल्मषान्। वसुदेवं देवभागं देवश्रवसमानकम् । २८।
 सुजयं श्यामकं कङ्क शमीकं वत्सकं वृकम्। देवदुन्दुभयो नेदुरानका यस्य जन्मनि । २९।
 वसुदेवं हरेः स्थानं वदन्त्यानकदुन्दुभिम्। पृथा च श्रुतदेवा च श्रुतकीर्तिः श्रुतश्रवाः । ३०।
 राजाधिदेवी चैतेषां भगिन्यः पञ्च कन्यकाः। कुन्तेः सख्युः पिता शूरो ह्यपुत्रस्य प्रथमदात् । ३१।
 साऽप्य दुर्वाससो विद्यां देवहूतीं प्रतोषितात्। तस्या वीर्यपरीक्षाधर्माजुहाव रविं शुचिम् । ३२।
 तदैवोपागतं देवं वीक्ष्य विस्मितमानसा। प्रत्ययार्थं प्रयुक्ता मे याहि देव क्षमस्व मे । ३३।
 अमोघं दर्शनं देवि आधत्से त्वयि चात्मजम्। योनिर्यथा न द्रुष्यते कर्ताहं ते सुमध्यमे । ३४।
 इति तस्यां स आधाय गर्भं सूर्यो दिवं गतः। सद्यः कुमारः संजज्ञे द्वितीय इव भास्करः । ३५।
 तं सात्यजत्रदीतोये कृच्छ्राल्लोकस्य बिभ्यती। प्रपितामहस्तामुवाह पाण्डुर्वं सत्यविक्रमः । ३६।

From (the loins of) Vidūratha (the son of Citraratha) appeared Śūra, whose son was Bhajamāna. From Bhajamāna followed Śini, of whom was born Swayambhoja; and Hṛdika was recognized as the latter's son. (26) Devabāhu, Śatadhanvā and Kṛtavarmā were the sons of Hṛdika. Śūra (Śūrasena) was the son of Devamīgha (who is known from other sources* to be the fourth son of Hṛdika). Śūra's wife was Māriṣā by name. (27) Through her he begot ten faultless sons—Vasudeva, Devabhāga, Devaśravā, Ānaka, Śrījaya, Śyāmaka, Kaṇka, Śāmika, Vatsaka and Vṛka. They call Vasudeva—a (fit) receptacle for the descent of Śrī Hari—as Ānakadundubhi inasmuch as on the (happy) occasion of his birth kettledrums (Dundubhis) and larger drums (Ānakas) of the gods sounded (of themselves). Prthā (Kuntī) and Śrutadevā, Śrutakīrti, Śrutaśravā and, Rājādhidevī—these five girls were the sisters of the aforesaid (Vasudeva and others). Their father, Śūra, actually gave Prthā (in adoption) to his friend, Kuntī, who was issueless. (28—31) From the sage Durvāsā, who got highly pleased with her (for her services rendered to him when he called on her father as an unexpected guest), she received a (certain) Mantra by means of which gods can be easily invoked; (and) in order to test its efficacy she invoked the lustrous sun-god. (32) Astonished in mind to behold the god arrived in her presence that very moment, she (apologetically) said, "The spell was employed by me for the sake of trial (alone). (Therefore, kindly) return and forgive me (my audacity)." (33) (The sun god replied,) "My sight never goes in vain, O godly virgin! I intend to beget a son through you. I shall (so) arrange that your virginity is not impaired, O beautiful damsel!" (34) So saying, the son-god deposited his seed in her womb and returned to heaven. That very moment a male child—who was another sun as it were, was born of her without any travail. (35) Afraid of the world (however), she painfully consigned the child to the stream of a river. (Later on) your great grandfather, Pāṇḍu, of genuine valour duly married her. (36)

श्रुतदेवां तु कारुष्ये वृद्धशर्मा समग्रहीत्। यस्यामभूद् दन्तवक्त्र ऋषिशप्तो दितेः सुतः । ३७।
 कैकेयो धृष्टकेतुश्च श्रुतकीर्तिमिवन्दत्। सत्तर्दनादयस्तस्य पञ्चासन् कैकयाः सुताः । ३८।
 राजाधिदेव्यामवन्तौ जयसेनोऽजनिष्ठ ह। दमघोषश्चेदिराजः श्रुतश्रवसमग्रहीत् । ३९।
 शिशुपालः सुतस्तस्याः कथितस्तस्य सम्भवः। देवभागस्य कसायां चित्रकेतुवृहद्वलौ । ४०।
 कंसवत्यां देवश्रवसः सुवीर इषुर्मास्तथा। कङ्कायामानकाजातः सत्यजित् पुरुजित् तथा । ४१।
 सुजयो राष्ट्रपाल्यां च वृषदुर्मर्षणादिकान्। हरिकेशहिरण्याक्षौ शूरभूम्यां च श्यामकः । ४२।

* The Viṣṇupurāṇa says:—तस्यापि कृतवर्मशतधनुर्देवमीदृयाद्याः पुत्रा वधुः। देवमीदृयाद्या शूरस्यापि मारिषा नाम पत्न्यभवत्। तस्यां चासी दश पुत्रजनयद् वसुदेवपूर्वात्।

मिश्रकेश्यामप्सरसि वृकादीन् वत्सकस्तथा । तक्षपुष्करशालादीन् दुर्वाक्ष्यां वृक आदधे । ४३ ।

सुमित्रार्जुनपालादीञ्छमीकात् सुदामिनी । कङ्कश्च कर्णिकायां वै ऋतधामजयावपि । ४४ ।

Again, Vṛddhaśarmā, a scion of Karūṣa, duly espoused Śrutadevā, of whom was born Dantavakra, who was (first) born of Diti (as the demon Hiranyākṣa), because cursed by the sages (Sanaka and others). (37) And Dhṛṣṭaketu, the (then) ruler of the territory of Kekaya, took Śrutakīrti to wife. His sons were Santardana and others, the five princes of Kekaya. (38) Through Rājādhidevi (his wife) Jayasena—so the tradition goes—begot Vinda and Anuvinda (who became rulers of Avantī); (while) Damaghōṣa, the king of Cedi, accepted (for his wife) Śrutaśravā. (39) The latter's son was Śiśupāla, the story of whose birth has already been told* Citraketu and Bṛhadbala were the sons of Devābhāga by his wife Kāṁsā. (40) Suvira and Iṣumān were the two sons of Devāśravā by Kāṁsāvatī, while Satyajit as well as Purujit were born of Kaṅkā, through Ānaka. (41) Again, Śrījaya begot through Rāṣṭrapālī Vṛṣa, Durmaśaṇa and others; while Śyāmaka begot through Śūrabhūmi Harikeśa and Hiranyākṣa, (42) Similarly, Vatsaka begot through Mīśrakesī—a celestial nymph—Vṛka and others; while Vṛka begot through (his wife) Durvārksi, Takṣa Puṣkara, Śāla and so on. (43) Through (her union with) Sāmika, again, his wife Sudāmini bore Sumitra, Arjunapāla and others; while Kaṅka too, for his part, begot Rīthadhāma and Jaya. (44)

पौरवी रोहिणी भद्रा मदिरा रोचना इला । देवकीप्रमुखा आसन् पत्या आनकदुन्दुभेः । ४५ ।

बलं गदं सारणं च दुर्मदं विपुलं ध्रुवम् । वसुदेवस्तु रोहिण्यां कृतादीनुदपादयत् । ४६ ।

सुभद्रो भद्रवाहश्च दुर्मदो भद्र एव च । पौरव्यास्तनया ह्येते भूताद्या द्वादशाभवन् । ४७ ।

नन्दोपनन्दकृतकशूराद्या मदिरात्मजाः । कौसल्या केशिन् त्वेकमसूत कुलनन्दनम् । ४८ ।

रोचनायामतो जाता हस्तहेमाङ्गदादयः । इलायामुरुवल्कादीन् यदुमुख्यानजीजनत् । ४९ ।

विपृष्ठो धृतदेवायामेक आनकदुन्दुभेः । शान्तिदेवात्मजा राजञ्छमप्रतिश्रुतादयः । ५० ।

राजानः कल्पवर्षाद्या उपदेवासुता दश । वसुहंससुवंशाद्याः श्रीदेवायास्तु षट्सुताः । ५१ ।

देवर्क्षितया लब्धा नव चात्र गदादयः । वसुदेवः सुतानष्टावादधे सहदेवया । ५२ ।

पुरुविश्रुतमुखास्तु साक्षाद् धर्मो वसूनिव । वसुदेवस्तु देवक्यामष्ट पुत्रानजीजनत् । ५३ ।

कीर्तिमन्तं सुषेणं च भद्रसेनमुदारधीः । ऋजुं सम्मर्दनं भद्रं संकर्षणमहीश्वरम् । ५४ ।

अष्टमस्तु तयोरासीत् स्वयमेव हरिः किल । सुभद्रा च महाभागा तव राजन् पितामही । ५५ ।

Pauravī, Rohiṇī, Bhadrā, Madirā, Rocanā, Ilā, Devakī and others (Dhṛtadevāḥ—and so on, all sisters of Devakī) were the wives of Ānakadundubhi (Vasudeva). (45) Now, Vasudeva begot through Rohiṇī Bala, Gada, Sāraṇa, Durmada Vipula, Dhruva, Kṛta and others—(46) Bhūta, Subhadra and Bhadravāha, Durmada and also Bhadra and (seven) others—these twelve indeed were the sons born of Pauravī. (47) Similarly Nanda, Upananda, Kṛtaka, Śūra and so on were the sons of Madirā. Bhadrā (hailing from Kosala), however, brought forth only one son (the delight of his race), Keśi by name. (48) Through Rocanā from (the loins of) Vasudeva appeared Hasta, Hemāṅgada and others; (and) through Ilā he begot Uruvalka and others, foremost among the Yadus. (49) Viprīṣṭha alone appeared from (the loins of) Ānakadundubhi through Dhṛtadevā; while Śrama, Pratiśruta and others were the sons of Śāntidevā, O Parikṣit ! (50) Kalpavarṣa and other kings, numbering ten, were the sons of Upadevā; while Vasu, Harṁsa, Suvarṁsa and (three others) were the six sons of Śrīdevā. (51)

* Vide Book VII.

† Vide Verses 22-23 above.

Again, nine sons, Gada and others were obtained by Devarakṣitā through Vasudeva; (while) he begot through Sahadevā eight sons, the foremost of whom was Puruṣīrta, as Dharma beg of the (eight) Vasus themselves. Further the highminded Vasudeva begot through Devakī (eight) more sons—Kirtimān, Suṣeṇa, Bhādrasena, Bhādra, Rju, Samardana and Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa, who was the same as Śeṣa (the king of serpents); while the eighth son of (the blessed) Vasudeva and Devakī indeed was Lord Śrī Hari Himself. And the highly blessed Subhadra, your grandmother, was their daughter, O king! (52—55)

यदा यदेह धर्मस्य क्षयो वृद्धिश्च पाप्मनः । तदा तु भगवानीश आत्मानं सृजते हरिः । ५६ ।

न ह्यस्य जन्मनो हेतुः कर्मणो वा महीपते । आत्ममायां विनेशस्य परस्य द्रष्टुरात्मनः । ५७ ।

यन्मायाचेष्टितं पुंसः स्थित्यन्त्यस्ययाय हि । अनुग्रहस्तन्निवृत्तेरात्मलाभाय चेष्टते । ५८ ।

अक्षौहिणीनां पतिभिरसुरैर्नृपलाञ्छनैः । भुव आक्रम्यमाणाया आभाराय कृतोद्यमः । ५९ ।

कर्माण्यपरिमेयाणि मनसापि सुरेश्वरैः । सहस्रकर्षणश्चक्रे भगवान् मधुसूदनः । ६० ।

कलौ जनिष्यमाणानां दुःखशोकतमोनुदम् । अनुग्रहाय भक्तानां सुपुण्यं व्यतनोद् यशः । ६१ ।

यस्मिन् सत्कर्णपीयूषे यशस्तीर्थवरे सकृत् । श्रोत्राञ्जलिरुपस्पृश्य ध्रुवते कर्मवासनाम् । ६२ ।

भोजवृषयन्धकमधुसूरसेनदशार्हकैः । श्लाघनीयेहितः शश्वत् कुरुसृञ्जयपाण्डुभिः । ६३ ।

स्निग्धस्मितेक्षितोदारेर्वार्यैर्विक्रमलीलाया । नृलोकं रमयामास मूर्त्या सर्वाङ्गरम्यया । ६४ ।

यस्याननं मकरकुण्डलचारुकर्णभ्राजत्कपोलसुभगं सविलासहासम् ।

नित्योत्सवं न तत्पुट्टंशिभिः पिबन्त्यो नार्यो नराश्च मुदिताः कुपिता निमेषः । ६५ ।

जातो गतः पितृगृहाद् ब्रजमेधितार्थो हत्वा रिपून् सुतशतानि कृतोरुदारः ।

उत्पाद्य तेषु पुरुषः क्रतुभिः समीजे आत्मानमात्मनिगमं प्रथयञ्जनेषु । ६६ ।

पृथ्व्याः स वै गुरुभरं क्षपयन् कुरूणामन्तःसमुत्थकलिना युधि भूपचम्बः ।

दृष्ट्वा विभूय विजये जयमुद्दिष्ये प्रोच्योद्धवाय च परं समगात् स्वधाम । ६७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे बैयासिक्यामष्टादशसाहस्र्यां पारमहंस्यां संहितायां नवमस्कन्धे

श्रीसूर्यसोमवंशानुकीर्तने चतुर्वंशानुकीर्तने नाम चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः । २४ ।

—:~::~:—

इति नवमः स्कन्धः समाप्तः

हरिः ॐ तत्सत्

Whenever there is decline of virtue and growth of sin in this world, the almighty Lord Śrī Hari actually manifests Himself at that time. (56) Indeed, for the appearance and actions of the all-pervading Lord Śrī Hari, the (absolutely) unattached witness, O ruler of the earth, there is no ground other than His own will to sport. (57) For, the activity of His Māyā (deluding potency) conduces to the birth, continuance and destruction of every embodied soul; while His grace is intended to bring Self-Realization through cessation of birth. (58) Endeavouring to remove the burden of the earth, which was overrun by demons disguised as kings, who led more than one Akṣauhiṇis, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the slayer of the demon Madhu), accompanied by (His elder brother) Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa (better known as Balarāma), performed deeds which cannot be comprehended even in thought by the rulers of gods. (59-60) (Nay,) in order to shower His grace on the devotees He spread far and wide (through those deeds) a most sacred glory capable of driving away the sorrow, grief and ignorance of those going to be born in the (ensuing) Kali age. (61) Sipping with the hollow of his joined palms in the form of his ears but once from the holiest stream of His glory, which is nectar to the ears of the righteous, a man shakes off the tendencies of actions (standing in the way of Liberation). (62) Through words sweetened by His loving smiles and glances, His valourous pastimes and (divine) personality, charming in every limb, He brought joy to mankind, His activities being ever praised by the Bhojas, Vṛṣṇis, Andhakas, Madhus, Śūrasenas and Dāśārhas (on the one hand) and by the Kurus, Śrñjayas and Pāṇḍus on the other. (63-64) Drinking, full of joy, with their eyes the beauty of His face—rendered (all the more) lovely by ears adorned with alligator-shaped ear-rings and lustrous cheeks, (nay,) lit up with a graceful smile and ever steeped in joy—men and women not only did not feel sated but grew angry with Nimi* (who was responsible for the twinkling of their eyes, that interrupted the joy flowing from his sight). (65) As soon as born, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the supreme Person) went to the dales of Vraja from His father's house (at Mathurā) and, having heightened the joy of the residents of Vraja, returned to Mathurā, slew enemies, married numerous wives, begot through them hundreds of sons, and worshipped His own Self by means of (a number of) sacrifices in order to popularize His own Vedic path (leading to His realization). (66) Intending to reduce the heavy burden of the earth by means of the internal discord appearing among the Kurus, He swept away by His (mere) glance the armies of kings on the battle-field, loudly proclaimed far and wide the victory of Vijaya (Arjuna), taught the highest truth to (His beloved disciple) Uddhava and returned with an easy mind to His own (divine) Abode. (67)

*Thus ends the twenty fourth discourse, entitled "An account of the posterity of Yadu", forming part of an account of the solar and lunar dynasties (of kings),
in Book Nine of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā, composed by the sage Vedavyāsa and consisting of eighteen thousand Ślokas.*

END OF BOOK NINE

* We have already seen in Discourse XIII above how Nimi—when his body fell due to the curse of his Guru, the sage Vasiṣṭha—sought and secured a boon from the gods by virtue of which he resides in a subtle form in the eyefield of all living beings and directs their closing and opening.

ॐ श्रीपरमात्मने नमः

श्रीमद्भागवतमहापुराणम्

दशमः स्कन्धः

(पूर्वार्धः)

अथ प्रथमोऽध्यायः

Śrīmad Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇa

Book Ten (First Half)

Discourse I

The Lord reassures Mother Earth; Vasudeva marries Devakī and Kṛṣṇa despatches the six sons of Devakī

राजीवाच्च

कथितो वंशविस्तारो भवता सोमसूर्ययोः । राज्ञां चोभयवंश्यानां चरितं परमाद्भुतम् । १ ।
यदोश्च धर्मशीलस्य नितरां मुनिसत्तम । तत्राशेनावतीर्णस्य विष्णोर्वीर्याणि शंस नः । २ ।
अवतीर्य यदोर्वीशे भगवान् भूतभावनः । कृतवान् यानि विश्वात्मा तानि नो वद विस्तरात् । ३ ।

निवृत्ततर्पैरुपगीयमानाद् भवौषधाच्छ्रेत्रमनोऽभिरामात् ।
क उत्तमश्लोकगुणानुवादात् पुमान् विरज्येत विना पशुघ्नात् । ४ ।
पितामहा मे समरेऽमरञ्जयेर्दवव्रताद्यातिरथेस्तिमिङ्गिलैः ।
दुरत्यये कौरवसैन्यसागरं कृत्वातरन् वत्सपदे स्म यत्पूवाः । ५ ।
द्रौण्यस्त्रविप्रुष्टमिदं मदङ्गं सन्तानबीजं कुरुषाण्डवानाम् ।
जुगोप कुक्षिं गत आत्तचक्रो मातुश्च मे यः शरणं गतायाः । ६ ।
वीर्याणि तस्याखिलदेहभाजामन्तर्बहिः पूरुषकालरूपैः ।
प्रयच्छतो मृत्युमुतामृतं च मायामनुष्यस्य वदस्व विद्वन् । ७ ।

The king began again : The extent of the lunar and solar dynasties and (an account of) the most wonderful deeds of the kings born in both the dynasties as well as of the extremely pious Yadu have been told by you, O jewel among sages! (Now kindly) recount to us exploits of Lord Viṣṇu descended in that line alongwith Śrī Balarāma (His part manifestation). (1-2) (Pray,) narrate to us in detail (all) those deeds which the (said) Lord, the Soul of the universe and the Protector of created beings, performed, appearing in the line of Yadu. (3) What mah other than the killer of animals would desist from a recital of the excellences of the illustrious Lord—a (sure) remedy for (the malady of) transmigration, (and highly) pleasing to the ear as well as to the mind, and constantly sung (even) by souls from whom the thirst for pleasure has departed (for ever). (4) Using Him for a raft my grandfather (Arjuna) and granduncles

(Yudhiṣṭhira and others) indeed crossed the ocean of the Kaurava army—(so) difficult to cross because (of the presence) of whales in the form of great car-warriors like Devavrata (more popularly known by the name of Bhīṣma), vanquishers in battle of (even) immortals—treating it as a (mere) footprint of a calf. (5) Again, having entered, discus in hand, the womb of my mother (Uttarā), who had sought Him as her refuge, He protected this body of mine, the seed of the race of the Kurus and the Pāṇḍavas, and badly burnt by the (mystic) missile hurled by Aśwatthāmā (the son of Droṇa). (6) Recount, O sage, the exploits of that Lord, disguised as a human being, by His transcendental creative energy, who, dwelling (both) within and outside all embodied beings, (severally) in the form of the Inner Controller and Time, metes out to them (according to their deserts) death (metempsychosis) as well as immortality. (7)

रोहिण्यास्तनयः प्रोक्तो रामः सङ्कर्षणस्त्वया । देवक्या गर्भसम्बन्धः कुतो देहान्तरं विना १८ ।
कस्मान्मुकुन्दो भगवान् पितुर्गहाद् व्रजं गतः । क्वासां ज्ञातिभिः सार्धं कृतवान् सात्वतांपतिः १९ ।
व्रजे वसन् किमकरोन्मधुपुर्या च केशवः । भ्रातरं चावधीत् कंसं मातुरद्धातदर्हणम् १० ।
देहं मानुषमाश्रित्य कति वर्षाणि वृष्णिभिः । यदुपुर्या सहावात्सीत् पत्युः कत्यभवन् प्रभोः ११ ।
एतदन्यच्च सर्वं मे मुने कृष्णविवेष्टितम् । वक्तुमर्हसि सर्वज्ञ श्रद्धधानाय विस्तृतम् १२ ।
नैषातिदुःसहा क्षुन्मां त्यक्तोदमपि बाधते । पिबन्तं त्वन्मुखाम्भोजञ्चुतं हरिकथामृतम् १३ ।

Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarāma) was (first) referred* to by you as a son of Rohiṇī. How could his connection be conceived with the womb of Devakī† without his assuming another body? (8) Wherefore did Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) shift to Vraja from His father's residence (at Mathurā)? And where (in what different places) did that Lord of the Yadus take up His abode alongwith His kinsfolk? (9) What did Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva), do while residing in Vraja as well as at Mathurā (the city founded by the demon Madhu)? And wherefore did He personally slay Kāṁsa, His (own) mother's cousin and (therefore) not deserving such fate (at His hands)? (10) Having assumed a human semblance, for how many years did He reside in the company of the Vṛṣṇis at Mathurā (the capital of the Yadus), and how many were the wives of the Lord? (11) You ought to relate fully to me, endowed (as I am) with faith, O omniscient sage, this and all other exploits of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (12) This hunger, (so) very difficult to bear, does not (at all) afflict me, although I have given up even water, drinking as I am the nectar of Śrī Hari's story, flowing from your lotus lips. (13)

सूत उवाच

एवं निशम्य भृगुनन्दन साधुवादं वैयासकिः स भगवानथ विष्णुरातम् ।

प्रत्यर्च्य कृष्णचरितं कलिकल्मषघ्नं व्याहर्तुमारभत भगवत्प्रधानः १४ ।

Sūta resumed : Having heard the said laudable question, O Śaunika (a scion of Bhṛgu), and complimenting Parikṣit (the protege of Lord Viṣṇu), the glorious sage Śuka (the son of Vyāsa), the foremost of the Lord's devotees, proceeded to narrate (as follows) the story of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, that destroys the impurities of the Kali age. (14)

श्रीशुक उवाच

सम्यग्यवसिता बुद्धिस्तव राजर्षिसत्तम । वासुदेवकथायां ते यज्जाता नैष्ठिकी रतिः १५ ।

वासुदेवकथाप्रश्नः पुरुषांस्त्रीन् पुनाति हि । वक्तारं पृच्छकं श्रोतृस्तथादसलिलं यथा १६ ।

* Vide IX. xxiv. 46.

† See IX. xxiv. 54.

भूमिर्दूतनृपव्याजदैत्यानीकशतापुतैः । आक्रान्ता भूरिभारेण ब्रह्माणं शरणं ययौ । १७ ।
 गौर्भूत्वाश्रुमुखी खित्रा क्रन्दन्ती करुणं विभोः । उपस्थितान्तिके तस्मै व्यसनं स्वमवोचत । १८ ।
 ब्रह्मा तदुपधार्याथ सह देवैस्तया सह । जगाम सत्रिनयनस्तीरं क्षीरपयोनिधेः । १९ ।
 तत्र गत्वा जगन्नाथं देवदेवं वृषाकपिम् । पुरुषं पुरुषसूक्तेन उपतस्थे समाहितः । २० ।
 गिरं समाधौ गगने समीरितां निशम्य वेधास्त्रिदशानुवाच ह ।
 मां पौरुषीं मे शृणुतामराः पुनर्विधीयतामाशु तथैव मा विरम् । २१ ।
 पुरैव पुंसावधृतो धराज्वरो भवद्विरशैर्यदुषूपजन्यताम् ।
 स यावदुर्व्यां भरमीश्वरेश्वरः स्वकालशक्त्या क्षपयंश्चरेद् भुवि । २२ ।

वसुदेवगृहे साक्षाद् भगवान् पुरुषः परः । जनिष्यते तन्निर्याथं सम्भवन्तु सुखिन्यः । २३ ।
 वासुदेवकलानन्तः सहस्रवदनः स्वराद् । अग्रतो भविता देवो हरेः प्रियचिकीर्षया । २४ ।
 विष्णोर्माया भगवती यया सम्मोहितं जगत् । आदिष्टा प्रभुणांशेन कार्यार्थं सम्भविष्यति । २५ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Your mind has arrived at a right conclusion, O jewel among royal sages, as a sequel to which lasting devotion to the story of Lord Vāsudeva has sprung up in your heart. (15) An inquiry concerning the story of Lord Vāsudeva indeed purifies all the three persons, viz., the reciter, the interlocutor and the audience (even) as the water touched by the Lord's feet (the water in which an image of the Lord has been washed or the Gaṅgā) hallows all. (16) Oppressed with stupendous weight by millions of detachments of Daityas in the disguise of arrogant kings, Mother Earth sought Brahmā (the creator) as her refuge. (17) Appearing as a disconsolate cow, its face wet with tears and piteously lowing, she sought the presence of Brahmā (the supreme ruler) and told him of her distress. (18) Realizing her calamity, Brahmā accompanied by Lord Śiva (the three-eyed One) forthwith proceeded to the shore of the ocean of milk (the abode of Lord Viṣṇu) alongwith the (other) gods as well as with her. (19) Having arrived there and fully collected (in mind), Brahmā prayed to Lord Viṣṇu, the Supreme Person, the Ruler of the universe, the adored (even) of the gods, in the terms of the Puruṣa-Sūkta (a celebrated Vedic hymn addressed to the Supreme Person). (20) Hearing in the course of a trance (state of complete absorption) a voice uttered in the sky (the source of which was invisible), the creator clearly said to the gods (as follows): "Hear from me, O gods, the word of the Supreme Person, and then do accordingly at once; let there be no delay. (21) The affliction of Mother Earth had already been known by the Supreme Person. (Therefore) let yourselves be born among the Yadus in part manifestation (and continue there) till that suzerain Lord walks on earth, reducing the burden of Mother Earth through His own (Divine) Energy in the shape of Time. (22) Lord Viṣṇu Himself (the glorious Supreme Person) will be manifested in the house of Vasudeva; let celestial women (also therefore) be born for His pleasure. (23) With intent to do what pleases Śrī Hari, the thousand-headed and self-efulgent Lord Ananta (the serpent-god Śeṣa), a part manifestation of Lord Vāsudeva, will precede Him (as His elder brother). (24) Commanded by the Lord, the Divine Māyā (enchanting potency) of Lord Viṣṇu, by whom the (whole) universe stands bewitched, will (also) be born in part manifestation for the purpose of doing His work." (25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यादिश्यामरगणान् प्रजापतिपतिर्बिभुः । आश्वास्य च महीं गीर्षिः स्वधाम परमं ययौ । २६ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Having thus directed the hosts of gods and reassured Mother Earth with His (comforting) words, Brahmā (the supreme lord), the ruler of Prajāpatīs (lords of created beings), returned to his exalted abode. (26)

शूरसेनो यदुपतिर्मथुरामावसन् पुरीम् । माथुराज्जूरसेनांश्च विषयान् बुभुजे पुरा । २७ ।
 राजधानी ततः साभूत् सर्वयादवभूषुजाम् । मथुरा भगवान् यत्र नित्यं संनिहितो हरिः । २८ ।
 तस्यां तु कर्हिचिच्छैरिवसुदेवः कृतोद्बहः । देवक्या सूर्यया सार्धं प्रयागे रथमारुहत् । २९ ।
 उग्रसेनसुतः कंसः स्वसुः प्रियचिकीर्षया । रश्मिन् हयानां जग्राह रौक्मं रथशतैर्वृतः । ३० ।
 चतुःशतं पारिबर्हं गजानां हेममालिनाम् । अश्वानामयुतं सार्धं रथानां च त्रिषदशतम् । ३१ ।
 दासीनां सुकुमारीणां द्वे शते समलङ्कृते । दुहित्रे देवकः प्रादाद् याने दुहितृवत्सलः । ३२ ।
 शङ्खतूर्यमृदङ्गाश्च नेदुर्दुन्दुभयः समम् । प्रयाणप्रक्रमे तावद् वरवध्वोः सुमङ्गलम् । ३३ ।
 पथि प्रग्रहिणं कंसमाभाष्याहाशरीरवाक् । अस्यास्त्वामष्टमो गर्भो हन्ता यां वहसेऽबुध । ३४ ।
 इत्युक्तः स खलः पापो भोजानां कुलपांसनः । भगिनीं हन्तुमारब्धः खड्गपाणिः कचेऽग्रहीत् । ३५ ।

ते जुगुप्सितकर्माणं नृशंसं निरपत्रम् । वसुदेवो महाभाग उवाच परिसान्त्वयन् । ३६ ।

Of yore Śūrasena, the chief of the Yadus, ruled the principalities of Mathurā and Śūrasena, (himself) residing in the city of Mathurā (his capital). (27) Since then the said Mathurā, in which Lord Śrī Hari is ever present, continued to be the capital of all Yādava kings. (28) Having gone through his wedding ceremony indeed in that city, one day, Vasudeva, son of Śūra (a noble man of the kingdom of Mathurā), mounted the chariot alongwith his newly wedded wife, Devakī, while departing (for his home). (29) Surrounded by hundreds of chariots plated with gold, Prince Kāṁsa, the (eldest) son of King Ugrasena (the then ruler of Mathurā) held the reins of the horses (assumed the role of a charioteer) in order to oblige his cousin (Devakī). (30) At the time of their departure Devakā (the younger brother of Ugrasena), who was (so) fond of his daughter gave away to his daughter by way of dowry four hundred elephants decked with necklaces of gold, fifteen thousand horses, eighteen hundred chariots and two hundred graceful servant-maids profusely adorned. (31-32) As the procession of the bride and the bridegroom was just going to start, conchs, clarionets, clay tomtoms and kettledrums sounded all at once in a most auspicious manner. (33) Addressing Kāṁsa, who held the reins while on the way, an incorporeal voice said, "O foolish one! the eighth child of this girl, whom you are (now) conducting, will slay you." (34) Told thus, that wicked and sinful fellow, the disgrace of the Bhojas, seized his cousin by the hair, sword in hand, and proceeded to kill her. (35) The highly blessed Vasudeva pleaded with that hard-hearted and shameless fellow of detestable deeds, trying to appease him (as follows). (36)

वसुदेव उवाच

श्लाघनीयगुणः शूरैर्भवान् भोजयशस्करः । स कथं भगिनीं हन्यात् स्त्रियमुद्वाहपर्वणि । ३७ ।
 मृत्युर्नमवतां वीर देहेन सह जायते । अद्य वाब्दशतान्ते वा मृत्युर्वै प्राणिनां ध्रुवः । ३८ ।
 देहे पञ्चत्वमाप्रे देही कर्मानुगोऽवशः । देहान्तरमनुप्राप्य प्राक्तनं त्यजते वपुः । ३९ ।
 ब्रजंतिष्ठन् पदैकेन यथैवैकेन गच्छति । यथा तृणजलूकैव देही कर्मगतिं गतः । ४० ।

स्वप्ने यथा पश्यति देहमीदृशं मनोरथेनाभिनविष्टचेतनः ।

दृष्टश्रुताभ्यां मनसानुचिन्तयन् प्रपद्यते तत् किमपि ह्यापस्मृतिः । ४१ ।

यतो यतो धावति दैवचोदितं मनो विकारात्मकमाप पञ्चसु ।

गुणेषु मायारचितेषु देहसौ प्रपद्यमानः सह तेन जायते । ४२ ।

ज्योतिर्यथैवादकपार्थिवेषुदः समीरवेगानुगतं विभाव्यते ।

एवं स्वमायारचितेऽसौ पुमान् गुणेषु रागानुगतो विमुह्यति । ४३ ।

तस्मात्र कस्यचिद् द्रोहमाचरेत् स तथाविधः । आत्मनः क्षेममन्विच्छन् द्रोह्युर्वै परतो भयम् । ४४ ।

एषा तवानुजा बाला कृपणा पुत्रिकोपमा । हन्तुं नार्हसि कल्याणीमिमां त्वे दीनवत्सलः । ४५ ।

Vasudeva said : You are possessed of virtues worthy of being extolled by heroes and are the glory of the Bhojas. As such how can you slay your (own) cousin, a woman, on the festive occasion of her wedding ? (37) The death of those that are born is ordained alongwith their birth, O valiant prince! Death is indeed inevitable to (all) living beings (no matter) whether it comes this (very) day or at the end of a hundred years. (38) When the body is about to expire (lit., to be dissolved into its five constituent elements, viz., earth, water, fire, air and ether), the soul (tenanting it), following (the course of) its destiny, helplessly quits the former body on (mentally) obtaining another corporeal form. (39) As indeed a walking man paces forward with another leg while sticking to the earth by one leg or even as a caterpillar leaves a blade of grass (only) when it has caught hold of another, so does the embodied soul, following the course of its destiny, leave the former body only when it has caught hold of another. (40) Just as a man in a dream state or one whose mind is entirely possessed with a longing and who is contemplating on the object of his desire with a mind coloured by that which has (either) been (actually) perceived (by him in his waking life) or heard of, visualizes a corresponding conceptual form (of the kind actually seen or heard of by him) and (unconsciously) comes to identify himself with it, and (forthwith) indeed forgets his (living) body, so does the embodied soul quit the previous body on attaining a new one. (41) Identifying itself with that (particular) body out of the (numberless) material bodies (which are nothing but the five elements) moulded (into diverse forms) by Maya (the creative energy of the Lord)—which his mind, consisting of (various) ideas and impelled by destiny, flows towards and clings to, the embodied soul passes into that very form alongwith the mind. (42) Even as the sun or the moon, with which we are so familiar, when reflected in earthen vessels full of water, appears as shaking due to the force of the wind (though not actually shaking), so does the soul, entering through attachment the material forms brought forth by its own ignorance, gets deluded (seized with the fear of death and so on). (43) As such (i.e., inevitably exposed to the fear of death), the embodied soul, seeking after its own welfare, should not therefore do wrong to anyone; for there is fear to the wrong-doer from others (viz., from the individual wronged, its kith and kin and the god of retribution). (44) This younger cousin of yours is a (mere) helpless girl and is like a daughter to you. You ought not (therefore) to kill this girl, who has just gone through the auspicious nuptial rites, kind as you are to the helpless. (45)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं स सामभिर्भेदेर्बोध्यमानोऽपि दारुणः । न न्यवर्तत कौरव्य पुरुषादाननुव्रतः । ४६ ।

निर्बन्धं तस्य तं ज्ञात्वा विचिन्त्यानकदुन्दुभिः । प्राप्तं कालं प्रतिव्योद्धुमिदं तत्रान्वपद्यत । ४७ ।

मृत्युर्बुद्धिमतापोहो यावद्बुद्धिबलोदयम् । यद्यसौ न निवर्तत नापराधोऽस्ति देहिनः । ४८ ।

प्रदाय मृत्यवे पुत्रान् मोचये कृपणामिमाम् । सुता मे यदि जायेरन् मृत्युर्वा न म्रियेत चेत् । ४९ ।

विपर्ययो वा किं न स्याद् गतिर्धातुर्दुस्त्यया । उपस्थितो निवर्तत निवृत्तः पुनरापतेत् । ५० ।

अग्रेयथा दारुवियोगयोगयोरदृष्टतोऽन्यत्र निमित्तमस्ति ।

एवं हि जन्तोऽपि दुर्बिभाव्यः शरीरसंयोगवियोगहेतुः । ५१ ।

एवं विमृश्य तं पापं यावदात्मनिदर्शनम् । पूजयामास वै शौरिर्बहुमानपुरःसरम् । ५२ ।

प्रसनवदनाम्भोजो नृशंसं निरपत्रयम् । मनसा दूयमानेन विहसन्निदमब्रवीत् ॥ ५३ ॥

Śrī Śuka went on: Even though admonished through conciliatory words and those inspiring fear as aforesaid, Kāṁsa, who was heartless (by nature) and followed the ways of ogres (besides), did not desist (from his purpose), O Parīkṣit (a scion of Kuru)!(46) Perceiving such obstinacy of his (in the matter of slaying Devakī) and contemplating how to avert her imminent death, Ānakadundubhi (Vasudeva) resolved upon the following expedient in that behalf. (47) (He said to himself,) "Death should be warded off by a wise man so long as his reason and might are intact. If, however, death does not turn back there is nothing wrong on the part of the embodied soul. (48) Promising to hand over sons (that may be born to Devakī) to Kāṁsa (who is death personified), I ought to rescue this helpless girl and I shall have to forgo my sons only in case they are actually born (hereafter) and provided Kāṁsa (himself) does not expire (in the meantime). (49) Or might not the contrary happen (i.e., might not Kāṁsa himself suffer death at the hands of my sons); (for) the ways of Providence are hard to comprehend. What is imminent may turn away and what has turned away may appear again. (50) (Just) as in the case of a (forest) fire there is no cause other than destiny for its coming into contact with a (particular) tree (however distant it may be) and its remaining aloof from another (though quite near to it), so indeed in the case (even) of a living being the ground (other than destiny) of its being connected with or dissociated from a (particular) body is difficult to conceive." (51) Having thus pondered to the best of his intellectual acumen, Vasudeva (the son of Śūra) actually eulogized that sinful fellow with great esteem. (52) With a blooming lotus-like countenance, yet with an aching heart, he smilingly addressed the following words to that hard hearted wretch. (53)

वसुदेव उवाच

न ह्यस्यास्ते भयं सौम्य यद् वागाहाशरीरिणी । पुत्रान् समर्पयिष्येऽस्या वतस्ते भयमुत्थितम् ॥ ५४ ॥

Vasudeva observed : Indeed there is no fear to you, O gentle one, from this girl as the incorporeal voice (from heaven) has conveyed (to you). I shall (accordingly) make over (to you) her sons, from whom fear has arisen in you. (54)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स्वसुर्वधानिववृते कंसस्तद्वाक्यसारवित् । वसुदेवोऽपि तं प्रीतः प्रशस्य प्राविशद् गृहम् ॥ ५५ ॥
अथ काल उपावृत्ते देवकी सर्वदेवता । पुत्रान् प्रसुषुवे चाष्टौ कन्यां चैवानुवत्सरम् ॥ ५६ ॥
कीर्तिमन्तं प्रथमजं कंसायानकदुन्दुभिः । अर्पयामास कृच्छ्रेण सोऽज्नुतादतिविह्वलः ॥ ५७ ॥
किं दुःसहं नु साधूनां विदुषां किमपेक्षितम् । किमकार्यं कदर्याणां दुस्त्यजं किं धृतात्मनाम् ॥ ५८ ॥
दृष्ट्वा समत्वं तच्चौरैः सत्ये चैव व्यवस्थितम् । कंसस्तुष्टमना राजन् प्रहसन्निदमब्रवीत् ॥ ५९ ॥
प्रतियातु कुमारोऽयं न ह्यस्मादस्ति मे भयम् । अष्टमाद् युवयोर्गर्भान्मृत्युर्मे विहितः किल ॥ ६० ॥
तथेति सुतमादाय यथावानकदुन्दुभिः । नाभ्यनन्दत तद्वाक्यमसतोऽविजितात्मनः ॥ ६१ ॥

Śrī Śuka continued : Kāṁsa, who knew the truthfulness of Vasudeva's words, ceased from killing Devakī (his own cousin). Applauding him, Vasudeva too reached home full of delight. (55) Now, when the time came, Devakī, who (being the abode of Śrī Hari) represented all the gods (on her person), (successively) brought forth eight sons and a daughter too (Subhadrā by name) besides, one every year. (56) Much afraid of falsehood, Vasudeva handed over to Kāṁsa with (great) difficulty his first-born son, Kīrtimān (by name). (57) Indeed what is difficult to endure in the eyes of the righteous? What is needed by the wise? What is unworthy in the eyes of the depraved? And what is difficult to renounce for those who have cherished Śrī Hari (the Self of all)? (58) Rejoiced at heart to perceive such equanimity in Vasudeva (the son of Śūra) as well as his unflinching devotion to truth, Kṛṣṇa, O Parīkṣit, smilingly spoke the following words—(59) "Let this boy return (to your protection); for there is no fear to me from him. Obviously my death has been decreed at the hands of your eighth progeny." (60) Taking the boy with the word "Amen", Vasudeva returned (home). (Of course) he did not rejoice over those words of Kṛṣṇa (the wicked one) of uncontrolled mind. (61)

नन्दाद्या ये व्रजे गोपा याश्चामीषां च योषितः । वृष्णयो वसुदेवाद्या देवक्याद्या यदुन्निवः । ६२ ।
सर्वे वै देवताप्राया उभयोरपि भारत । ज्ञातयो बन्धुसुहृदो ये च कंसमनुव्रताः । ६३ ।
एतत् कंसाय भगवाञ्छंसाभ्येत्य नारदः । भूमेर्भारयमाणानां दैत्यानां च वधोद्यमम् । ६४ ।
ऋषेर्विनिर्गमे कंसो यदून् मत्वा सुरानिति । देवक्या गर्भसम्भूतं विष्णुं च स्ववधं प्रति । ६५ ।
देवकीं वसुदेवं च निगृह्य निगडैर्गृहे । जातं जातमहन् पुत्रं तयोरजनशङ्कया । ६६ ।
मातरं पितरं भ्रातॄन् सर्वांश्च सुहृदस्तथा । घ्नन्ति ह्यसुतुपो लुब्धा राजानः प्रायशो भुवि । ६७ ।
आत्मानमिह सज्ज्ञातं जानन् प्राग् विष्णुना हतम् । महासुरं कालेनेमिं यदुभिः स व्यरुध्यत । ६८ ।
उग्रसेनं च पितरं यदुभोजान्धकाधिपम् । स्वयं निगृह्य बुभुजे शूरसेनान् महाबलः । ६९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे श्रीकृष्णवतारोपक्रमे प्रथमोऽध्यायः । १ ।

"Whatever cowherds there are in Vraja, the foremost of whom is Nanda, and again (all) those who are their wedded wives, the Vṛṣṇis led by Vasudeva, and Yādava women headed by Devakī, nay, (even) the kinsmen, relatives and friends of both Nanda and Vasudeva, who are devoted to Kṛṣṇa (yourself) are all for the most part gods themselves." This was what the all-powerful sage Nārada communicated to Kṛṣṇa, going to him (of his own accord), and also apprized him of the endeavours (of Brahmā and the other gods) for the destruction of the Daityas, that constituted a burden to Mother Earth, O Parīkṣit (a scion of Bharata)! (62—64) Believing the Yadus to be (so many) gods, and Lord Viṣṇu as about to appear from the womb of Devakī for the purpose of slaying him, and binding Devakī and Vasudeva with fetters in their own residence after the departure of the (celestial) sage, Kṛṣṇa did to death every son of the said couple even as he was born, suspecting him to be the (birthless) Viṣṇu (Himself). (65-66) Greedy monarchs given to self-gratification on this earth generally, as a matter of fact, kill their (own) father and mother, brothers as well as all their relations. (67) Knowing himself to have been, in a previous existence, the great demon Kālanemi, slain by Viṣṇu and reborn (as Kṛṣṇa) in current life, he entered into hostilities with the Yadus. (68) Nay, putting in prison his (own) father, Ugrasena—the lord of the Yadus, the Bhojas and the Andhakas—the mighty Kṛṣṇa ruled over the Śūrasena territory himself. (69)

Thus ends the first discourse, forming an introduction to the descent of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वितीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse II

The Lord enters the womb of Devakī and is extolled by the gods

श्रीशुक उवाच

प्रलम्बबकचापूरतृणावर्तमहाशनैः । मुष्टिकारिद्विद्विदपूतनाकेशिधेनुकैः । १ ।
 अन्यैश्चासुरभूपालैर्बाणभौमादिभिर्युतः । यदूनां कदनं चक्रे बली मागधसंश्रयः । २ ।
 ते पीडिता निविशिशुः कुरुपञ्चालकेकयान् । शल्वान् विदर्भान् निषधान् विदेहान् कोसलानपि । ३ ।
 एके तमनुरुन्धाना ज्ञातयः पर्युपासते । हतेषु षट्सु बालेषु देवक्या औग्रसेनिना । ४ ।
 सप्तमो वैष्णवं धाम यमनन्तं प्रचक्षते । गर्भो बभूव देवक्या हर्षशोकविवर्धनः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Conjoined with Pralamba, Baka, Caṇūra, Tṛṇāvarta and Aghāsura (who in the form of a python ate much), Muṣṭika, Aṛiṣṭa, Dwivida, Pūtanā, Keśi and Dhenuka, as well as with other demon kings, the foremost of whom were Bāṇa and Bhauma, and with Jarāsandha (the ruler of Magadha, whose two daughters had been married to him) as his ally, the powerful Kāṁsa set about (the task of) destroying the Yadus. (1-2) Hard pressed, they migrated to the territories of the Kurus, Pañcālas and Kekayas, Śālvas, Vidarbhas, Niṣadhas, Videhas and Kosalas too. (3) Remaining faithful to him, a few kinsmen (of theirs, however,) continued to serve him. When six boys of Devakī had been killed by Kāṁsa (the son of Ugrasena), a ray of Lord Viṣṇu, whom the devotees speak of as Lord Ananta, entered the womb of Devakī as her seventh child, that went to enhance her delight and grief at the same time. (4-5)

भगवानपि विश्वात्मा विदित्वा कंसजं भयम् । यदूनां निजनाथानां योगमायां समादिशत् । ६ ।
 गच्छ देवि व्रजं भद्रे गोपगोभिरलङ्कृतम् । रोहिणी वसुदेवस्य भार्याऽऽस्ते नन्दगोकुले ।
 अन्याश्च कंससंवित्रा विवरेषु वसन्ति हि । ७ ।

देवक्या जठरे गर्भं शेषारख्यं धाम मामकम् । तत् संनिक्वृष्य रोहिण्या उदरे संनिवेश्य । ८ ।
 अथाहर्मेशभागेन देवक्याः पुत्रतां शुभे । प्राप्स्यामि त्वं यशोदायां नन्दपत्न्यां भविष्यसि । ९ ।
 अर्चिष्यन्ति मनुष्यास्त्वां सर्वकामवरेश्वरीम् । धूपोपहारबलिभिः सर्वकामवप्रदाम् । १० ।
 नामधेयानि कुर्वन्ति स्थानानि च नरा भुवि । दुर्गेति भद्रकालीति विजया वैष्णवीति च । ११ ।
 कुमुदा चण्डिका कृष्णा माधवी कन्यकेति च । माया नारायणीशानी शास्तेत्यम्बिकेति च । १२ ।
 गर्भसंकर्षणात् तं वै प्राहुः संकर्षणं भुवि । रामेति लोकरमणाद् बलं बलवदुद्धृयात् । १३ ।

Perceiving the fear born of Kāṁsa to the Yadus, His proteges, the Lord too, the Soul of the universe, commanded (as follows) Yogamāyā (His transcendent creative energy):—(6) "Proceed, O good goddess, to Vraja enriched by cowherds and cows. Rohiṇī, Vasudeva's wife, is staying in the village of Gokula owned by Nanda; and, afraid of Kāṁsa, his other wives too are residing in secret places. (7) There exists in Devakī's womb, in the form of an embryo, My own part manifestation known by the name of Śeṣa (the serpent-god). Taking it out, place it in the womb of Rohiṇī. (8) Then I shall assume the role of a son of Devakī with all My divine potencies, which constitute so many parts of My being as it were, O blessed lady; while you shall be born of Yaśodā, the wife of Nanda. (9) People will worship you by means of incense, offerings of food and other presents, recognizing you as the supreme controller (of the destinies) of men seeking various boons and as the bestower of all desired blessings. (10) Men will erect temples (sacred to you) on earth and give (diverse) appellations (to you) such as Durgā, Bhadrakālī, Vijayā, Vaiṣṇavī, Kumudā, Caṇḍikā, Kṛṣṇā, Mādhavī and Kanyakā, Māyā, Nārāyaṇī, Īśānī, Śārādā and Ambikā. (11-12) People on earth will call the son of Rohiṇī Sankarṣaṇa, particularly because of his being taken out of the womb (of Devakī); by the name of Rāma because of his giving delight to the world and Bala because of his pre-eminence among those possessed of strength." (13)

सन्दिष्ट्वं भगवता तथेत्योमिति तद्वचः । प्रतिगृह्य परिक्रम्य गां गता तत् तथाकरोत् । १४ ।

गर्भे प्रणीते देवक्या रोहिणीं योगनिद्रया । अहो विस्रंसितो गर्भ इति पौरा विचुकुशः । १५ ।

Thus instructed by the Lord and accepting His command with the words, "O yes, let it be so !" and going round Him from left to right (as a mark of respect), the goddess descended on earth and carried out His behest as she was told. (14) When the embryo in the womb of Devakī was transferred to that of Rohiṇī by Yogamāyā (who represents the Lord's trance-sleep at the time of universal dissolution), the people of Mathurā wailed aloud saying, "Ah! the embryo (in the womb of Devakī) has perished !" (15)

भगवानपि विश्वात्मा भक्तानामभयङ्कुरः । आविवेशांशभागेन मन आनकदुग्धैः । १६ ।

स बिभ्रत् पौरुषं धाम भ्राजमानो यथा रविः । दुरासदोऽतिदुर्धर्षो भूतानां सम्बभूव ह । १७ ।

ततो जगन्मङ्गलमच्युतांशं समाहितं शूरसुतेन देवी ।

दधार सर्वात्मकमात्मभूतं काष्ठा यथाऽऽनन्दकरं मनस्तः । १८ ।

सा देवकी सर्वजगन्निवासनिवासभूता नितरां न रेजे ।

भोजेन्द्रगेहेऽग्निशिखेव रुद्धा सरस्वती ज्ञानखले यथा सती । १९ ।

तां वीक्ष्य कंसः प्रभयाजितान्तरां विरोचयन्तीं भवनं शुचिस्मिताम् ।

आहूय मे प्राणहरो हरिर्गुहां ध्रुवं श्रितो यत्र पुण्यमीदृशी । २० ।

किमद्य तस्मिन् करणीयमाशु मे यदर्थतन्त्रो न विहन्ति विक्रमम् ।

स्त्रियाः स्वसुगुरुमत्या वधोऽयं यशः श्रियं हृत्यनुकालमायुः । २१ ।

स एष जीवन् खलु सम्परेतो वर्तेत योज्यन्तनुशसितेन ।

देहे मृते तं मनुजाः शपन्ति गन्ता तमोऽयं तनुमानिनो ध्रुवम् । २२ ।

इति घोरतमाद् भावात् सन्निवृत्तः स्वयं प्रभुः । आस्ते प्रतीक्षस्तज्जन्म होर्वैरानुबन्धकृतः । २३ ।

आसीनः संविशंस्तिष्ठन् भुञ्जानः पर्यटन् महीम् । चिन्तयानो हृषीकेशमपश्यत् तन्मयं जगत् । २४ ।

The Lord too, who is the Soul of the universe and rids His devotees of (all) fear, entered the mind of Vasudeva with all His divine potencies constituting parts of His being as it were. (16) Carrying (in him) the glorious presence of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person) and (consequently) shining as the sun, Vasudeva evidently grew to be most formidable and hard to approach in the eyes of (all) living beings. (17) Thereupon, just as the eastern quarter bears the moon (the delighter of all), the glorious Devakī conceived in her mind the Lord carrying (with Him all) His divine potencies (constituting so many parts of His Being), and embodying the good-luck of the world—the Lord who comprises all and represented her very self—duly communicated (to her) by Vasudeva (through mere sight even as a preceptor would impress on the mind of his disciple a mental image of the Lord). (18) Imprisoned within (the four walls of) the palace of Kārṇsa (the chief of the Bhojas) like an enclosed flame or like useful knowledge pent up in (the mind of) a (selfish) scholar who keeps his knowledge to himself, Devakī, who had (now) turned into an abode of the Lord Himself (the abode of the universe), did not shine fully (failed to delight the outside world). (19) Perceiving Devakī—who bore the invincible Lord within her—illuminating the palace by her (uncommon) lustre and having a bright smile (on her countenance), Kāṁsa said (to himself): "Hari, who is going to take my life, has clearly and surely entered her womb, like a lion entering a cave; for she was not like this (so bright) before. (20) What should be speedily done by me now with reference to him? For (if I attempt to make short work of him, the moment he is born) he is not going to withhold his prowess (even as a new-born babe would do), intent as he is on his purpose (of advancing the interests of the gods). (And if I dispose of Devakī herself, before my enemy is born,) such destruction of Devakī (my cousin), who is not only a woman but enceinte (too), will forthwith mar my reputation and prosperity and cut short my life. (21) Such a one is indeed (as good as) dead, though breathing, who lives by most atrocious deeds; (for) people curse such a man (even during his lifetime) and, when his body gets defunct, he is surely destined to go to hell (consisting of blinding darkness), the inevitable fate of one identifying oneself with the body." (22) Pondering thus, Kāṁsa, though powerful himself, ceased from that darkest design (of killing Devakī) and kept awaiting the birth of Śrī Hari, cherishing a feeling of enmity for Him. (23) Thinking of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses) while sitting, lying down, standing, taking his food and walking on earth, he saw the world full of Him. (24)

ब्रह्मा भवश्च तत्रैव मुनिभिर्नारदादिभिः। देवैः सानुचरैः साकं गीर्भिवृषणमैडयम्। २५।

सत्यव्रतं सत्यपरं त्रिसत्यं सत्यस्य योनिं निहितं च सत्ये।

सत्यस्य सत्यमृतसत्यनेत्रं सत्यात्मकं त्वां शरणं प्रपन्नाः। २६।

एकायनोऽसौ द्विफलस्त्रिमूलश्चतुरसः पञ्चविधः षडात्मा।

सप्तत्वगष्टविटपो नवाक्षो दशच्छदी द्विखगो ह्यादिवृक्षः। २७।

त्वमेक एवास्य सतः प्रसूतिस्त्वं सन्निधानं त्वमनुग्रहश्च।

त्वन्मायया संवृत्तेतसस्त्वां पश्यन्ति नाना न विपश्चिता ये। २८।

बिभर्षि रूपाण्यवबोध आत्मा क्षेमाय लोकस्य चराचरस्य।

सत्त्वोपपन्नानि सुखावहानि सतामभद्राणि मुहुः खलानाम्। २९।

त्वय्यम्बुजाक्षाखिलसत्त्वधाग्नि समाधिनाऽऽवेशितचेतसैके।

त्वत्पादपोतेन महकृतेन कुर्वन्ति गोवत्सपदं भवाब्धिम्। ३०।

स्वयं समुत्तीर्य सुदुस्तरं ह्युमन् भवान्णवं भीममदप्रसौहृदाः।

भवत्पदाम्भोरुहनावमत्र ते निधाय याताः सदनुग्रहो भवान्। ३१।

येऽप्येऽरविन्दाक्ष विमुक्तमानिनस्त्वय्यस्तभावादविशुद्धबुद्धयः।

आरुह्य कृच्छ्रेण परं पदं ततः पतन्त्यधोऽनादृत्युषदङ्घ्रयः। ३२।

तथा न ते माधव तावकाः क्वचिद् भ्रश्यन्ति मार्गात्त्वयि बद्धसौहृदाः।

त्वयाभिगुप्ता विचरन्ति निर्भया विनायकानीकपमूर्धसु प्रभो। ३३।

सत्त्वं विशुद्धं श्रयते भवान् स्थितौ शरीरिणां श्रेयउपायनं वपुः।

वेदक्रियायोगतपःसमाधिभिस्तवार्हणं येन जनः समीहते। ३४।

सत्त्वं न चेद्भारतिरिदं निजं भवेद् विज्ञानमज्ञानभिदापमार्जनम्।

गुणप्रकाशैरनुमीयते भवान् प्रकाशते यस्य च येन वा गुणः। ३५।

न नामरूपे गुणजन्मकर्मभिर्निरूपितव्ये तव तस्य साक्षिणः।

मनोवचोभ्यामनुमेयवर्त्मनो देव क्रियायां प्रतियन्यथापि हि ।३६।

शृण्वन् गृणन् संस्मर्यश्च चिन्तयन् नामानि रूपाणि च मङ्गलानि ते ।

क्रियासु यस्वच्चरणारविन्दयोरविष्टचेता न भवाय कल्पते ।३७।

दिष्ट्या हरेऽस्या भवतः पदो भुवो भारोऽपनीतस्तव जन्मनेशितुः ।

दिष्ट्याङ्कितां त्वत्पदकैः सुशोभनैर्द्रक्ष्याम गां द्यां च तवानुकम्पिताम् ।३८।

न तेऽभवस्येश भवस्य कारणं विना विनोदं व्रत तर्कयामहे ।

भवो निरोधः स्थितिरप्यविद्या कृता यतस्त्वय्यभयाश्रयात्मनि ।३९।

मत्स्याश्चकच्छपन्सिंहवराहहंसराजन्यविप्रविवुधेषु कृतावतारः ।

त्वं पासि नस्त्रिभुवनं च यथाधुनेश भारं भुवो हर यदूतम वन्दनं ते ।४०।

दिष्ट्याम्ब ते कुक्षिगतः परः पुमानंशेन साक्षाद् भगवान् भवाय नः ।

मा भूद् भयं भोजपतेर्मूर्खोर्गोप्ता यदूनां भविता तवात्मजः ।४१।

Going thither, with sages headed by Nārada and gods accompanied by their attendants (such as Gandharvas), Brahmā and Śiva (the Source of the universe), glorified (in the following words) Lord Viṣṇu (who showers all desired boons). (25) "We seek as our shelter You of true resolve, existing in the past, present and future (i.e., before, during and after creation), the (ultimate) Source of earth, water and fire (collectively referred to in the Vedic literature by the term 'Sat'), as well as of air and ether (collectively known as Tyat") and dwelling in the aforesaid (five) elements (called by the name of 'Satyam'), as the Reality underlying them (all), the Prompter of truthful speech as well as of undifferentiating vision, and consisting of truth, which is (at the same time) the highest means of attaining You. (26) This beginningless tree of creation indeed has one ground (in the shape of Prakṛti or Primordial Matter), a couple of fruits (in the form of pleasure and pain), three roots (in the form of the three modes of Prakṛti viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas), four kinds of sap (in the form of the four objects of human pursuit, viz., religious merit, earthly possessions, sensuous pleasure and final Beatitude), five media of perception (in the form of the five senses of perception), six states (viz., birth, existence, growth, ripeness, decay and destruction or six forms of anguish, viz., hunger and thirst, grief and infatuation, old age and death), seven layers of barks (in the form of the seven constituents of a body, viz., chyle, blood, flesh, fat, bone, marrow and semen), eight boughs (in the shape of the five elements—viz., earth, water, fire, air and ether—mind, reason and ego) and nine hollows (in the form of the nine apertures of the body, viz., the two sockets of eyes, the two cavities of ears, the two nostrils, the mouth and the organs of urination and defecation) and a pair of birds (viz., the individual soul and the Inner Controller inhabiting it) and is endowed with ten leaves (in the form of the ten vital airs, viz., Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna, Samāna, Nāga, Kūrma, Kṛkālā, Devadatta and Dhanañjaya). (27) You alone are the Cause of the aforesaid tree in the form of the phenomenal universe; You are its resting-place and you are its preserver (too). Those whose wisdom is clouded by Your Māyā (deluding potency) look upon You as many, (but) not so those who are wise. (28) Being the Spirit, which is consciousness itself, You repeatedly assume (reveal) for the welfare of the mobile and the immobile creation forms constituted of Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas), which bring delight to the righteous and are harmful (bring destruction) to the wicked. (29) With their mind fixed through concentration on You, the embodiment of pure Sattva, O lotus-eyed Lord, the select few (those endowed with intelligence) cross the ocean of mundane existence like the foot-print of a calf with the help of the vessel in the form of Your feet, made available (shown) by the exalted. (30) Having themselves duly crossed the terrible ocean of metempsychosis, (so) very difficult to cross, O self-effulgent Lord, and leaving behind the bark of Your lotus-feet (setting an example of their devotion) here (on this side of the ocean) the aforesaid (wise men), full of unbounded compassion (for the afflicted), have reached the other shore (without any exertion), gracious as You are to the righteous. (31) Others (those treading the path of Knowledge unmixed with Devotion), who regard themselves as liberated, O lotus-eyed One, and whose mind is not very pure due to lack of devotion to You and because they have failed to adore Your feet, fall down from their position even on attaining with (great) difficulty a high state (in the form of noble birth, learning and asceticism, so favourable to Liberation.) (32) Those devotees of Yours, who have fastened their (deep) affection on You, O Spouse of Lakṣmī, do not, under any circumstance, stray in that way from the path (of Devotion). Protected on all sides by You and therefore rid of all fear (on the other hand), O Lord, they move about freely, setting their foot on the heads of the commanders of gods presiding over obstacles. (33) For the continuance of the world You assume (reveal) a form—consisting of pure Sattva and dispensing the fruit of actions of embodied beings—through the medium of which people (belonging to the four Āśramas or stages of life) offer worship to You (severally) through (a study of) the Vedas, the practice of rituals, asceticism and concentration of mind. (34) Had this (divine) personality of Yours, consisting of Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas) not been manifest, O Maker of the universe, saving knowledge, which wipes out ignorance and the (resulting) notion of diversity (and which follows from the worship of Your personality) would not have been possible (at all). (If it is urged that the existence of Brahma would still be concluded from the light shed by the intellect and other faculties which, being material, possess only reflected light, our reply is that) You are only inferred (but not directly perceived), through the light shed by material organs, as one in relation to whom and presided over by whom the material organs shed their light. (Through Your worship however, the mind gets attuned with You and Your truth is realized by Your grace). (35) O self-effulgent Lord, who are the witness of the mind etc., and the means of whose realization can (only) be guessed, Your names and forms, associated with Your excellences, births and deeds, can neither be conceived with the mind nor extolled in words. Nevertheless, as is well-known, those engaged in the act of Your worship do recite Your names and perceive Your forms. (36) Hearing and reciting, contemplating on and helping others remember Your auspicious names and forms, he whose mind is fixed on Your lotus-feet (even) when he is engaged in activities (of various kinds) no longer deserves to be reborn. (37) Happily, O Hari, the burden of this earth, which represents Your feet, has been removed by Your (very) descent. Luckily (enough), we shall perceive the earth and heaven adorned with Your lovely footprints bearing auspicious marks and (thus) favoured by You, its (supreme) Ruler. (38) O Lord, that constitutes a haven free from (all) fear, we conceive no ground for Your descent other than love for sport, birthless as You are; for birth, life and death are attributed (even) to the (individual) soul through ignorance about You. (39) O Lord, relieve the burden of the earth on this occasion (even) as You have protected us as well as (all) the three worlds (at other times), having descended in the form of a fish, a horse (Lord Hayagrīva), tortoise, man-lion, boar, swan, Kṣatriya prince (Śrī Rāma), a Brāhmaṇa (Lord Paraśurāma) and a god (the divine Dwarf), Hail to You, O Jewel among the Yadus! (40) (Addressing Devakī, they said), fortunately, O mother, the almighty Lord, the Supreme Person has Himself entered your womb alongwith (all) His (divine) potencies (constituting so many parts of His being) for our welfare. Let there be no more fear of Kāṁsa (the chief of the Bhojas), who is courting his own death (by persecuting you and your husband); (for) your (prospective) son will prove to be the Protector of the Yadus." (41)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यभिष्टूय पुरुषं यद्वपमनिदं यथा । ब्रह्मेशानौ पुरोधाय देवाः प्रतिययुर्दिवम् । ४२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे गर्भगतविष्णोर्ब्रह्मादिकृतस्तुतिर्नाम द्वितीयोऽध्यायः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Having thus glorified the Supreme Person, whose essence is, really speaking, other than (different from) this visible universe, and placing Brahṁā and Śiva at their heads, the gods returned to heaven. (42)

Thus ends the second discourse entitled "Eulogy of Lord Viṣṇu in Devakī's womb addressed by Brahṁā and others", in Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ तृतीयोऽध्यायः

Discourse III

Advent of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ सर्वगुणोपेतः कालः परमशोभनः । यद्वैवाजनजन्मर्क्षं शान्तर्क्षग्रहतरकम् । १ ।
दिशः प्रसेदुर्गगनं निर्मलोद्गुणोदयम् । मही मङ्गलभूयिष्ठपुरग्रामव्रजाकरा । २ ।
नद्यः प्रसन्नसलिला हृदा जलरुहश्रियः । द्विजालिकुलसंनादस्तबका वनराजयः । ३ ।
ववौ वायुः सुखस्पर्शः पुण्यगन्धवहः शुचिः । अग्रयश्च द्विजातीनां शान्तास्तत्र समिन्धतः । ४ ।
मनांस्यान् प्रसन्नानि साधूनामसुरद्वहाम् । जायमानेज्जने तस्मिन् नेदुर्दुभयो दिवि । ५ ।
जगुः किन्नरगन्धर्वास्तुष्टुवुः सिद्धचारणाः । विद्याधर्यश्च ननूतुरप्सरोभिः समं तदा । ६ ।
मुमुचुर्मुनयो देवाः सुमनांसि मुदान्विताः । मन्दं मन्दं जलधरा जगज्जुर्नुसागरम् । ७ ।
निशीथे तम उद्धूते जायमाने जनार्दने । देवक्यां देवरूपिण्यां विष्णुः सर्वगुहाशयः ।

आविरीसीद् यथा प्राच्यां दिशीन्दुरिव पुष्कलः । ८ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Now came the most delightful hour, fraught with all blessings, when precisely the asterisk Rohiṇi (presided over by Brahṁā, son of the birthless Lord Viṣṇu) was at the ascendant and when (the rest of) the asterisks, planets and (other) stars bore a gentle aspect. (1) The quarters became clear (of clouds as though it were autumn, although the rainy season had not yet ended); while the firmament was marked with the presence of multitudes of stars shining unobscured. The earth was seen with its towns, villages, stations of cowherds and mines full of festivities. (2) The rivers flowed in a limpid stream; ponds bloomed with lotuses; rows of forest-trees laden with bunches of flowers rang with the sweet noise of birds and swarms of bees. (3) A hallowed breeze (coming as it did from the direction of the holy Yamunā) and wafting a sweet fragrance, blew delightful to the touch; the sacred fires of the twice-born (that had been extinguished due to Kāṁsa's persecution) burst into flames (automatically) on the occasion. (4) The minds of the righteous became cheerful oppressed as they had been by the demons. When that birthless Lord was about to be born kettledrums sounded (of themselves) in heaven. (5) At that time Kinnaras and Gandharvas sang, Siddhas and Cāraṇas uttered praises and Vidyādhara women danced with celestial nymphs. (6) Full of joy, sages and gods showered flowers and clouds gently rumbled after the manner of the (roaring) ocean. (7) When midnight enveloped in (thick) darkness came and when people's prayer (for His descent) began, Lord Viṣṇu, the Indweller of all hearts, manifested Himself in His entirety through Devakī—who possessed a form similar to that of a goddess (being an incarnation of Aditi, the mother of the gods)—even as the full moon would appear in the eastern horizon. (8)

तमद्भुतं बालकमम्बुजेक्षणं चतुर्भुजं शङ्खगदार्युदायुधम् ।
 श्रीवत्सलक्ष्मं गलशोभिकौस्तुभं पीताम्बरं सान्द्रपयोदसौभगम् । ९ ।
 महाहैवैदूर्यकिरीटकुण्डलत्विषा परिषुक्तसहस्रकुन्तलम् ।
 उद्दामकाञ्च्यङ्गदकङ्कणादिभिर्विरोचमानं वसुदेवं ऐक्षत । १० ।
 स विस्मयोत्फुल्लविलोचनो हरिं सुतं विलोक्यानकदुन्दुभिस्तदा ।
 कृष्णावतारोत्सवसम्भ्रमोऽस्पृशन् मुदा द्विजेभ्योऽयुतमाप्नुतो गवाम् । ११ ।
 अथैनमस्तौदवधार्य पूरुषं परं नताङ्गः कृतधीः कृताङ्गलिः ।
 स्वरोच्चिषा भारत सूतिकागृहं विरोचयन्तं गतभीः प्रभाववित् । १२ ।

Vasudeva beheld that extraordinary boy with lotus-like eyes, endowed with four arms wielding uplifted weapons (and other emblems) such as a conch, a mace and a discus; bearing on his bosom the mark of Śrīvatsa (a golden curl of hair characteristic of Lord Viṣṇu); clad in yellow (silk); possessing the charm of a cloud laden with moisture, with the Kaustubha gem shining at His neck and His profuse locks bathed in the splendour of His diadem and ear-rings studded with precious cat's-eyes, and highly resplendent with an exquisite girdle, armlets and bangles etc. (9-10) Plunged in joy to behold Śrī Hari as his (own) son and with his eyes wide open through wonder (at the appearance of the all-pervading Lord through the womb of his wife, Devakī, even though he was bound inwardly with the shackles of ignorance and outwardly by the fetters of Kāṁsa), Vasudeva mentally gave away on that (auspicious) occasion ten thousand cows to Brāhmaṇas in his hurry to celebrate the descent of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Lord Viṣṇu). (11) Concluding the boy, (who was) illuminating the lying-in-chamber with His (own) splendour, to be (no other than) Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person), O scion of Bharata, Vasudeva, who was aware of the Lord's greatness and whose fear was (completely) gone, now proceeded to glorify Him with a guileless mind and joined palms, his body bent low (with humility). (12)

वसुदेव उवाच

विदितासि भवान् साक्षात् पुरुषः प्रकृतेः परः । केवलानुभवानन्दस्वरूपः सर्वबुद्धिदृक् । १३ ।
 स एव स्वप्रकृत्येदं सृष्ट्याये त्रिगुणात्मकम् । तदनु त्वं ह्यप्रविष्टः प्रविष्ट इव भाव्यसे । १४ ।
 यथेमेविकृता भावास्तथा ते विकृतैः सह । नानावीर्याः पृथग्भूता विराजं जनयन्ति हि । १५ ।
 सन्निपत्य समुत्पाद्य दृश्यन्तेऽनुगता इव । प्रागेव विद्यमानत्वात् तेषामिह सम्भवः । १६ ।
 एवं भवान् बुद्ध्यनुमेयलक्षणैर्ग्राहीगुणैः सन्नपि तद्गुणाग्रहः ।
 अनावृतत्वाद् बहिरन्तरं न ते सर्वस्य सर्वात्मन आत्मवस्तुनः । १७ ।
 य आत्मनो दृश्यगुणेषु सन्निति व्यवस्यते स्वव्यतिरेकतोऽबुधः ।

विनानुवादं न च तन्मनीषितं सम्यग् यतस्त्यक्तमुपाददत् पुमान् । १८ ।

त्वत्तोऽस्य जन्मस्थितिसंयमान् विभो वदन्त्यनीहादगुणादविक्रियात् ।

त्वयिश्चरे ब्रह्मणि नो विरुध्यते त्वदाश्रयत्वादुपचर्यते गुणैः । १९ ।

स त्वं त्रिलोकस्थितये स्वमायया बिभर्षि शुक्लं खलु वर्णमात्मनः ।

सर्गाय रक्तं रजसोपवृंहितं कृष्णं च वर्णं तमसा जनात्यये । २० ।

त्वमस्य लोकस्य विभो रिरिक्षिषुगृहिऽवतीर्णोऽसि ममाखिलेश्वर ।

राजन्यसंज्ञासुरकोटियूथपैर्निव्यूह्यमाना निहनियसे चमूः । २१ ।

अयं त्वसभ्यस्तव जन्म नौ गृहे श्रुत्वाप्रजांस्तेन्यवधीत् सुरेश्वर ।

स तेऽवतारं पुरुषैः समर्पितं श्रुत्वाधुनैवाभिसरत्युतायुधः । २२ ।

Vasudeva prayed : You have been directly known (by me) to be (the same as) the Supreme Person, existing beyond Prakṛti (the material plane), nay, consisting of absolute and conscious bliss, the witness of all minds. (13) Having evolved even as such (consisting of truth, consciousness and bliss) at the beginning (of creation) this (universe), consisting of the three Guṇas, by Your (own), creative energy, You are conceived as having entered it after that, even though as a matter of fact You have not entered it. (14) (Just) as these elementary principles, (viz., the Mahat-tattva, Ahaṅkāra and the five Tanmātrās) appear to have entered their evolutes (even though they do not really enter it), so is the case with You (who appear to have entered the womb of Devakī even though You have not actually entered it). Combining (under the direction of the Spirit) with their (sixteen) evolutes (viz., the five gross elements and the ten Indriyas and the mind), the former actually bring forth the cosmic egg, though possessing diverse properties and existing apart (from one another); and, having duly evolved it, they appear as having entered it (even though they do not really do so). Their entry into it is not possible due to their being already present in it (as its causes). (15-16) In this way You are imagined as having entered Devakī's womb, though not having actually entered it. Though existing (as their cause) with the objects perceptible by the senses (whose true nature can only be inferred through the perception of sense-objects), You are not apprehended along with those sense-objects; (for) the distinction of inside and outside does not exist in You, that comprise and indwell all, are all-pervading and real—because of Your being unlimited. (How, then, can it be possible for You to enter anything?) (17) He who concludes with regard to material objects perceptible by him that they are real as distinct from their (own) self is ignorant. And since, when investigated into, such an object does not prove to be anything but a (mere) display of words, a man acknowledging what has been disproved is (certainly) a fool. (18) The wise declare the appearance, the continuance and the destruction of this (universe), O Lord, (as proceeding) from You, who are desireless, beyond the (three) Guṇas and changeless. This is not incompatible in You, who are (at once) Brahma (the Absolute) and the (almighty) Lord. (As a matter of fact,) whatever is done by the Guṇas is ascribed to You because of Your being their ultimate ground. (19) As such (consisting of truth, consciousness and bliss), of course, You assume (reveal) by Your creative will Your pure (white) complexion (Viṣṇu form consisting of Sattva) for the continuance of the three worlds, Your red complexion (Brahmā form), endowed with the principle of Rajas, for their creation, and a dark complexion (Rudra form), evolved by (the principle of) Tamas for their destruction. (20) Intending to protect this universe, O Lord, the Ruler of all, You have descended in my house. You will (in course of time) extirpate (for the protection of the righteous) armies led by numberless Asura chiefs passing under the name of Kṣatriya princes. (21) Hearing of (anticipating) Your birth in our house, this villain (of a Kaṁsa) actually killed Your elder brothers, O Ruler of the gods ! Leaming of Your advent as soon as it is intimated by his men, he will rush in this very moment with uplifted weapons. (22)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अश्वेनामात्मजं वीक्ष्य महापुरुषलक्षणम् । देवकी तमुपाधावत् कंसाद भीता शुचिस्मिता । २३ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Perceiving her aforesaid son endowed with the characteristics of Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person), Devakī, who was (hitherto) afraid of Kāṁsa, now bore a bright smile (on her countenance) and glorified Him. (23)

देवक्युवाच

रूपं यत् तत् प्राहुर्व्यक्तमाद्यं ब्रह्म ज्योतिर्निर्गुणं निर्विकारम् ।

सत्तामात्रं निर्विशेषं निरीहं स त्वं साक्षाद् विष्णुरध्यात्मदीपः । २४ ।

नष्टे लोके द्विपरार्धावसाने महाभूतेष्वादिभूतं गतेषु ।

व्यक्तेऽव्यक्तं कालवेगेन याते भवानेकः शिष्यते शेषसंज्ञः । २५ ।

योऽयं कालस्तस्य तेऽव्यक्तबन्धो चेष्टामाहुश्चेष्टते येन विश्वम् ।

निमेषादिवत्सरान्तो महीयांस्तं त्वेशानं क्षेमधाम प्रपद्ये । २६ ।

मर्त्यो मृत्युव्यालभीतः पलायन् लोकान् सर्वात्रिभयं नाध्यगच्छत् ।

त्वत्पादाब्जं प्राप्य यदृच्छयाद्य स्वस्थः शेते मृत्युरस्मादपैति । २७ ।

स त्वं घोरदुःखसेनात्मजात्रस्त्राहि त्रस्तान् भृत्यवित्रासहासि ।

रूपं चेदं पौरुषं ध्यानधिष्यन् मा प्रत्यक्षं मांसदृशां कृषीष्टाः । २८ ।

जन्य ते मय्यसौ पापो मा विद्यान्मधुसूदन । समुद्विजे भवद्धेतोः कंसादहमर्धोऽरधीः । २९ ।

उपसंहर विश्रामत्रदो रूपमलौकिकम् । शङ्खचक्रगदापद्मश्रिया जुष्टं चतुर्भुजम् । ३० ।

विश्वं यदेतत् स्वतनौ निशान्ते यथावकाशं पुरुषः परो भवान् ।

बिभर्ति सोऽयं मम गर्भोऽभूदहो नृलोकस्य विडम्बनं हि तत् । ३१ ।

Devakī prayed : You are Lord Viṣṇu Himself, the Illuminator of (all) psycho-physical organisms, the indefinable Reality, which the Vedas declare as the unmanifest cause consisting of (mere) consciousness, transcending the three Guṇas, absolute existence, unqualified and devoid of activity. (24) When at the end of two Parārdhas (constituting the lifetime of Brahmā) the universe (consisting of seven higher and seven lower worlds) is dissolved (into its constituent elements), by force of Time the (five) gross elements are ultimately merged (alongwith the ten Indriyas and the mind including the deities presiding over them) in Ahaṅkāra (their cause), (Ahaṅkāra is merged in the Mahat-tattva), the Mahat-tattva in the Unmanifest (and the Unmanifest in Yourself), You alone are left and (therefore) called by the name of Śeṣa (lit., the residue). (25) The wise declare as a potency of Yours the aforesaid Time, which extends (in point of duration) from the twinkling of an eye to a year and is infinite in extent, and under whose impulse the universe proceeds on in its cyclic course, O Director of the Unmanifest ! I fly (for protection) to You as such, the Ruler (of Time as well as of Prakṛti), the Abode of security. (26) Afraid of the serpent of death and running about all the worlds (in quest of a quarter free from the fear of death), a mortal is not able to attain a place void of fear. Having by an indescribable stroke of good luck (however) reached Your lotus-feet, he rests in peace, O Primeval Being; for (even) death turns away from him. (27) As such (kindly) protect You us (Your devotees), afraid of the terrible Kāṁsa (the son of Ugrasena); (for) You are the dispeller of the grave fears of Your servants. And (pray), do not reveal to the ignorant (whose eyes are directed to the flesh) this divine form, the object of meditation (for the seekers of liberation). (28) Let not that wicked one know of Your birth through me, O slayer of the demon Madhu ! I am terribly afraid, for Your sake, of Kāṁsa and (feel) much agitated at heart. (29) Withdraw, O Soul of the universe, this four-armed transcendent form adorned with the splendour of a conch, a discus, a mace and a lotus. (30) It is a truism that You, the Supreme Person, hold at the end of the cosmic night (final dissolution) in Your Body this (vast) universe with enough space about it. That You as such should have entered my womb, Oh that is surely an imitation of human ways. (31)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

त्वमेव पूर्वसर्गेऽभूः पृथ्विः स्वायम्भुवे सति । तदायं सुतपा नाम प्रजापतिरकल्मषः । ३२ ।
 युवां वै ब्रह्मणाऽऽदिष्टौ प्रजासर्गे यदा ततः । सन्नियम्येन्द्रियग्राभं तेषाथे परमं तपः । ३३ ।
 वर्षवातातपहिमघर्मकालगुणाननु । सहमानौ श्वासरोधविनिर्धृतमनोमलौ । ३४ ।
 शीर्णपर्णानिलाहारावुपशान्तेन चेतसा । मत्तः कामानभीप्सन्तौ मदाराधनमीहितुः । ३५ ।
 एवं वां तप्यतोस्तीव्रं तपः परमदुष्करम् । दिव्यवर्षसहस्राणि द्वादशेयुर्मासिनोः । ३६ ।
 तदा वां परितुष्टोऽहममुना वपुषानये । तपसा श्रद्धया नित्यं भक्त्या च हृदि भावितः । ३७ ।
 प्रादुरासं वरदराड् युवयोः कामदित्सया । त्रियतां वर इत्युक्ते मादृशो वां वृतः सुतः । ३८ ।
 अनुष्ठप्राग्यविषयावनपत्यौ च दम्पती । न वज्राथेऽपवर्गं मे मोहितौ मम मायया । ३९ ।
 गते मयि युवां लब्ध्वा वरं मत्सदृशं सुतम् । प्राप्यान् भोगानभुञ्ज्वाथो युवां प्राप्तमनोरथौ । ४० ।
 अदृष्टान्यतमं लोके शीलौदार्यगुणैः समम् । अहं सुतो वामभवं पृथिगर्भं इति श्रुतः । ४१ ।
 तयोर्वा पुनरेवाहमदित्यामास कश्यपात् । उपेन्द्र इति विख्यातो वामनत्वाच्च वामनः । ४२ ।
 तृतीयेऽस्मिन् भवेऽहं वै तेनैव वपुषाथ वाम् । जातो भूयस्तयोरेव सत्यं मे व्याहृतं सति । ४३ ।
 एतद् वां दर्शितं रूपं प्राग्जन्मस्मरणाय मे । नान्यथा मद्भवं ज्ञानं मर्त्यलिङ्गेन जायते । ४४ ।
 युवां मां पुत्रभावेन ब्रह्मभावेन चासकृत् । चिन्तयन्तौ कृतस्नेहौ यास्येथे मद्भक्तिं पराम् । ४५ ।

The Lord replied : In a previous life (the third incarnation preceding the present one), in course of the Svāyambhuva Manvantara you alone, O good lady, were Prśni. In that life he (your husband) was a sinless Prajāpati, Sutapā by name. (32) When indeed you two were commanded by Brahmā to beget progeny, thereupon you both practised most rigid austerities, fully controlling your senses. (33) Enduring one after another the peculiarities of the (various) seasons in the form of rain, storm, sunshine, snow and heat, nay, subsisting (now) on withered leaves and (now) on air alone and with the impurities of your mind wiped out through breath-control, you performed My worship with a calm mind, seeking the objects of your desire from Me. (34-35) While you with your mind fixed on Me, were both thus practising severe austerities, most difficult to practise, O good lady, twelve thousand celestial years rolled by. (36) Constantly contemplated upon in the heart with reverence and devotion coupled with asceticism, and highly pleased with you both, O sinless one, I, the foremost of (all) bestowers of boons, appeared on that occasion in this (very) form with the desire of conferring (on you) the blessings sought by you both. When the words, "Ask any boon of your choice" were uttered (by Me), a son like Me was asked for by you. (37-38) Having not (yet) tasted the pleasures of sense and not blessed with any issue, you, husband and wife, did not ask (the boon of) final beatitude of Me, infatuated as you were by My Māyā. (39) Having secured the desired boon of (getting) a son like Me and having (thus) realized your ambition, you proceeded when I had left, to enjoy the sensuous pleasures. (40) Not finding anyone else in the world alike in amiable disposition, magnanimity and other qualities, I (Myself) was born as your son and became known by the name of Prśnigarbha (son of Prśni). (41) Once more as a son of you both as aforesaid, I was born of Aditi (an incarnation of Pr̥śnī) through the sage Kaśyapa (an incarnation of Sutapā) and came to be known as Upendra (Indra's younger brother) and (also) as Vāmana because of My dwarf-like form. (42) Indeed in this third incarnation of you both as such, I am again born at this moment in the same (four-armed) form (as was revealed to you before); (for) My word is (always) true, O good lady ! (43) This (four-armed) form has been revealed to you (again) for reminding you of My previous descents; (for) knowledge of My identity is not had otherwise through a mortal sem-blance. (Now of course I will assume the form of a human babe as desired by you). (44) Constantly thinking of Me as a son and (also) as Brahma (the all-pervading Lord), and having bestowed (your) love on Me, you both will attain the highest state of union with Me (in the form of co-residence with Me in My divine Abode). (45)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्त्वाऽऽसीद्धरिस्तूष्णीं भगवानात्ममायया । पित्रोः सम्प्रश्यतोः सद्यो बभूव प्राकृतः शिशुः । १४६ ।

ततश्च शौरिर्भगवत्प्रचोदितः सुतं समादाय स सूतिकागृहात् ।

यदा बहिर्गन्तुमियेष तर्ह्यजा या योगमायाजनि नन्दजायया । १४७ ।

तया हतप्रत्ययसर्ववृत्तिषु द्वाःस्थेषु पौरैष्वपि शायितेषुथ ।

द्वारस्तु सर्वाः पिहिता दुरत्यया बृहत्कपाटायसकीलशृङ्खलैः । १४८ ।

ताः कृष्णवाहे वसुदेव आगते स्वयं व्यवर्त्यन्त यथा तमो रवेः ।

ववर्ष पर्जन्यं ऽपांशुगर्जितः शेषोऽन्वगाद् वारि निवारयन् फणैः । १४९ ।

मघोनि वर्षत्यसकृद् यमानुजा गम्भीरतोयौघजवोर्मिफेनिला ।

भयानकावर्तशताकुला नदी मार्गं ददौ सिन्धुरिव श्रियः पतेः । १५० ।

नन्दव्रजं शौरिरूपेय तत्र तान् गोपान् प्रसुप्तानुपलभ्य निद्रया ।

सुतं यशोदाशयने निधाय तत्सुतामुपादाय पुनर्गृहानगात् । १५१ ।

देवक्याः शयने न्यस्य वसुदेवोऽथ दारिकाम् । प्रतिमुच्य पदोर्लोहमासे पूर्ववदावृतः । १५२ ।

यशोदा नन्दपत्नी च जातं परमबुध्यत । न तल्लिङ्गं परिश्रान्ता निद्रयापगतस्मृतिः । १५३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो मंहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे कृष्णजन्मनि तृतीयोऽध्यायः । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having thus spoken, Lord Śrī Hari, became silent and instantly assumed the form of an ordinary child by His own free will, His parents gazing (with wonder). (46) Thereupon as the aforesaid Vasudeva (the son of Śūra, who suddenly found his fetters loosened) felt inclined to step out of the lying-in-chamber, taking his son securely (in a winnowing basket covered with soft linen), as urged by the Lord, that (very) moment Yogamāyā, who is nick-named Ajā (birthless), was born through the wife of Nanda (at Gokula). (47) Now the gate-keepers having been deprived (for the time being) of all their cognitive faculties and the citizens too having been sent to sleep by Her (Yogamāyā), all the gates (of the palace), even though they had been closed by means of huge doors as well as with steel bolts and chains, and were (thus) hard to penetrate, flew open by themselves the moment Vasudeva arrived (near) carrying Lord ŚrīKṛṣṇa (on his head), (even) as darkness would disperse with the appearance of the sun. (At that time) clouds rained with a gentle rumbling; while Śeṣa followed (at the heels of Vasudeva), warding off the rain by means of his (thousand) hoods (spread as an umbrella over His head). (48-49) While Indra (the rain-god) was pouring showers frequently (in order to avert the popular gaze and allowing a respite at intervals so as to avoid continued hardship to Vasudeva), the Yamunā river (presided over by a deity of the same name and the younger sister of Yama, the god of retribution), (even though) covered with foam due to waves set up by the force of its deep flood, and studded with hundreds of fearful male-storms, afforded passage (to the divine Śrī Kṛṣṇa) by becoming fordable (even) as the ocean did (of yore) to Lord Śrī Rāma (the Spouse of Lakṣmī disguised as Sitā). (50) Reaching Nanda's Vraja and finding there the cowherds headed by Nanda buried in sleep under the influence of Yogamāyā (representing the trance-sleep of Lord Viṣṇu), Vasudeva (the son of Śūra) placed his son on the bed of Yaśodā (by her side) and returned (forthwith) to the palace (of Kāṁsa), taking* with him (in exchange) her (divine) daughter. (51) Laying the (divine) girl on Devakī's bed and putting the chains about his feet (again), Vasudeva now stood confined as before. (52) Yaśodā, Nanda's wife, too simply came to know of a child having been born (to her) but did not notice its sex, exhausted (as she was by the throes of parturition) and rendered unconscious by Yogamāyā. (53)

Thus ends the third discourse, bearing on the Advent of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्थोऽध्यायः

Discourse IV

Slipping from the grip of Kāṁsa, Yogamāyā ascends to the heavens and utters a prophecy

श्रीशुक उवाच

बहिरन्तःपुरद्वारः सर्वाः पूर्ववदावृताः । ततो बालध्वनिं श्रुत्वा गृहपालाः समुत्थिताः । १ ।
ते तु तूर्णमुपव्रन्त्य देवक्या गर्भजन्म तत् । आचख्युर्भोजराजाय यदुद्विग्नः प्रतीक्षते । २ ।
स तल्पात् तूर्णमुत्थाय कालोऽयमिति विह्वलः । सूतीगृहमगात् तूर्णं प्रस्खलन् मुक्तमूर्धजः । ३ ।
तमाह भ्रातरं देवी कृपणा करुणं सती । स्तुषेयं तव कल्याण स्त्रियं मा हन्तुमर्हसि । ४ ।
बहवो हिंसिता भ्रातः शिशवः पावकोपमाः । त्वया दैवनिस्पृष्टेन पुत्रिकैका प्रदीयताम् । ५ ।
नन्वहं ते ह्यवरजा दीना हतसुता प्रभो । दातुमर्हसि मन्दाया अङ्ग्रेयां चरमां प्रजाम् । ६ ।

Śrī Suka resumed : (Vasudeva having returned to the palace,) all the outer (main) gates as well as those of the gynaeceum were closed as before. Then, on hearing the cry of a babe, the guards of the palace got wide awake. (1) Hastily approaching Kāṁsa, they now reported to the ruler of the Bhojas of that (particular) childbirth (the birth of the eighth child) of Devakī, which he anxiously awaited. (2) Rising hurriedly from his bed and distressed to think that the baby was his death, he went in all haste to the lying-in-chamber with tottering steps and dishevelled hair. (3) Wretched as she was, the shining and virtuous lady pathetically

* Vasudeva can be accused here of callousness by the unwary reader in removing his own son and deliberately delivering the child of his friend, Nanda, to the hands of Death. But thoughtful readers would acquit him of this charge, knowing as they do that Vasudeva did all this under the express command of the Lord Himself, as is clear from verse 47 above.

addressed her aforesaid cousin (as follows):—"She is (deserving of protection like) a daughter-in-law to you, O blessed one; you ought not to kill a female child. (4) Many a babe, brilliant as fire, has been killed by you, impelled as you were by Providence, O brother! This solitary and helpless girl may (kindly) be gifted to me. (5) Since I am undoubtedly your younger cousin, whose sons have been killed and who is therefore miserable, O lord, you ought to bestow on me, hapless as I am, this last progeny (of mine), O dear brother!" (6)

श्रीशुक उवाच

उपगृह्यात्मजामेवं रुदत्या दीनदीनवत् । याचितस्तां विनिर्भर्त्य हस्तादाचिच्छदे खलः । ७ ।
तां गृहीत्वा चरणयोजातमात्रां स्वसुः सुताम् । अपोथयच्छलापृष्ठे स्वार्थोन्मूलितसौहृदः । ८ ।
सा तद्भस्तात् समुत्पत्य सद्यो देव्यम्बरं गता । अदृश्यतानुजा विष्णोः सायुधाटमहाभुजा । ९ ।
दिव्यस्रगम्बारालेपताभरणभूषिता । धनुःशूलेषुचर्मासिङ्घचक्रगदाधरा । १० ।
सिद्धचारणगन्धर्वैरप्सरःकिन्नरैरगैः । उपाहृतैरुबलिभिः स्तूयमानेदमब्रवीत् । ११ ।
किं मया हतया मन्द जातः खलु तवान्तकृत् । यत्र क्व वा पूर्वशत्रुर्मां हिंसीः कृपणान् वृथा । १२ ।
इति प्रभाष्य तं देवी माया भगवती भुवि । बहुनामनिकेतेषु बहुनामा बभूव ह । १३ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus entreated by Devaki—who wept like a most helpless woman, hugging her daughter—and, roughly rebuking her with vehemence, the wicked one snatched the baby from her hand. (7) Seizing by the feet his cousin's daughter, who had just been born, Kamsa—whose affection (for his cousin) had been uprooted by self-interest—dashed her against the (hard) surface of a slab. (8) Flying off his hand, the younger sister of Śrī Kṛṣṇa instantly rose to the heavens and was seen in the form of a goddess with eight mighty arms equipped with weapons. (9) Adorned with ethereal wreaths, raiment, sandal-paste, and bejewelled ornaments, She wielded (severally) a bow, a pike, an arrow, a shield, a sword, a conch and a mace (in Her eight hands). (10) While being hymned by Siddhas, Cāraṇas, Gandharvas, Apsarās, Kinnaras and Nāgas, who offered various articles of worship (to Her), She uttered the following words:—(11) "What would you gain by My being slain, O foolish one; for your destroyer, (who is) your erstwhile adversary (too), has been born at some place or other. (Therefore) do not kill (other) helpless children in vain." (12) Having warned him thus, lo! the almighty Māyā (disappeared and) stayed on earth as a deity under diverse appellations in shrines of different names. (13)*

तयाभिहितमाकर्ण्य कंसः परमविस्मितः । देवकीं वसुदेवं च विमुच्य प्रश्रितोऽब्रवीत् । १४ ।
अहो भगिन्यहो भाम मया वां बत पाप्मना । पुरुषाद् इवापत्यं बहवो हिंमिताः सुताः । १५ ।
स त्वहं त्यक्तकारुण्यस्त्यक्तज्ञातिसुहृत् खलः । काल्लोकांश्च वै गमिष्यामि ब्रह्महेव मृतः श्वसन् । १६ ।
दैवमप्यनृतं वक्ति न मर्त्या एव केवलम् । यद्विश्रम्भादहं पापः स्वसुनिहतवज्जिशून् । १७ ।
मा शोचतं महाभागावात्मजान् स्वकृतम्भुजः । जन्तवो न सदैकत्र दैवाधीनास्तदाऽऽसते । १८ ।
भुवि भौमानि भूतानि यथा यान्त्यपयान्ति च । नायमात्मा तथैतेषु विपर्येति यथैव भूः । १९ ।
यथानेर्वविदो भेदो यत आत्मविपर्ययः । देहयोगवियोगौ च संसृतिर्न निवर्तते । २० ।
तस्माद् भद्रे स्वतनयान् मया व्यापादितानपि । मानुशोच यतः सर्वः स्वकृतं विन्दतेऽवशः । २१ ।
यावद्भतोऽस्मि हन्तात्मीत्यात्मानं मन्यतेऽस्वदृक् । तावत्तदभिमान्यज्ञो बाध्यबाधकतामियात् । २२ ।

क्षमध्वं मम दौरात्यं साधवो दीनवत्सलाः । इत्युक्त्वाश्रुमुखः पादौ श्यालः स्वस्रोत्राग्रहीत् । २३ ।
 मोचयामास निगडाद् विश्रब्धः कन्यकागिरा । देवकीं वसुदेवं च दर्शयन्नात्मसौहृदम् । २४ ।
 भ्रातुः समनुत्पत्त्य क्षान्त्वा रोषं च देवकी । व्यसृजद् वसुदेवश्च प्रहस्य तमुवाच ह । २५ ।
 एवमेतन्महाभाग यथा वदसि देहिनाम् । अज्ञानप्रभवाहंघीः स्वपरेति भिदा यतः । २६ ।
 शोकहर्षभयद्वेषलोभमोहमदन्विताः । मिथो घ्नन्त न पश्यन्ति भावैर्भावं पृथग्दृशः । २७ ।

Highly amazed to hear the words uttered by Her and having completely liberated Devaki and Vasudeva, Kāṁsa spoke with humility (as follows):—(14) "Oh ! cousin ! Oh ! brother-in-law, alas, many a son of yours has been killed by me, a sinner (as I am), (even) as an ogre may kill his (own) progeny. (15) Having forsworn compassion and disowned my kinsmen and (other) relatives indeed, and (virtually) dead, though breathing, to what (infernal) regions shall I actually descend like a slayer of Brāhmaṇas, a notorious wretch as I am ? (16) Not only mortals but gods as well utter falsehood, putting faith in whom I, a sinner, killed my cousin's babes ! (17) (Pray,) do not lament your sons, who only reaped what they had sown (in their previous existence), O highly blessed souls ! Living beings do not, as a rule, live for ever, or at one place (even) so long as they live, being under the control of destiny. (18) As earthen pots come and go (appear and disappear) on the earth, so do bodies (of living beings) in the Self. And even as the earth undergoes no change consequent on the earthly beings undergoing transformation, so the Self (too) does not change consequent on the bodies undergoing changes (in the form of birth, death and so on). (19) In him who is not really cognizant of this fact arises misapprehension regarding the self (in the form of self-identification with the body, which is other than the self), from which proceeds the notion of difference (between the self and the not-self). Thence come about the union with and separation from other bodies (viz., those of his sons and other near and dear ones) and (the result is that) transmigration (and the resultant harvest of joys and sorrows) does not cease (in his case so long as his aforesaid misapprehension does not disappear. (20) Therefore (although in truth neither they were your sons nor did I kill them), O blessed lady, do not sorrow for your sons, though slain by me; for everyone helplessly reaps the fruit of one's own (past) actions. (21) The fool who does not cognize his (true) self and identifies himself with a (material) body assumes the role of a victim or agent of persecution (only) so long as he feels that 'I am slain or I am the slayer.' (22) (Pray), forgive you both my wickedness; for pious souls (like you) are (as a rule) fond of the afflicted." Saying so, and with his face wet with tears, Kāṁsa (the brother-in-law of Vasudeva) forthwith clasped the feet of his cousin and her husband. (23) Reassured by the utterance of the (divine) girl, he rid Devaki and Vasudeva of (their) chains, exhibiting his affection (for them). (24) Having vouchsafed her forgiveness to the cousin, who was fully repentant, Devaki gave up her anger as well; while Vasudeva laughingly spoke to him as follows:—(25) "It is precisely as you say, O highly blessed one! The feeling in embodied beings that 'I am this body etc., from which proceeds the distinction that 'this is mine' and 'that is not mine', has its origin in ignorance. (26) Full of grief, delight, fear, hatred, greed, infatuation and pride, those possessed of a differentiating eye, do not perceive God (manifested as the Time-Spirit) destroying beings through the agency of (other) beings by recourse to mutual strife." (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कंस एवं प्रसन्नाभ्यां विशुद्धं प्रतिभाषितः । देवकीवसुदेवाभ्यामनुज्ञातोऽविशद् गृहम् । २८ ।
 तस्यां रात्र्यां व्यतीतायां कंस आहूय मन्त्रिणः । तेभ्य आचष्ट तत् सर्वं यदुक्तं योगनिद्रया । २९ ।
 आकर्ण्य भर्तुर्गदितं तमूचुर्देवशत्रवः । देवान् प्रति कृतामर्षा दैतेया नातिकोविदाः । ३० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus addressed in a guileless manner by Devaki and Vasudeva, who felt (quite) appeased, and permitted by them, Kāṁsa withdrew to his palace. (28) That night having passed, Kāṁsa summoned his counsellors and told them all that which was intimated by Yogamāyā (representing the trance-sleep of Lord Viṣṇu). (29) Hearing the words of their master, the demons (lit., the progeny of Diti), the (sworn) enemies of the gods—who were resentful towards the gods and were not very clever—said:—(30)

एवं चेत्तर्हि भोजेन्द्र पुरग्रामव्रजादियु । अनिर्दशान् निर्दशांश्च हनिष्यामोऽद्य वै शिशून् । ३१ ।
 किमुद्यमैः करिष्यन्ति देवाः समरभीरवः । नित्यमुद्विग्नमनसो ज्याघोषैर्धनुषस्तव । ३२ ।
 अस्त्यतस्ते शरव्रातैर्हन्यमानाः संपन्ततः । जिजीविषव उत्सृज्य पलायनपरा ययुः । ३३ ।
 केचित् प्राञ्जलयो दीना न्यस्तशस्त्रा दिवौकसः । मुक्तच्छशिखाः केचिद् भीताः स्म इति वादिनः । ३४ ।
 न त्वं विस्मृतस्त्रास्त्रान् विरथान् भयसंवृतान् । हंसन्यासकविमुखान् भग्नचापानयुध्यतः । ३५ ।
 किं क्षेमशूरैर्विबुधैरसंयुगविकल्थनैः । रहोजुषा किं हरिणा शम्भुना वा वनौकसा ।
 किमिन्द्रेणाल्पवीर्येण ब्रह्मणा वा तपस्यता । ३६ ।
 तथापि देवाः सापत्न्यान्नोपेक्ष्या इति मन्यहे । ततस्तन्मूलखनने नियुङ्क्ष्वास्माननुव्रतान् । ३७ ।
 यथाऽऽमयोऽङ्गे सम्पुर्णो नृभिर्न शक्यते रूढपदश्चिकित्सितम् ।
 यथेन्द्रियग्राम उपेक्षितस्तथा रिपुर्महान् बद्धबलो न चाल्यते । ३८ ।
 मूलं हि विष्णुर्देवानां यत्र धर्मः सनातनः । तस्य च ब्रह्म गोविप्रास्तपो यज्ञाः सदक्षिणाः । ३९ ।
 तस्मात् सर्वास्मिन् राजन् ब्राह्मणान् ब्रह्मवादिनः । तपस्विनो यज्ञशीलान् गाश्व हन्मो हविर्दुघाः । ४० ।
 विप्रा गावश्च वेदाश्च तपः सत्यं दमः शमः । श्रद्धा दया तितिक्षा च क्रतवश्च हरेस्तुः । ४१ ।
 स हि सर्वसुराध्यक्षो ह्यसुरद्विद् गुहाशयः । तन्मूला देवताः सर्वाः सेधराः सचतुर्मुखाः । अयं वै तद्वधोपायो यदृषीणां विहिंसनम् । ४२ ।

"If that is so, O ruler of the Bhojas, then we shall presently kill without doubt (all) the babes of above and below ten days (dwelling) in towns, villages, cowherd-stations and other places. (31) What will the gods do (to us) with all their endeavours, cowards as they are in battle and ever perturbed in mind at the twangs of your bowstring? (32) Being assailed on all sides with the volleys of your arrows (even) as you discharged them, they took to their heels (in the past), anxious to escape with life, and made good their retreat, deserting the battle-field. (33) Having laid down their arms, some gods (lit., denizens of heaven) stood with their palms joined over their heads, reduced as they were to a miserable plight. Others, who appeared with the tufts of hair on their crown untied and with the back end of their loin-cloth remaining untucked to their loin (as a token of humility), exclaimed, "We are frightened (and seek your mercy!)" (34) You, however, never strike those (of your enemies) who have forgotten to take their missiles and (other) weapons, have lost their chariots, are overtaken with fear, are intent on something else, have turned their back on the battle-field, or whose bow has been broken or who are disinclined to fight. (35) What (harm) could be wrought by the gods, valiant (only) in a safe retreat and boastful in places other than the battle-field? What could be done by Hari, living in seclusion (in the heart of all) or by Śiva, dwelling in woods? (And) what could be achieved by Indra of poor strength or by Brahmā (engaged in) practising austerities? (36) Yet we think that the gods do not deserve to be ignored because of their hostile attitude (towards us). Therefore, command us, your obedient servants, to destroy Viṣṇu (disguised as an infant and forming their very mainstay). (37) (Even) as a malady appearing in the body and completely ignored (in its initial stages) by men cannot be remedied once it has struck deep roots, or as the senses cannot be controlled if neglected (and allowed to have their own way), so the enemy cannot be dislodged once his strength gets consolidated and he grows mighty. (38) Indeed Viṣṇu is the root (chief support) of the gods and he stays where the eternal (Vedic) Religion prevails. Again, Veda, the cow, the Brāhmaṇa, asceticism and the (institution of) sacrifices accompanied by (liberal) sacrificial fees constitute the roots of the latter. (39) Therefore, O king, we shall by all means kill Brāhmaṇas who are expositors of the Vedas, ascetics and those given to sacrificial performances as well as cows that yield materials (such as milk and clarified butter) worthy of being offered as oblation into the sacrificial fire (inasmuch as they are all instrumental in manifesting Viṣṇu). (40) Brāhmaṇas, cows and the Vedas, asceticism, truthfulness, control of the senses and the mind, reverence, compassion and endurance as well as sacrificial performances constitute (so many) embodiments of Śrī Hari. (41) He is unquestionably the ruler of all the gods, a (sworn) enemy of the demons and indeed the indweller of (all) hearts. All the gods including Śiva and Brahmā (the four-faced creator) have their origin in Him. Hence to extirpate the Ṛṣis—this constitutes the (most effective) means of killing Viṣṇu. (42)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं दुर्मन्त्रिभिः कंसः सह सम्मन्त्र्य दुर्मतिः । ब्रह्महिंसां हितं मेने कालपाशावृतोऽसुरः । ४३ ।
 सन्दिश्य साधुलोकस्य कदने कदनप्रियान् । कामरूपधरान् दिक्षु दानवान् गृहमाविशत् । ४४ ।
 ते वै रजः प्रकृतयस्तमसा मूढचेतसः । सतां विद्वेषमाचेरुरादागतमृत्यवः । ४५ ।
 आयुः श्रियं यशो धर्मं लोकानाशिष एव च । हन्ति श्रेयांसि सर्वाणि पुंसो महदतिक्रमः । ४६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे चतुर्थोऽध्यायः ॥ ४ ॥

Śrī Śuka proceeded further : Having thus fully deliberated with his wicked advisers, the evil-minded demon, Kaṁsa, thought the massacre of Brāhmaṇas as conducive to his good, enmeshed as he was by the snare of Death. (43) Commanding the demons—who were fond of persecuting others and could assume any form they liked—to oppress the righteous in all quarters, Kaṁsa retired into the palace. (44) The demons, whose disposition was predominantly Rājasika (turbulent) and whose understanding was clouded with Tamogūṇa (obtuseness), and whose death was near, acted inimically towards the virtuous. (45) An outrage done to an exalted soul brings to an end a man's life, fortune, glory, religious merit, his title to the higher worlds as well as his desired objects, nay, all blessings. (46)

Thus ends the fourth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चमोऽध्यायः

Discourse V

Festivities connected with the Birth of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa at Gokula

श्रीशुक उवाच

नन्दस्वात्मज उत्पन्ने जाताह्लादो महामनाः । आहूय विप्रान् वेदज्ञान् स्नातः शुचिरलङ्कृतः । १ ।
वाचयित्वा स्वस्ययनं जातकर्मात्यजस्य वै । कारयामास विधिवत् पितृदेवार्चनं तथा । २ ।
धेनूनां नियुते प्रादाद् विप्रेभ्यः समलङ्कृते । तिलाद्रीन् सप्त रत्नौघशतकौष्माण्डरावृतान् । ३ ।
कालेन स्नानशौचाभ्यां संस्कारैस्तपसेन्यया । शुध्यन्ति दानैः सन्तुष्टा द्रव्याण्यन्ताऽऽत्तविद्यया । ४ ।
सौमङ्गल्यगिरो विप्राः सूतमागधवन्दिनः । गायकाश्च जगुर्नदुर्भर्यो दुन्दुभयो मुहुः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Calling in Brāhmaṇas, well-versed in the art of fortune-telling and having made them repeat benedictory hymns, the high-souled Nanda, on the other hand, who was rejoiced at the thought of a son having been born to him (in his ripe old age), and who had just bathed and attained purity (thereby) and was (duly) adorned, had the Jātakarma* ceremony actually performed with respect to the Babe according to precept and (also) caused the manes and gods (in the form of Nāndī-Śrāddha and so on) to be worshipped. (1-2) He gave away to the Brāhmaṇas two lakhs of newly calved and richly adorned cows as well as seven mountain-like piles of sesamum seeds† studded with a vast number of precious stones and covered with a piece of gold cloth. (3) Material substances get purified through passage of time, bath and washing, sacraments, asceticism, sacrificial performances, charitable gifts and contentment; while the soul is purified through Self-knowledge (alone). (4) Brāhmaṇas as well as Sūtas,‡ Māgadhas and Vandis uttered benedictory words; songsters sang songs, while kettledrums and larger drums sounded again and again. (5)

ब्रजः समष्ट्यसंसिक्तद्वाराजिरगृहान्तरः । चित्रध्वजपताकास्रक्चैलपल्लवतोरणैः । ६ ।
गावो वृषा वत्सतरा हरिद्रातैलरूषिताः । विचित्रधातुबर्हस्रग्वस्त्रकाञ्चनमालिनः । ७ ।
महार्हवस्त्राभरणकञ्चुकोष्णीषभूषिताः । गोपाः समाययू राजन् नानोपायनपाणयः । ८ ।

Vraja had its doorways, courtyards and interiors of houses well swept and duly sprinkled with water, and was decorated with flags and buntings of various colours as well as with arches made of wreaths, textiles and leaves. (6) Cows, bulls and grown up calves were daubed with oil mixed with turmeric, painted with minerals of various colours and decked with peacock plumes, wreaths, cloth and gold necklaces. (7) Cowherds dressed in costly loin-cloths, coats and turbans and adorned with valuable jewels flocked (in the house of Nanda), carrying presents of various kinds in their hands, O Parikṣit ! (8)

* This ceremony consists in touching the tongue of a new-born male child thrice with ghee after appropriate prayers.

† It is customary among the Hindus to give away heaps of sesamum seeds on the auspicious occasion of the birth of a son

‡ These terms have been defined in the following couplet —

मृताः पौगाणिकाः श्रोत्रा मागधा वेशरथकाः । वन्दिनम्वचनपज्ञाः प्रस्तावमदुशीकयः ॥

* Sūtas are those who recite stories from the Purāṇas; Māgadhas are no other than bards reciting the glories of ancestors of kings, while Vandis are those who make observations suited to particular occasions *

गोयश्चाकर्ण्य मुदिता यशोदायाः सुतोद्भवम् । आत्मानं भूषयाञ्चक्रुर्ब्रह्मकल्पाञ्जनादिभिः । १ ।

नवकुङ्कुमकिञ्चल्कमुखपङ्कजभूतयः । बलिभिस्त्वरितं जग्मुः पृथुश्रोण्याश्चलत्कुचाः । १० ।

गोयः सुमृष्टमणिकुण्डलनिष्ककण्ठ्यश्चित्राम्बराः पथि शिराच्युतमाल्यवर्षाः ।

नन्दालयं सवलया व्रजतीविरिजुव्यालोलकुण्डलपयोधरहारशोभाः । ११ ।

ता आशिषः प्रयुञ्जानाश्रिं पाहीति बालके । हरिद्राचूर्णतैलान्निद्रिः सिञ्चन्त्यो जनमुज्जगुः । १२ ।

Rejoiced to hear of the birth of a son to Yaśodā, cowherd women too beautified their person with clothes, ornaments, collyrium and so on. (9) The charm of their lotus face heightened by (decorations of) fresh saffron paste, corresponding to the filaments of a lotus, they despite their bulky buttocks walked hurriedly with presents (in the shape of gold-rings, necklaces of jewels, raiments, fruits and blades of panic grass etc.,) their breasts shaking (on account of their rapid movement). (10) Adorned with well-polished bejewelled ear-rings and a string of gold coins worn about their neck as well as with bangles, and clad in raiments of various colours, the cowherd women shone brightly while proceeding to the palace of Nanda, flowers fallen from their braids being strewn in a shower on the way, and looked graceful with the ear-rings and the necklaces, hanging on their breasts, swinging about rapidly. (11) Invoking (divine) blessings on the boy in the words "May You protect the babe for long (O Lord I)" and sprinkling the multitude with water mixed with turmeric powder and oil, they sang in a high pitch. (12)

अवाद्यन्त विचित्राणि वादित्राणि महोत्सवे । कृष्णे विश्वेश्वरेऽनन्ते नन्दस्य व्रजमागते । १३ ।

गोपाः परस्परं हृष्टा दधिक्षीरघृताम्बुभिः । आसिञ्चन्तो विलिम्पन्तो नवनीतैश्च क्षिप्सुः । १४ ।

नन्दो महामनास्तेभ्यो वासोऽलङ्कारगोधनम् । सूतमागधवन्दिभ्यो येऽज्ये विद्योपजीविनः । १५ ।

तैस्तैः कामैरदीनात्मा यथोचितमपूजयत् । विष्णोराराधनार्थाय स्वपुत्रयोऽदयाय च । १६ ।

रोहिणी च महाभागा नन्दगोपाभिर्नदिता । व्यचरद् दिव्यवासःस्वकृष्णभरणभूषिता । १७ ।

तत आरभ्य नन्दस्य व्रजः सर्वसमृद्धिमान् । हरेर्निवासात्मगुणै रमाक्रीडमभूवृष । १८ ।

Now that the immortal Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Ruler of the universe, had come down to Vraja, musical instruments of various kinds were played upon on that occasion of great rejoicing. (13) Spraying with curds, milk, clarified butter and water and besmearing (the face of) one another with handfuls of fresh butter, the merry cowherds threw one another of the feet (in mirth). (14) For the purpose of propitiating Lord Viṣṇu as well as for the welfare of his son, the high-souled and liberal-minded Nanda conferred on them as well as on the Sūtas, the Māgadhas and the Vāndis and others who lived by their art or science (such as musicians, physicians, astrologers, dancers and interpreters of omens) raiment, ornaments and cattle-wealth, and suitably honoured them with gifts desired by them. (15-16) Felicitated by Nanda, the cowherd chief, the highly blessed Rohiṇī too (who excelled all the other wives of Vasudeva in that she had the rare good fortune of witnessing the childlike pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) moved about as the virtual mistress of Nanda's household (receiving female guests and ordering servants), decked with supernal clothes, garlands and necklaces (forgetting the distress of her captive husband). (17) Thenceforward Nanda's Vraja became the seat of all prosperity turning into the (very) playground of Goddess Rāmā by virtue of its native excellences peculiar to an abode of Lord Śrī Hari, O protector of men! (18)

गोपान् गोकुलरक्षायां निरुह्य मधुरां गतः । नन्दः कंसस्य वार्षिक्यं करं दातुं कुरुद्वह । १९ ।

वसुदेव उपश्रुत्य भ्रातरं नन्दमागतम् । ज्ञात्वा दत्तकरं राज्ञे ययौ तदवमोचनम् । २० ।

तं दृष्ट्वा सहस्रोत्थाय देहः प्राणमिवागतम् । प्रीतः प्रियतमं दोर्भ्यां सस्वजे प्रेमविह्वलः । २१ ।

पूजितः सुखमासीनः पृष्ठानामयमादृतः । प्रसक्तधीः स्वात्मजयोरिदमाह विशाम्यते । २२ ।

Having charged the cowherds with the protection of Gokula, Nanda went to Mathurā in order to pay his annual tribute to Kāṁsa, O jewel of the Kurus! (19) Reliably hearing of his friend, Nanda, having come (to Mathurā) and coming to know that he had paid his tribute, Vasudeva repaired to his camp (to see him and enquire about his own sons, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (20) Rejoiced to see him come and at once rising to his feet even as a body (lying unconscious) would do on consciousness returning to it, Nanda folded his most beloved friend in the arms, overwhelmed as he was with affection. (21) Welcomed (by Nanda) and honoured with an enquiry after his health, and comfortably seated, Vasudeva, whose mind was deeply attached to his sons, spoke as follows, O protector of the people:—(22)

दृष्ट्वा भ्रातः प्रवयसा इदानीमप्रजय ते । प्रजाशाया निवृत्तस्य प्रजा यत् समपद्यत । २३ ।

दृष्ट्वा संसारचक्रेऽस्मिन् वर्तमानः पुनर्भवः । उपलब्धो भवानद्य दुर्लभं प्रियदर्शनम् । २४ ।

नैकत्र प्रियसंवासः सुहृदां चित्रकर्मणाम् । ओघेन व्यूह्यमानानां प्लवानां स्रोतसो यथा । २५ ।

कच्चित् पशव्यं निरुजं भूर्यम्बुतृणवीरुधम् । बृहद्वनं तदधुना यत्रासे त्वं सुहृद्वृतः । २६ ।

भ्रातर्मम सुतः कच्चिन्मात्रा सह भवद्व्रजे । तातं भवन्तं मन्वानो भवदध्यामुपलालितः । २७ ।

पुंसस्त्रिवर्गो विहितः सुहृदो ह्यनुभावितः । न तेषु त्रिंश्रयमानेषु त्रिवर्गोऽर्थाय कल्पते । २८ ।

"It is a matter for congratulation, O brother, that an issue has now been vouchsafed to you, aged and issueless as you were, and had been shut out from all hopes of getting a progeny. (23) Through good luck you have been perceived today like one reborn (revolving all along) on this whirligig of mundane existence; for the sight of a loved one is (so) difficult to obtain. (24) The living together at one and the same place of friends engaged in diverse occupations, which is so agreeable, is not (always) possible any more than that of wooden planks etc., swept along by the current of a river. (25) Is that Vṛhadvana (Gokula) where you are residing at present surrounded (accompanied) by your kith and kin, favourable to cattle, free from diseases and provided with abundant water, grass and plants? (26) Cherished by you both (your wife and yourself) and recognizing you as his father, is my son (Balarāma), O brother, doing well with his mother (Rohiṇi) in your Vraja? (27) Indeed the threefold object of human pursuit (viz., religious merit, wealth and sensuous pleasure) is recommended only in so far as it is shared with one's near and dear ones. When the latter are in distress, such threefold pursuit does not make for happiness (the goal of all sentient beings). (28)

नन्द उवाच

अहो ते देवकी पुत्राः कंसेन बहवो हताः । एकावशिष्टावरजा कन्या सापि दिवं गता । २९ ।

नूनं हृदृष्टनिष्ठोऽयमदृष्टपरमो जनः । अदृष्टमात्मनस्तत्त्वं यो वेद न स मुह्यति । ३० ।

Nanda replied : Born of Devaki, (O friend,) many a son of yours has been killed alas! by Kāṁsa. (Only) one daughter, subsequently born, was left (having escaped death at his cruel hands). But she too ascended to heaven. (29) Indeed a created being depends on its destiny and is controlled by destiny. He who knows destiny to be his (very) essence (the unfailing cause of his happiness and misery) does not get infatuated. (30)

वसुदेव उवाच

करो वै वार्षिको दत्तो राज्ञे दृष्टा वयं च वः । नेह स्थेयं बहुतिथं सन्त्युपाताश्च गोकुले । ३१ ।

Vasudeva said : The annual tribute has actually been paid to the king and we (too) have been seen by you. You should not (therefore) stay here long; (for) there are startling occurrences at Gokula too. (31)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति नन्दादयो गोपाः प्रोक्तास्ते शौरिणा ययुः । अनोभिरनडुद्युक्तैस्तमनुज्ञाय गोकुलम् । ३२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे नन्दवसुदेवसङ्गमो नाम पञ्चमोऽध्यायः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus exhorted by Vasudeva (the son of Śūra) and taking leave of him, the said cowherds, headed by Nanda, returned to Gokula riding on their carts drawn by bullocks. (32)

Thus ends the fifth discourse entitled "The meeting of Nanda and Vasudeva", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षष्ठोऽध्यायः

Discourse VI

Deliverance of Pūtana

श्रीशुक उवाच

नन्दः पथि वचः शौरैर्न मृषेति विचिन्तयन् । हरिं जगाम शरणमुत्पातागमशङ्कितः । १ ।
कंसेन प्रहिता घोरा पूतना बालघातिनी । शिशुश्चचार निघ्नन्ती पुराग्रामव्रजादिषु । २ ।
न यत्र श्रवणादीनि रक्षोग्नानि स्वकर्मसु । कुर्वन्ति सात्वतां भर्तुर्यातुधान्यश्च तत्र हि । ३ ।
सा खेचर्यकदोपेत्य पूतना नन्दगोकुलम् । योषित्वा माययाऽऽत्मानं प्राविशत् कामचारिणी । ४ ।

तां केशबन्धव्यतिषक्तमल्लिकां बृहन्नितम्बस्तनकृच्छ्रमध्यमाम् ।
सुवाससं कम्पितकर्णभूषणविषोल्लसत्कुन्तलमण्डिताननाम् । ५ ।
वल्गुस्मितापाङ्गविसर्गवीक्षितैर्मनो हरन्तीं वनितां व्रजौकसाम् ।
अर्मसताम्भोजकरेण रूपिणीं गोप्यः श्रियं द्रष्टुमिवागतां पतिम् । ६ ।
बालग्रहस्तत्र विचिन्वती शिशून् यदृच्छया नन्दगृहेऽसदन्तकम् ।
बालं प्रतिच्छिन्ननिजोल्तेजसं ददर्श तल्पेऽग्रिमिवाहितं भसि । ७ ।
विबुध्य तां बालकमारिकाग्रहं चराचरात्माऽऽस निमीलितेक्षणः ।
अनन्तमारोपयदङ्गमन्तकं यथोरगं सुप्तमबुद्धिरज्जुधीः । ८ ।
तां तीक्ष्णचित्तमतिवामचेष्टितां वीक्ष्यान्तरा कोशपरिच्छदासिवत् ।
वरस्त्रियं तत्प्रभया च धर्षिते निरीक्षमाणे जननी ह्यतिष्ठताम् । ९ ।
तस्मिन् स्तनं दुर्जरवीर्यमुल्बणं घोराङ्गमादाय शिशोर्ददावथ ।
गाढं कराभ्यां भगवान् प्रपीड्य तत् प्राणैः समं रोषसमन्वितोऽपिबत् । १० ।
सा मुञ्च मुञ्चालमिति प्रभाषिणी निष्पीड्यमानारिखलजीवमर्मणि ।
विवृत्य नेत्रे चरणी भुजौ मुहुः प्रखिन्नगात्रा क्षिपती रुरोद ह । ११ ।

तस्याः स्वनेनातिगभीरंहसा साद्रिर्मही द्यौश्च चचाल सग्रहा ।
 रसा दिशश्च प्रतिनेदिरे जनाः पेतुः क्षितौ वज्रनिपातशङ्कया । १२ ।
 निशाचरीत्थं व्यथितस्तना व्यसुर्व्यादाय केशांश्चरणौ भुजावपि ।
 प्रसार्य गोष्ठे निजरूपमास्थिता वज्राहतो वृत्र इवापतवृष । १३ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Pondering on his way that the words of Vasudeva (the son of Śūra) could not be untrue, Nanda sought Śrī Hari as his refuge, apprehensive as he was of the coming of startling events. (1) Despatched by Kāṁsa, the terrible demoness Pūtānā, who was given to (the practice of) killing infants, moved about in towns, villages, cowherdstations etc., killing infants (wherever she went). (2) Ogresses and others find their way only there where people, though devoted to their duties, do not practise the hearing etc., of the names and stories of Lord Viṣṇu (the Protector of devotees), capable of exterminating the ogres. (3) Reaching Gokula, ruled over by Nanda, on one occasion, and disguising herself as a woman through her witchcraft, the said Pūtānā, who was capable of coursing through the air and could go anywhere she pleased, entered the village. (4) Seeing that lovely woman, clad in fine clothes, with jasmine flowers tucked to her braid, her slender waist pressed as it were between her bulky hips (below) and her full breasts (above), and with her face set off with curly locks radiant with the lustre of her swinging ear-rings, the Gopis thought her to be the most beautiful Lakṣmi (Herself), come to see Her Spouse, distinguished as she was by her hand bearing a lotus (the emblem of Lakṣmi) and captivating the mind of the inhabitants of Vraja by her side-long looks accompanied with sweet smiles. (5-6) Hunting for infants and propelled by Providence, Pūtānā (lit., an evil spirit seizing infants and causing their death) saw lying in a bed in that palace of Nanda, the Babe (Śrī Kṛṣṇa), the Destroyer of the wicked, with His immeasurable glory veiled, like fire buried under ashes. (7) Recognizing her to be an evil spirit given to the destruction of infants, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Soul of the mobile and immobile creation) lay with His eyes utterly closed. She placed the infinite Lord, her very death, in her lap (even) as an ignorant man would a sleeping serpent, mistaking it for a rope. (8) Seeing inside the house that excellent woman—whose (outward) behaviour was most affectionate (like that of a mother), though she was possessed of a cruel heart and thus resembled a sword encased in a charming scabbard—and overwhelmed with her splendour, the two mothers (Rohiṇi and Yaśodā) stood merely gazing. (9) Taking Śrī Kṛṣṇa in her lap there, that cruel woman put into the Baby's mouth her dreadful breast besmeared with deadly poison. Squeezing it hard with both his hands, the Lord full of indignation forthwith sucked the poison alongwith her (very) life. (10) Being wrung in all her vital parts, she cried out saying. "Leave me, O leave me, enough of it!" Distending her eyes and tossing about her feet and arms again and again, she actually screamed, her limbs drenched with perspiration. (11) As a result of her very deep and violent roar the earth with its mountains and heaven with its planets shook, the subterranean worlds as well as the (four) quarters echoed and people toppled down on the ground under the apprehension of a thunderbolt. (12) Thus tormented at her breasts and reverting (in her helpless state) to her own (demoniac) form, she (sprang and) fell dead in (the outskirts of) Vraja, opening her mouth and flinging about her hair and stretching her legs and arms too (even) like the demon Vṛtra knocked down by the thunderbolt (of Indra), O protector of men ! (13)

पतमानोऽपि	तदेहस्त्रिगव्यूत्यन्तरहुमान् । चूर्णायामास	राजेन्द्र	महदासीत्तदद्भुतम् । १४ ।
ईषामात्रोदंष्ट्रास्यं	गिरिकन्दरनासिकम् । गण्डशैलस्तनं	रौद्रं	प्रकीर्णारुणमूर्धजम् । १५ ।
अन्धकूपगभीराक्षं	पुलिनारोहभीषणम् । बद्धसेतुभुजोर्वद्धि		शून्यतोयहृदोदरम् । १६ ।

सन्तत्रसुः स्म तद् वीक्ष्य गोपा गोप्यः कलेवरम् । पूर्वं तु तन्निःस्वनितभिन्नहृत्कर्णमस्तकाः । १७ ।
 बालं च तस्या उरसि क्रीडन्तमकुतोभयम् । गोप्यस्तूर्णं समभ्येत्य जगुर्जातसम्भ्रमाः । १८ ।
 यशोदातोहिणीभ्यां ताः समं बालस्य सर्वतः । रक्षां विदधिरे सम्यगगोपुच्छभ्रमणादिभिः । १९ ।
 गोमूत्रेण स्त्रापयित्वा पुनर्गौरजसार्भकम् । रक्षां चकृश्च शकृता द्वादशाङ्गेषु नामभिः । २० ।
 गोप्यः संस्पृष्टसलिला अङ्गेषु करयोः पृथक् । न्यस्यात्मन्यथ बालस्य बीजन्यासमकुर्वत । २१ ।

Even while falling down, her (colossal) body crushed, O ruler of kings, trees within (an area of) twelve miles. That was a great wonder. (14) Its mouth was ranged with fearful teeth as long as a plough-tree; its nostrils resembled a pair of mountain caves; its breasts looked like a couple of huge rocks; its coppery hair hung loose; its eyes were deep like a well overgrown with plants etc.; it looked terrible with its hips resembling sand-banks; its arms, thighs and feet resembled dams; while its belly looked like a waterless pond. The cowherds and cowherdesses were really much frightened to see that fearful body, their heart, ears and head having already been split by her yell. (15—17) And finding the boy fearlessly playing on her bosom, the cowherd women quickly went up to Him and picked Him up, alarmed as they were. (18) Along with Yaśodā and Rohiṇī they fully ensured the safety of the boy (against evil spirits) on all sides by waving round him the tail of a cow (which has been declared in the scriptures to be the seat of Goddess Lakṣmī) and other occult rites. (19) Having bathed the boy with the urine of a cow (which is held to be as sacred as the water of the holy Gaṅgā) and again sprinkling him with the dust under the hoofs of cows (which is considered to be as good as sprinkling with the totality of all sacred waters), they (further) ensured his security by daubing him with cowdung (which is recognized as another seat of Goddess Lakṣmī) at twelve points while uttering (twelve different) names* (of the Lord). (20) Having sipped water and assigned (a number of) seed-letters (representing the first letters of the following eleven names of the Lord, followed by a nasal sound—Anusvāra) separately to the (diverse) limbs of their (own) body as well as to (the parts of) their hands, the cowherd women next assigned the same seed-letters to the limbs and (parts of) the hands of the baby. (21)

अव्यादजोऽङ्घ्रि मणिमांस्तव जान्वथोरु यज्ञोऽच्युतः कटिततं जठरं हयास्यः ।

हन्तु केशवस्त्वदुर ईश इनस्तु कण्ठं विष्णुर्भुजं मुखमुरुक्रम ईश्वरः कम् । २२ ।

चक्रग्रन्थः सहगदो हरिरस्तु पश्चात् त्वत्पार्श्वयोर्धनुरसौ मधुहाजनश्च ।

कोणेषु शङ्ख उरुगाय उपर्युपेन्द्रस्ताक्षर्यः क्षितौ हलधरः पुरुषः समन्तात् । २३ ।

इन्द्रियाणि हृषीकेशः प्राणान् नारायणोऽवतु । श्वेतद्वीपपतिश्चित्तं मनो योगेश्वरोऽवतु । २४ ।

पृश्निगर्भस्तु ते बुद्धिमात्मानं भगवान् परः । क्रीडन्तं पातु गोविन्दः शयानं पातु माधवः । २५ ।

* The twelve names to be uttered on such occasion and the twelve limbs to be touched while doing so are specified in the following verses of the Padmapurāṇa:—

ललाटे केशवं ध्यायेन्नारायणमथोदरे । वक्षःस्थले माधवं तु गोविन्दं कण्ठकूर्चम् ॥

विष्णुं च दक्षिणे कुक्षौ बाहौ च मधुसूदनम् । त्रिविक्रमं कन्यारे तु वामनं वामपार्श्वके ॥

श्रीधरं वामबाहौ तु हृषीकेशं तु कन्यारे । पृष्ठे तु पञ्चनाभं च कट्यां दामोदरं न्यसेत् ॥

*Ona should visualiza Kāśava on ona's forehead, Nārāyaṇa on the belly, Mādhava on the breast and Govinda on the back of ona's neck, Viṣṇu in the right side of the abdomen and Madhusūdana on the right arm, Trivikrama on the neck, Vāmana on the left side (of the abdomen), Śṇidhara on the left arm and Hṛṣīkeśa again on the neck, Padmanābha on the back and Oamodara on the waist."

This shows that the Gopis of Vraja were all Vaiṣṇavas.

ब्रजन्तमव्याद् वैकुण्ठ आसीनं त्वां श्रियः पतिः । भुञ्जानं यज्ञभुक् पातु सर्वग्रहभयङ्करः । १२६ ।
 डाकिन्यो यातुधान्यश्च कूष्माण्डा येऽर्भकग्रहाः । भूतप्रेतपिशाचाश्च यक्षरक्षोविनायकाः । १२७ ।
 कोटरा रेवती ज्येष्ठा पूतना मातृकादयः । उन्मादा ये ह्यपस्मारा देहप्राणेन्द्रियद्रुहः । १२८ ।
 स्वप्नद्रुष्टा महोत्पाता वृद्धबालग्रहाश्च ये । सर्वे नश्यन्तु ते विष्णोर्नामग्रहणभोरवः । १२९ ।

(They said:—) "May Aja (the birthless Lord) protect your feet; Mañimān (the Lord adorned with the Kaustubha gem), your knees and Yajña (the Deity presiding over sacrifices), your thighs; Acyuta (the immortal Lord), your loins; Hayagrīva (the Lord endowed with the head of a horse), your abdomen; Keśava (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva), your heart; Īśa (the almighty Lord), your bosom and Ina (the Master), your throat; Viṣṇu (the all-pervading Lord), your arms; Urukrama (the Lord with long strides), your mouth and Īśvara (the Supreme Lord), your head. (22) May the wielder of a discus stand (as your protector) before you and Śrī Hari, endowed with a mace, behind you; the Slayer of Madhu and Ajana (the birthless Lord), wielding (severally) a bow and a sword, stand on your two sides; Urugāya (sung by many), the wielder of a conch, at the (four) points intervening between the quarters; Lord Vāmana (the younger Brother of Indra), overhead; the Rider of Garuḍa, on the ground and the Supreme Person (Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa) wielding a plough, on all sides. (23) May Hṛṣikeśa protect your Indriyas; Nārāyaṇa, your vital airs; Vāsudeva (the Lord of Śvetadwīpa), your intellect; Aniruddha (the Master of Yoga), your mind; Prśnigarbha (Pradyumna), understanding and Saṅkarṣaṇa (the all-destroying Lord), your Ahaṅkāra (ego). May Govinda (who sports in the senses) protect you while you are at play, Mādhava, while lying down; Vaiṣṇava, while walking; the Lord of Śrī, while seated; and the Enjoyer of sacrifices, inspiring terror in all evil spirits, while you are dining (24—26) (Malevolent spirits such as) Dākinis, Yātudhānis and Kūṣmāṇḍas evilspirits that seize their victims taking the form of babes, Bhūtas, Pretas and Piśācas, Yakṣas, Rākṣasas and Vināyakas, Koṭārā, Revatī, Jyēṣṭhā, Pūtānā, (the sixteen) Mātṛkāś and others (such as Caraki and Jwālamukha), Unmādas (evil spirits causing insanity) and Apasmāras (those inducing apoplexy), that actually torment the body and the Indriyas and interfere with the vital functions, those responsible for evil portents of a grave nature seen in dreams and those that seize the aged as well as youngsters (alike)—terrified at the mention of the names of Lord Viṣṇu, may all these (evil spirits) die out. (27—29)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति प्रणयबद्धाभिर्गोपीभिः कृतरक्षणम् । पाययित्वा स्तनं माता संन्यवेशयदात्मजम् । ३० ।
 तावन्नन्दादयो गोपा मथुराया ब्रजं गताः । विलोक्य पूतनादेहं बभूवुरतिविस्मिताः । ३१ ।
 नूनं बतर्षिः संजातो योगेशो वा समास सः । स एव दृष्टो ह्युत्पातो यदाहानकदुन्दुभिः । ३२ ।
 कलेवरं परशुभिश्छित्त्वा तत्ते ब्रजौकसः । दूरे क्षिप्त्वावयवशो न्यदहनं काष्ठधिष्ठितम् । ३३ ।
 दह्यमानस्य देहस्य धूमश्चागुरुसौरभः । उत्थितः कृष्णनिर्भुक्तसपद्याहतपाप्मनः । ३४ ।
 पूतना लोकबालघ्नी राक्षसी रुधिराशना । जिघांसयापि हरये स्तनं दत्त्वाऽऽप सन्नतिम् । ३५ ।
 किं पुनः श्रद्धया भक्त्या कृष्णाय परमात्मने । यच्छन् प्रियतमं किं नु रक्तास्तन्मातरो यथा । ३६ ।
 पदभ्यां भक्तहृदिस्थाभ्यां वन्द्याभ्यां लोकवन्दितः । अङ्गं यस्याः समाक्रम्य भगवानपिबत् स्तनम् । ३७ ।
 यातुधान्यपि सा स्वर्गमवाप जननीगतिम् । कृष्णभुक्तस्तनक्षीराः किमु गावो नु मातरः । ३८ ।
 पयांसि यासामपिबत् पुत्रस्नेहस्तुतान्यलम् । भगवान् देवकीपुत्रः कैवल्याद्यखिलप्रदः । ३९ ।
 तासामविरतं कृष्णे कुर्वतीनां सुतेक्षणम् । न पुनः कल्पते राजन् संसारोऽज्ञानसम्भवः । ४० ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Giving suck to her Son, whose safety had thus been ensured by cowherd women, bound (to him) by (ties of) affection, the mother put Him to sleep. (30) Meanwhile the (party of) cowherds headed by Nanda came back to (the outskirts of) Vraja from Mathurā, and were greatly astonished to see the (colossal) body of Putanā. (31) (They said to one another,) "Oh, surely a seer has been really born in the person of Vasudeva or he must have been a master of Yoga (in his previous incarnation); for that very calamity has actually been perceived, of which Ānakadundubhi spoke (to us)." (32) Having hacked that body with axes and cast it piecemeal at a distance, those inhabitants of Vraja (that had been entrusted with the protection of Gokula) burnt it to ashes after it had been piled over with logs of wood. (33) Out of that body, while it was being cremated, arose (a column of) smoke emitting the fragrance of aloe-wood, the sin attaching to it having been completely wiped out the moment its life was sucked out (through the breasts) by Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (34) (Lo!) Putanā, a blood-sucking ogress given to the destruction of infants in the world and giving suck to Śrī Hari even with the (deprecable) motive of killing Him, attained the destiny of saints! (35) How much more, then, should one deserve such a state, who offers one's most beloved something with (utmost) reverence and devotion to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Spirit, as did His affectionate mothers* and cows full of motherly affection. (36) Even the said ogress (Putanā), whose breast the Lord sucked covering her body with His feet—feet which remain enshrined in the heart of His devotees and are worthy of being adored even by Brahmā, Śiva and others (who are adored by the world), ascended to heaven (Vaikuṇṭha), a destiny worthy of His mothers (Devaki and Yaśodā)! What wonder, then, that the cows and mothers, the milk of whose breasts was (lovingly) sucked by Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, should attain that destiny? (37-38) Rebirth, which results from ignorance, could never be possible, O Parīkṣit, in the case of those (cows and mothers) that incessantly looked upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa as their as son, nay, whose milk, oozing out of parental affection, the (said) divine son of Devaki, the Bestower of Liberation and all other blessings, sucked to His heart's content. (39-40)

कटधूमस्य सौरभ्यमवधाय ब्रजौकसः। किमिदं कुत एवेति वदन्तो ब्रजमाययुः।४१।

ते तत्र वर्णितं गोपैः पूतनागमनादिकम्। श्रुत्वा तन्निधनं स्वस्ति शिशोश्चासन् सुविस्मिताः।४२।

नन्दः स्वपुत्रमादाय प्रेत्यागतमुदारधीः। मूर्धन्युपाधाय परमां मुदं लेभे कुरुद्वह।४३।

य एतत् पूतनामोक्षं कृष्णसार्धकमद्भुतम्। शृणुयाच्छ्रद्धया मर्त्यो गोविन्दे लभते रतिम्।४४।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे षष्ठोऽध्यायः।६।

Smelling the fragrance of the smoke rising from the crematorium, the inhabitants of Vraja (Nanda and others, that had gone out of Vraja before Putanā came there), returned to Vraja saying what (a strange phenomenon) it was and whence the odour actually came ! (41) Hearing (the story) of Putanā's arrival etc., as well as of her (subsequent) death and the baby's safety, as told by the cowherds present there, they stood highly amazed. (42) Taking up (in his arms) his son, who had returned from the jaws of death (as it were,) and smelling

* We shall see in Oiscourse XIII below how Śrī Kṛṣṇa assumed the form of all His boy companions and calves besides His own form on their having been stolen away by Brahmā, and continued in those forms for a full twelve month, thus conferring on the mothers of all those youngsters and calves the unique honour and privilege of being His mothers. It is these numberless cowherdesses and cows of Vraja that are referred to in the above verse as His mothers (मलः) in the plural number.

Him at His crown (as a token of affection), the noble-minded Nanda experienced a great delight, O jewel of the Kurus ! (43) A man who hears (or recites) with reverence (the story) of this wonderful childlike sport of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, consisting in the deliverance of Pūtānā, comes to develop love for the said Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows). (44)

Thus ends the sixth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VII

Deliverance of the demon Tṛṇāvarta

राजोवाच

येन येनावतारेण भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । करोति कर्णरम्याणि मनोज्ञानि च नः प्रभो । १ ।

यच्छृण्वतोऽपैत्यरतिर्वितृष्णा सत्त्वं च शुद्धयत्यचिरेण पुंसः ।

भक्तिर्हरौ तत्पुरुषे च सख्यं तदेव हारं वद मन्यसे चेत् । २ ।

अथान्यदपि कृष्णस्य तोकाचरितमद्भुतम् । मानुषं लोकमासाद्य तज्जातिमनुसूयतः । ३ ।

The king (Parikṣit) said : The exploits which the almighty Lord Śrī Hari performs, through whatever descents it may be, are (so) charming to our ear and (so) appealing to our mind, O master ! (1) If you think fit, (therefore, kindly) narrate in particular that story of Śrī Hari by listening to which (the feeling of) ennui and the diverse cravings (responsible for such ennui) of (any) man (whatsoever) disappear, his mind gets purified before long, devotion to (the aforesaid) Śrī Hari is generated and friendship established with His servants. (2) (Pray,) further recount even other marvellous infantile sports of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who imitated (the ways of) the human race when he came down to the human (mortal) world. (3)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कदाचिदौत्थानिककौतुकाप्लवे जन्मर्क्षयोगे समवेतयोषिताम् ।

वादित्रगीतद्विजमन्त्रवाचकैश्चकार सूनोरभिषेचनं सती । ४ ।

नन्दस्य पत्नी कृतमज्जनादिकं विप्रैः कृतस्वस्त्ययनं सुपूजितैः ।

अन्नाद्यवासःस्नग्भोगैश्चेनुभिः संजातनिद्राक्षमशीशयच्छनैः । ५ ।

औत्थानिकौत्सुक्यमना मनस्विनी समागतान् पूजयती ब्रजौकसः ।

नैवाशृणोद् वै रुदितं सुतस्य सा रुन्द स्तनार्थं चरणानुदक्षिपत् । ६ ।

अथः शयानस्य शिशोरनोऽल्पकप्रवालमृद्वद्ग्रिहतं व्यवर्तत ।

विध्वस्तनानारसकुप्यभाजनं व्यत्यस्तचक्राक्षविभित्रकूबरम् । ७ ।

दृष्ट्वा यशोदाप्रमुखा ब्रजस्त्रिय औत्थानिके कर्मणि याः समागताः ।

नन्दादयश्चाद्भुतदर्शनाकुलाः कथं स्वयं वै शकटं विपर्यगात् । ८ ।

ऊचुरव्यवसितमतीन् गोपान् गोपीश्च बालकाः । रुदतानेन पादेन क्षिप्तमेतन्न संशयः । ९ ।
न ते श्रद्धेधरे गोपा बालभाषितमित्युत । अप्रमेयं बलं तस्य बालकस्य न ते विदुः । १० ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Once on the occasion of the ceremonial ablution (of the infant Śrī Kṛṣṇa) to commemorate His turning in the bed (which generally takes place at the end of three months), when the (same) constellation (Rohiṇi) under which He was born happened to be at the ascendant, Yaśodā (the good old mother of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) performed in the midst of the ladies assembled (at her residence) the rite of sprinkling her son with water, accompanied by the playing of musical instruments, songs and the chanting of sacred texts done by the Brāhmaṇas. (4) When the ablution etc., of Śrī Kṛṣṇa had been finished and the ceremony of invoking blessings on Him performed by the Brāhmaṇas that had (already) been duly honoured with gifts of cooked food and raw articles of food, raiment, garlands, boons sought by them and cows, and when drowsiness was fully manifested in His eyes, Nanda's wife gently put Him to sleep (on a cradle or a cot underneath a cart). (5) Busy honouring the inhabitants of Vraja assembled (for the occasion) with a mind full of zeal over the festival commemorating Śrī Kṛṣṇa's turning in the bed, the noble-minded Yaśodā did not at all hear the cry of her son, who, while actually crying for a suck, tossed up His feet (in an angry mood). (6) Hit by the tiny feet, tender as a leaf, of the Babe, lying beneath, the cart turned* upside down with the result that the metal jars (placed on it and) containing various delicious substances (such as milk, curds and ghee) were crushed, its wheels and axle-tree inverted and its pole shattered. (7) Perceiving it (in that topsyturvy condition), the women of Vraja—that had gathered (at Nanda's residence) for the festival commemorating the turning of Śrī Kṛṣṇa in the bed—headed by Yaśodā, as well as Nanda and others, who were perplexed at that amazing sight, wondered how the cart had actually turned upside down by itself. (8) Boys (who were playing there when the cart turned turtle) told the (wondering) cowherds and cowherdesses—whose mind was uncertain (as to who was really responsible for upturning the cart)—that the cart had been knocked down with His foot by Śrī Kṛṣṇa while crying (for His mother's breast): there was no doubt (about it). (9) Those cowherds (however) did not believe it, taking it to be the (mere) talk of children and (therefore) doubting it; for they did not know the immeasurable strength of that Boy. (10)

रुदन्तं सुतमादाय यशोदा ग्रहशङ्किता । कृतस्वस्ययनं विप्रैः सूक्तैः स्तनमपाययत् । ११ ।
पूर्ववत् स्थापितं गोपैर्बलिभिः सपरिच्छदम् । विप्रा हुत्वा र्चायाञ्च कुर्यद्ध्यक्षत कुशाम्बुभिः । १२ ।
येऽसूयानृतदम्भेष्वाहिंसापानविवर्जिताः । न तेषां सत्यशीलानामाशिषो विफलाः कृताः । १३ ।
इति बालकमादाय सामग्र्यञ्जुलपाकृतैः । जलैः पवित्रैर्षधिभिर्भषिच्य द्विजोत्तमैः । १४ ।
वाचयित्वा स्वस्ययनं नन्दगोपः समाहितः । हुत्वा चाग्निं द्विजतिथ्यः प्रादादन्नं महागुणम् । १५ ।
गावः सर्वगुणोपेता वासः स्रग्विममालिनीः । आत्मजाभ्युदयार्थाय प्रादाते चान्वयुञ्जत । १६ ।
विप्रा मन्त्रविदो युक्तास्तैर्याः प्रोक्तास्तथाऽऽशिषः । ता निष्फला भविष्यन्ति न कदाचिदपि स्फुटम् । १७ ।

*The great demon Hiranyākṣa, who was slain by the Lord disguised as a boar (vide Discourses XVII to XIX of Book III), had a son, Utkaca by name. He was exceedingly powerful and well-built. In the course of his peregrinations he once crushed the trees of the hermitage of the sage Lomaśa, who pronounced on him a curse that he would thenceforth remain disembodied. He felt that his physical sheath was about to fall off like slough. He fell prostrate at the feet of the sage and asked his forgiveness. Appeased by his penitent behaviour, the sage blessed him that in the course of the Vaivasvata Manvantara he would be liberated by the touch of the feet of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa. It was Utkaca that had entered the cart in Nanda's residence in his disembodied state and was forthwith liberated by the touch of the Lord's feet.

Taking up her crying son, Yaśodā, who was afraid of the presence of some evil spirit, gave Him suck (only) when the ceremony of invoking blessings on Him had been performed by Brāhmaṇas with the help of Vedic hymns (destroying evil spirits). (11) Having poured oblations into the sacred fire (in order to propitiate the deities presiding over the planets and so on), the Brāhmaṇas worshipped the cart (which was the seat of their wealth in the shape of dairy products, and the abode of Lakṣmī) with curds, unbroken grains of rice, blades of the (sacred) Kuśa grass and water, when it had been placed as before by mighty cowherds and provided (once more) with (all) its goods (whatever was kept on it). (12) Taking up the Boy and sprinkling Him with water consecrated through (the recitation of) sacred texts from the Sāmaveda and Yajurveda and hallowed with sanctifying herbs, (nay,) causing benedictions to be pronounced by the foremost of Brāhmaṇas and propitiating the (sacred) fire (by pouring oblations into it), Nanda, the cowherd chief—who felt convinced that the benedictions uttered by those truthful ones who are completely free from a carping spirit, mendacity, hypocrisy, jealousy, violence and pride never go in vain—gave to the Brahmanas very wholesome food to eat. (13—15) For (the purpose of ensuring) his son's all-round prosperity Nanda (further) gave away (to the Brāhmaṇas) cows endowed with all good qualities and adorned with cloth, garlands and gold necklaces and they uttered their (choicest) blessings in return. (16) Obviously benedictions that are uttered by Brāhmaṇas well versed in sacred prayers and united with God shall never prove fruitless and (invariably) come out true. (17)

एकदाऽऽरोहमारूढं लालयन्ती सुतं सती। गरिमाणं शिशोर्वोदु न सेहे गिरिकृत्वत्। १८।

भूमौ निधाय तं गोपी विस्मिता भारपीडिता। महापुरुषमादध्यौ जगतामास कर्मसु। १९।

One day (when Śrī Kṛṣṇa had just attained the age of one year), Yaśodā (the good old lady), while she was busy fondling her son, seated in her lap, could not bear the weight of the Babe, who had (all of a sudden) grown heavy as a mountain-peak. (18) Placing Him on the ground, Yaśodā (the cowherd lady), who felt astonished (at this wonderful phenomenon) and, oppressed with burden, contemplated on the Supreme Person (out of fear of some unexpected calamity) and set about her worldly duties (such as summoning Brāhmaṇas for the ceremony of invoking blessings on her babe). (19)

दैत्यो नाम्ना तृणावर्तः कंसभूयः प्रणोदितः। चक्रवातस्वरूपेण जहारासीनमर्भकम्। २०।

गोकुलं सर्वमावृण्वन् मुष्णंश्चक्षुषि रेणुभिः। ईरयन् सुमहाघोरशब्देन प्रदिशो दिशः। २१।

मुहूर्तमभवद् गोष्ठं रजसा तमसाऽऽवृतम्। सुतं यशोदा नापश्यत्स्मिन् न्यस्तवती यतः। २२।

नापश्यत् कश्चनात्मानं परं चापि विमोहितः। तृणावर्तनिमुष्टाभिः शर्कराभिरुपद्रुतः। २३।

इति खरपवनचक्रपांसुर्वेण सुतपदवीमबलाविलक्ष्य माता।

अतिकरुणामनुस्मरन्त्यशोचद् भुवि पतिता मृतवत्सका यथा गौः। २४।

रुदितमनुनिशम्य तत्र गोप्यो भृशमनुतप्तधियोऽश्रुपूर्णमुख्यः।

रुन्दुरनुपलभ्य नन्दसुतं पवन उपातपांसुर्वर्षवेगे। २५।

A demon, Trṇāvarta by name and a servant of Kamsa, particularly directed (by him), appeared in the form of a whirlwind, enveloping the entire Gokula in particles of dust and blinding the eyes (of all), and shaking the quarters as well as the intermediate points with his most terrible roar, and carried away the squatting Babe. (20-21) For an hour or so Vraja remained enveloped in dust and darkness. Yaśodā did not find her son on the spot where she had set him. (22) Oppressed with particles of sands wafted by Trṇāvarta and utterly confused, one could not see one's own self, much less another. (23) Not finding any trace of her son in the shower of dust occasioned by that violent whirlwind, and repeatedly thinking of Him in a most pathetic manner, the helpless mother (Yaśodā) lamented and dropped on the ground like a cow whose calf had died. (24) Having heard the cry (of Yaśodā) later on, when the wind had the vehemence of its shower of dust abated, and with their mind sore afflicted at not perceiving there the Darling of Nanda, the cowherd women (too) wept, their face flooded with tears. (25)

तृणावर्तः शान्तरथो वात्यारूपधरो हरन् । कृष्णं नभोगतो गन्तुं नाशक्रोदं भूरिभारभृत् । २६ ।
तमश्मानं मन्यमान आत्मनो गुरुमत्तया । गले गृहीत उत्क्रष्टुं नाशक्रोददुतार्भकम् । २७ ।
गलग्रहणनिश्चेष्टो दैत्यो निर्गतलोचनः । अव्यक्तरावो न्यपतत् सहबालो व्यसुव्रजे । २८ ।
तमन्तरिक्षात् पतितं शिलायां विशीर्षसर्वावयवं करालम् ।
पुरं यथा रुद्रशरेण विद्धं स्त्रियो रुदृत्यो ददृशुः समेताः । २९ ।
प्रादाय मात्रे प्रतिहत्य विस्मिताः कृष्णं च तस्योरसि लम्बमानम् ।
तं स्वस्तिमन्तं पुरुषादनीतं विहायसा मृत्युमुखात् प्रमुक्तम् ।
गोप्यश्च गोपाः किल नन्दमुख्या लब्ध्वा पुनः प्रापुरतीव मोदम् । ३० ।
अहो बतात्यद्भुतमेष रक्षसा बालो निवृत्तिं गमितोऽभ्यगात् पुनः ।
हिंस्रः स्वपापेन विहिंसितः खलः साधुः समत्वेन भयाद् विमुच्यते । ३१ ।
किं नस्तपश्चीर्णमधोक्षजाचनं पूर्तेष्टदत्तमुत भूतसौहृदम् ।
यत्संपरेतः पुनरेव बालको दिष्ट्या स्वबन्धुन् प्रणयन्नुपस्थितः । ३२ ।
दृष्ट्वाद्भुतानि बहुशो नन्दगोपो बृहद्भने । वसुदेववचो भूयो मानयामास विस्मितः । ३३ ।

Carrying away Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Tṛṇāvarta, who had assumed the form of a whirlwind, went up to the skies (to a certain height) but could not proceed (further), his impetuosity having ceased now that he (felt he) was carrying a huge burden (since the Lord had grown heavy again). (26) Taking that wonderful Boy to be a rock (of sapphire) because of His being heavier than himself (and having given up the form of a whirlwind), he could not cast Him away, caught as he was by the throat. (27) Rendered motionless by the (extraordinary) pressure at the throat and giving forth an indistinct groan, the demon fell down dead in (the outskirts of) Vraja, Babe and all, his eyes having been shot out (of the sockets). (28) The crying women assembled there saw the terrible demon fallen from the skies on a slab, with all his limbs shattered, like the city* (built by the demon Maya and) cleft by the arrow of Lord Rudra. (29) Nay, astonished to find Śrī Kṛṣṇa dangling on his breast, they picked up and restored Him to His mother. The cowherdresses and cowherds headed by Nanda, so the tradition goes, experienced excessive joy to get back the Babe, sound of body, though taken away by the ogre through the air, and extricated from the jaws of Death (as it were). (30) Oh, what a joy! It is extremely wonderful that, though brought to an end by the ogre, this boy has returned safe! The bloody and wicked fellow has been destroyed by his own sin and a pious soul is completely rid of fear by virtue of his even-mindedness. (31) What austerities, worship of Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception), act of pious liberality† (Pūrta) and sacrificial

* Vide VII. x.54—59.

† The word 'Pūrta' has been defined by Manu in the following couplet:—

वासीकूपतडागादि देवतायतनानि च । अन्नप्रदानमाश्रयः पूर्तिरित्याभिधीयते ॥

(Manusmṛti, IV. 226)

* Digging wells, big and small, tanks etc., construction of temples, giving away foodgrains, laying out garden—these are called by the name of Pūrta.*

The word 'Iṣṭa' again, has been defined by Atri as below:—

अग्निहोत्रं तपः सत्यं वेदानां चैव याननम् । अतिथ्यं वैश्वदेवश्च इष्टमित्याभिधीयते ॥

Pouring oblations into the sacred fire, practising austerities, truthfulness and also preserving the Vedas by committing them to memory, hospitality, performing the rite called Vaiśvadeva—this is called by the name of Iṣṭa.

performance etc. (Iṣṭa), act of charity or act of benevolence to living beings has been performed by us due to which the boy, though (virtually) dead, has luckily enough appeared (in our midst) again, reviving (us,) his kinsfolk? (32) Amazed to see many (more) wonders (of this kind) at Bṛhadvana (Gokula), Nanda, the cowherd chief, esteemed the prophecy of Vasudeva again and again. (33)

एकदार्भकमादाय स्वाङ्कमारोष्य भामिनी । प्रस्रुतं पाययामास स्तनं स्नेहपरिप्लुता । ३४ ।

पीतप्रायस्य जननी सा तस्य रुचिरस्मितम् । मुखं लालयती राजञ्चुष्मतो ददृशे इदम् । ३५ ।

खं रोदसी ज्योतिरनीकमाशाः सूर्येन्दुबह्विश्वसनाम्बुधीश्च ।

द्वीपान् नगांस्तदुहितृर्वनानि भूतानि यानि स्थिरजङ्गमानि । ३६ ।

सा वीक्ष्य विश्वं सहसा राजन् सञ्जातवेपथुः । सम्मील्य मृगशावाक्षी नेत्रे आसीत् सुविस्मिता । ३७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे तृणावर्तमोक्षो नाम सप्तमोऽध्यायः । ७ ।

One day, taking up the Babe and placing Him in her lap, the blessed Yaśodā, overwhelmed with affection, made Him suck her breast overflowing with milk. (34) Caressing the mouth (lips), lit up with a charming smile, of the Babe, who had almost finished sucking, O king, the aforesaid mother saw in His mouth while He was yawning the following, viz., the sky, the horizon, the host of luminaries, the (four) quarters, the sun, the moon, fire, the air and the oceans, the broad divisions of the globe, mountains, the rivers (flowing from them), forests and all created beings, stationary as well as moving. (35-36) Seized with a tremor to perceive the universe vividly all of a sudden, O Parikṣit, (in the mouth of the Babe), and fully closing her eyes, Yaśodā (whose eyes resembled those of a fawn) stood greatly amazed. (37)

Thus ends the seventh discourse entitled "The deliverance of Tṛṇāvarta" in the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टमोऽध्यायः

Discourse VIII

The Naming Ceremony of the Lord and His Infantile Sports

श्रीशुक उवाच

गर्गः पुरोहितो राजन् यदूतां सुमहातपाः । ब्रजं जगाम नन्दस्य वसुदेवप्रचोदितः । १ ।

तं दृष्ट्वा परमप्रीतः प्रत्युत्थाय कृताञ्जलिः । आनर्चाधोक्षजधिया प्रणिपातपूरःसरम् । २ ।

सूपविष्टं कृतार्तिथ्यं गिरा सूनृतया मुनिम् । नन्दयित्वाब्रवीद् ब्रह्मन् पूर्णस्य करवाम किम् । ३ ।

महद्विचलनं नृणां गृहिणां दीनचेतसाम् । निःश्रेयसाय भगवन् कल्पते नान्यथा क्वचित् । ४ ।

ज्योतिषामयनं साक्षाद् यत्तज्ज्ञानमतीन्द्रियम् । प्रणीतं भवता येन पुमान् वेदं परावरम् । ५ ।
 त्वं हि ब्रह्मविदां श्रेष्ठः संस्कारान् कर्तुमर्हसि । बालयोरनयोर्नृणां जन्मना ब्राह्मणो गुरुः । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Importuned by Vasudeva, Garga, the (family) priest of the Yadus, who was a very great ascetic, O king, repaired to Nanda's Vraja. (1) Supremely delighted to see him and rising (from his seat) with joined palms by way of welcome Nanda worshipped him, prostrating himself at the very outset and recognizing him to be Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception). (2) Delighting the sage with sweet words when hospitality had been offered to him and he was comfortably seated, Nanda said, "O holy one, what can we do for you, who are fully gratified (and want nothing)? (3) The stirring out of exalted souls (like you) is directed towards the supreme good of men (like me) attached to their household and distressed in mind, O venerable sage, and is never meant otherwise. (4) A (popular) treatise on astrology—from which proceeds the knowledge of supersensuous phenomena and through which (any) man can know the cause (of his present happiness and misery in the shape of past good and evil deeds) as well as its effect (in the shape of the pleasurable and painful experiences of this life)—has been directly composed by you. (5) (Besides being a master of astrology) you are the foremost of the knowers of Veda and are (thus) qualified to perform the purificatory rites (such as the naming ceremony) with respect to these two boys; for a Brāhmaṇa is the preceptor of (all) men by virtue of his (very) birth. (Hence it is not essential that such rites should be performed by one's own preceptor)." (6)

गर्ग उवाच

यदूनामहमाचार्यः ख्यातश्च भुवि सर्वतः । सुतं मया संस्कृतं ते मन्यते देवकीसुतम् । ७ ।
 कंसः पापमतिः सख्यं तव चानकदुन्दुभेः । देवक्या अष्टमो गर्भो न स्त्री भवितुमर्हति । ८ ।
 इति सञ्चिन्तयञ्छ्रुत्वा देवक्या दारिकावचः । अपि हन्ताऽऽगताश्ङ्कुस्तर्हि तन्नोऽनयो भवेत् । ९ ।

Garga replied : I am the (family) priest of the Yadus and known (as such) all over the globe. People would take your son, if consecrated by me through purificatory rites, as Devaki's son. (7) Pondering that the eighth progeny of Devaki ought not to be a girl, ever since he has heard the remark of Devaki's daughter (that his slayer has been born somewhere) and bearing in mind the friendship (subsisting) between you and Ānakadundubhi, the evil-minded Kāṁsa may have his suspicion (easily) aroused (by My performing the purificatory rites with respect to your sons, that Vasudeva's eighth child has been removed to your house and is being brought up here by you). If (therefore, God forbid), he should kill your son (under such suspicion), that would (prove to) be a (serious) blunder on our part. (8-9)

नन्द उवाच

अलक्षितोऽस्मिन् रहसि मामकैरपि गोव्रजे । कुरु द्विजातिसंस्कारं स्वस्तिवाचनपूर्वकम् । १० ।

Nanda said : Unperceived even by my (own) people, (kindly) perform in this cow-pen in secret the purificatory rite the naming ceremony appropriate to a member of the twice-born classes, after uttering the benedictory hymns. (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं सम्प्रार्थितो विप्रः स्वचिकीर्षितमेव तत् । चकार नामकरणं गूढो रहसि बालयोः । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Thus entreated (by Nanda), and (himself) remaining concealed, the sage performed in secret the naming ceremony with respect to the two boys (the sons of Rohiṇi and Yaśodā); (for) that was sought to be done by himself. (11)

गर्ग उवाच

अयं हि रोहिणीपुत्रो रमयन् सुहृदो गुणैः । आख्यास्यते राम इति बलाधिक्याद् बलं विदुः ।

यदूनामपृथग्भावात् सङ्कर्षणमुशान्यतु । १२ ।

आसन् वर्णाख्यो ह्यस्य गृह्णतोऽनुयुगं तनूः । शुक्लो रक्तस्तथा पीत इदानीं कृष्णतां गतः । १३ ।

प्रागयं वसुदेवस्य क्वचिजातस्तवात्मजः । वासुदेव इति श्रीमानभिज्ञाः सम्प्रचक्षते । १४ ।

बहूनि सन्ति नामानि रूपाणि च सुतस्य ते । गुणकर्मानुरूपाणि तान्यहं वेद नो जनाः । १५ ।

एष वः श्रेय आधास्यद् गोपगोकुलनन्दनः । अनेन सर्वदुर्गाणि यूयमञ्जस्तरेष्वथ । १६ ।

पुरानेन ब्रजपते साधवो दस्युपीडिताः । अराजके रक्ष्यमाणा जियुर्दस्यून समेधिताः । १७ ।

य एतस्मिन् महाभागाः प्रीतिं कुर्वन्ति मानवाः । नारयोऽपि भवन्त्येतान् विष्णुपक्षानिवासुराः । १८ ।

तस्मान्नन्दात्मजोऽयं ते नारायणसमो गुणैः । श्रिया कीर्त्यानुभावेन गोपायस्व समाहितः । १९ ।

इत्यात्मानं समादिश्य गर्गं च स्वगृहं गते । नन्दः प्रमुदितो मेन आत्मानं पूर्णमाश्रियाम् । २० ।

Garga observed : Delighting his kinsfolk with his excellences, this son of Rohiṇi, as a matter of fact, will be styled as Rāma (the delighter of the people); and due to his superiority of strength people will remember him as Bala (strength personified). (Nay,) because of his observing no distinction (inter se) between the Yadus* (viz., between yourselves, on the one hand, and Vasudeva etc., on the other) people will also recognize him as Saṅkarṣaṇa (the unifier). (12) Taking (diverse) forms indeed in each Yuga, Yaśodā's son has manifested three (different) colours, viz., white, red and yellow; this time he has assumed a dark complexion (13) Some time in the past this son of yours was born in the house of Vasudeva; (hence) the wise (who know this truth) will duly designate him as the glorious Vāsudeva (son of Vasudeva). (14) There are numerous names and forms of your son, conforming to his excellences and actions. I (alone) know them, not the commonality. (15) The delight of the cowherds, nay, of the entire Gokula, this boy will bring you happiness. By his help you will easily surmount all difficulties. (16) Protected and strengthened by him during a period of anarchy in former times, O lord of Vraja, pious souls, tormented by robbers, (eventually) conquered them. (17) Enemies cannot overpower those highly blessed souls who offer love to this boy, any more than demons can overpower those whose cause has been espoused by Lord Viṣṇu. (18) Therefore, this son of yours, O Nanda, is a compeer of Lord Nārāyaṇa in point of excellences, splendour, fame and glory. (Please) look after him intently. (19) And, when Garga, having duly instructed Nanda, had returned to his abode (at Mathurā), Nanda felt much delighted and deemed himself full of (all) blessings. (20)

कालेन ब्रजतात्वेन गोकुले रामकेशवौ । जानुभ्यां सह पाणिभ्यां पिङ्गमाणौ विजहृतुः । २१ ।

तावद्भ्रियुगमनुकृष्य सरोसुपत्नौ घोयप्रघोषरुचिरं ब्रजकर्दमेषु ।

तन्नादहृष्टमनसावनुसृत्य लोकं मुग्धप्रभीतवदुपेतुर्नृन्ति मात्रोः । २२ ।

तन्मातरी निजसुतौ घृणया स्रुवन्त्यौ पङ्काङ्गरुचिरावुपगुह्य दोर्ध्याम् ।

दत्त्वा स्तनं प्रपिबतोः स्म मुखे निरीक्ष्य मुग्धस्मिताल्पदर्शनं ययतुः प्रमोदम् । २३ ।

* In the Harivamśa (The Supplement of the Mahābhārata) Śrī Balarāma says to Nanda:—

यादवेष्वपि सर्वेषु भवन्तो मम वल्लभाः ।

"Even among the Yadavas you are (particularly) beloved of me."

यह्यङ्गनादर्शनीयकुमारलीलावन्तर्जने तदबलाः प्रगृहीतपुच्छैः ।
 वत्सैरितस्तत उभावनुकृष्यमाणौ प्रेक्षन्त्य उन्मिमतगृहा जहृषुहसन्त्यः । २४ ।
 शृङ्ख्यप्रिदंष्ट्रसजलद्विजकण्टकेभ्यः क्रीडापरावतिचलौ स्वसुतौ निषेदधुम् ।
 गृहाणि कर्तुमपि यत्र न तज्जन्यौ शेकात आपतुरल मनसोऽनवस्थाम् । २५ ।

Not long afterwards, Balarāma and Keśava (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) began to sport in Gokula going about on hands and knees. (21) Moving briskly on the muddy grounds of Vraja dragging both their feet behind in a (most) charming way—the tiny bells of Their anklets and girdle making a tinkling noise and Their mind delighted to hear their sound—and following any passer-by (to some distance), the two Boys would (soon) return to Their mothers like innocent and terrified babes (when the passer-by would turn round and look at Them and They discovered him to be a stranger). (22) Folding in their arms their Sons—who looked charming with mud, that served to beautify Their person as a paint—and giving Them suck, Their two mothers, whose breasts were overflowing with milk due to their (motherly) affection, experienced ecstatic joy indeed to behold Their countenance bright with a winning smile and small teeth (even) as They sucked their breasts with relish. (23) When the two Boys were old enough to be engaged in boyish sports, (so) captivating to the eyes of young women, the latter would then feel delighted to gaze on Them both being dragged behind hither and thither in the interior of Vraja by calves whose tails were tightly seized by Them, and stood laughing leaving their homestead. (24) When Their mothers did not succeed in restraining their most restless Sons—absorbed as They were in play—from horned animals and those having sharp teeth, fire, sword, water, birds and thorns, nor could they attend to their domestic duties, they would experience a great distraction of mind. (25)

कालेनाल्पेन राजर्षे रामः कृष्णश्च गोकुले । अघृष्टजानुभिः पद्भिर्विचक्रमतुरङ्गसा । २६ ।
 ततस्तु भगवान् कृष्णो वयस्यैर्ब्रजबालकैः । सहरामो ब्रजस्त्रीणां चिक्रीडे जनयन् मुदम् । २७ ।
 कृष्णस्य गोप्यो रुचिरं वीक्ष्य कौमारचापलम् । शृण्वत्याः किल तन्मातुरिति होचुः समागताः । २८ ।
 वत्सान् मुञ्चन् ऋचिदसमये क्रोशसंजातहासः स्तेयं स्वाद्वत्यथ दधि पयः कल्पितैः स्तेययोगैः ।
 मर्कान् भोक्ष्यन् विभजति स चेन्नानि भाण्डं भिनति द्रव्यालाभे स गृहकुपितो यात्युपक्रोश्य तोकान् । २९ ।
 हस्ताग्राह्ये रचयति विधिं पीठकोलखलाद्यैश्छिद्रं ह्यन्तर्निहितवयुनः शिष्यभाण्डेषु तद्वित् ।
 ध्वान्तागारे धृतमणिगणं स्वाङ्गमर्थप्रदीपं काले गोप्यो यर्हि गृहकृत्येषु सुव्यग्रचित्ताः । ३० ।
 एवं धाष्ट्र्यानुशति कुरुते मेहनादीनि वास्तौ स्तेयोपार्थैर्विचचितकृतिः सुप्रतीको यथाऽऽस्ते ।
 इत्थं स्त्रीभिः सभयनयनश्रीमुखालोकिनीभिर्व्याख्यातार्था प्रहसितमुखी न ह्युपालब्धुमेच्छत् । ३१ ।

After a short time, O royal sage, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa began to move about with ease in Gokula on Their feet without rubbing Their knees (against the ground). (26) Then, in course of time, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, accompanied by Balarāma, began to sport with the boys of Vraja of His own age, bringing delight to the women of Vraja (thereby). (27) Gazing on the charming boyish pranks of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the cowherd women (of Vraja) called (at His residence) in a body and actually spoke as follows to His mother, who was all ears:—(28) Occasionally untethering the calves before time (when we are unwary, and thus allowing them to suck the whole milk of their mothers) and with his risibility excited by scolding, your darling swallows our tasteful curds and milk stolen through thieving devices contrived by Him. He (not only quaffs them himself, but) deals them out in order to feed monkeys; and, if a monkey drinks no more, he smashes the (very) jar (containing curds and milk). (Nay,) enraged with the people of the house on getting no material (to eat), he departs setting the infants (of the house) a crying (by pinching them). (29) Where the milk etc., is kept (in swings etc.) hanging beyond the reach of his hands, he contrives plans (to get at it) with the help of wooden seats and mortars etc., (placed one upon another). Possessed of insight into the contents (of the pots) and expert in (the art of) making holes, he strikes holes into the pots placed in swings (where the aforesaid expedients fail). In a dark room he uses his own person, wearing hosts of gems, as a lamp to reveal things and he does all this at a time when the cowherd women have their mind fully engrossed in their household duties. (30) He commits nuisance in our tidy houses and does other such mischievous acts. And having accomplished his work through pilfering devices, he sits (by your side) as a very innocent boy." Yaśodā, to whom the matter was thus reported at length by the (cowherd) women—who watched the charming countenance (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) gazing with terrified eyes—did not feel inclined (even) to rebuke her son and stood with a laughing face. (31)

एकदा क्रीडमानास्ते रामाद्या गोपदारकाः । कृष्णो मृदं भक्षितवानिति मात्रे न्यवेदयन् । ३२ ।
सा गृहीत्वा करे कृष्णमुपालभ्य हितैषिणी । यशोदा भयसम्भ्रान्तप्रेक्षणाक्षमभाषत । ३३ ।
कस्मान्मृदमदानात्पन् भवान् भक्षितवान् रहः । वदन्ति तावका ह्येते कुमारस्तेऽग्रजोऽप्ययम् । ३४ ।

One day, while at play, the cowherd boys headed by Balarāma complained to Yaśodā (the mother of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), that Kṛṣṇa had eaten earth. (32) Taking Śrī Kṛṣṇa by the hand and chiding him, the said Yaśodā, who sought his welfare and found that His eyes cast a bewildered look, spoke to Him (as follows):—(33) "Why did you eat earth surreptitiously, O unruly child? Indeed these boys, your playmates, as well as this elder brother of yours say so." (34)

श्रीकृष्ण उवाच

नाहं भक्षितवानम्ब सर्वे मिथ्याभिज्ञासिनः । यदि सत्यगिरस्तर्हि समक्षं पश्य मे मुखम् । ३५ ।
यद्येवं तर्हि व्यादेहीत्युक्तः स भगवान् हरिः । व्यादत्ताव्याहृतैश्चर्यः क्रीडामनुजबालकः । ३६ ।
सा तत्र ददृशे विश्वं जगत् स्थासु च खं दिशः । साद्रिद्वीपाब्धिभूगोलं सवायग्रीन्दुतारकम् । ३७ ।
ज्योतिश्चक्रं जलं तेजो नभस्वान् वियदेव च । वैकारिकाणीन्द्रियाणि मनो मात्रा गुणास्त्रयः । ३८ ।

एतद् विचित्रं सह जीवकालस्वभावकर्माशयलिङ्गभेदम् ।
सुनोस्तनौ वीक्ष्य विदारितास्ये व्रजं सहात्मानमवाप शङ्काम् । ३९ ।
किं स्वप्न एतदुत देवमाया किं वा मदीयो बत बुद्धिमोहः ।
अथो अमुयैव ममार्भकस्य यः कश्चनौत्पत्तिक आत्मयोगः । ४० ।
अथो यथावन्न वितर्कगोचरं चेतोमनःकर्मवचोभिरञ्जसा ।
यदाश्रयं येन यतः प्रतीयते सुदुर्विभाव्यं प्रणतास्मि तत्पदम् । ४१ ।
अहं ममासौ पतिरेष मे सुतो व्रजेश्वरस्याखिलवित्पा सती ।
गोप्यश्च गोपाः सहगोधनाश्च मे यन्माययेत्यं कुमतिः स मे गतिः । ४२ ।

इत्थं विदिततत्त्वायां गोपिकायां स ईश्वरः । वैष्णवीं व्यतनोन्मायां पुत्रस्नेहमयीं विभुः । ४३ ।
सद्यो नष्टस्मृतिर्गोपी साऽऽरोप्यागेहमात्मजम् । प्रवृद्धस्नेहकलिलहृदयाऽऽसीद् यथा पुरा । ४४ ।
त्रया चोपनिषद्भिश्च सांख्ययोगैश्च सात्वतैः । उपगीयमानमाहातयं हरिं सामन्यतात्मजम् । ४५ ।

Śrī Kṛṣṇa replied : I never ate earth, O mother ! They are all liars. If (it is urged) they are truthful, then examine my mouth with your own eyes (in order to verify their veracity). (35) "If so, then open your mouth !" Thus urged, the aforesaid Lord Śrī Hari, whose lordship is (ever) unobstructed and who had in sport assumed the form of a human child, opened His mouth. (36) There (inside the Lord's mouth) she beheld the (whole) universe consisting of the moving and the stationary, the atmosphere, the (four) quarters, the terrestrial globe with its mountains, principal divisions and oceans, and including the wind (causing the motion of the planets), the fire of lightning, the moon as well as the stars, heaven, water, fire, the air as well as the sky, the deities presiding over the Indriyas (who are modifications of the Sāttvika Ahaṅkāra), the mind, the Indriyas (modifications of the Rājasika Ego), the objects of senses (modifications of the Tāmasika Ego), and the three Guṇas. (37-38) Synchronously observing in the (infantile) body of her Son, (nay,) in His wide open mouth, this wonderful universe—consisting of a variety of organisms (moving as well as immobile) owing their diversity to the Jiva, Kāla (the factor disturbing the equilibrium of the Guṇas), Nature (the cause of the modification of the three Guṇas), Karma (the cause of birth), the tendency to action (the seed of Karma)—as well as Vraja including herself (and her Son), Yaśodā was seized with dismay. (39) (She thought within herself, "Is this a dream or illusion set up by the Lord, or alas ! is it delusion of my mind or some inborn characteristic divine glory of this very infant of mine? (40) Therefore, I bow down to that (ultimate) Goal (viz., Brahma), which is most difficult to comprehend, (nay,) which cannot be easily and correctly guessed through the intellect, mind, actions and words, which is the ground of this universe, and by means of which (as presiding over the senses) and because of which it is perceived. (41) He (that Lord alone) is my refuge, by whose Māyā has been generated (in me) this perverse (egotistic) notion that I am (Yaśodā,) the chaste wife of Nanda (the lord of Vraja), the (sole) mistress of his entire fortune, and he, my husband, that this child (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) is my son and that the cowherds and cowherdesses (of Vraja) as well as the cattle-wealth (and so on) are mine." (42) On the cowherdess (Yaśodā) who had thus realized the truth, that almighty Lord (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) cast His divine charm in the form of maternal affection (for Him). (43) Placing Śrī Kṛṣṇa (her Son) in her lap, the aforesaid cowherd lady, whose revelation had instantly disappeared, stood with her heart full of intense affection (even) as before. (44) (Once again) she regarded Śrī Hari—whose glory is being celebrated by the three Vedas (treating of the rituals) as well as by the Upaniṣads, nay, (even) by the Sāṅkhya and Yoga systems (of philosophy) and (even so) by the Vaiṣṇava scriptures (such as the Pāñcarātra of Devarṣi Nārada)—as her own son. (45)

राजोवाच

नन्दः किमकरोद् ब्रह्मन् श्रेय एवं महोदयम् । यशोदा च महाभागा पपौ यस्याः स्तनं हरिः । ४६ ।
पितरौ नान्वचिन्देतां कृष्णोदाराभकेहितम् । गायन्त्यद्यापि कवयो यल्लोकशमलापहम् । ४७ ।

The king (Parīkṣit) said : What meritorious act did Nanda perform so as to deserve such great fortune and what did the highly blessed Yaśodā do, whose breast Śrī Hari (Himself) sucked, while His parents (Vasudeva and Devaki) did not (even) get to behold the charming infantile sports of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, which sages glorify even to this day and which (when sung) are capable of wiping out the sins of the (whole) world ? (46-47)

श्रीशुक उवाच

द्रोणो वसूनां प्रवरो धरया सह भार्यया । करिष्यमाण आदेशान् ब्रह्मणस्तमुवाच ह । ४८ ।
जातयोनीं महादेवे भुवि विश्वेश्वरे हरौ । भक्तिः स्यात् परमा लोके ययाज्ञो दुर्गतिं तरेत् । ४९ ।

तत्र चक्रुः परिवृद्धौ गोपा रामजनार्दनौ। कृष्णसंघट्टिनः केचिदासन् रामस्य चापरे। १२०।
 अचेरुर्विविधाः क्रोडा वाह्यवाहकलक्षणाः। यत्रारोहन्ति जेतारो वहन्ति च पराजिताः। १२१।
 वहन्तो वाह्यमानाश्च चारयन्तश्च गोधनम्। भाण्डीरकं नाम वटं जग्मुः कृष्णपुरोगमाः। १२२।

(One day) while Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa were grazing the cattle in that forest in the company of (other) cowherds, a demon named Pralamba arrived there in the guise of a cowherd boy with intent to kidnap the two Brothers. (17) Though knowing him (his real character), the all-perceiving Lord, who had appeared in the race of the Daśārhas, approved of his friendship, contemplating the means of killing him. (18) Calling by his side to that spot (all) the cowherds, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was well-versed in play, said, "O cowherd boys, let us play (this time) dividing ourselves suitably into two camps." (19) In that game, the cowherd boys made Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (lit., He who is solicited by the people) their leader; some (of them) joined the group of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, while others took the side of Balarāma. (20) They played various games which were characterized by the role of mounts (in the case of one party) and that of riders (in the case of the other party). In these games those who won rode, while the worsted ones carried the former. (21) (Thus) carrying and being carried, and pasturing their cattle-wealth, they (all) with Śrī Kṛṣṇa going ahead reached a banyan tree, Bhāṇḍīraka by name. (22)

रामसङ्घट्टिनो यर्हि श्रीदामवृषभादयः। क्रोडायां जयिनस्तांस्तान्हुः कृष्णादयो नृप। १२३।
 उवाह कृष्णो भगवान् श्रीदामान् पराजितः। वृषभं भद्रसेनस्तु प्रलम्ब्यो रोहिणीसुतम्। १२४।
 अविविह्य मन्थमानः कृष्णं दानवपुङ्गवः। वहन् द्रुततरं प्रागादवरोहणतः परम्। १२५।
 तमुद्ब्रह्न् धरणिधरेन्द्रगौरवं महासुरो विगतलयो निजं वपुः।
 स आस्थितः पुरटपरिच्छदो बभौ तद्दिद्ध्युमानुदुपतिवाडिवाम्युः। १२६।
 निरीक्ष्य तद्वपुर्लम्ब्यरे चरत् प्रदीप्तदग्ध्रं भ्रुकुटितोऽग्रदंष्ट्रकम्।
 ज्वलच्छिखं कटककिरीटकुण्डलत्विषाद्भुतं हलधर ईषदत्रसत्। १२७।
 अथागतस्मृतिरभयो रिपुं बलो विहायसार्थमिव हरन्तमात्मनः।
 रुषाहनच्छिरसि दृढेन मुष्टिना सुराधिपो गिरिमिव वज्ररहसा। १२८।
 स आहतः सपदि विशीर्णमस्तको मुखाद् वमन् रुधिरमपस्मृतोऽसुरः।
 महारवं व्यसुरपतत् समीरयन् गिरिवंश मधवत आयुधाहतः। १२९।

When (on one occasion) Śrīdāmā, Vṛṣabha and others, who had taken the side of Balarāma, had the upper hand in the game, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and others, O protector of men, carried them. (23) Having been worsted, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa bore Śrīdāmā; Bhadrāsena, Vṛṣabha; and Pralamba, Balarāma (the son of Rohiṇī). (24) Thinking Śrī Kṛṣṇa to be unbearable (for him, he chose to remain on His side) and acting as a mount for Balarāma, Pralamba (the foremost among the Dānavas) ran posthaste beyond the limit fixed for demounting the riders. (25) Bearing on his back Balarāma, who had assumed the weight of Mount Meru (the chief of the mountains), the mighty demon found that his speed had altogether disappeared and, having resumed his own (demoniac) form and, adorned with gold ornaments, he shone like a cloud illumined with flashes of lightning and bearing the moon (the ruler of the stars) on its back. (26) Balarāma (the wielder of a plough for a weapon) felt a bit afraid to perceive that body soaring in the skies at a great speed with burning eyes and hair glowing as flames and with its fearful tusks reaching the end of its contracted eye-brows and looking uncanny with the splendour of its bracelets, coronet and ear-rings. (27) Balarāma, to whom self-consciousness (the knowledge of His divinity) had returned the very next moment and who had (consequently) been rid of (all) fear, hit the enemy—who was carrying him through the sky as though it were some treasure found by him—in (great) rage on his head with his strong fist, which descended with the vehemence of a thunderbolt, even as Indra (the ruler of the gods) would strike a mountain. (28) With his head smashed forthwith and deprived of his consciousness when struck (by Balarāma), and vomiting blood, the said demon fell dead, uttering a loud cry, as a mountain struck with the weapon of Indra. (29)

दृष्ट्वा प्रलम्बं निहतं बलेन बलशालिना । गोपाः सुविस्मिता आसन् साधु साध्विति वादिनः । ३० ।
 आशिषोऽभिगुणन्तस्तं प्रशंसुस्तदहंणम् । प्रेत्यागतमिवालिङ्ग्य प्रेमविह्वलचेतसः । ३१ ।
 पापे प्रलम्बे निहते देवाः परमनिर्वृताः । अभ्यवर्षन् बलं माल्यैः शशंसुः साधु साध्विति । ३२ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे प्रलम्बवधो नामाष्टादशोऽध्यायः । १८ ।

Seeing Pralamba slain by the mighty Balarāma, the cowherds felt highly amazed and shouted, "Well done, Bravo !" (30) Uttering benedictions on him and embracing him as though he had returned to life after death, they extolled him, deserving as he was of such praise, their mind overwhelmed with affection. (31) Supremely gratified on the sinful Pralamba having been slain, the gods covered Bala with flowers and applauded him exclaiming, "Well done ! Bravo !" (32)

Thus ends the eighteenth discourse entitled "The Lord slays Pralamba," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XIX

The Lord swallows up a wild fire (again)

श्रीशुक उवाच

क्रीडासक्तेषु गोपेषु तद्गवो दूरचारिणीः । खरं चरन्त्यो विविशुस्तृणलोभेन गह्वरम् । १ ।
 अजा गावो महिषश्च निर्विशान्त्यो वनाद् वनम् । इषीकाटवीं निर्विविशुः क्रन्दन्त्यो दावतर्षिताः । २ ।
 तेऽपश्यन्तः पशून् गोपाः कृष्णरामादयस्तदा । जातानुतापा न विदुर्विविन्वन्तो गवां गतिम् । ३ ।
 तृणैस्तत्तुरदच्छिन्नैर्गोष्पदैर्द्विवर्गैर्गाम् । मार्गमन्वगमन् सर्वे नष्टाजीव्या विचेतसः । ४ ।
 मुञ्जाटव्यां भ्रष्टमार्गं क्रन्दमानं स्वगोधनम् । सम्प्राप्य तृषिताः श्रान्तास्ततस्ते संन्यवर्तयन् । ५ ।
 ता आहूता भगवता मेघगम्भीरया गिरा । खनाभ्रां निनन्दं श्रुत्वा प्रतिनेदुः प्रहर्षिताः । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : While the cowherd boys were absorbed in play, their cows, grazing at will, strayed afar and, tempted by (green) grass, entered a dense forest. (1) Moving from forest to forest, the she-goats, cows and she-buffaloes felt thirsty from heat and, wailing loudly, entered a thicket of rushes. (2) Not perceiving the cattle, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Balarāma and the other Gopas were now filled with remorse but could not find any trace of the cows even though they searched for them. (3) The Gopas, whose very means of livelihood had (thus) been lost and who (consequently) felt (very) perturbed, all followed the track of the cows with the help of the blades of grass cut by their hoofs and teeth and marked by their footprints. (4) Having duly found their cattle-wealth, whose passage had been intercepted in that thicket of rushes and which was piteously crying, the cowherds, who were seized with thirst and felt exhausted (too), successfully drove it back from the thicket. (5) Called by the Lord in a tone deep as the rumbling of clouds, the cows responded to His call, overjoyed as they were to hear the shouting of their names. (6)

ततः समन्ताद् वनधूमकेतुर्यदृच्छयाभूत् क्षयकृद् वनौकसाम् ।

समीरितः सारथिनोल्बणोलुपकैर्विलेलिहानः स्थिरजङ्गमान् महान् । ७ ।

तमापतन्तं परितो दवाग्निं गोपाश्च गावः प्रसमीक्ष्य भीताः ।

ऊचुश्च कृष्णं सबलं प्रपन्ना यथा हरि मृत्युभयादिता जनाः । ८ ।

कृष्ण कृष्ण महावीर हे रामामितविक्रम । दावाग्निना दह्यमानान् प्रपन्नांस्त्रातुमर्हथः । ९ ।

नूनं त्वद्वाञ्छवाः कृष्ण न चार्हन्त्यवसीदितुम् । वयं हि सर्वधर्मज्ञ त्वत्राथास्वत्परायणाः । १० ।

Presently, by the will of Providence there broke out on all sides a huge wild fire playing havoc with the inhabitants of the forest and, lapping with its (tonguelike) fearful flames the animate and inanimate beings, now that it was fanned by the wind (its helpmate). (7) The cowherds as well as the cows felt dismayed to discern the forest conflagration advancing on every side and, flying for succour to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma—even as people stricken with the fear of death would seek Śrī Hari—spoke (as follows). (8) "O Kṛṣṇa, the Enchanter of all, O mighty hero, O Rāma of immeasurable prowess, be pleased to protect us, who are being burnt by a wild fire and have sought You (as our refuge). (9) Surely, Your relations, O Kṛṣṇa, do not deserve to undergo suffering. We have as a matter of fact You (alone) as our protector and ultimate refuge, O knower of all righteousness!" (10)

श्रीशुक उवाच

वचो निशम्य कृपणं बन्धूनां भगवान् हरिः । निमीलयत मा भैष्ट लोचनानीत्यभाषत । ११ ।

तथेति मीलिताक्षेषु भगवानग्निमुल्बणम् । पीत्वा मुखेन तान् कृच्छ्राद् योगाधीशो व्यमोचयत् । १२ ।

ततश्च तेऽक्षीण्युन्मील्य पुनर्भाण्ड्रीमापिताः । निशम्य विस्मिता आसन्नात्मानं गाश्च मोचिताः । १३ ।

कृष्णस्य योगवीर्यं तद् योगमायानुभावितम् । दावाग्नेरात्मनः क्षेमं वीक्ष्य ते मेनिरेऽमरम् । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing the piteous prayer of His friends, Lord Śrī Hari said, "Shut your eyes and do not be afraid." (11) When they had shut their eyes saying "Be it so," the Lord, the Master of Yoga (mystic powers), swallowed up the terrible fire and (thus) completely rid them of the peril. (12) Nay, on opening their eyes they stood amazed to find themselves as well as the cows rescued and brought to Bhāṇḍira.* (13) Perceiving that Yogic power of Śrī Kṛṣṇa—manifested by His Yogamāyā—which had brought about their deliverance from a wild fire, they believed Him to be an immortal. (14)

गाः सन्निवर्त्य सायाह्ने सहरामो जनार्दनः । वेणुं विरणयन् गोष्ठमगाद् गोपैरभिभुतः । १५ ।

गोपीनां परमानन्द आसीद् गोविन्ददर्शने । क्षणं युगशतमिव यासां येन विनाभवत् । १६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां मेहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे दावाग्निपानं

नार्मकोनविंशोऽध्यायः । १९ ।

* The tree is stated to have been at a distance of 10 miles from the thicket of rushes.

Driving back the cows at eventide, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is solicited by the people), accompanied by Balarāma, withdrew to Vraja playing on His flute and extolled on all sides by cowherd boys. (15) Supreme was the joy of the Gopīs (of Vraja) at the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cow), in whose absence a single moment hung heavy on them as a hundred Yugas. (16)

Thus ends the nineteenth discourse entitled "Śrī Kṛṣṇa swallows up a wild fire (again)" in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XX

A description of the Rains and Autumn

श्रीशुक उवाच

तयोस्तदद्भुतं कर्म दावाग्नेर्मोक्षमात्मनः । गोपाः स्त्रीभ्यः समाचख्युः प्रलम्बवधमेव च । १ ।

गोपवृद्धाश्च गोप्यश्च तदुपाकर्ण्य विस्मिताः । मेनिरे देवप्रवरौ कृष्णारामौ ब्रजं गतौ । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : The cowherd boys narrated at full length to their womenfolk that extraordinary feat of the two Brothers in the shape of their deliverance from a wild fire and even so the destruction of Pralamba. (1) Astonished to hear it, the elderly among the Gopas and the cowherd women too thought Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma to be two foremost gods come down to Vraja. (2)

ततः प्रावर्तत प्रावृद् सर्वसत्त्वसमुद्भवा । विद्योतमानपरिधिर्विसफूर्जितनभस्तला । ३ ।

सान्द्रलीलाम्बुदैर्ब्योम सविद्युत्स्तनयितुभिः । अस्पृष्ट्योतिराच्छन्नं ब्रह्मेव सगुणं बभौ । ४ ।

अष्टौ मासान् निपीतं यद् भूयसाश्चोदमयं वसु । स्वगोभिर्मोक्तुमारभे पर्जन्यः काल आगते । ५ ।

तडित्वन्तो महामेघाश्चण्डश्चसनवेपिताः । प्रीणनं जीवनं ह्यस्य मुमुचुः करुणा इव । ६ ।

तपःकृशा देवर्माढा आसीद् वर्षीयसी मही । यथैव काम्यतपसस्तनुः सम्प्राप्य तत्फलम् । ७ ।

निशामुखेषु खद्योतास्तमसा भान्ति न ग्रहाः । यथा पापेन पाखण्डा न हि वेदाः कलौ युगे । ८ ।

श्रुत्वा पर्जन्यनिनदं मण्डूका व्यसृजन् गिरः । तूष्णीं शयानाः प्राग्यद्ब्रह्मब्राह्मणा नियमात्यये । ९ ।

आसन्नृत्यथवाहिन्यः क्षुद्रनद्योऽनुशुष्यतीः । पुंसो यथास्वतन्त्रस्य देहद्रवणिसम्पदः । १० ।

हरिता हरिभिः शर्धैरिन्द्रगोपैश्च लोहिताः । उच्छिलीन्धकृतच्छाया नृणां श्रीरिव भूरभूत् । ११ ।

क्षेत्राणि सस्यसम्पदिः कर्षकाणां मुदं ददुः । धनिनामुपतापं च दैवाधीनमजानताम् । १२ ।

जलस्थलौकसः सर्वे नववारिनिषेवया । अबिभ्रद् रुचिरं रूपं यथा हरिनिषेवया । १३ ।

सरिद्धिः सङ्गतः सिन्धुक्षुभे श्वसनोर्मिमान् । अपक्वयोगिनश्चितं कामाक्तं गुणयुग् यथा । १४ ।

गिरयो वर्षधाराभिर्हन्यमाना न विव्यथुः । अभिभूयमाना व्यसनैर्यथाधोक्षजचेतसः । १५ ।

मार्गा बभूवुः सन्दिग्धास्तूर्णश्छन्ना ह्यसंस्कृताः । नाभ्यस्यमानाः श्रुतयो द्विजैः कालहता इव । १६ ।

लोकबन्धुषु मेघेषु विद्युत्श्वलसौहृदाः । स्थैर्यं न चकृः कामिन्यः पुरुषेषु गुणिष्विव । १७ ।

धनुर्वियति माहेन्द्रं निर्गुणं च गुणिन्यभात् । व्यक्ते गुणव्यतिकरेऽगुणवान् पुरुषो यथा । १८ ।

न रराजोदुपश्छन्नः स्वज्योत्स्नाराजितैर्धनैः । अहंमत्या भासितया स्वभासा पुरुषो यथा । १९ ।

मेघागमोत्सवा हृष्टाः प्रत्यन्तञ्छिखण्डिनः । गृहेषु तप्ता निर्विण्णा यथाच्युतजनागमे । २० ।
 पीत्वापः पादपाः पद्मिरासन्नानात्ममूर्तयः । प्राक् क्षामास्तपसा श्रान्ता यथा कामानुमेवया । २१ ।
 सरस्वशान्तरोधस्तु न्युषुरङ्गाणि सारसाः । गृहेष्वशान्तकृत्येषु ग्राम्या इव दुराशयाः । २२ ।
 जलौघैर्निरभिद्यन्त सेतवो वर्षतीश्वरे । पाखण्डिनामसद्बदैर्वेदमार्गाः कलौ यथा । २३ ।
 व्यमुञ्चन् वायुभिर्नुना भूतेभ्योऽध्यामृतं घनाः । यथाऽऽशिषो विश्पतयः काले काले द्विजेरिताः । २४ ।

Then commenced the rainy season, conducive to the growth of all creatures (as being favourable to their breeding and nourishment both), characterized by bright circles (round the sun and the moon) and thundering heavens. (3) Overcast with dense and dark clouds attended with lightning and thunder, with the luminaries rendered obscure, the sky shone as Brahma (the Spirit) conditioned by the three Guṇas (and known as the Jīva with its light of wisdom obscured by the Sattva, Rajas and Tamas corresponding in the case of the sky to the flashes of lightning, thunder and the clouds). (4) When (the opportune) time (in the form of the monsoon) came, the sun-god began to release the wealth of the earth in the form of water that had been absorbed by him during the (past) eight months (even as a righteous monarch would return to the people the wealth which he extorted from them in the form of land revenue and other legitimate taxes). (5) Huge clouds endowed with (the eyes of) lightning (and perceiving the heat of the world) and tossed by tempestuous winds poured down water, which brings joy to this world (even as the compassionate, observing the miserable plight of the world and stirred with a feeling of commiseration for the afflicted, lay down their very life and thus bring delight to the world). (6) Shrunken through the (summer) heat, the earth grew plump again when drenched by heaven, even as the body of a man engaged in austerities performed for attaining some selfish end, which is emaciated through such austerities, grow corpulent (again) on realizing the fruit of those austerities. (7) It is the fire-flies and not the planets that shine at the approach of night shrouded in darkness (occasioned by a thick coating of clouds obscuring the heavenly bodies), even as it is heresies and not the Vedas that flourish in the age of Kali contaminated with sin (born of ignorance that clouds one's judgment). (8) Frogs, that had been silently hibernating before, began to utter their croaks on hearing the roar of clouds, (even) as Brāhmaṇa pupils at the end of their (daily) routine of devotions (during which they observe complete silence and on hearing the call of their preceptor) would start their recitation (of the Vedas). (9) Small streams that were gradually drying up (now) overflowed their channel (even) as the bodily resources and material riches of a man who has no self-control flow in a wrong channel. (10) The earth looked green with its green meadows, crimson with the Indragopas (a species of red insects with a velvety skin) and shaded (rendered white) by mushrooms, (even) as the army of kings is arrayed in uniforms of various colours. (11) Fields with their wealth of crop afforded delight to the cultivators and caused agony to the rich, who (envied their lot and) did not know that everything lay in the hands of Providence. (12) All the inhabitants of land and water put on a winning form and appearance through the use of fresh (rain) water (even) as devotees attain an attractive (divine) form through the worship of Śrī Hari. (13) United with rivers, the ocean, which was (already) rough with waves generated by winds, became (all the more) turbulent (even) as the mind of an immature Yogī, tinged (as it is) with desire, gets agitated when brought into contact with sense-objects. (14) Beaten by volleys of rain, mountains did not feel the least agitated any more than those whose mind is fixed on Lord Viṣṇu (who is above sense-perception) when they are overwhelmed with calamities. (15) Overgrown with grass and remaining untrodden (for a long time), the tracks became doubtful indeed even like the texts of the Vedas which are not properly studied by the Brāhmaṇas and are consigned to oblivion by the force of time. (16)

Flashes of lightning did not bear constancy to the clouds, which are the friends of the people, any more than libidinous women are constant (even) to men possessed of virtues. (17) In the sky, endowed with the attribute of sound, the rainbow (Indra's bow) without a string* shone like the attributeless Being (Brahma) in the manifest world consisting of the three Guṇas. (18) Screened by clouds illumined by her own effulgence, the moon did not shine any more than the Jīva (an embodied soul) obscured by the ego-sense which is illumined by its (the Jīva's) own light. (19) Exulting over the appearance of clouds, with their hair standing on end, peacocks rejoiced (even) as householders feeling agonized and disgusted with the world do on the advent of servants of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord). (20) Sucking water through their roots trees, that had shrunk heretofore due to (the summer) heat, got regenerated into numerous forms (in the shape of fresh foliage, blossoms, fruits etc.), (even) as ascetics that are emaciated and fatigued before through austerities grow robust again through the enjoyment of pleasures. (21) Cranes continued to live, O Parikṣit, even in lakes whose brink was miry and full of thorns etc., (even) as householders whose mind is devoted to the pleasures of sense choose to remain in their houses, which keep them engaged in distracting duties. (22) While Indra (the ruler of the three worlds) poured down showers, dams got breached by floods (even) as in the Kali age the paths of virtue chalked out by the Vedas are destroyed by the false theories of heretics. (23) Driven by the winds, clouds now poured down nectar-like water to living beings (even) as rulers of men, directed by the Brāhmaṇas, conferred from time to time desired boons (on those who sought them). (24)

एवं वनं तद् वर्षिष्ठं पक्कखर्जूरजम्बुमत् । गोगोपालवृत्तो रन्तु सखलः प्रविशद्वरिः । १२५ ।

धेनवो मन्दगामिन्य ऊधोभारेण भूयसा । ययुर्भगवताऽऽहूता द्रुतं प्रीत्या स्तुतस्तनीः । १२६ ।

वनौकसः प्रमुदिता वनराजर्मधुच्युतः । जलधारा गिरेर्नदानासन्ना ददृशे गुहाः । १२७ ।

क्वचिद् वनस्पतिक्रोडे गुहायां चाभिवर्षति । निर्विश्य भगवान् रेमे कन्दमूलफलाशनः । १२८ ।

दध्योदनं समानीतं शिलायां सलिलान्तिके । सम्भोजनीयैर्बुधुजे गोपैः सङ्कर्षणांखितः । १२९ ।

शाहलोपरि संविश्य चर्वतो मीलितेक्षणान् । तृप्तान् वृषान् वत्सतरान् गाक्ष स्वोधोभरश्रमाः । १३० ।

प्रावृद्भिर्यं च तां वीक्ष्य सर्वभूतमुदावहाम् । भगवान् पूजयाञ्चक्रे आत्मशक्त्युपवृंहिताम् । १३१ ।

Surrounded by cows and cowherd boys and accompanied by Balarāma, Śrī Hari entered deep into the said forest (of Vṛndāvana)—which was so luxuriant and full of ripe dates and rose-apples—in order to sport. (25) Called by the Lord, cows, that walked with a slow gait due to the heavy weight of their udders, marched with quick steps, their udders showering milk (on the way) due to affection. (26) (As He passed through the woods) the Lord perceived the denizens of the forest (viz., the Bhīlas as well as the birds and beasts) highly rejoiced, rows of trees dripping with honey, streams of water flowing from mountains as well as their murmur and the caves near them. (27) At times, when it rained on all sides, the Lord took shelter in the hollow of a tree or in a cave and sported (there) eating bulbs, roots and fruits. (28) Accompanied by Saṅkaraṇa (Balarāma), He ate rice and curds brought by Him (from home) with vegetables etc., on a slab close to the water in the company of cowherd boys. (29) Beholding fully gratified bulls, calves and cows weary with the weight of their udders, sitting on the green meadows and ruminating with their eyes closed, as well as the aforesaid splendour of the rainy season, enhanced by His own (enrapturing) energy and bringing delight to (all) created beings, the Lord welcomed them all. (30-31)

एवं निवसतोस्तस्मिन् रामकेशवयोर्व्रजे । शरत् समभवद् व्यभ्रा स्वच्छाम्बुपरुषानिला । १३२ ।

* There is a pun on the word Guṇa, which denotes an attribute as well as a string.

शरदा नीरजोत्पत्त्या नीराणि प्रकृतिं ययुः। भ्रष्टानामिव चेतांसि पुनर्योगनिषेधवा। ३३।
 व्योम्नोऽब्दं भूतशाबल्यं भुवः पङ्कमपां मलम्। शरङ्गहारश्रमिणां कृष्णे भक्तिर्यथाशुभम्। ३४।
 सर्वस्वं जलदा हित्वा विरेजुः शुभ्रवर्चसः। यथा त्यक्तैषणाः शान्ता मुनयो मुक्तकिल्बिषाः। ३५।
 गिरयो मुमुचुस्तोयं क्वचिन्न मुमुचुः शिवम्। यथा ज्ञानामृतं काले ज्ञानिनो ददते न वा। ३६।
 नैवाविदन् क्षीयमाणं जलं गाधजलेचराः। यथाऽऽयुस्त्वहं क्षय्यं नरा मूढाः कुटुम्बिनः। ३७।
 गाधवारिचरास्तापमविन्दञ्छरदर्कजम्। यथा दरिद्रः कृपणः कुटुम्ब्यविजितेन्द्रियः। ३८।
 शनैः शनैर्जहुः पङ्कं स्थलान्यामं च वीरुधः। यथाहंममतां धीराः शरीरादिभ्रुनात्वमु। ३९।
 निश्चलाम्बुरभूतूर्णां समुद्रः शरदागमे। आत्मनूपरते सम्यङ्मुनिर्व्युपरातागमः। ४०।
 केदारेभ्यस्त्वपोऽगृह्णन् कवका दृढसेतुभिः। यथा प्राणैः स्रवज्ज्ञानं तत्रिरोधेन योगिनः। ४१।
 शरदकांशुजान्तापान् भूतानामुडुपोऽहरत्। देहाभिमानजं बोधो मुकुन्दो ब्रजयोषिताम्। ४२।
 खमशोभत निमेषं शरद्विमलतारकम्। सत्त्वयुक्तं यथा चित्तं शब्दब्रह्मार्थदर्शनम्। ४३।
 अखण्डमण्डलो व्योम्नि रराजोडुगणैः शशी। यथा यदुपतिः कृष्णो दृष्णिचक्रावृतो भुवि। ४४।
 आश्लिष्य समशीतोष्णं प्रसूनवनमारुतम्। जनास्तापं जहृगोय्यो न कृष्णहतचेतसः। ४५।
 गावो मृगाः खगा नार्यः पुष्पिण्यः शरदाभवन्। अन्वीयमानाः स्ववृषैः फलैरीशक्रिया इव। ४६।
 उदह्वयन् वारिजानि सूर्योत्थाने कुमुदं विना। राज्ञा तु निर्भया लोका यथा दस्यून् विना नृप। ४७।
 पुरग्रामेष्वाग्रयणैरैन्द्रियैश्च महोत्सवैः। बभौ भूः पक्वसस्याद्या कलाभ्यां नितरां हरैः। ४८।
 वणिङ्मुनिनृपस्त्राता निर्गम्यार्थान् प्रपेदिरे। वर्षरुद्धा यथा सिद्धाः स्वपिण्डान् काल आगते। ४९।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे प्रादुर्दशदर्शने नाम विंशोऽध्यायः। २०।

While Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva) thus dwell in Vraja, there fully set in the autumnal season free from clouds and characterized by crystal waters and gentle breezes. (32) Due to the autumn, marked with the appearance of lotuses, waters regained their transparency (even) as the minds of those that have strayed from (the path of) Yoga recover their purity by resuming the practice of Yoga. (33) The autumn drove away the clouds from the sky, relieved the congestion of living beings (occasioned by the overgrowth of creatures), dried up the mire on the earth and eliminated the turbidity of water (even) as devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa puts an end to all evil besetting those belonging to the (four) Āśramas (stages in life). (34) Having discharged all their wealth (in the form of water), the clouds shone forth in their white lustre (even) like ascetics that have given up (all forms of) desire (viz., the desire for progeny, the hankering for wealth and the ambition for glory) and have shed their impurity (in the shape of) tendency to action and have (consequently become composed. (35) As some places the mountains released their pure water whereas at other places they did not, (even) as enlightened souls impart their nectar-like wisdom on some (opportune) occasions (to the qualified), while at other times they do not. (36) The creatures living in shallow waters did not at all notice the water diminishing (everyday), (even) as stupid householders do not perceive their span of life shortening everyday. (37) Like a destitute and helpless householder, who has not been able to subdue his senses, suffering hardships, the creatures living in shallow waters experienced the heat radiated by the autumnal sun. (38) (Virgin) tracts of land gradually gave up their moisture and the plants their unripe state, (even) as the wise slowly give up the sense of identification with, and the feeling of mineness with respect to, the body etc., which are not the self. (39) On the advent of the autumn the ocean became calm and quiet (even) as an ascetic is relieved of his recitation of the Vedas when his mind is completely at rest. (40) Cultivators checked the water going out of the fields by means of strong dams (even) as those practising Yoga preserve the wisdom flowing out through the senses by controlling the latter. (41) The moon alleviated the suffering of living beings caused by the rays of the autumnal sun, (even) as (the dawn of) wisdom puts an end to the miseries born of one's identification with the body or as Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of liberation) relieved the agony (caused by their separation from Him) of the women of Vraja. (42) The cloudless sky looked charming (at night) with its stars twinkling brightly due to the autumnal season (even) like the mind with the quality of Sattva predominating in it and revealing the (correct) import of the Vedas. (43) The full moon shone in the firmament with the hosts of stars (even) as on the earth did Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Protector of the Yadus, surrounded by the circle of Vṛṣṇis. (44) Embracing the temperate breeze that blew from the woods in (full) blossom, people dismissed their anguish (occasioned by heat), but not so the cowherd women (of Vraja), whose mind had been captivated by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (inasmuch as it tended to enhance the poignancy of their agony of separation from the Lord caused by His absence from Vraja during the daytime.) (45) Persistently sought by their partners cows, she-deer, female birds and women conceived under the influence of the autumnal season even as works intended to propitiate the Lord are necessarily followed by their fruit. (46) At sunrise (all) aquatic flowers bloomed forthwith the exception of water-lilies, even as (all) people barring the thieves are rendered fearless under a (good) king. (47) Enriched with ripe corns the earth looked happy with (Vedic) sacrifices carried on with oblations of first fruits at the end of the rainy season as well as with (other) grand festivals conducted for the gratification of the senses in cities and villages, and more so with Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarama (the two Avatāras of Śrī Hari). (48) Going out (at the end of the four months of the rainy season), merchants, recluses, kings and students aimed to return from the house of their preceptor after the completion of their studies—that had been detained* by the rains—(now) realized their ends even as those adept in Yoga and well-versed in Mantras (mystic formulas) etc., impeded by the span of their life, attain ethereal forms earned by them when the (appropriate) time comes. (49)

Thus ends the twentieth discourse entitled "A description of the Rains and Autumn" in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXI

The Song Inspired by the Flute

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थं शरत्त्वच्छजलं पद्माकरसुगन्धिना । न्यविशद् वायुना वातं सगोगोपालकोऽच्युतः । १ ।

कुसुमितवनराजिशुष्मिभृङ्गद्विजकुलशुष्टसरःसरिन्महीध्रम् ।

मधुपतिरवगाह्य चारयन् गाः सहपशुपालबलश्रुकूज वेणुम् । २ ।

* According to Hindu astronomy the four months of the rainy season are regarded as inopportune for commercial trips, expeditions for extending one's dominions, marriages and rambling on the part of recluses.

तद् ब्रजस्त्रिय आश्रित्य वेणुगीतं स्मरोदयम् । काश्चित् परोक्षं कृष्णस्य स्वसखीभ्योऽन्ववर्णयन् । ३ ।
 तद् वर्णयितुमारब्धः स्मरन्त्यः कृष्णचेष्टितम् । नाशकन् स्मरवेगेन विक्षिप्तमनसो नृप । ४ ।
 बर्हापीडं नटवरवपुः कर्णयोः कर्णिकारं बिभ्रद् वासः कनककपिशं वैजयन्तीं च मालाम् ।
 रन्ध्रान् वेणोर्धरसुधया पूरयन् गोपवृन्दैर्वन्दारण्यं स्वपदमणं प्रविशद् गीतकीर्तिः । ५ ।
 इति वेणुरवं राजन् सर्वभूतमनोहरम् । श्रुत्वा ब्रजस्त्रियः सर्वा वर्णयन्त्योऽभिरक्षिरे । ६ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Accompanied by cows and cowherd boys, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) entered deep into the aforesaid forest with its waters made transparent by the autumn and fanned by a breeze charged with the fragrance of lotus-beds. (1) Having entered the forest—the lakes and streams as well as the mountains of which were resonant with the sweet warbling of birds and the (sweet) humming of bees, intoxicated by (the presence of) rows of trees in full bloom—and pasturing the cows in the company of Balarāma and (other) cowherds, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of the Madhus) sounded His flute. (2) Hearing that (entrancing) music of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's flute—which kindled love (in their heart)—some women of Vraja proceeded to celebrate it in song before their female companions (all) out of His sight. (3) Recalling the (loving) gestures of Śrī Kṛṣṇa while commencing to describe the music, they (however) could not, their mind being distracted by the vehemence of love, O protector of men. (4) Exhibiting (before their mental eyes) an exquisite form resembling that of an actor (on the stage), adorned with a crest of peacock feathers, wearing Karṇikāra flowers on His ears, a wreath of flowers of five different colours and a golden cloth (round his loins), and filling the holes of His flute with the nectar of His lips (as it were), the Lord (they felt) entered Vṛndāvana, charming with His footprints (found at every step), His glory being sung by hosts of cowherd boys. (5) Hearing, O Parikṣit, the (said) music of His flute, captivating to the mind of all living beings, and celebrating it (in the following strain), all those women of Vraja mentally embraced the Lord. (6)

गोप्य ऊचुः

अक्षण्वतां फलमिदं न परं विदामः सख्यः पशून्तु विवेशयतोर्वयस्यैः ।
 वक्त्रं ब्रजेशसुतयोरनुवेणु जुष्टं यैर्वा निपीतमनुरक्तकाशमोक्षम् । ७ ।
 चूतप्रवालबर्हस्तवकोत्पलाब्जमालानुपूक्तपरिधानविचित्रवेषां ।
 मध्ये विरेजतुरलं पशुपालगोष्ठ्यां रङ्गे यथा नटवरां क्व च गायमानौ । ८ ।
 गोप्यः किमाचरदयं कुशलं स्म वेणुर्दामोदराधरसुधामपि गोपिकानाम् ।
 भुङ्क्ते स्वयं यदवशिष्टरसं हृदित्यो हृत्पत्त्वचोऽश्रुमुमुचुस्तत्रो यथाऽऽर्याः । ९ ।

The Gopīs sang : This is the prize for those who have eyes, friends; and we know of no greater prize than that enjoyed by those who have feasted their eyes on the countenance—playing on the flute and casting loving glances (all round)—of the two sons of Nanda (the lord of Vraja) as They lead the cattle alongwith their playmates (the cowherd boys). (7) Singing at times amidst a circle of cowherd boys, and picturesquely clad in a garment fitted closely with tender mango leaves, peacock feathers and bunches of flowers (tucked to the curly locks), a pair of lilies (fastened to the ears), a lotus (held in the right hand) and a garland (worn about the neck), (the two Brothers looked most charming like a pair of excellent actors on the stage. (8) O Gopīs, what meritorious act has this flute performed, by virtue of which it freely enjoys (to its heart's content) the nectar flowing from the lips of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was once tied by His mother with a cord at the belly)—though a monopoly of the Gopīs—so that nothing but sweetness is left behind (in those lips) ! (Lo ! the rivers (by whose waters its parent stock—the bamboo—was nourished) appear with their hair standing on end (in the form of the blooming lotuses through rapture), while the (bamboo) trees (themselves) are shedding tears (of joy in the shape of honey) even as the elders of a family are delighted to find their child enjoying the grace of the Lord. (9)

वृन्दावनं सखि भुवो वितनोति कीर्तिं यद् देवकीमुतपदाम्बुजलब्धलक्ष्मि ।

गोविन्दवेणुमनुमत्तमयूरनृत्यं प्रेक्ष्याद्रिसान्धपरतान्यसमस्तसत्त्वम् । १० ।

धन्याः स्म मूढमतयोऽपि हरिण्य एता या नन्दनन्दनमुपात्तविचित्रवेष्टम् ।

आकर्ण्य वेणुरणितं सहकृष्णसाराः पूजां दधुर्विरचितं प्रणयावलोकैः । ११ ।

कृष्णं निरीक्ष्य वनितोत्सवरूपशीलं श्रुत्वा च तत्कणितवेणुविचित्रगीतम् ।

देव्यो विमानगतयः स्मरनुन्नसारा भ्रश्यत्प्रसूनकबरा मुमुहूर्तिर्वीर्यव्यः । १२ ।

गावश्च कृष्णमुखनिर्गतवेणुगीतपीयूषमुत्तथितकर्णपुटैः पिबन्त्यः ।

शावाः स्तुतस्तनपयःकवलाः स्म तस्थुर्गोविन्दमात्मनि दृशाश्चकलाः स्पृशन्त्यः । १३ ।

प्रायो वताम्बु विहगा मुनयो वनेऽस्मिन् कृष्णोक्षितं तदुदितं कलवेणुगीतम् ।

आरुह्य ये द्रुमभुजान् रुचिप्रवालान् शृण्वन्त्यमीलितदृशो विगतान्यावाचः । १४ ।

(The soil of) Vṛndāvana, O friend, enhances the glory of the earth (so as to make it outshine even the heavenly regions) in that the soil has been graced by the lotus-feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the son of Yaśodā*) and (further) because, witnessing the dance of peacocks enraptured to hear (the music of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa's flute (which they mistake for the low rumbling of clouds) all other creatures on the summits of Mount Govardhana cease from every activity (and stand motionless—a thing which is not seen in any other sphere). (10) Blessed indeed are these female deer, though stupid of mind—that, on hearing the music of the flute, offered in the company of the male deer (the black antelopes) worship, performed through their loving glances, to the darling of Nanda, who has put on a wonderful garb. (11) Gazing on Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose comeliness and amiable disposition are a source of joy to the fair sex, and hearing the weird notes of the flute played on by Him, celestial women riding in aerial cars (and embraced by their spouses) stood infatuated, deprived of their presence of mind through love, flowers dropping from their braids and their skirts unsettled. (12) Drinking with the cup of their ears, standing erect, the nectar-like music of flute flowing from Śrī Kṛṣṇa's lips and hugging Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) in their mind on His entering it through their eyes, the cows as well as their calves (that had just been let loose to be suckled by their mothers) stood motionless with drops of tears (in their eyes), the mouths of the latter remaining filled with the draught of milk flowing from the dripping udders (of their mothers), having no strength left in them to swallow the milk. (13) In all probability, Oh mother†, the birds (dwelling) in this forest are (no other than) sages, who—having perched on the boughs of trees clothed with charming foliage (devoid of fruits and flowers) so that they may be able to behold Śrī Kṛṣṇa (without any hindrance) and (since they have no attraction for such fruits and flowers)—hear the dulcet music of the flute poured forth by Him with unwinking

* The word 'Devaki' occurring in the above verse evidently stands for Yaśodā inasmuch as the people of Vraja—and even the outside world—till the death of Karṣa took Śrī Kṛṣṇa to be the son of Yaśodā alone, and we have the evidence of the Viṣṇupurāṇa to show that Yaśodā bore the name of Devaki too—'इह नाम्ना नन्दजाया यशोदा देवकीत्यादि.'

† It is usual with Indian women to address their female companions as mother in moments of ecstasy and specially while pouring out their heart through a song.

(sleepless) eyes, other voices having altogether ceased for them. (The Gopis have evidently concluded this from the fact that perching on the boughs of the tree of the Veda and renouncing the fruit of actions promised in it, sages devote themselves to action alone—corresponding to charming leaves—fixing their mind on the glory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa with the sole object of securing a vision of the Lord). (14)

नद्यस्तदा तदुपचार्य मुकुन्दगीतमावर्तलक्षितमनोभवभग्नवेगाः ।
 आलिङ्गनस्थगितमूर्ध्निभुजैर्मुसुरारैर्हन्ति पादयुगलं कमलोपहाराः । १५ ।
 दृष्ट्वाऽऽतपे ब्रजपशून् सह रामगोपैः सञ्चारयन्तमनुवेणुमुदीरयन्तम् ।
 प्रेमप्रवृद्ध उदितः कुसुमावलीभिः सख्युर्व्याधात् स्ववपुषाम्बुद आतपत्रम् । १६ ।

Hearing the aforesaid music of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) on that occasion, (even) the (inanimate) rivers—that had their rapid flow (towards the ocean, their darling) arrested through love (for Śrī Kṛṣṇa) betrayed by eddies—clasped both the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Slayer of the demon Mura) with the arms of their waves in such a way as to fold them in their embrace, offering lotuses (as a symbol of their heart). (15) Witnessing (with the eyes of lightning) Śrī Kṛṣṇa duly pasturing the cattle of Vraja in the company of Balarāma and the (other) cowherd boys in the (hot) sun and playing on the flute in their rear, a cloud appeared (over His head) and, swollen with love, did the service of an umbrella to its Friend (Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who resembles the cloud in hue and like a cloud allays the suffering of the people) with its body, covering Him (at the same time) with showers of flowers.* (16)

पूर्णाः पुलिन्द उरुगायपदाब्जरागश्रीकुङ्कुमेन दयितास्तनमण्डितेन ।
 तद्दर्शनस्मररुजस्तृणरूषितेन लिप्यन्त्य आननकुचेषु जहस्तदाधिम् । १७ ।
 हन्तायमद्रिरबला हरिदासवर्यो यद् रामकृष्णचरणस्पर्शप्रमोदः ।
 मानं तनोति सहगोगणयोस्तथोर्यत् पानीयसूयवसकन्दरकन्दमूलैः । १८ ।
 गा गोपकैरनुबनं नयतोरुदारवेणुस्वनैः कल्पदैस्तनुधुत्सु सख्यः ।
 अस्पन्दनं गतिमतां पुलकस्तरूपां नयिगपाशकुतलक्षणयोर्विचित्रम् । १९ ।

एवंविधा भगवतो या वृन्दावनचारिणः । वर्णयन्त्यो मिथो गोष्यः क्रीडास्तन्यतयां ययुः । २० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वाध्याये वेणुगीतं नामैकविंशोऽध्यायः । २१ ।

Fully accomplished of their purpose are the Bhīla women who, when smitten with pangs of love at the Lord's sight, dismissed that agony besmearing their face and breasts with the saffron paste (originally) painted on the bosom of His darling and rendered still more charming by contact with the reddish hue of the lotus-feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is widely celebrated) and (ultimately) transferred to the blades of grass (of Vṛndāvana due to His ramblings there). (17) Ah, this mountain (Govardhana), O fair ones, is the foremost of Śrī Hari's servants in that it not only derives supreme joy from the touch of the feet of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (joy which is betrayed by its horripilation in the form of fresh blades of grass), but also extends its hospitality to the two Brothers along with their cows and followers through (the fresh and pure) water (of its cascades), excellent pasture, caves (affording shelter to them) and its (produce in the form of) bulbs and roots. (18) It is most wonderful that due to

* Although the flowers were evidently showered by the gods riding in their aerial cars (Vide verse 12 above), the Gopis in the ecstasy of love imagine them to have been showered by the cloud.

the highly delightful notes, consisting of low and sweet tones, of the flutes of the two Brothers—leading the cows from one forest to another in the company of (other) cowherd boys and distinguished by a string for tying the hind legs of cows while milking them (which they had twined round their heads) and a cord for pulling unruly cows (which they had placed across their shoulder)—there should ensue among the embodied beings, O friends, (complete) lack of movement in those capable of locomotion (including running streams), and a thrill of joy should appear in (the stationary) trees! (19) Recounting to one another such pastimes that pertained to the Lord, who moved about in Vṛndāvana, the Gopis became mentally absorbed in those pastimes (themselves). (20)

*Thus ends the twentyfirst discourse entitled "A Song inspired by the (Lord's) Flute," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXII

The Lord steals away the garments of cowherd maids

श्रीशुक उवाच

हेमन्ते प्रथमे मासि नन्दव्रजकुमारिकाः । चेस्त्वहविष्यं भुञ्जानाः कात्यायन्यर्चनव्रतम् । १ ।
आमुष्याम्भसि कालिन्ध्या जलान्ते चोदितेऽरुणे । कृत्वा प्रतिकृतिं देवीमानचूर्नुप सैकतीम् । २ ।
गन्धैर्माल्यैः सुरभिर्भर्वलिभिर्धूपदीपकैः । उद्यावच्चैश्चोपहारैः प्रवालफलतण्डुलैः । ३ ।
कात्यायनि महामाये महायोगिन्यधोश्चरि । नन्दगोपसुतं देवि पतिं मे कुरु ते नमः ।

इति मन्त्रं जपन्त्यस्ताः पूजां चक्रुः कुमारिकाः । ४ ।

एवं मासं व्रतं चेरुः कुमार्यः कृष्णचेतसः । भद्रकालीं समानचूर्नुभूयान्नन्दसुतः पतिः । ५ ।
उषस्युत्थाय गोत्रैः स्वैरन्योन्यावद्ब्रवाहवः । कृष्णमुच्चैर्जगुर्नान्यः कालिन्ध्यां स्नातुमन्वहम् । ६ ।

Srī Śuka began again : In the first month (Mārgaśīrṣa) of the Hemanta season (consisting of the months of Mārgaśīrṣa and Pauṣa) the maids of Vraja, ruled over by Nanda, observed a vow of worshipping Goddess Kātyāyanī, subsisting on only such food as is fit to be offered to the sacrificial fire. (1) Having taken a dip in the waters of the Kāliṇḍī (Yamunā) at daybreak and making an image of sand on the river bank, they worshipped the Goddess (in that image), O protector of men, with sandal-paste etc., fragrant flowers, propitiatory oblations (such as cocoanut), incense and lights, other offerings (such as articles of wearing apparel, ornaments etc.), high and low, as well as with tender leaves, fruits and (unbroken) grains of rice. (2-3) The aforesaid virgins performed worship, each muttering the following prayer—"Goddess Kātyāyanī, the great deluding potency (of the Lord), possessed of infinite Yogic powers, O supreme Ruler (of the universe in a female form), (pray) make Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Darling of Nanda, the cowherd chief) my husband ! Hail to You !" (4) With their mind (and heart) set on Śrī Kṛṣṇa the maidens thus observed the (sacred) vow for a (whole) month and worshipped Goddess Bhadrakālī with due ceremony praying: "Let the Darling of Nanda be our husband." (5) Rising early in the morning when called by their names (by other girls), they loudly sang the praises of Śrī Kṛṣṇa as they went with their hands mutually clasped to bathe in the Kālinḍī everyday. (6)

नद्यां कदाचिदागत्य तीरे निक्षिप्य पूर्ववत् । वासांसि कृष्णं गायन्त्यो विजह्वः सलिले मुदा । ७ ।

भगवांस्तदभिप्रेत्य कृष्णो योगेश्वरेश्वरः । वयस्यैरावृतस्तत्र गतस्तत्कर्मसिद्धये । ८ ।

तासां वासांस्युपादाय नीपमारुह्य सत्वरः । हसद्भिः प्रहसन् बालैः परिहासमुवाच ह । ९ ।

अत्रागत्याबलाः कामं स्वं स्वं वासः प्रगृह्यताम् । सत्यं ब्रवाणि नो नर्म यद् यूयं व्रतकर्षिताः । १० ।

न मयोदितपूर्वं वा अनृतं तदिमे विदुः । एकैकशः प्रतीच्छन्त्यं सहैवोत सुमध्यमाः । ११ ।

Arriving at the river on a certain day (the last day of the month, viz., the full moon, when they were going to conclude their vow) and leaving their clothes on the bank as usual, they merrily sported in the water glorifying Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (7) Coming to know of this and surrounded by His companions, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of (all) Masters of Yoga, went there in order to reward their act (of worship). (8) Taking their clothes, He hastily climbed up a Kadamba tree (near by) and, indulging in fun with the laughing boys, so the tradition goes, jestingly spoke as follows—(9) "Coming here, O maids, receive you each your own raiment at will. I speak the truth and am not jesting since you are (all) exhausted by (observing) the vow. (10) Never has a lie been told by Me before; these boys know it. Take your clothes one by one or all together (as you please), O slender-waisted ones." (11)

तस्य तत् क्ष्वेलितं दृष्ट्वा गोप्यः प्रेमपरिप्लुताः । ब्रीडिताः प्रेक्ष्य चान्योन्यं जातहासा न निर्ययुः । १२ ।

एवं ब्रुवति गोविन्दे नर्मणाऽऽक्षिप्तचेतसः । आकण्ठमग्राः शीतोदे वेपमानास्तमब्रुवन् । १३ ।

मानयं भोः कृथास्त्वां तु नन्दगोपसुतं प्रियम् । जानीमोऽङ्गं ब्रजश्लाघ्यं देहि वासांसि वेपिताः । १४ ।

श्याममुन्दर ते दास्यः करवाम तवोदितम् । देहि वासांसि धर्मज्ञ नो चेद् राज्ञे ब्रुवामहे । १५ ।

Perceiving that joke of the Lord the cowherd maids were overwhelmed with love. Abashed to see one another, they felt inclined to laugh, but did not come out (of the water). (12) When Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) remarked thus, the cowherd maids, whose mind was enraptured by the joke and who stood shivering, immersed as they were up to the neck in the cold water, spoke to Him (as follows):—(13) "Pray, do no wrong by us. We know you well to be the beloved son of Nanda, the cowherd chief, and praised all over Vraja, O dear Kṛṣṇa ! Please return our clothes; we are shivering (with cold). (14) O Fair one with a dark-brown complexion ! we are your servants and are prepared to do your bidding. (Therefore), give back our clothes, O Knower of Dharma (the principles of righteousness) ! If not, we shall report the matter to the king." (15)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

भवत्यो यदि मे दास्यो मयोक्तं वा करिष्यथ । अत्रागत्य स्ववासांसि प्रतीच्छन्तु शुचिस्मिताः । १६ ।

ततो जलाशयात् सर्वा दारिकाः शीतवेपिताः । पाणिभ्यां योनिमाच्छाद्य प्रोतेरुः शीतकर्षिताः । १७ ।

भगवानाह ता वीक्ष्य शुद्धभावप्रसादितः । स्कन्धे निधाय वासांसि प्रीतः प्रोवाच सस्मितम् । १८ ।

यूयं विवस्त्रा यदपो धृतव्रता व्यगाहर्ततस्तद् देवहेलनम् ।

वद्ध्वाङ्गलिं मूर्ध्यपनुत्तयेऽहसः कृत्वा नमोऽधो वसनं प्रगृह्यताम् । १९ ।

इत्यच्युतेनाभिहिता ब्रजाबला मत्वा विवस्त्राप्लवनं व्रतच्युतिम् ।

तत्पूर्तिकामास्तदशेषकर्मणां साक्षात्कृतं नेमुखद्यमृग् यतः । २० ।

तास्तथावनता दृष्ट्वा भगवान् देवकीसुतः । वासांसि ताभ्यः प्रायच्छत् करुणस्तेन तोषितः । २१ ।

दृढं प्रलब्धास्त्रपया च हापिताः प्रस्तोभिताः क्रीडनवच्च कारिताः ।

वस्त्राणि चैवापहतान्यथायम् ता नाभ्यसूयन् प्रियसङ्गनिर्वृताः । १२१ ।

परिधाय स्ववासिं प्रेष्ठसङ्गमसजिताः । गृहीतचित्ता नो चेलुस्तस्मैल्लज्जावितेक्षणाः । १२३ ।

The glorious Lord said : "If you are my servants and if you will do my bidding, come here and receive (from me) your clothes wearing a bright smile (on your lips)." (16) Shivering with cold all the maidens thereupon emerged from the river, shrunken with cold and covering their privy parts with the palms. (17) Perceiving them as good as dead (through great shame), and pleased with their pure heart, the Lord placed the clothes (kept so far on the tree) on His shoulder and, full of love, smilingly said:—(18) "Since, having undertaken a (sacred) vow, you took a dip in the waters in a nude state, that has indeed been an offence on your part against the god of water (which has gone a long way to violate the sanctity of your vow); (therefore), receive your raiment (only) after joining your palms on the crown of your head and bowing low for the expiation of that sin." (19) Realizing their act of plunging in water in a nude state to be a violation of their vow as pointed out in the aforesaid words by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), and seeking the fulfilment of that vow, the maidens of Vraja bowed to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who embodies the fruit of that as well as of all other religious rites); for it is He who washes away all transgressions. (20) Seeing them bent in the aforesaid manner and propitiated through such salutation, the all-merciful Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devakī) returned their clothes. (21) Even though they were badly taken in, nay, stripped of (all) shame, ridiculed and treated as toys, and their clothes too were stolen away, yet they did not find fault with Him, (highly) gratified as they were through the company of their beloved Lord. (22) Having put on their clothes they riveted their bashful looks on Śrī Kṛṣṇa and could not stir (from that place), enthralled as they were by their meeting with their most beloved Lord and their mind having been captivated (by Him). (23)

तासां विज्ञाय भगवान् स्वपादस्पर्शकाम्यया । धृतव्रतानां संकल्पमाह दामोदरोऽबलाः । १२४ ।

संकल्पो विदितः साध्यो भवतीनां मदर्चनम् । मयानुमोदितः सोऽगौ सत्यो भवितुमर्हति । १२५ ।

न मय्यावेशितधियां कामः कामाय कल्पते । भर्जिता कथिता धाना प्रायो बीजाय नेष्यते । १२६ ।

चाताबला व्रजं सिद्धा मयेमा रंस्यथ क्षपाः । यदुद्दिश्य व्रतमिदं चेरुरार्यार्चनं सतीः । १२७ ।

Perceiving the intention of those maidens, that had undertaken the aforesaid vow with a longing to touch His feet, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who had once allowed Himself to be tied with a cord at the abdomen by His mother and thus demonstrated His love for His devotees) addressed the girls (as follows):—(24) "Your desire, O chaste girls, in the shape of eagerness to worship Me is (already) known to Me. (Nay), it has been approved of by Me; (hence) it deserves to materialize. (25) The craving for enjoyment on the part of those whose mind is devoted to Me cannot lead to (further) enjoyment even as seeds of grain (once) fried or boiled are not as a general rule intended to be sown. (26) Go (back), O damsels, to Vraja. You stand accomplished of your purpose and will sport with Me during the coming (autumnal) nights, for which purpose you have observed this vow in the form of worship of the Goddess, O virtuous girls !" (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यादिष्टा भगवता लब्धकामाः कुमारिकाः । ध्यायन्त्यस्तत्पदाम्भोजं कृच्छ्रान्निर्विशुर्ज्रम् । १२८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus commanded by the Lord and having (virtually) realized their ambition, the maidens returned to Vraja with great difficulty, contemplating on His lotus-feet. (28)

अथ गोपैः परिवृतो भगवान् देवकीसुतः । वृन्दावनाद् गतो दूरं चारयन् गाः सहाप्रजः । २९ ।
 निदाघार्कात्पे तिग्मे छायाभिः स्वाभिरात्मनः । आतपत्रायितान् वीक्ष्य द्रुमानाह व्रजौकसः । ३० ।
 हे स्तोककृष्ण हे अंशो श्रीदामन् सुबलार्जुन । विशालर्षभ तेजस्विन् देवप्रस्थ वरूथप । ३१ ।
 पश्यतैतान् महाभागान् परार्थैकान्तजीवितान् । वातवर्षातपहिमान् सहन्तो वारयन्ति नः । ३२ ।
 अहो एषां वरं जन्म सर्वप्राण्युपजीवन्म् । सुजनस्येव येषां वै विमुखा यान्ति नार्थिनः । ३३ ।
 पत्रपुष्पफलच्छायामूलवल्कलदारुभिः । गन्धनिर्यासभस्पास्थितोक्मैः कामान् वितन्वते । ३४ ।
 एतावज्जन्मसाफल्यं देहिनामिह देहिषु । प्राणैरर्थैर्धियावाचा श्रेय एवाचरेत् सदा । ३५ ।
 इति प्रवालस्तवकफलपुष्पदलोत्करैः । तरूणां नम्रशाखानां मध्येन यमुनां गतः । ३६ ।
 तत्र गाः पाययित्वापः समृष्टाः शीतलाः शिवाः । ततो नृप स्वयं गोपाः कामं स्वादु पपुर्जलम् । ३७ ।
 तस्या उपवने कामं चारयन्तः पशून् नृप । कृष्णरामावुपागम्य क्षुधार्ता इदमब्रुवन् । ३८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे गोपीवस्त्रापहारो नाम द्वाविंशोऽध्यायः । २२ ।

Accompanied by cowherd boys and pasturing the cows Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devakī), one day (during the following hot weather), went far away from Vṛndāvana along with His elder brother (Balarāma). (29) Perceiving the trees, which played the role of umbrellas to Him with their shade in the scorching rays of the summer sun, the Lord addressed the cowherd boys of Vraja (as follows):—(30) O Stokakṛṣṇa, Arṇśu, Śrīdāmā, Subala, Arjuna, Viśāla, Rṣabha, Tejasvī, Devaprastha and Varūthapa, look at these highly blessed beings that live solely for others; enduring storm, showers, sunshine and snow (themselves) they ward them off from us ! (31-32) Oh ! enviable is the birth—serving as a means of subsistence to all animate beings—of these trees, approaching which suppliants never return disappointed any more than those that seek a benevolent man. (33) By means of (their) leaves, flowers, fruits, shade, roots, bark and wood as well as with their fragrance, exudation, ashes, coal and tender leaves they gratify the desires of others. (34) This much is the fruitfulness of the birth of embodied creatures in this world that they should constantly do good alone to (other) embodied souls through their life, wealth, intellect and speech. (35) Saying so the Lord arrived at the Yamunā passing through rows of trees whose boughs were bent low with clusters of young leaves, fruits and blossoms as well as with bunches of (other) leaves. (36) Prompting the cows to drink of the very sweet, cool and wholesome waters (of the Yamunā), the cowherd boys then drank, O protector of men, to their heart's content the tasteful water themselves. (37) Pasturing the cattle at will in the grove on the bank of the Yamunā, O king, they approached Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma and, pinched with hunger, spoke as follows. (38)

Thus ends the twenty-second discourse entitled, "The Lord steals away the garments of the cowherd maids", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIII

Redemption of the wives of some Brāhmaṇas engaged in a sacrifice

गोपा ऊचुः

राम राम. महावीर्यं कृष्ण दुष्टनिबर्हण। एषा वै बाधते क्षुन्तस्तच्छान्तिं कर्तुमर्हथः। १।

The cowherd boys said : O Balarāma, the delighter of souls and possessed of extraordinary valour, O Kṛṣṇa, the exterminator of the wicked, this hunger is actually pinching us; (therefore) be pleased to appease it. (1)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति विज्ञापितो गोपैर्भवान् देवकीसुतः। भक्ताया विप्रभार्यायाः प्रसीदन्निदमब्रवीत्। २।
प्रयात देवयजनं ब्राह्मणा ब्रह्मवादिनः। सत्रमाङ्गिरसं नाम ह्यासते स्वर्गकाम्यया। ३।
तत्र गत्वोदनं गोपा याचतास्मद्विसर्जिताः। कीर्तयन्तो भगवत आर्यस्य मम चाभिधाम्। ४।
इत्यादिष्टा भगवता गत्वायाचन्त ते तथा। कृताञ्जलिपुटा विप्रान् दण्डवत् पतिता भुवि। ५।
हे भूमिदेवाः शृणुत कृष्णस्यादेशकारिणः। प्राप्ताञ्जानीत भद्रं वो गोपान् नो रामचोदितान्। ६।

गाश्चारयन्तावविदूर ओदनं रामाच्युतौ वो लयतो बुभुक्षितौ।

तयोर्द्विजा ओदनमर्थिनोर्वदि श्रद्धा च वो यच्छत धर्मवित्तमाः। ७।

दीक्षायाः पशुसंस्थायाः सौत्रामण्याश्च सप्तमाः। अयत्र दीक्षितस्यापि नानमश्नन् हि दुष्यति। ८।
इति ते भगवद्वाच्यां शृण्वन्तोऽपि न शुश्रुवुः। क्षुद्राशा भूरिकर्माणो बालिशा वृद्धमानिनः। ९।
देशः कालः पृथग् द्रव्यं मन्त्रतन्त्रत्विजोऽग्नयः। देवता यजमानश्च क्रतुर्धर्मश्च यन्मयः। १०।
तं ब्रह्म परमं साक्षाद् भगवन्तमधोक्षजम्। मनुष्यदृष्ट्या दुष्पज्ञा मर्त्यात्मानो न मेनिरे। ११।
न ते यदोमिति प्रोचुर्न नेति च परंतप। गोपा निराशाः प्रत्येत्य तथोचुः कृष्णरामयोः। १२।
तदुपाकर्ण्य भगवान् प्रहस्य जगदीश्वरः। व्याजहार पुनर्गोपान् दर्शयँल्लौकिकीं गतिम्। १३।
मां ज्ञापयत पत्नीभ्यः संसर्कणमागतम्। दास्यन्ति काममननं वः स्निग्धा मय्युषिता धिया। १४।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus requested by the cowherd boys, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devaki), who sought to shower His grace on certain Brāhmaṇa matrons devoted to Him, spoke as follows:—(2) "Repair to the sacrificial hall where certain Brāhmaṇas, who are expositors of the Vedas, are actually conducting a sacrificial session, known by the name of Āṅgirasa with a desire to ascend to heaven (after death). (3) Arriving there, O cowherd boys, as despatched by us, and mentioning the name of my venerable brother as well as my own, ask some cooked rice of them." (4) Thus instructed by the Lord, they went and solicited the Brāhmaṇas as directed with joined palms and lying prostrate on the ground (in the following words):—(5) "O Brāhmaṇas (lit., gods on the earth), listen to us! Know us, cowherd boys, to be the servants of Śrī Kṛṣṇa arrived (here) as directed by Balarāma. May Good betide you ! (6) Pasturing their cows not very far (from this place) and stricken with hunger, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) long to have boiled rice from you. Give Them rice, O Brāhmaṇas, when They (earnestly) ask for it, provided you have it and if you possess (any) reverence for Them, foremost as you are of (all) knowers of Dharma (the principles of righteousness). (7) Indeed anyone eating the food cooked in the house even of a householder consecrated for a sacrifice other than the one involving animal slaughter and different from a sacrifice known by the name of Sautrāmaṇi, O most righteous souls, is not defiled (thereby)." (8) Though listening to the aforesaid solicitation of the Lord, the Brāhmaṇas paid no heed to it, cherishing as they did petty hopes (of ascending to heaven from which one is sure to fall one day) though engaged in elaborate undertakings, and ignorant as they were, though accounting themselves advanced (in knowledge). (9) The foolish Brāhmaṇas, who regarded the mortal body as their own self, took no notice of Śrī Kṛṣṇa—who was no other than the almighty Lord Viṣṇu, the supreme Reality, constituting as He does the place and time (for the performance of a sacrifice), the diverse substance (for being offered to the sacrificial fire), the mystic formulas (employed in invoking the various deities and recited at the time of pouring oblations), the procedure (laid down for conducting a sacrifice), the priests (officiating at a sacrifice), the (sacrificial) fires, the divinities (intended to be propitiated through a sacrifice), the sacrificer, the act of sacrifice (itself) as well as the religious merit (resulting from the performance of a sacrifice)—looking upon Him as a mere human being. (10-11) When the Brāhmaṇas neither said "yes" nor did they say "no", O chastiser of foes, the cowherd boys returned disappointed and informed Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma accordingly. (12) On hearing of it the almighty Lord of the universe burst into laughter and spoke to the Gopas again (as follows) in order to show (to them) the conduct of the worldly people (who would) not feel humiliated much less relax their effort even when their prayer was turned down once):—(13) "Communicate to their wives the fact of my having arrived (here) alongwith Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarāma). They will give you food according to your desire, affectionate as they are (by nature) and living as they do in me through their mind." (14)

गत्वा पत्नीशालायां दृष्ट्वाऽऽसीनाः स्वलङ्कृताः। नत्वा द्विजसतीगोपाः प्रश्रिता इदमब्रुवन्। १५।
 नमो वो विप्रपत्नीभ्यो निबोधत वर्चांसि नः। इतोऽविदूरे चरता कृष्णेनेहेषिता वयम्। १६।
 गाश्चारयन् सगोपालैः सरामो दूमागतः। बुभुक्षितस्य तस्यान्नं सानुगस्य प्रदीयताम्। १७।
 श्रुत्वाच्युतमुपायातं नित्यं तद्दर्शनोत्सुकाः। तत्कथाक्षिप्तमनसो बभूवुर्जातसम्भ्रमाः। १८।
 चतुर्विधं बहुगुणमन्नमादाय भाजनैः। अभिसस्युः प्रियं सर्वाः समुद्रमिव निम्नगाः। १९।
 निषिध्यमानाः पतिभिर्भ्रातृभिर्बन्धुभिः सुतैः। भगवत्युत्तमश्लोके दीर्घश्रुतधृताशयाः। २०।
 यमुनोपवनेऽशोकनवपल्लवमण्डिते। विचरन्तं वृतं गोपैः साग्रजं ददुःश्वः स्त्रियः। २१।
 इयामं हिरण्यपरिधिं वनमाल्यबर्हधातुप्रवालनटवेषमनुव्रतांसे।
 विन्यस्तहस्तमितरेण धुनानमब्जं कर्णोत्पलालककपोलमुखाब्जहासम्। २२।
 प्रायः श्रुतप्रियतमोदयकर्णपूर्यस्मिन् निमग्नमनसस्तमथाक्षिरध्नैः।
 अन्तः प्रवेश्य सुचिरं परिरभ्य तापं प्राज्ञं यथाभिमतयो विजहन्निन्द्र। २३।

Presently the cowherd boys went and found the virtuous wives of the Brāhmaṇas seated in the apartment reserved for the wives of the sacrificers, well adorned and, bowing to them, submissively spoke as follows:—(15) "Hail to you, Brāhmaṇa ladies ! (Pray) listen to our words. We have been sent here by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is rambling not very far from this place. (16) Pasturing the cows in the company of (other) cowherd boys and accompanied by Balarāma, he has come far away (from home). Let some food be given to him, hungry as he is alongwith his followers." (17) Hearing of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) having come (so) near, the Brāhmaṇa ladies—who had been ever anxious to have a look at Him, their mind having been lured by His stories—were seized with a flurry. (18) Taking (with them) in vessels excellent food of four* kinds, they all marched towards their beloved Lord, like rivers flowing towards the ocean, even though they were being stopped by their husbands, brothers and other relations, as well as by their sons, their mind being set on the illustrious Lord because of their having heard of Him for a long time. (19-20) The ladies (presently) beheld Śrī Kṛṣṇa sauntering in a grove on the bank of the Yamunā—beautified by fresh leaves of Aśoka trees—surrounded by (other) cowherd boys and accompanied by His elder brother. (21) Dark-brown of hue He had about His loins a golden piece of silk; adorned with a garland of sylvan flowers, peacock feathers and tender leaves and painted with minerals, He presented the appearance of an actor (on the stage); He rested one hand on the shoulder of a devoted companion and was swinging a lotus with the other; He wore a pair of water-lilies on His ears and a smile on His lotus-face, His curly locks hanging on His cheeks. (22) Ushering into their heart by the gates of their eyes Him on whom they had set their mind through the glories of that most loved One—which they had often heard and which had served as an embellishment for their ears—and embracing Him (there) for a pretty long time, they shook off their agony (of separation from Him), even as men with an egotistic turn of mind are rid of their anguish on embracing an enlightened soul, O ruler of men ! (23)

तास्तथा त्यक्तसर्वांशः प्राप्ता आत्मदिदृक्षया । विज्ञायाखिलदृग्द्रष्टा प्राह प्रहसिताननः । १४ ।

स्वागतं वो महाभागा आस्यतां करवाम किम् । यन्नो दिदृक्षया प्राप्ता उपपन्नमिदं हि वः । १५ ।

नन्द्यद्वा मयि कुर्वन्ति कुशलाः स्वार्थदर्शनाः । अर्हेतुक्त्वव्यवहितां भक्तिमात्मप्रिये यथा । १६ ।

प्राणवृद्धिर्भनः स्वात्मदारापत्यधनादयः । यत्सम्पर्कात् प्रिया आसंसतः को न्वपरः प्रियः । १७ ।

तद् यात देवयजनं पतयो वो द्विजातयः । स्वसन्नं पारयिष्यन्ति युष्माभिर्गृहमेधिनः । १८ ।

Even though He had come to know that they had arrived (there) under the aforesaid circumstances (in the teeth of opposition of all their people) with the (sole) desire to see Him and having given up all hopes (of returning to their home and being welcomed again by their husbands and other relations), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Witness of all minds) addressed them as follows with a smiling face:—(24) "Welcome is your visit (to this place), O highly blessed ladies ! Let yourselves be (comfortably) seated. What can We do for you ? It is but proper for you that you have come with a longing to see Me (disregarding all impediments). (25) Surely the wise, who realize their own interests, duly practise disinterested and uninterrupted devotion direct to Me, their own beloved Self. (26) Indeed, who else could be dearer than one's own self, through contact with whom life and intellect, mind and body, kinsfolk, wife, progeny and wealth etc., are dear ? (27) Therefore, return to the sacrificial hall, where your husbands—who are Brāhmaṇa householders—will successfully, conclude their sacrificial session with your help." (28)

पत्य ऊचुः

मैवं विभोर्ऽहं भवान् गदितुं नृशंसं सत्यं कुरुष्व निगमं तव पादमूलम् ।

प्राप्ता वयं तुलसिदाम पदावसृष्टं केशैर्निबोद्धुमतिलङ्घ्य समस्तबन्धून् । १९ ।

गृह्णन्ति नो न पतयः पितरौ सुता वा न भ्रातृबन्धुसुहृदः कुत एव चान्ये ।

तस्माद् भवत्प्रपदयोः पतितत्सनां नो नान्या भवेद् गतिरिन्दम तद् विधेहि । २० ।

* The four kinds of food mentioned in our scriptures are:—

(1) भक्ष्य, that which can be easily gulped, such as porridge;

(2) भोज्य, that which has to be masticated before it can be swallowed;

(3) लेह्य, that which can be licked, e. g., chutney ; and

(4) चोष्य, that which is sucked, e.g., an orange or sugarcane.

The wives (of the Brāhmaṇas) said : It is not becoming of You, O almighty Lord, to utter such cruel words. (Pray) vindicate the Vedic dictum, "One does not return"* (on having attained to Me). Ignoring all our near and dear ones we have sought the soles of Your feet in order to wear on our locks the wreath of Tulasi leaves kicked off (even indifferently at us) by You. (29) Neither our husbands, parents, and sons, nor our brothers, kinsmen and other relations would accept us; how, then, would others receive us ? Therefore, (pray) so ordain, O subduer of foes, that no other asylum may be left to us, whose body has fallen down at the fore part of Your feet. (30)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

पतयो नाभ्यसूयेरन् पितृभ्रातृसुतादयः । लोकाश्च वो मयोपेता देवा अप्यनुमन्वते । ३१ ।

न प्रीतयेऽनुरागाय ह्यङ्गसङ्गो नृणामिह । तन्मनो मयि युञ्जाना अचिरान्मवाप्स्यथ । ३२ ।

The glorious Lord said : Your husbands, parents, brothers, sons and other people will not be angry with you since you have been favoured by Me; (nay) even the gods (over there) approve of your conduct. (31) Indeed bodily contact (with Me) does not tend to the gratification or to heighten the love of men in this world. Therefore, devoting your mind to Me you will attain to Me before long. (32)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्ता द्विजपत्न्यस्ता यज्ञवाटं पुनर्गताः । ते चानसूयवः स्वाभिः स्त्रीभिः सत्रमपारयन् । ३३ ।

तत्रैका विधृता भर्त्रा भगवन्तं यथाश्रुतम् । हृदोपगृह्य विजहौ देहं कर्मानुबन्धनम् । ३४ ।

भगवानपि गोविन्दस्तेनैवात्रेन गोपकान् । चतुर्विधेनाशयित्वा स्वयं च बुभुजे प्रभुः । ३५ ।

एवं लीलानरवपुर्नृलोकमनुशीलयन् । रेमे गोगोपगोपीनां रमयन् रूपवाक्कृतैः । ३६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus addressed (by the Lord), the sages' wives mentioned before returned to the sacrificial grounds. (Nay,) not finding fault with them, the sages too successfully concluded the sacrificial session with the help of their wives. (33) One of those ladies, who was (forcibly) held back by her husband, mentally embraced the Lord even as she had heard of Him, and cast off the body, that had been brought about as a result of her (past) actions. (34) Having fed the cowherd boys with the same food of four kinds, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) too, though all powerful Himself, partook of it (in the end). (35) Thus imitating the ways of men and delighting the cows and cowherds as well as the cowherdesses by His personal charm, speech and doings, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who had assumed a human semblance for the sake of sport) carried on His pastimes (in Vraja). (36)

अथानुस्मृत्य विप्रास्ते अन्वतप्यन् कृतागसः । यद् विश्वेश्वरयोर्वाच्यामहम् नृविडम्बयोः । ३७ ।

दृष्ट्वा स्त्रीणां भगवति कृष्णे भक्तिमलौकिकीम् । आत्मानं च तया हीनमनुतप्ता व्यगर्हयन् । ३८ ।

धिग् जन्म नस्त्रिवद् विद्यां धिग् व्रतं धिग् बहुज्ञताम् । धिक् कुलं धिक् क्रियादाक्ष्यं विमुखा ये त्वधोक्षजे । ३९ ।

नूनं भगवतो माया योगिनामपि मोहिनी । यद् वयं गुरवो नृणां स्वार्थं मुह्यामहे द्विजाः । ४० ।

अहो पश्यत नारीणामपि कृष्णे जगद्गुरौ । दुरन्तभावं योऽविध्यन्मृत्युपाशान् गृहाभिधान् । ४१ ।

नासां द्विजातिरसंस्कारो न निवासो गुरावपि । न तपो नात्ममीमांसा न शौचं न क्रियाः शुभाः । ४२ ।

अथापि ह्युत्तमश्लोके कृष्णे योगेश्वरेश्वरे । भक्तिर्दृढा न चात्माकं संस्कारादिमतामपि । ४३ ।

ननु स्वार्थविमूढानां प्रमत्तानां गृहेहया । अहो नः स्मारयामास गोपवाक्यैः सतां गतिः । ४४ ।
 अन्यथा पूर्णकामस्य कैवल्यद्याशिषां पतेः । ईशितव्यैः किमस्माभिरीशस्यैतद् विडम्बनम् । ४५ ।
 हित्वान्यान् भजते ये श्रीः पादस्पृशशया सकृत् । आत्मदोषापवर्गेण तद्याच्चा जनमोहिनी । ४६ ।
 देशः कालः पृथग्द्रव्यं मन्त्रतन्त्रविजोऽग्नयः । देवता यजमानश्च क्रतुर्धर्मश्च यन्मयः । ४७ ।
 स एष भगवान् साक्षाद् विष्णुर्योगेश्वरेश्वरः । जातो यदुष्टित्यश्रूणम् ह्यपि मूढा न विचारे । ४८ ।
 अहो वयं धन्यतमा येषां नस्तादृशीः स्त्रियः । भक्त्या यासां मतिर्जाता अस्माकं निश्चला हरौ । ४९ ।
 नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते कृष्णायकुण्ठमेधसे । यन्मायामोहितधियो भ्रमामः कर्मवर्त्मसु । ५० ।
 स वै न आद्यः पुरुषः स्वमायामोहितात्मनाम् । अविज्ञातानुभावानां क्षन्तुमर्हत्यतिक्रमम् । ५१ ।

Presently the aforesaid Brāhmaṇas were filled with remorse to realize (through the fellowship of their pious and devoted wives) that they had committed an offence in that they turned down the solicitation of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Rulers of the universe), who were behaving as men. (37) Perceiving the transcendent devotion of their womenfolk to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa and full of regret to find themselves devoid of it, they severely condemned themselves (as follow):—(38) "Fie upon our threefold birth (in the shape of our being born of Brāhmaṇa parents, investiture with the sacred thread and consecration for the sacrifice in which we are engaged) and learning (mastery of the Vedas); fie upon our sacred vow (of continence for the period of the sacrifice); fie upon our versatile knowledge; fie upon our pedigree and fie upon our proficiency in rituals when we have actually turned our face away from Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is above sense-perception). (39) Indeed the Lord's Māyā (deluding potency) is capable of infatuating even those who are adept in Yoga (abstract meditation). That is why we, who are Brāhmaṇas and (therefore) teachers of men, are ignorant of our real interest.(40) O look at the devotion even of (our) women to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Father of the universe, the depth of which cannot be easily fathomed by us and which has cut asunder the snares of death going by the name of household ties (that bound them) ! (41) Neither was the purificatory rite, (viz., that of investiture with the sacred thread) which is peculiar to the males of the twice-born classes undergone by them, nor did they reside in the preceptor's house (for learning the Vedas). No austerities were ever performed by them, nor was any enquiry made about the Spirit. Nor is purity (of personal habits) seen in them, nor (again) do any virtuous acts characterize them. (42) Yet there is actually found in them unswerving devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa of excellent renown, the Lord of (all) masters of Yoga: while it does not appear in us, who have undergone the aforesaid purificatory rite and are endowed with all the other qualifications (mentioned in the foregoing verse). (43) Oh, the Lord (who is the mainstay and the goal of the virtuous) awakened through the words of the cowherd boys us, who were surely deluded in the matter of our (real) self-interest and whose judgment had been vitiated by our household activities! (44) Otherwise what could He gain through us, who are subject to His control—He who has all His desires fulfilled and who is capable of bestowing all blessings, the highest of them being final beatitude ? And His begging food of us (too) was a mere imitation. (45) Supplication (for boiled rice) on the part of the Lord—whom Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) constantly waits upon with the hope of securing the touch of His feet, renouncing all others (Brahmā and so on, who sought Her favour) and giving up Her own faults of fickleness etc.—deludes the (common) people. (46) We have actually heard that the selfsame Lord Viṣṇu, the Ruler of (all) masters of Yoga—who constitutes the time and place of performing a sacrifice, the diverse substances (intended for being offered to the sacrificial fire), the mystic formulae (employed for invoking the various deities and recited while pouring oblations into the sacred fire), the procedure of conducting a sacrifice, the priests officiating at a sacrifice, the sacrificial fires, the divinities (sought to be propitiated through a sacrifice), the sacrificer, the act of sacrifice (itself) and the religious merit (flowing from a sacrificial performance)—has Himself appeared in the race of the Yadus; yet we could not recognize Him, fools that we are. (47-48) Oh most blessed are we, in whose lot have fallen such wives as these, through whose devotion our mind (too) has been irrevocably fixed on Śrī Hari. (49) Hail to You, the almighty Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose intellect knows no obstruction. It is (only) because our judgment has been clouded by Your Māyā (deluding potency) that we are wandering in the alleys of Karma. (50) May that most ancient Person be pleased as a matter of fact to forgive the transgression on our part, who did not know His glory, infatuated as we were by His Māyā." (51)

इति स्वाधमनुसृत्य कृष्णे ते कृतहेलनाः । दिदृक्ष्वोऽप्यच्युतयोः कंसाद् भीता न चाचलन् । ५२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे परमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे यज्ञपत्न्युद्धरणं नाम त्रयोविंशोऽध्यायः । २३ ।

Recalling thus their own offence again and again the aforesaid Brāhmaṇas, who had shown disrespect to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (by turning a deaf ear to His request for being supplied with boiled rice), did not stir out, afraid as they were of Kāṁsa, though eager to behold the two immortal Brothers. (52)

Thus ends the twenty-third discourse entitled "The Redemption of the wives of some Brāhmaṇas engaged in a sacrifice", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIV

The Lord stops the sacrifice to Indra

श्रीशुक उवाच

भगवानपि तत्रैव बलदेवेन संयुतः । अपश्यन्निवसन् गोपानिन्द्रयागकृतोद्यमान् । १ ।
तदभिज्ञोऽपि भगवान् सर्वात्मा सर्वदर्शनः । प्रश्नयावनतोऽपृच्छद् वृद्धान् नन्दपुरोगमान् । २ ।
कथ्यतां मे पितः कोऽयं सम्भ्रमो व उपागतः । किं फलं कस्य चोद्देशः केन वा साध्यते मयः । ३ ।
एतद् ब्रूहि महान् कामो मद्यं शुश्रूषवे पितः । न हि गोप्यं हि साधूनां कृत्यं सर्वात्मनामिह । ४ ।
अस्त्यस्वपरदृष्टीनाममित्रोदात्तविद्विषाम् । उदासीनोऽरिवद् वर्ज्यं आत्मवत् सुहृदुच्यते । ५ ।
ज्ञात्वाज्ञात्वा च कर्माणि जनोऽयमनुतिष्ठति । विदुषः कर्मसिद्धिः स्यात्तथा नविदुषो भवेत् । ६ ।
तत्र तावत् क्रियायोगो भवतां किं विचारितः । अथवा लौकिकस्तमे पृच्छतः साधु भयपताम् । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Dwelling in the same land of Vraja accompanied by Baladeva, Śrī Kṛṣṇa too saw the cowherds engaged in preparations for the worship of Indra (the god of rain). (1) Though aware of it, the Lord, who is the Indweller of all (hearts) and all-perceiving and was (yet) bent low with humility, enquired of the elderly people (of Vraja): the leader of whom was Nanda, (as follows):—(2) "It may kindly be pointed out to me, O father, what is this occasion for (unusual) flutter come up before you ? What will be the fruit (of it) ? For whom is it intended ? And by whom and through what materials is this sacrifice going to be performed ? (3) (Kindly) tell me this, eager as I am to hear it, O father ! Great is my longing

(for it). Indeed no undertaking, in this world, of pious souls—who look upon all as their own self, in whose eyes none is their own or alien and who have no friend, neutral or enemy—is secret. (Of course, where this is not the case) a neutral (too) ought to be shunned like an enemy, whereas a friend has been declared to be as good as one's own self (and hence nothing should be kept secret from him). (4-5) People perform actions either deliberately (after weighing their consequences) or without deliberation. But success does not attend the actions of a thoughtless man as it crowns those of a thoughtful person. (6) Of such actions, then, has this expedient in the form of ritual been considered by you ? Or, does it follow the course of the world ? (Pray,) explain this fully to me, inquisitive as I am." (7)

नन्द उवाच

पर्जन्यो भगवानिन्द्रो मेघास्तस्यात्ममूर्त्यः । तेऽभिर्वर्षन्ति भूतानां प्रीणनं जीवनं पयः । ८ ।
 तं तात वयमन्ये च वार्ष्णेयं पतिमीश्वरम् । द्रव्यंस्तद्रेतसा सिद्धैर्यजन्ते क्रतुभिर्नराः । ९ ।
 तच्छेषेणोपजीवन्ति त्रिवर्गफलहेतवे । पुंसां पुरुषकाराणां पर्जन्यः फलभावनः । १० ।
 य एवं विसृजेद् धर्मं पारम्ययागतं नरः । कामाल्लोभाद् भयाद् द्वेषात् स वै नाप्नोति शोभनम् । ११ ।

Nanda replied : The all-powerful Indra is the god of rain, the clouds being his (so many) manifestations dear as his own self. They pour forth water, which is the delight and life of living beings. (8) We and other men, O darling, worship the aforesaid almighty ruler of the clouds through sacrificial performances conducted by means of substances produced with the water discharged by him, and subsist on the remains of such sacrifices for the attainment of the threefold reward in the shape of religious merit, enjoyment and worldly possessions. (In this way) it is Indra who yields the fruit (in the shape of a bumper crop) of men's efforts (in the form of agriculture). (9-10) The man who relinquishes a religious practice that has come down thus through successive generations from love of enjoyment, greed, fear (of opposition) or prejudice, surely does not achieve good results. (11)

श्रीसुक उवाच

वचो निशम्य नन्दस्य तथान्येषां ब्रजौकसाम् । इन्द्राय मन्युं जनयन् पितरं प्राह केशवः । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing the reply of Nanda and the other inhabitants of Vraja, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva) addressed His father (as follows) in order to rouse the anger of Indra (and thereby crush his pride). (12)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

कर्मणा जायते जन्तुः कर्मणैव विलीयते । सुखं दुःखं भयं क्षेमं कर्मणैवाभिपद्यते । १३ ।
 अस्ति चेदीश्वरः कश्चित् फलरूपेण कर्मणाम् । कर्तारं भजते सोऽपि न ह्यकर्तुः प्रभुर्हि सः । १४ ।
 किमिन्द्रेणेह भूतानां स्वस्वकर्मानुवर्तिनाम् । अनीशेनान्यथा कर्तुं स्वभावविहितं नृणाम् । १५ ।
 स्वभावतन्त्रो हि जनः स्वभावमनुवर्तते । स्वभावस्थमिदं सर्वं सदेवासुरमानुषम् । १६ ।
 देहानुष्ठावचाञ्जनुः प्राप्योत्सृजति कर्मणा । शत्रुर्मित्रमुदासीनः कर्मैव गुरुरीश्वरः । १७ ।
 तस्मात् सम्पूजयेत् कर्म स्वभावस्थः स्वकर्मकृत् । अञ्जसा येन वर्तेत तदेवास्य हि दैवतम् । १८ ।
 आजीव्यैकर्तारं भावं यस्वन्यमुपजीवति । न तस्माद् विन्दते क्षेमं जारं नार्यसती यथा । १९ ।
 वर्तेत ब्रह्मणा विप्रो राजन्यो रक्षया भुवः । वैश्यस्तु वार्तया जीवेच्छुद्रस्तु द्विजसेवया । २० ।
 कृषिवाणिज्यगोरक्षा कुसीदं तुर्यमुच्यते । वार्ता चतुर्विधा तत्र वयं गोवृत्तयोऽनिशम् । २१ ।

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति स्थित्युत्पत्त्यन्तहेतवः । रजसोत्पद्यते विश्वमन्योन्यं विविधं जगत् । २२ ।
 रजसा चोदिता मेधा वर्षन्त्यमूनि सर्वतः । प्रजास्तैरेव सिद्ध्यन्ति महेन्द्रः किं करिष्यति । २३ ।

The glorious Lord said : A creature is born by force of Karma (past actions), by force of Karma alone it dies and by force of Karma itself it experiences pleasure and pain, is subjected to fear and enjoys security. (13) If there is any supreme Ruler who dispenses the fruit of others' actions, he too rewards or punishes (only) the doer; indeed he has no authority over him who does nothing. (14) What have created beings—that follow each the course of its own action in this world—to do with Indra, who is incapable of altering the course of actions performed by men according to their individual nature ? (15) Indeed every created being is a slave to its nature and follows its own natural disposition. The whole of this creation including gods, demons and human beings has its being in nature. (16) By force of Karma a soul takes (diverse) corporeal forms, high and low, and quits them. Karma alone appears in the form of an enemy, a friend or a neutral and Karma alone is our preceptor and almighty Lord. (17) Therefore, sticking to the Varṇa (grade of society) and Āśrama (stage in life) determined by one's own nature and performing one's own duty, one should duly worship Karma alone. In fact, that alone is one's deity by which one lives happily (in this world). (18) Depending on a particular deity, he who worships another does not derive happiness from the latter any more than an unchaste woman who loves a paramour. (19) A Brāhmaṇa should live by (the teaching and exposition of) the Vedas; a Kṣatriya, by protecting the land; a Vaiśya, by (what is known as) Vārtā; while a Śūdra should live by service (rendered) to the (aforesaid) twice-born classes. (20) Vārtā is said to be of four kinds, viz., agriculture, commerce and rearing the bovine race, usury being the fourth. Out of these (four) the cow has ever been our (only) means of subsistence. (21) (The qualities of) Sattva, Rajas and Tamas are severally the cause of the continuance, appearance and dissolution (of the universe); it is through (the quality of) Rajas that by mutual union (of the male and female) is brought forth the heterogenous universe. (22) Impelled by Rajas, clouds shower water all round. It is through such water that living beings achieve their purpose (of getting their food etc.). What has Mahendra to do with this ? (23)

न नः पुरो जनपदा न ग्रामा न गृहा वयम् । नित्यं वनौकसस्तात वनशैलनिवासिनः । २४ ।
 तस्माद् गवां ब्राह्मणानामद्रेक्षारभ्यतां मखः । य इन्द्रयागसम्भारास्तैरयं साध्यतां मखः । २५ ।
 पच्यन्तां विविधाः पाकाः सूपान्ताः पायसादयः । संयावापूपशकुल्यः सर्वदोहश्च गृह्यताम् । २६ ।
 ह्यन्तामग्रयः सम्यग् ब्राह्मणैर्ब्रह्मवादिभिः । अन्नं बहुविधं तैश्चो देयं वो धेनुदक्षिणाः । २७ ।
 अन्येभ्यश्चाश्वचाण्डालपतितेभ्यो यथाहृतः । यवसं च गवां दत्त्वा गिरये दीयतां बलिः । २८ ।
 खलङ्कृता भुक्वन्तः खनुलिप्ताः सुवाससः । प्रदक्षिणं च कुरुत गोविप्रानलपर्वतान् । २९ ।
 एतन्मम मतं तात क्रियतां यदि रोचते । अयं गोब्राह्मणादीनां मह्यं च दयितो मखः । ३० ।

There are neither cities nor territories nor villages nor houses in our possession. We have ever had our abode in the forest, dwelling as we do in woodlands and on mountains. (24) Therefore, let there be instituted a worship of cows, the Brāhmaṇas and the mountain (Govardhana). Let this worship be accomplished with those very materials that have been brought together for the worship of Indra. (25) Let different varieties of cooked food from rice boiled in milk with sugar down to boiled pulses including Saṁyāva (a kind of porridge made of wheat flour with milk and ghee etc.), buns and cakes be prepared and let all the milk be collected. (26) Let fires be properly fed with offerings by Brāhmaṇas who are expositors of the Vedas. Let excellent food be offered to them by you as well as cows and sacrificial fees. (27) Food should also be given to (all) others down to the dog, the pariah and the fallen as may be deemed proper. And after supplying grass to the cows let the (aforesaid articles of) food be offered to the mountain. (28) Duly adorned after taking your meals, artistically painted with sandal-paste etc., and decently dressed, go you round the cows, the Brāhmaṇas, the sacred fires and the mountain, keeping them to your right (as a mark of respect). (29) Let this view of mine be adopted, O father, if it pleases you. This worship will be dear to the cows, the Brāhmaṇas and the mountain as well as to myself. (30)

श्रीशुक उवाच

कालात्मना भगवता शक्रदर्पं जिघांसता । प्रोक्तं निश्चयं नन्दाद्याः साध्वगृह्णन्त तद्वचः । ३१ ।
तथा च व्यदधुः सर्वं यथाऽऽह मधुसूदनः । वाचयित्वा स्वस्त्ययनं तद् द्रव्येण गिरिद्विजान् । ३२ ।
उपहृत्य बलीन् सर्वानादृता यवसं गवाम् । गोधनानि पुस्तकृत्य गिरिं चक्रुः प्रदक्षिणम् । ३३ ।
अनास्यनदुद्युक्तानि ते चारुह्य स्वलङ्कृताः । गोप्यश्च कृष्णवीर्याणि गायन्त्यः सद्भिर्जाशिषः । ३४ ।
कृष्णस्त्वन्यतमं रूपं गोपविश्रम्भणं गतः । शैलोऽस्मीति ब्रुवन् भूरि बलिमादद बृहद्वपुः । ३५ ।
तस्मै नमो ब्रजजनैः सह चक्रेऽत्मनाऽऽत्मने । अहो पश्यत शैलोऽसौ रूपी नोऽनुग्रहं व्यधात् । ३६ ।
एषोऽवजानतो मर्त्यान् कामरूपी वनौकसः । हन्ति ह्यस्मै नमस्यामः शर्मणे आत्मनो गवाम् । ३७ ।
इत्यद्रिगोद्विजमखं वासुदेवप्रणोदिताः । यथा विधाय ते गोपाः सहकृष्णा ब्रजं ययुः । ३८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे चतुर्विंशोऽध्यायः । २४ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Hearing the words uttered by the Lord, who in the form of the Time-Spirit sought to crush the pride of Indra, Nanda and others received His advice with approbation and did everything (precisely) as Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Destroyer of the demon Madhu) had said. After getting benedictory verses recited (by the Brāhmaṇas) and respectfully offering all the varieties of food out of the oblations meant for Indra to the mountain and the Brāhmaṇas and grass to the cows they as well as the cowherd women, who were well-adorned and were celebrating the exploits of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, rode in their bullock-carts and placing their cattle-wealth ahead of them went round the mountain keeping it to their right, the Brāhmaṇas pronouncing their benedictions. (31—34) Having assumed another peculiar form, that created confidence in the mind of the cowherds (to whom the mountain was represented as a god), Śrī Kṛṣṇa in that gigantic personality consumed the abundant mass of offerings saying, "I am the mountain (Govardhana) !" (35) Alongwith the people of Vraja, Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself offered His greetings to that (other) Self of His, saying, "Oh ! look here, appearing in a visible form this mountain has shown his grace to us. (36) Taking any form at will this deity actually kills such mortals as dwelling in the forest show disrespect to him. (Hence) for our own welfare as well as for that of the bovine race we bow to him." (37) Having thus performed with due ceremony the worship of mount Govardhana, the cows and the Brāhmaṇas as particularly directed by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Vasudeva), the said cowherds returned to Vraja alongwith Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (38)

Thus ends the twenty-fourth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXV

The Lord lifts up Mount Govardhana

श्रीशुक उवाच

इन्द्रस्तदाऽऽत्मनः पूजां विज्ञाय विहतां नृप। गोपेभ्यः कृष्णनाथेभ्यो नन्दादिभ्यश्चकोप सः । १ ।
गणं सांवर्तकं नाम मेधानां चान्तकारिणाम्। इन्द्रः प्राचोदयत् क्रुद्धो वाक्यं चाहेशमान्युत । २ ।
अहो श्रीमदमाहात्म्यं गोपानां काननौकसाम्। कृष्णं मर्त्यमुपाश्रित्य ये चक्रुर्देवहेलनम् । ३ ।
यथादुर्दैः कर्ममयैः क्रतुभिर्नामनौनिभैः। विद्यामान्वीक्षिकीं हित्वा तितीर्षन्ति भवार्णवम् । ४ ।
वाचालं बालिशं स्तब्धमज्ञं पण्डितमानिनम्। कृष्णं मर्त्यमुपाश्रित्य गोपा मे चक्रुरप्रियम् । ५ ।
एषां श्रियावल्लभानां कृष्णोनाध्यायितात्मनाम्। धुनुत श्रीमदस्तम्भं पशून् नयत संक्षयम् । ६ ।
अहं चैरावतं नागमारुह्यानुव्रजे व्रजम् । परदूर्णमहावीर्यैर्नन्दगोष्ठजिघांसाया । ७ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Then, coming to know of his worship having been stopped, O Protector of men, the aforesaid Indra became angry with Nanda and the other Gopas, who looked upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa as their Protector. (1) The indignant Indra mobilized the host of destructive clouds known as the Sāhmavartaka host (so-called because it is ordinarily released only during the period of dissolution of the universe), and issued the following command, regarding himself as he did to be the supreme ruler:—(2) "Oh, the greatness of pride—begotten of wealth—of the cowherds dwelling in the forest, who have despised a divinity (in my person), depending as they do on Kṛṣṇa a (mere) mortal! (3) Even as those devoted to rituals seek to cross the ocean of mundane existence by recourse to sacrificial performances consisting of rituals passing for boats in name alone and (wholly) undependable, giving up the signs of self-realization, so having taken shelter under Kṛṣṇa—a garrulous, foolish, arrogant and ignorant mortal, though thinking himself to be a great scholar—the cowherds, have given offence to me. (4-5) Get rid of the stiffness—caused by pride of wealth—of these Gopas, who have grown arrogant through affluence and whose mind has been puffed up by Kṛṣṇa; and bring their cattle to destruction. (6) Riding my elephant, Airāvata, I too am following upon your heels to Vraja alongwith the wind-gods, who are possessed of great prowess, with intent to annihilate to Nanda's Vraja." (7)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थं मघवताऽऽज्ञप्ता मेघा निर्मुक्तबन्धनाः। नन्दगोकुलमासारैः पीडयामासुरोजसा । ८ ।
विद्योतमाना विद्युद्भिः स्तनन्तः स्तनयितुभिः। तीव्रैर्मरुद्गणैर्नुन्ना ववृषुर्जलशंकराः । ९ ।
स्थूणास्थूला वर्षधारा मुञ्चत्स्वप्नेषुभीक्ष्णशः। जलौघैः प्लाव्यमाना भूर्नादृश्यत नतोन्नतम् । १० ।
अत्यासारातिवातेन पशवो जातवेपनाः। गोपा गोप्यश्च शीतार्ता गोविन्दं शरणं ययुः । ११ ।
शिरः सुतांश्च कायेन प्रच्छाद्यासारपीडिताः। वेपमाना भगवतः पादमूलमुपावयुः । १२ ।
कृष्ण कृष्ण महाभाग त्वत्रार्थं गोकुलं प्रभो। त्रातुमर्हसि देवात्रः कुपिताद् भक्तवत्सल । १३ ।
शिलावर्षनिपातेन हन्यमानमचेतनम्। निरीक्ष्य भगवान् मेने कुपितेन्द्रकृतं हरिः । १४ ।
अपस्वृत्युल्बणं वर्षमतिवातं शिलामयम्। स्वयागे विहतेऽस्माभिरिन्द्रो नाशाय वर्षति । १५ ।
तत्र प्रतिविधिं सम्यगात्मयोगेन साधये। लोकेशमानिनां मौढ्याद्धरिष्ये श्रीमदं तपः । १६ ।

न हि सद्भावयुक्तानां सुराणामीशविस्मयः । मत्तोऽसतां मानभङ्गः प्रशमायोपकल्पते । १७ ।
तस्मान्मच्छरणं गोष्ठं मन्त्राथं मत्स्त्रिग्रहम् । गोपाये स्वात्मयोगेन सोऽयं मे व्रत अहितः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka resumed : Thus commanded by Indra and completely freed from their binding chains (which had held them under check till the time of universal destruction), the clouds started tormenting Nanda's Vraja by their sharp driving showers with (great) violence. (8) Shining brightly with flashes of lightning and roaring with (rolling) thunders and driven by tempestuous winds, they showered hail-stones. (9) While the clouds were incessantly pouring forth torrents thick as columns, the earth being flooded by volumes of flowing water could not be seen with its distinction of high and low lands. (10) Seized with a shiver through excessive driving showers and tempestuous gales and afflicted with cold, the cowherds and the cowherdresses sought Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) as their refuge. (11) Oppressed with the torrential downpour and fully covering their head as well as their children with their trunk, they sought shivering the soles of feet of the Lord (and prayed as follows):—(12) "O Kṛṣṇa, O Enchanter of souls, O highly blessed Lord, be pleased to protect the bovine race, which has its protector in You (alone), as well as ourselves from the angry Indra, O Lover of Your devotees!" (13) Perceiving the animals being beaten by severe hailstorm and getting benumbed, Śrī Hari understood it to be the work of the indignant Indra. (14) (He said to Himself,) "His own worship having been obstructed by us, Indra is sending down this most terrible hailstorm accompanied by a tempestuous gale out of season for our destruction. (15) I shall (presently) employ an effective remedy against this by My own divine power and (thereby) dispel the ignorance—in the form of pride of wealth—of the gods, who through infatuation fancy themselves to be the rulers of the world. (16) Surely the pride of being the supreme ruler of the world cannot find place in the gods, who are endowed (in a special degree) with the quality of Sattva; and the humiliation of the vile at My hands conduces to their peace of mind. (17) I shall accordingly by My own divine power protect Vraja, which has sought shelter in Me, looks upon Me as its Protector, nay, which constitutes My own family! (In fact) this is the famous vow taken by Me." (18)

इत्युक्त्वैकेन हस्तेन कृत्वा गोवर्धनाचलम् । दधार लीलया कृष्णश्छत्राकमिव बालकः । १९ ।
अथाह भगवान् गोपान् हेऽम्ब तात ब्रजौकसः । यथोपजोषं विशत गिरिगतं सगोधनाः । २० ।
न त्रास इह वः कार्यो मद्भस्ताद्रिनिपातने । वातवर्षभयेनालं तत्राणं विहितं हि वः । २१ ।
तथा निर्विशिर्गतां कृष्णाश्वासितमानसाः । यथावकाशं सधनाः सव्रजाः सोपजीविनः । २२ ।
क्षुत्तुड्व्यथां सुखापेक्षां हित्वा तैर्ब्रजवासिभिः । वीक्ष्यमाणो दधावद्रि सप्ताहं नाचलत् पदात् । २३ ।
कृष्णयोगानुभावं तं निशाद्येन्द्रोऽतिविस्मितः । निःसम्भो भ्रष्टस्फुल्लपः खान् मेघान् संन्यवारयत् । २४ ।
खं व्यभ्रमुदितादित्यं वातवर्षं च दारुणम् । निशाद्योपरतं गोपान् गोवर्धनधरोऽब्रवीत् । २५ ।
निर्यात त्यजत त्रासं गोपाः सखीधनार्भकाः । उपारतं वातवर्षं व्युदप्रायाश्च निम्नगाः । २६ ।
ततस्ते निर्ययुर्गोपाः खं स्वमादाय गोधनम् । शकटोदोपकरणं स्त्रीबालस्थविराः शनैः । २७ ।
भगवानपि तं शैलं स्वस्थाने पूर्ववत् प्रभुः । पश्यतां सर्वभूतानां स्थापयामास लीलया । २८ ।

Having observed thus, and uprooting with one hand Mount Govardhana even as a child would pull out a mushroom, Śrī Kṛṣṇa sportfully lifted it up. (19) Then the Lord said to the cowherds, "O mother, father, the people of Vraja, comfortably take shelter in the cavity beneath the mountain along with your cattle-wealth. (20) No fear need be entertained by you about the fall of the mountain from My hand on this spot. Away with the fear of storm and rain, since your protection against them has (already) been ensured." (21) Their mind having been reassured in that way by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, they entered the cavity (and made themselves comfortable there) according to the space available alongwith their cattle-wealth, ring of bullock-carts and dependant (viz., servants, priests and so on). (22) Being (constantly) gazed upon by the aforesaid inhabitants of Vraja, who stood disregarding the pangs of hunger and thirst as well as the need for personal comfort, Śrī Kṛṣṇa held up the mountain for a (full) week and did not stir from His position. (23) Much astonished to see that wonderful power of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, shorn of pride, and thwarted in his purpose, Indra totally stopped his clouds (from pouring showers). (24) Seeing the sky clear of clouds, the sun risen and the violent downpour and tempest stopped, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bearer of Govardhana), spoke to the Gopas (as follows):—(25) "Dismiss (all) fear and go out, O cowherds, alongwith your womenfolk, wealth and children. The storm and rain have ceased and the rivers are almost emptied of their water." (26) Taking each his own cattle-wealth, the aforesaid cowherds as well as the womenfolk, children and the aged thereupon gradually issued forth, their goods loaded on their carts. (27) The almighty Lord too sportfully set down the mountain as before in its own place, all the creatures looking on (with wonder). (28)

तं प्रेमवेगात्प्रभृता ब्रजौकसो यथा समीयुः परिरम्भणादिभिः ।

गोष्यश्च सखेहमपूजयन् मुदा दध्यक्षताद्विर्युयुजुः सदाशिषः । २९ ।

यशोदा रोहिणी नन्दो रामश्च बलिनां वरः । कृष्णमालिङ्ग्य युयुजुराशिषः स्नेहकातराः । ३० ।

दिवि देवगणाः साध्याः सिद्धगन्धर्वचारणाः । तुष्टुवर्मुमुचुस्तुष्टाः पुष्पवर्षाणि पार्थिव । ३१ ।

शङ्खदुन्दुभयो नेदुर्दिवि देवप्रणोदिताः । जगुर्गन्धर्वपतयस्तुम्बुरुप्रमुखा नृप । ३२ ।

ततोऽनुरक्तैः पशुपैः परिश्रितो राजन् स गोष्ठं सबलोऽप्रजद्धरिः ।

तथाविधान्यस्य कृतानि गोपिका गायन्त्य इयुर्मुदिता हृदिस्पृशः । ३३ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे षष्ठविंशोऽध्यायः । २५ ।

Overflowing with an uprush of love, the people of Vraja approached Him with embraces and other appropriate (loving) gestures and the Gopis joyously exhibited their loving regard for Him by sprinkling Him with curds and unbroken rice and showered their choice blessings (on Him). (29) Overpowered with affection, Yaśodā, Rohiṇī, Nanda and Balarāma, the foremost of the powerful, hugged Śrī Kṛṣṇa and pronounced their blessings (on Him). (30) (Highly) gratified, hosts of gods, the Sādhyaas as well as the Siddhas, Gandharvas and Cāraṇas in heaven glorified Him and showered volleys of flowers (on Him), O ruler of the earth ! (31) Prompted by the gods conchs and kettledrums sounded in the heavens; while Gandharva chiefs—the foremost of whom was Tumburu—sang, O protector of men ! (32) Surrounded by loving cowherds and accompanied by Balarāma, O king, the said Śrī Hari went back from that place to Vraja. Full of delight the cowherd women (too) returned (to their respective homes) celebrating such exploits (as the uplifting of Govardhana) of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who had captivated their heart). (33)

*Thus ends twenty-fifth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise
known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ षड्विंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVI

Nanda's conversation with the cowherds about Śrī Kṛṣṇa's glory

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवंविधानि कर्माणि गोपाः कृष्णस्य वीक्ष्य ते । अतद्वीर्यविदः प्रोचुः समभ्येत्य सुविस्मिताः । १ ।
 बालकस्य यदेतानि कर्माण्यत्यद्भुतानि वै । कथमर्हत्यसौ जन्म ग्राम्येष्वामजगुप्सितम् । २ ।
 यः सप्तहायनो बालः करैर्णकेन लीलया । कथं विभ्रद् गिरिवरं पुष्करं गजराडिव । ३ ।
 तोकेनामीलिताक्षेण पूतनाया महौजसः । पीतः स्तनः सह प्राणैः कालेनैव वयस्तनो । ४ ।
 हिन्वतोऽधः शयानस्य मास्यस्य चरणवुदक् । अनोऽपतद् विपर्यस्तं रुदतः प्रपदाहतम् । ५ ।
 एकहायन आसीनो ह्रियमाणो विहायसा । दैत्येन यस्तृणावर्तमहन् कण्ठप्रहातुरम् । ६ ।
 क्वचिद्वैद्यद्वयस्तैन्ये मात्रा बद्ध उलूखले । गच्छन्नर्जुनयोर्मध्ये बाहुभ्यां तावपातयत् । ७ ।
 वने सञ्चारयन् वत्सान् सरामो बालकैर्वृतः । हन्तुकामं वकं दोर्भ्यां मुखतोऽग्निपाटयत् । ८ ।
 वसेषु वत्सरूपेण प्रविशन्तं जिघांसया । हत्वा न्यपातयत्तेन कपित्थानि च लीलया । ९ ।
 हत्वा रासभर्देतयं तद्वभृश्च बलान्वितः । चक्रे तालवनं क्षेमं परिपक्कफलान्वितम् । १० ।
 प्रलब्धं घातयित्वा बलेन बलशालिना । अमोचयद् ब्रजपशून् गोपांश्चारण्यबद्धितः । ११ ।
 आशीविषतमाहीन्द्रं दमित्वा विमदं हुदात् । प्रसह्योद्वास्य यमुनां चक्रेऽसौ निर्विषोदकाम् । १२ ।
 दुस्यजश्वानुरागोऽस्मिन् सर्वेषां नो ब्रजौकसाम् । नन्द ते तनयेऽस्मासु तस्याभ्यौत्पत्तिकः कथम् । १३ ।

क्व सप्तहायनो बालः क्व महाद्विविधारणम् । ततो नो जायते शङ्का ब्रजनाथ तवात्मजे । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Much astonished to witness such (superhuman) feats of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the aforesaid Gopas, who were ignorant of His power, gathered together and talked (as follows):—(1) Since these exploits are most wonderful indeed on the part of a (mere) boy, how could he deserve a birth among rustics, which is (so) unworthy of himself ? (2) A boy of seven, how could he keep on holding (for a week) with one hand a big mountain as sportfully as a lordly elephant would hold a lotus ? (3) By him as a (mere) babe with its eyes half closed was sucked the breast of the mighty Pūtana alongwith her life, (even) as the lifespan of a living organism is (gradually) swallowed up by Time ! (4) Struck by the fore part of his feet (even) as he—(only three) months old—lay underneath a cart kicking up his feet and crying, the cart fell topsy-turvy ! (5) Being carried away through the sky by a demon while squatting (on the floor) as an infant of one year, he killed the demon, Ṭṇāvarta (by name), who was feeling oppressed on account of his being caught by the neck ! (6) Tied by the mother to a mortar on the ground of theft of butter, on one occasion, and crawling on all fours between the two Arjuna trees he caused them to fall down ! (7) Duly pasturing calves in the forest, accompanied by Balarāma and surrounded by (other) boys, he tore asunder by the bill, with his arms, his enemy in the form of a heron, that sought to kill him. (8) Having killed another demon, who, in the guise of a calf had found his way into his herd of calves with intent to kill him, he sportfully caused with the carcass a number of Kapittha trees to fall (by dashing it against the Kapittha trees) ! (9) Slaying the demon (Dhenuka), disguised as a donkey, and his kinsfolk while accompanied by Balarāma, he rendered safe the forest of palm trees (the home of Dhenuka); which was rich with ripe fruits. (10) Getting the terrible (demon) Pralamba slain by the powerful Balarāma, he rescued the cattle of Vraja as well as the cowherds from a forest fire. (11) Having subdued the most venomous Kāliya (a ruler of serpents) and rid it of haughtiness, he forcibly expelled it from the pool (inhabited by it) and made the waters of the Yamunā free from poison! (12) The love of us all, who have our abode in Vraja, for this boy of yours, O Nanda, is such as cannot be easily given up and his love for us (too) is quite natural. How is it? (13) A boy of seven years lifting up a big mountain—how inconceivable is this ! It is for this reason that our suspicion is aroused, O ruler of Vraja, with regard to your son (being God Himself). (14)

नन्द उवाच

श्रूयतां मे वचो गोपा ध्येतु शङ्का च वोऽर्भके । एनं कुमारमुद्दिश्य गर्गो मे यदुवाच ह । १५ ।
वर्णास्त्रयः किलास्यासन् गूढतोऽनुयुगं तनूः । शुक्लो रक्तस्थथा पीत इदानीं कृष्णतां गतः । १६ ।
प्रागयं वसुदेवस्य क्वचिज्जातस्तत्वात्मजः । वासुदेव इति श्रीमानभिज्ञाः सम्प्रचक्षते । १७ ।
बहूनि सन्ति नामानि रूपाणि च सुतस्य ते । गुणकर्मानुरूपाणि तान्यहं वेद नो जनाः । १८ ।
एष वः श्रेय आधास्यद् गोपगोकुलनन्दनः । अनेन सर्वदुर्गाणि यूयमञ्जस्तरिष्वथ । १९ ।
पुराणेन व्रजपते साधवो दस्युपीडिताः । अराजके रक्ष्यमाणा जिग्युर्दस्युन् समेधिताः । २० ।
य एतस्मिन् महाभागाः प्रीतिं कुर्वन्ति मानवाः । नारयोऽभिभवन्त्येतान् विष्णुपक्षानिवासुराः । २१ ।
तस्मान्नन्द कुमारोऽयं नारायणसमो गुणैः । श्रिया कीर्त्यानुभावेन तत्कर्मसु न विस्मयः । २२ ।
इत्यङ्गा मां समादिश्य गर्गो च स्वगृहं गते । मन्ये नारायणस्यांशं कृष्णमक्लिष्टकारिणम् । २३ ।

Nanda replied : (Pray,) hear my statement, O Gopas, which is (precisely) what the sage Garga told me concerning this boy; and let your suspicion about the child melt away. (15) (Garga said:) Taking (diverse) forms indeed in each Yuga, this boy has manifested (in his body) three (different) colours, viz., white, red and yellow; this time he has assumed a dark complexion. (16) Some time in the past this son of yours was born in the house of Vasudeva; (hence) the wise (who know this truth) will duly designate him as the glorious Vāsudeva (son of Vasudeva). (17) There are numerous names and forms of your son, conforming to his excellences and actions. I (alone) know them, not the commonalty. (18) The delight of the cowherds, nay, of the entire Gokula, this boy will bring you happiness. By his help you will easily surmount all difficulties. (19) Being protected and strengthened by him during a period of anarchy in former times, O lord of Vraja, pious souls, tormented by robbers, (eventually) conquered them. (20) Enemies cannot overpower those highly blessed men who offer love to this boy, any more than demons can prevail over those whose cause has been espoused by Lord Viṣṇu. (21) Therefore, this son of yours, O Nanda, is a compeer of Lord Nārāyaṇa in point of excellences, splendour, fame and glory, so that there is nothing to be wondered at his exploits. (22) Ever since, having directly exhorted me thus, Garga returned to his abode, I have recognized Kṛṣṇa, who has (ever) rid us of affliction, to be (no other than) a part manifestation of Lord Nārāyaṇa. (23)

इति नन्दवचः श्रुत्वा गर्गगीतं व्रजौकसः । दृष्टश्रुतानुभावास्ते कृष्णस्यामिततेजसः ।

मुदिता नन्दमानर्चुः कृष्णं च गतविस्मयाः । २४ ।

देवे वर्षति यज्ञविप्लवरुषा वज्राश्मघर्षानिलैः

सीदत्यालपशुस्त्रि आत्मशरणं दृष्टवानुकम्प्युत्समयन् ।

उत्पात्यैककरोण शैलमबलो लीलोच्छिलीन्धं यथा

विभ्रद् गोष्टमपान्महेन्द्रमदभित् प्रीयान्न इन्द्रो गवाम् । २५ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे षड्विंशोऽध्यायः । २६ ।

Having heard the aforesaid statement of Nanda recapitulating the words of Garga, the inhabitants of Vraja, who had already witnessed and heard of the glory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, possessed as he was of infinite energy, felt rejoiced and worshipped Nanda as well as Śrī Kṛṣṇa, now that their astonishment was gone. (24) May Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of cows) be gracious to us—Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who, when Indra (the god of rain), enraged at the interruption of his worship, sent down (heavy) showers accompanied by strokes of lightning, hailstorms and tempestuous winds, was moved with pity to see (the whole of) Vraja with its cowherds, cattle and womenfolk in distress and depending (solely) on Himself and, smilingly uprooting with one hand mount Govardhana, even as a child would pull up a mushroom, held it up and (thus) protected Vraja, (thereby) crushing the pride of the mighty Indra ! (25)

*Thus ends the twenty-sixth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise
known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ सप्तविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVII

Indra extols Śrī Kṛṣṇa

श्रीशुक उवाच

गोवर्धने धृते शैल आसाराद् रक्षिते ब्रजे । गोलोकादाब्रजत् कृष्णं सुरभिः शक्र एव च । १ ।
विविक्त उपसङ्गम्य ब्रीडितः कृतहेलनः । पस्पशं पादयोरेनं किरीटेनार्कवर्चसा । २ ।
दृष्टश्रुतानुभावोऽस्य कृष्णस्यामिततेजसः । नष्टत्रिलोकेशमद इन्द्र आह कृताञ्जलिः । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : When Govardhana was held up and Vraja was protected (thereby) from torrential rain, Surabhi (the celestial cow of plenty) sought Śrī Kṛṣṇa from Goloka (the home of cows in heaven) and so did Indra from paradise. (1) Full of shame for his having shown disrespect (to the Lord), he approached the latter in a secluded place and touched His feet with his diadem possessing the splendour of the sun. (2) Indra—who had not only heard but (actually) witnessed the glory of the aforesaid Śrī Kṛṣṇa of unlimited energy, and whose pride as the ruler of (all) the three worlds had been crushed—spoke with joined palms (as follows). (3)

इन्द्र उवाच

विशुद्धसत्त्वं तव धाम शान्तं तपोमयं ध्वस्तरजस्तमस्कम् ।
मायामयोऽयं गुणसम्प्रबाहो न विद्यते तेऽग्रहणानुबन्धः । ४ ।
कुतो नु तद्धेतव ईश तत्कृता लोभादयो येऽबुधलिङ्गभावाः ।
तथापि दण्डं भगवान् विभर्ति धर्मस्य गुप्त्यै खलुनिग्रहाय । ५ ।
पिता गुरुस्त्वं जगतामधीशो दुरत्ययः काल उपात्तदण्डः ।
हिताय स्वेच्छातनुभिः समीहसे मानं विधुन्वन्नगदीशमानिनाम् । ६ ।

ये मद्विधाज्ञा जगदीशमानिनस्त्वां वीक्ष्य कालेऽभयमाशु तन्मदम् ।
 हित्वाऽऽर्यमार्गं प्रभजन्त्यपस्मया ईहा खलानामपि तेऽनुशासनम् । ७ ।
 स त्वं ममैश्वर्यमदप्नुतस्य कृतागसस्तेऽविदुषः प्रभावम् ।
 क्षन्तुं प्रभोऽथाहंसि मूढचेतसो मैवं पुनर्भूयतिरोश मेऽसती । ८ ।
 तववतारोऽयमधोक्षजेह स्वयम्भराणामुरुभारजन्मनाम् ।
 चमूपतीनामभवाय देव भवाय युष्मच्चरणानुवर्तिनाम् । ९ ।

नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते पुरुषाय महात्मने । वासुदेवाय कृष्णाय सात्वतां पतये नमः । १० ।
 स्वच्छन्दोपात्तदेहाय विशुद्धज्ञानमूर्तये । सर्वस्मै सर्वबीजाय सर्वभूतात्मने नमः । ११ ।
 मयेदं भगवन् गोष्ठनाशयासारवायुभिः । चेष्टितं विहते यज्ञे मानिना तीव्रमन्युना । १२ ।
 त्वयेशानुगृहीतोऽस्मि ध्वस्तस्तम्भो वृथोद्यमः । ईश्वरं गुरुमात्मानं त्वामहं शरणं गतः । १३ ।

Indra prayed : Your essential character, consisting as it does of pure Sattva, is uniform, full of wisdom and untouched by Rajas and Tamas. This phenomenal universe, which is a product of Māyā, finds no place in You, persisting as it does through ignorance (alone). (4) How, then, could greed etc.—which are responsible for rebirth and are born of identification with the body, constituting as they do the distinguishing marks of the ignorant—exist in You? Yet You wield the rod of punishment for the maintenance of righteousness and for the punishment of the wicked. (5) You are the father, the preceptor and the supreme ruler of (all) the worlds; You are the Time-Spirit that cannot be easily set at naught and that holds the sceptre of sway (over the universe). It is for the good of the world that You carry on Your sport in embodied forms assumed at will, curbing the pride of those who fancy themselves to be the rulers of the world. (6) Fools like me, who regard themselves as rulers of the universe, speedily shake off that pride on seeing You undaunted even in times of danger and, rid of their haughtiness, take the path of Devotion trodden by the righteous. (In fact) Your very activity serves as a punishment for the wicked. (7) Such that You are, be pleased, O almighty Lord, to forgive me—who, immersed as I am in the pride of wealth and power and ignorant of Your greatness, have sinned against You—and to ordain that my mind may not be so evilly disposed again hereafter, deluded as my intellect is. (8) Your descent on this earth, O Lord who are above sense-perception, is conducive to the extermination of leaders of (great) armies—who are not only a burden to the earth themselves but who bring into existence many such scourges—and to the welfare of those devoted to Your feet. (9) Hail, hail to You, the almighty and infinite Lord, the Inner Controller of all, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Son of Vasudeva, the Protector of the Yādavas. (10) Salutation to the Lord, who has assumed a form conforming the wish of His devotees, who is an embodiment of pure consciousness, who is all-formed, the Cause of all, the Soul of all living beings ! (11) On my worship having been interfered with, this (mischief) was done, O Lord, for the destruction of Vraja by means of torrential rain and winds by me who was full of pride and seized with violent rage. (12) My pride having been crushed and my efforts having been foiled, I have been favoured by You, O Lord ! I have (accordingly) sought You, the Supreme Ruler and Preceptor, (nay) my very Self, as my refuge. (13)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं सङ्कीर्तितः कृष्णो मधोना भगवानमुम् । मेघगम्भीरया वाचा प्रहसन्निदमब्रवीत् । १४ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus glorified by Indra, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa heartily laughed and spoke to him as follows in a voice deep as the rumbling of clouds. (14)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मया तेऽङ्कारि मधवन् मखभङ्गोऽनुगृहता । मदनुस्मृतये नित्यं मत्तस्येन्द्रश्रिया भृशम् । १५ ।

मामैश्वर्यश्रीमदाधो दण्डपाणिं न पश्यति । तं भ्रंशयामि सम्पद्भ्यो यस्य चेच्छाम्यनुग्रहम् । १६ ।

गम्यतां शक्र भद्रं वः क्रियतां मेऽनुशासनम् । स्थीयतां स्वाधिकारेषु युक्तैर्वः स्तम्भवर्जितैः । १७ ।

The glorious Lord said : It was in order to shower My grace on you and to put you incessantly in mind of Me, highly intoxicated as you were with the fortune of Indra, that the interruption of your worship was brought about by Me, O god of rain. (15) Blinded with the pride of power and wealth, one takes no notice of Me, who wield the rod of punishment. Him (alone) do I cast down from an affluent state, on whom I intend to shower My grace. (16) You may go now, O Indra; may all be well with you! Let My injunctions be followed. Devoted to your duty and free from egotism, hold on to your offices (as before). (17)

अथाह सुरभिः कृष्णमभिवन्द्य मनस्विनी । स्वसन्तानैरुपामन्य गोपेरुपिणमीश्वरम् । १८ ।

Hailing and accosting Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the supreme Lord disguised as a cowherd boy, along-with her progeny, the high-minded cow of plenty now spoke to Him (thus). (18)

सुरभिरुवाच

कृष्ण कृष्ण महायोगिन् विश्वात्मन् विश्वसम्भव । भवता लोकनाथेन सनाथा वयमच्युत । १९ ।

त्वं नः परमकं देवं त्वं न इन्द्रो जगत्पते । भवाय भव गोविप्रदेवानां ये च साधवः । २० ।

इन्द्रं नस्त्वाभिवेक्ष्यामो ब्रह्मणा नोदिता वयम् । अवतीर्णोऽसि विश्वात्मन् भूमेर्भागपनुत्तये । २१ ।

Surabhi said : O Kṛṣṇa, the Enchanter of souls, O great Yogi, O Inner Controller and Source of the universe ! we have been favoured by You, the Protector of the worlds, O immortal Lord ! (19) You are our supreme Deity. For the prosperity of the bovine race, the Brāhmaṇas and the gods as well as of those who are pious-minded, be You our Ruler (henceforth), O Lord of the universe ! (20) Directed by Brahṁā we shall crown You as our king, since You have come down to this earth for relieving the burden of the earth, O Soul of the universe ! (21)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं कृष्णमुपामन्य सुरभिः पयसाऽऽत्मनः । जलैराकाशगङ्गाया ऐरावतकरोदधृतैः । २२ ।

इन्द्रः सुरर्षिभिः साकं नोदितो देवमातृभिः । अभ्यषिञ्चत दाशार्हं गोविन्द इति चाभ्यधात् । २३ ।

तत्रागातास्तुबुल्लारदादयो गन्धर्वविद्याधरसिद्धचारणाः ।

जगुर्यशो लोकमलापहं हरेः सुराङ्गनाः संननुत्सुदान्विताः । २४ ।

तं तृष्टुर्वेदनिकायकेतवो व्यवाकिंश्चाद्भुतपुष्पवृष्टिभिः ।
लोकाः परां निर्वृतिमाप्नुवंस्त्रयो गावस्तदा गामनयन् पयोद्भुताः । २५ ।
नानारसौधाः सरितो वृक्षा आसन् मधुस्रवाः । अकृष्टपच्यौषधयो गिरयोऽपि भद्रदम्पतीन् । २६ ।

कृष्णोऽभिषिक्त एतानि सत्वानि कुरुनन्दन । निर्वैराण्यभवंस्तात क्रूराण्यपि निसर्गतः । २७ ।
इति गोगोकुलपति गोविन्दमभिषिच्य सः । अनुज्ञातो यथौ शक्रो वृत्तो देवादिभिर्दिवम् । २८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे इन्द्रस्तुतिर्नाम सप्तविंशोऽध्यायः ॥२७॥

Śrī Śuka went on: Having thus prayed to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, born in the line of Daśārha, Surabhi bathed Him with her own milk (flowing from her udders); (even so) urged by Aditi and others (the mothers of the gods) and accompanied by celestial sages, Indra (too) bathed Him with the water of the heavenly Gaṅgā, brought by Airāvata (Indra's elephant) in its own trunks, and designated Him as Govinda (the Ruler of the cows). (22-23) Gandharvas, Vidyādharas, Siddhas and Cāraṇas, headed by Tumburu and Nārada (two Gandharva chiefs noted for their skill in vocal music), who had assembled there, sang the glory of Śrī Hari, which is capable of destroying the sins of the world; while celestial damsels beautifully danced full of joy. (24) The foremost among the gods glorified Him and covered Him with showers of weird flowers. (All) the three worlds derived supreme joy; while the cows drenched the earth with their (overflowing) milk on that occasion. (25) Rivers flowed with delicious fluids of various kinds (such as milk); trees yielded honey in profusion, bumper crops appeared (even) on unploughed lands and mountains exhibited gems on their surface. (26) On Śrī Kṛṣṇa having been crowned (thus as the Ruler of the cows), all those (wild) creatures (which are ordinarily met with in a forest), O delight of the Kurus, became free from enmity, O dear Parīkṣit, though savage by nature. (27) Having thus crowned Govinda as the Ruler of the cows as well as of Vraja, and permitted by Him, the celebrated Indra rose to heaven accompanied by the gods. (28)

Thus ends the twenty-seventh discourse entitled "Indra extols Śrī Kṛṣṇa," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टाविंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXVIII

Śrī Kṛṣṇa rescues His father from the realm of Varuna

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकादश्यां निराहारः समभ्यर्च्य जनार्दनम् । स्नातुं नन्दस्तु कालिन्ध्या द्वादश्यां जलमाविशत् । १ ।
तं गृहीत्वानयद् भृत्यो वरुणास्यासुरोत्तिकम् । अविज्ञायासुरीं वेलं प्रविष्टमुदकं निशि । २ ।
चक्रुस्तमपश्यन्तः कृष्ण रामेति गोपकाः । भगवांस्तदपश्यन्त्य पितरं वरुणाहृतम् ।

तदन्तिकं गतो राजन् स्वानामभयदो विभुः । ३ ।

प्राप्तं वीक्ष्य हृषीकेशं लोकपालः सपर्यया । महत्या पूजयित्वाऽहं तदर्शनमहोत्सवः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having fasted on the (following) Ekādaśī (the eleventh day of a lunar fortnight) and duly worshipped Lord Viṣṇu (who is solicited by His devotees and is the deity presiding over this day), Nanda descended into the water of the Kālinī (during the third watch of the night) in order to take his bath within the hours of the Dwādaśī (the twelfth day). (1) A demon servant of Varuṇa (the god of water) seized and took Nanda to the presence of his master on the plea of his (Nanda's) having entered the water at night, (apparently) not knowing that the hour is reserved for the (activities of) demons. (2) Failing to perceive Nanda, the cowherds cried out, "O Rāma ! O Kṛṣṇa !" Hearing the cry and coming to know of His father having been carried away to Varuṇa, the almighty Lord, who affords protection to His own, sought the presence of Varuṇa. O king ! (3) Finding Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses) arrived at his door, Varuṇa (the guardian of a sphere), who was greatly rejoiced at His sight, worshipped Him with grand presents and spoke (as follows). (4)

वरुण उवाच

अद्य मे निभृतो देहोऽष्टैवारथोऽधिगतः प्रभो । त्वत्पादभ्यामो भगवन्नवापुः पारमध्वनः । ५ ।

नमस्तुभ्यं भगवते ब्रह्मणे परमात्मने । न यत्र श्रूयते माया लोकसृष्टिविकल्पना । ६ ।

अजानता मामकेन मूढेनाकार्यवेदिना । आनीतोऽयं तव पिता तद् भवान् क्षन्तुमर्हति । ७ ।

ममाप्यनुग्रहं कृष्ण कर्तुमर्हस्यशेषदृक् । गोविन्द नीयतामेष पिता ते पितृवत्सल । ८ ।

Varuṇa said : It is today that my life has been fulfilled and it is only today that a (real) treasure has been found (by me), (even though I possess all the treasures of the world, being the lord of the ocean, a storehouse of all jewels), O my Master. (The end of my worldly existence also seems to be near inasmuch as) those worshipping Your feet have reached to the other end of their life's journey (viz., final beatitude). (5) Hail to You, the almighty Lord, the all-perfect Supreme Spirit (the controller of all embodied souls), in whom Māyā, which brings about the creation of the (various) worlds, is not even heard of. (6) This father of Yours was brought (here) by this ignorant and foolish servant of mine, who did not know his duty. May You be pleased to forgive my fault. (7) Be pleased, O Kṛṣṇa, to shower Your grace on me too, O omniscient Lord ! O Govinda, here is Your father, who may be taken (back), fond as You are of Your parents. (8)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं प्रसादितः कृष्णो भगवानीश्वरेश्वरः । आदायागात् स्वपितरं बन्धूनां चावहन् सुदम् । ९ ।

नन्दस्वतीन्द्रियं दृष्ट्वा लोकपालमहोदयम् । कृष्णे च सन्नतिं तेषां ज्ञातिभ्यो विस्मितोऽब्रवीत् । १० ।

ते त्वीत्सुक्यधियो राजन् मत्वा गोपास्तमीश्वरम् । अपि नः स्वगतिं सूक्ष्मापुषाधास्यदधीश्वरः । ११ ।

इति स्वानां स भगवान् विज्ञायाखिलदृक् स्वयम् । सङ्कल्पसिद्धये तेषां कृपयैतदचित्तयत् । १२ ।

जनो वै लोक एतस्मिन्नविद्याकामकर्मभिः । उद्यावचासु गतिषु न वेद स्वां गतिं भ्रमन् । १३ ।

इति सञ्चिन्त्य भगवान् महाकारुणिको हरिः । दर्शयामास लोकं स्वं गोपानां तमसः परम् । १४ ।

सत्यं ज्ञानमनन्तं यद् ब्रह्म ज्योतिः सनातनम् । यद्धि पश्यन्ति मुनयो गुणापाये समाहिताः । १५ ।

ते तु ब्रह्महृदं नीता मग्नाः कृष्णेन चोद्धृताः । ददृशुर्ब्रह्मणो लोकं यत्राकूरोऽध्यगात् पुरा । १६ ।

नन्दादयस्तु तं दृष्ट्वा परमानन्दनिर्वृताः । कृष्णं च तत्रच्छन्दोभिः स्तूयमानं सुविस्मिताः । १७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धेऽष्टविंशोऽध्यायः । १८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus propitiated (by Varuṇa), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Ruler (of the universe), returned (to Vraja), taking His father (with Him) and bringing joy to His relations. (9) Astonished indeed to witness the immense fortune of Varuṇa, which was something that he had never seen before, as well as the submissiveness of the people of that realm towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Nanda spoke about it to his kinsfolk. (10) Believing Him to be God (Himself), they too thought with an eager mind, O Parikṣit, "Would the supreme Lord were to translate us to His own (divine) realm as well as to His imperceptible (transcendent) state (known by the name of Brahma) !" (11) Having come to know by Himself the aforesaid wish of His own people, the said all-perceiving Lord graciously pondered thus with a view to accomplishing their desire:—(12) "Revolving through (diverse) states of existence, (both) high and low, in this (material) world under the force of ignorance (in the shape of identification with the body etc.), desire (born of such ignorance) and actions (prompted by such desire), indeed, this embodied soul is unable to realize its essential character." (13) Reflecting thus, the highly merciful Lord Śrī Hari revealed to the cowherds His own (divine) realm (viz., Vaikuṇṭha), lying beyond Prakṛti and (before that) His (transcendent) state called Brahma, which is (absolute) truth, (pure) consciousness, infinite, self-effulgent and eternal, and which sages realize only when the three Guṇas are transcended and when they have been fully composed. (14-15) Transported (first) to the all absorbing state of Brahma and steeped in it, and eventually lifted out of it by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (as out of a trance), they beheld the (divine) realm of the same Brahma (crystallized in the form of Lord Viṣṇu) by the grace of the same Kṛṣṇa because of whom Akrūra perceived that divine abode (on another occasion) in the past.* (16) Nanda and others were indeed exhilarated with supreme ecstasy to behold the said realm as well as Śrī Kṛṣṇa being panegyricized there by the (four) Vedas (in living forms), and felt greatly amazed (to find Śrī Kṛṣṇa in their midst once again as before). (17)

*Thus ends the twenty-eighth discourse in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise
known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

* Vide Discourse XXXIX below.

अथैकोनत्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXIX

A description of the (celebrated) Rāsa Play (of the Lord)

श्रीशुक उवाच

भगवानपि ता रात्रीः शरदोत्फुल्लमल्लिकाः । वीक्ष्य रन्तुं मनश्चक्रे योगमायामुपाश्रितः । १ ।

तदोद्भूतः ककुभः करैर्मुखं प्राच्या विलिम्पन्नरुणेन शक्तमैः ।

स चर्षणीनामुदगाच्छुचो मृजन् प्रियः प्रियाया इव दीर्घदर्शनः । २ ।

दृष्ट्वा कुमुदन्तमखण्डमण्डलं रमाननाभं नवकुङ्कुमारुणम् ।

वनं च तत्कोमलगोभिरञ्जितं जगौ कलं वामदृशां मनोहरम् । ३ ।

निशम्य गीतं तदनङ्गवर्धनं ब्रजस्त्रियः कृष्णगृहीतमानसाः ।

आजगमुन्मन्यमलक्षितोद्यमाः स यत्र कान्तो जवलोत्कुण्डलाः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Finding those nights* adorned with full-blown jasmines (even) in autumn, the Lord too (who has all His desires fulfilled) made up His mind to play, falling back upon His Yogamāyā (wonderful divine potency that supplies all the requisites for such play). (1) Presently there appeared (on the horizon) the familiar moon (the king of the stars) painting the face of the Orient with a red hue by its most soothing rays—even as a lover appearing (returning home) after a long absence would daub the face of his beloved wife with saffron paste—and alleviating the sufferings of the people (caused by the hot sun during the daytime). (2) Beholding the moon (lit., the friend of the lilies, so-called because a water-lily opens only under the rays of the moon) in full orb—which shone like the countenance of Goddess Lakṣmī and possessed a scarlet hue like that of fresh saffron—and the woodland (of Vṛndāvana) illumined with its soft rays, Śrī Kṛṣṇa struck a melodious note on His flute, that enraptured the mind of the fair-eyed Gopīs. (3) Hearing that music, kindling love (in the bosom of the Gopīs), the women of Vraja, whose mind had (already) been captivated by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, sallied forth from all sides (with the help of the note of the flute) to the spot where that beloved One was—so (hurriedly) that their endeavour (to reach the Lord) could not be perceived by one another—their ear-rings swinging due to their swift movement. (4)

दुहन्त्योऽभिययुः काश्चिद् दोहं हित्वा समुत्सुकाः । पयोऽधिश्चित्य संयावमनुद्वास्यापरा ययुः । ५ ।

परिवेषयन्त्यस्तद्धित्वा पाययन्त्यः शिशून् पयः । शुश्रूषन्त्यः पतीन् काश्चिदरनन्त्योऽप्यास्य भोजनम् । ६ ।

लिम्पन्त्यः प्रमृजन्त्योऽन्या अञ्जन्यः काश्च लोचने । व्यत्यस्तवस्त्राभरणाः काश्चित् कृष्णान्तिकं ययुः । ७ ।

ता वार्यमाणाः पतिभिः पितृभिर्भ्रतृबन्धुभिः । गोविन्दापहृतात्मानो न न्यवर्तन्त मोहिताः । ८ ।

अन्तर्गृहगताः काश्चिद् गोप्योऽलब्धविनिर्गमाः । कृष्णं तद्वावनायुक्ता दध्युर्मीलितलोचनाः । ९ ।

दुःसहप्रेष्ठविरहतीव्रतापथुताशुभाः । ध्यानप्राप्ताश्चुताश्लेषनिर्वृत्या क्षीणमङ्गलाः । १० ।

तमेव परमात्मानं जारबुद्ध्यापि सङ्गताः । जहर्गुणमयं देहं सद्यः प्रक्षीणबन्धनाः । ११ ।

* The above verse should be read with verse 29 of discourse XXII, in which the Lord promised to sport with the damsels of Vraja, who worshipped Goddess Kātyāyanī during the previous winter in order to secure His grace.

Full of intense longing some, who were milking (their) cows, darted off leaving the milking-vessel (uncared for); (while) others left as soon as they had placed the milk on the oven (without waiting for its being boiled) and still others went out without removing the (dressed) porridge (from the hearth). (5) Some, who were serving food (to their husbands and other relations) went away neglecting that duty; others, who were feeding their infants with milk gave up that work and ran. Still others, who were waiting upon their husbands, turned their back on them and departed; while some (more), who were dining, bolted away leaving their meal. (6) Others, who were bedaubing their person with sandal-paste etc., left that work half-finished; still others, who were rubbing and cleaning their person with oily substances, decamped leaving off that work; and some (more), who were painting their eyes with collyrium, put off that work and ran to meet Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Still others sought the presence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa with their garments and jewels wrongly placed. (7) Though being stopped by their husbands, parents, brothers or other relations, they did not turn back (homeward), infatuated as they were (through love), their mind having been lured away by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows). (8) Some cowherd women, who were inside their house and could not find their way out for a sally, fixed their mind on Śrī Kṛṣṇa with their eyes closed, seized as they were with an intense longing to meet Him. (9) (All) their sins having been burnt up by the intense agony of separation from Śrī Kṛṣṇa (their most beloved Lord)—which could not be easily endured—and their (entire) stock of merit depleted through ecstatic joy proceeding from the loving embrace of the immortal Lord secured in contemplation, the cowherd women, whose shackles of Karma (which kept them bound to the world) were (thus) completely sundered, forthwith cast off their material body, united as they were (in thought) with Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Supreme Spirit), even though they recognized Him to be a (mere) paramour. (10-11)

राजोवाच

कृष्णं विदुः परं कान्तं न तु ब्रह्मतया मुने। गुणप्रवाहोपरमस्तासां गुणधियां कथम्। १२।

The king (Parīkṣit) put in : The (aforesaid) Gopis knew Śrī Kṛṣṇa to be no more than their darling and in any case did not recognize Him as Brahma (the Infinite), O (holy) sage! How was the cessation of the stream (cycle) of mundane existences possible in the case of the aforesaid Gopis, whose mind was swayed by the three Guṇas? (12)

श्रीशुक उवाच

उक्तं पुरस्तादेतत्तु चेष्टः सिद्धिं यथा गतः। द्विपन्नपि हृषीकेशं किमुताधोक्षजप्रियाः। १३।
 नृणां निःश्रेयसार्थाय व्यक्तिर्भगवतो नृप। अव्ययस्याप्रमेयस्य निर्गुणस्य गुणात्मनः। १४।
 कामं क्रोधं भयं स्नेहमैक्यं सौहृदमेव च। नित्यं हरौ विदधतो यान्ति तन्मयतां हि ते। १५।
 न चैवं विस्मयः कार्यो भवता भगवत्यजे। योगेश्वरेश्वरे कृष्णे यत एतद् विमुच्यते। १६।
 ता दृष्टान्तिकमायाता भगवान् ब्रजयोषितः। अवदद् वदतां श्रेष्ठो वाचः पेशैर्विमोहयन्। १७।

Śrī Śuka replied : This has already* been explained to you how Śiśupāla (the ruler of Cedi) attained final beatitude (oneness with the Lord) though hating Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses). What wonder, then, that the Gopis who looked upon Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is above sense-perception) as their beloved Lord should do so. (13) The manifestation of the Lord, who is free from decay and cannot be cognized through the intellect, (nay), who is beyond the three Guṇas as well as their Controller, O protector of men, is intended (only) for bestowing the boon of final beatitude on human beings. (14) Indeed they who constantly cherish (the feeling of) lascivious passion, wrath, fear, affection, kinship or devotion toward Śrī Hari attain oneness with Him. (15) Hence no feeling of wonder should be entertained by you as you do with regard to Śrī Kṛṣṇa—the birthless Lord, the Ruler of all masters of Yoga—by whose grace (the whole of) this (mobile and immobile) creation can be liberated. (16) Finding the aforesaid women of Vraja arrived in His presence, the Lord, who is the foremost of (all) elocutionists, addressed them (as follows), infatuating them by His elegant expressions. (17)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

स्वान्तं वो महाभागाः प्रियं किं करवाणि वः । व्रजस्यानामयं कश्चिद् वृतागमनकारणम् । १८ ।
 रजन्वेषा घोररूपा घोरसत्त्वनिषेविता । प्रतियात व्रजं नेह स्थेयं स्त्रीभिः सुमध्यमाः । १९ ।
 मातरः पितरः पुत्रा भ्रातरः पतयश्च वः । विचिन्वन्ति ह्यपश्यन्तो मा कृद्वं बन्धुसाध्वसम् । २० ।
 दृष्टं वनं कुसुमितं राकेशकररञ्जितम् । यमुनानिललालैजतरुपल्लवशोभितम् । २१ ।
 तद् यात मा चिरं गोष्ठं शुश्रूषध्वं पतीन् सती । क्रन्दन्ति वत्सा बालाश्च तान् पाययत दुहृत । २२ ।
 अथवा मदभिस्नेहाद् भवत्यो यन्त्रिताशयाः । आगता ह्युपपन्नं वः प्रीयन्ते मयि जन्तवः । २३ ।
 भर्तुः शुश्रूषणं स्त्रीणां परो धर्मो ह्यमायया । तद्वन्धूनां च कल्याण्यः प्रजानां चानुपोषणम् । २४ ।
 दुःशीलो दुर्भगो वृद्धो जडो रोयधनोऽपि वा । पतिः स्त्रीभिर्न हातव्यो लोकेऽप्यभिरपातकी । २५ ।
 अस्वर्ग्यमयशस्यं च फल्गु कृच्छ्रं भयावहम् । जुगुप्सितं च सर्वत्र औपपत्यं कुलस्त्रियाः । २६ ।
 श्रवणाद् दर्शनाद् ध्यानाच्चयि भावोऽनुकीर्तनात् । न तथा सन्निकर्षेण प्रतियात ततो गृहान् । २७ ।

The glorious Lord said : Welcome is your presence (here), O highly blessed ones ! In what way can I oblige you? Is everything well with Vraja ? (Please) reveal (to Me) the motive of your visit (to this place). (18) Frightful in aspect is this night and characterized by the presence of hideous creatures (too). (Therefore) return to Vraja (forthwith); you should not tarry here, O slender-waisted ones ! (19) Not finding you (at home), mothers and fathers, sons, brothers and husbands must be looking for you. (Pray,) do not cause anxiety to your near and dear ones. (20) The blossoming forest, illumined with the rays of the full moon and adorned with the tender leaves of trees waving before the sport of breezes from the Yamunā, has been seen (by you). (21) Therefore, return without delay to Vraja and serve your husbands, O virtuous ladies ! The calves as well as the children are crying (due to hunger); nourish them with milk and milk the cows. (22) Or (may be) you have come because your mind is bound by ties of attachment for Me. (If so) it is but proper for you; for (all) creatures find delight in Me. (23) Indeed the paramount duty of women is to wait in a guileless manner upon their husband as well as his relations and to nourish the children. (24) A husband should not be abandoned by women aspiring for higher (heavenly) regions, be he depraved, unlucky, decrepit, dull-witted, ailing or even indigent, unless (of course) he is a reprobate. (25) Intercourse with a paramour on the part of a woman of noble pedigree is a bar to heaven, scandalous, mean, a source of trouble, fraught with fear and hateful everywhere. (26) Love for Me is fostered not so much by physical proximity (to Me) as by hearing My praises, looking at Me, meditating on Me or by singing Me glories. Therefore, return home. (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति विप्रियमाकर्ण्य गोव्यो गोविन्दभाषितम् । विषण्णा भयसङ्कल्पाश्लिन्तामापुर्दुरत्ययाम् । २८ ।

कृत्वा मुखान्वय शुचः श्वसनेन शुष्यद्विम्बाधराणि चरणेन भुवं लिखन्त्यः ।

अस्त्रैरुपात्तमपिभिः कुचकुङ्कुमानि तस्थुर्मृजन्त्य उरुदुःखभराः स्म तूष्णीम् । २९ ।

प्रेष्ठं प्रियेतरमिव प्रतिभाषमाणं कृष्णं तदर्थविनिवर्तितसर्वकामाः ।

नेत्रे विमृज्य रुदितोपहृते स्म किञ्चित्संरम्भगद्गदगिरोऽब्रुवतामुरक्ताः । ३० ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Hearing the foregoing speech of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows), which was so unpleasant (to hear), the Gopīs felt despondent and, finding their designs frustrated, were plunged into deep anxiety (that could not be easily overcome). (28) Casting down their faces with lips, cherry as a ripe Bimba fruit, parched up by their breaths hot with grief, and scratching the ground with their toe, they stood silent under the heavy load of their sorrow, washing the saffron painted on their breasts with tears mixed with the collyrium of their eyes. (29) Wiping their eyes bedimmed by weeping, the Gopīs, who had given up all (other) cravings for the sake of the Lord, full of love as they were (for Him), spoke (thus) to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, their most beloved One—who was talking like one who had no love for them, as though rejecting their offer of love—in a voice choked with mild anger. (30)

गोप्य ऊचुः

मैवं विभोऽर्हति भवान् गदितुं नृशंसं सन्त्यज्य सर्वविषयांस्तव पादमूलम् ।

भक्ता भजस्व दुरवग्रह मा त्यजास्मान् देवो यथाऽऽदिपुरुषो भजते मुमुक्षुः । ३१ ।

यत्यत्यपत्यसुहृदामनुवृत्तिरङ्ग स्त्रीणां स्वधर्म इति धर्मविदा त्वोक्तम् ।

अस्त्वैवमेतदुपदेशपदे त्वयीशे प्रेष्ठो भवांस्तनुभूतां किल बन्धुरात्मा । ३२ ।

कुर्वन्ति हि त्वयि रतिं कुशलाः स्व आत्मन् नित्यप्रिये पतिसुतादिभिरार्तिदः किम् ।

तत्रः प्रसीद परमेश्वर मा स्म छिन्द्या आशां भूतां त्वयि चिरादरविन्दनेत्र । ३३ ।

चित्तं सुखेन भवतापहृते गृहेषु यन्निर्विशत्युत करावपि गृह्यकृत्ये ।

पादौ पदं न चलतस्तव पादमूलाद् याम कथं व्रजमशो करवाय किं वा । ३४ ।

सिञ्चाङ्ग नस्त्वदधरामृतपूरकेण हासावलोककलगीतजहृच्छयाग्निम् ।

नो चेद वयं विरहजान्मुपयुक्तदेहा ध्यानेन याम पदयोः पदवीं सखे ते । ३५ ।

The Gopīs said : You ought not to speak so cruelly to us. Kindly take in Your service us, that have sought the soles of Your feet renouncing all (other) objects, (even) as Lord Nārāyaṇa (the most ancient Person) accepts (the worship of) those that seek Liberation. (Pray,) do not abandon us, O Lord who are (so) hard to win over! (31) As it has been observed by You, the Knower of Dharma (the principles of righteousness), that the natural duty of women is to render service to their husband and children as well as to the relations of their husband, O beloved One, let such service be done to You, the almighty Lord, the (central) theme of all teachings; for You are the most beloved Friend, (nay) the (very) Self of all embodied souls (so that service rendered to You will redound to the gratification of all, even as by watering the roots of a tree all its limbs get nourished of their own accord). (32) Those well-versed in the sacred lore surely find delight in You (alone), their own eternally beloved Self; what purpose could be gained through a husband, children and others, who are sources of agony? Therefore, be gracious to us, O supreme Lord; (pray,) do not frustrate our hopes centred in You for a long time, O lotus-eyed One? (33) Our mind, which found delight (heretofore) in the home, has been easily lured away by You; and our hands too, that remained engaged in household duties, have been robbed of their capacity for work. Our feet (likewise) do not recede even a step from the soles of Your feet. How, then, can we return to Vraja or (even if we manage somehow to go there) what (useful work) shall we do there (when our mind and other internal organs have ceased functioning altogether)? (34) Quench with the flood of nectar flowing from Your lips the fire of passion kindled (in our breast) by Your (bewitching) smiles, (loving) glances and melodious music. If not, on our bodies being consumed by the fire of separation we shall (like Yogīs) attain to the presence of Your (lotus) feet by force of meditation, O beloved Friend ! (35)

यह्मंयुजाक्ष तव पादतलं रमाया दत्तक्षणं क्वचिदरण्यजनप्रियस्य ।
 अस्माक्ष्म तत्रभूति नान्यसमक्षमङ्गं स्थातुं त्वयाभिरमिता वत पारयामः ।३६।
 श्रियंर्यदायुजजरजश्चकमे तुलस्या लब्ध्वापि वक्षसि पदे किल भृत्यजुष्टम् ।
 यस्याः स्ववीक्षणकृतेऽन्यसुरप्रयासस्तद्वद् वयं च तव पादरजः प्रपन्नाः ।३७।
 तत्रः प्रसीद वृजिनार्दन तेऽङ्घ्रिमूलं प्राप्ता विसृज्य वसतीस्त्वदुपासनाशाः ।
 त्वत्सुन्दरस्मितनिरीक्षणतीव्रकामतप्तात्मनां पुरुषभूषण देहि दास्यम् ।३८।
 वीक्ष्यालकावृतमुखं तव कुण्डलश्रीगण्डस्थलाधारसुधं हसिताबलोक्तम् ।
 दत्ताभयं च भुजदण्डयुगं विलोक्य वक्षः श्रियैकरमणं च भवाम दास्यः ।३९।
 का स्त्रधङ्ग ते कल्पदायतमूर्च्छितेन सम्मोहिताऽऽर्यचरितान्न चलेत्रिलोक्याम् ।
 त्रैलोक्यसौभागमिदं च निरीक्ष्य रूपं यद् योद्विजद्गुणमृगाः पुलकान्वभिन्नम् ।४०।
 व्यक्तं भवान् ब्रजभयार्तिहरोऽभिजातो देवो यथाऽऽदिपुरुषः सुरलोकोगोप्ता ।
 तन्नो निधेहि करपङ्कजमार्तबन्धो तप्तस्तनेषु च शिरस्सु च किङ्करीणाम् ।४१।

From the time, O lotus-eyed One, we touched at some unknown spot (in the forest) the soles of Your (lotus) feet—that concede the privilege of touching them (even) to Goddess Rāmā (only) now and then—alas ! we are not able (even) to stand before anyone else, now that we have been blessed by You, to whom we (the denizens of the forest) are so dear, O Darling ! (36) Having secured a place even on Your bosom, Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) has (always) sought in rivalry with Tulasi (the deity presiding over the basil plant, the favourite of the Lord) for the dust of Your lotus-feet, actually enjoyed by Your servants—Śrī, for (drawing) whose (gracious) look (on them) the other gods (strenuously) exert themselves. We too have likewise sought the dust of Your feet. (37) Therefore, be propitious to us, O Soother of (all) suffering, since we have sought the soles of Your feet quitting our homes with the (sole) ambition of waiting upon You. (Pray,) grant us, O jewel among men, the privilege of serving You—us whose mind is tormented with intense longing awakened by Your piercing glances accompanied by charming smiles. (38) Beholding Your countenance—overhung by curly locks, with its cheeks illumined by the splendour of earrings and lips full of nectar and characterized by smiles and sidelong glances—and gazing on Your stout arms, that have vouchsafed protection (to Your devotees) as well as on Your bosom, the sole delight of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity), we would be Your slaves. (39) Bewitched by Your music characterized by protracted rise and fall of voice and consisting of melodious pieces, and having gazed (even once) on this form, most graceful in all the three worlds—at the sight of which (and hearing which music) cows, birds, trees and beasts (too) wear a thrill of joy—what woman, O Darling ! in the three worlds would not deviate from the conduct of virtuous women ? (40) Indeed You have been particularly born as the Dispeller of the fears and distress of Vraja, (even) as Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person) was born (in heaven) in the form of the divine Dwarf as the Protector of the celestial realm. Therefore, place Your lotus-hand, O Befriender of the afflicted, on the burning breasts and heads of (us,) Your servant-maids. (41)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति विकृषितं तासां श्रुत्वा योगेश्वरेश्वरः । प्रहस्य सदयं गोपीरात्मारामोऽप्यरीरमत् ॥४२॥

ताभिः समेताभिरुदारचेष्टितः प्रियेक्षणोत्फुल्लमुखीभिरच्युतः ।

उदारहासरद्विजकुन्ददीधितिर्व्यरोचतैणाङ्क इवोडुभिवृत् ॥४३॥

उपगीयमान उद्गायन् वनिताशतयूथपः । मालां बिभ्रद् वैजयन्तीं व्यवरन्मण्डयन् वनम् ॥४४॥

नद्याः पुलिनमाविश्य गोपीभिर्हिमबालुकम् । रेमे तत्तरलानन्दकुमुदामोदवायुना ॥४५॥

बाहुप्रसारपरिरम्भकरालकोरुनीवीस्तनालभननर्मनखाग्रपातैः ।

श्वेल्यावलोकहसितैर्ब्रजसुन्दरीणां पुनः अभयन् रतिपति रमयाञ्चकार ॥४६॥

एवं भगवतः कृष्णाल्लब्धमाना महात्मनः । आत्मानं येनैरे स्त्रीणां मानिन्योऽप्यधिकं भुवि ॥४७॥

तासां तत् सौभाग्यमदं वीक्ष्य मानं च केशवः । प्रशमाय प्रसादाय तत्रैवान्तरधीयत ॥४८॥

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे भगवतो रामक्रीडावर्णनं

नारमैकोनविंशोऽध्यायः ॥२९॥

Śrī Śuka went on : Laughing heartily to hear the aforesaid pitiful prayer of the Gopīs, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of all masters of Yoga), proceeded to delight them out of compassion, though revelling in His own Self. (42) Surrounded by them—who had (now) gathered together with their faces blooming at the sight of their beloved Lord—Śrī Kṛṣṇa of noble deeds, whose teeth bore the splendour of jasmine flowers during His charming smile, shone brightly like the full moon (the disk of which is marked with dark spots resembling the spots of an antelope) in the midst of stars. (43) Being praised in song (by the Gopīs) and loudly singing (songs Himself) and wearing a Vaijayanti garland (strung with flowers of five different colours), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who led hundreds of beves of lovely women) sauntered about gracefully the forest (with His bewitching presence). (44) Arriving in company with the Gopīs at the bank of the river (Yamunā)—covered with sands rendered cool by a breeze affording joy through its contact with the waves of that river and charged with the fragrance of water-lilies (growing in the river)—the Lord sported (with the Gopīs there). (45) Inflaming the passion of the charming women of Vraja by stretching His arms (in order to reach them from a distance), embracing them, touching their hands, locks, thighs, skirt and bosom, cutting jokes with them and digging the ends of His nails into their limbs, as well as by His sportful glances accompanied with smiles, Śrī Kṛṣṇa brought delight to them. (46) Having thus received loving attention and regard from the lofty-minded Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Gopīs grew proud and thought themselves superior to all women on earth. (47) Perceiving their vanity produced by such (rare) good-luck as well as their pride, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Śiva) disappeared on that very spot with a view to curbing their pride once for all and in order to shower His grace on them. (48)

Thus ends the twenty-ninth discourse entitled "The Lord's Rāsa-Play" in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXX

The Gopīs' Quest for Śrī Kṛṣṇa during the Rāsa-Play

श्रीशुक उवाच

अन्तर्हिते भगवति सहसैव ब्रजाङ्गनाः । अतर्प्यस्तमचक्षाणाः करिण्य इव यूथपम् । १ ।
 गत्यानुरागस्मितविभ्रमेक्षितैर्मनोरमालापविहारविभ्रमैः ।
 आक्षिप्तचित्ताः प्रमदा रमापतेस्तास्ता विचेष्टा जगृहुस्तदात्मिकाः । २ ।
 गतिस्मितप्रेक्षणभाषणादिषु प्रियाः प्रियस्य प्रतिरूढमूर्तयः ।
 असावहं त्वित्यबलास्तदात्मिका न्यवेदिषुः कृष्णविहारविभ्रमाः । ३ ।
 गायन्त्य उच्चैरमुमेव संहता विचिव्युरुन्मत्तकवद् वनाद् वनम् ।
 पप्रच्छुराकाशवदन्तरं वहिर्भूतेषु सन्तं पुरुषं वनस्पतीन् । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : The Lord having disappeared all of a sudden, the (aforesaid) women of Vraja felt agonized not to see Him (even) as she-elephants would when they failed to see the leader of their herd. (1) With their mind captivated by the (charming) gait, loving smiles and sportful glances as well as by the delightful conversation, dalliances and graceful movements of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Spouse of Rāmā), the young women, getting identified with Him, imitated His various pastimes. (2) Imitating the dalliances and graceful movements of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the (cowherd) women—who were His darlings and felt identified with Him, and whose frames had turned into (so many) replicas (as it were) of their beloved Lord in point of gait, smiles, glances and speech etc.—said (to one another), "Indeed I am Śrī Kṛṣṇa !" (3) Loudly singing His praises in a chorus while going from forest to forest, they searched for Him alone as though they were mad, and enquired of trees about Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Perfect Person) pervading (all) creatures inside as well as outside as ether (in the following words):—(4)

दृष्टो वः कचिदक्षयं प्लक्ष न्यग्रोध नो मनः । नन्दसुनर्गतो हत्वा प्रेमहासावलोकनैः । ५ ।
 कचिद् कुरवकाशोकनागपुत्रागचम्पकाः । रामानुजो मानिनीनामितो दर्पहरिसतः । ६ ।
 कचिन्तुलसि कल्याणि गोविन्दचरणप्रिये । सह त्वालिकुलैर्विभ्रद् दृष्टसेऽतिप्रियोऽन्युतः । ७ ।
 मालत्यदर्शि वः कचिन्मल्लिके जाति यूथिके । प्रीतिं वो जनयन् यातः कसस्पशेन माधवः । ८ ।

चूतप्रियालपनसासनकोविदारजम्बूकबिल्वकुलाप्रकदम्बनीपाः ।
 येऽन्ये परार्थभ्रवका यमुनोपकूलाः शंसन्तु कृष्णपदवीं रहितात्मनां नः । ९ ।
 किं ते कृतं क्षिति तपो वत केशवाङ्घ्रिस्पर्शात्सर्वोत्सुकताङ्गरुहैर्विभासि ।
 अण्डध्रिसम्भव उलूकमविक्रमाद् वा आहो वराहवपुषः परिरम्भणेन । १० ।
 अध्येणपत्न्युपगतः प्रिययेह गात्रैस्तन्वन् दृशां सखि सुनिर्वृतिमच्युतो वः ।
 कान्ताङ्गसङ्गकुचकुङ्कुमरञ्जितायाः कुन्दरजः कुलपतेरिह वाति गन्धः । ११ ।
 बाहुं प्रियांस उपधाय गृहीतपद्मो रामानुजस्तुलसिकालिकुलैर्मदाद्यैः ।
 अन्वीयमान इह वस्तरवः प्रणामं किं वाभिनन्दति चरन् प्रणयावलोकैः । १२ ।

पृच्छतेमा लता बाहूनप्यादिल्लिष्टा वनस्पतेः । नूनं तत्करजस्पृष्टा बिभ्रत्युत्पुलकान्यहो । १३ ।

"O Aśwattha (the holy fig tree), O Plakṣa, O Nyagrodha (the banyan tree) ! was the Darling of Nanda—who has gone (this way) captivating our mind by His (sidelong) glances accompanied with endearing smiles—seen by you ? (5) O Kurabaka (a species of amaranth), Aśoka, Nāga, Punnāga and Campaka trees ! did Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the younger Brother of Balarāma), whose (very) smile takes away the pride of angry women, go this side ? (6) O blessed Tulasī (holy basil), to whom the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) are (so) dear, was that immortal Lord, most beloved of you, seen by you bearing you (on His bosom in a garland) alongwith swarms of bees ? (7) O Mālātī, O Mallikā, O Jātī, O Yūthikā ! was Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Spouse of Lakṣmī) seen by you causing delight to you by the touch of His hand while going (this way)? (8) O Cūta (a particular variety of mango trees), Priyāla, Panasa (the jack tree), Asana, Kovidāra, Jambu (the rose-apple tree), Arka (the sun-plant), Bilva (the wood-apple tree), Bakula, Āmra (the common mango), Kādamba and Nipa (a variety of Kādamba) trees and whatever other trees stand on the bank of the Yamunā (and as such are expected to speak the bare truth), (pray) point out to us—whose mind is no longer with us (having been lured away by Śrī Kṛṣṇa)—the way to reach Śrī Kṛṣṇa, born as you are for the good of others. (9) Oh, what austerity, O Earth, was performed by you in that with the blades of grass and sprouts etc., (which look like bristling hair on your body) you appear thrilled with joy at the touch of the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva)? Has this joy been caused by (the touch of) the Lord's feet (just now) or is it due to your having been bestridden by the Lord with wide strides (during His descent as Vāmana or the Divine Dwarf) or (again) by His embrace (even earlier) in the form of Vārāha (the Divine Boar) ? (10) O she-deer, did Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) come over here in the company of His darling bringing excessive joy to the eyes of you all by His (charming) limbs, O friend ? (For) here comes the fragrance of the garland of jasmine flowers worn on the person of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of His race), and tinged with the saffron on the bosom of His lady-love at the time of her embrace. (11) Holding a lotus (in His right hand) and resting His (other) arm on the (left) shoulder of His darling and being followed by swarms of black bees attracted by Tulasī flowers (inter-woven in His wreath of wild blossoms) and blinded by intoxication (caused by their sweet fragrance), did Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Balarāma's Younger Brother) hail your greetings by His glances surcharged with love, while sauntering here? (12) Make enquiries of these creepers (too, O friends); (for) lo ! even though having encircled the arms (in the shape of boughs) of (their husband in the form of) a tree, they have surely been touched by His nails (while plucking their flowers), as (is evident from the fact that) they exhibit a thrill of joy (in the form of sprouts). (13)

इत्युन्मत्तवोगोप्यः कृष्णान्वेषणकातराः । लीला भगवत्स्तास्ता ह्यनुचक्रुस्तदात्मिकाः । १४ ।
कस्याश्चित् पूतनायन्याः कृष्णायन्यपिबत् स्तनम् । तोकायित्वा रुदत्यन्या पदाहञ्चकटायतीम् । १५ ।
दैत्यायित्वा जहाराण्यामेका कृष्णार्भभावनाम् । रिङ्गयामास काण्ड्यङ्घ्री कर्पन्ती घोषनिःस्वनैः । १६ ।
कृष्णरामायिते द्वे तु गोपायन्यश्च काश्चन । वत्सायतीं हन्ति चान्या तत्रैका तु वकायतीम् । १७ ।
आहूय दूरगा यद्वत् कृष्णस्तमनुकुर्वतीम् । वेणुं कणन्तीं क्रीडन्तीमन्याः शंसन्ति साध्विति । १८ ।
कस्यांचित् स्वभुजं न्यस्य चलन्याहापरा ननु । कृष्णोऽहं पश्यत गतिं ललितामिति तन्मनाः । १९ ।
मा भैष्ट वातवर्षाभ्यां तत्राणं विहितं मया । इत्युक्त्वैकेन हस्तेन यतन्युन्निदधेऽम्बरम् । २० ।
आरुह्यैका पदाऽऽक्रम्य शिरस्याहापरां नृप । दुष्टाहे गच्छ जातोऽहं खलानां ननु दण्डधृक् । २१ ।

तत्रैकोवाच हे गोपा दावाग्रिं पश्यतोत्वणम् । चक्षूंष्याश्वपिदध्वं वो विधास्ये क्षेममञ्जसा । १२१ ।
बद्धान्यया स्रजा काचित्तन्वी तत्र उलूखले । भीता सुदृक् पिथायासं भजे भीतिविडम्बनम् । १२२ ।

Thus raving like a madman, the cowherd women, who got very distracted in their quest for Śrī Kṛṣṇa and felt identified with Him, actually imitated the various pastimes of the Lord. (14) Personating Śrī Kṛṣṇa, one Gopī sucked the breast of another, who played the part of Pūtanā. Behaving like infant Śrī Kṛṣṇa and crying (like a babe), another kicked a fourth, that rested on all fours over the latter as a cart. (15) Playing the role of Tṛṇāvarta (the demon), a certain Gopī carried away another, who fancied herself to be infant Śrī Kṛṣṇa; while a third crawled on hands and knees (like infant Śrī Kṛṣṇa), dragging her feet accompanied by the jingling sounds of her anklets. (16) Two (of the Gopīs) played the role of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma indeed; while some behaved like cowherd boys (and the demons Vatsa and Baka). Of the former two (viz., those that behaved like Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma), again, the latter struck at her friend who personated Vatsāsura*, while the former struck at a fourth that had assumed the role of Bakāsura. (17) Calling to the cows, that had gone far away, in the manner of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, a certain Gopī behaved like Him, playing on the flute and sporting (as He did); while others applauded her saying, "Well done !" (18) With her mind absorbed in Him another Gopī walked (to and fro) resting her arm on some friend and said, "Hullo, I am Kṛṣṇa ! Look at my graceful gait." (19) "Do not be afraid of storm and shower; protection against them has (already) been provided by Me !" observing thus, one held up her scarf with one hand making a show of effort (in doing so). (20) Treading on another's head and standing on her, O Protector of men, a certain Gopī said, "O vile snake, clear away ! Indeed I am born (here) as the chastiser of the wicked." (21) One of those Gopīs said (to others; visualizing them as so many cowherds), "O Gopas look at the terrible forest fire ! Shut your eyes at once; I shall easily vouchsafe protection to you." (22) Tied to another Gopī, that had been seated in such a way as to pass for a mortar, with a garland by another (who played the role of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's mother) and (consequently) afraid, one delicate lady of that lot with lovely eyes covered her face and put up a show of fear. (23)

एवं कृष्णं पृथ्व्याना वृन्दावनलतास्तरुन् । व्यचक्षत वनोद्देशे पदानि परमात्मनः । १२४ ।
पदानि व्यक्तमेतानि नन्दसूनोर्महात्मनः । लक्ष्यन्ते हि ध्वजाभोजवज्राङ्कुशयवादिभिः । १२५ ।
तैस्तैः पदैस्तत्पदवीमन्विच्छन्त्योऽग्रतोऽबला । वध्वाः पदैः सुपूक्तानि विलोक्यार्ताः समब्रुवन् । १२६ ।
कस्याः पदानि चैतानि याताया नन्दसूनना । असंन्यस्तप्रकोष्ठायः करेणोः करिणा यथा । १२७ ।
अनयाऽऽराधितो नूनं भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । वज्रो विहाय गोविन्दः प्रीतो यामनयद् रहः । १२८ ।
धन्या अहो अमी आल्यो गोविन्दाद्भ्यग्रजरेणवः । यान् ब्रह्मेशो रमा देवी दधुर्भूयधनुन्तये । १२९ ।
तस्या अमूनि नः क्षोभं कुर्वन्त्युच्चैः पदानि यत् । यैकापहत्य गोपीनां रहो भुङ्क्तेऽच्युताधरम् । १३० ।
न लक्ष्यन्ते पदान्यत्र तस्या नूनं तृणाङ्कुरैः । खिद्यत्सुजाताद्भित्तलाभुनिन्ये प्रेयसी प्रियः । १३१ ।
इमान्यधिकमग्नानि पदानि वहतो बधूम् । गोप्यः पश्यत कृष्णस्य भारक्रान्तस्य कामिनः । १३२ ।
अत्रावरोपिता कान्ता पुष्पहेतोर्महात्मना । अत्र प्रसूनावचयः प्रियाथं प्रेयसा कृतः ।
प्रपदाक्रमणे एते पश्यतासकले पदे । १३३ ।

केशप्रसाधनं तत्र कामिन्याः कामिना कृतम् । तानि चूडयता कान्तामुपविष्टमिह ध्रुवम् । १३४ ।

* According to popular tradition it was Balarāma, and not Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who killed Vatsāsura—पद्माक्षो निहतोऽनन्त कस्यश्चै धेनुकायय ।

Evidently this tradition is referred to by the sage Śuka in the above verse.

रेमे तथा चात्मरत आत्मारामोऽप्यखण्डितः । कामिनां दर्शयन् दैन्यं स्त्रीणां चैव दुरात्मताम् । ३५ ।

Thus (imitating the pastimes of the Lord and) enquiring of the creepers and trees of Vṛndāvana (once more) about Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the cowherd women noticed in a certain part of the forest the footprints of the Lord (embodying the Supreme Spirit). (24) (They said to one another,) "Surely these are the footprints of the high-souled Darling of Nanda since they are (easily) distinguished through the marks of a flag, a lotus, a thunderbolt, a goad, a barley seed and so on. (25) Tracking His path with the help of those footprints, the poor women felt sore at heart to find before them the said footprints interspersed with those of a lady and spoke to one another (as follows):—(26) "Whose footprints can these be? Who is she that has gone (this side) in the company of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Darling of Nanda) with His forearm placed on her shoulder, (even) like a she-elephant walking by the side of a male elephant? (27) The almighty Lord Śrī Hari has surely been propitiated by this lady in that, leaving us (all), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) has been pleased to take her apart. (28) Oh, blessed are those particles of dust under the feet of Govinda, O friends, that (even) Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva and Goddess Rāmā have borne on the crown of their head in order to drive away their agony of separation (from Him). (29) Those footprints, that meet our eyes, of that lady, who having stolen away Śrī Kṛṣṇa enjoys alone in secret the (nectar of) lips of that immortal Lord, the (common) property of the Gopis are causing great agitation in our mind. (30) (Proceeding further the Gopis remarked,) her footprints are not to be noticed here. Surely the Darling has lifted up His lady-love, whose delicate soles were being pricked with (sharp) blades of grass. (31) O cowherd women, behold these footprints, sunk deeper (into the soil), of the love-stricken Śrī Kṛṣṇa who was (apparently) weighed down by a (heavy) load, carrying His sweetheart (as He did). (32) (Going still further, the Gopis observed,) on this spot the lady-love has (obviously) been set down by the high-souled Lord for the sake of (gathering) flowers.* (Moving still further they said,) here flowers have been gathered by the Darling for the sake of His beloved, behold these impressions, which are not entire, indicating that the Lord (evidently) trod on the fore part of His feet (here). (33) (Proceeding still further, they said,) here it seems the hair of that loving lady have been done by the love-stricken Lord, while here the Lord has surely squatted (on the ground) while fastening the flowers to her braid." (34) (Śrī Śuka continued) though (ever) delighted in Himself and sporting with His own self and remaining unaffected (by the charms of lovely women), Śrī Kṛṣṇa toyed with that lady in order to illustrate the wretched plight of the love-stricken as well as the evil-mindedness of women. (35)

इत्येवं दर्शयन्त्यस्तांश्रुर्गोष्यो विचेतसः । यां गोपीमनयत् कुण्डो विहायान्याः स्त्रियो वने । ३६ ।

सा च मेने तदाऽऽत्मानं वरिष्ठं सर्वयोषिताम् । हित्वा गोपीः कामयाना मामसौ भजते प्रियः । ३७ ।

ततो गत्वा वनोद्देशं दृष्ट्वा केशवमब्रवीत् । न पारयेहं चलितुं नय मां यत्र ते मनः । ३८ ।

एवमुक्तः प्रियामाह स्कन्ध आरुह्यतामिति । ततश्चान्तर्द्वे कृष्णः सा वधूरुन्वतप्यत । ३९ ।

हा नाथ रमण प्रेष्ठ क्वासि क्वासि महाभुज । दास्यास्ते कृपणायामे सखे दर्शय सन्निधिम् । ४० ।

अन्विच्छन्त्यो भगवतो मार्गं गोष्योऽविदूतः । ददुःशुः प्रियविश्लेषमोहितां दुःखितां सखीम् । ४१ ।

तथा कथितमाकर्ण्य मानप्राप्तिं च माधवात् । अवमानं च दौरात्याद् विसम्यं परमं ययुः । ४२ ।

Thus showing to one another what they saw, the cowherd women wandered in a bewildered state. That Gopī, again, whom Śrī Kṛṣṇa had taken away (with Him), leaving (all)

* The whole of verse 32 and the first line of the following have not been commented upon by Śrīdhara Svāmī, the earliest commentator of Śrīmad Bhāgavatā, and not even by Śrī Vallabhaṇācārya, which shows that they were not recognized by them as forming part of the text of Śrīmad Bhagavatā.

the other women in the forest, thereupon thought herself to be the most lovely of all the women. (She said to herself,) "Abandoning the other Gopis, that loved Him, the Darling is enjoying my company (alone)!" (36-37) Then, reaching a certain part of the forest, she arrogantly said to Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva), "I am unable to walk (any more); carry me wherever it pleases you." (38) Requested thus, the Lord replied to His lady-love, "Mount my shoulder (then)!" After that, (however, as soon as the lady tried to mount His shoulder), Śrī Kṛṣṇa disappeared and the said lady repented (in the following words):—(39) "My most beloved lord, O delighter of my soul, where are you, where are you, O mighty-armed one, pray reveal your presence, O friend, to me, your wretched servant." (40) Tracking the path of the Lord (still further), the cowherd women perceived not very far from them their afflicted female companion confounded due to her separation from her beloved Lord. (41) The Gopīs felt highly astonished to hear the account narrated by her as also how she had received honour from Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Spouse of Lakṣmī) and how (again) through (her own) wickedness she had met with disregard at His hands. (42)

ततोऽविशन् वनं चन्द्रज्योत्स्ना यावद् विभाव्यते । तमः प्रविष्टमालक्ष्य ततो निववृत्तुः स्त्रियः । ४३ ।
 तन्मनस्कास्तदालपास्तद्विवेष्टास्तदात्मिकाः । तद्गुणानेव गायन्त्यो नात्मागाराणि सस्मरुः । ४४ ।
 पुनः पुलिनमागत्य कलिन्ध्याः कृष्णभावनाः । समवेता जगुः कृष्णं तदागमनकाङ्क्षिताः । ४५ ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसा संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे रासक्रीडायां कृष्णान्वेषणं नाम त्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३० ।

Again (in her company) the (cowherd) women penetrated the forest (further) so long as moonlight was visible. Perceiving (however) the darkness had set in they returned from that (very) point. (43) With their mind absorbed in Him, talking of Him, imitating His various activities, nay, identified with Him and singing His praises alone, the cowherd women did not recollect their own body, much less their homes. (44) Coming back to the sandy bank of the Kāṇḍī, thinking of that Enchanter of souls (alone), and seized with a longing for His return, they sang of Śrī Kṛṣṇa in a chorus. (45)

Thus ends the thirtieth discourse entitled "The Gopīs' Quest for Śrī Kṛṣṇa during the Rāsa Play," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकत्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXI

The Gopīs' Song (at the Lord's disappearance) during the Rāsa Play

गोप्य ऊचुः

जयति तेऽधिकं जन्मना ब्रजः श्रयत इन्दिरा शश्वदत्र हि ।
 दयित दृश्यतां दिक्षु तावकास्त्वयि धृतासवस्त्वां विचिन्वते । १ ।

शरदुदाशये साधुजातसत्सरसिजोदरश्रीमुषा दृशा ।
 सुरतनाथ तेऽश्लुक्दासिका वरद निम्नतो नेह किं वधः । २ ।
 विषजलाप्ययाद् व्यालराक्षसाद् वर्षमारुताद् वैद्युतानलात् ।
 वृषमयात्मजाद् विश्वतोभयादृषभ ते वयं रक्षिता मुहुः । ३ ।
 न खलु गोपिकानन्दनो भवानखिलदेहिनामन्तरात्मदक् ।
 विखनसार्वथितो विश्वगुणये सख उदेयिवान् सात्वतां कुले । ४ ।

The Gopis sang : Vraja shines all the more brightly by Your descent (in the house of Nanda and Yaśodā); for Lakṣmī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) constantly dwells here (from that time in order to catch Your glimpse). O beloved Lord ! please (reveal Yourself and) see how Your sweethearts, who have centred their life in You, are searching for You in every quarter. (1) Is it no massacring here on Your part, O Granter of boons, who kill us, Your gratuitous slaves, O Bestower of enjoyment, by Your (shaft-like) eyes, that steal the splendour of the interior of a lovely and full-blown lotus growing in an autumnal pond ? (2) We have been saved by You time and again, O jewel among men, from death through poisonous water, from (the clutches of) a demon disguised as a snake (Aghāsura by name), from showers and storm as well as from strokes of lightning, from the demon that appeared in the form of a calf (the young of a bull) as well as from Vyomāsura * (the son of the demon Maya), nay, from every (other) peril. (3) Surely You are no (mere) son of a cowherd woman (Yaśodā), being the witness of the internal sense (viz., the mind) of all embodied souls. Solicited by Brahmā, You appeared, O Friend, in the race of the Yadus for the protection of the universe. (4)

विरचिताभयं वृष्णिधुर्यं ते चरणमीयुषां संसृतेर्भयात् ।
 करसरोरुहं कान्त कामदं शिरसि धेहि नः श्रीकरग्रहम् । ५ ।
 ब्रजजनार्तिहन् वीर योषितां निजजनस्सयध्वंसनस्मित ।
 भज सखे भवत्किङ्करीः स्म नो जलरुहाननं चारु दर्शय । ६ ।
 प्रणतदेहिनां पापकर्शनं तृणचरानुगं श्रीनिकेतनम् ।
 फणिफणार्पितं ते पदाम्बुजं कृणु कुचेपु नः कृन्धि हृच्छयम् । ७ ।
 मधुरया गिरा वल्गुवाक्यया दुधमनोज्ञया पुष्करेक्षण ।
 विधिकरीरिमा वीर मुह्यतीरधरसीधुनाऽऽप्याययस्व नः । ८ ।
 तव कथामृतं तप्तजीवनं कविभिरीडितं कल्मषापहम् ।
 श्रवणमङ्गलं श्रीमदाततं भुवि गुणन्ति ते भूरिदा जनाः । ९ ।
 प्रहसितं प्रिय प्रेमवीक्षणं विहरणं च ते ध्यानमङ्गलम् ।
 रहसि संविदो या हृदिस्पृशः कुहक नो मनः क्षोभयन्ति हि । १० ।
 चलसि यद् ब्रजाच्चारयन् पशून् नलिनसुन्दरं नाथ ते पदम् ।
 शिलतृणाङ्कुरैः सीदतीति नः कलिलतां मनः कान्त गच्छति । ११ ।
 दिनपरिक्षये नीलकुन्तलैर्वनरुहाननं विभ्रदावृतम् ।
 घनरजस्वलं दर्शयन् मुहुर्मनसि नः स्मरं वीर यच्छसि । १२ ।

* Vide Discourse XXXVII below. According to a learned and saintly commentator the incident relating to Vyomāsura took place before the Rāsa-Līlā even though it is described by the sage Suka later.

Place on our head, O beloved Lord, Your lotus-like palm, that has vouchsafed protection, O Chief of the Vṛṣṇis, to those that have sought Your feet from fear of transmigration, (nay,) which grants (all) desires and has clasped the hand of Śrī (as a part of the marriage ceremony). (5) O Alleviator of the suffering of the people of Vraja, O gallant Lord, whose (very) smile crushes the pride (born of unrequited love) of Your own people, accept (in Your service), O Friend, us, Your (avowed) servants and reveal to us (poor women) Your charming lotus-like countenance. (6) Set on our bosom Your lotus-feet—which dissipate the sins of (all) embodied beings that bow down to You, which follow (out of affection even) animals that live on grass, (nay,) which are the abode of beauty and prosperity and which were (dauntlessly) placed on the hoods of a (terrible) snake (Kāliya)—and thereby soothe the pangs of love pent up in our heart. (7) (Pray,) revive with the nectar of Your lips O valiant one, these women, in the person of ourselves, who are ready to do Your bidding and who are getting charmed, O Lord with lotus eyes, by Your melodious speech, consisting of delightful expressions and pleasing (even) to the learned. (8) Munificent are those men who extensively recite on earth Your nectar-like story, which is life-giving to the afflicted, has been celebrated by the wise and eradicates (all) sins, which is auspicious to hear and is most soothing (too). (9) Your hearty laugh, O Darling, loving glances and pastimes which are happy to contemplate on and Your covert jests uttered in secret, that went deep into our heart, really agitate our mind (now that You are away from us), O deceitful Lover! (10) Our mind, O beloved Lord, grows uneasy to think that Your feet, charming as a lotus, get pricked with spikes of corn, blades of grass and sprouts when You go out of Vraja pasturing the cattle. (11) You kindle love in our heart, O gallant Lord, again and again even as You reveal Yourself (before us) at the close of the day, wearing a countenance overhung by dark curly locks and soiled with the dust raised by cows (that constitute the wealth of the Gopas), and (thus) resembling a lotus* (surrounded by black bees and covered with pollen). (12)

प्रणतकामदं	पद्मजार्चितं	धरणिमण्डनं	ध्येयमापदि ।
चरणपङ्कजं	शन्तमं च	ते रमण नः	स्तेनेष्वर्पयाधिहन् । १३ ।
सुरतवर्धनं	शोकनाशनं	स्वरितवेणुना	सुष्ठु चुष्वितम् ।
इतररागविस्मरणं	नृपां	वितर वीर	नस्तेऽधरामृतम् । १४ ।
अटति यद् भवानह्नि	काननं	ब्रुदिर्युगायते	त्वामपश्यताम् ।
कुटिलकुन्तलं	श्रीमुखं च	ते जड उदीक्षतां	पक्ष्मकृद् दृशाम् । १५ ।
पतिसुतान्वयभ्रातृबान्धवानतिविलङ्घ्य			तेऽप्यच्युतागताः ।
गतिविदस्तवोद्गीतमोहिताः	कितव	योषितः	कस्यजेत्रिंशि । १६ ।
रहसि संविदं	हृद्योदयं	प्रहसिताननं	प्रेमवीक्षणम् ।
बृहदुरः	श्रियो वीक्ष्य धाम ते	मुहुरतिस्पृहा	मुह्यते मनः । १७ ।
ब्रजवनौकसां	व्यक्तिरङ्ग ते	वृजिनहन्त्यलं	विश्वमङ्गलम् ।
त्यज मनाक् च	नस्त्वत्स्पृहात्मनां	स्वजनहृद्गुजां	यन्निवृत्तम् । १८ ।
यने सुजातचरणाम्बुरुहं	स्तेनेषु भीताः	शनैः प्रिय दधीमहि	कर्कशेषु ।
तेनादवीमटसि तद् व्यथते न	किंस्वित्	कृपादिभिर्भ्रमति	धीर्भवदायुषां नः । १९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे रासक्रीडायां
गोपीगीते नामैकत्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३१ ।

* Lit., sprung out of water.

O Delighter of souls, (pray) set on our bosom, O Reliever of agony, Your most blissful lotus-like feet, which grant the desires of those that bow low to them, and are worshipped by Brahmā (the lotus-born), which are the ornament of the earth and are worth contemplating upon in (times of) adversity. (13) Vouchsafe to us, O heroic Lord, the nectar of Your lips, which heightens our enjoyment and destroys (all) grief, (nay,) which is fully enjoyed by the flute sounded by You and makes people forget all other attachments. (14) When You proceed to the woods during the daytime, (even) half a moment becomes an age to us, who fail to see You. And dull-witted is he (Brahmā) who has created rows of hair on the edge (and thus interrupted the joy) of eyes of us (all), that eagerly behold (without winking Your splendid countenance overhung by curly hair (on Your return from the woods at eventide). (15) Completely neglecting our husband, children, kinsmen, brothers and other relations, O immortal Lord, and enchanted by the shrill note of Your flute, we have sought Your presence, knowing as we did Your (alluring) ways. What man, O Trickster, would abandon (helpless) women at (dead of) night ? (16) Perceiving Your amorous advances made in secret, Your smiling countenance, which kindles love in our heart, Your loving glances and broad chest, the abode of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity). Our mind gets infatuated again and again through intense longing (to meet You). (17) Your manifestation (on earth), O Darling, has put an end to the sorrows of the inhabitants of Vraja as well as of the denizens of the forest, and is extremely auspicious for the whole universe. (Pray) unreservedly administer to us—whose mind is full of longing for you—at least a little of that remedy (in the form of Your company) which may relieve the pangs of heart of Your own people. (18) You traverse the forest on those tender lotus-like feet which, O Darling, we have gently and timidly set on our hard bosom (for fear of injuring them). Are they not pained by coming in contact with gravel etc. ? The mind of us (all), whose life is centred in You, reels at the (very) thought of it. (19)

Thus ends the thirty-first discourse, entitled "the Gopīs' Song (at the Lord's disappearance) during the Rāsa-Play," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्वात्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXII

The Lord comforts the Gopīs during the Rāsa Play

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति गोप्यः प्रगायन्त्यः प्रलपन्त्यश्च चित्रधा । रुद्रुः सुखरं राजन् कृष्णदर्शनलालसाः । १ ।
 तासामाविरभूच्छौरिः सयमानमुखाम्बुजः । पीताम्बरधरः स्रग्वी साक्षान्मथममन्थः । २ ।
 तं विलोक्यागतं प्रेष्ठं प्रीत्युफुल्लदुःखलाः । उत्स्युर्युगपत् सर्वास्तनवः प्राणमिवागतम् । ३ ।
 काचित् कराम्बुजं शौरेर्जगुहेऽञ्जलिना मुदा । काचिद् दधार तद्बाहुर्मसे चन्दनरूपितम् । ४ ।
 काचिदञ्जलिनागुह्णान्तन्वी ताम्बूलचर्वितम् । एका तदङ्घ्रिकमलं सन्तप्ता स्तनयोरधात् । ५ ।

एका ध्रुकुटिमाबध्य प्रेमसंरम्भविह्वला । प्रतीवैक्षत् कटाक्षैः संदृष्टदशनच्छदा । ६ ।
 अपरानिमिषद्भ्यां जुषाणा तन्मुखाम्बुजम् । आपीतमपि नात्यत् सन्तस्तरणं यथा । ७ ।
 तं काचित्रेत्रन्नेण हृदिकृत्य निमील्य च । पुलकाङ्गुपगुह्यास्ते योगीवानन्द समुता । ८ ।
 सर्वास्ताः केशवालोकरमोत्सवनिर्वृताः । जहृर्विरहजं तापं प्राज्ञं प्राप्य यथा जनाः । ९ ।
 ताभिर्विधूतशोकाभिर्भगवानच्युतो वृतः । व्यरोचताधिकं तात पुरुषः शक्तिर्भिर्यथा । १० ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Thus singing at the pitch of their voice and raving in various ways, the cowherd women loudly wailed, O king, seized as they were with a longing to behold Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (1) In their (very) midst appeared (all of a sudden) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Sūra), clad in yellow (silk) and adorned with a garland and wearing a smiling lotus-like countenance, the Enchanter of Cupid himself (who maddens the whole world). (2) Beholding Śrī Kṛṣṇa, their most beloved Lord, come (back), all the women sprang on their feet all at once, their eyes wide open with joy, (even) as the limbs of a body would on finding the life-breath returned. (3) One (of them) clasped the lotus-like hands of Sauri with her joined palms with delight, while another placed on her shoulder His arm smeared with sandal-paste. (4) A certain Gopi of delicate limbs took in the hollow of her palms the betel chewed by Him, while another set His lotus-feet on her bosom, burning as she was (with the fire of passion). (5) Knitting her brows and closely biting her (lower) lip, another looked at Him as though tormenting Him with volleys of her side-glances, agitated as she was with anger caused by (unrequited) love. (6) Another continued to gaze on His lotus-like countenance with unwinking eyes, even though it had been duly contemplated (for a long time), but did not feel sated any more than saints would while contemplating on His (lotus) feet. (7) A certain Gopi ushered Him into his heart through the hollows of her eyes, shut her eyes (in order to preclude His egress) and, (mentally) embracing Him with the hairs of her body standing on end, stood immersed in bliss like a Yogi (one united in thought with God). (8) Enraptured with the grand feast provided by the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva), they all shed the agony caused by separation from Him even as men get rid of their grief on meeting an enlightened soul. (9) Surrounded by those women, who had shaken off their sorrow, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) shone very brightly, O dear Pañkṣit, like the Supreme Spirit endowed with His potencies (in the form of Sattva etc.). (10)

ताः समादाय कालिन्ध्या निर्विश्य पुलिनं विभुः । विकसत्कुन्दमन्दारसुरभ्यनिलषट्पदम् । ११ ।

शरच्चन्द्रांशुसन्दोहध्वस्तदोषातमः शिवम् । कृष्णाया हस्ततरालचितकोमलबालुकम् । १२ ।

तद्दर्शनाह्लादविधूतहृद्रजो मनोरथान्तं श्रुतयो यथा ययुः ।

स्वैरुत्तरीयैः कुचकुङ्कुमाङ्कितैरचीकृपन्नासनमात्मवन्धवे । १३ ।

तत्रोपरविष्टो भगवान् स ईश्वरो योगेश्वरान्तर्हृदि कल्पितासनः ।

चकास गोपीपरिषद्गतोऽर्चितल्लोलोक्वलयक्ष्येकपदं वपुर्दधत् । १४ ।

सभाजयित्वा तमनङ्गदीपनं सहासलीलेक्षणविभ्रमध्रुवा ।

संस्पर्शनेनाङ्कृताङ्ग्रिहस्तयोः संस्तुय ईषत्कुपिता बभाषिरे । १५ ।

Taking them (with Him) in a body the almighty Lord repaired to the delightful bank of the Kālīndī, which was swarmed with black bees drawn by (gentle) winds charged with the fragrance of full-blown jasmines and Mandāras, where the darkness of the night had been dispelled by the flood of rays of the autumnal moon and on which soft sands had been spread by the hands—in the form of waves—of the Kṛṣṇā (Yamunā). (11-12) The Gopīs, whose heartache (caused by their separation from the Lord) had been dissipated by the joy flowing from His sight, attained the end of their desire even as the Śrutis (Vedic texts dealing with rituals performed from some interested motive, and thus failing to perceive God) transcend the realm of desire (when they pass on to the topic of Jñāna or God-Realization and achieve their real purpose). (Now) they prepared a seat for Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Friend of their soul) with their scarfs spotted with the saffron paint on their bosom. (13) Seated there and honoured by them, the aforesaid almighty Lord, who stands enthroned in the heart of masters of Yoga, shone in the midst of that bevy of the Gopis, revealing a personality which is the one abode of loveliness spread through (all) the three worlds. (14) Greeting Śrī Kṛṣṇa—who had kindled love in their breast—with their eye-brows, whose grace fulness was heightened by their sportful glances accompanied by (bright) smiles, and warmly praising Him while pressing His hands and feet placed in their lap, they spoke (as follows) feeling a bit enraged. (15)

गोप्य ऊचुः

भजतोऽनुभजन्त्येक एक एतद्विपर्ययम् । नोभयांश्च भजन्त्येक एतन्नो ब्रूहि साधु भोः । १९।

The Gopis said : Some love in return those who love them; while others do (just) the reverse of it (i.e., love even those that do not love them in return). Still others do not love either. Kindly explain this clearly to us, O Lord ! (16)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

मिथो भजन्ति ये सख्यः स्वार्थेकान्तोद्यमा हि ते । न तत्र सौहृदं धर्मः स्वार्थार्थं तद्वि नान्यथा । १७।

भजन्त्यभजतो ये वै करुणाः पितरो यथा । धर्मो निरपवादोऽत्र सौहृदं च सुमध्यमाः । १८।

भजतोऽपि न वै केचिद् भजन्त्यभजतः कुतः । आत्मारामा ह्याप्तकामा अकृतज्ञा गुरुद्वेष्टाः । १९।

नाहं तु सख्यो भजतोऽपि जन्तून् भजाम्यमीषामनुवृत्तिवृत्तये ।

यथाधनो लब्धधने विनष्टे तच्चिन्तयान्यत्रिभृतो न वेद । २०।

एवं मदर्थेऽङ्घ्रितलोकवेदस्वानां हि वो मय्यनुवृत्तयेऽबलाः ।

मया परोक्षं भजता तिरोहितं मामूयितुं मार्हथ तत् प्रियं प्रियाः । २१।

न पारयेऽहं निरवद्यसंयुजां स्वसाधुकृत्यं विवृधायुषापि वः ।

या माभजन् दुर्जरोहश्चङ्खलाः संवृश्च्य तद् वः प्रतियातु साधुना । २२।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पाण्डवस्योऽर्थव्याख्यायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे शसक्रीडायां

गोपीमान्वनं नाम द्वात्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३२।

The glorious Lord replied : They who love one another (for mutual benefit), O friends, (really love their own self and none other; for) their endeavour indeed is solely actuated by self-interest. Neither goodwill nor virtue plays any part there; for such love has a (purely) selfish motive and not otherwise. (17) They who actually love even those that do not love them (in return) are compassionate (and loving too) like one's parents. There is blameless virtue as well as goodwill operating here, O charming girls ! (18) Some indeed do not love even those that love them, much less those that do not love them. They are either sages revelling in their own self (and having no knowledge of the external world) or those who have realized their ambition (and are therefore free from all craving for enjoyment, though conscious of external objects) or dullards (who are incapable of appreciating a good turn done to them) or ungrateful people (who bear enmity to their own benefactors that are as good as their father, though conscious of their services). (19) I, for my part, O friends, (do not come under any of these categories, being supremely compassionate and friendly, inasmuch as I) do not (visibly) reciprocate the love (and remain out of sight for some time) of even those individuals who love Me, in order that they could ever think of Me in the same way as a penniless person would, on a treasure found by him being lost, remain engrossed in the thought of that wealth (alone) and would not be sensible to anything else. (20) Indeed in order to ensure thus your constant devotion to Me, O fair ones, I remained out of your sight (for some time), though loving you invisibly (and listening to your professions of love with great delight)—you, who have for My sake ignored (all worldly decorum as well as (the injunctions of) the Vedas and deserted your own people. Therefore, O beloved ones, you ought not to find fault with Me, your darling. (21) (As a matter of fact) I cannot even through the (long) life of a heavenly being (36000 human years) repay My obligation (which is the duty of all virtuous men) to you, whose connection with Me is (absolutely) free from blemish and who have fixed your mind on Me completely cutting asunder the fetters that bound you to your home and which cannot be easily broken. (Therefore,) let your services to Me be repaid by your own goodness. (22)

Thus ends the thirty-second discourse entitled "The Lord comforts the Gopīs during the Rāsa-Play" in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रयस्त्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXIII

A Description of the Rāsa Play

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्थं भगवतो गोप्यः श्रुत्वा वाचः सुपेशलाः । जहृर्विरहजं तापं तदङ्गोपचिताशिषः । १ ।
तत्रारभत गोविन्दो रासक्रीडामनुव्रतः । स्त्रीरत्नैरन्वितः प्रीतैरन्योबाद्धबाहुभिः । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Hearing thus the bewitching words of the Lord, the cowherd women cast off the agony caused by their separation (from Him), their desire having been fulfilled through the (thrilling) touch of His divine personality (the embodiment of Bliss). (1) Accompanied by those jewels among women (so) devoted and affectionate towards Him, who stood (in a circle) with their arms interlocked, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) inaugurated His (celebrated) Rāsa-Play* on the aforesaid spot (the sandy bank of the Yamunā). (2)

रासोत्सवः सम्प्रवृत्तो गोपीमण्डलमण्डितः । योगेश्वरेण कृष्णेन तासां मध्ये द्वयोर्द्वयोः ।
प्रविष्टेन गृहीतानां कण्ठे स्वनिकटं स्त्रियः । ३ ।

* In the Nāṭya-Śāstra (the well-known manual on histrionics attributed to the sage Bharata) we come across the following definition of Rāsa:—

नर्तगृहीतकण्ठनामन्योऽन्तकश्रियाम् । नर्तकीनां भवेद् रासो मण्डलीभूय नर्तनम् ॥

"Rāsa is the name of a particular dance carried on by a number of women dancing in a circle with their hands interlocked in the company of men who dance with them with their arms placed round the neck of their female partners.

यं मन्येरन् नभस्तावद् विमानशतसङ्कुलम् । दिर्वाकसां सदारणामौत्सुक्यापहतात्मनाम् । ४ ।
 ततो दुन्दुभयो नेदुर्निपेतुः पुष्पवृष्टयः । जगुर्गन्धर्वपतयः सस्त्रीकास्तद्यशोऽमलम् । ५ ।
 वलयानां नूपुराणां किङ्किणीनां च योषिताम् । सप्रियाणामभ्रच्छब्दस्तुमुलो रासमण्डले । ६ ।
 तत्रातिशुशुभे ताभिर्भगवान् देवकीसुतः । मध्ये मणीनां हैमानां महामरकतो यथा । ७ ।
 पादन्यासैर्भुजविधुतिभिः सस्मितैर्भूविलासैर्भज्यन्मध्यैश्चलकुचपटैः । कुण्डलैर्गण्डलोलैः ।
 स्विद्यन्मुख्यः कबररशनाग्रन्थयः । कृष्णवधो गायन्त्यस्तं तडित इव ता मेघचक्रे विरेजुः । ८ ।
 उच्चैर्जगुर्नृत्यमाना रक्तकण्ठ्यो रतिप्रियाः । कृष्णाभिमर्शमुदितौ यद्गीतेनेदमावृतम् । ९ ।
 काचित् समं मुकुन्देन स्वरजातीरमिश्रिताः । उन्नित्ये पूजिता तेन प्रीयता साधु साध्विति ।
 तदेव ध्रुवमुन्नित्ये तस्यै मानं च बहूदात् । १० ।
 काचिद् रासपरिश्रान्ता पार्श्वस्थस्य गदाभूतः । जग्राह बाहुना स्कन्धं श्लथद्वल्यमल्लिका । ११ ।
 तत्रैकांसगतं बाहुं कृष्णस्योत्पलसौरभम् । चन्दनालिप्तमाघ्राय हृष्टरोमा चुचुब्ध ह । १२ ।
 कस्याश्चिन्नाद्याविक्षिप्तकुण्डलत्विषमण्डितम् । गण्डं गण्डे सन्दधत्या अदात्ताम्बुलचर्वितम् । १३ ।
 नृत्यन्ती गायती काचित् कूजन्पुष्पमेखला । पार्श्वस्थाच्युतहस्ताब्जश्रान्ताधातुस्तनयोः शिवम् । १४ ।

(Now) commenced duly the festive dance of Rāsa adorned with the circle of the aforesaid Gopis standing with their necks encircled by (the arms of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Master of Yoga (inconceivable powers), who (appeared to have) introduced Himself (in so many identical forms) between every two Gopis, and whom those (cowherd) women imagined to be by their own side. Presently the firmament was thronged with hundreds of aerial cars of heavenly beings, who were accompanied by their consorts and whose mind had been carried away by curiosity (in the form of a longing to behold Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (3-4) Then sounded kettle-drums (beaten by heavenly beings), showers of flowers fell, and the chiefs of Gandharvas sang His immaculate glory in chorus with their spouses. (5) There arose a confused din produced by (the jingling of) bangles and anklets and (the tinkling of) tiny bells attached to the girdle of the cowherd women joined with their beloved Lord in that ring of Rāsa dancers. (6) There in the company of those girls Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devakī) shone exceedingly bright like a large emerald* strung in the midst of (every two) gold beads. (7) With their (measured) treads, the motions of their hands, the playful movements of their eye-brows, accompanied with (graceful) smiles, bending waists, shaking breasts and fluttering skirts of their garments, ear-rings rocking against their cheeks, perspiring faces, and their braids and girdles loosened (on account of their swift movement) and celebrating the Lord in song, the aforesaid darlings of Śrī Kṛṣṇa shone brightly like flashes of lightning in a mass of clouds. (8) Engaged in dancing and delighted with the touch of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Gopis—whose voice was sweetened with love, (nay,) whose (sole) delight was loving devotion (to Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and whose music filled (the whole of) this universe—sang at the pitch of their voice. (9) Singing in chorus with Śrī Kṛṣṇa a certain Gopī (Viśākhā) struck at a high pitch notes (altogether) different (from those of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and was applauded by the latter—who felt (much) delighted (by her performance)—in the words, "Well done !", "Bravo !". Another girl (presumably Lalitā) reproduced the same tune at the top of her voice according to the measure of time technically known by the name of Dhruvapada (Dhruvad) and the Lord showed abundant regard to her (for her excellent performance). (10) Fully tired by the Rāsa dance, another Gopī (probably Śrī Rādhā) clasped with her arm the shoulder of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu, and) who stood by her side, her bangles slipping (from her wrists) and jasmine flowers dropping

* Śrī Kṛṣṇa is said to possess the hue of the sapphire. Here He has been likened to an emerald apparently due to His colour being blended with the golden hue of the Gopis and thus appearing green rather than cerulean

(from her braid due to langour). (11) Smelling the arm—emitting the fragrance of a water-lily and smeared with sandal, paste and resting on one of her shoulders—of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (yet) another of those Gopīs (Śyāmalā) kissed it, so it is said, the hair on her body standing on end (due to joy). (12) To a certain Gopī (presumably Śaibyā) who united with His cheek her own lit up with the lustre of her ear-ring tossed by the dance, the Lord gave His half-chewed betel. (13) Fatigued while dancing and singing with her anklets and girdle jingling (with the movement of her feet), another (Gopī, most probably Bhadrā), pressed to her bosom the soothing lotus-like palm of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) standing beside her. (14)

गोष्ठ्यो लब्ध्वाच्युतं कान्तं श्रिय एकान्तवल्लभम् । गृहीतकण्ठ्यस्तद्वोभ्यां गायन्यस्तं विजह्निरे । १५ ।

कर्णोत्पलालकविटङ्ककपोलधर्मवक्त्रश्रियो वलयनूपुरधोषवाद्यैः ।

गोष्ठ्यः समं भगवता ननूतुः स्वकेशस्तस्त्रजो भ्रमरगायकरासगोष्ठ्याम् । १६ ।

एवं परिष्ठङ्कराभिमर्शस्त्रिक्षणोद्दामविलासहारैः ।

रेमे रमेशो ब्रजसुन्दरीभिर्यथाभक्तः स्वप्रतिविम्बविभ्रमः । १७ ।

तदङ्गसङ्गप्रमुदाकुलेन्द्रियाः केशान् दुकूलं कुचपट्टिकां वा ।

नाङ्गः प्रतिव्योदुमलं ब्रजस्त्रियो विस्रस्तमालाभरणाः कुरुद्वह । १८ ।

कृष्णविक्रीडितं वीक्ष्य मुमुहुः खेचरस्त्रियः । कामार्दिताः शशाङ्कश्च सगणो विस्मितोऽभवत् । १९ ।

कृत्वा तावन्तामात्मानं यावतीर्गोपयोषितः । रेमे स भगवांस्ताभिरात्मारामोऽपि लीलया । २० ।

तासामतिविहारेण श्रान्तानां वदनानि सः । प्रामृजत् करुणः प्रेम्णा शन्तेमेनाङ्गपाणिना । २१ ।

गोष्ठ्यः स्फुरत्सुरटकण्डलकुन्तलविङ्गण्डश्रिया सुधितहासनिरीक्षणेन ।

मानं दधत्य ऋषभस्य जगुः कृतानि पुण्यानि तत्करुहस्यशंभोदाः । २२ ।

ताभिर्युतः श्रममपोहितमुङ्गसङ्गं घृष्टस्त्रजः स कुचकुङ्कुमरञ्जितायाः ।

गन्धर्वपालिभिरनुद्रुत आविशद् वाः श्रान्तो गजीभिरभिराडिव भिन्नसेतुः । २३ ।

सोऽभ्यस्यलं युवतिभिः परिषिच्यमानः प्रेम्णोक्षितः प्रहसतीभिरितस्ततोऽङ्ग ।

वैमानिकैः कुसुमवर्षिभिरिड्यमानो रेमे स्वयं स्वरतिरत्र गजेन्द्रलोलः । २४ ।

ततश्च कृष्णोपवने जलस्थलप्रसूनगन्धानिलजुष्टिक्तटे ।

चचार भृङ्गप्रमदागणावृतो यथा मदच्युद् द्विदः करेणुभिः । २५ ।

एवं शशाङ्कांशुविराजिता निशाः स सत्यकामोऽनुरताबलगणः ।

सिपेव आत्मन्यवरुद्धसौरतः सर्वाः शरत्काव्यकथारसाश्रयाः । २६ ।

Having thus secured Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), the only Beloved of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity), as their Darling, and celebrating Him in song, the Gopīs sported (with Him), their necks encircled by His arms. (15) The cowerd women—the charm of whose face was heightened by the water-lilies adorning their ears, cheeks graced with their (curly) locks and drops of sweat (glistening on their forehead)—danced with the Lord, keeping time by (the jingling of) bangles, anklets and girdle, that served as (so many) musical instruments, the garlands dropping from their braids, in that assembly of Rāsa dancers, where (humming) black bees played the role of songsters (all other music—both vocal and instrumental—having stopped due to the Gopīs being exhausted). (16) Thus by embracing them, touching them with His hands, casting loving glances at them, making unrestrained amorous gestures and laughing heartily, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu, the Spouse of Rāmā) sported with those lovely women of Vraja (even) as an infant would play with its own reflections (seen through a set of mirrors). (17) Their senses overwhelmed with excessive joy caused by contact with His (Divine) person and their garlands and ornaments loosened, the women of Vraja were not able to adjust as before their (unsettled) locks, scarf or (even) their brassiere, O Jewel of the Kurus. (18) Smitten with love to witness the amorous sport of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the celestial ladies (too) fainted and the moon-god along with his retinue (viz., the twenty-seven Nakṣatras or lunar mansions) felt amazed (with the result that his progress in the heavens was arrested along with that of the other planets and the night extended to an inordinate length). (19) Sportfully revealing Himself in as many forms as there were cowherd women, the aforesaid Lord delightfully spent His time with (each of) them (individually in different forms), though revelling in His own Self. (20) With His most blissful hand, O dear Parīkṣit, the compassionate Lord lovingly wiped the faces of those girls, fatigued (as they were) by over-exertion in dancing. (21) Offering worship to the Supreme Person with the splendour of their cheeks, heightened by the lustre of their brilliant gold ear-rings and curly locks, as well as with their nectar-like smiles and glances and enraptured by the (thrilling) touch of His (blessed) nails, the Gopīs celebrated in song His purifying exploits. (22) Accompanied by them and followed by black bees, humming like the leaders of Gandharvas and attracted by His garland squeezed by the embraces of the Gopīs and tinged with the saffron paint on their bosom, the fatigued Lord—who had transgressed all limits (imposed by worldly usage and Vedic injunctions)—entered the water (of the Yamunā) in order to get over His fatigue, (even) as the leader of (a herd of) elephants would do in the company of she-elephants after having broken the dams. (23) Profusely sprinkled all over from every side by the young women—who were heartily laughing—in the water and affectionately regarded by them, O dear Parīkṣit, and being glorified by the gods (borne in their aerial cars and) showering flowers (on Him), the Lord Himself sported in their midst like a leader of elephants, though revelling in His own Self. (24) Surrounded by black bees and the beves of young women, the Lord then rambled in a grove on the bank of the Yamunā, served on all sides by a breeze wafting the fragrance of flowers (both) on land and in water, (even) like a tusker shedding temporal fluid and accompanied by she-elephants. (25) The aforesaid Lord of unfailing desire, to whom those beves of delicate women were (so) fondly attached and who (voluntarily) exhibited in Himself the (various) amorous gestures, thus enjoyed all those nights* illumined with the rays of the full moon and embodying all the charms peculiar to the autumn season and depicted in poetical works. (26)

राजीवाच

संस्थापनाय धर्मस्य प्रशमायेतरस्य च। अवतीर्णो हि भगवानंशेन जगदीश्वरः। २७।

स कथं धर्मसेतूनां वक्ता कर्ताभिरक्षिता। प्रतीपमाचरद् ब्रह्मन् परदाराभिर्भक्षणम्। २८।

आप्तकामो यदुपतिः कृतवान् वै जुगुप्सितम्। किमभिप्राय एतं नः संशयं छिन्धि सुव्रत। २९।

The king submitted : It was in fact for establishing Dharma (righteousness) on a sound footing as well as for the suppression of that which is other than Dharma (viz., Adharma or unrighteousness) that Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (the Ruler of the universe) descended (in the world of matter) along with His part manifestation (Balarāma). (27) How (then) did He, the Promulgator, Institutor and Conservator of ethical standards, commit a transgression in the shape of embracing others' wives, O holy one ? (28) With what intention indeed did that Lord of the Yadus, who had all His desires fulfilled, perpetrate a repelling act ? (Pray,) resolve this doubt of ours, O sage of sacred vows ! (29)

श्रीशुक उवाच

धर्मव्यतिक्रमो दृष्ट ईश्वराणां च साहसम्। तेजीयसां न दोषाय बह्वैः सर्वभुजो यथा। ३०।

* If has already been indicated in verse 19 above that the night on which the Lord enacted His celebrated Rāsa-Play combined numberless nights, by divine will, although to the Gopīs in their ecstasy of delight they appeared as one single night.

नैतत् समाप्रेजातु मनसापि हानीश्वरः । विनश्यत्याचरन् मौढ्याद्याथारुद्रोऽभिजिज्जं विषम् । ३१ ।
 ईश्वराणां वचः सत्यं तथैवाचरितं क्वचित् । तेषां यत् स्वचोयुक्तं बुद्धिमास्तत् समाचरेत् । ३२ ।
 कुशलाचरितैर्नामिह स्वार्थो न विद्यते । विपर्ययेण वानर्थो निरहंकारिणां प्रभो । ३३ ।
 किमुताखिलसत्त्वानां तिर्यङ्मूर्त्यदिवौकसाम् । ईशितुश्चेति तव्यानां कुशलाकुशलान्वयः । ३४ ।

यत्पादपङ्कजपरागनिषेवतृप्ता योगप्रभावविधुताखिलकर्मबन्धाः ।

खैरं चरन्ति मुनयोऽपि न नह्यमानास्तस्येच्छयाऽन्तवपुषः कुत एव बन्धः । ३५ ।

गोपीनां तत्पतीनां च सर्वेषामेव देहिनाम् । योऽन्तश्चरति सोऽध्यक्षः क्रीडनेनेह देहभावः । ३६ ।
 अनुग्रहाय भूतानां मानुषं देहमास्थितः । भजते तादृशीः क्रीडा याः श्रुत्वा तत्परो भवेत् । ३७ ।
 नासृयन् खलु कृष्णाय मोहितास्तस्य मायया । मन्वमानाः स्वपार्श्वस्थान् स्वान् स्वान् दारान् ब्रजौकसः । ३८ ।
 ब्रह्मरात्र उपावृत्ते वासुदेवानुमोदिताः । अनिच्छन्त्यो ययुर्गोप्यः स्वगृहान् भगवत्प्रियाः । ३९ ।

Śrī Śuka replied : Violation of Dharma (the principles of righteousness) and overboldness (too) is (occasionally) witnessed on the part of the mighty. It does not (however) bring (any) sin on those possessed of exceptional glory as in the case of fire, that consumes everything (including even impure substances such as filth and corpses). (30) He (however) who is not (so) powerful (and is bound by his Karma) should never deliberately attempt this even mentally; for he who does so through folly (recognizing himself as powerful) will (surely) meet his ruin even as anyone other than Rudra would if he were to swallow the poison churned out of the ocean. (31) A precept (alone) of the mighty (those possessed of wisdom, dispassion and so on) is authoritative (and therefore worth following, if uttered in right earnest and not as a test of our wisdom). Their conduct (however) is worth imitating on certain occasions only. (Therefore,) an intelligent man should follow only such conduct as is consistent with their own precept. (32) There is no personal gain to be achieved here through such virtuous conduct by egoless people, nor does any harm come to them through the reverse of such actions. O king ! (33) How, then, could any virtue or sin binding those that are subject to His control attach to the (supreme) Ruler of all creatures, viz., sub-human creatures, human beings and gods. (34) Whence indeed could there be any bondage for the Lord, who assumed a personality of His own free will, when those who are sated (in the sense that they have no desire left in them) by enjoying the pollen of His lotus-feet as also those who have shaken off all their ties of Karma by virtue of their Yoga (mental union with God) and (even so) those who are given to contemplation on their identity with the Universal Spirit conduct themselves freely (in this world) and are never bound (by their actions) ? (35) He (alone) who indwelt (as the Inner Controller) not only the cowherd women and their husbands but all embodied souls (as a matter of fact), (nay), who is the Witness (of all minds etc.) sportfully assumed a personality (and manifested Himself as Śrī Kṛṣṇa) in this world (of matter). (36) Having assumed a human semblance in order to shower His grace on (and attract solely towards Him) created beings, the Lord indulges in sports like the Rāsa-Play, hearing of which man may get exclusively devoted to Him. (37) Deluded by His Māyā the men of Vraja did not regard Śrī Kṛṣṇa with jealousy; (for) each of them took his womenkind to be present by his side. (38) When the early hours of the morning approached (at the close of a whole night of Brahmā) the Gopīs, who were (so) beloved of the Lord, returned to their homes, though reluctantly, with the approval of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Son of Vasudeva). (39)

विक्रीडितं ब्रजवधूभिर्दिदं च विष्णोः श्रद्धान्वितोऽनुभृणुयादथ वर्णयेद् यः ।

भक्तिं परो भगवति प्रतिलभ्य कामं हद्रोगमाश्वपहिनोत्सचिरेण धीरः । ४० ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे रासक्रीडावर्णनं नाम

त्रयस्त्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३३ ।

He who full of reverence hears in the proper order of sequence or recounts the story of the aforesaid amorous pastime of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than the all-pervading Lord Viṣṇu) with the women of Vraja is blessed with supreme devotion to the Lord and, becoming a master of his self before long, speedily overcomes lust (which is a malady of the mind). (40)

Thus ends the thirty-third discourse entitled "A Description of the (actual) Rāsa-Play", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुस्त्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXIV

The Lord makes short work of Śaṅkhacūḍa

श्रीशुक उवाच

एकदा देवयानायां गोपाला जातकौतुकाः । अनोभिरनङ्घ्रुकैः प्रययुस्तेऽम्बिकावनम् । १ ।
तत्र स्नात्वा सरस्वत्यां देवं पशुपतिं विभुम् । आनन्द्युर्हणैर्भक्त्या देवीं च नृपतेऽम्बिकाम् । २ ।
गावो हिरण्यं वासोसि मधु मध्वन्नमादृताः । ब्राह्मणेभ्यो ददुः सर्वे देवो नः प्रीयतामिति । ३ ।
ऊषुः सरस्वतीतीरे जलं प्राश्य धृतव्रताः । रजनीं तां महाभागा नन्दसुनन्दादयः । ४ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Their interest having been aroused in (undertaking) a pilgrimage for the worship of a god on a certain occasion, the cowherds (of Vraja) rode in their carts drawn by bullocks to (a forest known as) Ambikā Vana (which was sacred to Goddess Pārvatī, the Mother of the universe). (1) Having bathed in the Sarasvatī river there, they worshipped the almighty Lord Śiva as well as Goddess Ambikā (His Consort) with devotion through (various) articles of worship, O protector of men ! (2) Full of reverence they all gifted to the Brahmans cows, gold, clothes, sweets and rice boiled with honey praying "May the Lord be propitious to us !" (3) Having undertaken sacred vows and subsisting on water (alone for the whole day); the highly blessed ones, Nanda, Sunanda (his younger brother) and others, spent that night on the bank of the Sarasvatī. (4)

कश्चिन्महानहिस्तस्मिन् विपिनोऽतिबुभुक्षितः । यदृच्छयाऽऽगतो नन्दं शयानमुरगोऽग्रसीत् । ५ ।
स चुकोशाहिना ग्रस्तः कृष्ण कृष्ण महानयम् । सर्पो मां ग्रसते तात प्रपन्नं परिमोचय । ६ ।
तस्य चाक्रन्दितं श्रुत्वा गोपालाः सहस्रोत्थिताः । ग्रस्तं च दृष्ट्वा विभ्रान्ताः सर्पं विव्यधुरुस्त्वृकैः । ७ ।
अलातैर्दह्यमानोऽपि नामुञ्चतमुरङ्गमः । तमस्पृशत् पदाभ्येत्य भगवान् सात्वतां पतिः । ८ ।
स वै भगवतः श्रीमत्यादप्यर्शहताशुभः । भजे सर्पवपुर्हित्वा रूपं विद्याधराच्चितम् । ९ ।
तमपृच्छदधृषीकेशः प्रणतं समुपस्थितम् । दीप्यमानेन वपुषा पुरुषं हेममालिनम् । १० ।
को भवान् परया लक्ष्म्या रोचतेऽद्भुतदर्शनः । कथं जुगुप्सितामेतां गतिं वा प्रापितोऽवशः । ११ ।

Sore pinched with hunger a huge snake arrived in that forest by the will of Providence and crawling, (imperceptibly), proceeded to swallow Nanda, who was lying down (there). (5) Seized by the python, he cried, "Kṛṣṇa, O enchanter of all, this huge serpent is devouring me, O darling ! (Pray,) deliver me, who have sought you as my refuge." (6) Hearing his cry as well as his wailing, the cowherds sprang on their feet at once and, bewildered to see him caught (in the coils of a boa constrictor), struck the serpent with fire-brands. (7) Though being scorched with pieces of burning wood, the reptile did not leave Nanda. Approaching the serpent (in the meantime), Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of the Yadus) touched the animal with His foot. (8) (All) his evil Karma having been wiped out by the touch of the Lord's glorious foot, the animal cast off the body of a serpent and attained a (shining) form honoured by the Vidyādhara. (9) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses) questioned (as follows) the superhuman being, who stood beside Him adorned with a gold necklace and bowing low with a resplendent body:—(10) "Who are you that are shining with great splendour, endowed as you are with a weird form ? And how were you helplessly cast into this disgusting species (of a serpent) ?" (11)

सर्प उवाच

अहं विद्याधरः कश्चित् सुदर्शन इति श्रुतः । श्रिया स्वरूपसम्पत्त्या विमानेनाचरं दिशः । १२ ।
 त्रषीन् विरूपानङ्गिरसः प्राहसं रूपदर्पितः । तैरिमां प्रापितो योनिं प्रलब्धैः स्वेन पाप्मना । १३ ।
 शापो मेऽनुग्रहायैव कृतस्तैः करुणात्मभिः । यदहं लोकगुरुणा पदा स्पृष्टो हताशुभः । १४ ।
 तं त्वाहं भवभीतानां प्रपन्नानां भयापहम् । आपृच्छे शापनिर्मुक्तः पादस्पर्शादमीवहन् । १५ ।
 प्रपन्नोऽस्मि महायोगिन् महापुरुष सत्यते । अनुजानीहि मां देव सर्वलोकेश्वरेश्वर । १६ ।
 ब्रह्मदण्डाद् विमुक्तोऽहं सद्यस्तेऽच्युत दर्शनात् । यन्नाम गृह्णन्नखिलान् श्रोतृनात्मानमेव च ।

सद्यः पुनाति किं भूयस्तस्य स्पृष्टः पदा हि ते । १७ ।

इत्यनुज्ञाय दाशार्हं परिक्रम्याभिवन्द्य च । सुदर्शनो दिवं यातः कृच्छ्रान्नन्दश्च मोचितः । १८ ।

निशाम्य कृष्णस्य तदात्पर्वभवं ब्रजौकसो विस्मितचेतसस्ततः ।

समाप्य तस्मिन् नियमं पुनर्ब्रजं नृपाययुस्तत् कथयन्त आदृताः । १९ ।

The (erstwhile) serpent replied : "I am a Vidyādhara known by the name of Sudarśana. Endowed with (extraordinary) splendour and wealth of beauty I used to fly in an aerial car in all directions. (12) Proud of my comeliness I laughed at some deformed sages born in the line of the sage Aṅgirā. I was cast into this form (of a python) through my own sin by them, derided as they were by me. (13) (I now feel that) the curse was pronounced by those kind-hearted souls just in order to show their grace to me in that I have been touched with Your foot by You, the Father of the universe, with the result that all my sins have been wiped out. (14) Completely rid of the curse by the touch of Your feet, O Dispeller of sorrows, I ask leave of You, the celebrated Lord, who dissipate the fears of those who are afraid of rebirth and have sought You as their refuge. (15) I have approached You as my protector, O great Yogi, O Supreme Person, O Protector of the righteous ! (Pray) grant me leave, O Lord, O Ruler of rulers of all the worlds ! (16) I was immediately rid of the Brāhmaṇas' curse through Your very sight, O Immortal Lord ! A man uttering Your name purifies at once all those who hear him (do so) as well as himself. What wonder, then, that I, who was actually touched by the feet of such a Lord, viz., Yourself, should get purified (at once) !" (17) Thus taking leave of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Daśārha), going round Him (clockwise) and respectfully bowing to Him, Sudarśana ascended to heaven and Nanda was rescued from a perilous situation. (18) With their mind struck with wonder to witness such peculiar glory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and completing their religious observances there, the people of Vraja returned home from that (holy) place, O protector of men, talking about it with reverence. (19)

कदाचिदथ गोविन्दो रामश्चाद्भुतविक्रमः । विजह्नुतुर्वने रात्र्यां मध्यगौ व्रजयोषिताम् । २० ।
उपगीयमानो ललितं स्त्रीजनैर्बद्धसौहृदैः । स्वलङ्घ्यतानुलिप्ताङ्गौ स्रविणौ विरजोऽम्बरो । २१ ।
निशामुखं मानयन्तावदितोऽपतारकम् । मल्लिकागन्धमत्तालि जुष्टं कुमुदवायुना । २२ ।
जगतुः सर्वभूतानां मनःश्रवणमङ्गलम् । तौ कल्पयन्तौ युगपत् स्वरमण्डलमूर्च्छितम् । २३ ।
गोप्यस्तद्गीतमाकर्ण्य मूर्च्छिता नाविदन् नृप । खंसद्वकूलमात्मानं स्वस्तकेशाख्यं ततः । २४ ।

On a certain occasion later on Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) and Balarāma of wonderful prowess sported in the forest at night in the midst of women of Vraja. (20) They were being melodiously sung by the womenfolk—who had fastened their love on Them—were well-adorned, (nay) had their limbs smeared with sandal-paste, and were decked with garlands and dressed in immaculate garments. (21) Making much of the advent of night—which was marked by the appearance of the moon and the stars as well as by (the hovering of) black bees intoxicated with the fragrance of jasmines, and was fanned by a breeze charged with the fragrance of water-lilies—and simultaneously going through the whole scale of musical notes with a regulated rise and fall of sound, the two Brothers sang to the delight of the mind and ears of all created beings. (22-23) Hearing Their song, the cowherd women fell into a trance and did not notice their raiment falling off from their person or their wreaths dropped from their braid due to that trance, O protector of men ! (24)

एवं विक्रीडतोः स्वरं गायतोः सम्प्रमत्तवत् । शङ्खचूड इति ख्यातो धनदानुचरोऽथ्यगात् । २५ ।
तयोर्निरीक्षतो राजस्तत्राथं प्रमदाजनम् । क्रोशन्तं कालयामास दिश्युदीच्यामशङ्कितः । २६ ।
क्रोशन्तं कृष्ण रामेति विलोक्य स्वपरिग्रहम् । वथा गा दस्युना यस्ता भ्रातरावन्धवाताम् । २७ ।
मा भैष्ट्यभयारावां शालहस्तां तरस्विनौ । आसेदतुस्तं तरसा त्वरितं गुह्यकाधमम् । २८ ।
स वीक्ष्य तावनुप्राप्तौ कालमृत्यू इवोद्विजन् । विसृज्य स्त्रीजनं मूढः प्राद्वज्जीवितेच्छया । २९ ।
तमन्धवावद् गोविन्दो यत्र यत्र स धावति । जिहीर्षुलच्छिरोरलं तस्थौ रक्षन् स्त्रियो बलः । ३० ।
अविदूः इवाभ्येत्य शिरस्तस्य दुरात्मनः । जहार मुष्टिनैवाङ्ग सहचूडामणिं विभुः । ३१ ।
शङ्खचूडं निहत्यैवं मणिमादाय भास्वरम् । अग्रजायाददात् प्रीत्या पश्यन्तीनां च योषिताम् । ३२ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो मंहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे शङ्खचूडवधो नाम चतुर्लिंशोऽध्यायः । ३४ ।

While the two Brothers were thus revelling unconstrainedly and singing as though highly intoxicated, an attendant of Kubera (the bestower of riches) known by the name of Śaṅkhacūḍa, arrived there. (25) Nothing daunted, O king, he drove the screaming young women, though protected by Them, towards the north before Their very eyes. (26) Beholding Their own womenfolk crying "O Kṛṣṇa ! O Balarāma !" even like cows seized by a robber, the two Brothers ran in pursuit. (27) Shouting Their assurance of safety in the words "Do not be afraid !" with a sal tree in hand, the two nimble-footed Brothers ran with quick steps and speedily overtook that vile Guhyaka (Yakṣa). (28) Shuddering to perceive the two Brothers, close upon his heels like Kāla (the Time-Spirit) and Death personified, the fool abandoned the womenfolk and ran post-haste with intent to save his life. (29) Intending to snatch the jewel on his head, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) chased him whithersoever he ran; while Bala stood guard over the women. (30) Approaching him as though he were not very far off, the almighty Lord severed the head of that evil-minded fellow, including the jewel on his crest with a (stroke of) His fist, O dear Parikṣit ! (31) Having thus slain Śaṅkhacūḍa and taking his splendid gem, He lovingly presented it to His elder brother in the presence of the women, who stood looking on (with wonder). (32)

Thus ends the thirty-fourth discourse entitled "The Lord slays Śaṅkhacūḍa", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चत्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXV

The Gopīs' song in pairs of verses

श्रीशुक उवाच

गोप्यः कृष्णो वनं याते तमनुद्भूतचेतसः । कृष्णालीलाः प्रगायन्त्यो निन्युर्दुःखेन वासरान् । १ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : On Śrī Kṛṣṇa having proceeded to the forest (for pasturing the cattle), the cowherd women (whose mind accompanied Him to the forest) spent their days in anguish, loudly singing His pastimes. (1)

गोप्य ऊचुः

वामबाहुकृतवामकपोलो	वल्गितभ्रुरधरार्पितवेणुम् ।
कोमलाङ्गुलिभिराश्रितमार्गं	गोप्य ईरयति यत्र मुकुन्दः । २ ।
व्योमयानवनिताः सह	सिद्धैर्विस्मितास्तदुपधार्य सलज्जाः ।
काममार्गणसमर्पितचिन्ताः	कम्पलं ययुरपस्मृतनीव्यः । ३ ।

The Gopīs sang : When Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) plays on the flute, applied to His lips—the holes of which are (gently) touched by His delicate fingers—dancing His eyebrows, His left cheek inclined towards (the root of) His left arm, O cowherd women, the consorts of the Siddhas (flying through the air), accompanied by the Siddhas (their spouses), are struck with wonder to hear that music and, blushing to find their mind made a target of the shafts of love, fall into a trance, forgetful of their skirts (that get loosened and unsettled in that helpless state). (2-3)

हन्त चित्रमबलाः	शृणुतेदं	हारहास	उरसि	स्थिरविद्युत् ।
नन्दसुनुरयमार्तजनानां	नर्मदो	यर्हि	कूजितवेणुः । ४ ।
वृन्दशो ब्रजवृषा	मृगावा	वेणुवाद्यहतचेतस	आरात् ।
दन्तदष्टकवला	धृतकर्णा	निद्रिता	लिखितचित्रमिवास्न । ५ ।

Oh, hear of this strange phenomenon, O delicate women ! When this Darling of Nanda—on whose bosom smiling with pear-necklaces shines Goddess Lakṣmī (in the form of a golden streak) like a stationary flash of lightning—sounds His flute, bringing delight to the afflicted people (smitten with the pangs of separation from Him), herds of bulls in Vraja as well as deer and cows (in the forest), stand with erect ears, as though they were asleep or painted, their mind captivated by the music of the flute heard from a distance, and mouthfuls of grass pressed between their teeth (without being swallowed). (4-5)

बर्हिणस्तबकधातुपलाशैर्बद्धमल्लपरिबर्हिषिडम्बः ।

कर्हिचित् सबल आलि स गोपैर्गाः समाह्वयति यत्र मुकुन्दः । ६ ।

तर्हि भग्नगतयः सरितो वै तत्पदाम्बुजजोऽनिलनीतम् ।

स्पृहयतीर्वयमिवाबहुपुण्याः प्रेमवेपितभुजाः स्तिमितायः । ७ ।

Whenever the aforesaid Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), accompanied by Bala and putting on the garb of a wrestler decorated with a tuft of peacock-feathers and tender leaves, and painted with minerals (of various colours) O friend, calls the cows by their names (through the notes of His flute) in the company of (other) cowherds, the (inanimate) rivers too find their flow retarded and stand with their arms (in the shape of waves) thrown into motion (as if to fold the Lord in their embrace), and (when foiled in their attempt) yearning for the dust of His lotus-feet borne by the breeze but eventually with their waters stilled (as though in despair), possessed as they are of poor merit like ourselves. (6-7)

अनुचरैः समनुवर्णितवीर्यं आदिपूरुष इवाचलभूतिः ।

वनचरो गिरितटेषु चरन्तीर्वेणुनाऽऽह्वयति गाः स यदा हि । ८ ।

वनलतास्तरव आत्मनि विष्णुं व्यञ्जयन्त्य इव पुष्पफलाढ्याः ।

प्रणतभारविटपा मधुधाराः प्रेमहृष्टतनवः ससृजुः स्म । ९ ।

Whenever Śrī Kṛṣṇa, possessed of everlasting fortune like Lord Viṣṇu (the most ancient Person) and with His prowess sung in extenso (even as in the case of Lord Viṣṇu) by His followers, calls by their (respective) names the cows grazing on the slopes of the mountain (Govardhana) with the help of His flute, while roaming about in the forest (Himself), the creepers of the forest as well as the trees (their partners in life), laden as they are with flowers and fruits, appear with their boughs bent low under their weight and with their frames thrilled through (ecstasy of) love shed streams of honey as though manifesting (the all-pervading) Lord Viṣṇu (indwelling them in the form of rapture). (8-9)

दर्शनीयतिलको वनमालादिव्यगन्धतुलसीमधुमत्तैः ।

अलिकुलैरलघुगीतमभीष्टमाद्रियन् यर्हि सन्धितवेणुः । १० ।

सरसि सारसहंसविहङ्गाश्चारुगीतहृतचेतस एय ।

हरिमुपासत ते यतचित्ता हन्त मीलितदृशो धृतमौनाः । ११ ।

When Śrī Kṛṣṇa, wearing (on His forehead) a sacred mark (so) charming to look at, applies the flute to His lips, admiring the high-pitched and agreeable humming of swarms of black bees drunk with the honey of Tulasi (basil) flowers forming part of His wreath of sylvan flowers and emitting an ethereal fragrance, the cranes, swans and other birds (dwelling) in lakes, dear me, approach Śrī Hari, their heart captivated by the dulcet music (of the flute), and flock by His side with their mind (fully) collected and eyes closed and observing (complete) silence. (10-11)

सहबलः स्रग्वतंसविलासः सानुषु क्षितिभृतो ब्रजदेव्यः ।

हर्षयन् यर्हि वेणुरवेण जातहर्ष उपरम्भति विश्वम् । १२ ।

महदतिक्रमणशङ्कितचेता मन्दमन्दमनुगर्जति मेघः ।

सुहृदमभ्यवर्षत् सुमनोभिश्छायया च विदधत् प्रतपत्रम् । १३ ।

When, accompanied by Bala and gracefully adorned with floral ear-rings, and standing on the summits of the mountain (Govardhana), O beauties of Vraja, Śrī Kṛṣṇa fills the universe with the sound of His flute, enrapturing all and filled with delight (Himself), the cloud rumbles in gentle tones (as if) keeping time with His tune, and afraid at heart (as it were) of showing disrespect to the Great One, and covers his Friend with a shower of flowers (in the form of spray), spreading over Him an umbrella with his shadow. (12-13)

विविधगोपचरणेषु विदग्धो वेषुवाद्य उरुधा निजशिक्षाः ।

तत्र सुतः सति यदाधरबिम्बे दत्तवेषुगन्धत् स्वरजातीः । १४ ।

सवनशस्तदुपधार्य सुरेशाः शक्रशर्वपरमेष्ठिपुरोगाः ।

कवय आनतकन्धरचिताः कश्मलं ययुरनिश्चिततत्त्वाः । १५ ।

When, placing the flute between His lips, ruddy as a (ripe) Bilma fruit, O Yaśodā (a virtuous lady), your Son, an expert in the various games played by cowherds, evolves varied original tunes in the domain of flute-playing, the chiefs of the gods headed by Indra, Lord Śiva (the god of destruction) and Brahmā (the highest functionary of the universe) listen to that music again and again with their neck and mind inclined (towards the quarter from which the sound comes) and, unable to penetrate into its subtleties, learned as they are, fall into confusion. (14-15)

निजपदाब्जदलैर्ध्वजवन्नरीरजाङ्कुशविचित्रललापैः ।

व्रजभुवः शमयन् खुरतोदं वर्ध्मधुर्यगतिरीडितवेषुः । १६ ।

व्रजति तेन वयं सविलासवीक्षणापितमनोभववेगाः ।

कुजगतिं गमिता न विदामः कश्मलेन कबरं वसनं वा । १७ ।

When, playing on His flute, Śrī Kṛṣṇa walks with the gait of an elephant (the foremost of all creatures in point of bulk), soothing the pain of the soil of Vraja caused by the hoofs of the cattle (treading on it) by (the soles of) His own (tender) feet resembling the petals of a lotus and bearing the weird marks of a flag, thunderbolt, lotus and goad, we—in whom are fire of love is kindled by His amorous glances and who are reduced to the (insensate) state of trees by (the sight of) His (graceful) movements—are no longer conscious of our braid or (even) of our dress due to infatuation. (16-17)

मणिधरः कञ्चिदागणयन् गा मालया दयितगन्धतुलसाः ।

प्रणयिनोऽनुचरस्य कदांसे प्रक्षिपन् भुजमगायत यत्र । १८ ।

कण्ठितवेषुखवञ्चितचिताः कृष्णामन्वसत कृष्णगृह्णयः ।

गुणगणार्णमनुगाय हरिण्यो गोपिका इव विमुक्तगृहाशाः । १९ ।

Whenever, wearing (a string of) beads (of various colours) and counting the (herds of) cows (with the help of those beads) and resting His arm on the shoulder of a loving follower, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, adorned with a wreath of Tulasī flowers, the fragrance of which is (so) dear to Him, sings somewhere (on His flute), the she-deer, the companions of black antelopes, whose mind is carried away by the music of His sounding flute, continue to be with Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the ocean of virtues, once they meet Him, having abandoned like (us,) the cowherd women (all) hopes of returning to their home. (18-19)

कुन्ददामकृतकीतुकवैद्यो गोपगोधनवृत्तो यमुनायाम् ।

नन्दसुनुरनये तव वत्सो नर्मदः प्रणयिनां विजहार । २० ।

मन्दवायुरूपवायानुकुलं मानयन् मलयजस्पर्शेन ।

वन्दिनस्तमुपदेवगणा ये वाद्यगीतबलिभिः परिवह्युः । २१ ।

When, having gaily decorated Himself with wreaths of jasmine flowers, and surrounded by cowherd boys and His cattle-wealth, your Darling, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Nanda's Son), O sinless Yaśodā, sports on the bank of the Yamunā, giving delight to His loving companions, a gentle breeze fans Him agreeably, welcoming Him by its cool and fragrant touch like that of sandal-paste; and hosts of demigods (Gandharvas and others), who play the role of panegyrists, wait upon Him with their instrumental and vocal music and offerings (of various kinds and thereby delay His return to Vraja). (20-21)

वत्सलो ब्रजगवां यदगधो वन्द्यमानचरणः पथि वृद्धे ।
 कृत्स्नगोधनमुपोह्य दिनान्ते गीतवेणुनुगेडितकीर्तिः । २२ ।
 उत्सवं श्रमरुचापि दृशीनामुन्नयन् खुररजश्छुरितस्वक् ।
 दित्सयैति सुहृदाशिष एष देवकीजठरभूरुडुराजः । २३ ।

With intent to grant the desire of His near and dear ones, here comes Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a veritable moon) born of Devakī's womb—who is (so) fond of the people of Vraja as well as of the cows, for whose sake He held up the mountain (for full seven days)—collecting all the cattle-wealth at the close of the day, (nay,) playing on His flute and bringing delight to the eyes of all even by the splendour of His fatigued person, His feet being adored on the way by the oldest of the old (Brahmā and others), His glory being sung by His followers and His garland covered all over with the dust raised by the hoofs of the cattle. (22-23)

मदविधूर्णितलोचन ईषन् मानदः स्वसुहृदां वनमाली ।
 बदरपाण्डुवदनो मृदुराण्डं मण्डयन् कनककुण्डलक्ष्या । २४ ।
 यदुपतिद्विरदराजविहारो यामिनीपतिरिवैष दिनान्ते ।
 मुदितवक्त्र उपयाति दुरन्तं मोचयन् ब्रजगवां दिनतापम् । २५ ।

With His eyes somewhat rolling through inebriety and His face turned pale as a (ripening) plum, lighting up as He does His soft cheeks with the splendour of His gold ear-rings, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of the Yadus)—who is adorned with a wreath of sylvan flowers, wears a cheerful countenance and bestows honour on His near and dear ones—is coming over there even as the moon at the close of day, sporting as the leader of a herd of elephants and relieving the daylong and endless agony (of separation) of the women of Vraja (who are as docile and deserving of protection as cows). (24-25)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं ब्रजस्त्रियो राजन् कृष्णलीला नु गायतीः । रेमिरेऽहः सु तच्चितास्तन्मनस्का महोदयाः । २६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे चारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे वृन्दावनक्रीडायां

गोपिकायुगलगीते नाम पञ्चत्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३५ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : In this way, Oh Parikṣit, the women of Vraja, whose intellect and mind were absorbed in Him and who were therefore full of great rejoicing, delightfully spent their time (even) during the day, celebrating in song the pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (26)

*Thus ends the thirty-fifth discourse entitled "The Gopis' Song in pairs of Verses", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa,
 otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.*

अथ षट्त्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXVI

Kaṁsa sends Akrūra to Vraja to bring Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma to Mathurā

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ तद्वाङ्गतो गोष्ठमरिष्टो वृषभासुरः । महीं महाककुत्सायः कम्पयन् खुरविक्षताम् । १ ।
 रम्भमाणः खरतरं पदा च बिलिखन् महीम् । उद्यम्य पुच्छं वप्राणि विषाणाग्रेण चोद्धरन् । २ ।
 किञ्चित् किञ्चित्कृन्मुञ्चन् मूत्रयन् स्तब्धलोचनः । यस्य निह्नादितेनाङ्गं निष्ठुरेण गवां नृणाम् । ३ ।
 पतन्त्यकालतो गर्भाः स्रवन्ति स्म भयेन वै । निर्विशन्ति घना यस्य ककुत्सचलशङ्कया । ४ ।
 तं तीक्ष्णशृङ्गमुद्वीक्ष्य गोप्यो गोपाश्च तत्रसुः । पशवो दुद्रुवुर्भीता राजन् संत्यज्य गोकुलम् । ५ ।
 कृष्ण कृष्णोति ते सर्वे गोविन्दं शरणं ययुः । भगवानपि तद् वीक्ष्य गोकुलं भयविद्रुतम् । ६ ।
 मा भैष्टेति गिराऽऽश्वास्य वृषासुरमुपाह्वयत् । गोपालैः पशुभिर्मन्द त्रासितैः किमसत्तम् । ७ ।
 बलदर्पहाहं दुष्टानां त्वद्विधानां दुरात्मनाम् । इत्यास्फोट्याच्युतोऽरिष्टं तलशब्देन कोपयन् । ८ ।
 सख्युरसे भुजाभोगं प्रसार्यावस्थितो हरिः । सोऽप्येवं कोपितोऽरिष्टः खुरेणावनिमुल्लिखन् ।

उद्यमुच्छभ्रमन्मेघः क्लृदः कृष्णमुपाद्रवत् । ९ ।

अग्रन्यस्तविषाणाग्रः स्तब्धासुरलोचनोऽच्युतम् । कटाक्षिव्याद्रवत्पुर्णमिन्द्रमुक्तोऽशनिर्यथा । १० ।
 गृहीत्वा शृङ्गयोस्तं वा अष्टादश पदानि सः । प्रत्यपोवाह भगवान् गजः प्रतिगजं यथा । ११ ।
 सोऽपविद्धो भगवता पुनस्तथाय सत्वरः । आपतत् स्विन्नसर्वाङ्गो निःश्वसन् क्रोधपूरितः । १२ ।

तमापतन्तं स निगृह्य शृङ्गयोः पदा समाक्रम्य निपात्य भूतले ।
 निष्पीडयामास यथाऽऽर्द्रमन्त्रं कृत्वा विषाणेन जघान सोऽपतत् । १३ ।
 असृग् वमन् मूत्रशकृत् समुत्सृजन् क्षिपंश्च पादाननवस्थितेक्षणः ।
 जगाम कृच्छ्रं निर्ऋतेरथ क्षयं पुष्यः किरन्तो हरिमीडिरे सुराः । १४ ।

एवं ककुत्सिन् हत्वा स्तूयमानः स्वजातिभिः । विवेश गोष्ठं सबलो गोपीनां नयनोत्सवः । १५ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Some time after (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's return from the forest) there came to Vraja Aṛiṣṭa, a demon disguised as a bull with a huge body and a large hump, shaking the earth (already) torn by his hoofs. (1) He was bellowing very harshly and breaking the earth with his hoofs: (nay.) uplifting his tail he was throwing up the mounds of earth with the ends of his horns and was (at the same time) discharging dung and urine in small quantities (at intervals), and staring with unwinking eyes. At his violent and thunder-like roar, O dear Parikṣit, cows and women were prematurely delivered of their offspring at an initial or advanced stage of gestation indeed through fear, and clouds settled on his hump mistaking it for a hillock. (2—4) Perceiving that animal with sharp horns the cowherds and cowherdesses felt dismayed and the cattle fled in terror leaving Vraja far behind, O king ! (5) Crying "Kṛṣṇa! O Enchanter of all !!" they all sought Govinda as their refuge. Observing this and reassuring the people of Vraja, driven off by fright, in the words "Do not be afraid !" the Lord too challenged the diabolical bull saying. "What will you gain, O fool, through the cattle and the cowherds being terrified thus, O vilest creature ? (6-7) Here am I to crush the pride, born of might, of the wicked and evil-minded like you !" Slapping His arms (by way of challenge to a duel) and provoking Arisṭa by means of the sound produced thereby, the immortal Śrī Hari stood stretching His serpent-like arm on the shoulder of a boy companion. Thus angered, the aforesaid Arisṭa too rushed towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa in fury, frowning the earth with his hoofs, the clouds dispersing at the touch of his erect tail. (8-9) With the ends of his horns thrust forward and his bloodshot eyes remaining winkless the animal darted forthwith towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa even like the thunderbolt hurled by Indra, threatening Him with his side-glances. (10) Seizing him by the horns, the Lord actually pushed him back, like an elephant driving a rival elephant, to a distance of eighteen steps. (11) Knocked down by the Lord, the bull quickly rose again and, filled with fury, rushed forward sweating all over and breathing hard. (12) Seizing tightly the demon by the horns, even as he came rushing, and throwing him to the ground, the Lord set His foot on him and (pressing him at one end with His feet) wrung him even as a drenched cloth; and (then) pulling his horn struck him with it till he fell prostrate. (13) Vomiting blood, discharging urine and dung profusely and throwing up his feet with his eyes rolling, the demon experienced (great) agony and (eventually) met his end at the hands of Death (himself in the disguise of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Destroyer of Death). The gods (in heaven) applauded Śrī Hari, covering Him with flowers. (14) Having thus disposed of the demon in the form of a bull and being glorified by His own kinsmen (the cowherds), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the feast of the Gopis' eyes) accompanied by Bala (who had joined him on hearing of his encounter with the bull) entered Vraja (once more). (15)

अरिष्टे निहते दैव्यै कृष्णेनाद्भुतकर्मणा । कंसायाथाह भगवान् नारदो देवदर्शनः । १६ ।

यशोदायाः सुतां कन्यां देवक्याः कृष्णमेव च । रामं च रोहिणीपुत्रं वसुदेवेन बिभ्यता । १७ ।

न्यस्तौ स्वमित्रे नन्दे वै चाभ्यां ते पुरुषा हताः । निशम्य तद् भोजपतिः कोपात् प्रचलितोद्विग्नः । १८ ।

निशातमसिमादत्त वसुदेवजिघांसया । निवारितो नारदेन तत्सुतो मृत्युमात्मनः । १९ ।

ज्ञात्वा लोहमयैः पार्श्वैर्बन्ध सह भार्यया । प्रतियाते तु देवर्षौ कंस आभाष्य केशिनम् । २० ।

प्रेषयामास हन्येतां भवता रामकेशवौ । ततो मुष्टिकचाणूरशलतोशलकादिकान् । २१ ।

अमात्यान् हस्तिपांश्चैव समाहूयाह भोजराट् । भो भो निशम्यतामेतद् वीरचाणूरमुष्टिकौ । २२ ।

नन्द्व्रजे किलासाते सुतावानकदुन्दुभेः । रामकृष्णौ ततो मह्यं मृत्युः किल निदर्शितः । २३ ।

भवद्भ्यामिह सम्प्राप्तौ हन्येतां मल्ललीलया । मञ्जाः क्रियन्तां विविधा मल्लरङ्गपरिश्रिताः ।

पौरा जानपदाः सर्वे पश्यन्तु स्वैरसंयुगम् । २४ ।

महामात्र त्वया भद्र रङ्गद्वयुपनीयताम् । द्विपः कुवल्यापीडो जहि तेन ममाहिता । २५ ।

आरभ्यतां धनुर्यागश्चतुर्दश्यां यथाविधि । विशसन्तु पशून् मेध्यान् भूतराजाय मीढुषे । २६ ।

The demon Arisṭa having been slain by Śrī Kṛṣṇa of miraculous deeds, the holy Nārada, who was gifted with divine vision, presently (called on and) told Kamsa of the female child (which was supposed to be the eighth progeny of Devakī and had escaped death* at his hands) being (as a matter of fact) a daughter of Yaśodā, as well as of Śrī Kṛṣṇa being the (eighth) offspring of Devakī, and of Balarāma being a son of Rohini as also of the two Brothers—by whom Kamsa's men (agents) had been actually made short work of—having been placed by the terrified Vasudeva (Their real father) in the charge of his friend, Nanda. Kamsa, the chief of the Bhojas, whose mind was agitated through anger to hear this (revelation), snatched a sharp-edged sword with the intention of killing Vasudeva. Stopped

(however) by Nārada and coming to know (from the same sage) of the two Sons of Vasudeva to have been ordained (by Providence) to be his Death, he bound Vasudeva along with his wife (Devakī) with iron fetters. The celestial sage having (now) returned (to his abode in the highest heaven), Kāṁsa conferred with Keśī and despatched him (to Vraja) with the order "Let Balarāma and Keśava (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) be disposed of (by you)!" Summoning in his presence Muṣṭika, Cāṇūra, Śala, Tośalaka and others (who were renowned experts in wrestling) as well as his ministers and keepers of elephants, Kāṁsa (the king of the Bhojas) then said, "O! Let this (command of mine) be listened to (and obeyed forthwith), O heroic Cāṇūra and Muṣṭika! (16—22) I hear the two sons of Ānakadundubhi (Vasudeva), Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa, are dwelling in Nanda's Vraja; at their hands I am told has my death been decreed. (23) Let the two boys, when arrived here, be killed by you in a game of wrestling. Let galleries of diverse designs be erected (in the form of an amphitheatre) round the arena for the wrestlers, (and) let all the people of the city as well as of the country (the kingdom of Mathurā) witness the voluntary combat. (24) O keeper of (my) elephants, O blessed one, let the (mighty) elephant Kuvalayāpida be brought to (and stationed at) the (main) entrance of the amphitheatre (and) kill through it my two (juvenile) enemies. (25) Let a bow-sacrifice (in which Lord Śiva is worshipped in the form of a bow and which is recommended in the works on Śiva-Worship as conducive to victory over enemies) be commenced with due ceremony on the (coming) fourteenth lunar day (which is held particularly sacred to Lord Śiva). Let the priests immolate animals, fit to be sacrificed, to Lord Śiva (the Ruler of the spirits and popularly worshipped even to this day at Mathurā under the name of Śrī Bhūteśwara), the Bestower of (all) boons." (26)

इत्याज्ञाप्यार्थतन्त्रज्ञ आहूय यदुपुङ्गवम् । गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणिं ततोऽङ्कुरमुवाच ह । २७ ।
 भो भो दानपते मह्यं क्रियतां मैत्रमादृतः । नान्यस्त्वत्तो हिततमो विद्यते भोजवृष्णिषु । २८ ।
 अतस्त्वामाश्रितः सौम्य कार्यगौरवसाधनम् । यथेन्द्रो विष्णुमाश्रित्य स्वार्थमध्यगमद् विसुः । २९ ।
 गच्छ नन्दव्रजं तत्र सुतावानकदुन्दुभेः । आसाते ताविहानेन रथेनानय मा धिरम् । ३० ।
 निमुष्टः किल मे मृत्युर्देवैर्वैकुण्ठसंश्रयैः । तावानय समं गोपैर्नन्दाद्यैः साधुपाययैः । ३१ ।
 घातयिष्य इहानीतौ कालकल्पेन हस्तिना । यदि मुक्तौ ततो मल्लैर्घातये वैद्युतोपमैः । ३२ ।
 तयोर्निहतयोस्तप्तान् वसुदेवपुरोगमान् । तदबन्धून् निहनिष्यामि वृष्णिभोजदशार्हकान् । ३३ ।
 उग्रसेनं च पितरं स्थविरं राज्यकामुकम् । तद्भ्रातरं देवकं च ये चान्ये विद्विषो मम । ३४ ।
 ततश्चैषा मही मित्र भवित्री नष्टकण्टका । जरासन्धो मम गुरुर्द्विविदो दयितः सखा । ३५ ।
 शम्बरो नरको बाणो मय्येव कृतसौहृदाः । तैरहं सुरपक्षीयान् हत्वा भोक्ष्ये महीं नृपान् । ३६ ।
 एतस्मात्वाऽऽनय क्षिप्रं रामकृष्णाविहार्षकौ । धनुर्मखनिरीक्षार्थं द्रष्टुं यदुराश्रियम् । ३७ ।

Having thus commanded his servants, Kāṁsa (who was well-versed in the methods of achieving his personal ends) summoned Akrūra, the foremost of the Yadus (and a kinsman of Vasudeva), and, clasping his hand with his own, addressed him as follows:—(27) "O chief of the charitably disposed, let an act of friendship be done to me. None else is more honoured and more friendly (to me) than you in the race of the Bhojas and the Vṛṣṇis. (28) I therefore depend on you, O gentle one, as the means of accomplishing a great purpose, (even) as the mighty Indra attained his end (in the form of sovereignty of the three worlds, that had been usurped by Bali (the demon king), depending as he did on Lord Viṣṇu (descended in the form of Vāmana*, the Divine Dwarf, his younger Brother). (29) Proceed (at once) to Nanda's Vraja;

* For the story of Lord Vāmana see Discourses XVIII to XXIII of Book Eight.

there reside the two sons of Ānakadundubhi (Vasudeva). (Please) bring them both here in this chariot; let there be no delay. (30) My death, I understand, has been pre-ordained at the hands of the younger one by the gods, who have their (sole) refuge in Viṣṇu. (Therefore) fetch them along with the Gopas headed by Nanda and equipped with tributes of various kinds. (31) I shall have them despatched, when brought down here, by my elephant (Kūvalayāpīḍa), who is as good as Death (himself). If (however) they escape it, I shall get them killed by wrestlers (fierce) like thunderbolts. (32) On the two brothers having been killed I shall do away with their afflicted kinsmen—the Vṛṣṇis, the Bhojas and the Daśārhas—headed by Vasudeva, as well as my aged father, Ugrasena, who is anxious to regain his sovereignty, his (younger) brother, Devaka, and whoever else are my enemies. (33-34) And then this earth, O friend, will be rid of (all its) thorns, Jarāsandha is (my father-in-law and therefore as good as) my father; while Dvivida (the monkey-chief) is my beloved friend. (35) (Even so) Śambara, Naraka and Bāṇa have (all) entered into alliance with me. Destroying with their help (all) kings who are siding with the gods, I shall rule over the (entire) globe (myself). (36) Knowing this (but not disclosing my intention to the people of Vraja), fetch the two youngsters, Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa, here at once so as to enable them to witness the bow-sacrifice as well as to behold the splendour of Mathurā (the capital of the Yadus)." (37)

अक्रूर उवाच

राजन् मनीषितं सध्रुवक् तव स्वाद्यमार्जनम् । सिद्धयसिद्धयोः समं कुर्याद्देवं हि फलसाधनम् । ३८ ।
मनोरथान् करोत्युच्चैर्जनो देवहृत्तनपि । युज्यते हर्षशोकाभ्यां तथाप्याज्ञां करोमि ते । ३९ ।

Akrūra replied : Well-thought out is your remedy against the evil that stares you in the face. One should (however) keep one's mind balanced in success and failure; for it is Providence that procures the fruit of our endeavours. (38) Man entertains high aspirations, even though they are thwarted by Providence, and (thus) meets with joy and grief. Nevertheless I shall do your bidding. (39)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमादिश्य चाक्रूरं मन्त्रिणश्च विसृज्य सः । प्रविवेश गृहं कैसस्तथाक्रूरः स्वमालयम् । ४० ।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यो संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धेऽक्रूरसंभेयं नाम षट्त्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३६ ।

Śrī Śuka continued: Having thus instructed Akrūra and sent away his counsellors, Kariṣa retired into the gynaeceum and Akrūra too returned to his house. (40)

Thus ends the thirty-sixth discourse entitled "Kariṣa despatches Akrūra (to Vraja)", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तत्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXVII

The demon Vyoma slain (by the Lord)

श्रीरुक् उवाच

केशी तु कंसप्रहितः खुरैर्महीं महाहयो निर्जरयन् मनोजवः ।
 सटावधूताभ्रविमानसङ्कुलं कुर्वन् नभो हेषितभीषिताखिलः ।१।
 विशालनेत्रो विकटास्यकोटरो बृहद्गलो नीलमहाम्बुदोपमः ।
 दुराशयः कंसहितं चिकीर्षुर्व्रजं स नन्दस्य जगाम कम्पयन् ।२।
 तं त्रासयन्तं भगवान् स्वगोकुलं तद्धेषितैर्वालविघूर्णिताम्बुदम् ।
 आत्मानमाजौ मृगयन्तमग्रणीरुपाह्वयत् स व्यनदमृगेन्द्रवत् ।३।
 स तं निशाम्याभिमुखो मुखेन खं पिबन्निवाभ्यद्रवदत्यमर्षणः ।
 जघान पद्भ्यामरविन्दलोचनं दुरासदश्चण्डजवो दुरत्ययः ।४।
 तद् वञ्चयित्वा तमधोक्षजो रुषा प्रगृह्य दोर्भ्यां परिविध्य पादयोः ।
 सावज्ञमुत्सृज्य धनुःशतान्तरे यथोरगं ताक्ष्यं सुतो व्यस्थितः ।५।
 स लब्धसंज्ञः पुनरुत्थितो रुषा व्यादाय केशी तरसाऽऽपतद्धरिम् ।
 सोऽप्यस्य वक्त्रे भुजमुत्तरं स्मयन् प्रवेशयामास यथोरगं विले ।६।
 दन्ता निपेतुर्भगवद्भुजस्युशस्ते केशिनस्तप्तमयः स्पृशो यथा ।
 बाहुश्च तद्देहगतो महात्मनो यथाऽऽमयः संववृधे उपेक्षितः ।७।
 समेधमानेन स कृष्णबाहुना निरुद्धवायुश्चरणांश्च विक्षिपन् ।
 प्रस्विन्नगात्रः परिवृत्तलोचनः पपात लेण्डं विसृजन् क्षितौ व्यसुः ।८।
 तद्देहतः कर्कटिकाफलोपमाद् व्यसोरपाकुच्य भुजं महाभुजः ।
 अविस्मितोऽयत्नवहतारिरुत्सयैः प्रसूनवर्षैर्विविषद्भिरीडितः ।९।

Śrī Śuka began again : Despatched by Kāṁsa* and anxious to oblige him, the aforesaid Keśī of evil intent, for his part, went to Nanda's Vraja in the form of a colossal horse—quick as thought, with big eyes, a fearful cave-like mouth and a huge neck and resembling a large dark cloud—pounding and shaking the earth with its hoofs crowding the firmament with clouds and aerial cars dispersed by its manes and terrifying all with its neighs.† (1-2) Placing Himself in the forefront, the Lord challenged the (diabolical) horse, that was frightening (the inhabitants of) His Vraja with its neighs as aforesaid, throwing the clouds into commotion by the hair of its tail and seeking after Him for a duel; and the animal roared loudly like a lion (when thus challenged). (3) Beholding Him, the animal—which was not only difficult to approach and possessed of terrible speed but formidable too—turned round and ran towards Him full of rage and, drinking the heavens as it were with its (wide open) mouth struck the lotus-eyed Lord with its (hind) legs. (4) Dodging the stroke and seizing the horse by its

* Vide verses 20-21 of Discourse XXXVI above.

† Verse 2 has not been commented upon by Śrīdhara Swāmī.

(aforesaid) legs, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is above sense-perception) whirled it in a rage with His arms and, flinging it disdainfully to a distance of a hundred bows (four hundred cubits), even as Garuḍa (son of the sage Kaśyapa) would throw a serpent, stood as before (as if nothing had happened). (5) Having recovered its senses and rising up again, the said Keśi rushed towards Śrī Hari with (great) speed, opening its mouth in fury. He too smilingly thrust His left arm into its mouth (as playfully) as a snake-charmer would put a serpent into a hole. (6) Touching the Lord's arm the teeth of Keśi dropped down as they would on touching a heated iron rod. Nay, finding its way into its body, the arm of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Supreme Spirit) swelled to an enormous degree, even as (the fluid collected in the body of a man suffering from) the disease of dropsy would if neglected. (7) With its breath choked by the immensely swelling arm of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and its eyes rolling, and profusely sweating all over, the animal dropped dead on the ground throwing up its legs and passing excrement. (8) Drawing out His arm from its dead body, which resembled a (ripe) cucumber (that had burst open at several places), the mighty-armed Lord, who had killed the enemy without any effort and (therefore) stood unrelated, was glorified by the highly amazed gods (lit., the denizens of heaven), who showered flowers (on Him). (9)

देवर्षिरुपसङ्ग्य भागवतप्रवरो नृप । कृष्णमङ्गिष्ठकर्माणं रहस्येतदभाषत । १० ।
 कृष्ण कृष्णाप्रमेयात्मन् योगेश जगदीश्वर । वासुदेवाखिलावास सात्वतां प्रवर प्रभो । ११ ।
 त्वमात्मा सर्वभूतानामेको ज्योतिर्विधत्ताम् । गूढो गुहाशयः साक्षी महापुरुष ईश्वरः । १२ ।
 आत्मनाऽऽत्माश्रयः पूर्वं मायया ससृजे गुणान् । तैरिदं सत्यसंकल्पः सृजत्यत्यवसीश्वरः । १३ ।
 स त्वं भूधरभूतानां दैत्यप्रमथरक्षसाम् । अवतीर्णो विनाशाय सेतूनां रक्षणाय च । १४ ।
 दिष्ट्या ते निहतो दैत्यो लीलायां हयाकृतिः । यस्य हेषितसंत्रस्तास्त्यजन्यनिमिषा दिवम् । १५ ।

Approaching Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was unwearied in action, Nārada (the celestial sage), the foremost of the Lord's votaries, O protector of men, spoke to Him in secret as follows:—(10) "O Kṛṣṇa of incomprehensible character, O Enchanter of all, O Master of Yoga (possessed of inconceivable powers), O Ruler of the universe, O Vāsudeva (present in all beings), the Abode of all, the foremost of the Yadus, O almighty Lord ! (11) You are the one Spirit, indwelling all created beings and remaining concealed like the fire hidden in logs of wood, nay, enshrined inside the intellect, the Witness (of all), the Supreme Person, the almighty Lord. (12) Depending on Your own Self, You evolved the three Guṇas at the dawn of creation by Your Mâyā (creative energy), which is (no other than) Your own Self; and with their help You create, protect and absorb (into Your own Self) this (visible) universe, unfailing of purpose and almighty as You are. (13) As such You have descended (in the world of matter) for the annihilation of demons, goblins and ogres born as kings (lit., the conservators of the earth) and for the protection of the virtuous (who are the living standards of morality). (14) Luckily enough by You, has been sportfully slain this demon (Keśi) in the form of a horse, frightened by whose neighs the gods (whose eyelids never fall) evacuated heaven. (15)

चाणूरं मुष्टिकं चैव मल्लानन्यांश्च हस्तिनम् । कंसं च निहतं द्रक्ष्ये परश्चोऽहनि ते विभो । १६ ।
 तस्यानु शङ्खयवनमुराणां नरकस्य च । पारिजातापहरणमिन्द्रस्य च पराजयम् । १७ ।
 उद्वाहं वीरकन्यानां वीर्यशुल्कादिलक्षणम् । नृगस्य मोक्षणं पापाद् द्वारकायां जगत्यते । १८ ।
 स्यमन्तकस्य च मणेरानां सह भार्यया । मृतपुत्रप्रदानं च ब्राह्मणस्य स्वधामतः । १९ ।
 पौण्ड्रकस्य वधं पश्चात् काशिपुर्वाश्च दीपनम् । दन्तवक्त्रस्य निधनं चैद्यस्य च महाक्रतौ । २० ।
 यानि चान्यानि वीर्याणि द्वारकामावसन् भवान् । कर्ता द्रक्ष्याम्यहं तानि गेयानि कविभिर्भुवि । २१ ।

अथ ते कालरूपस्य क्षयविणोर्मुख्य वै । अक्षौहिणीनां निधनं द्रक्ष्याम्यर्जुनसारथे । १२२ ।

The day after tomorrow I shall see Cāṇūra and Muṣṭika and other wrestlers as well as the elephant (Kuvālayāpiḍa) and Kaṁsa (himself) slain by You, O almighty Lord ! (16) After that I shall witness the death (at Your hands) of the demon Pañcajana (living in the form of a conch), the Ionian hero (Kālayavana) and the demon Mura as well as of Naraka and (also) the carrying off (from heaven) of the (celestial) Pārijāta tree and the discomfiture of Indra (who will try to thwart Your purpose). (17) I shall also behold the espousal (by You) of the daughters of heroes—which will be distinguished by the fact that show of valour will be the (only) price paid by You (for the same) and so on, and shall (further) witness the deliverance of King Nrga at Dwārakā from sin (in the shape of unwittingly giving away a Brāhmaṇa's cow as his own, for which he was hurled into the womb of a chameleon), O Lord of the universe! (18) I shall also witness the acceptance (by You) of the (brilliant) gem Syamantaka alongwith Jāmbavatī (for Your wife from the bear chief Jāmbavān) as well as the restoration to a Brāhmaṇa of his deceased son to be brought by You from Your own divine Abode (the realm of Mahākāla). (19) I shall (further) witness the destruction (by You) of King Pauṇḍraka and later on the setting on fire of the city of Kāśī (the modern Vārāṇasī) and (even so) the death (at Your hands) of Dantavakra and (earlier) of Śiśupāla (the king of Cedi) in the course of a great sacrifice (viz., the Rājasūya sacrifice to be performed by Emperor Yudhiṣṭhira). (20) I shall also witness those feats of valour that You will perform while residing in Dwārakā and which will be celebrated in song by the poets on earth. (21) I shall then behold the extermination of a number of Akṣauhiṇīs (in the course of the great Mahābhārata war) by Yourself as Arjuna's charioteer and assuming the role of Kāla (the Time-Spirit) actually bent on the dissolution of this (visible) universe. (22)

विशुद्धविज्ञानधनं	स्वसंस्थया	समाप्तसर्वाधर्ममोघवाञ्छितम् ।
स्वतेजसा	नित्यनिवृत्तमायागुणप्रवाहं	भगवन्तमीमहि । १२३ ।
त्वामीश्वरं	स्वाश्रयमात्ममायया	विनिर्मिताशेषविशेषकल्पनम् ।
क्रीडाधर्मद्यात्तमनुष्यविग्रहं	नतोऽस्मि	धुर्यं यदुवृष्यासात्वताम् । १२४ ।

We approach (for protection) the almighty Lord (in You), who is pure consciousness personified, who has fully achieved all His ends by virtue of His being established in His own (blissful) existence, whose desire never fails to yield its fruit and by whose effulgence (in the form of consciousness) the stream of the three Guṇas (in the shape of the world-process), having its origin in Māyā, is ever shut out from Him. (23) I bow to You, the self-dependent almighty Lord who has evolved this (varied) creation out of all these differentiated categories (the Mahat-tattva etc.) brought forth by His own Māyā (creative energy), and who has now for the sake of sport assumed a human semblance as the foremost of the Yadus, the Vṛṣṇīs and the Sātvatas. (24)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं यदुपति कृष्णं भागवतप्रबरो मुनिः । प्रणिपत्याभ्यनुज्ञातौ ययौ तदहर्निशोत्सवः । १२५ ।
 भगवानपि गोविन्दो हत्वा केशिनमाहवे । पशूनपालयत् पालैः प्रीतैर्ब्रजमुख्यावहः । १२६ ।
 एकदा ते पशून् पालाश्चारयन्तोऽद्रिस्थानुषु । चक्रुर्निलायनक्रीडाशोरपालापदेशतः । १२७ ।
 तत्रासन् कतिचिद्योराः पालाश्च कतिचिन्शु । मेषाघिताश्च तत्रैके विजहुरकुतोभयाः । १२८ ।
 मयपुत्रो महामायो व्योमो गोपालवेषधृक् । मेषाघितानपोवाह प्रायश्चोरारयितो बहून् । १२९ ।
 गिरिर्दयां विनिक्षिप्य नीतं नीतं महामुरः । शिलया पिदधे द्वारं चतुःपञ्चावशेषिताः । १३० ।

तस्य तत् कर्म विज्ञाय कृष्णः शरणदः सताम् । गोपान् नयन्तं जग्राह वृकं हरिखिन्नजसा । ३१ ।
 स निजं रूपमास्थाय गिरीन्द्रसदृशं बली । इच्छन् विमोक्तुमात्मानं नाशक्रोदं ग्रहणातुरः । ३२ ।
 तं निगृह्णाच्युतो दोर्भ्यां पातयित्वा महीतले । पश्यतां दिवि देवानां पशुमारममारयत् । ३३ ।
 गुहापिधानं निर्भिद्य गोपान् निःसार्य कृच्छतः । स्तूयमानः सुरैर्गोपैः प्रविवेश स्वगोकुलम् । ३४ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे व्योमासुरवधो नाम सप्तत्रिंशोऽध्यायः । ३७ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Having thus bowed low to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of the Yadus, and gladly permitted by Him, the sage Nārada, the foremost of the Lord's devotees, who was filled with ecstatic delight at His sight, departed (for his abode in Satyaloka). (25) Having made short work of the demon Keśi in a (personal) combat, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) too continued to tend the cattle as usual in the company of the cowherd boys, who were (deeply) attached to Him, bringing delight (thereby) to (the entire) Vraja. (26) Once, while pasturing the cattle on the mountain heights, the cowherd boys played various games of (cleverly) smuggling others' goods under the guise of thieves and guards. (27) Of them some played the part of thieves and others acted as watchmen, O protector of men; while still others of the Gopas played the role of rams. In this way they sported fearlessly. (28) Maya's son Vyoma (a demon), who was adept in great conjuring tricks and who made his appearance there in the guise of a cowherd boy, often playing the part of a thief, carried away many cowherd boys that were playing the role of rams. (29) Laying down each cowherd boy he carried away into a mountain cave, the mighty demon closed its entrance with a (large) slab. (In this way only) four or five (of the Gopas) remained (outside the cave). (30) Perceiving that work of the demon, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who affords protection to the righteous, forcibly seized Him even as he was carrying away the cowherd boys, just as a lion would seize a wolf. (31) Resuming his natural (demoniac) form, resembling a huge mountain, the powerful demon, who was feeling pained by the grip, sought to extricate himself but could not. (32) Catching hold of the demon by the arms and dashing him to the ground, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), made short work of him by gagging him and squeezing his windpipe while the gods in heaven stood looking on. (33) Having broken asunder the rock that blocked the mouth of the cave and rescuing the cowherd boys from their uncomfortable situation, and being glorified by the gods as well as the Gopas, the Lord withdrew to His (realm of) Vraja. (34)

Thus ends the thirty-seventh discourse entitled "The demon Vyoma slain," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टात्रिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXVIII

Akrūra's arrival (in Vraja)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अक्रूरोऽपि च तां तस्मिन् मधुपुर्यां महामतिः । उषित्वा रथमास्थाय प्रययौ नन्दगोकुलम् । १ ।
 गच्छन् पथि महाभागो भगवत्यम्बुजेक्षणे । भक्तिं परामुपगत एवमेतदचित्तयत् । २ ।

किं मयाऽऽचरितं भद्रं किं तप्तं परमं तपः । किं वाथाप्यहं दत्तं यद् द्रक्ष्याम्यद्य केशवम् । ३ ।
 ममैतद् दुर्लभं मन्य उत्तमश्लोकदर्शनम् । विषयात्मनो यथा ब्रह्मकीर्तनं शूद्रजन्मनः । ४ ।
 मैवं ममाधमस्यापि स्यादेवाच्युतदर्शनम् । ह्रियमाणः कालनद्या क्वचित्तरति कश्चन । ५ ।
 ममाद्यामङ्गलं नष्टं फलवांश्चैव मे भवः । यन्नमस्ये भगवतो योगिध्येयाङ्घ्रिपङ्कजम् । ६ ।
 कंसो बताद्याकृत मेऽत्यनुग्रहं द्रक्ष्येऽङ्घ्रिपद्मं प्रहितोऽमुना हरेः ।
 कृतावतारस्य दुरत्ययं तपः पूर्वेऽतस्त्वं यन्नखमण्डलत्विषा । ७ ।
 यदचिन्तितं ब्रह्मभवादिभिः सुरैः श्रिया च देव्या मुनिभिः ससात्वतैः ।
 गोचारणायानुचरैश्चरद्वने यद् गोपिकानां कुचकुङ्कुमाङ्कितम् । ८ ।
 द्रक्ष्यामि नूनं सुकपोलनासिकं सितावलोकारुणकझलोचनम् ।
 मुखं मुकुन्दस्य गुडालकावृतं प्रदक्षिणं मे प्रचरन्ति वै मृगाः । ९ ।
 अथ्यद्य विष्णोर्मनुजत्वमीयुषो भारवताराय भुवो निजेच्छया ।
 लावण्यधाप्रो भवितोपलम्भनं मह्यं न न स्यात् फलमञ्जसा दृशः । १० ।
 य ईक्षिताहरहितोऽप्यस्ततोः स्वतेजसापास्तमोभिदाभ्रमः ।

स्वमाययाऽऽत्मन् रचितैस्तदीक्षया प्राणाक्षधीभिः सद्नेषुभीयते । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having spent that night* at Mathurā (the city founded by the demon Madhu), the high-minded Akrūra too mounted a chariot and drove to Nanda's Vraja. (1) Proceeding along the road the highly blessed one developed supreme devotion to the lotus-eyed Lord and thought as follows adopting the following line of reasoning:—(2) "What noble act has been performed, (nay,) what supreme austerity has been gone through or again what gift has been bestowed on a worthy recipient by me, by virtue of which I am going to behold Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of even Brahmā and Lord Śiva) ? (3) I consider it as difficult for me—whose mind is given to sensuous pleasures—to gain the sight of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of excellent renown as a recital of the Vedas is for one born of Śūdra parents. (4) (Rather) I should not think like that. Even to me, a vile creature, the sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (the immortal Lord) must be vouchsafed; (for, though) borne away by the stream of Time, one may get to the shore (the end of mundane existence) some time. (5) (All) my evil has been destroyed today; nay, my birth too has become fruitful in that I shall bow to the lotus-feet of the almighty Lord, that are fit to be meditated upon by Yogis (those given to contemplation). (6) Ah, Kāṁsa has done me a great favour today; (for) despatched by him (to Vraja) I shall behold the lotus- feet of Śrī Hari, descended in the world of matter—feet by the splendour of whose spherical nails people in the past have got over the darkness of ignorance, so difficult to cross over, (nay) which are adored by gods headed by Brahmā and Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe), by the divine Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) as well as by sages and devotees; which move about in the forest alongwith their followers for the purpose of pasturing the cows, and which are tinged with the saffron paint on the bosom of cowherd women. (7-8) I shall surely behold the countenance of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) with lovely cheeks and a shapely nose and with reddish lotus-like eyes casting smiling glances, and overhung by curly locks; for the deer walk to my right indeed.† (9) If there comes about today a meeting with Lord Viṣṇu, the home of loveliness, who has of His own

* This has reference to verse 40 of Discourse XXXVI above.

† According to the science of omens this is considered to be a propitious omen as is borne out by the following verse:—
 प्रदक्षिणगतः श्रेष्ठ यात्रायां मृगपक्षिणः ।

free will assumed a human semblance for relieving the burden of the earth, there is no denying the fact that my eyes will have easily attained the fruit of their existence. (10) He is the Spectator of the cause as well as of the effect, though (entirely) free from egotism; in Him ignorance (veiling one's real character) as well as the notion of difference (resulting from it) and the misconception arising from such a notion stand eliminated by His own effulgence (in the form of eternal realization of His own essential character) and He is seen (sporting) in arbours (or the dwellings of the Gopis of Vraja) in the company of Jivas (embodied souls) endowed with the vital principle, senses and mind and evolved in His own Self by His Māyā (creative energy) under His own supervision. (11)

यस्याखिलामीवहभिः सुमङ्गलैर्वाचो विमिश्रा गुणकर्मजन्मभिः ।
 प्राणन्ति शुभन्ति पुनन्ति वै जगद् यास्तद्विरक्ताः शवशोभना मताः ॥१२॥
 स चावतीर्णः किल सात्वतान्वये स्वसेतुपालामरवर्यशर्मकृत ।
 यशो वितन्वन् ब्रज आस्त ईश्वरो गायन्ति देवा यदशेषमङ्गलम् ॥१३॥
 तं त्वद्य नूनं महतां गतिं गुं त्रैलोक्यकान्तं दृशिमन्महोत्सवम् ।
 रूपं दधानं श्रिय ईप्सितास्पदं द्रक्ष्ये ममासन्नुषसः सुदर्शनाः ॥१४॥

(Nay,) utterances connected with His excellences (compassion etc.), exploits and descents that wipe out the sins of all and are attended with (all) excellent blessings actually give (new) life and grace and lend sanctity to the universe while those removed from them are (though adorned with figures of speech and other elegances) considered to be as good as a (finely dressed and well-adorned) corpse. (12) Descended, as I understand in the race of the Sātvatas (Yadus) in order to bring happiness to the foremost of the immortals maintaining the ethical standards set up by Himself, the same Lord is living (at present) in Vraja, spreading (far and wide) His glory which the gods (ever) celebrate in song as the source of all blessings. (13) I shall surely behold today that very Lord, who is the goal of exalted souls and the preceptor (of the whole universe) and exhibits a form which is loved by (all) the three worlds, provides a grand feast to those that have eyes and is the coveted Abode of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity); (for) all these mornings have revealed good omens to me. (14)

अथावरूढः सपदीशयो रथात् प्रधानपुंसोश्चरणं स्वलब्धये ।
 धिया धृतं योगिभिरप्यहं ध्रुवं नमस्य आभ्यां च सखीन् वनौकसः ॥१५॥
 अयङ्ध्रिमूले पतितस्य मे विभुः शिरस्यधास्यन्निजहस्तपङ्कजम् ।
 दत्ताभयं कालभुजङ्गरंहसा प्रोद्वेजितानां शरणैषिणां नृणाम् ॥१६॥
 समर्हणं यत्र निधाय कौशिकस्तथा बलिश्चाप जगत्पवेन्द्रताम् ।
 यद् वा विहारे ब्रजयोषितां श्रमं स्पर्शेन सौगन्धिकगन्धपानुदत् ॥१७॥
 न मय्युपैथ्यस्वरिबुद्धिमन्युतः कंसस्य दूतः प्रहितोऽपि विश्वदृक् ।
 योऽन्तर्बहिश्चेतस एतदीहितं क्षेत्रज्ञ ईक्षत्यमलेन चक्षुषा ॥१८॥
 अयङ्ध्रिमूलेऽवहितं कृताञ्जलिं मामीक्षिता सस्मितमार्द्रया दृशा ।
 सपट्टपथस्तसमस्तकिल्बिषो वोढा मुदं वीतविशङ्क ऊर्जिताम् ॥१९॥
 सुहृत्तमं ज्ञातिमनन्यदैवतं दोष्यं बृहद्भ्यां परिरप्यतेऽथ माम् ।
 आत्मा हि तीर्थीक्रियते तदैव मे बन्धश्च कर्मात्मक उच्छसित्यतः ॥२०॥

लब्धाङ्गसङ्गं प्रणतं कृताञ्जलिं मां वक्ष्यतेऽङ्कुर ततैर्युश्रवाः ।
 तदा वयं जन्मभूतो महीयसा नैवादृतो यो धिगमुष्य जन्म तत् । ११ ।
 न तस्य कश्चिद् दयितः सुहृत्तमो न चाप्रियो द्वेष्य उपेक्ष्य एव वा ।
 तथापि भक्तान् भजते यथा तथा सुरदुमो यद्वदुपाश्रितोऽर्थदः । १२ ।
 किञ्चाग्रजो मावनतं यदुत्तमः स्मयन् परिषृज्य गृहीतमङ्गलौ ।
 गृहं प्रवेद्याप्तसमस्तसकृत् संप्रक्ष्यते कंसकृतं स्वबन्धुषु । १३ ।

Alighted from the chariot immediately afterwards, I shall certainly bow at the feet of the almighty Lords (of the universe), the foremost Persons (Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa)—which are (only) cherished in their mind by (great) Yogis for Self-Realization (but are never seen by them)—and alongwith Them I shall greet Their friends (the cowerd boys) as well as the (other) inhabitants of Vraja (consisting mainly of a woodland). (15) Will the Lord place on my head, when I am fallen at the soles of His feet, His own lotus-like palm, that has given assurances of safety to men terrified by the speed of the serpent of Time and seeking shelter (at His feet)? (16) Placing articles of worship in (the hollow of) that palm, Kauśika (a former Indra) attained the rulership of (all) the three worlds and pouring water into it the demon Bali (the celebrated demon king and devotee) secured (a title to) the sovereignty of the three worlds. Nay, it relieved by its (soft and fragrant) touch the fatigue of the women of Vraja during the Rāsa-Play, emitting as it did the fragrance of a Saugandhika (a particular species of lotus, so-called because of its remarkable fragrance). (17) Even though I have been sent by Kāṁsa as his messenger, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord)—who is omniscient and the Knower of all bodies and who witnesses with His unclouded vision the activity of the mind, existing as He does inside as well as outside the latter—will not (I am sure) harbour a feeling of enmity towards me. (18) If He smilingly looks on me—fallen at the soles of His feet with a fully controlled mind and joined palms—with a compassionate eye, I shall forthwith be absolved from all sins and, completely rid of (all) fear (of rebirth etc.), experience supreme bliss. (19) Again, when He folds in His long arms me, his most sincere friend and kinsman exclusively devoted to Him, my body will at once be actually turned into a (veritable) sanctuary and my bonds in the form of Karma will fall off from it. (20) When I have thus enjoyed His (blissful) embrace and stand bowing low (before Him) with joined palms, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (of wide renown) will address me in the words 'Uncle Akṛūra !' Then (alone) will my birth be fruitful. Fie upon that birth of him who is not accepted as His own by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Supreme Lord). (21) Neither is anyone beloved of Him, much less His dearest friend, nor again is anyone unwelcome, much less hateful or even worthy of being treated with indifference. Nevertheless He loves His devotees (alone) in the same way as they do, just as a wish-yielding tree grants the desire of men (only) when approached (by them). (22) Further His elder Brother (Balarāma), the foremost of the Yadus, would smilingly embrace me—bowing low (before Him)—and conduct me; caught by my joined palms into the house and will enquire in detail of me, when I have received all attentions, about the conduct of Kāṁsa towards His kinsfolk." (23)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति सञ्जितनयन् कृष्णं श्वफल्कतनयोऽध्वनि । रथेन गोकुलं प्रापः सूर्यश्चास्तगिरिं नृप । १४ ।

पदानि तस्याखिललोकपालकिरीटजुष्टमलपादरेणोः ।
 ददर्श गोष्ठे क्षितिकौतुकानि विलक्षितान्यब्जयवाङ्कुशाद्यैः । १५ ।
 तद्दर्शनाह्लादविवृद्धसम्भ्रमः प्रेम्णोर्ध्वरोमाश्रुकलाकुलेक्षणः ।
 रथादवस्कन्द्य स तेषुचेष्टत प्रभोरमूयङ्घ्रिराजंसाहो इति । १६ ।

देहभृतमियानर्थो हित्वा दम्भं भियं शुचम् । संदेशाद् यो हरेर्लिङ्गदर्शनश्रवणादिभिः । १७ ।

Śrī Suka continued : Thus contemplating on Śrī Kṛṣṇa all the way, Akrūra (the son of Śwaphalka) arrived in Vraja in the chariot, while the sun reached the western hill (horizon), O protector of men. (24) He beheld in Vraja the footprints of Śrī Kṛṣṇa—the sacred dust of whose feet is borne on their crown by the guardians of all the worlds—which served as the ornaments of the earth and were distinguished by the marks of a lotus, a grain of barley, a goad and so on. (25) His impatience having been immensely heightened by the joy derived from their sight, his hair standing on end through love and his eyes bedimmed with tear-drops, he jumped down from the chariot and rolled on the footprints exclaiming, "Oh ! these are the particles of dust of the Lord's feet !" (26) This much is the end to be attained by those invested with a body, viz., that giving up hypocrisy, fear and worry, they should cultivate through the sight of Śrī Hari's images, the hearing of His praises and so on that ecstatic mood which was felt by Akrūra from the time he received the mandate (from Kamsa). (27)

ददर्श कृष्णं रामं च ब्रजे गोदोहनं गतौ । पीतनीलाम्बरधरो शरदम्बुरुहेक्षणौ । १८ ।

किशोरो श्यामलश्चेतौ श्रीनिकेतौ बृहद्गुणौ । सुमुखौ सुन्दरवरौ बालद्विरद्विक्रमौ । १९ ।

ध्वजवक्त्राङ्गशाम्भोजैश्चिह्नितैरङ्घ्रिभिर्भ्रजम् । शोभयन्तौ महात्मानावनुक्रोशस्मितेक्षणौ । २० ।

उदाररुचिरक्रीडौ स्त्रविणौ वनमालिनौ । पुण्यगन्धानुलिप्ताङ्गौ स्त्रातौ विरजवाससौ । २१ ।

प्रधानपुरुषावाधौ जगद्धेतू जगत्पती । अवतीर्णौ जगत्पथं स्वांशेन बलकेशवौ । २२ ।

दिशो वितिमिरा राजन् कुर्वणौ प्रभया स्वया । यथा मारकतः शैले सौम्यश्च कनकाचितौ । २३ ।

रथात्तूर्णमवप्लुत्य सोऽङ्कुरः स्नेहविह्वलः । पपात चरणोपात्ते दण्डवद् रामकृष्णयोः । २४ ।

भगवद्दर्शनाद्वाढबाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणः । पुलकाचिताङ्ग औत्कण्ठ्यात् स्वास्थ्याने नाशकन्नुप । २५ ।

भगवांस्तमभिप्रेत्य रथाङ्गाङ्कितपाणिना । परिभेज्युपाकृष्य प्रीतः प्रणतवत्सलः । २६ ।

संकर्षणश्च प्रणतमुपगुह्य महामनाः । गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणी अनयत् सानुजो गुहम् । २७ ।

(Presently) he saw in Vraja Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma with eyes resembling a pair of autumnal lotuses, (severally) wearing yellow and blue garments and present in the yard where cows were milked. (28) They were (mere) lads, dark-brown and fair (in complexion respectively) the abodes of grace, with long arms and a lovely countenance, the foremost among the charming and having the prowess of young elephants. (29) The two high-souled Brothers were gracing (the soil of) Vraja by Their feet distinguished with the marks of a flag, the thunderbolt, a goad and a lotus and were casting (all round) glances accompanied with smiles full of compassion. (30) Having bathed, they had put on immaculate clothes, were besmeared all over with sandal-paste which emitted a delightful odour and adorned with necklaces of jewels and garlands of sylvan flowers and were engaged in noble and charming pastimes. (31) They were the two foremost and most ancient Persons, the Causes as well as the Rulers of the universe, descended for the sake of the world in Their all-blissful essence as Balarāma and Keśava (Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (32) (Shining) like a rock of emerald and another of silver, covered with gold, the two (divine) Brothers were ridding the quarters of their darkness with Their own effulgence, O Parikṣit ! (33) Hastily jumping down from the chariot and overwhelmed with affection, the aforesaid Akrūra fell prostrate at the feet of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (34) With his eyes blinded by tears of joy brought by the sight of the Lord and his frame covered with bristling hair, he was unable even to introduce himself (by uttering his name) due to his throat being choked (with emotion), O protector of men ! (35) Coming to know him (as well as of his intention through inference), the Lord (who is so fond of those who are bent low before Him), drew Akrūra towards and near Him with His hand characterized by the mark of a discus and, full of delight, embraced him. (36) The high-minded Saṅkaraṣaṇa (Balarāma) too hugged Akrūra bowing low (before him) and, clasping his (joined) palms with His own took him to His house in the company of His younger Brother (Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (37)

पृष्ठाय स्वागतं तस्मै निवेद्य च वरासनम् । प्रक्षाल्य विधिवत् पादौ मधुपर्कार्हाणमाहृत । ३८ ।
निवेद्य गां चातिथये संवाह्य श्रान्तमादृतः । अन्नं बहुगुणं मेध्यं श्रद्धयोपाहरद् विभुः । ३९ ।
तस्मै भुक्तवते प्रीत्या रामः परमधर्मवित् । सुखवासैर्गन्धमाल्यैः परां प्रीतिं व्यधात् पुनः । ४० ।
पप्रच्छ सत्कृतं नन्दः कथं स्थ निरनुग्रहे । कसे जीवति दाशार्हं सौनपाला इवावयः । ४१ ।
योज्यधीत् स्वस्वसुप्तोक्तान् क्रोशन्त्या असुतुप् खलः । किं नु स्वित्तत्प्रजानां वः कुशलं विमुशामहे । ४२ ।
इत्थं सुनृतया वाचा नन्देन सुसंभाजितः । अक्रूरः परिपृष्टेन जहावध्वपरिश्रमम् । ४३ ।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धेऽक्रूरगमनं नामष्टाविंशोऽध्यायः । ३८ ।

Then, enquiring about his safe arrival and giving him an excellent seat, Balarāma washed his feet with due ceremony and fetched (for him) an offering called Madhuparka (consisting of honey, clarified butter and curds). (38) Again, bestowing on the guest a cow and massaging him, weary as he was, the almighty Lord respectfully and with (great) reverence brought (for him) pure food endowed with manifold excellences. (39) When he had finished his meals, Balarāma, who knew the highest Dharma (in the shape of hospitality shown to a newcomer and so on), gave him supreme joy again by (lovingly) offering him articles (such as betel and cardamoms) intended to scent his mouth (after meals) as well as perfumes and garlands. (40) When he had thus been shown (the customary) hospitality, Nanda enquired of him:—"Like the sheep having a butcher for their keeper, how are you getting on while the ruthless Kāṁsa is alive, O Akrūra (a scion of Daśārha)? (41) We wonder what safety, in truth could there be to you, the subjects of him who killed the babes of his screaming cousin (Devakī) a wicked fellow given to the gratification of His own self that he is." (42) Duly greeted thus with polite words by Nanda, who had (already) been subjected to (similar) polite enquiries, Akrūra forgot the fatigue of his journey. (43)

Thus ends the thirty-eighth discourse entitled "Akrūra's arrival (in Vraja)" in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकोनचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XXXIX

Departure of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma for Mathurā

श्रीशुक उवाच

सुखोपविष्टः पर्यङ्के रामकृष्णोरुमानितः । लेभे मनोरथान् सर्वान् पथि यान् स चकार ह । १ ।
किमलभ्यं भगवति प्रसन्ने श्रीनिकेतने । तथापि तत्परा राजत्र हि वाञ्छन्ति किञ्चन । २ ।
सायंतनाशनं कृत्वा भगवान् देवकीसुतः । सुहृत्सु वृत्तं कंसस्य पप्रच्छान्यच्चिकीर्षितम् । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having been comfortably seated on a couch and greatly honoured by Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa, Akrūra actually realized all the aspirations that he had entertained on his way (to Vraja). (1) What remains unattainable when the Lord, who is the Abode of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) is pleased? Nevertheless those exclusively devoted to Him, O king, seek nothing as a matter of fact. (2) Having finished His supper, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devaki) enquired (of Akrūra) about the conduct of Kāṁsa towards His kinsmen and what else was sought to be done by Him. (3)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

तात सौम्यागतः कश्चित् स्वागतं भद्रमस्तु वः । अपि स्वज्ञातिबन्धूनामनमीवमनामयम् । ४ ।
किं नु नः कुशलं पृच्छे एधमाने कुलामये । कंसे मातुलनाम्यङ्ग स्वानां नस्तत्त्वजासु च । ५ ।
अहो अस्मदभूद् भूरि पित्रोर्वृजिनमार्ययोः । यद्धेतोः पुत्रमरणं यद्धेतोर्वन्धनं तयोः । ६ ।
दिष्ट्याद्य दर्शनं स्वानां मह्यं वः सौम्य कङ्क्षितम् । सञ्जातं वर्ण्यतां तात तवागमनकारणम् । ७ ।

The glorious Lord said : O dear uncle, O gentle one, I hope you came safely (all the way). May all be well with you ! I believe no outrage has been perpetrated (by the tyrant Kāṁsa) against your friends, your kinsmen and other relations and good health is enjoyed by them all. (4) So long as Kāṁsa—who, though passing by the name of my maternal uncle, is a (veritable) pestilence to my family—is thriving, O dear uncle, what good indeed is our asking about the welfare of our kinsmen and their progeny? (5) Oh, (how) great has been the suffering of our noble parents for our sake; (for) it was due to us that the death of their (other) sons took place and it was on account of us that bondage was accepted by them. (6) Luckily (enough) has the sight of our kinsmen in yourself, O gentle one, been vouchsafed today to us, by whom it was (long) coveted. (Now) the motive of your visit (to Vraja), O dear uncle ! may (kindly) be communicated (to us). (7)

श्रीशुक उवाच

पृष्ठे भगवता सर्वं वर्णयामास माधवः । वैरानुबन्धं यदुषु वसुदेवबोधमयम् । ८ ।
यत्संदेशो यदर्थं वा दूतः संप्रेषितः स्वयम् । यदुक्तं नारादेनास्य स्वजन्मानकदुन्दुभेः । ९ ।
श्रुत्वाक्रूरवचः कृष्णो बलश्च परवीरहा । प्रहस्य नन्दं पितरं राज्ञाऽऽदिष्टं विजज्ञतुः । १० ।
गोपान् समादिशत् सोऽपि गृह्यतां सर्वगोरसः । उपायनानि गृह्णीष्वं युज्यन्तां शकटानि च । ११ ।
यास्यामः श्वे मधुपुरीं दास्यामो नृपते रसान् । द्रक्ष्यामः सुमहत् पर्वं यान्ति जानपदाः किल ।
एवमाघोषयत् क्षत्रा नन्दगोपः स्वगोकुले । १२ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Questioned by the Lord (as aforesaid), Akrūra (a scion of Madhu) related (to Him) everything, viz., the inveteracy of Kāṁsa's enmity to the Yadus and his attempt to kill Vasudeva, (also) with what message and for what purpose Akrūra himself had been sent by Kāṁsa as his emissary and what was communicated to him by Nārada regarding His having been born of Ānakadundubhi (Vasudeva). (8-9) Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Bala, the slayer of hostile warriors heartily laughed to hear the message of Akrūra and apprised Their father, Nanda, of the king's command. (10) Nanda too duly instructed the Gopas (as follows):— "Let all the yield of the cows (in the shape of milk, curds and clarified butter) be collected. (Also) take (with you) presents (of various kinds) and let bullock-carts be got ready. (11) We shall proceed tomorrow to Mathurā (the city founded by the demon Madhu) and (on arriving there) shall present to the king delicious substances (such as milk, curds and ghee) and witness the grand festival (of a bow-sacrifice). I hear the people of the (entire) kingdom (of Mathurā) are going (there)." Nanda, the chief of the Gopas, caused this to be proclaimed by the watchman all over his Vraja. (12)

गोप्यस्तास्तदुपश्रुत्य बभूवुर्व्यथिता भृशम् । रामकृष्णौ पुरीं नेतुमक्रूरं ब्रजमागतम् । १३ ।
 काश्चित्कृतकृतापथासम्प्लानमुखश्रियः । संसहकूलवलयेकेशग्रन्थश्च काश्चन । १४ ।
 अन्याश्च तदनुध्याननिवृत्ताशेषवृत्तयः । नाभ्यजानन्निमं लोकमात्मलोकं गता इव । १५ ।
 स्मरन्त्यश्वापराः शौरेरनुरागस्मितेरिताः । हृदिस्पृशश्चित्रपदा गिरः संमुमुहुः स्त्रियः । १६ ।
 गतिं सुललितां चेष्टां स्निग्धहासावलोकनम् । शोकापहानि नर्माणि प्रोद्दामचरितानि च । १७ ।
 चिन्तयन्त्यो मुकुन्दस्य भीता विरहकातराः । समेताः सङ्घशः प्रोचुरश्रुमुख्योज्ज्वलाशयाः । १८ ।

The cowherd women, of whom so much has been said before, were sore distressed to hear at that time of Akrūra having arrived in Vraja to take Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa to the capital. (13) Some had the splendour of their countenance marred by the hot breaths proceeding from the agony caused by that news; others found their scarfs and bangles slipping off and their (braid-knots) loosened. (14) (Still) others, who had the functions of all their senses suspended by concentrated thought of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, had no consciousness left of their physical body, as though they had risen to the realm of the Spirit. (15) Other (cowherd) women fainted as they recalled the talks of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūra), which touched (the very chords of) their heart and consisted of wonderful expressions and were uttered with smiles full of love. (16) Thinking of the most graceful gait and movements, glances accompanied by loving smiles, jokes that dissipated grief and the extraordinary exploits of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), the Gopīs—who were terror-stricken and agitated by the (very) thought of the (impending) separation (from Śrī Kṛṣṇa), met together in groups and feelingly talked to one another the whole night (as follows) with tears on their faces and their mind absorbed in Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord). (17-18)

गोप्य ऊचुः

अहो विधातस्तव न क्वचिद् दया संयोज्य मैत्र्या प्रणयेन देहिनः ।
 तांश्चाकृतार्थान् वियुनङ्क्ष्यपार्थक्यं विक्रीडितं तेऽर्भकचेष्टितं यथा । १९ ।
 यस्त्वं प्रदर्शयसितकुन्तलावृतं मुकुन्दवक्त्रं सुकपोलमुन्नमम् ।
 शोकापनोदस्मितलेशसुन्दरं करोषि पारोक्ष्यमसाधु ते कृतम् । २० ।
 क्रूरस्त्वमक्रूरसमाख्यया स्म नश्चक्षुर्हि दत्तं हरसे बताज्ञवत् ।
 येनैकदेशेऽखिलसर्गसौष्टवं त्वदीयमद्राक्ष्म वयं मधुद्विषः । २१ ।

The Gopīs said : O creator, there is no (trace of) compassion anywhere in you since, having united embodied souls through friendly behaviour and affection, you disunite them even when they have not yet (fully) realized their ambition. Your capricious acts are as aimless as the movements of a babe. (19) Having (once) revealed (to us) the face of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) with lovely cheeks and a prominent nose, (nay,) overhung by dark curly locks and charming with a gentle smile that dispels (all) grief, you are screening it from our view. This act of yours is far from good. (20) You are cruel indeed in that under the appellation of Akrūra (not cruel) you are like an ignorant person taking away (from us) the eye, given by yourself, with which we witnessed all your creative skill (concentrated) in a single limb of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Slayer of the demon Madhu) ! (21)

न नन्दसूनुः क्षणभङ्गसौहृदः समीक्षते नः स्वकृतानुरागवत् ।

विहाय गेहान् स्वजनान् सुतान् पतीस्तद्वाप्यमद्वोपगता नवप्रियः । २२ ।
 सुखं प्रभाता रजनीयमाशिषः सत्या बभूवुः पुरयोषितां ध्रुवम् ।
 याः संप्रविष्टस्य मुखं व्रजस्पतेः पास्यन्त्यपाङ्गोत्कलितस्मितसखम् । २३ ।
 तासां मुकुन्दो मधुमञ्जुभाषितैर्गृहीतचित्तः परवान् मनस्व्यपि ।
 कथं पुनर्नः प्रतियास्यतेऽबला ग्राह्याः सलज्जस्मितविभ्रमैर्भ्रमन् । २४ ।
 अद्य ध्रुवं तत्र दृशो भविष्यते दाशार्हभोजान्धकवृण्णिसात्वताम् ।
 महोत्सवः श्रीरमणं गुणास्पदं द्रक्ष्यन्ति ये चाध्वनिं देवकीसुतम् । २५ ।

Alas ! the Darling of Nanda (Himself) whose friendship is (but) momentary, and who is fond of the new, does not even gaze on us, who have been enslaved by the spell cast by Himself and who directly sought His service renouncing our homes, relations, sons and husbands! (22) Happy will be the dawn following this night for the ladies of the city (of Mathurā); (nay), their aspirations have been surely realized; (for) they will fondly gaze on the countenance—full of nectarean smiles exhibited by the corners of eyes—of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of Vraja), even as He fearlessly enters the city. (23) How, then, will Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) return to us, helpless rustic women—even though He has got other relations (too in Vraja), and although He is self-possessed—when His mind is captivated by the utterances, sweet as honey, of those ladies (of Mathurā), and remains deluded by their bashful smiles and amorous glances ? (24) Today surely a grand feast awaits (in Mathurā) the eyes of the Daśārhas, the Bhojas, the Andhakas, the Vṛṣṇis and the Sātyatas—who will behold Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Yaśodā, nicknamed as Devakī), the Spouse of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) and the (one) Abode of (all) excellences—as well as to the eyes of those that will see Him (driving) on the road (to Mathurā). (25)

मैतद्विधस्याकरुणस्य नाम भूदकूर इत्येतदतीव दारुणः ।
 योऽसावनाश्वास्य सुदुःखितं जनं प्रियास्त्रियं नेष्यति पारमध्वनः । २६ ।
 अनाद्रंधीरेष समास्थितो रथं तपन्वमी च त्वरयन्ति दुर्मदाः ।
 गोपा अनोभिः स्थविरैरुपेक्षितं दैवं च नोऽद्य प्रतिकूलमीहते । २७ ।
 निवारयामः समुपेत्य माधवं किं नोऽकरिष्यन् कुलवृद्धबाण्धवाः ।
 मुकुन्दसङ्गात्रिमिषार्धदुस्यजाद् दैवेन विध्वंसितदीनचेतसाम् । २८ ।
 यस्यानुरागललितस्मितवल्लुमन्त्रलीलालोकपरिरम्भणारासगोष्ठ्याम् ।
 नीताः स नः क्षणमिव क्षणदा विना ते गोष्यः कथं न्वतितरेम तमो दुरन्तम् । २९ ।
 योऽहः क्षये व्रजमनन्तसखः परीतो गोपैर्विशन् खुररजश्छुरितालकस्रक् ।
 वेणुं कृणन् स्मितकटाक्षनिरीक्षणं चित्तं क्षिणीत्यमुमृते नु कथं भवेम । ३० ।

'Akrūra' (one who is not cruel) should not have been the name of such a ruthless fellow who is extremely hard-hearted in that he is going to take Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is dearer than life) beyond the familiar path, not caring to comfort us (the womenfolk), sore distressed as we are. (26) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (whose mind is altogether devoid of the moisture of love) is (already) comfortably seated in the chariot and, following Him, these arrogant Gopas in their bullock-carts are urging Akrūra to make haste. (On top of it) the aged ones have grown indifferent (do not interfere). And Fate too is working against us today ! (27) Let us politely approach Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Madhu) and stop Him. What harm can the elders of the race or our relations do to us, who stand deprived by Providence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's company—which could not be easily forgone even for half a second—and are (so) distressed in mind ? (28) How shall we, O cowherd women, be able in fact to get over the anguish of separation—which is so difficult to overcome—without Him in whose company a number of nights were spent by us as an instant in the Rāsa assembly enlivened by His winsome smiles, charming whispers, playful glances and embraces, all of which were inspired by His love? (29) How can we really survive without Him who—while entering Vraja at the close of the day, accompanied by Balarāma (who is possessed of infinite strength) and surrounded by cowherd boys and playing on the flute, His curly locks and wreaths of flowers covered all over with the dust raised by the hoofs of the cows—used to captivate our mind with His sidelong glances full of smiles? (30)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं ब्रुवाणा विरहातुरा भृशं ब्रजस्त्रियः कृष्णविषक्तमानसाः ।

विसृज्य लज्जां रुदुः स्म सुखं गोविन्द दामोदर माधवेति । ३१ ।

स्त्रीणामेवं रुदन्तीनामुदिते सवितर्यथ । अक्रूरश्चोदयामास कृतमैत्रादिको रथम् । ३२ ।

गोपास्तमन्वसज्जन्त नन्दाद्याः शकटैस्ततः । आदायोपायनं भूरि कुम्भान् गोरससम्भृतान् । ३३ ।

गोप्यश्च दयितं कृष्णमनुब्रज्यानुव्रजिताः । प्रत्यादेशं भगवतः काङ्क्षन्त्यश्वावतस्थिरे । ३४ ।

तास्तथा तप्यतीर्वीक्ष्य स्वप्रस्थाने यदूतमः । सान्त्वयामास सप्रेमैरायास्य इति दौत्यकैः । ३५ ।

यावदालक्ष्यते केतुर्यावद् रेणु रथस्य च । अनुप्रस्थापितात्मानो लेख्यानीवोपलक्षिताः । ३६ ।

ता निराशा निववृत्तुर्गोविन्दविनिवर्तने । विशोका अहनी नित्युर्गायन्त्यः प्रियचेष्टितम् । ३७ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Talking (to one another) in this strain and sore afflicted at the thought of separation, the women of Vraja—whose mind was deeply attached to Śrī Kṛṣṇa—cried loudly, casting all bashfulness to the winds, "O Protector of cows, O Kṛṣṇa (who was tied at the waist with a string by mother Yaśodā), O Scion of Madhu!" (31) In spite of the womenfolk (of Vraja) wailing as aforesaid, now that the sun had risen, Akrūra—who had (just) finished his (Sandhyā) prayers to the sun-god and other devotions—presently drove his chariot (in the direction of Mathurā). (32) The Gopas headed by Nanda thereupon closely followed him in their bullock-carts taking (with them) abundant presents including pitchers full of the yield of cows (in the shape of milk, curds and ghee). (33) The cowherd women too followed their beloved Śrī Kṛṣṇa (to a short distance) and delighted (to some extent by His turning round and casting loving glances at them) they paused (awhile) awaiting the Lord's message in reply to theirs (which had evidently been sent by them through some special messenger). (34) Observing them suffering agony as aforesaid at His departure, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the foremost of the Yadus) comforted them with messages full of love, sent through a messenger, saying "I shall come (back)!" (35) As long as the flag (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's chariot) was visible and so long as the dust raised by the chariot continued to be seen, the Gopīs—who had sent their mind after the Lord—were seen (standing) like so many painted figures. (36) Hopeless of Govinda's return, they (all) retraced their steps and, rid of grief (by His loving assurances) passed their days and nights celebrating in songs the pastimes of their beloved Lord. (37)

भगवानपि सम्प्राप्तो रामाक्रूरयुतो नृप । रथेन वायुवेगेन कालिन्दीमघनाशिनीम् । ३८ ।

तत्रोपस्पृश्य पानीयं पीत्वा मृष्टं मणिप्रभम् । वृक्षपण्डमुपब्रज्य सरामो रथमाविशत् । ३९ ।

अक्रूरस्तावुषामन्य निवेद्य च रथोपरि । कालिन्द्या हृदमागत्य स्नानं विधिवदाचरत् । ४० ।

निमग्न्य तस्मिन् सलिले जपन् ब्रह्म सनातनम् । तावेव ददृशेऽक्रूरो रामकृष्णौ समन्वितौ । ४१ ।

तौ रथस्थौ कथमिह सुतावानकदुन्दुभेः । तर्हि स्वित् स्थन्देन न स्त इत्युमन्य व्यचष्ट सः । ४२ ।

तत्रापि च यथापूर्वमासीनीं पुनरेव सः । न्यमज्जद् दर्शनं यमे मृषा किं सलिले तयोः । ४३ ।
 भूयस्तत्रापि सोऽद्राक्षीत् स्तुयमानमहीश्वरम् । सिद्धचारणगन्धर्वैरसुरैर्नतकन्धरैः । ४४ ।
 सहस्रशिरसं देवं सहस्रफणमौलिनम् । नीलाश्वारं बिसश्वेतं शृङ्गेः श्वेतमिव स्थितम् । ४५ ।
 तथोत्सङ्गे घनश्यामं पीतकौशेयवाससम् । पुरुषं चतुर्भुजं शान्तं पद्मपत्रारुणेषणम् । ४६ ।
 चारुप्रसन्नवदनं चारुहासनिरीक्षणम् । सुभूत्रसं चारुकर्णं सुकपोलारुणाधरम् । ४७ ।
 प्रलम्बपीवरभुजं तुङ्गासोरःस्थलश्रियम् । कम्बुकण्ठं निम्ननाभिं वलिमत्पल्लवोदरम् । ४८ ।
 बृहत्कटितटश्रोणिकरभोरुह्यान्वितम् । चारुजानुयुगं चारुजङ्घायुगलसंयुतम् । ४९ ।
 तुङ्गगुल्फारुणनखव्रातदीधितिभिर्वृतम् । नवाङ्गुल्यङ्गुष्ठदलैर्विलसत्पादपङ्कजम् । ५० ।
 सुमहार्हमणिप्रातकिरीटकटाङ्गदैः । कटिसूत्रब्रह्मसूत्रहारनूपुरकुण्डलैः । ५१ ।
 भ्राजमानं पद्मकरं शङ्खचक्रगदाधरम् । श्रीवत्सवक्षसं भ्राजत्कोस्तुभं वनमालिनम् । ५२ ।
 सुनन्दनन्दप्रमुखैः पार्षदैः सनकादिभिः । सुरेशैर्ब्रह्मरुद्रार्चनैर्वभिश्च द्विजोत्तमैः । ५३ ।
 प्रह्लादनादवसुप्रमुखैर्भगवतोत्तमैः । स्तुयमानं पृथग्भावैर्वचोभिरमलात्मभिः । ५४ ।
 श्रिया पुष्ट्या गिरा कान्त्या कीर्त्या तुष्ट्येलोर्जया । विद्यया विद्यया शक्या मायया च निषेवितम् । ५५ ।

(On this side) the Lord, for His part, safely reached (about noon) with Balarāma and Akrūra, O protector of men, (the bank of) the Kālindī, that washes off (all) sin, in His chariot, swift as wind. (38) Washing there His hands and feet etc., and drinking of its sweet water green as an emerald, He went near a cluster of trees (where the chariot was made to stand) and got into the chariot alongwith Balarāma. (39) Helping the two Brothers to get into the chariot and taking leave of Them, Akrūra returned (for his midday devotions) to the pool (known by the name of Ananta-Tīrtha or Brahmahrada) in the Yamunā and performed his ablutions with due ceremony. (40) Plunging in that water and muttering the (holy) Gāyatrī-Mantra (the essence of the eternal Veda), Akrūra beheld (in the water) the same Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa seated together. (41) (He said to Himself), "How can the two Sons of Ānakadundubhi, who are seated in the chariot, be here ? In that case (if they are really here), they should not be in the chariot." Saying so he emerged from the water and perceived the two Brothers seated even there (in the chariot) as heretofore. He (therefore) took a plunge again saying (to himself), "Is my having seen Them in the water false?" (42-43) This time he saw in that very water, being glorified by Siddhas, Cāraṇas, Gandharvas and Asuras with bent heads, the thousand-headed god Śeṣa (the lord of serpents)—with his thousand hoods protected by (the same number of) diadems—clad in blue (silk), (himself) white as a lotus fibre and rooted (there) like Mount Kailāsa (the silvery mountain) with its (golden) peaks (corresponding to the diadems of Śeṣa). (44-45) He (further) beheld on the coils of the serpent-god Lord Viṣṇu (the Supreme Person), dark-brown as a cloud, clad in yellow silk, possessed of four arms and eyes reddish like lotus petals, and looking (very) serene. (46) He wore a lovely and cheerful countenance with winsome smiles and glances, shapely eyebrows, a prominent nose, beautiful ears, charming cheeks and ruddy lips. (47) He had pretty long and plump arms, high shoulders, a breast which is the abode of Śrī, a conch-shaped neck, a deep navel and a belly shaped like a leaf (of the Indian fig tree) and marked with folds. (48) He had bulky buttocks and hips and a pair of thighs, tapering like the outer edge of the hand from the wrist to the root of the little finger, a pair of well-formed knees as well as a pair of shapely shanks. (49) He had prominent ankles and was enveloped with rays of light radiating from the ruddy nails (of His toes) and had lotus-like feet charming with toes and a pair of big toes tender as petals. (50) He shone resplendent with a diadem, bracelets and armlets set with most valuable gems, as well as with a girdle, a sacred thread, necklaces and pairs of anklets and ear-rings, and held a lotus (in one of His hands) and a conch, a discus and a mace (in the others). His breast was distinguished with a white curl of hair, the Kaustubha gem shining at His neck, and was adorned with a garland of sylvan flowers. (51-52) He was being glorified through praises expressive of divergent sentiments by attendants, the foremost of whom were Sunanda and Nanda (and who severally occupied the four quarters and the four intermediate points), the sage Sanaka and his three brothers (Sanandana, Sanātana and Sanatkumāra, all of whom including Sanaka, were standing behind the Lord), the chiefs of gods, headed by Brahmā and Lord Śiva (all of whom occupied a position to His right), the nine foremost Brāhmaṇas (Maṛīci and others, who stood to His left), as well as by the foremost of the Lord's devotees of pure mind, such as Prahrāda, Nārada and the Vasu (Uparicara by name, all of whom stood in front of the Lord). (53-54) He was (also) waited upon (in living forms) by Śrī (the goddess of beauty and good fortune), Puṣṭi (the goddess presiding over nutrition), Sarasvatī (the goddess presiding over speech), Kānti (the goddess presiding over splendour), Kīrti (the goddess presiding over glory), Tuṣṭi (the goddess presiding over contentment), Ilā (goddess Earth), Ūrjā (the goddess presiding over omnipotence), Vidyā (the goddess presiding over spiritual enlightenment conducive to Liberation), Avidyā (the goddess presiding over nescience, which binds the Jīva to mundane existence), Śakti (the foremost of all divine energies, going by the name of Hlādinī or the delighting potency) and Māyā (the Cause of Vidyā and Avidyā both). (55)

विलोक्य सुभृशं प्रीतो भक्त्या परमया युतः । हृष्यन्तूरुहो भावपरिक्लिन्नात्मलोचनः । ५६ ।

गिरा गद्गदयास्तौषीत् सत्त्वमालम्ब्य सात्वतः । प्रणम्य मूर्ध्नावहितः कृताञ्जलिपुटः शनैः । ५७ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्ये संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धेऽङ्कप्रतिपादने एकोनचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ३९ ।

Extremely rejoiced to perceive the Lord and summoning his presence of mind, Akrūra (who belonged to the Sātvata clan) and was full of supreme devotion, greeted the Lord with his head (bent low), and with joined palms and a concentrated mind slowly proceeded to extol the Lord in a voice choked with emotion, his hair standing on end and his mind and eyes moistened with love. (56-57)

Thus ends the thirty-ninth discourse forming part of the story of Akrūra's withdrawal (to Mathurā), in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XL

Akrūra's eulogy (of the Lord)

अक्रूर उवाच

नतोऽस्म्यहं त्वाखिलहेतुहेतुं नारायणं पूरुषमाद्यमव्ययम् ।

चन्नाभिजातादरविन्दकोशाद् ब्रह्माऽऽविरासीद् यत् एष लोकः । १ ।

भूस्तोयमग्निः पवनः खमादिर्महानजादिर्मन इन्द्रियाणि ।

सर्वेन्द्रियार्था विबुधाश्च सर्वे ये हेतवस्ते जगतोऽङ्गभूताः । २ ।

नैते स्वरूपं विदुरात्मनस्ते ह्यजादयोऽनात्मतया गृहीताः ।

अजोऽनुबद्धः स गुणैरजाया गुणात् परं वेद न ते स्वरूपम् । ३ ।

त्वां योगिनो यजन्त्यद्वा महापुरुषमीश्वरम् । साध्यात्मं साधिभूतं च साधिदैवं च साधवः । ४ ।

त्रय्या च विद्यया केचित् त्वां वै वैतानिका द्विजाः यजन्ते वितर्तयैर्ज्ञानारूपामराख्यया । ५ ।

एके त्वाखिलकर्माणि संन्यस्योपशमं गताः । ज्ञानिनो ज्ञानयजेन यजन्ति ज्ञानविग्रहम् । ६ ।

अन्ये च संस्कृतात्मानो विधिनाभिहितेन ते । यजन्ति त्वच्ययास्त्वां वै बहुमूर्त्यैकमूर्तिकम् । ७ ।

त्वामेवाव्ये शिवोक्तेन मार्गेण शिवरूपिणम् । ब्रह्माचार्यविभेदेन भगवन् समुपासते । ८ ।

सर्व एव यजन्ति त्वां सर्वदेवमयेश्वरम् । येऽप्यन्यदेवताभक्ता यद्याप्यन्यधियः प्रभो । ९ ।

यथाद्रिप्रभवा नद्यः पर्जन्यापूरिताः प्रभो । विशन्ति सर्वतः सिन्धुं तद्वत्त्वां गतयोऽन्ततः । १० ।

Akrūra prayed : I bow to You, Lord Nārāyaṇa, the most ancient and undecaying Person, the Cause of all causes (the Mahat-tattva and so on), from the lotus bud sprung from whose navel emerged Brahmā, from whom evolved this creation (both animate and inanimate)! (1) Whatever causes there are, viz., the earth, water, fire, the air, ether and its cause (Ahaṅkāra), the Mahat-tattva (the principle of cosmic intelligence), Prakṛti (primordial Matter) as well as its Cause (the Spirit), the mind, the Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action), the objects of all the (five) senses as well as the deities (presiding over them) have all evolved from Your (divine) Person. (2) (All) these (causes), Prakṛti and so on, which are (objectively) perceived, fail to know Your essential character because of their being material (other than the Spirit); while You are the Spirit. The celebrated Brahmā (too) who is conditioned by the modes of Prakṛti, is unable to know Your reality, which lies beyond the three Guṇas. (3) (Yet) pious Yogis (those given to contemplation) directly worship (and thereby seek to attain) You as indwelling the (diverse) limbs of the body (the eye, the heart and so on), (nay,) informing all material bodies and presiding over the bodies of the (various) gods, the Inner Controller and Ruler of the universe. (4) Some Brāhmaṇas given to sacrificial performance worship You alone under the name of gods invested with different forms, through extensive sacrifices as revealed by the three Vedas (Ṛk, Yajus and Sāma). (5) Some men of wisdom, who have developed dispassion, worship You, the embodiment of (pure) consciousness, through sacrifice in the form of spiritual enlightenment (consisting of absorption in to the Self), renouncing all actions (in the form of worldly as well as religious duties). (6) And, having consecrated themselves (through initiation in the various forms of worship), and (fully) absorbed in You, others worship You in a plurality of forms (viz., Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha) or in one form (that of Nārāyaṇa) according to the procedure taught by Yourself (in Tantric works such as the Pāñcarātra). (7) Others (the votaries of Lord Śiva) duly worship You alone in the form of Śiva along the lines recommended by Śiva (Himself), (of course,) differing in detail according to the teachings of a plurality of teachers, O almighty Lord ! (8) Even those who are devoted to other (minor) deities, although they look upon those gods as other than You, O Lord, all worship You alone, the almighty God representing all the gods (in Your Person). (9) (Just) as rivers having their source in a mountain and made full by the god of rain (and branching forth into so many streams), O Lord, find their way into the ocean from all sides, so do all paths ultimately lead to You alone. (10)

सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति भवतः प्रकृतेर्गुणाः । तेषु हि प्राकृताः प्रोता आग्रहास्थावरादयः । ११ ।

तुभ्यं नमस्तेऽस्वविषक्तदृष्टये सर्वात्मने सर्वधियां च साक्षिणे ।

गुणाप्रवाहोऽयमविद्यया कृतः प्रवर्तते देवनृतिर्यगात्मसु । १२ ।

अग्निमुखं तेऽवनिरद्भिरीक्षणं सूर्यो नभो नाभिरथो दिशः श्रुतिः ।

द्यौः कं सुरेन्द्रास्तव बाहवोऽर्णवाः कुक्षिर्मरुत् प्राणबलं प्रकल्पितम् । १३ ।

तेमाणि वृक्षौषधयः शिरोरुहा मेघाः परस्यास्थिनखानि तेऽद्वयः ।

निमेषणं राज्यहनी प्रजापतिर्मेढ्रस्तु वृष्टिस्तव वीर्यमिष्यते । १४ ।

त्वय्यव्ययात्मन् पुरुषे प्रकल्पिता लोकाः सपाला बहुजीवसङ्कुलाः ।

यथा जले सञ्जिहते जलौकसोऽप्युदुम्बरे वा मशका मनोमये । १५ ।

यानि यानीह रूपाणि क्रीडनार्थं विभर्षि हि । तैरामृष्टश्चो लोका मुदा गायन्ति ते यशः । १६ ।

नमः कारणमत्स्याय प्रलयाब्धिचराय च । हयशीर्षो नमस्तुभ्यं मधुकैटभमृत्यवे । १७ ।

अकूपाराय बृहते नमो मन्दरधारिणे । क्षित्युद्धारविहाराय नमः सूकरमूर्तये । १८ ।

नमस्तेऽद्भुतसिंहाय साधुलोकभयापह । वामनाय नमस्तुभ्यं क्रान्तत्रिभुवनाय च । १९ ।

नमो भृगूणां पतये दृप्तक्षत्रवनच्छिदे । नमस्ते रघुवर्याय रावणान्तकराय च । २० ।

नमस्ते वामुदेवाय नमः सङ्कर्षणाय च । प्रद्युम्नायानिरुद्धाय सात्वतां पतये नमः । २१ ।

नमो बुद्धाय शृङ्गाय दैत्यदानवमोहिने । म्लेच्छप्रायक्षत्रहन्त्रे नमस्ते कल्किरूपिणे । २२ ।

Sattva, Rajas and Tamas are the (three) modes of Your (own) Prakṛti (energy). Hence those endowed with a material body—from inanimate creatures (trees etc.) to Brahmā (the creator)—(ultimately) enter into them (and they into Prakṛti, the latter merging in You. In this way all the gods finally enter into You). (11) (My) salutation be to You, whose mind is unattached, identified as You are with all and the witness of all minds ! This stream of the (three) Guṇas (in the form of the cycle of birth and death), brought about by Avidyā (an energy of Yours that veils one's essential character), operates (only) on those that are identified with a celestial, human or sub-human form. (12) Fire has been conceived (by Your worshippers for the purpose of meditation) to be Your mouth, the earth as Your feet, the sun as Your eye, the sky as Your navel, and the quarters as Your ears, the highest heaven (the abode of Brahmā) as the top part of Your head, the chiefs of gods (Indra and others) as Your arms, the oceans as Your abdomen and the air as Your life-breath and strength. (13) Trees and annual plants are looked upon as the hair on Your body, clouds as Your locks, the mountains as the bones and nails of Your transcendent Self, day and night as the twinkling of Your eyes, Brahmā (the lord of creation) as Your membrum virile and rainfall as Your semen. (14) Conceived in You, the perfect and imperishable person, who can (only) be hinted at by the mind, the (numberless) universes—teeming with innumerable Jivas (embodied beings)—with their guardians move about like the eggs of tiny aquatic creatures in water or even like the (tiny) insects in (the interior of) an Udumbara fruit. (15) With their grief dispelled by the thought of the several forms You assume (from time to time) for the sake of sport, people sing Your glory with delight. (16) Hail to You, who appeared as the divine Fish from a definite motive and roamed through the ocean that deluged the world at the time of universal dissolution. Salutation to You, the Slayer of (the demons) Madhu and Kaiṭabha in the person of Hayagrīva (the Lord manifested with the head and neck of a horse). (17) Hail to You as the gigantic Tortoise that supported Mount Mandara (on His back). Salutation to You in the form of the divine Boar that sported (in the ocean) for lifting up the earth. (18) Hail to You in

भवान् प्रविशतामग्रे सहयानः पुरीं गृहम् । वयं त्विहावमुच्यथा ततो द्रक्ष्यामहे पुरीम् । १० ।

Akrūra replied : "Whatever wonders there are on this earth, in the firmament or in water exist in You (alone), who ensoul the universe. What wonder can, therefore, remain unseen by me, when I am directly looking at You ? (4) When I am gazing on Yourself, in whom all marvels exist, O infinite Lord, what miracle could have been seen by me (elsewhere, viz.,) on this earth, in the sky or in water ?" (5) Observing thus, Akrūra (the son of Gāndinī*) drove his chariot and brought Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa to Mathurā at the decline of day. (6) People from the country, O king, who flocked at every stage on the road, felt delighted to behold the two Sons of Vasudeva and could not withdraw their eyes (from Them). (7) Meanwhile the people of Vraja, headed by Nanda, the chief of the cowherds, (who had left the main road when they found Akrūra tarrying on the bank of the Yamunā, and taken a shorter route) reached a garden in the precincts of the city in advance and stood waiting (there for Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (8) Having joined them, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the universe) clasped with His own hand the hand of Akrūra, who stood bent low with reverence, and spoke to him as though laughing heartily :—(9) "Enter you the city in advance with the chariot and return home. We, however, shall presently take down our things here and having rested awhile shall then visit the city." (10)

अक्रूर उवाच

नाहं भवद्भ्यां रहितः प्रवेक्ष्ये मथुरां प्रभो । त्वक्तुं नार्हसि मां नाथ भक्तं ते भक्तवत्सल । ११ ।

आगच्छ याम गेहान् नः सनाथान् कुर्वधोक्षज । सहाग्रजः सगोपालैः सुहृद्भिश्च सुहृत्तम । १२ ।

पुनीहि पादरजसा गृहान् नो गृहमेधिनाम् । यच्छौचेनानुतुष्यन्ति पितरः साश्रयः सुराः । १३ ।

अवनित्याद्विद्युगलमासीच्छ्लोक्यो बलिर्महान् । ऐश्वर्यमतुलं लेभे गतिं चैकान्तिनां तु या । १४ ।

आपस्तेऽद्ध्यवनेज्जन्त्यर्बल्लौक्रेकाञ्जुचयोऽपुनन् । शिरसाधत्त याः शर्वः स्वर्वाताः सगरात्मजाः । १५ ।

देवदेव जगन्नाथ पुण्यश्रवणकीर्तन । यदूतपोतमश्लोक नारायण नमोऽस्तु ते । १६ ।

Akrūra submitted : Bereft of You both I shall not enter Mathurā, O Lord ! You ought not to abandon me, Your devotee, my master, (so) fond of Your votaries. (11) Come, let us (all) go (together). (Pray,) grace our house, O Lord, who are above sense-perception, with the presence of its master (in You), visiting it alongwith Balarāma (Your elder Brother) as well as with Your near and dear ones and (other) cowherds, O best Friend ! (12) (Please) sanctify our house, householders as we are, with the dust of Your feet. With the water washing Your feet (and collected in a basin in one's house or flowing in the form of the holy Gaṅgā) the manes as well as the gods including the fire-god get eternally propitiated (if it is offered to them by way of Tarpaṇa). (13) (Nay,) by washing both Your feet (the celebrated demon king) Bālī not only became worthy of (sacred) renown and great (in point of merits) but (also) attained incomparable affluence and power as well as the goal which is reached by those exclusively devoted to You. (14) The waters that washed Your feet (when You measured the earth and heaven in a couple of strides, and which flowed in the form of the holy Gaṅgā) and were (thus) hallowed (beyond all measure) sanctified all the three worlds (through which the Gaṅgā flows), the (great) Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) bore† them on His head and the (famous) sons of Sagara ascended to heaven (by contact of their remains with those sacred waters). (15) (My) salutation be to You, O Lord of the universe, adored (even) by the gods, the hearing and recital of whose praises brings (supreme) merit, O jewel among the

* The name of Akrūra's mother.

† Vide IX. ix. 9.

the form of a weird lion (half man and half lion), O Dispeller of the fears of the righteous! Salutation to You, again, as the divine Dwarf, who covered (all) the three worlds in one stride. (19) Hail to You in the form of Paraśurāma (the Lord of the Bhrgus), who cut down the forest of haughty Kṣatriyas ! Salutation to You as Śrī Rāma (the Chief of the Raghus), who put an end to Rāvaṇa ! (20) Hail, hail to You, manifested in the (four divine) forms of Vāsudeva (Śrī Kṛṣṇa), Saṅkarsaṇa (Balarāma), Pradyumna* (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's Son) and Aniruddha (Pradyumna's Son) ! Salutation to You, the Protector of the Sātvatas. (21) Hail to You as Lord Buddha, who was (altogether) faultless (though His gospel ran counter to the teachings of the Vedas) and who deluded the Daityas and the Dānavas (by preaching an anti-Vedic doctrine) ! Salutation to You in the form of Lord Kalki, (who is going to appear towards the end of Kaliyuga as) the Destroyer of Kṣatriyas, who will have well-nigh been reduced to the position of Mlecchas ! † (22)

भगवद्भिल्लोकोऽयं मोहितस्तव मायया । अहं ममेत्यसद्ग्राहो भ्राष्यते कर्मवर्त्मसु । २३ ।
 अहं चात्मात्मजागारदारार्थस्वजनादिषु । भ्रमामि स्वप्रकल्पेषु मूढः सत्यधिया विभो । २४ ।
 अनित्यानात्मदुःखेषु विपर्ययमतिह्वहम् । द्वन्द्वारामस्तमोविष्टो न जाने त्वाऽऽत्मनः प्रियम् । २५ ।
 यथाबुधो जलं हित्वा प्रतिच्छन्नं तदुद्धवैः । अभ्येति मृगतृष्णां वै तद्वत्त्वाहं पराङ्मुखः । २६ ।
 नोत्सहेऽहं कृपणधीः कामकर्महतं मनः । रोदुं प्रमाथिभिश्चाक्षैर्हिंयमाणमितस्ततः । २७ ।
 सोऽहं तवाङ्घ्र्युपगतोऽस्म्यसतां दुरापं तद्याप्यहं भवदनुग्रह ईश मये ।
 पुंसो भवेद् यर्हि संसरणापवर्गस्त्वव्यञ्जनाभ सदुपासनया मतिः स्यात् । २८ ।
 नमो विज्ञानमात्राय सर्वप्रत्ययहेतवे । पुरुषेशप्रधानाय ब्रह्मणेऽनन्तशक्तये । २९ ।
 नमस्ते वासुदेवाय सर्वभूतक्षयाय च । हृषीकेश नमस्तुभ्यं प्रपन्नं पाहि मां प्रभो । ३० ।
 इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धेऽक्षरस्तुर्निर्मम चत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ४० ।

O Lord, infatuated by Your Māya (deluding potency) and (consequently) clinging to the body and those connected with it (which are all devoid of reality) as the very self and as one's own (respectively), this (entire) world of living beings is made to revolve in the maze of Karma. (23) I too revolve in the domain of the body, offspring, homestead, wife, wealth, relations and so on—which are all (false) like a dream—thinking them to be real, a fool that I am, O almighty Lord ! (24) Holding as a matter of fact a contrary view with regard to the transient and to that which is not the Self as well as about that which is rooted in sorrow (or in other words mistaking that which is transient to be eternal, that which is not the self as one's own self and that which is full of sorrow as an embodiment of joy) and taking delight in pairs of opposites I am unable to know You, who are dear to me, enveloped as I am in (the darkness of) ignorance. (25) (Even) as an ignorant person would actually run after a mirage, abandoning water screened by its own products (viz., duck-weeds and other aquatic plants), so have I turned my face towards the body etc., leaving You. (26) Possessed of a poor understanding (clouded by an appetite for sensuous pleasures), I am not able to restrain my mind, agitated as it is by cravings and activities (of various kinds) and dragged here and there by the turbulent senses. (27) As such I have sought as my refuge Your feet, which are (so)

* Even though Pradyumna and Aniruddha were not yet born, Akrūra refers here to Their eternal forms which are only brought to light during Their descent in the world of matter.

† A Mleccha has been characterized by Baudhāyana, a Hindu law-giver, as follows:—

गोमांसखादको यस्तु विरुद्धं बहु भाषते । धर्मावार्ताहीनश्च स्तेच्छ इत्यभिधीयते ॥

"He who eats beef and indulges in self-contradictory statements, and is devoid of righteousness and purity of conduct is called a Mleccha."

difficult of access to the unrighteous. This too I think is possible (only) with Your grace; (for) devotion to You comes through the service of holy men (only) when the end of (the cycle of) birth and death for a man draws near, O Lord with a lotus sprung from Your navel ! (28) Hail to You who are all perfect and possessed of endless potencies, are invested with a body consisting of (pure) consciousness, the Source of all knowledge and the Ruler of all those (viz., the Time-Spirit, Karma, nature and so on) that control (the destiny of) the Jiva ! (29) Salutation to You, the Deity presiding over the intellect (in the form of Vāsudeva), the abode of all created beings (in the form of Lord Saṅkarṣaṇa, the Deity presiding over the ego-sense, which is the sustainer of all living creation)! Hail to You, O Ruler of the senses in the forms of Pradyumna and Aniruddha (the deities presiding over reason and the mind respectively)! (Pray,) protect me, fallen at Your feet, O Lord ! (30)

Thus ends the fortieth discourse entitled "Akrūra's Eulogy (of the Lord)" in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथैकचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLI

Entry into Mathurā (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma)

श्रीशुक उवाच

स्तुवतस्तस्य भगवान् दर्शयित्वा जले वपुः । भूयः समाहरत् कृष्णो नदो नाट्यमिवात्मनः । १ ।
सोऽपि चान्तर्हितं वीक्ष्य जलादुन्मज्ज्य सत्वरः । कृत्वा चावश्यकं सर्वं विस्मितो रथमागमत् । २ ।
तमपृच्छद्भूषिकेशः किं ते दृष्टमिवाद्भुतम् । भूमौ वियति तोये वा तथा त्वां लक्षयामहे । ३ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having shown (to Akrūra) His (Nārāyaṇa's) form under water, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa withdrew it again, (even) while he was eulogizing Him, (just) as an actor would wind up his part. (1) Perceiving the vision withdrawn and emerging from the water, Akrūra also hurriedly finished all his unavoidable routine of devotions, and returned wonder-struck to the chariot. (2) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the senses) asked him, "What wonder did you see (just) now on earth, in the heavens or in the water (of the Yamunā)? (From your moist and blooming eyes and cheerful countenance etc.), we conclude you to have witnessed something unusual. (3)

अक्रूर उवाच

अद्भुतानीह यावन्ति भूमौ वियति वा जले । त्वयि विश्वात्मके तानि किं मेऽदृष्टं विपश्यतः । ४ ।
यत्राद्भुतानि सर्वाणि भूमौ वियति वा जले । तं त्वानुपश्यतो ब्रह्मन् किं मे दृष्टमिवाद्भुतम् । ५ ।
इत्युक्त्वा चोदयामास स्यन्दनं गान्दिनीसुतः । मथुरामनयद् रामं कृष्णं चैव दिनात्यये । ६ ।
मार्गे ग्रामजना राजंस्त्र तत्रोपसंगताः । वसुदेवसुतौ वीक्ष्य प्रीता दृष्टिं न चाददुः । ७ ।
तावद् ब्रजौकसस्तत्र नन्दगोपादयोऽग्रतः । पुरोपवनमासाद्य प्रतीक्षन्तोऽवतस्थिरे । ८ ।
तान् समेत्याह भगवाननक्रूरं जगदीश्वरः । गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणिं प्रश्रितं प्रहसन्निव । ९ ।

भवान् प्रविशतामग्रे सहयानः पुरीं गृहम् । वयं त्विहावमुच्यथा ततो द्रक्ष्यामहे पुरीम् । १० ।

Akrūra replied : "Whatever wonders there are on this earth, in the firmament or in water exist in You (alone), who ensoul the universe. What wonder can, therefore, remain unseen by me, when I am directly looking at You ? (4) When I am gazing on Yourself, in whom all marvels exist, O infinite Lord, what miracle could have been seen by me (elsewhere, viz.,) on this earth, in the sky or in water ?" (5) Observing thus, Akrūra (the son of Gāndinī*) drove his chariot and brought Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa to Mathurā at the decline of day. (6) People from the country, O king, who flocked at every stage on the road, felt delighted to behold the two Sons of Vasudeva and could not withdraw their eyes (from Them). (7) Meanwhile the people of Vraja, headed by Nanda, the chief of the cowherds, (who had left the main road when they found Akrūra tarrying on the bank of the Yamunā, and taken a shorter route) reached a garden in the precincts of the city in advance and stood waiting (there for Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa). (8) Having joined them, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of the universe) clasped with His own hand the hand of Akrūra, who stood bent low with reverence, and spoke to him as though laughing heartily :—(9) "Enter you the city in advance with the chariot and return home. We, however, shall presently take down our things here and having rested awhile shall then visit the city." (10)

अक्रूर उवाच

नाहं भवद्भ्यां रहितः प्रवेक्ष्ये मथुरां प्रभो । त्यक्तुं नार्हसि मां नाथ भक्तं ते भक्तवत्सल । ११ ।

आगच्छ याम गेहान् नः सनाथान् कुर्वधोक्षज । सहाग्रजः सगोपालः सुहृद्भिश्च सुहृत्तम । १२ ।

पुनीहि पादरजसा गृहान् नो गृहमेधिनाम् । यच्छौचेनानुत्पन्ति पितरः साम्रयः सुराः । १३ ।

अवनिज्याङ्घ्रियुगलमासीच्छ्लोकयो बलिर्महान् । ऐश्वर्यमनुलं लेभे गतिं चैकान्तिनां तु वा । १४ ।

आपस्तेऽङ्घ्रयवनेज्यस्त्रील्लौकाज्जुचयोऽपुनन् । शिरसाधत् याः शर्वः स्वयार्ताः सगरात्मजाः । १५ ।

देवदेव जगन्नाथ पुण्यश्रवणकीर्तन । यदूतमोक्षमश्लोक नारायण नमोऽस्तु ते । १६ ।

Akrūra submitted : Bereft of You both I shall not enter Mathurā, O Lord ! You ought not to abandon me, Your devotee, my master, (so) fond of Your votaries. (11) Come, let us (all) go (together). (Pray,) grace our house, O Lord, who are above sense-perception, with the presence of its master (in You), visiting it along with Balarāma (Your elder Brother) as well as with Your near and dear ones and (other) cowherds, O best Friend ! (12) (Please) sanctify our house, householders as we are, with the dust of Your feet. With the water washing Your feet (and collected in a basin in one's house or flowing in the form of the holy Gaṅgā) the manes as well as the gods including the fire-god get eternally propitiated (if it is offered to them by way of Tarpana). (13) (Nay,) by washing both Your feet (the celebrated demon king) Bali not only became worthy of (sacred) renown and great (in point of merits) but (also) attained incomparable affluence and power as well as the goal which is reached by those exclusively devoted to You. (14) The waters that washed Your feet (when You measured the earth and heaven in a couple of strides, and which flowed in the form of the holy Gaṅgā) and were (thus) hallowed (beyond all measure) sanctified all the three worlds (through which the Gaṅgā flows), the (great) Lord Śiva (the Destroyer of the universe) bore† them on His head and the (famous) sons of Sagara ascended to heaven (by contact of their remains with those sacred waters). (15) (My) salutation be to You, O Lord of the universe, adored (even) by the gods, the hearing and recital of whose praises brings (supreme) merit, O jewel among the

* The name of Akrūra's mother.

† Vide IX. ix. 9.

Yadus, O Nārāyaṇa of excellent renown ! (16)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

आयास्ये भवतो गेहमहर्षयसमन्वितः । यदुचक्रद्गृहं हत्वा वितरिष्ये सुहृत्प्रियम् । १७ ।

The glorious Lord said : Accompanied by My elder brother, I shall visit your house (only) when I have slain Kārṇa (the enemy of Yadu's race), and bring delight to My (other) relations (as well). (17).

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवमुक्तो भगवता सोऽङ्करो विमना इव । पुरीं प्रविष्टः कंसाय कर्मावेद्य गृहं ययौ । १८ ।

अथापराह्णे भगवान् कृष्णः सङ्कर्षणान्वितः । मथुरां प्राविशद् गोपैर्दिदृक्षुः परिवारितः । १९ ।

ददर्श तां स्फाटिकतुङ्गगोपुरद्वारां बृहद्धेमकपाटोरणाम् ।

ताम्रारकोष्ठां परिखादुरासदामुद्यानरम्योपवनोपशोभिताम् । २० ।

सौवर्णशृङ्गाटकहर्म्यनिष्कृतैः श्रेणीसभाभिर्भवनैरुपस्कृताम् ।

वैदूर्यवज्रामलनीलविद्रुमैर्मुक्ताहरिद्रिर्वलभीषु वेदिषु । २१ ।

जुष्टेषु जालामुखरन्ध्रकुट्टिमेषुविष्टपारावतबर्हिनादिताम् ।

संस्तिक्तस्थापणमार्गचत्वारं प्रकीर्णमाल्याङ्कुरलाजतण्डुलाम् । २२ ।

आपूर्णकुम्भैर्दधिचन्दनोक्षितैः प्रसूनदीपावलिभिः सपल्लवैः ।

सवन्दरम्भारुपकैः सकेतुभिः स्वलङ्कृतद्वारगृहां सपट्टिकैः । २३ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus spoken to by the Lord, the aforesaid Akrūra entered the city like one sad at heart and, having apprised Kārṇa of what he had done, returned home. (18) Accompanied by Saṅkarṣaṇa (Balarāma) and surrounded by the (other) cowherds, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who was eager to have a look at the city, fearlessly entered Mathurā the next afternoon. (19) (Presently) He saw the city with high gateways (in its fortification wall) and portals (of its houses), made of crystal and fitted with huge doors of gold and embellished with ornamental arches—also of gold—over them. It had granaries etc., of copper and brass, had been rendered difficult of access by a moat and was adorned with gardens and delightful parks. (20) It was (further) graced with sheds of gold erected on the cross roads, mansions and rest-houses also of gold, halls for the meeting together of individuals following a particular trade and other (public) buildings. and was resonant with the noise of pigeons and peacocks perched on small wooden sheds erected in front of houses, platforms under them air-holes and pavements, (all) inlaid with cat's-eyes, diamonds, crystals, sapphires, corals, pearls and emeralds. Its roads, market-places, streets and quadrangles were profusely sprinkled with water and it was strewn with flowers, sprouts (of barley), parched paddy and rice-grains. (21-22) The entrances of its houses were artistically adorned (on both sides) with a pitcher full of water and sprinkled with curds and sandal-paste, (nay,) surrounded with rows of flowers and crowned with rows of lights, with (bunches of) leaves thrust into their mouth and strips of silk tied round their necks and with (trunks of) plantain, and areca-nut trees along with bunches of fruits fixed beside them and (festive) flags hoisted near them. (23)

तां सम्प्रविष्टौ वसुदेवनन्दनौ वृत्तौ वयस्यैरदेववर्त्मना ।

द्रष्टुं समीयुस्त्वरिताः पुरस्त्रियो हर्म्याणि चैवारुरुहन्तुपोत्सुकाः । २४ ।

काश्चिद् विपर्यगृह्यतवत्प्रभूषणा विस्मृत्य चैकं युगलेषुथापराः ।

कृतैकपत्रश्रवणैकनूपुरा नाङ्क्वा द्वितीयं त्वपराश्च लोचनम् । २५ ।
 अश्रन्त्य एकास्तदपास्य सोत्सवा अभ्यज्यमाना अकृतोपमजनाः ।
 स्वपन्त्य उल्लास्य निशम्य निःस्वनं प्रपाययन्त्योऽर्धमपोह्य मातरः । २६ ।
 मनांसि तासामरविन्दलोचनः प्रगल्भलीलाहसितावलोकनैः ।
 जहार मत्तद्विरदेन्द्रविक्रमो दृशां ददच्छीरमणात्मनोत्सवम् । २७ ।
 दृष्ट्वा मुहुःश्रुतमनुद्रुतचेतसस्तं तत्प्रेक्षणोत्सितसुधोक्षणलब्धमानाः ।
 आनन्दमूर्तिमुपगुह्य दृशाऽऽत्मलब्धं हृष्यस्त्वचो जहुरनन्तमरिन्दमाधिम् । २८ ।

प्रासादशिखराढाः प्रीत्युत्फुल्लमुखाम्बुजाः । अभ्यवर्षन् सौमनस्यैः प्रमदा बलकेशवौ । २९ ।
 दध्यक्षतैः सोदपात्रैः स्वगन्धैरभ्युपायनैः । तावानर्चुः प्रमुदितास्तत्र तत्र द्विजातयः । ३० ।
 ऊचुः पौरा अहो गोप्यस्तपः किमचरन् महत् । या ह्येतावनुपश्यन्ति नरलोकमहोत्सवौ । ३१ ।

Eager to have a look at the two Sons of Vasudeva—who had duly entered the city by the main road and were surrounded by Their companions—the women of the city hurriedly came together (at every stage) and climbed up the mansions (lining the road), O protector of men ! (24) Some ran with their garments and jewels wrongly placed, while others came out forgetting one of the ornaments worn in pairs. Some left with ornaments (only) on one ear and with anklet only on one ankle, while others painted only one of their eyes (with collyrium), omitting (in their hurry) to paint the other. (25) Full of joy some, who were taking their meal, went away leaving it; others, who were being smeared with oil, came away without taking their bath. Some, who were lying asleep, sprang on their feet as soon as they heard the noise (of the spectators at Their arrival); while mothers, who were fondly suckling their babe, sallied forth leaving the child (crying). (26) Possessed of the gait of a lordly elephant in rut, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (of lotus-like eyes) captivated their mind by His smiles and glances full of charming sport, providing a feast to their eyes by (the sight of) His (divine) personality, the delight of Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity). (27) Beholding Him, who had already been heard of (by them) many a time (before), and feeling honoured by being sprinkled with the nectar of His penetrating glances and unreserved smiles, the women of Mathurā, whose mind had already taken wings after Him, (mentally) embraced that Embodiment of Bliss—now that He had been ushered into their mind through (the gateway of) their eyes—thrilling all over (with joy), and shed their agony (of separation from Him), which knew no bounds, Ó queller of your foes (in the shape of lust and so on)! (28) Standing on the top of mansions, their lotus-like faces blooming with delight, the women covered Bala and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva) with showers of flowers (which embodied as it were their affectionate feelings towards the two Brothers). (29) At every step overjoyed Brāhmaṇas worshipped the two Brothers with curds and unbroken grains of rice (with which they adorned Their foreheads as a mark of auspiciousness), garlands and perfumes (of various kinds), offerings (in the shape of sweets, fruits etc.) as well as with vessels full of water (for washing Their hands and feet with). (30) The women of the city said (to one another), "Oh, what great austerities did the cowherd women (of Vraja) perform, by virtue of which they actually behold without interruption the two Brothers who afford great delight to the human world ?" (31)

रजकं कञ्चिदायान्तं रङ्गकारं गदाग्रजः । दृष्ट्वायाचत वासांसि धौतान्यत्युतमानि च । ३२ ।
 देह्यावयोः समुचितान्यङ्गं वासांसि चाहृतौ । भविष्यति परं श्रेयो दातुस्ते नात्र संशयः । ३३ ।
 स याचितो भगवता परिपूर्णं सर्वतः । साक्षेपं रुषितः प्राह भृत्यो राज्ञः सुदुर्मदः । ३४ ।
 ईदृशान्येव वासांसि नित्यं गिरिवनेचराः । परिधत्त किमुद्वृत्ता राजद्रव्याण्यधीप्सथ । ३५ ।

याताशु बालिशा मैवं प्रार्थ्यं यदि जिजीविषा । बध्नन्ति घ्नन्ति लुम्पन्ति दूषं राजकुलानि वै । ३६ ।
 एवं विकल्थमानस्य कुपितो देवकीसुतः । रजकस्य कराग्रेण शिरः कायादपातयत् । ३७ ।
 तस्यानुजिविनः सर्वे वासः कोशान् विसृज्य वै । दुद्रुवुः सर्वतो मार्गं वासांसि जगृहेऽप्युतः । ३८ ।
 वसित्वाऽऽत्माप्रिये वस्त्रे कृष्णः सङ्कर्षणस्तथा । शेषाण्यादत्त गोपेभ्यो विसृज्य भुवि कानिचित् । ३९ ।

Seeing a certain washerman, who was (also) a dyer (of clothes), coming (that way), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the elder Brother of Gada*) asked of him the very best and well-washed clothes (in the following words)—(32) "(Please) give Us both—who deserve the gift (from you)—eminently suitable clothes, O dear one! The highest blessing will be yours if you make the gift: there is no doubt about it." (33) Solicited (thus) by the Lord, who was most perfect in everyway, that extremely arrogant servant of Kamsa (the king of Mathurā), angrily and tauntingly replied (as follows):—(34) "Do you always wear such (excellent) clothes alone, roaming as you do on the mountain and in the woods, that, transcending all bounds of propriety, you dare seek to have royal goods? (35) Get away soon, O foolish ones! You should never make such requests if you wish to survive. The king's men actually put in bonds, slay and strip the insolent of their possessions." (36) While he was thus bragging, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devaki) got angry and severed the head of the washerman from his body with His finger-tips (alone). (37) Leaving the bundles of clothes, all his servants ran away in every direction and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) seized the clothes. (38) Putting on two pieces of cloth (each) of Their choice (one about the loins and the other across the shoulder baldricwise), Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Saṅkarṣaṇa distributed the rest among the (other) cowherds according to their liking, casting some to the ground. (39)

ततस्तु वायकः प्रीतस्तयोर्वेषमकल्पयत् । विचित्रवर्णंश्चैलेयैराकल्पैरनुरूपतः । ४० ।

नानालक्षणेवेषाभ्यां कृष्णरामौ विरेजतुः । खलङ्कृतौ बालगजौ पर्वणीव सिततरौ । ४१ ।

तस्य प्रसन्नो भगवान् प्रादात् सारूप्यमात्मनः । श्रियं च परमां लोके बलैश्वर्यस्मृतीन्द्रियम् । ४२ ।

Then, again, a weaver full of love adorned the two Brothers with ornaments of cloth of various colours in a befitting manner. (40) With Their decorations of divergent patterns Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma shone brightly like a pair of young elephants, one dark and the other white, tastefully adorned on a festive occasion. (41) Pleased with the weaver, the Lord conferred on him (a title to final beatitude in the shape of) similarity of form with Himself as well as great prosperity, (physical) strength, authority, God-consciousness and acuteness of the senses in the world. (42)

ततः सुदामो भवनं मालाकारस्य जग्मतुः । तौ दृष्ट्वा स समुत्थाय ननाम शिरसा भुवि । ४३ ।

तयोरासनमानीय पादौ चार्ध्यार्हणादिभिः । पूजां सानुगयोश्चक्रे सत्ताम्बूलानुलेपनैः । ४४ ।

प्राह नः सार्धकं जन्म पावितं च कुलं प्रभो । पितृदेवर्षयो मह्यं तुष्टा ह्यागमनेन वाम् । ४५ ।

भवन्तौ किल विश्वस्य जगतः कारणं परम् । अवतीर्णाविहारोऽन क्षेमाय च भवाय च । ४६ ।

न हि वां विषमा दृष्टिः सुहृदोर्जगदात्मनोः । समयोः सर्वभूतेषु भजन्तं भजतोरपि । ४७ ।

तावाज्ञापयतं भृत्यं किमहं करवाणि वाम् । पुंसोऽत्यनुग्रहो ह्येष भवद्विर्यं त्रियुज्यते । ४८ ।

इत्यभिप्रेत्य राजेन्द्र सुदामा प्रीतमानसः । शस्तैः सुगन्धैः कुसुमैर्माला विरचिता ददौ । ४९ ।

ताभिः खलङ्कृतौ प्रीतौ कृष्णरामौ सहानुगौ । प्रणताय प्रपन्नाय ददतुर्वरदौ वरान् । ५० ।

* The foremost of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's half-brothers (next to Balarāma), who was born of Devarakṣitā—one of the thirteen wives of Vasudeva and a sister of Devakī—who gave birth to nine sons, the eldest of whom was Gada. (Vide IX. xxiv. 52)

सोऽपि वब्रेऽचलां भक्तिं तस्मिन्नेवाखिलात्मनि । तद्भक्तेषु च सौहार्दं भूतेषु च दयां पराम् । ५१ ।
इति तस्मै वरं दत्त्वा श्रियं चान्वयवर्धिनीम् । बलमायुर्यशः कान्तिं निर्जगाम सहायजः । ५२ ।
इति श्रीमद्भगवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे पुरुषवेशो नाम एकचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ४१ ।

Next the two Brothers went to the house of the florist Sudāmā. Seeing Them he respectfully rose and bowed (to Them) with his head placed on the ground. (43) Fetching a seat as well as water to wash Their feet with, he offered worship to Them along with Their followers with water to wash Their hands with and other articles of worship including garlands, betel-leaves seasoned with catechu, lime and areca-nut parings, and sandal-paste. (44) He submitted, "Thanks to Your advent, O Lord, fruitful is our birth and hallowed is our race (today)! Indeed the manes, the gods and the Ṛsis (too) are pleased with me (for the same reason). (45) The ultimate Cause of the whole universe, You two, I understand, have appeared on this earth by Your own will for the protection as well as for the growth of the world. (46) Even though You love him (alone) who worships You, Your eye is never discriminating inasmuch as You are the disinterested friends, (nay,) the (very) Self of the universe and the same to all created beings. (47) As such be pleased to command me (Your servant) both of You what service can I render to You. Indeed this constitutes a great boon to a man that he is entrusted by You with some service." (48) Saying so and divining the wishes of the Lord, O king of kings, Sudāmā, whose mind was full of joy, presented (to the two Brothers) garlands made of excellent flowers of superb fragrance. (49) Charminglly adorned with them along with Their followers and full of delight, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, the Bestowers of boons, conferred boons on the florist, who stood bent low (with reverence) and sought Their protection. (50) He too asked for (the gift of) unflinching devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa alone, the Self of all, as well as friendship with His devotees and supreme (disinterested) compassion for (all) created beings. (51) Having thus conferred his desired boon as well as a fortune that would grow in the hands of his posterity, (physical) strength, longevity, glory and splendour, the Lord departed (from that place) along with Balarāma (His elder Brother). (52)

Thus ends the forty-first discourse entitled "Entry (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma) into Mathurā", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharṣa-Saṁhitā.

अथ द्विचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLII

A description of the amphitheatre for wrestlers (set up by Kamsa)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ ब्रजन् राजपथेन माधवः स्त्रियं गृहीताङ्गविलेपभाजनाम् ।
विलोक्य कुब्जां युवतीं वराननां पप्रच्छ यान्तीं प्रहसन् रसप्रदः । १ ।
का त्वं वरोर्वेतदु हानुलेपनं कस्याङ्गने वा कथयस्व साधु नः ।
देह्यावयोरङ्गविलेपमुत्तमं श्रेयस्ततस्ते नचिराद् भविष्यति । २ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Proceeding further along the main road, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Madhu), who affords delight liberally to all, saw a hunchbacked young woman of comely appearance passing (that way) with a vessel full of sandal-paste (used for smearing one's body with) and laughingly questioned her (as follows):—(1) "Hallo ! who are you, O handsome woman? And for whom is this sandal-paste intended? (Please) tell us the truth. (Pray,) give us both the excellent paste; goodwill betide you not long afterwards through this (piece of service). " (2)

सैरन्ध्रयुवाच

दास्यस्यहं सुन्दर कंससम्पत्ता त्रिवक्रनामा ह्यनुलेपकर्मणि ।

मद्भाविते भोजपतेरतिप्रियं विना युवां कोऽन्यतमस्तदहति । ३ ।

रूपपेशलमाधुर्यहसितालापवीक्षितैः । धर्षितात्मा ददौ सान्द्रमुभवोरनुलेपनम् । ४ ।

ततस्तावद्भारगेण स्ववर्णैतरशोभिना । सम्प्राप्तपरभागेन शशुभातेऽनुरञ्जितौ । ५ ।

प्रसन्नो भगवान् कुब्जां त्रिवक्रां रुचिराननाम् । ऋज्वीं कर्तुं मनश्चक्रे दर्शयन् दर्शने फलम् । ६ ।

पद्भ्यामाक्रम्य प्रपदे द्व्यङ्गुल्युत्तानपाणिना । प्रगृह्य चुबुकेऽध्यात्ममुदनीनमदच्युतः । ७ ।

सा तदर्जुसमानाङ्गी बृहच्छ्रेणिपयोधरा । मुकुन्दस्यर्शनात् सद्यो बभूव प्रमदोत्तमा । ८ ।

The maid-servant replied : "I am a maid-servant, Trivakrā* by name, esteemed by Kamsa for my art of preparing sandal-pastes, O pretty youth ! Sandal-paste prepared by me is much to the taste of Kamsa (the ruler of the Bhojas). Who else other than you two deserves (to have) it?" (3) Her mind bewitched by the comeliness and delicacy of form, loving disposition, laughter, conversation and penetrating glances of the two Brothers, the hunchback gave Them both the thick sandal-paste. (4) Painted (severally) with the pigment which shone in contrast with Their complexion and adorned the upper part of Their body, They then looked (most) charming. (5) The propitious Lord made up His mind to straighten the hunchback—who was curved at three places, though possessed of a charming countenance—(thereby) showing (to the world) the (immediate) reward of His sight. (6) Pressing the forepart of her feet with His own feet and supporting her chin on the two (viz., the index and middle) fingers, raised upwards, of His open (right) hand, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the infallible Lord) straightened up her body. (7) By the (magic) touch of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation) she then turned at once into a most beautiful woman with a straight and symmetrical body, bulky hips and full breasts. (8)

ततो रूपगुणीदार्यसम्पन्ना प्राह केशवम् । उन्नीरयान्तमाकृष्य स्मयन्ती जातहृच्छया । ९ ।

एहि वीर गृहं यामो न त्वां त्यक्तुमिहोत्सहे । त्वयोन्मथितचित्तायाः प्रसीद पुंसवर्षभ । १० ।

एवं स्त्रिया याच्यमानः कृष्णो रामस्य पश्यतः । मुखं वीक्षणुगानां च प्रहसन्तामुवाच ह । ११ ।

एष्यामि ते गृहं सुभ्रुः पुंसामाधिकर्शनम् । साधितार्थोऽगृह्णाणो नः पान्थानां त्वं परायणम् । १२ ।

विसृज्य माध्व्या वाण्या तां व्रजन् मार्गे वणिक्पथैः । नानोपायनताम्बूलस्त्रगन्धैः सायजोऽर्चितः । १३ ।

तद्दर्शनस्मरक्षोभादात्मानं नाविदन् स्त्रियः । विस्त्रस्तवासः कबरवलयालेख्यमूर्तयः । १४ ।

Endowed with the wealth of beauty and good qualities, Trivakrā, who had the fire of love kindled in her heart, then smilingly submitted (as follows) to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva), pulling the end of His upper garment—(9) "Come, O gallant youth, let us go home. I am unable to leave you here; (hence,) be gracious to me, whose mind has been robbed of its patience by you, O jewel among men !" (10) Being solicited by the woman

* She was curved at three places, viz., the neck, the breast and the waist, hence the name.

thus, while Balarāma stood looking on, Śrī Kṛṣṇa gazed on the latter's face as well as on that of His followers and laughingly replied to her as follows:—(11) "Having accomplished my errand I shall call at your house, which assuages the agony of men, O pretty girl; (for) you are the last refuge of us shelterless wayfarers." (12) Dismissing her with honeyed words and proceeding (further) along the road, Śrī Kṛṣṇa alongwith Balarāma (His elder brother) was honoured by those following the trade of a merchant with various presents, betel-leaves seasoned with catechu, lime and areca-nut parings, garlands and sandal-paste. (13) Due to agitation (of mind) caused by love at His sight, the women (of Mathurā) forgot (all about) themselves. (Standing spell-bound) with their garments unsettled, bangles slipped off and braids loosened, they looked like painted figures. (14)

ततः पौरान् पृच्छमानो धनुषः स्थानमच्युतः । तस्मिन् प्रविष्टो ददृशे धनुरेन्द्रमिवाद्भुतम् । १५ ।

पुरुषैर्बहुभिर्गुप्समर्चितं परमर्द्धिमत् । वार्यमाणो नृभिः कृष्णः प्रसह्य धनुराददे । १६ ।

करेण वामेन सलीलमुद्धृतं सज्यं च कृत्वा निमिषेण पश्यताम् ।

नृणां विकृष्य प्रबभञ्ज मध्यतो यथेक्षुदण्डं मदकर्वुरुक्रमः । १७ ।

धनुषो भज्यमानस्य शब्दः खं रोदसी दिशः । पूरयामास यं श्रुत्वा कंसस्त्रासमुपागमत् । १८ ।

तद्रक्षिणः सानुचराः कुपिता आततायिनः । ग्रहीतुकामा आवर्गुह्यतां बध्यतामिति । १९ ।

अथ तान् दुरभिप्रायान् विलोक्य बलकेशवौ । कृद्धौ धन्वन आदाय शकले तांश्च जघ्नतुः । २० ।

बलं च कंसप्रहितं हत्वा शालामुखात्ततः । निष्क्रम्य चेरतुर्हृष्टौ निरीक्ष्य पुरसम्पदः । २१ ।

तयोस्तदद्भुतं वीर्यं निशाम्य पुरवासिनः । तेजः प्रागल्भ्यं रूपं च मेनिरे विबुधोत्तमौ । २२ ।

तयोर्विचरतोः स्वैरमादियोऽस्तमुपेयिवान् । कृष्णरामौ वृतां गोपैः पुराच्छकटमीयतुः । २३ ।

गोथ्यो मुकुन्दविगमे विरहातुरा या आशासतादिश ऋता मधुपुर्वभूवन् ।

सम्पद्यतां पुरुषभूषणात्रलक्ष्मीं हित्वेतरान् नु भजतश्चकमेज्यन् श्रीः । २४ ।

अवनिक्ताङ्घ्रियुगलौ भुक्त्वा क्षीरोपसेचनम् । ऊषुत्तां सुखं रात्रिं ज्ञात्वा कंसचिकीर्षितम् । २५ ।

Enquiring of the citizens about the place where the bow had been kept (for the purpose of a bow-sacrifice), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) then entered the sacrificial hall and beheld (there) the wonderful bow—which resembled the rainbow (in point of size and picturesqueness, studded as it was with jewels of various colours), was guarded by many men, had been (duly) worshipped and was attended with a large fortune (in the shape of valuable gold ornaments)—and, even though being stopped by the men, He forcibly seized it. (15-16) Having strung the bow, which had (already) been playfully lifted (by Him) with His left hand, and pulling the string to its utmost capacity, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (of immeasurable prowess) broke it in two in the middle in the twinkling of an eye—while the men (guarding the bow) stood looking on—even as an elephant in rut would snap a sugar-cane. (17) The crash of the bow, while it was being broken, filled heaven and earth and the intermediate region as well as the (four) quarters. Hearing it Kāṁsa was seized with consternation. (18) Full of wrath and eager to apprehend the Lord, the custodians of the bow alongwith their followers surrounded Him with their bows drawn (in order to kill Him), exclaiming; "Let the intruder be seized, let him be bound!" (19) Immediately perceiving them to be of wicked intent, Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva) grew angry and, seizing the two pieces of the (broken) bow, made short work of them. (20) Having also destroyed a detachment sent by Kāṁsa the two Brothers came away through the entrance of the amphitheatre and roamed about delighted to witness the wealth of the city. (21) Perceiving such wonderful prowess, indomitable spirit, intrepidity and comeliness of the two Brothers, the citizens thought them to be two foremost gods. (22) While They were (yet) roving at will, the sun set on Them. Surrounded by the cowherds, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma (now) returned to Their carts outside the city. (23) In the case of those who gazed in Mathurā (the city founded by the demon Madhu) on the elegance of the personality of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Jewel among men)—which Iō! Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) coveted as Her abode, leaving (all) others who sought Her—the predictions that the cowherd women, afflicted at the thought of their separation (from Śrī Kṛṣṇa), had made at the time of departure (from Vraja) of Śrī Kṛṣṇa came to be (literally) true. (24) With Their feet duly washed and partaking of rice cooked in milk (with sugar), and having come to know what Kāṁsa intended to do (the next day), the two Brothers passed that night happily. (25)

कंसस्तु धनुषो भङ्गं रक्षिणां खबलस्य च । वधं निशम्य गोविन्दरामविक्रीडितं परम् । २६ ।

दीर्घप्रजागरे भीतो दुर्निमित्तानि दुर्मतिः । बहून्यचष्टोभयथा मृत्योर्दोत्यकराणि च । २७ ।

अदर्शनं स्वशिरसः प्रतिरूपे च सत्यपि । असत्यपि द्वितीये च द्वैरूप्यं ज्योतिषां तथा । २८ ।

छिद्रप्रतीतिश्चायायां प्राणघोषानुपश्रुतिः । स्वर्णप्रतीतिर्वृक्षेषु स्वपदानामदर्शनम् । २९ ।

स्वप्ने प्रेतपरिप्लवः खरयानं विषादनम् । यायान्नलदमाल्येकस्तैलाभ्यक्तो दिगम्बरः । ३० ।

अन्यानि चेत्थं भूतानि स्वप्रजागरितानि च । पश्यन् मरणसन्वस्तो निद्रां लेभे न चिन्तया । ३१ ।

Kāṁsa, on the other hand, felt dismayed to hear of the breaking of the (huge) bow and the destruction of its keepers as well as of his own detachment—which was a mere child's play on the part of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows) and Balarāma. Getting no sleep for a long time, the evil-minded fellow saw both in dream and while awake many an evil portent foreboding death and foreshadowing infamy. (26-27) Even though his reflection could be seen (in a mirror etc.) the head was not visible. Nay, the luminaries likewise appeared duplicated although no other object (such as a finger etc.) intervened (between his eye and the luminary). (28) Holes were seen by him in his shadow and the (whizzing) sound which is heard inside the ears on closing them was not heard by him. Trees appeared (to him) golden (in hue) and he failed to see his footprints (on sands, mud etc.). (29) In dreams he was embraced by his deceased relations, rode on a donkey, swallowed poison and went about all alone adorned with a wreath of china roses, smeared with oil and having no covering on his body except the quarters. (30) Beholding similar other scenes both in dreams and in waking life and terribly afraid of death, Kāṁsa did not have a wink of sleep in his anxiety. (31)

व्युष्टायां निशि कौटव्यं सूर्यं चादध्यः समुत्थिते । कारयामास वै कंसो मल्लक्रीडामहोत्सवम् । ३२ ।

आनर्चुः पुरुषा रङ्गं तूर्यभैरवंश्च जग्निरे । मञ्चाश्चालङ्कृताः स्वग्निः पताकाचैलतोरणैः । ३३ ।

तेषु पौरा जानपदा ब्रह्मक्षत्रपुरोगमाः । यथोपजावं विविशु राजानश्च कृतासनाः । ३४ ।

कंसः परिवृतोऽमात्यै राजमञ्च उपाविशत् । मण्डलेश्वरमध्यस्थो हृदयेन विदूयता । ३५ ।

बाद्यमानेषु तूर्येषु मल्लतालोल्लसरेषु च । मल्लाः खलङ्कृता दूताः सोपाध्यायाः समाविशन् । ३६ ।

चाणूरो मुष्टिकः कूटः शलस्तोशल एव च । त आसेदुरुपस्थानं वल्लुबाद्यप्रहर्षिताः । ३७ ।

नन्दगोपादयो गोपा भोजराजसमाहुताः । निवेदितोपायनास्ते एकस्मिन् मञ्च आविशन् । ३८ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे मल्लजङ्घोपवर्णने नाम द्विचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ४२ ।

When the night passed and the sun rose from the (eastern) waters, O scion of Kuru, Kāṁsa actually had a grand festival of wrestling bouts to be celebrated. (32) The men (of Kāṁsa) swept the arena, sprinkled it with water and decorated it with flowers and garlands etc.; trumpets and tabors were sounded and the galleries (for the spectators) were adorned with garlands, flags, tapestries and temporary arches. (33) On them were comfortably seated the people of the city and the country, headed by Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas, as well as chiefs and princes on their (respective) thrones. (34) Surrounded by (his) ministers, Kārṇsa took his seat on the royal dais in the midst of feudal lords and with a sore aching heart. (35) Amidst a flourish of trumpets, which was drowned (at intervals) by the clapping of the wrestlers' arms, proud wrestling champions picturesquely adorned majestically entered the arena along with their masters. (36) Feeling greatly cheered by the stirring (music of the) trumpets and other instruments—Cāṇūra, Muṣṭika, Kūṭa, Śāla and Tośāla too, (all) eminent wrestlers, found their way into the arena. (37) Specially invited by Kārṇsa (the ruler of the Bhojas), the aforementioned cowherds headed by Nanda, the chief of the Gopas, who had (just) offered their presents, took their seats on a (separate) dais. (38)

Thus ends the forty-second discourse entitled "A description of the amphitheatre for wrestlers (set up by Kārṇsa)", in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ त्रिचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLIII

The elephant Kuvalayāpīḍa killed (by the Lord)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ कृष्णश्च रामश्च कृतशौचौ परन्तपः। मल्लदुन्दुभिनिर्घोषं श्रुत्वा द्रष्टुमुपेतुः। १।
रङ्गद्वारे समासाद्य तस्मिन् नागमवस्थितम्। अपश्यत् कुवलयपीडं कृष्णोऽप्यष्टप्रचोदितम्। २।
बद्ध्वा परिकरं शौरिः समुह्य कुटिलालकान्। उवाच हस्तिपं वाचा मेघनादगभीरवा। ३।
अम्बुष्टाम्यष्ट मार्गं नो देहापक्रम या चिरम्। नो चेत् सकुञ्जरं त्वाद्य नयामि यमसादनम्। ४।
एवं निर्भर्त्सितोऽप्यष्टः कुपितः कोपितं राजम्। चोदयामास कृष्णाय कालान्तकयमोपमम्। ५।
करीन्द्रस्तमभिद्रुत्य करेण तरसाग्रहीत्। कराद् विगलितः सोऽमुं निहत्याङ्घ्रिबलीयत। ६।
संकुद्धस्तमचक्षाणो घ्राणदृष्टिः स केशवम्। परामृशत् पुष्करेण स प्रसह्य विनिर्गतः। ७।
पुच्छे प्रगृह्यातिवलं धनुषः पञ्चविंशतिम्। चित्रकर्षं यथा नागं सुपर्णं इव लीलया। ८।
स पर्यावर्तमानेन सव्यदक्षिणतोऽप्युतः। बभ्राम भ्राम्यमाणेन गोवत्सेनेव बालकः। ९।
ततोऽभिमुखमभ्येत्य पाणिनाऽऽहत्य वारणम्। प्राद्वन् पातयामास स्पृश्यमानः पदे पदे। १०।
स धावन् क्रीडया भूमौ पतित्वा सहसोत्थितः। तं मत्वा पतितं कुञ्जो दन्ताभ्यां सोऽहनक्षितम्। ११।
स्वविक्रमे प्रतिहते कुञ्जरेन्द्रोत्थमर्षितः। चोद्यमानो महामार्त्रः कृष्णमभ्यद्रवद् रुषा। १२।
तमापतन्तमासाद्य भगवान् मधुसूदनः। निगृह्य पाणिना हस्तं पातयामास भूतले। १३।
पतितस्य पदाऽऽक्रम्य मृगेन्द्र इव लीलया। दन्तमुत्पाद्य तेनेभं हस्तिपांशुहानद्धरिः। १४।

Srī Śuka began again : Having finished Their bath etc., the next day, and hearing the loud noise of the wrestlers and the din of kettledrums, O chastiser of foes, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma went to see the tournament. (1) Having duly reached the entrance of the amphitheatre, Śrī Kṛṣṇa saw stationed there the elephant Kuvalayāpīḍa as directed by its driver. (2) Tightening the cloth round His waist (by way of preparation for an encounter) and tying up His curly locks, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Śūra) challenged the keeper (as follows) in a voice deep as the rumbling of clouds:—(3) "O driver, O driver ! allow us passage; clear out without delay. If not, I shall presently despatch you alongwith the elephant to the abode of Death." (4) Threatened thus, the driver full of rage goaded the elephant—which had (already) been enraged and which looked like Yama (the chastiser of beings subject to the ravages of Time)—towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (5) Running towards Him, the lordly elephant quickly seized Śrī Kṛṣṇa with its trunk. He (however) slipped off from (the coils of) the trunk and, striking it (with His fist), disappeared in the midst of its legs. (6) Failing to perceive Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler even of Brahmā and Lord Śiva), the infuriated animal, which could discover things through scent, caught hold of the Lord with the end of its trunk. He (however) forcibly escaped from its hold. (7) Tightly seizing the mighty elephant by the tail, He (then) violently pulled it by way of sport to a distance of twenty-five bows (or a hundred cubits) without pausing even as Garuḍa (possessed of beautiful wings) would drag a cobra. (8) (Keeping hold of its tail all the while) the immortal Lord whirled with the elephant, which was being caused to revolve contrariwise when it turned either to the left or to the right (in order to catch hold of Śrī Kṛṣṇa), even as a boy would with a calf that was (similarly) made to revolve (by him). (9) Then, advancing in front of the elephant and striking it with His hand, the Lord in His attempt to throw it down ran swiftly (before it) so close that He looked as though being touched by it at every step. (10) While running, the Lord sportfully toppled down on the ground and immediately got up (and stood aside). Taking Him to be fallen (yet) the angry elephant struck the ground with its tusks. (11) Infuriated at its prowess having been frustrated and being urged by its keepers, the lordly elephant ran towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa in rage. (12) Approaching the elephant (even) as it came rushing, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Slayer of the demon Madhu), caught hold of its trunk with His hand and hurled it down to the ground. (13) Treading on the fallen animal like a lion (the king of beasts), and sportfully extracting its tusks Śrī Hari killed with it the elephant as well as its keepers. (14)

मृतकं द्विपमुत्सृज्य दन्तपाणिः समाविशत् । असन्यस्तविषाणोऽसुद्वदविन्दुभिरङ्कितः ।

विरूढस्वेदकणिकावदनाम्बुरुहो बभौ । १५ ।

वृत्तां गोपैः कतिपर्यैर्बलदेवजनार्दनैः । रङ्गं विविशत् राजन् गजदन्तवरायुधौ । १६ ।

मल्लानामशनिर्नृणां नरवरः स्त्रीणां स्मरो मूर्तिमान्

गोपानां स्वजनोऽसतां क्षितिभुजं शास्ता स्वपित्रोः शिशुः ।

मृत्युभोजपतेर्विराडविदुषां तत्त्वं परं योगिनां

वृष्णीनां परदेवतेति विदितो रङ्गं गतः साग्रजः । १७ ।

हतं कुवलयपीडं दृष्ट्वा तावपि दुर्जयौ । कंसो मनस्यपि तदा भृशमुद्विजे नृप । १८ ।

तां रेजतू रङ्गगतौ महाभुजौ विचित्रवेवाभरणस्त्रगम्बरौ ।

यथा नटावुत्तमवेपधारिणौ मनः क्षिपन्तौ प्रभया निरीक्षताम् । १९ ।

निरीक्ष्य तावुत्तमपूरुषौ जना मञ्जस्थिता नागरराष्ट्रका नृप ।

प्रहर्षवेगोल्कलितेक्षणाननाः पपुर्न तृप्ता नयनैस्तदाननम् । २० ।

पिबन्त इव चक्षुर्भ्यां लिहन्त इव जिह्वया । जिघ्रन्त इव नासाभ्यां श्लिष्यन्त इव बाहुभिः । २१ ।

ऊचुः परस्परं ते वै यथादृष्टं यथाश्रुतम् । तद्रूपगुणमाधुर्यप्रागल्भ्यस्मारिता इव । २२ ।

एतौ भगवतः साक्षाद्धरेनारायणस्य हि । अवतीर्णाविहांशेन वसुदेवस्य वेश्मनि । २३ ।

एष वै किल देवक्यां जातो गोकुलम् । कालमेतं वसन् गृहो बबुधे नन्दवैश्मनि । २४ ।
 पूतनानेन नीतान्तं चक्रवातश्च दानवः । अर्जुनौ गुह्यकः केशी धेनुकोऽप्ये च तद्विधाः । २५ ।
 गावः सपाला एतेन दावानेः परिमोचिताः । कालियो दमितः सर्प इन्द्रश्च विमदः कृतः । २६ ।
 सप्ताहमेकहस्तेन धृतोऽग्निप्रवरोऽमुना । वर्षवाताशनिभ्यश्च परित्रातं च गोकुलम् । २७ ।
 गोप्योऽस्य नित्यमुदितहसितप्रेक्षणं मुखम् । पश्यन्त्यो विविधांस्तापांस्तरन्ति स्माश्रमं मुदा । २८ ।
 वदन्त्यनेन वंशोऽयं यदोः सुबहुविश्रुतः । श्रियं यशो महत्त्वं च लप्स्यते परिरक्षितः । २९ ।
 अयं चास्याग्रजः श्रीमान् रामः कमललोचनः । प्रलम्बो निहतो येन वत्सको ये बकादयः । ३० ।

Leaving the dead elephant (where it was), the Lord duly entered the amphitheatre, tusk in hand. Stained with drops of blood as well as with those of ichor and with a tusk resting against one of His shoulders and His lotus-like face bedecked with drops of sweat appearing on it, He looked (most) charming. (15) Surrounded by a few Gopas and with the tusks of the elephant for Their excellent weapons, Baladeva and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is solicited by the people) entered the amphitheatre, O king ! (16) Present in the amphitheatre by the side of Balarāma (His elder brother), the Lord appeared as a thunderbolt to the wrestlers, a jewel among men to the male persons, love incarnate to the ladies (other than the elderly ones), a kinsman to the cowherds (of Vraja), a chastiser to the vile princes, a (mere) child to His parents, death (personified) to Kāṁsa (the ruler of the Bhojas), as deficient in strength and immature of body to the ignorant, the supreme Reality to the Yogis and the highest Divinity to the Vṛṣṇis. (17) Finding (the elephant) Kuvalayāpīḍa killed and also perceiving the two Brothers difficult to conquer, Kāṁsa, though self-possessed, felt much terrified at that time, O protector of men! (18) Decorated in a queer fashion, decked with quaint jewels and garlands and clad in weird garments and captivating the mind of the lookers-on with Their brilliance, the two mighty-armed Brothers shone in the amphitheatre like a pair of actors dressed in an excellent garb. (19) Gazing on the aforesaid foremost Persons, the people of the city as well as of the country, who were seated on the galleries, O protector of men, and whose eyes and faces were blooming with an outburst of ecstatic joy, drank in the beauty of Their countenance with (the cup of) their eyes, but did not feel sated. (20) They seemed to drink off (the beauty of) the two Brothers with their eyes, to lick Them with their tongue, to inhale Them with their nostrils and to clasp Them with their arms. (21) As though put in mind of Their story by (the sight of) Their comeliness of form, excellences, loving disposition and intrepidity, the onlookers spoke to one another (as follows) in the light of whatever they had actually seen and whatever they had heard (of the two Brothers):—(22) “Actually descended through a part of Lord Śrī Hari Himself, who has His abode in water (in the form of Nārāyaṇa), these two Brothers have appeared on this earth in the house of Vasudeva. (23) This (younger) One (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) was, it is understood, born as a matter of fact of Devakī and taken to Gokula (for fear of being killed by Kāṁsa). Dwelling all this time incognito he grew up (to this age) at the residence of Nanda. (24) By Him was put to an end Pūtānā as well as the demon (Tṛṇāvarta,) who appeared in the form of a whirlwind, the demigod (Śaṅkhacūḍa), the demons Keśī (who came in the form of a horse) and Dhenuka* (who lived in the gulf of a donkey) and others of that class, and the two Arjuna trees uprooted. (25) By this Boy were the cows along with their keepers rescued from a forest fire, the snake Kāliya subdued and Indra (the ruler of the gods) rid of his pride when Govardhana (the chief of the mountains) was borne by Him on one hand for a week and (the land of) Vraja protected from rain, storm

* Although the demons Vatsa and Baka were slain by Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Dhenuka by Bala, the people of Mathurā were evidently misinformed that the former two had been killed by Bala and the last-named by Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

and strokes of lightning. (26-27) Beholding with joy His ever-cheerful and smiling face enlivened with penetrating glances the cowerd women overcame agonies of various kinds without any effort. (28) The wise declare that, protected in everyway by the yonder Boy, this race of Yadu will become very well-known and attain prosperity, renown and glory. (29) And here is His elder brother, the glorious Balarāma of lotus-like eyes, by whom was slain Pralamba as well as the demon who came disguised as a calf* and others of whom Baka was the foremost. (30)

जनेष्टुर्व - द्रुवाणेषु तूर्येषु निनदत्सु च । कृष्णारामौ समाभाष्य चाणूरो वाक्यमब्रवीत् । ३१ ।
हे नन्दसूरो हे राम भवन्तौ वीरसंमतौ । नियुद्धकुशलौ श्रुत्वा राज्ञाऽऽहूतौ दिदृक्षुणा । ३२ ।
प्रियं राज्ञः प्रकुर्वन्त्यः श्रेयो विन्दन्ति वै प्रजाः । मनसा कर्मणा वाचा विपरीतमतोऽन्यथा । ३३ ।
नित्यं प्रमुदिता गोपा वत्सपाला यथा स्फुटम् । वनेषु मल्लयुद्धेन क्रीडन्तश्चारयन्ति गाः । ३४ ।
तस्माद् राज्ञः प्रियं यूयं वयं च करवाम हे । भूतानि नः प्रसीदन्ति सर्वभूतमयो नृपः । ३५ ।

While the people were talking thus and trumpets were loudly sounding, Cāṇūra (the foremost of the king's wrestlers) accosted Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma and spoke (to Them) as follows:—(31) "O Kṛṣṇa (Nanda's darling), O Balarāma, both of you are esteemed (by the people) as heroes ! On hearing of you as skilled in wrestling, you have been invited (to participate in the tournament) by the king, who has been eager to see you. (32) Subjects doing precisely by thought, word and deed what is agreeable to their king attain to prosperity indeed; while those acting otherwise than this meet with contrary results. (33) It is well-known how cowherds, from the time they begin to tend calves, daily pasture their cows with great joy in woodlands, diverting themselves with wrestling. (34) Therefore, let yourselves as well as ourselves, O boys, do what is liked by the king. (If the king is pleased, all) beings will be pleased with us; (for) the king is an embodiment of all creatures." (35)

तत्रिशम्याब्रवीत् कृष्णो देशकालोचितं वचः । नियुद्धमात्मनोऽभीष्टं मन्यमानोऽभिनन्द्य च । ३६ ।
प्रजा भोजपतेरस्य वयं चापि वनेचराः । करवाम प्रियं नित्यं तत्रः परमनुग्रहः । ३७ ।
बाला वयं तुल्यबलैः क्रीडिष्यामो यथोचितम् । भवेन्नियुद्धे पाथमः स्पृशेन्मल्ल सभासदः । ३८ ।

Hearing the aforesaid speech (of Cāṇūra) and welcoming it, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who regarded wrestling (with him) as something to His liking, gave the following reply, which was appropriate to the occasion and place (of the dialogue):—(36) "We too, who dwell in the woods, as well as yourselves are the subjects of this king of the Bhojas. Let us (all therefore) always do what would please him; through such behaviour his infinite grace will descend on us. (37) Youngsters as we are, we shall (however) sport with those who are our equals in strength. Let there be a well-matched wrestling bout, so that no sin (of allowing an unequal match) may attach to those present in the assembly, O (great) wrestler ! (38)

चाणूर उवाच

न बालो न किशोरस्त्वं बलश्च बलिनां वरः । लीलयेभो हतो येन सहस्रद्विपसत्त्वभृत् । ३९ ।
तस्माद् भवद्भ्यां बलिभिर्योद्ध्व्यं नानयोऽत्र वै । मयि विक्रम वार्ष्णेय बलेन सह मुष्टिकः । ४० ।
इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यं संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे कुवलयापांडवयो नाम त्रिचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ४३ ।

Cāṇūra replied : You are neither a youngster nor a lad; nor is Bala, the foremost of the mighty, of such description, by both of whom the elephant (Kūvalayāpiḍa), that possessed the strength of a thousand elephants, was disposed of in (mere) sport. (39) Therefore, you both should (unhesitatingly) contend with powerful rivals; there will be no unrighteousness involved in your doing so. Show your prowess against me, O scion of Vṛṣṇi, and let Muṣṭika try his strength with Bala. (40)

* Vide foot-note Ols. 43 Verse 25; Page 284.

Thus ends the forty-third discourse entitled "The elephant Kūvalayāpiḍa killed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa)," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ चतुश्चत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLIV

Kamsa slain (by the Lord)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं चर्चितसङ्कल्पो भगवान् मधुसूदनः । आससादाथ चाणूरं मुष्टिकं रोहिणीसुतः । १ ।
हस्ताभ्यां हस्तयोर्वद्ध्वा पद्भ्यामेव च पादयोः । विचकर्षतुरन्योन्यं प्रसह्य विजिगीषया । २ ।
अरत्नी द्वे अरत्निभ्यां जानुभ्यां चैव जानुनी । शिरः शीर्ष्णोरस्तोवन्त्योन्यमभिजघ्नतुः । ३ ।
परिश्रामणविक्षेपपरिम्बावपातनैः । उत्सर्पणापसर्पणीश्चान्योन्यं प्रत्यरुन्धताम् । ४ ।
उत्थापनैरुन्नयनैश्चालनैः स्थापनैरपि । परस्परं जिगीषन्तावपचक्रतुरात्मनः । ५ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Challenged thus, Lord Madhusūdana of unflinching resolution immediately closed with Cāṇūra, and Balarāma (son of Rohiṇi) with Muṣṭika. (1) Interlacing their hands with the hands and their feet with the feet of their rival, Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Cāṇūra (and even so Balarāma and Muṣṭika) tugged at one another vehemently with intent to overthrow their opponent. (2) They struck with their elbows the two elbows, with their knees the knees, with their head the head and with their chest the chest of each other. (3) They tried to frustrate each other by revolving, pushing, squeezing in their arms, throwing down, and slipping to the front or to the rear of their opponent. (4) Eager to score a victory over each other, they hurt the body of their adversary by lifting up, carrying, throwing back and even fixing him to a spot. (5)

तद् बलाबलवद्युद्धं समेताः सर्वयोषितः । ऊचुः परस्परं राजन् सानुकम्पा वरुथशः । ६ ।
महानयं वताधर्म एषां राजसभासदाम् । ये बलाबलवद्युद्धं राज्ञोऽन्विच्छन्ति पश्यतः । ७ ।
क्व वज्रसारसर्वाङ्गी मल्लौ शैलेन्द्रसन्निभौ । क्व चातिसुकुमाराङ्गौ किशोरौ नाप्तयौवनौ । ८ ।
धर्मव्यतिक्रमो हास्य समाजस्य ध्रुवं भवेत् । यत्राधर्मः समुत्तिष्ठेन्न स्थेयं तत्र कर्हिचित् । ९ ।
न सभां प्रविशेत् प्राज्ञः सन्ध्यदोषाननुस्मरन् । अद्रवन् विद्रुवन्नज्ञो नरः किल्बिषमश्नुते । १० ।
वल्गतः शत्रुमभितः कृष्णस्य वदनाम्बुजम् । वीक्ष्यतां श्रमवार्युप्तं पद्यकोशमिवाम्बुधिः । ११ ।
किं न पश्यत रामस्य मुखमाताम्रलोचनम् । मुष्टिकं प्रति सामर्थ्यं हाससंरम्भशोभितम् । १२ ।
पुण्या बत व्रजभुवो यदयं नृलिङ्गगूढः पुराणपुरुषो वनचित्रमाल्यः ।

गाः पालयन् सहबलः कणयश्च वेणुं विक्रीडयाञ्छति गिरित्रमार्चिताङ्घ्रिः । १३ ।

गोयस्तपः किमचरन् यदमुष्य रूपं लावण्यसारमसमोर्ध्वमनन्यसिद्धम् ।

दृग्भिः पिबन्त्यनुसवाभिनवं दुरापमेकान्तधाम यशसः श्रिय ऐश्वर्यस्य । १४ ।

या दोहनेऽवहनने मथनोपलेपप्रेङ्खेत्तु भार्भुदितोक्षणमार्जनादै ।

गायन्ति चैनमनुरक्तधियोऽश्रुकण्ठयो धन्या ब्रजस्त्रिय उरुक्रमचित्तयानाः । १५ ।

- प्रातर्ब्रजाद् ब्रजत आविशतश्च सायं गोभिः समं कणयतोऽस्य निशम्य वेणुम् ।

निर्गम्य तूर्णमबलाः पथि भूरिपुण्याः पश्यन्ति सस्मितमुखं सद्यावलोकम् । १६ ।

Full of compassion all the ladies (present there) collected in batches and spoke to one another about the contest being ill-matched (as going on between strong and feeble rivals), O king ! (6) "It is gross unrighteousness on the part of the king's courtiers, who countenance such a contest alas! between the strong and the weak while the king sits looking on ! (7) What comparison can there be between the two wrestlers (Cāṇūra and Muṣṭika) of adamantine frame and closely resembling a pair of two large mountains (on the one hand) and the two lads (Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa) of extremely delicate limbs, who have not yet attained their youth (on the other) ? (8) Forfeiture of religious merit (earned in the past) will surely fall to the lot of this assembly. As a matter of fact one should never stay there where unrighteousness fully rears its head. (9) Recognizing the faults of those present in an assembly a wise man should not (even) enter that assembly; (for) a man keeping silent (even though knowing a fact), making a false statement (in order to please those assembled) or pleading ignorance (surely) incurs sin. (10) Mark the lotus face—dripping all over with perspiration even like a lotus bud sprinkled with water—of Śrī Kṛṣṇa quickly shifting His position about His adversary. (11) Don't you see the face of Balarāma with reddish eyes, full of wrath as it is for Muṣṭika and enlivened by a bellicose spirit accompanied with risibility ? (12) Ah, blessed is the soil of Vraja on which treads in a merrily sportful spirit this Most Ancient Person—whose feet are adored (even) by Lord Śiva (the Guardian of Mount Kailāsa) and Rāmā (the goddess of beauty and prosperity)—disguised in a human semblance and adorned with sylvan flowers of various kinds, tending cows in the company of Balarāma and playing on His flute. (13) What austerities did the cowherd women (of Vraja) perform, by virtue of which they imbibe with (the cup of) their eyes (the beauty) of His bewitching form—the (very) essence of elegance—which is not only unsurpassed but unequalled (too), is not embellished by anything external, is eternally new and hard to attain and which is the unfailing abode of renown, splendour and divine glory ? (14) Blessed are the women of Vraja, who celebrate Him in song while milking their cows, pounding the corn, churning their curds, plastering their floor (with cowdung etc.), rocking the cradles, lulling their crying babes, sprinkling and sweeping their houses and attending to other such duties with a mind full of love and their throat choked with tears, (nay, all) whose movements are inspired by the thought of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is no other than Lord Viṣṇu, who took wide strides while measuring the three worlds during His descent as the divine Dwarf). (15) Possessed of endless merit are those women who—having heard His music (even) as He sallies forth from Vraja in the morning and returns in the evening along with the cows playing on the flute—come out hastily on the road and behold His smiling countenance enlivened with kind glances." (16)

एवं प्रभाषमाणानु स्त्रीषु योगेश्वरो हरिः । शत्रुं हन्तुं मनश्चक्रे भगवान् भरतर्षभ । १७ ।

सभयाः स्त्रीगिरः श्रुत्वा पुत्रस्नेहशुचाऽऽतुरौ । पितरावन्वतयेतां पुत्रयोरबुधौ बलम् । १८ ।

तैर्त्सर्निपुद्धविधिभिर्विविधैरच्युतेतरौ । युयुधाते यथान्योन्यं तथैव बलमुद्विक्कौ । १९ ।

भगवद्वात्रनिष्ठातैर्वन्ननिषेधनिर्मुक्तः । चापूरो भज्यमानाङ्गो मुहुर्लान्निमवाप ह । २० ।
 स श्येनवेग उत्पत्य मुष्टिकृत्य करानुभौ । भगवन्तं वासुदेवं क्रुद्धो वक्षस्यबाधत । २१ ।
 नाचलत्तत्प्रहारेण मालाहत इव द्विपः । बाह्वोर्निगृह्य चापूरं बहुशो भ्रामयन् हरिः । २२ ।
 भूपृष्ठे पोथयामास तरसा क्षीणजीवितम् । विस्स्ताकल्पकेशरुगिन्द्रश्चज इवापतत् । २३ ।
 तथैव मुष्टिकः पूर्वं स्वमुष्ट्याभिहतेन वै । बलभद्रेण बलिना तलेनाभिहतो भृशम् । २४ ।
 प्रवेपितः स रुधिरमुद्वमन् मुखतोऽर्दितः । व्यसुः पपातोर्व्युपस्थे वाताहत इवाङ्घ्रिपः । २५ ।
 ततः कूटमनुप्राप्तं रामः प्रहरतां वरः । अवधील्लीलया राजन् सावज्ञं वाममुष्टिना । २६ ।
 तर्ह्येव हि शलः कृष्णपदापहतशीर्षकः । द्विधा विदीर्णस्तोशलक उभावपि निपेततुः । २७ ।
 चापूरे मुष्टिके कूटे शले तोशलके हते । शेषाः प्रदुदुर्मुल्लाः सर्वे प्राणपरीप्सवः । २८ ।
 गोपान् वयस्यानाकृत्य तैः संसृज्य विजहत्तुः । बाद्यमानेषु तूयेंषु वल्गनौ स्तनपुरौ । २९ ।

While the women (of Mathurā) were thus talking (with one another) in anxious tones as aforesaid, Lord Śrī Hari, the Master of Yoga (and therefore able to read others' thoughts), made up His mind to get rid of His opponent (Cāṇūra), O jewel among the Bharatas ! (17) Hearing the aforesaid remarks—full of apprehension—of those women, His parents (Vasudeva and Devaki), who were unaware of their Son's strength and (consequently) overwhelmed with anxiety out of affection for Them, were filled with remorse (at their not having asked Akṛūra to desist from bringing Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa to Mathurā). (18) (Even) as Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) and His antagonist (Cāṇūra) contended with each other according to the various popular modes of wrestling, in that very manner did Balarāma and Muṣṭika struggle with each other. (19) His limbs being shattered by the hits of the Lord's limbs, which were as hard as strokes of lightning, Cāṇūra—so the tradition goes—fainted again and again. (20) Springing with the swiftness of a hawk and clenching the fingers of both his hands into fists, the latter, full of anger, struck Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Son of Vasudeva) on the chest. (21) The Lord (however) did not stir (even one inch from His position) under his blow, any more than an elephant would when struck with a garland. (On the other hand) Śrī Hari caught hold of Cāṇūra by his arms and, whirling him several times, dashed him to the ground, his life having become extinct (even) as a result of his being whirled with vehemence. His ornaments and garlands having fallen off and his locks dishevelled, the wrestler fell like a thunderbolt (the likeness of which is borne as an emblem on the ensign of Indra). (22-23) Precisely in the same manner was Muṣṭika struck violently with his palm by the mighty Balabhadra, who had also been struck with his fist by the latter in the first instance. (24) Violently shaken and sore afflicted, and vomiting blood from his mouth, he dropped lifeless on the ground like a tree blown down by the wind. (25) Balarāma, the foremost of warriors, playfully and scornfully slew with his left fist Kūṭa (another reputed wrestler), who came up next (to wrestle). (26) That very moment Śāla (another of Kaṁsa's wrestlers) had his head knocked off with Śrī Kṛṣṇa's foot, while Tośāla (the other wrestler of repute) was split into two (like a blade of grass) and both fell down (dead). (27) Cāṇūra, Muṣṭika, Kūṭa, Śāla and Tośāla, having (thus) been despatched, all the remaining wrestlers ran away anxious to save their life. (28) Drawing near them Their cowherd mates and closing with them, the two Brothers sported (in the arena), while the trumpets were being sounded, dancing (at intervals) with Their anklets jingling. (29)

जनाः प्रजहृषुः सर्वे कर्मणा रामकृष्णयोः । ऋते कंसं विप्रमुखाः साधवः साधु साध्वितः । ३० ।
 हतेषु मल्लवर्षेषु विद्वेषु च भोजराट् । न्यवारयत् स्वतूपाणि वाक्यं चेदमुवाच ह । ३१ ।
 निःसारयत दुर्वृत्तौ वसुदेवात्मजौ पुरात् । धनं हत गोपानां नन्दं बध्नीत दुर्मतिम् । ३२ ।

वसुदेवस्तु दुर्मेधा हन्यतामाश्वसन्तमः । उग्रसेनः पिता चापि सानुगः परपक्षगः । ३३ ।
 एवं विकथ्यमाने वै कंसे प्रकुपितोऽव्ययः । लघिन्नोत्पत्य तरसा भञ्जमुत्तुङ्गमारुहत् । ३४ ।
 तमाविशन्तमालोक्य मृत्युमात्मन आसनात् । मनस्वी सहस्रोत्थाय जगृहे सोऽसिचर्मणी । ३५ ।

तं खड्गपाणिं विचरन्तमाशु इयेनं यथा दक्षिणसव्यमखरे ।
 समग्रहीद् दुर्विषहोयतेजा यथोरगं तार्क्ष्यसुतः प्रसह्य । ३६ ।
 प्रगृह्य केशेषु चलत्किरीटं निपात्य रङ्गोपरि तुङ्गमञ्जात् ।
 तस्योपरिष्ठात् स्वयमवजनाभः पपात विश्वाश्रय आत्मतन्त्रः । ३७ ।
 तं सम्प्रेतं विचकर्ष भूमौ हरिदथेभं जगतो विपश्यतः ।
 हाहेति शब्दः सुमहांसदाभूदुदीरितः सर्वजनैर्नरेन्द्र । ३८ ।
 स नित्यदोद्विग्नधिया तमीश्वरं पिबन् वदन् वा विचरन् स्वपञ्चसन् ।
 ददर्श चक्रायुधमग्रतो यतस्तदेव रूपं दुरवापमाप । ३९ ।

With the exception of Kāṁsa all the people (present there) exceedingly rejoiced over the achievement of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa. And pious men, including the foremost of the Brāhmaṇas, exclaimed, "Well done ! bravo !" (30) The chief of the wrestlers having been struck down and the rest having fled away, Kāṁsa (the ruler of the Bhojas) stopped (the flourish of) his trumpets and, so the tradition goes, uttered the following injunctions:—(31) "Drive out of the city the two ill-behaved sons of Vasudeva; confiscate the wealth of the Gopas and put in bonds the wicked Nanda. (32) On the other hand, let Vasudeva of evil mind, the vilest of all, be made short work of at once and so also Ugrasena, my father, who has sided with my enemy, along with his followers." (33) While Kāṁsa was bragging thus, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the unwearied Lord) flew into a rage and, springing with agility, speedily ascended the elevated dais (which Kāṁsa was occupying). (34) Seeing Śrī Kṛṣṇa approaching as his very death, the heroic Kāṁsa rose at once from his seat and snatched up his sword and shield. (35) Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was possessed of formidable and terrible energy) quickly caught hold with a firm hand of Kāṁsa—who was moving right and left as a hawk in the air, sword in hand—even as Garuḍa (son of Kaśyapa) would forcibly seize a serpent. (36) Grasping him tightly by the hair, his diadem slipping off (even in the course of his being caught), and hurling him from the lofty dais to (the floor of) the arena, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu with a lotus sprung from His navel), the Support of the universe, depending on none other than Himself, jumped down in person upon him. (37) (Nay.) He dragged him hard, though fully dead, along the ground, the world witnessing it, (even) as a lion would drag an elephant. Very loud cries of "Alas ! Welladay !" uttered by all the people, O ruler of men, then arose (and rent the air). (38) Since with a mind full of dismay he ever saw (before his mental eyes) that very Lord armed with a discus while drinking or speaking, walking to and fro or lying asleep, nay, even while breathing, he attained (after death) that very form (so) difficult to attain. (39)

तस्यानुजा भ्रातरोऽष्टौ कङ्कन्यग्रोधकादयः । अभ्यधावन्नभिकुन्दा भ्रातुर्विंशकारिणः । ४० ।
 तथातिरभसांस्तान् संयत्तान् रोहिणीसुतः । अहन् परिघमुद्यम्य पशुनिव मुगाधिपः । ४१ ।
 नेदुर्दुन्दुभयो व्योम्नि ब्रह्मेशाद्या विभूतयः । पुष्पैः किरन्तस्तं प्रीताः शशंसुर्ननुतुः स्त्रियः । ४२ ।
 तेषां स्त्रियो महाराज सुहृन्मरणदुःखिताः । तत्राभीयुर्विनिघ्नन्त्यः शीर्षाण्यश्रुविलोचनाः । ४३ ।
 शयानान् वीरशय्यायां पतीनालिङ्ग्य शोचन्तीः । विलेपुः सुखं नार्यो विसृजन्त्यो मुहुः शुचः । ४४ ।
 हा नाथ प्रिय धर्मज्ञ करुणानाथवत्सल । त्वया हतेन निहता वयं ते सगृहप्रजाः । ४५ ।

त्वया विरहिता पत्या पुरीयं पुरुवर्षभ । न शोभते वयमिव निवृत्तोत्सवमङ्गला । ४६ ।
 अनागासां त्वं भूतानां कृतवान् द्रोहमुल्बणम् । तेनेमां भो दशां नीतो भूतध्रुक् को लभेत शम् । ४७ ।
 सर्वेषामिह भूतानामेष हि प्रभवाप्ययः । गोप्ता च तदवध्यायि न क्वचित् सुखमेधते । ४८ ।

Burning all over with rage, the eight younger brothers of Kāṁsa—Kāṁka, Nyagrodha and others—rushed (towards Śrī Kṛṣṇa) in order to get square with their (deceased) brother by avenging his death. (40) Taking up a bludgeon Balarāma (Rohiṇī's son), however, made short work of them (even) as they came fully prepared (for an encounter) with such great impetuosity, (just) as a lion (the king of beasts) would kill the cattle. (41) Kettledrums sounded in the heavens; full of delight, Brahmā (the creator), Lord Śiva and other (special) manifestations of divine glory extolled the Lord covering Him with (showers of) flowers, and celestial women (Apsarās) danced (out of joy). (42) Grieved at the death of their near and dear ones, O great king, the widows of the deceased came over to that place, severely and repeatedly beating their heads with tears in their eyes. (43) Embracing their husbands lying (dead) in the arena (which serves as a most glorious bed for heroes that have laid down their lives in an open combat), the women wailed (in the following words) at the pitch of their voice, lamenting their lot and repeatedly shedding tears of grief:—(44) "Ah, beloved lord, the knower of Dharma (the principles of righteousness) ! O kind-hearted one, fond of the helpless ! due to your having been slain, we (too), your own, with our homes and progeny have been ruined. (45) Bereft of you, its master, this city (of Mathurā), O jewel among men, does not look charming any more than we, all its festivities and felicity having ceased. (46) You wrought immense harm even to innocent creatures. It is for that reason that you have been reduced to this plight, O lord ! What oppressor of living beings can attain happiness ? (47) This Śrī Kṛṣṇa indeed is the Source, the End and the Protector of all created beings in this universe. Anyone showing disrespect to Him can never prosper. (48)

श्रीशुक उवाच

राजयोषित आश्वास्य भगवँल्लोकभावनः । यामाहुर्लौकिकीं संस्थां हतानां समकारयत् । ४९ ।
 मातरं पितरं चैव मोचयित्वाथ बन्धनात् । कृष्णरामौ ववन्दाते शिरसाऽऽसृद्य पादयोः । ५० ।
 देवकी वसुदेवश्च विज्ञाय जगदीश्वरौ । कृतसंवन्दनौ पुत्रौ सखजाते न शङ्कितौ । ५१ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे कंसवधो नाम चतुश्चत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ४४ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : Having comforted the royal ladies the Lord, who is the Protector of the universe, caused what they call obsequies to be duly performed with regard to the slain for their welfare in the other world. (49) Having then secured the release of Their mother (Devaki) and father (Vasudeva) too from bondage (while they were being taken to the gaol for being placed behind the bars), Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma bowed to them fully touching their feet with Their head. (50) Perceiving their sons—who had (just) bowed to them—to be (none else than) the Rulers of the universe, Devakī and Vasudeva did not embrace Them, afraid as they were (of showing disrespect to Them). (51)

Thus ends the forty-fourth discourse entitled "Kāṁsa slain (by the Lord)," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ पञ्चचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLV

The Lord brings back His preceptor's son (from the abode of Death)

श्रीशुक उवाच

पितरावुपलब्धार्थौ विदित्वा पुरुषोत्तमः । मा भूदिति निजां मायां ततान जनमोहिनीम् । १ ।
 उवाच पितरावेत्य साग्रजः सात्वतर्षभः । प्रश्नयावन्तः प्रीणन्नम्ब तातेति सादरम् । २ ।
 नास्मत्तो युवयोस्तात नित्योत्कण्ठितयोरपि । बाल्यपौगण्डकैशोराः पुत्राभ्यामभवन् क्वचित् । ३ ।
 न लब्धो देवहतयोर्वासो नौ भवदन्तिके । यां बालाः पितृगेहस्था विन्दन्ते लालिता मुदम् । ४ ।
 सर्वार्थसम्भवो देहो जनितः पोषितो यतः । न तयोर्याति निर्वंशं पित्रोर्मर्त्यः शतायुषा । ५ ।
 यस्तयोराम्बजः कल्प आत्मना च धनेन च । वृत्तिं न दद्यात् प्रेत्य स्वमांसं खादयन्ति हि । ६ ।
 मातरं पितरं वृद्धं भार्यां साध्वीं सुतं शिशुम् । गुरुं विप्रं प्रपन्नं च कल्पोऽविभ्रच्छ्वसन् मृतः । ७ ।
 तन्नावकल्पयोः कंसान्नित्यमुद्विग्नचेतसोः । मोघमेते व्यतिक्रान्ता दिवसा वामनर्चतोः । ८ ।
 तत् क्षन्तुमर्हंस्ततः मातर्नौ परतन्त्रयोः । अकुर्वतोर्वां शुश्रूषां क्लिष्टयोर्दुर्हदा भृशम् । ९ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Having come to know that His parents (Vasudeva and Devakī) had grasped the truth (about the divinity of the two Brothers) prematurely (before they had enjoyed the supreme bliss of loving Them as their own sons, which was sure to be marred by that knowledge), Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than the Supreme Person) spread His own Māyā (enchantment)—which infatuates His own people—so that such knowledge might not endure. (1) Approaching His father and mother in the company of His elder brother (Balarāma) and bowing in humility, the Jewel of the Sātvatas spoke respectfully (to them as follows), addressing them as "Mama and Papa" in order to delight them. (2) "Though you have been all along full of longing for us, O father, the joys of witnessing the infancy, childhood and boyhood of your sons (in us) have never fallen to your lot. (3) Ill-fated as we are, the privilege of living by your side could not be attained by us (so far) nor was that joy (ever) experienced by us, which children dwelling in their father's house and fondled by their parents do. (4) Even (by serving them) through a life of (full) hundred years a mortal is not able to get square with his parents by whom is brought into being and nourished this body in which all (the four) objects (of human pursuit) can be realized. (5) The servants of Yama actually make that son eat his own flesh on his departing from this world, who, though able-bodied, does not with his body and resources maintain them. (6) He is dead (to all intents and purposes), though breathing, who, though capable, fails to support his mother, aged father, virtuous wife, infant son, preceptor, a Brāhmaṇa (depending on him) and one who has sought him for protection. (7) Therefore (all) these days have slipped in vain by us who have failed to serve you, helpless as we were, our mind being constantly afraid of Kamsa. (8) Be pleased, O father and mother, to forgive that sin (of omission) on our part, who failed to render service to you, subject as you were (to the will of another) and sore oppressed by that evil-minded fellow (Kamsa)". (9)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति मायामनुष्यस्य हरेर्विश्वात्मनो गिरा । मोहितावङ्कमारोप्य परिष्वज्यापतुर्मुदम् । १० ।

सिञ्चन्तावश्वराभिः स्नेहपाशेन चावृतौ । न किञ्चिदूचतु राजन् बाष्पकण्ठौ विमोहितौ । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Deluded by the foregoing speech of Śrī Hari, the Soul of the universe, though appearing as a human being through His Māyā (enchanting potency), His parents experienced supreme felicity as they placed Him on their lap and folded Him in their arms. (10) Bathing Him with streams of tears and bound with ties of affection the couple said nothing, O king, bewildered as they were, their throats choked with tears. (11)

एवमाश्वास्य पितरौ भगवान् देवकीसुतः । मातामहं तृप्तेन यदूनामकरोत्प्रपम् । १२ ।

आह चास्मान् महाराज प्रजाश्चाज्ञप्तुमर्हसि । ययातिशपाद् यदुभिर्नासितव्यं नृपासने । १३ ।

मयि भूय उपासीने भवतो विबुधादयः । बलिं हरन्त्यवनताः किमुतान्ये नराधिपाः । १४ ।

सर्वान्स्वान्ज्ञातिसंबन्धान् दिग्भ्यः कंसभयाकुलान् । यदुवृषयन्धकमधुदाशार्हकुं कुरादिकान् । १५ ।

सभाजितान् समाश्वास्य विदेशावासकर्शितान् । न्यवासयत् स्वगेहेषु वित्तैः संतर्प्य विश्वकृत् । १६ ।

कृष्णसंकर्षणभुजैर्गुप्ता लब्धमनोरथाः । गृहेषु रेमिरे सिद्धाः कृष्णरामगतज्वराः । १७ ।

वीक्षन्तोऽहरहः प्रीता मुकुन्दवदनाम्बुजम् । नित्यं प्रमुदितं श्रीमत् सदयस्मितवीक्षणम् । १८ ।

तत्र प्रवयसोऽप्यासन् युवानोऽतिबलौजसः । पिबन्तोऽक्षैर्मुकुन्दस्य मुखाम्बुजसुधां मुहुः । १९ ।

Having thus comforted His parents Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devakī) presently made His maternal grand-uncle, Ugrasena, king of the Yadus and said, "Be pleased to command us (your servants) as well as the people (of Mathurā), O great king ! (As for myself) the Yadus ought not to sit on a royal throne because of the curse of Yayāti. (Since, however, it is My desire to see you on the throne of Mathurā no blame will attach to you). (12-13) When I am waiting on you as a servant, (even) the gods and others will bear tribute to you, bent low (with submissiveness). What wonder, then, that other rulers of men should do so." (14) Calling back from the (various) quarters all His kinsmen and relations—the Yadus, the Vṛṣnis, the Andhakas, the Madhus, the Dāsārhas, the Kukuras and others—that had fled through fear of Kāṁsa and had been pulled down on account of their staying abroad—(nay,) consoling them fully and highly gratifying them with riches, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Maker of the universe) settled them in their own houses when they had been (duly) honoured. (15-16) Protected by the (all-powerful) arms of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Saṅkarṣaṇa and having realized their ambition and accomplished their purpose, they lived happily in their homes, (all) their agony having disappeared due to (the grace of) Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma. (17) They felt rejoiced to gaze everyday on the lotuslike countenance of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), which was ever full of ecstatic joy, charming and enlivened with compassionate and smiling glances. (18) Drinking now and again with (the cup of) their eyes the nectar-like beauty of the lotus face of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation), even the aged there (at Mathurā) turned young and acquired great strength and energy. (19).

अथ नन्दं समासाद्य भगवान् देवकीसुतः । संकर्षणश्च राजेन्द्र परिष्वज्येदमुच्यतुः । २० ।

पितर्युवाभ्यां स्निग्धाभ्यां पोषितौ लालितौ भृशम् । पित्रोरभ्यधिका प्रीतिरात्मजेष्वामनोऽपि हि । २१ ।

स पिता सा च जननी यौ पुष्णीतां स्वपुत्रवत् । शिशून् वस्युभिरुत्सृष्टानकल्पैः पोषरक्षणे । २२ ।

यात यूयं व्रजं तात वयं च स्नेहदुःखितान् । ज्ञातीन् वो द्रष्टुमेच्छामो विधाय सुहृदां सुखम् । २३ ।

एवं सान्त्वय्य भगवान् नन्दं सव्रजमच्युतः । वासोऽलङ्कारकुण्डाद्यैरर्हयामास सादरम् । २४ ।

इत्युक्तौ परिष्वज्य नन्दः प्रणयविह्वलः । पूरयन्नश्रुभिर्नेत्रे सह गोपैर्व्रजं ययौ । २५ ।

Meanwhile duly approaching Nanda and embracing him, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Devaki) and Sankarṣaṇa, O king of kings, spoke as follows:— (20) "O father, by you two (mother Yaśodā and yourself), full of affection, both of us have been nourished and fondled with utmost care. Parents' affection for their progeny is surely more profound than the love they cherish for their own self. (21) He is the (real) father and she the mother, who nourish like their own offspring the babes cast off by their relations incapable of nourishing and protecting them. (22) Return you (now) to Vraja, O dear father! Having afforded delight to our near and dear ones we two shall follow suit in order to see you, our kinsmen, disconsolate through affection." (23) Having thus consoled Nanda alongwith the (other) people of Vraja, the immortal Lord honoured them with reverence with articles of wearing apparel, ornaments, utensils and other (loving) presents. (24) Thus addressed (by Śrī Kṛṣṇa) and overwhelmed with affection, Nanda hugged the two Brothers and, filling his eyes with tears, returned to Vraja alongwith the (other) cowherds. (25)

अथ शूरसुतो राजन् पुत्रयोः समकारयत् । पुरोधसा ब्राह्मणैश्च यथावद् द्विजसंस्कृतिम् । २६ ।
 तेभ्योऽदाद दक्षिणा गावो रुक्ममालाः खलङ्कृताः । खलङ्कृतेभ्यः संपूज्य सवत्साः क्षीममालिनीः । २७ ।
 याः कृष्णारामजन्मर्क्षे मनोदत्ता महामतिः । ताश्चाददादनुसुम्य कंसेनाधर्मतो हताः । २८ ।
 ततश्च लब्धसंस्कारौ द्विजत्वं प्राप्य सुव्रतौ । गर्गाद् यदुकुलाचार्याद् गायत्रं व्रतमास्थितौ । २९ ।
 प्रभवौ सर्वविद्यानां सर्वज्ञौ जगदीश्वरौ । नान्यसिद्धामलज्जानं गूहमानौ नरेहितैः । ३० ।
 अथो गुरुकुले वासमिच्छन्तावुपजग्मतुः । काश्यं सान्दीपनिं नाम ह्यवन्तीपुरवासिनम् । ३१ ।
 यथोपसाद्य तौ दान्तौ गुरौ वृत्तिमनिन्दिताम् । ग्राहयन्तावुपेतौ स्म भक्त्या देवमिवाद्तौ । ३२ ।
 तयोर्द्विजवरस्तुष्टः शुद्धभावानुवृत्तिभिः । प्रोवाच वेदानखिलान् साङ्ख्योपनिषदो गुरुः । ३३ ।
 सरहस्यं धनुर्वेदं धर्मान् न्यायपथांस्तथा । तथा चान्वीक्षिकीं विद्यां राजनीतिं च षड्विधाम् । ३४ ।
 सर्वं नारवरश्रेष्ठौ सर्वविद्याप्रवर्तकौ । सकृन्निरगदमात्रेण तौ संजगृहुतुर्नृप । ३५ ।
 अहोरात्रैश्चतुःषष्ट्या संयतौ तावतीः कलाः । गुरुदक्षिणयाऽऽचार्यं छन्दयामासतुर्नृप । ३६ ।
 द्विजस्तयोस्तं महिमानमद्भुतं संलक्ष्य राजन्नतिमानुषीं मतिम् ।
 सम्मन्य पत्न्या स महार्णवे मृतं बालं प्रभासे वरयास्वभूव ह । ३७ ।
 तथेत्यथारुह्य महारथौ रथं प्रभासमासाद्य दुरन्तविक्रमौ ।
 वेलामुपब्रज्य निर्षीदतुः क्षणं सिन्धुर्विदिवहार्णमाहरत्तयोः । ३८ ।

तमाह भगवानाशु गुरुपुत्रः प्रदीयताम् । योऽसाविह त्वया यस्तो बालको महतोर्मिणा । ३९ ।

Vasudeva (the son of Śūra), O king, then duly caused to be performed in accordance with the scriptural ordinance by his priest (the sage Garga) and other Brāhmaṇas the purificatory rite (of investiture with the sacred thread) conferring the rank of a Dwija (the twice-born) with respect to both his sons. (26) Having appropriately worshipped them he gave to them, when they were duly adorned, fees for their services as well as cows fully decked with gold necklaces and other ornaments as also with silk wreaths and accompanied by calves. (27) Recalling his resolve made at the time of birth of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma, Vasudeva (who was possessed of a lofty mind) gave away even those cows that had been mentally gifted by him (on that occasion) and which had been unlawfully seized by Kāṁsa. (28) Having gone through the purificatory rite (of investiture with the sacred thread) and (thereby) attained the rank of a Dwija (the twice-born) the two Brothers of noble vows thereupon embarked on the vow of celibacy* under the instructions of Garga, the preceptor (of Yadu's race). (29)

* The vow of celibacy actually consists of three vows successively entered into by a religious student belonging to the twice-born classes. The first of them, known by the name of Gāyatra, is of three days' duration and is undertaken as a

Concealing by Their actions—which looked (more or less) human— Their unclouded wisdom, that had not been acquired through another, and seeking to reside in the house of a preceptor (with the object of attaining knowledge in order to set an example before the world), the two Brothers, who were the omniscient Rulers of the universe and the source of all learning, now actually sought the presence of a Brāhmaṇa of Ujjain, Sāndipani (the son of Sandipana) by name, born in the family of Kāśa. (30-31) Having duly approached him the two Brothers tamely and reverently waited upon him as a god with devotion, (thereby) teaching (to the world) irreproachable behaviour towards one's preceptor. (32) Gratified with Their services rendered with genuine devotion, Sāndipani (the teacher), the foremost of Brāhmaṇas, taught them all the (four) Vedas alongwith the (six) auxiliary branches of learning (viz., Śikṣā or phonetics, Chanda or prosody, Vyākaraṇa or grammar, Jyotiṣa or astronomy, Kalpa or the science prescribing the ritual and giving rules for ceremonial or sacrificial acts and Nirukta or etymology) and the Upaniṣads (the crowning part of the Veda expounding the secret meaning of the Vedas and treating of Brahma) as well as Dhanurveda (the science of archery) including its secrets (viz., the knowledge of Mantras by means of which the various Astras or mystic missiles are invoked and the deities presiding over them), the Dharmaśāstras (codes of laws such as the Manusmṛti) and the various systems of philosophy (such as Mimāṃsā) as well as the science of logic and the science of politics with its six branches (viz., those dealing with peace, warfare, expedition, encampment, exciting dissension or causing the separation of allies and depending on one's allies). (33-34) The two Brothers, who were jewels amongst the foremost of men and the Originators of all sciences, learnt everything in a single lesson, O protector of men ! (35) With their mind fully controlled They mastered in the course of sixty-four days and nights as many arts* and (then) persuaded the teacher to preparation for learning the holy Gāyatri-Mantra. This is followed by the second vow, known by the name of Prājāpatya, which extends to the time of commencing the study of the Vedas; and this is followed by the third, Brāhma vow, which lasts till the end of the Vedic study.

* The following are the sixty-four arts mentioned in the Śaiva Tantras—(1) Singing; (2) playing on various musical instruments; (3) dancing; (4) acting and gesticulation, mimicry etc.; (5) drawing and painting as well as calligraphy; (6) painting figures of various designs on the various parts of the body with musk-paste and other fragrant substances; (7) preparing for use in worship various designs with grains of rice, flowers etc.; (8) preparing a bed of flowers; (9) colouring the teeth and other limbs and articles of wearing apparel; (10) paving a floor with precious stones; (11) preparing a bed; (12) using a pot full of water as a musical instrument and treading on water; (13) showing miracles of various kinds; (14) preparing chaplats and wreaths of flowers; (15) making ornaments of flowers for the ears, braid etc.; (16) modes of beautifying the body with clothes and ornaments of various kinds; (17) painting ornamental figures on the ears; (18) making perfumes and cosmetics etc., of various kinds; (19) making ornaments of various designs; (20) jugglery; (21) appearing in various guises of one's choice; (22) sleight of hand; (23) culinary art; (24) making drinks of various tastes and colours and spirituous liquors of various kinds; (25) weaving and needle-work of various kinds; (26) working puppets by strings; (27) making musical instruments of various kinds; (28) solving riddles; (29) capping verses; (30) skill in uttering tongue-twisters; (31) the art of reading manuscripts easily and quickly; (32) dramaturgy and story-writing; (33) completion of incomplete verses or part verses; (34) making ligatures, canes, arrows etc.; (35) spindle-work; (36) carpentry; (37) architecture; (38) testing valuable metals and precious stones; (39) alchemy; (40) colouring precious stones; (41) knowledge of latent minerals; (42) nursing and treating plants; (43) setting game rams, cocks and quails to fight as sport; (44) teaching parrots and other birds to imitate human speech; (45) making an enemy quit his place by means of a charm; (46) cleaning and dressing the hair; (47) reading letters removed from one's sight and divining the nature of substances held within one's palm; (48) knowledge of books written in the language of barbarians; (49) fluently talking in the different Indian dialects; (50) reading good or bad omens; (51) making diagrams etc., by means of letters arranged in different orders as mystical formulae to be worshipped or worn as an amulet; (52) splitting hard substances such as diamonds into two or more pieces of different shapes; (53) reading the thoughts of others and bringing them out in a verse; (54) lexicography; (55) knowledge of prosody; (56) increasing the number of an object by various devices; (57) playing tricks; (58) showing off one's clothes as made of a superior texture than what they actually are; (59) playing at dice; (60) attracting remote objects; (61) playing children's games; (62) the practice of charms; (63) fore knowledge of the party going to win in a debate and (64) keeping goblins and vampires under one's control.

ask for the preceptor's fee of his liking, O King ! (36) Clearly perceiving such marvellous glory of the two Brothers (in the shape of Their having mastered all sciences and the other branches of learning without any effort) as well as Their superhuman intelligence, and deliberating with his wife, O Parikṣit, the aforesaid Brāhmaṇa (Sāndipani) asked for (as his fee the restoration of) their child lost in the ocean at Prabhāsa (the modern Prabhāspatan in Saurashtra), so the tradition goes. (37) Saying "So be it !" and mounting Their chariot, the two Brothers, who were great car-warriors, of endless powers, presently reached Prabhāsa and, going near the seashore, squatted there for a moment. Coming to know of Their divine character, the god presiding over the ocean brought presents for Them. (38) The Lord said to him, "Let My preceptor's son be restored at once—the same child which was swallowed up by you in a great wave here." (39)

समुद्र उवाच

नैवाहार्षमहं देव दैत्यः पञ्चजनो महान्। अन्तर्जलचरः कृष्ण शङ्खरूपधरोऽसुरः। ४०।
आस्ते तेनाहतो नूनं तच्छ्रुत्वा सत्वरं प्रभुः। जलमाविश्य तं हत्वा नापश्यदुरोऽर्भकम्। ४१।
तदङ्गप्रभवं शङ्खमादाय रथमागमत्। ततः संयमनीं नाम यमस्य दयितां पुरीम्। ४२।
गत्वा जनार्दनः शङ्खं प्रदध्मौ सहलायुधः। शङ्खनिर्हार्दमाकर्ण्य प्रजासंयमनो यमः। ४३।
तयोः सपर्यां महतीं चक्रे भक्त्युपबृंहिताम्। उवाचावनतः कृष्णं सर्वभूताशयालयम्।

लोलामनुष्य हे विष्णो युवयोः करवाम किम्। ४४।

The god of the ocean replied : "I did not carry away the child, O Lord ! There is a great demon belonging to the Daitya class, Pañcajana (by name), who lives under water in the form of a conch, O Kṛṣṇa ! The child was surely carried away by him." Hearing it the Lord speedily plunged into the water but on killing the demon did not find the child in his bowels. (40-41) Taking the conch that formed his body the Lord returned to the chariot. Then, going to the beloved city of Yama, Saṁyamani by name, Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is solicited by the people), accompanied by Balarāma (who had a plough for his weapon), blew the (same) conch. Hearing the blast of the conch Yama, the chastiser of the people (transgressing the scriptural ordinance), offered to Them both worship on a grand scale, accompanied with devotion, and, bending low (with humility), addressed (as follows) Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who has His abode in the heart of all created beings (as the Inner Controller of all), "O Viṣṇu (the all-pervading Lord) disguised as a human being by way of sport, what can we do for You both ?" (42—44)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

गुरुपुत्रमिहानीतं निजकर्मनिबन्धनम्। आनयस्व महाराज मच्छासनपुरुस्कृतः। ४५।
तथेति तेनोपानीतं गुरुपुत्रं यदुत्तमौ। दत्त्वा स्वगुरवे भूयो वृणीष्वेति तमूचतुः। ४६।

The glorious Lord said : "Impelled by My command, O great ruler, fetch My preceptor's son, who was brought here as a result of his own Karma." (45) Handing over to Their preceptor his son, brought by Yama with the words "So be it !" the two Brothers, the foremost of the Yadus, said to him, "(Be pleased to) ask for another boon (of your choice)." (46)

गुरुवाच

सम्यक् संपादितो वत्स भवद्भ्यां गुरुनिष्कयः। को नु युष्मद्विधगुरोः कामानामवशिष्यते। ४७।
गच्छतं स्वगृहं वीरौ कीर्तिर्नामस्तु पावनी। छन्दोस्थयातयामानि भवन्तिह परत्र च। ४८।
गुरुणैवमुज्जातौ रथेनानिलरंहसा। आयातौ स्वपुरं तात पर्जन्यनिनदेन वै। ४९।

समनन्दन् प्रजाः सर्वा दृष्ट्वा रामजनार्दनौ।अपश्यन्त्यो बह्वहनि नष्टलब्धधना इव।५०।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे गुरुपुत्रानयनं नाम पञ्चचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः।४५।

The preceptor replied : "The debt of your preceptor has been fully repaid by you both, O my child ! Which of the desires of him who has been a preceptor to pupils like you can remain unfulfilled as a matter of fact ? (47) Return to your home, O valiant ones ! May your glory purify all and let the Vedas (ever) remain fresh (in your memory) here as well as hereafter." (48) Thus permitted by Their preceptor, the two Brothers forthwith returned to Their city (Mathurā), O dear Parīkṣit, in Their chariot swift as wind and thundering like a cloud.(49) All the people (of Mathurā) greatly rejoiced to behold Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (whom they had missed for many days) like people who had (once) lost and (then) recovered their wealth. (50)

Thus ends the forty-fifth discourse entitled "The Lord brings back His preceptor's son (from the abode of Death)," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथ षट्चत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLVI

The Lord relieves the agony of Nanda (by despatching Uddhava to Vraja with a message of endearment)

श्रीशुक उवाच

वृष्णीनां प्रवरो मन्त्री कृष्णस्य दयितः सखा। शिष्यो बृहस्पतेः साक्षादुद्धवो बुद्धिसत्तमः। १।
तमाह भगवान् प्रेष्ठं भक्तमेकान्तिनं क्वचित्। गृहीत्वा पाणिना पाणिं प्रपन्नार्तिहरो हरिः। २।
गच्छोद्धव व्रजं सौम्य पित्रोर्नौ प्रीतिमावह। गोपीनां मद्वियोगाधि मत्सन्देहैर्विमोचय। ३।
ता मन्थनस्का मत्प्राणा मदर्थं त्यक्तदैहिकाः। (मामेव दयितं प्रेष्ठमात्मानं मनसा गताः।*)
ये त्यक्तलोकधर्माश्च मदर्थं तान् बिभर्षमहम्। ४।

मयि ताः प्रेयसां प्रेष्ठे दूरस्थे गोकुलस्त्रियः। स्मरन्त्योऽङ्गविपुलान्ति विरहौलकण्ठविह्वलाः। ५।
धारयन्त्यतिकृच्छ्रेण प्रायः प्राणान् कथञ्चन। प्रत्यागमनसन्देहैर्बल्लव्यो मे मदात्मिकाः। ६।

Śrī Śuka began again : A beloved friend and counsellor of Śrī Kṛṣṇa was Uddhava, the most distinguished of the Vṛṣṇis and a direct disciple of the sage Brhaspati (the preceptor of the gods) and foremost in intelligence. (1) Claspings his hand with His own on a certain day, Lord Śrī Hari, who alleviates the suffering of those that flee (for protection) to Him, spoke (as follows) to Uddhava, who was most beloved of and exclusively devoted to Him:—(2) "Proceed you, gentle Uddhava, to Vraja and (thereby) bring delight to Our parents (Nanda and Yaśodā) and relieve in particular the agony—caused by separation from Me—of the cowherd women through My messages. (3) The latter have not only given their mind to Me but their (very) life is centred in Me; (nay,) they have renounced for My sake everything

*The part of the verse placed within brackets has not been commented on by Śrīdhara.

connected with their body and have mentally taken refuge in Me alone, their beloved friend, the highest object of their affection, their very Self. I stand (through thick and thin) by those that have not only given up their interests in this as well as in the other world but have also set at naught their moral obligations for my sake. (4) I—the most beloved of (all) their beloved objects—being at a distance from them, the women of Vraja, O dear Uddhava, remain forgetful of everything (including their own self), thinking (constantly as they do) of me, and overwhelmed with intense longing occasioned by separation (from me). (5) With their mind absorbed in me the cowherd women are in most cases somehow propping up their life with great difficulty on my assurances of coming back (to Vraja)." (6)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्युक्त उद्धवो राजन् संदेशं भर्तुरादृतः। आदाय रथमारुह्य प्रययौ नन्दगोकुलम्। ७।
 प्राप्तो नन्दव्रजं श्रीमान् निल्लोचति विभावसौ। छन्नयानः प्रविशतां पशूनां खुररेणुभिः। ८।
 वासिताथैऽभियुध्यद्विनादितं शुष्मिभिवृषैः। धावन्तीभिश्च वास्त्राभिरुधोभारैः खवत्सकान्। ९।
 इतस्ततो विलङ्घ्यद्विगोवत्सैर्मण्डितं सितैः। गोदोहशब्दाभिरवं वेणूनां निःस्वेन च। १०।
 गायन्तीभिश्च कर्माणि शुभानि बलकृष्णयोः। स्वलङ्कृताभिर्गोपीभिर्गोपैश्च सुविराजितम्। ११।
 अन्यर्कातिथिगोविप्रपितृदेवार्चनान्वितैः। धूपदीपैश्च माल्यैश्च गोपावासैर्मनोरमम्। १२।
 सर्वतः पुष्पितवनं द्विजालिकुलनादितम्। हंसकारण्डवाकीर्णैः पद्मषण्डैश्च मण्डितम्। १३।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus instructed (by the Lord) and mounting a chariot Uddhava drove to Nanda's Gokula (a station of cowherds) carrying the message of his Master (Śrī Kṛṣṇa) with (great) reverence. (7) The blessed one reached Nanda's Vraja while the sun was (just) setting, his chariot obscured with the dust raised by the hoofs of cattle that were entering Vraja (at that very moment). (8) The place was rendered noisy by bulls in rut contending with one another for the sake of cows in heat and by cows rushing to meet their (respective) calves though oppressed with the weight of their udders. (9) (Nay,) it was graced with white calves capering here and there as well as with the music of flutes and was full of noise, on all sides, accompanied with the sound of the milking of cows. (10) Again, it shone most resplendent with cowherd women richly adorned and singing the noble deeds of Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa, as well as with cowherds. (11) The place ravished the mind with its dwellings of cowherds characterized by the worship of sacred fires, the sun-god, newcomers, cows, Brāhmaṇas, the manes and gods as well as with frankincense (that was being burnt there), and lights and garlands (with which the houses were decorated). (12) It abounded in groves in full blossom on all sides and was rendered noisy with the notes of birds and the humming of black bees and was graced with beds of lotuses crowded with swans and Kāraṇḍavas (a species of ducks). (13)

तमागतं समागम्य कृष्णस्यानुचरं प्रियम्। नन्दः प्रीतः परिब्रूय्य वासुदेवधिवार्चयत्। १४।
 भोजितं परमात्रेण संविष्टं कशिपौ सुखम्। गतश्रमं पर्यपृच्छत् पादसंवाहनादिभिः। १५।
 कचिदङ्गं महाभाग सखा नः शूरनन्दनः। आस्ते कुशल्यपत्याद्यैर्मुक्तो मुक्तः सुहृद्वृतः। १६।
 दिष्ट्या कंसो हतः पापः सानुगः स्वेन पाप्मना। साधूनां धर्मशीलानां यदुनां द्वेष्टि यः सदा। १७।
 अपि स्मरति नः कृष्णो मातरं सुहृदः सखीन्। गोपान् व्रजं चात्मनाथं गावो वृन्दावनं गिरिम्। १८।
 अप्यायास्यति गोविन्दः स्वजनान् सकृदीक्षितुम्। तर्हि ब्रक्ष्याम तद्वक्त्रं सुनसं सुस्मितेक्षणम्। १९।
 दावाग्नेर्वातवर्षाच्च वृषसर्पाच्च रक्षिताः। दुरत्ययेभ्यो मृत्युभ्यः कृष्णो न सुमहात्मनः। २०।
 स्मरतां कृष्णवीर्याणि लीलापाङ्कनिरिक्षितम्। हसितं भाषितं चाङ्गं सर्वान् नः शिथिलाः क्रियाः। २१।

सरिच्छैलवनेद्देशान् मुकुन्दपदभूषितान् । आक्रीडानीक्षमाणानां मनो याति तदात्मताम् । २२ ।
 मन्ये कृष्णं च रामं च प्राप्तविह सुरोत्तमौ । सुराणां महदर्थाय गर्गस्य वचनं यथा । २३ ।
 कंसं नागायुतप्राणं मल्लौ गजपति तथा । अवधिष्टां लीलयैव पशूनिव मृगाधिपः । २४ ।
 तालत्रयं महासारं धनुर्यष्टिमिवेभराद् । बभञ्जकेन हस्तेन सप्ताहमदधाद् गिरिम् । २५ ।
 प्रलम्बो धेनुकोऽरिष्टस्तृणावर्तो बकादयः । दैत्याः सुरामुरजितो हता येनेह लीलया । २६ ।

Delighted to meet and embrace that beloved servant of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, arrived at his door, Nanda showed him (every) regard, looking upon him as Śrī Kṛṣṇa (Himself). (14) When he had been (duly) treated to rice boiled in milk with sugar (which has been regarded as the best food) and was comfortably seated in a couch and had been relieved of his fatigue by kneading his feet and other (such) services (rendered by a servant), Nanda enquired of him (as follows):—(15) "Is our friend, Vasudeva (the delight of Sūra), O dear Uddhava, doing well, O highly blessed one, (now that he is) free (from bondage), united with his sons and others (wives and so on) and surrounded by his near and dear ones ? (16) Luckily (enough for us) the wicked Kāṁsa—who always hated the pious Yadus, that are given to (the practice of) virtue—has been killed alongwith his followers (younger brothers) by his own sin. (17) Does Kṛṣṇa remember us and his mother (sitting there), (other relations) and playmates, the cowherds (in general), (the people of) Vraja, that looked upon him as its protector, the cows, (the woodland of) Vṛndāvana and the (Govardhana) hill ? (18) Will Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the protector of cows) come over (to this place but) once to see his own people ? Then (only) we shall (be able to) behold his countenance with a shapely nose and winsome smiles and glances. (19) We were protected from forest fire, storm and rain, the demon Aṛiṣṭa (who came disguised as a bull) and a python (named Sudarśana)—perils that were (so) difficult to overcome—by Śrī Kṛṣṇa, who is exceedingly magnanimous. (20) (Even) as we remember the exploits of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, his sportful sidelong looks, laughter and talk, O dear Uddhava, all our activities get slackened. (21) (Nay) our mind gets absorbed in him as we behold the streams, hills and woodlands as well as the playgrounds graced by the footprints of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation). (22) I look upon Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma too as the foremost of divinities come down here (on this earth) for (accomplishing) some momentous purpose of the gods, as the word of Garga indicated. (23) They killed in mere sport Kāṁsa, who possessed the strength of (not less than) ten thousand elephants, and (his) two (principal) wrestlers (Cāṇūra and Muṣṭika) as well as Kuvalayāpiḍa (the chief of his elephants) (just) as a lion (the king of beasts) would kill (a number of) animals. (24) Kṛṣṇa snapped the most powerful bow (of Kāṁsa) measuring 3 Tālas (equivalent to 27 spans*), (even) as a leader of elephants would break a sugarcane, and held the (Govardhana) hill with one hand for a (full) week. (25) (Nay,) by the two brothers were sportfully slain here (in this land of Vraja) the demons Pralamba, Dhenuka, Aṛiṣṭa, Tṛṇāvarta, Baka and others, who had conquered gods as well as demons." (26)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इति संस्मृत्य संस्मृत्य नन्दः कृष्णानुरक्तधीः । अत्युत्कण्ठोऽभवत्पूर्णां प्रेमप्रसरविह्वलः । २७ ।
 यशोदा वर्ण्यमानानि पुत्रस्य चरितानि च । शृण्वन्त्यश्रूण्यवास्ताक्षीत् स्नेहस्तुतपयोधरा । २८ ।
 तयोरिच्छं भगवति कृष्णे नन्दयशोदयोः । वीक्ष्यानुरागं परमं नन्दमाहोद्धवो मुदा । २९ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus vividly remembering again and again all about the two Brothers Nanda, whose mind was full of love for Śrī Kṛṣṇa, kept quiet, seized as he was with

* 'ताली नववितस्तयः' : so says the lexicographer Devabodha.

excessive longing and overwhelmed with a flood of love. (27) Hearing of her Son's exploits being recounted (as aforesaid), Yaśodā too shed tears (of love), her breasts overflowing with (maternal) affection. (28) Perceiving such supreme love of Nanda and Yaśodā for Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa Uddhava joyfully spoke to Nanda (as follows). (29)

उद्धव उवाच

युवां श्लाघ्यतमौ नूनं देहिनामिह मानद। नारायणेऽखिलगुरौ यत्कृता मतिरीदृशी। ३०।
 एतौ हि विश्वस्य च बीजयोनी रामो मुकुन्दः पुरुषः प्रधानम्।
 अन्वीय भूतेषु विलक्षणस्य ज्ञानस्य चेशत इमौ पुराणौ। ३१।
 यस्मिञ्जनः प्राणवियोगकाले क्षणं समावेश्य मनो विशुद्धम्।
 निर्हृत्य कर्माशयमाशु याति परं गतिं ब्रह्मयोऽर्कवर्णः। ३२।
 तस्मिन् भवन्ताखिलात्महेतौ नारायणे कारणमर्त्यमूर्तौ।
 भावं विधत्तां नितरां महात्मन् किं वावशिष्टं युवयोः सुकृत्यम्। ३३।
 आगमिष्यत्यदीर्घेण कालेन व्रजमच्युतः। प्रियं विधास्यते पित्रोर्भगवान् सात्वतां पतिः। ३४।
 हत्वा कंसं रङ्गमध्ये प्रतीपं सर्वसात्वताम्। यदाह वः समागत्य कृष्णः सत्यं करोति तत्। ३५।
 मा रिवद्यतं महाभागौ द्रक्ष्यथः कृष्णमन्तिके। अन्तर्हृदि स भूतानामास्ते ज्योतिरिवैधसि। ३६।
 न ह्यस्यास्ति प्रियः कश्चिन्नाप्रियो वास्त्यमानिनः। नोत्तमो नाधमो नापि समानस्यासमोऽपि वा। ३७।
 न माता न पिता तस्य न भार्या न सुतादयः। नात्मीयो न परश्चापि न देहो जन्म एव च। ३८।
 न चास्य कर्म वा लोके सदसन्मिश्रयोनिषु। क्रीडार्थः सोऽपि साधूनां परित्राणाय कल्पते। ३९।
 सत्त्वं रजस्तम इति भजते निर्गुणो गुणान्। क्रीडन्नतीतोऽत्र गुणैः सुजत्यवति हन्यजः। ४०।
 यथा भ्रमरिकादृष्ट्या आश्रयतीव महीयते। चित्ते कर्तरि तत्रात्मा कर्तेवाहं धिया स्मृतः। ४१।
 युवयोरेव नैवायमात्मजो भगवान् हरिः। सर्वेषामात्मजो ह्यात्मा पिता माता स ईश्वरः। ४२।
 दृष्टं श्रुतं भूतभवद् भविष्यत् स्थास्तुश्चरिष्युर्महदल्पकं च।
 विनाच्युताद् वस्तु तरां न वाच्यं स एव सर्वं परमार्थभूतः। ४३।

Uddhava said : Indeed you two (Yaśodā and Nanda) are the most praiseworthy of (all) embodied beings here (on this earth). O bestower of honour (on us all, of being the servants of the Lord, who has been made available to us only through you), in that such (unique) love has been conceived by you for Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is no other than Lord Nārāyaṇa), the Father and Controller of all. (30) Indeed Balarāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Bestower of Liberation)—They are (both) the material and the efficient cause of the universe; They are also the Puruṣa (individual soul) and Pradhāna (primordial Matter). (Nay,) entering into the (various) living organisms They control the various types of consciousness (in the form of the individual soul conditioned by those organisms), eternal (beginningless) as They are. (31) Focussing (even) one's impure mind on Śrī Kṛṣṇa (merely) for an instant at the time of death one speedily attains the supreme goal, burning the store of Karma and becoming one with Brahma (the Absolute) and attaining a form consisting of Sattva unmixed with Rajas and Tamas. (32) You cherish (such) great devotion to that Supreme Spirit, Lord Nārāyaṇa, the Soul as well as the Source of all, who has assumed a human semblance for some purpose. What meritorious act remains to be done by you two (under the circumstances)? (33) At no distant date will the divine Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), the Protector of the Yadus, come (back) to Vraja and bring delight to (you) His parents. (34) Śrī Kṛṣṇa will make good what He told you* on coming back after killing Kāṁsa, the enemy of the Yadus, in the midst of an (open) assembly. (35) Grieve not, O highly blessed ones; you will (at no distant date) find Śrī Kṛṣṇa by your side. He dwells in the heart of (all) created beings (even) as fire (is latent) in wood. (36) Indeed none is dear or unwelcome to Him, who is not identified with a (particular) body. Nor is anyone superior or inferior nor even unequal in His eyes, He being the same (to all). (37) He has neither father nor mother, neither wife nor sons etc.; none is His own or alien to Him; nor can a body, much less birth or action be attributed to Him. Even as such He descends in high, low and mixed species (of life) in the world for the sake of pastime with a view to protecting the virtuous. (38-39) Though untouched by the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti), He assumes the qualities of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, and, sporting with them, though (really) transcending them, the birthless Lord evolves, maintains and absorbs the universe by means of these Guṇas here (in the realm of Prakṛti). (40) (Just) as when looked at with a revolving eye (by a revolving person) the earth is seen rotating or while the mind (alone) is the doer, the soul is recognized as such due to its identification with the mind, so is God held to be responsible for the creation etc., of the universe, although, as a matter of fact, the same is being done by the Guṇas. (41) He, the divine Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the alleviator of the distress of all) is certainly not only your son; for He is the Son, the (very) Self, the Father, the Mother, (Nay,) the Ruler of all. (42) (Nay,) nothing which is seen or heard of, has gone by or is (still) existent or which is (yet) to come, which is immobile or mobile, big or small, is really worth naming (when considered) apart from God; for He alone is everything, He alone is true. (43)

* Vide verse 23 of Discourse XLV above.

एवं निशा सा ब्रुवतोर्व्यतीता नन्दस्य कृष्णानुचरस्य राजन् ।

गोप्यः समुत्थाय निरुप्य दीपान् वास्तून् समभ्यर्च्य दधीन्यमन्थन् । ४४ ।

ता दीपदीप्तैर्मणिभिर्विरज्जु रज्जुर्विकर्षद्भुजकङ्कणस्रजः ।

चलन्निवन्धस्तनहारकुण्डलत्विषत्कपोलारुणकुङ्कुमानाः । ४५ ।

उद्गायतीनामरविन्दलोचनं ब्रजार्जुनानां दिवमस्पृशद् ध्वनिः ।

दध्नश्च निर्मन्थनशब्दमिश्रितो निरस्यते येन दिशाममङ्गलम् । ४६ ।

The night slipped past Nanda and Uddhava (Śrī Kṛṣṇa's servant) while they were thus chatting, O king ! Quitting their bed (towards the close of night), kindling their lights and duly worshipping (on the threshold etc.), the deities presiding over their house the cowherdesses (of Vraja) began to churn their curds. (44) With rows of bangles round their wrists pulling the cords (that revolved the churning-staff), their cheeks shining with (bright) ear-rings (that rocked with the motion of their arms), and their faces painted with red saffron (a product of the Balkh territory), the Gopīs looked very charming with gems (in their girdle etc.), brightened by the lights, their hips, breasts and necklaces shaking (all the time). (45) (Now) rose to the heavens the music of the women of Vraja, who were celebrating at the pitch of their voice the exploits of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the lotus-eyed Lord), blended with the (gurgling) noise produced by the churning of curds, both of which combined to drive away the evil forces operating in the (four) quarters. (46)

भगवत्सुदिते सुर्वे नन्दद्वारि ब्रजौकसः । दृष्ट्वा रथं शातकौशं कस्यायमिति चाब्रुवन् । ४७ ।

अकूर आगतः किं वा यः कंसस्यार्थसाधकः । येन नीतो मधुपुरीं कृष्णः कमललोचनः । ४८ ।

किं साधयिष्यत्यस्माभिर्भर्तुः प्रेतस्य निष्कृतिम् । इति स्त्रीणां वदन्तीनामुद्धवोऽगात् कृताह्निकः । ४९ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे नन्दशोकपनयनं नाम षट्त्वारिंशोऽध्यायः । ४६ ।

Seeing a chariot plated with gold at the portals of Nanda, now that the glorious sun-god had appeared (at the horizon), the (unsophisticated) women of Vraja (who had no knowledge of the outside world, Śrī Kṛṣṇa being their solitary concern), inquired (of one another) as to whose chariot it was, and suggested as follows:—(47) "May it be that Akrūra—by whom the lotus-eyed Śrī Kṛṣṇa was taken away to Mathurā (the city founded by and named after the demon Madhu), and who (thus) accomplished the purpose of Kāṁsā (his master)—has turned up (once more). (48) Is he (now) going to offer oblations to (the spirit of) his deceased master with our bodies (flesh)?" While the women were talking in this strain, Uddhava returned (to Nanda's residence from the bank of the holy Yamunā) having finished his daily routine (of bath and devotions). (49)

Thus ends the forty-sixth discourse entitled "Śrī Kṛṣṇa dispels the agony of Nanda," in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Purāṇa, otherwise known as the Paramaharīsa-Saṁhitā.

अथ सप्तचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLVII

Dialogue between Uddhava and the Gopīs and ode to a black bee

श्रीशुक उवाच

तं वीक्ष्य कृष्णानुचरं ब्रजस्त्रियः प्रलम्बबाहुं नवकञ्जलोचनम् ।
पीताम्बरं पुष्करमालिनं लसन्मुखारविन्दं मणिमृष्टकुण्डलम् । १ ।
शुचिस्मिताः कोऽयमपीच्छदर्शनः कुतश्च कस्याच्युतवेषभूषणः ।
इति स्म सर्वाः परिवव्रुस्तुकास्तमुत्तमश्लोकपदाम्बुजाश्रयम् । २ ।
तं प्रश्रयेणावनताः सुसत्कृतं सत्रीडहासेक्षणसूनृतादिभिः ।
रहस्यपृच्छन्नुपविष्टमासने विज्ञाय सन्देशहरं रमापतेः । ३ ।

जानीमस्त्वां यदुपतेः पार्श्वे समुपागतम् । भर्त्रेह प्रेषितः पित्रोर्भवान् प्रियचिकीर्षया । ४ ।
अन्यथा गोव्रजे तस्य स्मरणीयं न चक्षमहे । स्नेहानुबन्धो बन्धूनां मुनेरपि सुदुस्त्यजः । ५ ।
अन्येषुर्थकृता मैत्री यावदर्थविडम्बनम् । पुष्पिः स्त्रीषु कृता यद्वत् समनस्स्विव षट्पदेः । ६ ।
निस्स्वं त्यजन्ति गणिका अकल्पं नृपतिं प्रजाः । अधीतविद्या आचार्यमृत्विजो दत्तदक्षिणम् । ७ ।
खगा वीतफलं वृक्षं भुक्त्वा चातिथयो गृहम् । दग्धं मृगास्तथारण्यं जारो भुक्त्वा रतां स्त्रियम् । ८ ।
इति गोप्यो हि गोविन्दे गतवाक्कायमानसाः । कृष्णदूते ब्रजं याते ऊढ्वे त्यक्तलौकिकाः । ९ ।
गायन्त्यः प्रियकर्माणि रुदत्यश्च गतह्रियः । तस्य संस्मृत्य संस्मृत्य यानि कैशोरबाल्ययोः । १० ।
काचिन्मधुकरं दृष्ट्वा ध्यायन्ती कृष्णसङ्गमम् । प्रियप्रस्थापितं दूतं कल्पयित्वेदमब्रवीत् । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Gazing on the aforesaid servant of Śrī Kṛṣṇa with unusually long arms, eyes resembling a pair of fresh-blown lotuses and a bright lotus-like countenance, clad in yellow (silk) and wearing a garland of lotuses and adorned with ear-rings brilliant with gems, all the women of Vraja with bright smiles eagerly surrounded Uddhava, who had taken shelter under the lotus-feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the illustrious Lord), wondering who he was with (such) a handsome appearance and dressed and adorned in the style of that immortal Lord, whence he had come and whose son (or servant) he was. (1-2) Concluding him to be a messenger from Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who was no other than Lord Viṣṇu, the Spouse of Goddess Rāmā), the Gopis, bent low with modesty, enquired of him in private (as follows) when he had been duly greeted with bashful smiles and glances and kind words etc., and had squatted on a seat:—(3) "We know you to be a companion of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Lord of the Yadus), duly arrived in our midst. You have been despatched here by your master with intent to bring delight to His parents. (4) Otherwise we do not find anything worth remembering for Him in Vraja, a (mere) pasture-land for cows. Ties of affection for one's relations are most difficult to disregard even for a hermit. (5) Friendship with others (who are not bound by ties of blood)—like that cultivated by lovers with their sweethearts or by black bees with flowers—actuated as it is by self-interest, lasts (only) till one's interests continue to be served (by them) and is (at best) a travesty of love. (6) Harlots forsake a destitute (lover); the people, an incapable ruler; students who have learnt what they wanted to learn, their teacher; the priests officiating at a sacrifice, the sacrificer who has paid the sacrificial fees (at the end of the sacrifice); the birds, a tree from which fruits have disappeared; strangers, a dwelling (which afforded shelter to them) after finishing their meal; animals, a burnt forest and a paramour, a woman attached to him (even though unsated), the moment he has enjoyed her." (7-8) In this way, when Uddhava, the messenger of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, arrived in Vraja, the cowherd women, whose speech, body and mind were undoubtedly devoted to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (the Protector of cows) cast to the winds (all) worldly etiquette. (9) Recalling again and again the exploits of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (their beloved Lord), that pertained to His boyhood and infancy they celebrated them in song and wept, (all) sense of shame having taken leave of them. (10) Musing over her (past) union with Śrī Kṛṣṇa and (presently) perceiving a black bee (before her), a certain Gopī (presumably Śrī Rādhā Herself, the foremost and the beloved of all Gopīs, some of whom loved Her even more than they loved Śrī Kṛṣṇa) fancied it to be a messenger despatched by Śrī Kṛṣṇa (her Darling) and spoke* as follows. (11)

गोप्युवाच

मधुप कितवन्मो मा सृशाङ्घ्रि सपत्न्याः कुचविलुलितमालाकुङ्कुमश्मश्रुभिर्नः ।
 वहतु मधुपतिस्तन्मानिनीनां प्रसादं यदुसदसि विडम्ब्यं यस्य दूतस्त्वमीदृक् । १२ ।
 सकृदधरमुद्यो स्वां मोहिनीं पावयित्वा सुमनस इव सद्यस्तल्यजेऽस्मान् भवादृक् ।
 परिचरति कथं तत्पादपद्मं तु पद्मा ह्यपि वत हतचेता उत्तमश्लोकजल्पैः । १३ ।
 किमिह बहु षडङ्घ्रे गायसि त्वं यदूनामधिपतिमगृहाणामप्रतो नः पुराणम् ।
 विजयसखसखीनां गीयतां तत्प्रसङ्गः क्षपितकुचरुजस्ते कल्पयन्तीष्टमिष्टाः । १४ ।
 दिवि भुवि च रसायां काः स्त्रियस्तदुरापाः कपटरुचिरहासभ्रविजृम्भस्य याः सुः ।
 चरणरज उपास्ते यस्य भूतिर्वयं का अपि च कृपणपक्षे ह्युत्तमश्लोकशब्दः । १५ ।
 विमृज शिरसि पादं वेदम्यहं चादुकारैरनुनयविदुषस्तेऽध्येत्य दीर्यैर्मुकुन्दात् ।

* Authoritative Vaiṣṇava commentators like Śaṅkara Goswāmī, who are believed to have actually witnessed these Līlās of Śrī Kṛṣṇa and His beloved Gopis by the special grace of the Lord, have traced the following utterances to Śrī Rādhā, on the basis of the Agni-Purāṇa as well as on the strength of their own transcendent vision. Again, these utterances are believed to have escaped from the lips of Śrī Rādhā in a state of divine ecstasy (Oṁyonmāda), which has no parallel anywhere and is the special monopoly of Śrī Rādhā, a unique personification of Mahābhava, the highest and purest form of divine Love. These utterances have also been classified under various heads such as Cītrajāla, which have been clearly defined in standard works on poetics like the Ujjvala-nīlamanī of Rūpa Goswāmī.

खकृत इह विमुष्टापत्यपत्यलोका व्यसृजदकृतचेताः किं नु सस्येयमस्मिन् । १६ ।

मृगयुरिव कपीन्द्रं विव्यधे लुब्धधर्मा स्त्रियमकृत विरूपां स्त्रीजितः कामयानाम् ।

बलिमपि बलिमत्वावेष्टयद् ध्वाङ्गवद् यस्तदलमसितसख्यैर्दुस्त्यजस्तकथार्थः । १७ ।

यदनुव्रतिलीलाकर्णपीयूषविप्रदसकृददनविधूतद्वन्द्वधर्मा विनष्टाः ।

सपदि गृहकुदुष्यं दीनमुत्सृज्य दीना बहव इह विहङ्गा भिक्षुचर्यां चरन्ति । १८ ।

वयमृतमिव जिह्मव्याहतं श्रद्धधानाः कुलिकरुतमिवाज्ञाः कृष्णबन्धो हरिण्यः ।

ददृशुसकृदेतत्तत्रवस्पर्शतीव्रस्मररुज उपमन्त्रिन् भण्यतामन्यवार्ता । १९ ।

प्रियसख पुनरागाः प्रेषसा प्रेषितः किं वरय किमनुरुधे माननीयोऽसि मेऽङ्ग ।

नयसि कथमिहास्मान् दुस्त्यजद्वन्द्वपार्श्वं सततमुरसि सौम्य श्रीर्वधूः साकमाप्ते । २० ।

अपि वत मधुपुर्यामार्यपुत्रोऽधुनाऽऽस्ते स्मरति स पितृगेहान् सौम्य बन्धुंश्च गोपान् ।

क्वचिदपि स कथा नः किङ्करीणां गुणीते भुजमगरुसुगन्धं मूर्ध्यधास्यत् कदा नु । २१ ।

The Gopī said : O black bee (lit., the sucker of honey), O friend of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a treacherous lover), (pray) do not touch our feet (by way of supplication) with your (moustache-like) tentacles tinged (red) with the saffron of the garland (of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) pressed against the breasts (painted with saffron) of our rivals (at Mathurā). Let Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Chief of the Madhus), whose messenger you are—you who are distinguished by such characteristics (as have been depicted just now)—bear (on His garland etc.), the token of favour (in the shape of marks of saffron etc.), of those proud ladies (of Mathurā), which would be an object of ridicule for the court of the Yadus. (What will you gain by conciliating us rustic women of Vraja?) (12) Having allowed us to drink the entrancing nectar of His lips (but) once, He deserted us, innocent women, all of a sudden (even) as a black bee like you would leave the (guileless) flowers. I wonder how Lakṣmī (who is reputed to be very clever and discerning) continues to serve His lotus-feet (which She would not if She came to know of His infidelity and ungratefulness) ? Presumably She does so (only) because She has Her mind captivated alas ! by the honeyed words of our illustrious Lord (We for our part have grown too wise to be deceived any more by His false promises). (13) Why do you, O six-legged one, glorify before us homeless people here at (such) length Śrī Kṛṣṇa (now the Lord of the Yadus), the (most) Ancient One (and therefore to well-known to us to need any introduction) ? Let His stories be (profitably) sung in the presence of the (blessed) lady companions of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is shortly going to be nicknamed as Arjuna's Friend). They will (in return for Your service) confer on you the object of your desire, beloved as they are of Him and have the agony of their heart soothed (by His loving embraces). (14) What women are there on earth, in heaven or in the subterranean regions, who are hard to win for the playful movements of His eyebrows accompanied by His cunning and winsome smiles ? Of what account are we in His eyes, whose dust of feet (even) Lakṣmī (the goddess of fortune) worships ? Nevertheless (tell Him that) the epithet of Uttamaśloka (one enjoying excellent fame), as a matter of fact, applies to him who espouses the cause of the forlorn (like) us. (15) Leave my foot, on which you have placed your head, acquainted as I am with you, who know how to win over others with blandishments and messages (of love), having learnt this art from Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is a past master in such artifices). (Ah,) He left here us, who had for His own sake renounced our children, husband and (even happiness in) the other world (obtainable through virtuous conduct alone), fickle-minded as He is. What, then, is to be gained by coming to terms with Him ? (16) Hard-hearted by nature, He (in His previous descent as Śrī Rama) hit (with an arrow) Vālī (the lord of the monkeys) like a hunter (without giving him any notice or challenging him to an open combat according to the established canons of warfare) and, domineered over by His Consort (Sītā), deformed a woman (Śūrpaṇakhā), who had approached Him with lust (in her heart). (Nay,) having accepted (as the divine Dwarf) Bali's worship (in the form of a gift of land measuring three strides) He bound him (even) as a crow would (in conjunction with other crows) surround (and plague) its feeder after eating the food offered by the latter. Therefore, enough of friendship with those possessed of a dark hue. (Yet) the treasure in the form of His story is difficult to forgo. (17) With (all) their natural propensities (in the form of likes and dislikes etc.), existing as pairs of opposites uprooted by tasting but once even a small bit of His supremely delightful stories, which fall as nectar on their ears, and (thus) completely ruined (in the eyes of the world), and leaving all of a sudden their home and family in a wretched condition, many men here lead a life of mendicants, deprived of (all) enjoyment, like so many birds. (18) Believing as true the (false) professions (of love) on the part of that Cheat, (even) as she-deer, the foolish companions of a black antelope, would put faith in the (deceptive) music of a hunter and suffer the torment of being hit with a shaft, we ignorant sweethearts of Śrī Kṛṣṇa have repeatedly suffered this fate, having been subjected to smarting pangs of love occasioned by the (loving) touch of His nails. (Therefore,) O messenger, let any other topic be discussed (and talk no more of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, whose very mention awakens memories that accentuate our agony of separation from Him). (19) O friend of our beloved Lord ! sent (back) by our Darling (though stung with our pungent words), have you come (to us) again ? (If so,) ask what you would (of us); (for) you are worthy of honour to me, O dear one ! How will you take us—who are here—to His side, whose companionship is difficult to forgo (once it is had) ? (For) His (divine) Spouse, Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity), O gentle one, ever remains with Him on His very bosom (in the form a golden streak). (20) Ah, is my Darling lit., son of one's father-in-law* now at Mathurā (has returned from the house of His preceptor after completing His studies there)? Does He remember, O gentle one, his paternal house (the house of His godfather, Nanda) as well as His relations and (other) cowherds? Does He ever make any references to us His maid-servants? Oh, when will He (return to Vraja and) place His arm, more fragrant (even) than aloë-wood, on our head (by way of consolation)? (21)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथोद्धवो निशम्यैव कृष्णदर्शनलालसाः । सान्त्वयन् प्रियसन्देशगोपीरिदमभाषत ॥२१॥

Śrī Śuka resumed : On hearing this (unprecedented) effusion of love, Uddhava forthwith spoke as follows to the cowherd women—who had been pining for a sight of Śrī Kṛṣṇa—comforting them with messages (of love) from their beloved Lord. (22)

उद्धव उवाच

अहो यूयं स्म पूर्णार्था भवत्यो लोकपूजिताः । वासुदेवे भगवति यासामित्यपि मनः ॥२३॥

दानव्रततपोहोमजपस्वाध्यायसंयमैः । श्रेयोभिर्विविधैश्चान्यैः कृष्णो भक्तिर्हि साध्यते ॥२४॥

भगवत्युत्तमश्लोके भवतीभिरनुत्तमा । भक्तिः प्रवर्तिता दिष्ट्या मुनीनामपि दुर्लभा ॥२५॥

दिष्ट्या पुत्रान् पतीन् देहान् स्वजनान् भवनानि च । हित्वावृणीत यूयं यत् कृष्णाख्यं पुरुषं परम् ॥२६॥

सर्वात्मभावोऽधिकृतो भवतीनामधोक्षजे । विरहेण महाभागा महान् मेऽनुग्रहः कृतः ॥२७॥

श्रूयतां प्रियसन्देशो भवतीनां सुखावहः । यमादायागतो भद्रा अहं भर्तृ रहस्करः ॥२८॥

* It is forbidden in our Sāstras to utter one's own name or that of one's preceptor and other elders (including one's parents and grandparents, husband and his parents and so on), that of an abject miser or of one's eldest son or wedded wife even while dying:—आत्मनाम गुरोर्नाम नामातिकृपणम्य च । प्राणान्तेऽपि न वक्तव्यं ऋषिपुत्रकलत्रयोः ॥ (Karmalocana)

Uddhava said : Oh, you (Gopīs) have (all) your objects accomplished indeed and are the adored of (all) the worlds in that your mind is so (fully and exclusively) absorbed in Lord Vasudeva. (23) Devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa indeed is sought to be attained through charitable gifts, fasting, austerities pouring oblations into the sacred fire, muttering prayers, study of the Vedas, self-control and various other virtuous practices. (24) It is a matter for congratulation that the ideal of supreme devotion to the divine Lord of excellent renown—which is hard to attain even for sages—has been set up by you. (25) It is (further) gratifying (to note) that you (all) have sought the Supreme Person under the name of Śrī Kṛṣṇa neglecting (your) children, husbands and other relations, dwellings, nay, (your very) bodies. (26) Due to (your) separation (from the Lord) you have developed exclusive devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa (which has enabled you to behold Him in all that meets the eye). (Nay,) you have conferred a (great) boon on me (by thus affording me an opportunity to witness your unprecedented love with my own eyes), O highly blessed ones ! (27) (Now) listen to the message of your Darling (Śrī Kṛṣṇa), which (I am sure) will bring joy to you and carrying which I, who execute His secret commissions, have come (to you), O good ladies ! (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

भवतीनां वियोगो मे न हि सर्वात्मना क्वचित् । यथा भूतानि भूतेषु खं वाय्वग्निरजं मही ।

तथाहं च मनःप्राणभूतेन्द्रियगुणाश्रयः । २९ ।

आत्मन्येवात्मनाऽऽत्मानं सृजे हन्यनुपालये । आत्ममायानुभावेन भूतेन्द्रियगुणात्मना । ३० ।

आत्मा ज्ञानमयः शुद्धो व्यतिरिक्तोऽगुणान्वयः । सुषुप्तिस्वप्नजाग्रद्विमायावृत्तिभिर्यते । ३१ ।

येनेन्द्रियाश्चान् ध्यायेत मृषा स्वप्नदुत्थितः । तत्रिन्ध्यादिन्द्रियाणि विनिद्रः प्रत्यपद्यत । ३२ ।

एतदन्तः समाप्रायो योगः सांख्यं मनीषिणाम् । त्यागस्तपो दमः सत्यं समुद्रान्ता इवापगाः । ३३ ।

The glorious Lord says : Your separation from Me, the material cause of all (and therefore present in all as their very Self), is not possible under any circumstance. (Just) as the (five gross) elements—(viz.,) ether, the air, fire, water and earth—are present in (all) created beings (as their constituents), so am I, underlying as I do the mind, the vital airs, the elements, the Indriyas (the five senses of perception and the five organs of action) and the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti). (29) In Myself (as the ground) do I create, maintain and (then) dissolve Myself (in the form of the cosmos) by dint of My own Māyā (creative energy) by Myself in the form of the elements, the Indriyas and the Guṇas. (30) The Spirit is all knowledge, transcendent, unconnected with the (three) Guṇas and (absolutely) pure (untainted by Māyā). It is experienced through the (various) states of the mind (viz., wakefulness, the dream state and deep sleep), brought about by Māyā. (31) Remaining vigilant (all the time), one should (therefore endeavour to) control that mind through which one conceives the (various) objects of sense (viz., sound, touch, sight, taste and smell), though unreal—like one who, when awake, recalls the objects seen in a dream—and seizes the senses. (32) In the eyes of the wise, (the teachings of) the Vedas, the (eightfold) path of Yoga, the Sāṅkhya system of philosophy (which differentiates Matter from the Spirit), renunciation, suffering hardships for the sake of one's faith, subjugation of one's senses and truthfulness have their goal in mind-control even as rivers terminate in the ocean. (33)

यत्त्वं भवतीनां वै दूरे वर्तं प्रियो दृशाम् । मनसः सन्निकर्षार्थं मदनुध्यानकाय्यया । ३४ ।

यथा दूरचरे प्रेष्ठे मन आविश्य वर्तते । स्त्रीणां च न तथा चेतः सन्निकृष्टेऽक्षिणोचरे । ३५ ।

मय्यावेश्य मनः कुतश्च विमुक्ताशेषवृत्ति यत् । अनुस्मरन्त्यो मां नित्यमचिरान्तामुपैष्यथ । ३६ ।

या मया क्रीडता रात्र्यां वनेऽस्मिन् ब्रज आस्थिताः । अलव्यरासाः कल्याण्यो माऽऽमुमुक्षुर्द्विर्वाचितया । ३७ ।

It is only with intent to focus your thought constantly on Me in order to ensure your mental proximity with Me that I, your Darling, am actually staying (so) far from your eyes. (34) The mind of women as well as of others does not get so absorbed in the thought of their most beloved one living close by and open to their view as in that of one staying at a distance. (35) Incessantly thinking of Me (as you do), having devoted to Me your whole (undivided) mind, which has completely shed all (other) thoughts, you will come to Me before long. (36) Those blessed (cowherd) women who (having been held back by their husbands and others) stayed away in Vraja and could not (therefore) get an opportunity to sport with Me while I diverted myself in the woodland (of Vṛndavana) one night attained to Me through contemplation on My exploits. (37)

श्रीशुक उवाच

एवं प्रियतमादिष्टमाकर्ण्य ब्रजयोषितः । ता ऊचुर्द्वंद्वं प्रीतास्तत्सन्देशागतस्मृतीः । ३८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Delighted to hear the message of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (their most beloved Lord), the aforesaid women of Vraja spoke to Uddhava (as follows), their memories of Śrī Kṛṣṇa having been awakened by His message. (38)

गोप्य ऊचुः

दिष्ट्याहितो हतः कंसो यदुनां सानुगोऽयकृत् । दिष्ट्याऽऽर्पैर्लब्धसर्वाथैः कुशल्यास्तेऽच्युतोऽधुना । ३९ ।

कश्चिद् गदाग्रजः सौम्य करोति पुरयोषिताम् । प्रीति नः त्रिगुणसत्रीडहासोदारक्षणाचिंतः । ४० ।

कथं रतिविशेषज्ञः प्रियश्च वरयोषिताम् । नानुब्रध्येत तद्वाक्यैर्विभ्रमैश्चानुभाजितः । ४१ ।

अपि स्मरति नः साधो गोविन्दः प्रस्तुते क्वचित् । गोष्ठीमध्ये पुरस्त्रीणां ग्राम्याः स्वैरकथान्तरे । ४२ ।

ताः किं निशाः स्मरति यासु तदा प्रियाभिर्वृन्दावने कुमुदकुन्दशङ्करम्ये ।

रेमे कण्ठरनूपुरासगोष्ठ्यामस्माभिरीडीतमनोज्ञकथः कदाचित् । ४३ ।

अप्येष्यतीह दशार्हस्तप्ताः स्वकृतया शुचा । सङ्गीवयन् नु नो गार्त्रयथेन्द्रो वनमय्युदः । ४४ ।

कस्मात् कृष्ण इहायाति प्राप्तारान्यो हताहितः । नरेन्द्रकन्या उद्वाह्य प्रीतः सर्वसुहृद्वृत्तः । ४५ ।

किमस्माभिर्वनौकोभिरन्याभिर्वा महात्मनः । श्रीपतेराप्तकामस्य क्रियेतार्थः कृतात्मनः । ४६ ।

परं सौख्यं हि नैराश्यं स्वैरिण्यप्याह पिङ्गला । तज्जानतीनां नः कृष्णे तथाप्याशा दुरत्यया । ४७ ।

क उस्तहेत सन्यक्तुमुत्तमश्लोकसंविदम् । अनिच्छतोऽपि यस्य श्रीरङ्गाच्च चयवते क्वचित् । ४८ ।

सरिच्छैलवनोद्देशा गावो वेणुरवा इमे । सङ्कर्षणसहायेन कृष्णोनाचरिताः प्रभो । ४९ ।

पुनः पुनः स्मारयन्ति नन्दगोपसुतं बत । श्रीनिकेतैस्तत्पदकैर्विस्मृतुं नैव शक्नुमः । ५० ।

गत्या ललितयोदराहासलीलावलोकनैः । माध्व्या गिरा हतधियः कथं न विस्मरामहे । ५१ ।

हे नाथ हे रमानाथ ब्रजनाथार्तिनाशन । मग्नमुदुर गोविन्द गोकुलं वृजिनार्णवात् । ५२ ।

The Gopīs said : By good-luck Kāṁsa, the (sworn) enemy and persecutor of the Yadus, has been killed alongwith his followers. It is a matter for (further) gratification that Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord) is now doing well with His relations, who have attained all their objects (through Him). (39) (Others said), Does Śrī Kṛṣṇa (elder Brother of Gada), who was (till the other day) greeted (by us) with our loving and pleasing glances accompanied by bashful smiles, bring delight to the women of the city (of Mathurā), O gentle one? (40) (Still others said,) How can He, an expert in love-making and (hence) beloved of charming women, help being won over (by them) when greeted with their (sweet) words and amorous gestures? (41) (Some more said,) Does Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows), O pious one, remember us, rustic women, in any context in the course of an unreserved talk in an assembly of the ladies of the city ? (42) (Others said,) Does He (ever) recall those nights, during that period (of His stay in Vraja), when He sported with (us) His sweethearts in (the woodland of) Vṛndāvana, charming with lilies and jasmynes as well as with a full moon (bearing a spot resembling the figure of a hare) in the ring of the Rāsa dance accompanied by the sound of jingling anklets, in the course of which His delightful stories were sung (by us)? (43) Will Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Daśārha) ever come over here to infuse new life into us—tormented (as we are) with grief occasioned by (separation from) Him—by (the soothing touch of) His (delightful) limbs even as Indra (the god of rain) would refresh a forest (scorched with summer heat) by (sending) clouds (of rain)? (44) (Still others said,) Wherefore should Śrī Kṛṣṇa come here now that He has slain His enemies and attained sovereignty and, surrounded by all His kinsmen (the Yadus), will feel (extremely) delighted when He has married (so many) princesses? (45) (Some more wisely said,) What purpose of the high-souled Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Spouse of Śrī), who has (all) His desires fulfilled and is (ever) perfect in His (own) Self, could be served by us, dwelling in a forest, or (even) by other ladies (of royal descent)? (46) Even Pīṅgalā, a wanton woman (of the legend), (once) spoke of hopelessness as the only road to supreme happiness. Though we know (all) that, our hope to meet Śrī Kṛṣṇa is nevertheless hard to overcome. (47) Who can dare withdraw his mind from the confidential talk of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who is extolled by the most high, nay,) from whose person (bosom) Śrī (the goddess of beauty and prosperity) never gets down even though He does not long for Her ? (48) Alas ! the river (Yamunā), the mountain (Govardhana) and the forest lands (of Vṛndāvana), the cows and the notes of flutes over there, hallowed (as they are) by Śrī Kṛṣṇa coupled with Saṅkarṣaṇa (through association with Them), O mighty Uddhava, awaken again and again the memory of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Son of Nanda, the cowherd chief) through His footprints, the abodes of (all) charm and prosperity. Surely we cannot (therefore) forget Him. (49-50) How can we forget Him—O Uddhava, we, whose mind has been captivated by His charming gait, pleasing laughter and playful glances as well as by His honeyed words? (51) O Lord, O Spouse of Rāmā, O Saviour of Vraja, O Reliever of (our) agony, O Protector of cows, lift (the village of) Gokula out of the ocean of suffering, in which it lies plunged. (52)

श्रीगुक् उवाच

ततस्ताः कृष्णसन्देशैर्व्यपेतविरहज्वराः । उद्धवं पूजयाञ्चकुर्वात्वाऽऽत्मानमधोक्षजम् । ५३ ।

उवास कतिचिन्मासान् गोपीनां विनुदञ्छुचः । कृष्णलीलाकथां गायन् रमयामास गोकुलम् । ५४ ।

यावन्त्यहानि नन्दस्य ब्रजोऽवात्सीत् स उद्धवः । ब्रजौकसां क्षणप्रायाण्यासन् कृष्णस्य वार्तया । ५५ ।

सरिद्धनगिरिद्रोणीर्वीक्षन् कुसुमितान् द्रुमान् । कृष्णं संस्मारयन् रेमे हरिदासो ब्रजौकसाम् । ५६ ।

Śrī Śuka went on : The Gopis, whose agony of separation (from the Lord) was (now) gone to a large extent, thanks to the messages received from Śrī Kṛṣṇa, (duly) worshipped Uddhava, recognizing him to be Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself (who is above sense-perception) and (therefore) their very Self. (53) He stayed for some months (there) in order to drive away the grief of the cowherd women. (Nay,) celebrating in song the story of the pastimes of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, he brought delight to (the entire village of) Gokula. (54) As long as the aforesaid Uddhava lived in Nanda's Vraja the days passed like (so many) moments with the people of Vraja in talks about Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (55) Eagerly observing the river, the woodlands and the dales as well as the trees in blossom and vividly reminding the inhabitants of Vraja of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (by questioning them about the pastimes connected with the various spots), Uddhava (the servant of Śrī Kṛṣṇa) spent his time in delight. (56)

दृष्ट्वैवपादि गोपीनां कृष्णवेशात्मविक्रमम् । उद्धवः परमप्रीतस्ता नमस्यन्निदं जगौ । ५७ ।

एताः परं तनुभूतो भुवि गोपवधो गोविन्द एव निखिलात्मनि रूढभावाः ।
 वाञ्छन्ति यद् भवभियो मुनयो वयं च किं ब्रह्मजन्मभिरनन्तकथारसस्य । ५८ ।
 क्रेमाः स्त्रियो वनचरीर्व्यभिचारदुष्टाः कृष्णे क्व चैष परमात्मनि रूढभावः ।
 नन्वीश्वरोऽनुभजतोऽविदुषोऽपि साक्षाच्छ्रेयस्तनोत्यगदराज इवोपयुक्तः । ५९ ।
 नायं श्रियोऽङ्ग उ नितान्तरतेः प्रसादः स्वयोषितां नलिनगन्धरुचां कुतोऽन्याः ।
 रासोत्सवेऽस्य भुजदण्डगृहीतकण्ठलब्धाशिषां य उदगाद् ब्रजवल्लवीनाम् । ६० ।
 आसामहो चरणरेणुजुषामहं स्यां वृन्दावने किमपि गुल्मलतौषधीनाम् ।
 या दुस्त्यजं स्वजनमार्यपथं च हित्वा भेजुर्मुकुन्दपदवीं श्रुतिभिर्विमृश्याम् । ६१ ।
 या वै श्रियाचिन्तमजादिभिराप्तकामैर्योगेश्वरैरपि यदात्मनि रासगोष्ठ्याम् ।
 कृष्णस्य तद् भगवतश्चरणारविन्दं न्यस्तं स्तनेषु विजहः परिरेभ्य तापम् । ६२ ।

वन्दे नन्दब्रजस्त्रीणां पादरेणुमभीक्ष्णशः । यासां हरिकथोद्गीतं पुनाति भुवनत्रयम् । ६३ ।

Supremely delighted to perceive the anguish of mind—as depicted before* and of an allied nature—of the Gopis, occasioned by their absorbing thought of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, and bowing to them (in reverence), Uddhava sang as follows :—(57) "These cowerd women alone on earth have justified their possessing a human body in that they have developed supreme love exclusively for Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Protector of cows), the Soul of the universe—(a love) which not only strivers afraid of metempsychosis but sages (emancipated souls), nay, (even) we (devotees of the Lord) aspire for ? What (else) is there to be gained through (three kinds of)† births as a Brāhmaṇa by him who has developed a taste for the stories of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the deathless Lord)? (Or what is to be gained through repeated births as Brahmā by him who has not been able to develop a zest for such stories ?‡ (58) The two are quite out of keeping with one another—these women (impure by their very sex), roaming about in woods and polluted (in the eyes of adverse critics) through infidelity to their (worldly) husbands, (on the one hand) and surpassing (unflinching) love for Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Spirit, as depicted above (on the other)! Surely the almighty Lord, directly and liberally confers (final) beatitude on him who constantly remembers Him, though not knowing His reality, (just) as nectar (the sovereign of all medicines) does good (to an ailing person) when used (even unknowingly). (59) Oh, the grace which descended on the cowherdesses of Vraja—who attained the object of their desire in the form of having their necks encircled by His stout arms during the Rāsa festival—did not fall to the lot of celestial damsels (nymphs) possessing the fragrance and splendour of a lotus, or (even) of Śrī, who is exclusively attached to His person (bosom); how (then) could others expect such favour (from Him) ? (60) Oh, let me be (incarnated as) anyone of the shrubs, creepers or herbs in (the woodlands of) Vṛndāvana, catching the dust of feet of these (blessed ladies), who (successfully) trod the path (of Devotion) leading to Śrī Kṛṣṇa—(the path) which is (still) to be strenuously sought for (even) by the Upaniṣads$—

* Vide verses 4 to 21 and 39 to 52 Supra.

† The three kinds of birth as a Brāhmaṇa are :—(1) physical birth from Brāhmaṇa parents, (2) investiture with the sacred thread and initiation in the holy Gayatrī-Mantra, which is regarded as a second birth and (3) consecration befitting one for the performance of a sacrifice, which is looked upon as a third incarnation.

‡ The compound word 'अनन्तकथारसस्य' can be split up in two ways—firstly as अनन्त + कथा + रसस्य and secondly as अनन्त + कथा - रसस्य. The word 'Brahma' too admits of a double meaning. The alternative interpretation of the last quarter of the verse according to the latter way of splitting the compound has been shown within brackets.

$This evidently refers to the Upanishadic text 'यती वाचो निर्वर्तने अग्राय यनसा मर' which tells us that "words (scriptural texts) fail to reach Brahma and return (unsuccessful) along with the mind."

neglecting their own people as well as the path trodden by the virtuous, (both of) which are (so) difficult to abandon (for a chaste woman). (61) (Nay,) these Gopis completely shook off their agony (of separation from the Lord), embracing (as they did) those lotus-feet of the divine Śrī Kṛṣṇa which are actually fondled by Goddess Śrī and mentally adored by (great gods like) Brahmā and others, sages that have (all) their desires fulfilled (and are therefore free from all cravings), (nay,) even by masters of Yoga (like Śiva, Sanaka and Nārada), and which were (lovingly) placed (by the Lord) on their bosom in the gathering (of women) on the occasion of the Rāsa dance! (62) I repeatedly salute the dust of feet of the (blessed) women of Nanda's Vraja, whose loud singing of the stories of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (who captivates all) purifies the three worlds." (63)

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ गोपीरनुज्ञाय यशोदां नन्दमेव च। गोपानामन्य दाशार्हो यास्यन्नारुहे रथम्। ६४।
तं निरतं समासाद्य नानोपायनपाणयः। नन्दादयोऽनुरागेण प्रावोचन्नश्रुलोचनाः। ६५।
मनसो वृत्तयो नः स्युः कृष्णपादाम्बुजाश्रयाः। वाचोऽभिधायिनीनां प्रां कायस्तत्प्रहृणादिषु। ६६।
कर्मभिर्भ्राम्यमाणानां यत्र क्वापीश्वरेच्छया। मङ्गलाचरितैर्दानं रतिनः कृष्ण ईश्वरे। ६७।
एवं सभाजितो गोपैः कृष्णभक्त्या नराधिप। उद्धवः पुनरागच्छन्मथुरां कृष्णपालिताम्। ६८।
कृष्णाय प्रणिपत्याह भक्त्युद्रेकं ब्रजौकसाम्। वसुदेवाय रामाय राज्ञे चोपायनान्यदात्। ६९।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंसां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे उद्धवप्रतियोगे सप्तचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः ॥७॥

Śrī Śuka proceeded further : Seeking the permission of the cowherd women as well as of Yaśodā and Nanda, and taking leave of the cowherds, Uddhava (a scion of Daśārha), now ready to depart (for Mathurā) mounted the chariot. (64) Duly approaching him, when he had (just) stepped out (of Nanda's mansion), with various presents (intended for Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma) in their hands, Nanda and others lovingly addressed him in feeling terms (as follows) with tears in their eyes:—(65) "Let (all) the activities of our mind (ever) hinge on the lotus-feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa. Let our speech utter His names (alone) and let our body remain engaged in bending before Him and so on. (66) Being tossed by our (past) actions coupled with the will of Providence (as guided by those actions) wherever (in whatever species of life) we may be, let our delight be (ever) found in the almighty Śrī Kṛṣṇa as a result of our virtuous actions and charitable gifts (that may have been performed by us in our past lives)." (67) Thus honoured by the cowherds out of devotion to Śrī Kṛṣṇa, O ruler of men, Uddhava came back to Mathurā (which was now) protected by (the same Lord) Śrī Kṛṣṇa. (68) Falling prostrate before Śrī Kṛṣṇa he spoke (to Him) of the plenitude of devotion (to His feet) of the people of Vraja and handed over the presents (sent by Nanda) to Him as well as to Vasudeva, Balarāma and the king (Ugrasenā). (69)

Thus ends the forty-seventh discourse, bearing on the return of Uddhava (to Mathurā), in the first half of Book Ten of the great and glorious Bhāgavata-Puṇaṇa, otherwise known as the Paramahansa-Saṁhitā.

अथाष्टचत्वारिंशोऽध्यायः

Discourse XLVIII

The Lord pays a visit to Kubjā (the hunchbacked woman) and Akrūra at
- their respective places

श्रीशुक उवाच

अथ विज्ञाय भगवान् सर्वात्मा सर्वदर्शनः । सैरन्ध्र्याः कामतप्तायाः प्रियमिच्छन् गृहं ययौ । १ ।

महाहोपस्कैराढ्यं कामोपायोपबृंहितम् । मुक्तादामपताकाभिर्वितानशयनासनैः ।

धूपैः सुरभिभिर्दीपैः स्वगन्धैरपि मण्डितम् । २ ।

गृहं तमायान्तमवेक्ष्य साऽऽसनात् सद्यः समुत्थाय हि जातसम्प्रया ।

यथोपसङ्गम्य सखीभिरच्युते सभाजयामास सदासनादिभिः । ३ ।

तथोद्धवः साधु तयाभिपूजितो न्यषीददुर्व्यामभिमृश्य चासनम् ।

कृष्णोऽपि तूर्णं शयनं महाधनं विवेश लोकाचरितान्यनुव्रतः । ४ ।

सा मज्जनालेपदुकूलभूषणस्वगन्धताम्बूलसुधासवादिभिः ।

प्रसाधितात्मोपससार माधवं सम्रीडलीलोत्पितविभ्रमेक्षितैः । ५ ।

आहूय कान्तां नवसङ्गमहिषा विशङ्कितां कङ्कणभूषिते करे ।

प्रगृह्य शय्यामधिवेद्य रामया रेमेऽनुलेपापणपुण्यलेशया । ६ ।

सानङ्गतप्रकुचयोरुरसस्तथाक्षणोर्जिघ्रन्त्यनन्तचरणेन रुजो मृजन्ती ।

दोर्ध्यां स्तनान्तरगतं परिरथ्य कान्तमानन्दमूर्तिमज्जादतिदीर्घतापम् । ७ ।

सैवं कैवल्यनाथं तं प्राप्य दुष्प्रापमीश्वरम् । अङ्गरागार्पणेनाहो दुर्भगेदमयाचत । ८ ।

आहोष्यतामिह प्रेष्ठ दिनानि कतिचिन्मया । रमस्व नोत्सहे त्यक्तं सङ्कं तेऽम्बुरुहेक्षण । ९ ।

तस्यै कामवरं दत्त्वा मानयित्वा च मानदः । सहोद्धवेन सर्वेशः स्वधामागमदर्चितम् । १० ।

दुराराध्यं समाराध्य विष्णुं सर्वेश्वरेश्वरम् । यो वृणीते मनोऽग्राह्यमसत्तात् कुमनीष्यसौ । ११ ।

Śrī Śuka began again : Perceiving what was in the mind of Trivakrā (the erstwhile maid-servant of Kāṁsā), smitten (as she was) with (pangs of) love (for Śrī Kṛṣṇa), and seeking her gratification, the all-seeing Lord, the Soul of the universe, then called at her house, (which was) equipped with costly articles of household use and supplemented by devices stimulating passion (such as erotic pictures), nay, embellished with strings of pearls and flags, canopies, beds and seats as well as with fragrant incenses, lights, wreaths and perfumes. (1-2) Seized with a flurry, as a matter of fact, to perceive Him coming to her house, she stood up at once from her seat and, meeting Him with due ceremony along with her female companions, honoured Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the unfailing Lord) by offering Him a good seat and other articles of worship. (3) Duly honoured by her in a like manner, Uddhava squatted on the floor touching the seat (offered by her) with his head. Following the practices of the worldly-minded, Śrī Kṛṣṇa, for His part, quickly settled down on the costly bed (already placed there). (4) Duly preparing herself with a bath, pigments, fine linen, jewellery, garlands, perfumes, betel-leaves chewed with catechu, lime and areca-nut parings etc., nectar-like beverage and so on, she approached Śrī Kṛṣṇa (a scion of Madhu) with shy looks accompanied by sportful smiles and amorous gestures. (5) Calling (to His side) the lovely damsel, timid (as she was) through bashfulness occasioned by her (very) first meeting (with a lover), and seizing her by the hand, adorned with a bracelet, the Lord set her on the bed and dallied with the charming girl, her only merit (entitling her to this rare privilege and honour) being that she had (willingly) offered (to Him) sandal-paste (which was meant for Kāṁsa, her master, who had a special liking for it). (6) Enjoying the (transcendent) smell of His feet and brushing off the suffering of her breasts, bosom and eyes—tormented (as they were) with pangs of love—by the (soothing and thrilling) touch of the feet of Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the immortal Lord), she folded in her arms the all-blissful Darling, who (now) rested on her bosom, and (thereby) got rid of her agony (of separation from Him) of very long standing. (7) Alas ! having thus secured by offering pigment the presence of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the almighty Lord, the Bestower of final beatitude, (who is) so difficult to attain, the hapless woman (unlike the blessed Gopis, who dedicated their all to Him and sought nothing in return) asked (of Him) the following (viz., the gratification of her carnal desire, although her physical contact alone with the all-blissful and all-powerful Lord was enough to ensure for her the highest blessing in the form of final beatitude). (8) She said, "(Be pleased to) stay here (in my house) for a few days and make merry with me, my most beloved friend, (for) I dare not forgo your company, O lotus-eyed one !" (9) Granting her the desired boon (in the shape of a promise to revel with her again) and honouring her (with suitable presents and polite words and thereby acknowledging her service). Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the Ruler of all), who respects (the wishes of) all, returned with Uddhava to His own abode (Vasudeva's house), (which was) full of prosperity.) (10) He who, having duly propitiated Śrī Kṛṣṇa (the all-pervading Lord), the Ruler (even) of universal lords (Brahmā, Śiva and others), who is so hard to please (except through exclusive Devotion), asks for that which is acceptable (agreeable) to the mind is of perverted understanding because of his pettiness. (11)

अक्रूरभवनं कृष्णः सहारामोद्धवः प्रभुः । किञ्चिच्चिकीर्षयन् प्रागादक्रूरप्रियकाम्यया । १२ ।
 स तान् नरवरश्रेष्ठानाराद वीक्ष्य स्वबन्धवान् । प्रत्युत्थाय प्रमुदितः परिषृज्याभ्यनन्दत । १३ ।
 ननाम कृष्णं रामं च स तैरप्यभिवादितः । पूजयामास विधिवत् कृतस्मनपरिग्रहान् । १४ ।
 पादावनेजनीरापो धारयञ्छिरसा नृप । अर्हणेनाम्बरैर्दिव्यैर्गन्धस्वभूषणोत्तमैः । १५ ।
 अर्वित्वा शिरसाऽऽनम्य पादावङ्कगतौ मृजन् । प्रश्रयावनतोऽक्रूरः कृष्णरामावभाषत । १६ ।
 दिष्ट्या पापो हतः कंसः सानुगो वामिदं कुलम् । भवद्भ्यामुद्धृतं कृच्छ्राद् दुरन्ताद्य समेधितम् । १७ ।
 युवां प्रधानपुरुषौ जगद्दधेत् जगन्मयी । भवद्भ्यां न विना किञ्चित् परमस्ति न चापरम् । १८ ।
 आत्मसृष्टिदिं विश्वमन्वाविश्य स्वशक्तिभिः । ईयते बहुधा ब्रह्मन् श्रुतप्रत्यक्षगोचरम् । १९ ।
 यथा हि भूतेषु चराचरेषु महादयो योनिषु भान्ति नाना ।
 एवं भवान् केवल आत्मयोनिष्ठात्माऽऽत्मतन्त्रो बहुधा विभाति । २० ।
 सृजत्यथो लुप्तसि पासि विश्वं रजस्तमःसत्त्वगुणैः स्वशक्तिभिः ।
 न बन्धसे तद्गुणकर्मभिर्वा ज्ञानात्मनस्ते क्व च बन्धहेतुः । २१ ।
 देहाद्युपाधेरनिरूपितत्वाद् भवो न साक्षात्त्र भिदाऽऽत्मनः स्यात् ।
 अतो न बन्धस्तव नैव मोक्षः स्यात् न निकामस्त्वयि नोऽविवेकः । २२ ।
 त्वयोदितोऽयं जगतो हिताय यदा यदा वेदपथः पुराणः ।
 बाधेत पाखण्डपथैरसद्भिस्तदा भवान् सत्त्वगुणं विभर्ति । २३ ।
 स त्वं प्रभोऽद्य वसुदेवगृहेऽवतीर्णः स्वांशेन भारमपनेतुमिहासि भूमेः ।

अक्षौहिणीशतवधेन सुरेतरांशराज्ञामपुष्य च कुलस्य यशो वितन्वन् । २४ ।
 अद्येश नो वसतयः खलु भूरिभागा यः सर्वदेवपितृभूतनुदेवमूर्तिः ।
 यत्पादशौचसलिलं त्रिजगत् पुनाति स त्वं जगद्गुरुधोक्षज याः प्रविष्टः । २५ ।
 कः पण्डितस्त्वदपरं शरणं समीयाद् भक्तप्रियादृतगिरः सुहृदः कृतज्ञात् ।
 सर्वान् ददाति सुहृदो भजतोऽभिकापानात्मानमप्युपचयापचयौ न यस्य । २६ ।
 दिष्ट्या जनार्दन भवानिह नः प्रतीतो योगेश्वररपि दुरापगतिः सुरेशः ।
 छिन्ध्याद् नः सुतकलत्रधनात्प्रेहदेहादिमोहरशानं भवदीयमायाम् । २७ ।

Wishing to get Akrūra do some errand (of His) and (also) with intent to oblige him Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa, accompanied by Balarāma and Uddhava, visited in state the residence of Akrūra. (12) Overjoyed to perceive from a distance the aforesaid jewels among the best of men, (who were) his own relations, and rising (from his seat) to receive them, he (went up to,) embraced and welcomed them. (13) (Nay, recalling Their divinity) he bowed to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma (in spite of Their young age) and, greeted by Them too (in return), duly worshipped Them, who had (now) taken Their seat. (14) Sprinkling over his head in every direction the water with which he had washed Their feet, O protector of men, and honouring Them with (various) articles of worship, as well as with exquisite robes, sandal-paste, garlands and excellent jewels, Akrūra, who was (already) bent low with humility, bowed down to Them with his head (inclined) and, kneading Their feet, that rested on his lap, spoke to Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma (as follows):—(15-16) "Luckily (enough) by You two the sinful Kāṁsa has been slain alongwith his followers and this race of Yours not only saved from a calamity which was hard to get over but made to prosper (too). (17) You two are Prakṛti (primordial Matter) and Puruṣa (the Spirit), the (material and efficient) causes (respectively) of the universe and you with the universe (too). There in neither any cause nor any effect apart from You two. (18) Entering after its creation (as its Inner Controller) this universe, evolved by Yourself through the instrumentality of Your own potencies (in the shape of Rajoguṇa etc.), O Kṛṣṇa (the supreme Lord), You are perceived in various forms within the range of hearing and sight. (19) Even as the (five) elements (earth etc.), appear in various forms in (the diverse orders of) created beings, (both) mobile and immobile, the media of their manifestation, so do You, the absolute Self, (entirely) self-dependent, appear in numberless forms in the various worlds (the fields of Your manifestation). (20) Through the instrumentality of Your own potencies in the shape of the (three) Guṇas (modes of Prakṛti)—Rajas, Sattva and Tamas—You (severally) evolve, then protect (preserve) and (ultimately) reabsorb the universe. You are (however) not bound by those Guṇas or (even) by those actions (in the form of creation, protection and reabsorption of the universe). Under no circumstance whatsoever can ignorance (the cause of bondage) be attributed to You, who are Consciousness itself. (21) A body and other adjuncts (that are supposed to limit the Self or Consciousness) being unascertained (through metaphysical investigation), birth and differences (following it) cannot be directly ascribed to the Spirit (much less to You, the Supreme Spirit). Hence there can be neither bondage nor liberation for You. What appears as bondage or liberation in You is (only superimposed by) our ignorance about You and a reflection of our (own) mind. (22) Each time this dateless path of the Vedas taught by You for the good of the world is obstructed by false creeds of a heretical type, You assume (for the vindication of the Vedic path) a form consisting of Sattva (unmixed with Rajas and Tamas). (23) As such, O Lord, You are born this time in the house of Vasudeva here (on this planet) with Your own part manifestation (Balarāma) in order to remove the earth's burden by destroying hundreds of Akṣauhiṇis of kings who are partial incarnations of demons and in order to spread the glory of this race (the race of the Yadus). (24) Highly blessed indeed are our dwellings today, that You, O Lord who are above sense-perception, have visited—You, the well-known Father and Preceptor of the universe, manifested in the form of all the gods, manes, spirits and kings (the rulers of men)—the waters washing whose feet (under the name of the Gaṅgā) sanctify (all) the three worlds. (25) What wise man would seek as his protector anyone other than You, who are (so) truthful of speech, friendly, grateful and loving to Your votaries, and who grant all the desires of a pure-hearted devotee, nay, bestow on him Your very Self, to which neither growth nor decay can be attributed. (26) Luckily enough (for us), O Lord who are supplicated by (all) meñ, You have been perceived by us here (at our very house)—You, whose ways cannot be easily comprehended even by masters of Yoga (like Sanaka) and rulers of gods (like Indra). (Pray,) dispel at once Your Māyā (enchantment) in the shape of ties of attachment to our children, wife, wealth, relations, houses, body and so on.⁸ (27)

श्रीशुक उवाच

इत्यर्चितः संस्तुतश्च भक्तेन भगवान् हरिः । अक्रूरं सस्मितं प्राह गीर्भिः सम्मोहयन्निव । २८ ।

Śrī Śuka continued : Thus honoured and glorified by His devotee, Lord Śrī Hari smilingly replied to Akrūra (as follows), enchanting him as it were by His (sweet and polite) words. (28)

श्रीभगवानुवाच

त्वं नो गुरुः पितृव्यश्च श्लाघ्यो बन्धुश्च नित्यदा । वयं तु रक्ष्याः पोष्याश्च अनुकम्प्याः प्रजा हि वः । २९ ।
भवाद्बिधा महाभागा निषेव्या अहंसत्तमाः । श्रेयस्कार्मैर्भूमिर्नित्यं देवाः स्वार्था न साधवः । ३० ।
न ह्यमयानि तीर्थानि न देवा मृच्छिलामयाः । ते पुनन्त्युरुक्कालेन दर्शनादेव साधवः । ३१ ।
स भवान् सुहृदां वै नः श्रेयाश्चैयश्चिकीर्षया । जिज्ञासार्थं पाण्डवानां गच्छस्व त्वं गजाह्वयम् । ३२ ।
पितर्युपरते बालाः सह मात्रा सुदुःखिताः । आनीताः स्वपुरं राज्ञा वसन्त इति शृश्रुम् । ३३ ।
तेषु राजाम्बिकापुत्रो भ्रातृपुत्रेषु दीनधीः । समो न वर्तते नूनं दुष्पुत्रवशगोऽन्यदृक् । ३४ ।
गच्छ जानीहि तद्वृत्तमधुना साध्वसाधु वा । विज्ञाय तद् विधास्यामो यथा शं सुहृदां भवेत् । ३५ ।
इत्यक्रूरं समादिश्य भगवान् हरिरीश्वरः । सङ्कर्षणोद्धवाभ्यां वै ततः स्वभवनं ययौ । ३६ ।

इति श्रीमद्भागवते महापुराणे पारमहंस्यां संहितायां दशमस्कन्धे पूर्वार्धे अष्टयन्तारिशोऽध्यायः । ४८ ।

