रावणस्य सुताः सर्वे मुण्डास्तैलसमुक्षिताः ।
वराहेण दशग्रीवः शिशुमारेण चेन्द्रजित् ॥ ३१ ॥
उष्ट्रेण कुम्भकर्णश्च प्रयातो दक्षिणां दिशम् ।
एकस्तत्र मया दृष्टः श्वेतच्छत्रो विभीषणः ॥ ३२ ॥
शुक्लमाल्याम्बरधरः शुक्लगन्धानुलेपनः ।
शङ्खदुन्दुभिनिर्घोषैर्नृत्तगीतैरलंकृतः ॥ ३३ ॥
आरुह्य शैलसंकाशं मेघस्तनितनिःस्वनम् ।
चतुर्दन्तं गजं दिव्यमास्ते तत्र विभीषणः ॥ ३४ ॥
चतुर्भिः सचिवैः सार्धं वैहायसमुपस्थितः ॥ ३५ ॥

"All the sons of Rāvaṇa too were seen by me with shaven heads and bathed in oil. Nay, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, departed in a southerly direction on the back of a boar, his eldest son Meghanāda (the conqueror of Indra) too on the back of a dolphin and Kumbhakarna on the back of a camel. In that dream Vibhiṣaṇa, Rāvaṇa's youngest brother, alone was seen by me shaded with a white canopy, dressed in white and wearing a white garland, nay, smeared with white sandal-paste. Hailed with blasts of conch-shells and the beating of kettledrums as well as with dances and songs, Vibhiṣaṇa stood there in the air mounted on a four-tusked celestial elephant closely resembling a hill and trumpeting like thunder, with four ministers.

(31—35)

समाजश्च महान् वृत्तो गीतवादित्रनिःस्वनः ।
पिबतां रक्तमाल्यानां रक्षसां रक्तवाससाम् ॥ ३६ ॥

"A large assemblage, distinguished by the sound of vocal and instrumental music, of ogres, clad in red and adorned with red garlands and drinking oil, had also collected.

(36)

लङ्का चेयं पुरी रम्या सवाजिरथकुञ्जरा ।
सागरे पतिता दृष्टा भग्नगोपुरतोरेणा ॥ ३७ ॥

"Nay, this enchanting city of Laṅkā, horses, chariots and elephants and all, was seen by me fallen into the sea, its gateways and arches shattered.

(37)

लङ्का दृष्टा मया स्वप्ने रावणेनाभिरक्षिता ।

दग्धा रामस्य दूतेन वानरेण तरस्विना ॥ ३८ ॥

"Though protected on all sides by Rāvaṇa, Laṅkā was further seen by me in a different dream burnt up by an agile monkey, acting as an envoy of Śrī Rāma.

(38)

पीत्वा तैलं प्रमत्ताश्च प्रहसन्त्यो महास्वनाः ।

लङ्कायां भस्मरूक्षायां सर्वा राक्षसयोषितः ॥ ३९ ॥

"All the ogresses in Laṅkā, now arid with ashes, were seen drunk with oil and laughing heartily with great noise.

(39)

कुम्भकर्णादयश्चेमे सर्वे राक्षसपुंगवाः ।

रक्तं निवसनं गृह्य प्रविष्टा गोमयहृदम् ॥ ४० ॥

"Putting on a red attire of inferior quality, all these jewels among the ogres, Kumbhakarna and others, disappeared into a pool of cowdung.

(40)

अपगच्छत पश्यध्वं सीतामाप्नोति राघवः ।

घातयेत् परमामर्षी युष्मान् सार्धं हि राक्षसैः ॥ ४१ ॥

"Therefore, get away from this place and watch how Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, recovers Sītā. Supremely intolerant by nature, he will undoubtedly kill you all alongwith the ogres.

(41)

प्रियां बहुमतां भार्या वनवासमनुव्रताम् ।

भर्त्सितां तर्जितां वापि नानुमंस्यति राघवः ॥ ४२ ॥

"Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, would never tolerate his beloved and highly esteemed wife, who had followed him in his exile, to be reproached or threatened by you.

(42)

तदलं क्रूरवाक्यैश्च सान्त्वमेवाभिधीयताम् ।

अभियाचाम वैदेहीमेतद्धि मम रोचते ॥ ४३ ॥

"Therefore, have done with cruel words and let conciliatory words alone be spoken to her. Let us crave her forgiveness; for, this alone appeals to me.

(43)

यस्या ह्येवंविधः स्वजो दुःखितायाः प्रदृश्यते ।

सा दुःखैर्बहुभिर्मुक्ता प्रियं प्राप्नोत्यनुत्तमम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“Rid of her numerous woes, that wretched lady about whom such a dream has been vividly seen by me will undoubtedly attain her beloved and highest object. (44)

भर्त्सितामपि याचध्वं राक्षस्यः किं विवक्षया ।

राघवाद्धि भयं घोरं राक्षसानामुपस्थितम् ॥ ४५ ॥

“Beseech her forgiveness, O ogresses, even though she has been menaced by you. What will be gained through your anxiety to discuss the subject any more; for a terrible danger from Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) threatens the ogres. (45)

प्रणिपातप्रसन्ना हि मैथिली जनकात्मजा ।

अलमेषा परित्रातुं राक्षस्यो महतो भयात् ॥ ४६ ॥

“Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, daughter of Janaka, will get pleased with prostration alone. She is capable of shielding you from a terrible danger, O ogresses ! (46)

अपि चास्या विशालाक्ष्या न किञ्चिदुपलक्ष्ये ।

विरूपमपि चांगेषु सुसूक्ष्ममपि लक्षणम् ॥ ४७ ॥

“Furthermore, I do not notice in the limbs of this large-eyed lady any inauspicious mark, however minute, which may give indication of any mishap to her. (47)

छायावैगुण्यमात्रं तु शङ्के दुःखमुपस्थितम् ।

अदुःखार्हमिमां देवीं वैहायसमुपस्थिताम् ॥ ४८ ॥

“I, for my part, suspect that misfortune has befallen this godlike lady—who does not merit adversity and who mounted an aerial car in the dream seen by me—only in the shape of diminution of splendour occasioned by want of bath, toilet etc. (48)

अर्थसिद्धिं तु वैदेह्याः पश्याम्यहमुपस्थिताम् ।

राक्षसेन्द्रविनाशं च विजयं राघवस्य च ॥ ४९ ॥

“I, for my part, visualize the accomplishment of purpose of Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory to be at hand, as also the destruction of Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, and the triumph of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (49)

निमित्तभूतमेतत् तु श्रोतुमस्या महत् प्रियम् ।

दृश्यते च स्फुरच्चक्षुः पद्मपत्रमिवायतम् ॥ ५० ॥

“Nay, her left eye, large as a lotus-petal, is seen throbbing. This is surely a prognostication of her hearing a most pleasing news. (50)

ईषद्धि हृषितो वास्या दक्षिणाया हृदक्षिणः ।

अकस्मादेव वैदेह्या बाहुरेकः प्रकम्पते ॥ ५१ ॥

“Again, slightly thrilled, the left arm alone of this amiable lady, Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, is palpitating without any visible cause at all. (51)

करेणुहस्तप्रतिमः सव्यश्चोरुरनुत्तमः ।

वेपन् कथयतीवास्या राघवं पुरतः स्थितम् ॥ ५२ ॥

“Her most shapely left thigh, resembling the proboscis of an elephant, which is also pulsating, announces, as it were, the presence of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, standing in front of her. (52)

पक्षी च शाखानिलयं प्रविष्टः

पुनः पुनश्चोत्तमसान्त्ववादी ।

सुस्वागतां वाचमुदीरयाणः

पुनः पुनश्चोदयतीव हृष्टः ॥ ५३ ॥

“Nay, uttering excellent sweet notes again and again after entering its nest on the branch of a tree, a delighted bird is repeatedly urging Sītā, as it were, to rejoice, uttering, as it did, a note announcing the advent of an auspicious hour.” (53)

ततः सा ह्रीमती बाला भर्तुर्विजयहर्षिता ।

अवोचद् यदि तत् तथ्यं भवेयं शरणं हि वः ॥ ५४ ॥

Rejoiced at the prospect of her husband's triumph, that shy youthful lady thereupon said, “If that comes out to be true, I shall undoubtedly be your protector.” (54)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे सप्तविंशः सर्गः ॥ २७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-seven in the Sundarakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टाविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXVIII

The moment Sītā, who was unable to bear the reproaches and threats of the ogresses, endeavours after wailing a good deal to strangle herself to death with the cord used for tying her hair, a propitious omen, never seen before, appears on her person

सा राक्षसेन्द्रस्य वचो निशम्य
तद् रावणस्याप्रियमप्रियार्ता ।
सीता वितत्रास यथा वनान्ते
सिंहाभिपन्ना गजराजकन्या ॥ १ ॥

Recalling the aforesaid unpalatable threat of Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, the celebrated Sītā, who was already afflicted with separation from her beloved husband, got terrified even as the female calf of a lordly elephant fallen into the clutches of a lion on the edge of a forest. (1)

सा राक्षसीमध्यगता च भीरु- वर्गिभर्भृशं रावणतर्जिता च ।
कान्तारमध्ये विजने विसृष्टा
बालेव कन्या विललाप सीता ॥ २ ॥

Encircled by the ogresses and repeatedly intimidated with threats by Rāvaṇa, that timid lady, Sītā, began to wail as follows like a young girl abandoned in the heart of a lonely and thick forest: (2)

सत्यं बतेदं प्रवदन्ति लोके
नाकालमृत्युर्भवतीति सन्तः ।
यत्राहमेवं परिभर्त्स्यमाना
जीवामि यस्मात् क्षणमप्यपुण्या ॥ ३ ॥

"Truly do the wise affirm that death does not come in the world before the appointed hour, since I, devoid of merit that I am, survive even for a moment, though being reproached unsparingly in this way. (3)

सुखाद् विहीनं बहुदुःखपूर्णं- मिदं तु नूनं हृदयं स्थिरं मे ।
विदीर्यते यन्न सहस्रधाद्य
वज्राहतं शृंगमिवाचलस्य ॥ ४ ॥

"Though bereft of joy and full of great agony, my heart must be hard indeed in that it does not break into a thousand pieces this day like the crest of a mountain struck by lightning. (4)

नैवास्ति नूनं मम दोषमत्र
वध्याहमस्याप्रियदर्शनस्य ।
भावं न चास्याहमनुप्रदातु- मलं द्विजो मन्त्रमिवाद्विजाय ॥ ५ ॥

"Surely no blame whatsoever will attach to me if I give up the ghost at this juncture; for, I stand sentenced to death at the hands of this ogre of odious appearance. In any case, I am unable voluntarily to bestow my affection on him any more than a member of the twice-born classes would impart Vedic knowledge to one not belonging to the twice-born classes. (5)

तस्मिन्नागच्छति लोकनाथे
गर्भस्थजन्तोरिव शल्यकृन्तः ।
नूनं ममांगान्यचिरादनार्यः
शस्त्रैः शितैश्छेत्स्यति राक्षसेन्द्रः ॥ ६ ॥

"Even before Śrī Rāma, that ruler of the world, arrives here, the vile Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, will as surely cut my limbs to pieces in no time with his sharpened weapons even as a surgeon would cut the limbs of a lifeless foetus in order to facilitate its extraction from the womb under extraordinary circumstances when other contrivances to force it out prove abortive. (6)

दुःखं बतेदं ननु दुःखिताया
मासौ चिरायाभिगमिष्यतो द्वौ ।
बद्धस्य वध्यस्य यथा निशान्ते
राजोपरोधादिव तस्करस्य ॥ ७ ॥

“Alas, it is painful indeed that two months (on the expiry of which I am going to be killed by Rāvaṇa) will before long slip away past me, afflicted for long, even as the night at the end of which a thief, placed in fetters under the detention orders of a king is to be executed, passes away in his cell. (7)

हा राम हा लक्ष्मण हा सुमित्रे
हा राममातः सह मे जनन्यः ।
एषा विपद्याम्यहमल्पभाग्या
महार्णवे नौरिव मूढवाता ॥ ८ ॥

“O Rāma, O Lakṣmaṇa, O Sumitrā, O Kausalyā (Śrī Rāma’s mother) and alongwith these my own mothers too, I, a woman of scanty fortune, am going to perish like a bark caught in a whirlwind in mid-ocean. (8)

तरस्विनौ धारयता मृगस्य
सत्त्वेन रूपं मनुजेन्द्रपुत्रौ ।
नूनं विशस्तौ मम कारणात् तौ
सिंहर्षभौ द्वाविव वैद्युतेन ॥ ९ ॥

“Like a pair of excellent lions killed by a stroke of lightning, those two agile princes (Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa) were undoubtedly killed on my account by the being who had assumed the guise of a deer. (9)

नूनं स कालो मृगरूपधारी
मामल्पभाग्यां लुलुभे तदानीम् ।
यत्रार्यपुत्रौ विससर्ज मूढा
रामानुजं लक्ष्मणपूर्वजं च ॥ १० ॥

“It was surely the Time-Spirit, who, having assumed the form of a deer, beguiled me, a woman of scanty fortune that I am, at that time and to whom I, a stupid woman, despatched the two sons of my father-in-law, Lakṣmaṇa, a younger brother of Śrī Rāma, and Śrī Rāma, the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa. (10)

हा राम सत्यव्रत दीर्घबाहो
हा पूर्णचन्द्रप्रतिमानवक्त्र ।
हा जीवलोकस्य हितः प्रियश्च
वध्यां न मां वेत्ति हि राक्षसानाम् ॥ ११ ॥

“O Śrī Rāma of unfailing vows and long arms, whose countenance resembles the full moon, you, who are friendly to and beloved of the world of living beings, do not actually know me to have been sentenced to death by the king of ogres. (11)

अनन्यदेवत्वमियं क्षमा च
भूमौ च शय्या नियमश्च धर्मे ।
पतिव्रतात्वं विफलं ममेदं
कृतं कृतघ्नेष्विव मानुषाणाम् ॥ १२ ॥

“My devotion to a single deity in the form of my husband and this forbearance, nay, my reposing on the ground, and my observing rules of righteousness and loyalty to my husband—all this has proved futile like the service rendered by human beings to ungrateful men. (12)

मोघो हि धर्मश्चरितो ममायं
तथैकपत्नीत्वमिदं निरर्थकम् ।
या त्वां न पश्यामि कृशा विवर्णा
हीना त्वया संगमने निराशा ॥ १३ ॥

“Only in vain has this virtue been practised by me and this exclusive devotion of mine to my husband has also proved futile in that I do not behold you and, separated from you, have grown pale and emaciated and lost all hope of being reunited with you. (13)

पितुर्निदेशं नियमेन कृत्वा
वनान्निवृत्तश्चरितव्रतश्च ।
स्त्रीभिस्तु मन्ये विपुलेक्षणाभिः
संरंस्यसे वीतभयः कृतार्थः ॥ १४ ॥

“When, having carried out the behest of your father according to rules and completed your vow of fourteen years of ascetic life, you return from the forest, rid of all fear and accomplished of purpose, you for your part will, I believe, revel with many large-eyed women after marrying them. (14)

अहं तु राम त्वयि जातकामा
चिरं विनाशाय निबद्धभावा ।
मोघं चरित्वाथ तपो व्रतं च
त्यक्ष्यामि धिग्जीवितमल्पभाग्याम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Having practised austerities and observed holy vows for nothing (as they did not prove effective in reuniting me with you), I for myself, O Śrī Rāma, in whom was aroused a longing for you and whose affection has been fastened in you for long to my mortal agony, I shall presently give up the ghost now. Woe to me of scanty fortune! (15)

संजीवितं क्षिप्रमहं त्यजेयं
विषेण शस्त्रेण शितेन वापि।
विषस्य दाता न तु मेऽस्ति कश्चि-
च्छस्त्रस्य वा वेश्मनि राक्षसस्य ॥ १६ ॥

“I would shortly part with my life through poison or even by means of a sharpened weapon. In the abode of Rāvaṇa, an ogre, however, there is none to give me poison or a weapon.” (16)

शोकाभितप्ता बहुधा विचिन्त्य
सीताथ वेणीग्रथनं गृहीत्वा।
उद्धृद्ध्य वेण्युद्ग्रथनेन शीघ्र-महं गमिष्यामि यमस्य मूलम् ॥ १७ ॥

Reflecting on various lines and then seizing the string that tied her hair, Sītā, who was tormented with grief, now thought within herself: “Tying my neck with the fillet that ties my braid, I shall proceed to the presence of Yama.” (17)

उपस्थिता सा मृदुसर्वगात्री
शाखां गृहीत्वा च नगस्य तस्य।
तस्यास्तु रामं परिचिन्तयन्त्या
रामानुजं स्वं च कुलं शुभांग्याः ॥ १८ ॥
तस्या विशोकानि तदा बहूनि
धैर्यार्जितानि प्रवराणि लोके।
प्रादुर्निमित्तानि तदा बभूवुः
पुरापि सिद्धान्युपलक्षितानि ॥ १९ ॥

Taking hold of a branch of the aforesaid Śīmśapā tree, that lady, who was delicate of all limbs, stood near that tree. While that lady of charming limbs was thinking deeply of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa as also of her own royal House, many omens—which were well-known in the world as dispellers of grief and restoring confidence, and which had been found by her even before as predictive of success, presently appeared on her person. (18-19)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डेऽष्टाविंशः सर्गः ॥ २८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-eight in the Sundarakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXIX

The omens described. Concluding them to be auspicious, from the thrill that ran through her body at their sight, Sītā experiences great joy

तथागतां तां व्यथितामनिन्दितां
व्यतीतहर्षां परिदीनमानसाम्।
शुभां निमित्तानि शुभानि भेजिरे
नरं श्रिया जुष्टमिवोपसेविनः ॥ १ ॥

Like willing attendants flocking round a man favoured by the goddess of fortune, auspicious omens appeared on the person of the aforesaid blessed lady, who, though beyond reproach, was nevertheless agonized, utterly bereft of joy and sore distressed in mind, and had reached the Śīmśapā tree as aforesaid. (1)

तस्याः शुभं वाममरालपक्ष-राज्यावृतं कृष्णविशालशुक्लम्।
प्रास्पन्दतैकं नयनं सुकेश्या
मीनाहतं पद्ममिवाभिताम्रम् ॥ २ ॥

The charming left eye alone, of that lady of lovely locks—which was screened with rows of slanting eyelashes, was dark in the middle, large and white all round and coppery at the edge—began repeatedly to throb like a lotus struck gently by a fish. (2)

भुजश्च चार्वाञ्चितवृत्तपीनः
परार्ध्यकालागुरुचन्दनार्हः ।
अनुत्तमेनाध्युषितः प्रियेण
चिरेण वामः समवेपताशु ॥ ३ ॥

Her charming, graceful, rounded and fleshy left arm too, which deserved to be painted with excellent black aloe and sandalwood paste and had been used for long before this as a pillow by her most excellent darling, Śrī Rāma, at once began to palpitate. (3)

गजेन्द्रहस्तप्रतिमश्च पीन-
स्तयोर्द्वयोः संहतयोस्तु जातः ।
प्रस्पन्दमानः पुनरूरुरस्या
रामं पुरस्तात् स्थितमाचचक्षे ॥ ४ ॥

Again, of her well-knit thighs, the left one, which was fleshy and beautiful, nay, which resembled the proboscis of a lordly elephant and was visibly throbbing—announced, as it were, the presence of Śrī Rāma standing in front of her. (4)

शुभं पुनर्हेमसमानवर्ण-
मीषद्रजोर्ध्वस्तमिवातुलाक्ष्याः ।
वासः स्थितायाः शिखराग्रदन्त्याः
किञ्चित् परिस्त्रंसत चारुगात्र्याः ॥ ५ ॥

Moreover, the covering of Sītā standing there, of matchless eyes and charming limbs, whose teeth resembled the ends of the seeds of a pomegranate—which was of golden hue and was slightly soiled, as it were, with dust-slipped a bit from her person in a way which augured well for her. (5)

एतैर्निमित्तैरपरैश्च सुभूः
संचोदिता प्रागपि साधुसिद्धैः ।
वातातपक्लान्तमिव प्रणष्टं
वर्षेण बीजं प्रतिसंजहर्ष ॥ ६ ॥

Reassured by these and other omens as well, which had come out perfectly true even before, Sītā, of shapely eyelashes, greatly rejoiced even as a seed blighted by the wind and the sun comes back of life through a shower. (6)

तस्याः पुनर्विम्बफलोपमोष्ठं
स्वक्षिभ्रुकेशान्तमरालपक्ष्म ।
वक्त्रं बभासे सितशुक्लदंष्ट्रं
राहोर्मुखाच्चन्द्र इव प्रमुक्तः ॥ ७ ॥

Again, her countenance with its lips resembling a ripe Bimba fruit in colour and its beautiful eyes, shapely brows, lovely locks, curved eyelashes and set white teeth shone like the full moon released from the mouth of the demon Rāhu. (7)

सा वीतशोका व्यपनीततन्द्रा
शान्तज्वरा हर्षविबुद्धसत्त्वा ।
अशोभतार्या वदनेन शुक्ले
शीतांशुना रात्रिरिवोदितेन ॥ ८ ॥

Completely rid of grief, her exhaustion fully relieved, her fever allayed and her mind illumined through joy, the noble lady Sītā looked charming with her countenance as a night with the moon having risen during the bright fortnight. (8)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे एकोनत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ २९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-nine in the Sundarakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXX

Weighing the pros and cons of comforting Sītā or remaining mum, now that he had come to know everything about Sītā at first hand, Hanumān decides upon the former course at the psychological moment

हनुमानपि विक्रान्तः सर्वं शुश्राव तत्त्वतः ।
सीतायास्त्रिजटायाश्च राक्षसीनां च तर्जितम् ॥ १ ॥

The valiant Hanumān too correctly heard everything including the lamentation of Sītā, the dream of Trijaṭā and the threats of the ogresses. (1)

अवेक्षमाणस्तां देवीं देवतामिव नन्दने ।
ततो बहुविधां चिन्तां चिन्तयामास वानरः ॥ २ ॥

Looking intently on that lady, who resembled a heavenly being in the Nandana grove (forming part of Indra's paradise), Hanumān thereupon indulged in speculation of various kinds. (2)

यां कपीनां सहस्राणि सुबहून्ययुतानि च ।
दिक्षु सर्वासु मार्गन्ते सेयमासादिता मया ॥ ३ ॥

He said to himself: 'The lady found by me here is the same Sītā whom many thousands, nay, myriads of monkeys have been seeking in all the quarters. (3)

चारेण तु सुयुक्तेन शत्रोः शक्तिमवेक्षता ।
गूढेन चरता तावदवेक्षितमिदं मया ॥ ४ ॥

'By me, thoughtfully appointed by my master as a spy and moving about incognito in my attempt to ascertain the enemy's strength, for my part, the following information has been gathered. (4)

राक्षसानां विशेषश्च पुरी चेयं निरीक्षिता ।
राक्षसाधिपतेरस्य प्रभावो रावणस्य च ॥ ५ ॥

'The relative position in regard to power and resources of the ogres per se as well as the topography of this city of Laṅkā as also the glory of this Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, has been scrutinized by me. (5)

यथा तस्याप्रमेयस्य सर्वसत्त्वदयावतः ।
समाश्वासयितुं भार्या पतिदर्शनकांक्षिणीम् ॥ ६ ॥

'It is opportune for me duly to comfort the spouse, longing to see her husband, of Śrī Rāma, who is immeasurably great and full of compassion for all beings. (6)

अहमाश्वासयाम्येनां पूर्णचन्द्रनिभाननाम् ।
अदृष्टदुःखां दुःखस्य न ह्यन्तमधिगच्छतीम् ॥ ७ ॥

'I shall presently console this lady, whose countenance resembles the full moon, who had never experienced sorrow before and yet who is not reaching the end of her suffering. (7)

यदि ह्यहं सतीमेनां शोकोपहतचेतनाम् ।
अनाश्वास्य गमिष्यामि दोषवद् गमनं भवेत् ॥ ८ ॥

'If I actually return without reassuring this virtuous lady, whose understanding has been clouded by grief, my departure will be regarded as blameworthy. (8)

गते हि मयि तत्रेयं राजपुत्री यशस्विनी ।
परित्राणमपश्यन्ती जानकी जीवितं त्यजेत् ॥ ९ ॥

'Perceiving no means of deliverance from her calamity, when I have actually left for Kiṣkindhā without meeting her, this illustrious princess, the daughter of Janaka, may yield up her life. (9)

यथा च स महाबाहुः पूर्णचन्द्रनिभाननः ।
समाश्वासयितुं न्याय्यः सीतादर्शनलालसः ॥ १० ॥

'Even as the long-armed Śrī Rāma, whose countenance resembles the full moon, and who is equally eager to behold Sītā, deserves to be comforted with the tidings of Sītā, and Sītā too deserves to be comforted with the news of Śrī Rāma. (10)

निशाचरीणां प्रत्यक्षमक्षमं चाभिभाषितम्।
कथं नु खलु कर्तव्यमिदं कृच्छ्रगतो ह्यहम् ॥ ११ ॥

'To speak to her within the sight of the ogresses is, however, not advisable. How, I wonder, can this be actually done? I am really placed in a dilemma. (11)

अनेन रात्रिशेषेण यदि नाशवास्यते मया।
सर्वथा नास्ति संदेहः परित्यक्ष्यति जीवितम् ॥ १२ ॥

'If by the end of this night she is not restored to confidence by me, she will by all means give up the ghost: there is no doubt about it. (12)

रामस्तु यदि पृच्छेन्मां किं मां सीताब्रवीद् वचः।
किमहं तं प्रतिब्रूयामसम्भाष्य सुमध्यमाम् ॥ १३ ॥

'If Śrī Rāma for his part inquires of me as to what message Sītā gave to me, what reply shall I give to him without having spoken to Sītā of slender waist? (13)

सीतासंदेशरहितं मामितस्त्वरया गतम्।
निर्देहदपि काकुत्स्थः क्रोधतीव्रेण चक्षुषा ॥ १४ ॥

'Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, may even consume me with his glance, violent through anger, if I return from this place in haste without taking any message from Sītā. (14)

यदि वोद्योजयिष्यामि भर्तारं रामकारणात्।
व्यर्थमागमनं तस्य ससैन्यस्य भविष्यति ॥ १५ ॥

'Even if I prevail on my master Sugrīva to exert himself in the cause of Śrī Rāma, his expedition to Laṅkā with an army will go in vain in that Sītā will have given up the ghost long before his arrival. (15)

अन्तरं त्वहमासाद्य राक्षसीनामवस्थितः।
शनैराशवासयाम्यद्य संतापबहुलामिमाम् ॥ १६ ॥

'Therefore, snatching some suitable opportunity when the ogresses are inattentive, even though stationed in the midst of the ogresses, I shall this very day slowly console Sītā, who is full of agony. (16)

अहं ह्यतितनुश्चैव वानरश्च विशेषतः।
वाचं चोदाहरिष्यामि मानुषीमिह संस्कृताम् ॥ १७ ॥

'I am indeed not only exceedingly small in size but am a monkey to boot. I shall, however, speak on this occasion the Sanskrit language as spoken by humans. (17)

यदि वाचं प्रदास्यामि द्विजातिरिव संस्कृताम्। रावणं मन्यमाना मां सीता भीता भविष्यति ॥ १८ ॥

'But If I utter the Sanskrit language like a Brāhmaṇa, Sītā will get frightened thinking me to be Rāvaṇa. (18)

अवश्यमेव वक्तव्यं मानुषं वाक्यमर्थवत्।
मया सान्त्वयितुं शक्या नान्यथेयमनिन्दिता ॥ १९ ॥

'The human language alone as spoken near about Ayodhyā, which will convey my meaning to her, needs must be used by me. This irreproachable lady cannot otherwise be restored to confidence. (19)

सेयमालोक्य मे रूपं जानकी भाषितं तथा।
रक्षोभिस्त्रासिता पूर्वं भूयस्त्रासमुपैष्यति ॥ २० ॥

'Beholding my monkey form and hearing my human speech, however, this celebrated daughter of Janaka, already terrorized by the ogres, will give way to fear all the more. (20)

ततो जातपरित्रासा शब्दं कुर्यान्मनस्विनी।
जानाना मां विशालाक्षी रावणं कामरूपिणम् ॥ २१ ॥

'Seized with terror knowing me to be Rāvaṇa, who is able to change his form at will, the sensitive and large-eyed lady will then raise a cry. (21)

सीतया च कृते शब्दे सहसा राक्षसीगणः।
नानाग्रहरणो घोरः समेयादन्तकोपमः ॥ २२ ॥

'Nay, on a cry being raised by Sītā, the whole host of ogresses, armed with various weapons and terrible as Death, will flock together all at once. (22)

ततो मां सम्परिक्षिप्य सर्वतो विकृताननाः।
वधे च ग्रहणे चैव कुर्युर्यत्नं महाबलाः ॥ २३ ॥

'Surrounding me from all sides, the ogresses of loathsome appearance and endowed with extraordinary might will make an effort to kill or capture me. (23)

तं मां शाखाः प्रशाखाश्च स्कन्धाश्चोत्तमशाखिनाम् ।
दृष्ट्वा च परिधावन्तं भवेयुः परिशङ्किताः ॥ २४ ॥

‘Again, they will get alarmed to see me as such leaping on the boughs and branches as well as on the trunks of the tallest trees. (24)

मम रूपं च सम्प्रेक्ष्य वने विचरतो महत् ।
राक्षस्यो भयवित्रस्ता भवेयुर्विकृतस्वराः ॥ २५ ॥

‘Nay, sore stricken with terror to perceive my gigantic form even as I move about in the forest, the ogresses will begin to scream in terror. (25)

ततः कुर्युः समाह्वानं राक्षस्यो रक्षसामपि ।
राक्षसेन्द्रनियुक्तानां राक्षसेन्द्रनिवेशने ॥ २६ ॥

‘The ogresses will then summon to their aid the ogres too posted on duty by Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, at his own palace. (26)

ते शूलशरनिस्त्रिंशविविधायुधपाणयः ।
आपतेयुर्विमर्देऽस्मिन् वेगेनोद्वेगकारणात् ॥ २७ ॥

‘Due to excitement in this commotion they will rush with impetuosity taking darts, arrows, swords and various other weapons in hand. (27)

संरुद्धस्तैस्तु परितो विधमे राक्षसं बलम् ।
शक्नुयां न तु सम्प्राप्तुं परं पारं महोदधेः ॥ २८ ॥

‘Surrounded on all sides by them, I can no doubt exterminate the army of ogres; but I shall not in that case be able to reach the other end of the ocean. (28)

मां वा गृहीयुरावृत्य बहवः शीघ्रकारिणः ।
स्यादियं चागृहीतार्था मम च ग्रहणं भवेत् ॥ २९ ॥

‘Or, it is also possible that surrounding me, many agile ogres may capture me. In that case Sītā will remain unacquainted with my mission and my capture too will be effected. (29)

हिंसाभिरुचयो हिंस्युरिमां वा जनकात्मजाम् ।
विपन्नं स्यात् ततः कार्यं रामसुग्रीवयोरिदम् ॥ ३० ॥

‘Alternatively, the ogres, who take delight in bloodshed, may dispose of this daughter of Janaka. The present object of Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva will in that case be defeated. (30)

उद्देशे नष्टमार्गेऽस्मिन् राक्षसैः परिवारिते ।
सागरेण परिक्षिप्ते गुप्ते वसति जानकी ॥ ३१ ॥

‘Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, lives in this obscure sea-girt region, whose approaches are unknown and which is surrounded by ogres. (31)

विशस्ते वा गृहीते वा रक्षोभिर्मयि संयुगे ।
नान्यं पश्यामि रामस्य सहायं कार्यसाधने ॥ ३२ ॥

‘In the event of my being either killed or captured by the ogres in an encounter, I do not find anyone else who can assist Śrī Rāma in accomplishing this task of seeing Sītā and conveying her message to Śrī Rāma. (32)

विमृशंश्च न पश्यामि यो हते मयि वानरः ।
शतयोजनविस्तीर्णं लङ्घयेत महोदधिम् ॥ ३३ ॥

‘Even on taxing my brain I do not see any monkey who should be able, when I am dead, to leap across the vast sea a hundred Yojanas (eight-hundred miles) wide. (33)

कामं हन्तुं समर्थोऽस्मि सहस्राण्यपि रक्षसाम् ।
न तु शक्ष्याम्यहं प्राप्तुं परं पारं महोदधेः ॥ ३४ ॥

‘Although I am capable of killing thousands of ogres, I shall not, however, be able to reach the other end of the ocean due to exhaustion caused by the combat. (34)

असत्यानि च युद्धानि संशयो मे न रोचते ।
कश्च निःसंशयं कार्यं कुर्यात् प्राज्ञः ससंशयम् ॥ ३५ ॥

‘Conflicts are always dubious and uncertainty does not find favour with me. And what wise man would embark on a dubious undertaking without demur? (35)

एष दोषो महान् हि स्यान्मम सीताभिभाषणे ।
प्राणत्यागश्च वैदेह्या भवेदनभिभाषणे ॥ ३६ ॥

‘Indeed this will constitute a great error on my part if I openly talk with Sītā. And the death by her own self of Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, will follow if I do not talk to her. (36)

भूताश्चार्था विरुध्यन्ति देशकालविरोधिताः ।

विक्लवं दूतमासाद्य तमः सूर्योदये यथा ॥ ३७ ॥

‘Even as darkness disappears at sunrise, objects which are all but accomplished are completely lost at the hands of a timid or thoughtless messenger when they are set in opposition to time and place. (37)

अर्थानर्थान्तरे बुद्धिर्निश्चितापि न शोभते ।

घातयन्ति हि कार्याणि दूताः पण्डितमानिनः ॥ ३८ ॥

‘Even a decision duly arrived at by a ruler in consultation with his ministers regarding what should be done and what should be refrained from, does not yield good results when implemented by a thoughtless messenger. Indeed messengers fancying themselves clever but really not so, bring to nought all undertakings on such occasions. (38)

न विनश्येत् कथं कार्यं वैक्लव्यं न कथं मम ।

लङ्घनं च समुद्रस्य कथं नु न वृथा भवेत् ॥ ३९ ॥

‘How should I act to ensure that the purpose may not be frustrated? How should I guard against thoughtlessness? And how, I wonder, should I ensure that my leaping across the sea does not go in vain? (39)

कथं नु खलु वाक्यं मे शृणुयान्नोद्विजेत च ।

इति संचिन्त्य हनुमांश्चकार मतिमान् मतिम् ॥ ४० ॥

‘How indeed should I ensure that Sītā listens to my speech and does not get perturbed?’ Pondering thus, the wise Hanumān made the following resolve: (40)

राममक्लिष्टकर्माणं सुबन्धुमनुकीर्तयन् ।

नैनामुद्वेजयिष्यामि तद्वन्धुगतचेतनाम् ॥ ४१ ॥

‘Singing the praises of her praiseworthy spouse, Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, shall take care not to frighten her, her mind being absorbed in her aforesaid lord. (41)

इक्ष्वाकूणां वरिष्ठस्य रामस्य विदितात्मनः ।

शुभानि धर्मयुक्तानि वचनानि समर्पयन् ॥ ४२ ॥

श्रावयिष्यामि सर्वाणि मधुरां प्रबुवन् गिरम् ।

श्रद्धास्यति यथा सीता तथा सर्वं समादधे ॥ ४३ ॥

‘Delivering to her the beautiful message, conformable to righteousness, of Śrī Rāma, the foremost of the Ikṣvākus and a knower of the Self, I shall convey it fully, uttering sweet words, and shall make everything so intelligible that Sītā will give credence to it.’ (42-43)

इति स बहुविधं महाप्रभावो

जगतिपतेः प्रमदामवेक्षमाणः ।

मधुरमवितथं जगाद वाक्यं

द्रुमवितपान्तरमास्थितो हनूमान् ॥ ४४ ॥

Addressing himself to the young wife of Śrī Rāma and remaining seated in the midst of the boughs of the tree occupied by him, the celebrated Hanumān, who was possessed of great valour, made the following variously-worded sweet and truthful speech. (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३० ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty in the Sundarakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXI

Transported with joy to hear the story commencing from the birth of Śrī Rāma and ending with Hanumān's espying Sītā, narrated in a human tongue by Hanumān, remaining perched on the Śimśapā tree and casting her eyes all round, Sītā catches sight of Hanumān sitting on a bough of the same Śimśapā tree beneath which she stood

एवं बहुविधां चिन्तां चिन्तयित्वा महामतिः ।
संश्रवे मधुरं वाक्यं वैदेह्या व्याजहार ह ॥ १ ॥

Having indulged in speculation of various kinds as aforesaid, Hanumān who was endowed with extraordinary intelligence, they say, made the following sweet speech within the hearing of Sītā: (1)

राजा दशरथो नाम रथकुञ्जरवाजिमान् ।
पुण्यशीलो महाकीर्तिरिश्वाकूणां महायशः ॥ २ ॥

"In the line of the Ikṣvākus there was a highly illustrious and greatly renowned king named Daśaratha, who was given to meritorious deeds and owned excellent chariots, elephants and horses. (2)

राजर्षीणां गुणश्रेष्ठस्तपसा चर्षिभिः समः ।
चक्रवर्तिकुले जातः पुरंदरसमो बले ॥ ३ ॥

"Born in a line of universal monarchs, he was the foremost of royal sages in point of virtues, vied with seers in asceticism and was a compeer of Indra, the ruler of gods, in might. (3)

अहिंसारतिरक्षुद्रो घृणी सत्यपराक्रमः ।
मुख्यस्येक्ष्वाकुवंशस्य लक्ष्मीवाँल्लक्ष्मिवर्धनः ॥ ४ ॥
पार्थिवव्यञ्जनैर्युक्तः पृथुश्रीः पार्थिववर्षभः ।
पृथिव्यां चतुरन्तायां विश्रुतः सुखदः सुखी ॥ ५ ॥

"That jewel among monarchs took delight in harmlessness, was magnanimous, compassionate and distinguished by unflinching prowess. He enhanced the glory of the already distinguished line of Ikṣvāku, was full of prosperity, adorned with all the bodily marks, distinguishing a ruler of the earth, was endowed with a vast splendour and well-known all over the earth bounded by the four seas in the four quarters, and was not only happy himself but conferred happiness on others too. (4-5)

तस्य पुत्रः प्रियो ज्येष्ठस्ताराधिपनिभाननः ।
रामो नाम विशेषज्ञः श्रेष्ठः सर्वधनुष्मताम् ॥ ६ ॥

"His favourite eldest son, whose countenance resembled the full moon, nay, who was skilled in archery and the foremost of all bowmen, was known by the name of Rāma. (6)

रक्षिता स्वस्य वृत्तस्य स्वजनस्यापि रक्षिता ।
रक्षिता जीवलोकस्य धर्मस्य च परंतपः ॥ ७ ॥

"Śrī Rāma, the scourge of his foes, was a zealous upholder of his own character, the protector also of his own people, nay the protector of the whole world of living beings and the defender of righteousness. (7)

तस्य सत्याभिसंधस्य वृद्धस्य वचनात् पितुः ।
सभार्यः सह च भ्रात्रा वीरः प्रव्रजितो वनम् ॥ ८ ॥

"In deference to the plighted word (given to his own stepmother) of his aforesaid father, who was aged and true to his promise, the hero, accompanied by his consort and his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, proceeded in exile to the forest. (8)

तेन तत्र महारण्ये मृगायां परिधावता ।
राक्षसा निहताः शूरा बहवः कामरूपिणः ॥ ९ ॥

"By him, while chasing game in that vast forest, were slain many gallant ogres, able to change their form at will. (9)

जनस्थानवधं श्रुत्वा निहतौ खरदूषणौ ।
 ततस्त्वमर्षापहता जानकी रावणेन तु ॥ १० ॥
 वञ्चयित्वा वने रामं मृगरूपेण मायया ।
 स मार्गमाणस्तां देवीं रामः सीतामनिन्दिताम् ॥ ११ ॥
 आससाद वने मित्रं सुग्रीवं नाम वानरम् ।
 ततः स वालिनं हत्वा रामः परपुरंजयः ॥ १२ ॥
 आयच्छत् कपिराज्यं तु सुग्रीवाय महात्मने ।
 सुग्रीवेणाभिसंदिष्टा हरयः कामरूपिणः ॥ १३ ॥
 दिक्षु सर्वासु तां देवीं विचिन्वन्तः सहस्रशः ।
 अहं सम्पातिवचनाच्छतयोजनमायतम् ॥ १४ ॥
 तस्या हेतोर्विशालाक्ष्याः समुद्रं वेगवान् प्लुतः ।
 यथारूपां यथावर्णां यथालक्ष्मवतीं च ताम् ॥ १५ ॥
 अश्रौषं राघवस्याहं सेयमासादिता मया ।
 विररामैवमुक्त्वा स वाचं वानरपुंगवः ॥ १६ ॥

“Having put Śrī Rāma off the scent in the forest through one disguised as a deer by recourse to a conjuring trick on hearing of the destruction of Janasthāna (a part of the Daṇḍaka forest inhabited by ogres) as well as of the death of his younger half-brothers, Khara and Dūṣaṇa, Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, for her part was then borne away in indignation by Rāvaṇa. While searching for that godlike and irreproachable lady, Sītā, he found in the forest a friend in a monkey named Sugrīva. Having made short work of Vāli, Sugrīva’s elder brother, Śrī Rāma, capable of conquering hostile cities, for his part thereupon bestowed the kingship of monkeys on the high-souled Sugrīva. Commanded by Sugrīva, monkeys, capable of changing their form at will, set out in thousands in all the four quarters, searching for that godlike lady, Sītā. Full of impetuosity I took a leap across the sea (stretching between the island of Laṅkā and the mainland and), extending to a distance of a hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles) at the instance of Sampātī, the king of birds and the elder brother of Jaṭāyu, for the sake of that large-eyed lady. She has been found by me here endowed with a comeliness, complexion and bodily marks similar to those of which I had heard from the mouth of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu.” Having delivered the aforesaid speech, that bull among monkeys fell silent. (10—16)

जानकी चापि तच्छ्रुत्वा विस्मयं परमं गता ।
 ततः सा वक्रकेशान्ता सुकेशी केशसंवृतम् ।
 उन्नम्य वदनं भीरुः शिंशपामन्ववैक्षत् ॥ १७ ॥

Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, herself was struck with supreme wonder to hear that speech. Raising her face screened with dishevelled hair, that timid lady with charming curly locks thereupon looked up into the Śimśapā tree on which Hanumān was perched. (17)

निशम्य सीता वचनं कपेश्च
 दिशश्च सर्वाः प्रदिशश्च वीक्ष्य ।
 स्वयं प्रहर्षं परमं जगाम
 सर्वात्मना राममनुस्मरन्ती ॥ १८ ॥

Hearing the monkey’s speech and looking inquiringly into all the four quarters as well as into the “intermediate points, Sītā experienced supreme rapture thinking all the time of Śrī Rāma with all her being. (18)

सा तिर्यगूर्ध्वं च तथा ह्यधस्ता- निरीक्षमाणा तमचिन्त्यबुद्धिम् ।
 ददर्श पिंगाधिपतेरमात्यं
 वातात्मजं सूर्यमिवोदयस्थम् ॥ १९ ॥

Glancing from side to side as well as up and down, she espied the aforesaid Hanumān, son of the wind-god, of inconceivable intelligence, a minister of Sugrīva, the suzerain ruler of monkeys, and resembling the sun risen on the eastern sky. (19)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे एकत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-one of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्वात्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXII

Imagining Hanumān to have been seen in a dream, though actually perceived by her, and believing the sight of a monkey in a dream to be ominous, Sītā becomes anxious about the welfare of Śrī Rāma and others.

Then concluding him on other grounds to have been seen in her waking hours, she prays to Brahmā and other gods that the statement of Hanumān may come out to be true

ततः शाखान्तरे लीनं दृष्ट्वा चलितमानसा ।
वेष्टितार्जुनवस्त्रं तं विद्युत्संघातपिंगलम् ॥ १ ॥

Then, beholding Hanumān, clad in white and tawny like a series of flashes of lightning, concealed under cover of boughs, Sītā felt disturbed in mind. (1)

सा ददर्श कपिं तत्र प्रश्रितं प्रियवादिनम् ।
फुल्लाशोकोत्कराभासं तप्तचामीकरेक्षणम् ॥ २ ॥

She noticed there a monkey, meek and kind in speech, shining like a cluster of expanded Aśoka flowers and with eyes bright as refined gold. (2)

साथ दृष्ट्वा हरिश्रेष्ठं विनीतवदवस्थितम् ।
मैथिली चिन्तयामास विस्मयं परमं गता ॥ ३ ॥

Struck with extreme wonder to see Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, sitting in a humble posture, the aforesaid princess of Mithilā now reflected as follows: (3)

अहो भीममिदं सत्त्वं वानरस्य दुरासदम् ।
दुर्निरीक्ष्यमिदं मत्वा पुनरेव मुमोह सा ॥ ४ ॥

‘Ah, how terrible is this being of the monkey family !’ Nay, regarding it as difficult to approach and hideous to behold, she fainted once more suspecting it to be illusory. (4)

विललाप भृशं सीता करुणं भयमोहिता ।
राम रामेति दुःखार्ता लक्ष्मणेति च भामिनी ॥ ५ ॥

Distracted with fear and stricken with agony, the lovely Sītā piteously cried again and again: “Rāma ! O Rāma ! O Lakṣmaṇa !” (5)

रुरोद सहसा सीता मन्दमन्दस्वरा सती ।
साथ दृष्ट्वा हरिवरं विनीतवदुपागतम् ।
मैथिली चिन्तयामास स्वप्नोऽयमिति भामिनी ॥ ६ ॥

Nay, the virtuous Sītā fell a-sobbing all at once in faint accents. Seeing Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, come near in a humble mien in the meantime, the lovely Sītā thought that it must be a dream (6)

सा वीक्षमाणा पृथुभुग्वक्त्रं
शाखामृगेन्द्रस्य यथोक्तकारम् ।
ददर्श पिंगप्रवरं महार्हं
वातात्मजं बुद्धिमतां वरिष्ठम् ॥ ७ ॥

Looking round, in order to make sure that the ogresses were not looking at her or at the monkey, she beheld Hanumān, son of the wind-god, a jewel among the monkeys, adored even by the great, the foremost of the wise, who was obedient to Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys) and who had big jaws, one of which had been broken by means of the thunderbolt hurled by Indra to arrest his progress towards the sun to devour the solar orb. (7)

सा तं समीक्ष्यैव भृशं विपन्ना
गतासुकल्पेव बभूव सीता ।
चिरेण संज्ञां प्रतिलभ्य चैवं
विचिन्तयामास विशालनेत्रा ॥ ८ ॥

Getting utterly unconscious at the very sight of Hanumān, the aforesaid Sītā became like one lifeless. Nay, regaining consciousness after a long time, the large-eyed lady began to reflect as follows : (8)

स्वप्नो मयायं विकृतोऽद्य दृष्टः

शाखामृगः शास्त्रगणैर्निषिद्धः ।

स्वस्त्यस्तु रामाय सलक्ष्मणाय

तथा पितुर्मे जनकस्य राज्ञः ॥ १० ॥

‘This hideous dream has been seen by me today. The vision of a monkey has been condemned by the scriptures. May good luck attend on Śrī Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa as well as on my father, King Janaka. (9)

स्वप्नो हि नायं नहि मेऽस्ति निद्रा

शोकेन दुःखेन च पीडितायाः ।

सुखं हि मे नास्ति यतो विहीना

तेनेन्दुपूर्णप्रतिमानेन ॥ १० ॥

‘Surely this cannot be a dream; for sleep does not come to me, stricken as I am with grief and sorrow. Nor indeed is there any joy for me, separated as I am from that prince whose countenance resembles the full moon (10)

रामेति रामेति सदैव बुद्ध्या

विचिन्त्य वाचा ब्रुवती तमेव ।

तस्यानुरूपं च कथां तदर्था-

मेवं प्रपश्यामि तथा शृणोमि ॥ ११ ॥

‘Pondering with my mind at all times on the concept conveyed by the word ‘Rāma’ and speaking of the same Rāma with my tongue, I hear as well a talk corresponding to the same thought and likewise visualize the talk heard by me in conformity with the same theme. (11)

अहं हि तस्याद्य मनोभवेन

सम्पीडिता तद्गतसर्वभावा ।

विचिन्तयन्ती सततं तमेव

तथैव पश्यामि तथा शृणोमि ॥ १२ ॥

‘Constantly thinking as I do of him alone, tormented as I am by a longing for him, my whole affection being fastened on him, I likewise behold him and hear of him alone. (12)

मनोरथः स्यादिति चिन्तयामि

तथापि बुद्ध्यापि वितर्कयामि ।

किं कारणं तस्य हि नास्ति रूपं

सुव्यक्तरूपश्च वदत्ययं माम् ॥ १३ ॥

‘I speculate that what I am seeing may be a mere image; yet I reflect with my mind as to what can be the cause of this apparition; for a conceptual image has no concrete form, while this monkey appearing before me has a distinct form and is also talking to me. (13)

नमोऽस्तु वाचस्पतये सवज्रिणे

स्वयम्भुवे चैव हुताशनाय ।

अनेन चोक्तं यदिदं ममाग्रतो

वनौकसा तच्च तथास्तु नान्यथा ॥ १४ ॥

‘Let my salutation be to Sage Bṛhaspati (the master of speech) alongwith Indra (who is armed with a thunderbolt), to Brahmā (the self-born creator) as well as to the god of fire (the deity presiding over the organ of speech) ! May all that which has been uttered now in my presence by this monkey (lit., a denizen of the forest) prove true and not otherwise.’ (14)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे द्वात्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-two of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रयस्त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXIII

Keen to hear of Sītā's identity from her own lips, even though he had identified her, Hanumān inquires of her whether she was a goddess or anyone else and asks her to disclose her identity in case she was Sītā. In reply to this query Sītā narrates to him her whole life-story ending with her abduction by Rāvaṇa and tells him how Rāvaṇa was going to kill her two months later, and how in the event of her not being delivered from his clutches before that, she has resolved to end her life by herself

सोऽवतीर्य द्रुमात् तस्माद् विद्रुमप्रतिमाननः ।
विनीतवेषः कृपणः प्रणिपत्योपसृत्य च ॥ १ ॥
तामब्रवीन्महातेजा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
शिरस्यञ्जलिमाधाय सीतां मधुरया गिरा ॥ २ ॥

Slipping down from the aforesaid Śimśapā tree, bowing down and approaching Sītā, nay, placing his folded hands on his head, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, whose face resembled coral in hue, who was attired in a humble guise, was endowed with extraordinary energy and appeared distressed at the sight of Sītā's sad plight, spoke to her as follows in gentle tones: (1-2)

का नु पद्मपलाशाक्षि क्लिष्टकौशेयवासिनि ।
द्रुमस्य शाखामालम्ब्य तिष्ठसि त्वमनिन्दिते ॥ ३ ॥

"Who are you, O irreproachable lady with eyes resembling a lotus petal and clad in a worn silken garment, who stand holding a branch of this tree? (3)

किमर्थं तव नेत्राभ्यां वारि स्रवति शोकजम् ।
पुण्डरीकपलाशाभ्यां विप्रकीर्णमिवोदकम् ॥ ४ ॥

"Wherefore are tears born of grief trickling from your eyes like drops of water falling from a pair of lotus leaves? (4)

सुराणामसुराणां च नागगन्धर्वरक्षसाम् । यक्षाणां किन्नराणां च का त्वं भवसि शोभने ॥ ५ ॥

"Who are you among the gods and demons, the Nāgas, Gandharvas and ogres, the Yakṣas or the Kinnaras, O charming one? (5)

का त्वं भवसि रुद्राणां मरुतां वा वरानने ।
वसूनां वा वरारोहे देवता प्रतिभासि मे ॥ ६ ॥

"Who are you among the eleven Rudras (the gods of destruction), the forty-nine wind-gods and the eight Vasus, O lady of exquisite features? For, to me you appear to be a goddess, a lady of excellent limbs! (6)

किं नु चन्द्रमसा हीना पतिता विबुधालयात् ।
रोहिणी ज्योतिषां श्रेष्ठा श्रेष्ठा सर्वगुणाधिका ॥ ७ ॥

"Or, are you Rohiṇī, the foremost of lunar mansions and superior in all excellent virtues, separated from the moon and fallen from heaven, the abode of celestials? (7)

कोपाद् वा यदि वा मोहाद् भर्तारमसितेक्षणे ।
वसिष्ठं कोपयित्वा त्वं वासि कल्याण्यरुन्धती ॥ ८ ॥

"Or, are you, O dark-eyed one, the blessed Arundhati, fallen from the heavenly world on having angered your husband, Sage Vasiṣṭha, through resentment or error? (8)

को नु पुत्रः पिता भ्राता भर्ता वा ते सुमध्यमे ।
अस्माल्लोकादमुं लोकं गतं त्वमनुशोचसि ॥ ९ ॥

"Who is it, your son, father, brother or husband, O lady with slender waist, for whom, departed from this world, to the other you are grieving? (9)

रोदनादतिनिःश्वासाद् भूमिसंस्पर्शनादपि ।
न त्वां देवीमहं मन्ये राज्ञः संज्ञावधारणात् ॥ १० ॥

“From your crying, drawing deep and audible breaths, touching the ground and taking the name of a king, I do not consider you to be a goddess. (10)

व्यञ्जनानि हि ते यानि लक्षणानि च लक्ष्ये ।
महिषी भूमिपालस्य राजकन्या च मे मता ॥ ११ ॥

“Indeed, on the strength of the limbs of your body as well as from the marks on your person which I perceive, you are believed by me to be the consort of a ruler of the earth and the daughter of a king. (11)

रावणेन जनस्थानाद् बलात् प्रमथिता यदि ।
सीता त्वमसि भद्रं ते तन्ममाचक्ष्व पृच्छतः ॥ १२ ॥

“If you are Sītā, stolen away forcibly by Rāvaṇa from Janasthāna, kindly reveal it to me, who am inquisitive about it. May prosperity attend on you! (12)

यथा हि तव वै दैन्यं रूपं चाप्यतिमानुषम् ।
तपसा चान्वितो वेषस्त्वं राममहिषी ध्रुवम् ॥ १३ ॥

“Indeed, the sad plight, the ethereal beauty and the garb marked with asceticism, the like of which are seen in you, lead me to conclude that you are undoubtedly the consort of Śrī Rāma.” (13)

सा तस्य वचनं श्रुत्वा रामकीर्तनहर्षिता ।
उवाच वाक्यं वैदेही हनूमन्तं द्रुमाश्रितम् ॥ १४ ॥

Delighted at the mention of Śrī Rāma on hearing the utterance of the monkey, that princess of the Videha territory spoke as follows to Hanumān standing beneath the tree: (14)

पृथिव्यां राजसिंहानां मुख्यस्य विदितात्मनः ।
स्नुषा दशरथस्याहं शत्रुसैन्यप्रणाशिनः ॥ १५ ॥

“I am daughter-in-law of Daśaratha, the foremost of lions among kings on earth, who is a knower of the Self and the exterminator of hostile forces. (15)

दुहिता जनकस्याहं वैदेहस्य महात्मनः ।
सीतेति नाम्ना चोक्ताहं भार्या रामस्य धीमतः ॥ १६ ॥

“Nay, I am a daughter of the high-souled King Janaka, ruler of the Videha territory, and the consort of the wise Śrī Rāma, and I am called by the name of Sītā. (16)

समा द्वादश तत्राहं राघवस्य निवेशने ।
भुञ्जाना मानुषान् भोगान् सर्वकामसमृद्धिनी ॥ १७ ॥

“Enjoying human luxuries and endowed with an abundance of all enjoyments, I dwelt in the well-known abode of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, for twelve years. (17)

ततस्त्रयोदशे वर्षे राज्ये चेक्ष्वाकुनन्दनम् ।
अभिषेचयितुं राजा सोपाध्यायः प्रचक्रमे ॥ १८ ॥

“Then in the thirteenth year the king with his preceptor Sage Vasiṣṭha proceeded to install Śrī Rāma, the delight of the Ikṣvākus, on the throne as Prince Regent. (18)

तस्मिन् सन्निधयमाणे तु राघवस्याभिषेचने ।
कैकेयी नाम भर्तारमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १९ ॥

“While preparations for the said installation as Prince Regent of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, were being carried on, Kaikeyī (a stepmother of Śrī Rāma), they say, spoke as follows to her husband: (19)

न पिबेयं न खादेयं प्रत्यहं मम भोजनम् ।
एष मे जीवितस्यान्तो रामो यद्यभिषिच्यते ॥ २० ॥

“‘I shall no longer drink nor partake of my repast from day to day. Nay, this installation will prove to be the end of my existence if Rāma is installed on the throne. (20)

यत् तदुक्तं त्वया वाक्यं प्रीत्या नृपतिसत्तम ।
तच्चेन वितथं कार्यं वनं गच्छतु राघवः ॥ २१ ॥

“‘If that well-known pledge which was lovingly given by you, O jewel among the protectors of men, is not going to be dishonoured, let Rāma, a scion of Raghu, proceed to the forest.’ (21)

स राजा सत्यवाग् देव्या वरदानमनुस्मरन् ।
मुमोह वचनं श्रुत्वा कैकेय्याः क्रूरमप्रियम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Recalling the dual boon granted by him long before in favour of the queen Kaikeyī, the aforesaid king, who was true to his word, fainted on hearing the cruel and unpalatable demand of Kaikeyī. (22)

ततस्तं स्थविरो राजा सत्यधर्मे व्यवस्थितः ।
ज्येष्ठं यशस्विनं पुत्रं रुदन् राज्यमयाचत ॥ २३ ॥

“Then on regaining consciousness the aged king, who stood firmly by the vow of truthfulness, begged the sovereignty of Ayodhyā, in favour of Bharata, of his aforesaid eldest and illustrious son, Śrī Rāma. (23)

स पितुर्वचनं श्रीमानभिषेकात् परं प्रियम् ।
मनसा पूर्वमासाद्य वाचा प्रतिगृहीतवान् ॥ २४ ॥

“Having bowed first with his mind to the command of his father, which was dearer to him than his own installation on the throne as Prince Regent, the glorious Śrī Rāma accepted it with his words. (24)

दद्यान्न प्रतिगृहीयात् सत्यं ब्रूयान्न चानृतम् ।
अपि जीवितहेतोर्हि रामः सत्यपराक्रमः ॥ २५ ॥

“Śrī Rāma of unfailing prowess would only give and not accept gifts. He would speak the truth and never utter a falsehood even for his life. (25)

स विहायोत्तरीयाणि महार्हाणि महायशः ।
विसृज्य मनसा राज्यं जनन्यै मां समादिशत् ॥ २६ ॥

“Casting off his costly upper garments and renouncing the kingdom with his mind, that highly illustrious prince gave me into his mother’s keeping. (26)

साहं तस्याग्रतस्तूर्णं प्रस्थिता वनचारिणी ।
नहि मे तेन हीनाया वासः स्वर्गेऽपि रोचते ॥ २७ ॥

“Resolved to range in the forest with my husband, I, however, immediately marched to the forest in front of him; for living apart from him even in heaven would not find favour with me. (27)

प्रागेव तु महाभागः सौमित्रिर्मित्रनन्दनः ।
पूर्वजस्यानुयात्रार्थे कुशचीररलंकृतः ॥ २८ ॥

“Clad in robes of Kuśa grass and tattered clothes, the highly fortunate Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) too, the delight of his friends, got ready to accompany his eldest brother even before me. (28)

ते वयं भर्तुरादेशं बहुमान्य दृढव्रताः ।
प्रविष्टाः स्म पुरादृष्टं वनं गम्भीरदर्शनम् ॥ २९ ॥

“Highly respecting the command of our lord, and steadfast in our vows, we the aforesaid three penetrated deep into the forest, which had never been seen by us before and which was dreadful to look at. (29)

वसतो दण्डकारण्ये तस्याहममितौजसः ।
रक्षसापहता भार्या रावणेन दुरात्मना ॥ ३० ॥

“The consort of the aforesaid prince, who is endowed with immense strength, I was borne away, while the latter was sojourning in the Daṇḍaka forest, by the evil-minded ogre, Rāvaṇa. (30)

द्वौ मासौ तेन मे कालो जीवितानुग्रहः कृतः ।
ऊर्ध्वं द्वाभ्यां तु मासाभ्यां ततस्त्यक्ष्यामि जीवितम् ॥ ३१ ॥

“A period of two months has been allowed to me by him to live on sufferance. After the said two months, however, I shall give up the ghost.” (31)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे त्रयस्त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-three of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुस्त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXIV

Inferring from the suitable reply to his queries received from Sītā and the trust reposed in him by the latter, Hanumān reveals to her the role of an envoy allotted to him by Śrī Rāma and repeat the inquiries made by the two brothers about her welfare. Taking him to be Rāvaṇa disguised as a monkey, Sītā, on the other hand, reproaches him when the latter approaches her in order to bow down at her feet. In order to allay her fears, Hanumān for his part discloses to her his reality as a minister of Sugrīva as well as requests her to give credence to his words

तस्यास्तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा हनूमान् हरिपुंगवः ।
दुःखाद् दुःखाभिभूतायाः सान्त्वमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid speech of Sītā, who was overwhelmed with sorrow after sorrow, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, uttered the following reassuring reply : (1)

अहं रामस्य संदेशाद् देवि दूतस्तवागतः ।
वैदेहि कुशली रामः स त्वां कौशलमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

"I have sought your presence, O godlike lady, as an envoy carrying a message sent by Śrī Rāma. Śrī Rāma, O princess of the Videha territory, is doing well. He has communicated his own welfare to you. (2)

यो ब्राह्ममस्त्रं वेदांश्च वेद वेदविदां वरः ।
स त्वां दाशरथी रामो देवि कौशलमब्रवीत् ॥ ३ ॥

"Nay, Śrī Rāma, the celebrated son of Daśaratha, and the foremost of the knowers of Veda, who knows the use of the mystic missile presided over by Brahmā, the creator, as well as the import of the Vedas, O godlike lady, has also inquired of you about your own welfare. (3)

लक्ष्मणश्च महातेजा भर्तुस्तेऽनुचरः प्रियः । कृतवाञ्छोकसंतप्तः शिरसा तेऽभिवादनम् ॥ ४ ॥

"Endowed with extraordinary energy, Lakṣmaṇa too, a beloved servant of your husband, has saluted you with his head bent low, tormented as he is with grief." (4)

सा तयोः कुशलं देवि निशम्य नरसिंहयोः ।
प्रतिसंहृष्टसर्वांगी हनूमन्तथाब्रवीत् ॥ ५ ॥

Thrilled all over her body to hear about the welfare of those two lions among men, that godlike lady now replied as follows to Hanumān : (5)

कल्याणी बत गाथेयं लौकिकी प्रतिभाति मा ।
एति जीवन्तमानन्दो नरं वर्षशतादपि ॥ ६ ॥

"Ah, the following popular adage that 'joy comes to a surviving man, even though it be at the end of a hundred years', appears true to me." (6)

तयोः समागमे तस्मिन् प्रीतिरुत्पादिताद्भुता ।
परस्परेण चालापं विश्वस्तौ तौ प्रचक्रतुः ॥ ७ ॥

Consequent on that meeting of Hanumān and Sītā, a strange delight came over them. And restored to confidence, the two began to converse with one another. (7)

तस्यास्तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
सीतायाः शोकतप्तायाः समीपमुपचक्रमे ॥ ८ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid reply of Sītā, who was stricken with grief, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, endeavoured to draw nearer to her. (8)

यथा यथा समीपं स हनूमानुपसर्पति ।
तथा तथा रावणं सा तं सीता परिशङ्कते ॥ ९ ॥

The nearer did the celebrated Hanumān draw to her, the more did that Sītā suspect him to be Rāvaṇa. (9)

अहो धिग् धिक्कृतमिदं कथितं हि यदस्य मे।

रूपान्तरमुपागम्य स एवायं हि रावणः ॥ १० ॥

She said to herself : 'Oh, shame ! What a pity that I held all this converse with him. Indeed, he is the same Rāvaṇa, who has come here assuming another guise.' (10)

तामशोकस्य शाखां तु विमुक्त्वा शोककर्षिता।

तस्यामेवानवद्याङ्गी धरण्यां समुपाविशत् ॥ ११ ॥

Letting go that branch of the Aśoka tree, Sītā, for her part, of faultless limbs, sank down on that very spot on which she stood, exhausted as she was from grief.

(11)

अवन्दत महाबाहुस्ततस्तां जनकात्मजाम्।

सा चैनं भयसंत्रस्ता भूयो नैनमुदैक्षत ॥ १२ ॥

Thereupon Hanumān of mighty arms saluted the aforesaid daughter of Janaka. Sore stricken as she was with fear, Sītā, however, no longer raised her eyes to him.

(12)

तं दृष्ट्वा वन्दमानं च सीता शशिनिभानना।

अब्रवीद् दीर्घमुच्छ्वस्य वानरं मधुरस्वरा ॥ १३ ॥

Drawing a deep audible breath on seeing him while bowing down to her, Sītā, however, whose countenance resembled the full moon, spoke to Hanumān in sweet accents as follows :

(13)

मायां प्रविष्टो मायावी यदि त्वं रावणः स्वयम्।

उत्पादयसि मे भूयः संतापं तन्न शोभनम् ॥ १४ ॥

"If you are Rāvaṇa himself, given to conjuring tricks and, having entered a deceitful form, are causing agony to me once more, it is not good.

(14)

स्वं परित्यज्य रूपं यः परिव्राजकरूपवान्।

जनस्थाने मया दृष्टस्त्वं स एव हि रावणः ॥ १५ ॥

"Surely you are the same Rāvaṇa, who, having assumed the guise of a vagrant recluse, abandoning your native form, were seen by me in Janasthāna.

(15)

उपवासकृशां दीनां कामरूप निशाचर।

संतापयसि मां भूयः संतापं तन्न शोभनम् ॥ १६ ॥

"It is not right, O ranger of the night, able to change form at will, that you should once more torment me, emaciated through fasting and miserable as I am.

(16)

अथवा नैतदेवं हि यन्मया परिशङ्कितम्।

मनसो हि मम प्रीतिरुत्पन्ना तव दर्शनात् ॥ १७ ॥

"Or, that which is feared by me may not at all be true; for delight has sprung up in my heart at your sight.

(17)

यदि रामस्य दूतस्त्वमागतो भद्रमस्तु ते।

पृच्छामि त्वां हरिश्रेष्ठ प्रिया रामकथा हि मे ॥ १८ ॥

"If, on the other hand, you have really come as a messenger of Śrī Rāma, may good betide you. In that case I make inquiries of you about Śrī Rāma; for talk about Śrī Rāma is pleasing to me, O jewel among the monkeys !

(18)

गुणान् रामस्य कथय प्रियस्य मम वानर।

चित्तं हरसि मे सौम्य नदीकूलं यथा रयः ॥ १९ ॥

"Recount the virtues of my beloved Śrī Rāma, O gentle monkey ! Even as the current of a river wears away its bank, you are luring my mind with the prospect of delighting me with the news of Śrī Rāma.

(19)

अहो स्वप्नस्य सुखता याहमेव चिराह्ता।

प्रेषितं नाम पश्यामि राघवेण वनौकसम् ॥ २० ॥

"Oh the sweetness of the dream presented to me, in which the selfsame I, who was borne away by Rāvaṇa long since, see with my own eyes a monkey sent by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu !

(20)

स्वप्नेऽपि यद्यहं वीरं राघवं सहलक्ष्मणम्।

पश्येयं नावसीदेयं स्वप्नोऽपि मम मत्सरी ॥ २१ ॥

"If I could see the heroic Śrī Rāma accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, even in a dream, I would not feel disheartened; but even a dream is proving niggardly in my case.

(21)

नाहं स्वप्नमिमं मन्ये स्वप्ने दृष्ट्वा हि वानरम्।

न शक्योऽभ्युदयः प्राप्तुं प्राप्तश्चाभ्युदयो मम ॥ २२ ॥

"I do not believe this to be a dream; for good fortune cannot be attained on seeing a monkey in a dream; while placidity of mind, which is a harbinger of good fortune, has been attained by me. (22)

किं नु स्याच्चित्तमोहोऽयं भवेद् वातगतिस्त्वियम् ।

उन्मादजो विकारो वा स्यादयं मृगतृष्णिका ॥ २३ ॥

“Can this meeting of mine with a monkey be a delusion of my mind? Or, it may be a delusion caused by my being possessed by a ghost (clothed with an aerial body). Or, again, it may be a malady born of insanity or it may only be an optic illusion. (23)

अथवा नायमुन्मादो मोहोऽप्युन्मादलक्षणः ।

सम्बुद्धे चाहमात्मानमिमं चापि वनौकसम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Or this may not be a case of insanity, nor even delusion showing symptoms similar to those of insanity; for I am conscious of my own self as well as of this monkey.” (24)

इत्येवं बहुधा सीता सम्प्रधार्य बलाबलम् ।

रक्षसां कामरूपत्वान्मेने तं राक्षसाधिपम् ॥ २५ ॥

Having thus duly considered in many ways the strength of ogres and the weakness of monkeys, who cannot be expected to leap across a vast sea, and also considering the fact that the ogres are able to change their form at will, Sītā concluded Hanumān to be Rāvaṇa, the suzerain ruler of ogres. (25)

एतां बुद्धिं तदा कृत्वा सीता सा तनुमध्यमा ।

न प्रतिव्याजहाराथ वानरं जनकात्मजा ॥ २६ ॥

Having arrived at this conclusion at that time, that lady of slender waist, Sītā, Janaka's daughter, did not speak any more to the monkey, Hanumān. (26)

सीताया निश्चितं बुद्ध्वा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।

श्रोत्रानुकूलैर्वचनैस्तदा तां सम्प्रहर्षयन् ॥ २७ ॥

Coming to know the decision of Sītā, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, spoke as follows bringing excessive joy to her with his words, which were delightful to the ear: (27)

आदित्य इव तेजस्वी लोककान्तः शशी यथा ।

राजा सर्वस्य लोकस्य देवो वैश्रवणो यथा ॥ २८ ॥

“Glorious as the sun, nay, beloved of the world as the moon, Śrī Rāma brings delight to the entire universe by bestowing riches and food grains on all as the god Kubera, son of Sage Viśravā. (28)

विक्रमेणोपपन्नश्च यथा विष्णुर्महायशः ।

सत्यवादी मधुरवाग् देवो वाचस्पतिर्यथा ॥ २९ ॥

“He is endowed with prowess like the highly illustrious Lord Viṣṇu and utters truthful and sweet words like the celestial sage Bṛhaspati. (29)

रूपवान् सुभगः श्रीमान् कंदर्प इव मूर्तिमान् ।

स्थानक्रोधे प्रहर्ता च श्रेष्ठो लोके महारथः ॥ ३० ॥

“He is rich in comeliness, graceful and full of splendour as Love-incarnate. He punishes only him who deserves anger and is the foremost chariot-warrior in the world. (30)

बाहुच्छायामवष्टब्धो यस्य लोको महात्मनः ।

अपक्रम्याश्रमपदान्मृगरूपेण राघवम् ॥ ३१ ॥

शून्ये येनापनीतासि तस्य द्रक्ष्यसि तत्फलम् ।

अचिराद् रावणं संख्ये यो वधिष्यति वीर्यवान् ॥ ३२ ॥

क्रोधप्रमुक्तैरिषुभिर्ज्वलद्भिरिव पावकैः ।

तेनाहं प्रेषितो दूतस्त्वत्सकाशमिहागतः ॥ ३३ ॥

“The whole world depends on the protection of the arms of that exalted soul. You will see for yourself the consequence of the sinful act of Rāvaṇa, by whom you were borne away in a state of utter desolation after diverting Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, from the site of his hermitage through an ogre disguised as a deer. I have sought your presence here as an envoy despatched by that powerful prince, who will before long kill Rāvaṇa in a combat with his shafts, resembling blazing flames and shot in anger. (31—33)

त्वद्वियोगेन दुःखार्तः स त्वां कौशलमब्रवीत् ।

लक्ष्मणश्च महातेजाः सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनः ॥ ३४ ॥

अभिव्याह महाबाहुः स त्वां कौशलमब्रवीत् ।

रामस्य च सखा देवि सुग्रीवो नाम वानरः ॥ ३५ ॥

राजा वानरमुख्यानां स त्वां कौशलमब्रवीत् ।

नित्यं स्मरति ते रामः ससुग्रीवः सलक्ष्मणः ॥ ३६ ॥

“Stricken with agony caused by separation from you, he has made inquiries of you about your welfare. Greeting you, the mighty-armed and celebrated Lakṣmaṇa, the enhancer of Sumitrā’s joy, who is endowed with extraordinary energy, has also made inquiries of you about your welfare. Śrī Rāma’s friend, the celebrated monkey, named Sugrīva, the ruler of the foremost of monkeys, has also made inquiries of you about your welfare, O godlike lady ! Śrī Rāma, along with Sugrīva and Lakṣmaṇa, always remember you. (34—36)

दिष्ट्या जीवसि वैदेहि राक्षसीवशमागता ।
नचिराद् द्रक्ष्यसे रामं लक्ष्मणं च महारथम् ॥ ३७ ॥
मध्ये वानरकोटीनां सुग्रीवं चामितौजसम् ।
अहं सुग्रीवसचिवो हनूमान् नाम वानरः ॥ ३८ ॥

“By good luck, O princess of the Videha territory, you survive, though fallen into the clutches of ogresses. Before long you will see Śrī Rāma and the great chariot-warrior, Lakṣmaṇa, as also Sugrīva of immeasurable strength in the midst of crores of other monkeys. I am a monkey named Hanumān, a minister of Sugrīva. (37-38)

प्रविष्टो नगरीं लङ्कां लङ्घयित्वा महोदधिम् ।
कृत्वा मूर्ध्नि पदन्यासं रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Having leapt across the vast sea dividing the mainland from Laṅkā, I penetrated deep into the city of Laṅkā, setting my foot, as it were, on the head of the evil-minded Rāvaṇa. (39)

त्वां द्रष्टुमुपयातोऽहं समाश्रित्य पराक्रमम् ।
नाहमस्मि तथा देवि यथा मामवगच्छसि ।
विशङ्का त्यज्यतामेषा श्रद्धत्स्व वदतो मम ॥ ४० ॥

“Relying on my own prowess I have come to see you. I am not what you suppose me to be, O godlike lady ! Let this misgiving be shaken off and, pray, believe my words as I speak.” (40)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे चतुस्त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-four of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXV

Questioned by Sītā, who was anxious to ascertain the bonafides of the monkey, Hanumān, after cataloguing the marks on the person of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, narrates his own life-story from his birth onwards including his role as a minister of Sugrīva, and ending with his seeing of Sītā

Hearing the aforesaid story of Śrī Rāma from the lips of Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, for her part spoke the following reassuring words in sweet accents: (1)

तां तु रामकथां श्रुत्वा वैदेही वानरर्षभात् ।
उवाच वचनं सान्त्वमिदं मधुरया गिरा ॥ १ ॥

क्व ते रामेण संसर्गः कथं जानासि लक्ष्मणम् ।
वानराणां नराणां च कथमासीत् समागमः ॥ २ ॥

“Where did your contact with Śrī Rāma come about and how do you know Lakṣmaṇa? And how did a meeting take place between monkeys and human beings? (2)

यानि रामस्य चिह्नानि लक्ष्मणस्य च वानर ।
तानि भूयः समाचक्ष्व न मां शोकः समाविशेत् ॥ ३ ॥

“Describe in detail once more those distinctive marks which exist on the person of Śrī Rāma as well as on that of Lakṣmaṇa, O Hanumān, so that grief may not take possession of me. (3)

कीदृशं तस्य संस्थानं रूपं तस्य च कीदृशम् ।
कथमूरू कथं बाहू लक्ष्मणस्य च शंस मे ॥ ४ ॥

“Tell me what the shape and form of Śrī Rāma as well as of Lakṣmaṇa are like. What are their thighs and arms like?” (4)

एवमुक्तस्तु वैदेह्या हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
ततो रामं यथातत्त्वमाख्यातुमुपचक्रमे ॥ ५ ॥

Questioned thus by Sitā, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, for his part forthwith proceeded to describe Śrī Rāma in accordance with facts as follows: (5)

जानन्ती बत दिष्ट्या मां वैदेहि परिपृच्छसि ।
भर्तुः कमलपत्राक्षि संस्थानं लक्ष्मणस्य च ॥ ६ ॥

He said: “Luckily enough for me, O princess of the Videha territory, whose eyes resemble a lotus petal, you inquire in detail of me about the disposition of limbs of your husband as well as of Lakṣmaṇa, even though knowing them. (6)

यानि रामस्य चिह्नानि लक्ष्मणस्य च यानि वै ।
लक्षितानि विशालाक्षि वदतः शृणु तानि मे ॥ ७ ॥

“Hear from me even as I speak, O large-eyed lady, of those distinctive marks which have been actually noticed by me on the person of Śrī Rāma as well as on that of Lakṣmaṇa. (7)

रामः कमलपत्राक्षः पूर्णचन्द्रनिभाननः ।
रूपदाक्षिण्यसम्पन्नः प्रसूतो जनकात्मजे ॥ ८ ॥

“Śrī Rāma has eyes resembling a lotus petal; his countenance resembles the full moon, O daughter of Janaka ! He is richly endowed with charm and generosity from his birth. (8)

तेजसाऽऽदित्यसंकाशः क्षमया पृथिवीसमः ।
बृहस्पतिसमो बुद्ध्या यशसा वासवोपमः ॥ ९ ॥

“He vies with the sun in effulgence, with the earth in forbearance, with sage Bṛhaspati, the preceptor of gods, in intelligence and with Indra in renown. (9)

रक्षिता जीवलोकस्य स्वजनस्य च रक्षिता ।
रक्षिता स्वस्य वृत्तस्य धर्मस्य च परंतपः ॥ १० ॥

“He is a protector of the entire world of living beings as well as of his own people. Nay, he guards his own character and is a vindicator of virtue and the scourge of his enemies. (10)

रामो भामिनि लोकस्य चातुर्वर्ण्यस्य रक्षिता ।
मर्यादानां च लोकस्य कर्ता कारयिता च सः ॥ ११ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, O lovely lady, is a protector of the world and the preserver of the four grades of society. Nay, as the Creator and Protector of the universe, he has fixed the bounds of propriety to be observed by the people and has inspired the Ṛṣis and others to do so. (11)

अर्चिष्मानर्चितोऽत्यर्थं ब्रह्मचर्यव्रते स्थितः ।
साधूनामुपकारज्ञः प्रचारज्ञश्च कर्मणाम् ॥ १२ ॥

“He is full of splendour and is greatly adored by all and is steadfast in his vow of chastity. He is keenly alive to the services of holy men and knows how to popularize right actions. (12)

राजनीत्यां विनीतश्च ब्राह्मणानामुपासकः ।
ज्ञानवान् शीलसम्पन्नो विनीतश्च परंतपः ॥ १३ ॥

“He is well-versed in politics and a worshipper of Brāhmaṇas, is full of wisdom and richly endowed with amiability, has subdued his passions and is the torment of his foes. (13)

यजुर्वेदविनीतश्च वेदविद्धिः सुपूजितः ।
धनुर्वेदे च वेदे च वेदाङ्गेषु च निष्ठितः ॥ १४ ॥

“He is well-versed in Yajurveda and is highly respected by the knowers of Veda. He is highly proficient in the science of archery as well as in the Vedas as also in the sciences auxiliary to the Vedas. (14)

विपुलांसो महाबाहुः कम्बुग्रीवः शुभाननः ।

गूढजत्रुः सुताम्राक्षो रामो नाम जनैः श्रुतः ॥ १५ ॥

“He has broad shoulders, mighty-arms, a conch-shaped neck, a charming countenance and coppery eyes; he has his clavicle concealed behind muscles and is known by the people by the name of Rāma. (15)

दुन्दुभिस्वननिर्घोषः स्निग्धवर्णः प्रतापवान् ।

समश्च सुविभक्ताङ्गो वर्णं श्यामं समाश्रितः ॥ १६ ॥

“He has a voice deep like the sound of a kettledrum and a glossy skin, is full of glory, square-built and of well-proportioned limbs and is endowed with a dark-brown complexion. (16)

त्रिस्थिरस्त्रिप्रलम्बश्च त्रिसमस्त्रिषु चोन्नतः ।

त्रिताम्रस्त्रिषु च स्निग्धो गम्भीरस्त्रिषु नित्यशः ॥ १७ ॥

त्रिवलीमांस्यवनतश्चतुर्व्यङ्गस्त्रिशीर्षवान् ।

चतुष्कलश्चतुर्लेखश्चतुष्किष्कुश्चतुःसमः ॥ १८ ॥

चतुर्दशसमद्वन्द्वश्चतुर्दष्टश्चतुर्गतिः ।

महोष्ठहनुनासश्च पञ्चस्निग्धोऽष्टवंशवान् ॥ १९ ॥

He is ever stiff in three limbs¹ (viz., the breast, wrist and fist), long in three² (viz., the eyebrows, arms and the scrotum), uniform in three³ (viz., his locks, testicles and knees), elevated in three⁴ (viz., the breast, the rim of the navel and the abdomen), coppery in three⁵ (viz., the rims of his eyes, nails and the palms as well as the soles), soft in three⁶ (viz., the end of the membrum virile, the lines on his soles and the hair), and deep in three⁷ (viz., the voice, gait and the navel). He has three folds (in the skin of his neck and belly), is depressed at three places (viz., the middle of his soles, the lines on his soles, and the nipples), undersized at four places⁸ (viz., the neck, membrum virile, the back and the shanks), endowed with three spirals in the hair of his head, four lines at the root of his thumbs¹⁰ (indicating his knowledge of all the four Vedas) and four lines¹¹ on his forehead (indicating longevity), is four cubits high, and has four pairs of limbs (viz., the cheeks, arms, shanks and knees) equally matched.¹² He has fourteen other pairs of limbs (viz., the eyebrows, nostrils, eyes, ears, the lips, nipples, elbows, wrists, the knees, the testicles, the loins, the hands, the feet and the thighs equally matched.¹³ The four large teeth at both the ends of his upper and the lower jaws are very sharp.¹⁴ He walks in four different gaits resembling those of a lion, a tiger, an elephant and a bull¹⁵, is endowed with excellent lips, chin and nose, five glossy limbs, viz., the hair, eyes, teeth, skin and soles and eight long limbs, viz., the arms, the fingers and the toes, the eyes and the ears, the nose, the backbone and the body. (17—19)

दशपद्मो दशबृहत्त्रिभिर्व्याप्तो द्विशुक्लवान् ।

षडुन्नतो नवतनुस्त्रिभिर्व्याप्नोति राघवः ॥ २० ॥

“Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, has ten lotus-like limbs (viz., the countenance, the mouth, the eyes, the tongue, lips, palate,

* We read in works on Physiognomy—

1. उरश्च मणिबन्धश्च मुष्टिश्च नृपतेः स्थिराः ।
2. प्रलम्बा यस्य स धनी त्रयो भुमुष्कबाहवः ।
3. केशाग्रं वृषणं जानु समं यस्य स भूपतिः ।
4. नाभ्यन्तकुक्षिवक्षोभिरुन्नतो नृपतिर्भवेत् ।
5. नेत्रान्तनखपाण्यङ्घ्रितलैस्ताम्रस्त्रिभिः सुखी ।
6. स्निग्धाः भवन्ति वै येषां पादरेखाः शिरोरुहा ।
तथा लिङ्गमणिस्तेषां महाभाग्यं विनिर्दिशेत् ।
7. स्वरे गतौ च नाभौ च गम्भीरस्त्रिषु शस्यते ।
8. ग्रीवा प्रजननं पृष्ठं ह्रस्वे जङ्घे च पूजिते ।
9. आवर्तत्रययुक्तं यस्य शिरः क्षितिभृतामयं नाथः ।

10. मूलेऽङ्गुष्ठस्य रेखानां चतस्रस्तिस्र एव वा ।
एका द्वे वा यथायोगं वेदरेखा द्विजन्मान् ।
11. ललाटे यस्य दृश्यन्ते चतुस्त्रिद्वयेकरेखिकाः ।
शतद्वयं शतं षष्ठिस्तस्यायुर्विंशतिः क्रमात् ॥
12. बाहुजानूरुगण्डानि चत्वार्यथ समानि च ॥
13. भ्रुवौ नासापुटे नेत्रे कर्णावोष्ठौ च चूचुकौ ।
कूपरे मणिबन्धौ च जानुनी वृषणौ कटी ॥
करौ पादौ स्फिजो यस्य समौ ज्ञेयः स भूपतिः ।
14. स्निग्धा घनाश्च दशनाः सुतीक्ष्णदंष्ट्राः शभाश्चतस्रः ॥
We have read in the Bālakāṇḍa—
15. गजसिंहगती वीरौ शार्दूलवृषभोपमौ । breasts, nails, the hands and the feet¹), ten ample limbs, viz., the chest, the head, the forehead, the neck, the arms, the shoulders, the navel, the feet, the back and the ears², is spread through by reason of three, (viz., splendour, renown and glory), has two white limbs, viz., the teeth and the eyes, is elevated in six limbs viz., the flanks, the abdomen, the breast, the nose, the shoulders and the forehead³; small, thin, fine or sharp in nine, viz., the hair, the moustaches and the beard, nails, the hair on the body, the skin, the finger-joints, the membrum virile acumen and perception⁴ and pursues religious merit, worldly riches and sensual delight in three periods, viz., the forenoon, midday and afternoon. (20)

सत्यधर्मरतः श्रीमान् संग्रहानुग्रहे रतः ।
देशकालविभागज्ञः सर्वलोकप्रियंवदः ॥ २१ ॥

“He is devoted to truth and righteousness and glorious and remains intent on accumulating wealth and power and showering favour on the people. He knows the right use of time and place and speaks kindly to all people. (21)

भ्राता चास्य च वैमात्रः सौमित्रिरमितप्रभः ।
अनुरागेण रूपेण गुणैश्चापि तथाविधः ॥ २२ ॥

“His brother, Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā, too, of immeasurable splendour, is a replica of Śrī Rāma in affection, charm and excellences. (22)

स सुवर्णच्छविः श्रीमान् रामः श्यामो महायशः ।
तावुभौ नरशार्दूलौ त्वद्दर्शनकृतोत्सवौ ॥ २३ ॥
विचिन्वन्तौ महीं कृत्स्नामस्माभिः सह संगतौ ।
त्वामेव मार्गमाणौ तौ विचरन्तौ वसुन्धराम् ॥ २४ ॥
ददर्शतुर्मृगपतिं पूर्वजेनावरोपितम् ।

ऋष्यमूकस्य मूले तु बहुपादपसंकुले ॥ २५ ॥
भ्रातुर्भयार्तमासीनं सुग्रीवं प्रियदर्शनम् ।
वयं च हरिराजं तं सुग्रीवं सत्यसङ्गरम् ॥ २६ ॥

परिचर्यामहे राज्यात् पूर्वजेनावरोपितम् ।
ततस्तौ चीरवसनौ धनुःप्रवरपाणिनौ ॥ २७ ॥
ऋष्यमूकस्य शैलस्य रम्यं देशमुपागतौ ।
स तौ दृष्ट्वा नरव्याघ्रौ धन्विनौ वानरर्षभः ॥ २८ ॥
अभिप्लुतो गिरेस्तस्य शिखरं भयमोहितः ।
ततः स शिखरे तस्मिन् वानरेन्द्रो व्यवस्थितः ॥ २९ ॥
तयोः समीपं मामेव प्रेषयामास सत्वरम् ।
तावहं पुरुषव्याघ्रौ सुग्रीववचनात् प्रभू ॥ ३० ॥
रूपलक्षणसम्पन्नौ कृताञ्जलिरुपस्थितः ।
तौ परिज्ञाततत्त्वार्थौ मया प्रीतिसमन्वितौ ॥ ३१ ॥
पृष्ठमारोप्य तं देशं प्रापितौ पुरुषर्षभौ ।
निवेदितौ च तत्त्वेन सुग्रीवाय महात्मने ॥ ३२ ॥

“He is endowed with a golden lustre, while the glorious and highly illustrious Śrī Rāma is dark-brown of hue. Scouring the entire globe, eager as they are for your sight, both the aforesaid tigers among men got united with us. Ranging the earth looking about for you only, they for their part saw sitting at the foot of Mount Rṣyamūka, thick with numerous trees, Sugrīva of pleasing aspect, the lord of monkeys, dethroned by his elder brother, Vāli, and stricken with the fear of his aforesaid brother. Nay, we waited upon the aforesaid Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, who was free from deceit in combat and had been deposed from his throne by his elder brother, Vāli. Thereupon the two princes, who were clad in tatters and carried most excellent bows in their hands, sought the lovely region of Mount Rṣyamūka. Distracted with fear to behold the aforesaid tigers among men, armed each with a bow, that jewel among monkeys leapt up the summit of the aforesaid mountain.

Ensclosed on that peak, that ruler of monkeys despatched me alone with expedition to their presence. At Sugrīva's command, I approached with folded hands

1. मुखनेत्रास्यजिह्वोष्ठतालुस्तननखं करौ ।
पादौ च दशपद्मानि पद्माकाराणि यस्य च ।
2. उरः शिरो ललाटे च ग्रीवा बाह्वं सनाभयः ।
पादौ पृष्ठं श्रुती चैव विशालास्ते सुखप्रदाः ॥

3. कक्षः कुक्षिश्च वक्षश्च भ्राणं स्कन्धो ललाटिका ।
सर्वभूतेषु निर्दिष्टा उन्नतास्तु सुखप्रदाः ॥
4. केशश्मश्रुनखलोमत्वगङ्गुलिपर्वशेषोबुद्धिदर्शनानि ।

those mighty tigers among men, who were richly endowed with charm and auspicious bodily marks. Having fully known the real facts from me, those two jewels among men were filled with joy, and were transported by me on my shoulders to that region where Sugrīva was. The two princes were introduced in their reality by me to the high-souled Sugrīva. (23—32)

तयोरन्योन्यसम्भाषाद् भृशं प्रीतिरजायत ।
तत्र तौ कीर्तिसम्पन्नौ हरीश्वरनरेश्वरौ ॥ ३३ ॥
परस्परकृताश्वासौ कथया पूर्ववृत्त्या ।
तं ततः सान्त्वयामास सुग्रीवं लक्ष्मणाग्रजः ॥ ३४ ॥
स्त्रीहेतोर्वाल्लिना भ्रात्रा निरस्तं पुरुतेजसा ।
ततस्त्वन्नाशजं शोकं रामस्याक्लिष्टकर्मणः ॥ ३५ ॥
लक्ष्मणो वानरेन्द्राय सुग्रीवाय न्यवेदयत् ।
स श्रुत्वा वानरेन्द्रस्तु लक्ष्मणेनेरितं वचः ॥ ३६ ॥
तदासीन्निष्प्रभोऽत्यर्थं ग्रहग्रस्त इवांशुमान् ।
ततस्त्वद्वात्रशोभीनि रक्षसा ह्रियमाणया ॥ ३७ ॥
यान्याभरणजालानि पातितानि महीतले ।
तानि सर्वाणि रामाय आनीय हरियूथपाः ॥ ३८ ॥
संहृष्टा दर्शयामासुर्गतिं तु न विदुस्तव ।
तानि रामाय दत्तानि मयैवोपहृतानि च ॥ ३९ ॥
स्वनवन्त्यवकीर्णानि तस्मिन् विहतचेतसि ।
तान्यङ्गे दर्शनीयानि कृत्वा बहुविधं तदा ॥ ४० ॥
तेन देवप्रकाशेन देवेन परिदेवितम् ।
पश्यतस्तानि रुदतस्ताम्यतश्च पुनः पुनः ॥ ४१ ॥
प्रादीपयद् दाशरथेस्तदा शोकहुताशनम् ॥ ४२ ॥

“As a sequel to their holding talks with one another, a great amity sprang up between them—Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva. On that occasion those illustrious personage, the lord of monkeys and the ruler of men, felt mutually comforted by narrating their respective past history. Śrī Rāma (the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa) then consoled Sugrīva, who had been banished for the sake of his wife, Rūmā, who had been wrested from him by his elder brother, Vāli, who was endowed with extraordinary energy. Thereupon Lakṣmaṇa spoke to Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, about the grief caused to Śrī Rāma of unwearied action by your (Sītā's) loss.

“Hearing the words uttered by Lakṣmaṇa, the aforesaid lord of monkeys for his part looked extremely lustreless on that occasion like the sun overshadowed by the planet Rāhu. Fetching all those sets of jewels which adorned your limbs and which had been dropped on the earth's surface by you while being carried away by the ogre Rāvaṇa, the leaders of monkey-hordes, greatly delighted, showed them to Śrī Rāma. They, however, did not know your whereabouts. The jewels, which were handed over at that time to Śrī Rāma while he had completely lost his consciousness due to excessive grief, had fallen with a tinkling sound and got scattered, and had been brought in the first instance when they had actually fallen on the ground, by me alone. Clasp those jewels, worth beholding as they were, to his bosom, that adorable prince, who is a manifestation of the Deity, wailed in many ways. Even as he looked on them, he wept and pined for you again and again; the lamentation of Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, highly inflamed the fire of our grief at that time. (33—42)

शायितं च चिरं तेन दुःखार्तेन महात्मना ।
मयापि विविधैर्वाक्यैः कृच्छ्रादुत्थापितः पुनः ॥ ४३ ॥

“Stricken with agony, that exalted soul lay down senseless on the ground for a long time and was then roused by me by means of various cheering expressions with difficulty. (43)

तानि दृष्ट्वा महार्हाणि दर्शयित्वा मुहुर्मुहुः ।
राघवः सहसौमित्रिः सुग्रीवे संन्यवेशयत् ॥ ४४ ॥

“Having examined those valuable jewels, they showed them again and again to one another, and Śrī Rāma, together with Lakṣmaṇa, deposited them with Sugrīva. (44)

स तवादर्शनादार्यै राघवः परितप्यते ।
महता ज्वलता नित्यमग्निनेवाग्निपर्वतः ॥ ४५ ॥

“That scion of Raghu feels sore distressed at your loss even as the mountain* reputed to be the seat of the fire of universal destruction is ever burning with a mighty blazing fire, O noble lady ! (45)

त्वत्कृते तमनिद्रा च शोकश्चिन्ता च राघवम् ।

तापयन्ति महात्मानमग्न्यगारमिवाग्रयः ॥ ४६ ॥

“On account of you, sleeplessness, grief and anxiety too consume the high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), even as the three sacred fires keep a fire-sanctuary heated. (46)

तवादर्शनशोकेन राघवः परिचाल्यते ।

महता भूमिकम्पेन महानिव शिलोच्चयः ॥ ४७ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, has been shaken by grief caused by your absence in the same way as a large mountain is rocked by a violent earthquake. (47)

काननानि सुरम्याणि नदीप्रस्त्रवणानि च ।

चरन् न रतिमाप्नोति त्वामपश्यन् नृपात्मजे ॥ ४८ ॥

“Unable to see you, O princess, Śrī Rāma finds no delight even while ranging highly charming woodlands and by the side of streams and cascades. (48)

स त्वां मनुजशार्दूलः क्षिप्रं प्राप्स्यति राघवः ।

समित्रबान्धवं हत्वा रावणं जनकात्मजे ॥ ४९ ॥

“Making short work of Rāvaṇa with his near and dear ones, O daughter of Janaka, the celebrated Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, a veritable tiger among men, will soon recover you. (49)

सहितौ रामसुग्रीवावुभावकुरुतां तदा ।

समयं वालिनं हन्तुं तव चान्वेषणं प्रति ॥ ५० ॥

“United together in this way, both Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva then arrived at a mutual understanding to get rid of Vāli and to institute a search for you. (50)

ततस्ताभ्यां कुमाराभ्यां वीराभ्यां स हरीश्वरः ।

किष्किन्धां समुपागम्य वाली युद्धे निपातितः ॥ ५१ ॥

“On their reaching Kiṣkindhā together, the aforesaid Vāli, the ruler of monkeys, was then killed in combat by those two gallant princes. (51)

ततो निहत्य तरसा रामो वालिनमाहवे ।

सर्वर्क्षहरिसङ्घानां सुग्रीवमकरोत् पतिम् ॥ ५२ ॥

“Having struck down Vāli by his prowess in fight, Śrī Rāma thereupon crowned Sugrīva king of all the hordes of bears and monkeys. (52)

रामसुग्रीवयोरैक्यं देव्येवं समजायत ।

हनुमन्तं च मां विद्धि तयोर्दूतमुपागतम् ॥ ५३ ॥

“In this way, O godlike lady, did the alliance of Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva come about. And know me to be Hanumān arrived here as their envoy. (53)

स्वं राज्यं प्राप्य सुग्रीवः स्वानानीय महाकपीन् ।

त्वदर्थं प्रेषयामास दिशो दश महाबलान् ॥ ५४ ॥

“Having regained his lost sovereignty and calling together the great monkeys owing allegiance to him, and endowed with extraordinary might, Sugrīva despatched them in all the ten directions (viz., the four quarters, the four intermediate points, the higher and the lower regions). (54)

आदिष्टा वानरेन्द्रेण सुग्रीवेण महौजसः ।

अद्रिराजप्रतीकाशाः सर्वतः प्रस्थिता महीम् ॥ ५५ ॥

“Commanded by Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, monkeys possessed of extraordinary vigour and looking like so many lordly mountains, sallied forth in all directions on the earth. (55)

ततस्ते मार्गमाणा वै सुग्रीववचनातुराः ।

चरन्ति वसुधां कृत्स्नां वयमन्ये च वानराः ॥ ५६ ॥

“Searching for you, afraid as we were of violating the command of Sugrīva, we as well as other monkeys have been actually trotting the entire globe. (56)

* In the Bhīṣma-Parva of, the Mahābhārata, we find mention of the fire of universal destruction, called by the name of Sarhivartaka, existing on a peak of Mount Mālyavān:

तत्र माल्यव्रतः शृङ्गे दृश्यते हव्यवाट् सदा । नाम्ना संवर्तको नाम कालाग्निर्भरतर्षभ ॥

अङ्गदो नाम लक्ष्मीवान् वालिसूनुर्महाबलः ।

प्रस्थितः कपिशार्दूलस्त्रिभागबलसंवृतः ॥ ५७ ॥

“The glorious son of Vāli, Aṅgada by name, who is endowed with extraordinary might and is a veritable tiger among monkeys, set out accompanied by one-third of the Vānara army. (57)

तेषां नो विप्रणष्टानां विन्ध्ये पर्वतसत्तमे ।

भृशं शोकपरीतानामहोरात्रगणा गताः ॥ ५८ ॥

“A number of days and nights rolled past us, overwhelmed as we were with grief, having got lost on the Vindhyan range, the foremost of mountains. (58)

ते वयं कार्यनैराश्यात् कालस्यातिक्रमेण च ।

भयाच्च कपिराजस्य प्राणांस्त्यक्तुमुपस्थिताः ॥ ५९ ॥

“Due to despondency in the matter of accomplishing our purpose and in fear of the lord of monkeys, the time-limit for return having expired, we got ready to give up the ghost. (59)

विचित्य गिरिदुर्गाणि नदीप्रस्त्रवणानि च ।

अनासाद्य पदं देव्याः प्राणांस्त्यक्तुं व्यवस्थिताः ॥ ६० ॥

“Having not been able to find out any trace of Your Majesty, even on scouring mountain fastnesses as also river banks and regions surrounding cascades, we stood resolved to yield our lives. (60)

ततस्तस्य गिरेर्मूर्ध्नि वयं प्रायमुपास्महे ।

दृष्ट्वा प्रायोपविष्टांश्च सर्वान् वानरपुङ्गवान् ॥ ६१ ॥

भृशं शोकार्णवे मग्नः पर्यदेवयदङ्गदः ।

तव नाशं च वैदेहि वालिनश्च तथा वधम् ॥ ६२ ॥

प्रायोपवेशमस्माकं मरणं च जटायुषः ।

तेषां नः स्वामिसंदेशान्निराशानां मुमूर्षताम् ॥ ६३ ॥

कार्यहेतोरिहायातः शकुनिर्वीर्यवान् महान् ।

गृध्रराजस्य सोदर्यः सम्पातिर्नाम गृध्रराट् ॥ ६४ ॥

“We then sat down to fast till death on the summit of that Vindhyan mountain. Plunged deep into an ocean of grief on seeing all the foremost of monkeys resolved upon fasting till death, Prince Aṅgada began to bewail your untraceability, O princess of the Videha territory, as also the destruction of Vāli, his own father, and our resolution to die of hunger as well as the death of Jaṭāyu.

“For helping our cause (under the dispensation of Providence), now that we had lost all hope of carrying out the behest of our master, Sugriva, and longed to die, there appeared on the spot a gigantic and powerful bird, the king of vultures, Sampātī by name, the uterine elder brother of Jaṭāyu, also a king of vultures. (61—64)

श्रुत्वा भ्रातृवधं कोपादिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ।

यवीयान् केन मे भ्राता हतः क्व च निपातितः ॥ ६५ ॥

एतदाख्यातुमिच्छामि भवद्भिर्वानरोत्तमाः ।

अङ्गदोऽकथयत् तस्य जनस्थाने महद्वधम् ॥ ६६ ॥

रक्षसा भीमरूपेण त्वामुद्दिश्य यथार्थतः ।

जटायोस्तु वधं श्रुत्वा दुःखितः सोऽरुणात्मजः ॥ ६७ ॥

“Hearing of the destruction of his younger brother, Jaṭāyu, he spoke in anguish as follows : ‘I wish to hear it narrated by you, O jewels among monkeys, by whom my younger brother was killed and where he was struck down.’ Thereupon Aṅgada truly related to him how that great soul was killed by an ogre of terrible form on account of you (Sītā), whom Jaṭāyu was trying to rescue from that monster’s clutches. That son of Aruṇa, Sampātī, for his part felt distressed to hear of Jaṭāyu’s killing. (65—67)

त्वामाह स वरारोहे वसन्तीं रावणालये ।

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा सम्पातेः प्रीतिवर्धनम् ॥ ६८ ॥

अङ्गदप्रमुखाः सर्वे ततः प्रस्थापिता वयम् ।

विन्ध्यादुत्थाय सम्प्राप्ताः सागरस्यान्तमुत्तमम् ॥ ६९ ॥

“Nay, he spoke of you as dwelling in the abode of Rāvaṇa, O lady of excellent limbs! Hearing the aforesaid report of Sampātī, which intensified our joy, and departing from the aforesaid Vindhyan mountain, as urged by Sampātī, we all duly reached the excellent seashore, with Aṅgada as our leader. (68-69)

त्वद्दर्शने कृतोत्साहा हृष्टाः पुष्टाः प्लवङ्गमाः ।

अङ्गदप्रमुखाः सर्वे वेलोपान्तमुपागताः ॥ ७० ॥

“Feeling happy and strong, resolved as they were to discover you, all the monkeys headed by Aṅgada then arrived near the seashore. (70)

चिन्तां जग्मुः पुनर्भीमां त्वद्दर्शनसमुत्सुकाः ।
अथाहं हरिसैन्यस्य सागरं दृश्य सीदतः ॥ ७१ ॥
व्यवधूय भयं तीव्रं योजनानां शतं प्लुतः ।
लङ्का चापि मया रात्रौ प्रविष्टा राक्षसाकुला ॥ ७२ ॥

“The monkeys, however, who were very keen to find you, fell a prey to a terrible anxiety at the sight of the sea. Dispelling the acute fear of the monkey army, which was sinking into despondency on beholding the sea, I forthwith leapt across a distance of one hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles). Nay, Laṅkā too, which is crowded with ogres, was duly penetrated into by me at night. (71-72)

रावणश्च मया दृष्टस्त्वं च शोकनिपीडिता ।
एतत् ते सर्वमाख्यातं यथावृत्तमनिन्दिते ॥ ७३ ॥
“Rāvaṇa also was beheld by me as well as you, who are sore stricken with grief. All this has been narrated to you by me in accordance with facts, O irreproachable lady ! (73)

अभिभाषस्व मां देवि दूतो दाशरथेरहम् ।
तस्मां रामकृतोद्योगं त्वन्निमित्तमिहागतम् ॥ ७४ ॥
सुग्रीवसचिवं देवि बुद्ध्यस्व पवनात्मजम् ।
कुशली तव काकुत्स्थः सर्वशस्त्रभृतां वरः ॥ ७५ ॥

“Speak to me, O godlike lady; I am a messenger of Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha. Therefore, know me, O godlike lady, to be Hanumān, son of the wind-god, a minister of Sugrīva, arrived here for your sake, having exerted in the cause of Śrī Rāma. All is well with your lord, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, the foremost of all wielders of weapons. (74-75)

गुरोराराधने युक्तो लक्ष्मणः शुभलक्षणः ।
तस्य वीर्यवतो देवि भर्तुस्तव हिते रतः ॥ ७६ ॥

“So is Lakṣmaṇa, who remains ever engaged in propitiating his eldest brother and is endowed with auspicious bodily marks, nay, is devoted to the well-being of your aforesaid powerful husband, O godlike lady ! (76)

अहमेकस्तु सम्प्राप्तः सुग्रीववचनादिह ।
मयेयमसहायेन चरता कामरूपिणा ॥ ७७ ॥
दक्षिणा दिगनुक्रान्ता त्वन्मार्गविचरयैषिणा ।
दिष्ट्याहं हरिसैन्यानां त्वन्नाशमनुशोचताम् ॥ ७८ ॥
अपनेष्यामि संतापं तवाधिगमशासनात् ।
दिष्ट्या हि न मम व्यर्थं सागरस्येह लङ्घनम् ॥ ७९ ॥

“I, for my part, have arrived here alone in obedience to the command of Sugrīva. This southern quarter has been scoured by me, moving all alone, capable as I am of changing my form at will and keen as I was to find out your whereabouts. By good luck I shall be able to dispel the agony of the monkey hordes who are bewailing your loss by telling them your discovery. Luckily enough, my leaping across the sea on this occasion will not go in vain. (77—79)

प्राप्त्याम्यहमिदं देवि त्वद्दर्शनकृतं यशः ।
राघवश्च महावीर्यः क्षिप्रं त्वामभिपत्स्यते ॥ ८० ॥
सपुत्रबान्धवं हत्वा रावणं राक्षसाधिपम् ।
माल्यवान् नाम वैदेहि गिरीणामुत्तमो गिरिः ॥ ८१ ॥
ततो गच्छति गोकर्णं पर्वतं केसरी हरिः ।
स च देवर्षिभिर्दिष्टः पिता मम महाकपिः ।
तीर्थं नदीपतेः पुण्ये शम्बसादनमुद्धरन् ॥ ८२ ॥

“I shall win, O godlike lady, this renown of having discovered you. Nay, having killed Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, with his sons and kinsfolk, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, will soon meet you. There is a mountain, Mālyavān by name, which is the foremost of mountains, O princess of the Videha territory ! From that mountain, which constituted the abode of Keśarī, the monkey Keśarī repaired to the Gokarṇa mountain. Enjoined by celestial sages, the aforesaid mighty monkey, who is my father, killed Sambasādana (a demon of that name, who oppressed the people on the seaside) on that sacred spot on the seashore. (80—82)

यस्याहं हरिणः क्षेत्रे जातो वातेन मैथिलि।
हनूमानिति विख्यातो लोके स्वेनैव कर्मणा ॥ ८३ ॥

“Begotten by the wind-god, O princess of Mithilā, through the consort of that monkey, I am called Hanumān and known all over the world for my own exploits. (83)

विश्वासार्थं तु वैदेहि भर्तुरुक्ता मया गुणाः।
अचिरात् त्वामितो देवि राघवो नयिता ध्रुवम् ॥ ८४ ॥

“Indeed to inspire you with confidence, O princess of the Videha territory, the excellences of your lord have been recounted by me. Before long, O godlike lady, will Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, take you without doubt from this place.” (84)

एवं विश्वासिता सीता हेतुभिः शोककर्षिता।
उपपन्नैरभिज्ञानैर्दूतं तमधिगच्छति ॥ ८५ ॥
अतुलं च गता हर्षं प्रहर्षेण तु जानकी।
नेत्राभ्यां वक्रपक्ष्माभ्यां मुमोचानन्दजं जलम् ॥ ८६ ॥

Reassured thus by cogent proofs and the identification marks described by Hanumān, Sītā, who was emaciated through grief, believed him to be a messenger of her husband and was moved to incomparable joy. Nay, due to excessive joy the daughter of Janaka shed tears of joy from her eyes fringed with curved lashes. (85-86)

चारु तद् वदनं तस्यास्ताम्रशुक्लायतेक्षणम्।
अशोभत विशालाक्ष्या राहुमुक्त इवोदुराद् ॥ ८७ ॥

The charming countenance of that large-eyed lady with coppery, white and big eyes shone at that time like the moon (lit., the lord of stars), disengaged from the hold of Rāhu. (87)

हनूमन्तं कपिं व्यक्तं मन्यते नान्यथेति सा।
अथोवाच हनूमांस्तामुत्तरं प्रियदर्शनाम् ॥ ८८ ॥

She now thought Hanumān unmistakably to be a monkey, and not otherwise. Hanumān now addressed the following excellent words to Sītā of pleasing aspect: (88)

एतत् ते सर्वमाख्यातं समाश्वसिहि मैथिलि।
किं करोमि कथं वा ते रोचते प्रतियाम्यहम् ॥ ८९ ॥

“Everything that I wished to say has thus been told by me. Be reassured, O princess of Mithilā ! What more can I do for you and what would please you? I should like to return if you allow me to go. (89)

हतेऽसुरे संयति शम्बसादने
कपिप्रवीरेण महर्षिचोदनात्।

ततोऽस्मि वायुप्रभवो हि मैथिलि
प्रभावतस्तत्प्रतिमश्च वानरः ॥ ९० ॥

“After the demon Sambasādana had been killed in combat by Kesari, a distinguished hero among the monkeys, at the command of an eminent sage, I was then born of the loins of the wind-god, O princess of Mithilā, and am a monkey equal to him in might.” (90)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे पञ्चत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-five of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXVI

Hanumān delivers Śrī Rāma's signet ring to Sītā in order to strengthen her confidence in him. Applauding Hanumān, Sītā, who was rejoiced to receive the token, inquires about the health of Śrī Rāma and others.

In order to appease the lady, who felt indignant at the thought that Śrī Rāma did not care to come to her rescue so far, which led her to suspect that he had ceased to love her, Hanumān attributes his non-appearance to his ignorance about her whereabouts. Describing Śrī Rāma's desolation in order to betoken his excessive love for her, he consoles her with the assurance that Śrī Rāma is sparing no pains to rescue her from her confinement

भूय एव महातेजा हनूमान् पवनात्मजः ।
अब्रवीत् प्रश्रितं वाक्यं सीताप्रत्ययकारणात् ॥ १ ॥

In order to inspire confidence in Sītā, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, once more addressed the following courteous words to her :

(1)

वानरोऽहं महाभागे दूतो रामस्य धीमतः ।
रामनामाङ्कितं चेदं पश्य देव्यङ्गुलीयकम् ॥ २ ॥
प्रत्ययार्थं तवानीतं तेन दत्तं महात्मना ।
समाश्वसिहि भद्रं ते क्षीणदुःखफला ह्यसि ॥ ३ ॥

"I am a monkey and a messenger of the wise Śrī Rāma, O highly blessed one! Also behold, O godlike lady, this ring marked with the name of Śrī Rāma, handed over by that exalted soul and brought by me to gain your confidence. Be reassured, may good betide you. The fruit of your past deeds which you have been reaping in the form suffering all these days has certainly come to an end."

(2-3)

गृहीत्वा प्रेक्षमाणा सा भर्तुः करविभूषितम् ।
भर्तारमिव सम्प्राप्तं जानकी मुदिताभवत् ॥ ४ ॥

Taking the jewel which had adorned so long the hand of her lord and gazing on it, as though her own husband had duly arrived in the form of that ring, Sītā, Janaka's daughter, felt rejoiced. (4)

चारु तद् वदनं तस्यास्ताम्रशुक्लायतेक्षणम् ।
बभूव हर्षोदग्रं च राहुमुक्त इवोदुराट् ॥ ५ ॥

Her charming countenance with large coppery and white eyes bloomed with joy and shone like the moon (lit., the lord of stars) released by Rāhu. (5)

ततः सा ह्रीमती बाला भर्तुः संदेशहर्षिता ।
परितुष्टा प्रियं कृत्वा प्रशशंस महाकपिम् ॥ ६ ॥

Treating Hanumān with regard, that youthful lady, who was delighted to receive the message of her lord, felt so very happy to see the token of her husband and fully satisfied, then paid a tribute to the great monkey in the following words : (6)

विक्रान्तस्त्वं समर्थस्त्वं प्राज्ञस्त्वं वानरोत्तम ।
येनेदं राक्षसपदं त्वयैकेन प्रधर्षितम् ॥ ७ ॥

"You are valiant, you are full of address and you are learned, a jewel among the monkeys, in that this abode of ogres has been assailed by you alone. (7)

शतयोजनविस्तीर्णः सागरो मकरालयः ।
विक्रमश्लाघनीयेन क्रमता गोष्पदीकृतः ॥ ८ ॥

"Nay, the sea which extends to a distance of one hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles) and is an abode of alligators, has been treated by you like the impression of a cow's hoof on the soil while crossing it, laudable as you are for your prowess. (8)

नहि त्वां प्राकृतं मन्ये वानरं वानरर्षभ।
यस्य ते नास्ति संत्रासो रावणादपि सम्भ्रमः ॥ १॥

“Surely, I do not look upon you as an ordinary monkey, O jewel among monkeys, in that there exists no fear nor any awe even for Rāvaṇa in your mind. (9)

अहंसे च कपिश्रेष्ठ मया समभिभाषितुम्।
यद्यसि प्रेषितस्तेन रामेण विदितात्मना ॥ १० ॥

“Nay, you deserve to be talked with by me, O jewel among monkeys, if you have been sent by the celebrated Śrī Rāma, a knower of the Self. (10)

प्रेषयिष्यति दुर्धर्षो रामो नह्यपरीक्षितम्।
पराक्रममविज्ञाय मत्सकाशं विशेषतः ॥ ११ ॥

“Surely Śrī Rāma, who is difficult to overpower, would not send to my presence in particular an untried hand without fully ascertaining the latter's prowess. (11)

दिष्ट्या च कुशली रामो धर्मात्मा सत्यसंगरः।
लक्ष्मणश्च महातेजाः सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनः ॥ १२ ॥

“Nay, luckily enough for me Śrī Rāma, whose mind is given to piety and who is unfailing in his promise, is doing well, as also Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary energy and enhances the joy of Sumitrā, his mother. (12)

कुशली यदि काकुत्स्थः किं न सागरमेखलाम्।
महीं दहति कोपेन युगान्ताग्रिखोत्थितः ॥ १३ ॥

“If Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, is well, wherefore does he not consume with his wrath the earth encircled by the oceans, as the fire of universal destruction would. (13)

अथवा शक्तिमन्तौ तौ सुराणामपि निग्रहे।
ममैव तु न दुःखानामस्ति मन्ये विपर्ययः ॥ १४ ॥

“Nay, the two princes are able to subdue even gods. But I believe the end of my sufferings has not yet arrived. (14)

कच्चिन्न व्यथते रामः कच्चिन्न परितप्यते।
उत्तराणि च कार्याणि कुरुते पुरुषोत्तमः ॥ १५ ॥

“I hope Śrī Rāma does not feel afflicted nor does he suffer agony. Does that ideal man discharge his duties relating to the future? (15)

कच्चिन्न दीनः सम्भ्रान्तः कार्येषु च न मुह्यति।
कच्चित् पुरुषकार्याणि कुरुते नृपतेः सुतः ॥ १६ ॥

“I hope the prince does not feel helpless or nervous and does not get perplexed in the matter of his duties? Does he perform his human duties? (16)

द्विविधं त्रिविधोपायमुपायमपि सेवते।
विजिगीषुः सुहृत् कच्चिन्मित्रेषु च परंतपः ॥ १७ ॥

“I hope, acting as a friend towards his allies, Śrī Rāma, the scourge of his foes, pursues in relation to them the twofold policy of conciliation and gift and, desirous of victory, follows the threefold policy of gift, chastisement and sowing seeds of dissension with regard to his enemies. (17)

कच्चिन्मित्राणि लभतेऽमित्रैश्चाप्यभिगम्यते।
कच्चित् कल्याणमित्रश्च मित्रैश्चापि पुरस्कृतः ॥ १८ ॥

“I hope he is able to gain friends and is sought for help and protection even by enemies. Are his friends well-disposed towards him and is he esteemed by his friends? (18)

कच्चिदाशास्ति देवानां प्रसादं पार्थिवात्मजः।
कच्चित् पुरुषकारं च दैवं च प्रतिपद्यते ॥ १९ ॥

“Does the prince ever seek the favour of gods? And does he fall back upon personal effort as well as on Providence for the success of his undertakings? (19)

कच्चिन्न विगतस्नेहो विवासान्मयि राघवः।
कच्चिन्मां व्यसनादस्मान्मोक्षयिष्यति राघवः ॥ २० ॥

“I hope Śrī Rāma has not become completely devoid of love towards me as a result of my living in an alien land. Will Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, deliver me from this calamity? (20)

सुखानामुचितो नित्यमसुखानामनूचितः ।

दुःखमुत्तरमासाद्य कच्चिद् रामो न सीदति ॥ २१ ॥

“I hope Śrī Rāma, who is ever deserving of delights and is undeserving of woes, has not sunk into despondency on meeting with the greatest misfortune of his life in the form of my loss? (21)

कौसल्यायास्तथा कच्चित् सुमित्रायास्तथैव च ।

अभीक्ष्णं श्रूयते कच्चित् कुशलं भरतस्य च ॥ २२ ॥

“I hope news about the welfare of Kausalyā and likewise of Sumitrā as well as of Bharata is frequently brought to his ears. (22)

मन्निमित्तेन मानार्हः कच्चिच्छोकेन राघवः ।

कच्चिन्नान्यमना रामः कच्चिन्मां तारयिष्यति ॥ २३ ॥

“Does Śrī Rāma, who is deserving of honour, feel stricken with grief occasioned by my absence? I hope he has not become indifferent to me. And will he rescue me? (23)

कच्चिदक्षौहिणीं भीमां भरतो भ्रातृवत्सलः ।

ध्वजिनीं मन्त्रिभिर्गुप्तां प्रेषयिष्यति मत्कृते ॥ २४ ॥

“Will Bharata, who is fond of his brother, send out for my sake a formidable army, consisting of one Akṣauhiṇī, protected by ministers? (24)

वानराधिपतिः श्रीमान् सुग्रीवः कच्चिदेष्यति ।

मत्कृते हरिभिर्वीरैर्वृतो दन्तनखायुधैः ॥ २५ ॥

“Will the glorious Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, come to my succour, followed by gallant monkeys using their teeth and nails for weapons? (25)

कच्चिच्च लक्ष्मणः शूरः सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनः ।

अस्त्रविच्छरजालेन राक्षसान् विधमिष्यति ॥ २६ ॥

“Nay, will the heroic Lakṣmaṇa, who enhances the joy of Sumitrā, his mother, and is skilled in the use of mystic missiles, exterminate the ogres with his volley of arrows? (26)

रौद्रेण कच्चिदस्त्रेण रामेण निहतं रणे ।

द्रक्ष्याम्यल्पेन कालेन रावणं ससुहृज्जनम् ॥ २७ ॥

“I hope I shall see Rāvaṇa killed at no distant date with his near and dear ones in combat by Śrī Rāma with an infallible and devastating missile? (27)

कच्चिन्न तद्धेमसमानवर्णं

तस्याननं पद्मसमानगन्धि ।

मया विना शुष्यति शोकदीनं

जलक्षये पद्ममिवातपेन ॥ २८ ॥

“I hope that golden countenance of his, melancholy with grief and fragrant like a lotus, has not withered like a lotus blasted under the sun when the water in a pond has dried up. (28)

धर्मापदेशात् त्यजतः स्वराज्यं

मां चाप्यरण्यं नयतः पदातेः ।

नासीद् यथा यस्य न भीर्न शोकः

कच्चित् स धैर्यं हृदये करोति ॥ २९ ॥

“I hope Śrī Rāma, whom neither fear nor grief could flinch from his purpose, when he renounced his sovereignty in the name of righteousness and led me on foot to the forest, still retains firmness in his heart. (29)

न चास्य माता न पिता न चान्यः

स्नेहाद् विशिष्टोऽस्ति मया समो वा ।

तावद्ध्यहं दूत जिजीविषेयं

यावत् प्रवृत्तिं शृणुयां प्रियस्य ॥ ३० ॥

“No one, not even his own mother, Kausalyā, or his father, Emperor Daśaratha, or any other relation, has had the privilege of receiving as abundant affection from Śrī Rāma as he has bestowed on me, not to speak of anyone getting more than me. I too wish to survive only so long as I continue to hear the news of my beloved lord.” (30)

इतीव देवी वचनं महार्थं

तं वानरेन्द्रं मधुरार्थमुक्त्वा ।

श्रोतुं पुनस्तस्य वचोऽभिरामं

रामार्थयुक्तं विरराम रामा ॥ ३१ ॥

Having addressed these words of sweet content and full of great import to that leader of monkeys, Hanumān, the charming lady became silent in order to be able to hear more of Hanumān's delightful speech dealing with the theme of Śrī Rāma. (31)

सीताया वचनं श्रुत्वा मारुतिर्भीमविक्रमः ।
शिरस्यञ्जलिमाधाय वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ ३२ ॥

Placing his folded hands on his head as a token of submission on hearing the reply of Sītā, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, of redoubtable prowess made the following excellent submission: (32)

न त्वामिहस्थां जानीते रामः कमललोचनः ।
तेन त्वां नानयत्याशु शचीमिव पुरंदरः ॥ ३३ ॥

"The lotus-eyed Śrī Rāma does not know you to be here. Therefore, he does not take you back soon as did Indra (the destroyer of strongholds) rescue his own consort, Śaci, borne away by the demon Anuṣṛāda. (33)

श्रुत्वैव च वचो मह्यं क्षिप्रमेष्यति राघवः ।
चमूं प्रकर्षन् महतीं हर्यृक्षगणसंयुताम् ॥ ३४ ॥

"Leading a huge army consisting of monkeys and bears, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, will instantly come here merely on hearing my report. (34)

विष्टम्भयित्वा बाणौघैरक्षोभ्यं वरुणालयम् ।
करिष्यति पुरीं लङ्कां काकुत्स्थः शान्तराक्षसाम् ॥ ३५ ॥

"Filling the sea (lit., the abode of Varuṇa) through and through with volleys of shafts, even though it cannot even be shaken by others, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, will rid the city of Lāṅkā of ogres. (35)

तत्र यद्यन्तरा मृत्युर्यदि देवा महासुराः ।
स्थास्यन्ति पथि रामस्य स तानपि वधिष्यति ॥ ३६ ॥

"On that occasion if Death, gods or even mighty demons stand in the way of Śrī Rāma, he would destroy them too. (36)

तवादर्शनजेनार्ये शोकेन परिपूरितः ।
न शर्म लभते रामः सिंहार्दित इव द्विपः ॥ ३७ ॥

"Filled with grief born of your absence,

O noble lady, Śrī Rāma does not find rest any more than an elephant wounded by a lion. (37)

मन्दरेण च ते देवि शपे मूलफलेन च ।
मलयेन च विन्ध्येन मेरुणा ददुरेण च ॥ ३८ ॥

यथा सुनयनं वल्गु बिम्बोष्ठं चारुकुण्डलम् ।
मुखं द्रक्ष्यसि रामस्य पूर्णचन्द्रमिवोदितम् ॥ ३९ ॥

"Nay, I swear to you by the Mandara and Malaya, Vindhya, Sumeru and Dardura mountains, constituting the abode of monkeys, as well as by roots and fruits which serve as our food, O godlike lady, that you will soon behold the charming countenance of Śrī Rāma, resembling the risen full moon, with beautiful eyes, lips like a ripe Bimba fruit and lovely earrings. (38-39)

क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि वैदेहि रामं प्रस्त्रवणे गिरौ ।
शतक्रतुमिवासीनं नागपृष्ठस्य मूर्धनि ॥ ४० ॥

"You will shortly see Śrī Rāma perched on the Prasravaṇa mountain like Indra (who is believed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices in his previous existences as a condition precedent for being born as Indra) seated on the back of Airāvata (the chief of elephants), O princess of the Videha territory ! (40)

न मांसं राघवो भुङ्क्ते न चैव मधु सेवते ।
वन्यं सुविहितं नित्यं भक्तमश्नाति पञ्चमम् ॥ ४१ ॥

"Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, does not take meat nor honey. He partakes everyday of wild fruits and boiled (wild) rice, fully sanctioned for an ascetic, in the evening (the fifth* period of the day). (41)

नैव दंशान् न मशकान् न कीटान् न सरीसृपान् ।
राघवोऽपनयेद् गात्रात् त्वद्गतेनान्तरात्मना ॥ ४२ ॥

"Śrī Rāma is no longer able to drive away gnats or mosquitoes, insects or even reptiles from his body, his mind being fixed on you. (42)

* The five periods into which a day has been divided are—(1) morning (प्रातः), forenoon (संगव), midday (मध्याह्न), afternoon (अपराह्न) and evening (सायाह्न).

नित्यं ध्यानपरो रामो नित्यं शोकपरायणः ।
नान्यच्चिन्तयते किञ्चित् स तु कामवशं गतः ॥ ४३ ॥

“Śrī Rāma is ever given to contemplation and ever given over to grief. He for his part does not think of anything else, other than you fallen as he is under the sway of love. (43)

अनिद्रः सततं रामः सुप्तोऽपि च नरोत्तमः ।
सीतेति मधुरां वाणीं व्याहरन् प्रतिबुध्यते ॥ ४४ ॥

“Śrī Rāma remains ever awake. Even when asleep, that jewel among men starts up, uttering the name of Sītā in sweet accents. (44)

दृष्ट्वा फलं वा पुष्पं वा यच्चान्यत् स्त्रीमनोहरम् ।
बहुशो हा प्रियेत्येवं श्वसंस्त्वामभिभाषते ॥ ४५ ॥

“Heaving a sigh on beholding a fruit or flower or whatever else is likely to captivate the mind of women, he often calls on you, saying ‘Ah, darling !’ (45)

स देवि नित्यं परितप्यमान-
स्त्वामेव सीतेत्यभिभाषमाणः ।

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे षट्त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-six of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXVII

Sītā, who was distressed to hear of Śrī Rāma’s excessive grief caused by his separation from her, implores Hanumān to bring Śrī Rāma at once to her.

Hanumān, who could not bear to see Sītā’s sad plight, offers to carry her on his back to the presence of Śrī Rāma and girds up his loins to do so. In order to inspire confidence in Sītā, who doubts his capacity to do it looking to his small size, Hanumān assumes a gigantic form; Sītā, however, declines to go with him and urges Hanumān to bring Śrī Rāma to her

सा सीता वचनं श्रुत्वा पूर्णचन्द्रनिभानना ।
हनूमन्तमुवाचेदं धर्मार्थसहितं वचः ॥ १ ॥
Hearing the speech of Hanumān, the धृतव्रतो राजसुतो महात्मा

तवैव लाभाय कृतप्रयत्नः ॥ ४६ ॥

“Suffering extreme agony caused by separation from you and calling on you alone by the name of Sītā, that magnanimous prince, who has undertaken sacred vows is solely engaged in efforts for your recovery.” (46)

सा रामसंकीर्तनवीतशोका
रामस्य शोकेन समानशोका ।
शरन्मुखेनाम्बुदशेषचन्द्रा
निशेव वैदेहसुता बभूव ॥ ४७ ॥

That daughter of Janaka, a ruler of the Videha territory, whose grief (over the imagined apathy of Śrī Rāma) was now completely gone at the detailed description of the condition of Śrī Rāma, yet who felt equally grieved on hearing of Śrī Rāma’s grief—resembled a night, partly bright and partly dark, at the commencement of autumn with the moon obscured by the remnants of clouds. (47)

aforsaid Sītā, whose face resembled the full moon, made the following reply in consonance with righteousness and material good : (I)

अमृतं विषसम्पृक्तं त्वया वानर भाषितम्।
यच्च नान्यमना रामो यच्च शोकपरायणः ॥ २ ॥

“What has been said by you, O Hanumān, viz., that Śrī Rāma does not give his mind to any other thing than me and that he is given over to grief, is nectar mixed with poison. (2)

ऐश्वर्ये वा सुविस्तीर्णे व्यसने वा सुदारुणे।
रज्ज्वेव पुरुषं बद्ध्वा कृतान्तः परिकर्षति ॥ ३ ॥

“Tying a man with a cord, as it were, Death snatches away a man, no matter whether he is rolling in very extensive fortune or sunk in terrible adversity. (3)

विधिर्नूनमसंहार्यः प्राणिनां प्लवगोत्तम।
सौमित्रिं मां च रामं च व्यसनैः पश्य मोहितान् ॥ ४ ॥

“Inevitable indeed is the destiny of living beings, O jewel among monkeys! For example, look at Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā, Śrī Rāma and myself distracted by woes. (4)

शोकस्यास्य कथं पारं राघवोऽधिगमिष्यति।
प्लवमानः परिक्रान्तो हतनौः सागरे यथा ॥ ५ ॥

“How will Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, reach the end of this ocean of grief any more than a powerful man who has suffered a shipwreck and is swimming in a sea? (5)

राक्षसानां वधं कृत्वा सूदयित्वा च रावणम्।
लङ्कामुन्मथितां कृत्वा कदा द्रक्ष्यति मां पतिः ॥ ६ ॥

“When will my lord, Śrī Rāma, see me after compassing the destruction of ogres, killing Rāvaṇa and laying Laṅkā waste? (6)

स वाच्यः संत्वरस्वेति यावदेव न पूर्यते।
अयं संवत्सरः कालस्तावद्धि मम जीवितम् ॥ ७ ॥

“He should be asked to act with great haste; for my life is going to last only till the current period of twelve months is not complete. (7)

वर्तते दशमो मासो द्वौ तु शेषौ प्लवङ्गम।
रावणेन नृशंसेन समयो यः कृतो मम ॥ ८ ॥

“This is the close of the tenth month and two months still remain, O Hanumān, out of the time-limit of twelve months that has been fixed by the merciless Rāvaṇa for my survival. (8)

विभीषणेन च भ्रात्रा मम निर्यातनं प्रति।
अनुनीतः प्रयत्नेन न च तत् कुरुते मतिम् ॥ ९ ॥

“Nay, Rāvaṇa was perseveringly entreated by his younger brother, Vibhiṣaṇa, for my restoration to Śrī Rāma; but the former does not feel inclined to do it. (9)

मम प्रतिप्रदानं हि रावणस्य न रोचते।
रावणं मार्गते संख्ये मृत्युः कालवशंगतम् ॥ १० ॥

“My restoration does not find favour with Rāvaṇa; for Death lies in wait for him in combat, fallen as he is in the clutches of the Time-Spirit (an embodiment of the destructive principle). (10)

ज्येष्ठा कन्या कला नाम विभीषणसुता कपे।
तया ममैतदाख्यातं मात्रा प्रहितया स्वयम् ॥ ११ ॥

“The eldest daughter born of Vibhiṣaṇa is called by the name of Kalā, O Hanumān! This was reported to me by Kalā herself when she was sent to me by her mother. (11)

अविन्ध्यो नाम मेधावी विद्वान् राक्षसपुङ्गवः।
धृतिमाञ्छीलवान् वृद्धो रावणस्य सुसम्मतः ॥ १२ ॥

“There is a jewel among the ogres, Avindhya by name, who is intelligent and learned, full of fortitude and rich in amiable disposition, aged and highly respected by Rāvaṇa. (12)

रामात् क्षयमनुप्राप्तं रक्षसां प्रत्यचोदयत्।
न च तस्य स दुष्टात्मा शृणोति वचनं हितम् ॥ १३ ॥

“He forewarned Rāvaṇa of the imminent destruction of ogres at the hands of Śrī Rāma if he did not restore me; but the evil-minded fellow did not heed his salutary advice. (13)

आशंसेयं हरिश्रेष्ठ क्षिप्रं मां प्राप्यते पतिः।
अन्तरात्मा हि मे शुद्धस्तस्मिंश्च बहवो गुणाः ॥ १४ ॥

“I hope, O jewel among monkeys, that my lord will regain me soon; for my heart is pure and the virtues existing in him are numerous. (14)

उत्साहः पौरुषं सत्त्वमानृशंस्यं कृतज्ञता।
विक्रमश्च प्रभावश्च सन्ति वानर राघवे॥ १५ ॥

“Perseverance, manliness, courage, absence of cruelty, gratitude, prowess and energy figure in Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, O Hanumān ! (15)

चतुर्दश सहस्राणि राक्षसानां जघान यः।
जनस्थाने विना भ्रात्रा शत्रुः कस्तस्य नोद्विजेत्॥ १६ ॥

“What enemy would not tremble before him, who slew as many as fourteen thousand ogres in Janasthāna, unaided by his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa? (16)

न स शक्यस्तुल्यितुं व्यसनैः पुरुषर्षभः।
अहं तस्यानुभावज्ञा शक्रस्येव पुलोमजा॥ १७ ॥

“That jewel among men cannot be shaken by woes (which are no match for him). I know his might even as Śaci (sprung from the loins of the demon Pulomā) knows the might of her husband, Indra. (17)

शरजालांशुमान् शूरः कपे रामदिवाकरः।
शत्रुरक्षोमयं तोयमुपशोषं नयिष्यति॥ १८ ॥

“The valiant Śrī Rāma, who is like the sun with his shafts for rays, O Hanumān, will surely dry up the water in the form of the hostile ogres.” (18)

इति संजल्पमानां तां रामार्थे शोककर्षिताम्।
अश्रुसम्पूर्णवदनामुवाच हनुमान् कपिः॥ १९ ॥

To Sītā, who was speaking volubly as aforesaid, nay, who had been emaciated through grief on account of her separation from Śrī Rāma, her face bathed in tears, Hanumān submitted as follows : (19)

श्रुत्वैव च वचो मह्यं क्षिप्रमेष्यति राघवः।
चमूं प्रकर्षन् महतीं हर्यृक्षगणसंकुलाम्॥ २० ॥

“Leading a huge army, full of monkeys and bears, Śrī Rāma will surely hasten to Laṅkā the moment he hears my report. (20)

अथवा मोचयिष्यामि त्वामद्यैव सराक्षसात्।
अस्माद् दुःखादुपारोह मम पृष्ठमनिन्दिते॥ २१ ॥

“Or, I myself shall deliver you from this calamity caused by the ogre Rāvaṇa this very day. Please climb up my back, O irreproachable lady ! (21)

त्वां तु पृष्ठगतां कृत्वा संतरिष्यामि सागरम्।
शक्तिरस्ति हि मे वोढुं लङ्कामपि सरावणाम्॥ २२ ॥

“I shall easily leap across the sea even after placing you on my back; for I can carry on my back the whole of Laṅkā, Rāvaṇa and all. (22)

अहं प्रस्रवणस्थाय राघवायाद्य मैथिलि।
प्रापयिष्यामि शक्राय हव्यं हुतमिवानलः॥ २३ ॥

“I shall transport you this very day, O princess of Mithila, to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, staying on Mount Prasravaṇa, even as the sacred fire conveys the oblations thrown into it to Indra for whom they are intended. (23)

द्रक्ष्यस्यद्यैव वैदेहि राघवं सहलक्ष्मणम्।
व्यवसायसमायुक्तं विष्णुं दैत्यवधे यथा॥ २४ ॥

त्वदर्शनकृतोत्साहमाश्रमस्थं महाबलम्।
पुरंदरमिवासीनं नगराजस्य मूर्धनि॥ २५ ॥

“You will see this very day Śrī Rāma, accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa—Śrī Rāma, who in his determination to exterminate the ogres resembles Lord Viṣṇu, full of determination to destroy the demons, is endowed with extraordinary might and resolved to see you and remains seated in his hermitage even as Indra (the destroyer of strongholds) on the summit of Mount Meru, the king of mountains, O Sītā ! (24-25)

पृष्ठमारोह मे देवि मा विकाङ्क्षस्व शोभने।
योगमन्विच्छ रामेण शशाङ्केनेव रोहिणी॥ २६ ॥

“Mount on my back, O godlike lady ! Do not show reluctance, O charming one ! Seek to be united with Śrī Rāma even as Rohiṇī”* is with the deity presiding over the moon (marked with the figure of a hare).

(26)

कथयन्तीव शशिना संगमिष्यसि रोहिणी।

मत्पृष्ठमधिरोह त्वं तराकाशं महार्णवम् ॥ २७ ॥

“You will be united with Śrī Rāma as Rohiṇī with the moon-god, the very moment, as it were, you say that you wish to be so united. Pray, climb up my back and reach beyond the vast sea through space the very next moment, as it were.

(27)

नहि मे सम्प्रयातस्य त्वामितो नयतोऽङ्गने।

अनुगन्तुं गतिं शक्ताः सर्वे लङ्कानिवासिनः ॥ २८ ॥

“Surely all the dwellers in Laṅkā will not be able to follow my speed even as I depart from this place bearing you on my back, O fair one !

(28)

यथैवाहमिह प्राप्तस्तथैवाहमसंशयम्।

यास्यामि पश्य वैदेहि त्वामुद्यम्य विहायसम् ॥ २९ ॥

“Lo, bearing you on my back, O princess of the Videha territory, I shall undoubtedly return through airspace precisely as I came here.”

(29)

मैथिली तु हरिश्रेष्ठाच्छ्रुत्वा वचनमद्भुतम्।

हर्षविस्मितसर्वाङ्गी हनूमन्तमथाब्रवीत् ॥ ३० ॥

हनूमन् दूरमध्वानं कथं मां नेतुमिच्छसि।

तदेव खलु ते मन्ये कपित्वं हरियूथप ॥ ३१ ॥

Thrilled all over with joy to hear the aforesaid wonderful proposal from Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, for her part forthwith replied as follows to Hanumān : “How do you intend to take me, O Hanumān, to such a long distance from this place? Indeed, I look upon the aforesaid proposal of yours to be precisely monkey-like, O leader of monkey hordes !

(30-31)

कथं चाल्पशरीरस्त्वं मामितो नेतुमिच्छसि।

सकाशं मानवेन्द्रस्य भर्तुर्मे प्लवगर्षभ ॥ ३२ ॥

“How do you intend to take me from this place, diminutive of form that you are, to the presence of my royal husband, O jewel among monkeys?”

(32)

सीतायास्तु वचः श्रुत्वा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः।

चिन्तयामास लक्ष्मीवान् नवं परिभवं कृतम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Hearing the query of Sītā, the glorious Hanuman, son of the wind-god, thought it to be the first affront of its kind offered to him.

(33)

न मे जानाति सत्त्वं वा प्रभावं वासितेक्षणा।

तस्मात् पश्यतु वैदेही यद् रूपं मम कामतः ॥ ३४ ॥

He said to himself: ‘The dark-eyed lady does not know my strength nor my power. Let the princess of the Videha territory, therefore, behold the form that I can assume at will.’

(34)

इति संचिन्त्य हनुमांस्तदा प्लवगसत्तमः।

दर्शयामास सीतायाः स्वरूपमरिमर्दनः ॥ ३५ ॥

Thinking thus, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys and the destroyer of his enemies, revealed his form to Sītā on that occasion.

(35)

स तस्मात् पादपाद् धीमानाप्लुत्य प्लवगर्षभः।

ततो वर्धितुमारेभे सीताप्रत्ययकारणात् ॥ ३६ ॥

Leaping down from that tree (beneath which she stood), that wise leader of monkeys then began to grow in size in order to inspire confidence in Sītā.

(36)

मेरुमन्दरसंकाशो बभौ दीप्तानलप्रभः।

अग्रतो व्यवतस्थे च सीताया वानरर्षभः ॥ ३७ ॥

Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, looked like Mount Meru or Mount Mandāra and stood in front of Sītā, shining brightly like a blazing fire.

(37)

हरिः पर्वतसंकाशस्ताम्रवक्त्रो महाबलः।

वज्रदंष्ट्रनखो भीमो वैदेहीमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ३८ ॥

The redoubtable Hanumān, who resembled a mountain and had a coppery countenance with adamant teeth and nails and was endowed with extraordinary might, submitted as follows to Sītā, a princess of the Videha Kingdom :

(38)

सपर्वतवनोद्देशां सादृष्ट्राकारतोरणाम्।

लङ्कामिमां सनाथां वा नयितुं शक्तिरस्ति मे ॥ ३९ ॥

“There is capacity in me to carry this entire city of Laṅkā including its hills and woodlands as well as its market-places, defensive walls and arches, with its very lord, Rāvaṇa. (39)

तदवस्थाप्यतां बुद्धिरलं देवि विकाङ्क्षया ।
विशोकं कुरु वैदेहि राघवं सहलक्ष्मणम् ॥ ४० ॥

“Therefore, let your mind be settled, O godlike lady, and have done with hesitation. Rid Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, alongwith Lakṣmaṇa, of grief, O princess of the Videha territory !” (40)

तं दृष्ट्वाचलसंकाशमुवाच जनकात्मजा ।
पद्मपत्रविशालाक्षी मारुतस्यौरसं सुतम् ॥ ४१ ॥

Finding Hanumān of the size of a mountain, Sītā, daughter of Janaka, who had eyes big as the petals of a lotus, replied as follows to the son of the wind-god: (41)

तव सत्त्वं बलं चैव विजानामि महाकपे ।
वायोरिव गतिश्चापि तेजश्चाग्नेरिवाद्भुतम् ॥ ४२ ॥

“I know full well your courage and strength, O mighty Hanumān! Your speed is like that of the wind, while your marvellous brilliance too is like that of fire itself. (42)

प्राकृतोऽन्यः कथं चेमां भूमिमागन्तुमर्हति ।
उद्धरप्रमेयस्य पारं वानरयूथप ॥ ४३ ॥

“How could any other ordinary monkey actually reach this land beyond the vast sea, O leader of hordes of monkeys? (43)

जानामि गमने शक्तिं नयने चापि ते मम ।
अवश्यं सम्प्रधार्याशु कार्यसिद्धिरिवात्मनः ॥ ४४ ॥

“I know your power of locomotion as well as your ability to carry me on your back. The accomplishment of my object too must, however, be determined at once even as yours. (44)

अयुक्तं तु कपिश्रेष्ठ मया गन्तुं त्वया सह ।
वायुवेगसवेगस्य वेगो मां मोहयेत् तव ॥ ४५ ॥

“My going with you, however, O jewel among monkeys, is not proper. Your speed, which is equal to that of the wind, may render me unconscious. (45)

अहमाकाशमासक्ता उपर्युपरि सागरम् ।
प्रपतेयं हि ते पृष्ठाद् भूयो वेगेन गच्छतः ॥ ४६ ॥

“Besides, stuck to space, even as you sweep with speed all over the sea, I may actually tumble down from your back. (46)

पतिता सागरे चाहं तिमिनक्रझषाकुले ।
भवेयमाशु विवशा यादसामन्नमुत्तमम् ॥ ४७ ॥

“Nay, fallen insensible into the sea, teeming with sharks, crocodiles and giant fish, I may become the excellent food of aquatic creatures. (47)

न च शक्ष्ये त्वया सार्धं गन्तुं शत्रुविनाशन ।
कलत्रवति संदेहस्त्वयि स्यादप्यसंशयम् ॥ ४८ ॥

“For other reasons too, O destroyer of foes, I shall not be able to go with you. Suspicion of the ogres will undoubtedly fall on you as you will go with a lady on your back. (48)

हियमाणां तु मां दृष्ट्वा राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ।
अनुगच्छेयुरादिष्टा रावणेन दुरात्मना ॥ ४९ ॥

“Enjoined by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, ogres of terrible prowess will surely pursue you on seeing me being borne away by you. (49)

तैस्त्वं परिवृतः शूरैः शूलमुद्गरपाणिभिः ।
भवेस्त्वं संशयं प्राप्तो मया वीर कलत्रवान् ॥ ५० ॥

“Surrounded by the heroic ogres carrying darts and clubs in their hands, and accompanied by a lady i.e., myself, you will fall into danger. (50)

सायुधा बहवो व्योम्नि राक्षसास्त्वं निरायुधः ।
कथं शक्ष्यसि संयातुं मां चैव परिरक्षितुम् ॥ ५१ ॥

“There will be numerous ogres equipped with arms in space; how then will you be able to fight them, as also protect me, unarmed that you are? (51)

युध्यमानस्य रक्षोभिस्ततस्तैः क्रूरकर्मभिः ।
प्रपतेयं हि ते पृष्ठाद् भयार्ता कपिसत्तम ॥ ५२ ॥

“Stricken with fear, O jewel among monkeys, I may then fall down from your back while you are contending with those ogres of cruel deeds. (52)

अथ रक्षांसि भीमानि महान्ति बलवन्ति च।
कथंचित् साम्प्राये त्वां जयेयुः कपिसत्तम ॥ ५३ ॥
अथवा युध्यमानस्य पतेयं विमुखस्य ते।
पतितां च गृहीत्वा मां नयेयुः पापराक्षसाः ॥ ५४ ॥

“In case the ogres, who are terrible, huge and mighty, are somehow able to overcome you in conflict, or if I slip when you have turned your eyes away from me while fighting with them, the sinful ogres may bear me away, laying hold on me when fallen. (53-54)

मां वा हरेयुस्त्वद्धस्ताद् विशसेयुरथापि वा।
अनवस्थौ हि दृश्येते युद्धे जयपराजयौ ॥ ५५ ॥

“Or, they may wrest me from your grasp or even kill me afterwards; for victory and defeat in combat are said to be uncertain. (55)

अहं वापि विपद्येयं रक्षोभिरभितर्जिता।
त्वत्प्रयत्नो हरिश्रेष्ठ भवेन्निष्फल एव तु ॥ ५६ ॥

“Or, I may even die when intimidated by the ogres. Your endeavour to take me to the presence of Śrī Rāma may in that case prove utterly futile, O jewel among monkeys! (56)

कामं त्वमपि पर्याप्तो निहन्तुं सर्वराक्षसान्।
राघवस्य यशो हीयेत् त्वया शस्तैस्तु राक्षसैः ॥ ५७ ॥

“Even though you are able to kill all the ogres, the fame of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, may suffer diminution because of the ogres having been killed by you. (57)

अथवाऽऽदाय रक्षांसि न्यसेयुः संवृते हि माम्।
यत्र ते नाभिजानीयुर्हरयो नापि राघवः ॥ ५८ ॥

“Or, bearing me away, the ogres may actually lodge me in a secret place, where neither those monkeys nor Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, may know anything about me. (58)

आरम्भस्तु मदर्थोऽयं ततस्तव निरर्थकः।
त्वया हि सह रामस्य महानागमने गुणः ॥ ५९ ॥

“This adventure of yours undertaken on my account will then prove to be in vain. A great advantage indeed lies in Śrī Rāma’s advent with you. (59)

मयि जीवितमायत्तं राघवस्यामितौजसः।
भ्रातृणां च महाबाहो तव राजकुलस्य च ॥ ६० ॥

“The life of Śrī Rāma, who is endowed with immeasurable strength, as well as of his three younger brothers, as also of your king, Sugrīva and his family is dependent on me, O mighty-armed monkey ! (60)

तौ निराशौ मदर्थं च शोकसंतापकर्षितौ।
सह सर्वर्क्षहरिभित्त्यक्षयतः प्राणसंग्रहम् ॥ ६१ ॥

“Despondent and emaciated through grief and agony on my account, the two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, will give up their hold on life alongwith all the bears and monkeys. (61)

भर्तुर्भक्तिं पुरस्कृत्य रामादन्यस्य वानर।
नाहं स्पृष्टुं स्वतो गात्रमिच्छेयं वानरोत्तम ॥ ६२ ॥

“Keeping as I do devotion to my lord in the forefront, O Hanumān, I do not wish to touch of my own free will the body of anyone other than Śrī Rāma, O jewel among monkeys ! (62)

यदहं गात्रसंस्पर्शं रावणस्य गता बलात्।
अनीशा किं करिष्यामि विनाथा विवशा सती ॥ ६३ ॥

“That I was forced into contact with Rāvaṇa was because, being helpless, without a protector and having lost control of myself, I could not do anything. (63)

यदि रामो दशग्रीवमिह हत्वा सराक्षसम्।
मामितो गृह्य गच्छेत् तत् तस्य सदृशं भवेत् ॥ ६४ ॥

“If, having killed Rāvaṇa alongwith the other ogres on this soil, and recovering me, Śrī Rāma departs from this place, that would be worthy of him. (64)

श्रुताश्च दृष्टा हि मया पराक्रमा
महात्मनस्तस्य रणावमर्दिनः।

न देवगन्धर्वभुजङ्गराक्षसा
भवन्ति रामेण समा हि संयुगे ॥ ६५ ॥

“The heroic achievements of that exalted soul, capable of crushing the enemy in combat, have been heard of, nay, actually witnessed by me. Not even gods, Gandharvas, Nāgas and ogres combined can in fact be a match for Śrī Rāma on the field of battle. (65)

समीक्ष्य तं संयति चित्रकार्मुकं
महाबलं वासवतुल्यविक्रमम्।
सलक्ष्मणं को विषहेत राघवं
हुताशनं दीप्तमिवानिलेरितम् ॥ ६६ ॥

“Who, having vividly perceived Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who is endowed with extraordinary might and is equal in prowess to Indra, the ruler of gods, accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa and armed with a bright bow and as such resembling a fire fanned by a blast and burst into flames, would dare withstand him? (66)

सलक्ष्मणं राघवमाजिमर्दनं
दिशागजं मत्तमिव व्यवस्थितम्।
सहेत को वानरमुख्य संयुगे
युगान्तसूर्यप्रतिमं शराचिषम् ॥ ६७ ॥

“Who can, O jewel among monkeys, resist Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, capable of crushing the enemy in combat, and firmly stationed on the field of battle like an elephant guarding a quarter in rut and resembling the sun at the end of creation with the arrows as its rays? (67)

स मे कपिश्रेष्ठ सलक्ष्मणं प्रियं
सयूथपं क्षिप्रमिहोपपादय।
चिराय रामं प्रति शोककर्षितां
कुरुष्व मां वानरवीर हर्षिताम् ॥ ६८ ॥

“Therefore, O jewel among monkeys, bring here with all speed my beloved lord alongwith Lakṣmaṇa and the leaders of monkey hordes. Bring joy to me, O gallant monkey, emaciated as I am through grief for long on account of Śrī Rāma.” (68)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे सप्तत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-seven of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टात्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXVIII

Asked by Hanumān for a token, Sītā narrates the episode of a crow, which occurred on the Citrakūṭa mountain, and asks Hanumān to repeat the story to Śrī Rāma by way of a token. She further sends her greetings both to Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, conveys her inquiry after their welfare and communicates to them her resolve to survive only for a month after the expiry of the time-limit prescribed by Rāvaṇa; and last of all, she hands over to him her jewel for the head as a token

ततः स कपिशार्दूलस्तेन वाक्येन तोषितः।

सीतामुवाच तच्छ्रुत्वा वाक्यं वाक्यविशारदः ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the foregoing reply, that tiger

among monkeys, who was gratified by the aforesaid plea, and was a past-master in expression, thereupon submitted to Sītā as follows : (1)

युक्तरूपं त्वया देवि भाषितं शुभदर्शने।
सदृशं स्त्रीस्वभावस्य साध्वीनां विनयस्य च ॥ २ ॥
स्त्रीत्वान्न त्वं समर्थासि सागरं व्यतिवर्तितुम्।
मामधिष्ठाय विस्तीर्णं शतयोजनमायतम् ॥ ३ ॥

“What has been uttered by you, O divine lady of charming aspect, is most proper, being in accord with Your feminine nature and modesty, characteristic of virtuous ladies. Mounting on my back, you will not be able to cross the vast sea, a hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles) wide, because of your being a woman. (2-3)

द्वितीयं कारणं यच्च ब्रवीषि विनयान्विते।
रामादन्यस्य नार्हामि संसर्गमिति जानकि ॥ ४ ॥
एतत् ते देवि सदृशं पत्न्यास्तस्य महात्मनः।
का ह्यन्या त्वामृते देवि ब्रूयाद् वचनमीदृशम् ॥ ५ ॥

“Again, the second plea which you have given for not accepting my offer to take you across the sea on my back to the presence of Śrī Rāma, O daughter of Janaka, full of modesty as you are, saying ‘I ought not to touch a male other than Śrī Rāma’ is but worthy of you, a consort of that exalted soul, O godlike lady ! For what woman other than you can put forward such a plea, O divine lady? (4-5)

श्रोष्यते चैव काकुत्स्थः सर्वं निरवशेषतः।
चेष्टितं यत् त्वया देवि भाषितं च ममाग्रतः ॥ ६ ॥

“Nay, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, will certainly hear fully from my lips all that has been done and said by you in my presence, O godlike lady ! (6)

कारणैर्बहुभिर्देवि रामप्रियचिकीर्षया।
स्नेहप्रस्कन्नमनसा मयैतत् समुदीरितम् ॥ ७ ॥

“For many reasons and with intent to do what pleases Śrī Rāma, this proposal was made by me with a mind moistened with affection, O divine lady ! (7)

लङ्काया दुष्प्रवेशत्वाद् दुस्तरत्वान्महोदधेः।
सामर्थ्यादात्मनश्चैव मयैतत् समुदीरितम् ॥ ८ ॥

“This proposal was made by me because

Laṅkā is difficult to penetrate, the vast sea is difficult to cross and because of my own capacity to take you across the sea. (8)

इच्छामि त्वां समानेतुमद्यैव रघुनन्दिना।
गुरुस्नेहेन भक्त्या च नान्यथा तदुदाहृतम् ॥ ९ ॥

“I wished to reunite you with Śrī Rāma the delight of the Raghus, this very day. Hence that proposal was made by me out of affection for the venerable Śrī Rāma and out of devotion to you, not for any other reason. (9)

यदि नोत्सहसे यातुं मया सार्धमनिन्दिते।
अभिज्ञानं प्रयच्छ त्वं जानीयाद् राघवो हि यत् ॥ १० ॥

“If you are unable to come with me, O irreproachable lady, pray let me have some token by means of which Śrī Rāma, scion of Raghu, may come to know that I have for certain met you.” (10)

एवमुक्ता हनुमता सीता सुरसुतोपमा।
उवाच वचनं मन्दं बाष्पप्रग्रथिताक्षरम् ॥ ११ ॥

Requested thus by Hanumān, Sītā, who resembled the daughter of a god, replied as follows in faint accents, her voice choked with tears: (11)

इदं श्रेष्ठमभिज्ञानं ब्रूयास्त्वं तु मम प्रियम्।
शैलस्य चित्रकूटस्य पादे पूर्वोत्तरे पदे ॥ १२ ॥
तापसाश्रमवासिन्याः प्राज्यमूलफलोदके।
तस्मिन् सिद्धाश्रिते देशे मन्दाकिन्यविदूरतः ॥ १३ ॥
तस्योपवनखण्डेषु नानापुष्पसुगन्धिषु।
विहृत्य सलिले क्लिन्नो ममाङ्गे समुपाविशः ॥ १४ ॥

“Please deliver you to my darling without fail the most excellent token in the shape of the following message : ‘Having sported in water in the groves, redolent with the fragrance of various flowers, of the well-known region inhabited by Siddhas and rich in roots, fruits and water, not very far from the Mandākinī river, on a small hill adjacent to the Citrakūṭa mountain on its north-eastern side, you sat down dripping (being wet) on my lap, while I was living in a hermitage fit for ascetics. (12—14)

ततो मांससमायुक्तो वायसः पर्यंतुण्डयत्।
तमहं लोष्टमुद्यम्य वारयामि स्म वायसम्॥ १५ ॥

“Thereupon a crow, greedy of flesh, began to peck at me. Picking up a clod of earth I kept the crow back. (15)

दारयन् स च मां काकस्तत्रैव परिलीयते।
न चाप्युपारमन्मांसाद् भक्षार्थी बलिभोजनः॥ १६ ॥

“In order to pierce me, the said crow, however, who lived on fragments of food offered at meals, remained in hiding on that very spot and would not leave its prey, desirous as it was of food. (16)

उत्कर्षन्त्यां च रशनां क्रुद्धायां मयि पक्षिणे।
स्त्रंसमाने च वसने ततो दृष्टा त्वया ह्यहम्॥ १७ ॥
त्वया विहसिता चाहं क्रुद्धा संलज्जिता तदा।
भक्ष्यगृद्धेन काकेन दारिता त्वामुपागता॥ १८ ॥

“As my skirt slipped while I was pulling its string in order to tighten it, angry as I was at the bird, I was actually seen by you in that state and laughed at. I felt nettled and abashed at that moment. Pecked once more by the crow, who was avid of food, I sought shelter with you. (17-18)

ततः श्रान्ताहमुत्सङ्गमासीनस्य तवाविशम्।
क्रुध्यन्तीव प्रहृष्टेन त्वयाहं परिसान्त्विता॥ १९ ॥

“Feeling exhausted, I sought your lap as though angry, seated as you were, and was duly comforted by you, fully delighted as I was with your presence. (19)

बाष्पपूर्णमुखी मन्दं चक्षुषी परिमार्जती।
लक्षिताहं त्वया नाथ वायसेन प्रकोपिता॥ २० ॥

“Gently wiping my eyes, my face bathed in tears, I was marked by you, O lord, as having been annoyed by the crow. (20)

परिश्रमाच्च सुप्ता हे राघवाङ्केऽस्म्यहं चिरम्।
पर्यायेण प्रसुप्तश्च ममाङ्के भरताग्रजः॥ २१ ॥

“Nay, due to exhaustion, O Hanumān, I lay asleep in the arms of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) for long. And Śrī Rāma (the eldest brother of Bharata) in his turn lay fast asleep in my arms. (21)

स तत्र पुनरेवाथ वायसः समुपागमत्।
ततः सुप्तप्रबुद्धां मां राघवाङ्कात् समुत्थिताम्।
वायसः सहसागम्य विददार स्तनान्तरे॥ २२ ॥

“Meantime (while Śrī Rāma was lying asleep in my arms) the same crow appeared on the scene once more. Descending all of a sudden, the crow presently clawed me in the breasts even as I awoke from slumber and rose from the arms of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (22)

पुनः पुनरथोत्पत्य विददार स मां भृशम्।
ततः समुत्थितो रामो मुक्तैः शोणितबिन्दुभिः॥ २३ ॥

“Flying up again, it forthwith tore me grievously once more. At the touch of drops of blood discharged from the wound, Śrī Rāma presently awoke from sleep. (23)

स मां दृष्ट्वा महाबाहुर्वितुत्रां स्तनयोस्तदा।
आशीविष इव क्रुद्धः श्वसन् वाक्यमभाषत॥ २४ ॥
केन ते नागनासोरु विक्षतं वै स्तनान्तरम्।
कः क्रीडति सरोषेण पञ्चवक्त्रेण भोगिना॥ २५ ॥

“Incensed to see me lacerated at both the breasts, and hissing like a venomous serpent, he then spoke as follows: ‘By whom have your breasts been actually wounded, O lady with thighs resembling the proboscis of an elephant? Who is playing with an angry five-headed serpent?’ (24-25)

वीक्षमाणस्ततस्तं वै वायसं समवैक्षत।
नखैः सरुधिरैस्तीक्ष्णैर्मामेवाभिमुखं स्थितम्॥ २६ ॥

“Gazing all round, he thereupon actually perceived that crow sitting with its face turned towards me alone, its sharp claws stained with blood. (26)

पुत्रः किल स शक्रस्य वायसः पततां वरः।
धरान्तरं गतः शीघ्रं पवनस्य गतौ समः॥ २७ ॥

“That crow, the foremost of birds, was, they say, no other than the son of Indra (the ruler of gods), who had quickly descended from the heaven to the earth, vying as he did with the wind in speed. (27)

ततस्तस्मिन् महाबाहुः कोपसंवर्तितेक्षणः ।

वायसे कृतवान् क्रूरां मतिं मतिमतां वरः ॥ २८ ॥

“His eyes rolling through fury, the mighty-armed prince, the foremost of the wise, made a severe resolve with regard to that crow. (28)

स दर्भसंस्तराद् गृह्य ब्रह्मणोऽस्त्रेण योजयत् ।

स दीप्त इव कालाग्निर्ज्वालाभिमुखो द्विजम् ॥ २९ ॥

“Taking a blade of the sacred Kuśa grass from his mat, he charged it with the potency of the mystic missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator). It burst into flames like the blazing fire of universal destruction before the bird. (29)

स तं प्रदीप्तं चिक्षेप दर्भं तं वायसं प्रति ।

ततस्तु वायसं दर्भः सोऽम्बरेऽनुजगाम ह ॥ ३० ॥

“He hurled that fiery blade of the sacred Kuśa grass at the aforesaid crow. Presently that blade of the sacred Kuśa grass for its part actually followed the crow through the air. (30)

अनुसृष्टस्तदा काको जगाम विविधां गतिम् ।

त्राणकाम इमं लोकं सर्वं वै विचचार ह ॥ ३१ ॥

“Seeking protection when given chase to by the missile, the crow then sought various asylums and thus actually ranged this whole universe: so it is said. (31)

स पित्रा च परित्यक्तः सर्वैश्च परमर्षिभिः ।

त्रैल्लोकान् सम्परिक्रम्य तमेव शरणं गतः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Having duly traversed through all the three worlds (the earth, heaven and the region lying between them), nay, deserted by his father Indra and all the greatest Ṛṣis, he sought Śrī Rāma alone as his refuge. (32)

स तं निपतितं भूमौ शरण्यः शरणागतम् ।

वधाहमपि काकुत्स्थः कृपया पर्यपालयत् ॥ ३३ ॥

“Out of compassion the celebrated Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), spared the crow, who had sought pardon from him and fallen on the ground, though deserving of death. (33)

परिद्यूनं विवर्णं च पतमानं तमब्रवीत् ।

मोघमस्त्रं न शक्यं तु ब्राह्मं कर्तुं तदुच्यताम् ॥ ३४ ॥

“Even as he was falling, Śrī Rāma said to the crow, whose energy had exhausted and who had grown pale through fear : ‘The missile presided over by Brahmā cannot in any case be rendered ineffectual : it may, therefore, be pointed out how to make it effectual.’ (34)

ततस्तस्याक्षि काकस्य हिनस्ति स्म स दक्षिणम् ।

दत्त्वा तु दक्षिणं नेत्रं प्राणेभ्यः परिरक्षितः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Then Śrī Rāma destroyed the right eye of the crow. Since he had actually sacrificed his right eye, he was spared his life. (35)

स रामाय नमस्कृत्वा राज्ञे दशरथाय च ।

विसृष्टस्तेन वीरेण प्रतिपेदे स्वमालयम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“Having made obeisance to Śrī Rāma and mentally to his father, King Daśaratha, when dismissed by that hero, he returned to his abode. (36)

मत्कृते काकमात्रेऽपि ब्रह्मास्त्रं समुदीरितम् ।

कस्माद् यो माहरत् त्वत्तः क्षमसे तं महीपते ॥ ३७ ॥

“Addressing Śrī Rāma again, as though present before her, ‘a missile presided over by Brahmā was discharged by you at a mere crow for my sake. How then, O ruler of the earth, do you bear with him who wrested me from you? (37)

स कुरुष्व महोत्साहां कृपां मयि नरर्षभ ।

त्वया नाथवती नाथ ह्यनाथा इव दृश्यते ॥ ३८ ॥

“Such that you are, pray show compassion to me with great vigour, O jewel among men ! She, who has her lord in you, O lord, actually looks like one without any protector. (38)

आनृशंस्यं परो धर्मस्त्वत्त एव मया श्रुतम् ।

जानामि त्वां महावीर्यं महोत्साहं महाबलम् ॥ ३९ ॥

अपारवारमक्षोभ्यं गाम्भीर्यात् सागरोपमम् ।

भर्तारं ससमुद्राया धरण्या वासवोपमम् ॥ ४० ॥

“From you alone have I heard that motiveless compassion is the highest virtue. Nay, I know you to be endowed with extraordinary valour, extraordinary vigour and extraordinary might, limitless in time or space, incapable of being disturbed and resembling the ocean in profundity, the lord of the earth, including the oceans and a compeer of Indra, the lord of paradise.

(39-40)

एवमस्त्रविदां श्रेष्ठो बलवान् सत्त्ववानपि।
किमर्थमस्त्रं रक्षःसु न योजयसि राघव॥ ४१॥

“Wherefore, O scion of Raghu, do you not employ your missiles against the ogres, even though you are, as aforesaid, the foremost of those proficient in the use of missiles, mighty and full of courage?”

(41)

न नागा नापि गन्धर्वा न सुरा न मरुद्गणाः।
रामस्य समरे वेगं शक्ताः प्रतिसमीहितुम्॥ ४२॥

Turning to Hanumān “Neither Nāgas nor Gandharvas (celestial musicians), nor gods nor the Māruts (the forty-nine wind-gods) are able to resist the onrush of Śrī Rāma in combat.

(42)

तस्य वीर्यवतः कच्चिद् यद्यस्ति मयि सम्भ्रमः।
किमर्थं न शरैस्तीक्ष्णैः क्षयं नयति राक्षसान्॥ ४३॥

“If there still exists any regard for me in the heart of that powerful prince, wherefore does he not destroy the ogres with his sharp arrows?”

(43)

भ्रातुरादेशमादाय लक्ष्मणो वा परंतपः।
कस्य हेतोर्न मां वीरः परित्राति महाबलः॥ ४४॥

“Or, why does not the heroic Lakṣmaṇa, the scourge of the foes, nay, who is endowed with extraordinary might, deliver me, taking permission of his eldest brother?”

(44)

यदि तौ पुरुषव्याघ्रौ वाय्विन्द्रसमतेजसौ।
सुराणामपि दुर्धर्षौ किमर्थं मामुपेक्षतः॥ ४५॥

“If those two tigers among men, who are equal to Indra and the wind-god in energy, are difficult to overcome even by gods, wherefore do they disregard me?”

(45)

ममैव दुष्कृतं किञ्चिन्महदस्ति न संशयः।
समर्थावपि तौ यन्मां नावेक्षेते परंतपौ॥ ४६॥

“Some major sin of mine alone comes in the way in that those twin scourges of their foes, do not take care of me, even though they are capable to do so: there is no doubt about it.”

(46)

वैदेह्या वचनं श्रुत्वा करुणं साश्रु भाषितम्।
अथाब्रवीन्महातेजा हनूमान् हरियूथपः॥ ४७॥
त्वच्छोकविमुखो रामो देवि सत्येन ते शपे।

रामे दुःखाभिपन्ने तु लक्ष्मणः परितप्यते॥ ४८॥

Hearing the aforesaid piteous appeal uttered by Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, with tears in her eyes, Hanumān, a leader of monkey hordes, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, forthwith replied as follows: “I swear to you by truth, O godlike lady, that Śrī Rāma has grown averse to everything else through grief caused by your absence. And Lakṣmaṇa too suffers agony due to Śrī Rāma being overwhelmed with sorrow.

(47-48)

कथंचिद् भवती दृष्टा न कालः परिशोचितुम्।
इमं मुहूर्तं दुःखानामन्तं द्रक्ष्यसि शोभने॥ ४९॥

“Somehow you have been discovered by me; hence this is not the time for grieving. From this very hour you will see the end of your woes drawing near, O glorious lady !

(49)

तावुभौ पुरुषव्याघ्रौ राजपुत्रौ महाबलौ।
त्वद्दर्शनकृतोत्साहौ लोकान् भस्मीकरिष्यतः॥ ५०॥

“Both the aforesaid princes, who are tigers among men and are endowed with extraordinary might, and who are determined to see you, will reduce all the ogres to ashes.

(50)

हत्वा च समरक्रूरं रावणं सहबान्धवम्।
राघवस्त्वां विशालाक्षि स्वां पुरीं प्रति नेष्यति॥ ५१॥

“Nay, killing Rāvaṇa, who is ferocious on the field of battle, along with his kinsfolk, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, O large-eyed lady, will take you back to his own city. (51)

ब्रूहि यद् राघवो वाच्यो लक्ष्मणश्च महाबलः ।
सुग्रीवो वापि तेजस्वी हरयो वा समागताः ॥ ५२ ॥

“Now, please communicate what message is to be delivered by me on your behalf to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as well as to Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might, or even to Sugrīva, who is full of energy, or to the monkeys assembled at Kiṣkindhā.” (52)

इत्युक्तवति तस्मिंश्च सीता पुनरथाब्रवीत् ।
कौसल्या लोकभर्तारं सुषुवे यं मनस्विनी ॥ ५३ ॥
तं ममार्थं सुखं पृच्छ शिरसा चाभिवादय ।
स्वजश्च सर्वरत्नानि प्रियायाश्च वराङ्गनाः ॥ ५४ ॥
ऐश्वर्यं च विशालायां पृथिव्यामपि दुर्लभम् ।
पितरं मातरं चैव सम्मान्याभिप्रसाद्य च ॥ ५५ ॥
अनुप्रव्रजितो रामं सुमित्रा येन सुप्रजाः ।
आनुकूल्येन धर्मात्मा त्यक्त्वा सुखमनुत्तमम् ॥ ५६ ॥
अनुगच्छति काकुत्स्थं भ्रातरं पालयन् वने ।
सिंहस्कन्धो महाबाहुर्मनस्वी प्रियदर्शनः ॥ ५७ ॥
पितृवद् वर्तते रामे मातृवन्मां समाचरत् ।
ह्रियमाणां तदा वीरो न तु मां वेद लक्ष्मणः ॥ ५८ ॥
वृद्धोपसेवी लक्ष्मीवान् शक्तो न बहुभाषिता ।
राजपुत्रप्रियश्रेष्ठः सदृशः श्वशुरस्य मे ॥ ५९ ॥
मत्तः प्रियतरो नित्यं भ्राता रामस्य लक्ष्मणः ।
नियुक्तो धुरि यस्यां तु तामुद्वहति वीर्यवान् ॥ ६० ॥
यं दृष्ट्वा राघवो नैव वृत्तमार्यमनुस्मरत् ।
स ममार्थाय कुशलं वक्तव्यो वचनान्मम ॥ ६१ ॥

Hanumān having spoken as aforesaid, Sitā too further spoke forthwith as follows: “Make on my behalf inquiries concerning the welfare of that protector of the world whom the high-minded Kausalyā brought forth, and greet Śrī Rāma with your head bent low. Inquiries concerning welfare should be addressed on my behalf and in my name to Lakṣmaṇa, that heroic and powerful younger brother of Śrī Rāma, who, having renounced garlands and all kinds of jewels as well as women, who were agreeable and excellent, nay, a dominion which was hard to attain on this vast globe, and even in heaven, as also unsurpassed felicity, and having offered profound respects to and pacified his father and mother, followed Śrī Rāma in the latter's exile, nay, because of whom Sumitrā has earned the title of a blessed mother, nay, whose mind is given to piety, who follows his eldest brother, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha) with devotion in the forest watching over him as a bodyguard, who has shoulders broad like those of a lion, is mighty-armed, steady-minded, and pleasing to look upon, who behaves towards Śrī Rāma as towards his father and treated me as his own mother, who did not know at all of my being borne away at the time of the occurrence, who serves his elders, is glorious and energetic, yet measured in speech, who is the foremost of those beloved of that prince, Śrī Rāma, and a replica in gallantry of my father-in-law, King Daśaratha, who is ever dearer to Śrī Rāma more than I and who willingly and efficiently shoulders the responsibility with which he is saddled and on seeing whom Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, ceases to remember his deceased father. (53—61)

मृदुर्नित्यं शुचिर्दक्षः प्रियो रामस्य लक्ष्मणः ।
यथा हि वानरश्रेष्ठ दुःखक्षयकरो भवेत् ॥ ६२ ॥

“Nay, the inquiry should be addressed to him in such a way that Lakṣmaṇa, an ever mild, pure and clever darling of Śrī Rāma, O jewel among monkeys, may bring my woes to an end. (62)

त्वमस्मिन् कार्यनिर्वाहे प्रमाणं हरियूथप ।
राघवस्त्वत्समारम्भान्मयि यत्नपरो भवेत् ॥ ६३ ॥

“You are upto the accomplishment of this task, O leader of monkey hordes ! By your effort alone can Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, be active on my behalf. (63)

इदं ब्रूयाश्च मे नाथं शूरं रामं पुनः पुनः ।
जीवितं धारयिष्यामि मासं दशरथात्मज ॥ ६४ ॥

“Also please submit again and again to my lord, the valiant Śrī Rāma, as follows : ‘I am going to survive only a month, O son of Daśaratha ! (64)

ऊर्ध्वं मासान्न जीवेयं सत्येनाहं ब्रवीमि ते।
 रावणेनोपरुद्धां मां निकृत्या पापकर्मणा।
 त्रातुमर्हसि वीर त्वं पातालादिव कौशिकीम् ॥ ६५ ॥

“‘Out of time-limit set for my survival, only one month is left now. I shall thus not live beyond a month. I swear to you by truth. You ought to rescue me, confined as I am by Rāvaṇa of sinful deeds and subjected to persecution at the hands of ogresses, O heroic prince, even as Lord Viṣṇu in His descent as the Divine Boar rescued Goddess Earth, born in the line of Sage Kauśika from Pātāla (the nethermost subterranean region).’” (65)

ततो वस्त्रगतं मुक्त्वा दिव्यं चूडामणिं शुभम्।
 प्रदेयो राघवायेति सीता हनुमते ददौ ॥ ६६ ॥

Untying the bright divine jewel for her head, tied in her garment, Sītā thereupon gave it to Hanumān, saying that it be delivered to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). (66)

प्रतिगृह्य ततो वीरो मणिरत्नमनुत्तमम्।
 अङ्गुल्या योजयामास नह्यस्य प्राभवद् भुजः ॥ ६७ ॥

Taking from Sītā's hand the excellent jewel, which was invaluable, the hero Hanumān placed it on his finger since his arm (even though he had resumed his former tiny form) was too thick for it. (67)

मणिरत्नं कपिवरः प्रतिगृह्याभिवाद्य च।
 सीतां प्रदक्षिणं कृत्वा प्रणतः पार्श्वतः स्थितः ॥ ६८ ॥

Taking and greeting the excellent jewel and walking round Sītā clockwise as a mark of respect, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, stood bent low by her side. (68)

हर्षेण महता युक्तः सीतादर्शनजेन सः।
 हृदयेन गतो रामं लक्ष्मणं च सलक्षणम् ॥ ६९ ॥

Filled with great delight born of Sītā's discovery, he mentally sought the presence of Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with auspicious bodily marks, and Lakṣmaṇa. (69)

मणिवरमुपगृह्य तं महार्हं
 जनकनृपात्मजया धृतं प्रभावात्।

गिरिवरपवनावधूतमुक्तः

सुखितमनाः प्रतिसंक्रमं प्रपेदे ॥ ७० ॥

Rejoiced at heart to receive that valuable and superb jewel, borne on her person by the daughter of King Janaka by dint of her asceticism (so that it remained unnoticed by the ogresses all the while). His conditioned resembled the one fully accomplished and happy, who was once shaken by a blast coming from the top of a huge mountain and then delivered from it, Hanumān prepared to set out on his return journey. (70)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये

सुन्दरकाण्डेऽष्टात्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-eight of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXIX

Sītā asks Hanumān, when the latter is about to depart with the jewel for her head, to apprise Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa of her own welfare and urge them to rescue her. When Sītā expresses her misgivings about the capacity of the heroes on Śrī Rāma's side to cross the sea, Hanumān expatiates on the might of the monkey heroes and assures her of their ability to cross it, and in the end consoles her by promising to bring Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa on his back across the sea in any case

मणिं दत्त्वा ततः सीता हनूमन्तमथाब्रवीत् ।
अभिज्ञानमभिज्ञातमेतद् रामस्य तत्त्वतः ॥ १ ॥

Having parted with her jewel, Sītā then spoke to Hanumān forthwith as follows: "This token is fully known to Śrī Rāma in its reality. (1)

मणिं दृष्ट्वा तु रामो वै त्रयाणां संस्मरिष्यति ।
वीरो जनन्या मम च राज्ञो दशरथस्य च ॥ २ ॥

"Seeing the jewel, the heroic Śrī Rāma for his part will surely call to mind three individuals all at once, viz., my mother, King Daśaratha and myself as it was given as a dowry to me by my mother in the presence of my father-in-law. (2)

स भूयस्त्वं समुत्साहचोदितो हरिसत्तम ।
अस्मिन् कार्यसमुत्साहे प्रचिन्तय यदुत्तरम् ॥ ३ ॥

"Goaded further by extraordinary zeal, O jewel among monkeys, consider carefully what is to be done next for giving impetus to this work of rescuing me. (3)

त्वमस्मिन् कार्यनिर्योगे प्रमाणं हरिसत्तम ।
तस्य चिन्तय यो यत्नो दुःखक्षयकरो भवेत् ॥ ४ ॥

"You alone are capable of bringing this task to completion, O jewel among monkeys ! Please consider what effort might bring my misfortunes to an end. (4)

हनूमन् यत्नमास्थाय दुःखक्षयकरो भव ।
स तथेति प्रतिज्ञाय मारुतिर्भीमविक्रमः ॥ ५ ॥
शिरसाऽऽवन्द्य वैदेहीं गमनायोपचक्रमे ।
ज्ञात्वा सम्प्रस्थितं देवी वानरं पवनात्मजम् ॥ ६ ॥

बाष्पगद्गदया वाचा मैथिली वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
हनूमन् कुशलं ब्रूयाः सहितौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ७ ॥
सुग्रीवं च सहामात्यं सर्वान् वृद्धांश्च वानरान् ।
ब्रूयास्त्वं वानरश्रेष्ठ कुशलं धर्मसंहितम् ॥ ८ ॥

"Remaining active, therefore, O Hanumān, pray, terminate my suffering." Giving his assurance in the words "Be it so", and making obeisance to Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, with his head bent low, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, of redoubtable prowess made ready to depart. Perceiving Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, fully prepared to leave, Sītā, a princess of Mithila, spoke as follows in a voice choked with tears: "Communicate my welfare to Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa together, O Hanumān ! Nay, make a report in consonance with righteousness regarding my welfare, O jewel among monkeys, to Sugrīva and his ministers, as also to all elderly monkeys. (5—8)

यथा च स महाबाहुर्म तारयति राघवः ।
अस्माद् दुःखाम्बुसरोधात् त्वं समाधातुमर्हसि ॥ ९ ॥

"You ought to make efforts to see that the mighty-armed scion of Raghu delivers me from this ocean of sorrow. (9)

जीवन्तीं मां यथा रामः सम्भावयति कीर्तिमान् ।
तत् त्वया हनुमन् वाच्यं वाचा धर्ममवाप्नुहि ॥ १० ॥

"My case should be put by you in such a way, O Hanumān, that the illustrious Śrī Rāma may find me alive. Reap the virtue of rendering help to me by your words. (10)

नित्यमुत्साहयुक्तस्य वाचः श्रुत्वा मयेरिताः ।

वर्धिष्यते दाशरथेः पौरुषं मदवाप्तये ॥ ११ ॥

“The effort of Śrī Rāma (son of Daśaratha), who is ever full of determination to recover me, will be intensified on hearing the words uttered by me. (11)

मत्संदेशयुता वाचस्त्वत्तः श्रुत्वैव राघवः ।

पराक्रमे मतिं वीरो विधिवत् संविधास्यति ॥ १२ ॥

“Only after hearing from you the words conveying my message, the heroic Śrī Rāma will duly set his heart on exhibiting his valour.” (12)

सीतायास्तद् वचः श्रुत्वा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।

शिरस्यञ्जलिमाधाय वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ १३ ॥

Placing his joined palms above his head on hearing the aforesaid appeal of Sitā, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, made the following reply: (13)

क्षिप्रमेष्यति काकुत्स्थो हर्यृक्षप्रवरैर्वृतः ।

यस्ते युधि विजित्यारीन् शोकं व्यपनयिष्यति ॥ १४ ॥

“Surrounded by the foremost of monkeys and bears, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), who, having conquered his enemies on the field of battle, will completely drive away your grief, will soon make his appearance here. (14)

नहि पश्यामि मर्त्येषु नासुरेषु सुरेषु वा ।

यस्तस्य वमतो बाणान् स्थातुमुत्सहतेऽग्रतः ॥ १५ ॥

“I know of none among mortals, demons or gods, who would dare stand before him while he is shooting arrows. (15)

अप्यर्कमपि पर्जन्यमपि वैवस्वतं यमम् ।

स हि सोढुं रणे शक्तस्तव हेतोर्विशेषतः ॥ १६ ॥

“Indeed he would be able to withstand in combat even the sun-god, Indra (the rain-god), Yama (the god of retribution), son of the sun-god, particularly for your sake. (16)

स हि सागरपर्यन्तां महीं साधितुमर्हति ।

त्वन्निमित्तो हि रामस्य जयो जनकनन्दिनि ॥ १७ ॥

“Śrī Rāma can conquer the earth bounded by the ocean. Hence Śrī Rāma’s victory in your cause is certain, O daughter of Janaka !” (17)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा सम्यक् सत्यं सुभाषितम् ।

जानकी बहु मेने तं वचनं चेदमब्रवीत् ॥ १८ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid reply of Hanumān, which was reasonable, truthful and beautifully worded, the daughter of Janaka held him in great estimation and proceeded to speak as follows : (18)

ततस्तं प्रस्थितं सीता वीक्षमाणा पुनः पुनः ।

भर्तृस्नेहान्वितं वाक्यं सौहार्दादनुमानयत् ॥ १९ ॥

Gazing again and again on Hanumān, who had then made ready to depart, Sitā uttered the following respectful words, expressive of her husband’s affection for her, actuated as she was with goodwill for him: (19)

यदि वा मन्यसे वीर वसैकाहमरिंदम ।

कस्मिंश्चित् संवृते देशे विश्रान्तः श्वो गमिष्यसि ॥ २० ॥

“If you deem fit, O hero, halt for a day, O tamer of foes! Resting in some covered place, you may leave tomorrow. (20)

मम चैवाल्पभाग्यायाः सांनिध्यात् तव वानर ।

अस्य शोकस्य महतो मुहूर्तं मोक्षणं भवेत् ॥ २१ ॥

“Due to your presence, O Hanumān, I shall be rid for a while, unfortunate as I am, of this violent grief. (21)

ततो हि हरिशार्दूल पुनरागमनाय तु ।

प्राणानामपि संदेहो मम स्यान्नात्र संशयः ॥ २२ ॥

“For, if after that there is any doubt about your return, O tiger among monkeys, there is uncertainty of my survival too: there is no doubt about it. (22)

तवादर्शनजः शोको भूयो मां परितापयेत् ।

दुःखादुःखपरामृष्टां दीपयन्निव वानर ॥ २३ ॥

“Grief born of your absence, O monkey, will torment me further, burning me, as it were, seized as I already am with agony after agony. (23)

अयं च वीर संदेहस्तिष्ठतीव ममाग्रतः ।
 सुमहांस्त्वत्सहायेषु हर्यृक्षेषु हरीश्वर ॥ २४ ॥
 कथं नु खलु दुष्पारं तरिष्यन्ति महोदधिम् ।
 तानि हर्यृक्षसैन्यानि तौ वा नरवरात्मजौ ॥ २५ ॥

“Nay, this very great doubt ever stands before me as it were about your associate monkeys and bears, O heroic lord of monkeys, as to how on earth those hordes of monkeys and bears, or, for that matter, those two princes will actually be able to cross the vast sea, which is so difficult to cross. (24-25)

त्रयाणामेव भूतानां सागरस्येह लङ्घने ।
 शक्तिः स्याद् वैनतेयस्य तव वा मारुतस्य वा ॥ २६ ॥

“The capacity to cross the sea in this world exists in three created beings only, viz., Garuḍa (son of Vinatā), the wind-god and yourself. (26)

तदस्मिन् कार्यनिर्योगे वीरैवं दुरतिक्रमे ।
 किं पश्यसे समाधानं त्वं हि कार्यविदां वरः ॥ २७ ॥

“What means do you perceive, O hero, for the accomplishment of this task, which is so very hard to get through? For, you are the foremost of those who know how to accomplish a task. (27)

काममस्य त्वमेवैकः कार्यस्य परिसाधने ।
 पर्याप्तः परवीरघ्न यशस्यस्ते फलोदयः ॥ २८ ॥

“Although you are definitely equal to the accomplishment of this task of rescuing me single-handed, O destroyer of hostile warriors, the attainment of success in that case will redound to your own glory rather than to that of Śrī Rāma. (28)

बलैः समग्रैर्युधि मां रावणं जित्य संयुगे ।
 विजयी स्वपुरं यायात् तत्तस्य सदृशं भवेत् ॥ २९ ॥

“If, on the other hand, conquering Rāvaṇa on the battlefield with the help of all his forces, Śrī Rāma returns victorious in combat to his own capital, that indeed would be worthy of him. (29)

बलैस्तु संकुलां कृत्वा लङ्कां परबलार्दनः ।
 मां नयेद् यदि काकुत्स्थस्तत् तस्य सदृशं भवेत् ॥ ३० ॥

“If, overrunning Laṅkā with his forces, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha) the scourge of hostile forces, for his part, takes me back from Laṅkā, that alone would be worthy of him. (30)

तद्यथा तस्य विक्रान्तमनुरूपं महात्मनः ।
 भवेदाहवशूरस्य तथा त्वमुपपादय ॥ ३१ ॥

“Therefore, act you in such a way that the exalted soul, valiant in combat, may exhibit prowess worthy of him.” (31)

तदर्थोपहितं वाक्यं प्रश्रितं हेतुसंहितम् ।
 निशम्य हनुमान् शेषं वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ ३२ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid utterance of Sītā, which was full of significance, polite and logical, Hanumān made the following final reply: (32)

देवि हर्यृक्षसैन्यानामीश्वरः प्लवतां वरः ।
 सुग्रीवः सत्यसम्पन्नस्तवार्थं कृतनिश्चयः ॥ ३३ ॥

“The lord of the monkey and bear hordes and the foremost of monkeys, Sugrīva, who is richly endowed with truthfulness, is determined to liberate you, O godlike lady ! (33)

स वानरसहस्राणां कोटीभिरभिसंवृतः ।
 क्षिप्रमेष्यति वैदेहि राक्षसानां निबर्हणः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Surrounded by crores of monkeys, O princess of the Videha territory, that destroyer of ogres will make his appearance soon. (34)

तस्य विक्रमसम्पन्नाः सत्त्ववन्तो महाबलाः ।
 मनःसंकल्पसम्पाता निदेशे हरयः स्थिताः ॥ ३५ ॥
 येषां नोपरि नाधस्तान्न तिर्यक् सज्जते गतिः ।
 न च कर्मसु सीदन्ति महत्स्वमिततेजसः ॥ ३६ ॥

“Monkeys, who are richly endowed with valour, full of courage and extraordinarily mighty, nay, who can leap to any distance according to their mental resolve, whose course is impeded neither upwards nor downwards nor to their right or left, who never lose heart even in great undertakings and are endowed with extraordinary energy, remain standing at Sugrīva’s beck and call. (35-36)

असकृत् तैर्महोत्साहैः ससागरधराधरा ।

प्रदक्षिणीकृता भूमिर्वायुमार्गानुसारिभिः ॥ ३७ ॥

“The earth including the oceans and mountains has been circumambulated by them clockwise more than once following the aerial path, endowed as they are with extraordinary energy. (37)

मद्विशिष्टाश्च तुल्याश्च सन्ति तत्र वनौकसः ।

मत्तः प्रत्यवरः कश्चिन्नास्ति सुग्रीवसंनिधौ ॥ ३८ ॥

“There exist in that army monkeys who are my equals and even superior to me. None is inferior to me in the company of Sugrīva. (38)

अहं तावदिह प्राप्तः किं पुनस्ते महाबलाः ।

नहि प्रकृष्टाः प्रेष्यन्ते प्रेष्यन्ते हीतरे जनाः ॥ ३९ ॥

“When I have arrived here, how easily can they arrive, who are endowed with extraordinary might ! Surely these superior ones are not sent on errands, only the inferior ones are so sent. (39)

तदलं परितापेन देवि शोको व्यपैतु ते ।

एकोत्पातेन ते लङ्कामेष्यन्ति हरियूथपाः ॥ ४० ॥

“Therefore, have done with sorrowing, O godlike lady ! Let your grief disappear. In a single bound those leaders of monkey hordes will reach Laṅkā. (40)

मम पृष्ठगतौ तौ च चन्द्रसूर्याविवोदितौ ।

त्वत्सकाशं महासङ्घौ नृसिंहावागमिष्यतः ॥ ४१ ॥

“Nay, like the sun and the moon appearing on the horizon, those two lions among men, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, followed by large multitudes, will arrive in your presence mounted on my back. (41)

तौ हि वीरौ नरवरौ सहितौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

आगम्य नगरीं लङ्कां सायकैर्विधमिष्यतः ॥ ४२ ॥

“Arriving together, those two heroic jewels among men will undoubtedly blow away Laṅkā with their shafts. (42)

सगणं रावणं हत्वा राघवो रघुनन्दनः ।

त्वामादाय वरारोहे स्वपुरीं प्रति यास्यति ॥ ४३ ॥

“Making short work of Rāvaṇa alongwith his hordes, Śrī Rāma, the delight of the Raghus, will return to his own city Ayodhyā, taking you with him, O lady of excellent limbs ! (43)

तदाश्वसिहि भद्रं ते भव त्वं कालकाङ्क्षिणी ।

नचिराद् द्रक्ष्यसे रामं प्रज्वलन्तमिवानलम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“Therefore, take heart and bide you your time. May good betide you ! Before long you shall be able to see Śrī Rāma shining bright like fire. (44)

निहते राक्षसेन्द्रे च सपुत्रामात्यबान्धवे ।

त्वं समेष्यसि रामेण शशाङ्केनेव रोहिणी ॥ ४५ ॥

“Nay, when Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, is slain with his sons, ministers and kinsfolk, you shall be re-united with Śrī Rāma as Rohiṇī (a consort of the moon god presiding over a constellation of the same name) is with the moon-god. (45)

क्षिप्रं त्वं देवि शोकस्य पारं द्रक्ष्यसि मैथिलि ।

रावणं चैव रामेण द्रक्ष्यसे निहतं बलात् ॥ ४६ ॥

“Soon you shall see the end of your grief, O godlike princess of Mithilā ! Nay, you will also see Rāvaṇa killed by Śrī Rāma by force of superior might.” (46)

एवमाश्वास्य वैदेहीं हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।

गमनाय मतिं कृत्वा वैदेहीं पुनरब्रवीत् ॥ ४७ ॥

Having comforted Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, as above, and making up his mind to depart, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, spoke to Sitā once more as follows : (47)

तमरिष्टं कृतात्मानं क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि राघवम् ।

लक्ष्मणं च धनुष्याणि लङ्काद्वारमुपागतम् ॥ ४८ ॥

“You shall soon behold the celebrated Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the destroyer of his foes, who has subdued his soul, as also Lakṣmaṇa, arrived at the gate of Laṅkā, bow in hand. (48)

नखदंष्ट्रायुधान् वीरान् सिंहशार्दूलविक्रमान् ।

वानरान् वारणेन्द्राभान् क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि संगतान् ॥ ४९ ॥

“At no distant date you shall also see gathered together valiant monkeys endowed with the prowess of lions and tigers, nay looking like lordly elephants and using their nails and teeth as weapons. (49)

शैलाम्बुदनिकाशानां लङ्कामलयसानुषु ।
नर्दतां कपिमुख्यानामार्यै यूथान्यनेकशः ॥ ५० ॥

“You shall see, O noble lady, numerous companies of the foremost of monkeys, looking like mountains or clouds and thundering on the peaks of the Malaya mountain in Laṅkā. (50)

स तु मर्मणि घोरेण ताडितो मन्मथेषुणा ।
न शर्म लभते रामः सिंहार्दित इव द्विपः ॥ ५१ ॥

“Hit in his vulnerable parts by the formidable darts of Love, the aforesaid Śrī Rāma for his part knows no more rest than an elephant hurt by a lion. (51)

रुद मा देवि शोकेन मा भूत् ते मनसो भयम् ।
शचीव भर्त्रा शक्रेण सङ्गमेष्यसि शोभने ॥ ५२ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे एकोनचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-nine of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XL

Asking Hanumān, who was ready to depart, to remind Śrī Rāma of his having once painted a decorative mark on her cheek with red realgar, and also of how he threw a reed at the crow assailing her, destroying his right eye thereby, as further tokens of Hanumān having met her, and urging him to apprise Śrī Rāma of her wretched plight, Sītā grants him leave to depart with her blessings

श्रुत्वा तु वचनं तस्य वायुसूनोर्महात्मनः ।
उवाचात्महितं वाक्यं सीता सुरसुतोपमा ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the assurance of that high-souled son of the wind-god, Sītā, who resembled the daughter of a god, made for her part, the following reply, which was calculated to “Weep no more, O godlike lady ! Let there be no fear from grief to your mind. You shall be re-united with your husband in the same way as Śaci, the consort of Indra, was with Indra, O charming lady ! (52)

रामाद् विशिष्टः कोऽन्योऽस्ति कश्चित् सौमित्रिणा समः ।
अग्निमारुतकल्पौ तौ भ्रातरौ तव संश्रयौ ॥ ५३ ॥

“Who else is superior to Śrī Rāma and who is a match for Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā? Those two brothers, who resemble fire and the wind, are your support. (53)

नास्मिंश्चिरं वत्स्यसि देवि देशे
रक्षोगणैरध्युषितेऽतिरौद्रे ।

न ते चिरादागमनं प्रियस्य
क्षमस्व मत्संगमकालमात्रम् ॥ ५४ ॥

“You shall not stay long in this most fearful land inhabited by ogres, O godlike lady ! The advent of your darling will not take long. Pray, have patience only till the moment of my meeting with Śrī Rāma.” (54) advance her own interests : (1)

त्वां दृष्ट्वा प्रियवक्तरं सम्प्रहृष्यामि वानर ।
अर्धसंजातसस्येव वृष्टिं प्राप्य वसुंधरा ॥ २ ॥

“I feel thrilled to see you speaking kind words, O Hanumān, even as the earth with its crops half ripe is enlivened on having a shower. (2)

यथा तं पुरुषव्याघ्रं गात्रैः शोकाभिकर्शितैः ।
संस्पृशेयं सकामाहं तथा कुरु दयां मयि ॥ ३ ॥

“Show compassion to me by manipulating things in such a way that, full of longing, I may be able to embrace that tiger among men with my limbs utterly emaciated through grief. (3)

अभिज्ञानं च रामस्य दद्या हरिगणोत्तम ।
क्षितामिषीकां काकस्य कोपादेकाक्षिशतानीम् ॥ ४ ॥

“Again, remind Śrī Rāma, O jewel among hordes of monkeys, as a token of your having met me, of the reed hurled by him in anger, which destroyed one eye of the son of Indra, who came disguised as a crow. (4)

मनःशिलायास्तिलको गण्डपाश्वे निवेशितः ।
त्वया प्रणष्टे तिलके तं किल स्मर्तुमर्हसि ॥ ५ ॥

“Further say to him, ‘You ought surely to recall the decoration which was painted by you on my (Sītā’s) cheek with realgar when my former decoration had got effaced. (5)

स वीर्यवान् कथं सीतां हतां समनुमन्यसे ।
वसन्तीं रक्षसां मध्ये महेन्द्रवरुणोपम ॥ ६ ॥

“‘Though powerful, how do you wink at Sītā (myself) having been borne away and living in the midst of ogres, O lord vying with Indra, the ruler of gods, and Varuṇa, the god of waters? (6)

एष चूडामणिर्दिव्यो मया सुपरिरक्षितः ।
एतं दृष्ट्वा प्रहृष्यामि व्यसने त्वामिवानघ ॥ ७ ॥

“‘This celestial jewel for the head was preserved by me with special care, I used to feel overjoyed in adversity to see it as I did on seeing you, O sinless one ! (7)

एष निर्यातितः श्रीमान् मया ते वारिसम्भवः ।
अतः परं न शक्यामि जीवितुं शोकलालसा ॥ ८ ॥

“‘This splendid jewel, having its origin in sea-water, has been sent by me to you (Śrī Rāma). Absorbed in grief that I am, I shall no longer be able to survive beyond a month. (8)

असह्यानि च दुःखानि वाचश्च हृदयच्छिदः ।
राक्षसैः सह संवासं त्वत्कृते मर्षयाम्यहम् ॥ ९ ॥

“‘Only for your sake have I endured so long unbearable woes, words which pierced my heart and living surrounded by ogresses. (9)

धारयिष्यामि मासं तु जीवितं शत्रुसूदन ।
मासादूर्ध्वं न जीविष्ये त्वया हीना नृपात्मज ॥ १० ॥

“‘Anyhow I shall continue to live for a month more, O destroyer of foes ! Beyond a month, of course, I am not going to survive in your absence, O prince ! (10)

घोरो राक्षसराजोऽयं दृष्टिश्च न सुखा मयि ।
त्वां च श्रुत्वा विषज्जन्तं न जीवेयमपि क्षणम् ॥ ११ ॥

“‘Frightful is this ruler of ogres; his attitude towards me is also not favourable. On hearing of you (Śrī Rāma) tarrying, on top of all this, I may not survive even a moment longer.’ (11)

वैदेह्या वचनं श्रुत्वा करुणं साश्रुभाषितम् ।
अथाब्रवीन्महातेजा हनुमान् मारुतात्मजः ॥ १२ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid plaintive message of Sītā, uttered with tears in her eyes, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, forthwith submitted as follows : (12)

त्वच्छोकविमुखो रामो देवि सत्येन ते शपे ।
रामे शोकाभिभूते तु लक्ष्मणः परितप्यते ॥ १३ ॥

“I swear to you by truth, O godlike lady, that Śrī Rāma has grown averse to everything else through grief caused by your absence. And Lakṣmaṇa too suffers agony due to Śrī Rāma being overwhelmed with sorrow. (13)

दृष्टा कथंचिद् भवती न कालः परिदेवितुम् ।
इमं मुहूर्तं दुःखानामन्तं द्रक्ष्यसि भामिनि ॥ १४ ॥

“Somehow you have been discovered by me; hence this is not the time for grieving. From this very hour you will see the end of your woes drawing near, O noble lady ! (14)

तावुभौ पुरुषव्याघ्रौ राजपुत्रावनिन्दितौ ।
त्वद्दर्शनकृतोत्साहौ लङ्कां भस्मीकरिष्यतः ॥ १५ ॥

“Both the aforesaid princes, who are tigers among men and are beyond reproach and who are determined to see you, will reduce Laṅkā to ashes. (15)

हत्वा तु समरे रक्षो रावणं सहबान्धवैः ।
राघवौ त्वां विशालाक्षि स्वां पुरीं प्रति नेष्यतः ॥ १६ ॥

“Nay, killing in combat the ogre Rāvaṇa, alongwith his kinsfolk, the two scions of Raghu, O large-eyed lady, will take you back to their own capital. (16)

यत्तु रामो विजानीयादभिज्ञानमनिन्दिते ।
प्रीतिसंजननं भूयस्तस्य त्वं दातुमर्हसि ॥ १७ ॥

“You ought further to give me a token which Śrī Rāma alone may be able to recognize and which may cause him delight, O irreproachable lady !” (17)

साब्रवीद् दत्तमेवाहो मयाभिज्ञानमुत्तमम् ।
एतदेव हि रामस्य दृष्ट्वा यत्नेन भूषणम् ॥ १८ ॥
श्रद्धेयं हनुमन् वाक्यं तव वीर भविष्यति ।
स तं मणिवरं गृह्य श्रीमान् प्लवगसत्तमः ॥ १९ ॥
प्रणम्य शिरसा देवीं गमनायोपचक्रमे ।
तमुत्पातकृतोत्साहमवेक्ष्य हरियूथपम् ॥ २० ॥
वर्धमानं महावेगमुवाच जनकात्मजा ।
अश्रुपूर्णमुखी दीना बाष्पगद्गदया गिरा ॥ २१ ॥

She replied, “An excellent token has already been handed over to you by me, O Hanumān ! On his having carefully seen this jewel alone, your statement, O gallant Hanumān, will actually prove worthy of credence to Śrī Rāma.” Having taken that excellent jewel and made respectful obeisance to the godlike lady with his head bent low, the glorious Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, prepared to depart. Observing that leader of monkey hordes, who was possessed of great impetuosity, expanding and striving to leap across the sea, Sītā, Janaka's daughter, spoke as follows in a voice choked with sobs, her face bathed in tears, distressed as she was: (18—21)

हनुमन् सिंहसंकाशौ भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
सुग्रीवं च सहामात्यं सर्वान् ब्रूया अनामयम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Pray, apprise, O Hanumān, all, viz., the two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, who resemble a pair of lions, as well as Sugrīva and his ministers, of my welfare. (22)

यथा च स महाबाहुर्मा तारयति राघवः ।
अस्माद् दुःखाम्बुसरोधात् त्वं समाधातुमर्हसि ॥ २३ ॥

“You ought to make efforts to see that that mighty-armed scion of Raghu delivers me from this ocean of sorrow. (23)

इदं च तीव्रं मम शोकवेगं
रक्षोभिरेभिः परिभर्त्सनं च ।

ब्रूयास्तु रामस्य गतः समीपं
शिवश्च तेऽध्वास्तु हरिप्रवीर ॥ २४ ॥

“Arrived in the presence of Śrī Rāma, speak to him of the acute vehemence of my grief as well as of the threats of these ogres and let your journey be happy, O great hero among the monkeys !” (24)

स राजपुत्र्या प्रतिवेदितार्थः
कपिः कृतार्थः परिहृष्टचेताः ।

तदल्पशेषं प्रसमीक्ष्य कार्यं
दिशं ह्युदीचीं मनसा जगाम ॥ २५ ॥

Apprised by the princess, Sītā, of her object, nay, greatly delighted at heart on his purpose of visiting Sītā having been accomplished and thinking that only a small fraction of his duty remained to be performed, he mentally sought the northern direction. (25)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे चत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४० ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLI

Accounting his purpose not fully accomplished till he had ascertained the strength of the ogres, even though he had received the message of Sītā, and making up his mind to lay waste the royal pleasure-garden as a means of ascertaining the strength of the enemy, Hanumān proceeds to do it

स च वाग्भिः प्रशस्ताभिर्गमिष्यन् पूजितस्तया ।
तस्माद् देशादपाक्रम्य चिन्तयामास वानरः ॥ १ ॥

Moving from that place, when he had been honoured by Sītā with excellent words while he was about to depart, the aforesaid monkey, Hanumān, now thought within himself: (1)

अल्पशेषमिदं कार्यं दृष्टेयमसितेक्षणा ।
त्रीनुपायानतिक्रम्य चतुर्थं इह दृश्यते ॥ २ ॥

‘This dark-eyed lady Sītā has been seen, which was the principal object of my visit to this place. Only a small portion of my present duty still remains to be performed. Leaving out of consideration three out of the four means to success (viz., negotiation, gift and sowing seeds of dissension) the fourth, viz., punishment appears to be called for at this juncture. (2)

न साम रक्षःसु गुणाय कल्पते
न दानमर्थोपचितेषु युज्यते ।
न भेदसाध्या बलदर्पिता जनाः
पराक्रमस्त्वेष ममेह रोचते ॥ ३ ॥

‘Negotiation does not conduce to good results with ogres; gift too is not enjoined in favour of those richly endowed with wealth; people who are intoxicated with power cannot be tamed by sowing seeds of dissension in their ranks. Hence show of valour alone appeals to me on this occasion. (3)

न चास्य कार्यस्य पराक्रमादृते
विनिश्चयः कश्चिदिहोपपद्यते ।
हतप्रवीराश्च रणे तु राक्षसाः
कथंचिदीयुर्यदिहाद्य मार्दवम् ॥ ४ ॥

‘Barring show of valour no infallible means of accomplishing this task of ascertaining the strength of the ogres is practicable in these circumstances; for the ogres can adopt a meek attitude in the ensuing conflict only if their foremost heroes are somehow killed at the present moment. (4)

कार्ये कर्मणि निर्वृत्ते यो बहून्यपि साधयेत् ।
पूर्वकार्याविरोधेन स कार्यं कर्तुमर्हति ॥ ५ ॥

‘He alone can successfully accomplish his purpose, who compasses numerous secondary tasks even after the main business has been carried through, without marring the previous achievement. (5)

न ह्येकः साधको हेतुः स्वल्पस्यापीह कर्मणः ।
यो ह्यर्थं बहुधा वेद स समर्थोऽर्थसाधने ॥ ६ ॥

‘Surely there cannot be an exclusive means of accomplishing a purpose in this world, however insignificant it may be. On the other hand, he alone is capable of accomplishing a purpose, who knows to do a thing in many ways. (6)

इहैव तावत्कृतनिश्चयो ह्यहं
ब्रजेयमद्य प्लवगेश्वरालयम् ।
परात्मसम्मर्दविशेषतत्त्ववित्
ततः कृतं स्यान्मम भर्तृशासनम् ॥ ७ ॥

‘If I return to the abode of Sugriva (the lord of monkeys) today, having ascertained the truth as to who will predominate in an encounter between the enemy and ourselves, and also having determined the future course of action in this very journey, then only will the command of my master have been carried out by me in the real sense of the term. (7)

कथं नु खल्वद्य भवेत् सुखागतं

प्रसह्य युद्धं मम राक्षसैः सह।

तथैव खल्वात्मबलं च सारवत्

समानयेन्मां च रणे दशाननः ॥ ८ ॥

‘How can my journey to this place at this juncture possibly prove to be a truly happy one? How will my encounter with the ogres come about all of a sudden? And, similarly, how indeed will that ten-headed monster Rāvaṇa actually know the strength of his own mighty troops as well as myself in a combat between us? (8)

ततः समासाद्य रणे दशाननं

समन्त्रिवर्गं सबलं सयायिनम्।

हृदि स्थितं तस्य मतं बलं च

सुखेन मत्वाहमितः पुनर्व्रजे ॥ ९ ॥

‘Then, meeting Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, his body of ministers, troops and charioteer, and conveniently reading the design enshrined in his heart, and ascertaining his strength, I shall return from this place afterwards. (9)

इदमस्य नृशंसस्य नन्दनोपममुत्तमम्।

वनं नेत्रमनःकान्तं नानाद्रुमलतायुतम् ॥ १० ॥

‘This excellent grove of the cruel Rāvaṇa, which vies with the Nandana grove in heaven, is pleasing to the eyes as well as to the mind and is full of trees and creepers of every variety. (10)

इदं विध्वंसयिष्यामि शुष्कं वनमिवानलः।

अस्मिन् भग्ने ततः कोपं करिष्यति स रावणः ॥ ११ ॥

‘I shall presently lay it waste even as fire consumes a dry grove. When this has been laid waste, the notorious Rāvaṇa will forthwith give vent to his anger. (11)

ततो महत्साश्वमहारथद्विपं

बलं समानेष्यति राक्षसाधिपः।

त्रिशूलकालायसपट्टिशायुधं

ततो महद्युद्धमिदं भविष्यति ॥ १२ ॥

‘Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, will thereupon lead his huge army, full of horses, large chariots and elephants and armed with tridents and spears made of iron, and a formidable struggle will then immediately follow. (12)

अहं च तैः संयति चण्डविक्रमैः

समेत्य रक्षोभिरभङ्गविक्रमः।

निहत्य तद् रावणचोदितं बलं

सुखं गमिष्यामि हरीश्वरालयम् ॥ १३ ॥

‘Nay, coming to grips on the battle-field with those ogres of terrible prowess and destroying that army led by Rāvaṇa, my valour knowing no frustration, I shall happily return to the abode of Sugriva, the lord of monkeys.’ (13)

ततो मारुतवत् क्रुद्धो मारुतिर्भीमविक्रमः।

ऊरुवेगेन महता द्रुमान् क्षेपुमथारभत् ॥ १४ ॥

Furious like the wind, Hanumān (son of the wind-god) of redoubtable valour, now forthwith proceeded to fell the trees with great impetuosity of his thighs. (14)

ततस्तद्धनुमान् वीरो बभञ्ज प्रमदावनम्।

मत्तद्विजसमाघुष्टं नानाद्रुमलतायुतम् ॥ १५ ॥

The valiant Hanumān then laid waste the aforesaid pleasance attached to the gynaeceum, which was resonant with the shrieks of birds in heat and full of trees and creepers of every variety. (15)

तद्वनं मथितैर्वृक्षैर्भिन्नैश्च सलिलाशयैः।

चूर्णितैः पर्वताग्रैश्च बभूवाप्रियदर्शनम् ॥ १६ ॥

With its trees uprooted and ponds stirred up and rendered muddy and the crests of its pleasure-hills crushed, that pleasure-grove presented an unsightly appearance. (16)

नानाशकुन्तविरुतैः प्रभिन्नसलिलाशयैः।

ताग्रैः किसलयैः क्लान्तैः क्लान्तद्रुमलतायुतैः ॥ १७ ॥

न बभौ तद् वनं तत्र दावानलहतं यथा।

व्याकुलावरणा रेजुर्विह्वला इव ता लताः ॥ १८ ॥

With the shrieks of various birds, the brinks of its ponds demolished, its coppery shoots withered, and with the myriads of its trees and creepers dried up, that pleasure-grove did not look bright on that occasion, as though it had been destroyed by a wild fire. Those creepers too with their coverings in the form of leaves displaced looked like women with their robes in disarray. (17-18)

लतागृहैश्चित्रगृहैश्च सादितै- व्यालैर्मृगैरार्तरवैश्च पक्षिभिः ।
शिलागृहैरुन्मथितैस्तथा गृहैः
प्रणष्टरूपं तदभूमहद् वनम् ॥ १९ ॥

With its arbours and picture-galleries destroyed, tame beasts of prey (such as tigers), deer and birds emitting cries of distress, its grottos and other structures demolished, that extensive grove presented the appearance of ruin. (19)

सा विह्वलाशोकलताप्रताना
वनस्थली शोकलताप्रताना ।
जाता दशास्यप्रमदावनस्य
कपेर्बलाद्धि प्रमदावनस्य ॥ २० ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे एकचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-one of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLII

Perceiving the devastation of the royal pleasance at the hands of Hanumān, the ogresses keeping watch over Sītā asked her who he was. On Sītā's pleading her ignorance in the matter, some of them hurriedly seek the presence of Rāvaṇa and report the matter to him. Hanumān makes short work of a company of ogres known by the name of Kiṅkaras, despatched by Rāvaṇa.

Thereupon Rāvaṇa sends Prahasta's son to punish the intruder

ततः पक्षिनिनादेन वृक्षभङ्गस्वनेन च ।
बभूवुस्त्राससम्भ्रान्ताः सर्वे लङ्कानिवासिनः ॥ १ ॥

Thereupon all the denizens of Laṅkā got terror-stricken at the screaming of birds

Through the ferocity of the monkey, Hanumān, the woodland of that pleasure-garden, which afforded shelter to the womenfolk of Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) and which was distinguished by its clusters of shaking Aśoka creepers, then became a jumble of creepers which caused grief to the lookers-on. (20)

ततः स कृत्वा जगतीपतेर्महान्
महद् व्यलीकं मनसो महात्मनः ।
युयुत्सुरेको बहुभिर्महाबलैः
श्रिया ज्वलंस्तोरणमाश्रितः कपिः ॥ २१ ॥

Having perpetrated something which was utterly displeasing to the mind of the high minded ruler of the land of Laṅkā, and eager to contend single-handed with a number of warriors endowed with extraordinary might, the great monkey, Hanumān, took up his position at the entrance of the pleasance, blazing with martial glory. (21) and the crash of falling trees. (1)

विद्रुताश्च भयत्रस्ता विनेदुर्मृगपक्षिणः ।
रक्षसां च निमित्तानि क्रूराणि प्रतिपेदिरे ॥ २ ॥

Put to flight, being panic-stricken, beasts and birds began to scream. Nay, fierce portents made their appearance before the ogres. (2)

ततो गतायां निद्रायां राक्षस्यो विकृताननाः ।
तद् वनं ददृशुर्भग्नं तं च वीरं महाकपिम् ॥ ३ ॥

Their sleep having consequently vanished, the ugly-faced ogresses found that grove devastated and saw that huge and gallant monkey before them. (3)

स ता दृष्ट्वा महाबाहुर्महासत्त्वो महाबलः ।
चकार सुमहद्रूपं राक्षसीनां भयावहम् ॥ ४ ॥

Beholding them, the mighty-armed Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary courage and might, assumed a gigantic form striking terror into the ogresses. (4)

ततस्तु गिरिसंकाशमतिकायं महाबलम् ।
राक्षस्यो वानरं दृष्ट्वा पप्रच्छुर्जनकात्मजाम् ॥ ५ ॥

Seeing a colossal monkey looking like a mountain and endowed with extraordinary strength, the ogresses for their part forthwith questioned the daughter of Janaka as follows: (5)

कोऽयं कस्य कुतो वायं किंनिमित्तमिहागतः ।
कथं त्वया सहानेन संवादः कृत इत्युत ॥ ६ ॥
आचक्ष्व नो विशालाक्षि मा भूते सुभगे भयम् ।
संवादमसितापाङ्गि त्वया किं कृतवानयम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Please tell us, O large-eyed lady, who this creature is, whose messenger is he, whence and what for he has come and also wherefore talk was held by him with you. No fear need be entertained by you, O graceful lady! What conversation did he have with you, O lady with dark-cornered eyes?” (6-7)

अथाब्रवीत् तदा साध्वी सीता सर्वाङ्गशोभना ।
रक्षसां कामरूपाणां विज्ञाने का गतिर्मम ॥ ८ ॥

The virtuous Sītā, who was charming of every limb, then replied forthwith as follows: “What means can I have for acquiring correct knowledge about the ogres, who are capable of changing their form at will? (8)

यूयमेवास्य जानीत योऽयं यद् वा करिष्यति ।
अहिरेव ह्यहेः पादान् विजानाति न संशयः ॥ ९ ॥

“You alone ought to know who he is and what he is about. Indeed a serpent alone has true knowledge about the movements of a serpent: there is no doubt about it. (9)

अहमप्यतिभीतास्मि नैव जानामि को ह्ययम् ।
वेद्मि राक्षसमेवैनं कामरूपिणमागतम् ॥ १० ॥

“I too am exceedingly frightened and do not know at all who he really is. Of course, I believe him to be an ogre able to change his form at will, arrived here.” (10)

वैदेह्या वचनं श्रुत्वा राक्षस्यो विद्रुता द्रुतम् ।
स्थिताः काश्चिद्गताः काश्चिद् रावणाय निवेदितुम् ॥ ११ ॥

Hearing the reply of Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), the ogresses fled with all speed. Some of them remained rooted there, while others left to report the matter to Rāvaṇa. (11)

रावणस्य समीपे तु राक्षस्यो विकृताननाः ।
विरूपं वानरं भीमं रावणाय न्यवेदिषुः ॥ १२ ॥

Arrived in the presence of Rāvaṇa, the ugly-faced ogresses for their part reported to Rāvaṇa the presence of a monstrous and redoubtable monkey in the following words: (12)

अशोकवनिकामध्ये राजन् भीमवपुः कपिः ।
सीतया कृतसंवादस्तिष्ठत्यमितविक्रमः ॥ १३ ॥

“A monkey of terrible proportions and endowed with immense prowess stands, O king, in the heart of the Aśoka grove, having held a talk with Sītā. (13)

न च तं जानकी सीता हरिं हरिणलोचना ।
अस्माभिर्बहुधा पृष्टा निवेदयितुमिच्छति ॥ १४ ॥

“Though questioned by us in many ways, Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, whose eyes resemble those of a doe, however, does not wish to disclose the identity of the monkey. (14)

वासवस्य भवेद् दूतो दूतो वैश्रवणस्य वा।
प्रेषितो वापि रामेण सीतान्वेषणकाङ्क्षया ॥ १५ ॥

“He may be an emissary of Indra (the ruler of gods) or an envoy of Kubera (the god of riches) or he may have been dispatched even by Rāma with intent to have Sītā traced out. (15)

तेनैवाद्भुतरूपेण यत्तत्तव मनोहरम्।
नानामृगगणाकीर्णं प्रमृष्टं प्रमदावनम् ॥ १६ ॥

“By that very monkey of marvellous form has your soul-captivating pleasance, which was crowded with herds of beasts of every variety, has been laid waste. (16)

न तत्र कश्चिदुद्देशो यस्तेन न विनाशितः।
यत्र सा जानकी देवी स तेन न विनाशितः ॥ १७ ॥

“There is not a single quarter in that pleasance, which has not been utterly devastated by him. That place alone where lives that godlike lady, Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, has not been destroyed. (17)

जानकीरक्षणार्थं वा श्रमाद् वा नोपलक्ष्यते।
अथवा कः श्रमस्तस्य सैव तेनाभिरक्षितः ॥ १८ ॥

“It is not definitely known whether he has spared it with a view to saving her or due to exhaustion. Or, since exhaustion is unknown to him, Janaka’s daughter has definitely been saved by him. (18)

चारुपल्लवपत्राढ्यं यं सीता स्वयमास्थिता।
प्रवृद्धः शिंशपावृक्षः स च तेनाभिरक्षितः ॥ १९ ॥

“That fully developed Śimśapā tree too, which is rich in lovely foliage and in the shade of which Sītā herself remains ensconced has been spared by him. (19)

तस्योग्ररूपस्योग्रं त्वं दण्डमाज्ञातुमर्हसि।
सीता सम्भाषिता येन वनं तेन विनाशितम् ॥ २० ॥

“You ought to enjoin some severe punishment on that monkey having a frightful form, by whom Sītā has been spoken to. By him alone has the grove been devastated. (20)

मनःपरिगृहीतां तां तव रक्षोगणेश्वर।
कः सीतामभिभाषेत यो न स्यात् त्यक्तजीवितः ॥ २१ ॥

“Who would dare to talk with Sītā, who has been mentally accepted by you, save him who has given up all hope of survival, O ruler of ogre hordes?” (21)

राक्षसीनां वचः श्रुत्वा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः।
चिताग्निरिव जज्वाल कोपसंवर्तितेक्षणः ॥ २२ ॥

Hearing the report of the ogresses, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, flared up like a funeral fire, his eyes rolling rapidly through rage. (22)

तस्य क्रुद्धस्य नेत्राभ्यां प्रापतन्नश्रुबिन्दवः।
दीप्ताभ्यामिव दीपाभ्यां सार्चिषः स्नेहबिन्दवः ॥ २३ ॥

From his eyes, angry as he was, trickled down tear-drops like burning drops of oil from a pair of kindled lights. (23)

आत्मनः सदृशान् वीरान् किंकरान्नाम राक्षसान्।
व्यादिदेश महातेजा निग्रहार्थं हनूमतः ॥ २४ ॥

Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, ordered in particular valiant ogres, named Kinkaras, who vied with himself, to capture Hanumān. (24)

तेषामशीतिसाहस्रं किंकराणां तरस्विनाम्।
निर्ययुर्भवनात् तस्मात् कूटमुदगरपाणयः ॥ २५ ॥

Of the aforesaid energetic Kinkaras, eighty thousand sallied forth from that palace, iron mallets and clubs in hand. (25)

महोदरा महादंष्ट्रा घोररूपा महाबलाः।
युद्धाभिमनसः सर्वे हनूमद्ग्रहणोन्मुखाः ॥ २६ ॥

They were all big-bellied, had large teeth and of terrible form, were endowed with extraordinary might, inclined to fighting and eager to lay hold on Hanumān. (26)

ते कपिं तं समासाद्य तोरणस्थमवस्थितम्।
अभिपेतुर्महावेगाः पतंगा इव पावकम् ॥ २७ ॥

Duly approaching the aforesaid monkey, who was stationed at the archway, ready to fight, they darted at him with great vehemence like moths rushing towards a flame. (27)

ते गदाभिर्विचित्राभिः परिधैः काञ्चनाङ्गदैः ।

आजग्मुर्वानरश्रेष्ठं शरैरादित्यसंनिभैः ॥ २८ ॥

They assailed Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, with maces of different kinds, iron bludgeons plated with gold at the head and arrows shining brightly as the sun. (28)

मुद्गरैः पट्टिशैः शूलैः प्रासतोमरपाणयः ।

परिवार्य हनूमन्तं सहसा तस्थुरग्रतः ॥ २९ ॥

Surrounding Hanumān, the Kiṅkaras, who were equipped with clubs, sharp-edged spears and iron pikes and who carried lances and javelins in their hands, stood all of a sudden in front of him. (29)

हनूमानपि तेजस्वी श्रीमान् पर्वतसंनिभः ।

क्षितावाविद्ध्य लाङ्गूलं ननाद च महाध्वनिम् ॥ ३० ॥

Lashing his tail at the ground, the glorious Hanumān too, who was full of energy and looked like a mountain, uttered a loud roar. (30)

स भूत्वा तु महाकायो हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।

पुच्छमास्फोटयामास लङ्कां शब्देन पूरयन् ॥ ३१ ॥

Assuming a gigantic form, the celebrated Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, waved his tail to and fro, filling Laṅkā with its sound. (31)

तस्यास्फोटितशब्देन महता चानुनादिना ।

पेतुर्विहङ्गा गगनादुच्चैश्चेदमघोषयत् ॥ ३२ ॥

At the loud and resonant sound of the swishing of his tail, birds fell from the airspace and he proclaimed in aloud voice: (32)

जयत्यतिबलो रामो लक्ष्मणश्च महाबलः ।

राजा जयति सुग्रीवो राघवेणाभिपालितः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Victorious is Śrī Rāma, who is possessed of surpassing strength and Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might. Victorious too is King Sugrīva, protected on all sides by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (33)

दासोऽहं कोसलेन्द्रस्य रामस्याक्लिष्टकर्मणः ।

हनूमान् शत्रुसैन्यानां निहन्ता मारुतात्मजः ॥ ३४ ॥

“I, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, and the destroyer of hostile armies, am a servant of Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, the lord of Kośala. (34)

न रावणसहस्रं मे युद्धे प्रतिबलं भवेत् ।

शिलाभिश्च प्रहरतः पादपैश्च सहस्रशः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Not even a thousand of Rāvaṇas can stand my might in combat, even as I assail them with a myriad of rocks and trees. (35)

अर्दयित्वा पुरीं लङ्कामभिवाद्य च मैथिलीम् ।

समृद्धार्थो गमिष्यामि मिषतां सर्वरक्षसाम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“Destroying the city of Laṅkā and greeting Sītā, the princess of Mithilā, I shall return fully accomplished of purpose, while all the ogres stand looking on.” (36)

तस्य संनादशब्देन तेऽभवन् भयशङ्किताः ।

ददृशुश्च हनूमन्तं संध्यामेघमिवोन्नतम् ॥ ३७ ॥

The Kiṅkaras were stricken with fear at his roar and beheld Hanumān standing aloft as an evening cloud. (37)

स्वामिसंदेशनिःशङ्कास्ततस्ते राक्षसाः कपिम् ।

चित्रैः प्रहरणैर्भीमैरभिपेतुस्ततस्ततः ॥ ३८ ॥

Rid of all doubt as to who he was by the mention of his master, those ogres thereupon attacked him from every side with various dreadful weapons. (38)

स तैः परिवृतः शूरैः सर्वतः स महाबलः ।

आससादायसं भीमं परिघं तोरणाश्रितम् ॥ ३९ ॥

Surrounded by those valiant ogres from all sides, the celebrated Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might, seized a formidable iron bar lying at the archway. (39)

स तं परिघमादाय जघान रजनीचरान् ।

सपन्नगमिवादाय स्फुरन्तं विनतासुतः ॥ ४० ॥

Laying hold on that bar, he struck the rangers of the night even as Garuḍa (son of Vinatā) would, carrying a struggling serpent. (40)

विचचाराम्बरे वीरः परिगृह्य च मारुतिः ।

सूदयामास वज्रेण दैत्यानिव सहस्रदृक् ॥ ४१ ॥

Nay, grasping the bar tightly, the gallant Hanumān, son of the wind-god, ranged through the air and began to destroy the ogres even as Indra (the god with a thousand eyes) killed the Daityas (sons of Diti) with his thunderbolt. (41)

स हत्वा राक्षसान् वीरः किंकरान् मारुतात्मजः ।
युद्धाकाङ्क्षी महावीरस्तोरणं समवस्थितः ॥ ४२ ॥

Having made short work of the ogres known by the collective name of Kiṅkaras, the aforesaid valiant Hanumān, who was an eminent hero, stood rooted at the gate thirsting for combat. (42)

ततस्तस्माद् भयान्मुक्ताः कतिचित्तत्र राक्षसाः ।
निहतान् किंकरान् सर्वान् रावणाय न्यवेदयन् ॥ ४३ ॥

Free from that fear, being at a considerable distance from Hanumān, a few ogres, who had survived there, spoke to Rāvaṇa of all the Kiṅkaras having been disposed of. (43)

स राक्षसानां निहतं महाबलं
निशम्य राजा परिवृत्तलोचनः ।
समादिदेशाप्रतिमं पराक्रमे
प्रहस्तपुत्रं समरे सुदुर्जयम् ॥ ४४ ॥

Hearing of the large army of ogres having been wiped out, King Rāvaṇa whose eyes began to roll rapidly through rage, duly commanded Jambumālī, son of Prahasta, who was unequalled in prowess and was most difficult to conquer in battle. (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे द्विचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-two of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLIII

Having disposed of the Kiṅkaras sent by Rāvaṇa and making up his mind to demolish the sanctuary sacred to the guardian deity of ogres, Hanumān climbs it up and, killing the guards posted there, exhibits his prowess by uttering the name of Śrī Rāma in a thundering voice. Nay, uprooting a pillar of the sanctuary, he brandishes it and burns the sanctuary with the fire produced thereby

ततः स किंकरान् हत्वा हनूमान् ध्यानमास्थितः ।
वनं भग्नं मया चैत्यप्रासादो न विनाशितः ॥ १ ॥

Having killed the Kiṅkaras, the celebrated Hanumān then thought to himself : 'The grove has been devastated by me, but the edifice of the sanctuary, sacred to the guardian deity of the ogres, has not been demolished.' (1)

तस्मात् प्रासादमद्यैवमिमं विध्वंसयाम्यहम् ।
इति संचिन्त्य हनुमान् मनसादर्शयन् बलम् ॥ २ ॥

Hanumān, therefore, stood revolving in his mind as follows : 'Exhibiting my strength, I shall, therefore, likewise destroy this edifice today.' (2)

चैत्यप्रासादमुत्प्लुत्य मेरुशृङ्गमिवोन्नतम् ।
आरुरोह हरिश्रेष्ठो हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ॥ ३ ॥

Taking a leap, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, climbed up the edifice of the sanctuary, which was high as a peak of Mount Meru. (3)

आरुह्य गिरिसंकाशं प्रासादं हरियूथपः ।
बभौ स सुमहातेजाः प्रतिसूर्य इवोदितः ॥ ४ ॥

Climbing up the edifice, which closely resembled a mountain, that leader of monkey hordes, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary effulgence, looked like a second sun, just risen. (4)

सम्प्रधृष्य तु दुर्धर्षश्चैत्यप्रासादमुन्नतम् ।
हनूमान् प्रज्वलल्लक्ष्म्या पारियात्रोपमोऽभवत् ॥ ५ ॥

Blazing with glory on having assailed that lofty edifice of the sanctuary, Hanumān for his part, who was difficult to challenge, shone like the Pāriyātra mountain (one of the seven principal mountains of India). (5)

स भूत्वा सुमहाकायः प्रभावान् मारुतात्मजः ।
धृष्टमास्फोटयामास लङ्कां शब्देन पूरयन् ॥ ६ ॥

Assuming immense proportions by dint of his glory, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, boldly began to demolish the sanctuary filling Laṅkā with the crash. (6)

तस्यास्फोटितशब्देन महता श्रोत्रघातिना ।
पेतुर्विहंगमास्तत्र चैत्यपालाश्च मोहिताः ॥ ७ ॥

At the loud and deafening sound of his act of demolition, the birds as well as the guards of the sanctuary toppled down senseless on the spot. (7)

अस्त्रविज्जयतां रामो लक्ष्मणश्च महाबलः ।
राजा जयति सुग्रीवो राघवेणाभिपालितः ॥ ८ ॥

“May Śrī Rāma, skilled in the use of missiles, be eminently victorious, as well as Lakṣmaṇa, endowed with extraordinary might. Triumphant is King Sugrīva, protected on all sides by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (8)

दासोऽहं कोसलेन्द्रस्य रामस्याक्लिष्टकर्मणः ।
हनूमान् शत्रुसैन्यानां निहन्ता मारुतात्मजः ॥ ९ ॥

“I, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, and destroyer of hostile armies, am a servant of Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, the lord of Kośala. (9)

न रावणसहस्रं मे युद्धे प्रतिबलं भवेत् ।
शिलाभिश्च प्रहरतः पादपैश्च सहस्रशः ॥ १० ॥

“Not even a thousand of Rāvaṇas can stand my might in combat, even as I assail them with myriad of rocks and trees. (10)

धर्षयित्वा पुरीं लङ्कामभिवाद्य च मैथिलीम् ।
समृद्धान् गमिष्यामि मिषतां सर्वरक्षसाम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Destroying the city of Laṅkā and greeting Sītā, the princess of Mithilā, I shall return fully accomplished of purpose, while all the ogres stand looking on.” (11)

एवमुक्त्वा महाकायश्चैत्यस्थो हरियूथपः ।
ननाद भीमनिर्ह्रादो रक्षसां जनयन् भयम् ॥ १२ ॥

Having shouted thus while standing on the sanctuary, the colossal Hanumān, a leader of the monkey hordes, emitted a terrible thunder-like roar, causing terror to the ogres. (12)

तेन नादेन महता चैत्यपालाः शतं ययुः ।
गृहीत्वा विविधानस्त्रान् प्रासान् खड्गान् परश्वधान् ॥ १३ ॥

विसृजन्तो महाकाया मारुतिं पर्यवारयन् ।
ते गदाभिर्विचित्राभिः परिधैः काञ्चनाङ्गदैः ॥ १४ ॥

आजगमुर्वा नरश्रेष्ठं बाणैश्चादित्यसंनिभैः ।
आवर्त इव गङ्गायास्तोयस्य विपुलो महान् ॥ १५ ॥

परिक्षिप्य हरिश्रेष्ठं स बभौ रक्षसां गणः ।
ततो वातात्मजः क्रुद्धो भीमरूपं समास्थितः ॥ १६ ॥

प्रासादस्य महास्तस्य स्तम्भं हेमपरिष्कृतम् ।
उत्पाटयित्वा वेगेन हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ॥ १७ ॥

ततस्तं भ्रामयामास शतधारं महाबलः ।
तत्र चाग्निः समभवत् प्रासादश्चाप्यदह्यत ॥ १८ ॥

Impelled by that great noise, a hundred gigantic guards posted at the sanctuary sallied forth seizing missiles of every description, as well as spears, swords and axes, and discharging them, surrounded Hanumān, son of the wind-god, from all sides. Armed with weird maces, iron clubs plated with gold and arrows shining brightly as the sun, they approached Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys. Surrounding Hanumān, that host of ogres looked like a mighty and extensive whirlpool in the stream of the Gaṅgā. The infuriated Hanumān thereupon took on a terrible aspect. Tearing up with impetuosity a pillar, decked with gold, and bristling with a hundred edges of that edifice, the great Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god and endowed with extraordinary might, then began to spin it round, so that fire was generated from it due to its attrition with other pillars and the edifice was set ablaze with it. (13—18)

दह्यमानं ततो दृष्ट्वा प्रासादं हरियूथपः ।
स राक्षसशतं हत्वा वज्रेणेन्द्र इवासुरान् ॥ १९ ॥
अन्तरिक्षस्थितः श्रीमानिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ।
मादृशानां सहस्राणि विसृष्टानि महात्मनाम् ॥ २० ॥
बलिनं वानरेन्द्राणां सुग्रीववशवर्तिनाम् ।
अटन्ति वसुधां कृत्स्नां वयमन्ये च वानराः ॥ २१ ॥

Having dispatched all the hundred ogres posted there by means of that pillar, even as Indra got rid of demons with his thunderbolt, and on seeing that monument in flames, that glorious leader of monkey hordes then proclaimed as follows, standing in airspace all the while : “Thousands of colossal and mighty leaders of monkeys, resembling me and amenable to the control of Sugrīva, have been dispatched in all directions. We as well as other monkeys are scouring the entire globe. (19—21)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे त्रिचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-three of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुश्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLIV

Dispatched by Rāvaṇa to capture Hanumān, Jambumālī is killed in battle by the former

संदिष्टो राक्षसेन्द्रेण प्रहस्तस्य सुतो बली ।
जम्बुमाली महादंष्ट्रो निर्जगाम धनुर्धरः ॥ १ ॥
रक्तमाल्याम्बरधरः स्रग्वी रुचिरकुण्डलः ।
महान् विवृत्तनयनश्चण्डः समरदुर्जयः ॥ २ ॥

दशनागबलाः केचित् केचिद् दशगुणोत्तराः ।
केचिन्नागसहस्रस्य बभूवुस्तुल्यविक्रमाः ॥ २२ ॥

“Some of them are endowed with the strength of ten elephants, others are ten times as strong as the former, while still others are equal in prowess to a thousand elephants. (22)

सन्ति चौघबलाः केचित् सन्ति वायुबलोपमाः ।
अप्रमेयबलाः केचित् तत्रासन् हरियूथपाः ॥ २३ ॥

“Some leaders of monkey hordes out of them are endowed with the strength of a flood, while others are as strong as the wind, while still others possess strength beyond measure. (23)

ईदृग्विधैस्तु हरिभिवृतो दन्तनखायुधैः ।
शतैः शतसहस्रैश्च कोटिभिश्चायुतैरपि ॥ २४ ॥
आगमिष्यति सुग्रीवः सर्वेषां वो निषूदनः ।
नेयमस्ति पुरी लङ्का न यूयं न च रावणः ।
यस्य त्विक्ष्वाकुवीरेण बद्धं वैरं महात्मना ॥ २५ ॥

“Surrounded by hundreds, nay, myriads, lakhs and even crores of such monkeys, Sugrīva, who is capable of destroying you all, will come here soon. Neither will this city of Laṅkā endure, nor you, ogres, nor again Rāvaṇa, by whom enmity has actually been courted with the high-souled Śrī Rāma, the hero of the House of Ikṣvāku.” (24-25)

धनुः शक्रधनुःप्रख्यं महद् रुचिरसायकम् ।
विस्फारयाणो वेगेन वज्राशनिसमस्वनम् ॥ ३ ॥

Commanded by Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, Jambumālī, the eminent, mighty and ferocious son of Prahasta, who had large teeth, carried a bow and was difficult to conquer in battle, sallied forth clad in crimson and adorned with a garland of red flowers, a chaplet and brilliant earrings, and stretching with impetuosity his large bow, which resembled a rainbow, was furnished with shining arrows and which when twanged produced a sound like that of thunder and that accompanying a stroke of lightning, his eyes rolling through anger. (1—3)

तस्य विस्फारघोषेण धनुषो महता दिशः।
प्रदिशश्च नभश्चैव सहसा समपूर्यत ॥ ४ ॥

All the four quarters as well as the intermediate points as also the sky got filled all of a sudden with the thunderous twang of that bow. (4)

रथेन खरयुक्तेन तमागतमुदीक्ष्य सः।
हनूमान् वेगसम्पन्नो जहर्ष च ननाद च ॥ ५ ॥

Observing him arrived in a chariot drawn by donkeys, the celebrated Hanumān, who was full of vigour, rejoiced and roared too. (5)

तं तोरणविटङ्कस्थं हनूमन्तं महाकपिम्।
जम्बुमाली महातेजा विव्याध निशितैः शरैः ॥ ६ ॥

Jambumālī, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, pierced with sharpened arrows that great monkey, Hanumān, standing on the top of the archway. (6)

अर्धचन्द्रेण वदने शिरस्येकेन कर्णिना।
बाह्वोर्विव्याध नाराचैर्दशभिस्तु कपीश्वरम् ॥ ७ ॥

He for his part hit Hanumān, the leader of monkeys, in the mouth with an arrow with a crescent-shaped head, on the head with a single barbed shaft and in the arms with ten steel arrows. (7)

तस्य तच्छुशुभे ताम्रं शरेणाभिहतं मुखम्।
शरदीवाम्बुजं फुल्लं विद्धं भास्कररश्मिना ॥ ८ ॥

Pierced with an arrow, his well-known coppery countenance looked charming like a blown red lotus lit by a sunbeam in autumn. (8)

तत्तस्य रक्तं रक्तेन रञ्जितं शुशुभे मुखम्।
यथाऽऽकाशे महापद्मं सिक्तं काञ्चनबिन्दुभिः ॥ ९ ॥

Stained with blood, his ruddy face looked splendid like a large red lotus in the sky, sprinkled with drops of honey of a red Aśoka flower. (9)

चुकोप बाणाभिहतो राक्षसस्य महाकपिः।
ततः पाश्वर्षेऽतिविपुलां ददर्श महतीं शिलाम् ॥ १० ॥

Wounded by the shafts of the ogre, the great monkey waxed wroth. Presently he sighted by his side a big rock of immense proportions. (10)

तरसा तां समुत्पाट्य चिक्षेप जववद् बली।
तां शरैर्दशभिः क्रुद्धस्ताडयामास राक्षसः ॥ ११ ॥

Tearing it up with impetuosity, the mighty monkey hurled it with vehemence. Full of rage the ogre broke it asunder with ten arrows. (11)

विपन्नं कर्म तद् दृष्ट्वा हनूमांश्चण्डविक्रमः।
सालं विपुलमुत्पाट्य भ्रामयामास वीर्यवान् ॥ १२ ॥

Uprooting a huge sal tree on seeing the aforesaid feat brought to naught, the powerful Hanumān, who was endowed with terrific prowess, began to whirl it. (12)

भ्रामयन्तं कपिं दृष्ट्वा सालवृक्षं महाबलम्।
चिक्षेप सुबहून् बाणाञ्जम्बुमाली महाबलः ॥ १३ ॥

Perceiving the monkey, who was endowed with extraordinary might, spinning the sal tree, the highly powerful Jambumālī let loose numerous shafts. (13)

सालं चतुर्भिश्चिच्छेद वानरं पञ्चभिर्भुजे।
उरस्येकेन बाणेन दशभिस्तु स्तनान्तरे ॥ १४ ॥

He rent the sal asunder with four arrows and pierced the monkey in his arms with five others, in the chest with a further dart and between the breasts with ten more. (14)

स शरैः पूरिततनुः क्रोधेन महता वृतः।
तमेव परिघं गृह्य भ्रामयामास वेगितः ॥ १५ ॥

Seizing the same iron club (which he had made use of in the very first instance),

Hanumān, whose body was covered with darts and who was now overcome with violent anger, spun it with impetuosity. (15)

अतिवेगोऽतिवेगेन भ्रामयित्वा बलोत्कटः ।

परिधं पातयामास जम्बुमालेर्महोरसि ॥ १६ ॥

Whirling the club with extreme velocity, full of great impetuosity as he was, Hanumān, who was superior in strength directed it against the broad chest of Jambumālī. (16)

तस्य चैव शिरो नास्ति न बाहू जानुनी न च ।

न धनुर्न रथो नाश्वास्तत्रादृश्यन्त नेषवः ॥ १७ ॥

Neither could his head be discerned any more nor his arms nor his knees nor his bow nor his chariot nor the donkeys yoked to it nor the arrows placed in his quiver. (17)

स हतस्तरसा तेन जम्बुमाली महारथः ।

पपात निहतो भूमौ चूर्णिताङ्ग इव द्रुमः ॥ १८ ॥

Struck with violence by that club, Jambumālī, who was an eminent chariot-warrior, dropped dead on the ground like a tree with its boughs and trunk etc., smashed. (18)

जम्बुमालिं सुनिहतं किंकरांश्च महाबलान् ।

चुक्रोध रावणः श्रुत्वा क्रोधसंरक्तलोचनः ॥ १९ ॥

Rāvaṇa waxed wroth on hearing of Jambumālī as well as of the Kiṅkaras, who were endowed with extraordinary might, having been easily killed, his eyes blood-shot through anger. (19)

स रोषसंवर्तितताम्रलोचनः

प्रहस्तपुत्रे निहते महाबले ।

अमात्यपुत्रानतिवीर्यविक्रमान्

समादिदेशाशु निशाचरेश्वरः ॥ २० ॥

On Jambumālī (son of Prahasta), who was endowed with extraordinary might, having been killed, the notorious Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres), whose coppery eyes began to roll rapidly through anger, promptly commanded the sons of his chief minister, who were endowed with surpassing virility and prowess, to march against Hanumān. (20)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे चतुश्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-four of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLV

Having made short work of the seven sons of Rāvaṇa's chief minister too, Hanumān climbs up the archway again and takes up his position there

ततस्ते राक्षसेन्द्रेण चोदिता मन्त्रिणः सुताः ।

निर्ययुर्भवनात् तस्मात् सप्त सप्तार्चिवर्चसः ॥ १ ॥

महद्वलपरीवारा धनुष्मन्तो महाबलाः ।

कृतास्त्रास्त्रविदां श्रेष्ठाः परस्परजयैषिणः ॥ २ ॥

हेमजालपरिक्षिप्तैर्ध्वजवद्भिः पताकिभिः ।

तोयदस्वननिर्घोषैर्वाजियुक्तैर्महारथैः ॥ ३ ॥

तप्तकाञ्चनचित्राणि चापान्यमितविक्रमाः ।

विस्फारयन्तः संहृष्टास्तडिद्वन्त इवाम्बुदाः ॥ ४ ॥

Commanded by Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, the aforesaid seven sons of his chief minister—who were splendid as fire—were followed by a large army, armed with bows and endowed with extraordinary might and immeasurable prowess, and were the foremost of those trained in the science of arms and skilled in the use of missiles and were eager to excel one another in fighting, sallied forth, highly delighted, from that palace of Rāvaṇa in large chariots to which horses were yoked, were overlaid with a protective armour of gold, were surmounted by banners and decorated with smaller flags and which made a rattling sound resembling a peal of thunder, stretching their bows inlaid with refined gold and as such looking like clouds accompanied by flashes of lightning. (1—4)

जनन्यस्तास्ततस्तेषां विदित्वा किंकरान् हतान् ।

बभूवुः शोकसम्भ्रान्ताः सबान्धवसुहृज्जनाः ॥ ५ ॥

Coming to know of the Kiṅkaras having been killed, their mothers alongwith their near and dear ones got confounded on account of grief and fear of further calamity. (5)

ते परस्परसंघर्षात् तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणाः ।

अभिपेतुर्हनुमन्तं तोरणस्थमवस्थितम् ॥ ६ ॥

Vying with one another to take the lead, the chief minister's sons, who were decked with ornaments of refined gold, rushed on Hanumān, who stood on the archway motionless. (6)

सृजन्तो बाणवृष्टिं ते रथगर्जितनिःस्वनाः ।

प्रावृट्काल इवाम्भोदा विचेरुर्नैर्ऋताम्बुदाः ॥ ७ ॥

Discharging a hail of shafts like watery clouds during the monsoon, the aforesaid cloud in the shape of ogres rambled about, emitting a sound like a clap of thunder in the shape of the rattling of their chariots. (7)

अवकीर्णास्ततस्ताभिर्हनुमान् शरवृष्टिभिः ।

अभवत् संवृताकारः शैलराडिव वृष्टिभिः ॥ ८ ॥

Covered by those showers of shafts, Hanumān became invisible even as a king of mountains is obscured by incessant showers. (8)

स शरान् वञ्चयामास तेषामाशुचरः कपिः ।

रथवेगांश्च वीराणां विचरन् विमलेऽम्बरे ॥ ९ ॥

Wheeling about in the cloudless sky, that swift-footed monkey, Hanumān, eluded the shafts of those heroic ogres as well as the onrush of their chariots. (9)

स तैः क्रीडन् धनुष्मद्भिर्व्योम्नि वीरः प्रकाशते ।

धनुष्मद्भिर्यथा मेघैर्मरुतः प्रभुरम्बरे ॥ १० ॥

Sporting in the air with those warriors, each armed with a bow, the hero shone like the powerful wind-god playing in the heavens with clouds accompanied by rainbows. (10)

स कृत्वा निनदं घोरं त्रासयंस्तां महाचमूम् ।

चकार हनुमान् वेगं तेषु रक्षःसु वीर्यवान् ॥ ११ ॥

Emitting a terrible roar and striking terror into that large army, the powerful Hanumān rushed on those ogres. (11)

तलेनाभिहनत् कांश्चित् पादैः कांश्चित् परंतपः ।

मुष्टिभिश्चाहनत् कांश्चिन्नखैः कांश्चिद् व्यदारयत् ॥ १२ ॥

Hanumān, the scourge of his enemies, struck down some with the palm of his hand, and some more with his feet. He hit others with his fists and tore still others with his nails. (12)

प्रममाथोरसा कांश्चिदूरुभ्यामपरानपि ।

केचित् तस्यैव नादेन तत्रैव पतिता भुवि ॥ १३ ॥

He crushed some with his chest and others against his thighs, while others fell on the ground at the very spot where they stood, simply at the roar of Hanumān. (13)

ततस्तेष्ववसन्नेषु भूमौ निपतितेषु च ।

तत्सैन्यमगमत् सर्वं दिशो दश भयार्दितम् ॥ १४ ॥

The said sons of Rāvaṇa's chief minister having been got rid of and fallen on the ground, that army fled in all the ten directions, stricken with fear. (14)

विनेदुर्विस्वरं नागा निपेतुर्भुवि वाजिनः ।

भग्ननीडध्वजच्छत्रैर्भूश्च कीर्णाभवद् रथैः ॥ १५ ॥

Elephants trumpeted dissonantly, horses fell to the ground and the earth was strewn with chariots which had their seats, ensigns and canopies shattered. (15)

स्रवता रुधिरेणाथ स्रवन्त्यो दर्शिताः पथि ।

विविधैश्च स्वनैर्लङ्का ननाद विकृतं तदा ॥ १६ ॥

Rivers were presented to the view by blood flowing on the way. Nay, Lāṅkā seemed to shriek wild due to various cries uttered by its denizens. (16)

स तान् प्रवृद्धान् विनिहत्य राक्षसान्

महाबलश्चण्डपराक्रमः कपिः ।

युयुत्सुरन्यैः पुनरेव राक्षसै-

स्तदेव वीरोऽभिजगाम तोरणम् ॥ १७ ॥

Having disposed of those arrogant ogres, the heroic monkey, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might and terrific prowess, sought once more the same archway, eager to give battle to other ogres.

(17)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे पञ्चचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-five of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLVI

Having killed five more generals sent by Rāvaṇa, Hanumān returns again to the archway of the Aśoka grove

हतान् मन्त्रिसुतान् बुद्ध्वा वानरेण महात्मना ।

रावणः संवृताकारश्चकार मतिमुत्तमाम् ॥ १ ॥

Coming to know of his chief minister's sons having been killed by the colossal monkey, Rāvaṇa, who had hypocritically concealed the expression of his face giving a clue to the disposition of his mind, made a crafty resolution to renew his efforts to tame the monkey. (1)

स विरूपाक्षयूपाक्षौ दुर्धरं चैव राक्षसम् ।

प्रघसं भासकर्णं च पञ्च सेनाग्रनायकान् ॥ २ ॥

संदिदेश दशग्रीवो वीरान् नयविशारदान् ।

हनूमद्ग्रहणेऽव्यग्रान् वायुवेगसमान् युधि ॥ ३ ॥

That ten-headed monster commanded five leading generals of his army, viz.,
Virupākṣa and Yupākṣa as well as the ogre Dūrdhara, Praghāṣa and Bhāsaakaṇṇa, who were valiant, nay, past masters in strategy and imperturbable and approached the speed of the wind on the field of battle, to take Hanumān captive. (2-3)

यात सेनाग्रगाः सर्वे महाबलपरिग्रहाः ।

सवाजिरथमातङ्गाः स कपिः शास्यतामिति ॥ ४ ॥

"March you all, O generals, taking a large army with you and accompanied by horses, chariots and elephants and let that monkey be punished. (4)

यत्तैश्च खलु भाव्यं स्यात् तमासाद्य वनालयम् ।

कर्म चापि समाधेयं देशकालाविरोधितम् ॥ ५ ॥

"Approaching that monkey, you must surely remain alert and action should be taken by you, which is not out of harmony with time and place. (5)

न ह्यहं तं कपिं मन्ये कर्मणा प्रति तर्कयन् ।

सर्वथा तन्महद् भूतं महाबलपरिग्रहम् ॥ ६ ॥

"Judging him by his actions, I surely do not account him a monkey. At all events he must be some great being endowed with extraordinary might. (6)

वानरोऽयमिति ज्ञात्वा नहि शुद्ध्यति मे मनः ।

नैवाहं तं कपिं मन्ये यथेयं प्रस्तुता कथा ॥ ७ ॥

"My mind is surely not ready to believe that he is a monkey. I certainly do not account him a monkey as the story which is told about him shows. (7)

भवेदिन्द्रेण वा सृष्टमस्मदर्थं तपोबलात् ।

सनागयक्षगन्धर्वदेवासुरमहर्षयः

॥ ८ ॥

युष्माभिः प्रहितैः सर्वैर्मया सह विनिर्जिताः ।
तैरवश्यं विधातव्यं व्यलीकं किञ्चिदेव नः ॥ १॥

“He may be some creature evolved for our annihilation by Indra, the ruler of gods, by virtue of his askesis. Gods, demons and eminent Ṛṣis alongwith Nāgas, Yakṣas and Gandharvas were utterly vanquished by you (the ogre army) under my command and standing by me. Something unpleasant to us need must be done by them. (8-9)

तदेव नात्र संदेहः प्रसह्य परिगृह्यताम् ।
यात सेनाग्रगाः सर्वे महाबलपरिग्रहाः ॥ १० ॥
सवाजिरथमातङ्गाः स कपिः शास्यतामिति ।
नावमन्यो भवद्भिश्च कपिर्धीरपराक्रमः ॥ ११ ॥

“It is precisely some such being: there is no doubt about it. He must be taken captive by force. March you all, O generals, taking a large army with you and accompanied by horses, chariots and elephants. Let that monkey be chastised. Nay, the monkey, who is endowed with steady prowess, should not be disregarded by you. (10-11)

दृष्टा हि हरयः पूर्वं मया विपुलविक्रमाः ।
वाली च सह सुग्रीवो जाम्बवांश्च महाबलः ॥ १२ ॥
नीलः सेनापतिश्चैव ये चान्ये द्विविदादयः ।
नैव तेषां गतिर्भीमा न तेजो न पराक्रमः ॥ १३ ॥
न मतिर्न बलोत्साहो न रूपपरिकल्पनम् ।
महत्सत्त्वमिदं ज्ञेयं कपिरूपं व्यवस्थितम् ॥ १४ ॥

“Monkeys of immense prowess have been actually seen by me in the past, viz., Vāli alongwith Sugrīva, as well as Jāmbavān, the bear, who is endowed with extraordinary might, as also General Nīla and others such as Dwivida. Their capacity to leap, however, is not so tremendous, nor energy, nor prowess, nor intellect, nor strength and vigour, nor ability to assume different forms at will. He should be concluded to be some mighty creature drawn up in the form of a monkey. (12—14)

प्रयत्नं महदास्थाय क्रियतामस्य निग्रहः ।
कामं लोकास्त्रयः सेन्द्राः ससुरासुरमानवाः ॥ १५ ॥

भवतामग्रतः स्थातुं न पर्याप्ता रणाजिरे ।
तथापि तु नयज्ञेन जयमाकाङ्क्षता रणे ॥ १६ ॥
आत्मा रक्ष्यः प्रयत्नेन युद्धसिद्धिर्हि चञ्चला ।
ते स्वामिवचनं सर्वे प्रतिगृह्य महौजसः ॥ १७ ॥
समुत्पेतुर्महावेगा हुताशसमतेजसः ।
रथैश्च मत्तैर्नागैश्च वाजिभिश्च महाजवैः ॥ १८ ॥
शस्त्रैश्च विविधैस्तीक्ष्णैः सर्वैश्चोपहिता बलैः ।
ततस्तु ददृशुर्वीरा दीप्यमानं महाकपिम् ॥ १९ ॥
रश्मिमन्तमिवोद्यन्तं स्वतेजोरश्मिमालिनम् ।
तोरणस्थं महावेगं महासत्त्वं महाबलम् ॥ २० ॥
महामतिं महोत्साहं महाकायं महाभुजम् ।
तं समीक्ष्यैव ते सर्वे दिक्षु सर्वास्ववस्थिताः ॥ २१ ॥
तैस्तैः प्रहरणैर्भीमैरभिपेतुस्ततस्ततः ।
तस्य पञ्चायसास्तीक्ष्णाः सिताः पीतमुखाः शराः ।
शिरस्युत्पलपत्राभा दुर्धरेण निपातिताः ॥ २२ ॥

“Putting forth extraordinary effort, let him be taken captive. Even all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) including Indra, the ruler of the three worlds, as well as gods, demons and human beings are not able to stand before you on the field of battle. Nevertheless, one’s own self must at all events be zealously protected by one who knows how to behave prudently and seeks to triumph in combat; for success in battle is uncertain indeed.”

Bowing to the command of their master, all the generals, who were endowed with extraordinary energy and agility and equipped with sharp weapons of every kind and followed by all kinds of forces, and who were effulgent as fire, sallied forth in chariots as well as on the back of elephants in rut and horses of extraordinary swiftmess. Thereupon the heroes for their part caught sight of the great monkey, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary agility, extraordinary courage, extraordinary strength, extraordinary intelligence, extraordinary ardour, a gigantic body and mighty-arms, and who was blazing like the rising sun, encircled as he was by the rays of his glory. Immediately on perceiving him, they all, who were stationed in all quarters, assailed him with their dreadful weapons of all descriptions from every side. Five sharp and white polished steel shafts with yellow (golden) tips were dug into his head by Dūrdhara and shone like petals of lilies causing no more pain to him than lilies.

(15—22)

स तैः पञ्चभिराविद्धः शरैः शिरसि वानरः ।

उत्पपात नदन् व्योम्नि दिशो दश विनादयन् ॥ २३ ॥

Pierced in the head with those five arrows, the monkey leapt roaring in the sky, making all the ten directions resound thereby.

(23)

ततस्तु दुर्धरो वीरः सरथः सज्जकार्मुकः ।

किरन् शरशतैर्नैकैरभिपेदे महाबलः ॥ २४ ॥

Thereupon the valiant Dūrdhara, who was endowed with extraordinary might, arrived near him in his chariot, with his bow duly drawn and covered him with many hundreds of shafts.

(24)

स कपिर्वारयामास तं व्योम्नि शरवर्षिणम् ।

वृष्टिमन्तं पयोदान्ते पयोदमिव मारुतः ॥ २५ ॥

Continuing in the air, Hanumān kept back by means of his very roar Dūrdhara, who was raining arrows on him, even as the wind would keep back a rainy cloud at the end of the monsoon.

(25)

अर्द्यमानस्ततस्तेन दुर्धरेणानिलात्मजः ।

चकार निनदं भूयो व्यवर्धत च वीर्यवान् ॥ २६ ॥

Being tormented by the aforesaid Dūrdhara, the powerful Hanumān emitted a roar once more and grew immensely in size.

(26)

स दूरं सहस्रोत्पत्य दुर्धरस्य रथे हरिः ।

निपपात महावेगो विद्युद्राशिर्गिराविव ॥ २७ ॥

Bounding high into the sky, Hanumān precipitately jumped with great impetuosity on the chariot of Dūrdhara like a mass of lightning on a mountain.

(27)

ततः स मथिताष्टाश्वं रथं भग्नाक्षकूबरम् ।

विहाय न्यपतद् भूमौ दुर्धरस्त्यक्तजीवितः ॥ २८ ॥

Having lost his chariot, whose axle and pole had been broken and all the eight horses mangled, Dūrdhara dropped down dead on the ground.

(28)

तं विरूपाक्षयूपाक्षौ दृष्ट्वा निपतितं भुवि ।

तौ जातरोषौ दुर्धर्षावुत्पेततुररिन्दमौ ॥ २९ ॥

Enraged to see him fallen flat on the ground, the notorious Virupākṣa and Yupākṣa, who were difficult to overcome and were capable of taming the enemy, sprang up in the sky.

(29)

स ताभ्यां सहस्रोत्प्लुत्य विष्टितो विमलेऽम्बरे ।

मुद्राभ्यां महाबाहुर्वक्षस्यभिहतः कपिः ॥ ३० ॥

Stationed in the cloudless sky, the aforesaid mighty-armed Hanumān was struck by them in the chest all of a sudden with clubs even as they sprang up in the sky.

(30)

तयोर्वेगवतोर्वेगं निहत्य स महाबलः ।

निपपात पुनर्भूमौ सुपर्ण इव वेगितः ॥ ३१ ॥

Having foiled the onrush of the aforesaid two generals, who were full of impetuosity, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might and full of vehemence, swooped down on the earth again like Garuḍa with beautiful feathers.

(31)

स सालवृक्षमासाद्य समुत्पाट्य च वानरः ।

तावुभौ राक्षसौ वीरौ जघान पवनात्मजः ॥ ३२ ॥

Reaching a sal tree and uprooting it, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, struck down with it both those valiant ogres.

(32)

ततस्तांस्त्रीन् हतान् ज्ञात्वा वानरेण तरस्विना ।

अभिपेदे महावेगः प्रहस्य प्रघसो बली ॥ ३३ ॥

भासकर्णश्च संकुब्धः शूलमादाय वीर्यवान् ।

एकतः कपिशार्दूलं यशस्विनमवस्थितौ ॥ ३४ ॥

Finding all those three killed by Hanumān, who was full of agility and laughing heartily, the mighty Praghāsa, who was endowed with extraordinary swiftness, arrived next, as also the powerful Bhāsa-karṇa, highly enraged, taking a dart in his hand. The two general stood on one side of the illustrious Hanumān, a tiger among monkeys. (33-34)

पट्टिशेन शिताग्रेण प्रघसः प्रत्यपोथयत्।
भासकर्णश्च शूलेन राक्षसः कपिकुञ्जरम्॥ ३५ ॥

Praghasa pierced Hanumān, an elephant among monkeys, with a sharp-pointed spear, while the ogre Bhāsakarna attacked him with a dart. (35)

स ताभ्यां विक्षतैर्गात्रैरसृग्दिग्धतनूरुहः।
अभवद् वानरः क्रुद्धो बालसूर्यसमप्रभः॥ ३६ ॥

With his limbs lacerated by their blows and the coat of hair on his body smeared with blood, that monkey, Hanumān, who shone like the rising sun, waxed enraged. (36)

समुत्पाट्य गिरेः शृङ्गं समृगव्यालपादपम्।
जघान हनुमान् वीरो राक्षसौ कपिकुञ्जरः।
गिरिशृङ्गसुनिष्पिष्टौ तिलशस्तौ बभूवतुः॥ ३७ ॥

Breaking off the peak of a mountain including its beasts, snakes and trees, the heroic Hanumān, a veritable elephant among monkeys, struck with it the two ogres. Utterly crushed under the mountain-peak, they were reduced to smithereens. (37)

ततस्तेष्ववसन्नेषु सेनापतिषु पञ्चसु।
बलं तदवशेषं तु नाशयामास वानरः॥ ३८ ॥

All those five generals having been killed, Hanumān now began to destroy the army which remained after them. (38)

अश्वैरश्वान् गजैर्नागान् योद्धैर्योधान् रथै रथान्।
स कपिर्नाशयामास सहस्राक्ष इवासुरान्॥ ३९ ॥

Like Indra (the thousand eyed god) exterminating the demons, Hanumān destroyed the horses by striking them with horses, the elephants with elephants, the warriors with warriors and the chariots with chariots. (39)

हयैर्नागैस्तुरंगैश्च भग्नाक्षैश्च महारथैः।
हतैश्च राक्षसैर्भूमी रुद्धमार्गा समन्ततः॥ ४० ॥

The earth had its pathways on all sides completely blocked with the horses, elephants and swift-footed horses as well as with the ogres who had been killed and the big chariots that had their axles broken. (40)

ततः कपिस्तान् ध्वजिनीपतीन् रणे
निहत्य वीरान् सबलान् सवाहनान्।
तथैव वीरः परिगृह्य तोरणं
कृतक्षणः काल इव प्रजाक्षये॥ ४१ ॥

Having killed in combat those valiant generals alongwith their forces and vehicles destroyed and taking his stand likewise on the archway, the heroic Hanumān now stood biding his time for a further opportunity of showing his valour, like the Time-Spirit bent upon the destruction of created beings. (41)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे षट्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः॥ ४६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-six of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLVII

Prince Akṣa, son of Rāvaṇa, who came to meet Hanumān in combat, is killed

सेनापतीन् पञ्च स तु प्रमापितान्
हनूमता सानुचरान् सवाहनान्।

निशम्य राजा समरोद्धतोन्मुखं
कुमारमक्षं प्रसमैक्षताक्षम्॥ १ ॥

Hearing of his five generals killed with their followers and vehicles destroyed by Hanumān, Rāvaṇa, the king, for his part looked intently and inquisitively on Prince Akṣa, who stood face to face with him and was violent in combat and inclined to fighting. (1)

स तस्य दृष्ट्यर्पणसम्प्रचोदितः

प्रतापवान् काञ्चनचित्रकार्मुकः ।

समुत्पपाताथ सदस्युदीरितो

द्विजातिमुख्यैर्हविषेव पावकः ॥ २ ॥

Spurred on by his mere glance, the glorious prince, who was armed with a marvellous bow inlaid with gold, leapt up forthwith in the royal assembly like a flame fed with ghee by the foremost of Brāhmaṇas in a fire-sanctuary. (2)

ततो महान् बालदिवाकरप्रभं

प्रतप्तजाम्बूनदजालसंततम् ।

रथं समास्थाय ययौ स वीर्यवान्

महाहरिं तं प्रति नैर्ऋतर्षभः ॥ ३ ॥

Mounting a chariot, effulgent as the rising sun and overlaid with a protective armour of highly refined gold, that eminent and powerful jewel among the ogres immediately marched against that mighty Hanumān. (3)

ततस्तपःसंग्रहसंचयार्जितं

प्रतप्तजाम्बूनदजालचित्रितम् ।

पताकिनं रत्नविभूषितध्वजं

मनोजवाष्टाश्ववरैः सुयोजितम् ॥ ४ ॥

सुरासुराधृष्यमसङ्गचारिणं

तडित्प्रभं व्योमचरं समाहितम् ।

सतूणमष्टासिनिबद्धबन्धुरं

यथाक्रमावेशितशक्तितोमरम् ॥ ५ ॥

विराजमानं प्रतिपूर्वस्तुना

सहेमदाम्ना शशिसूर्यवर्चसा ।

दिवाकराभं रथमास्थितस्ततः

स निर्जंगामामरतुल्यविक्रमः ॥ ६ ॥

Mounted on that chariot—which shone like the sun, nay, which had been acquired through accumulated practice of austerities, had been rendered picturesque by a protective armour of highly refined gold and was decorated with small flags, which could be distinguished by a bejewelled ensign, to which eight excellent horses, swift as mind, were firmly yoked, and was unassailable by gods and demons alike, which could move without any solid support and as such coursed through the air, flashing like lightning, was well fitted out and equipped with quivers, which looked charming with eight swords fastened to it (in the four quarters and the four intermediate points), in which javelins and lances had been placed in orderly array and which shone brightly with all war equipments strung together with a golden cord brilliant as the rays of the sun and the moon—Prince Akṣa, who vied with gods in prowess, presently sallied forth from that place. (4—6)

स पूरयन् खं च महीं च साचलां

तुरङ्गमातङ्गमहारथस्वनैः ।

बलैः समेतैः सहतोरणस्थितं

समर्थमासीनमुपागमत् कपिम् ॥ ७ ॥

Nay, filling the firmament as well as the earth including its mountains with the neighing of horses and elephants and the rattling of large chariots, Akṣa, alongwith the collected forces approached the powerful Hanumān stationed on the archway. (7)

स तं समासाद्य हरिं हरीक्षणो

युगान्तकालाग्रिमिव प्रजाक्षये ।

अवस्थितं विस्मितजातसम्भ्रमं

समैक्षताक्षो बहुमानचक्षुषा ॥ ८ ॥

Hanumān, who stood ready for the annihilation of ogres like the destructive fire raging at the time of universal dissolution, was astonished to see the prince, who was a mere boy before him, arrived to give battle to him. Hanumān was struck with wonder to know that he was son of the great Rāvaṇa, the said Akṣa, whose eyes shone like that of a lion, and gazed on him with eyes full of pride. (8)

स तस्य वेगं च कपेर्महात्मनः
पराक्रमं चारिषु रावणात्मजः ।
विचारयन् स्वं च बलं महाबलो
युगक्षये सूर्य इवाभिवर्धत ॥ ९ ॥

Reflecting on the speed of that gigantic Hanumān as well as on his prowess with regard to his enemies as also on his own strength, that son of Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, began to swell in glory like the sun at the end of the world cycle. (9)

स जातमन्युः प्रसमीक्ष्य विक्रमं
स्थितः स्थिरः संयति दुर्निवारणम् ।
समाहितात्मा हनुमन्तमाहवे
प्रचोदयामास शितैः शरैस्त्रिभिः ॥ १० ॥

Enraged to observe his valour, he took his stand firmly with a concentrated mind and provoked Hanumān, who was difficult to check in combat, to an encounter by piercing him with three whetted shafts. (10)

ततः कपिं तं प्रसमीक्ष्य गर्वितं
जितश्रमं शत्रुपराजयोचितम् ।
अवैक्षताक्षः समुदीर्णमानसं
सबाणपाणिः प्रगृहीतकार्मुकः ॥ ११ ॥

Observing Hanumān full of pride inasmuch as he had conquered fatigue, was capable of vanquishing his enemies and whose zeal for fighting had grown (as a result of his repeated triumphs over his enemies), and firmly holding his bow, Prince Akṣa, arrow in hand, gazed on him. (11)

स हेमनिष्काङ्गदचारुकुण्डलः
समाससादाशुपराक्रमः कपिम् ।
तयोर्बभूवाप्रतिमः समागमः
सुरासुराणामपि सम्भ्रमप्रदः ॥ १२ ॥

Adorned with an ornament for the breast, a pair of armlets and charming earrings, all made of gold, Akṣa of fiery spirit met Hanumān at close quarters and an encounter took place between them, which was without a parallel and struck awe even in gods and demons. (12)

ररास भूमिर्न तताप भानुमान्
ववौ न वायुः प्रचचाल चाचलः ।
कपेः कुमारस्य च वीर्यसंयुगं
ननाद च द्यौरुदधिश्च चुक्षुभे ॥ १३ ॥

Witnessing the mighty contest between the valiant Hanumān and the prince, the earth shrieked in agony under their heavy footfalls, the sun did not shine brightly, the wind ceased to blow, the mountain (Trikūṭa on which the city of Lāṅkā stood) shook, the firmament rang and the sea too was convulsed. (13)

स तस्य वीरः सुमुखान् पतत्रिणः
सुवर्णपुङ्खान् सविषानिवोरगान् ।
समाधिसंयोगविमोक्षतत्त्ववि-
च्छानथ त्रीन् कपिमूर्ध्न्यताडयत् ॥ १४ ॥

That hero, who correctly knew how to fix his gaze on the target, to fit a shaft to the bow and to discharge it, forthwith dug into the monkey's head three winged shafts with lovely heads and golden feathers, which resembled venomous serpents. (14)

स तैः शरैर्मूर्ध्नि समं निपातितैः
क्षरन्नसृग्दग्धविवृत्तनेत्रः ।
नवोदितादित्यनिभः शरांशुमान्
व्यराजतादित्य इवांशुमालिकः ॥ १५ ॥

Discharging blood from his wounds caused by those shafts simultaneously dug into his head by Akṣa, and bathed in it and thereby looking like the newly risen sun, his eyes rolling rapidly through indignation, Hanumān shone brightly like the sun, surrounded by a circle of rays, having the arrows transfixed into his forehead for its rays. (15)

ततः प्लवङ्गाधिपमन्त्रिसत्तमः
समीक्ष्य तं राजवरात्मजं रणे ।
उदग्रचित्रायुधचित्रकार्मुकं
जहर्ष चापूर्यत चाहवोन्मुखः ॥ १६ ॥

Hanumān, the foremost of ministers of the suzerain lord of monkeys, now rejoiced and grew in size on perceiving that offspring of Rāvaṇa with his marvellous weapons and picturesque bow raised upward on the field of battle, inclined as he was to fighting. (16)

स मन्दराग्रस्थ इवांशुमाली
विवृद्धकोपो बलवीर्यसंवृतः ।
कुमारमक्षं सबलं सबाह्वं
ददाह नेत्राग्रिमरीचिभिस्तदा ॥ १७ ॥

Infuriated and full of strength and virility, Hanumān, who resembled the sun appearing on a peak of Mount Mandāra, began at that moment to burn Prince Akṣa alongwith his forces and vehicles by the rays of fire emanating from his eyes. (17)

ततः स बाणासनशक्रकार्मुकः
शरप्रवर्षो युधि राक्षसाम्बुदः ।
शरान् मुमोचाशु हरीश्वराचले
बलाहको वृष्टिमिवाचलोत्तमे ॥ १८ ॥

Bearing a rainbow in the shape of a bow and pouring a shower of arrows on the field of battle, the cloud in the form of the ogre Akṣa began to discharge arrows rapidly on a mountain in the shape of Hanumān, a leader of monkeys, even as a cloud would pour a shower on the foremost of mountains. (18)

कपिस्ततस्तं रणचण्डविक्रमं
प्रवृद्धतेजोबलवीर्यसायकम् ।
कुमारमक्षं प्रसमीक्ष्य संयुगे
ननाद हर्षाद् घनतुल्यनिःस्वनः ॥ १९ ॥

“Observing on the field of battle the aforesaid Prince Akṣa, whose prowess was formidable in combat, nay, whose energy, strength, prowess and force of arrows had considerably grown, Hanumān thereupon shouted in sheer joy, his roar resembling a clap of thunder. (19)

स बालभावाद् युधि वीर्यदर्पितः
प्रवृद्धमन्युः क्षतजोपमेक्षणः ।
समाससादाप्रतिमं रणे कपिं
गजो महाकूपमिवावृतं तृणैः ॥ २० ॥

Proud of his valour on the field of battle as a result of ignorance (characteristic of children), and with blood-shot eyes, his fury having grown beyond measure, Akṣa approached Hanumān, who had no rival in combat, even as an elephant would approach a big well covered with grass. (20)

स तेन बाणैः प्रसभं निपातितै- श्चकार नादं घननादिनिःस्वनः ।
समुत्सहेनाशु नभः समारुजन्
भुजोरुविक्षेपणघोरदर्शनः ॥ २१ ॥

Struck with arrows shot with violence by Akṣa, Hanumān forthwith shouted with great vigour in a voice resembling thunder, rending the air, as it were, and assuming a terrible aspect by stretching out his arms and thighs. (21)

तमुत्पतन्तं समभिद्रवद् बली
स राक्षसानां प्रवरः प्रतापवान् ।
स्थी रथश्रेष्ठतरः किरन् शरैः
पयोधरः शैलमिवाश्मवृष्टिभिः ॥ २२ ॥

Mounted on a chariot, the mighty and glorious Akṣa, the most distinguished of ogres and the most eminent of chariot-warriors, closely followed Hanumān even as the latter sprang up in the sky, covering him with shafts, even as a cloud would cover a mountain with showers of hailstones. (22)

स ताञ्छ्रांस्तस्य हरिर्विमोक्षयं- श्चचार वीरः पथि वायुसेविते ।
शरान्तरे मारुतवद् विनिष्पतन्
मनोजवः संयति भीमविक्रमः ॥ २३ ॥

Darting like the wind between the arrows and thereby escaping those arrows of Akṣa, the heroic Hanumān, who was swift as thought and exhibited terrific prowess on the field of battle, began to range the airspace. (23)

तमात्तबाणासनमाहवोन्मुखं
खमास्तृणान्तं विविधैः शरोत्तमैः ।
अवैक्षताक्षं बहुमानचक्षुषा
जगाम चिन्तां स च मारुतात्मजः ॥ २४ ॥

The said offspring of the wind-god, Hanumān, regarded with an eye full of esteem Akṣa—who, having seized his bow, was covering the sky with various excellent arrows, keen as he was for an encounter—and became thoughtful. (24)

ततः शरैर्भिन्नभुजान्तरः कपिः
कुमारवर्येण महात्मना नदन्।
महाभुजः कर्मविशेषतत्त्वविद्
विचिन्तयामास रणे पराक्रमम्॥ २५ ॥

Roaring, when pierced in the breast with shafts by the high-minded Akṣa, the foremost of princes, the mighty-armed Hanumān, who knew how to act under particular circumstances, reflected on the following lines on the prowess of Akṣa on the field of battle. (25)

अबालवद् बालदिवाकरप्रभः
करोत्ययं कर्म महन्महाबलः।
न चास्य सर्वाहवकर्मशालिनः
प्रमापणे मे मतिरत्र जायते॥ २६ ॥

“Endowed with extraordinary might and possessing the splendour of the rising sun, this boy is accomplishing great deeds unlike a boy! Nor do I feel inclined to kill on this occasion this youth, who is distinguished in his acts of warfare. (26)

अयं महात्मा च महांश्च वीर्यतः
समाहितश्चातिसहश्च संयुगे।
असंशयं कर्मगुणोदयादयं
सनागयक्षैर्मुनिभिश्च पूजितः॥ २७ ॥

“This prince is high-souled and also eminent in valour; nay, he is circumspect and extremely enduring in combat and is adored even by hermits including Nāgas and Yakṣas due to exaltation of his deeds and virtues. (27)

पराक्रमोत्साहविवृद्धमानसः
समीक्षते मां प्रमुखोऽग्रतः स्थितः।
पराक्रमो ह्यस्य मनांसि कम्पयेत्
सुरासुराणामपि शीघ्रकारिणः॥ २८ ॥

“Standing in the van as the leader, reassured as he is by prowess and strength of will, he looks me straight in the eyes. Surely the valour of this warrior, who is quick of action, would shake the mind even of gods and demons. (28)

न खल्वयं नाभिभवेदुपेक्षितः
पराक्रमो ह्यस्य रणे विवर्धते।
प्रमापणं ह्यस्य ममाद्य रोचते
न वर्धमानोऽग्निरुपेक्षितुं क्षमः॥ २९ ॥

“If disregarded, he would undoubtedly get the better of me; for his prowess grows in combat. Putting an end to him, therefore, now finds favour with me. A spreading fire is not worth neglecting.” (29)

इति प्रवेगं तु परस्य तर्कयन्
स्वकर्मयोगं च विधाय वीर्यवान्।
चकार वेगं तु महाबलस्तदा
मतिं च चक्रेऽस्य वधे तदानीम्॥ ३० ॥

Pondering thus the tremendous speed of the enemy and determining the course of his own action, the powerful Hanumān for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, made up his mind to kill him without delay and increased his momentum for that purpose. (30)

स तस्य तानष्ट वरान् महाहयान्
समाहितान् भारसहान् विवर्तने।
जघान वीरः पथि वायुसेविते
तलप्रहारैः पवनात्मजः कपिः॥ ३१ ॥

Coursing through the airspace, that valiant Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, killed with the blows of his palm Akṣa’s well-known eight big horses, trained in turning quickly to the right and left and capable of enduring the burden of the chariot. (31)

ततस्तलेनाभिहतो महारथः
स तस्य पिङ्गाधिपमन्त्रिर्निर्जितः।
स भग्वनीडः परिवृत्तकूबरः
पपात भूमौ हतवाजिरम्बरात्॥ ३२ ॥

Overpowered by Hanumān, the counsellor of Sugrīva (the suzerain lord of monkeys), nay, struck by him with his palm, that well-known huge chariot of Akṣa, which had its interior broken, its pole overturned and horses already killed, thereupon fell to the earth from the sky. (32)

स तं परित्यज्य महारथो रथं
सकार्मुकः खड्गधरः खमुत्पतन् ।
ततोऽभियोगादृषिरुग्रवीर्यवान्
विहाय देहं मरुतामिवालयम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Bounding into the air with his bow and sword, having abandoned that chariot, that great chariot-warrior, Akṣa, now looked like a Ṛṣi (the seer of a Vedic Mantra), possessing tremendous power, ascending to the realm of gods on quitting his body through practice of yoga. (33)

कपिस्ततस्तं विचरन्तमम्बरे
पतत्रिराजानिलसिद्धसेविते ।
समेत्य तं मारुतवेगविक्रमः
क्रमेण जग्राह च पादयोर्दृढम् ॥ ३४ ॥

Meeting the prince, ranging through the heavens, frequented by Garuḍa, the king of birds, the wind-god and the Siddhas, Hanumān, who was endowed with the speed and prowess of the wind-god, caught him firmly by the legs one after the other. (34)

स तं समाविध्य सहस्रशः कपि- र्महोरगं गृह्य इवाण्डजेश्वरः ।
मुमोच वेगात् पितृतुल्यविक्रमो
महीतले संयति वानरोत्तमः ॥ ३५ ॥

Catching hold of him even as Garuḍa, the king of birds, would seize a huge serpent, and spinning him round thousands of times, Hanumān, a jewel among monkeys, whose prowess equalled that of his father, the wind-god, dashed him violently to the battle-ground. (35)

स भग्नबाहूरुक्कटीपयोधरः
क्षरन्नसृङ्निर्मथितास्थिलोचनः ।
सम्भिन्नसंधिः प्रविकीर्णबन्धनो
हतः क्षितौ वायुसुतेन राक्षसः ॥ ३६ ॥

Killed by Hanumān, son of the wind-god, that ogre fell to the ground, dripping with blood, his arms, thighs, waist and chest fractured, bones and eyes crushed, joints dislocated and sinews shattered. (36)

महाकपिभूमितले निपीड्य तं
चकार रक्षोऽधिपतेर्महद्भयम् ।
महर्षिभिश्चक्रचरैः समागतैः
समेत्य भूतैश्च सयक्षपन्नगैः ।
सुरैश्च सेन्द्रैर्भृशजातविस्मयै-
र्हते कुमारे स कपिर्निरीक्षितः ॥ ३७ ॥

Having dashed him to the earth's surface, the huge monkey, Hanumān, struck terror into Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres. Nay, on the prince having been killed, Hanumān was gazed upon by eminent Ṛṣis ranging the stellar sphere, who had gathered together in a body to witness the combat alongwith genii, accompanied by Yakṣas and Nāgas, as also by gods including Indra, their ruler, who were greatly astonished at the feat. (37)

निहत्य तं वज्रिसुतोपमं रणे
कुमारमक्षं क्षतजोपमेक्षणम् ।
तदेव वीरोऽभिजगाम तोरणं
कृतक्षणः काल इव प्रजाक्षये ॥ ३८ ॥

Having dispatched Prince Akṣa, who vied with Jayanta, Indra's son, and was distinguished by bloodshot eyes on the field of battle, the hero, Hanumān, sought the same archway, biding time for a further opportunity to destroy ogres even like the Time-Spirit bent on the destruction of created beings. (38)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे सप्तचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-seven of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLVIII

Dispatched by Rāvaṇa, Indrajit, Rāvaṇa's eldest son, marches against Hanumān. On his shafts being rendered ineffective by Hanumān through his extreme agility, Indrajit takes him captive by discharging the unfailing missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator). Even though capable of rendering it ineffective, Hanumān yields to its influence, eager as he was to meet Rāvaṇa, to whose presence he is led by his son

ततस्तु रक्षोऽधिपतिर्महात्मा
हनूमताक्षे निहते कुमारे ।
मनः समाधाय स देवकल्पं
समादिदेशेन्द्रजितं सरोषः ॥ १ ॥

Filled with rage on Prince Akṣa having been killed by Hanumān, yet controlling his mind, the high-minded Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part next commanded his eldest son Indrajit*, who vied with gods, as follows: (1)

त्वमस्त्रविच्छस्त्रभृतां वरिष्ठः
सुरासुराणामपि शोकदाता ।
सुरेषु सेन्द्रेषु च दृष्टकर्मा
पितामहाराधनसंचितास्त्रः ॥ २ ॥

"Proficient in the use of mystic missiles and the foremost of those wielding arms, you cause grief even to the gods and the demons. Your exploits have been witnessed even against the gods including Indra, their ruler, and you have acquired proficiency in the use of mystic missiles by propitiating Brahmā (the grandfather of the entire creation, being the progenitor of Marīci and others, the lords of creation). (2)

त्वदस्त्रबलमासाद्य ससुराः समरुद्गणाः ।
न शेकुः समरे स्थातुं सुरेश्वरसमाश्रिताः ॥ ३ ॥
"Coming in conflict with the might of your missiles, none, including gods and the company of the forty-nine wind-gods, dependent on Indra, the ruler of gods, could stand on the field of battle. (3)

न कश्चित् त्रिषु लोकेषु संयुगे न गतश्रमः ।
भुजवीर्याभिगुप्तश्च तपसा चाभिरक्षितः ।
देशकालप्रधानश्च त्वमेव मतिसत्तमः ॥ ४ ॥

"There is none in the three worlds except you who is free from fatigue even in combat. You are protected on all sides by the might of your arms and are further protected by virtue of askesis. Time and place are the main considerations with you, nay, you are the foremost of all in intelligence. (4)

न तेऽस्त्यशक्यं समरेषु कर्मणां
न तेऽस्त्यकार्यं मतिपूर्वमन्त्रणे ।
न सोऽस्ति कश्चित् त्रिषु संग्रहेषु
न वेद यस्तेऽस्त्रबलं बलं च ॥ ५ ॥

"Nothing is incapable of achievement by means of your exploits in contests nor is there anything which cannot be accomplished by you after deliberation through your judgment. Nor is there anyone in the three worlds, who does not know the force of your missiles or your own physical strength. (5)

ममानुरूपं तपसो बलं च ते
पराक्रमश्चास्त्रबलं च संयुगे ।
न त्वां समासाद्य रणावमर्दे मनः श्रमं गच्छति निश्चितार्थम् ॥ ६ ॥
"The power of your austerities, nay,

* So-called because he had conquered Indra, the Lord of Gods.

your prowess as well as the might of your missiles in combat is equal to mine. Finding you in the thick of fight, my mind does not give way to despair, being assured of victory. (6)

निहताः किंकराः सर्वे जम्बुमाली च राक्षसः ।
अमात्यपुत्रा वीराश्च पञ्च सेनाग्रगामिनः ॥ ७ ॥

“All the Kīṅkaras have been destroyed as also the ogre, Jambumālī. Even the seven heroic sons of my chief minister as well as the five generals have been killed. (7)

बलानि सुसमृद्धानि साश्वनागरथानि च ।
सहोदरस्ते दयितः कुमारोऽक्षश्च सूदितः ।
न तु तेष्वेव मे सारो यस्त्वय्यरिनिषूदन ॥ ८ ॥

“Nay, forces fully equipped with strength and arms and accompanied by horses, elephants and chariots, as well as your beloved uterine brother, Prince Akṣa, have been destroyed. The strength, however, which exists in me, O destroyer of foes, hinges on you alone, and did not hinge on them. (8)

इदं च दृष्ट्वा निहतं महद् बलं
कपेः प्रभावं च पराक्रमं च ।
त्वमात्मनश्चापि निरीक्ष्य सारं
कुरुष्व वेगं स्वबलानुरूपम् ॥ ९ ॥

“Seeing this large army destroyed by the monkey and considering the influence as well as the prowess of the monkey and weighing your own strength, exhibit your valour according to your might. (9)

बलावमर्दस्त्वयि संनिकृष्टे
यथा गते शाम्यति शान्तशत्रौ ।
तथा समीक्ष्यात्मबलं परं च
समारभस्वास्त्रभृतां वरिष्ठ ॥ १० ॥

“Fully weighing your own strength as well as of the enemy, exert yourself in such a way, O jewel among those employing missiles, that the further destruction of our army may stop the moment you, whose enemies have ceased, have arrived near Hanumān. (10)

न वीर सेना गणशो च्यवन्ति
न वज्रमादाय विशालसारम् ।
न मारुतस्यास्ति गतिप्रमाणं
न चाग्निकल्पः करणेन हन्तुम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Forces should not be led by you against the enemy; for they flee en masse before a powerful enemy or perish all together. Nor should you march against him taking a weapon exceedingly sharp-edged and hard like the thunderbolt; for there is no limit to the strength of Hanumān. Nay, resembling fire, as he does, he cannot be destroyed by means of any weapon. (11)

तमेवमर्थं प्रसमीक्ष्य सम्यक्
स्वकर्मसाम्याद्धि समाहितात्मा ।
स्मरंश्च दिव्यं धनुषोऽस्य वीर्यं
व्रजाक्षतं कर्म समारभस्व ॥ १२ ॥

“Concluding what has been stated by me to be precisely true, and with your mind composed by the thought that success can be achieved by your own effort, nay, bearing in mind the wonderful potency of this bow, sally forth and duly proceed with your work of subduing the enemy intact. (12)

न खल्वियं मतिश्रेष्ठ यत्त्वां सम्प्रेषयाम्यहम् ।
इयं च राजधर्माणां क्षत्रस्य च मतिर्मता ॥ १३ ॥

“Indeed, the thought is not well-advised that I should willingly send you to face this danger. O darling of excellent judgment ! But you know this decision is in accord with the duties of a king and is approved of by the warrior class. (13)

नानाशस्त्रेषु संग्रामे वैशारद्यमरिंदम ।
अवश्यमेव बोद्धव्यं काम्यश्च विजयो रणे ॥ १४ ॥

“Proficiency in the various branches of learning (such as ethics, economics and political science) as well as in military operations should be acquired by a king and triumph in war should also be sought, O tamer of enemies !” (14)

ततः पितुस्तद्वचनं निशम्य
प्रदक्षिणं दक्षसुतप्रभावः ।

चकार भर्तारमतित्वरेण
रणाय वीरः प्रतिपन्नबुद्धिः ॥ १५ ॥

Hearing that exhortation of his father, the hero Indrajit, who was powerful as a god (a son of Dakṣa*, a lord of created beings), and had made up his mind to seek the field of battle with all speed, then went round his lord, Rāvaṇa, clockwise. (15)

ततस्तैः स्वगणैरिष्टैरिन्द्रजित् प्रतिपूजितः ।
युद्धोद्धतकृतोत्साहः संग्रामं सम्प्रपद्यत ॥ १६ ॥

Honoured by some beloved people of his own class present in the royal assembly, Indrajit, who was terrific in combat and was full of martial ardour, proceeded towards the field of battle. (16)

श्रीमान् पद्मविशालाक्षो राक्षसाधिपतेः सुतः ।
निर्जगाम महातेजाः समुद्र इव पर्वणि ॥ १७ ॥

The glorious son of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, who had eyes big as a lotus, and was endowed with extraordinary energy, rushed forth like a sea on a full-moon day. (17)

स पक्षिराजोपमतुल्यवेगै- र्व्याघ्रैश्चतुर्भिः स तु तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रैः ।
रथं समायुक्तमसह्यवेगः
समारुरोहेन्द्रजिदिन्द्रकल्पः ॥ १८ ॥

The notorious Indrajit of irresistible vigour, for his part who compared with Indra, duly ascended his chariot, yoked to four sharp-toothed tigers, vying with Garuḍa in speed and well-matched in swiftness. (18)

स रथी धन्विनां श्रेष्ठः शस्त्रज्ञोऽस्त्रविदां वरः ।
रथेनाभिययौ क्षिप्रं हनूमान् यत्र सोऽभवत् ॥ १९ ॥

That chariot-warrior, the foremost of bowmen, skilled in the use of weapons and a jewel among those proficient in the use of missiles, drove rapidly in his chariot to where the celebrated Hanumān was. (19)

स तस्य रथनिर्घोषं ज्यास्वनं कार्मुकस्य च ।
निशम्य हरिवीरोऽसौ सम्प्रहृष्टतरोऽभवत् ॥ २० ॥

That famous hero among the monkeys felt extremely rejoiced to hear the rattling of Indrajit's chariot and the twang of his bowstring. (20)

इन्द्रजिच्चापमादाय शितशल्यांश्च सायकान् ।
हनूमन्तमभिप्रेत्य जगाम रणपण्डितः ॥ २१ ॥

Taking his bow and sharp-pointed arrows, Indrajit, skilled in the art of warfare, proceeded towards Hanumān. (21)

तस्मिंस्ततः संयति जातर्हो
रणाय निर्गच्छति बाणपाणौ ।

दिशश्च सर्वाः कलुषा बभूवु- र्मृगाश्च रौद्रा बहुधा विनेदुः ॥ २२ ॥

Nay, as Indrajit sallied forth from that place for a contest, arrow in hand and full of passion for war, all the four quarters became gloomy and hideous beasts such as jackals began to howl in various ways. (22)

समागतास्तत्र तु नागयक्षा
महर्षयश्चक्रचराश्च सिद्धाः ।

नभः समावृत्य च पक्षिसङ्घा
विनेदुरुच्चैः परमप्रहृष्टाः ॥ २३ ॥

Thickly covering the sky, Nāgas and Yakṣas, eminent Ṛṣis and Siddhas moving in multitudes, gathered there; and flocks of birds began to emit shrill cries, supremely rejoiced as they were. (23)

आयान्तं स रथं दृष्ट्वा तूर्णमिन्द्रध्वजं कपिः ।
ननाद च महानादं व्यवर्धत च वेगवान् ॥ २४ ॥

Perceiving the chariot bearing the standard of Indra (seized by him as a token of his having conquered Indra) coming rapidly

* We read in the Viṣṇu-Purāṇa—

मनसा त्वेव भूतानि पूर्वं दक्षोसृजत्तथा । देवानृषीन् सगन्धर्वानुरागान् पक्षिणस्तथा ॥

“Of yore Dakṣa evolved with his mind alone created beings, viz., gods, and Ṛṣis alongwith Gandharvas, serpents and birds.”

towards him, Hanumān, who was full of ardour, raised a great shout and grew to immense proportions. (24)

इन्द्रजित् स रथं दिव्यमाश्रितश्चित्रकार्मुकः ।

धनुर्विस्फारयामास तडिदूर्जितनिःस्वनम् ॥ २५ ॥

Seated in a celestial chariot, that conqueror of Indra, who was armed with a marvellous bow, pulled his bow string, which emitted a harsh sound like that accompanying a stroke of lightning. (25)

ततः समेतावतितीक्ष्णवेगौ

महाबलौ तौ रणनिर्विशङ्कौ ।

कपिश्च रक्षोऽधिपतेस्तनूजः

सुरासुरेन्द्राविव बद्धवैरौ ॥ २६ ॥

Thereupon the two warriors, viz., Hanumān and Indrajit, who were endowed with a fiery spirit and extraordinary might, were intrepid in war and had conceived confirmed hostility towards each other like Indra (the ruler of gods) and Bali (the ruler of demons), closed with each other. (26)

स तस्य वीरस्य महारथस्य

धनुष्मतः संयति सम्मतस्य ।

शरप्रवेगं व्यहनत् प्रवृद्ध-

श्चचार मार्गे पितुरग्रमेयः ॥ २७ ॥

Hanumān, who had grown to huge proportions and was immeasurable in strength, wheeled about in the path of his father, the wind-god, and evaded the extraordinary vehemence of the shafts of that valiant Bowman, Indrajit, a great chariot-warrior, highly esteemed on the field of battle. (27)

ततः शरानायततीक्ष्णशल्यान्

सुपत्रिणः काञ्चनचित्रपुङ्खान् ।

मुमोच वीरः परवीरहन्ता

सुसंततान् वज्रसमानवेगान् ॥ २८ ॥

Thereupon the hero, Indrajit, the slayer of hostile warriors, began to discharge long and sharp-pointed beautifully-feathered arrows, provided with picturesque golden shafts, swift as lightning and discharged continuously, one after the other. (28)

ततः स तत्स्यन्दननिःस्वनं च

मृदङ्गभेरीपटहस्वनं च ।

विकृष्यमाणस्य च कार्मुकस्य

निशम्य घोषं पुनरुत्पपात ॥ २९ ॥

Hearing the rumbling of his chariot as well as the crash of wooden tomtoms, kettle drums and war-drums accompanying him as also the sound of his bowstring being pulled, Hanumān forthwith sprang up once more. (29)

शराणामन्तरेष्वाशु व्यावर्तत महाकपिः ।

हरिस्तस्याभिलक्ष्यस्य मोक्षयँल्लक्ष्यसंग्रहम् ॥ ३० ॥

Baffling the marksmanship of Indrajit, who was well-known for his hitting the target, Hanumān, the great monkey, swiftly wheeled about between the arrows. (30)

शराणामग्रतस्तस्य पुनः समभिवर्तत ।

प्रसार्य हस्तौ हनुमानुत्पपातानिलात्मजः ॥ ३१ ॥

Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, stood once more facing his arrows and forthwith leapt up stretching his arms to escape his arrows. (31)

तावुभौ वेगसम्पन्नौ रणकर्मविशारदौ ।

सर्वभूतमनोग्राहि चक्रतुर्युद्धमुत्तमम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Both the aforesaid warriors, who were richly endowed with swiftness and skilled in warfare, carried on an excellent fight, which captivated the mind of all created beings. (32)

हनूमतो वेद न राक्षसोऽन्तरं

न मारुतिस्तस्य महात्मनोऽन्तरम् ।

परस्परं निर्विषहौ बभूवतुः

समेत्य तौ देवसमानविक्रमौ ॥ ३३ ॥

The ogre found no opportunity to hit Hanumān nor did the son of the wind-god find any opportunity to catch hold of and overpower that high-minded ogre. Closing with one another, the two warriors, who were equal in prowess to gods, grew unbearable to each other. (33)

ततस्तु लक्ष्ये स विहन्यमाने
 शरेष्वमोघेषु च सम्पतत्सु ।
 जगाम चिन्तां महतीं महात्मा
 समाधिसंयोगसमाहितात्मा ॥ ३४ ॥

Hanumān (who was the target of Indrajit's arrows) remaining unscathed, even though Indrajit's infallible shafts were raining on him, the high-minded ogre, whose mind was focussed on directing his arrows against his target, gave way to great anxiety. (34)

ततो मतिं राक्षसराजसूनु-
 श्रकार तस्मिन् हरिवीरमुख्ये ।
 अवध्यतां तस्य कपेः समीक्ष्य
 कथं निगच्छेदिति निग्रहार्थम् ॥ ३५ ॥

Realizing the fact of the monkey in question incapable of being slain, Indrajit (son of the ruler of ogres) began to consider the question of capturing that leader of monkey heroes and thought how he could fall into bondage. (35)

ततः पैतामहं वीरः सोऽस्त्रमस्त्रविदां वरः ।
 संदधे सुमहातेजास्तं हरिप्रवरं प्रति ॥ ३६ ॥

Thereupon that hero, the foremost of those well-versed in the use of missiles, and endowed with exceptional energy, put to his bow the missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator), aiming it at that jewel among monkeys. (36)

अवध्योऽयमिति ज्ञात्वा तमस्त्रेणास्त्रतत्त्ववित् ।
 निजग्राह महाबाहुं मारुतात्मजमिन्द्रजित् ॥ ३७ ॥

Concluding that he was incapable of being killed even with that missile, Indrajit, who knew how to use a missile correctly, bound that mighty-armed offspring of the wind-god by means of the missile. (37)

तेन बद्धस्ततोऽस्त्रेण राक्षसेन स वानरः ।
 अभवन्निर्विचेष्टश्च पपात च महीतले ॥ ३८ ॥

Bound by that ogre with the help of that missile, the aforesaid monkey became unconscious and fell on the ground. (38)

ततोऽथ बुद्ध्वा स तदस्त्रबन्धं
 प्रभोः प्रभावाद् विगताल्पवेगः ।
 पितामहानुग्रहमात्मनश्च
 विचिन्तयामास हरिप्रवीरः ॥ ३९ ॥

Realizing at once that he had been bound with the help of a missile presided over by Brahmā, and yet free from the least pain due to a boon granted by the latter, that pre-eminent hero among the monkeys considered it to be a favour done to him by Brahmā. (39)

ततः स्वायम्भुवैर्मन्त्रैर्ब्रह्मास्त्रं चाभिमन्त्रितम् ।
 हनूमांश्चिन्तयामास वरदानं पितामहात् ॥ ४० ॥

Recognizing it to be a missile presided over by Brahmā and consecrated by means of spells sacred to Brahmā (the self-born creator), Hanumān recalled a boon received by him from the grandfather of the entire creation to the effect that he would be freed from its effect after an hour or so. (40)

न मेऽस्य बन्धस्य च शक्तिरस्ति
 विमोक्षणे लोकगुरोः प्रभावात् ।
 इत्येवमेवं विहितोऽस्त्रबन्धो
 मयाऽऽत्मयोनेरनुवर्तितव्यः ॥ ४१ ॥

He said to himself: 'Due to the power of Brahmā (operating through the missile) the capacity to loosen this bondage does not lie in me. Therefore, the bondage through the missile presided over by Brahmā (the self born creator), imposed on me by Indrajit as above must be borne by me.' (41)

स वीर्यमस्त्रस्य कपिर्विचार्य
 पितामहानुग्रहमात्मनश्च ।
 विमोक्षशक्तिं परिचिन्तयित्वा
 पितामहाज्ञामनुवर्तते स्म ॥ ४२ ॥

Reflecting on the potency of the missile, the grace of Brahmā enjoyed by him and pondering his capacity to undo it (which was going to descend on him after a while),
 Hanumān submitted to the ordinance of Brahmā (the grandfather of the entire creation). (42)

अस्त्रेणापि हि बद्धस्य भयं मम न जायते।

पितामहमहेन्द्राभ्यां रक्षितस्यानिलेन च ॥ ४३ ॥

He said to himself: 'No fear is experienced by me even though I stand bound by means of a missile, protected as I am by Brahmā and Indra, the ruler of gods, as well as by the wind-god, my own procreator. (43)

ग्रहणे चापि रक्षोभिर्महन्मे गुणदर्शनम्।

राक्षसेन्द्रेण संवादस्तस्माद् गृह्णन्तु मां परे ॥ ४४ ॥

'I discern a great advantage, viz., the opportunity of a talk with Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, following from my capture at the hands of the ogres. Therefore, let my enemies seize me.' (44)

स निश्चितार्थः परवीरहन्ता

समीक्ष्यकारी विनिवृत्तचेष्टः।

परैः प्रसह्याभिगतैर्निगृह्य

ननाद तैस्तैः परिभर्त्स्यमानः ॥ ४५ ॥

Being chided by different ogres, who had arrived near and forcibly caught hold of him, Hanumān, the slayer of hostile heroes, who acted after fully considering the pros and cons, had decided upon his course of action as above and had fully ceased all movement of body, and groaned as though in pain. (45)

ततस्ते राक्षसा दृष्ट्वा विनिश्चेष्टमरिंदमम्।

बबन्धुः शणवल्कैश्च द्रुमचीरैश्च संहतैः ॥ ४६ ॥

Seeing Hanumān bereft of all movement, the said ogres forthwith bound him with plaited cords of hemp and bark. (46)

स रोचयामास परैश्च बन्धं

प्रसह्य वीरैरभिगर्हणं च।

कौतूहलान्मां यदि राक्षसेन्द्रो

द्रष्टुं व्यवस्येदिति निश्चितार्थः ॥ ४७ ॥

He approved of his having been forcibly bound and reviled by the hostile warriors since, having decided to seek the presence of Rāvaṇa, he felt sure that Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, might make an effort to see him out of curiosity. (47)

स बद्धस्तेन वल्केन विमुक्तोऽस्त्रेण वीर्यवान्।

अस्त्रबन्धः स चान्यं हि न बन्धमनुवर्तते ॥ ४८ ॥

Bound with that rope, the powerful Hanumān was set free by the missile; for the bondage of that missile does not at all co-exist with another bondage and leaves its victim. (48)

अथेन्द्रजित् तं द्रुमचीरबद्धं

विचार्य वीरः कपिसत्तमं तम्।

विमुक्तमस्त्रेण जगाम चिन्ता-

मन्येन बद्धोऽप्यनुवर्ततेऽस्त्रम् ॥ ४९ ॥

अहो महत् कर्म कृतं निरर्थं

न राक्षसैर्मन्त्रगतिर्विमृष्टा।

पुनश्च नास्त्रे विहतेऽस्त्रमन्यत्

प्रवर्तते संशयिताः स्म सर्वे ॥ ५० ॥

Recognizing that jewel among the monkeys, who had now been bound with a rope made of the bark of trees, as having been set free by the missile, Indrajit now became thoughtful when he saw that, even though bound with other means, the monkey was behaving as if he was still bound with the missile. He said to himself, 'Oh, my great exploit in the form of taking this monkey captive has been rendered futile by the ogres, by whom the mode of operation of the mystic formula (by which this missile is controlled) was surely not taken into consideration. Once the missile has been rendered ineffective, another round of the missile cannot be operative again; and thus we have all been placed in a predicament.' (49-50)

अस्त्रेण हनुमान् मुक्तो नात्मानमवबुध्यते।

कृष्यमाणस्तु रक्षोभिस्तैश्च बन्धैर्निपीडितः ॥ ५१ ॥

Even though set free by the missile, Hanumān did not reveal himself as aware of this fact, while being dragged by the ogres and held fast with earthly cords. (51)

हन्यमानस्ततः क्रूरै राक्षसैः कालमुष्टिभिः।

समीपं राक्षसेन्द्रस्य प्राकृष्यत स वानरः ॥ ५२ ॥

Being struck by cruel ogres with their severe fists, the aforesaid monkey was dragged violently to the presence of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres. (52)

अथेन्द्रजित् तं प्रसमीक्ष्य मुक्त-

मस्त्रेण बद्धं द्रुमचीरसूत्रैः ।

व्यदर्शयत् तत्र महाबलं तं

हरिप्रवीरं सगणाय राज्ञे ॥ ५३ ॥

Vividly perceiving that eminent hero among the monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary might, set free by the missile and bound with cords of bark alone, Indrajit now presented him in the court before the king, Rāvaṇa, surrounded by his courtiers. (53)

तं मत्तमिव मातङ्गं बद्धं कपिवरोत्तमम् ।

राक्षसा राक्षसेन्द्राय रावणाय न्यवेदयन् ॥ ५४ ॥

The ogres announced to Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, the presence of that jewel among the foremost of monkeys, who stood bound like an elephant in rut. (54)

कोऽयं कस्य कुतो वापि किं कार्यं कोऽभ्युपाश्रयः ।

इति राक्षसवीराणां दृष्ट्वा संजज्ञिरे कथाः ॥ ५५ ॥

“Who is this being? Whose son or servant is he? Where has he come from? What is his mission and who is his supporter?” So went round the inquiries of the ogre heroes on seeing Hanumān. (55)

हन्यतां दह्यतां वापि भक्ष्यतामिति चापरे ।

राक्षसास्तत्र संक्रुद्धाः परस्परमथाबुवन् ॥ ५६ ॥

Nay, highly enraged, other ogres on the spot forthwith said to one another, “Let the monkey be killed, roasted alive or even devoured.” (56)

अतीत्य मार्गं सहसा महात्मा

स तत्र रक्षोऽधिपपादमूले ।

ददर्श राज्ञः परिचारवृद्धान्

गृहं महारत्नविभूषितं च ॥ ५७ ॥

Having covered the way, that exalted soul, Hanumān, beheld all of a sudden on that spot—elderly attendants of the king seated at the feet of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, as well as his assembly hall richly decorated with precious jewels. (57)

स ददर्श महातेजा रावणः कपिसत्तमम् ।

रक्षोभिर्विकृताकारैः कृष्यमाणमितस्ततः ॥ ५८ ॥

The splendid Rāvaṇa too, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, saw Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys being dragged hither and thither by ogres of ugly bearing. (58)

राक्षसाधिपतिं चापि ददर्श कपिसत्तमः ।

तेजोबलसमायुक्तं तपन्तमिव भास्करम् ॥ ५९ ॥

Hanumān, too beheld Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, richly endowed with energy and strength and resembling the blazing sun. (59)

स रोषसंवर्तितताम्रदृष्टि-

दर्शाननस्तं कपिमन्ववेक्ष्य ।

अथोपविष्टान् कुलशीलवृद्धान्

समादिशत् तं प्रति मुख्यमन्त्रीन् ॥ ६० ॥

Looking unwinkingly and intently on the aforesaid monkey, his coppery eyes rolling rapidly through rage, that ten-headed monster forthwith commanded his chief counsellors seated in their due places there, who were distinguished for their lineage and character, to interrogate him. (60)

यथाक्रमं तैः स कपिश्च पृष्ठः

कार्यार्थमर्थस्य च मूलमादौ ।

निवेदयामास

हरीश्वरस्य

दूतः सकाशादहमागतोऽस्मि ॥ ६१ ॥

Questioned by them in succession as to the work he had taken upon himself, the motive by which he was actuated and the ultimate aim with which he had come, that monkey said at the outset: “I am a messenger arrived from the presence of Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys.” (61)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डेऽष्टचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-eight of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto XLIX

Wonderstruck to behold the splendour and glory of Rāvaṇa, Hanumān believes that he could even rule over heaven but for his gross unrighteousness, which dragged him down

ततः स कर्मणा तस्य विस्मितो भीमविक्रमः ।
 हनूमान् क्रोधताम्राक्षो रक्षोऽधिपमवैक्षत ॥ १ ॥
 भ्राजमानं महार्हेण काञ्चनेन विराजता ।
 मुक्ताजालवृतेनाथ मुकुटेन महाद्युतिम् ॥ २ ॥
 वज्रसंयोगसंयुक्तैर्महार्हमणिविग्रहैः ।
 हैमैराभरणैश्चित्रैर्मनसेव प्रकल्पितैः ॥ ३ ॥
 महार्हक्षौमसंवीतं रक्तचन्दनरूषितम् ।
 स्वनुलिप्तं विचित्राभिर्विविधाभिश्च भक्तिभिः ॥ ४ ॥
 विचित्रं दर्शनीयैश्च रक्ताक्षैर्भीमदर्शनैः ।
 दीप्ततीक्ष्णमहादंष्ट्रं प्रलम्बं दशनच्छदैः ॥ ५ ॥
 शिरोभिर्दशभिर्वीरो भ्राजमानं महौजसम् ।
 नानाव्यालसमाकीर्णैः शिखरैरिव मन्दरम् ॥ ६ ॥
 नीलाञ्जनचयप्रख्यं हारेणोरसि राजता ।
 पूर्णचन्द्राभवक्त्रेण सबालार्कमिवाम्बुदम् ॥ ७ ॥
 बाहुभिर्बद्धकेयूरैश्चन्दनोत्तमरूषितैः ।
 भ्राजमानाङ्गदैर्भीमैः पञ्चशीर्षैरिवोरगैः ॥ ८ ॥
 महति स्फाटिके चित्रे रत्नसंयोगचित्रिते ।
 उत्तमास्तरणास्तीर्णे सूपविष्टं वरासने ॥ ९ ॥
 अलंकृताभिरत्यर्थं प्रमदाभिः समन्ततः ।
 बालव्यजनहस्ताभिरारात्समुपसेवितम् ॥ १० ॥
 दुर्धरेण प्रहस्तेन महापाश्वेन रक्षसा ।
 मन्त्रिभिर्मन्त्रतत्त्वज्ञैर्निकुम्भेन च मन्त्रिणा ॥ ११ ॥
 उपोपविष्टं रक्षोभिश्चतुर्भिर्बलदर्पितम् ।
 कृत्स्नं परिवृतं लोकं चतुर्भिरिव सागरैः ॥ १२ ॥
 मन्त्रिभिर्मन्त्रतत्त्वज्ञैरन्यैश्च शुभदर्शिभिः । आश्वसास्यमानं सचिवैः सुरैरिव सुरेश्वरम् ॥ १३ ॥

suzerain lord of ogres, who, though endowed with extraordinary splendour, shone further with a glittering and precious diadem of gold encircled with strings of pearls, as well as with lovely gold ornaments inlaid with diamonds and studded with costly gems, which appeared as though evolved with the mind; who was attired in valuable silk and daubed with red sandal-paste and painted with various peculiar designs; who looked wonderful with his twenty terrible-looking, yet shapely ruddy eyes, had brilliant, sharp, enormous teeth and protruding lips; who was endowed with extraordinary strength and shone brightly with his ten heads as Mount Mandāra with its peaks infested with snakes of every variety; who was graced with a pearl necklace casting its splendour on his bosom and who not only looked like a mass of blue antimony but with his countenance shining like the full moon also presented the appearance of a cloud illumined by the rising sun; who was distinguished by twenty terrible arms adorned with Keuras (a kind of jewel), smeared with excellent sandal-paste and decked with shining Aṅgadas (another ornament) and looking like as many five-hooded serpents with their fingers appearing like hoods; who was comfortably seated on a big, wonderful and excellent throne of crystal, rendered picturesque by being inlaid with jewels and overspread with an exquisite covering; who was duly waited upon at close quarters on all sides by young women sumptuously adorned, whisk in hand; who was proud of his might and had four counselors, belonging to the ogre race, who knew the secret of good counsel, viz.,

Astonished at the feat of Indrajit (resulting in his own capture and his being dragged to the presence of Rāvaṇa) and his eyes turned coppery through rage at the thought of his atrocious deed in the form of Sītā's abduction, that heroic Hanumān of redoubtable prowess looked at Rāvaṇa, the

Dūrdhara, Prahasta, the ogre Mahāpārśva and the counsellor Nikumbha, seated by his side, and looked like the entire terrestrial globe in miniature enclosed by the four oceans in the quarters; and who was being reassured by counsellors knowing the secret of good counsel and other ministers wishing well of him even as Indra, the ruler of gods, is reassured by gods. (1—13)

अपश्यद् राक्षसपतिं हनूमानतितेजसम् ।
वेष्टितं मेरुशिखरे सतोयमिव तोयदम् ॥ १४ ॥

Hanumān thus saw Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, who was endowed with surpassing energy, resembling a cloud laden with moisture and perched on a peak of Mount Meru. (14)

स तैः सम्पीड्यमानोऽपि रक्षोभिर्भीमविक्रमैः ।
विस्मयं परमं गत्वा रक्षोऽधिपमवैक्षत ॥ १५ ॥

Experiencing supreme wonder, even though greatly oppressed by those ogres of terrible prowess, Hanumān looked intently on Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres. (15)

भ्राजमानं ततो दृष्ट्वा हनुमान् राक्षसेश्वरम् ।
मनसा चिन्तयामास तेजसा तस्य मोहितः ॥ १६ ॥

Dazzled by his magnificence on seeing Rāvaṇa shining brightly, Hanumān thought in his mind as follows: (16)

अहो रूपमहो धैर्यमहो सत्त्वमहो द्युतिः ।
अहो राक्षसराजस्य सर्वलक्षणयुक्तता ॥ १७ ॥

‘What charm, what presence of mind, what courage, what splendour and what combination of all auspicious bodily marks are present in the king of ogres ! (17)

यद्यधर्मो न बलवान् स्यादयं राक्षसेश्वरः ।
स्यादयं सुरलोकस्य सशक्रस्यापि रक्षिता ॥ १८ ॥

‘Had this mighty lord of ogres not been antagonistic to virtue, he would have proved to be a protector of the realm of gods including Indra, the ruler of gods. (18)

अस्य क्रूरैर्नृशंसैश्च कर्मभिलोककुत्सितैः ।
सर्वे बिभ्यति खल्वस्माल्लोकाः सामरदानवाः ॥ १९ ॥

‘Due to his cruel and ruthless deeds, condemned by the world, all people including gods and demons remain actually afraid of him. (19)

अयं ह्युत्सहते क्रुद्धः कर्तुमेकार्णावं जगत् ।
इति चिन्तां बहुविधामकरोन्मतिमान् कपिः ।
दृष्ट्वा राक्षसराजस्य प्रभावममितौजसः ॥ २० ॥

‘If enraged, he can really turn the world into one ocean.’ Perceiving the glory of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres), who was endowed with extraordinary might, the sagacious Hanumān brooded on such diverse thoughts. (20)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे

एकोनपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ४९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-nine of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto L

Commanded by Rāvaṇa, Prahasta inquires of Hanumān as to who he was as also his motive in devastating the royal pleasance and killing the ogres.

In reply Hanumān says that he destroyed the grove in order that he might be taken captive and dragged to the presence of Rāvaṇa, whom he was eager to see, and was compelled in self-defence to kill those who stood in his way. In the end he declares himself to be a messenger of Śrī Rāma and adds that, though protected against the missile presided over by Brahmā, he submitted to its influence only in order to be able to see Rāvaṇa

तमुद्दीक्ष्य महाबाहुः पिङ्गाक्षं पुरतः स्थितम् ।
रोषेण महताऽऽविष्टो रावणो लोकरावणः ॥ १ ॥

The mighty-armed Rāvaṇa, who made people cry in distress wherever he went, was seized with violent rage to behold that monkey (lit., a tawny-eyed one) before him.

(1)

शङ्काहतात्मा दध्यौ स कपीन्द्रं तेजसा वृतम् ।
किमेष भगवान् नन्दी भवेत् साक्षादिहागतः ॥ २ ॥
येन शतोऽस्मि कैलासे मया प्रहसिते पुरा ।
सोऽयं वानरमूर्तिः स्यात्किंस्विद् बाणोऽपि वासुरः ॥ ३ ॥

His mind overcome with apprehension, he speculated as follows with regard to Hanumān (a leader of monkeys), who was invested with glory: "Is it the glorious Nandī, a leader of the attendants of Lord Śiva, who has come here in person, by whom I was formerly cursed on Mount Kailāśa, the abode of Lord Śiva, when he was mocked by me? Or, perhaps he may even be the celebrated demon Baṇa, son of Bali, in the guise of a monkey."

(2-3)

स राजा रोषताम्राक्षः प्रहस्तं मन्त्रिसत्तमम् ।
कालयुक्तमुवाचेदं वचो विपुलमर्थवत् ॥ ४ ॥

His eyes bloodshot through anger, the aforesaid king Rāvaṇa spoke to Prahasta, the foremost of his ministers, the following opportune, solemn and significant words :

(4)

दुरात्मा पृच्छ्यतामेष कुतः किं वास्य कारणम् ।
वनभङ्गे च कोऽस्यार्थो राक्षसानां च तर्जने ॥ ५ ॥

"Let this evil-minded fellow be asked where he has come from, what is his motive in coming here, nay, what was his object in destroying the grove as well as in threatening the ogres.

(5)

मत्पुरीमप्रधृष्ट्यां वै गमने किं प्रयोजनम् ।
आयोधने वा किं कार्यं पृच्छ्यतामेष दुर्मतिः ॥ ६ ॥

"Let this perverse fellow be asked what really is his purpose in actually coming over to my city, which cannot be taken by storm or what is his object in seeking an encounter with our people."

(6)

रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा प्रहस्तो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
समाश्वसिहि भद्रं ते न भीः कार्या त्वया कपे ॥ ७ ॥

Hearing the command of Rāvaṇa, Prahasta spoke to Hanumān as follows: "Take heart, O monkey ! May good betide you. No fear need be entertained by you. (7)

यदि तावत् त्वमिन्द्रेण प्रेषितो रावणालयम् ।
तत्त्वमाख्याहि मा ते भूद् भयं वानर मोक्ष्यसे ॥ ८ ॥

"If for that matter you have been sent to the abode of Rāvaṇa by Indra, pray, speak the truth, O monkey ! Let no fear haunt you. You shall be liberated. (8)

यदि वैश्रवणस्य त्वं यमस्य वरुणस्य च ।
चारुरूपमिदं कृत्वा प्रविष्टो नः पुरीमिमाम् ॥ ९ ॥

“Tell us if you are a messenger of the god of riches, Kubera, (a son of Sage Viśravā), Yama (the god of retribution) or Varuṇa (the god of water) and have deeply penetrated into this city of ours, having assumed the disguise of a spy. (9)

विष्णुना प्रेषितो वापि दूतो विजयकाङ्क्षिणा ।
नहि ते वानरं तेजो रूपमात्रं तु वानरम् ॥ १० ॥

“Or, tell me if you are an envoy dispatched by Viṣṇu, who is longing for conquest. Surely your prowess is not like that of a monkey; your form alone, for that matter, is that of a monkey. (10)

तत्त्वतः कथयस्वाद्य ततो वानर मोक्ष्यसे ।
अनृतं वदतश्चापि दुर्लभं तव जीवितम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Correctly communicate this today. Then you shall be set free, O monkey ! On the other hand, it will be difficult for you to survive if you tell a lie. (11)

अथवा यन्निमित्तस्ते प्रवेशो रावणालये ।
एवमुक्तो हरिवरस्तदा रक्षोगणेश्वरम् ॥ १२ ॥
अब्रवीन्नास्मि शक्रस्य यमस्य वरुणस्य च ।
धनदेन न मे सख्यं विष्णुना नास्मि चोदितः ॥ १३ ॥

“Or, simply let us know the motive of your penetrating deep into the abode of Rāvaṇa.” Interrogated in the foregoing words on that occasion, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, submitted as follows to Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogre hordes: “I am neither a messenger of Indra (the ruler of gods) nor of Yama, nor of Varuṇa, nor does my friendship exist with Kubera (the bestower of riches) nor have I been dispatched by Viṣṇu. (12-13)

जातिरेव मम त्वेषा वानरोऽहमिहागतः ।
दर्शने राक्षसेन्द्रस्य तदिदं दुर्लभं मया ॥ १४ ॥

वनं राक्षसराजस्य दर्शनार्थं विनाशितम् ।
ततस्ते राक्षसाः प्राप्ता बलिनो युद्धकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ १५ ॥
रक्षणार्थं च देहस्य प्रतियुद्धा मया रणे ।
अस्त्रपाशैर्न शक्योऽहं बद्धं देवासुरैरपि ॥ १६ ॥

“I am a monkey by my very birth and as a monkey alone have I come here for a sight of the king of ogres. Nay, this well-known and rare grove of the king of ogres has been laid waste by me merely for the sake of obtaining a sight of Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres. Thereupon came those mighty ogres longing for an encounter, and in self-defence they were met by me on the field of battle. I am incapable of being bound with missiles and nooses by gods and demons. (14—16)

पितामहादेष वरो ममापि हि समागतः ।
राजानं द्रष्टुकामेन मयास्त्रमनुवर्तितम् ॥ १७ ॥

“A boon to this effect has actually been won even by me from Brahmā (the progenitor even of the lords of creation). The missile was respected by me only because I longed to see the king. (17)

विमुक्तोऽप्यहमस्त्रेण राक्षसैस्त्वभिवेदितः ।
केनचिद् रामकार्येण आगतोऽस्मि तवान्तिकम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Though completely set free by the missile, I have been brought and announced to you as if I were still bound with the missile. Spurred on by some mission of Śrī Rāma, have I sought your presence. (18)

दूतोऽहमिति विज्ञाय राघवस्यामितौजसः ।
श्रूयतामेव वचनं मम पथ्यमिदं प्रभो ॥ १९ ॥

“Recognizing the fact that I am an envoy of Śrī Rāma, who is endowed with limitless energy, let this salutary advice of mine be definitely listened to, O lord ! (19)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे पञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५० ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LI

Narrating the story of Śrī Rāma from the latter's entry into the forest, to his own sight of Sītā being borne away by Rāvaṇa through the air over the R̥ṣyamūka mountain, and celebrating the glory of Śrī Rāma, Hanumān points out to Rāvaṇa that if he longed to survive he should restore Sītā to Śrī Rāma and that he should be prepared for the worst if, on the other hand, he chooses not to part with her

तं समीक्ष्य महासत्त्वं सत्त्ववान् हरिसत्तमः ।
वाक्यमर्थवदव्यग्रस्तमुवाच दशाननम् ॥ १ ॥

Looking intently on Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, who was endowed with extraordinary might, the mighty Hanumān coolly made to him the following submission, pregnant with meaning: (1)

अहं सुग्रीवसंदेशादिह प्राप्तस्तवान्तिके ।
राक्षसेश हरीशस्त्वां भ्राता कुशलमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

"Carrying a message from Sugrīva, I have sought your presence here. Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, who is like a brother to you (being your well-wisher) has enquired after your welfare, O lord of ogres ! (2)

भ्रातुः शृणु समादेशं सुग्रीवस्य महात्मनः ।
धर्मार्थसहितं वाक्यमिह चामुत्र च क्षमम् ॥ ३ ॥

"Now hear the message of your brother, the high-souled Sugrīva, consisting of the following advice, conformable to piety and earthly gain, and conducive to your good in this as well as in the other world. (3)

राजा दशरथो नाम रथकुञ्जरवाजिमान् ।
पितेव बन्धुर्लोकस्य सुरेश्वरसमद्युतिः ॥ ४ ॥

"There was a king, Daśaratha by name, who owned chariots, elephants and horses, nay, who was a befriender of the people like a father and equalled Indra in splendour. (4)

ज्येष्ठस्तस्य महाबाहुः पुत्रः प्रियतरः प्रभुः ।
पितुर्निदेशान्निष्क्रान्तः प्रविष्टो दण्डकावनम् ॥ ५ ॥
लक्ष्मणेन सह भ्राता सीतया सह भार्यया ।
रामो नाम महातेजा धर्म्यं पन्थानमाश्रितः ॥ ६ ॥

"His mighty-armed, powerful and exceedingly beloved eldest son, Śrī Rāma by name, who is endowed with extraordinary energy and abides in the path of virtue, went out on exile in obedience to the command of his father, and penetrated deep into the Daṇḍaka forest alongwith his wife, Sītā, and brother, Lakṣmaṇa. (5-6)

तस्य भार्या जनस्थाने भ्रष्टा सीतेति विश्रुता ।
वैदेहस्य सुता राज्ञो जनकस्य महात्मनः ॥ ७ ॥

"His consort, well-known by the name of Sītā, daughter of the high-souled Janaka, king of Videha territory, got lost in Janasthāna. (7)

मार्गमाणस्तु तां देवीं राजपुत्रः सहानुजः ।
ऋष्यमूकमनुप्राप्तः सुग्रीवेण च संगतः ॥ ८ ॥

"Seeking for the said godlike lady, the prince, accompanied by his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, reached Mount R̥ṣyamūka and came in contact with Sugrīva. (8)

तस्य तेन प्रतिज्ञातं सीतायाः परिमार्गणम् ।
सुग्रीवस्यापि रामेण हरिराज्यं निवेदितुम् ॥ ९ ॥

"By Sugrīva was promised him a search for Sītā, while a promise was made by Śrī Rāma too to procure and make over to Sugrīva his lost kingship of monkeys. (9)

ततस्तेन मृधे हत्वा राजपुत्रेण वालिनम् ।
सुग्रीवः स्थापितो राज्ये हर्यृक्षाणां गणेश्वरः ॥ १० ॥

"After killing Vāli on the field of battle, Sugrīva was re-installed by that prince, Śrī Rāma, on the throne as the lord of hordes of monkeys and bears. (10)

त्वया विज्ञातपूर्वश्च वाली वानरपुङ्गवः ।
स तेन निहतः संख्ये शरेणैकेन वानरः ॥ ११ ॥

“Nay, Vāli, the foremost of monkeys, was already known to you. That monkey was killed on the battle-field by Śrī Rāma with a single arrow. (11)

स सीतामार्गणे व्यग्रः सुग्रीवः सत्यसंगरः ।
हरीन् सम्प्रेषयामास दिशः सर्वा हरीश्वरः ॥ १२ ॥

“Impatient to find out Sītā and true to his promise, the celebrated Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, duly dispatched monkeys in all directions. (12)

तां हरीणां सहस्राणि शतानि नियुतानि च ।
दिक्षु सर्वासु मार्गन्ते ह्यधश्चोपरि चाम्बरे ॥ १३ ॥

“Hundreds and thousands, nay, lakhs of monkeys are searching for her in all the four quarters as also below in the subterranean regions and above in the heavens. (13)

वैनतेयसमाः केचित् केचित् तत्रानिलोपमाः ।
असङ्गतयः शीघ्रा हरिवीरा महाबलाः ॥ १४ ॥

“The monkey heroes are swift and endowed with extraordinary might, and can move without any footing. Some of them are equal in speed to Garuḍa (the son of Vinatā), while others vie with the wind in swiftness of motion. (14)

अहं तु हनुमान्नाम मारुतस्यौरसः सुतः ।
सीतायास्तु कृते तूर्णं शतयोजनमायतम् ॥ १५ ॥
समुद्रं लङ्घयित्वैव त्वां दिदृक्षुरिहागतः ।
भ्रमता च मया दृष्टा गृहे ते जनकात्मजा ॥ १६ ॥

“I, for my part, am Hanumān by name, son of the wind-god, sprung from his loins. Having quickly leapt across the sea itself (dividing the main land from Laṅkā), which is really a hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles) wide, for the sake of Sītā, I have come here, longing as I did to see you. While I was roaming in search of her, Janaka’s daughter was discovered by me in your pleasance. (15-16)

तद् भवान् दृष्टधर्मार्थस्तपःकृतपरिग्रहः ।
परदारान् महाप्राज्ञ नोपरोद्धुं त्वमर्हसि ॥ १७ ॥

“Therefore, having known the truth about righteousness and earthly gain, and having amassed riches by dint of askesis, O most wise king, you ought not to detain another’s wife. (17)

नहि धर्मविरुद्धेषु बह्वपायेषु कर्मसु ।
मूलघातिषु सज्जन्ते बुद्धिमन्तो भवद्विधाः ॥ १८ ॥

“Wise people like you do not engage in actions which are antagonistic to virtue, lead to many evils and destroy the doer, root and branch. (18)

कश्च लक्ष्मणमुक्तानां रामकोपानुवर्तिनाम् ।
शराणामग्रतः स्थातुं शक्तो देवासुरेष्वपि ॥ १९ ॥

“And who is capable, even among gods and demons of withstanding the shafts shot by Lakṣmaṇa in the wake of Śrī Rāma’s wrath? (19)

न चापि त्रिषु लोकेषु राजन् विद्येत कश्चन ।
राघवस्य व्यलीकं यः कृत्वा सुखमवाप्नुयात् ॥ २० ॥

“Nor is there anyone in all the three worlds, O king, who will enjoy happiness even after committing an offence against Śrī Rāma. (20)

तत् त्रिकालहितं वाक्यं धर्म्यमर्थानुयायि च ।
मन्यस्व नरदेवाय जानकी प्रतिदीयताम् ॥ २१ ॥

“Therefore, accept my advice, which is conducive to your good in all the three divisions of time (viz., the past, present and future), is in perfect accord with virtue and leads to material gain as well. Let the daughter of Janaka be restored to Śrī Rāma (a god among men). (21)

दृष्टा हीयं मया देवी लब्धं यदिह दुर्लभम् ।
उत्तरं कर्म यच्छेषं निमित्तं तत्र राघवः ॥ २२ ॥

“The aforesaid godlike lady has actually been seen by me; what was difficult to achieve on this occasion has been achieved. Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, is capable of doing that which remains to be done as a sequel. (22)

लक्षितेयं मया सीता तथा शोकपरायणा ।

गृहे यां नाभिजानासि पञ्चास्यामिव पन्नगीम् ॥ २३ ॥

“The aforesaid Sītā, whom you do not recognize as a five-hooded female serpent in your abode, has been found by me, indescribably given over to grief. (23)

नेयं जरयितुं शक्या सासुरैरमरैरपि ।

विषसंस्पृष्टमत्यर्थं भुक्तमन्नमिवौजसा ॥ २४ ॥

“She is incapable of being absorbed with one’s might even by gods, including demons, any more than food mixed with poison in an excessive degree could be digested with one’s natural digestive power, if partaken of. (24)

तपःसंतापलब्धस्ते सोऽयं धर्मपरिग्रहः ।

न स नाशयितुं न्याय्य आत्मप्राणपरिग्रहः ॥ २५ ॥

“It is not right for you to forfeit this vast fortune, which is an outcome of virtue alone, or the capacity to preserve your life for an inordinately long period of time, both of which have been acquired by you through the observance of austerities. (25)

अवध्यतां तपोभिर्या भवान् समनुपश्यति ।

आत्मनः सासुरैर्देवैर्हेतुस्तत्राप्ययं महान् ॥ २६ ॥

“The aforesaid extraordinary virtue alone is responsible even for your immunity, which you perceive, from death at the hands of gods including demons, acquired by austerities. (26)

सुग्रीवो न च देवोऽयं न यक्षो न च राक्षसः ।

मानुषो राघवो राजन् सुग्रीवश्च हरीश्वरः ।

तस्मात् प्राणपरित्राणं कथं राजन् करिष्यसि ॥ २७ ॥

“Sugrīva or Śrī Rāma is neither a god, nor a Yakṣa, nor an ogre. Śrī Rāma is a human being; while Sugrīva, O king, is the lord of monkeys. How then will you be able to preserve your life against the latter? (27)

न तु धर्मोपसंहारमधर्मफलसंहितम् ।

तदेव फलमन्वेति धर्मश्चाधर्मनाशनः ॥ २८ ॥

“The fruit of virtue does not follow one who has reached the culmination of unrighteousness, even though he practises virtue; the fruit of unrighteousness alone follows him. And exceeding virtue (following an unrighteous act) atones for unrighteousness.* (28)

प्राप्तं धर्मफलं तावद् भवता नात्र संशयः ।

फलमस्याप्यधर्मस्य क्षिप्रमेव प्रपत्स्यसे ॥ २९ ॥

“The fruit of virtue practised by you in the past has already been attained and enjoyed by you; there is no doubt about it. You will reap the fruit of this unrighteousness in the shape of abduction and detention of Sītā too very soon. (29)

जनस्थानवधं बुद्ध्वा वालिनश्च वधं तथा ।

रामसुग्रीवसख्यं च बुद्ध्यस्व हितमात्मनः ॥ ३० ॥

“Recalling the extermination of the ogres of Janasthāna as well as the destruction of Vāli as also the alliance of Śrī Rāma with Sugrīva, ponder over your own interest. (30)

कामं खल्वहमप्येकः सवाजिरथकुञ्जराम् ।

लङ्कां नाशयितुं शक्तस्तस्यैष तु न निश्चयः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Even though I am undoubtedly capable of destroying Laṅkā with its horses, chariots and elephants single-handed, such, however, is not the resolve of Śrī Rāma. (31)

रामेण हि प्रतिज्ञातं हर्यृक्षगणसंनिधौ ।

उत्सादनममित्राणां सीता यैस्तु प्रधर्षिता ॥ ३२ ॥

“Indeed in the presence of hordes of monkeys and bears the extermination of his enemies, by whom Sītā was actually laid violent hands upon, was vowed by Śrī Rāma. (32)

अपकुर्वन् हि रामस्य साक्षादपि पुरंदरः ।

न सुखं प्राप्नुयादन्यः किं पुनस्त्वद्विधो जनः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Assuredly, doing wrong to Śrī Rāma, not even Indra himself can attain happiness,

* This is corroborated by the Śruti text ‘धर्मेण पापमपनुदति’ one is able to drive away sin through righteousness. Expiatory acts recommended in Smṛti texts also point to the same fact.

much less an ordinary individual like you.

(33)

यां सीतेत्यभिजानासि येयं तिष्ठति ते गृहे।

कालरात्रीति तां विद्धि सर्वलङ्काविनाशिनीम् ॥ ३४ ॥

“Know her, whom you recognize by the name of Sītā and who stays in your abode, to be none else than Kālarātri (the goddess presiding over and responsible for universal dissolution), bent upon destroying the whole of Laṅkā.

(34)

तदलं कालपाशेन सीताविग्रहरूपिणा।

स्वयं स्कन्धावसक्तेन क्षेममात्मनि चिन्त्यताम् ॥ ३५ ॥

“Therefore, have done with the noose of death in the form of Sītā’s personality, which has been placed by yourself about your neck. And let the means of your own safety be devised.

(35)

सीतायास्तेजसा दग्धां रामकोपप्रदीपिताम्।

दह्यमानामिमां पश्य पुरीं सावृप्रतोलिकाम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“Behold (in the immediate future) this city of Laṅkā, which has already been consumed by the moral power of Sītā, and set on fire by the wrath of Śrī Rāma, burning with its palaces and streets.

(36)

स्वानि मित्राणि मन्त्रींश्च ज्ञातीन् भ्रातृन् सुतान् हितान्।

भोगान् दारांश्च लङ्कां च मा विनाशमुपानय ॥ ३७ ॥

“Pray, don’t lead to annihilation your own allies, counsellors, relations, brothers, sons, friends and consorts as well as your luxuries, and Laṅkā itself.

(37)

सत्यं राक्षसराजेन्द्र शृणुष्व वचनं मम।

रामदासस्य दूतस्य वानरस्य विशेषतः ॥ ३८ ॥

“Listen, O suzerain lord of ogres, to my truthful assertion, coming as it is from the lips of a servant of Śrī Rāma, an envoy and particularly a monkey.

(38)

सर्वाल्लोकान् सुसंहत्य सभूतान् सचराचरान्।

पुनरेव तथा स्रष्टुं शक्तो रामो महायशः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Annihilating all the worlds including the elements (which have entered into their constitution), their created beings, as well as the entire mobile and immobile creation, the highly illustrious Śrī Rāma is capable of creating them over again in the same way.

(39)

देवासुरनरेन्द्रेषु यक्षरक्षोरगेषु च।

विद्याधरेषु नागेषु गन्धर्वेषु मृगेषु च ॥ ४० ॥

सिद्धेषु किंनरेन्द्रेषु पतत्रिषु च सर्वतः।

सर्वत्र सर्वभूतेषु सर्वकालेषु नास्ति सः ॥ ४१ ॥

यो रामं प्रति युध्येत विष्णुतुल्यपराक्रमम्।

सर्वलोकेश्वरस्येह कृत्वा विप्रियमीदृशम्।

रामस्य राजसिंहस्य दुर्लभं तव जीवितम् ॥ ४२ ॥

“Among gods, demons and the rulers of men as well as among the Yakṣas, ogres and serpents as also among the Vidyādharas (celestial artistes), Nāgas, Gandharvas (celestial musicians), and beasts, Siddhas and the rulers of Kinnaras, nay, even among the birds in all places: in short, among all created beings at all places and times there is none who can fight against Śrī Rāma, the equal of Viṣṇu in prowess. Since you have given such offence to Śrī Rāma, a lion among kings and the ruler of the worlds, it is difficult for you to preserve your life here.

(40—42)

देवाश्च दैत्याश्च निशाचरेन्द्र

गन्धर्वविद्याधरनागयक्षाः ।

रामस्य लोकत्रयनायकस्य

स्थातुं न शक्ताः समरेषु सर्वे ॥ ४३ ॥

“Gods and demons, nay, Gandharvas, Vidyādharas, Nāgas and Yakṣas are all unable to stand in front of Śrī Rāma, the ruler of all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) in combat, O ruler of ogres !

(43)

ब्रह्मा स्वयम्भूश्चतुराननो वा

रुद्रस्त्रिनेत्रस्त्रिपुरान्तको वा ।

इन्द्रो महेन्द्रः सुरनायको वा

स्थातुं न शक्ता युधि राघवस्य ॥ ४४ ॥

“Even the self-born and four-headed

Brahmā (the creator), the three-eyed Lord Rudra (the god of destruction), the Destroyer of the three cities (built by the demon Maya), and the mighty sovereign Indra, the ruler of gods, are unable to stand before Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, on the field of battle.” (44)

स सौष्ठवोपेतमदीनवादिनः

कपेर्निशम्याप्रतिमोऽग्रियं वचः ।

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे एकपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-one of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LII

Provoked by the harsh words of Hanumān, Rāvaṇa orders him to be put to death. Vibhīṣaṇa, however, exhorts the latter to desist from this dastardly act, pointing out that the killing of an envoy is forbidden by the Śāstras

स तस्य वचनं श्रुत्वा वानरस्य महात्मनः ।

आज्ञापयद् वधं तस्य रावणः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ॥ १ ॥

Overcome with wrath on hearing the reply of that high-souled Hanumān, Rāvaṇa ordered his killing. (1)

वधे तस्य समाज्ञप्ते रावणेन दुरात्मना ।

निवेदितवतो दौत्यं नानुमेने विभीषणः ॥ २ ॥

Vibhīṣaṇa, however, did not signify his approval of the death of Hanumān, who had made known his being an envoy of Śrī Rāma, ordered by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa. (2)

तं रक्षोऽधिपतिं क्रुद्धं तच्च कार्यमुपस्थितम् ।

विदित्वा चिन्तयामास कार्यं कार्यविधौ स्थितः ॥ ३ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid king of ogres angry, and looking to that affair viz., the death of an envoy which was imminent, Vibhīṣaṇa, who had his mind fixed on propriety of action, pondered over his duty in the circumstances. (3)

दशाननः कोपविवृत्तलोचनः

समादिशत् तस्य वधं महाकपेः ॥ ४५ ॥

Hearing the reply, which was excellent though distasteful, of the monkey, who was intrepid of speech, the unrivalled Rāvaṇa (the ten headed monster), his eyes rolling through rage, ordained the death of that mighty monkey. (45)

निश्चितार्थस्ततः साम्ना पूज्यं शत्रुजिदग्रजम् ।

उवाच हितमत्यर्थं वाक्यं वाक्यविशारदः ॥ ४ ॥

Having determined his duty, Vibhīṣaṇa, who was a master of expression, thereupon addressed to his elder brother, who was worthy of adoration to him, the following appeal, which was exceedingly wholesome: (4)

क्षमस्व रोषं त्यज राक्षसेन्द्र

प्रसीद मे वाक्यमिदं शृणुष्व ।

वधं न कुर्वन्ति परावरज्ञा

दूतस्य सन्तो वसुधाधिपेन्द्राः ॥ ५ ॥

“Pray, forgive me, and cast off anger, O ruler of ogres ! Be propitiated and listen to this appeal of mine. Virtuous and exalted rulers of the earth, who know what is noble and what is low, do not take the life of a messenger. (5)

राजन् धर्मविरुद्धं च लोकवृत्तेश्च गर्हितम् ।

तव चासदृशं वीर कपेरस्य प्रमापणम् ॥ ६ ॥

“To consign this monkey to death, O king, is contrary to righteousness, nay deprecable from the point of worldly usage and as such unbecoming of you, O Lord ! (6)

धर्मज्ञश्च कृतज्ञश्च राजधर्मविशारदः ।
परावरज्ञो भूतानां त्वमेव परमार्थवित् ॥ ७ ॥

“You know what is right; you recognize a service done to you, and are conversant with the duties of a king; you can distinguish between high and low among created beings and you alone know the ultimate purpose of life. (7)

गृह्यन्ते यदि रोषेण त्वादृशोऽपि विचक्षणाः ।
ततः शास्त्रविपश्चित्त्वं श्रम एव हि केवलम् ॥ ८ ॥

“If even those who are learned like you are seized with anger, then the mastery of the scriptures is indeed mere fruitless labour. (8)

तस्मात् प्रसीद शत्रुञ्च राक्षसेन्द्र दुरासद ।
युक्तायुक्तं विनिश्चित्य दूतदण्डो विधीयताम् ॥ ९ ॥

“Be propitiated, therefore, O destroyer of foes, O ruler of ogres, who are difficult to approach ! Let punishment be meted out to a messenger only after carefully determining what is meet and what is improper.” (9)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
कोपेन महताऽऽविष्टो वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ १० ॥

Filled with violent anger on hearing the submission of Vibhīṣaṇa, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, spoke in reply as follows: (10)

न पापानां वधे पापं विद्यते शत्रुसूदन ।
तस्मादिमं वधिष्यामि वानरं पापकारिणम् ॥ ११ ॥

“No sin lies in the act of killing the sinful, O destroyer of foes ! I shall, therefore, make an end of this monkey, a perpetrator of sin.” (11)

अधर्ममूलं बहुदोषयुक्त-मनार्यजुष्टं वचनं निशम्य ।
उवाच वाक्यं परमार्थतत्त्वं
विभीषणो बुद्धिमतां वरिष्ठः ॥ १२ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid reply of Rāvaṇa, which was rooted in unrighteousness, full of many faults and unbecoming of noble souls, Vibhīṣaṇa, the foremost of those endowed with wisdom, made the following submission, which enabled one to ascertain the highest truth: (12)

प्रसीद लङ्केश्वर राक्षसेन्द्र
धर्मार्थतत्त्वं वचनं शृणुष्व ।
दूता न वध्याः समयेषु राजन्
सर्वेषु सर्वत्र वदन्ति सन्तः ॥ १३ ॥

“Be propitiated, O lord of Laṅkā, O ruler of ogres ! Pray, listen to my appeal embodying the essence of righteousness and worldly fortune. Messengers, O king, are undeserving of death at all times and at all places—so declare the virtuous. (13)

असंशयं शत्रुरयं प्रवृद्धः
कृतं ह्यनेनाप्रियमप्रमेयम् ।
न दूतवध्यां प्रवदन्ति सन्तो
दूतस्य दृष्टा बहवो हि दण्डाः ॥ १४ ॥

“Undoubtedly this monkey is a formidable adversary. Indeed incalculable harm has been done by him. Nevertheless the wise do not sanction the killing of a messenger; for numerous other punishments are found recommended in the scriptures with regard to a messenger. (14)

वैरूप्यमङ्गेषु कशाभिघातो
मौण्ड्यं तथा लक्षणसंनिपातः ।
एतान् हि दूते प्रवदन्ति दण्डान्
वधस्तु दूतस्य न नः श्रुतोऽस्ति ॥ १५ ॥

“Mutilation of any of his limbs, flogging, shaving of the head and branding—indeed the wise recommend any of these punishments with regard to a messenger; the killing of a messenger has, however, never been heard of by us. (15)

कथं च धर्मार्थविनीतबुद्धिः
परावरप्रत्ययनिश्चितार्थः ।
भवद्विधः कोपवशे हि तिष्ठेत्
कोपं न गच्छन्ति हि सत्त्ववन्तः ॥ १६ ॥

“And indeed how can one like you, whose mind has penetrated into the realms of righteousness and worldly prosperity and who has determined his duty by discriminating between what is noble and what is ignoble, remain swayed by anger? For, the powerful never give way to anger. (16)

न धर्मवादे न च लोकवृत्ते
न शास्त्रबुद्धिग्रहणेषु वापि।
विद्येत कश्चित्तव वीर तुल्य-
स्त्वं ह्युत्तमः सर्वसुरासुराणाम् ॥ १७ ॥

“No one is your equal in discussing virtue, nor in observing the worldly usage, nor even in grasping the import of scriptures by means of your intellect, O hero! Indeed you are the foremost of the gods and the demons. (17)

पराक्रमोत्साहमनस्विनां च
सुरासुराणामपि दुर्जयेन।
त्वयाप्रमेयेण सुरेन्द्रसङ्घा
जिताश्च युद्धेष्वसकृन्नरेन्द्राः ॥ १८ ॥

“Nay, by you, who are difficult to conquer even for high-minded gods and demons endowed with prowess and martial ardour and are immeasurable in strength etc., hosts of leaders of gods and rulers of men have been conquered in combats more than once. (18)

इत्थंविधस्यामरदैत्यशत्रोः
शूरस्य वीरस्य तवाजितस्य।
कुर्वन्ति वीरा मनसाप्यलीकं
प्राणैर्विमुक्ता न तु भोः पुरा ते ॥ १९ ॥

“In the past heroes have never given offence even with their mind to you, who are so valiant and heroic and inimical even to gods and demons and have never been conquered by anyone, O King! Those who raised their head, were immediately deprived of their life. (19)

न चाप्यस्य कपेर्घाते कंचित् पश्याम्यहं गुणम्।
तेष्वयं पात्यतां दण्डो यैरयं प्रेषितः कपिः ॥ २० ॥

“Nor do I perceive any good whatsoever in taking the life of this monkey. Let this punishment in the form of death descend on them by whom this monkey has been sent. (20)

साधुर्वा यदि वासाधुः परैरेष समर्पितः।
ब्रुवन् परार्थं परवान् न दूतो वधमर्हति ॥ २१ ॥

“Whether he is good or bad, he has been sent by our enemies. Advocating others' interests, dependent as he is on them, an envoy does not merit death. (21)

अपि चास्मिन् हते नान्यं राजन् पश्यामि खेचरम्।
इह यः पुनरागच्छेत् परं पारं महोदधेः ॥ २२ ॥

“Moreover, once this monkey is killed, O king, I see no other sky-ranger who can come once more to the opposite shore of the vast sea on this side. (22)

तस्मान्नास्य वधे यत्नः कार्यः परपुरंजय।
भवान् सेन्द्रेषु देवेषु यत्नमास्थातुमर्हति ॥ २३ ॥

“Therefore, O conqueror of hostile citadels, no attempt should be made to take the life of this monkey. On the other hand, you should direct your efforts against the gods including Indra, their ruler. (23)

अस्मिन् विनष्टे नहि भूतमन्यं
पश्यामि यस्तौ नरराजपुत्रौ।
युद्धाय युद्धप्रिय दुर्विनीता-
वुद्योजयेद् वै भवता विरुद्धौ ॥ २४ ॥

“If this monkey is put to death, I do not really perceive any other created being who can incite those two insolent human princes, who are hostile to you, to wage war against you, O bellicose king! (24)

पराक्रमोत्साहमनस्विनां च
सुरासुराणामपि दुर्जयेन।
त्वया मनोनन्दन नैर्ऋतानां
युद्धाय निर्नाशयितुं न युक्तम् ॥ २५ ॥

“For you, who are difficult to conquer even for high-minded gods and demons endowed with prowess and martial ardour, O delight of ogres, it is not meet to crush the ardour of those ogres (the progeny of Nirrti) for war. (25)

हिताश्च शूराश्च समाहिताश्च
कुलेषु जाताश्च महागुणेषु ।
मनस्विनः शस्त्रभृतां वरिष्ठाः
कोपप्रशस्ताः सुभृताश्च योधाः ॥ २६ ॥
तदेकदेशेन बलस्य तावत्
केचित् तवादेशकृतोऽद्य यान्तु ।
तौ राजपुत्रावुपगृह्य मूढौ
परेषु ते भावयितुं प्रभावम् ॥ २७ ॥

“Therefore, in order to make your greatness known to the enemies, let a few warriors, who are well-disposed and valiant, nay, devoted and born in families noted for their great qualities, high-minded, foremost among armed soldiers, renowned for their burning ardour, handsomely paid and obedient to your commands, proceed today with a section of your army and return after capturing the two princes, distracted as they are through agony caused by separation from Sītā.” (26-27)

निशाचराणामधिपोऽनुजस्य
विभीषणस्योत्तमवाक्यमिष्टम् ।
जग्राह बुद्ध्या सुरलोकशत्रु-
र्महाबलो राक्षसराजमुख्यः ॥ २८ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the foremost of the rulers of ogres, the suzerain lord of the rangers of the night and an enemy of the celestial realm, who was endowed with extraordinary might, accepted with his mind the sound and palatable advice of his younger brother, Vibhiṣaṇa. (28)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे द्विपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-two of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LIII

Wrapping up the tail of Hanumān in rags and soaking it in oil, and then lighting it up, the ogres, as urged by Rāvaṇa, take Hanumān round the city to the accompaniment of beat of drums. Hearing this news from the lips of the ogresses, Sītā prays to the god of fire on oath to see that Hanumān remains unscathed. Climbing up the gate and shedding the fire by attenuating his body, and then resuming vast proportions and seizing the iron bar of the gate, Hanumān kills with it the ogres guarding the gate

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा दशग्रीवो महात्मनः ।
देशकालहितं वाक्यं भ्रातुरुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the foregoing advice of his younger brother, the high-souled Vibhiṣaṇa, which was salutary both from the point of view of time and place, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, made the following assertion by way of a reply: (1)

सम्यगुक्तं हि भवता दूतवध्या विगर्हिता ।
अवश्यं तु वधायान्यः क्रियतामस्य निग्रहः ॥ २ ॥

“It is truly said by you that the killing of a messenger has been severely condemned. In any case, some punishment other than death need must be meted out to him. (2)
कपीनां किल लाङ्गूलमिष्टं भवति भूषणम् ।
तदस्य दीप्यतां शीघ्रं तेन दग्धेन गच्छतु ॥ ३ ॥

“In the case of monkeys the tail, they say, is the cherished embellishment. Therefore, let his tail be set on fire at once and let him return with his tail burnt. (3)

ततः पश्यन्त्वमुं दीनमङ्गवैरूप्यकर्शितम् ।
सुमित्रज्ञातयः सर्वे बान्धवाः ससुहृज्जनाः ॥ ४ ॥

“Thereupon let his beloved friends and relations and his kinsfolk including his well-wishers, all find him wretched and distressed through mutilation.” (4)

आज्ञापयद् राक्षसेन्द्रः पुरं सर्वं सचत्वरम् ।
लाङ्गूलेन प्रदीप्तेन रक्षोभिः परिणीयताम् ॥ ५ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, issued the following command: “Let the monkey be taken by the ogres with his tail on fire round the entire city with its cross roads.” (5)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राक्षसाः कोपकर्कशाः ।
वेष्टन्ते तस्य लाङ्गूलं जीर्णैः कार्पासिकैः पटैः ॥ ६ ॥

Hearing his aforesaid command, the ogres, who were merciless through rage, began to wrap the tail of Hanumān in cotton tatters. (6)

संवेष्टयमाने लाङ्गूले व्यवर्धत महाकपिः ।
शुष्कमिन्धनमासाद्य वनेष्विव हुताशनम् ॥ ७ ॥

While his tail was being swathed, the huge monkey grew out of all proportion like a fire in woodlands on catching dry wood. (7)

तैलेन परिषिच्याथ तेऽग्निं तत्रोपपादयन् ।
लाङ्गूलेन प्रदीप्तेन राक्षसांस्तानताडयत् ॥ ८ ॥
रोषामर्षपरीतात्मा बालसूर्यसमाननः ।
स भूयः संगतैः क्रूरैः राक्षसैर्हरिपुङ्गवः ॥ ९ ॥

Having soaked the tail in oil, the ogres forthwith set fire to it and Hanumān, whose countenance shone like the rising sun, his mind seized with anger and indignation, began to smite those ogres with his blazing tail. That jewel among the monkeys was bound more tightly by the cruel ogres who had gathered together there. (8-9)

सहस्रीबालवृद्धाश्च जग्मुः प्रीतिं निशाचराः ।
निबद्धः कृतवान् वीरस्तत्कालसदृशीं मतिम् ॥ १० ॥

The rangers of the night, including their womenfolk, children and the aged, were filled with delight. Bound tightly, the hero arrived at the following resolution in consonance with that juncture: (10)

कामं खलु न मे शक्ता निबद्धस्यापि राक्षसाः ।
छित्त्वा पाशान् समुत्पत्य हन्यामहमिमान् पुनः ॥ ११ ॥

“Even though I stand bound to all appearance, the ogres cannot in any case prevail against me. Severing my bonds and springing up, I shall be able to kill the ogres again. (11)

यदि भर्तृहितार्थाय चरन्तं भर्तृशासनात् ।
निबध्नन्ते दुरात्मानो न तु मे निष्कृतिः कृता ॥ १२ ॥

“If under the command of their master the evil-minded fellows have bound me, ranging as I did for the purpose of doing good to my master, no reprisal at all could be made by them for the grave injuries inflicted on them by me. (12)

सर्वेषामेव पर्याप्तो राक्षसानामहं युधि ।
किं तु रामस्य प्रीत्यर्थं विषहिष्येऽहमीदृशम् ॥ १३ ॥

“I am strong enough for all the ogres taken together in combat. Still for the pleasure of Śrī Rāma, I shall put up with such bonds. (13)

लङ्का चारयितव्या मे पुनरेव भवेदिति ।
रात्रौ नहि सुदृष्टा मे दुर्गकर्मविधानतः ॥ १४ ॥

“Laṅkā will thus be involuntarily caused to be surveyed by me once more; for at night it was not closely perceived from the point of view of the technique of its fortification. (14)

अवश्यमेव द्रष्टव्या मया लङ्का निशाक्षये ।
कामं बध्नन्तु मे भूयः पुच्छस्योदीपनेन च ॥ १५ ॥
पीडां कुर्वन्ति रक्षांसि न मेऽस्ति मनसः श्रमः ।
ततस्ते संवृताकारं सत्त्ववन्तं महाकपिम् ॥ १६ ॥
परिगृह्य ययुर्हृष्टा राक्षसाः कपिकुञ्जरम् ।
शङ्खभेरीनिनादैश्च घोषयन्तः स्वकर्मभिः ॥ १७ ॥

राक्षसाः क्रूरकर्माणश्चारयन्ति स्म तां पुरीम्।
 अन्वीयमानो रक्षोभिर्ययौ सुखमरिंदमः ॥ १८ ॥
 हनूमांश्चारयामास राक्षसानां महापुरीम्।
 अथापश्यद् विमानानि विचित्राणि महाकपिः ॥ १९ ॥
 संवृतान् भूमिभागांश्च सुविभक्तांश्च चत्वरान्।
 रथ्याश्च गृहसम्बाधाः कपिः शृङ्गाटकानि च ॥ २० ॥
 तथा रथ्योपरथ्याश्च तथैव च गृहान्तरान्।
 चत्वरेषु चतुष्केषु राजमार्गे तथैव च ॥ २१ ॥
 घोषयन्ति कपिं सर्वे चार इत्येव राक्षसाः।
 स्त्रीबालवृद्धा निर्जग्मुस्तत्र तत्र कुतूहलात् ॥ २२ ॥
 तं प्रदीपितलाङ्गुलं हनूमन्तं दिदृक्ष्वः।
 दीप्यमाने ततस्तस्य लाङ्गुलाग्रे हनूमतः ॥ २३ ॥
 राक्षस्यस्ता विरूपाक्ष्यः शंसुर्देव्यास्तदप्रियम्।
 यस्त्वया कृतसंवादः सीते ताम्रमुखः कपिः ॥ २४ ॥
 लाङ्गुलेन प्रदीप्तेन स एष परिणीयते।
 श्रुत्वा तद् वचनं क्रूरमात्मापहरणोपमम् ॥ २५ ॥
 वैदेही शोकसंतप्ता हुताशनमुपागमत्।
 मङ्गलाभिमुखी तस्य सा तदासीन्महाकपेः ॥ २६ ॥
 उपतस्थे विशालाक्षी प्रयता हव्यवाहनम्।
 यद्यस्ति पतिशुश्रूषा यद्यस्ति चरितं तपः।
 यदि वा त्वेकपत्नीत्वं शीतो भव हनूमतः ॥ २७ ॥

“Lankā, therefore, needs must be seen by me at the close of the night. Let the ogres freely bind me anew and cause pain to me by setting my tail on fire; there will be no strain on my mind.” Taking hold of the gigantic monkey, Hanumān, an elephant among monkeys, who, though full of courage had suppressed the expression of his face (which might betray his feelings), the ogres then advanced joyfully. Nay, making him publicly known through his own exploits by means of the blasts of conches and the beating of kettledrums, the ogres of cruel deeds dragged him through that city. Followed closely by the ogres, Hanumān, the tamer of his foes, marched happily and the gigantic monkey ranged the big city of ogres. Nay, Hanumān duly surveyed the marvellous seven-storied mansions, as well as sequestered tracts of land, as also well-defined quadrangles, nay, streets thickly lined with buildings and cross-roads and even so streets and lanes and likewise the spaces between two houses. In the quadrangles as also at cross-roads, as well as on the main road all the ogres announced the monkey precisely as a spy. Desirous of seeing the celebrated Hanumān with his tail set ablaze, womenfolk, children and aged people came out at every place out of curiosity.

While the tail of the said Hanumān was being set fire to, the aforementioned ogresses with misshapen eyes presently conveyed that unpleasant tidings to the godlike lady, Sītā, in the following words : “That monkey with a coppery countenance, who held conversation with you, O Sītā, is being taken round through the streets over there with his tail set ablaze.” Tormented with grief to hear the aforesaid report, which was as cruel as the story of her own abduction, Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, approached with her mind the god of fire (lit., the consumer of oblations). At that time she became solicitous for the welfare of that great monkey. The devout Sītā (who had large eyes) approached the god of fire with the following prayer: “If service rendered to one’s husband has any value, if austerities have ever been practised by me or if there is exclusive devotion in me to my husband, please prove cool to Hanumān, O fire !

(15—27)

यदि किञ्चिदनुक्रोशस्तस्य मय्यस्ति धीमतः।

यदि वा भाग्यशेषो मे शीतो भव हनूमतः ॥ २८ ॥

“If there is any compassion for me in the heart of that sagacious prince, or if any residue of good luck still exists in me, prove cool to Hanumān.

(28)

यदि मां वृत्तसम्पन्नां तत्समागमलालसाम्।

स विजानाति धर्मात्मा शीतो भव हनूमतः ॥ २९ ॥

“If Śrī Rāma, whose mind is set on piety, fully knows me to be richly endowed with morality and ardently keen on being re-united with him, please prove cool to Hanumān. (29)

यदि मां तारयेदार्यः सुग्रीवः सत्यसंगरः ।
अस्माद् दुःखाम्बुसरोधाच्छीतो भव हनूमतः ॥ ३० ॥

“If the noble Sugrīva, who is true to his promise, should be able to take me across this ocean of agony, please prove cool to Hanumān.” (30)

ततस्तीक्ष्णाचिरव्यग्रः प्रदक्षिणशिखोऽनलः ।
जज्वाल मृगशावाक्ष्याः शंसन्निव शुभं कपेः ॥ ३१ ॥

Thereupon the fire, which had burst into leaping flames, began to burn mildly with its flames rising to his right (as a token of propitiousness), announcing, as it were, to the fawn-eyed lady the welfare of the monkey. (31)

हनूमज्जनकश्चैव पुच्छानलयुतोऽनिलः ।
ववौ स्वास्थ्यकरो देव्याः प्रालेयानिलशीतलः ॥ ३२ ॥

Though brought into contact with the fire at the tail, the wind too, the procreator of Hanumān, blew ice-cold, causing satisfaction to the godlike lady. (32)

दह्यमाने च लाङ्गूले चिन्तयामास वानरः ।
प्रदीप्तोऽग्रिरयं कस्मान्न मां दहति सर्वतः ॥ ३३ ॥

While the tail was burning, Hanumān thought to himself, “How does this fire, ablaze on all sides, not burn me?” (33)

दृश्यते च महाज्वालः करोति च न मे रुजम् ।
शिशिरस्येव सम्पातो लाङ्गूलाग्रे प्रतिष्ठितः ॥ ३४ ॥

“It appears as having burst into big flames, yet it does not cause pain to me any more than a mass of ice placed at the end of my tail. (34)

अथ वा तदिदं व्यक्तं यद् दृष्टं प्लवता मया ।
रामप्रभावादाश्चर्यं पर्वतः सरितां पतौ ॥ ३५ ॥

“Or, this cold touch of fire has come to be felt due to the same inscrutable power of Śrī Rāma as a result of which a marvel in the form of a mountain in the sea was seen by me while leaping across it. (35)

यदि तावत् समुद्रस्य मैनाकस्य च धीमतः ।
रामार्थं सम्भ्रमस्तादृक् किमग्रिर्न करिष्यति ॥ ३६ ॥

“If there was such a flurry to be seen in the mind of the sea and the sagacious Mount Maināka in the cause of Śrī Rāma, will not fire show the same degree of flurry in making its touch cool? (36)

सीतायाश्चानृशंस्येन तेजसा राघवस्य च ।
पितुश्च मम सख्येन न मां दहति पावकः ॥ ३७ ॥

“The fire does not burn me because of Sītā’s mercy for those depending on her, the glory of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, and the friendship of my father with the god of fire.” (37)

भूयः स चिन्तयामास मुहूर्तं कपिकुञ्जरः ।
कथमस्मद्विधस्येह बन्धनं राक्षसाधमैः ॥ ३८ ॥
प्रतिक्रियास्य युक्ता स्यात् सति मह्यं पराक्रमे ।

ततश्छित्त्वा च तान् पाशान् वेगवान् वै महाकपिः ॥ ३९ ॥
उत्पपाताथ वेगेन ननाद च महाकपिः ।

पुरद्वारं ततः श्रीमान् शैलशृङ्गमिवोन्नतम् ॥ ४० ॥
विभक्तरक्षः सम्बाधमाससादानिलात्मजः ।

स भूत्वा शैलसंकाशः क्षणेन पुनरात्मवान् ॥ ४१ ॥
ह्रस्वतां परमां प्राप्तो बन्धनान्वयशतयत् ।

विमुक्तश्चाभवच्छ्रीमान् पुनः पर्वतसंनिभः ॥ ४२ ॥

Once more did that elephant among the monkeys reflect awhile as follows: “How could the bondage of one like me at the hands of the vile ogres be congruous? The reprisal of this outrage should be justified on my part so long as there is prowess in me.” Nay, having severed those bonds, Hanumān, the great monkey, who was full of impetuosity, thereupon sprang up in the air with vehemence and the gigantic Hanumān gave a shout. The glorious Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, then reached the city gate, which was lofty as a hill-top and from which throngs of ogres had turned away. Having once more assumed in an instant an exceedingly diminutive form, the self-possessed Hanumān, who looked like a mountain in size, cast off his bonds. And becoming completely free, the glorious

Hanumān once more assumed the appearance of a mountain. (38—42)

वीक्षमाणश्च ददृशे परिघं तोरणाश्रितम्।
स तं गृह्य महाबाहुः कालायसपरिष्कृतम्।
रक्षिणस्तान् पुनः सर्वान् सूदयामास मारुतिः ॥ ४३ ॥

Nay, looking round about him, he caught sight of a club studded with iron, lying at the gate. Seizing it, the mighty-armed Hanumān, son of the wind god, destroyed once more all those who were guarding the gate. (43)

स तान् निहत्वा रणचण्डविक्रमः

समीक्षमाणः पुनरेव लङ्काम्।

प्रदीप्तलाङ्गूलकृताचिमाली

प्रकाशितादित्य इवाचिमाली ॥ ४४ ॥

Having got rid of them and surveying Laṅkā once more, Hanumān, whose prowess on the field of battle was terrific, and who was surrounded by a circle of flames depicted by his inflamed tail, shone brightly like the sun with a circle of rays surrounding it. (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे त्रिपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-three of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुःपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LIV

Making up his mind to set fire to the city of Laṅkā, which was the only work left for him to do, and coming out into the open, Hanumān burns the entire city barring the abode of Vibhīṣaṇa.

Astonished to see the city burning, the gods and Gandharvas (celestial musicians) are filled with supreme joy

वीक्षमाणस्ततो लङ्कां कपिः कृतमनोरथः।
वर्धमानसमुत्साहः कार्यशेषमचिन्तयत् ॥ १ ॥

While surveying Laṅkā, Hanumān, whose desired object had been accomplished and whose zeal was growing, pondered over that which remained for him to do. (1)

किं नु खल्ववशिष्टं मे कर्तव्यमिह साम्प्रतम्।
यदेषां रक्षसां भूयः संतापजननं भवेत् ॥ २ ॥

He said to himself, 'What is actually left for me to do in Laṅkā at the present moment, which may prove to be a source of further torment to these ogres? (2)

वनं तावत्प्रमथितं प्रकृष्टा राक्षसा हताः।
बलैकदेशः क्षपितः शेषं दुर्गविनाशनम् ॥ ३ ॥

'The grove has already been laid waste, eminent ogres killed and a part of the army has been destroyed. The demolition of the citadel alone remains. (3)

दुर्गे विनाशिते कर्म भवेत् सुखपरिश्रमम्।
अल्पयत्नेन कार्येऽस्मिन् मम स्यात् सफलः श्रमः ॥ ४ ॥

'With their fort destroyed, my work of leaping across the sea and laying waste the grove will prove to be a labour with a happy conclusion. My labour in the cause of searching for Sītā will become fruitful with a little effort in the direction of demolishing the fort. (4)

यो ह्ययं मम लाङ्गूले दीप्यते हव्यवाहनः।
अस्य संतर्पणं न्याय्यं कर्तुमेभिर्गृहोत्तमैः ॥ ५ ॥

'It is advisable for me to feed to the fill with these excellent buildings this fire (lit., the bearer of sacrificial offerings to the gods) which is actually blazing on my tail though proving so cool to me.' (5)

ततः प्रदीप्तलाङ्गूलः सविद्युदिव तोयदः ।
भवनाग्रेषु लङ्काया विचचार महाकपिः ॥ ६ ॥

With his tail set ablaze, Hanumān, the great monkey, began to flit over the tops of houses in Lāṅkā like a cloud charged with lightning. (6)

गृहाद् गृहं राक्षसानामुद्यानानि च वानरः ।
वीक्षमाणो ह्यसंत्रस्तः प्रासादांश्च चचार सः ॥ ७ ॥

Not the least daunted, he actually passed from one house to another, surveying the pleasures and mansions of the ogres. (7)

अवप्लुत्य महावेगः प्रहस्तस्य निवेशनम् ।
अग्निं तत्र विनिक्षिप्य श्वसनेन समो बली ॥ ८ ॥
ततोऽन्यत् पुप्लुवे वेश्म महापार्श्वस्य वीर्यवान् ।
मुमोच हनुमानग्निं कालानलशिखोपमम् ॥ ९ ॥

Springing up with great impetuosity to the mansion of Prahasta (the chief minister) and scattering fire there, the powerful Hanumān, who was equal in might to the wind god, then leapt to another dwelling, belonging to Mahāpārśwa, and scattered fire, which resembled the flames of the fire of final dissolution. (8-9)

वज्रदंष्ट्रस्य च तथा पुप्लुवे स महाकपिः ।
शुकस्य च महातेजाः सारणस्य च धीमतः ॥ १० ॥

Nay, that gigantic monkey likewise bounded to the dwelling of Vajradamstra as also to that of Śuka as well as to the house of the sagacious Sāraṇa. (10)

तथा चेन्द्रजितो वेश्म ददाह हरियूथपः ।
जम्बुमालेः सुमालेश्च ददाह भवनं ततः ॥ ११ ॥

Even so, Hanumān, the leader of monkey hordes, burnt the palace of Indrajit and then the habitat of Jambumālī as well as that of Sumālī. (11)

रश्मिकेतोश्च भवनं सूर्यशत्रोस्तथैव च ।
ह्रस्वकर्णस्य दंष्ट्रस्य रोमशस्य च रक्षसः ॥ १२ ॥
युद्धोन्मत्तस्य मत्तस्य ध्वजग्रीवस्य रक्षसः ।
विद्युज्जिह्वस्य घोरस्य तथा हस्तिमुखस्य च ॥ १३ ॥

करालस्य विशालस्य शोणिताक्षस्य चैव हि ।
कुम्भकर्णस्य भवनं मकराक्षस्य चैव हि ॥ १४ ॥
नरान्तकस्य कुम्भस्य निकुम्भस्य दुरात्मनः ।
यज्ञशत्रोश्च भवनं ब्रह्मशत्रोस्तथैव च ॥ १५ ॥
वर्जयित्वा महातेजा विभीषणगृहं प्रति ।
क्रममाणः क्रमेणैव ददाह हरिपुङ्गवः ॥ १६ ॥

Nay, leaping up one after another in order of importance to the house of Rāsmiketu, and even so to that of Sūryaśatru, to those of Hṛaśwakarṇa, Damastra and the ogre Romaśa, to the dwellings of Yuddhonmatta, Matta, the ogre Dhvajagrīva, to those of Vidyujjihva, Ghora and likewise of Hastimukha, Karāla, Viśāla and even so Sonitakṣa, to the palace of Kumbhakaraṇa and also to those of Makarākṣa, of Narāntaka, Kumbha, the evil-minded Nikumbha, and Yajñaśatru and likewise of Brahmaśatru, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, set fire to them, avoiding the palace of Vibhiṣaṇa alone (who had averted his death sentence). (12—16)

तेषु तेषु महार्हेषु भवनेषु महायशाः ।
गृहेष्वृद्धिमतामृद्धिं ददाह कपिकुञ्जरः ॥ १७ ॥

Penetrating into all costly houses, the highly illustrious Hanumān, an elephant among the monkeys, burnt all the wealth in the mansions of the rich. (17)

सर्वेषां समतिक्रम्य राक्षसेन्द्रस्य वीर्यवान् ।
आससादाथ लक्ष्मीवान् रावणस्य निवेशनम् ॥ १८ ॥

Passing over the houses of all, the powerful and glorious monkey forthwith reached the palace of Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres. (18)

ततस्तस्मिन् गृहे मुख्ये नानारत्नविभूषिते ।
मेरुमन्दरसंकाशे नानामङ्गलशोभिते ॥ १९ ॥
प्रदीप्तमग्निमुत्सृज्य लाङ्गूलाग्रे प्रतिष्ठितम् ।
ननाद हनुमान् वीरो युगान्तजलदो यथा ॥ २० ॥

Scattering blazing fire on his tail in that distinguished palace, which was decked with various jewels, which resembled Mounts Meru and Mandāra in height and was enriched with various auspicious articles, the valiant Hanumān thundered like a cloud appearing at the time of universal dissolution. (19-20)

श्वसनेन च संयोगादतिवेगो महाबलः ।
कालाग्निरिव जज्वाल प्रावर्धत हुताशनः ॥ २१ ॥

Through contact with the wind, the very mighty fire (lit., the consumer of oblations) grew out of all proportion with great rapidity and blazed like the fire of universal destruction. (21)

प्रदीप्तमग्निं पवनस्तेषु वेश्मसु चारयन् ।
तानि काञ्चनजालानि मुक्तामणिमयानि च ॥ २२ ॥
भवनानि व्यशीर्यन्त रत्नवन्ति महान्ति च ।
तानि भग्नाविमानानि निपेतुर्वसुधातले ॥ २३ ॥
भवनानीव सिद्धानामम्बरात् पुण्यसंक्षये ।
संजज्ञे तुमुलः शब्दो राक्षसानां प्रधावताम् ॥ २४ ॥
स्वे स्वे गृहपरित्राणे भग्नेत्साहोज्झितश्रियाम् ।
नूनमेषोऽग्निरायातः कपिरूपेण हा इति ॥ २५ ॥

The wind began to spread the blazing fire through all those dwellings. The result was that those stately mansions made of pearls and gems, nay, provided with lattices of gold and full of precious stones, got cracked and, their storeys being shattered, they toppled to the earth like the mansions of Siddhas fallen from the heavens on the exhaustion of their merits. There ensued a tumultuous uproar among the ogres running with great speed each to save his own dwelling, their spirit broken and splendour gone. They said to one another. "Ah, here indeed is the god of fire arrived in the form of a monkey !" (22—25)

क्रन्दन्त्यः सहसा पेतुः स्तनंधयधराः स्त्रियः ।
काश्चिदग्निपरीताङ्ग्यो हर्म्येभ्यो मुक्तमूर्धजाः ॥ २६ ॥
पतन्त्योरेजिरेऽग्नेभ्यः सौदामन्य इवाम्बरात् । वज्रविद्रुमवैदूर्यमुक्तारजतसंहतान् ॥ २७ ॥
विचित्रान् भवनाद्धातून् स्यन्दमानान् ददर्श सः ।
नाग्निसृप्यति काष्ठानां तृणानां च यथा तथा ॥ २८ ॥

हनूमान् राक्षसेन्द्राणां वधे किञ्चिन्न तृप्यति ।
न हनूमद्विशस्तानां राक्षसानां वसुन्धरा ॥ २९ ॥

Nay, women carrying their sucklings fell down crying precipitately. While falling from their mansions, some women with dishevelled hair, their limbs enveloped in flames, shone like flashes of lightning falling from clouds in the heavens. Hanumān beheld strange molten metals mixed with diamonds, corals, cat's-eye gems, pearls and silver streaming from every house. Hanumān did not feel wearied in killing the ogre chiefs any more than fire is sated with consuming logs of wood and blades of grass; nor did Mother Earth (lit., that which carries riches) feel wearied in receiving in her lap, ogres killed by Hanumān. (26—29)

हनूमता वेगवता वानरेण महात्मना ।
लङ्कापुरं प्रदग्धं तद् रुद्रेण त्रिपुरं यथा ॥ ३० ॥

The aforesaid city of Lankā was burnt up by the gigantic Hanumān, who was full of impetuosity, in the same way as Tripura (a triad of cities built of gold, silver and iron, in heaven, the aerial region and the earth by the demon Maya) was burnt by Rudra, the god of destruction. (30)

ततः स लङ्कापुर पर्वताग्रे
समुत्थितो भीमपराक्रमोऽग्निः ।
प्रसार्य चूडावलयं प्रदीप्तो
हनूमता वेगवतोपसृष्टः ॥ ३१ ॥

Lighted by the impetuous Hanumān, a fire then broke out on the summit of the mountain Trikūṭa on which the city of Lankā stood—a fire which was endowed with terrible prowess, and expanding its circle of flames, flared up. (31)

युगान्तकालानलतुल्यरूपः
समारुतोऽग्निर्ववृधे दिवस्पृक् ।
विधूमरश्मिर्भवनेषु सक्तो
रक्षःशरीराज्यसमर्पितार्चिः ॥ ३२ ॥

Fanned by the wind and inflamed by ghee in the shape of the bodies of ogres, the fire with smokeless flames, which had persisted in the houses in Laṅkā shot up to the skies and appeared like the fire at the time of universal dissolution. (32)

आदित्यकोटीसदृशः सुतेजा
लङ्कां समस्तां परिवार्य तिष्ठन् ।

शब्दैरनेकैरशनिप्ररूढै-

भिन्दन्निवाण्डं प्रबभौ महाग्निः ॥ ३३ ॥

Like the fire of universal destruction, which splits up the egg-shaped universe, with various sounds, harsh like claps of thunder, the brilliant fire, which enveloped the entire Laṅkā, shone brightly like millions of suns. (33)

तत्राम्बरादग्निरतिप्रवृद्धो

रूक्षप्रभः किंशुकपुष्पचूडः ।

निर्वाणधूमाकुलराजयश्च

नीलोत्पलाभाः प्रचकाशिरेऽग्नाः ॥ ३४ ॥

Extending up to the skies, the fire, which cast a fierce splendour and shot scarlet flames resembling Kiṁśuka flowers, grew out of all proportion. And dense columns of smoke hanging in the air on all sides shone at that time like clouds bearing the colour of blue lotuses. (34)

वज्री महेन्द्रस्त्रिदशेश्वरो वा

साक्षाद् यमो वा वरुणोऽनिलो वा ।

रौद्रोऽग्निरर्को धनदश्च सोमो

न वानरोऽयं स्वयमेव कालः ॥ ३५ ॥

“He is surely the mighty Indra, the ruler of gods, who wields the thunderbolt, or Yama (the god of retribution) in person or Varuṇa (the god of water), or the wind-god, the fire seated in the third eye of the forehead of Lord Śiva, the sun-god, Kubera (the bestower of riches) or the moon-god. He is no monkey, but Kāla, the Time-Spirit himself. (35)

किं ब्रह्मणः सर्वपितामहस्य

लोकस्य धातुश्चतुराननस्य ।

इहागतो वानररूपधारी

रक्षोपसंहारकरः प्रकोपः ॥ ३६ ॥

“May it be the fury of the four-faced Brahmā, the grandfather of all, the creator of the world, arrived here in the guise of a monkey, playing the role of a destroyer of the ogres? (36)

किं वैष्णवं वा कपिरूपमेत्य

रक्षोविनाशाय परं सुतेजः ।

अचिन्त्यमव्यक्तमनन्तमेकं

स्वमायया साम्प्रतमागतं वा ॥ ३७ ॥

“Or, may it be the supreme adorable energy of Lord Viṣṇu, the Protector of the universe, unthinkable, unmanifest, infinite and peerless, arrived at this juncture for the extermination of ogres, assuming the form of a monkey by virtue of Her supernatural creative power?” (37)

इत्येवमूचुर्बहवो

विशिष्टा

रक्षोगणास्तत्र समेत्य सर्वे ।

सप्राणिसङ्घां सगृहां सवृक्षां

दग्धां पुरीं तां सहसा समीक्ष्य ॥ ३८ ॥

Thus spoke all the numerous hosts of eminent ogres, gathering together in the presence of Rāvaṇa on perceiving that city burnt all of a sudden with its multitudes of living beings inhabiting it, houses and trees. (38)

ततस्तु लङ्का सहसा प्रदग्धा

सराक्षसा साश्वरथा सनागा ।

सपक्षिसङ्घा समृगा सवृक्षा

रुरोद दीना तुमुलं सशब्दम् ॥ ३९ ॥

Consumed all of a sudden with ogres, horses, chariots and elephants, flocks of birds, beasts and trees, the deity presiding over Laṅkā for its part thereupon cried in distress with a tumultuous noise. (39)

हा तात हा पुत्रक कान्त मित्र

हा जीवितेशाङ्ग हतं सुपुण्यम् ।

रक्षोभिरेवं बहुधा बुवद्भिः

शब्दः कृतो घोरतरः सुभीमः ॥ ४० ॥

A terrific and exceedingly violent clamour was raised by the ogres crying in various ways as follows: "O my dear father, O my beloved son, O my beloved husband, O my friend, O lord of my life, O my dear one, our excessive religious merit is exhausted." (40)

हुताशनज्वालसमावृता सा
हतप्रवीरा परिवृत्तयोधा ।
हनूमतः क्रोधबलाभिभूता
बभूव शापोपहतेव लङ्का ॥ ४१ ॥

Enveloped in flames, nay, with its eminent heroes killed and its warriors thrown into disorder, humbled as it was by the vehemence of the wrath of Hanumān, the celebrated Laṅkā appeared as though visited by a curse. (41)

ससम्भ्रमं त्रस्तविषण्णराक्षसां
समुज्ज्वलज्वालहुताशनाङ्किताम् ।
ददर्श लङ्कां हनुमान् महामनाः
स्वयंभुरोषोपहतामिवावनिम् ॥ ४२ ॥

The high-minded Hanumān saw Laṅkā with its ogres dismayed and despondent and seized with a flurry, and bearing the imprint of fire bursting into blazing flames and thus resembling the earth destroyed by the wrath of the self-born Lord Śiva. (42)

भङ्क्त्वा वनं पादपरत्नसंकुलं
हत्वा तु रक्षांसि महान्ति संयुगे ।
दग्ध्वा पुरीं तां गृहरत्नमालिनीं
तस्थौ हनुमान् पवनात्मजः कपिः ॥ ४३ ॥

Having destroyed the Aśoka grove, thick with the best of trees, killed eminent ogres in combat and burnt that city containing rows of excellent buildings, Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god) stood at ease. (43)

स राक्षसांस्तान् सुबहूंश्च हत्वा
वनं च भङ्क्त्वा बहुपादपं तत् ।
विसृज्य रक्षोभवनेषु चाग्निं
जगाम रामं मनसा महात्मा ॥ ४४ ॥

Nay, having dispatched many notorious ogres and destroyed the aforesaid grove rich in numerous trees and kindled fire in the dwellings of ogres, the high-souled

Hanumān sought the presence of Śrī Rāma with his mind. (44)

ततस्तु तं वानरवीरमुख्यं
महाबलं मारुततुल्यवेगम् ।
महामतिं वायुसुतं वरिष्ठं
प्रतुष्टुवुर्देवगणाश्च सर्वे ॥ ४५ ॥

Thereupon all the hosts of gods on their part gratefully extolled the highly intelligent son of the wind-god, a prince among monkey heroes, the foremost of the mighty, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might and was equal to the wind in swiftness. (45)

देवाश्च सर्वे मुनिपुङ्गवाश्च
गन्धर्वविद्याधरपन्नगाश्च ।
भूतानि सर्वाणि महान्ति तत्र
जग्मुः परां प्रीतिमतुल्यरूपाम् ॥ ४६ ॥

All the gods as well as the foremost of ascetics, even so, Gandharvas, Vidyādhara and Nāgas—nay, all great beings present there experienced an exceeding and unequalled joy. (46)

भङ्क्त्वा वनं महातेजा हत्वा रक्षांसि संयुगे ।
दग्ध्वा लङ्कापुरीं भीमां रराज स महाकपिः ॥ ४७ ॥

Having destroyed the Aśoka grove, killed ogres in conflict and burnt the redoubtable city of Laṅkā, that eminent Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, shone brightly. (47)

गृहाग्र्यशृङ्गाग्रतले विचित्रे
प्रतिष्ठितो वानरराजसिंहः ।
प्रदीप्तलाङ्गूलकृताचिमाली
व्यराजतादित्य इवार्चिमाली ॥ ४८ ॥

Firmly seated on the marvellous top of an excellent building, Hanumān, a lion among monkey chiefs, who was surrounded by a circle of flames rising from his flaming tail, shone brightly like the sun encircled with a nimbus. (48)

लङ्कां समस्तां सम्पीड्य लाङ्गूलाग्निं महाकपिः ।
निर्वापयामास तदा समुद्रे हरिपुङ्गवः ॥ ४९ ॥

Having subjected the entire Laṅkā to excessive suffering, the mighty monkey Hanumān, a bull among monkeys, then quenched the fire of his tail in the sea. (49)

ततो देवाः सगन्धर्वाः सिद्धाश्च परमर्षयः।

दृष्ट्वा लङ्कां प्रदग्धां तां विस्मयं परमं गताः ॥ ५० ॥

Beholding the aforesaid Laṅkā reduced to ashes, the gods including Gandharvas, Siddhas and eminent Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) were filled with extreme wonder. (50)

तं दृष्ट्वा वानरश्रेष्ठं हनूमन्तं महाकपिम्।

कालाग्निरिति संचिन्त्य सर्वभूतानि तत्रसुः ॥ ५१ ॥

Seeing that mighty monkey, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, and fancying him to be the fire of universal dissolution, all created beings were amazed. (51)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे चतुःपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-four of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LV

Seeing the whole of Laṅkā reduced to ashes and presuming Sītā too to have shared its lot, Hanumān begins to reproach himself and gets overwhelmed with grief. In the meantime, he hears of her safety from the lips of Siddhas, Cāraṇas (celestial bards) and others and feels comforted

संदीप्यमानां वित्रस्तां त्रस्तरक्षोगणां पुरीम्।

अवेक्ष्य हनुमाँल्लङ्कां चिन्तयामास वानरः ॥ १ ॥

Perceiving the city of Laṅkā blazing and alarmed with its multitudes of ogres panic stricken, Hanumān became thoughtful. (1)

तस्याभूत् सुमहांस्त्रासः कुत्सा चात्मन्यजायत।

लङ्कां प्रदहता कर्म किंस्वित् कृतमिदं मया ॥ २ ॥

A grave apprehension entered his mind and there arose in him a feeling of self-reproach. He said to himself: "What an abominable act has evidently been done by me in burning Laṅkā consummately ! (2)

धन्याः खलु महात्मानो ये बुद्ध्या कोपमुत्थितम्।

निरुन्धन्ति महात्मानो दीप्तमग्निमिवाभ्रसा ॥ ३ ॥

Blessed indeed are those broad-minded great souls who in their wisdom curb the anger born within them even as they quench a blazing fire with water. (3)

क्रुद्धः पापं न कुर्यात् कः क्रुद्धो हन्याद् गुरुनपि।

क्रुद्धः परुषया वाचा नरः साधूनधिक्षिपेत् ॥ ४ ॥

What angry man would not perpetrate a sinful act? He who is angry may kill even his elders. Nay an angry man may insult even pious souls in harsh tones. (4)

वाच्यावाच्यं प्रकुपितो न विजानाति कर्हिचित्।

नाकार्यमस्ति क्रुद्धस्य नावाच्यं विद्यते क्वचित् ॥ ५ ॥

He who is enraged can never discern what is worth uttering and what ought not to be uttered. There is no iniquity anywhere which cannot be perpetrated by an angry man and no abusive language which cannot be uttered by him. (5)

यः समुत्पतितं क्रोधं क्षमयैव निरस्यति।

यथोरगस्त्वचं जीर्णां स वै पुरुष उच्यते ॥ ६ ॥

He alone is truly called a man, who drives away by virtue of sheer forbearance the anger that has sprung up in his heart even as a snake casts off its slough. (6)

धिगस्तु मां सुदुर्बुद्धिं निर्लज्जं पापकृत्तमम्।
अचिन्तयित्वा तां सीतामग्निदं स्वामिघातकम् ॥ ७ ॥

‘Woe be to me, the greatest sinner, utterly perverse and impudent, who, practised incendiarism without giving any thought to the aforesaid Sītā and in this way proved (indirectly) responsible for taking the life of my master, Śrī Rāma. (7)

यदि दग्धा त्वियं सर्वा नूनमार्यापि जानकी।
दग्धा तेन मया भर्तुर्हतं कार्यमजानता ॥ ८ ॥

‘If this whole city for its part has been burnt, the noble daughter of Janaka too has surely been burnt. By doing this the purpose of my master has unconsciously been frustrated by me. (8)

यदर्थमयमारम्भस्तत्कार्यमवसादितम् ।
मया हि दहता लङ्कां न सीता परिरक्षिता ॥ ९ ॥

‘That very cause for which this enterprise (in the shape of my journey across the sea and the destruction of Laṅkā) was undertaken has been marred in that Sītā has not been protected by me while burning Laṅkā. (9)

ईषत्कार्यमिदं कार्यं कृतमासीन्न संशयः।
तस्य क्रोधाभिभूतेन मया मूलक्षयः कृतः ॥ १० ॥

‘This feat of burning Laṅkā has been accomplished by me as an insignificant act: there is no doubt about it. Overwhelmed as I was with anger, the very root of that achievement has, however, been cut at by me. (10)

विनष्टा जानकी व्यक्तं न ह्यदग्धः प्रदृश्यते।
लङ्कायाः कश्चिदुद्देशः सर्वा भस्मीकृता पुरी ॥ ११ ॥

‘Sītā, the daughter of Janaka, has obviously perished; for no part of Laṅkā appears to have remained unburnt. The entire city lies in ashes. (11)

यदि तद्विहतं कार्यं मया प्रज्ञाविपर्ययात्।
इहैव प्राणसंन्यासो ममापि ह्यद्य रोचते ॥ १२ ॥

‘If that cause in the shape of Sītā’s recovery has been marred by me through perversity of judgment, it appears agreeable to me even to yield up my life at this very spot this very day. (12)

किमग्नौ निपताम्यद्य आहोस्विद् वडवामुखे।
शरीरमिह सत्त्वानां दद्मि सागरवासिनाम् ॥ १३ ॥

‘Shall I throw myself into the fire or into a submarine fire or offer my body to the denizens of the deep today? (13)

कथं नु जीवता शक्यो मया द्रष्टुं हरीश्वरः।
तौ वा पुरुषशार्दूलौ कार्यसर्वस्वघातिना ॥ १४ ॥

‘How can Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, or those two tigers among men, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, be faced by me while I am alive, since the purpose has been marred by me in its entirety? (14)

मया खलु तदेवेदं रोषदोषात् प्रदर्शितम्।
प्रथितं त्रिषु लोकेषु कपित्वमनवस्थितम् ॥ १५ ॥

‘Through the culpability of my anger indeed the same simian nature has been exhibited at this juncture by me, which is well-known in all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region) and has been characterized as unsteady. (15)

धिगस्तु राजसं भावमनीशमनवस्थितम्।
ईश्वरेणापि यद् रागान्मया सीता न रक्षिता ॥ १६ ॥

‘Woe be to my movements dominated by Rājas (passion or anger), which are incapable of yielding desired results and are uncertain in the matter of results, because it was due to anger (born of Rajoguṇa) that Sītā was not protected by me, even though I was capable of doing it. (16)

विनष्टायां तु सीतायां तावुभौ विनशिष्यतः।
तयोर्विनाशे सुग्रीवः सबन्धुर्विनशिष्यति ॥ १७ ॥

‘Sītā having perished, both those princes Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa too will perish. On their ceasing to exist, Sugrīva too will yield up his life with all his kinsfolk. (17)

एतदेव वचः श्रुत्वा भरतो भ्रातृवत्सलः।
धर्मात्मा सहशत्रुघ्नः कथं शक्यति जीवितुम् ॥ १८ ॥

‘Even on hearing this report how will Bharata, who is fond of his brothers and whose mind is set on virtue, be able to survive with his younger brother, Śatrughna? (18)

इक्ष्वाकुवंशे धर्मिष्ठे गते नाशमसंशयम् ।
भविष्यन्ति प्रजाः सर्वाः शोकसंतापपीडिताः ॥ १९ ॥

‘Of the most pious race of Ikṣvāku having met with extinction, all created beings will undoubtedly be tormented with grief and agony. (19)

तदहं भाग्यरहितो लुप्तधर्मार्थसंग्रहः ।
रोषदोषपरीतात्मा व्यक्तं लोकविनाशनः ॥ २० ॥

‘Having thus forfeited my stock of religious merit and earthly good, and hence devoid of good luck, my mind dominated by evil in the form of anger, I am evidently guilty of having compassed the destruction of the world.’ (20)

इति चिन्तयतस्तस्य निमित्तान्युपपेदिरे ।
पूर्वमप्युपलब्धानि साक्षात् पुनरचिन्तयत् ॥ २१ ॥

While he was pondering thus, good omens appeared to him, whose welcome results had already been directly experienced by him. He pondered again as follows : (21)

अथ वा चारुसर्वाङ्गी रक्षिता स्वेन तेजसा ।
न नशिष्यति कल्याणी नाग्निरग्नौ प्रवर्तते ॥ २२ ॥

‘Or, it is possible the lady, who is charming of all limbs, has been protected by her own glory. The blessed lady would not perish; for fire does not burn fire. (22)

नहि धर्मात्मनस्तस्य भार्याममिततेजसः ।
स्वचरित्राभिगुप्तां तां स्पष्टमुहति पावकः ॥ २३ ॥

‘Surely fire would not dare to touch the consort, protected on all sides by her own immaculate character, of that pious-minded prince Śrī Rāma, who is endowed with immeasurable energy. (23)

नूनं रामप्रभावेण वैदेह्याः सुकृतेन च ।
यन्मां दहनकर्मायं नादहद्भव्यवाहनः ॥ २४ ॥

‘Surely it was because of Śrī Rāma’s glory and the virtue of Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, that this fire (lit., the bearer of sacrificial offerings), whose natural function it is to consume whatever comes into touch with it, could not burn me. (24)

त्रयाणां भरतादीनां भ्रातृणां देवता च या ।
रामस्य च मनःकान्ता सा कथं विनशिष्यति ॥ २५ ॥

‘How could she, who is an object of adoration to the three brothers of Śrī Rāma, Bharata and others, and is beloved of Śrī Rāma’s heart, perish? (25)

यद् वा दहनकर्मायं सर्वत्र प्रभुरव्ययः ।
न मे दहति लाङ्गूलं कथमार्या प्रधक्ष्यति ॥ २६ ॥

‘Or, how should this fire, whose, natural function it is to burn whatever comes into contact with it and has power over all, yet which could not burn even my tail, consume the noble lady because of whom this miracle has happened?’ (26)

पुनश्चाचिन्तयत् तत्र हनूमान् विस्मितस्तदा ।
हिरण्यनाभस्य गिरेर्जलमध्ये प्रदर्शनम् ॥ २७ ॥

Hanumān then recalled once more with wonder on that spot the appearance in the midst of sea-water of the hill Maināka having gold in its cavities. (27)

तपसा सत्यवाक्येन अनन्यत्वाच्च भर्तारि ।
असौ विनिर्देहदग्निं न तामग्निः प्रधक्ष्यति ॥ २८ ॥

He said to himself : ‘By virtue of her asceticism, truthful speech and exclusive devotion to her husband, she can consume fire itself; fire, on the other hand, cannot consume her.’ (28)

स तथा चिन्तयंस्तत्र देव्या धर्मपरिग्रहम् ।
शुश्राव हनुमांस्तत्र चारणानां महात्मनाम् ॥ २९ ॥

While pondering as aforesaid at that time the steadfastness of Sitā, a godlike lady in the path of virtue, Hanumān heard on that spot the following words of the high-souled Cāraṇas (heavenly bards) : (29)

अहो खलु कृतं कर्म दुर्विगाहं हनूमता ।
अग्निं विसृजता तीक्ष्णं भीमं राक्षससन्नि ॥ ३० ॥

“Indeed a marvellous and difficult feat has been accomplished by Hanumān in igniting a fierce and terrible fire in the dwellings of the ogres. (30)

प्रपलायितरक्षःस्त्रीबालवृद्धसमाकुला ।
जनकोलाहलाध्माता क्रन्दन्तीवादिकन्दरैः ॥ ३१ ॥
दग्धेयं नगरी लङ्का साट्टप्राकारतोरणा ।
जानकी न च दग्धेति विस्मयोऽद्भुत एव नः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Thickly crowded with ogres, their womenfolk, children and the aged in rapid flight and filled with the noise of the people, this city of Laṅkā, which is shrieking, as it were, in the form of its denizens, has been burnt with its mountains, caverns, attics, defensive walls and archways; yet Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, has not been even touched by fire. This is an unprecedented wonder to us.” (31-32)

इति शुश्राव हनुमान् वाचं ताममृतोपमाम् ।
बभूव चास्य मनसो हर्षस्तत्कालसम्भवः ॥ ३३ ॥

Hanumān heard the aforesaid talk, which was sweet as nectar, and the joy which sprang up in his heart at that moment pervaded his soul. (33)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे पञ्चपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-five of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्पञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LVI

Hanumān sees Sītā once more and bidding adieu to her, takes a leap across the sea

ततस्तु शिंशपामूले जानकीं पर्यवस्थिताम् ।
अभिवाद्याब्रवीद् दिष्ट्या पश्यामि त्वामिहाक्षताम् ॥ १ ॥

Greeting the daughter of Janaka ensconced at the foot of the Śimsāpā tree, Hanumān for his part said to her, “Luckily I find you unscathed at this moment.” (1)

ततस्तं प्रस्थितं सीता वीक्षमाणा पुनः पुनः ।
भर्तुः स्नेहान्विता वाक्यं हनूमन्तमभाषत ॥ २ ॥

स निमित्तैश्च दृष्टार्थैः कारणैश्च महागुणैः ।
ऋषिवाक्यैश्च हनुमानभवत् प्रीतमानसः ॥ ३४ ॥

On account of good omens whose welcome results had been perceived by him on many an occasion in the past; nay, for very potent reasons such as the glory of Śrī Rāma and Sītā’s exclusive devotion to her husband, which led him to conclude that Sītā was alive as also on the strength of the words of the Cāraṇas, who could see everything, the aforesaid Hanumān felt delighted in mind. (34)

ततः कपिः प्राप्तमनोरथार्थ-स्तामक्षतां राजसुतां विदित्वा ।
प्रत्यक्षतस्तां पुनरेव दृष्ट्वा
प्रतिप्रयाणाय मतिं चकार ॥ ३५ ॥

Coming to know of that princess having escaped unscathed, and then seeing her once more with his own eyes, Hanumān, who had attained his end and acquired the speed of thought, made up his mind to return to the presence of Śrī Rāma. (35)

Gazing again and again on Hanumān, who had made ready to depart, Sītā, who was full of affection for her lord, spoke as follows to him: (2)

यदि त्वं मन्यसे तात वसैकाहमिहानघ ।
क्वचित् सुसंवृते देशे विश्रान्तः श्वो गमिष्यसि ॥ ३ ॥

“If at all you deem fit, O dear son, halt for a day here, O sinless one ! Having rested in some fully covered place, you may leave on the morrow. (3)

मम चैवाल्पभाग्यायाः सांनिध्यात् तव वानर।
शोकस्यास्याप्रमेयस्य मुहूर्तं स्यादपि क्षयः ॥ ४ ॥

“Besides, due to your proximity, O Hanumān, there will be an end of my grief, which cannot be measured, unfortunate as I am, at least for a while. (4)

गते हि हरिशार्दूल पुनः सम्प्राप्तये त्वयि।
प्राणेष्वापि न विश्वासो मम वानरपुङ्गव ॥ ५ ॥

“For, if once you are gone, O tiger among monkeys, there is uncertainty of your return to this place, and there is no surety of my survival either, O bull among monkeys! (5)

अदर्शनं च ते वीर भूयो मां दारयिष्यति।
दुःखाद् दुःखतरं प्राप्तां दुर्मनःशोककर्षिताम् ॥ ६ ॥

“Nay, your disappearance from my presence, O hero, will further torment me, fallen that I am out of frying-pan into the fire and emaciated through sadness and grief. (6)

अयं च वीर संदेहस्तिष्ठतीव ममाग्रतः।
सुमहत्सु सहायेषु हर्यृक्षेषु महाबलः ॥ ७ ॥
कथं नु खलु दुष्पारं संतरिष्यति सागरम्।
तानि हर्यृक्षसैन्यानि तौ वा नरवरात्मजौ ॥ ८ ॥

“Nay, this doubt ever stands before me, as it were, about your very mighty associate monkeys and bears, O hero, as to how on earth Sugrīva (who is endowed with extraordinary might) or those hordes of monkeys and bears or those two princes will actually be able to cross over the sea, which is so difficult to accomplish. (7-8)

त्रयाणामेव भूतानां सागरस्यापि लङ्घने।
शक्तिः स्याद् वैनतेयस्य तव वा मारुतस्य वा ॥ ९ ॥

“The capacity to cross the sea exists in three created beings only, viz., Garuḍa (son of Vinatā), the wind-god and yourself. (9)

तदत्र कार्यनिर्बन्धे समुत्पन्ने दुरासदे।
किं पश्यसि समाधानं त्वं हि कार्यविशारदः ॥ १० ॥

“When this obstacle, which is so difficult to manoeuvre, in the way of accomplishing the task has duly come up in hand, what means do you perceive for the execution of this work, since you are skilled in action? (10)

काममस्य त्वमेवैकः कार्यस्य परिसाधने।
पर्याप्तः परवीरघ्न यशस्यस्ते फलोदयः ॥ ११ ॥

“Although you are yourself equal to the accomplishment of this task of rescuing me single-handed, O destroyer of hostile warriors, the attainment of success will redound to your glory rather than to that of Śrī Rāma. (11)

बलैस्तु संकुलां कृत्वा लङ्कां परबलार्दनः।
मां नयेद् यदि काकुत्स्थस्तत् तस्य सदृशं भवेत् ॥ १२ ॥

“If, having overrun Laṅkā with his forces, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, the scourge of hostile forces, for his part, takes me back from Laṅkā, that alone would be worthy of him. (12)

तद् यथा तस्य विक्रान्तमनुरूपं महात्मनः।
भवत्याहवशूरस्य तथा त्वमुपपादय ॥ १३ ॥

“Therefore, act you in such a way that the exalted soul, valiant in combat, may exhibit prowess worthy of him.” (13)

तदर्थोपहितं वाक्यं प्रश्रितं हेतुसंहितम्।
निशम्य हनुमान् वीरो वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ १४ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid speech of Sītā, which was full of significance, polite and logical, the heroic Hanumān made the following final reply : (14)

देवि हर्यृक्षसैन्यानामीश्वरः प्लवतां वरः।
सुग्रीवः सत्त्वसम्पन्नस्त्वार्थे कृतनिश्चयः ॥ १५ ॥

“The ruler of the monkey and bear hordes, Sugrīva, the foremost of monkeys, who is richly endowed with energy, is determined to liberate you, O godlike lady ! (15)

स वानरसहस्राणां कोटीभिरभिसंवृतः।
क्षिप्रमेष्यति वैदेहि सुग्रीवः प्लवगाधिपः ॥ १६ ॥

“Surrounded by crores and crores of monkeys, O princess of the Videha territory, the said Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, will make his appearance soon.

(16)

तौ च वीरौ नरवरौ सहितौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

आगम्य नगरीं लङ्कां सायकैर्विधमिष्यतः ॥ १७ ॥

“Nay, arriving together, those two heroic jewels among men will destroy Laṅkā with their shafts.

(17)

सगणं राक्षसं हत्वा नचिराद् रघुनन्दनः ।

त्वामादाय वरारोहे स्वां पुरीं प्रति यास्यति ॥ १८ ॥

“Having made short work of the ogre, Rāvaṇa, with his hordes, Śrī Rāma, the delight of the Raghus, will return before long to his own city, Ayodhyā, taking you with him, O lady of excellent limbs !

(18)

समाश्वसिहि भद्रं ते भव त्वं कालकाङ्क्षिणी ।

क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि रामेण निहतं रावणं रणे ॥ १९ ॥

“Be fully restored to confidence and bide your time. May good betide you ! You shall soon be able to see Rāvaṇa killed in combat by Śrī Rāma.

(19)

निहते राक्षसेन्द्रे च सपुत्रामात्यबान्धवे ।

त्वं समेष्यसि रामेण शशाङ्केनेव रोहिणी ॥ २० ॥

“When Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, is slain along with his sons, ministers and kinsfolk, you shall be united with Śrī Rāma as Rohiṇī (a consort of the moon-god presiding over a constellation of the same name) is with the moon-god.

(20)

क्षिप्रमेष्यति काकुत्स्थो हर्यृक्षप्रवरैर्युतः ।

यस्ते युधि विजित्यारीज्जोकं व्यपनयिष्यति ॥ २१ ॥

“Accompanied by eminent leaders of monkeys and bears, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha)—who, having fully conquered his enemies in combat, will thoroughly dispel your grief—will make his appearance soon.”

(21)

एवमाश्वास्य वैदेहीं हनुमान् मारुतात्मजः ।

गमनाय मतिं कृत्वा वैदेहीमभ्यवादयत् ॥ २२ ॥

Having comforted Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, as above, and making up his mind to depart, Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god) greeted Sitā.

(22)

राक्षसान् प्रवरान् हत्वा नाम विश्राव्य चात्मनः ।

समाश्वस्य च वैदेहीं दर्शयित्वा परं बलम् ॥ २३ ॥

नगरीमाकुलां कृत्वा वञ्चयित्वा च रावणम् ।

दर्शयित्वा बलं घोरं वैदेहीमभिवाद्य च ॥ २४ ॥

प्रतिगन्तुं मनश्चक्रे पुनर्मध्येन सागरम् ।

ततः स कपिशार्दूलः स्वामिसंदर्शनोत्सुकः ॥ २५ ॥

आरुरोह गिरिश्रेष्ठमरिष्टमरिमर्दनः ।

तुङ्गपद्मकजुष्टाभिर्नीलाभिर्वनराजिभिः ॥ २६ ॥

सोत्तरीयमिवाम्भोदैः शृङ्गान्तरविलम्बिभिः ।

बोध्यमानमिव प्रीत्या दिवाकरकरैः शुभैः ॥ २७ ॥

उन्मिषन्तमिवोद्धूतैर्लोचनैरिव धातुभिः ।

तोयौघनिःस्वनैर्मन्त्रैः प्राधीतमिव पर्वतम् ॥ २८ ॥

प्रगीतमिव विस्पष्टं नानाप्रस्त्रवणस्वनैः ।

देवदारुभिरुद्धूतैरूर्ध्वबाहुमिव स्थितम् ॥ २९ ॥

प्रपातजलनिर्घोषैः प्राकुष्टमिव सर्वतः ।

वेपमानमिव श्यामैः कम्पमानैः शरद्वनैः ॥ ३० ॥

वेणुभिर्मारुतोदधूतैः कूजन्तमिव कीचकैः ।

निःश्वसन्तमिवामर्षाद् घोरैराशीविषोत्तमैः ॥ ३१ ॥

नीहारकृतगम्भीरैर्ध्यायन्तमिव गह्वरैः ।

मेघपादनिभैः पादैः प्रक्रान्तमिव सर्वतः ॥ ३२ ॥

जृम्भमाणमिवाकाशे शिखरैरभ्रमालिभिः ।

कूटैश्च बहुधा कीर्णं शोभितं बहुकन्दरैः ॥ ३३ ॥

सालतालैश्च कर्णैश्च वंशैश्च बहुभिवृतम् ।

लतावितानैर्विततैः पुष्पवद्भिरलंकृतम् ॥ ३४ ॥

नानामृगगणैः कीर्णं धातुनिष्यन्दभूषितम् ।

बहुप्रस्त्रवणोपेतं शिलासंचयसंकटम् ॥ ३५ ॥

महर्षियक्षगन्धर्वकिंनरोरगसेवितम् ।

लतापादपसम्बाधं सिंहादिष्ठितकन्दरम् ॥ ३६ ॥

व्याघ्रादिभिः समाकीर्णं स्वादुमूलफलद्रुमम् ।

आरुरोहानिलसुतः पर्वतं प्लवगोत्तमः ॥ ३७ ॥

रामदर्शनशीघ्रेण प्रहर्षेणाभिचोदितः ।

तेन पादतलक्रान्ता रम्येषु गिरिसानुषु ॥ ३८ ॥

सघोषाः समशीर्यन्त शिलाश्चूर्णीकृतास्ततः ।

स तमारुह्य शैलेन्द्रं व्यवर्धत महाकपिः ॥ ३९ ॥

दक्षिणादुत्तरं पारं प्रार्थयँल्लवणाभ्सः ।

अधिरुह्य ततो वीरः पर्वतं पवनात्मजः ॥ ४० ॥

ददर्श सागरं भीमं भीमोरगनिषेवितम्।
 स मारुत इवाकाशं मारुतस्यात्मसम्भवः ॥ ४१ ॥
 प्रपेदे हरिशार्दूलो दक्षिणादुत्तरां दिशम्।
 स तदा पीडितस्तेन कपिना पर्वतोत्तमः ॥ ४२ ॥
 ररास विविधैर्भूतैः प्राविशद् वसुधातलम्।
 कम्पमानैश्च शिखरैः पतद्भिरपि च द्रुमैः ॥ ४३ ॥

Having killed distinguished ogres and thus exhibiting his surpassing strength, Hanumān created a stir in Laṅkā, befooled Rāvaṇa and displayed his terrific might and thus made his name widely known. Having fully consoled and greeted Sītā, Hanumān made up his mind once more to return across the sea. Then that tiger among the monkeys, the destroyer of his foes, eager as he was to see his master, Śrī Rāma, ascended the Arista mountain, the foremost of mountains, which was clothed, as it were, with dark groves, embellished with tall Padmaka trees, and was covered with clouds hanging between its summits as with an upper garment; which was being awakened, as it were, with love by the bright rays of the sun, resembling so many hands; which was staring as it were with so many eyes in the form of metals scattered here and there; which appeared to have started reciting the Vedas on every side in the form of the deep sound of running streams; which had commenced singing, as it were, at a high pitch very distinctly in the form of the murmuring of various cascades; which stood, as it were, with uplifted arms in the form of towering deodars; which had started crying loudly, as it were, on all sides in the form of the sound of its waterfalls and seemed to quake in the form of its waving dark clusters of autumnal reeds; which was piping, as it were, in the form of hollow bamboos tossed about by the wind and whistling, and was hissing as it were, in indignation in the form of its terrible and most poisonous serpents; which sat absorbed in meditation, as it were, in the form of its caves obscured by mist and had set about moving on all sides, as it were, with its offshoots looking like so many rising clouds, which with its peaks enveloped in clouds seemed to stretch its limbs in the air; which bristled with a number of peaks and was adorned with numerous caves; and which was hemmed in with many sal palmyra, Karṇa and bamboo trees and was graced with extensive canopies of creepers laden with blossom; which was crowded with herds of deer of every species and decked with streams of molten metals; which was rich in numerous cascades and thick with accumulations of rocks; which was frequented by eminent Ṛsis, yakṣas, Gandharvas, Kinnaras and Nāgas, was impenetrable on account of creepers and trees and whose caves were occupied by lions; which was infested with tigers and other carnivorous beasts and abounded in luscious roots and trees yielding delicious fruits.

Impelled by excessive joy on having successfully completed his mission and impatience to see Śrī Rāma, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, the foremost of monkeys, thus ascended the aforesaid mountain. Pressed under his soles and crushed by his weight, rocks on the lovely peaks of the mountain now fell to pieces with a noise. Ascending that lord of mountains and seeking to bound to the northern shore from the southern shore of the brackish sea, that mighty Hanumān grew in size. Having ascended the mountain, the heroic Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, then beheld the formidable sea infested with dreadful serpents. Like the wind rushing through airspace, Hanumān, a veritable tiger among the monkeys, set out from the southern to the northern quarter. Pressed at that moment by Hanumān, Arista, the foremost of mountains, shrieked under his weight and sank into the bowels of the earth with its various living beings and shaking summits amid toppling trees. (23—43)

तस्योरुवेगोन्मथिताः पादपाः पुष्पशालिनः ।
निपेतुर्भूतले भग्नाः शक्रायुधहता इव ॥ ४४ ॥

Violently shaken and broken by the impetus of his thighs, trees charming with blossom fell to the ground as though struck by Indra's thunderbolt. (44)

कन्दरोदरसंस्थानां पीडितानां महौजसाम् ।
सिंहानां निनदो भीमो नभो भिन्दन् हि शुश्रुवे ॥ ४५ ॥

The terrible roar of lions endowed with great vigour, dwelling in the interior of caves and subjected to pressure was heard rending the skies, as it were. (45)

व्रस्तव्याविद्धवसना व्याकुलीकृतभूषणाः ।
विद्याधर्यः समुत्पेतुः सहसा धरणीधरात् ॥ ४६ ॥

Vidyādhara women rose all of a sudden from the mountain, their raiment in disorder through fear and ornaments fallen off. (46)

अतिप्रमाणा बलिनो दीप्तजिह्वा महाविषाः ।
निपीडितशिरोग्रीवा व्यवेष्टन्त महाहयः ॥ ४७ ॥

Large mighty snakes, immense in size and highly poisonous, with flaming tongues, their hoods and necks severely pressed,
lay coiled. (47)

किंनरोरगगन्धर्वयक्षविद्याधरास्तथा ।
पीडितं तं नगवरं त्यक्त्वा गगनमास्थिताः ॥ ४८ ॥

Deserting that jewel among mountains, subjected to extraordinary pressure, Kinnaras, Nāgas, Gandharvas, Yakṣas and Vidyādharas took their stand in the airspace. (48)

स च भूमिधरः श्रीमान् बलिना तेन पीडितः ।
सर्वक्षशिखरोदग्रः प्रविवेश रसातलम् ॥ ४९ ॥

Nay, pressed by the mighty Hanumān, that glorious mountain, conspicuous with its peaks crowned with trees, sank into the bowels of the earth. (49)

दशयोजनविस्तारस्त्रिंशद्योजनमुच्छ्रितः ।
धरण्यां समतां यातः स बभूव धराधरः ॥ ५० ॥

Ten Yojanas (or eighty miles) in extent and thirty Yojanas (or two hundred and forty miles) in height, the aforesaid mountain got level with the earth. (50)

स लिलङ्घयिषुर्भीमं सलीलं लवणार्णवम् ।
कल्लोलास्फालवेलान्तमुत्पपात नभो हरिः ॥ ५१ ॥

Eager to leap sportingly across the formidable salty sea, whose shores were being lashed by its waves, the said monkey,
Hanumān, sprang in the airspace. (51)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे
षट्पञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-six of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LVII

Having leapt from the coast of Laṅkā and touching the Maināka mountain, which he came across in the way, nay, advancing further, Hanumān roars at the top of his voice at the sight of the Mahendra mountain in order to bring joy to the monkeys awaiting his return there. Jāmbavān tells the monkeys, who got up impetuously on hearing the roar, that Hanumān has returned successful from his expedition as was evident from his jubilant roar. Having greeted Jāmbavān and others on alighting on the summit of the Mahendra mountain, Hanumān narrates to them in a nutshell the story of his discovery of Sītā. Applauding Hanumān, Prince Aṅgada, who was eager to hear the story, sits down to do so on an extensive flat rock alongwith all

आप्लुत्य च महावेगः पक्षवानिव पर्वतः ।
 भुजङ्गयक्षगन्धर्वप्रबुद्धकमलोत्पलम् ॥ १ ॥
 स चन्द्रकुमुदं रम्यं सार्ककारण्डवं शुभम् ।
 तिष्यश्रवणकादम्बमभ्रशैवलशाद्वलम् ॥ २ ॥
 पुनर्वसुमहामीनं लोहिताङ्गमहाग्रहम् ।
 ऐरावतमहाद्वीपं स्वातीहंसविलासितम् ॥ ३ ॥
 वातसंघातजालोर्मिचन्द्रांशुशिशिराम्बुमत् ।
 हनूमानपरिश्रान्तः पुप्लुवे गगनार्णवम् ॥ ४ ॥

Bounding with great impetuosity, Hanumān, who looked like a winged mountain, and never felt exhausted, sailed across the firmament, which presented the appearance of a delightful and charming ocean graced with a swan in the form of the constellation Swāti, with the Nāgas, Yakṣas and Gandharvas gathered together there for its full-blown lotuses and water-lilies, the moon for a white water-lily, the sun for a water-fowl, the constellations known by the names of Puṣya and Śrāvaṇa for swans, the clouds for its duck-weeds and grassy spots adjoining the shores, the twin constellations, the Punarvasus, for its large fish, the planet Mars for a large alligator, Airāvata (the elephant carrying Indra on its back) for a large island, the gales for its billows and the moonbeams for its cool water. (1—4)

ग्रसमान इवाकाशं ताराधिपमिवोल्लिखन् ।
 हरन्निव सनक्षत्रं गगनं सार्कमण्डलम् ॥ ५ ॥
 अपारमपरिश्रान्तश्चाम्बुधिं समगाहत ।
 हनूमान् मेघजालानि विकर्षन्निव गच्छति ॥ ६ ॥

As though swallowing up the space, scratching the moon (the lord of stars), seizing the heavens alongwith their lunar mansions and the solar orb and drawing the masses of clouds apart, Hanumān unweariedly sailed over the boundless sea. (5-6)

पाण्डुरारुणवर्णानि नीलमाञ्जिष्ठकानि च ।
 हरितारुणवर्णानि महाभ्राणि चकाशिरे ॥ ७ ॥

Huge clouds, white, roseate, blue, madder like, green and dark in colour made their appearance in the sky. (7)

प्रविशन्नभ्रजालानि निष्क्रमंश्च पुनः पुनः ।
 प्रकाशश्चाप्रकाशश्च चन्द्रमा इव दृश्यते ॥ ८ ॥

Penetrating deep into the masses of clouds and emerging from them again and again, Hanumān looked like the moon becoming invisible and visible again. (8)

विविधाभ्रघनापन्नगोचरो धवलाम्बरः ।
 दृश्यादृश्यतनुर्वीरस्तथा चन्द्रायतेऽम्बरे ॥ ९ ॥

Having found his way into the various masses of clouds and emerging again, his person accordingly becoming visible and invisible, the hero Hanumān, who was clad in white, thereby shone like the moon in the sky. (9)

तार्क्ष्यायमाणो गगने स बभौ वायुनन्दनः ।
दारयन् मेघवृन्दानि निष्पतंश्च पुनः पुनः ॥ १० ॥

Emerging again and again tearing asunder the masses of clouds, that delight of the wind-god looked like Garuḍa in the sky. (10)

नदन् नादेन महता मेघस्वनमहास्वनः ।
प्रवरान् राक्षसान् हत्वा नाम विश्राव्य चात्मनः ॥ ११ ॥
आकुलां नगरीं कृत्वा व्यथयित्वा च रावणम् ।
अर्दयित्वा महावीरान् वैदेहीमभिवाद्य च ॥ १२ ॥
आजगाम महातेजाः पुनर्मध्येन सागरम् ।
पर्वतेन्द्रं सुनाभं च समुपस्पृश्य वीर्यवान् ॥ १३ ॥
ज्यामुक्त इव नाराचो महावेगोऽभ्युपागमत् ।
स किञ्चिदारात् सम्प्राप्तः समालोक्य महागिरिम् ॥ १४ ॥
महेन्द्रं मेघसंकाशं ननाद स महाकपिः ।
स पूरयामास कपिर्दिशो दश समन्ततः ॥ १५ ॥
नदन् नादेन महता मेघस्वनमहास्वनः ।

स तं देशमनुप्राप्तः सुहृद्दर्शनलालसः ॥ १६ ॥
ननाद सुमहानादं लाङ्गूलं चाप्यकम्पयत् ।
तस्य नानद्यमानस्य सुपर्णाचरिते पथि ॥ १७ ॥
फलतीवास्य घोषेण गगनं सार्कमण्डलम् ।
ये तु तत्रोत्तरे कूले समुद्रस्य महाबलाः ॥ १८ ॥
पूर्वं संविष्टिताः शूरा वायुपुत्रदिदृक्षवः ।
महतो वायुनुन्नस्य तोयदस्येव निःस्वनम् । शुश्रुवुस्ते तदा घोषमूरुवेगं हनूमतः ॥ १९ ॥

Having dispatched the eminent ogres and thereby made his name widely known, created a stir in the city of Laṅkā and caused agony to Rāvaṇa, killed eminent heroes among the ogres and greeted Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, Hanumān endowed with extraordinary energy, whose roar resembled a peal of thunder, once more reached the middle of the sea, thundering with a great roar. Nay, having duly touched the Sunābha (Maināka) mountain, the lord of mountains, the powerful Hanumān, who was full of great impetuosity, sped on like an arrow discharged from a bowstring. Having arrived a bit near, and observing Mahendra, the great mountain, that mighty monkey thundered like a cloud. Emitting a roar, the aforesaid monkey whose loud cry resembled the rumbling of a cloud, filled all the ten directions completely with his roar. Arrived in that region where his companions were waiting for him, Hanumān, who was panting to see his friends, gave out a very loud cry and waved his tail. The firmament with the solar orb began to crack, as it were, due to his roar even as he repeatedly roared on the path followed by Garuḍa endowed with beautiful wings. Those heroes, endowed with extraordinary might, who stood already on the aforesaid northern shore of the sea, eager to see Hanumān, heard at that time the sound produced by the sweeping motion of Hanumān's thighs, which resembled the rumbling of a huge cloud propelled by the wind. (11—19)

ते दीनमनसः सर्वे शुश्रुवुः काननौकसः ।
वानरेन्द्रस्य निर्घोषं पर्जन्यनिनदोपमम् ॥ २० ॥

All those monkeys, who were feeling distressed in mind due to anxiety on the score of Hanumān, heard the thunder-like roar of Hanumān. (20)

निशम्य नदतो नादं वानरास्ते समन्ततः ।
बभूवुरुत्सुकाः सर्वे सुहृद्दर्शनकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ २१ ॥

Hearing the roar of Hanumān, who was emitting a loud cry, all the aforesaid monkeys on all sides became full of longing, eager as they were to see their comrade. (21)

जाम्बवान् स हरिश्रेष्ठः प्रीतिसंहृष्टमानसः ।
उपामन्त्र्य हरीन् सर्वानिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २२ ॥

Addressing all the monkeys present there, Jāmbavān, the foremost of monkeys and bears, who felt enraptured at heart with joy, spoke as follows : (22)

सर्वथा कृतकार्योऽसौ हनूमान् नात्र संशयः ।

न ह्यस्याकृतकार्यस्य नाद एवंविधो भवेत् ॥ २३ ॥

“The yonder Hanumān has been wholly successful, there is no doubt about it; for had he been unsuccessful, his roar would not have been of this type.” (23)

तस्य बाहूरुवेगं च निनादं च महात्मनः ।

निशम्य हरयो हृष्टाः समुत्पेतुर्यतस्ततः ॥ २४ ॥

Rejoiced to hear the sound of the dashing movement of the arms and thighs, as well as the roar of that exalted soul, the monkeys leapt up here and there. (24)

ते नगाग्रान्नगाग्राणि शिखराच्छिखराणि च ।

प्रहृष्टाः समपद्यन्त हनूमन्तं दिदृक्षुवः ॥ २५ ॥

Feeling overjoyed, they sprang from tree-top to tree-top and from peak to peak, eager as they were to behold Hanumān. (25)

ते प्रीताः पादपाग्रेषु गृह्य शाखामवस्थिताः ।

वासांसि च प्रकाशानि समाविध्यन्त वानराः ॥ २६ ॥

Standing on tree-tops seizing the boughs (lest they should topple down while gazing upwards), they joyously waved their splendid raiment. (26)

गिरिगह्वरसंलीनो यथा गर्जति मारुतः ।

एवं जगर्ज बलवान् हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ॥ २७ ॥

The mighty Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, roared even as the wind pent up in a mountain cavern would. (27)

तमभ्रघनसंकाशमापतन्तं महाकपिम् ।

दृष्ट्वा ते वानराः सर्वे तस्थुः प्राञ्जलयस्तदा ॥ २८ ॥

Seeing that huge monkey rushing like a mass of clouds at that moment all the aforesaid monkeys stood with joined palms. (28)

ततस्तु वेगवान् वीरो गिरेर्गिरिनिभः कपिः ।

निपपात गिरेस्तस्य शिखरे पादपाकुले ॥ २९ ॥

Having leapt from the Arista mountain in Laṅkā, the heroic Hanumān, for his part, who was full of impetuosity and looked like a mountain himself, descended on the top of that mountain, Mahendra, thick with trees. (29)

हर्षेणापूर्यमाणोऽसौ रम्ये पर्वतनिर्झरे ।

छिन्नपक्ष इवाकाशात् पपात धरणीधरः ॥ ३० ॥

Overflowing with joy he alighted on the brink of a lovely fountain, like a mountain whose pinions have been clipped descending from the heavens. (30)

ततस्ते प्रीतमनसः सर्वे वानरपुङ्गवाः ।

हनूमन्तं महात्मानं परिवार्योपतस्थिरे ॥ ३१ ॥

Delighted at heart, all those jewels among the monkeys thereupon stood encircling the high-souled Hanumān. (31)

परिवार्य च ते सर्वे परां प्रीतिमुपागताः ।

प्रहृष्टवदनाः सर्वे तमागतमुपागमन् ॥ ३२ ॥

Gathering round him they all derived supreme joy. Nay, with an exceedingly cheerful countenance they all approached Hanumān, who had just arrived. (32)

उपायनानि चादाय मूलानि च फलानि च ।

प्रत्यर्चयन् हरिश्रेष्ठं हरयो मारुतात्मजम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Taking presents in the form of roots and fruits, the monkeys honoured Hanumān, the foremost among monkeys. (33)

विनेदुर्मुदिताः केचित् केचित् किलकिलां तथा ।

हृष्टाः पादपशाखाश्च आनियुर्वानरर्षभाः ॥ ३४ ॥

Some roared in sheer delight, others likewise raised shouts of felicity; full of joy, other jewels among the monkeys brought boughs of trees for Hanumān to sit on. (34)

हनूमांस्तु गुरुन् वृद्धाञ्जाम्बवत्प्रमुखांस्तदा ।

कुमारमङ्गदं चैव सोऽवन्दत महाकपिः ॥ ३५ ॥

That great monkey, Hanumān, for his part saluted at that moment his elders as well as the aged, the foremost of whom was Jāmbavān, as also Prince Aṅgada. (35)

स ताभ्यां पूजितः पूज्यः कपिभिश्च प्रसादितः ।

दृष्ट्वा देवीति विक्रान्तः संक्षेपेण न्यवेदयत् ॥ ३६ ॥

Honoured by the two, viz., Jāmbavān and Aṅgada, and propitiated by the other monkeys, the valiant Hanumān, who merited such honourable welcome, submitted in brief that the godlike lady had been seen by him. (36)

निषसाद च हस्तेन गृहीत्वा वालिनः सुतम् ।
रमणीये वनोद्देशे महेन्द्रस्य गिरेस्तदा ॥ ३७ ॥

Nay, taking Aṅgada (Vāli's son) by the hand, he then sat down in a lovely part of the woodland on the Mahendra mountain. (37)

हनूमानब्रवीत् पृष्टस्तदा तान् वानरर्षभान् ।
अशोकवनिकासंस्था दृष्टा सा जनकात्मजा ॥ ३८ ॥
रक्ष्यमाणा सुघोराभी राक्षसीभिरनिन्दिता ।
एकवेणीधरा बाला रामदर्शनलालसा ॥ ३९ ॥
उपवासपरिश्रान्ता मलिना जटिला कृशा ।
ततो दृष्टेति वचनं महार्थममृतोपमम् ॥ ४० ॥
निशम्य मारुतेः सर्वे मुदिता वानराभवन् ।
क्ष्वेडन्त्यन्ये नदन्त्यन्ये गर्जन्त्यन्ये महाबलाः ॥ ४१ ॥
चक्रुः किलकिलामन्ये प्रतिगर्जन्ति चापरे ।
केचिदुच्छ्रितलाङ्गूलाः प्रहृष्टाः कपिकुञ्जराः ॥ ४२ ॥
आयताञ्चितदीर्घाणि लाङ्गूलानि प्रविव्यधुः ।
अपरे तु हनूमन्तं श्रीमन्तं वानरोत्तमम् ॥ ४३ ॥
आप्लुत्य गिरिशृङ्गेषु संस्पृशन्ति स्म हर्षिताः ।
उक्तवाक्यं हनूमन्तमङ्गदस्तु तदाब्रवीत् ॥ ४४ ॥
सर्वेषां हरिवीराणां मध्ये वाचमनुत्तमाम् ।
सत्त्वे वीर्ये न ते कश्चित् समो वानर विद्यते ॥ ४५ ॥
यदवप्लुत्य विस्तीर्णं सागरं पुनरागतः ।
जीवितस्य प्रदाता नस्त्वमेको वानरोत्तम ॥ ४६ ॥

Enquired by them, Hanumān then told those jewels among the monkeys that Sitā, Janaka's daughter, had been seen by him dwelling in the Aśoka grove; that the young lady, who was beyond reproach, was being guarded by exceedingly dreadful ogresses, wore a single plait of hair as a mark of desolation and sighed for Śrī Rāma's sight, and that she had been thoroughly worn out through fasting, wore matted locks, and was emaciated and stained with dust. All the monkeys thereupon felt rejoiced to hear the nectar-like report of Hanumān to the effect that Sitā had been seen by him, which was full of great significance. Some roared like lions, others raised jubilanteries, while still other monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary might, bellowed like bulls. Others again raised shouts expressive of joy, while yet others roared in return. With their tails lifted up some elephant-like monkeys, who felt overjoyed, waved their thick long curled tails. Bounding from the peaks of the mountain, full of joy, others for their part embraced the glorious Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys. In the midst of all monkey heroes, Aṅgada for his part then paid the following most excellent compliment to Hanumān, who had spoken as above: "No one stands equal to you, O Hanumān, in courage or valour, since having leapt across the extensive sea, you have come back. You are the sole life-giver to us, O jewel among the monkeys ! (38—46)

त्वत्प्रसादात् समेष्यामः सिद्धार्था राघवेण ह ।
अहो स्वामिनि ते भक्तिरहो वीर्यमहो धृतिः ॥ ४७ ॥

"Through your grace alone shall we be united with Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, our purpose in the shape of Sitā's discovery having been accomplished. Wonderful is your devotion to your master, amazing is your valour and marvellous your firmness. (47)

दिष्ट्या दृष्टा त्वया देवी रामपत्नी यशस्विनी ।
दिष्ट्या त्यक्ष्यति काकुत्स्थः शोकं सीतावियोगजम् ॥ ४८ ॥

"Luckily has the godlike and illustrious consort of Śrī Rāma been seen by you and luckily will Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, shed his grief born of separation from Sitā." (48)

ततोऽङ्गदं हनूमन्तं जाम्बवन्तं च वानराः ।
परिवार्य प्रमुदिता भेजिरे विपुलाः शिलाः ॥ ४९ ॥

Surrounding Aṅgada, Hanumān and Jāmbavān, and full of great joy, the monkeys, thereupon betook themselves to extensive rocks. (49)

उपविष्टा गिरेस्तस्य शिलासु विपुलासु ते।
 श्रोतुकामाः समुद्रस्य लङ्घनं वानरोत्तमाः ॥ ५० ॥
 दर्शनं चापि लङ्कायाः सीताया रावणस्य च।
 तस्थुः प्राञ्जलयः सर्वे हनूमद्वदनोन्मुखाः ॥ ५१ ॥

Seated on the extensive rocks of that mountain, eager as they were to hear how Hanumān was able to leap across the sea and see Laṅkā, Sītā and Rāvaṇa, all those jewels among the monkeys waited with joined palms, their faces turned towards Hanumān. (50-51)

तस्थौ तत्राङ्गदः श्रीमान् वानरैर्बहुभिर्वृतः।
 उपास्यमानो विबुधैर्दिवि देवपतिर्यथा ॥ ५२ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे सप्तपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-seven of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LVIII

Enquired by Jāmbavān, seated alongwith the monkey hordes, Hanumān narrates in extenso how he saw Mount Maināka in the course of his journey to Laṅkā, reached Laṅkā, beheld Janaka's daughter and returned to Mount Mahendra

ततस्तस्य गिरेः शृङ्गे महेन्द्रस्य महाबलाः।
 हनुमत्प्रमुखाः प्रीतिं हरयो जग्मुर्तुत्तमाम् ॥ १ ॥

Having met together on the summit of the aforesaid Mahendra mountain, the monkeys headed by Hanumān, who were endowed with extraordinary might, presently experienced the highest joy. (1)

प्रीतिमत्सूपविष्टेषु वानरेषु महात्मसु।
 तं ततः प्रतिसंहृष्टः प्रीतियुक्तं महाकपिम् ॥ २ ॥
 जाम्बवान् कार्यवृत्तान्तमपृच्छदनिलात्मजम्।
 कथं दृष्ट्वा त्वया देवी कथं वा तत्र वर्तते ॥ ३ ॥

The high-souled monkeys being joyfully and comfortably seated, Jāmbavān, who felt highly rejoiced, now enquired of that great monkey, Hanumān, who was also

The glorious Aṅgada sat there encircled by numerous monkeys even like Indra, the lord of gods, waited upon by gods in heaven. (52)

हनूमता कीर्तिमता यशस्विना

तथाङ्गदेनाङ्गदनद्धबाहुना ।

मुदा तदाध्यासितमुन्नतं मह-

न्महीधराग्रं ज्वलितं श्रियाभवत् ॥ ५३ ॥

Full of joy at that time, the glorious Hanumān as well as the illustrious Aṅgada, who had his arms adorned with a pair of armlets, the lofty and huge mountain peak stood illumined with splendour. (53) filled with joy, particulars about his errand in the following words : "How was the godlike lady discovered by you and how does she fare there? (2-3)

तस्यां चापि कथं वृत्तः क्रूरकर्मा दशाननः।

तत्त्वतः सर्वमेतन्नः प्रब्रूहि त्वं महाकपे ॥ ४ ॥

"Moreover, how does Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster of cruel deeds behave towards her? Please relate you all this to us accurately in detail, O mighty Hanumān ! (4)

सम्मार्गिता कथं देवी किं च सा प्रत्यभाषत।

श्रुतार्थाश्चिन्तयिष्यामो भूयः कार्यविनिश्चयम् ॥ ५ ॥

"How was the godlike lady traced by you and what reply did she make? Having learnt the truth from you, we shall ponder what decision should be taken about the future course of action. (5)

यश्चार्थस्तत्र वक्तव्यो गतैरस्माभिरात्मवान्।
रक्षितव्यं च यत्तत्र तद् भवान् व्याकरोतु नः ॥ ६ ॥

“Prudent as you are, please state clearly what fact should be disclosed by us when we have arrived there in the presence of Śrī Rāma, and what should be kept back on that occasion.” (6)

स नियुक्तस्ततस्तेन सम्प्रहृष्टतनूरुहः।
नमस्यन् शिरसा देव्यै सीतायै प्रत्यभाषत ॥ ७ ॥

Urged by Jāmbavān, and making obeisance with his head bent low to the godlike lady, Sītā, Hanumān then replied as follows, his hair standing on end: (7)

प्रत्यक्षमेव भवतां महेन्द्राग्रात् खमाप्लुतः।
उदधेर्दक्षिणं पारं काङ्क्षमाणः समाहितः ॥ ८ ॥

“Seeking to reach the southern shore of the sea, I took a leap in the airspace with a concentrated mind from the summit of the Mahendra mountain in your very presence. (8)

गच्छतश्च हि मे घोरं विघ्नरूपमिवाभवत्।
काञ्चनं शिखरं दिव्यं पश्यामि सुमनोहरम् ॥ ९ ॥
स्थितं पन्थानमावृत्य मेने विघ्नं च तं नगम्।
उपसंगम्य तं दिव्यं काञ्चनं नगमुत्तमम् ॥ १० ॥
कृता मे मनसा बुद्धिर्भक्तव्योऽयं मयेति च।
प्रहतस्य मया तस्य लाङ्गूलेन महागिरिः ॥ ११ ॥
शिखरं सूर्यसंकाशं व्यशीर्यत सहस्रधा।
व्यवसायं च तं बुद्ध्वा स होवाच महागिरिः ॥ १२ ॥
पुत्रेति मधुरां वाणीं मनः प्रह्लादयन्निव।
पितृव्यं चापि मां विद्धि सखायं मातरिश्वनः ॥ १३ ॥
मैनाकमिति विख्यातं निवसन्तं महोदधौ।
पक्षवन्तः पुरा पुत्र बभूवुः पर्वतोत्तमाः ॥ १४ ॥

“Even as I was advancing, a formidable obstacle appeared in my way, as it were. I beheld a heavenly and exceedingly soul-captivating golden peak, which stood blocking my way, and I accounted that mountain an impediment. Approaching that foremost celestial golden mountain, the following resolve was mentally made by me: ‘This mountain must be shattered by me.’ The peak, shining brightly like the sun, of that vast mountain, even as the latter was struck by me with my tail, broke into a thousand fragments. Perceiving the aforesaid performance of mine, that huge mountain uttered the following sweet words, bringing excessive joy to my soul, as it were: ‘Know me, my son, to be a friend of the wind-god and as such your uncle, dwelling in the ocean and widely known as Maināka. The leading mountains were endowed, my son, with wings in the past. (9—14)

छन्दतः पृथिवीं चेरुर्बाधमानाः समन्ततः।
श्रुत्वा नगानां चरितं महेन्द्रः पाकशासनः ॥ १५ ॥
वज्रेण भगवान् पक्षौ चिच्छेदैषां सहस्रशः।
अहं तु मोचितस्तस्मात् तव पित्रा महात्मना ॥ १६ ॥

“‘They ranged at will all over the earth causing molestation everywhere. Hearing of the conduct of the mountains, the glorious and mighty Indra, the tamer of the demon Pāka, severed with his thunderbolt the wings of the aforesaid mountains by thousands. I was, however, saved from that catastrophe by your magnanimous father. (15-16)

मारुतेन तदा वत्स प्रक्षिप्तो वरुणालये।
राघवस्य मया साह्ये वर्तितव्यमरिंदम ॥ १७ ॥

“I was cast at that juncture into the sea (the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water) by the wind-god, my son ! I must come to the help of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, O tamer of foes ! (17)

रामो धर्मभृतां श्रेष्ठो महेन्द्रसमविक्रमः।
एतच्छ्रुत्वा मया तस्य मैनाकस्य महात्मनः ॥ १८ ॥
कार्यमावेद्य च गिरिरुद्धतं वै मनो मम।
तेन चाहमनुज्ञातो मैनाकेन महात्मना ॥ १९ ॥

“‘Śrī Rāma is the foremost of those who uphold the cause of virtue and is equal in prowess to the mighty Indra.’ On hearing this submission of the high-souled Maināka mountain, my purpose was confided by me to the mountain and my mind got stirred up once more to proceed further. Nay, I was permitted by the lofty-minded Maināka to depart. (18-19)

स चाप्यन्तर्हितः शैलो मानुषेण वपुष्मता।
शरीरेण महाशैलः शैलेन च महोदधौ ॥ २० ॥

“The aforesaid mountain too, the lord of big mountains, vanished in his human form consisting of charming limbs, while in his rocky form he disappeared into the ocean. (20)

उत्तमं जवमास्थाय शेषमध्वानमास्थितः।
ततोऽहं सुचिरं कालं जवेनाभ्यगमं पथि ॥ २१ ॥

“Catching excellent speed, I proceeded on the rest of my journey. From that moment I continued on my course with speed for a sufficiently long time. (21)

ततः पश्याम्यहं देवीं सुरसां नागमातरम्।
समुद्रमध्ये सा देवी वचनं चेदमब्रवीत् ॥ २२ ॥

“Then I perceived in mid-ocean the goddess Surasā, the mother of serpents, and that goddess spoke to me as follows: (22)

मम भक्ष्यः प्रदिष्टस्त्वममरैर्हरिसत्तम।
ततस्त्वां भक्षयिष्यामि विहितस्त्वं हि मे सुरैः ॥ २३ ॥

“‘You have been destined by the immortals to be my food, O jewel among monkeys ! I shall accordingly devour you since you have been sent by the gods.’ (23)

एवमुक्तः सुरसया प्राञ्जलिः प्रणतः स्थितः।
विवर्णवदनो भूत्वा वाक्यं चेदमुदीरयम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Spoken to as aforesaid by Surasā, I stood bent low with joined palms before her; and my face turning pale, I submitted to her as follows : (24)

रामो दाशरथिः श्रीमान् प्रविष्टो दण्डकावनम्।
लक्ष्मणेन सह भ्रात्रा सीतया च परंतपः ॥ २५ ॥

“The glorious Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha and the scourge of his foes, penetrated deep into the Daṇḍaka forest with his consort, Sītā, and younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa. (25)

तस्य सीता हता भार्या रावणेन दुरात्मना।
तस्याः सकाशं दूतोऽहं गमिष्ये रामशासनात् ॥ २६ ॥

“His consort, Sītā, was borne away by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa. At the behest of Śrī Rāma I am going to seek her presence as a messenger. (26)

कर्तुमर्हसि रामस्य साहाय्यं विषये सती।
अथवा मैथिलीं दृष्ट्वा रामं चाक्लिष्टकारिणम् ॥ २७ ॥

आगमिष्यामि ते वक्त्रं सत्यं प्रतिशृणोमि ते।
एवमुक्ता मया सा तु सुरसा कामरूपिणी ॥ २८ ॥

अब्रवीन्नातिवर्तेत कश्चिदेष वरो मम।
एवमुक्तः सुरसया दशयोजनमायतः ॥ २९ ॥

ततोऽर्धगुणविस्तारो बभूवाहं क्षणेन तु।
मत्प्रमाणाधिकं चैव व्यादितं तु मुखं तथा ॥ ३० ॥

“Living as you do in the dominion of Śrī Rāma, you ought to render assistance to him. Or, having seen the daughter of Janaka and having reported to Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, I shall seek your mouth : I truthfully promise this to you. Assured thus by me, the said Surasā for her part, who was able to change her form at will, replied, ‘None can dare escape me: this is the boon granted in my favour.’ Threatened thus by Surasā, I, for my part, who was ten Yojanas (or eighty miles) in extent, grew half as much in size in a trice. Her mouth too was distended by her to a size greater than mine. (27—30)

तद् दृष्ट्वा व्यादितं त्वास्यं ह्रस्वं ह्यकरवं पुनः।
तस्मिन् मुहूर्ते च पुनर्बभूवाद्गुष्ठसम्मितः ॥ ३१ ॥

Perceiving her mouth wide open, I then assumed a dwarfish form, nay, the same moment I further reduced myself to the size of a human thumb. (31)

अभिपत्याशु तद्वक्त्रं निर्गतोऽहं ततः क्षणात्।
अब्रवीत् सुरसा देवी स्वेन रूपेण मां पुनः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Having entered her mouth quickly, I came out of it instantly. Appearing in her native form, the goddess Surasā further said to me : (32)

अर्थसिद्धौ हरिश्रेष्ठ गच्छ सौम्य यथासुखम्।
समानय च वैदेहीं राघवेण महात्मना ॥ ३३ ॥

“Proceed now, O gentle one, according to your pleasure for accomplishing your purpose, O jewel among the monkeys, and re-unite the princess of the Videha territory with the high-souled Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (33)

सुखी भव महाबाहो प्रीतास्मि तव वानर।
ततोऽहं साधुसाध्वीति सर्वभूतैः प्रशंसितः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Be happy, O mighty-armed monkey ! I am pleased with you.’ Thereupon I was applauded by all beings, who said: ‘Well done ! Bravo !!’ (34)

ततोऽन्तरिक्षं विपुलं प्लुतोऽहं गरुडो यथा।
छाया मे निगृहीता च न च पश्यामि किंचन ॥ ३५ ॥

“Then I sprang into the vast space like Garuḍa (the king of birds, the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu). In the meantime my shadow was held fast; yet I perceived nothing. (35)

सोऽहं विगतवेगस्तु दिशो दश विलोकयन्।
न किंचित् तत्र पश्यामि येन मे विहता गतिः ॥ ३६ ॥

“My speed having been arrested thereby, I surveyed all the ten directions; yet I could not discover there the object by which my course had been stayed. (36)

अथ मे बुद्धिरुत्पन्ना किंनाम गमने मम।
ईदृशो विघ्न उत्पन्नो रूपमत्र न दृश्यते ॥ ३७ ॥

“Then the thought came to me: ‘How I wonder such an obstacle has appeared in my journey, although no concrete form is to be discerned here?’ (37)

अधोभागे तु मे दृष्टिः शोचतः पतिता तदा।
तत्राद्राक्षमहं भीमां राक्षसीं सलिलेशयाम् ॥ ३८ ॥

“While I was brooding thus, my eye presently fell downward. There I espied a terrible ogress lying on water. (38)

प्रहस्य च महानादमुक्तोऽहं भीमया तया।
अवस्थितमसम्भ्रान्तमिदं वाक्यमशोभनम् ॥ ३९ ॥

“Heartily laughing on seeing me motionless, yet undaunted, that dreadful woman accosted me with a loud cry in the following inauspicious words : (39)

क्वासि गन्ता महाकाय क्षुधिताया ममेप्सितः।
भक्षः प्रीणय मे देहं चिरमाहारवर्जितम् ॥ ४० ॥

“‘Whither are you bound, O gigantic monkey? You are my coveted food, hungry as I am. Pray, gratify my person, which has remained without sustenance for a long period.’ (40)

बाढमित्येव तां वाणीं प्रत्यगृह्णामहं ततः।
आस्यप्रमाणादधिकं तस्याः कायमपूरयम् ॥ ४१ ॥

“Saying ‘Amen,’ I actually bowed to that command of hers and then expanded my body to a size larger than the capacity of her mouth. (41)

तस्याश्चास्यं महद् भीमं वर्धते मम भक्षणे।
न तु मां सा नु बुबुधे मम वा विकृतं कृतम् ॥ ४२ ॥

“Her huge and dreadful mouth too began to grow in order to devour me. She, however, neither recognized me nor did she perceive the transformation subsequently gone through by me in the shape of a minute form. (42)

ततोऽहं विपुलं रूपं संक्षिप्य निमिषान्तरात्।
तस्या हृदयमादाय प्रपतामि नभःस्थलम् ॥ ४३ ॥

Having contracted my gigantic form in the twinkling of an eye, and extracting her heart, I forthwith sprang in the vault of heaven. (43)

सा विसृष्टभुजा भीमा पपात लवणाभ्रसि।
मया पर्वतसंकाशा निकृत्तहृदया सती ॥ ४४ ॥

“Her heart having been cut off, that terrible woman, who looked much like a mountain, dropped into the salty water, her arms paralysed. (44)

शृणोमि खगतानां च वाचः सौम्या महात्मनाम्।
राक्षसी सिंहिका भीमा क्षिप्रं हनुमता हता ॥ ४५ ॥

“I heard at that moment the delightful words of exalted souls standing in the sky: ‘The terrible ogress, Simhika, has been dispatched in no time by Hanumān.’ (45)

तां हत्वा पुनरेवाहं कृत्यमात्ययिकं स्मरन्।
गत्वा च महदध्वानं पश्यामि नगमण्डितम् ॥ ४६ ॥

दक्षिणं तीरमुदधेर्लङ्का यत्र गता पुरी।
 अस्तं दिनकरे याते रक्षसां निलयं पुरीम् ॥ ४७ ॥
 प्रविष्टोऽहमविज्ञातो रक्षोभिर्भीमविक्रमैः।
 तत्र प्रविशतश्चापि कल्पान्तघनसप्रभा ॥ ४८ ॥
 अट्टहासं विमुञ्चन्ती नारी काप्युत्थिता पुरः।
 जिघांसन्तीं ततस्तां तु ज्वलदग्निशिरोरुहाम् ॥ ४९ ॥
 सव्यमुष्टिप्रहारेण पराजित्य सुभैरवाम्।
 प्रदोषकाले प्रविशं भीतयाहं तयोदितः ॥ ५० ॥

“‘Calling to mind once more my errand in the shape of Sītā’s discovery, which had been delayed, after having killed her, and traversing a long distance, I sighted the southern shore of the sea, graced with mountains, where stood the city of Laṅkā. The sun having set, I penetrated, unnoticed by ogres of terrible prowess, deep into the city constituting the abode of ogres. Even while I was making good my entry into the city, a certain woman possessing the hue of a cloud, appearing at the end of a world cycle, rose in front of me, bursting into a horse-laugh. Having vanquished with a stroke of my left fist that exceedingly dreadful woman, whose locks resembled a flaming fire, and who sought to kill me, I for my part then compassed my entry at eventide, spoken to by her, afraid as she was, in the following words: (46—50)

अहं लङ्कापुरी वीर निर्जिता विक्रमेण ते।
 यस्मात् तस्माद् विजेतासि सर्वरक्षांस्यशेषतः ॥ ५१ ॥

“‘I am the city of Laṅkā (incarnate), O hero ! Since I have been vanquished by you by dint of prowess, you will conquer all the ogres in their entirety.’ (51)

तत्राहं सर्वरात्रं तु विचरञ्जनकात्मजाम्।
 रावणान्तःपुरगतो न चापश्यं सुमध्यमाम् ॥ ५२ ॥

“Though ranging over Laṅkā all through the night, I did not find Janaka’s daughter of slender waist even though I penetrated into the gynaeceum of Rāvaṇa. (52)

ततः सीतामपश्यंस्तु रावणस्य निवेशने।
 शोकसागरमासाद्य न पारमुपलक्ष्ये ॥ ५३ ॥

“Not finding Sītā even in the abode of Rāvaṇa and thus facing an ocean of grief, I did not perceive its end. (53)

शोचता च मया दृष्टं प्राकारेणाभिसंवृतम्।
 काञ्चनेन विकृष्टेन गृहोपवनमुत्तमम् ॥ ५४ ॥

“Even while I was brooding, an excellent pleasance enclosed on all sides by a lofty wall of gold was seen by me. (54)

सप्राकारमवल्लुत्य पश्यामि बहुपादपम्।
 अशोकवनिकामध्ये शिंशपापादपो महान् ॥ ५५ ॥

“Having leapt across the enclosure, I as such saw a grove consisting of numerous trees. In the midst of that grove of Aśoka trees, there stood a huge Śimśapā (Aśoka) tree. (55)

तमारुह्य च पश्यामि काञ्चनं कदलीवनम्।
 अदूराच्छिंशपावृक्षात् पश्यामि वरवर्णिनीम् ॥ ५६ ॥
 श्यामां कमलपत्राक्षीमुपवासकृशाननाम्।
 तदेकवासःसंवीतां रजोध्वस्तशिरोरुहाम् ॥ ५७ ॥
 शोकसन्तापदीनाङ्गीं सीतां भर्तृहिते स्थिताम्।
 राक्षसीभिर्विरूपाभिः क्रूराभिरभिसंवृताम् ॥ ५८ ॥
 मांसशोणितभक्ष्याभिव्याघ्रीभिर्हरिणीं यथा।
 सा मया राक्षसीमध्ये तर्ज्यमाना मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ ५९ ॥
 एकवेणीधरा दीना भर्तृचिन्तापरायणा।
 भूमिशय्या विवर्णाङ्गी पद्मिनीव हिमागमे ॥ ६० ॥
 रावणाद् विनिवृत्तार्था मर्तव्ये कृतनिश्चया।
 कथंचिन्मृगशावाक्षी तूर्णमासादिता मया ॥ ६१ ॥

“Ascending it, I sighted a golden thicket of plantain trees. Not far from the Śimśapā tree, I beheld the youthful Sītā of excellent complexion with eyes resembling lotus petals and a face emaciated through fasting, her hair soiled with dust and her limbs afflicted through grief and agony, clad in a single piece of cloth which she had on her person while being borne away by Rāvaṇa over Kiṣkindhā, devoted to the good of her lord and surrounded on all sides by ugly and cruel ogresses living on flesh and blood even as a doe encircled by tigresses. The lady, who had eyes like those of a fawn, was somehow quickly found by me miserable in the midst of ogresses, intimidated as she was by them again and again, wearing a single pleat as a mark of desolation, given to the thought of her lord, having the bare ground for her bed, pale-limbed like a lotus plant at the advent of winter, nay, deprived of the object of her desire viz., the service of Śrī Rāma, because of Rāvaṇa and resolved upon dying. (56—61)

तां दृष्ट्वा तादृशीं नारीं रामपत्नीं यशस्विनीम् ।
तत्रैव शिंशपावृक्षे पश्यन्नहमवस्थितः ॥ ६२ ॥

“Perceiving that illustrious lady, the consort of Śrī Rama, in such a condition, I remained perched on the same Śimśapā tree, looking at her. (62)

ततो हलहलाशब्दं काञ्चीनूपुरमिश्रितम् ।
शृणोम्यधिकगम्भीरं रावणस्य निवेशने ॥ ६३ ॥

“Then I heard in the abode of Rāvaṇa an unusually deep sound of hallooing, mixed with the jingling of girdles and anklets. (63)

ततोऽहं परमोद्विग्नः स्वरूपं प्रत्यसंहरम् ।
अहं च शिंशपावृक्षे पक्षीव गहने स्थितः ॥ ६४ ॥

“Feeling supremely anxious, I thereupon contracted my form and remained crouched like a bird on the Śimśapā tree thick with foliage. (64)

ततो रावणदाराश्च रावणश्च महाबलः ।
तं देशमनुसम्प्राप्तो यत्र सीताभवत् स्थिता ॥ ६५ ॥

“Then arrived the consorts of Rāvaṇa as well as Rāvaṇa himself, who is endowed, with extraordinary might, in that place where Sītā was ensconced. (65)

तं दृष्ट्वाथ वरारोहा सीता रक्षोगणेश्वरम् ।
संकुच्योरु स्तनौ पीनौ बाहुभ्यां परिरभ्य च ॥ ६६ ॥

“Seeing that lord of ogre hordes, Sītā of lovely hips sat compressing her thighs and enclosing her high breasts with her arms. (66)

वित्रस्तां परमोद्विगां वीक्ष्यमाणामितस्ततः ।
त्राणं कंचिदपश्यन्तीं वेपमानां तपस्विनीम् ॥ ६७ ॥

तामुवाच दशग्रीवः सीतां परमदुःखिताम् ।
अवाक्शिराः प्रपतितो बहुमन्यस्व मामिति ॥ ६८ ॥

“Fallen flat at her feet, head downward, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, said to the aforesaid Sītā, who felt greatly frightened and highly confused, and was glancing round in the hope of finding an asylum, but, finding no saviour, was trembling helpless and supremely distressed as she was; ‘Pray, regard me with favour. (67-68)

यदि चेत्त्वं तु मां दर्पान्नाभिनन्दसि गर्विते ।
द्विमासानन्तरं सीते पास्यामि रुधिरं तव ॥ ६९ ॥

“‘If, however, you do not welcome me through vanity. O proud Sītā, I shall drink your blood after two months.’ (99)

एतच्छ्रुत्वा वचस्तस्य रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ।
उवाच परमक्रुद्धा सीता वचनमुत्तमम् ॥ ७० ॥

“Highly incensed to hear this request of that evil-minded Rāvaṇa, Sītā made the following excellent reply : (70)

राक्षसाधम रामस्य भार्याममिततेजसः ।

इक्ष्वाकुवंशनाथस्य स्नुषां दशरथस्य च ॥ ७१ ॥

अवाच्यं वदतो जिह्वा कथं न पतिता तव ।

किंस्विद्वीर्यं तवानार्य यो मां भर्तुर्संनिधौ ॥ ७२ ॥

अपहृत्यागतः पाप तेनादृष्टो महात्मना ।

न त्वं रामस्य सदृशो दास्येऽप्यस्य न युज्यसे ॥ ७३ ॥

“‘How did your tongue not fall off, O vile ogre, even as you made a proposal which should not be made to the consort of Śrī Rāma, who is endowed with immeasurable strength and daughter-in-law of Emperor Daśaratha, the protector of Ikṣvāku’s line? Of what account is your valour, O ignoble soul, when you came away abducting me stealthily, in the absence of my lord and unperceived by that exalted soul, O sinful one? You are not equal in any respect to Śrī Rāma; nay, you are not fit even to be his slave. (71—73)

अजेयः सत्यवाक् शूरो रणश्लाघी च राघवः ।

जानक्या परुषं वाक्यमेवमुक्तो दशाननः ॥ ७४ ॥

जज्वाल सहसा कोपाच्चितास्थ इव पावकः ।

विवृत्य नयने क्रूरे मुष्टिमुद्यम्य दक्षिणम् ॥ ७५ ॥

मैथिलीं हन्तुमारब्धः स्त्रीभिर्हाहाकृतं तदा ।
 स्त्रीणां मध्यात् समुत्पत्य तस्य भार्या दुरात्मनः ॥ ७६ ॥
 वरा मन्दोदरी नाम तया स प्रतिषेधितः ।
 उक्तश्च मधुरां वाणीं तया स मदनादितः ॥ ७७ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, is invincible, truthful of speech, valiant and a lover of war.’ Spoken to in these harsh words by Sitā (the daughter of Janaka), Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) blazed up all of a sudden with wrath even like a fire deposited in a funeral pile. Rolling his cruel eyes and raising his right fist, he proceeded to strike the princess of Mithilā. An alarm was then raised by the women. Springing up from their midst, the excellent wife of that evil-minded fellow, Mandodarī by name, ran to him. By her he was restrained. Nay, the fellow, who was smitten with love, was spoken to by her in sweet words as follows :

(74—77)

सीतया तव किं कार्यं महेन्द्रसमविक्रम ।
 मया सह रमस्वाद्य मद्विशिष्टा न जानकी ॥ ७८ ॥

“‘What purpose of yours will be served by Sitā, O lord, You, who are equal in prowess to the mighty Indra? Pray, revel with me today; Sitā, the daughter of Janaka, is in no way superior to me.

(78)

देवगन्धर्वकन्याभिर्यक्षकन्याभिरेव च ।
 सार्धं प्रभो रमस्वेति सीतया किं करिष्यसि ॥ ७९ ॥

“‘Nay, sport with the daughters of gods and Gandharvas (celestial musicians) as well as with those of Yakṣas, my lord! You have nothing to do with Sitā.’

(79)

ततस्ताभिः समेताभिर्नारीभिः स महाबलः ।
 उत्थाप्य सहसा नीतो भवनं स्वं निशाचरः ॥ ८० ॥

“Having been raised up by those women collectively, that ranger of the night, who was endowed with extraordinary might, was then abruptly conducted back to his residence.

(80)

याते तस्मिन् दशग्रीवे राक्षस्यो विकृताननाः ।
 सीतां निर्भर्त्सयामासुर्वाक्यैः क्रूरैः सुदारुणैः ॥ ८१ ॥

“The aforesaid Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) having left, the ogresses with ugly faces, who had been posted there to guard Sitā, threatened her in cruel and very sharp terms.

(81)

तृणवद् भाषितं तासां गणयामास जानकी ।
 गर्जितं च तथा तासां सीतां प्राप्य निरर्थकम् ॥ ८२ ॥

“The daughter of Janaka, Sitā, however, accounted their effusion worth no more than straw. Their thundering too was likewise lost on Sitā.

(82)

वृथा गर्जितनिश्चेष्टा राक्षस्यः पिशिताशनाः ।
 रावणाय शशंसुस्ताः सीताव्यवसितं महत् ॥ ८३ ॥

“The flesh-eating ogresses, who had become motionless due to their thundering having proved abortive, made known to Rāvaṇa the mighty resolve of Sitā to die rather than to submit to him.

(83)

ततस्ताः सहिताः सर्वा विहताशा निरुद्यमाः ।
 परिक्लिश्य समस्तास्ता निद्रावशमुपागताः ॥ ८४ ॥

“Having given up all effort to persuade Sitā to submit to Rāvaṇa, now that their hopes had been frustrated, nay, feeling vexed, they were all collectively as well as individually overpowered by sleep.

(84)

तासु चैव प्रसुप्तासु सीता भर्तृहिते रता ।
 विलप्य करुणं दीना प्रशुशोच सुदुःखिता ॥ ८५ ॥

“Wailing piteously, when they had all fallen fast asleep, Sitā, who was devoted to the good of her husband, deeply lamented, miserable and sore distressed as she was.

(85)

तासां मध्यात् समुत्थाय त्रिजटा वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
 आत्मानं खादत क्षिप्रं न सीतामसितेक्षणाम् ॥ ८६ ॥
 जनकस्यात्मजां साध्वीं स्नुषां दशरथस्य च ।
 स्वप्नो ह्यद्य मया दृष्टो दारुणो रोमहर्षणः ॥ ८७ ॥
 रक्षसां च विनाशाय भर्तुरस्या जयाय च ।
 अलमस्मान् परित्रातुं राघवाद् राक्षसीगणम् ॥ ८८ ॥

“Rising up from their midst, Trijaṭā spoke as follows : ‘Sooner feed on yourselves than on the dark-eyed Sitā, daughter of Janaka and a virtuous daughter-in-law of Emperor Daśaratha. In fact, a fearful dream has been seen by me, which makes my hair stand on end and presages the destruction of ogres and the triumph of her lord. She alone is competent to protect us, the entire host of ogresses from the wrath of Rāma, the scion of Raghu. (86—88)

अभियाचाम वैदेहीमेतद्धि मम रोचते ।
यदि होवविधः स्वप्नो दुःखितायाः प्रदृश्यते ॥ ८९ ॥
सा दुःखैर्विविधैर्मुक्ता सुखमानोत्यनुत्तमम् ।
प्रणिपातप्रसन्ना हि मैथिली जनकात्मजा ॥ ९० ॥

“Let us, therefore, solicit the grace of Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory; for this alone finds favour with me. For, if such a dream is vividly seen about an afflicted lady, she is freed from woes of various kinds and attains unsurpassed felicity. Sitā, daughter of Janaka, will surely be propitiated through mere prostration at her feet. (89-90)

अलमेषा परित्रातुं राक्षस्यो महतो भयात् ।
ततः सा ह्रीमती बाला भर्तुर्विजयहर्षिता ॥ ९१ ॥
अवोचद् यदि तत् तथ्यं भवेयं शरणं हि वः ।
तां चाहं तादृशीं दृष्ट्वा सीताया दारुणां दशाम् ॥ ९२ ॥
चिन्तयामास विश्रान्तो न च मे निर्वृतं मनः ।
सम्भाषणार्थं च मया जानक्याश्चिन्तितो विधिः ॥ ९३ ॥

“She alone is competent to deliver the ogresses from the great peril.’ Hanumān rejoiced at the prospect of her lord’s triumph on hearing of the dream related to her by Trijaṭā, that youthful lady, Sitā, who was full of modesty, thereupon said, ‘If the dream seen by Trijaṭā comes out to be true, I shall surely afford protection to you all.’ Witnessing such a hard plight of Sitā, I, who had taken some rest in the meantime became thoughtful; my mind, however, was not at rest. A method was also contrived by me to enter into conversation with the daughter of Janaka. (91—93)

इक्ष्वाकुकुलवंशस्तु स्तुतो मम पुरस्कृतः ।
श्रुत्वा तु गदितां वाचं राजर्षिगणभूषिताम् ॥ ९४ ॥

प्रत्यभाषत मां देवी बाष्पैः पिहितलोचना ।
कस्त्वं केन कथं चेह प्राप्नो वानरपुङ्गव ॥ ९५ ॥

“The pedigree of the House of Ikṣvākus, which was placed in the forefront by all even in the past began to be extolled by me. Hearing the speech uttered by me, which was enriched with the praises of a royal sage viz., King Daśaratha, the godlike lady, Sitā, for her part, spoke in return to me as follows, her eyes full of tears : “Who are you? Dispatched by whom and how have you arrived here, O bull among monkeys? (94-95)

का च रामेण ते प्रीतिस्तन्मे शंसितुमर्हसि ।
तस्यास्तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा अहमप्यब्रुवं वचः ॥ ९६ ॥

“Nay, what kind of love is cherished by you for Śrī Rāma? You ought to relate all that to me.” Hearing her aforesaid questionnaire, I too made the following reply : (96)

देवि रामस्य भर्तुस्ते सहायो भीमविक्रमः ।
सुग्रीवो नाम विक्रान्तो वानरेन्द्रो महाबलः ॥ ९७ ॥

“There is a valiant ally of terrific prowess of your lord, Sugrīva by name, the valiant ruler of monkeys, who is endowed with extraordinary might, O godlike lady ! (97)

तस्य मां विद्धि भृत्यं त्वं हनूमन्तमिहागतम् ।
भर्त्रा सम्प्रहितस्तुभ्यं रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ॥ ९८ ॥

“Know me to be his servant, Hanumān by name, arrived here. I have been duly dispatched by your husband, Śrī Rāma, of unwearied action. (98)

इदं तु पुरुषव्याघ्रः श्रीमान् दाशरथिः स्वयम् ।
अङ्गुलीयमभिज्ञानमदात् तुभ्यं यशस्विनि ॥ ९९ ॥

“Nay, the glorious Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, a tiger among men, has personally handed over as a token this ring for you, O illustrious lady ! (99)

तदिच्छामि त्वयाज्ञप्तं देवि किं करवाण्यहम् ।
रामलक्ष्मणयोः पार्श्वं नयामि त्वां किमुत्तरम् ॥ १०० ॥

“Therefore, I seek your command,

O godlike lady, as to what I should do. I can carry you, if you so please, to the presence of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. What is your response?' (100)

एतच्छ्रुत्वा विदित्वा च सीता जनकनन्दिनी ।

आह रावणमुत्पाट्य राघवो मां नयत्विति ॥ १०१ ॥

“Hearing this and knowing the truth, Sitā, the delight of Janaka, replied, ‘Let Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, take me back after destroying Rāvaṇa.’ (101)

प्रणम्य शिरसा देवीमहमार्यामनिन्दिताम् ।

राघवस्य मनोह्लादमभिज्ञानमयाचिषम् ॥ १०२ ॥

“Having respectfully saluted the godlike noble and irreproachable lady, Sitā, with my head bent low, I asked her for a token which should bring delight to the mind of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (102)

अथ मामब्रवीत् सीता गृह्यतामयमुत्तमः ।

मणिर्येन महाबाहू रामस्त्वां बहु मन्यते ॥ १०३ ॥

“Sitā thereupon said to me, ‘Let this excellent jewel be taken by you, for which the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma will hold you in great esteem.’ (103)

इत्युक्त्वा तु वरारोहा मणिप्रवरमुत्तमम् ।

प्रायच्छत् परमोद्विग्ना वाचा मां संदिदेश ह ॥ १०४ ॥

“Saying so, Sitā (a lady with lovely limbs), for her part, delivered to me an excellent jewel (the foremost of jewels) for the head and, feeling highly upset, further related to me in so many words one or two incidents known to Śrī Rāma alone. (104)

ततस्तस्यै प्रणम्याहं राजपुत्र्यै समाहितः ।

प्रदक्षिणं परिक्राममिहाभ्युद्धतमानसः ॥ १०५ ॥

“Having respectfully bowed down to that princess, I thereupon then devoutly went clockwise round her with a mind intent upon returning to this place. (105)

उत्तरं पुनरेवाह निश्चित्य मनसा तदा ।

हनूमन् मम वृत्तान्तं वक्तुमर्हसि राघवे ॥ १०६ ॥

“Having deliberated with her mind, she then once more addressed the following to me: ‘You ought to relate my story to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, O Hanumān !

(106)

यथा श्रुत्वैव नचिरात् तावुभौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

सुग्रीवसहितौ वीरावुपेयातां तथा कुरु ॥ १०७ ॥

“‘Nay, act in such a way that immediately on hearing my story both those heroes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, may turn up before long alongwith Sugrīva. (107)

यदन्यथा भवेदेतद् द्वौ मासौ जीवितं मम ।

न मां द्रक्ष्यति काकुत्स्थो म्रिये साहमनाथवत् ॥ १०८ ॥

“‘If this proves to be otherwise, my life is to continue only for a month (two fortnights*). If Śrī Rāma does not appear within this period I, as such, shall have to die like one without a protector and Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, will no longer be able to see me.’ (108)

तच्छ्रुत्वा करुणं वाक्यं क्रोधो मामभ्यवर्तत ।

उत्तरं च मया दृष्टं कार्यशेषमनन्तरम् ॥ १०९ ॥

“When I heard that pathetic appeal, anger took possession of me and what remained to be done by me next was forthwith envisaged by me. (109)

ततोऽवर्धत मे कायस्तदा पर्वतसंनिभः ।

युद्धाकाङ्क्षी वनं तस्य विनाशयितुमारभे ॥ ११० ॥

“My body then began to expand and presently grew to the size of a mountain. Seeking a combat, I forthwith proceeded to devastate the pleasure-grove of Rāvaṇa. (110)

तद् भग्नं वनखण्डं तु भ्रान्तत्रस्तमृगद्विजम् ।

प्रतिबुद्ध्य निरीक्षन्ते राक्षस्यो विकृताननाः ॥ १११ ॥

“Waking up from slumber, the ugly faced ogresses beheld that part of the grove laid waste and its beasts and birds bewildered and panic-stricken. (111)

* The word ‘मासौ’ in this verse has been construed by one commentator as used in the sense of two fortnights according to the Śruti texts—‘पक्षा वै मासाः’

मां च दृष्ट्वा वने तस्मिन् समागम्य ततस्ततः ।
ताः समभ्यागताः क्षिप्रं रावणायाचचक्षिरे ॥ ११२ ॥

“Nay, meeting together from every side on seeing me in the grove, they collectively reported the matter to Rāvaṇa without delay in the following words : (112)

राजन् वनमिदं दुर्गं तव भग्नं दुरात्मना ।
वानरेण ह्यविज्ञाय तव वीर्यं महाबल ॥ ११३ ॥

“‘This grove of yours, which is difficult of access, has been destroyed by an evil-minded monkey, who surely does not fully know your power, O king, endowed with extraordinary might ! (113)

तस्य दुर्बुद्धिता राजस्तव विप्रियकारिणः ।
वधमाज्ञापय क्षिप्रं यथासौ न पुनर्व्रजेत् ॥ ११४ ॥

“‘This is no doubt his perversity, O king ! Pray, therefore, order his death instantly since he has given offence to you lest he should run away unpunished.’ (114)

तच्छ्रुत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रेण विसृष्टा बहुदुर्जयाः ।
राक्षसाः किंकरा नाम रावणस्य मनोऽनुगाः ॥ ११५ ॥

“On hearing the report, ogres, collectively known as the Kiṅkaras, who were very difficult to conquer and followed the mind of Rāvaṇa, were sent out by the king of ogres. (115)

तेषामशीतिसाहस्रं शूलमुद्गरपाणिनाम् ।
मया तस्मिन् वनोद्देशे परिधेण निषूदितम् ॥ ११६ ॥

“Eighty thousand of them, darts and clubs in hand, were exterminated by me in that part of the grove with an iron bar. (116)

तेषां तु हतशिष्टा ये ते गता लघुविक्रमाः ।
निहतं च मया सैन्यं रावणायाचचक्षिरे ॥ ११७ ॥

“Taking quick strides, those few for their part, who had survived, went and broke the news to Rāvaṇa of the army having been wiped out by me. (117)

ततो मे बुद्धिरुत्पन्ना चैत्यप्रासादमुत्तमम् ।
तत्रस्थान् राक्षसान् हत्वा शतं स्तम्भेन वै पुनः ॥ ११८ ॥
ललामभूतो लङ्काया मया विध्वंसितो रुषा ।
ततः प्रहस्तस्य सुतं जम्बुमालिनमादिशत् ॥ ११९ ॥

राक्षसैर्बहुभिः सार्धं घोररूपैर्भयानकैः ।
तमहं बलसम्पन्नं राक्षसं रणकोविदम् ॥ १२० ॥
परिधेणातिघोरेण सूदयामि सहानुगम् ।
तच्छ्रुत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रस्तु मन्त्रिपुत्रान् महाबलान् ॥ १२१ ॥
पदातिबलसम्पन्नान् प्रेषयामास रावणः ।
परिधेनैव तान् सर्वान् नयामि यमसादनम् ॥ १२२ ॥

“Next it struck my mind to demolish the excellent edifice of a sanctuary sacred to the tutelary deity of the ogres. After killing a hundred ogres garrisoned there, the sanctuary, which was the very ornament of Laṅkā, was then utterly destroyed by me in anger with a pillar of the same structure. Thereupon Rāvaṇa dispatched Jambumālī, son of Prahasta, alongwith numerous frightful ogres of grim aspect. I killed that mighty ogre, though he was skilled in warfare, alongwith his followers with a most formidable iron bar. Hearing of it, Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, dispatched the sons of his minister, who were endowed with extraordinary might, and were strengthened by a regiment of infantry. I, however, sent them to the abode of Death with the iron bar itself. (118—122)

मन्त्रिपुत्रान् हतान् श्रुत्वा समरे लघुविक्रमान् ।
पञ्च सेनाग्रगान् शूरान् प्रेषयामास रावणः ॥ १२३ ॥

“Hearing of the minister’s sons, who were quick in exhibiting their valour in combat, having been killed, Rāvaṇa dispatched five heroic generals. (123)

तानहं सहसैन्यान् वै सर्वानेवाभ्यसूदयम् ।
ततः पुनर्दशग्रीवः पुत्रमक्षं महाबलम् ॥ १२४ ॥
बहुभी राक्षसैः सार्धं प्रेषयामास संयुगे ।
तं तु मन्दोदरीपुत्रं कुमारं रणपण्डितम् ॥ १२५ ॥
सहसा खं समुद्यन्तं पादयोश्च गृहीतवान् ।
तमासीनं शतगुणं भ्रामयित्वा व्यपेषयम् ॥ १२६ ॥

“I, however, destroyed them all alongwith their troops. Thereupon Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, sent to the field of battle his son, Akṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, alongwith many other ogres. I, however, suddenly caught by the feet the aforesaid prince, son of Mandodarī, who was a past master in warfare and was springing in the sky. Nay, whirling him round a hundred times as soon as he was down, I crushed him.” (124—126)

तमक्षमागतं भग्नं निशम्य स दशाननः ।
ततश्चेन्द्रजितं नाम द्वितीयं रावणः सुतम् ॥ १२७ ॥
व्यादिदेश सुसंकुब्धो बलिनं युद्धदुर्मदम् ।
तच्चाप्यहं बलं सर्वं तं च राक्षसपुङ्गवम् ॥ १२८ ॥
नष्टौजसं रणे कृत्वा परं हर्षमुपागतः ।
महतापि महाबाहुः प्रत्ययेन महाबलः ॥ १२९ ॥
प्रहितो रावणेनैष सह वीरैर्मदोद्धतैः ।
सोऽविषहं हि मां बुद्ध्वा स्वसैन्यं चावमर्दितम् ॥ १३० ॥
ब्रह्मणोऽस्त्रेण स तु मां प्रबद्ध्वा चातिवेगिनः ।
रज्जुभिश्चापि बध्नन्ति ततो मां तत्र राक्षसाः ॥ १३१ ॥

“Highly enraged to hear of the celebrated Prince Akṣa having been killed as soon as arrived, that ten-headed monster, Rāvaṇa, thereupon dispatched his other mighty son, Indrajit by name, fierce in combat, with a large army. Having crushed in combat the spirit of that entire force as well as of that bull among ogres, I experienced supreme felicity. Alongwith heroes who were insolent with arrogance, this mighty-armed prince, who was endowed with extraordinary might, had been sent by Rāvaṇa with great confidence. Perceiving his army crushed and consequently realizing me to be irresistible, Indrajit for his part made me captive by means of a missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator) and, having bound me, handed me over to the ogres. Ogres full of excessive agility then began to bind me further with cords on that spot. (127—131)

रावणस्य समीपं च गृहीत्वा मामुपागमन् ।
दृष्ट्वा सम्भाषितश्चाहं रावणेन दुरात्मना ॥ १३२ ॥
पृष्टश्च लङ्कागमनं राक्षसानां च तं वधम् ।
तत्सर्वं च रणे तत्र सीतार्थमुपजल्पितम् ॥ १३३ ॥

“Holding me by the hand, they sought the presence of Rāvaṇa. On seeing me, I was spoken to by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa and questioned about the motive of my visit to Laṅkā and my said destruction of the ogres. ‘All that was done by me in combat for the sake of Sītā !’ was the reply made by me. (132-133)

तस्यास्तु दर्शनाकाङ्क्षी प्राप्तस्त्वद्भवनं विभो ।
मारुतस्यौरसः पुत्रो वानरो हनुमानहम् ॥ १३४ ॥

I continued: “‘I am a monkey, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, arrived in your palace with a longing to see Sītā. (134)

रामदूतं च मां विद्धि सुग्रीवसचिवं कपिम् ।
सोऽहं दौत्येन रामस्य त्वत्सकाशमिहागतः ॥ १३५ ॥

“‘Further know me to be a monkey, envoy of Śrī Rāma and a minister of Sugrīva. As such I have sought your presence here in the capacity of a messenger of Śrī Rāma. (135)

शृणु चापि समादेशं यदहं प्रब्रवीमि ते ।
राक्षसेश हरीशस्त्वां वाक्यमाह समाहितम् ॥ १३६ ॥

“‘I hereby deliver to you, O lord of ogres, the friendly message which Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, has sent to you. Pray, listen to his advice too. (136)

सुग्रीवश्च महाभागः स त्वां कौशलमब्रवीत् ।
धर्मार्थकामसहितं हितं पथ्यमुवाच ह ॥ १३७ ॥

“‘Nay, the celebrated and highly blessed Sugrīva has inquired after your welfare and has tendered this friendly and salutary advice, which is in consonance with righteousness, your worldly interests and enjoyment too. (137)

वसतो ऋष्यमूके मे पर्वते विपुलद्रुमे ।
राघवो रणविक्रान्तो मित्रत्वं समुपागतः ॥ १३८ ॥

“‘While I was sojourning on the R̥ṣyamūka mountain, covered with numerous trees, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who is valiant in combat, entered into an alliance with me. (138)

तेन मे कथितं राजन् भार्या मे रक्षसा हृता ।
तत्र साहाय्यहेतोर्मे समयं कर्तुमर्हसि ॥ १३९ ॥

“‘The following exhortation was addressed by him, O king, to me: 'My consort has been borne away by an ogre. You ought to give me your pledge to render help in her recovery.'

(139)

वालिना हृतराज्येन सुग्रीवेण सह प्रभुः ।

चक्रेऽग्निसाक्षिकं सख्यं राघवः सहलक्ष्मणः ॥ १४० ॥

“The powerful Śrī Rāma, who was accompanied by his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, solemnized his alliance with me (Sugrīva), who had been robbed of my sovereignty by Vāli (my elder brother), in the presence of fire as a witness. (140)

तेन वालिनमाहत्य शरेणैकेन संयुगे ।

वानराणां महाराजः कृतः सम्प्लवतां प्रभुः ॥ १४१ ॥

“After killing Vāli with a single arrow on the field of battle, I (Sugrīva), the lord of monkeys, was crowned by him suzerain lord of all monkeys. (141)

तस्य साहाय्यमस्माभिः कार्यं सर्वात्मना त्विह ।

तेन प्रस्थापितस्तुभ्यं समीपमिह धर्मतः ॥ १४२ ॥

“Help must be rendered to him by us with all our being in this life: with this end in view an envoy has been dispatched by me (Sugrīva) to your presence in Laṅkā in accordance with the principles of righteousness. (142)

क्षिप्रमानीयतां सीता दीयतां राघवस्य च ।

यावन्न हरयो वीरा विधमन्ति बलं तव ॥ १४३ ॥

“Let Sītā be brought and restored to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, before the monkey heroes exterminate your forces. (143)

वानराणां प्रभावोऽयं न केन विदितः पुरा ।

देवतानां सकाशं च ये गच्छन्ति निमन्त्रिताः ॥ १४४ ॥

“To whom is this glory of the monkeys not already known, who seek the presence even of gods only when invited by the latter for help? (144)

इति वानरराजस्त्वामाहेत्यभिहितो मया ।

मामैक्षत ततो रुष्टश्चक्षुषा प्रदहन्निव ॥ १४५ ॥

“Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, has sent the foregoing message to you.

“Provoked to anger when spoken to in these words by me, Rāvaṇa presently looked at me as though he was going to reduce me to ashes by his very gaze. (145)

तेन वध्योऽहमाज्ञप्तो रक्षसा रौद्रकर्मणा ।

मत्प्रभावमविज्ञाय रावणेन दुरात्मना ॥ १४६ ॥

“I was ordered to be put to death by that ogre of violent deeds, the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, who did not know my glory in the shape of my immunity from death. (146)

ततो विभीषणो नाम तस्य भ्राता महामतिः ।

तेन राक्षसराजश्च याचितो मम कारणात् ॥ १४७ ॥

“His younger brother, Vibhiṣaṇa by name, who is endowed with great sagacity, was also present there. By him was Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) solicited on my behalf in the following words: (147)

नैवं राक्षसशार्दूल त्यज्यतामेष निश्चयः ।

राजशास्त्रव्यपेतो हि मार्गः संलक्ष्यते त्वया ॥ १४८ ॥

“No such attempt should at all be made, O tiger among the ogres ! Let this resolve be abandoned by you. A course which is repugnant to the code governing the conduct of kings is being envisaged by you. (148)

दूतवध्या न दृष्टा हि राजशास्त्रेषु राक्षस ।

दूतेन वेदितव्यं च यथाभिहितवादिना ॥ १४९ ॥

“The killing of an envoy is surely not approved of in the codes governing the conduct of rulers, O ogre ! The message of his master must be delivered by an envoy, who simply reiterates what he has been told by his master. (149)

सुमहत्यपराधेऽपि दूतस्यातुलविक्रम ।

विरूपकरणं दृष्टं न वधोऽस्ति हि शास्त्रतः ॥ १५० ॥

“Even in the event of a very grave offence committed by an envoy, O brother endowed with incomparable prowess, mutilation alone, and not death, has been approved in the scriptures.’ (150)

विभीषणेनैवमुक्तो रावणः संदिदेश तान् ।

राक्षसानेतदेवाद्य लाङ्गूलं दह्यतामिति ॥ १५१ ॥

“Exhorted in these words by Vibhīṣaṇa, Rāvaṇa commanded those ogres present by his side as follows : ‘Let the tail alone of the monkey be burnt now.’ (151)

ततस्तस्य वचः श्रुत्वा मम पुच्छं समन्ततः ।
वेष्टितं शणवल्कैश्च पटैः कार्पासकैस्तथा ॥ १५२ ॥

“On hearing his command, my tail was forthwith wrapped all over in the bark of hemp as well as in rags of silk and cotton. (152)

राक्षसाः सिद्धसंनाहास्ततस्ते चण्डविक्रमाः ।
तदादीप्यन्त मे पुच्छं हनन्तः काष्ठमुष्टिभिः ॥ १५३ ॥

“Having wrapped my tail as above, those ogres of terrible prowess then set fire to my aforementioned tail, striking me with their wooden staffs and fists. (153)

बद्धस्य बहुभिः पाशैर्यन्त्रितस्य च राक्षसैः ।
न मे पीडाभवत् काचिद् दिदृक्षोर्नगरीं दिवा ॥ १५४ ॥

“No pain was experienced by me even though I was bound with many cords and wrapped in rags, since I was eager to survey Laṅkā by the day. (154)

ततस्ते राक्षसाः शूरा बद्धं मामग्निसंवृतम् ।
अघोषयन् राजमार्गे नगरद्वारमागताः ॥ १५५ ॥

“Arrived at the city gate, those gallant ogres made me publicly known in the principal streets, bound by cords and my tail enveloped in flames. (155)

ततोऽहं सुमहद्वृषं संक्षिप्य पुनरात्मनः ।
विमोचयित्वा तं बन्धं प्रकृतिस्थः स्थितः पुनः ॥ १५६ ॥

“Having contracted my gigantic form once more and thereby unfastened my bonds, I stood in my native form again. (156)

आयसं परिधं गृह्य तानि रक्षांस्यसूदयम् ।
ततस्तन्नगरद्वारं वेगेन प्लुतवानहम् ॥ १५७ ॥

“Seizing an iron bar I made short work of those ogres. Then with agility I leapt up that city gate. (157)

पुच्छेन च प्रदीप्तेन तां पुरीं सादृगोपुराम् ।
दहाम्यहमसम्भ्रान्तो युगान्ताग्निरिव प्रजाः ॥ १५८ ॥

“Nay, with my tail inflamed I set fire to that city with its attics and gates without getting confused, even as the fire of universal destruction would burn all created beings. (158)

विनष्टा जानकी व्यक्तं न ह्यदग्धः प्रदृश्यते ।
लङ्कायाः कश्चिदुद्देशः सर्वा भस्मीकृता पुरी ॥ १५९ ॥

“‘Evidently Sītā, daughter of Janaka, has also perished, since no part of Laṅkā is seen unburnt—the whole city stands reduced to ashes. (159)

दहता च मया लङ्कां दग्धा सीता न संशयः ।
रामस्य च महत्कार्यं मयेदं विफलीकृतम् ॥ १६० ॥

“‘Even while I was setting fire to Laṅkā, Sītā too has been burnt; there is no doubt about it. Nay, this great purpose of Śrī Rāma has thereby been defeated by me.’ (160)

इति शोकसमाविष्टश्चिन्तामहमुपागतः ।
ततोऽहं वाचमश्रौषं चारणानां शुभाक्षराम् ॥ १६१ ॥
जानकी न च दग्धेति विस्मयोदन्तभाषिणाम् ।
ततो मे बुद्धिरुत्पन्ना श्रुत्वा तामद्भुतां गिरम् ॥ १६२ ॥

“Thoroughly possessed by grief, I began to reflect as above. In the meantime I heard the propitious utterance of Cāraṇas (celestial bards), who were narrating a tale of wonder, saying that Janaka’s daughter had not been burnt. When I heard that wondrous speech, the following thought presently occurred to me : (161-162)

अदग्धा जानकीत्येव निमित्तैश्चोपलक्षितम् ।
दीप्यमाने तु लाङ्गूले न मां दहति पावकः ॥ १६३ ॥

“‘Sītā, daughter of Janaka, has surely escaped being burnt. Nay, this is indicated by the following good omens too. In the first place even though my tail is burning, the fire does not burn me. (163)

हृदयं च प्रहृष्टं मे वाताः सुरभिगन्धिनः ।
तैर्मिमित्तैश्च दृष्टार्थैः कारणैश्च महागुणैः ॥ १६४ ॥
ऋषिवाक्यैश्च दृष्टार्थैरभवं हृष्टमानसः ।
पुनर्दृष्टा च वैदेही विसृष्टश्च तया पुनः ॥ १६५ ॥

“‘My heart too feels extremely rejoiced and the breezes are laden with sweet odour.' On account of the aforesaid good omens, whose welcome results had been witnessed by me on many an occasion in the past, nay, for very potent reasons such as the glory of Śrī Rāma and Sītā's exclusive devotion to her husband, which led me to conclude that Sītā was alive as also on the strength of the words of the Cāraṇas, who could see everything, which were based on perceived facts, I felt rejoiced in my mind.' Nay, Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, was seen by me once more and I was granted leave by her again. (164-165)

ततः पर्वतमासाद्य तत्रारिष्टमहं पुनः ।
प्रतिप्लवनमारेभे युष्मद्दर्शनकाङ्क्षया ॥ १६६ ॥

"Having reached the Ariṣṭa mountain there in Laṅkā, I then proceeded to leap back from that mountain with a longing to see you all. (166)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे अष्टपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-eight of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LIX

Picturing to his fellow monkeys the said plight of Sītā, and feeling that it behoved them all to see Śrī Rāma only after recovering Sītā from Laṅkā, nay, recounting the past heroic exploits of Jāmbavān and others, Hanumān incites them all to have recourse to the arbitrament of war

एतदाख्याय तत् सर्वं हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
भूयः समुपचक्राम वचनं वक्तुमुत्तरम् ॥ १ ॥

Having narrated all this story to the monkeys assembled there, Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god) once more proceeded to make his further statement as follows : (1)

सफलो राघवोद्योगः सुग्रीवस्य च सम्भ्रमः ।
शीलमासाद्य सीताया मम च प्रीणितं मनः ॥ २ ॥

ततः श्वसनचन्द्रार्कसिद्धगन्धर्वसेवितम् ।
पन्थानमहमाक्रम्य भवतो दृष्टवानिह ॥ १६७ ॥

"Following the path frequented by the wind, the moon, the sun, the Siddhas and the Gandharvas, I have found you all here. (167)

राघवस्य प्रसादेन भवतां चैव तेजसा ।
सुग्रीवस्य च कार्यार्थं मया सर्वमनुष्ठितम् ॥ १६८ ॥

"Everything has been accomplished by me through the grace of Śrī Rāma as well as through your boisterous energy, as also for achieving the purpose of King Sugrīva. (168)

एतत् सर्वं मया तत्र यथावदुपपादितम् ।
तत्र यन्न कृतं शेषं तत् सर्वं क्रियतामिति ॥ १६९ ॥

"All this has been duly carried out by me in Laṅkā. Let all that which could not be done there and still remains to be done, be accomplished by you." (169)

"Fruitful is the endeavour of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, and the perseverance of Sugrīva. Nay, my mind is gratified to witness the chastity of Sītā. (2)

आर्यायाः सदृशं शीलं सीतायाः प्लवगर्षभाः ।
तपसा धारयेल्लोकान् क्रुद्धा वा निर्दहेदपि ॥ ३ ॥

"The conduct of Sītā is worthy of that noble lady, O jewels among monkeys. She can sustain all the worlds by virtue of her asceticism, as also, if enraged, she can reduce them all to ashes. (3)

सर्वथातिप्रकृष्टोऽसौ रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
यस्य तां स्पृशतो गात्रं तपसा न विनाशितम् ॥ ४ ॥

“That ruler of ogres, Rāvaṇa too, is very rich in asceticism in everyway, in that his body was not destroyed by her askesis even while he laid hands on Sītā. (4)

न तदग्निशिखा कुर्यात् संस्पृष्टा पाणिना सती ।
जनकस्य सुता कुर्याद् यत् क्रोधकलुषीकृता ॥ ५ ॥

“Even a flame, when fully touched with one’s hand, is incapable of doing that harm which Janaka’s daughter would if stirred by anger. (5)

जाम्बवत्प्रमुखान् सर्वाननुज्ञाप्य महाकपीन् ।
अस्मिन्नेवंगते कार्ये भवतां च निवेदिते ।
न्याय्यं स्म सह वैदेह्या द्रष्टुं तौ पार्थिवात्मजौ ॥ ६ ॥

“This work of mine in the shape of Sītā’s discovery, which has thus been crowned with success, having been reported to you all, it behoves us to raid the pleasance of Rāvaṇa and after recovering Sītā forcibly from the clutches of Rāvaṇa to see those two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, alongwith Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, after taking leave of all the great monkeys headed by Jāmbavān. (6)

अहमेकोऽपि पर्याप्तः सराक्षसगणां पुरीम् ।
तां लङ्कां तरसा हन्तुं रावणं च महाबलम् ॥ ७ ॥
किं पुनः सहितो वीरैर्बलवद्भिः कृतात्मभिः ।
कृतास्त्रैः प्लवगैः शक्तैर्भवद्भिर्विजयैषिभिः ॥ ८ ॥

“Even single handed, I am capable of destroying with my prowess that city of Laṅkā with its host of ogres, and killing Rāvaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might, much more so when accompanied by you—heroic, mighty and powerful, monkeys, disciplined of mind, skilled in the use of missiles and eager for victory. (7-8)

अहं तु रावणं युद्धे ससैन्यं सपुरःसरम् ।
सहपुत्रं वधिष्यामि सहोदरयुतं युधि ॥ ९ ॥

“I, for my part, shall destroy in an encounter on the field of battle Rāvaṇa with his army, those marching before him, his sons and his brothers. (9)

ब्राह्ममस्त्रं च रौद्रं च वायव्यं वारुणं तथा ।
यदि शक्रजितोऽस्त्राणि दुर्निरीक्ष्याणि संयुगे ।
तान्यहं निहनिष्यामि विधमिष्यामि राक्षसान् ॥ १० ॥

“Even though the missiles employed by Indrajit (Rāvaṇa’s eldest son) are e.g., those presided over by Brahmā (the creator) and Rudra (the god of destruction) and Vayu (the wind-god) and Varuṇa (the god of water) difficult even to discern on the battlefield, I shall repulse them as well as exterminate the ogres. (10)

भवतामभ्यनुज्ञातो विक्रमो मे रुणद्धि तम् ।
मयातुला विसृष्टा हि शैलवृष्टिर्निरन्तरा ॥ ११ ॥
देवानपि रणे हन्यात् किं पुनस्तान् निशाचरान् ।
भवतामननुज्ञातो विक्रमो मे रुणद्धि माम् ॥ १२ ॥
सागरोऽप्यतियाद् वेलां मन्दरः प्रचलेदपि ।
न जाम्बवन्तं समरे कम्पयेदरिवाहिनी ॥ १३ ॥

“If approved by you, my prowess will frustrate him; for an incessant and unequalled shower of rocks discharged by me on the field of battle is enough to destroy even gods, much more so those rangers of the night. So long as it is not approved by you, I keep my vehemence under check. Even the sea may overflow its shores; even Mount Mandāra may move from its position; but no hostile army shall be able to stagger Jāmbavān in combat. (11—13)

सर्वराक्षससङ्घानां राक्षसा ये च पूर्वजाः ।
अलमेकोऽपि नाशाय वीरो वालिसुतः कपिः ॥ १४ ॥

“The heroic Aṅgada, son of Vāli, alone is equal to the destruction of all Rakṣasa hosts, nay, even of the ogres who were their progenitors. (14)

प्लवगस्योरुवेगेन नीलस्य च महात्मनः ।
मन्दरोऽप्यवशीर्येत किं पुनर्युधि राक्षसाः ॥ १५ ॥

“Even Mount Mandāra would be shattered in an encounter by the rapid movement of the thighs of the high-minded monkey, Nīla, much more so the ogres. (15)

सदेवासुरयक्षेषु गन्धर्वोरगपक्षिषु ।
मैन्दस्य प्रतियोद्धारं शंसत द्विविदस्य वा ॥ १६ ॥

“Point out to me a warrior among the demons and Yakṣas including the gods, as well as among the Gandharvas, serpents and birds, who can contend as an equal with Mainda or Dwivida. (16)

अश्विपुत्रौ महावेगावेतौ प्लवगसत्तमौ ।
एतयोः प्रतियोद्धारं न पश्यामि रणाजिरे ॥ १७ ॥

“These two sons of the Aświnīkumāras, are endowed with great impetuosity and are the foremost among monkeys. I do not find any match for them on the field of battle. (17)

मयैव निहता लङ्का दग्धा भस्मीकृता पुरी ।
राजमार्गेषु सर्वेषु नाम विश्रावितं मया ॥ १८ ॥

“By me alone was Laṅkā, the ogress presiding over Laṅkā, laid low and the city set to fire and reduced to ashes. Nay, in all the principal streets the name of Śrī Rāma and others was proclaimed by me as follows: (18)

जयत्यतिबलो रामो लक्ष्मणश्च महाबलः ।
राजा जयति सुग्रीवो राघवेणाभिपालितः ॥ १९ ॥

“‘Victorious is Śrī Rāma of exceeding might, as also Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might ! Victorious is King Sugrīva, who is protected on all sides by Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) ! (19)

अहं कोसलराजस्य दासः पवनसम्भवः ।
हनूमानिति सर्वत्र नाम विश्रावितं मया ॥ २० ॥

“‘I am Hanumān, a servant of Śrī Rāma, ruler of the kingdom of Kośāla, and son of the wind-god.’ In this way the name of Śrī Rāma and others was proclaimed by me everywhere. (20)

अशोकवनिकामध्ये रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ।
अधस्ताच्छिंशपामूले साध्वी करुणमास्थिता ॥ २१ ॥
राक्षसीभिः परिवृता शोकसंतापकर्षिता ।
मेघरेखापरिवृता चन्द्ररेखेव निष्प्रभा ॥ २२ ॥

“The virtuous lady Sītā abides in a pitiable condition on the ground at the foot of a Śīmśapā tree in the heart of a grove of Aśoka trees, belonging to the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, surrounded by ogresses, nay, emaciated through grief and agony and bereft of splendour like a digit of the moon veiled by the strip of a cloud. (21-22)

अचिन्तयन्ती वैदेही रावणं बलदर्पितम् ।
पतिव्रता च सुश्रोणी अवष्टब्धा च जानकी ॥ २३ ॥

“Caring little for Rāvaṇa, who is proud of his might, Sītā of charming limbs, a princess of the Videha territory, who has taken a vow of fidelity to her lord, has been placed under restraint. (23)

अनुरक्ता हि वैदेही रामे सर्वात्मना शुभा ।
अनन्यचित्ता रामेण पौलोमीव पुरन्दरे ॥ २४ ॥

“Devoted to Śrī Rāma with her whole being, the blessed Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, has set her mind exclusively on Śrī Rāma even as Śaci (daughter of the demon Pulomā) on Indra. (24)

तदेकवासःसंवीता रजोध्वस्ता तथैव च ।
सा मया राक्षसीमध्ये तर्ज्यमाना मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ २५ ॥
राक्षसीभिर्विरूपाभिर्दृष्टा हि प्रमदावने ।
एकवेणीधरा दीना भर्तृचिन्तापरायणा ॥ २६ ॥

“Clad in a single piece of cloth, which she had on her person even while being borne away by Rāvaṇa, and likewise soiled with dust, she was actually seen by me in a wretched condition in the midst of ogresses in a pleasance, wearing a single braid, absorbed in the thought of her husband and being threatened again and again by misshapen ogresses. (25-26)

अधःशय्या विवर्णाङ्गी पद्मिनीव हिमोदये ।
रावणाद् विनिवृत्तार्था मर्तव्यकृतनिश्चया ॥ २७ ॥

“She stretches herself on the bare ground, has grown pale of body like a lotus plant at the dawn of winter, has utterly refused to have anything to do with Rāvaṇa and is determined to die rather than submit to Rāvaṇa. (27)

कथंचिन्मृगशावाक्षी विश्वासमुपपादिता ।
ततः सम्भाषिता चैव सर्वमर्थं प्रकाशिता ॥ २८ ॥

“Somehow the lady with eyes like those of a fawn was inspired with confidence. She was then talked to and apprised of the whole truth. (28)

रामसुग्रीवसख्यं च श्रुत्वा प्रीतिमुपागता ।
नियतः समुदाचारो भक्तिर्भर्तारि चोत्तमा ॥ २९ ॥

“Hearing of the alliance between Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva, she experienced joy. Constant is her chastity and supreme is her devotion to her lord. (29)

यत्र हन्ति दशग्रीवं स महात्मा दशाननः ।
निमित्तमात्रं रामस्तु वधे तस्य भविष्यति ॥ ३० ॥

“Since Sītā does not kill Rāvaṇa by subjecting him to a curse, it is evident that the aforesaid Rāvaṇa is very powerful by virtue of his asceticism. Nevertheless as the great sin incurred by him through the abduction of Sītā has filled his cup of sin to the brim, Śrī Rāma will serve only as an instrument for his death. (30)

सा प्रकृत्यैव तन्वङ्गी तद्वियोगाच्च कर्षिता ।
प्रतिपत्पाठशीलस्य विद्येव तनुतां गता ॥ ३१ ॥

“Frail-bodied by her very nature, Sītā has been further reduced through separation from her Lord and has grown thin like the learning of a scholar continuing his studies even on the first day of a lunar fortnight (which must be observed as a complete holiday by students). (31)

एवमास्ते महाभागा सीता शोकपरायणा ।
यदत्र प्रतिकर्तव्यं तत् सर्वमुपकल्प्यताम् ॥ ३२ ॥

“In this way the highly blessed Sītā remains given over to grief. Let all that be devised which requires to be done by way of a remedy in this behalf.” (32)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे एकोनषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ५९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-nine of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LX

Feeling encouraged by the tributes paid to his valour by his fellow monkeys, Prince Aṅgada undertakes to exterminate the entire ogre race including Rāvaṇa and bring back Sītā from Laṅkā.

Jāmbavān, however, who is more sagacious and practical-minded, discourages him by recourse to potent counter-arguments

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा वालिसूनुरभाषत ।
अश्विपुत्रौ महावेगौ बलवन्तौ प्लवंगमौ ॥ १ ॥
पितामहवरोत्सेकात् परमं दर्पमास्थितौ ।
अश्विनोर्माननार्थं हि सर्वलोकपितामहः ॥ २ ॥
सर्वावध्यत्वमतुलमनयोर्दत्तवान् पुरा ।
वरोत्सेकेन मत्तौ च प्रमथ्य महतीं चमूम् ॥ ३ ॥

सुराणाममृतं वीरौ पीतवन्तौ महाबलौ ।
एतावेव हि संक्रुद्धौ सवाजिरथकुञ्जराम् ॥ ४ ॥
लङ्कां नाशयितुं शक्तौ सर्वे तिष्ठन्तु वानराः ।
अहमेकोऽपि पर्याप्तः सराक्षसगणां पुरीम् ॥ ५ ॥
तां लङ्कां तरसा हन्तुं रावणं च महाबलम् ।
किं पुनः सहितो वीरैर्बलवद्भिः कृतात्मभिः ॥ ६ ॥

कृतास्त्रैः प्लवगैः शक्तैर्भवद्विजयैषिभिः ।
वायुसूनोर्बलैरेव दग्धा लङ्केति नः श्रुतम् ॥ ७ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid narration of Hanumān, Aṅgada (son of Vāli) spoke as follows : “The two mighty monkeys, Mainda and Dwivida (sons of the Aświnikumāras, the twin born physicians of gods), who are endowed with great impetuosity, fell a prey to great vanity due to haughtiness caused by a boon granted in their favour by Brahmā (the grandfather of the entire creation). In order to do honour to the Aświnikumāras, Brahmā (the grandfather of the whole universe) actually bestowed on these two monkeys (Mainda and Dwivida) on a former occasion the incomparable boon in the shape of incapability of being slain by anyone. Having completely routed the mighty army of the gods, the two heroes, who were intoxicated with pride occasioned by this rare boon and were endowed with extraordinary might, quaffed the drink of immortality. Highly enraged, these two alone are actually able to destroy Laṅkā with its horses, chariots and elephants, let alone all the other monkeys. Even single-handed I am capable of destroying with my might the aforesaid city of Laṅkā with its hosts of ogres and killing Rāvaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might, much more so when accompanied by you, heroic, mighty and powerful monkeys, disciplined of mind, skilled in the use of missiles and eager for victory. It has just been heard by us that Laṅkā was burnt by the very might of Hanumān (son of the wind-god). (1—7)

दृष्ट्वा देवी न चानीता इति तत्र निवेदितुम् ।
न युक्तमिव पश्यामि भवद्विः ख्यातपौरुषैः ॥ ८ ॥

“I do not deem it fit to be reported there at Kiṣkindhā by you, whose virility is well-known, that the godlike lady Sitā has been discovered but not recovered. (8)

नहि वः प्लवने कश्चिन्नापि कश्चित् पराक्रमे ।
तुल्यः सामरदैत्येषु लोकेषु हरिसत्तमाः ॥ ९ ॥

“None among the inhabitants of all the worlds, including gods and demons, is your match in leaping or in valour, O jewels among the monkeys ! (9)

जित्वा लङ्कां सरक्षौघां हत्वा तं रावणं रणे ।
सीतामादाय गच्छामः सिद्धार्था हृष्टमानसाः ॥ १० ॥

“Conquering Laṅkā with its hosts of ogres, and killing the notorious Rāvaṇa in an encounter, and taking Sitā back, we should all return to Kiṣkindhā, accomplished of purpose and rejoiced at heart. (10)

तेष्वेवं हतवीरेषु राक्षसेषु हनूमता ।
किमन्यदत्र कर्तव्यं गृहीत्वा याम जानकीम् ॥ ११ ॥

“When the valiant among the ogres have thus been killed by Hanumān, what else remains to be done at this hour? Let us, therefore, return taking the daughter of Janaka with us. (11)

रामलक्ष्मणयोर्मध्ये न्यस्याम जनकात्मजाम् ।
किं व्यलीकैस्तु तान् सर्वान् वानरान् वानरर्षभान् ॥ १२ ॥

“Let us take and place the daughter of Janaka between Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. What shall we gain by unnecessarily burdening the monkeys assembled at Kiṣkindhā, who are all jewels among monkeys, with hardships involved in leaping across the sea? (12)

वयमेव हि गत्वा तान् हत्वा राक्षसपुङ्गवान् ।
राघवं द्रष्टुमर्हामः सुग्रीवं सहलक्ष्मणम् ॥ १३ ॥

“Going to Laṅkā and making short work of those jewels among ogres, we ourselves should actually see Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, as well as Sugrīva.” (13)

तमेवं कृतसंकल्पं जाम्बवान् हरिसत्तमः ।
उवाच परमप्रीतो वाक्यमर्थवदर्थवित् ॥ १४ ॥

To Aṅgada, who had resolved as above, Jāmbavān, the foremost of monkeys and bears, who knew the truth, and felt highly pleased, made the following significant reply : (14)

नैषा बुद्धिर्महाबुद्धे यद् ब्रवीषि महाकपे ।
 विचेतुं वयमाज्ञप्ता दक्षिणां दिशमुत्तमाम् ॥ १५ ॥
 नानेतुं कपिराजेन नैव रामेण धीमता ।
 कथंचिन्निर्जितां सीतामस्माभिर्नाभिरोचयेत् ॥ १६ ॥
 राघवो नृपशार्दूलः कुलं व्यपदिशन् स्वकम् ।
 प्रतिज्ञाय स्वयं राजा सीताविजयमग्रतः ॥ १७ ॥
 सर्वेषां कपिमुख्यानां कथं मिथ्या करिष्यति ।
 विफलं कर्म च कृतं भवेत् तुष्टिर्न तस्य च ॥ १८ ॥
 वृथा च दर्शितं वीर्यं भवेद् वानरपुङ्गवाः ।
 तस्माद् गच्छाम वै सर्वे यत्र रामः सलक्ष्मणः ।
 सुग्रीवश्च महातेजाः कार्यस्यास्य निवेदने ॥ १९ ॥

“What you say, O mighty monkey of great understanding, is not wisdom. We were enjoined only to explore the excellent southern quarter, and not to bring back Sītā either by Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, or by the sagacious Śrī Rāma. In the name of his own race Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, a veritable tiger among kings, may not like Sītā having anyhow been won by us. Having taken a vow before all the leading monkeys that he would win back Sītā himself, how will he falsify his vow? The work accomplished by Hanumān will then have been rendered fruitless nor will his pleasure be won and the valour exhibited in winning back Sītā will also prove infructuous, O bulls among monkeys! Therefore, in order to report this achievement of Hanumān, let us all actually return to where Śrī Rāma, accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, and Sugrīva, who is endowed with extraordinary energy, are. (15—19)

न तावदेषा मतिरक्षमा नो
 यथा भवान् पश्यति राजपुत्र ।
 यथा तु रामस्य मतिर्निविष्टा
 तथा भवान् पश्यतु कार्यसिद्धिम् ॥ २० ॥

“This suggestion of yours, the way in which you are thinking, O prince, is not at all such as we may not be able to carry out. But devise you the means to accomplish our purpose according to the decision arrived at by Śrī Rāma.” (20)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे षष्ठितमः सर्गः ॥ ६० ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXI

Set out from the Mahendra mountain in the direction of Kiṣkindhā, the monkeys halt at Madhuvana, a grove guarded by the monkey Dadhimukha, and most beloved of Sugrīva, which falls on their way. When the monkeys began to enjoy the fruits of the grove with the permission of Prince Aṅgada, Dadhimukha, comes in their way and is lacerated with their claws and teeth

ततो जाम्बवतो वाक्यमगृह्णन्त वनौकसः ।
 अङ्गदप्रमुखा वीरा हनूमांश्च महाकपिः ॥ १ ॥
 The heroic monkeys headed by Aṅgada, as well as the great monkey, Hanumān, thereupon accepted the advice of Jāmbavān. (1)

 प्रीतिमन्तस्ततः सर्वे वायुपुत्रपुरःसराः ।
 महेन्द्राग्रात् समुत्पत्य पुप्लुबुः प्लवगर्षभाः ॥ २ ॥
 मेरुमन्दरसंकाशा मत्ता इव महागजाः ।
 छादयन्त इवाकाशं महाकाया महाबलाः ॥ ३ ॥

सभाज्यमानं भूतैस्तमात्मवन्तं महाबलम् ।
हनूमन्तं महावेगं वहन्त इव दृष्टिभिः ॥ ४ ॥
राघवे चार्थनिर्वृत्तिं कर्तुं च परमं यशः ।
समाधाय समृद्धार्थाः कर्मसिद्धिभिरुन्नताः ॥ ५ ॥

Having made up their mind to accomplish the purpose of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, and to bring the highest renown to him, and leaping from the aforesaid summit of the Mahendra mountain, all the jewels among monkeys—who were gigantic like the Meru and Mandāra mountains and resembled lordly elephants in rut, and were endowed with extraordinary might, nay, who were accomplished of purpose and felt exalted due to successes in their undertakings, leapt forward in the direction of Kiṣkindhā, full of joy, with Hanumān (son of the wind-god) at their head, covering the space, as it were, nay, bearing the celebrated, self-possessed and exceptionally mighty Hanumān, who was endowed with great impetuosity and was being honoured by heavenly beings by their gazes, as it were. (2—5)

प्रियाख्यानोन्मुखाः सर्वे सर्वे युद्धाभिनन्दिनः ।
सर्वे रामप्रतीकारे निश्चितार्था मनस्विनः ॥ ६ ॥

All were keen to break the pleasant tidings; all hailed war and all were determined to assist Śrī Rāma in subduing Rāvaṇa, and were high-minded. (6)

प्लवमानाः खमाप्लुत्य ततस्ते काननौकसः ।
नन्दनोपममासेदुर्वनं द्रुमशतायुतम् ॥ ७ ॥

Bounding into the air, the aforesaid monkeys arrived, leaping at a grove full of hundreds of trees and vying with the Nandana grove in paradise. (7)

यत् तन्मधुवनं नाम सुग्रीवस्याभिरक्षितम् ।
अधृष्यं सर्वभूतानां सर्वभूतमनोहरम् ॥ ८ ॥
यद् रक्षति महावीरः सदा दधिमुखः कपिः ।
मातुलः कपिमुख्यस्य सुग्रीवस्य महात्मनः ॥ ९ ॥
ते तद् वनमुपागम्य बभूवुः परमोत्कटाः ।
वानरा वानरेन्द्रस्य मनःकान्तं महावनम् ॥ १० ॥

Those monkeys felt supremely eager to partake of the honey etc., in which the grove abounded or reaching that grove, Madhuvana by name, belonging to Sugriva, which was an extensive grove protected on all sides, and as such inviolable for all created beings, nay, which captivated the soul of all created beings, which was constantly guarded by the exceptionally gallant monkey, Dadhimukha, maternal uncle of the high-souled Sugriva, the foremost of monkeys, and which was pleasing to the mind, O Sugriva, the ruler of monkeys. (8—10)

ततस्ते वानरा हृष्टा दृष्ट्वा मधुवनं महत् ।
कुमारमभ्ययाचन्त मधूनि मधुपिङ्गलाः ॥ ११ ॥

Rejoiced to see the extensive Madhuvana, the aforesaid monkeys, who were reddish brown as honey, thereupon asked Prince Āṅgada for permission to taste the honey. (11)

ततः कुमारस्तान् वृद्धाञ्जाम्बवत्प्रमुखान् कपीन् ।
अनुमान्य ददौ तेषां निसर्गं मधुभक्षणे ॥ १२ ॥

Securing the consent of those elderly monkeys headed by Jāmbavān, the prince then granted them permission to partake of the honey. (12)

ते निसृष्टाः कुमारेण धीमता वालिसूनुना ।
हरयः समपद्यन्त द्रुमान् मधुकराकुलान् ॥ १३ ॥

Authorized by the sagacious Prince Āṅgada (son of Vāli), those monkeys approached the trees swarming with bees. (13)

भक्षयन्तः सुगन्धीनि मूलानि च फलानि च ।
जग्मुः प्रहर्षं ते सर्वे बभूवुश्च मदोत्कटाः ॥ १४ ॥

Feasting on the fragrant roots and fruits too, they all experienced great joy and got excited through drink. (14)

ततश्चानुमताः सर्वे सुसंहृष्टा वनौकसः ।
मुदिताश्च ततस्ते च प्रनृत्यन्ति ततस्ततः ॥ १५ ॥

Having been granted permission by Āṅgada to partake of the honey, all the monkeys now felt extremely delighted. Nay, feeling rejoiced, they then began to dance merrily here and there. (15)

गायन्ति केचित् प्रहसन्ति केचि-

नृत्यन्ति केचित् प्रणमन्ति केचित् ।

पतन्ति केचित् प्रचरन्ति केचित्

प्लवन्ति केचित् प्रलपन्ति केचित् ॥ १६ ॥

While some sang, others laughed to their heart's content, still others danced, while many more meekly bowed down. Again, some fell down, others moved quickly, still others bounded and some more raved. (16)

परस्परं केचिदुपाश्रयन्ति

परस्परं केचिदतिबुवन्ति ।

द्रुमाद् द्रुमं केचिदभिद्रवन्ति

क्षितौ नगाग्रान्निपतन्ति केचित् ॥ १७ ॥

Some leaned against one another, others disputed with one another, still others ran from one tree to another while many more jumped to the ground from tree-tops. (17)

महीतलात् केचिदुदीर्णवेगा

महाद्रुमाग्राण्यभिसम्पतन्ति ।

गायन्तमन्यः प्रहसन्नुपैति

हसन्तमन्यः प्ररुदन्नुपैति ॥ १८ ॥

Some with increased impetuosity flew to the top of gigantic trees from the earth's surface. While one was singing, another approached him laughing to his heart's content; and while one was laughing, another went up to him weeping bitterly. (18)

तुदन्तमन्यः प्रणदन्नुपैति

समाकुलं तत् कपिसैन्यमासीत् ।

न चात्र कश्चिन्न बभूव मत्तो

न चात्र कश्चिन्न बभूव दूतः ॥ १९ ॥

While one was pinching another, a third approached the former roaring. In short, greatly excited was that entire army of monkeys. None in that army was not drunk; and none in that army was not haughty. (19)

ततो वनं तत् परिभक्ष्यमाणं

द्रुमांश्च विध्वंसितपत्रपुष्पान् ।

समीक्ष्य कोपाद् दधिवक्त्रनामा

निवारयामास कपिः कर्पीस्तान् ॥ २० ॥

Perceiving that grove being wrecked and the trees stripped off their leaves and blossom, the monkey named Dadhimukha (who had been placed in charge of the grove by King Sugriva) angrily checked the aforesaid monkeys. (20)

स तैः प्रवृद्धैः परिभर्त्स्यमानो

वनस्य गोप्ता हरिवृद्धवीरः ।

चकार भूयो मतिमुग्रतेजा

वनस्य रक्षां प्रति वानरेभ्यः ॥ २१ ॥

While being upbraided by those arrogant monkeys, that elderly hero among the monkeys, who guarded the grove, and was endowed with terrific energy, further contemplated the means of protecting the grove against the monkeys. (21)

उवाच कांश्चित् परुषाण्यभीत-

मसक्तमन्यांश्च तलैर्जघान ।

समेत्य कैश्चित् कलहं चकार

तथैव साम्नोपजगाम कांश्चित् ॥ २२ ॥

He dauntlessly spoke harsh words to some, while others he smote immediately with his palms; coming at close quarters with others, he wrangled with them, while still others he approached with soothing words. (22)

स तैर्मदादप्रतिवार्यवेगै-

र्बलाच्च तेन प्रतिवार्यमाणैः ।

प्रधर्षणे त्यक्तभयैः समेत्य

प्रकृष्यते चाप्यनवेक्ष्य दोषम् ॥ २३ ॥

Dadhimukha began to be dragged violently by those monkeys, who were being forcibly checked by him even though their vehemence had become irresistible due to their inebriety, nay, who had cast away all fear and who had joined together, taking no account of the guilt involved in assaulting a servant of the king. (23)

नखैस्तुदन्तो दशनैर्दशन्त-स्तलैश्च पादैश्च समापयन्तः ।
 मदात् कपिं ते कपयः समन्ता-
 न्महावनं निर्विषयं च चक्रुः ॥ २४ ॥
 Scratching Dadhimukha with their claws, biting him with their teeth and taking the life out of him, as it were, with their slaps and kicks in their drunkenness, the aforesaid monkeys divested that extensive grove on all sides of all its edibles in the shape of fruits, honey and roots etc. (24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे
 एकषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-one of the Sundarākāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXII

Having entered Madhuvana and partaken of honey, as permitted by Hanumān, and singing and dancing like drunken people, the monkeys were forbidden by those guarding the grove and they belaboured the latter. Repulsed by them, the guards reported the matter to their leader, Dadhimukha, who appeared on the scene with his entourage and on remonstrating with the monkeys was thrashed by Aṅgada, who dashed him to the ground. The guards headed by Dadhimukha then move en masse to Kiṣkindhā to report the matter to Sugrīva and bow down at the latter's feet

तानुवाच हरिश्रेष्ठो हनूमान् वानरर्षभः ।
 अव्यग्रमनसो यूयं मधु सेवत वानराः ॥ १ ॥

Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys and a veritable jewel among them, spoke to them as follows: "With an undisturbed mind enjoy you the honey, O monkeys ! (1)

अहमावर्जयिष्यामि युष्माकं परिपन्थिनः ।
 श्रुत्वा हनूमतो वाक्यं हरीणां प्रवरोऽङ्गदः ॥ २ ॥
 प्रत्युवाच प्रसन्नात्मा पिबन्तु हरयो मधु ।
 अवश्यं कृतकार्यस्य वाक्यं हनूमतो मया ॥ ३ ॥
 अकार्यमपि कर्तव्यं किमङ्गं पुनरीदृशम् ।
 अङ्गदस्य मुखाच्छ्रुत्वा वचनं वानरर्षभाः ॥ ४ ॥
 साधु साध्विति संहृष्टा वानराः प्रत्यपूजयन् ।
 पूजयित्वाङ्गदं सर्वे वानरा वानरर्षभम् ॥ ५ ॥
 जग्मुर्मधुवनं यत्र नदीवेग इव हुमम् ।
 ते प्रविष्टा मधुवनं पालानाक्रम्य शक्तितः ॥ ६ ॥

अतिसर्गाच्च पटवो दृष्ट्वा श्रुत्वा च मैथिलीम् ।
 पपुः सर्वे मधु तदा रसवत् फलमाददुः ॥ ७ ॥

"I shall ward off those who hinder you." Delighted at heart to hear the exhortation of Hanumān, Aṅgada, the most eminent of monkeys, echoed his words as follows : "Let the monkeys drink honey. The direction of Hanumān, who has accomplished his errand, must be followed by me even if it is not worth following, much more an advice of this type which is worth following, O dear ones !" Highly rejoiced to hear the compliment coming from the lips of Aṅgada, the monkeys, who were the foremost of their class, approved it, saying "Excellent ! Bravo !" Applauding Aṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, all the monkeys proceeded once more to the site where Madhuvana was, even as the strong current of a river would rush towards a tree standing on its bank. Having penetrated deep into Madhuvana after overpowering the guards by dint of their superior might, all the monkeys—who felt exceptionally strong due to the permission granted by Āṅgada to enjoy the produce of the grove and because Hanumān had seen Sītā, princess of Mithilā, and others had heard of her being present in Laṅkā, drank honey on that happy occasion and gathered the delicious fruits to enjoy them. (2—7)

उत्पत्य च ततः सर्वे वनपालान् समागतान्।
ते ताडयन्तः शतशः सक्ता मधुवने तदा ॥ ८ ॥

Jumping up and thrashing the guards of the grove, who had come together to hinder them, all the monkeys then became engaged in hundreds in gathering the fruit etc., in Madhuvana on that occasion. (8)

मधूनि द्रोणमात्राणि बाहुभिः परिगृह्य ते।
पिबन्ति कपयः केचित् सङ्कुशस्तत्र हृष्टवत् ॥ ९ ॥

Holding with their arms honeycombs weighing a Droṇa (approx. 30 Kg.) each, some monkeys in that grove quaffed the honey in groups to their heart's content. (9)

घ्नन्ति स्म सहिताः सर्वे भक्षयन्ति तथापरे।
केचित् पीत्वापविध्यन्ति मधूनि मधुपिङ्गलाः ॥ १० ॥

All the monkeys, who were reddish brown like honey, broke the honeycombs together, while others partook of the honey contained in those combs, while still others threw away the combs after drinking the honey. (10)

मधूच्छिष्टेन केचिच्च जघ्नुरन्योन्यमुत्कटाः।
अपरे वृक्षमूलेषु शाखा गृह्य व्यवस्थिताः ॥ ११ ॥

Others, who were intoxicated, pelted one another with balls of wax, while still others stood rooted at the foot of trees, seizing the boughs. (11)

अत्यर्थं च मदग्लानाः पर्णान्यास्तीर्य शेरते।
उन्मत्तवेगाः प्लवगा मधुमत्ताश्च हृष्टवत् ॥ १२ ॥

Feeling utterly languid through inebriety, monkeys, who were drunk with honey and possessed the impetuosity of a madman, lay down, full of joy, spreading leaves on the ground. (12)

क्षिपन्त्यपि तथान्योन्यं स्खलन्ति च तथापरे।
केचित् क्ष्वेडान् प्रकुर्वन्ति केचित् कूजन्ति हृष्टवत् ॥ १३ ॥

Others, likewise, insulted one another, while others stumbled down. Some roared like lions, while others, full of joy, whistled like birds. (13)

हरयो मधुना मत्ताः केचित् सुप्ता महीतले।
धृष्टाः केचिद्धसन्त्यन्ये केचित् कुर्वन्ति चेतवत् ॥ १४ ॥

Drunk with honey, some monkeys lay down to repose on the earth's surface, while other impudent monkeys laughed, while still others did the reverse, i.e., wept. (14)

कृत्वा केचिद् वदन्यन्ये केचिद् बुध्यन्ति चेतवत्।
येऽप्यत्र मधुपालाः स्युः प्रेष्या दधिमुखस्य तु ॥ १५ ॥

Having done one thing, some monkeys pretended to have done something else, while still others construed their acts in a different way. (15)

तेऽपि तैर्वानरैर्भीमैः प्रतिषिद्धा दिशो गताः।
जानुभिश्च प्रघृष्टाश्च देवमार्गं च दर्शिताः ॥ १६ ॥

Hindered in their duty by those terrible monkeys, even the aforesaid servants of Dadhimukha, who for their part guarded the honey in this grove, fled in all directions. Nay, they were dragged by their knees and, further seized by their feet, were tossed up in the air. (16)

अब्रुवन् परमोद्विग्ना गत्वा दधिमुखं वचः।
हनुमता दत्तवरैर्हतं मधुवनं बलात्।
वयं च जानुभिर्घृष्टा देवमार्गं च दर्शिताः ॥ १७ ॥

Approaching Dadhimukha, greatly alarmed as they were, they submitted as follows : “Madhuvana has been forcibly laid waste by the monkeys, who had been granted by Hanumān, the privilege to enjoy the fruits etc., of the grove. Nay, we too were dragged by the knees and, seized by the feet, tossed up in the air.” (17)

तदा दधिमुखः क्रुद्धो वनपस्तत्र वानरः ।
हतं मधुवनं श्रुत्वा सान्त्वयामास तान् हरीन् ॥ १८ ॥
एतागच्छत गच्छामो वानरानतिदर्पितान् ।
बलेनावारयिष्यामि प्रभुञ्जानान् मधूत्तमम् ॥ १९ ॥

Incensed to hear of Madhuvana having been devastated by the monkeys, Dadhimukha, whose duty it was to guard the grove, consoled the reporting monkeys on that occasion as follows : “Come along, come away; let us approach the highly arrogant monkeys. I shall forcibly ward off the monkeys feasting on the excellent honey.” (18-19)

श्रुत्वा दधिमुखस्येदं वचनं वानरर्षभाः ।
पुनर्वीरा मधुवनं तेनैव सहिता ययुः ॥ २० ॥

Hearing this assurance of Dadhimukha, the aforesaid heroic jewels among monkeys retraced their steps to Madhuvana, accompanied by Dadhimukha himself. (20)

मध्ये चैषां दधिमुखः सुप्रगृह्य महातरुम् ।
समभ्यधावन् वेगेन सर्वे ते च प्लवंगमाः ॥ २१ ॥

Nay, uprooting and firmly seizing a huge tree, Dadhimukha took up his position in their midst. And all the aforesaid monkeys ran with all speed in the direction of Madhuvana. (21)

ते शिलाः पादपांश्चैव पाषाणानपि वानराः ।
गृहीत्वाभ्यागमन् क्रुद्धा यत्र ते कपिकुञ्जराः ॥ २२ ॥

Seizing rocks and trees as well as slabs of stone, those monkeys arrived, full of rage, at the place where those elephants among monkeys were. (22)

बलान्निवारयन्तश्च आसेदुर्हरयो हरीन् ।
संदष्टौष्ठपुटाः क्रुद्धा भर्त्सयन्तो मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ २३ ॥

Forcibly hindering the monkeys, nay, biting their lips in rage and threatening them again and again, the monkeys came near them. (23)

अथ दृष्ट्वा दधिमुखं क्रुद्धं वानरपुङ्गवाः ।
अभ्यधावन्त वेगेन हनुमत्प्रमुखास्तदा ॥ २४ ॥

Seeing Dadhimukha enraged, the aforesaid bulls among monkeys, headed by Hanumān, forthwith ran with all speed to meet them on that occasion. (24)

सर्वश्वं तं महाबाहुमापतन्तं महाबलम् ।
वेगवन्तं विजग्राह बाहुभ्यां कुपितोऽङ्गदः ॥ २५ ॥

Full of rage, Aṅgada clasped tightly by his arms the mighty-armed Dadhimukha, who was endowed with extraordinary might and was rushing with all speed, tree in hand. (25)

मदान्धो न कृपां चक्रे आर्यकोऽयं ममेति सः ।
अथैनं निष्पिपेषाशु वेगेन वसुधातले ॥ २६ ॥

Blinded with intoxication, he did not show any mercy to him on the score of his being his granduncle. Nay, causing him at once to fall down, he began to rub him against the ground with vehemence. (26)

स भग्नबाहूरुमुखो विह्वलः शोणितोक्षितः ।
प्रमुमोह महावीरो मुहूर्तं कपिकुञ्जराः ॥ २७ ॥

Having completely lost control over himself, nay, bathed in blood, his arms, thighs and face broken, that elephant among monkeys, an eminent hero, fainted away for a moment. (27)

स कथंचिद् विमुक्तस्तैर्वानरैर्वानरर्षभः ।
उवाचैकान्तमागत्य स्वान् भृत्यान् समुपागतान् ॥ २८ ॥

Withdrawing to a secluded corner when let go somehow by those monkeys, that jewel among monkeys spoke as follows to his subordinates, who had come very near: (28)

एतागच्छत गच्छामो भर्ता नो यत्र वानरः ।
सुग्रीवो विपुलग्रीवः सह रामेण तिष्ठति ॥ २९ ॥

“Come along, come away; we shall proceed to where the thick-necked monkey, Sugrīva, our master, is staying with Śrī Rāma. (29)

सर्वं चैवाङ्गदे दोषं श्रावयिष्याम पार्थिवे ।
अमर्षी वचनं श्रुत्वा घातयिष्यति वानरान् ॥ ३० ॥

“Nay, we shall make known to the king

all the misconduct of Aṅgada. Full of indignation he will cause the offending monkeys to be put to death on hearing our complaint. (30)

इष्टं मधुवनं ह्येतत् सुग्रीवस्य महात्मनः ।
पितृपैतामहं दिव्यं देवैरपि दुरासदम् ॥ ३१ ॥

“For, this wonderful Madhuvana, which has been inherited by him from his forefathers and is difficult to approach even for gods, is dear to the high-souled Sugrīva. (31)

स वानरानिमान् सर्वान् मधुलुब्धान् गतायुषः ।
घातयिष्यति दण्डेन सुग्रीवः समुहज्जनान् ॥ ३२ ॥

“The celebrated Sugrīva will cause to be killed by way of punishment all these monkeys—avid for honey, whose sands of life have already run out—alongwith their near and dear ones. (32)

वध्या ह्येते दुरात्मानो नृपाज्ञापरिपन्थिनः ।
अमर्षप्रभवो रोषः सफलो मे भविष्यति ॥ ३३ ॥

“These evil-minded monkeys, deserve to be killed because they have flouted the royal command. Born of indignation, my wrath will bear fruit only then.” (33)

एवमुक्त्वा दधिमुखो वनपालान् महाबलः ।
जगाम सहस्रोत्पत्य वनपालैः समन्वितः ॥ ३४ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid to the guards of the grove, and springing up all at once, Dadhimukha, who was endowed with extraordinary might, departed for Kiṣkindhā, duly accompanied by the guards of the grove. (34)

निमेषान्तरमात्रेण स हि प्राप्तो वनालयः ।

सहस्रांशुसुतो धीमान् सुग्रीवो यत्र वानरः ॥ ३५ ॥

In the mere twinkling of an eye the aforesaid monkey actually reached the place where the sagacious monkey, Sugrīva, son of the sun god, was. (35)

रामं च लक्ष्मणं चैव दृष्ट्वा सुग्रीवमेव च ।

समप्रतिष्ठां जगतीमाकाशान्निपपात ह ॥ ३६ ॥

Beholding from a distance Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa too, as well as Sugrīva, he descended to a level ground from the airspace: so the tradition goes. (36)

स निपत्य महावीरः सर्वैस्तैः परिवारितः ।

हरिर्दधिमुखः पालैः पालानां परमेश्वरः ॥ ३७ ॥

स दीनवदनो भूत्वा कृत्वा शिरसि चाञ्जलिम् ।

सुग्रीवस्याशु तौ मूर्ध्ना चरणौ प्रत्यपीडयत् ॥ ३८ ॥

Coming down, surrounded by all the aforesaid guards, nay, wearing a miserable aspect and placing his joined palms over his head, that monkey, Dadhimukha, the paramount leader of those guards, who was a great hero, forthwith pressed the well-known feet of Sugrīva with his head. (37-38)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये

सुन्दरकाण्डे द्विषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-two of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXIII

Having heard from the mouth of Dadhimukha the story of Madhuvana having been laid waste by the monkeys, Sugrīva concludes from the jubilation of the monkeys that Sītā has been traced out.

Comforting Dadhimukha, he asks him to send Aṅgada and others without delay

ततो मूर्ध्ना निपतितं वानरं वानरर्षभः ।
दृष्ट्वैवोद्विग्नहृदयो वाक्यमेतदुवाच ह ॥ १ ॥

Feeling anxious at heart on seeing the monkey Dadhimukha fallen flat with his head touching the ground, Sugrīva, the foremost of monkeys, forthwith spoke as follows: so it is said: (1)

उत्तिष्ठोत्तिष्ठ कस्मात् त्वं पादयोः पतितो मम ।
अभयं ते प्रदास्यामि सत्यमेवाभिधीयताम् ॥ २ ॥

“Stand up, rise! Why are you lying prostrate at my feet? I shall grant you immunity from all fear: let the bare truth be spoken. (2)

किं सम्भ्रमाद्धितं कृत्स्नं ब्रूहि यद् वक्तुमर्हसि ।
कच्चिन्मधुवने स्वस्ति श्रोतुमिच्छामि वानर ॥ ३ ॥

“Through whose fear have you come? Speak out that which is wholly conducive to our interest, since you are free to speak anything you like. I hope all is well with Madhuvana. I wish to hear everything from you, O monkey!” (3)

स समाश्वासितस्तेन सुग्रीवेण महात्मना ।
उत्थाय स महाप्राज्ञो वाक्यं दधिमुखोऽब्रवीत् ॥ ४ ॥

Getting up when fully comforted in the foregoing words by the aforesaid Sugrīva, who had a lofty mind, that highly sagacious monkey, Dadhimukha, spoke as follows: (4)

नैवर्क्षरजसा राजन् न त्वया न च वालिना ।
वनं निमृष्टपूर्वं ते नाशितं तत्तु वानरैः ॥ ५ ॥

“That grove Madhuvana, which had never before suffered either by your father

Rikṣarāja or by yourself or even by your elder brother and predecessor, Vāli, to be freely enjoyed by anyone, has been actually laid waste by the monkeys, O king! (5)

न्यवारयमहं सर्वान् सहैभिर्वनचारिभिः ।
अचिन्तयित्वा मां हृष्टा भक्षयन्ति पिबन्ति च ॥ ६ ॥

“Alongwith these monkey-guards, I checked them all; disregarding me, however, they merrily continued to feast on the fruits and drink the honey. (6)

एभिः प्रधर्षणायां च वारितं वनपालकैः ।
मामप्यचिन्तयन् देव भक्षयन्ति वनौकसः ॥ ७ ॥

“On the depredation being commenced by them, resistance was offered by the guards of the grove; but disregarding even me, O lord, the monkeys continued to eat and drink the produce of the grove. (7)

शिष्टमत्रापविध्यन्ति भक्षयन्ति तथापरे ।
निवार्यमाणास्ते सर्वे भ्रुकुटिं दर्शयन्ति हि ॥ ८ ॥

“Some monkeys not only partook of the honey but they threw away what remained in the honeycomb. While being checked they all actually frowned at us. (8)

इमे हि संरब्धतरास्तदा तैः सम्प्रधर्षिताः ।
निवार्यन्ते वनात् तस्मात् क्रुद्धैर्वानरपुङ्गवैः ॥ ९ ॥

“When these guards got more enraged, they were actually assaulted by the intruders. Nay, they were driven away from that grove by the excited leaders of monkeys. (9)

ततस्तैर्बहुभिर्वीरैर्वानरैर्वानरर्षभाः ।
संरक्तनयनैः क्रोधाद्धरयः सम्प्रधर्षिताः ॥ १० ॥

“The monkeys guarding the grove, who are veritable jewels among monkeys, were then assaulted by those numerous heroic monkeys with eyes blood-red through anger. (10)

पाणिभिर्निहताः केचित् केचिज्जानुभिराहताः ।

प्रकृष्टाश्च तदा कामं देवमार्गं च दर्शिताः ॥ ११ ॥

“Some of these were struck with their hands, others with their knees and then dragged at will and flung in the air. (11)

एवमेते हताः शूरास्त्वयि तिष्ठति भर्तरि ।

कृत्स्नं मधुवनं चैव प्रकामं तैश्च भक्ष्यते ॥ १२ ॥

“In this way these valiant monkeys have been thrashed, while you, their master, continue to rule. Nay, the entire Madhuvana has been wrecked by them according to their free will.” (12)

एवं विज्ञाप्यमानं तं सुग्रीवं वानरर्षभम् ।

अपृच्छत् तं महाप्राज्ञो लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा ॥ १३ ॥

The highly sagacious Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of hostile warriors, interrogated as follows that jewel among monkeys, the celebrated Sugrīva, who was being informed as above: (13)

किमयं वानरो राजन् वनपः प्रत्युपस्थितः ।

किं चार्थमभिनिर्दिश्य दुःखितो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ १४ ॥

“What for has this monkey, who guards your grove arrived in your presence? Nay, concerning what matter has this monkey, full of agony, addressed an appeal to you, O king?” (14)

एवमुक्तस्तु सुग्रीवो लक्ष्मणेन महात्मना ।

लक्ष्मणं प्रत्युवाचेदं वाक्यं वाक्यविशारदः ॥ १५ ॥

Questioned thus by the high-souled Lakṣmaṇa, Sugrīva, for his part, who was a master of expression, submitted to Lakṣmaṇa as follows: (15)

आर्य लक्ष्मण सम्प्राह वीरो दधिमुखः कपिः ।

अद्भुतप्रमुखैर्वीरैर्भक्षितं मधु वानरैः ॥ १६ ॥

“O noble Lakṣmaṇa, the heroic monkey, Dadhimukha, was complaining that the honey and other products of Madhuvana had been consumed by the heroic monkeys with Aṅgada as their leader. (16)

नैषामकृतकार्याणामीदृशः स्याद् व्यतिक्रमः ।

वनं यदभिपन्नास्ते साधितं कर्म तद् ध्रुवम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Such an escapade could not have been indulged in by the monkeys had they not accomplished my purpose. Since they have started wrecking the grove, my work has surely been accomplished by them. (17)

वारयन्तो भृशं प्राप्ताः पाला जानुभिराहताः ।

तथा न गणितश्चायं कपिर्दधिमुखो बली ॥ १८ ॥

“The guards of the grove, who were posted there, hindering them again and again were crushed with their knees, nay, this mighty monkey, Dadhimukha, was not taken into account either. (18)

पतिर्मम वनस्यायमस्माभिः स्थापितः स्वयम् ।

दृष्टा देवी न संदेहो न चान्येन हनूमता ॥ १९ ॥

“This monkey Dadhimukha was posted by me as a guardian of this grove of mine. The godlike lady, Sītā, has been discovered: there is no doubt about it and she has been seen by Hanumān alone and by none else. (19)

न ह्यन्यः साधने हेतुः कर्मणोऽस्य हनूमतः ।

कार्यसिद्धिर्हनुमति मतिश्च हरिपुङ्गवे ॥ २० ॥

व्यवसायश्च वीर्यं च श्रुतं चापि प्रतिष्ठितम् ।

जाम्बवान् यत्र नेता स्यादद्भुतश्च महाबलः ॥ २१ ॥

हनूमांश्चाप्यधिष्ठाता न तत्र गतिरन्यथा ।

अद्भुतप्रमुखैर्वीरैर्हितं मधुवनं किल ॥ २२ ॥

विचित्य दक्षिणामाशामागतैर्हरिपुङ्गवैः ।

आगतैश्चाप्रधृष्टं तद्धतं मधुवनं हि तैः ॥ २३ ॥

“Surely none other than Hanumān is capable of accomplishing this task. The capacity to accomplish a deed as well as intelligence, nay strenuous effort and virility and learning too are firmly endowed in Hanumān, a veritable bull among monkeys. In an army where Jāmbavān as well as Aṅgada, who is endowed with extraordinary might, is the leader, and Hanumān a counsellor, failure is out of the question. Madhuvana, they say, has been laid waste by the heroic jewels among monkeys, headed by Aṅgada, who have returned after exploring the southern quarter. Nay, the celebrated Madhuvana, which could not be laid violent hands upon by anyone, has actually been devastated by them as soon as they returned from Laṅkā. (20—23)

धर्षितं च वनं कृत्स्नमुपयुक्तं तु वानरैः ।
पातिता वनपालास्ते तदा जानुभिराहताः ॥ २४ ॥

“The wood was not only laid violent hands upon but was wholly consumed by the monkeys. The aforesaid monkeys guarding the grove were knocked down by them and then rubbed with their knees. (24)

एतदर्थमयं प्राप्तो वक्तुं मधुरवागिह ।
नाम्ना दधिमुखो नाम हरिः प्रख्यातविक्रमः ॥ २५ ॥

“This monkey, Dadhimukha by name, who is sweet of expression and whose prowess is widely known, came here to report this matter. (25)

दृष्ट्वा सीता महाबाहो सौमित्रे पश्य तत्त्वतः ।
अभिगम्य यथा सर्वे पिबन्ति मधु वानराः ॥ २६ ॥

“Since reaching Madhuvana, the monkeys are all drinking honey; know it correctly, O mighty-armed son of Sumitrā, that Sītā has been discovered. (26)

न चाप्यदृष्ट्वा वैदेहीं विश्रुताः पुरुषर्षभ ।
वनं दत्तवरं दिव्यं धर्षयेयुर्वनौकसः ॥ २७ ॥

“Without having found Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, O jewel among men, the renowned monkeys would not have laid violent hands on the heavenly wood which was bestowed upon one of our ancestors as a boon by the gods.” (27)

ततः प्रहृष्टो धर्मात्मा लक्ष्मणः सहराघवः ।
श्रुत्वा कर्णसुखां वाणीं सुग्रीववदनाच्च्युताम् ॥ २८ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa, whose mind was set on virtue, alongwith Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, thereupon felthighly rejoiced to hear the aforesaid speech, so agreeable to the ear, which had come from the lips of Sugrīva.

(28)

प्राहृष्यत भृशं रामो लक्ष्मणश्च महायशाः ।
श्रुत्वा दधिमुखस्यैवं सुग्रीवस्तु प्रहृष्य च ॥ २९ ॥
वनपालं पुनर्वाक्यं सुग्रीवः प्रत्यभाषत ।
प्रीतोऽस्मि सोऽहं यद्भुक्तं वनं तैः कृतकर्मभिः ॥ ३० ॥

Śrī Rāma as well as the highly illustrious Lakṣmaṇa were filled with ecstatic delight. Nay, feeling excessively delighted to hear the aforesaid report of Dadhimukha, Sugrīva, for his part who was distinguished by his well-built neck, once more addressed the following words to Dadhimukha, the guardian of the wood: “I am gratified to learn that the produce of the grove has been consumed by the monkeys who have accomplished their work. (29-30)

धर्षितं मर्षणीयं च चेष्टितं कृतकर्मणाम् ।
गच्छ शीघ्रं मधुवनं संरक्षस्व त्वमेव हि ।
शीघ्रं प्रेषय सर्वास्तान् हनूमत्प्रमुखान् कपीन् ॥ ३१ ॥

“The violence as well as the vagaries of those who have done their duty must be tolerated by us. Return apace to Madhuvana; nay, you alone must guard it jealously as before. Dispatch without delay all those monkeys with Hanumān at their head. (31)

इच्छामि शीघ्रं हनुमत्प्रधानान्-
शाखामृगांस्तान् मृगराजदर्पान् ।
प्रष्टुं कृतार्थान् सह राघवाभ्यां
श्रोतुं च सीताधिगमे प्रयत्नम् ॥ ३२ ॥

“With the two scions of Raghu, I immediately wish to talk to those monkeys headed by Hanumān, who having accomplished their purpose, are proud as lions, as well as to hear of their endeavour in the cause of finding out Sītā.” (32)

प्रीतिस्फीताक्षौ सम्प्रहृष्टौ कुमारौ
दृष्ट्वा सिद्धार्थौ वानराणां च राजा ।
अङ्गैः प्रहृष्टैः कार्यसिद्धिं विदित्वा
बाह्योरासन्नामतिमात्रं ननन्द ॥ ३३ ॥

Beholding the two princes Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa extremely delighted with their eyes dilated with joy as though accomplished of purpose, nay, realizing, by his own limbs thrilled with delight that the success of his enterprise was within the reach of his arms, Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, experienced the height of felicity. (33)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे त्रिषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-three of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुःषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXIV

Returning to Madhuvana as commanded by Sugrīva, and craving the forgiveness of Aṅgada, Dadhimukha submits to the latter that he is urgently summoned by Sugrīva. Set out in the company of Hanumān and others, and approaching Sugrīva, Prince Aṅgada apprises Śrī Rāma, after saluting him, of the discovery of Sītā and other events

सुग्रीवेणैवमुक्तस्तु हृष्टो दधिमुखः कपिः।
राघवं लक्ष्मणं चैव सुग्रीवं चाभ्यवादयत् ॥ १ ॥

Feeling rejoiced when commanded thus by Sugrīva, the monkey Dadhimukha, for his part, greeted Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, and Lakṣmaṇa as well as Sugrīva. (1)

स प्रणम्य च सुग्रीवं राघवौ च महाबलौ।
वानरैः सहितः शूरैर्दिवमेवोत्पपात ह ॥ २ ॥

Nay, having respectfully bowed down to Sugrīva as well as to Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, who were endowed with extraordinary might, he alongwith the other monkeys, who had accompanied him, sprang in the airspace again on their way to Madhuvana: so the tradition goes. (2)

स यथैवागतः पूर्वं तथैव त्वरितं गतः।
निपत्य गगनाद् भूमौ तद् वनं प्रविवेश ह ॥ ३ ॥

He journeyed back quite as quickly as he had come before, nay, descending from the air to the ground, they say, he penetrated deep into the wood. (3)

स प्रविष्टो मधुवनं ददर्श हरियूथपान्।
विमदानुद्धतान् सर्वान् मेहमानान् मधूदकम् ॥ ४ ॥

Having found his way into the interior of Madhuvana, he saw the leaders of monkey hordes, who, though overbearing before, had grown sober since and were all passing as urine, honey transformed after assimilation into water. (4)

स तानुपागमद् वीरो बद्ध्वा करपुटाञ्जलिम्।
उवाच वचनं श्लक्ष्णमिदं हृष्टवदङ्गदम् ॥ ५ ॥

The said hero approached them and, joining his palms, addressed Aṅgada the following sweet words like one filled with delight : (5)

सौम्य रोषो न कर्तव्यो यदेभिः परिवारणम्।
अज्ञानाद् रक्षिभिः क्रोधाद् भवन्तः प्रतिषेधिताः ॥ ६ ॥

“No resentment should be harboured by you, O gentle one, for the restraint unwittingly imposed on you by these guards, in that you were angrily hindered by them from enjoying the produce of this grove. (6)

श्रान्तो दूरादनुप्राप्तो भक्षयस्व स्वकं मधु।
युवराजस्त्वमीशश्च वनस्यास्य महाबल ॥ ७ ॥

“Come from afar and exhausted as you are, partake of the honey, which is yours in that you are the Crown prince and as such the owner of this wood, O prince ! endowed with extraordinary might ! (7)

मौख्यात् पूर्वं कृतो रोषस्तद् भवान् क्षन्तुमर्हति।
यथैव हि पिता तेऽभूत् पूर्वं हरिगणेश्वरः ॥ ८ ॥
तथा त्वमपि सुग्रीवो नान्यस्तु हरिसत्तम।
आख्यातं हि मया गत्वा पितृव्यस्य तवानघ ॥ ९ ॥
इहोपयानं सर्वेषामेतेषां वनचारिणाम्।
भवदागमनं श्रुत्वा सहैर्भिर्वनचारिभिः ॥ १० ॥
प्रहृष्टो न तु रुष्टोऽसौ वनं श्रुत्वा प्रधर्षितम्।
प्रहृष्टो मां पितृव्यस्ते सुग्रीवो वानरेश्वरः ॥ ११ ॥
शीघ्रं प्रेषय सर्वास्तानिति होवाच पार्थिवः।
श्रुत्वा दधिमुखस्यैतद् वचनं श्लक्ष्णमद्भुतः ॥ १२ ॥
अब्रवीत् तान् हरिश्रेष्ठो वाक्यं वाक्यविशारदः।
शङ्के श्रुतोऽयं वृत्तान्तो रामेण हरियूथपाः ॥ १३ ॥

“You ought to pardon us for the wrath which was vented by us earlier due to foolishness. Sugrīva is now the lord of monkey hordes precisely in the same way as your father, Vāli, formerly was. You too are the same and none else, O jewel among monkeys ! The arrival here of all these monkeys including yourself was actually reported to your uncle by me after going there, O sinless one ! He felt greatly rejoiced to hear of your arrival alongwith all these monkeys. He did not get angry even on hearing of the grove having been devastated. Highly pleased, your uncle, King Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, commanded me as follows : “Please send them all without delay.” Hearing the aforesaid refined submission of Dadhimukha, Āṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, who was a master of expression, spoke to them as follows : “I presume this news of our arrival has been heard by Śrī Rāma, O leaders of monkey hordes ! (8—13)

अयं च हर्षादाख्याति तेन जानामि हेतुना।
तत् क्षमं नेह नः स्थातुं कृते कार्ये परंतपाः ॥ १४ ॥

“I conclude this also from the fact that this monkey, Dadhimukha, is narrating the event joyfully. Hence it does not behove us to tarry here any longer now that our work has been accomplished, O tormentors of foes ! (14)

पीत्वा मधु यथाकामं विक्रान्ता वनचारिणः।
किं शेषं गमनं तत्र सुग्रीवो यत्र वानरः ॥ १५ ॥

“You, valiant monkeys, have drunk honey to your heart's content. Nothing remains for you to do. It is, therefore, advisable for us to proceed to Kiṣkindhā where the monkey king Sugrīva is. (15)

सर्वे यथा मां वक्ष्यन्ति समेत्य हरिपुङ्गवाः।
तथास्मि कर्ता कर्तव्ये भवद्भिः परवानहम् ॥ १६ ॥

“I shall act as you all will conjointly ask me, O bulls among monkeys; for I depend on you in the matter of deciding what should be done by me. (16)

नाज्ञापयितुमीशोऽहं युवराजोऽस्मि यद्यपि।
अयुक्तं कृतकर्माणो यूयं धर्षयितुं बलात् ॥ १७ ॥

“Even though I am the Crown prince, I am not competent to issue orders to you. Since you have performed your duty, it will be unjustified on my part to play the lord over you by force.” (17)

ब्रुवतश्चाद्भुतस्यैवं श्रुत्वा वचनमुत्तमम्।
प्रहृष्टमनसो वाक्यमिदमूचुर्वनौकसः ॥ १८ ॥

Greatly delighted at heart to hear the aforesaid excellent speech of Āṅgada, even while he was speaking, the monkeys submitted as follows : (18)

एवं वक्ष्यति को राजन् प्रभुः सन् वानरर्षभ।
ऐश्वर्यमदमत्तो हि सर्वोऽहमिति मन्यते ॥ १९ ॥

“Who, O king, while being a master, would speak in this strain, O jewel among monkeys? Drunk with the pride of power, everyone as a rule is self-conceited. (19)

तव चेदं सुसदृशं वाक्यं नान्यस्य कस्यचित्।
सन्नतिर्हि तवाख्याति भविष्यच्छुभयोग्यताम्॥ २० ॥

“This speech is quite becoming of you and does not become anyone else. Indeed this extreme humility indicates your fitness for further good fortune. (20)

सर्वे वयमपि प्राप्तास्तत्र गन्तुं कृतक्षणाः।
स यत्र हरिवीराणां सुग्रीवः पतिरव्ययः॥ २१ ॥

“We all too have come here eager to proceed to where Sugrīva, that imperishable lord of monkey-heroes, is. (21)

त्वया ह्यनुकैर्हरिभिर्नैव शक्यं पदात् पदम्।
क्वचिद् गन्तुं हरिश्रेष्ठ ब्रूमः सत्यमिदं तु ते॥ २२ ॥

“It is surely not at all possible for us monkeys to advance even one step from where we stand in any direction, unless commanded by you, O jewel among monkeys : we tell you this quite correctly.” (22)

एवं तु वदतां तेषामङ्गदः प्रत्यभाषत।
साधु गच्छाम इत्युक्त्वा खमुत्पेतुर्महाबलाः॥ २३ ॥

While they were speaking thus, Aṅgada for his part replied, “All right !” Saying : “Let us move !”, the monkeys, who were all endowed with extraordinary might, sprang in the air. (23)

उत्पतन्तमनूत्पेतुः सर्वे ते हरियूथपाः।
कृत्वाऽऽकाशं निराकाशं यन्त्रोत्क्षिप्ता इवोपलाः॥ २४ ॥

Filling the space, all those leaders of monkey-hordes followed Aṅgada, even as he sprang, like so many stones shot from a catapult (24)

अङ्गदं पुरतः कृत्वा हनूमन्तं च वानरम्।
तेऽम्बरं सहस्रोत्पत्य वेगवन्तः प्लवङ्गमाः॥ २५ ॥

विनदन्तो महानादं घना वातेरिता यथा।
अङ्गदे समनुप्राप्ते सुग्रीवो वानरेश्वरः॥ २६ ॥

उवाच शोकसंतप्तं रामं कमललोचनम्।
समाश्वसिहि भद्रं ते दृष्टा देवी न संशयः॥ २७ ॥

Springing all of a sudden in the air, placing Aṅgada at their head, as also the monkey, Hanumān, the aforesaid monkeys, full of impetuosity, darted along, thundering like so many clouds propelled by the wind. Aṅgada having arrived near Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma with lotus-like eyes, who was tormented with grief : “Take heart ! May good betide you! The godlike lady, Sītā, has been discovered : there is no doubt about it. (25—27)

नागन्तुमिह शक्यं तैरतीतसमयैरिह।
अङ्गदस्य प्रहर्षाच्च जानामि शुभदर्शनम्॥ २८ ॥

“It was not possible for them to return here otherwise, the time-limit fixed by me having been exceeded by them long before. I conclude this also from Aṅgada’s ecstatic delight, O prince of charming looks ! (28)

न मत्सकाशमागच्छेत् कृत्ये हि विनिपातिते।
युवराजो महाबाहुः प्लवतामङ्गदो वरः॥ २९ ॥

“Had their design been frustrated, the mighty-armed Crown Prince Aṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, would not have sought my presence in any case. (29)

यद्यप्यकृतकृत्यानामीदृशः स्यादुपक्रमः।
भवेत् तु दीनवदनो भ्रान्तविप्लुतमानसः॥ ३० ॥

“Even though such a conduct may be possible even on the part of those who have not been able to accomplish their purpose, he would have worn a wretched aspect and felt bewildered and disturbed in mind, which he is not. (30)

पितृपैतामहं चैतत् पूर्वकैरभिरक्षितम्।
न मे मधुवनं हन्याददृष्ट्वा जनकात्मजाम्॥ ३१ ॥

“Without seeing Janaka’s daughter, none would have dared to destroy my Madhuvana, which was bequeathed to my father, Ṛkṣarāja, by my grandfather, Brahmā, and has been protected on all sides by my forbears. (31)

कौसल्या सुप्रजा राम समाश्वसिहि सुव्रत।
दृष्टा देवी न संदेहो न चान्येन हनूमता॥ ३२ ॥

“Kausalyā, your mother, is blessed with a happy son in you. Be restored to confidence, O Rāma of noble vows! The godlike lady Sītā has been discovered: there is no doubt about it. Nay, she has been traced out by Hanumān and by none else. (32)

नह्यन्यः कर्मणो हेतुः साधनेऽस्य हनूमतः ।
हनूमतीह सिद्धिश्च मतिश्च मतिसत्तम ॥ ३३ ॥
व्यवसायश्च शौर्यं च श्रुतं चापि प्रतिष्ठितम् ।
जाम्बवान् यत्र नेता स्यादङ्गदश्च हरीश्वरः ॥ ३४ ॥
हनूमांश्चाप्यधिष्ठाता न तत्र गतिरन्यथा ।
मा भूश्चिन्तासमायुक्तः सम्प्रत्यमितविक्रम ॥ ३५ ॥
यदा हि दर्पितोदग्राः संगताः काननौकसः ।
नैषामकृतकार्याणामीदृशः स्यादुपक्रमः ॥ ३६ ॥

“Surely none else, other than Hanumān, could be confident in accomplishing this task. Nay, the capacity to accomplish a deed as well as intelligence, as also strenuous effort and valour and learning too are firmly embeded in Hanumān, O prince foremost in wisdom! In an army where Jāmbavān as well as Aṅgada, the lord of monkeys, is the leader, and Hanumān a counsellor, failure is out of the question. Do not feel worried any longer. O prince of immeasurable prowess, since the monkeys have come elated with pride. Such conduct would not be possible on the part of those who have not accomplished their task. (33—36)

वनभङ्गेन जानामि मधूनां भक्षणेन च ।
ततः किलकिलाशब्दं शुश्रावासन्नमम्बरे ॥ ३७ ॥
हनूमत्कर्मदृसानां नदतां काननौकसाम् ।
किष्किन्धामुपयातानां सिद्धिं कथयतामिव ॥ ३८ ॥

“From the fact of their having laid waste Madhuvana and enjoyed the honey, I conclude that they are successful.” Presently Sugrīva heard closeby in the sky a cry expressing joy, of monkeys arrived in the vicinity of Kiṣkindhā, roaring and thereby proclaiming their triumph, as it were, proud as they are of the achievements of Hanumān. (37-38)

ततः श्रुत्वा निनादं तं कपीनां कपिसत्तमः ।
आयताञ्चितलाङ्गूलः सोऽभवद्दृष्टमानसः ॥ ३९ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid clamour of the monkeys, the celebrated Sugrīva, the foremost of monkeys, now felt delighted at heart and stretched and curled his tail at the end out of joy. (39)

आजग्मुस्तेऽपि हरयो रामदर्शनकाङ्क्षिणः ।
अङ्गदं पुरतः कृत्वा हनूमन्तं च वानरम् ॥ ४० ॥

Placing Aṅgada as also the monkey Hanumān at their head, all those monkeys too, who were eager to have a look at Śrī Rāma, arrived. (40)

तेऽङ्गदप्रमुखा वीराः प्रहृष्टाश्च मुदान्विताः ।
निपेतुर्हरिराजस्य समीपे राघवस्य च ॥ ४१ ॥

Filled with joy, nay, thrilled, those heroes, headed by Aṅgada, descended from the airspace close to Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, as well as to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (41)

हनूमांश्च महाबाहुः प्रणम्य शिरसा ततः ।
नियतामक्षतां देवीं राघवाय न्यवेदयत् ॥ ४२ ॥

Nay, making respectful obeisance with his head bent low, the mighty-armed Hanumān then reported the godlike lady Sītā to be constant in her devotion to Śrī Rāma and sound in body. (42)

दृष्ट्वा देवीति हनुमद्वदनादमृतोपमम् ।
आकर्ण्य वचनं रामो हर्षमाप सलक्ष्मणः ॥ ४३ ॥

Śrī Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa experienced delight on hearing the nectar-like news from the lips of Hanumān that the godlike lady had been discovered. (43)

निश्चितार्थं ततस्तस्मिन् सुग्रीवं पवनात्मजे ।
लक्ष्मणः प्रीतिमान् प्रीतं बहुमानादवैक्षत ॥ ४४ ॥

Full of love, Lakṣmaṇa thereupon regarded with great esteem the joyful Sugrīva, who felt sure about the aforesaid Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god) having accomplished the object, viz., the discovery of Sītā. (44)

प्रीत्या च परयोपेतो राघवः परवीरहा।
 बहुमानेन महता हनूमन्तमवैक्षत ॥ ४५ ॥
 Full of supreme affection, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the destroyer of hostile warriors, too looked on Hanumān with great and high regard. (45)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे
 चतुःषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-four of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXV

Asked by Śrī Rāma to tell him the news about Sītā, Hanumān apprises Śrī Rāma of her presence at the foot of a Śimśapā tree in the midst of ogresses and delivers her message after narrating the incidents related by her as a token

ततः प्रस्रवणं शैलं ते गत्वा चित्रकाननम्।
 प्रणम्य शिरसा रामं लक्ष्मणं च महाबलम् ॥ १ ॥
 युवराजं पुरस्कृत्य सुग्रीवमभिवाद्य च।
 प्रवृत्तिमथ सीतायाः प्रवक्तुमुपचक्रमुः ॥ २ ॥

Then moving to Mount Prasravana, clothed with lovely woods, making obeisance with their heads bent low to Śrī Rāma, and also Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, nay, greeting Sugrīva, and placing Aṅgada, the Crown prince at their head, the monkeys forthwith proceeded to give information regarding Sītā as follows: (1-2)

रावणान्तःपुरे रोधं राक्षसीभिश्च तर्जनम्।
 रामे समनुरागं च यथा च नियमः कृतः ॥ ३ ॥
 एतदाख्याय ते सर्वं हरयो रामसंनिधौ।
 वैदेहीमक्षतां श्रुत्वा रामस्तूत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ ४ ॥

Having related in the presence of Śrī Rāma all this, viz., Sītā's detention in the pleasure of Rāvaṇa, she being threatened by ogresses, her unflinching devotion to Śrī Rāma and how a time limit of a couple of fortnights had been fixed for her survival by Rāvaṇa, the said monkeys kept mum. Hearing of Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, being alive, Śrī Rāma for his part asked the following question: (3-4)

क्व सीता वर्तते देवी कथं च मयि वर्तते।
 एतन्मे सर्वमाख्यात वैदेहीं प्रति वानराः ॥ ५ ॥

“Where does Sītā, the godlike lady, live and how is she disposed towards me? Pray, tell me all this concerning Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) O monkeys !” (5)

रामस्य गदितं श्रुत्वा हरयो रामसंनिधौ।
 चोदयन्ति हनूमन्तं सीतावृत्तान्तकोविदम् ॥ ६ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, the monkeys began to urge, in the presence of Śrī Rāma, Hanumān, who knew full well the facts about Sītā, to answer the question of Śrī Rāma. (6)

श्रुत्वा तु वचनं तेषां हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः।
 प्रणम्य शिरसा देव्यै सीतायै तां दिशं प्रति ॥ ७ ॥
 उवाच वाक्यं वाक्यज्ञः सीताया दर्शनं यथा।
 तं मणिं काञ्चनं दिव्यं दीप्यमानं स्वतेजसा ॥ ८ ॥
 दत्त्वा रामाय हनुमांस्ततः प्राञ्जलिरब्रवीत्।
 समुद्रं लङ्घयित्वाहं शतयोजनमायतम् ॥ ९ ॥
 अगच्छं जानकीं सीतां मार्गमाणो दिदृक्षया।
 तत्र लङ्केति नगरी रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ १० ॥

दक्षिणस्य समुद्रस्य तीरे वसति दक्षिणे।
 तत्र सीता मया दृष्टा रावणान्तःपुरे सती ॥ ११ ॥
 त्वयि संन्यस्य जीवन्ती रामा राम मनोरथम्।
 दृष्टा मे राक्षसीमध्ये तर्ज्यमाना मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ १२ ॥
 राक्षसीभिर्विरूपाभी रक्षिता प्रमदावने।
 दुःखमापद्यते देवी त्वया वीर सुखोचिता ॥ १३ ॥
 रावणान्तःपुरे रुद्धा राक्षसीभिः सुरक्षिता।
 एकवेणीधरा दीना त्वयि चिन्तापरायणा ॥ १४ ॥

Hearing their request and offering salutations with his head bent low to the southern quarter and thereby to the godlike lady Sītā, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, who knew the art of expression, made the following statement describing how he was able to see Sītā. Having delivered to Śrī Rāma the wonderful golden jewel glowing in its own splendour, Hanumān then submitted with joined palms as follows:

“Having leapt across the sea, a hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles) wide, I reached its southern shore looking about for Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, with intent to see her. There on the southern shore of the southern sea is situated the city ruled over by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, known by the name of Laṅkā. The virtuous and lovely Sītā was seen by me living in the pleasance of Rāvaṇa in that city, having centred her heart on you, O Rāma ! Nay, she was seen by me in the midst of ogresses, guarded in a pleasance by ugly ogresses and being threatened again and again. Detained in the pleasance of Rāvaṇa and closely guarded by ogresses, the godlike lady, who deserves to live happily with you, O valiant prince, has been reduced to straits. She wears a single pleat of hair (as a mark of desolation), is forlorn and remains absorbed in your thought alone. (7—14)

अधःशय्या विवर्णाङ्गी पद्मिनीव हिमागमे।
 रावणाद् विनिवृत्तार्था मर्तव्यकृतनिश्चया ॥ १५ ॥

“She stretches herself on the bare ground, is pale of limbs like a lotus plant at the approach of winter, has utterly refused to have anything to do with Rāvaṇa, and is determined to die rather than submit to Rāvaṇa. (15)

देवी कथंचित् काकुत्स्थ त्वन्मना मार्गिता मया।
 इक्ष्वाकुवंशविख्यातिं शनैः कीर्तयतानघ ॥ १६ ॥
 सा मया नरशार्दूल शनैर्विश्वासिता तदा।
 ततः सम्भाषिता देवी सर्वमर्थं च दर्शिता ॥ १७ ॥

“The godlike lady, whose mind is set on you, O scion of Kakutstha, was somehow traced out by me. She was then inspired by me, by degrees with confidence, O tiger among men, by gradually recounting the glory of Ikṣvāku’s race. She was later on accosted by me and apprised of all the facts, including your alliance with Sugrīva. (16-17)

रामसुग्रीवसख्यं च श्रुत्वा हर्षमुपागता।
 नियतः समुदाचारो भक्तिश्चास्याः सदा त्वयि ॥ १८ ॥

“Nay, she experienced delight on hearing of the alliance between you and king Sugrīva. Constant is her morality and abiding is her devotion to you. (18)

एवं मया महाभाग दृष्टा जनकनन्दिनी।
 उग्रेण तपसा युक्ता त्वद्भक्त्या पुरुषर्षभ ॥ १९ ॥

“In this way, O highly blessed one, was the delight of Janaka, Sītā, found by me, endowed with severe asceticism and devotion to you, O jewel among men ! (19)

अभिज्ञानं च मे दत्तं यथावृत्तं तवान्तिके।
 चित्रकूटे महाप्राज्ञ वायसं प्रति राघव ॥ २० ॥

“The way in which an incident connected with a crow took place in your presence at Citrakūṭa was also related by her by way of a token, O Śrī Rāma, exceptionally sagacious scion of Raghu ! (20)

विज्ञाप्यः पुनरप्येष रामो वायुसुत त्वया।
 अखिलेन यथा दृष्टमिति मामाह जानकी ॥ २१ ॥

“The daughter of Janaka said to me, ‘Śrī Rāma enshrined in my memory, O son of the wind-god, should further be told by you in every detail what has been witnessed by you here. (21)

अयं चास्मै प्रदातव्यो यत्नात् सुपरिरक्षितः ।

ब्रुवता वचनान्येवं सुग्रीवस्योपशृण्वतः ॥ २२ ॥

“Nay, this jewel, which has been carefully preserved with diligence, should be handed over to Śrī Rāma after addressing the following words within the hearing of Sugrīva :

(22)

एष चूडामणिः श्रीमान् मया ते यत्नरक्षितः ।

मनःशिलायास्तिलकं तत् स्मरस्वेति चाब्रवीत् ॥ २३ ॥

“ ‘Here is the brilliant jewel for the head associated with you and preserved by me with diligence.’ She further said, ‘Kindly recall that sacred mark on my forehead painted by you with realgar.

(23)

एष निर्यातितः श्रीमान् मया ते वारिसम्भवः ।

एनं दृष्ट्वा प्रमोदिष्ये व्यसने त्वामिवानघ ॥ २४ ॥

“ ‘This brilliant jewel found in the waters is hereby being sent by me to you. Gazing on it in my adversity I used to feel highly rejoiced as on seeing you, O sinless prince !

(24)

जीवितं धारयिष्यामि मासं दशरथात्मज ।

ऊर्ध्वं मासान्न जीवेयं रक्षसां वशमागता ॥ २५ ॥

“ ‘I am going to survive but for a month, O son of Daśaratha ! Fallen that I am into the clutches of ogres, I am not going to survive beyond a month.’

(25)

इति मामब्रवीत् सीता कृशाङ्गी धर्मचारिणी ।

रावणान्तःपुरे रुद्धा मृगीवोत्फुल्ललोचना ॥ २६ ॥

“Thus spoke to me Sītā of emaciated limbs, who looked with eyes wide open (through fear) like a doe, was given to the practice of virtue, and had been detained in the pleasance of Rāvaṇa.

(26)

एतदेव मयाऽऽख्यातं सर्वं राघव यद् यथा ।

सर्वथा सागरजले संतारः प्रविधीयताम् ॥ २७ ॥

“This precisely is the news about Sītā, which has been narrated by me exhaustively and correctly, O scion of Raghu ! A method may now be devised to cross the sea-water at all events.”

(27)

तौ जाताश्चासौ राजपुत्रौ विदित्वा

तच्चाभिज्ञानं राघवाय प्रदाय ।

देव्या चाख्यातं सर्वमेवानुपूर्व्याद्

वाचा सम्पूर्णं वायुपुत्रः शशंस ॥ २८ ॥

Coming to know that the two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, were restored to confidence, and having delivered the aforesaid token to Śrī Rāma, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, reproduced in its entirety in so many words seriatim all that was communicated by the godlike lady.

(28)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये

सुन्दरकाण्डे पञ्चषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-five of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्षष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXVI

Pressing to his bosom the jewel for the head sent by Sītā and piteously wailing in many ways, Śrī Rāma urges Hanumān to repeat the message of Sītā

एवमुक्तो हनुमता रामो दशरथात्मजः ।
तं मणिं हृदये कृत्वा रुरोद सहलक्ष्मणः ॥ १ ॥

Pressing that jewel to his bosom when spoken to as aforesaid by Hanumān, Śrī Rāma, sprung from the loins of Daśaratha, wept with his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa.

(1)

तं तु दृष्ट्वा मणिश्रेष्ठं राघवः शोककर्षितः ।
नेत्राभ्यामश्रुपूर्णाभ्यां सुग्रीवमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Beholding that excellent jewel, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, for his part, who was emaciated through grief born of separation from Sītā, spoke as follows to Sugrīva with eyes full of tears:

(2)

यथैव धेनुः स्रवति स्नेहाद् वत्सस्य वत्सला ।
तथा ममापि हृदयं मणिश्रेष्ठस्य दर्शनात् ॥ ३ ॥

“Even as a cow, who is fond of her calf, begins to distil milk from her teats through excess of affection at the very sight of her calf, so does my heart too melt through the sight of the excellent jewel. (3)

मणिरत्नमिदं दत्तं वैदेह्याः श्वशुरेण मे ।
वधूकाले यथा बद्धमधिकं मूर्ध्नि शोभते ॥ ४ ॥

“This excellent jewel was presented by my father-in-law King Janaka to Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, when she had become a bride, and was fastened to her head in such a way as it looked surpassingly charming. (4)

अयं हि जलसम्भूतो मणिः प्रवरपूजितः ।
यज्ञे परमतुष्टेन दत्तः शक्रेण धीमता ॥ ५ ॥

“This jewel, which was found in the waters and had been adored by the foremost among gods, was actually bestowed on King Janaka by the wise Indra (the ruler of gods), who was highly pleased with the former in the course of a sacrificial performance intended to propitiate him. (5)

इमं दृष्ट्वा मणिश्रेष्ठं तथा तातस्य दर्शनम् ।
अद्यास्म्यवगतः सौम्य वैदेहस्य तथा विभोः ॥ ६ ॥

“By seeing this excellent jewel I have indirectly obtained today the sight of my father in whose hands the jewel was placed by Janaka as well as that of the mighty Janaka, the ruler of the Videha territory, in the same way as I have obtained the sight of Sītā herself, O gentle one ! (6)

अयं हि शोभते तस्याः प्रियाया मूर्ध्नि मे मणिः ।
अद्यास्य दर्शनेनाहं प्राप्तां तामिव चिन्तये ॥ ७ ॥

“Indeed, this jewel looked extremely charming on the head of my aforesaid darling. Through its sight today I conceive her to have been recovered. (7)

किमाह सीता वैदेही ब्रूहि सौम्य पुनः पुनः ।
परासुमिव तोयेन सिञ्चन्ती वाक्यवारिणा ॥ ८ ॥

“Please repeat, O gentle one, again and again, what Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, said to you, sprinkling me, unconscious as I am, with water in the form of her speech, as it were. (8)

इतस्तु किं दुःखतरं यदिमं वारिसम्भवम् ।
मणिं पश्यामि सौमित्रे वैदेहीमागतां विना ॥ ९ ॥

Turning to Lakṣmaṇa, “indeed what could be more painful, O son of Sumitrā, than the fact that I behold this jewel, found in the waters, come without Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory? (9)

चिरं जीवति वैदेही यदि मासं धरिष्यति ।
क्षणं वीर न जीवेयं विना तामसितेक्षणाम् ॥ १० ॥

Addressing Hanumān again Śrī Rāma said : “Sītā will live long if she survives for a month. I, however, would not survive even for a moment without that dark-eyed lady, O gallant one ! (10)

नय मामपि तं देशं यत्र दृष्टा मम प्रिया।

न तिष्ठेयं क्षणमपि प्रवृत्तिमुपलभ्य च ॥ ११ ॥

“Please take me as well to that region where my darling was seen by you. Nay, having received news about her, I cannot tarry even for a moment. (11)

कथं सा मम सुश्रोणी भीरुभीरुः सती तदा।

भयावहानां घोराणां मध्ये तिष्ठति रक्षसाम् ॥ १२ ॥

“How does my virtuous consort, Sītā, with charming limbs, who is extremely timid, stay all the time in the midst of violent and frightful ogres? (12)

शारदस्तिमिरोन्मुक्तो नूनं चन्द्र इवाम्बुदैः।

आवृतो वदनं तस्या न विराजति साम्प्रतम् ॥ १३ ॥

“Surely her countenance, resembling, as it does, the autumnal moon bereft of its spot, though screened by clouds, does not shine so brightly any more. (13)

किमाह सीता हनुमंस्तत्त्वतः कथयस्व मे।

एतेन खलु जीविष्ये भेषजेनातुरो यथा ॥ १४ ॥

“Pray, tell me correctly, O Hanumān, what Sītā said to you. I shall surely survive on the strength of her message even as an ailing man would with the help of medicine. (14)

मधुरा मधुरालापा किमाह मम भामिनी।

मद्विहीना वरारोहा हनुमन् कथयस्व मे।

दुःखाद् दुःखतरं प्राप्य कथं जीवति जानकी ॥ १५ ॥

“Please tell me, O Hanumān, what my beloved consort, who has a comely exterior and is sweet of expression, who is endowed with excellent limbs and has been separated from me, said to you. How does the daughter of Janaka survive even on meeting with a misfortune harder than before?” (15)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे षट्षष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-six of the Sundarakaṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXVII

Hanumān reproduces at length the incident connected with a crow that took place during the sojourn of Sītā with Śrī Rāma at Citrakūṭa, related by her by way of a token, and further describes her piteous lament and the way in which she was comforted by Hanumān

एवमुक्तस्तु हनुमान् राघवेण महात्मना।

सीताया भाषितं सर्वं न्यवेदयत् राघवे ॥ १ ॥

Urged in the foregoing words by the high-souled Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, Hanumān for his part repeated as follows to Śrī Rāma all that was said by Sītā : (1)

इदमुक्तवती देवी जानकी पुरुषर्षभ।

पूर्ववृत्तमभिज्ञानं चित्रकूटे यथातथम् ॥ २ ॥

“The godlike lady Sītā related as follows, even as it had occurred, O jewel among men, an incident that had taken place at Citrakūṭa in the past. (2)

सुखसुप्ता त्वया सार्धं जानकी पूर्वमुत्थिता।

वायसः सहसोत्पत्य विददार स्तनान्तरम् ॥ ३ ॥

“Having slept happily at your side on one occasion, Sītā, daughter of Janaka, got up before you, when, coming down suddenly, a crow tore the flesh of her breast with its beak. (3)

पर्यायेण च सुप्तस्त्वं देव्यङ्गे भरताग्रज।
पुनश्च किल पक्षी स देव्या जनयति व्यथा ॥ ४ ॥

"You then lay asleep on the lap of the godlike lady, O elder brother of Bharata! And once more did that bird actually begin to torment the godlike lady. (4)

ततः पुनरुपागम्य विददार भृशं किल।
ततस्त्वं बोधितस्तस्याः शोणितेन समुक्षितः ॥ ५ ॥

"Coming near once more indeed, it forthwith cruelly tore her breast. Bathed in blood that began to flow from her breast, you were awakened then by her. (5)

वायसेन च तेनैवं सततं बाध्यमानया।
बोधितः किल देव्या त्वं सुखसुप्तः परंतप ॥ ६ ॥

"Though lying happily asleep, O tormentor of foes, you were actually awakened by the godlike lady, who was being ceaselessly tormented by that crow as aforesaid. (6)

तां च दृष्ट्वा महाबाहो दारितां च स्तनान्तरे।
आशीविष इव क्रुद्धस्ततो वाक्यं त्वमूचिवान् ॥ ७ ॥

"Nay, enraged like a venomous serpent on seeing her lacerated in the breast, O mighty-armed prince, you for your part thereupon put the following question to her : (7)

नखाग्रैः केन ते भीरु दारितं वै स्तनान्तरम्।
कः क्रीडति सरोषेण पञ्चवक्त्रेण भोगिना ॥ ८ ॥

'By whom has the flesh of your breast been actually torn with the ends of his nails, O tender one? Who is playing with an angry five-hooded serpent?' (8)

निरीक्षमाणः सहसा वायसं समुदैक्षथाः।
नखैः सरुधिरैस्तीक्ष्णैस्तामेवाभिमुखं स्थितम् ॥ ९ ॥

"Casting your eyes around, you suddenly observed a crow with its sharp talons stained with blood, perched just in front of Sītā. (9)

सुतः किल स शक्रस्य वायसः पततां वरः।
धरान्तरगतः शीघ्रं पवनस्य गतौ समः ॥ १० ॥

"Indeed, that crow was no other than Jayanta, son of Indra, and was the foremost of birds. Vying as he did with the wind in swift motion, he had his abode in the subterranean regions. (10)

ततस्तस्मिन् महाबाहो कोपसंवर्तितेक्षणः।
वायसे त्वं व्यथाः क्रूरां मतिं मतिमतां वर ॥ ११ ॥

"With your eyes rolling through anger, O mighty-armed prince, you then thought of punishing that crow, O jewel among the wise! (11)

स दर्भसंस्तराद् गृह्य ब्रह्मास्त्रेण न्ययोजयः।
स दीप्त इव कालाग्निर्ज्वालाभिमुखं खगम् ॥ १२ ॥

"Snatching a blade from your bed of the sacred Kuśa grass, you as such charged it with the potency of a mystic missile presided over by Brahmā, the creator. The blade blazed forth like the flaming fire of universal destruction with its end facing the bird. (12)

स त्वं प्रदीप्तं चिक्षेप दर्भं तं वायसं प्रति।
ततस्तु वायसं दीप्तः स दर्भोऽनुजगाम ह ॥ १३ ॥

"You then hurled that blazing blade of the sacred Kuśa grass at the crow. Thereupon that flaming blade of Kuśa grass for its part actually pursued the crow. (13)

भीतैश्च सम्परित्यक्तः सुरैः सर्वैश्च वायसः।
त्रैल्लोकान् सम्परिक्रम्य त्रातारं नाधिगच्छति ॥ १४ ॥

"The crow, however, was forsaken by all the gods, who were seized with fear of you, and did not find a protector even after ranging all the three worlds (heaven, earth and the intermediate region). (14)

पुनरप्यागतस्तत्र त्वत्सकाशमर्दिम।
त्वं तं निपतितं भूमौ शरण्यः शरणागतम् ॥ १५ ॥

वधार्हमपि काकुत्स्थ कृपया परिपालयः।
मोघमस्त्रं न शक्यं तु कर्तुमित्येव राघव ॥ १६ ॥

भवांस्तस्याक्षि काकस्य हिनस्ति स्म स दक्षिणम्।
राम त्वां स नमस्कृत्य राज्ञो दशरथस्य च ॥ १७ ॥

विसृष्टस्तु तदा काकः प्रतिपेदे स्वमालयम्।
एवमस्त्रविदां श्रेष्ठः सत्त्ववाञ्छीलवानपि ॥ १८ ॥

किमर्थमस्त्रं रक्षःसु न योजयसि राघव।
 न दानवा न गन्धर्वा नासुरा न मरुद्गणाः ॥ १९ ॥
 तव राम रणे शक्तास्तथा प्रतिसमासितुम्।
 तव वीर्यवतः कश्चिन्मयि यद्यस्ति सम्भ्रमः ॥ २० ॥
 क्षिप्रं सुनिशितैर्बाणैर्हैन्यतां युधि रावणः।
 भ्रातुरादेशमाज्ञाय लक्ष्मणो वा परंतपः ॥ २१ ॥
 स किमर्थं नरवरो न मां रक्षति राघवः।
 शक्तौ तौ पुरुषव्याघ्रौ वाय्वग्निसमतेजसौ ॥ २२ ॥
 सुराणामपि दुर्धर्षो किमर्थं मामुपेक्षतः।
 ममैव दुष्कृतं किञ्चिन्महदस्ति न संशयः ॥ २३ ॥
 समर्थो सहितौ यन्मां न रक्षेते परंतपौ।
 वैदेह्या वचनं श्रुत्वा करुणं साधुभाषितम् ॥ २४ ॥
 पुनरप्यहमार्यां तामिदं वचनमब्रुवम्।
 त्वच्छोकविमुखो रामो देवि सत्येन ते शपे ॥ २५ ॥

“The crow at long last sought your presence once more at Citrakūṭa, O tamer of foes ! Fit as you are to afford protection to those seeking it, you for your part afforded shelter in your mercy to the crow, who sought your protection and had fallen flat on the ground, even though he deserved death, O scion of Kakutstha ! You, as such, however, destroyed the right eye of that crow only because it was not possible to render the missile ineffectual, O scion of Raghu ! Having saluted you as well as King Daśaratha (in heaven, who had obviously sent him back to Śrī Rāma to seek his forgiveness), the crow for his part, when spared by you, returned forthwith to his abode.

Says Sītā: “You are in this way the foremost of those skilled in the use of mystic missiles, full of courage and endowed with an amiable disposition. Wherefore then do you not direct your missiles against the ogres, O scion of Raghu? Neither giants nor Gandharvas (celestial musicians) nor demons nor the troops of wind-gods are able to withstand you in combat any more than that crow, O Rāma ! If there exists any regard for me in your mind, powerful as you are, let Rāvaṇa be killed on the field of battle with exceptionally sharp arrows without delay. Or, knowing as he does the behest of his elder brother, why does Lakṣmaṇa, a scion of Raghu, the foremost among men and the scourge of his foes, not come forward to rescue me? Wherefore do those two powerful tigers among men, who vie with the wind god and the god of fire in energy and are difficult to overcome even for gods, disregard me? No doubt there is some great sin committed by myself due to which Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two scourges of their foes, though powerful and living together, fail to protect me.’ Hearing the plaintive and gently-worded invocation of Sītā, I once more addressed the following words to that noble lady: ‘I swear to you by my truthfulness that Śrī Rāma has grown indifferent to everything because of grief born of separation from you, O godlike lady ! (15—25)

रामे दुःखाभिभूते च लक्ष्मणः परितप्यते।
 कथंचिद् भवती दृष्टा न कालः परिशोचितुम् ॥ २६ ॥

“‘Śrī Rāma being overwhelmed with agony, Lakṣmaṇa too is feeling afflicted. Somehow you have been discovered. Hence this is not the time for you to lament. (26)

अस्मिन् मुहूर्ते दुःखानामन्तं द्रक्ष्यसि भामिनि।
 तावुभौ नरशार्दूलौ राजपुत्रौ परंतपौ ॥ २७ ॥
 त्वद्दर्शनकृतोत्साहौ लङ्कां भस्मीकरिष्यतः।
 हत्वा च समरे रौद्रं रावणं सहबान्धवम् ॥ २८ ॥
 राघवस्त्वां वरारोहे स्वपुरीं नयिता ध्रुवम्।
 यत् तु रामो विजानीयादभिज्ञानमनिन्दिते ॥ २९ ॥
 प्रीतिसंजननं तस्य प्रदातुं तत् त्वमर्हसि।
 साभिवीक्ष्य दिशः सर्वा वेणुदुग्धत्रणमुत्तमम् ॥ ३० ॥
 मुक्त्वा वस्त्राद् ददौ मह्यं मणिमेतं महाबल।
 प्रतिगृह्य मणिं दोर्भ्यां तव हेतो रघुप्रिय ॥ ३१ ॥
 शिरसा सम्प्रणम्यैनामहमागमने त्वरे।
 गमने च कृतोत्साहमवेक्ष्य वरवर्णिनी ॥ ३२ ॥
 विवर्धमानं च हि मामुवाच जनकात्मजा।
 अश्रुपूर्णमुखी दीना बाष्पगद्गदभाषिणी ॥ ३३ ॥

“You will see the end of your woes during this very hour, O lovely lady ! Striving for your sight, both the aforesaid princes, who are tigers among men and the scourge of their foes, will reduce Laṅkā to ashes. Nay, having made short work on the field of battle of the violent Rāvaṇa with his kinsfolk, Śrī Rāma will surely take you back to his city Ayodhyā, O lady of excellent limbs! You, for your part, ought to make over to me a token which Śrī Rāma may easily recognize and which may fully bring delight to him, O irreproachable lady! Surveying all the four quarters and untying from the end of her garment this excellent jewel fit for being strung together with her braid, she handed it over to me, O prince endowed with extraordinary might! Taking the jewel in my hands for being delivered to you, O prince, beloved of the Raghus, and saluting her most respectfully with my head bent low, I was seized with a hurry to return. Nay, perceiving me eager to depart and, therefore, expanding my body to immense proportions, poor Sītā, daughter of Janaka, of excellent complexion, spoke to me in faltering accents, her throat being choked with sobs and her face bathed in tears.

(27—33)

ममोत्पतनसम्भ्रान्ता शोकवेगसमाहता ।
मामुवाच ततः सीता सभाग्योऽसि महाकपे ॥ ३४ ॥
यद् द्रक्ष्यसि महाबाहुं रामं कमललोचनम् ।
लक्ष्मणं च महाबाहुं देवं मे यशस्विनम् ॥ ३५ ॥

“Getting unnerved at the thought of my springing up to cross the ocean and smitten with the vehemence of grief, Sītā then said to me, ‘Fortunate you are, O Hanumān, in that you will be able to see the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma with lotus-like eyes, as also the mighty-armed Lakṣmaṇa, my illustrious brother-in-law.’

(34-35)

सीतयाप्येवमुक्तोऽहमब्रुवं मैथिलीं तथा ।
पृष्ठमारोह मे देवि क्षिप्रं जनकनन्दिनि ॥ ३६ ॥
यावत्ते दर्शयाम्यद्य ससुग्रीवं सलक्ष्मणम् ।
राघवं च महाभागे भर्तारमसितेक्षणे ॥ ३७ ॥

“Spoken to as aforesaid, I likewise said to Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, ‘Get on my back quickly, O godlike lady, the delight of Janaka, and continue there till I show you this very day Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, your spouse, accompanied by Sugrīva and Lakṣmaṇa, O highly blessed lady of dark eyes!’

(36-37)

साब्रवीन्मां ततो देवी नैष धर्मो महाकपे ।
यत्ते पृष्ठं सिषेवेऽहं स्ववशा हरिपुङ्गव ॥ ३८ ॥

“Thereupon that godlike lady replied to me as follows : ‘It will not be virtuous on my part, O Hanumān, if I get on your back even when I have control over my own self, O bull among monkeys !

(38)

पुरा च यदहं वीर स्पृष्टा गात्रेषु रक्षसा ।
तत्राहं किं करिष्यामि कालेनोपनिपीडिता ॥ ३९ ॥

“‘Even though I was touched the other day by the ogre Rāvaṇa all over my limbs while being borne away from Janasthāna, O gallant monkey, I could not help it, helpless as I was due to my evil destiny.

(39)

गच्छ त्वं कपिशार्दूल यत्र तौ नृपतेः सुतौ ।
इत्येवं सा समाभाष्य भूयः संदेष्टुमास्थिता ॥ ४० ॥

“‘Therefore, proceed you, O tiger among monkeys, to where those two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, are.’ Having confidently spoken thus, Sītā proceeded to give the following further message:

(40)

हनुमन् सिंहसंकाशौ तावुभौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
सुग्रीवं च सहामात्यं सर्वान् ब्रूया अनामयम् ॥ ४१ ॥

“‘Inquire, O Hanumān, on my behalf after the welfare of both the aforesaid lion-like princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, as also of Sugrīva including his ministers and all the rest.

(41)

यथा च स महाबाहुर्मा तारयति राघवः ।
अस्माद्दुःखाम्बुसंरोधात् तत् त्वमाख्यातुमर्हसि ॥ ४२ ॥

“‘You ought to deliver my message in such a way that the celebrated Śrī Rāma of mighty arms may deliver me from this ocean of misery.

(42)

इदं च तीव्रं मम शोकवेगं
 रक्षोभिरेभिः परिभर्त्सनं च।
 ब्रूयास्तु रामस्य गतः समीपं
 शिवश्च तेऽध्वास्तु हरिप्रवीर ॥ ४३ ॥

“Seeking the presence of Śrī Rāma, O foremost hero among monkeys, speak to him for your part of the poignant vehemence of my grief as also of my being threatened by these ogres. And may your journey be happy !” (43)

एतत् तवार्था नृप संयता सा
 सीता वचः प्राह विषादपूर्वम्।
 एतच्च बुद्ध्वा गदितं यथा त्वं
 श्रद्धत्स्व सीतां कुशलां समग्राम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“This is the message which that noble and self-restrained lady, Sītā, gave for you with despondency, O protector of men ! Nay, pondering this statement of mine in its true perspective, believe Sītā, the foremost of all devoted wives, to be well.” (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे सप्तषष्ठितमः सर्गः ॥ ६७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-seven of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टषष्ठितमः सर्गः

Canto LXVIII

Hanumān tells Śrī Rāma, how Sītā expressed her doubt in the first instance about a monkey being able to leap across a vast sea and how her doubt was resolved by him

अथाहुमुत्तरं देव्या पुनरुक्तः ससम्भ्रमम्।
 तव स्नेहान्नरव्याघ्र सौहार्दादनुमान्य च ॥ १ ॥
 एवं बहुविधं वाच्यो रामो दाशरथिस्त्वया।
 यथा मां प्राप्नुयाच्छीघ्रं हत्वा रावणमाहवे ॥ २ ॥

“Having shown her regard for me out of native good-heartedness and affection for you, O tiger among men, I, who was in a hurry to depart was then spoken to once more as follows by the godlike lady about the future course of action : ‘Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, should be appealed to by you in many ways so impressively that making short work of Rāvaṇa in combat, he may promptly win me back. (1-2)

यदि वा मन्यसे वीर वसैकाहमरिंदम।
 कस्मिंश्चित् संवृते देशे विश्रान्तः श्रो गमिष्यसि ॥ ३ ॥

“Or, if you deem fit, O gallant Hanumān, tarry for a day in some covered place, O tamer of foes ! Having taken rest, you may leave on the tomorrow. (3)

मम चाप्यल्पभाग्यायाः सांनिध्यात् तव वानर।
 अस्य शोकविपाकस्य मुहूर्तं स्याद् विमोक्षणम् ॥ ४ ॥

“Through your presence, O Hanumān, the termination of my grief, which is a fruit of my sinful deeds, may follow for a while, unfortunate that I am. (4)

गते हि त्वयि विक्रान्ते पुनरागमनाय वै।
 प्राणानामपि संदेहो मम स्यान्नात्र संशयः ॥ ५ ॥

“When you, O heroic Hanumān, have actually left to come back, there will be danger even to my life; there is no doubt about it. (5)

तवादर्शनजः शोको भूयो मां परितापयेत्।
 दुखाद् दुःखपराभूतां दुर्गतां दुःखभागिनीम् ॥ ६ ॥

“The grief born of your disappearance from my view will further torment me, who stand discomfited by one woe after another, wretched and doomed to suffering that I am. (6)

अयं च वीर संदेहस्तिष्ठतीव ममाग्रतः ।
 सुमहांस्त्वत्सहायेषु हर्यृक्षेषु हरीश्वर ॥ ७ ॥
 कथं नु खलु दुष्पारं तरिष्यन्ति महोदधिम् ।
 तानि हर्यृक्षसैन्यानि तौ वा नरवरात्मजौ ॥ ८ ॥

“Moreover, O valiant chief of monkeys, this very grave doubt precisely stands before me as to how on earth, in spite of the monkeys and bears having you for their helper, all those armies of monkeys and bears or even those two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, will actually be able to leap across the ocean, which is so difficult to cross. (7-8)

त्रयाणामेव भूतानां सागरस्यास्य लङ्घने ।
 शक्तिः स्याद् वैनतेयस्य वायोर्वा तव चानघ ॥ ९ ॥

“O sinless Hanumān! the capacity to cross this sea lies in the following three created beings alone, viz., in Garurḍa (son of Vinatā), the wind-god and you, O sinless one ! (9)

तदस्मिन् कार्यनिर्योगे वीरैवं दुरतिक्रमे ।
 किं पश्यसि समाधानं ब्रूहि कार्यविदां वर ॥ १० ॥

“Therefore, the accomplishment of this task being so difficult, O gallant monkey, what expedient do you perceive? Speak out, O jewel among those who know how to accomplish an act ! (10)

काममस्य त्वमेवैकः कार्यस्य परिसाधने ।
 पर्याप्तः परवीरञ्च यशस्यस्ते बलोदयः ॥ ११ ॥

“Although you are unquestionably capable of accomplishing this task single-handed, O destroyer of hostile warriors, such display of strength on your part will conduce to your own renown. (11)

बलैः समग्रैर्यदि मां हत्वा रावणमाहवे ।
 विजयी स्वपुरीं रामो नयेत् तत् स्याद् यशस्कर्म ॥ १२ ॥

“If, making short work of Rāvaṇa in combat in co-operation with all his forces, Śrī Rāma takes me in triumph to his own city, Ayodhyā, that would redound to his glory. (12)

यथाहं तस्य वीरस्य वनादुपधिना ह्ता ।
 रक्षसा तद्भयादेव तथा नार्हति राघवः ॥ १३ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, ought not to take me back in the same surreptitious way as I was borne away from the forest of Janasthāna by recourse to an artifice by the ogre Rāvaṇa precisely for fear of Śrī Rāma, in his absence. (13)

बलैस्तु संकुलां कृत्वा लङ्कां परबलार्दनः ।
 मां नयेद् यदि काकुत्स्थस्तत् तस्य सदृशं भवेत् ॥ १४ ॥

“If, having overrun Laṅkā with his forces, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, the destroyer of hostile warriors, for his part takes me back to Ayodhyā that would be worthy of him. (14)

तद् यथा तस्य विक्रान्तमनुरूपं महात्मनः ।
 भवत्याहवशूरस्य तथा त्वमुपपादय ॥ १५ ॥

“Therefore, work out things in such a way that valour worthy of that exalted soul, valiant in combat, may come into play.’ (15)

तदर्थोपहितं वाक्यं प्रश्रितं हेतुसंहितम् ।
 निशम्याहं ततः शेषं वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवम् ॥ १६ ॥

“Hearing the aforesaid appeal of Sītā, which was full of meaning, polite and reasonable, I then made the following concluding submission : (16)

देवि हर्यृक्षसैन्यानामीश्वरः प्लवतां वरः ।
 सुग्रीवः सत्त्वसम्पन्नस्त्वदर्थे कृतनिश्चयः ॥ १७ ॥

“Sugrīva, the foremost of monkeys and the lord of hordes of monkeys and bears, who is richly endowed with strength, has resolved to rescue you, O godlike lady ! (17)

तस्य विक्रमसम्पन्नाः सत्त्ववन्तो महाबलाः ।
 मनःसंकल्पसदृशा निदेशे हरयः स्थिताः ॥ १८ ॥
 येषां नोपरि नाधस्तात्र तिर्यक् सज्जते गतिः ।
 न च कर्मसु सीदन्ति महत्स्वमिततेजसः ॥ १९ ॥

“At his beck and call stand monkeys rich in prowess, full of courage and endowed with extraordinary might, swift as thought and possessed of immense energy, whose movement is not hampered upward or downward, right or left, and who do not lose heart even when faced with great formidable tasks. (18-19)

असकृत् तैर्महाभागैर्वानरैर्बलसंयुतैः ।
प्रदक्षिणीकृता भूमिर्वायुमार्गानुसारिभिः ॥ २० ॥

“The earth has been gone round clockwise more than once by those highly blessed and mighty monkeys following the path of the wind. (20)

मद्विशिष्टाश्च तुल्याश्च सन्ति तत्र वनौकसः ।

मत्तः प्रत्यवरः कश्चिन्नास्ति सुग्रीवसंनिधौ ॥ २१ ॥

“There are monkeys equal and even superior to me in strength in Kiṣkindhā. There is no monkey inferior to me near about Sugrīva. (21)

अहं तावदिह प्राप्तः किं पुनस्ते महाबलाः ।

नहि प्रकृष्टाः प्रेष्यन्ते प्रेष्यन्ते हीते जनाः ॥ २२ ॥

“When I have arrived here leaping across the sea, how much more would those monkeys do, endowed as they are with extraordinary might. Under no circumstances are the seniors sent out on errands; the juniors alone are so sent. (22)

तदलं परितापेन देवि मन्युरपैतु ते ।

एकोत्पातेन ते लङ्कामेष्यन्ति हरियूथपाः ॥ २३ ॥

“Therefore, have done with agony, O godlike lady ! Let your despondency be over for good. In one bound will the aforesaid leaders of monkey hordes reach Laṅkā. (23)

मम पृष्ठगतौ तौ च चन्द्रसूर्याविवोदितौ ।

त्वत्सकाशं महाभागे नृसिंहावागमिष्यतः ॥ २४ ॥

“And perched upon my back will those two lions among men reach your presence, O highly blessed lady, like the moon and the sun risen in the sky. (24)

अरिघ्नं सिंहसंकाशं क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि राघवम् ।

लक्ष्मणं च धनुष्मन्तं लङ्काद्वारमुपागतम् ॥ २५ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये सुन्दरकाण्डे अष्टषष्ठितमः सर्गः ॥ ६८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-eight of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

“You will soon see Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the destroyer of his foes, who, resembles a lion, as well as Lakṣmaṇa, armed with an excellent bow, arrived at the very gate of Laṅkā. (25)

नखदंष्ट्रायुधान् वीरान् सिंहशार्दूलविक्रमान् ।

वानरान् वारणेन्द्राभान् क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि संगतान् ॥ २६ ॥

“You will also see gathered here soon the gallant monkeys having nails and teeth for their weapons and endowed with the prowess of lions and tigers, nay, looking like lordly elephants. (26)

शैलाम्बुदनिकाशानां लङ्कामलयसानुषु ।

नर्दतां कपिमुख्यानां नचिराच्छ्रोष्यसे स्वनम् ॥ २७ ॥

“You will before long hear the clamour of the foremost of monkeys resembling mountains and clouds and roaring on the peaks of the Trikūṭa mountain in Laṅkā. (27)

निवृत्तवनवासं च त्वया सार्धमरिंदमम् ।

अभिषिक्तमयोध्यायां क्षिप्रं द्रक्ष्यसि राघवम् ॥ २८ ॥

“You will also soon see Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the tamer of his foes, crowned at Ayodhyā with you, his term of exile in the forest just nearing completion.’ (28)

ततो मया वाग्भिरदीनभाषिणी

शिवाभिरिष्टाभिरभिप्रसादिता ।

उवाह शान्तिं मम मैथिलात्मजा

तवातिशोकेन तथातिपीडिता ॥ २९ ॥

“Cheered by me with gladdening and agreeable words, Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, who, though sore afflicted with the thought of your excessive grief on her account and who never speaks pitiful words, derived solace in my presence.” (29)

॥ सुन्दरकाण्डं सम्पूर्णम् ॥

END OF SUNDARAKĀṆḌA

श्रीसीतारामचन्द्राभ्यां नमः

श्रीमद्वाल्मीकीयरामायणम् युद्धकाण्डम्

प्रथमः सर्गः

Śrīmad Vālmīki-Rāmāyaṇa (Yuddhakāṇḍa)

[Book Six]

Canto I

Hearing the report of Hanumān, and highly rejoiced at his having done something worthy of a noble servant, which could not be accomplished by anyone else, Śrī Rāma applauds him and clasps him to his bosom

श्रुत्वा हनूमतो वाक्यं यथावदभिभाषितम् ।
रामः प्रीतिसमायुक्तो वाक्यमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Filled with delight to hear the story of Hanumān, faithfully narrated, Śrī Rāma made the following appropriate reply: (1)

कृतं हनूमता कार्यं सुमहद् भुवि दुर्लभम् ।
मनसापि यदन्येन न शक्यं धरणीतले ॥ २ ॥

“A very great work, rare on earth, has been done by Hanumān, which could not be accomplished even in thought by another on the earth’s surface. (2)

नहि तं परिपश्यामि यस्तरेत महोदधिम् ।
अन्यत्र गरुडाद् वायोरन्यत्र च हनूमतः ॥ ३ ॥

“Indeed, I know of no other than Garuḍa (the king of birds and the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu) and the wind-god and of no other than Hanumān, who could cross the expansive sea. (3)

देवदानवयक्षाणां गन्धर्वोरगरक्षसाम् ।
अप्रधृष्यां पुरीं लङ्कां रावणेन सुरक्षिताम् ॥ ४ ॥
प्रविष्टः सत्त्वमाश्रित्य जीवन् को नाम निष्क्रमेत् ।
को विशेत् सुदुराधर्षा राक्षसैश्च सुरक्षिताम् ॥ ५ ॥
यो वीर्यबलसम्पन्नो न समः स्याद्धनूमतः ।
भृत्यकार्यं हनुमता सुग्रीवस्य कृतं महत् ।
एवं विधाय स्वबलं सदृशं विक्रमस्य च ॥ ६ ॥

“Having penetrated by dint of his courage deeply into Laṅkā, which cannot be taken violently even by gods, demons and Yakṣas nor by Gandharvas, Nāgas and ogres and is well-protected by Rāvaṇa, who else could actually escape alive? Who can, in fact, even enter the city, which is exceedingly difficult to assail and is strongly guarded by ogres, unless he is richly endowed with virility and strength like Hanumān? Nay, a momentous service has been rendered by Hanumān to Sugrīva by manifesting his strength in proportion to his valour in this way. (4—6)

यो हि भृत्यो नियुक्तः सन् भर्त्रा कर्मणि दुष्करे ।
कुर्यात् तदनुरागेण तमाहुः पुरुषोत्तमम् ॥ ७ ॥

“They speak of that servant as the foremost among men, who, when entrusted by his master with a duty difficult to perform, does even more; of course, in consonance with that work. (7)

यो नियुक्तः परं कार्यं न कुर्यान्नृपतेः प्रियम् ।
भृत्यो युक्तः समर्थश्च तमाहुर्मध्यमं नरम् ॥ ८ ॥

“The wise speak of that servant as a mediocre man, who, though qualified and capable, does not, when confided with some work, accomplish any other allied work liked by the king. (8)

नियुक्तो नृपतेः कार्यं न कुर्याद् यः समाहितः ।
भृत्यो युक्तः समर्थश्च तमाहुः पुरुषाधमम् ॥ ९ ॥

“People dub that servant as the lowest of men, who, though qualified and capable, does not, when entrusted with a duty, carry out the behest of a king with a composed mind. (9)

तन्नियोगे नियुक्तेन कृतं कृत्यं हनूमता ।
न चात्मा लघुतां नीतः सुग्रीवश्चापि तोषितः ॥ १० ॥

“Extra work was also done by Hanumān when entrusted with the duty of search for Sītā; yet no dishonour was brought to his own self and Sugrīva too was gratified by him by his act of valour. (10)

अहं च रघुवंशश्च लक्ष्मणश्च महाबलः ।
वैदेह्या दर्शनेनाद्य धर्मतः परिरक्षिताः ॥ ११ ॥

“Through the discovery of Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, the entire race of Raghu, as well as myself and Lakṣmaṇa too, who is endowed with extraordinary might, have been saved from destruction today in consonance with righteousness. (11)

इदं तु मम दीनस्य मनो भूयः प्रकर्षति ।
यदिहास्य प्रियाख्यातुर्न कुर्मि सदृशं प्रियम् ॥ १२ ॥

“It undoubtedly wrings my soul further, wretched that I am, to think that I have nothing worthwhile to offer to Hanumān, who has communicated to me this delightful news. (12)

एष सर्वस्वभूतस्तु परिष्वङ्गो हनूमतः ।
मया कालमिमं प्राप्य दत्तस्तस्य महात्मनः ॥ १३ ॥

“This embrace, which is all that I can call my own at this moment, is unreservedly offered to this high-souled Hanumān.” (13)

इत्युक्त्वा प्रीतिहृष्टाङ्गो रामस्तं परिष्वजे ।
हनूमन्तं कृतात्मानं कृतकार्यमुपागतम् ॥ १४ ॥

Saying so, Śrī Rāma, whose limbs were thrilled with delight, embraced the celebrated Hanumān, who had disciplined his mind and who had just returned having carried out his behest. (14)

ध्यात्वा पुनरुवाचेदं वचनं रघुसत्तमः ।
हरीणामीश्वरस्यापि सुग्रीवस्योपशृण्वतः ॥ १५ ॥

Exercising his mind awhile, Śrī Rāma, the foremost among the Raghus, once more spoke as follows, Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, too, listening: (15)

सर्वथा सुकृतं तावत् सीतायाः परिमार्गणम् ।
सागरं तु समासाद्य पुनर्नष्टं मनो मम ॥ १६ ॥

“The search for Sītā has, of course, been conducted thoroughly well. On duly reaching the ocean, however, my mind gets dejected once more. (16)

कथं नाम समुद्रस्य दुष्पारस्य महाम्भसः ।
हरयो दक्षिणं पारं गमिष्यन्ति समागताः ॥ १७ ॥

“How on earth will the monkeys, gather together for the purpose of recovering Sītā from the enemy’s hands, reach the southern shore of the sea, which is so difficult to cross and comprises a vast sheet of water? (17)

यद्यप्येष तु वृत्तान्तो वैदेह्या गदितो मम।
समुद्रपारगमने हरीणां किमिवोत्तरम् ॥ १८ ॥

Although this fact of the impassability of the sea has been mentioned even by Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, what step should be taken for the passage of the monkeys across the sea?" (18)

इत्युक्त्वा शोकसम्भ्रान्तो रामः शत्रुनिबर्हणः।
हनुमन्तं महाबाहुस्ततो ध्यानमुपागमत् ॥ १९ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid to Hanumān, the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma, the exterminator of his foes, who felt perplexed through grief, then became thoughtful (19)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे प्रथमः सर्गः ॥ १ ॥

Thus ends Canto One in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्वितीयः सर्गः

Canto II

Sugrīva heartens Śrī Rāma, who is tormented with grief, by asking him to take courage

तं तु शोकपरिद्धूनं रामं दशरथात्मजम्।
उवाच वचनं श्रीमान् सुग्रीवः शोकनाशनम् ॥ १ ॥

To the said Śrī Rāma, sprung from the loins of Daśaratha, who was sore stricken with grief, the glorious Sugrīva for his part made the following reply, which was calculated to drive away his grief: (1)

किं त्वया तप्यते वीर यथान्यः प्राकृतस्तथा।
मैवं भूस्त्यज संतापं कृतघ्न इव सौहृदम् ॥ २ ॥

"Why do you give way to sorrow, O hero, even as another common man would? Do not be sorrowful like this; shake of agony even as an ungrateful fellow would cast all goodwill to the winds. (2)

संतापस्य च ते स्थानं नहि पश्यामि राघव।
प्रवृत्तावुपलब्धायां ज्ञाते च निलये रिपोः ॥ ३ ॥

"Moreover, I do not actually find any occasion for your agony, O scion of Raghu, intelligence about Sītā having been received and the enemy's abode discovered. (3)

मतिमाञ्शास्त्रवित् प्राज्ञः पण्डितश्चासि राघव।
त्यजेमां प्राकृतां बुद्धिं कृतात्मेवार्थदूषिणीम् ॥ ४ ॥

"You are endowed with prudence, well-versed in the sacred lore, exceedingly wise and learned, O scion of Raghu! As such like one who has disciplined one's mind, give up this commonplace mentality, which is calculated to mar your very purpose. (4)

समुद्रं लङ्घयित्वा तु महानक्रसमाकुलम्।
लङ्कामारोहयिष्यामो हनिष्यामश्च ते रिपुम् ॥ ५ ॥

"Crossing the sea, infested with mighty crocodiles, we shall climb up the fortress of Laṅkā and make short work of your enemy, Rāvaṇa. (5)

निरुत्साहस्य दीनस्य शोकपर्याकुलात्मनः।
सर्वार्था व्यवसीदन्ति व्यसनं चाधिगच्छति ॥ ६ ॥

"All the affairs of a man who is lacking in spirit and miserable, and whose mind is puzzled through grief, come to nought and he meets with disaster. (6)

इमे शूराः समर्थाश्च सर्वतो हरियूथपाः।
त्वत्प्रियार्थं कृतोत्साहाः प्रवेष्टुमपि पावकम्।
एषां हर्षेण जानामि तर्कश्चापि दृढो मम ॥ ७ ॥

“These leaders of monkey troops are gallant and powerful in everyway; they are ready even to enter fire in order to oblige you. I conclude this from their joy on the proposal of an expedition against Laṅkā being made to them, and my reason in favour of this conclusion is also strong. (7)

विक्रमेण समानेष्टे सीतां हत्वा यथा रिपुम्।
रावणं पापकर्माणं तथा त्वं कर्तुमर्हसि॥ ८ ॥

“You ought to manipulate things in such a way that I may after disposing of the enemy, Rāvaṇa of sinful deeds, be able to recover Sitā. (8)

सेतुरत्र यथा बद्धयेद् यथा पश्येम तां पुरीम्।
तस्य राक्षसराजस्य तथा त्वं कुरु राघव॥ ९ ॥

“Take steps, O scion of Raghu, to see that a bridge is constructed across the intervening sea and we behold that city of the aforesaid king of ogres. (9)

दृष्ट्वा तां हि पुरीं लङ्कां त्रिकूटशिखरे स्थिताम्।
हतं च रावणं युद्धे दर्शनादवधारय॥ १० ॥

“Know Rāvaṇa as killed as soon as he is seen in combat and immediately on our beholding that city of Laṅkā standing on a peak of the Trikūṭa mountain. (10)

अबद्ध्वा सागरे सेतुं घोरे च वरुणालये।
लङ्कां न मर्दितुं शक्या सेन्द्रैरपि सुरासुरैः॥ ११ ॥

“Nay, without throwing a bridge over the sea, the formidable abode of Varuṇa (the god of water), Laṅkā cannot be overcome even by gods and demons, including Indra. (11)

सेतुबन्धः समुद्रे च यावल्लङ्कासमीपतः।
सर्वं तीर्णं च मे सैन्यं जितमित्युपधारय।
इमे हि समरे वीरा हरयः कामरूपिणः॥ १२ ॥

“Nay, know that the whole of my army will be borne across the sea and come out victorious the moment a bridge is built upto the vicinity of Laṅkā; for, the monkeys, who are capable of assuming any form at will, are all heroic in battle. (12)

तदलं विक्लवां बुद्धिं राजन् सर्वार्थनाशिनीम्।
पुरुषस्य हि लोकेऽस्मिन् शोकः शौर्यापकर्षणः॥ १३ ॥

“Therefore, have done with a timid mind which defeats all purpose; for, grief in this world takes away the valour of a man, O king! (13)

यत् तु कार्यं मनुष्येण शौटीर्यमवलम्ब्यताम्।
तदलंकरणाथैव कर्तुर्भवति सत्वरम्॥ १४ ॥

“Heroism alone, which is worth resorting to, ought to be taken recourse to by a man. It is capable of bringing success without doubt to a doer quickly. (14)

अस्मिन् काले महाप्राज्ञ सत्त्वमातिष्ठ तेजसा।
शूराणां हि मनुष्याणां त्वद्विधानां महात्मनाम्।
विनष्टे वा प्रणष्टे वा शोकः सर्वार्थनाशनः॥ १५ ॥

“Have recourse to courage, O highly sagacious prince, at this moment, endowed that you already are with valour. Grief for something lost or utterly destroyed defeats all the purposes even of heroic and high-souled personages like you. (15)

तत्त्वं बुद्धिमतां श्रेष्ठः सर्वशास्त्रार्थकोविदः।
मद्विधैः सचिवैः सार्धमरिं जेतुं समर्हसि॥ १६ ॥

“Hence you are perfectly able to conquer your enemy in conjunction with your friends like me, foremost that you are among those endowed with wisdom and well-versed in the teachings of all sacred books. (16)

नहि पश्याम्यहं कंचित् त्रिषु लोकेषु राघव।
गृहीतधनुषो यस्ते तिष्ठेदभिमुखो रणे॥ १७ ॥

“I do not actually see anyone in all the three worlds (the earth, heaven and the intermediate region), who can stand face to face with you on a field of battle when you have seized a bow, O scion of Raghu! (17)

वानरेषु समासक्तं न ते कार्यं विपत्स्यते।
अचिराद् द्रक्ष्यसे सीतां तीर्त्वा सागरमक्षयम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Duly entrusted to the monkeys, your task will not suffer. Crossing the sea, which knows no destruction, you shall behold Sītā before long. (18)

तदलं शोकमालम्ब्य क्रोधमालम्ब्य भूपते।
निश्चेष्टाः क्षत्रिया मन्दाः सर्वे चण्डस्य बिभ्यति ॥ १९ ॥

“Therefore, give way no more to grief and have recourse to anger, O Lord of the earth! Spiritless Kṣatriyas (members of the warrior class) are inactive, while all fear the wrathful. (19)

लङ्घनार्थं च घोरस्य समुद्रस्य नदीपतेः।
सहास्माभिरिहोपेतः सूक्ष्मबुद्धिर्विचारय ॥ २० ॥

“Nay, accompanied by us, consider here with us the means of crossing the dread sea, the lord of rivers, sharp-witted that you are. (20)

लङ्घिते तत्र तैः सैन्यैर्जितमित्येव निश्चिनु।
सर्वं तीर्णं च मे सैन्यं जितमित्यवधार्यताम् ॥ २१ ॥

“Once the sea has been crossed by my forces, conclude, our victory is certain.

Nay, arrived beyond the sea, my entire army should be taken as victorious. (21)

इमे हि हरयः शूराः समरे कामरूपिणः।
तानरीन् विधमिष्यन्ति शिलापादपवृष्टिभिः ॥ २२ ॥

“These monkeys, heroic that they are in combat and capable of assuming any form at will, will surely blow away the aforesaid enemies by their volleys of rocks and trees. (22)

कथंचित् परिपश्यामि लङ्घितं वरुणालयम्।
हतमित्येव तं मन्ये युद्धे शत्रुनिर्बहण ॥ २३ ॥

“If I actually find the sea (the abode of Varuṇa) crossed by any means whatsoever, I count Rāvaṇa as definitely killed in battle, O exterminator of foes! (23)

किमुक्त्वा बहुधा चापि सर्वथा विजयी भवान्।
निमित्तानि च पश्यामि मनो मे सम्प्रहृष्यति ॥ २४ ॥

“What will be gained by speaking extensively on this topic? Nay, you will turnout victorious in everyway. For, I perceive good omens and my mind is excessively delighted.” (24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्वितीयः सर्गः ॥ २ ॥

Thus ends Canto Two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

तृतीयः सर्गः

Canto III

Enquired about Laṅkā by Śrī Rāma on his hearing the appeal of Sugrīva, Hanumān gives a detailed description of Laṅkā as he saw it

सुग्रीवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा हेतुमत् परमार्थवत्।
प्रतिजग्राह काकुत्स्थो हनूमन्तमथाब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the appeal of Sugrīva, which was full of reason and exposition of the real truth, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha)

accepted it and spoke to Hanumān as follows: (1)

तपसा सेतुबन्धेन सागरोच्छोषणेन च।
सर्वथापि समर्थोऽस्मि सागरस्यास्य लङ्घने ॥ २ ॥

“I am capable in everyway of crossing

this sea, either by strength of will acquired by virtue of my asceticism, or by throwing a bridge across it or even by drying up the sea by use of mystic missiles. (2)

कति दुर्गाणि दुर्गाया लङ्कायास्तद् ब्रवीष्व मे ।
ज्ञातुमिच्छामि तत् सर्वं दर्शनादिव वानर ॥ ३ ॥

“How many fortifications are there in Laṅkā, which is so difficult of access? Please point it out to me. I wish to know all that as through sight, O Hanumān! (3)

बलस्य परिमाणं च द्वारदुर्गक्रियामपि ।
गुप्तिकर्म च लङ्काया रक्षसां सदनानि च ॥ ४ ॥
यथासुखं यथावच्च लङ्कायामसि दृष्टवान् ।
सर्वमाचक्ष्व तत्त्वेन सर्वथा कुशलो ह्यसि ॥ ५ ॥

“You have seen according to your convenience the strength of the army as also the process by which the entrances have been rendered difficult of access, nay, the way in which Laṅkā is guarded, as well as the mansions of the ogres. Please relate everything in accordance with factual situation; for you are clever in everyway.” (4-5)

श्रुत्वा रामस्य वचनं हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
वाक्यं वाक्यविदां श्रेष्ठो रामं पुनरथाब्रवीत् ॥ ६ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god and the foremost among those adept in the art of expression, forthwith made the following submission to Śrī Rāma once more: (6)

श्रूयतां सर्वमाख्यास्ये दुर्गकर्म विधानतः ।
गुप्ता पुरी यथा लङ्का रक्षिता च यथा बलैः ॥ ७ ॥
राक्षसाश्च यथा स्निग्धा रावणस्य च तेजसा ।
परां समृद्धिं लङ्कायाः सागरस्य च भीमताम् ॥ ८ ॥
विभागं च बलौघस्य निर्देशं वाहनस्य च ।
एवमुक्त्वा कपिश्रेष्ठः कथयामास तत्त्वतः ॥ ९ ॥

“Please listen, my Lord! I shall relate to you everything—how the city of Laṅkā has been defended according to the technique of fortification and how it has been protected by troops and how the ogres are devoted to their king, and shall also describe the extreme prosperity of Laṅkā occasioned by Rāvaṇa’s glory, the dreadfulness of the sea, the division of the body of his forces into regiments and the strength of the animals carrying his forces other than the infantry.” Saying so, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, who knew the facts about Laṅkā, began as follows: (7—9)

हृष्टप्रमुदिता लङ्का मत्तद्विपसमाकुला ।
महती रथसम्पूर्णा रक्षोगणनिषेविता ॥ १० ॥

“The extensive city of Laṅkā is gay and in raptures and remains crowded with elephants in rut; nay, it is packed with chariots and is inhabited by hordes of ogres. (10)

दृढबद्धकपाटानि महापरिघवन्ति च ।
चत्वारि विपुलान्यस्या द्वाराणि सुमहान्ति च ॥ ११ ॥

“There are four extensive and huge gates in it, which have been provided with strong doors closed with massive bars. (11)

तत्रेषूपलयन्त्राणि बलवन्ति महान्ति च ।
आगतं प्रतिस्ैन्यं तैस्तत्र प्रतिनिवार्यते ॥ १२ ॥

“Powerful and enormous catapults discharging darts and stones have been attached to them; by them a hostile army arrived there is repulsed at the very gates. (12)

द्वारेषु संस्कृता भीमाः कालायसमयाः शिताः ।
शतशो रचिता वीरैः शतघ्न्यो रक्षसां गणैः ॥ १३ ॥

“Formidable sharp-edged steel clubs, known by the name of Śataghñis*, which are four cubits long and bristle with iron spikes and are so-called because they are supposed to kill hundreds at a time, forged by the heroic hordes of ogres, have been kept in readiness in hundreds at the gates. (13)

* शतघ्नी च चतुर्हस्ता लोहकण्टिकी गदा—इति वैजयन्ती ।

सौवर्णस्तु महांस्तस्याः प्राकारो दुष्प्रधर्षणः ।

मणिविद्रुमवैदूर्यमुक्ताविरचितान्तरः ॥ १४ ॥

“A high protective wall of gold—which is difficult to assail by force and is inlaid at intervals with gems, corals, cat’s-eyes and pearls—encircles it. (14)

सर्वतश्च महाभीमाः शीततोया महाशुभाः ।

अगाधा ग्राहवत्यश्च परिखा मीनसेविताः ॥ १५ ॥

“Most formidable, fathomless moats, filled with cold water and fraught with great evil to the enemy, nay, infested with alligators and inhabited by fishes, are in existence all round the city. (15)

द्वारेषु तासां चत्वारः संक्रमाः परमायताः ।

यन्त्रैरुपेता बहुभिर्महद्भिर्गृहपङ्क्तिभिः ॥ १६ ॥

“In front of the gateways there are four very extensive drawbridges across the moats, which are equipped with numerous engines and strengthened by many rows of stately buildings built on the protective wall and meant for those entrusted with the duty of guarding the entrances. (16)

त्रायन्ते संक्रमास्तत्र परसैन्यागते सति ।

यन्त्रैस्तैरवकीर्यन्ते परिखासु समन्ततः ॥ १७ ॥

“On the arrival of hostile forces near them the drawbridges are defended by the aforesaid engines and the forces are flung into the moats on every side. (17)

एकस्त्वकम्प्यो बलवान् संक्रमः सुमहादृढः ।

काञ्चनैर्बहुभिः स्तम्भैर्वैदिकाभिश्च शोभितः ॥ १८ ॥

“The principal (central) drawbridge before the northern gate, which is unshakable, strongly garrisoned and extremely strong, is embellished with numerous gold pillars and pedestals. (18)

स्वयं प्रकृतिमापन्नो युयुत्सू राम रावणः ।

उत्थितश्चाप्रमत्तश्च बलानामनुदर्शने ॥ १९ ॥

“The bellicose Rāvaṇa, O Rāma, is himself self-possessed, and remains active and alert in reviewing his forces. (19)

लङ्का पुनर्निरालम्बा देवदुर्गा भयावहा ।

नादेयं पार्वतं वान्यं कृत्रिमं च चतुर्विधम् ॥ २० ॥

“Laṅkā again, offers no base for invasion, is difficult of access even for gods and inspires terror in the invader. It has a fourfold defence, consisting of (i) a river (which encircles it on all sides), (ii) a mountain, viz., the Trikūṭa mountain, on whose summit it stands, (iii) a belt of forests surrounding it and (iv) an artificial fortification in the form of an enclosing wall and moats. (20)

स्थिता पारे समुद्रस्य दूरपारस्य राघव ।

नौपथश्चापि नास्त्यत्र निरुद्देशश्च सर्वतः ॥ २१ ॥

“Standing as it does beyond the sea with a distant shore, it offers no passage for vessels either and the sea is undivided too on all sides, O scion of Raghu! (21)

शैलाग्रे रचिता दुर्गा सा पूर्वैवपुरोपमा ।

वाजिवारणसम्पूर्णा लङ्का परमदुर्जया ॥ २२ ॥

“Built on a mountain peak, the aforesaid city of Laṅkā is difficult of access and vies with a celestial city, is packed with horses and elephants and is, therefore, most difficult to conquer. (22)

परिखाश्च शतघ्न्यश्च यन्त्राणि विविधानि च ।

शोभयन्ति पुरीं लङ्कां रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ २३ ॥

“Moats and Śataghñīs too as well as engines of various kinds adorn Laṅkā, the city of the evil-minded Rāvaṇa. (23)

अयुतं रक्षसामत्र पूर्वद्वारं समाश्रितम् ।

शूलहस्ता दुराधर्षाः सर्वे खड्गाग्रयोधिनः ॥ २४ ॥

“A myriad ogres, all carrying darts in their hands, and contending with swords in the van of battle, nay, difficult to assail, are garrisoned at the eastern gate of this city. (24)

नियुतं रक्षसामत्र दक्षिणद्वारमाश्रितम् ।

चतुरङ्गेण सैन्येन योधास्तत्राप्यनुत्तमाः ॥ २५ ॥

“A lakh of ogres, with a complete army of four limbs, viz., horses, foot soldiers, elephants and chariots, are garrisoned at the southern gate of this city. Warriors unsurpassed by others stand comprised in that army. (25)

प्रयुतं रक्षसामत्र पश्चिमद्वारमाश्रितम् ।
चर्मखड्गधराः सर्वे तथा सर्वास्त्रकोविदाः ॥ २६ ॥

“A million of ogres, all carrying shields and swords and proficient in the use of all mystic missiles, are garrisoned at the western gate of this city. (26)

न्यर्बुदं रक्षसामत्र उत्तरद्वारमाश्रितम् ।
रथिनश्चाश्ववाहाश्च कुलपुत्राः सुपूजिताः ॥ २७ ॥

“A hundred million of ogres, consisting of car-warriors and horse-soldiers, sons of noble families and greatly honoured for their skill in warfare are garrisoned at the northern gate. (27)

शतशोऽथ सहस्राणि मध्यमं स्कन्धमाश्रिताः ।
यातुधाना दुराधर्षाः साग्रकोटिश्च रक्षसाम् ॥ २८ ॥

“Again, ogres, hundreds of thousands in number, difficult to assail, and totalling one and a quarter of a crore of ogres, are garrisoned at the central military station. (28)

ते मया संक्रमा भग्नाः परिखाश्चावपूरिताः ।
दग्धा च नगरी लङ्का प्राकाराश्चावसादिताः ।
बलैकदेशः क्षपितो राक्षसानां महात्मनाम् ॥ २९ ॥

“The aforesaid drawbridges were broken by me and the moats filled up with the wreckage. Nay, the city of Laṅkā was burnt, the defensive walls pulled down and a part of the army of the gigantic ogres destroyed. (29)

येन केन तु मार्गेण तराम वरुणालयम् ।
हतेति नगरी लङ्का वानरैरुपधार्यताम् ॥ ३० ॥

“Let us by any means whatsoever positively cross the sea, the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water. The city of Laṅkā should then be taken as destroyed by the monkeys. (30)

अङ्गदो द्विविदो मैन्दो जाम्बवान् पनसो नलः ।
नीलः सेनापतिश्चैव बलशेषेण किं तव ॥ ३१ ॥

“Aṅgada, Dvividā, Mainda, Jāmbavān, Panasa and Nala and Nīla, the Commander-in-Chief, alone will be able to storm Laṅkā and recover Sītā. What will be gained by the rest of your forces being taken across the sea? (31)

प्लवमाना हि गत्वा त्वां रावणस्य महापुरीम् ।
सपर्वतवनां भित्त्वा सखातां च सतोरणाम् ।
सप्राकारां सभवनामानयिष्यन्ति राघव ॥ ३२ ॥

“Reaching the great city of Rāvaṇa, leaping and demolishing it with its mountains and woods, moats and archways, protective walls and buildings, they will bring back Sītā, O scion of Raghu! (32)

एवमाज्ञापय क्षिप्रं बलानां सर्वसंग्रहम् ।
मुहूर्तेन तु युक्तेन प्रस्थानमभिरोचय ॥ ३३ ॥

“Command the aforesaid generals accordingly without delay, if the latter course finds favour with you, or, if you would take the whole army across the sea, order them all to get accumulated, and be inclined to march at an opportune hour.” (33)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे तृतीयः सर्गः ॥ ३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुर्थः सर्गः

Canto IV

Hearing the report of Hanumān, Śrī Rāma fixes a propitious hour for the departure of his forces for Laṅkā, and perceives good omens

श्रुत्वा हनूमतो वाक्यं यथावदनुपूर्वशः ।
ततोऽब्रवीन्महातेजा रामः सत्यपराक्रमः ॥ १ ॥

Having duly heard the account of Hanumān seriatim, Śrī Rāma of unfailing prowess, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, then spoke as follows:

(1)

यन्निवेदयसे लङ्कां पुरीं भीमस्य रक्षसः ।
क्षिप्रमेनां वधिष्यामि सत्यमेतद् ब्रवीमि ते ॥ २ ॥

"I shall destroy without delay Laṅkā, that city of the redoubtable ogre, Rāvaṇa, of which you have just spoken: I truly promise this to you.

(2)

अस्मिन् मुहूर्ते सुग्रीव प्रयाणमभिरोचय ।
युक्तो मुहूर्ते विजये प्राप्नो मध्यं दिवाकरः ॥ ३ ॥

"Approve of our march at this very hour, O Sugrīva! The sun has reached the meridian and departure at this hour, known by the name of Abhijit (so-called because it brings victory to the departing person), is advisable.

(3)

सीतां हत्वा तु तद् यातु क्वासौ यास्यति जीवितः ।
सीता श्रुत्वाभियानं मे आशामेष्यति जीविते ।
जीवितान्तेऽमृतं स्पृष्ट्वा पीत्वामृतमिवातुरः ॥ ४ ॥

"That ogre for his part may return to his abode after abducting Sītā; but he cannot escape alive. Hearing from the mouth of Siddhas and others of my march to Laṅkā, Sītā too will regain her lost hope of survival, even as an ailing man would on touching an immortalizing herb or quaffing the drink of immortality at the close of his life.

(4)

उत्तराफाल्गुनी ह्यद्य श्वस्तु हस्तेन योक्ष्यते ।
अभिप्रयाम सुग्रीव सर्वानीकसमावृताः ॥ ५ ॥

"The constellation Uttarāphālgunī is actually in the ascendant today, while tomorrow the moon will be in conjunction with the constellation Hasta. Let us, therefore, march this very day, accompanied by all the troops, O Sugrīva!

(5)

निमित्तानि च पश्यामि यानि प्रादुर्भवन्ति वै ।
निहत्य रावणं सीतामानयिष्यामि जानकीम् ॥ ६ ॥

"From the omens, which actually appear on my person and which I behold, I conclude that killing Rāvaṇa, I shall bring back Sītā, Janaka's daughter.

(6)

उपरिष्ठाद्धि नयनं स्फुरमाणमिमं मम ।
विजयं समनुप्राप्तं शंसतीव मनोरथम् ॥ ७ ॥

"Twitching in the upper lid, this right eye of mine actually foretells, as it were, my coveted victory as being near."

(7)

ततो वानराजेन लक्ष्मणेन सुपूजितः ।
उवाच रामो धर्मात्मा पुनरप्यर्थकोविदः ॥ ८ ॥

Warmly applauded by Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, as well as by Lakṣmaṇa, Śrī Rāma, whose mind was set on piety and who was well-versed in politics, then spoke once more as follows:

(8)

अग्रे यातु बलस्यास्य नीलो मार्गमवेक्षितुम् ।
वृतः शतसहस्रेण वानराणां तरस्विनाम् ॥ ९ ॥

"Let Nīla, accompanied by one lakh of agile monkeys, march at the head of this army to examine the passage.

(9)

फलमूलवता नील शीतकाननवारिणा ।
पथा मधुमता चाशु सेनां सेनापते नय ॥ १० ॥

Addressing the Commander-in-Chief, Nila, he said: "O Nila, my generalissimo, lead the army speedily by a route full of fruits and roots as well as of honey and abounding in woods with a cool shade and fresh water. (10)

दूषयेयुर्दुर्गत्मानः पथि मूलफलोदकम् ।
राक्षसाः पथि रक्षेथास्तेभ्यस्त्वं नित्यमुद्यतः ॥ ११ ॥

"Evil-minded ogres might vitiate the roots, fruits and water along that route. Remaining ever vigilant on the way, protect you the aforesaid substances from them. (11)

निम्नेषु वनदुर्गेषु वनेषु च वनौकसः ।
अभिप्लुत्याभिपश्येयुः परेषां निहितं बलम् ॥ १२ ॥

"Leaping all round the monkeys should find out the enemy's troops lying in ambush in ravines and thickets, nay, in parts of the forest which are difficult of access. (12)

यन्तु फल्गु बलं किञ्चित् तदत्रैवोपपद्यताम् ।
एतद्धि कृत्यं घोरं नो विक्रमेण प्रयुज्यताम् ॥ १३ ॥

"Any weak element, which may be found, should, however, be left back at this very place, Kiṣkindhā; for this task of ours is formidable. Those troops alone, which are endowed with prowess should be utilized in this expedition. (13)

सागरौघनिभं भीममग्रानीकं महाबलाः ।
कपिसिंहाः प्रकर्षन्तु शतशोऽथ सहस्रशः ॥ १४ ॥

"Let the lions among monkeys, who are endowed with extraordinary might, in their hundreds and thousands, lead the redoubtable vanguard, resembling the tide of a sea. (14)

गजश्च गिरिसंकाशो गवयश्च महाबलः ।
गवाक्षश्चाग्रतो यातु गवां दृप्त इवर्षभः ॥ १५ ॥

"Let the monkeys Gaja, who closely resembles a mountain, and Gavaya, who is endowed with extraordinary might, as well as Gavākṣa march in the van even like a proud bull at the head of cows. (15)

यातु वानरवाहिन्या वानरः प्लवतां पतिः ।
पालयन् दक्षिणं पार्श्वमृषभो वानरर्षभः ॥ १६ ॥

"Let the monkey Rṣabha, a leader of monkeys, nay, who is a veritable bull among monkeys, proceed defending the right flank of the army of monkeys. (16)

गन्धहस्तीव दुर्धर्षस्तरस्वी गन्धमादनः ।
यातु वानरवाहिन्याः सव्यं पार्श्वमधिष्ठितः ॥ १७ ॥

"Let the impetuous Gandhamādana, who is difficult to assail like an elephant in rut, move along leading the left flank of the army of monkeys. (17)

यास्यामि बलमध्येऽहं बलौघमभिहर्षयन् ।
अधिरुह्य हनूमन्तमैरावतमिवेश्वरः ॥ १८ ॥

"Mounting the shoulders of Hanumān, even as Indra, the ruler of all the three worlds, would ride Airāvata, the king of elephants, and cheering the army, rushing like a flood, I shall march in the centre of the army. (18)

अङ्गदेनैष संयातु लक्ष्मणश्चान्तकोपमः ।
सार्वभौमेन भूतेशो द्रविणाधिपतिर्यथा ॥ १९ ॥

"Nay, let Lakṣmaṇa, who vies with Death himself, march on the back of Aṅgada even as Kubera, the lord or controller of riches, the ruler of spirits, would ride his own elephant, Sārvabhauma (one of the elephants guarding the quarters). (19)

जाम्बवांश्च सुषेणश्च वेगदर्शी च वानरः ।
ऋक्षराजो महाबाहुः कुक्षिं रक्षन्तु ते त्रयः ॥ २० ॥

"Nay, let the mighty-armed, Jāmbavān, the ruler of bears, and Suṣeṇa as well as the monkey, Vegadarśī, the aforesaid three defend the rear." (20)

राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा सुग्रीवो वाहिनीपतिः ।
व्यादिदेश महावीर्यो वानरान् वानरर्षभः ॥ २१ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, Sugrīva, the foremost of monkeys and the ruler of the army, who was endowed with extraordinary prowess, gave detailed orders to the monkeys accordingly. (21)

ते वानरगणाः सर्वे समुत्पत्य महौजसः।

गुहाभ्यः शिखरेभ्यश्च आशु पुप्लुविरे तदा ॥ २२ ॥

Emerging from the caves as well as from mountain-tops, all the aforesaid monkey hordes, who were endowed with extraordinary might, speedily leapt forward on that occasion. (22)

ततो वानरराजेन लक्ष्मणेन च पूजितः।

जगाम रामो धर्मात्मा ससैन्यो दक्षिणां दिशम् ॥ २३ ॥

Placed ahead Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, as well as Lakṣmaṇa, Śrī Rāma, whose mind was set on piety, thereupon sallied forth with his army in a southerly direction. (23)

शतैः शतसहस्रैश्च कोटिभिश्चायुतैरपि।

वारणाभैश्च हरिभिर्ययौ परिवृतस्तदा ॥ २४ ॥

Surrounded by monkeys numbering hundreds and tens of thousands, nay, lakhs and crores, and looking like elephants, Śrī Rāma then moved along. (24)

तं यान्तमनुयान्ती सा महती हरिवाहिनी।

हृष्टाः प्रमुदिताः सर्वे सुग्रीवेणापि पालिताः ॥ २५ ॥

That huge army of monkeys followed Śrī Rāma, who was marching along with them. Protected as they were by Sugrīva, all felt rejoiced and enraptured. (25)

आप्लवन्तः प्लवन्तश्च गर्जन्तश्च प्लवंगमाः।

क्ष्वेलन्तो निनदन्तश्च जग्मुर्वै दक्षिणां दिशम् ॥ २६ ॥

भक्षयन्तः सुगन्धीनि मधूनि च फलानि च।

उद्वहन्तो महावृक्षान् मञ्जरीपुञ्जधारिणः ॥ २७ ॥

The monkeys proceeded precisely in a southerly direction, some leaping on all sides in order to guard the army against any possible danger and others springing with a view to clearing the passage, thundering, nay, roaring like lions and bellowing like bulls, feasting on the fragrant honey and fruits and carrying huge trees bearing bunches of blossom. (26-27)

अन्योन्यं सहसा दृप्ता निर्वहन्ति क्षिपन्ति च।

पतन्तश्चोत्पतन्त्यन्ये पातयन्त्यपरे परान् ॥ २८ ॥

The proud monkeys would all of a sudden lift up and throw one another. Nay, moving along, some would spring up in the air, while others dashed down their companions, springing like them. (28)

रावणो नो निहन्तव्यः सर्वे च रजनीचराः।

इति गर्जन्ति हरयो राघवस्य समीपतः ॥ २९ ॥

“Rāvaṇa as well as all the rangers of the night must be killed by us” thus roared the monkeys in the presence of Śrī Rāma. (29)

पुरस्तादृषभो नीलो वीरः कुमुद एव च।

पन्थानं शोधयन्ति स्म वानरैर्बहुभिः सह ॥ ३० ॥

Going ahead alongwith many other monkeys, R̥ṣabha, Nila and the heroic Kumuda too cleared the way. (30)

मध्ये तु राजा सुग्रीवो रामो लक्ष्मण एव च।

बलिभिर्बहुभिर्भीमैर्वृतः शत्रुनिबर्हणः ॥ ३१ ॥

Surrounded by many mighty and redoubtable monkeys for his part, Sugrīva, the exterminator of foes, marched in the centre alongwith Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. (31)

हरिः शतबलिर्वीरः कोटिभिर्दशभिवृतः।

सर्वामेको ह्यवष्टभ्य ररक्ष हरिवाहिनीम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Actually controlling the entire army, the valiant monkey, Śatabali, who was accompanied by ten crores of monkeys, protected it single-handed. (32)

कोटीशतपरीवारः केसरी पनसो गजः।

अर्कश्च बहुभिः पार्श्वमेकं तस्याभिरक्षति ॥ ३३ ॥

Followed by a hundred crores of monkeys, Kesarī and Panasa protected the right flank of that army; while Gaja and

Arka, who were followed by numerous monkeys, guarded the other, left, flank. (33)

सुषेणो जाम्बवांश्चैव ऋक्षैर्बहुभिरावृतौ ।
सुग्रीवं पुरतः कृत्वा जघनं संरक्षतुः ॥ ३४ ॥

Surrounded by numerous bears and placing Sugrīva at their head, Suṣeṇa as well as Jāmbavān carefully guarded the rear. (34)

तेषां सेनापतिर्वीरो नीलो वानरपुंगवः ।
सम्पतन् प्लवतां श्रेष्ठस्तद् बलं पर्यवारयत् ॥ ३५ ॥

Marching ahead Śatabali and others, in order to clear the passage, the heroic Commander-in-Chief, Nila, the foremost among monkeys, nay, a veritable bull among them, held that army in check lest it should do any harm to the cities etc., falling on the way. (35)

दरीमुखः प्रजङ्घश्च जम्भोऽथ रभसः कपिः ।
सर्वतश्च ययुर्वीरास्त्वरयन्तः प्लवंगमान् ॥ ३६ ॥

The heroes, Darimukha and Prajaṅgha, as well as Jambha and the monkey Rabhasa went about urging the monkeys move forward on all sides. (36)

एवं ते हरिशार्दूला गच्छन्ति बलदर्पिताः ।
अपश्यन्त गिरिश्रेष्ठं सद्गं गिरिशतायुतम् ॥ ३७ ॥
सरांसि च सुफुल्लानि तटाकानि वराणि च ।
रामस्य शासनं ज्ञात्वा भीमकोपस्य भीतवत् ॥ ३८ ॥
वर्जयन् नागराभ्याशांस्तथा जनपदानपि ।
सागरौघनिभं भीमं तद् वानरबलं महत् ॥ ३९ ॥
निःसर्षं महाघोरं भीमघोषमिवार्णवम् ।
तस्य दाशरथेः पार्श्वे शूरास्ते कपिकुञ्जराः ॥ ४० ॥
तूर्णमापुप्लुवुः सर्वे सदश्वा इव चोदिताः ।
कपिभ्यामुह्यमानौ तौ शुशुभाते नरर्षभौ ॥ ४१ ॥
महद्भ्यामिव संस्पृष्टौ ग्रहाभ्यां चन्द्रभास्करो ।
ततो वानरराजेन लक्ष्मणेन सुपूजितः ॥ ४२ ॥
जगाम रामो धर्मात्मा ससैन्यो दक्षिणां दिशम् ।
तमङ्गदगतो रामं लक्ष्मणः शुभया गिरा ॥ ४३ ॥
उवाच परिपूर्णार्थं पूर्णार्थप्रतिभानवान् ।
हतामवाप्य वैदेहीं क्षिप्रं हत्वा च रावणम् ॥ ४४ ॥

समृद्धान्तर्यः समृद्धान्तर्यमयोध्यां प्रतियास्यसि ।
महान्ति च निमित्तानि दिवि भूमौ च राघव ॥ ४५ ॥
शुभानि तव पश्यामि सर्वाण्येवार्थसिद्धये ।
अनुवाति शिवो वायुः सेनां मृदुहितः सुखः ॥ ४६ ॥

In this way the aforesaid tigers among monkeys, who were all proud of their might, pressed forward. Meanwhile, they caught sight of the Sahya mountain, the foremost of mountains, surrounded by hundreds of other smaller mountains, as also lakes with full-blown lotuses and other flowers, as well as excellent ponds. Avoiding the precincts of cities as well as the rural parts like one seized with fear, knowing as it did the command of Śrī Rāma, whose wrath gave rise to fear, that redoubtable and huge monkey army, which resembled the tide of a sea, surged forward like an exceedingly dreadful ocean roaring terribly. Like swift steeds urged on with a spur, all those heroic elephants among monkeys bounded forward with agility to the side of the aforesaid Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha. Being borne by the two monkeys, Aṅgada and Hanumān, Lakṣmaṇa and Śrī Rāma, the aforesaid two jewels among men, shone brightly like the moon and the sun conjoined with two major planets, Jupiter and Venus, respectively. Highly honoured by Sugrīva, the king of monkeys, as well as by Lakṣmaṇa, and accompanied by the army, Śrī Rāma, whose mind was set on piety, thereupon proceeded towards the southern quarter. To the said Śrī Rāma, whose purpose ever stood fully accomplished, Lakṣmaṇa, who was mounted on the shoulders of Aṅgada and who had intuitive knowledge of the fruition of an undertaking, submitted as follows in happy accents: "Killing Rāvaṇa in no time and recovering the abducted princess of the Videha territory, you will return fully accomplished of purpose to Ayodhyā, which will also have its purpose accomplished by your safe and happy return. I perceive good omens of great moment, which all prognosticate the accomplishment of your purpose, O scion of Raghu! A benign, gentle, favourable, cool and agreeable, fragrant breeze is blowing in the same direction as the army is proceeding. (37—46)

पूर्णवल्गुस्वराश्रेमे प्रवदन्ति मृगद्विजाः ।
प्रसन्नाश्च दिशः सर्वा विमलश्च दिवाकरः ॥ ४७ ॥

“Nay, these beasts and birds are emitting unbroken and agreeable sounds. Moreover the quarters are all serene and the sun is shining brightly. (47)

उशना च प्रसन्नार्चिरनु त्वां भार्गवो गतः ।
ब्रह्मरशिर्विशुद्धश्च शुद्धाश्च परमर्षयः ।
अर्चिष्मन्तः प्रकाशन्ते ध्रुवं सर्वे प्रदक्षिणम् ॥ ४८ ॥

“With its bright light, the planet Venus too, sprung from the Sage Bhṛgu (a mind-born son of Brahmā, the creator) has risen at your back, in the north. The very bright pole-star (which is distinguishable by the contiguity of the stars presided over by the seven Brāhmaṇa Ṛṣis or the Great Bear) as well as the stars presided over by the seven foremost Ṛṣis (and bearing the name of the Great Bear) are all shining clearly and brightly in the northern sky, while coursing clockwise round the pole-star. (48)

त्रिशङ्कुर्विमलो भाति राजर्षिः सपुरोहितः ।
पितामहः पुरोऽस्माकमिक्ष्वाकूणां महात्मनाम् ॥ ४९ ॥

“A star presided over by the royal sage Triśaṅku, a forbear of the high-souled Ikṣvākus, is also shining brightly before us in the southern sky, accompanied by another star presided over by his family priest, Sage Vasiṣṭha. (49)

विमले च प्रकाशेते विशाखे निरुपद्रवे ।
नक्षत्रं परमस्माकमिक्ष्वाकूणां महात्मनाम् ॥ ५० ॥

“The two bright stars, the Viśākhās, the foremost constellation in the eyes of the Ikṣvākus (being their tutelary constellation), are also gleaming over there, free from the evil influence of malevolent planets (Mars etc.). (50)

नैर्ऋतं नैर्ऋतानां च नक्षत्रमतिपीड्यते ।
मूलो मूलवता स्पृष्टो धूयते धूमकेतुना ॥ ५१ ॥

“The constellation Mūla, presided over by the ogre Nirṛti (the deity presiding over the south-west) and as such ruling the destinies of the ogres, is badly aspected, in that it is touched by a comet risen with a tail of light and tormenting it. (51)

सर्वं चैतद् विनाशाय राक्षसानामुपस्थितम् ।
काले कालगृहीतानां नक्षत्रं ग्रहपीडितम् ॥ ५२ ॥

“And all this has come about for the extermination of ogres; for the star ruling the destiny of those caught in the grip of Death is oppressed by a malevolent planet at the hour of death. (52)

प्रसन्नाः सुरसाश्चापो वनानि फलवन्ति च ।
प्रवान्ति नाधिका गन्धा यथर्तुकुसुमा द्रुमाः ॥ ५३ ॥

“The water of lakes etc., is pellucid and sweet and the woodlands are laden with fruit; fragrant breezes do not blow violently, while trees bear blossom according to season. (53)

व्यूढानि कपिसैन्यानि प्रकाशन्तेऽधिकं प्रभो ।
देवानामिव सैन्यानि संग्रामे तारकामये ।
एवमार्य समीक्ष्यैतत् प्रीतो भवितुमर्हसि ॥ ५४ ॥

“Disposed like the forces of gods arrayed in the battle, which brought destruction to the demon Tāraka (at the hands of Kārtikeya, son of Lord Śiva, the Commander-in-Chief of the celestial army), the forces of the monkeys shine brightly, O lord! Observing this fully, you ought to be pleased, O noble prince!” (54)

इति भ्रातरमाश्वस्य हृष्टः सौमित्रिरब्रवीत् ।
अथावृत्य महीं कृत्स्नां जगाम हरिवाहिनी ॥ ५५ ॥

Thus spoke Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), feeling cheerful on having reassured his eldest brother, Śrī Rāma. Meanwhile, the army of the monkeys moved along, covering the entire globe, as it were. (55)

ऋक्षवानरशार्दूलैर्नखद्रंष्ट्रायुधैरपि ।
कराग्रैश्चरणैश्च वानरैरुद्धतं रजः ॥ ५६ ॥
भीममन्तर्दधे लोकं निवार्य सवितुः प्रभाम् ।
सपर्वतवनाकाशं दक्षिणां हरिवाहिनी ॥ ५७ ॥
छादयन्ती ययौ भीमा द्यामिवाम्बुदसंततिः ।
उत्तरन्त्याश्च सेनायाः सततं बहुयोजनम् ॥ ५८ ॥
नदीस्रोतांसि सर्वाणि सस्यन्दुर्विपरीतवत् ।
सरांसि विमलाम्भांसि द्रुमाकीर्णाश्च पर्वतान् ॥ ५९ ॥
समान् भूमिप्रदेशांश्च वनानि फलवन्ति च ।
मध्येन च समन्ताच्च तिर्यक् चाधश्च साविशत् ॥ ६० ॥
समावृत्य महीं कृत्स्नां जगाम महती चमूः ।
ते हृष्टवदनाः सर्वे जग्मुर्मारुतरंहसः ॥ ६१ ॥
हरयो राघवस्यार्थे समारोपितविक्रमाः ।
हर्षं वीर्यं बलोद्रेकान् दर्शयन्तः परस्परम् ॥ ६२ ॥
यौवनोत्सेकजाद् दर्पाद् विविधांश्चक्रुर्ध्वनि ।
तत्र केचिद् द्रुतं जग्मुरुत्पेतुश्च तथापरे ॥ ६३ ॥
केचित् किलकिलां चक्रुर्वानरा वनगोचराः ।
प्रास्फोटयंश्च पुच्छानि संनिजघ्नुः पदान्यपि ॥ ६४ ॥

Intercepting the sunlight, the terrible dust raised by the monkeys—who consisted of some tiger-like bears and monkeys having nails and teeth for their weapons—with the fore parts of their hands and feet covered the earth. Like a continuous line of clouds enveloping the heavens, the formidable army of monkeys proceeded along encompassing the southern quarter alongwith the mountains, the woods and the sky. While the army crossed the rivers on the way, all their currents flowed in the opposite direction for many leagues continuously. The aforesaid army entered lakes with pellucid waters through the centre, mountains clothed with trees obliquely, level plains through every side and woodlands laden with fruit from underneath. The huge army thus advanced, covering the entire globe all over, as it were. Their prowess in the cause of Śrī Rāma having redoubled, all the aforesaid monkeys wore a cheerful countenance and moved with the swiftness of the wind. Exhibiting joy, prowess and superior strength in relation to one another through haughtiness born of high spirits natural to youth, they made various gestures on the way (as follows). Some of them walked quickly, while others sprang in the air. Still other monkeys, who ranged in the woods, emitted sounds expressive of joy, lashed their tail and also stamped their feet. (56—64)

भुजान् विक्षिप्य शैलांश्च द्रुमान्ये बभञ्जिरे ।
आरोहन्तश्च शृङ्गाणि गिरीणां गिरिगोचराः ॥ ६५ ॥

Stretching their arms, and climbing up the peaks of mountains, other monkeys (lit., rangers of mountains) broke off the rocks and trees. (65)

महानादान् प्रमुञ्चन्ति श्वेडामन्ये प्रचक्रिरे ।
ऊरुवेगैश्च ममृदुर्लताजालान्यनेकशः ॥ ६६ ॥

Some thundered at the top of their voice, while others roared like lions. Still others destroyed many networks of creepers with a jerk of their thighs. (66)

जृम्भमाणाश्च विक्रान्ता विचिक्रीडुः शिलादुमैः ।
ततः शतसहस्रैश्च कोटिभिश्च सहस्रशः ॥ ६७ ॥
वानराणां सुघोराणां श्रीमत्परिवृता मही ।
सा स्म याति दिवारात्रं महती हरिवाहिनी ॥ ६८ ॥

Even while stretching their limbs at the time of yawning, some powerful monkeys sported with rocks and trees. Presently the earth was splendidly covered by thousands, nay, lakhs and crores of most formidable monkeys. The huge army of monkeys thus moved on day and night. (67-68)

प्रहृष्टमुदिताः सर्वे सुग्रीवेणाभिपालिताः ।
वानरास्त्वरिता यान्ति सर्वे युद्धाभिनन्दिनः ।
प्रमोक्षयिषवः सीतां मुहूर्तं क्वापि नावसन् ॥ ६९ ॥

The monkeys, who all felt highly rejoiced and cheerful, protected as they were on all sides by Sugrīva, and who all welcomed war, eager as they were to get Sītā liberated, walked with quick steps and did not linger anywhere even for an hour. (69)

ततः पादपसम्बाधं नानावनसमायुतम् ।
सह्यपर्वतमासाद्य वानरास्ते समारुहन् ॥ ७० ॥

Then, reaching the Sahya mountain (identified with a part of the Western Ghats), thick with trees and rich in varied woodlands, the aforesaid monkeys climbed up to it. (70)

काननानि विचित्राणि नदीप्रस्त्रवणानि च ।
पश्यन्नपि ययौ रामः सह्यस्य मलयस्य च ॥ ७१ ॥

Śrī Rāma marched on, seeing diverse forests as well as the streams and cascades on the Sahya and Malaya mountains. (71)

चम्पकांस्तिलकांश्चूतानशोकान् सिन्दुवारकान् ।
तिनिशान् करवीरांश्च भञ्जन्ति स्म प्लवंगमाः ॥ ७२ ॥

The monkeys broke down Campaka, Tilaka, Mango, Aśoka, Sinduvāra, Tiniśa and Karavīra trees standing on the aforesaid mountains. (72)

अङ्गोलांश्च करञ्जांश्च प्लक्षन्यग्रोधपादपान् ।
जम्बूकामलकान् नीपान् भञ्जन्ति स्म प्लवंगमाः ॥ ७३ ॥

They also broke down Aṅkola, Karañja, Plakṣa and Nyagrodha, Jambū, Myrobalan and Nīpa trees. (73)

प्रस्तरेषु च रम्येषु विविधाः काननद्रुमाः ।
वायुवेगप्रचलिताः पुष्पैरवकिरन्ति तान् ॥ ७४ ॥

Violently shaken by the fury of the winds, generated by the swift march of the monkeys, the various forest trees standing on lovely rocks covered the monkeys with their blossom. (74)

मारुतः सुखसंस्पर्शो वाति चन्दनशीतलः ।
षट्पदैरनुकूजद्विर्वनेषु मधुगन्धिषु ॥ ७५ ॥

Accompanied by humming bees, a breeze delightful to the touch and cool through the contact of sandalwood trees was blowing through the woods emitting the odour of honey. (75)

अधिकं शैलराजस्तु धातुभिस्तु विभूषितः ।
धातुभ्यः प्रसृतो रेणुर्वायुवेगेन घट्टितः ॥ ७६ ॥
सुमहद्वानरानीकं छादयामास सर्वतः ।

गिरिप्रस्थेषु रम्येषु सर्वतः सम्प्रपुष्पिताः ॥ ७७ ॥
केतक्यः सिन्दुवाराश्च वासन्त्यश्च मनोरमाः ।

माधव्यो गन्धपूर्णाश्च कुन्दगुल्माश्च पुष्पिताः ॥ ७८ ॥

Richly adorned with minerals, the lord of mountains for its part shone all the brighter. The dust raised from the minerals and brought together by the wind covered the huge army of monkeys on all sides. Clothed with blossom on all sides on the lovely plateaux, the Ketakī and Sinduvāra trees and Vāsantī creepers ravished the soul. The Mādhavī creepers were charged with odour, while the Kunda (jasmine) shrubs were in blossom. (76—78)

चिरिबिल्वा मधूकाश्च वञ्जुला बकुलास्तथा ।
रञ्जकास्तिलकाश्चैव नागवृक्षाश्च पुष्पिताः ॥ ७९ ॥

Nay, Cīribilva and Madhūka, Vañjula and Bakula, Rañjaka and Tilaka trees and Nāga trees too burst into blossom. (79)

चूताः पाटलिकाश्चैव कोविदाराश्च पुष्पिताः ।
मुचुलिन्दार्जुनाश्चैव शिंशपाः कुटजास्तथा ॥ ८० ॥
हिन्तालास्तिनिशाश्चैव चूर्णका नीपकास्तथा ।
नीलाशोकाश्च सरला अङ्गोलाः पद्मकास्तथा ॥ ८१ ॥

Mango as well as Pāṭala and Kovidāra, Muculinda as well as Arjuna, Śimśapā and Kuṭaja, Hintāla as well as Tiniśa, Cūrṇa and Nīpa, blue Aśoka, Sarala, Aṅkola and Padmaka trees too were in blossom. (80-81)

प्रीयमाणैः प्लवंगैस्तु सर्वे पर्याकुलीकृताः ।
वाप्यस्तस्मिन् गिरौ रम्याः पल्वलानि तथैव च ॥ ८२ ॥

चक्रवाकानुचरिताः कारण्डवनिषेविताः ।
प्लवैः क्रौञ्चैश्च संकीर्णा वराहमृगसेविताः ॥ ८३ ॥

All the aforesaid trees on their part were set in commotion by the said monkeys, who felt pleased at the sight of their blossom. There were lovely wells with stairs as well as ponds on that mountain, which were frequented by Cakrawāka birds, the ruddy geese, inhabited by ducks, crowded with water-fowls and cranes and were haunted by boars and deer. (82-83)

ऋक्षैस्तरक्षुभिः सिंहैः शार्दूलैश्च भयावहैः ।
व्यालैश्च बहुभिर्भीमैः सेव्यमानाः समन्ततः ॥ ८४ ॥

Nay, they were being visited on all sides by bears, hyenas, lions, tigers inspiring terror and many dreadful and vicious elephants. (84)

पद्मैः सौगन्धिकैः फुल्लैः कुमुदैश्चोत्पलैस्तथा ।
वारिजैर्विविधैः पुष्पै रम्यास्तत्र जलाशयाः ॥ ८५ ॥

The reservoirs of water in the shape of lakes etc., on that mountain looked charming with expanded blue lotuses, water-lilies, white water-lilies and other aquatic flowers of various kinds. (85)

तस्य सानुषु कूजन्ति नानाद्विजगणास्तथा ।
स्नात्वा पीत्वोदकान्यत्र जले क्रीडन्ति वानराः ॥ ८६ ॥
अन्योन्यं प्लावयन्ति स्म शैलमारुह्य वानराः ।
फलान्यमृतगन्ध्नीनि मूलानि कुसुमानि च ॥ ८७ ॥
बभञ्जुर्वानरास्तत्र पादपानां मदोत्कटाः ।
द्रोणमात्रप्रमाणानि लम्बमानानि वानराः ॥ ८८ ॥
ययुः पिबन्तः स्वस्थास्ते मधूनि मधुपिङ्गलाः ।
पादपानवभञ्जन्तो विकर्षन्तस्तथा लताः ॥ ८९ ॥
विधमन्तो गिरिवरान् प्रययुः प्लवगर्षभाः ।
वृक्षेभ्योऽन्ये तु कपयो नदन्तो मधु दर्पिताः ॥ ९० ॥
अन्ये वृक्षान् प्रपद्यन्ते प्रपिबन्त्यपि चापरे ।
बभूव वसुधा तैस्तु सम्पूर्णा हरिपुङ्गवैः ।
यथा कमलकेदारैः पक्वैरिव वसुंधरा ॥ ९१ ॥

Nay, flocks of birds of various kinds sang on the peaks of that mountain. Having bathed and quaffed water, the monkeys sported and plunged one another in these lakes etc. Climbing the mountain, the monkeys broke down the fruits, fragrant as nectar, as well as the flowers of the trees as also the roots on that mountain. Nay, the aforesaid monkeys, who were drunk with pride of strength and were tawny like honey, quaffed honey from the hanging honeycombs, weighing about a maund* each, and went their way contented and happy. The jewels among monkeys marched on, smashing the trees, pulling the climbers and throwing away the foremost of mountains. Removing honey from the trees, other proud monkeys for their part thundered. Others proceeded to the trees to snatch away honey, while still others quaffed honey to their heart's content. Entirely covered with those bulls among monkeys, the earth for its part looked like a piece of land covered with ripe fields of paddy. (86—91)

महेन्द्रमथ सम्प्राप्य रामो राजीवलोचनः ।
आरुरोह महाबाहुः शिखरं द्रुमभूषितम् ॥ ९२ ॥

Duly reaching the Mahendra mountain, the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma with lotus-like eyes forthwith ascended its peak adorned with trees. (92)

ततः शिखरमारुह्य रामो दशरथात्मजः ।
कूर्ममीनसमाकीर्णमपश्यत् सलिलाशयम् ॥ ९३ ॥

Having climbed up its peak, Śrī Rāma, son of King Daśaratha, beheld from it the sea crowded with turtle and fish. (93)

ते सहां समतिक्रम्य मलयं च महागिरिम् ।
आसेदुरानुपूर्व्येण समुद्रं भीमनिःस्वनम् ॥ ९४ ॥

Having duly crossed in the first place the Sahya mountain as well as the great Malaya mountain, they reached in due course, after crossing the Mahendra mountain the sea, which was making a terrible noise. (94)

अवरुह्य जगामाशु वेलावनमनुत्तमम्।
रामो रमयतां श्रेष्ठः ससुग्रीवः सलक्ष्मणः ॥ ९५ ॥

Climbing down the Mahendra mountain, Śrī Rāma, the foremost of those who ravish the mind, accompanied by Sugrīva, the king of monkeys, and Lakṣmaṇa quickly sought the most excellent woodland adjoining the sea. (95)

अथ धौतोपलतलां तोयौघैः सहसोत्थितैः।
वेलामासाद्य विपुलां रामो वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ९६ ॥

Having arrived at the vast sea-shore, the foot of whose rocks had been washed by volumes of water risen all of a sudden, Śrī Rāma spoke as follows: (96)

एते वयमनुप्राप्ताः सुग्रीव वरुणालयम्।
इहेदानीं विचिन्ता सा या नः पूर्वमुपस्थिता ॥ ९७ ॥

"We have now reached the sea, the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water, O Sugrīva! The same problem faces me here at the present moment, which stared us in the face before. (97)

अतः परमतीरोऽयं सागरः सरितां पतिः।
न चायमनुपायेन शक्यस्तरितुमर्णवः ॥ ९८ ॥

"Beyond this stretches the yonder shoreless sea, the lord of rivers, and this sea cannot be crossed without some device. (98)

तदिहैव निवेशोऽस्तु मन्त्रः प्रस्तूयतामिह।
यथेदं वानरबलं परं पारमवाप्नुयात् ॥ ९९ ॥

"Therefore, let an encampment be made at this very spot and let deliberation be set on foot here, so that this army of monkeys may reach the opposite shore." (99)

इतीव स महाबाहुः सीताहरणकर्षितः।
रामः सागरमासाद्य वासमाज्ञापयत् तदा ॥ १०० ॥

In these words did the celebrated Śrī Rāma of mighty arms, who was emaciated due to the abduction of Sītā, enjoin the quartering of his army on reaching the sea. (100)

सर्वाः सेना निवेश्यन्तां वेलायां हरिपुङ्गव।
सम्प्राप्तो मन्त्रकालो नः सागरस्येह लङ्घने ॥ १०१ ॥

"Let all the forces be quartered on the strand, O bull among monkeys," he continued. "The time is ripe for us to discuss the means of crossing the sea at this point (101)

स्वां स्वां सेनां समुत्सृज्य मा च कश्चित् कुतो व्रजेत्।
गच्छन्तु वानराः शूरा ज्ञेयं छन्नं भयं च नः ॥ १०२ ॥

"Let no one slip away on any account whatsoever, leaving his unit of army. Let the gallant monkeys make a move to guard the army against any possible danger; and it should be known that there may be covert danger for us." (102)

रामस्य वचनं श्रुत्वा सुग्रीवः सहलक्ष्मणः।
सेनां निवेशयत् तीरे सागरस्य द्रुमायुते ॥ १०३ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, Sugrīva with Lakṣmaṇa caused the army to be quartered on the beach covered with trees. (103)

विरराज समीपस्थं सागरस्य च तद् बलम्।
मधुपाण्डुजलः श्रीमान् द्वितीय इव सागरः ॥ १०४ ॥

Quartered in the vicinity of the sea, that army shone brightly like a second glorious sea with its water pale-white as honey. (104)

वेलावनमुपागम्य ततस्ते हरिपुङ्गवाः।
निविष्टाश्च परं पारं काङ्क्षमाणा महोदधे ॥ १०५ ॥

Having reached the forest adjoining the beach, the aforesaid bulls among monkeys then encamped there, seeking to reach the other shore of the vast sea. (105)

तेषां निविशमानानां सैन्यसंनाहनिःस्वनः।
अन्तर्धाय महानादमर्णवस्य प्रशुश्रुवे ॥ १०६ ॥

The noise of the movement of the army, while they were encamping, was distinctly heard drowning the roar of the sea. (106)

सा वानराणां ध्वजिनी सुग्रीवेणाभिपालिता ।

त्रिधा निविष्टा महती रामस्यार्थपराभवत् ॥ १०७ ॥

Protected on all sides by Sugrīva and devoted to the cause of Śrī Rāma, that huge army of monkeys was encamped in three divisions viz., (i) bears, (ii) Go-Lāṅgūlas or long-tailed monkeys (लंगूर) and (iii) monkeys. (107)

सा महार्णवमासाद्य हृष्टा वानरवाहिनी ।

वायुवेगसमाधूतं पश्यमाना महार्णवम् ॥ १०८ ॥

Having reached the vast sea and beholding the ocean lashed by the force of the winds, the said army of monkeys felt rejoiced. (108)

दूरपारमसम्बाधं रक्षोगणनिषेवितम् ।

पश्यन्तो वरुणावासं निषेदुर्हरियूथपाः ॥ १०९ ॥

चण्डनक्रग्राहघोरं क्षपादौ दिवसक्षये ।

हसन्तमिव फेनौघैर्नृत्यन्तमिव चोर्मिभिः ॥ ११० ॥

चन्द्रोदये समुद्भूतं प्रतिचन्द्रसमाकुलम् ।

चण्डानिलमहाग्राहेः कीर्णं तिमितिमिगिलैः ॥ १११ ॥

दीप्तभोगैरिवाकीर्णं भुजङ्गैर्वरुणालयम् ।

अवगाढं महासत्त्वैर्नाशैलसमाकुलम् ॥ ११२ ॥

सुदुर्गं दुर्गमार्गं तमगाधमसुरालयम् ।

मकरैर्नागभोगैश्च विगाढा वातलोलिताः ।

उत्पेतुश्च निपेतुश्च प्रहृष्टा जलराशयः ॥ ११३ ॥

The leaders of the monkey troops sat surveying the sea (lit., the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water), with shores far apart, nay, stretching without any obstruction for hundreds of miles together and infested with hordes of ogres—the sea which looked terrible on account of its furious crocodiles and alligators; which was tossed high at the close of the day and the approach of night at moonrise and was full of images of the moon, reflected on its billows, which laughed as it were through volumes of foam produced by its waves and danced as it were through its billows; which was crowded with huge alligators, swift as a furious gale as well as with Timis* (a species of gigantic fish believed to be a hundred Yojanas or eight hundred miles long) and Timingilas (fish capable of devouring even Timis); which was swarmed with serpents endowed with flaming hoods and thus looked like Pātāla, the abode of Varuṇa; which was crowded with enormous aquatic creatures and thickly set with mountains (under water), which had excellent fastnesses like Laṅkā on its shore, which could not be easily crossed, and which was fathomless and an abode of demons. Volumes of its water, whipped into motion by the winds and penetrated into by sharks and the bodies of serpents, rose and fell joyfully. (109—113)

अग्निचूर्णमिवाविद्धं भास्वराम्बुमहोरगम् ।

सुरारिनिलयं घोरं पातालविषयं सदा ॥ ११४ ॥

सागरं चाम्बरप्रख्यमम्बरं सागरोपमम् ।

सागरं चाम्बरं चेति निर्विशेषमदृश्यत ॥ ११५ ॥

With its sparkling spray, the sea, which is always the dread refuge of demons (the enemies of gods) and is infested with huge serpents and reaches in its depth up to Pātāla (the nethermost subterranean region), looked like a multitude of sparks thrown here and there and also presented the appearance of the firmament whose sparkling frozen dew-drops appeared like so many sparks thrown here and there, nay, which is frequented by Nāgas, is the abode of demons and is deep as Pātāla; while the firmament above looked like another sea. Nay, the sea as well as the firmament looked just the same. (114-115)

* We read in the Purāṇas:

अस्ति मत्स्यस्तिमिर्नाम शतयोजनमायतः ।

तं यो गिलति मत्स्यः स तिमिगिल इतीरितः ॥

तिमिगिलगिलोऽप्यस्ति तद्गिलोऽप्यस्ति सागरे ॥

सम्पृक्तं नभसाप्यम्भः सम्पृक्तं च नभोऽम्भसा ।
तादृगूपे स्म दृश्येते तारारत्नसमाकुले ॥ ११६ ॥

The water of the sea was linked with the firmament and the latter with the water of the sea. Full of stars and pearls, respectively, the two appeared identical. (116)

समुत्पतितमेघस्य वीचिमालाकुलस्य च ।
विशेषो न द्वयोरासीत् सागरस्याम्बरस्य च ॥ ११७ ॥

No distinction could be made between the two, viz., the sea and the firmament, in the latter of which (the sky) clouds had sprung into existence, while the former was crowded with rows of waves. (117)

अन्योन्यैरहताः सक्ताः सस्वनुर्भीमनिःस्वनाः ।
ऊर्मयः सिन्धुराजस्य महाभेर्यं इवाम्बरे ॥ ११८ ॥

Having come in close contact with and collided against one another, the waves of the kingly sea roared with a terrible noise like huge kettledrums sounding in the air. (118)

रत्नौघजलसंनादं विषक्तमिव वायुना ।
उत्पतन्तमिव क्रुद्धं यादोगणसमाकुलम् ॥ ११९ ॥

The monkeys saw the sea concentrated, as it were, at one place by the wind, nay, characterized by the noise of precious stones scattered by it as well as by the roaring of its waves, also infested with aquatic creatures and rising high as though infuriated. (119)

ददृशुस्ते महात्मानो वाताहतजलाशयम् ।
अनिलोद्धूतमाकाशे प्रवलान्तमिवोर्मिभिः ॥ १२० ॥

Those high-souled monkeys surveyed the sea lashed by the winds and tossed by them in the air, nay, dancing, as it were, through its waves. (120)

ततो विस्मयमापन्ना हरयो ददृशुः स्थिताः ।
भ्रान्तोर्मिजालसंनादं प्रलोलमिव सागरम् ॥ १२१ ॥

Standing wonderstruck at this, the monkeys saw the sea full of noise produced by the rolling waves, riotous, as it were. (121)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुर्थः सर्गः ॥ ४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चमः सर्गः

Canto V

While talking with Lakṣmaṇa, Śrī Rāma is reminded of Sītā and, smitten with pangs of love, gives way to grief and lamentation

सा तु नीलेन विधिवत्स्वारक्षा सुसमाहिता ।
सागरस्योत्तरे तीरे साधु सा विनिवेशिता ॥ १ ॥

Properly guarded by itself and fully vigilant, the aforesaid army of monkeys for its part was comfortably quartered on the northern shore of the sea by Nila, the

Commander-in-Chief. (1)

मैन्दश्च द्विविदश्चोभौ तत्र वानरपुङ्गवौ ।
विचेरतुश्च तां सेनां रक्षार्थं सर्वतोदिशम् ॥ २ ॥

Nay, both Mainda and Dwivida, the two bulls among monkeys, patrolled in that area on all sides of the army for its protection. (2)

निविष्टायां तु सेनायां तीरे नदनदीपतेः।
पार्श्वस्थं लक्ष्मणं दृष्ट्वा रामो वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ३ ॥

The army having been quartered on the shore of the sea (the lord of all rivers and streams), Śrī Rāma for his part spoke as follows to Lakṣmaṇa on seeing him standing by his side: (3)

शोकश्च किल कालेन गच्छता ह्यपगच्छति।
मम चापश्यतः कान्तामहन्यहनि वर्धते ॥ ४ ॥

“As time passes, grief too, they say, undoubtedly disappears; in my case, however, even as I miss my darling, Sītā, it grows day by day. (4)

न मे दुःखं प्रिया दूरे न मे दुःखं ह्येति च।
एतदेवानुशोचामि वयोऽस्या ह्यतिवर्तते ॥ ५ ॥

“My agony does not exist because my beloved is away from me, nor is it due to the fact that she has been borne away. I grieve for this alone that the time allowed for her survival is actually passing away. (5)

वाहि वात यतः कान्ता तां स्पृष्ट्वा मामपि स्पृश।
त्वयि मे गात्रसंस्पर्शश्चन्द्रे दृष्टिसमागमः ॥ ६ ॥

“Speed, O Breeze, to the spot where my love is; having fanned her, touch me as well. The touch of my body with you in that case will react in the same way as the meeting of one’s gaze with the moon i.e., reliever of all pain and exhilarating. (6)

तन्मे दहति गात्राणि विषं पीतमिवाशये।
हा नाथेति प्रिया सा मां ह्रियमाणा यदब्रवीत् ॥ ७ ॥

“The exclamation ‘Ah, my lord!’ which that darling addressed to me while being borne away by the ogre, consumes my limbs like poison swallowed by me and continuing in my stomach. (7)

तद्वियोगेन्धनवता तच्चिन्ताविमलार्चिषा।
रात्रिं दिवं शरीरं मे दह्यते मदनाग्निना ॥ ८ ॥

“My body is consumed night and day by the fire of love fed with the fuel of my separation from her and flaring up into the bright flame of my thought of her. (8)

अवगाह्यार्णवं स्वप्न्ये सौमित्रे भवता विना।
एवं च प्रज्वलन् कामो न मा सुप्तं जले देहेत् ॥ ९ ॥

“Diving into the sea, without you as my companion, O darling of Sumitrā, I shall repose there. Flaming love will not certainly consume me lying asleep in water, as aforesaid. (9)

बहेतुत् कामयानस्य शक्यमेतेन जीवितुम्।
यदहं सा च वामोरुरेकां धरणिमाश्रितौ ॥ १० ॥

“That the said lady of charming limbs and myself repose on the selfsame earth is enough consolation for me, soliciting as I do her company (desolate that I am) and it will be possible for me to survive on this score alone. (10)

केदारस्येव केदारः सोदकस्य निरुदकः।
उपस्नेहेन जीवामि जीवन्तीं यच्छृणोमि ताम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Even as the crop in a field without water remains alive through contact with a field underwater, I too survive because I hear of her surviving. (11)

कदा नु खलु सुश्रोणीं शतपत्रायतेक्ष्णाम्।
विजित्य शत्रून् द्रक्ष्यामि सीतां स्फीतामिव श्रियम् ॥ १२ ॥

“When on earth, having thoroughly conquered my enemies, shall I actually behold Sītā of excellent limbs and eyes large as a lotus, and welcome as abundant fortune? (12)

कदा सुचारुदन्तोष्ठं तस्याः पद्ममिवाननम्।
ईषदुन्म्य पास्यामि रसायनमिवातुरः ॥ १३ ॥

“When, raising a bit her lotus-like face with its extremely charming teeth and lips, shall I kiss it even as an ailing man would drink an elixir of life? (13)

तौ तस्याः सहितौ पीनौ स्तनौ तालफलोपमौ।
कदा न खलु सोत्कम्पौ श्लिष्यन्त्या मां भजिष्यतः ॥ १४ ॥

“O, when will her close, bulging and quivering breasts, resembling the palmyra fruit, actually press me even as she embraces me? (14)

सा नूनमसितापाङ्गी रक्षोमध्यगता सती।
मन्नाथा नाथहीनेव त्रातारं नाधिगच्छति ॥ १५ ॥

“Surely that virtuous lady with dark-cornered eyes, who has myself alone for her protector and has fallen in the midst of ogres, does not find a redeemer any more than a woman without a protector. (15)

कथं जनकराजस्य दुहिता मम च प्रिया।
राक्षसीमध्यगा शेते स्नुषा दशरथस्य च ॥ १६ ॥

“How does the daughter of Janaka, nay, my darling and the daughter-in-law of Daśaratha repose in the midst of ogresses? (16)

अविक्षोभ्याणि रक्षांसि सा विधूयोत्पत्तिष्यति।
विधूय जलदान् नीलाञ्जलिलेखा शरत्स्विव ॥ १७ ॥

“Will Sitā emerge into view destroying through me the unshakable ogres, in the same way as the crescent would shine forth during the autumn dispersing the dark clouds? (17)

स्वभावतनुका नूनं शोकेनानशनेन च।
भूयस्तनुतरा सीता देशकालविपर्ययात् ॥ १८ ॥

“Sitā, who is slender by nature, must undoubtedly be leaner still from grief and abstinence from food due to adversity of time and place. (18)

कदा नु राक्षसेन्द्रस्य निधायोरसि सायकान्।
शोकं प्रत्याहरिष्यामि शोकमुत्सृज्य मानसम् ॥ १९ ॥

“O, when, digging shafts into the breast of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), and casting off my mental woe, shall I dispel the grief of Sitā? (19)

कदा नु खलु मे साध्वी सीतामरसुतोपमा।
सोत्कण्ठा कण्ठमालम्ब्य मोक्षयत्यानन्दजं जलम् ॥ २० ॥

“O when, clinging to my neck, full of longing, will my virtuous Sitā, who is like a daughter of the gods, shed tears of joy? (20)

कदा शोकमिमं घोरं मैथिलीविप्रयोगजम्।
सहसा विप्रमोक्ष्यामि वासः शुक्लेतरं यथा ॥ २१ ॥

“When shall I cast away thoroughly and for good all at once this terrible grief born of separation from Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, in the same way as one would discard a soiled garment?” (21)

एवं विलपतस्तस्य तत्र रामस्य धीमतः।
दिनक्षयान्मन्दवपुर्भास्करोऽस्तमुपागमत् ॥ २२ ॥

While the sagacious Śrī Rāma was wailing as aforesaid on that spot, the sun, whose brilliance had grown dim due to the decline of the day, disappeared below the western horizon. (22)

आश्वसितो लक्ष्मणेन रामः संध्यामुपासत।
स्मरन् कमलपत्रार्क्षीं सीतां शोकाकुलीकृतः ॥ २३ ॥

Comforted by Lakṣmaṇa, Śrī Rāma, who was distracted with grief, performed his evening devotions, thinking all the time of Sitā, whose eyes resembled the petals of a lotus. (23)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चमः सर्गः ॥ ५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

षष्ठः सर्गः

Canto VI

At Laṅkā Rāvaṇa holds consultation with the ogres on the means of victory in the contingency of a conflict with the monkeys

लङ्कायां तु कृतं कर्म घोरं दृष्ट्वा भयावहम् ।
राक्षसेन्द्रो हनुमता शक्रेणेव महात्मना ।
अब्रवीद् राक्षसान् सर्वान् हिया किञ्चिदवाङ्मुखः ॥ १ ॥

Perceiving the terrible and grisly feat accomplished in Laṅkā by the high-souled Hanumān, who vied with Indra in might, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, spoke as follows to all the ogres, his looks directed a bit downwards from bashfulness: (1)

धर्षिता च प्रविष्टा च लङ्का दुष्प्रसहा पुरी ।
तेन वानरमात्रेण दृष्टा सीता च जानकी ॥ २ ॥

“The city of Laṅkā, which was difficult to challenge, has been assailed and penetrated into and Sītā found out by Hanumān, a mere monkey. (2)

प्रासादो धर्षितश्चैत्यः प्रवरा राक्षसा हताः ।
आविला च पुरी लङ्का सर्वा हनुमता कृता ॥ ३ ॥

“The edifice used as a sanctuary has been penetrated, the topmost ogres have been killed and the entire city of Laṅkā turned upside down by Hanumān. (3)

किं करिष्यामि भद्रं वः किं वो युक्तमनन्तरम् ।
उच्यतां नः समर्थं यत् कृतं च सुकृतं भवेत् ॥ ४ ॥

“May good betide you, what shall I do next? What appeals to you as advisable to do next? Please suggest what is equal to us and what, if attempted, will be well executed. (4)

मन्त्रमूलं च विजयं प्रवदन्ति मनस्विनः ।
तस्माद् वै रोचये मन्त्रं रामं प्रति महाबलाः ॥ ५ ॥

“The wise declare victory as dependent on good counsel. I, therefore, prefer to take your counsel with regard to Rāma, O ogres of extraordinary might! (5)

त्रिविधाः पुरुषा लोके उत्तमाधममध्यमाः ।
तेषां तु समवेतानां गुणदोषौ वदाम्यहम् ॥ ६ ॥

“There are three kinds of men in the world—the good, the bad and the mediocre. I, for my part, describe the good points as well as the shortcomings of them all as follows: (6)

मन्त्रस्त्रिभिर्हि संयुक्तः समर्थैर्मन्त्रनिर्णये ।
मित्रैर्वापि समानार्थैर्बान्धवैरपि वाधिकैः ॥ ७ ॥
सहितो मन्त्रयित्वा यः कर्मारम्भान् प्रवर्तयेत् ।
दैवे च कुरुते यत्नं तमाहुः पुरुषोत्तमम् ॥ ८ ॥

“The wise declare him to be the foremost of men, whose counsel is actually endowed with the following three characteristics, and who prosecutes his undertakings after deliberating with his friends, who are capable of deciding a point at issue or with relations having common interests or even with his superiors and exerts himself depending on Providence. (7-8)

एकोऽर्थं विमृशेदेको धर्मं प्रकुरुते मनः ।
एकः कार्याणि कुरुते तमाहुर्मध्यमं नरम् ॥ ९ ॥

“They call him mediocre, who ponders his interests by himself, sets his mind on virtue all by himself and executes his designs single-handed. (9)

गुणदोषौ न निश्चित्य त्यक्त्वा दैवव्यपाश्रयम् ।
करिष्यामीति यः कार्यमुपेक्षेत् स नराधमः ॥ १० ॥

“Failing to ascertain the advantages and the disadvantages of a scheme, nay, renouncing his dependence on Providence and merely saying ‘I shall do it’, he who neglects his duty is the vilest of men. (10)

यथेमे पुरुषा नित्यमुत्तमाधममध्यमाः ।
एवं मन्त्रोऽपि विज्ञेय उत्तमाधममध्यमः ॥ ११ ॥

“Even as the aforementioned people are either ever good, bad or mediocre, so the conclusion arrived at by them is also good, bad or mediocre. (11)

ऐकमत्यमुपागम्य शास्त्रदृष्टेन चक्षुषा ।
मन्त्रिणो यत्र निरतास्तमाहुर्मन्त्रमुत्तमम् ॥ १२ ॥

“The wise declare that conclusion to be excellent in which the counsellors feel specially interested, after reaching an agreement based on a point of view supported by the scriptures. (12)

बह्वीरपि मतीर्गत्वा मन्त्रिणामर्थनिर्णयः ।
पुनर्यत्रैकतां प्राप्तः स मन्त्रो मध्यमः स्मृतः ॥ १३ ॥

“That conclusion is declared to be mediocre in arriving at which the judgment of the counsellors with regard to the point at issue reaches unanimity only after meeting with different angles of views. (13)

अन्योन्यमतिमास्थाय यत्र सम्प्रतिभाष्यते ।
न चैकमत्ये श्रेयोऽस्ति मन्त्रः सोऽधम उच्यते ॥ १४ ॥

“That conclusion, again, is declared to be third-rate, in arriving at which speeches and counter-speeches are made emphasising different points of view and from which good fortune does not follow even in the event of unanimity being arrived at somehow. (14)

तस्मात् सुमन्त्रितं साधु भवन्तो मतिसत्तमाः ।
कार्यं सम्प्रतिपद्यन्तमेतत् कृत्यं मतं मम ॥ १५ ॥

“Therefore, determine you, who are foremost in point of intelligence, a course of conduct which is well-deliberated and, therefore, right. This alone is reckoned by me as worth adopting. (15)

वानराणां हि धीराणां सहस्रैः परिवारितः ।
रामोऽभ्येति पुरीं लङ्कामस्माकमुपरोधकः ॥ १६ ॥

“Surrounded by thousands of heroic monkeys, Rāma is actually advancing towards the city of Laṅkā in order to besiege us. (16)

तरिष्यति च सुव्यक्तं राघवः सागरं सुखम् ।
तरसा युक्तरूपेण सानुजः सबलानुगः ॥ १७ ॥

“Clearly enough, by virtue of his might, which is worthy of him, Rāma (a scion of Raghu) will cross the sea with ease alongwith his younger brother as well as with his forces and entourage. (17)

समुद्रमुच्छेषयति वीर्येणान्यत्करोति वा ।
तस्मिन्नेवंविधे कार्ये विरुद्धे वानरैः सह ।
हितं पुरे च सैन्ये च सर्वं सम्मन्त्र्यतां मम ॥ १८ ॥

“He will either dry up the sea by dint of his prowess or do something else to bridge the sea. The aforesaid work of invading Laṅkā having commenced in this way and antagonism with the monkeys having been set on foot, advice may be tendered to me on whatever is good for the city and the army.” (18)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षष्ठः सर्गः ॥ ६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तमः सर्गः

Canto VII

Indulging in praise of their own might on hearing the command of Rāvaṇa, all the ogres present stimulate him with confidence, asking him not to give way to despondency

इत्युक्ता राक्षसेन्द्रेण राक्षसास्ते महाबलाः ।
 ऊचुः प्राञ्जलयः सर्वे रावणं राक्षसेश्वरम् ॥ १ ॥
 द्विषत्यक्षमविज्ञाय नीतिबाह्यास्त्वबुद्धयः ।
 राजन् परिघशक्त्यृष्टिशूलपट्टिशकुन्तलम् ॥ २ ॥
 सुमहन्नो बलं कस्माद् विषादं भजते भवान् ।
 त्वया भोगवतीं गत्वा निर्जिताः पन्नगा युधि ॥ ३ ॥

Not knowing in full about the strength of the enemy's army, all the aforesaid ogres, who, though endowed with extraordinary might, were unaware of political wisdom and lacked intelligence, submitted, when commanded thus by Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, with joined palms as follows: "There exists with us, O king, a huge army equipped with iron bars, javelins, double-edged swords, darts, sharp-edged spears and lances. Why then do you give way to despondency. After proceeding to Bhogavati (the city of the Nāgas in Pātāla), the Nāgas were completely subdued by you in combat.

(1—3)

कैलासशिखरावासी यक्षैर्बहुभिरावृतः ।
 सुमहत्कदनं कृत्वा वश्यस्ते धनदः कृतः ॥ ४ ॥

"Nay, after waging a terrible conflict, even Kubera, the bestower of riches, who dwells on a peak of Mount Kailāsa and remains surrounded by numerous Yakṣas (a class of demigods), was reduced to submission by you.

(4)

स महेश्वरसंख्येन श्लाघमानस्त्वया विभो ।
 निर्जितः समरे रोषाल्लोकपालो महाबलः ॥ ५ ॥

"Priding, as he did, on his friendship with Lord Śiva, the Supreme Lord, the aforesaid Kubera (a guardian of the world), who is endowed with extraordinary might, was utterly subdued by you on the field of battle in indignation, O powerful king!

(5)

विनिपात्य च यक्षौघान् विक्षोभ्य विनिगृह्य च ।
 त्वया कैलासशिखराद् विमानमिदमाहृतम् ॥ ६ ॥

"After causing a stir among the Yakṣa hordes, nay, taking them as prisoners and overthrowing them—this aerial car (Puṣpaka) was taken away by you from the peak of Mount Kailāsa.

(6)

मयेन दानवेन्द्रेण त्वद्भयात् सख्यमिच्छता ।
 दुहिता तव भार्यार्थे दत्ता राक्षसपुङ्गव ॥ ७ ॥

"By Maya (मय), a ruler of the Dānavas (the son of Dānu), who sought an alliance with you out of fear of you, O bull among ogres, his daughter, Mandodari, was given to you in marriage as your wife.

(7)

दानवेन्द्रो महाबाहो वीर्योत्सिक्तो दुरासदः ।
 विगृह्य वशमानीतः कुम्भीनस्याः सुखावहः ॥ ८ ॥

"Madhu (another ruler of the Dānavas), the husband (lit., the joy) of Kumbhīnasi, your beloved sister, who was proud of his virility and was difficult to approach, was subjugated by you by offering battle to him, O mighty-armed one!

(8)

निर्जितास्ते महाबाहो नागा गत्वा रसातलम् ।
 वासुकिस्तक्षकः शङ्खो जटी च वशमाहताः ॥ ९ ॥

"After descending into Rasātala (the penultimate subterranean region) the serpent-demons Vāsuki, Takṣaka, Śaṅkha and Jaṭi were completely subdued and reduced to submission by you, O mighty-armed one!

(9)

अक्षया बलवन्तश्च शूरा लब्धवराः पुनः ।
त्वया संवत्सरं युद्ध्वा समरे दानवा विभो ॥ १० ॥
स्वबलं समुपाश्रित्य नीता वशमरिंदम ।
मायाश्चाधिगतास्तत्र बह्व्यो वै राक्षसाधिप ॥ ११ ॥

“After carrying on a struggle for a whole year on the field of battle, O powerful suzerain lord of ogres, Dānavas (sons of Kālākā) who were beyond destruction, mighty and valiant and had obtained boons (of immortality), were reduced to submission by you by resorting to your own strength, O tamer of foes, and many conjuring tricks were learnt from them. (10-11)

शूराश्च बलवन्तश्च वरुणस्य सुता रणे ।
निर्जितास्ते महाभाग चतुर्विधबलानुगाः ॥ १२ ॥

Those heroic and mighty sons of Varuṇa, who were followed by an army consisting of four limbs, viz., elephants, chariots, cavalry and infantry, were completely subdued by you, O highly blessed one! (12)

मृत्युदण्डमहाग्राहं शाल्मलीद्रुममण्डितम् ।
कालपाशमहावीचिं यमकिंकरपन्नगम् ॥ १३ ॥
महाज्वरेण दुर्धर्षं यमलोकमहार्णवम् ।
अवगाह्य त्वया राजन् यमस्य बलसागरम् ॥ १४ ॥
जयश्च विपुलः प्राप्तो मृत्युश्च प्रतिषेधितः ।
सुयुद्धेन च ते सर्वे लोकस्तत्र सुतोषिताः ॥ १५ ॥

“After plunging into the ocean in the shape of Yama’s realm with an enormous alligator in the form of Death’s rod of punishment, nay, adorned with Śālmali (silk cotton) trees (bristling with thorns to tear the bodies of damned sinners with), turbulent with a huge billow in the shape of the noose of Kāla (the Time-Spirit) infested with serpents in the form of Yama’s servants and difficult to overcome on account of the mighty Jwara (the spirit presiding over fevers), and churning the sea in the shape of Yama’s forces, a momentous victory was scored and Death repulsed by you;

nay, all those people there were highly gratified through your excellent fighting skill. (13—15)

क्षत्रियैर्बहुभिर्वीरैः शक्रतुल्यपराक्रमैः ।
आसीद् वसुमती पूर्णा महद्भिरिव पादपैः ॥ १६ ॥

“The earth was formerly filled with numerous Kṣatriya heroes, equal in prowess to Indra (the ruler of gods), as with gigantic trees. (16)

तेषां वीर्यगुणोत्साहैर्न समो राघवो रणे ।
प्रसह्य ते त्वया राजन् हताः समरदुर्जयाः ॥ १७ ॥

“Rāma, a scion of Raghu, is not equal to them on the battlefield in point of prowess, martial qualities and bellicose spirit. Even though difficult to conquer in an encounter, they were violently made short work of by you at once. (17)

तिष्ठ वा किं महाराज श्रमेण तव वानरान् ।
अयमेको महाबाहुरिन्द्रजित् क्षपयिष्यति ॥ १८ ॥

“Or, remain where you are, O king! What is the use of your exerting yourself? This mighty-armed Indrajit, your eldest son, will extirpate all the monkeys, single-handed. (18)

अनेन च महाराज माहेश्वरमनुत्तमम् ।
इष्ट्वा यज्ञं वरो लब्धो लोके परमदुर्लभः ॥ १९ ॥

“Nay, after performing a sacrifice intended to propitiate Lord Śiva (the Supreme Lord), a boon, which was supremely difficult to win in the world, was secured by him from Lord Śiva, O mighty sovereign! (19)

शक्तितोमरमीनं च विनिकीर्णान्त्रिशैवलम् ।
गजकच्छपसम्बाधमश्वमण्डूकसंकुलम् ॥ २० ॥

रुद्रादित्यमहाग्राहं मरुद्वसुमहोरगम् ।
स्थाश्वगजतोयौघं पदातिपुलिनं महत् ॥ २१ ॥

अनेन हि समासाद्य देवानां बलसागरम् ।
गृहीतो दैवतपतिर्लङ्कां चापि प्रवेशितः ॥ २२ ॥

“After assailing the sea in the form of the celestial army with javelins and spears for its fish and entrails thrown asunder for duck-weeds, nay, full of turtles in the form of elephants, teeming with frogs in the form of horses, infested with alligators in the form of the eleven Rudras (gods of destruction) and twelve Ādityas (sons of Aditi), and with huge serpents in the form of the forty-nine Maruts (wind-gods) and the eight Vasus, and having chariots, horses and elephants for its volume of water and foot-soldiers for its sandy beach, Indra, the ruler of gods, was actually captured by him and thrust into Laṅkā as a detenu. (20—22)

पितामहनियोगाच्च मुक्तः शम्बरवृत्रहा।
गतस्त्रिविष्टपं राजन् सर्वदेवनमस्कृतः ॥ २३ ॥

“Nay, liberated by the command of Brahmā (the grandfather of all created beings, the whole creation having been brought into existence by his ten mind-born sons, the Prajāpatis), Indra (the destroyer of the demons Śambara and Vṛtra), who is adored by all the gods, returned to heaven, O king! (23)

तमेव त्वं महाराज विसृजेन्द्रजितं सुतम्।
यावद् वानरसेनां तां सरामां नयति क्षयम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Therefore, dispatch, O mighty ruler, your aforesaid son, Indrajit, alone, so that he may bring to an end the said army of the monkeys, including Rāma (even before it dares to cross the sea). (24)

राजन्नापदयुक्तेयमागता प्राकृताज्जनात्।
हृदि नैव त्वया कार्या त्वं वधिष्यसि राघवम् ॥ २५ ॥

“This adversity, which has come from ordinary beings (like human beings and monkeys), O king, does not deserve your concern. It should not at all be given any corner in your heart; for, you shall kill Rāma without doubt.” (25)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तमः सर्गः ॥ ७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टमः सर्गः

Canto VIII

Prahasta and others reassure Rāvaṇa by vauntingly vowing the death of Śrī Rāma and others

ततो नीलाम्बुदप्रख्यः प्रहस्तो नाम राक्षसः।
अब्रवीत् प्राञ्जलिर्वाक्यं शूरः सेनापतिस्तदा ॥ १ ॥

The valiant ogre, Prahasta by name, the Commander-in-Chief, who resembled a dark cloud, then submitted as follows with joined palms on that occasion: (1)

देवदानवगन्धर्वाः पिशाचपतगोरगाः।
सर्वे धर्षयितुं शक्याः किं पुनर्मर्नवौ रणे ॥ २ ॥

“The gods, Dānavas (sons of Danu) and Gandharvas, fiends, birds and serpents, all are capable of being easily overpowered by us in an encounter, much less a couple of mortals. (2)

सर्वे प्रमत्ता विश्वस्ता वञ्चिताः स्म हनूमता।
नहि मे जीवतो गच्छेज्जीवन् स वनगोचरः ॥ ३ ॥

“We were all hoodwinked by Hanūmān because we were unwary and unsuspecting. That monkey (a denizen of the forest) could not otherwise escape alive so long as I am living. (3)

सर्वा सागरपर्यन्तां सशैलवनकाननाम् ।
करोम्यवानरां भूमिमाज्ञापयतु मां भवान् ॥ ४ ॥

“I can sweep the entire globe, bounded by the oceans, with its mountains, forests and woodlands, clear it of all monkeys. Command me, if you will. (4)

रक्षां चैव विधास्यामि वानराद् रजनीचर ।
नागमिष्यति ते दुःखं किञ्चिदात्मापराधजम् ॥ ५ ॥

“Nay, I shall certainly protect you against the monkey race, O ranger of the night! No calamity of any kind born of your own crime (in the shape of Sītā’s abduction) will come to you.” (5)

अब्रवीत् तु सुसंकुद्धो दुर्मुखो नाम राक्षसः ।
इदं न क्षमणीयं हि सर्वेषां नः प्रधर्षणम् ॥ ६ ॥

“Feeling extremely enraged, another ogre, Durmukha by name, for his part submitted: “This outrage committed against us all is not worth pocketing, indeed. (6)

अयं परिभवो भूयः पुरस्यान्तःपुरस्य च ।
श्रीमतो राक्षसेन्द्रस्य वानरेण प्रधर्षणम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Furthermore, this assault by a monkey is an affront to the city of Lankā, to the royal gynaeceum as well as to the glorious ruler of ogres. (7)

अस्मिन् मुहूर्ते गत्वैको निर्वर्तिष्यामि वानरान् ।
प्रविष्टान् सागरं भीममम्बरं वा रसातलम् ॥ ८ ॥

“Marching alone at this very hour, I shall repulse the monkeys, even if they have taken refuge in the dreaded deep, in the heavens or in Rasātala (the penultimate subterranean region).” (8)

ततोऽब्रवीत् सुसंकुद्धो वज्रदंष्ट्रो महाबलः ।
प्रगृह्य परिघं घोरं मांसशोणितरूषितम् ॥ ९ ॥

Then spoke as follows Vajradamṣṭra, who was endowed with extraordinary might, extremely enraged and clasping his terrible iron bludgeon stained with flesh and blood: (9)

किं नो हनूमता कार्यं कृपणेन तपस्विना ।
रामे तिष्ठति दुर्धर्षे सुग्रीवेऽपि सलक्ष्मणे ॥ १० ॥

“What have we got to do with the miserable and poor Hanumān, so long as there is Rāma, who is difficult to assail, as well as Sugrīva, accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa? (10)

अद्य रामं ससुग्रीवं परिघेण सलक्ष्मणम् ।
आगमिष्यामि हत्वैको विक्षोभ्य हरिवाहिनीम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Having disposed of single-handed with my iron bludgeon, Rāma, accompanied by Sugrīva and Lakṣmaṇa, and having caused panic in the army of monkeys, I shall return today. (11)

इदं ममापरं वाक्यं शृणु राजन् यदिच्छसि ।
उपायकुशलो ह्येव जयेच्छत्रूनतन्द्रितः ॥ १२ ॥

“Pray, listen, if you will, O king, to this further submission of mine; for he alone who is resourceful is able to conquer his enemies if he is vigilant. (12)

कामरूपधराः शूराः सुभीमा भीमदर्शनाः ।
राक्षसा वा सहस्राणि राक्षसाधिप निश्चिताः ॥ १३ ॥

काकुत्स्थमुपसंगम्य बिभ्रतो मानुषं वपुः ।
सर्वे ह्यसम्भ्रमा भूत्वा ब्रुवन्तु रघुसत्तमम् ॥ १४ ॥

प्रेषिता भरतेनैव भ्रात्रा तव यवीयसा ।
स हि सेनां समुत्थाप्य क्षिप्रमेवोपयास्यति ॥ १५ ॥

“Assuming a human semblance, nay, approaching Rāma, a scion of Kakutṣtha, and feeling altogether free from embarrassment, O suzerain lord of ogres, heroic and most formidable ogres, terrible to look at, nay, capable of assuming any form at will and determined of purpose, should speak as follows to Rāma, the foremost of Raghus: ‘We have been sent by your younger brother, Bharata, himself, and, ordering his army to march, Rāma too will surely sally forth apace.’ (13—15)

ततो वयमितस्तूर्णं शूलशक्तिगदाधराः ।
चापबाणासिहस्ताश्च त्वरितास्तत्र यामहे ॥ १६ ॥

“Carrying pikes, javelins and maces and with arrows and swords in hand, we should then speedily reach there with quick steps from this side. (16)

आकाशे गणशः स्थित्वा हत्वा तां हरिवाहिनीम् ।

अश्मशस्त्रमहावृष्ट्या प्रापयाम यमक्षयम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Taking our stand in the airspace in battalions and battering the army of monkeys with a mighty hail of stones and missiles, we should send them to the abode of Death. (17)

एवं चेदुपसर्पेतामनयं रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

अवश्यमपनीतेन जहतामेव जीवितम् ॥ १८ ॥

“If Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa fall into our trap, they need must succumb to our wily stratagem. (18)

कौम्भकर्णिस्ततो वीरो निकुम्भो नाम वीर्यवान् ।

अब्रवीत् परमक्रुद्धो रावणं लोकरावणम् ॥ १९ ॥

“Extremely enraged, the heroic and powerful son of Kumbhakarna, Nikumbha by name, thereupon submitted as follows to Rāvaṇa, who made people cry by his oppression: (19)

सर्वे भवन्तस्तिष्ठन्तु महाराजेन संगताः ।

अहमेको हनिष्यामि राघवं सहलक्ष्मणम् ॥ २० ॥

सुग्रीवं सहनूमन्तं सर्वाश्चैवात्र वानरान् ।

ततो वज्रहनुर्नाम राक्षसः पर्वतोपमः ॥ २१ ॥

क्रुद्धः परिलिहन् सूक्कां जिह्वया वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।

स्वैरं कुर्वन्तु कार्याणि भवन्तो विगतज्वराः ॥ २२ ॥

एकोऽहं भक्षयिष्यामि तां सर्वा हरिवाहिनीम् ।

स्वस्थाः क्रीडन्तु निश्चिन्ताः पिबन्तु मधु वारुणीम् ॥ २३ ॥

अहमेको वधिष्यामि सुग्रीवं सहलक्ष्मणम् ।

साङ्गदं च हनूमन्तं सर्वाश्चैवात्र वानरान् ॥ २४ ॥

“Let you all tarry here in the company of our mighty ruler. I shall presently kill single-handed, Rāma, a scion of Raghu, as well as Lakṣmaṇa, Sugrīva alongwith Hanumān and all the other monkeys too.” Then an ogre, Vajrahanu by name, who looked like a mountain, submitted as follows, licking his lips with his tongue in rage: “Completely rid of all anxiety, you discharge your duties without constraint. I shall devour single-handed the whole of that army of monkeys. Divert yourself confidently and drink wine, getting free from anxiety. Alone I shall kill Sugrīva with Lakṣmaṇa, and Hanumān with Aṅgada as well as all the monkeys this very moment.” (20—24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टमः सर्गः ॥ ८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

नवमः सर्गः

Canto IX

Restraining the ogres, who were boasting each of his own strength, Vibhīṣaṇa begins to talk wisdom, on which Rāvaṇa retires to his own palace

ततो निकुम्भो रभसः सूर्यशत्रुर्महाबलः ।

सुप्तघ्नो यज्ञकोपश्च महापार्श्वमहोदरौ ॥ १ ॥

अग्रिकेतुश्च दुर्धर्षो रश्मिकेतुश्च राक्षसः ।

इन्द्रजिच्च महातेजा बलवान् रावणात्मजः ॥ २ ॥

प्रहस्तोऽथ विरूपाक्षो वज्रदंष्ट्रो महाबलः ।

धूम्राक्षश्चातिकायश्च दुर्मुखश्चैव राक्षसः ॥ ३ ॥

परिधान् पट्टिशान् शूलान् प्रासान् शक्तिपरश्वधान् ।

चापानि च सुबाणानि खड्गांश्च विपुलाम्बुधान् ॥ ४ ॥

प्रगृह्य परमक्रुद्धाः समुत्पत्य च राक्षसाः ।
अब्रुवन् रावणं सर्वे प्रदीप्ता इव तेजसा ॥ ५ ॥

Firmly grasping iron clubs, sharp-edged spears, pikes, darts, javelins and axes as also bows with excellent arrows as well as swords shining like a vast expanse of water, and jumping up, the ogres Nikumbha, Rabhasa, Sūryaśatru, who was endowed with extraordinary strength, Suptaghna and Yajñakopa, Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara, nay, Agniketu, who was difficult to overpower, and the ogre Raśmiketū, as also Indrajit, the lusty eldest son of Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, Prahasta and Virūpākṣa, Vajradamṣṭra, who was endowed with extraordinary might, and Dhūmrākṣa as also Atikāya as well as the ogre Durmukha, who were all extremely enraged, and were flaming as it were with glory, thereupon submitted to Rāvaṇa as follows: (1—5)

अद्य रामं वधिष्यामः सुग्रीवं च सलक्ष्मणम् ।
कृपणं च हनूमन्तं लङ्का येन प्रधर्षिता ॥ ६ ॥

“Today we shall dispose of Rāma and Sugrīva with Lakṣmaṇa, as well as the wretched Hanumān, by whom Laṅkā was outraged.” (6)

तान् गृहीतायुधान् सर्वान् वारयित्वा विभीषणः ।
अब्रवीत् प्राञ्जलिर्वाक्यं पुनः प्रत्युपवेश्य तान् ॥ ७ ॥

Restraining them all, who stood seizing hold of their weapons, and then pressing them to resume their seats, Vibhīṣaṇa (Rāvaṇa's youngest half-brother) submitted as follows with joined palms: (7)

अप्युपायैस्त्रिभिस्तात योऽर्थः प्राप्तुं न शक्यते ।
तस्य विक्रमकालांस्तान् युक्तानाहुर्मनीषिणः ॥ ८ ॥

“The wise declare the well-known occasions for exhibiting prowess appropriate to that end only which cannot be attained with all the other three expedients, viz., conciliation, gift and sowing seeds of dissension, O dear brother! (8)

प्रमत्तेष्वभियुक्तेषु दैवेन प्रहतेषु च ।
विक्रमास्तात सिद्ध्यन्ति परीक्ष्य विधिना कृताः ॥ ९ ॥

“Deeds of valour which are performed according to the prescribed method, after being duly tested, O dear brother, succeed only against those who are wanton, who have already been attacked by another enemy or who stand doomed by an adverse fate. (9)

अप्रमत्तं कथं तं तु विजिगीषुं बले स्थितम् ।
जितरोषं दुराधर्षं तं धर्षयितुमिच्छथ ॥ १० ॥

“How do you seek to overcome the celebrated Rāma, who is, on the contrary, watchful, is keen to conquer, is supported by divine power, has subdued anger and is difficult to overpower? (10)

समुद्रं लङ्घयित्वा तु घोरं नदनदीपतिम् ।
गतिं हनूमतो लोके को विद्यात् तर्कयेत वा ॥ ११ ॥

“Who in the world can know or even conceive the speed of Hanumān, who for his part came over to Laṅkā, leaping across the sea, the formidable lord of rivers and streams? (11)

बलान्यपरिमेयानि वीर्याणि च निशाचराः ।
परेषां सहसावज्ञा न कर्तव्या कथंचन ॥ १२ ॥

“Inestimable are the troops at the disposal of Rāma and so is his power, O rangers of the night! Underestimation should not be precipitately made in any case in respect of enemies. (12)

किं च राक्षसराजस्य रामेणापकृतं पुरा ।
आजहार जनस्थानाद् यस्य भार्या यशस्विनः ॥ १३ ॥

“Moreover, what offence was given to the ruler of ogres by the illustrious Rāma, whose consort the former bore away from Janasthāna? (13)

खरो यद्यतिवृत्तस्तु स रामेण हतो रणे।
अवश्यं प्राणिनां प्राणा रक्षितव्या यथाबलम् ॥ १४ ॥

“If it is urged in reply that Rāvaṇa abducted Rāma’s wife because Rāma had killed Khara, our half-brother, my rejoinder is that Khara was made short work of by Rāma in an encounter because the former had, for his part, gone beyond his limits, in that he had attacked Rāma in the latter’s own hermitage. Life needs must be protected by living beings according to their might. (14)

एतन्निमित्तं वैदेही भयं नः सुमहद् भवेत्।
आहता सा परित्याज्या कलहार्थे कृते नु किम् ॥ १५ ॥

“If Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, was borne away because of this grudge, she deserves to be yielded up inasmuch as she may prove to be a peril to us. What on earth will be gained if anything is done which has strife for its object? (15)

न तु क्षमं वीर्यवता तेन धर्मानुवर्तिना।
वैरं निरर्थकं कर्तुं दीयतामस्य मैथिली ॥ १६ ॥

“It is not at all desirable to make enmity without any purpose with that powerful prince, who follows the moral code. Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, may, therefore, be restored to him. (16)

यावन्न सगजां साश्वं बहुरत्नसमाकुलाम्।
पुरीं दारयते बाणैर्दीयतामस्य मैथिली ॥ १७ ॥

“Let Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, be made over to him before he tears asunder with his arrows Laṅkā, full of many precious stones, with its elephants and horses. (17)

यावत् सुघोरा महती दुर्धर्षा हरिवाहिनी।
नावस्कन्दति नो लङ्कां तावत् सीता प्रदीयताम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Let Sitā be given back to Rāma before the huge army of monkeys, which is most formidable and difficult to overpower, besieges Laṅkā. (18)

विनश्येद्धि पुरी लङ्का शूराः सर्वे च राक्षसाः।
रामस्य दयिता पत्नी न स्वयं यदि दीयते ॥ १९ ॥

“If the beloved consort of Rāma is not restored of your own accord, the city of Laṅkā as well as all the heroic ogres will surely perish. (19)

प्रसादये त्वां बन्धुत्वात् कुरुष्व वचनं मम।
हितं तथ्यं त्वहं ब्रूमि दीयतामस्य मैथिली ॥ २० ॥

“I seek to propitiate you because of your being my relation; pray, follow my counsel. I suggest only that which is true and conducive to your good: let Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, be surrendered to Rāma. (20)

पुरा शरत्सूर्यमरीचिसंनिभान्
नवाग्रपुङ्खान् सुदृढान् नृपात्मजः।
सृजत्यमोघान् विशिखान् वधाय ते
प्रदीयतां दाशरथाय मैथिली ॥ २१ ॥

“Let Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, be restored to Rāma (son of Daśaratha) before the prince looses for your destruction most stiff and unfailing arrows, shining brightly like the rays of the autumnal sun and provided with new heads and shafts. (21)

त्यजाशु कोपं सुखधर्मनाशनं
भजस्व धर्मं रतिकीर्तिवर्धनम्।
प्रसीद जीवेम सपुत्रबान्धवाः
प्रदीयतां दाशरथाय मैथिली ॥ २२ ॥

“Pray, renounce at once anger, which destroys happiness and virtues. Pursue righteousness, which enhances joy and fame. Be pacified, so that we may survive with our sons and relations; and let Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, be restored to Rāma (son of Daśaratha).” (22)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः।
विसर्जयित्वा तान् सर्वान् प्रविवेश स्वकं गृहम् ॥ २३ ॥

Dismissing them all on hearing the submission of Vibhīṣaṇa, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, retired to his own palace. (23)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे नवमः सर्गः ॥ ९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

दशमः सर्गः

Canto X

Making his way into the palace of his eldest (half-) brother early next morning and drawing his attention to the evil portents, Vibhīṣaṇa appeals to his good sense by making a timely submission

ततः प्रत्युषसि प्राप्ते प्राप्तधर्मार्थनिश्चयः ।
 राक्षसाधिपतेर्वेश्म भीमकर्मा विभीषणः ॥ १ ॥
 शैलाग्रचयसंकाशं शैलशृङ्गमिवोन्नतम् ।
 सुविभक्तमहाकक्षं महाजनपरिग्रहम् ॥ २ ॥
 मतिमद्भिर्महामात्रैरनुरक्तैरधिष्ठितम् ।
 राक्षसैराप्तपर्याप्तैः सर्वतः परिरक्षितम् ॥ ३ ॥
 मत्तमातङ्गनिःश्वासैर्व्याकुलीकृतमारुतम् ।
 शङ्खघोषमहाघोषं तूर्यसम्बाधनादितम् ॥ ४ ॥
 प्रमदाजनसम्बाधं प्रजल्पितमहापथम् ।
 तप्तकाञ्चननिर्यूहं भूषणोत्तमभूषितम् ॥ ५ ॥
 गन्धर्वाणामिवावासमालयं मरुतामिव ।
 रत्नसंचयसम्बाधं भवनं भोगिनामिव ॥ ६ ॥
 तं महाभ्रमिवादित्यस्तेजोविस्तृतरश्मिवान् ।
 अग्नस्यालयं वीरः प्रविवेश महाद्युतिः ॥ ७ ॥

After that, when the morning came, even as the sun with its rays diffused through their brilliance would penetrate into a huge cloud, the heroic Vibhīṣaṇa of valiant deeds, who was clothed with extraordinary splendour and who had ascertained the truth about righteousness and material gain, penetrated deep into the well-known palace of his eldest (half-) brother, the suzerain ruler of ogres, which looked like a mass of crags, was lofty like a mountain top and symmetrically divided into spacious apartments; which was inhabited by a gathering of learned men, superintended by wise and devoted ministers and guarded on all sides by trusted and competent ogres; whose air was rendered tempestuous by the breath of elephants in rut, which resounded with a loud noise made by the ogres, resembling the blast of conches and was rendered noisy by the blare of trumpets; which remained crowded with young women; whose broad passages were noisy (with the talk of passers-by) and which was provided with gates of refined gold; which was decked with the foremost of jewels and looked like an abode of Gandharvas (celestial musicians) or a mansion of gods; and which, abounding, as it did, in collections of precious stones, resembled a house of Nāgas. (1—7)

पुण्यान् पुण्याहघोषांश्च वेदविद्भिर्गुदाहृतान् ।
 शुश्राव सुमहातेजा भ्रातुर्विजयसंश्रितान् ॥ ८ ॥

There Vibhīṣaṇa (who was clothed with exceptional splendour) heard the holy sounds of prayers wishing a propitious day to the king and invoking the victory of his eldest half-brother, uttered by the knowers of Veda. (8)

पूजितान् दधिपात्रैश्च सर्पिभिः सुमनोऽक्षतैः ।
मन्त्रवेदविदो विप्रान् ददर्श स महाबलः ॥ १॥

Vibhīṣaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, beheld Brāhmaṇas versed in Mantras (sacred texts) as well as in the Brāhmaṇas (the portion of the Vedas containing rules for the recitation of the Mantras at various sacrifices) and worshipped with ghee, flowers and unbroken grains of rice as well as with vessels full of curds. (9)

स पूज्यमानो रक्षोभिर्दीप्यमानं स्वतेजसा ।
आसनस्थं महाबाहुर्वन्दे धनदानुजम् ॥ १० ॥

While being glorified by ogres, the mighty-armed Vibhīṣaṇa saluted Rāvaṇa (a younger half-brother of Kubera, the bestower of riches), seated on a throne, and shining with native splendour. (10)

स राजदृष्टिसम्पन्नमासनं हेमभूषितम् ।
जगाम समुदाचारं प्रयुज्याचारकोविदः ॥ ११ ॥

Going through the customary formalities, Vibhīṣaṇa, who was well-versed in the code of conduct, made for a seat decked with gold and blessed by a glance from the king. (11)

स रावणं महात्मानं विजने मन्त्रिसंनिधौ ।
उवाच हितमत्यर्थं वचनं हेतुनिश्चितम् ॥ १२ ॥
प्रसाद्य भ्रातरं ज्येष्ठं सान्त्वेनोपस्थितक्रमः ।
देशकालार्थसंवादि दृष्टलोकपरावरः ॥ १३ ॥

Having sought the favour of his eldest (half-) brother by means of soothing words, Vibhīṣaṇa, who knew what is good and bad in the world and had observed the customary rites (in the form of salutations etc.), tendered to the eminent Rāvaṇa in the presence of the latter's ministers in seclusion the following advice, which was exceedingly wholesome and based on logical grounds and was in consonance with place, time and purpose: (12-13)

यदाप्रभृति वैदेही सम्प्राप्तेह परंतप ।
तदाप्रभृति दृश्यन्ते निमित्तान्यशुभानि नः ॥ १४ ॥

“Ever since Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) arrived here, evil portents are being observed by us. (14)

सस्फुलिङ्गः सधूमार्चिः सधूमकलुषोदयः ।
मन्त्रसंधुक्षितोऽप्यग्निं सम्यगभिवर्धते ॥ १५ ॥

“The sacrificial fire emits sparks, its flames are enveloped in smoke, its manifestation (as a result of rubbing two pieces of wood against each other) is also obscure, accompanied as it is by smoke, and it does not flare up properly even when fed with oblations while uttering sacred formulas. (15)

अग्निष्टेष्वग्निशालासु तथा ब्रह्मस्थलीषु च ।
सरीसृपाणि दृश्यन्ते हव्येषु च पिपीलिकाः ॥ १६ ॥

“Reptiles are observed in kitchens and fire-sanctuaries and, likewise, in the places where the Vedas are taught, and ants are discovered in the substances to be offered as oblations into the sacrificial fire. (16)

गवां पयांसि स्कन्नानि विमदा वरकुञ्जराः ।
दीनमश्वाः प्रहेषन्ते नवग्रासाभिनन्दिनः ॥ १७ ॥

“The milk of cows has dried up, ichor no longer flows from the temples of the best of elephants; while horses, though feeling satisfied with their fresh supply of fodder, neigh dolefully. (17)

खरोष्ट्राश्वतरा राजन् भिन्नरोमाः स्रवन्ति च ।
न स्वभावेऽवतिष्ठन्ते विधानैरपि चिन्तिताः ॥ १८ ॥

“Nay, donkeys, camels and mules, O king, shed tears, their hair standing on end. Even though treated with care according to medical directions, they do not return to normalcy. (18)

वायसाः संघशः क्रूरा व्याहरन्ति समन्ततः ।
समवेताश्च दृश्यन्ते विमानाग्रेषु संघशः ॥ १९ ॥

“Crows in flock utter harsh cries on all sides and are seen gathered in swarms on the tops of seven-storeyed buildings. (19)

गृध्राश्च परिलीयन्ते पुरीमुपरि पिण्डिताः ।
उपपन्नाश्च संध्ये द्वे व्याहरन्त्यशिवं शिवाः ॥ २० ॥

“Nay, vultures collected in swarms hover over the city; while, arrived near the city, she-jackals howl ominously both morning and evening. (20)

क्रव्यादानां मृगाणां च पुरीद्वारेषु संघशः ।
श्रूयन्ते विपुला घोषाः सविस्फूर्जितनिःस्वनाः ॥ २१ ॥

“At the gates of the city are heard the loud cries of carnivorous animals (such as wolves and hyenās) gathered in herds alongwith peals of thunder. (21)

तदेवं प्रस्तुते कार्ये प्रायश्चित्तमिदं क्षमम् ।
रोचये वीर वैदेही राघवाय प्रदीयताम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Therefore, when the action of evil forces has started in this way, O gallant brother, this atonement is desirable that Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) be restored to Rāma (a scion of Raghu) and I like it. (22)

इदं च यदि वा मोहाल्लोभाद् वा व्याहृतं मया ।
तत्रापि च महाराज न दोषं कर्तुमर्हसि ॥ २३ ॥

“Even if this submission has been made through infatuation or greed, you ought not to find fault with me, O eminent monarch! (23)

अयं हि दोषः सर्वस्य जनस्यास्योपलक्ष्यते ।
रक्षसां राक्षसीनां च पुरस्यान्तःपुरस्य च ॥ २४ ॥

“This offence in the shape of Sītā’s abduction is recognized by all the people here, the ogres and the ogresses, the whole city and the gynaeceum. (24)

प्रापणे चास्य मन्त्रस्य निवृत्ताः सर्वमन्त्रिणः ।
अवश्यं च मया वाच्यं यद् दृष्टमथवा श्रुतम् ।
सम्प्रधार्य यथान्यायं तद् भवान् कर्तुमर्हति ॥ २५ ॥

“True, all your counsellors have refrained from tendering this advice to you for fear of incurring your displeasure; yet that which has been perceived or heard by me needs must be submitted. Determining the propriety or otherwise of my counsel according to the principles of equity, you ought to act accordingly.” (25)

इति स्वमन्त्रिणां मध्ये भ्राता भ्रातरमूचिवान् ।
रावणं रक्षसां श्रेष्ठं पथ्यमेतद् विभीषणः ॥ २६ ॥

Thus in the midst of his half-brother’s counsellors, Vibhīṣaṇa, brother of Rāvaṇa, tendered the aforesaid salutary advice to his (eldest half-) brother, Rāvaṇa, the foremost of ogres. (26)

हितं महार्थं मृदु हेतुसंहितं
व्यतीतकालायतिसम्प्रतिक्षमम् ।
निशम्य तद्वाक्यमुपस्थितज्वरः
प्रसङ्गवानुत्तरमेतदब्रवीत् ॥ २७ ॥

Hearing the foregoing submission of Vibhīṣaṇa, which was wholesome, full of great significance, gentle, logical and capable of doing good in the past, present and future, Rāvaṇa (who was seized with fever in the form of anger and) who was full of passion (for Sītā), made the following reply: (27)

भयं न पश्यामि कुतश्चिदप्यहं
न राघवः प्राप्स्यति जातु मैथिलीम् ।
सुरैः सहेन्द्रैरपि संगरे कथं
ममाग्रतः स्थास्यति लक्ष्मणाग्रजः ॥ २८ ॥

“I see no cause for fear from any quarter whatsoever. Rāma (a scion of Raghu) shall in no case get back Sītā (a princess of Mithilā). How can Rāma (the eldest half-brother of Lakṣmaṇa) stand before me in an encounter even though aided by gods including Indra (their ruler)?” (28)

इत्येवमुक्त्वा सुरसैन्यानाशनो
महाबलः संयति चण्डविक्रमः ।
दशाननो भ्रातरमाप्तवादिनं
विसर्जयामास तदा विभीषणम् ॥ २९ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, the destroyer of the celestial forces, who was endowed with extraordinary valour and exhibited terrific prowess in combat, forthwith dismissed his younger half-brother, Vibhīṣaṇa, who had elucidated the truth. (29)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे दशमः सर्गः ॥ १० ॥

Thus ends Canto Ten in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकादशः सर्गः

Canto XI

When Rāvaṇa entered the assembly hall to hold consultations with his counsellors, other leading ogres as well as Vibhīṣaṇa follow suit

स बभूव कृशो राजा मैथिलीकाममोहितः ।
असन्मानाच्च सुहृदां पापः पापेन कर्मणा ॥ १ ॥

King Rāvaṇa, who was infatuated with passion for Sītā (a princess of Mithilā) and had begun to be looked upon as sinful because of his evil doing in the shape of Sītā's abduction, grew emaciated through disrespect shown to him by his near and dear ones and his consuming passion for Sītā. (1)

अतीव कामसम्पन्नो वैदेहीमनुचिन्तयन् ।
अतीतसमये काले तस्मिन् वै युधि रावणः ।
अमात्यैश्च सुहृद्भिश्च प्राप्तकालममन्यत ॥ २ ॥

The time for holding consultation having elapsed, war being actually imminent, Rāvaṇa, who was exceedingly full of longing for Sītā and was constantly thinking of Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), thought consultation with his ministers and well-wishers to be opportune. (2)

स हेमजालविततं मणिविद्रुमभूषितम् ।
उपगम्य विनीताश्वमारुरोह महारथम् ॥ ३ ॥

Approaching a huge chariot overlaid with a lattice-work of gold, decked with gems and corals and drawn by trained horses, he ascended it. (3)

तमास्थाय रथश्रेष्ठं महामेघसमस्वनम् ।
प्रययौ रक्षसां श्रेष्ठो दशग्रीवः सभां प्रति ॥ ४ ॥

Taking his seat in that excellent chariot, which produced a rattling sound resembling the rumbling of a large cloud, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, the foremost of ogres, drove towards the assembly hall. (4)

असिचर्मधरा योधाः सर्वायुधधरास्ततः ।
राक्षसा राक्षसेन्द्रस्य पुरस्तात् सम्प्रतस्थिरे ॥ ५ ॥

At that time ogre troops carrying swords and bucklers and all kinds of weapons marched in order at the head of the ruler of ogres. (5)

नानाविकृतवेषाश्च नानाभूषणभूषिताः ।
पार्श्वतः पृष्ठतश्चैवं परिवार्य ययुस्तदा ॥ ६ ॥

Nay, ogres attired in various strange robes and adorned with all kinds of jewels, marched giving cover to him at his sides as well as at his back at that time. (6)

रथैश्चातिरथाः शीघ्रं मत्तैश्च वरवारणैः ।
अनूपेतुर्दशग्रीवमाक्रीडद्भिश्च वाजिभिः ॥ ७ ॥

Car-warriors of a superior order* also rushed apace in the wake of Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) in chariots as well as on excellent elephants in rut as also on (the back of) horses sportively following in different gaits. (7)

गदापरिग्रहस्ताश्च शक्तितोमरपाणयः ।
परश्वधधराश्चान्ये तथान्ये शूलपाणयः ।
ततस्तूर्यसहस्राणां संजज्ञे निःस्वनो महान् ॥ ८ ॥

Some had maces and iron bars in their hands, while others followed with javelins and iron clubs. Nay, still others carried axes, while some had darts in their hands. Then broke forth a loud blare of thousands of trumpets. (8)

तुमुलः शङ्खशब्दश्च सभां गच्छति रावणे ।
स नेमिघोषेण महान् सहसाभिनिनादयन् ॥ ९ ॥
राजमार्गं श्रिया जुष्टं प्रतिपेदे महारथः ।
विमलं चातपत्रं च प्रगृहीतमशोभत ॥ १० ॥
पाण्डुरं राक्षसेन्द्रस्य पूर्णस्ताराधिपो यथा ।
हेममञ्जरिगर्भे च शुद्धस्फटिकविग्रहे ॥ ११ ॥
चामरव्यजने तस्य रेजतुः सव्यदक्षिणे ।
ते कृताञ्जलयः सर्वे रथस्थं पृथिवीस्थिताः ॥ १२ ॥
राक्षसा राक्षसश्रेष्ठं शिरोभिस्तं ववन्दिरे ।
राक्षसैः स्तूयमानः सञ्जयाशीर्भिररिंदमः ॥ १३ ॥
आससाद महातेजाः सभां विरचितां तदा ।
सुवर्णरजतास्तीर्णा विशुद्धस्फटिकान्तराम् ॥ १४ ॥
विराजमानो वपुषा रुक्मपट्टोत्तरच्छदाम् ।
तां पिशाचशतैः षड्भिरभिगुप्तां सदाप्रभाम् ॥ १५ ॥
प्रविवेश महातेजाः सुकृतां विश्वकर्मणा ।
तस्यां तु वैदूर्यमयं प्रियकाजिनसंवृतम् ॥ १६ ॥
महत्सोपाश्रयं भेजे रावणः परमासनम् ।
ततः शशाशेषवरवद्दूताल्लघुपराक्रमान् ॥ १७ ॥

As Rāvaṇa drove to the assembly hall, a tumultuous blast of conches also followed.

That eminent and great car-warrior presently reached the splendid highway, causing it to echo with the rattling of the felloes of his chariot. Nay, held over the head of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), a spotless white canopy shone like the full moon (lit., the suzerain lord of stars). On his left and right shone a pair of whisks with handles of pure crystal and having bunches of golden threads in the middle. Standing on the ground (on the way) with joined palms, all the aforesaid ogres saluted Rāvaṇa, the foremost of ogres, with their heads bent low. Being hailed by ogres by means of shouts of victory and benedictions, Rāvaṇa (the scourge of his foes), who was endowed with extraordinary energy, presently reached the assembly hall constructed by Viśwakarmā (the architect of gods). With his body shining brightly, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary splendour, made his solemn entry into that assembly hall, which was paved with gold and silver, whose interior was wrought in pure crystal, whose floor was carpeted with silk, interwoven with threads of gold, and which was guarded on all sides by six hundred fiends, was full of perennial splendour and had been beautifully constructed by Viśwakarmā. Rāvaṇa for his part occupied in that hall a big and excellent throne made of cat's-eye, nay, covered with the skin of Priyakas (a species of deer) and provided with cushions, and forthwith authoritatively commanded fleet-footed messengers as follows: (9—17)

समानयत मे क्षिप्रमिहैतान् राक्षसानिति ।
कृत्यमस्ति महज्जाने कर्तव्यमिति शत्रुभिः ॥ १८ ॥

“Duly bring hither with all speed the well-known ogres to my presence. I know

* An Atiratha has been defined thus:

अमितान् योधयेद् यस्तु सम्प्रोक्तोऽतिरथस्तु सः ।

“He who fights numberless adversaries is spoken of as an Atiratha.”

that momentous action has to be taken with regard to the enemies.” (18)

राक्षसास्तद्वचः श्रुत्वा लङ्कायां परिचक्रमुः ।
अनुगेहमवस्थाय विहारशयनेषु च ।
उद्यानेषु च रक्षांसि चोदयन्तो ह्यभीतवत् ॥ १९ ॥

Hearing his command, the ogres coursed through Laṅkā, making their way into every single house, nay, penetrating into places of recreation and bedrooms as well as into gardens, and actually calling upon the ogres in an undaunted way to proceed to the assembly hall. (19)

ते रथान्तचरा एके दृप्तानेके दृढान् हयान् ।
नागानेकेऽधिरुरुर्हुर्जग्मुश्चैके पदातयः ॥ २० ॥

Some of the invited ogres sallied forth in the foremost of chariots, others rode on proud elephants, still others on sturdy horses, while yet others proceeded on foot. (20)

सा पुरी परमाकीर्णा रथकुञ्जरवाजिभिः ।
सम्पतद्भिर्विरुरुचे गरुत्मद्भिरिवाम्बरम् ॥ २१ ॥

Fully crowded with chariots, elephants and horses running in a line, that city looked very charming like the sky crowded with birds flying in a row. (21)

ते वाहनान्यवस्थाय यानानि विविधानि च ।
सभां पद्भिः प्रविविशुः सिंहा गिरिगुहामिव ॥ २२ ॥

Leaving their mounts as well as conveyances of every description outside, they made their way into the assembly hall on foot as lions would enter a rocky cave. (22)

राज्ञः पादौ गृहीत्वा तु राज्ञा ते प्रतिपूजिताः ।
पीठेष्वन्ये बृसीष्वन्ये भूमौ केचिदुपाविशन् ॥ २३ ॥

Touching the king's feet (as an act of submission) and greeted in their turn by the king, they, for their part, took their seat, some on seats of gold, others on mats of Kuśa grass and still others on the carpeted ground. (23)

ते समेत्य सभायां वै राक्षसा राजशासनात् ।
यथार्हमुपतस्थुस्ते रावणं राक्षसाधिपम् ॥ २४ ॥

Gathering in the assembly hall at the king's command, the aforesaid ogres actually took their position round Rāvaṇa, their suzerain lord, each according to his rank (24)

मन्त्रिणश्च यथामुख्या निश्चितार्थेषु पण्डिताः ।
अमात्याश्च गुणोपेताः सर्वज्ञा बुद्धिदर्शनाः ॥ २५ ॥
समीयुस्तत्र शतशः शूराश्च बहवस्तथा ।
सभायां हेमवर्णायां सर्वार्थस्य सुखाय वै ॥ २६ ॥

Counsellors foremost in their own sphere and clever in deciding affairs and qualified ministers, well-versed in all subjects and capable of viewing things with their understanding and likewise numerous warriors too actually gathered in hundreds in that assembly hall sparkling with gold for discussing all matters for a happy conclusion. (25-26)

ततो महात्मा विपुलं सुयुग्यं
रथं वरं हेमविचित्रिताङ्गम् ।
शुभं समास्थाय ययौ यशस्वी
विभीषणः संसदमग्रजस्य ॥ २७ ॥

Then arrived the high-souled and illustrious Vibhīṣaṇa in the assembly presided over by his eldest (half-) brother, Rāvaṇa, mounting a huge, bright and excellent chariot drawn by peerless horses, its various parts decked with gold. (27)

स पूर्वजायावरजः शशंस
नामाथ पश्चाच्चरणौ ववन्दे ।
शुकः प्रहस्तश्च तथैव तेभ्यो
ददौ यथार्हं पृथगासनानि ॥ २८ ॥

Younger as he was, he mentioned his name by way of courtesy to his eldest (half-) brother and then bowed at the latter's feet. Śuka and Prahasta too did just the same. Rāvaṇa, for his part, offered them separate seats according to their respective rank. (28)

सुवर्णनानामणिभूषणानां

सुवाससां संसदि राक्षसानाम्।

तेषां परार्घ्यागुरुचन्दनानां

स्रजां च गन्धाः प्रवबुः समन्तात् ॥ २९ ॥

The fragrance of most excellent aloe and sandal-paste painted on the persons, and garlands worn round the necks of those ogres adorned with ornaments of gold as well as of various gems and attired in excellent robes, spread all round. (29)

न चुक्रुशुर्नानृतमाह कश्चित्

सभासदो नापि जजल्पुरुच्चैः।

संसिद्धार्थाः सर्व एवोग्रवीर्या

भर्तुः सर्वे ददृशुश्चाननं ते ॥ ३० ॥

Those present in the assembly did not make noise nor did they talk loudly nor (again) did any of them tell a lie. They were all fully accomplished of purpose and endowed with terrible prowess and all gazed on the face of their ruler. (30)

स रावणः शस्त्रभृतां मनस्विनां

महाबलानां समितौ मनस्वी।

तस्यां सभायां प्रभया चकाशे

मध्ये वसूनामिव वज्रहस्तः ॥ ३१ ॥

In the gathering of armed heroes, who were endowed with extraordinary might, in that assembly hall, the aforesaid heroic Rāvaṇa shone with his lustre like Indra, who holds the thunderbolt in his hand, in the midst of the Vasus (a class of gods). (31)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकादशः सर्गः ॥ ११ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eleven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्वादशः सर्गः

Canto XII

Rāvaṇa orders his Commander-in-Chief, Prahasta, to make adequate arrangements for the defence of the city and to apprise

Kumbhakarna of the whole situation now that he had woken from his long slumber

स तां परिषदं कृत्स्नां समीक्ष्य समितिंजयः।

प्रचोदयामास तदा प्रहस्तं वाहिनीपतिम् ॥ १ ॥

Surveying the entire assembly mentioned above, Rāvaṇa, who came out victorious in battle, presently ordered Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief of his forces as follows: (1)

सेनापते यथा ते स्युः कृतविद्याश्चतुर्विधाः।

योधा नगररक्षायां तथा व्यादेष्टुमर्हसि ॥ २ ॥

“You ought to issue special order, O generalissimo, to see that troops belonging to the four divisions of the army (viz., cavalry, infantry, chariots and elephants), who are trained warriors, are entrusted with the defence of the city.” (2)

स प्रहस्तः प्रणीतात्मा चिकीर्षन् राजशासनम्।

विनिक्षिपद् बलं सर्वं बहिरन्तश्च मन्दिरे ॥ ३ ॥

Keen to carry out the royal command, the celebrated Prahasta, who had disciplined his mind, posted the entire army outside as well as inside the city. (3)

ततो विनिक्षिप्य बलं सर्वं नगरगुप्तये।
प्रहस्तः प्रमुखे राज्ञो निषसाद जगाद च॥ ४ ॥

Having told off the entire army for the defence of the city, Prahasta presently resumed his seat in front of the king and submitted as follows: (4)

विहितं बहिरन्तश्च बलं बलवतस्तव।
कुरुष्वाविमनाः क्षिप्रं यदभिप्रेतमस्ति ते॥ ५ ॥

“Your army, powerful as you are, has been stationed outside as well as inside the city. Therefore, accomplish at once with an undistracted mind what is intended by you.” (5)

प्रहस्तस्य वचः श्रुत्वा राजा राज्यहितैषिणः।
सुखेप्सुः सुहृदां मध्ये व्याजहार स रावणः॥ ६ ॥

Hearing the submission of Prahasta, a well-wisher of the State, the celebrated Rāvaṇa, who aspired for happiness, spoke as follows in the midst of his near and dear ones: (6)

प्रियाप्रिये सुखे दुःखे लाभालाभे हिताहिते।
धर्मकामार्थकृच्छ्रेषु यूयमर्हथ वेदितुम्॥ ७ ॥

“You ought to know your duty in the face of that which is agreeable and that which is not, as also in the midst of happiness and misery, gain and loss, what is wholesome and otherwise and when virtue, pleasure and self-interest are at stake. (7)

सर्वकृत्यानि युष्माभिः समारब्धानि सर्वदा।
मन्त्रकर्मनियुक्तानि न जातु विफलानि मे॥ ८ ॥

“My undertakings of all kinds, duly set afoot by you, have never proved futile, planned as they have always been according to deliberations. (8)

ससोमग्रहनक्षत्रैर्मरुद्भिरिव वासवः।
भवद्भिरहमत्यर्थं वृतः श्रियमवाप्नुयाम्॥ ९ ॥

“Accompanied by you even as Indra is by deities presiding over the planets and lunar mansions including the moon-god as well as the forty-nine wind-gods, I wish to enjoy royal fortune excessively. (9)

अहं तु खलु सर्वान् वः समर्थयितुमुद्यतः।
कुम्भकर्णस्य तु स्वप्नान्नेममर्थमचोदयम्॥ १० ॥

“I was, on my part, actually ready to apprise you all of what I have done; but due to Kumbhakarna’s slumber I did not broach the matter. (10)

अयं हि सुप्तः षण्मासान् कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः।
सर्वशस्त्रभृतां मुख्यः स इदानीं समुत्थितः॥ ११ ॥

“The said Kumbhakarna, the foremost of all those who bear arms, who is endowed with extraordinary might, remained actually asleep for six long months. He is now fully awake. (11)

इयं च दण्डकारण्याद् रामस्य महिषी प्रिया।
रक्षोभिश्चरितोद्देशादानीता जनकात्मजा॥ १२ ॥

“Moreover, Sītā (Janaka’s daughter), the beloved consort of Rāma, has been borne away by me from the Daṇḍaka forest, a region frequented by ogres. (12)

सा मे न शय्यामारोढुमिच्छन्त्यलसगामिनी।
त्रिषु लोकेषु चान्या मे न सीतासदृशी तथा॥ १३ ॥

“That lady of languid pace does not, however, feel inclined to lay her foot on my bed; and no other woman in the three worlds is charming in my eyes as Sītā. (13)

तनुमध्या पृथुश्रोणी शरदिन्दुनिभानना।
हेमबिम्बनिभा सौम्या मायेव मयनिर्मिता॥ १४ ॥

“Slender-waisted with well developed hips and a countenance resembling the autumnal full moon, the gentle lady looks like an image of gold. It appears as though she were an enchantment conjured by the demon Maya, a past master in conjuring tricks. (14)

सुलोहिततलौ श्लक्ष्णौ चरणौ सुप्रतिष्ठितौ।
दृष्ट्वा ताम्रनखौ तस्या दीप्यते मे शरीरजः॥ १५ ॥

“On seeing her feet, soft and well set, with deep red soles and coppery nails, love is kindled in my heart. (15)

हुताग्रेरर्चिसंकाशामेनां सौरीमिव प्रभाम्।
 उन्नसं विमलं वल्गु वदनं चारुलोचनम्॥ १६ ॥
 पश्यंस्तदवशस्तस्याः कामस्य वशमेयिवान्।
 क्रोधहर्षसमानेन दुर्वर्णकरणेन च॥ १७ ॥
 शोकसंतापनित्येन कामेन कलुषीकृतः।
 सा तु संवत्सरं कालं मामयाचत भामिनी॥ १८ ॥
 प्रतीक्षमाणा भर्तारं राममायतलोचना।
 तन्मया चारुनेत्रायाः प्रतिज्ञातं वचः शुभम्॥ १९ ॥

“Beholding her, who closely resembles the flame of a sacred fire fed with oblations and rivals the splendour of the sun, and gazing on her well-known fair and lovely countenance with a prominent nose and charming eyes, I am no longer master of myself and have become a slave of passion. Nay, I have been unnerved by love, which is uniform in anger and joy, makes one pale and is ever present even in grief and agony. Expecting, as she does, to meet in the meantime Rāma, her husband, that large-eyed lovely woman, however, asked of me a time-limit* of one year. That pleasing request of that lovely-eyed lady has been solemnly granted by me. (16—19)

श्रान्तोऽहं सततं कामाद् यातो ह्य इवाध्वनि।
 कथं सागरमक्षोभ्यं तरिष्यन्ति वनौकसः॥ २० ॥
 बहुसत्त्वझषाकीर्णं तौ वा दशरथात्मजौ।
 अथवा कपिनैकेन कृतं नः कदनं महत्॥ २१ ॥
 दुर्ज्ञेयाः कार्यगतयो ब्रूत यस्य यथामति।
 मानुषान्नो भयं नास्ति तथापि तु विमृश्यताम्॥ २२ ॥

“Like a horse that has travelled over a long distance, I, however, constantly feel worn-out through love. Although Rāma is reported to be on his way to Laṅkā with an army of monkeys and bears, how will the monkeys (lit., denizens of the forest) or even Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two sons of Daśaratha, be able to cross the sea, which is unassailable and infested with numerous aquatic creatures, including large fish? The other side of the picture is that a great havoc was wrought on our side by a single monkey, Hanumān. The ways of accomplishing one's purpose are thus difficult to ascertain. Therefore, speak what is there in whosoever's mind according to the belief of each. There is no cause for apprehension to us from a human being; nevertheless let us ponder over the question, in any case. (20—22)

तदा देवासुरे युद्धे युष्माभिः सहितोऽजयम्।
 ते मे भवन्तश्च तथा सुग्रीवप्रमुखान् हरीन्॥ २३ ॥
 परे परे समुद्रस्य पुरस्कृत्य नृपात्मजौ।
 सीतायाः पदवीं प्राप्य सम्प्राप्तौ वरुणालयम्॥ २४ ॥

“The other day, assisted by you, I came out victorious in a conflict between the gods and the demons. You, who are the same, stand likewise by my side even today. Having discovered the whereabouts of Sītā, through Hanumān, after crossing the sea and placing ahead the monkeys led by Sugrīva (their chief), the two princes have duly arrived on the other side of the sea. (23-24)

अदेया च यथा सीता वध्यौ दशरथात्मजौ।
 भवद्भिर्मन्त्र्यतां मन्त्रः सुनीतं चाभिधीयताम्॥ २५ ॥

“Consultations should, therefore, be held by you and a judicious line of conduct suggested, so that Sītā may not have to be given back and Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two sons of Daśaratha, may be killed. (25)

नहि शक्तिं प्रपश्यामि जगत्यन्यस्य कस्यचित्।
 सागरं वानरैस्तीर्त्वा निश्चयेन जयो मम॥ २६ ॥

* Rāvaṇa utters an impudent lie in order to vaunt his sham generosity. Sītā never asked him for a time-limit of one year assuring him that she would yield to his advances if her husband did not turn up within the stipulated period. She for her part consistently spurned his sinful proposal. The time-limit was fixed by Rāvaṇa of his own accord (vide Aranyakāṇḍa LVI. 24-25 of Vālmiki-Rāmāyaṇa)

“Surely, I do not see the capacity of anyone in the world other than Rāma to cross the sea alongwith the monkeys. But even if he succeeds in doing so, victory is surely mine.” (26)

तस्य कामपरीतस्य निशम्य परिदेवितम्।
कुम्भकर्णः प्रचुक्रोध वचनं चेदमब्रवीत्॥ २७॥

Hearing the wail of Rāvaṇa, who was overwhelmed with passion, Kumbhakarna flew into a rage and spoke the following words: (27)

यदा तु रामस्य सलक्ष्मणस्य
प्रसह्य सीता खलु सा इहाहता।
सकृत् समीक्ष्यैव सुनिश्चितं तदा
भजेत चित्तं यमुनेव यामुनम्॥ २८॥

“Even as the river Yamunā fills the depression near its source the moment it descends on earth, your mind ought to have sought careful deliberation with us that very moment when the aforesaid Sītā was actually borne away here by force (when she was alone in the cottage) after a single impulsive thought from the hermitage of Rāma; Rāma, who was accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa. (28)

सर्वमेतन्महाराज कृतमप्रतिमं तव।
विधीयेत सहास्माभिरादावेवास्य कर्मणः॥ २९॥

“All this doing of yours, O great king, is unworthy of you. Deliberation ought to have been held with us at the very beginning of this act. (29)

न्यायेन राजकार्याणि यः करोति दशानन।
न स संतप्यते पश्चान्निश्चितार्थमतिनृपः॥ ३०॥

“A monarch who discharges his kingly duties with justice, his mind having determined his purpose in consultation with his counsellors, does not have to repent O Rāvaṇa! (30)

अनुपायेन कर्माणि विपरीतानि यानि च।
क्रियमाणानि दुष्यन्ति हवींष्यप्रयतेष्विव॥ ३१॥

“Actions which are undertaken without recourse to fair means and run counter to the principles of righteousness beget sin even as oblations used in impure sacrifices undertaken for malevolent purposes. (31)

यः पश्चात् पूर्वकार्याणि कर्माण्यभिचिकीर्षति।
पूर्वं चापरकार्याणि स न वेद नयानयौ॥ ३२॥

“He who seeks to perform at a later date duties requiring to be performed earlier and those which ought to be performed later, performs at an early date, does not know right and wrong. (32)

चपलस्य तु कृत्येषु प्रसमीक्ष्याधिकं बलम्।
छिद्रमन्ये प्रपद्यन्ते क्रौञ्चस्य खमिव द्विजाः॥ ३३॥

“Observing the superior strength of an enemy who is hasty in actions, others for their part look for his weak point even as swans seek the fissure* in the Krauñca mountain in order to cross it. (33)

त्वयेदं महदारब्धं कार्यमप्रतिचिन्तितम्।
दिष्ट्या त्वां नावधीद् रामो विषमिश्रमिवामिषम्॥ ३४॥

“This great undertaking, which was not duly considered, has been set on foot by you. By your good luck Rāma did not kill you, even as food mixed with poison would kill the consumer. (34)

तस्मात् त्वया समारब्धं कर्म ह्यप्रतिमं परैः।
अहं समीकरिष्यामि हत्वा शत्रूंस्तवानघ॥ ३५॥

“Therefore, making short work of your enemies, O brother, who are free from sorrow, I shall actually neutralize the unworthy action that has been started by you in relation to your enemies. (35)

* We read in the Mahābhārata (Śalya-Parva, 46.84) how God Kārtikeya (son of Lord Śiva) made a fissure in the Krauñca mountain with His javelin.

अहमुत्सादयिष्यामि शत्रूंस्तव निशाचर।
यदि शक्रविवस्वन्तौ यदि पावकमारुतौ।
तावहं योधयिष्यामि कुबेरवरुणावपि ॥ ३६ ॥

“I shall exterminate all your foes, O ranger of the night! I shall encounter the two brothers in combat even if they happen to be Indra and the sun-god or the god of fire and the wind-god or Kubera (the god of riches and the deity presiding over the northern quarter) and Varuṇa (the god of water and the deity presiding over the western quarter). (36)

गिरिमात्रशरीरस्य महापरिघयोधिनः।
नर्दतस्तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रस्य बिभीयाद् वै पुरंदरः ॥ ३७ ॥

“Even Indra (the destroyer of strongholds) would be afraid of me as I, with my body having the size of a mountain and sharp teeth, roar while fighting with a huge iron bludgeon. (37)

पुनर्मा स द्वितीयेन शरेण निहनिष्यति।
ततोऽहं तस्य पास्यामि रुधिरं काममाश्वस ॥ ३८ ॥

“Before Rāma strikes me violently once more with a second arrow I shall drink his blood. Therefore, be fully restored to confidence. (38)

वधेन वै दाशरथेः सुखावहं
जयं तवाहर्तुमहं यतिष्ये।
हत्वा च रामं सह लक्ष्मणेन
खादामि सर्वान् हरियूथमुख्यान् ॥ ३९ ॥

“By making short work of Rāma (son of Daśaratha) I shall try my best to bring victory which will conduce to your happiness. Nay, having killed Rāma alongwith Lakṣmaṇa, I shall devour all the leaders of monkey hordes. (39)

रमस्व कामं पिब चाग्रघवारुणीं
कुरुष्व कार्याणि हितानि विज्वरः।
मया तु रामे गमिते यमक्षयं
चिराय सीता वशगा भविष्यति ॥ ४० ॥

“Enjoy life fully, drink the most excellent wine and, rid of anxiety, perform actions which are conducive to your welfare. When Rāma for his part has been dispatched to the abode of Death by me, Sītā will submit to your will for long.” (40)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्वादशः सर्गः ॥ १२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twelve in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रयोदशः सर्गः

Canto XIII

Advised by Mahāpārśwa to use violence against Sītā, Rāvaṇa pleads his inability to do so because of a curse pronounced against him in the past by Brahmā, and boasts of his own valour

रावणं क्रुद्धमाज्ञाय महापाश्वो महाबलः।
मुहूर्तमनुसंचिन्त्य प्राञ्जलिर्वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Reflecting awhile on finding Rāvaṇa enraged, Mahāpārśwa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, submitted with joined palms as follows: (1)

यः खल्वपि वनं प्राप्य मृगव्यालनिषेवितम्।
न पिबेन्मधु सम्प्राप्य स नरो बालिशो भवेत् ॥ २ ॥

“That man is a fool, who, even after reaching a forest infested by wild beasts of prey and reptiles and having duly found honey does not drink it. (2)

ईश्वरस्येश्वरः कोऽस्ति तव शत्रुनिर्बहण।
रमस्व सह वैदेह्या शत्रूनाक्रम्य मूर्धसु ॥ ३ ॥

“Who can lord it over you, a sovereign, O destroyer of foes? Setting your foot on the heads of your enemies, revel with Sitā (a princess of the Videha territory). (3)

बलात् कुक्कुटवृत्तेन प्रवर्तस्व महाबल।
आक्रम्याक्रम्य सीतां वै तां भुङ्क्ष्व च रमस्व च ॥ ४ ॥

“Act in the manner of a cock, using force against her, O ruler endowed with extraordinary might! Assaulting Sitā again and again, enjoy her and revel with her. (4)

लब्धकामस्य ते पश्चादागमिष्यति किं भयम्।
प्राप्तमप्राप्तकालं वा सर्वं प्रतिविधास्यसे ॥ ५ ॥

“Once you have attained your desired end, what peril will come upon you afterwards? And you will surely be able to meet every risk, no matter whether it is already present or is yet to come. (5)

कुम्भकर्णः सहास्माभिरिन्द्रजिच्च महाबलः।
प्रतिषेधयितुं शक्तौ सवज्रमपि वज्रिणम् ॥ ६ ॥

“In conjunction with us Kumbhakarna and Indrajit, who are endowed with extraordinary might, are capable of keeping back even Indra, armed with his thunderbolt. (6)

उपप्रदानं सान्त्वं वा भेदं वा कुशलैः कृतम्।
समतिक्रम्य दण्डेन सिद्धिमर्थेषु रोचये ॥ ७ ॥

“Leaving aside gift, conciliation or even the policy of sowing dissension in the enemy’s ranks, resorted to by the wise, I prefer to achieve success in our concerns by use of force. (7)

इह प्राप्तान् वयं सर्वाञ्छत्रुस्तव महाबल।
वशे शस्त्रप्रतापेन करिष्यामो न संशयः ॥ ८ ॥

“We shall reduce to submission by the strength of our arms all your enemies arrived here, O ruler endowed with extraordinary might! There is no doubt about it.” (8)

एवमुक्तस्तदा राजा महापार्श्वेन रावणः।
तस्य सम्पूजयन् वाक्यमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ९ ॥

Acclaiming his counsel when exhorted in the foregoing words by Mahāpārśwa on that occasion, King Rāvaṇa made the following reply: (9)

महापार्श्व निबोध त्वं रहस्यं किञ्चिदात्मनः।
चिरवृत्तं तदाख्यास्ये यदवाप्तं पुरा मया ॥ १० ॥

“Hear you, O Mahāpārśwa, of a certain secret of mine, of an incident which took place long ago, of a fruit which was gathered by me in the past. I shall presently confide it to you. (10)

पितामहस्य भवनं गच्छन्तीं पुञ्जिकस्थलाम्।
चञ्चूर्यमाणामद्राक्षमाकाशेऽग्निशिखामिव ॥ ११ ॥

“Once I beheld a celestial nymph, Puñjikasthalā by name, flashing like a flame and sneaking away for fear of me through the heavens to the abode of Brahmā (the grandfather of the entire creation, which was evolved by his mind-born sons, Marīci and others). (11)

सा प्रसह्य मया भुक्ता कृता विवसना ततः।
स्वयम्भूभवनं प्राप्ता लोलिता नलिनी यथा ॥ १२ ॥

“She was stripped of her garment and ravished by me. She then reached the abode of Brahmā, the self-born creator, like a lotus plant violently shaken by an elephant. (12)

तच्च तस्य तथा मन्ये ज्ञातमासीन्महात्मनः।
अथ संकुपितो वेधा मामिदं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ १३ ॥

“The aforesaid incident, I presume, came to be known precisely as it had occurred to that exalted soul. Highly enraged, the creator forthwith addressed the following words to me: (13)

अद्यप्रभृति यामन्यां बलान्मारीं गमिष्यसि।
तदा ते शतधा मूर्धा फलिष्यति न संशयः ॥ १४ ॥

“If you happen to violate any other woman henceforward, your head will be forthwith split into a hundred pieces; there is no doubt about it’.

(14)

इत्यहं तस्य शापस्य भीतः प्रसभमेव ताम्।
नारोहये बलात् सीतां वैदेहीं शयने शुभे ॥ १५ ॥

“Hence, afraid, as I am, of his curse, I do not violently put Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, on my charming bed by force.

(15)

सागरस्येव मे वेगो मारुतस्येव मे गतिः।
नैतद् दाशरथिर्वेद ह्यासादयति तेन माम् ॥ १६ ॥

“My fury resembles that of the sea, and my speed resembles the speed of the wind. Surely Rāma (son of Daśaratha) does not know of it, hence he is attacking me.

(16)

को हि सिंहमिवासीनं सुप्तं गिरिगुहाशये।
क्रुद्धं मृत्युमिवासीनं प्रबोधयितुमिच्छति ॥ १७ ॥

“Otherwise, who will actually seek to arouse me to martial activity as one would awaken a lion asleep in a sitting posture in its abode in the shape of a mountain cavern or arouse into activity Death sitting in rage?

(17)

न मत्तो निर्गतान् बाणान् द्विजिह्वान् पन्नगानिव।
रामः पश्यति संग्रामे तेन मामभिगच्छति ॥ १८ ॥

“Rāma has not seen arrows like serpents with forked tongues shot in a combat from my bow. Hence he is marching against me.

(18)

क्षिप्रं वज्रसमैर्बाणैः शतधा कार्मुकच्युतैः।
राममादीपयिष्यामि उल्काभिरिव कुञ्जरम् ॥ १९ ॥

“I shall consume Rāma in no time with my arrows shot in hundreds like the thunderbolt from my bow even as one would torment an elephant with firebrands.

(19)

तच्चास्य बलमादास्ये बलेन महता वृतः।
उदितः सविता काले नक्षत्राणां प्रभामिव ॥ २० ॥

“Nay, surrounded by a huge army, I shall split up his army even as, risen in the morning, the sun disperses the light of the stars.

(20)

न वासवेनापि सहस्रचक्षुषा
युधास्मि शक्यो वरुणेन वा पुनः।
मया त्वियं बाहुबलेन निर्जिता
पुरा पुरी वैश्रवणेन पालिता ॥ २१ ॥

“I am not capable of being conquered in an encounter even by the thousand-eyed Indra, the ruler of gods, nor, again, by Varuṇa, the god of water. Again, this city of Lankā, which was formerly ruled by Kubera (son of Sage Viśravā), was won by me on the strength of my arms.”

(21)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रयोदशः सर्गः ॥ १३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुर्दशः सर्गः

Canto XIV

Vibhīṣaṇa exhorts Rāvaṇa to restore Sītā to Śrī Rāma before the latter's arrows pierced the heads of the ogres

निशाचरेन्द्रस्य निशम्य वाक्यं
स कुम्भकर्णस्य च गर्जितानि।
विभीषणो राक्षसराजमुख्य-
मुवाच वाक्यं हितमर्थयुक्तम् ॥ १ ॥

Having listened to the braggadocio of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, and the thundering of Kumbhakarna, Vibhīṣaṇa made the following salutary and significant submission to Rāvaṇa, the foremost of the rulers of ogres: (1)

वृत्तो हि बाह्वन्तरभोगराशि- श्चिन्ताविषः सुस्मिततीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रः।
पञ्चाङ्गुलीपञ्चशिरोऽतिकायः
सीतामहाहिस्तव केन राजन् ॥ २ ॥

“By whom, O king, has the huge serpent of gigantic proportions in the form of Sītā—her bosom for its coils, her remaining plunged in thought for its poison, her sweet smiles for its sharp fangs, her five fingers for its five hoods—been tied to your neck? (2)

यावन् लङ्कां समभिद्रवन्ति
बलीमुखाः पर्वतकूटमात्राः।
दंष्ट्रायुधाश्चैव नखायुधाश्च
प्रदीयतां दाशरथाय मैथिली ॥ ३ ॥

“Let Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, be given back to Rāma (son of Daśaratha) while the monkeys, who are tall as mountain-tops and have teeth and claws for their weapons, have not yet invaded Laṅkā. (3)

यावन् गृह्णन्ति शिरांसि बाणा
रामेरिता राक्षसपुंगवानाम्।
वज्रोपमा वायुसमानवेगाः
प्रदीयतां दाशरथाय मैथिली ॥ ४ ॥

“Let Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, be restored to Rāma (son of Daśaratha) till the arrows propelled by Rāma, which resemble the thunderbolt in their fury and are swift as the wind, do not catch the heads of the foremost among the ogres. (4)

न कुम्भकर्णेन्द्रजितौ च राजं- स्तथा महापार्श्वमहोदरौ वा।
निकुम्भकुम्भौ च तथातिकायः
स्थातुं समर्था युधि राघवस्य ॥ ५ ॥

“Nay, neither Kumbhakarna and Indrajit nor even Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara nor Nikumbha and Kumbha, nor even Atikāya are capable of withstanding Rāma (a scion of Raghu) in combat, O king! (5)

जीवंस्तु रामस्य न मोक्ष्यसे त्वं
गुप्तः सवित्राप्यथवा मरुद्भिः।
न वासवस्याङ्कगतो न मृत्यो-
र्नभो न पातालमनुप्रविष्टः ॥ ६ ॥

“You shall not be spared by the arrows of Śrī Rāma even though protected by the sun-god or the wind-gods nor if seated in the lap of Indra or Death nor if you have penetrated into the heavens or Pātāla, the nethermost subterranean region.” (6)

निशम्य वाक्यं तु विभीषणस्य
ततः प्रहस्तो वचनं बभाषे।
न नो भयं विद्म न दैवतेभ्यो
न दानवेभ्योऽप्यथवा कदाचित् ॥ ७ ॥

Hearing the submission of Vibhīṣaṇa, Prahasta for his part forthwith observed as follows: “We do not know if there is ever any cause for fear to us from gods or even from demons. (7)

न यक्षगन्धर्वमहोरगेभ्यो
भयं न संख्ये पतगोरगेभ्यः ।
कथं नु रामाद् भविता भयं नो
नेन्द्रपुत्रात् समरे कदाचित् ॥ ८ ॥

“Nor is there any fear to us on the field of battle from Yakṣas (a class of demigods), Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and eminent Nāgas (serpent-demons) nor even from birds and reptiles. How, then, can there be any fear to us at any time on the battlefield from Rāma, the son of a ruler of mortals?” (8)

प्रहस्तवाक्यं त्वहितं निशम्य
विभीषणो राजहितानुकाङ्क्षी ।
ततो महार्थं वचनं बभाषे
धर्मार्थकामेषु निविष्टबुद्धिः ॥ ९ ॥

Hearing the noxious braggadocio of Prahasta, Vibhiṣaṇa for his part, who was a well-wisher of the king and whose mind penetrated into the domains of righteousness, material prosperity and sensuous enjoyment, immediately made the following speech, which was full of great significance: (9)

प्रहस्त राजा च महोदरश्च
त्वं कुम्भकर्णश्च यथार्थजातम् ।
ब्रवीत रामं प्रति तन्न शक्यं
यथा गतिः स्वर्गमधर्मबुद्धेः ॥ १० ॥

“The actions which the king as well as Mahodara as also yourself and Kumbhakarna propose to take against Rāma are not capable of being accomplished by you any more than the entry into heaven of one whose mind is set on unrighteousness, O Prahasta. (10)

वधस्तु रामस्य मया त्वया च
प्रहस्त सर्वैरपि राक्षसैर्वा ।
कथं भवेदर्धविशारदस्य
महार्णवं तर्तुमिवाप्लवस्य ॥ ११ ॥

“How can the destruction of Rāma, who is adept in achieving his object, be compassed, O Prahasta, by yourself, myself or even by all the ogres taken together any more than it is possible for anyone to cross the ocean without a bark? (11)

धर्मप्रधानस्य महारथस्य
इक्ष्वाकुवंशप्रभवस्य राज्ञः ।
पुरोऽस्य देवाश्च तथाविधस्य
कृत्येषु शक्तस्य भवन्ति मूढाः ॥ १२ ॥

“Even gods would feel nonplussed when placed in front of the aforesaid king, Rāma, who gives the foremost place to piety, is a great chariot-warrior, has taken his descent in the race of Ikṣvāku, is a replica of the latter in valour and other virtues and is capable of accomplishing his objects. (12)

तीक्ष्णा न तावत् तव कङ्कपत्रा
दुरासदा राघवविप्रमुक्ताः ।
भित्त्वा शरीरं प्रविशन्ति बाणाः
प्रहस्त तेनैव विकथ्यसे त्वम् ॥ १३ ॥

“The sharp arrows furiously discharged with vehemence by Rāma (a scion of Raghu), which are furnished with the feathers of a buzzard and are dangerous to approach, have not yet penetrated deep in your body after piercing it. That is why you indulge in boastful talk, O Prahasta! (13)

भित्त्वा न तावत् प्रविशन्ति कायं
प्राणान्तिकास्तेऽशनितुल्यवेगाः ।
शिताः शरा राघवविप्रमुक्ताः
प्रहस्त तेनैव विकथ्यसे त्वम् ॥ १४ ॥

“The deadly and sharp arrows furiously discharged with vehemence by Rāma (a scion of Raghu), which are equal in velocity to the thunderbolt, have not yet made their way deep into your body. That is why you play the braggart, O Prahasta! (14)

न रावणो नातिबलस्त्रिशीर्षो
न कुम्भकर्णस्य सुतो निकुम्भः ।
न चेन्द्रजिद् दाशरथिं प्रवोढुं
त्वं वा रणे शक्रसमं समर्थः ॥ १५ ॥

“Neither Rāvaṇa nor Trisīrā of exceeding might nor Nikumbha, son of Kumbhakarna, nor Indrajit nor even yourself shall be able to bear the onrush of Rāma (son of Daśaratha), who is equal to Indra in combat. (15)

देवान्तको वापि नरान्तको वा
तथातिकायोऽतिरथो महात्मा ।

अकम्पनश्चाद्रिसमानसारः

स्थातुं न शक्ता युधि राघवस्य ॥ १६ ॥

“Neither Devāntaka nor even Narāntaka nor Atikāya nor Atiratha of gigantic proportions nor Akampana, who is mighty as a mountain, is able to stand before Rāma (a scion of Raghu) on the field of battle. (16)

अयं च राजा व्यसनाभिभूतो
मित्रैरमित्रप्रतिमैर्भवद्भिः ।

अन्वास्यते राक्षसनाशनार्थे

तीक्ष्णः प्रकृत्या ह्यसमीक्षकारी ॥ १७ ॥

“Nay, this king, Rāvaṇa, who is overpowered by evil addictions*, is violent by nature and acts inconsiderately—is waited upon by friends in you, who are no better than foes, to the destruction of ogres. (17)

अनन्तभोगेन सहस्रमूर्ध्ना
नागेन भीमेन महाबलेन ।

बलात् परिक्षिप्तमिमं भवन्तो

राजानमुत्क्षिप्य विमोचयन्तु ॥ १८ ॥

“Extricating this king entwined with violence by a formidable cobra of infinite strength and extraordinary energy and endowed with a thousand hoods, you make him completely free. (18)

यावद्भिः केशग्रहणात् सुहृद्भिः
समेत्य सर्वैः परिपूर्णकामैः ।

निगृह्य राजा परिरक्षितव्यो

भूतैर्यथा भीमबलैर्गृहीतः ॥ १९ ॥

“The king should be collectively protected all round by all his well-wishers, whose desires have been fully gratified by him, even by using force against him and catching him by the hair (if necessary), even as one, possessed by spirits of terrible might, is protected by one’s near and dear ones. (19)

सुवारिणा राघवसागरेण
प्रच्छाद्यमानस्तरसा भवद्भिः ।

युक्तस्त्वयं तारयितुं समेत्य
काकुत्स्थपातालमुखे पतन् सः ॥ २० ॥

“Rāvaṇa, for his part, who is going to be engulfed by the sea in the shape of Rāma (a scion of Raghu)—which is full of excellent water (in the shape of high moral character), and who is about to fall into the mouth of Pātāla (the nethermost sub-terranean region) in the shape of Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), is worthy of being unitedly rescued by you. (20)

इदं पुरस्यास्य सराक्षसस्य
राज्ञश्च पथ्यं ससुहृज्जनस्य ।

सम्यग्धि वाक्यं स्वमतं ब्रवीमि

नरेन्द्रपुत्राय ददातु मैथिलीम् ॥ २१ ॥

“Indeed, I tender this advice, embodying my own opinion, which is highly conducive to the good of this city including the ogres, as well as of the king with his near and dear ones; let him give Sītā (a princess of Mithilā) back to Rāma (son of a ruler of men). (21)

परस्य वीर्यं स्वबलं च बुद्ध्वा
स्थानं क्षयं चैव तथैव वृद्धिम् ।

तथा स्वपक्षेऽप्यनुमृश्य बुद्ध्या

वदेत् क्षमं स्वामिहितं स मन्त्री ॥ २२ ॥

“A counsellor is he who after ascertaining the relative strength of the enemy as well as

* The following are the seven evil habits to which kings are generally found addicted:

वाग्दण्डयोस्तु पारुष्यमर्थदूषणमेव च । पानं स्त्री मृगया द्यूतं व्यसनं सप्तथा प्रभो ॥

“Harshness of speech and severity of punishment, extravagance, drinking, love of women, hunting and gambling constitute the sevenfold evil addictions, O Lord!”

his own master and, even so, duly considering with his acumen the status quo, set-back or rise of military power in the enemy's ranks as well as on his own side tenders an advice which is proper as well as conducive to the interests of his master.” (22)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुर्दशः सर्गः ॥ १४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fourteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चदशः सर्गः

Canto XV

Reproaching in a language which, though harsh, was yet conformable to truth, Indrajit, who was indulging in a boastful speech, on hearing the advice of Vibhīṣaṇa, the latter repeats that conciliation of Rāma was the only opportune and salutary course

बृहस्पतेस्तुल्यमतेर्वचस्त-

निशम्य यत्नेन विभीषणस्य ।

ततो महात्मा वचनं बभाषे

तत्रेन्द्रजिनैर्ऋतयूथमुख्यः ॥ १ ॥

Listening with restraint the foregoing speech of Vibhīṣaṇa, who was equal in wisdom to Sage Bṛhaspati (the preceptor of gods), the high-spirited Indrajit, the leader of ogre hordes, forthwith spoke as follows on that occasion: (1)

किं नाम ते तात कनिष्ठ वाक्य-

मनर्थकं वै बहुभीतवच्च ।

अस्मिन् कुले योऽपि भवेन जातः

सोऽपीदृशं नैव वदेन कुर्यात् ॥ २ ॥

“Why on earth should you actually utter meaningless words like one who is greatly alarmed, O youngest uncle? Even he who is not born in this race of Pulastya would not utter such words or do such a thing as is suggested by you. (2)

सत्त्वेन वीर्येण पराक्रमेण

धैर्येण शौर्येण च तेजसा च ।

एकः कुलेऽस्मिन् पुरुषो विमुक्तो

विभीषणस्तात कनिष्ठ एषः ॥ ३ ॥

“This Vibhīṣaṇa, the youngest of my uncles including father, is the only individual in this race who is utterly devoid of courage, virility, prowess, fortitude, heroism and spirit. (3)

किं नाम तौ मानुषराजपुत्रा-

वस्माकमेकेन हि राक्षसेन ।

सुप्राकृतेनापि निहन्तुमेतौ

शक्यौ कुतो भीषयसे स्म भीरो ॥ ४ ॥

“What are, in fact, those two sons of a king of men? Actually they are capable of being killed even by a single ogre, the most insignificant amongst us. Why then should you frighten us, O coward? (4)

त्रिलोकनाथो ननु देवराजः

शक्रो मया भूमितले निविष्टः ।

भयार्पिताश्चापि दिशः प्रपन्नाः

सर्वे तदा देवगणाः समग्राः ॥ ५ ॥

“Even the powerful Indra, the ruler of gods and the protector of all the three worlds, was cast by me to the ground. Nay, struck with terror, all the divine hordes too fled in all directions on that occasion. (5)

ऐरावतो निःस्वनमुनदन् स
निपातितो भूमितले मया तु।
विकृष्य दन्तौ तु मया प्रसह्य
वित्रासिता देवगणाः समग्राः ॥ ६ ॥

“After forcibly extracting his tusks with a crash, the celebrated Airāvata (the elephant of Indra) for his part, who was trumpeting all the time, was actually dashed to the ground by me and all the celestial hordes were thrown into panic by me. (6)

सोऽहं सुराणामपि दर्पहन्ता
दैत्योत्तमानामपि शोककर्ता।
कथं नरेन्द्रात्मजयोर्न शक्तो
मनुष्ययोः प्राकृतयोः सुवीर्यः ॥ ७ ॥

“How am I, who have crushed the pride even of gods and brought grief even to the foremost of Daityas, and am rich in manliness, not capable of subduing the two princes, insignificant mortals that they are?” (7)

अथेन्द्रकल्पस्य दुरासदस्य
महौजसस्तद् वचनं निशम्य।
ततो महार्थं वचनं बभाषे
विभीषणः शस्त्रभृतां वरिष्ठः ॥ ८ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid braggadocio of Indrajit (a rival of Indra), who was dangerous to approach in combat and was endowed with extraordinary energy, Vibhiṣaṇa, the foremost of armed soldiers, forthwith made the following reply, which was full of great significance: (8)

न तात मन्त्रे तव निश्चयोऽस्ति
बालस्त्वमद्याप्यविपक्वबुद्धिः।
तस्मात् त्वयाप्यात्मविनाशनाय
वचोऽर्थहीनं बहु विप्रलप्तम् ॥ ९ ॥

“Being a mere boy whose intellect is not yet ripe, my child, you are not able to decide what should be done and what should not be done. Therefore, much incoherent talk has been poured forth by you leading to your own destruction. (9)

पुत्रप्रवादेन तु रावणस्य
त्वमिन्द्रजिनिमित्रमुखोऽसि शत्रुः।
यस्येदृशं राघवतो विनाशं
निशम्य मोहादनुमन्यसे त्वम् ॥ १० ॥

“Though passing by the name of a son, O Indrajit, you are an enemy to Rāvaṇa under the cloak of a friend, in that even on hearing from me of his impending destruction at the hands of Rāma, a scion of Raghu, you are saying ditto to him through infatuation. (10)

त्वमेव वध्यश्च सुदुर्मतिश्च
स चापि वध्यो य इहानयत् त्वाम्।
बालं दृढं साहसिकं च योऽद्य
प्रावेशयन्मन्त्रकृतां समीपम् ॥ ११ ॥

“You are certainly deserving of death and grossly evil-minded too. Nay, he too is deserving of death, who brought you here, who ushered you, an utterly reckless boy, into the presence of counsellors today. (11)

मूढोऽप्रगल्भोऽविनयोपपन्न-
स्तीक्ष्णस्वभावोऽल्पमतिर्दुरात्मा।
मूर्खस्त्वमत्यन्तसुदुर्मतिश्च
त्वमिन्द्रजिद् बालतया ब्रवीषि ॥ १२ ॥

“You are indiscriminate, dull-witted, un-cultured, violent by nature, of poor intelligence, wicked, ignorant and extremely evil-minded, and talk like a child, O Indrajit! (12)

को ब्रह्मदण्डप्रतिमप्रकाश-नर्चिष्मतः कालनिकाशरूपान्।
सहेत बाणान् यमदण्डकल्पान्
समक्षमुक्तान् युधि राघवेण ॥ १३ ॥

“Who can withstand the flaming arrows, discharged by Rāma, a scion of

Raghu, in combat right in front of the enemy, who resemble the rod of Brahmā (the creator) in glory, that present a look similar to that of Death and are equal to the rod of Yama (the god of retribution)? (13)

धनानि रत्नानि सुभूषणानि
वासांसि दिव्यानि मणींश्च चित्रान्।

सीतां च रामाय निवेद्य देवीं
वसेम राजन्निह वीतशोकाः ॥ १४ ॥
“Offering riches, precious stones, excellent jewels, celestial garments and various gems, as well as the godlike Sītā to Rāma, let us live here free from grief, O king!” (14)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चदशः सर्गः ॥ १५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षोडशः सर्गः

Canto XVI

Annoyed to hear this advice of his youngest half-brother, Vibhīṣaṇa, which, though unpleasant to hear, was most wholesome, Rāvaṇa, on whom it made no impression, castigates him with harsh words

सुनिविष्टं हितं वाक्यमुक्तवन्तं विभीषणम्।
अब्रवीत् परुषं वाक्यं रावणः कालचोदितः ॥ १ ॥

Rāvaṇa, who was under the influence of Death, addressed the following harsh words to Vibhīṣaṇa, who had rendered an advice which was wholesome and impregnated with meaning: (1)

वसेत् सह सपत्नेन क्रुद्धेनाशीविषेण च।
न तु मित्रप्रवादेन संवसेच्छत्रुसेविना ॥ २ ॥

“One would rather live with an avowed enemy and even with an enraged venomous serpent than with an individual who, though professing himself to be a friend, is devoted to the enemy. (2)

जानामि शीलं ज्ञातीनां सर्वलोकेषु राक्षस।
हृष्यन्ति व्यसनेष्वेते ज्ञातीनां ज्ञातयः सदा ॥ ३ ॥

“I know, O ranger of the night, the disposition of one’s relatives in all the worlds. These latter always rejoice in the misfortunes of their relatives. (3)

प्रधानं साधकं वैद्यं धर्मशीलं च राक्षस।
ज्ञातयोऽप्यवमन्यन्ते शूरं परिभवन्ति च ॥ ४ ॥

“Kinsfolk (as a rule) despise their chief, even though he carries on his duties as a ruler, is learned and given to piety, O ogre, and try to humiliate him, if he is a hero. (4)

नित्यमन्योन्यसंहृष्टा व्यसनेष्वाततायिनः।
प्रच्छन्नहृदया घोरा ज्ञातयस्तु भयावहाः ॥ ५ ॥

“Feeling highly rejoiced in the misfortunes of one another, having secret designs and turning desperadoes any moment, kinsfolk are generally cruel and formidable. (5)

श्रूयन्ते हस्तिभिर्गीताः श्लोकाः पद्मवने पुरा।
पाशहस्तान् नरान् दृष्ट्वा शृणुष्व गदतो मम ॥ ६ ॥

“Couplets uttered in the past by elephants in a bed of lotuses on seeing men with snares in their hands (to catch them) have been heard by me. Listen to them from me even as I repeat them: (6)

नाग्निर्नान्यानि शस्त्राणि न नः पाशा भयावहाः ।
घोराः स्वार्थप्रयुक्तास्तु ज्ञातयो नो भयावहाः ॥ ७ ॥

“Neither fire nor other arms nor snares strike terror in us; but those of our own kind, who are cruel and actuated by self-interest, are dangerous. (7)

उपायमेते वक्ष्यन्ति ग्रहणे नात्र संशयः ।
कृत्स्नाद् भयाज्ज्ञातिभयं कुकष्टं विहितं च नः ॥ ८ ॥

“These (latter) will point out the device of catching us; there is no doubt about it. Nay, the peril from those of our kind is known to us as the most formidable of all perils.” (8)

विद्यते गोषु सम्पन्नं विद्यते ज्ञातितो भयम् ।
विद्यते स्त्रीषु चापल्यं विद्यते ब्राह्मणे तपः ॥ ९ ॥

“There exists wealth in the cow; there exists peril from one’s own kinsfolk; there exists capriciousness in women; and there exists asceticism in the Brāhmaṇa. (9)

ततो नेष्टमिदं सौम्य यदहं लोकसत्कृतः ।
ऐश्वर्यमभिजातश्च रिपूणां मूर्ध्नि च स्थितः ॥ १० ॥

“Therefore, it is not to your liking, my good brother, that I am honoured by the whole world, have attained power and pelf and have set my foot on the heads of my enemies. (10)

यथा पुष्करपत्रेषु पतितास्तोयबिन्दवः ।
न श्लेषमभिगच्छन्ति तथानार्येषु सौहृदम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Love bestowed on the unworthy does not moisten their heart any more than drops of water fallen on lotus leaves penetrate the latter. (11)

यथा शरदि मेघानां सिञ्चतामपि गर्जताम् ।
न भवत्यम्बुसंक्लेदस्तथानार्येषु सौहृदम् ॥ १२ ॥

“Even as the earth is not saturated with the water of clouds thundering and raining in autumn, so love bestowed on the unworthy fails to moisten their heart. (12)

यथा मधुकरस्तर्षाद् रसं विन्दन्न तिष्ठति ।
तथा त्वमपि तत्रैव तथानार्येषु सौहृदम् ॥ १३ ॥

“Affection does not abide in the heart of the unworthy any more than a black bee stays with a flower even though sucking its nectar with avidity. You too are of that type (13)

यथा मधुकरस्तर्षात् काशपुष्पं पिबन्नपि ।
रसमत्र न विन्देत तथानार्येषु सौहृदम् ॥ १४ ॥

“One bestowing love on the unworthy does not attain happiness any more than a black bee, though sucking the flowers of a grass known by the name of Kāśa gets nectar there. (14)

यथा पूर्वं गजः स्नात्वा गृह्य हस्तेन वै रजः ।
दूषयत्यात्मनो देहं तथानार्येषु सौहृदम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Just as picking up sand in its proboscis immediately after taking a dip in water in the first instance, an elephant soils its body again, so the affection bestowed on the unworthy gets clogged. (15)

योऽन्यस्त्वेवंविधं ब्रूयाद् वाक्यमेतन्निशाचर ।
अस्मिन् मुहुर्ते न भवेत् त्वां तु धिक् कुलपांसन ॥ १६ ॥

“He who, other than you, actually utters the aforesaid words in the way you have done, O ranger of the night, would have undoubtedly ceased to be this very moment. As for you, a curse upon you, O obloquy of your race!” (16)

इत्युक्तः परुषं वाक्यं न्यायवादी विभीषणः ।
उत्पपात गदापाणिश्चतुर्भिः सह राक्षसैः ॥ १७ ॥

Rebuked in these harsh words, Vibhiṣaṇa, who had spoken what is right, rose in the airspace, mace in hand, alongwith four other ogres, his ministers. (17)

अब्रवीच्च तदा वाक्यं जातक्रोधो विभीषणः ।
अन्तरिक्षगतः श्रीमान् भ्राता वै राक्षसाधिपम् ॥ १८ ॥

Nay, standing in airspace, the glorious Vibhiṣaṇa, (half-) brother of Rāvaṇa, who was filled with indignation, actually addressed the following words at that moment to Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres): (18)

स त्वं भ्रान्तोऽसि मे राजन् ब्रूहि मां यद् यदिच्छसि ।
ज्येष्ठो मान्यः पितृसमो न च धर्मपथे स्थितः ।
इदं हि परुषं वाक्यं न क्षमाम्यग्रजस्य ते ॥ १९ ॥

“You, who have spoken harsh words to me, O king, are deluded. Rebuke me in whatever words you will. Being my eldest brother, you are worthy of respect to me like a father; yet you are not steadfast on the path of virtue. I, therefore, cannot tolerate your abusive speech, even though you are my elder. (19)

सुनीतं हितकामेन वाक्यमुक्तं दशानन ।
न गृह्णन्त्यकृतात्मानः कालस्य वशमागताः ॥ २० ॥

“Those who have not mastered their self and have fallen under the sway of Death do not heed the excellent words of wisdom uttered by a well-wisher, O Rāvaṇa (endowed with ten heads)! (20)

सुलभाः पुरुषा राजन् सततं प्रियवादिनः ।
अप्रियस्य च पथ्यस्य वक्ता श्रोता च दुर्लभः ॥ २१ ॥

“People ever given to uttering palatable words, O king, can be easily had. He, however, who utters and listens to words which, though unpleasant to hear, yet are conducive to one’s good are difficult to find. (21)

बद्धं कालस्य पाशेन सर्वभूतापहारिणः ।
न नश्यन्तमुपेक्षे त्वां प्रदीप्तं शरणं यथा ॥ २२ ॥

“I could not ignore you, held fast in the noose of Death—who snatches away all beings—and going to perish like a house in flames. Hence I went out of my way to tell you all this. (22)

दीप्तपावकसंकाशैः शितैः काञ्चनभूषणैः ।
न त्वामिच्छाम्यहं द्रष्टुं रामेण निहतं शरैः ॥ २३ ॥

“I did not wish to see you killed by Rāma with sharp arrows glowing like a flaming fire and ornamented with gold. (23)

शूराश्च बलवन्तश्च कृतास्त्राश्च नरा रणे ।
कालाभिपन्नाः सीदन्ति यथा वालुकसेतवः ॥ २४ ॥

“Seized by death, even gallant and mighty men, nay, those who are skilled in archery fall in battle like dams of sand. (24)

तन्मर्षयतु यच्चोक्तं गुरुत्वाद्वितमिच्छता ।
आत्मानं सर्वथा रक्ष पुरीं चेमां सराक्षसाम् ।
स्वस्ति तेऽस्तु गमिष्यामि सुखी भव मया विना ॥ २५ ॥

“Being my elder brother, pray, forgive what has been said by me, wishing you well, as I do. Now protect yourself in every way, as well as this city including the ogres. May prosperity attend on you. Be happy in my absence. (25)

निवार्यमाणस्य मया हितैषिणा
न रोचते ते वचनं निशाचर ।
परान्तकाले हि गतायुषो नरा
हितं न गृह्णन्ति सुहृद्भिरीरितम् ॥ २६ ॥

“While you were being restrained by me as I wished you well, my warning did not find favour with you, O ranger of the night! At the hour of death men whose life has run its course do not, as a rule, heed the salutary advice tendered by their well-wishers.” (26)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षोडशः सर्गः ॥ १६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तदशः सर्गः

Canto XVII

Vibhīṣaṇa seeks the protection of Śrī Rāma and the latter holds consultation with his counsellors on the question of giving him shelter

इत्युक्त्वा परुषं वाक्यं रावणं रावणानुजः ।
आजगाम मुहूर्तेन यत्र रामः सलक्ष्मणः ॥ १ ॥

Addressing the aforesaid harsh words to Rāvaṇa, Vibhīṣaṇa, (the youngest half-brother of Rāvaṇa) arrived in less than an hour where Śrī Rāma was with Lakṣmaṇa (on the opposite shore). (1)

तं मेरुशिखराकारं दीप्तामिव शतहृदाम् ।
गगनस्थं महीस्थास्ते ददृशुर्वानराधिपाः ॥ २ ॥

Stationed on the ground (below), the celebrated leaders of monkeys espied Vibhīṣaṇa, who looked like a peak of Mount Meru in size and stood in the air like a dazzling flash of lightning. (2)

ते चाप्यनुचरास्तस्य चत्वारो भीमविक्रमाः ।
तेऽपि वर्मायुधोपेता भूषणोत्तमभूषिताः ॥ ३ ॥

His four well-known attendants too were endowed with redoubtable prowess. They too were furnished with armour and weapons and adorned with the foremost of jewels. (3)

स च मेघाचलप्रख्यो वज्रायुधसमप्रभः ।
वरायुधधरो वीरो दिव्याभरणभूषितः ॥ ४ ॥

The valiant Vibhīṣaṇa resembled a cloud and a mountain, vied with Indra (who wields the thunderbolt) in splendour, bore excellent arms and was adorned with heavenly jewels. (4)

तमात्मपञ्चमं दृष्ट्वा सुग्रीवो वानराधिपः ।
वानरैः सह दुर्धर्षश्चिन्तयामास बुद्धिमान् ॥ ५ ॥

Finding him to be the fifth (besides four others), the wise Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, who was difficult to overpower and stood with monkeys, became thoughtful. (5)

चिन्तयित्वा मुहूर्तं तु वानरांस्तानुवाच ह ।
हनुमत्प्रमुखान् सर्वानिदं वचनमुत्तमम् ॥ ६ ॥

Reflecting a while, he, for his part, they say, addressed the following excellent words to all those monkeys with Hanumān at their head: (6)

एष सर्वायुधोपेतश्चतुर्भिः सह राक्षसैः ।
राक्षसोभ्येति पश्यध्वमस्मान् हन्तुं न संशयः ॥ ७ ॥

“Lo, armed with all kinds of weapons and accompanied by four of his kind, this ogre is undoubtedly approaching to kill us.” (7)

सुग्रीवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा सर्वे ते वानरोत्तमाः ।
सालानुद्यम्य शैलांश्च इदं वचनमब्रुवन् ॥ ८ ॥

Lifting up sal trees and rocks on hearing the words of Sugrīva, all those jewels among monkeys submitted as follows: (8)

शीघ्रं व्यादिश नो राजन् वधायैषां दुरात्मनाम् ।
निपतन्ति हता यावद् धरण्यामल्पचेतनाः ॥ ९ ॥

“Command us at once, O king, to kill these evil-minded ones, so that on being killed, they may fall down on earth, endowed as they are with poor vitality.” (9)

तेषां सम्भाषमाणानामन्योन्यं स विभीषणः ।
उत्तरं तीरमासाद्य खस्थ एव व्यतिष्ठत ॥ १० ॥

Reaching the northern shore even as they were talking with one another in this strain, the aforesaid Vibhīṣaṇa stopped short while he was yet in the air. (10)

स उवाच महाप्राज्ञः स्वरेण महता महान् ।
सुग्रीवं तांश्च सम्प्रेक्ष्य खस्थ एव विभीषणः ॥ ११ ॥

Gazing on Sugrīva and those monkeys, the aforesaid Vibhīṣaṇa, highly intelligent and great as he was, spoke as follows in a loud voice while still remaining in the air: (11)

रावणो नाम दुर्वृत्तो राक्षसो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
तस्याहमनुजो भ्राता विभीषण इति श्रुतः ॥ १२ ॥

“There is an ogre of evil conduct, Rāvaṇa by name, who is the lord of ogres. I am his youngest (half-) brother, known by the name of Vibhīṣaṇa. (12)

तेन सीता जनस्थानाद् हृता हत्वा जटायुषम् ।
रुद्धा च विवशा दीना राक्षसीभिः सुरक्षिता ॥ १३ ॥

“Carried off from Janasthāna after killing Jāṭāyu, the poor and helpless Sītā has been detained by him and is being jealously guarded by ogresses. (13)

तमहं हेतुभिर्वाक्यैर्विविधैश्च न्यदर्शयम् ।
साधु निर्यात्यतां सीता रामायेति पुनः पुनः ॥ १४ ॥

“I thoroughly admonished him time and again by recourse to various arguments in the following words: ‘Let Sītā be restored to Rāma.’ (14)

स च न प्रतिजग्राह रावणः कालचोदितः ।
उच्यमानं हितं वाक्यं विपरीत इवौषधम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Impelled by fate, Rāvaṇa, however, would not listen to the salutary advice which was being tendered to him, any more than a man who is doomed would accept a medicine, which is calculated to do him good. (15)

सोऽहं परुषितस्तेन दासवच्चावमानितः ।
त्यक्त्वा पुत्रांश्च दारांश्च राघवं शरणं गतः ॥ १६ ॥

Abandoning my sons and wife, when spoken to harshly and treated with disrespect like a slave by him, though wishing him well, I have sought Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, as my refuge. (16)

निवेदयत मां क्षिप्रं राघवाय महात्मने ।
सर्वलोकशरण्याय विभीषणमुपस्थितम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Therefore, communicate to the high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who is capable of protecting all the worlds, the fact of myself, Vibhīṣaṇa, being present.” (17)

एतत्तु वचनं श्रुत्वा सुग्रीवो लघुविक्रमः ।
लक्ष्मणस्याग्रतो रामं संरब्धमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ १८ ॥

Hearing this appeal, the swift-footed Sugrīva for his part ran up to the presence of Śrī Rāma and indignantly submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma in the presence of Lakṣmaṇa: (18)

प्रविष्टः शत्रुसैन्यं हि प्राप्तः शत्रुरतर्कितः ।
निहन्यादन्तरं लब्ध्वा उलूको वायसानिव ॥ १९ ॥

“Indeed an enemy, who has belonged to the hostile ranks, has unexpectedly made his appearance. Finding an opportune moment he may kill us even as an owl would destroy crows. (19)

मन्त्रे व्यूहे नये चारे युक्तो भवितुमर्हसि ।
वानराणां च भद्रं ते परेषां च परंतप ॥ २० ॥

“For conferring benefits on the monkeys, as well as for the subjugation of the enemy, O scourge of your foes, you ought to remain alert in the matter of holding deliberations as to what ought to be done and what ought not to be done, deployment of troops, employing the four expedients against the enemy in their own sphere as well as in espionage: this will ensure your welfare. (20)

अन्तर्धानगता ह्येते राक्षसाः कामरूपिणः ।
शूराश्च निकृतिज्ञाश्च तेषां जातु न विश्वसेत् ॥ २१ ॥

“Since these ogres move about unperceived, are able to change their form at will and are valiant and crafty, one should never repose trust in them. (21)

प्रणिधी राक्षसेन्द्रस्य रावणस्य भवेदयम् ।
अनुप्रविश्य सोऽस्मासु भेदं कुर्यान् संशयः ॥ २२ ॥

“He may be a spy of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres. Finding his way in our midst, he may doubtless sow dissension amongst us. (22)

अथ वा स्वयमेवैष छिद्रमासाद्य बुद्धिमान्।
अनुप्रविश्य विश्वस्ते कदाचित् प्रहरेदपि॥ २३॥

“Or, discovering our weak points on entering our ranks, this fellow, shrewd as he is, may even strike us himself some day when we have reposed faith in him. (23)

मित्राटविवलं चैव मौलभृत्यबलं तथा।
सर्वमेतद् बलं ग्राह्यं वर्जयित्वा द्विषद्बलम्॥ २४॥

“A contingent supplied by allies, that provided by the foresters, that furnished by hereditary servants and the one supplied by paid servants—all these are worth accepting, but not the one supplied by an enemy. (24)

प्रकृत्या राक्षसो ह्येष भ्रातामित्रस्य वै प्रभो।
आगतश्च रिपुः साक्षात् कथमस्मिंश्च विश्वसेत्॥ २५॥

“Indeed, he is an ogre by birth and a brother of the enemy to boot, my lord! The enemy himself has in this way made his appearance before us. How can one repose trust in him in such circumstances? (25)

रावणस्यानुजो भ्राता विभीषण इति श्रुतः।
चतुर्भिः सह रक्षोभिर्भवन्तं शरणं गतः॥ २६॥

“Rāvaṇa’s own younger brother, known by the name of Vibhiṣaṇa, has sought you as his refuge alongwith four other ogres. (26)

रावणेन प्रणीतं हि तमवेहि विभीषणम्।
तस्याहं निग्रहं मन्ये क्षमं क्षमवतां वर॥ २७॥

“Know the said Vibhiṣaṇa to have been dispatched by Rāvaṇa himself. I, therefore, deem it fit to arrest him, O the foremost of the indulgent! (27)

राक्षसो जिह्मया बुद्ध्या संदिष्टोऽयमिहागतः।
प्रहर्तुं मायया छन्नो विश्वस्ते त्वयि चानघ॥ २८॥

“This ogre has evidently made his appearance here as directed by Rāvaṇa with crooked intent in order to strike you when you have reposed faith in him, remaining concealed by his witchcraft all the time, O sinless one! (28)

वध्यतामेष तीव्रेण दण्डेन सचिवैः सह।
रावणस्य नृशंसस्य भ्राता ह्येष विभीषणः॥ २९॥

“Let this Vibhiṣaṇa be killed alongwith his ministers by recourse to severe punishment, inasmuch as he is a brother of the cruel Rāvaṇa.” (29)

एवमुक्त्वा तु तं रामं संरब्धो वाहिनीपतिः।
वाक्यज्ञो वाक्यकुशलं ततो मौनमुपागमत्॥ ३०॥

Having submitted as aforesaid to Śrī Rāma, who was adept in expression, Sugrīva, the Commander-in-Chief, for his part, who knew how to speak and felt agitated, then assumed silence. (30)

सुग्रीवस्य तु तद् वाक्यं श्रुत्वा रामो महाबलः।
समीपस्थानुवाचेदं हनुमत्प्रमुखान् कपीन्॥ ३१॥

Hearing the foregoing speech of Sugrīva, Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary might, spoke as follows to the monkeys headed by Hanumān, who stood near him: (31)

यदुक्तं कपिराजेन रावणावरजं प्रति।
वाक्यं हेतुमदत्यर्थं भवद्विरपि च श्रुतम्॥ ३२॥

“The advice which has been tendered by Sugrīva, the king of monkeys, regarding Vibhiṣaṇa (Rāvaṇa’s youngest half-brother) is extremely reasonable and has been heard by you, too. (32)

सुहृदामर्थकृच्छ्रेषु युक्तं बुद्धिमता सदा।
समर्थेनोपसंदेष्टुं शाश्वतीं भूतिमिच्छता॥ ३३॥

“It is always desirable for one who is intelligent and capable of judgment and seeks the lasting good of one’s near and dear ones to express one’s honest opinion on knotty points in regard to duty.” (33)

इत्येवं परिपृष्टास्ते स्वं स्वं मतमतन्द्रिताः।
सोपचारं तदा राममूचुः प्रियचिकीर्षवः॥ ३४॥

Consulted in these words, the monkeys, who were free from lassitude and keen to oblige Śrī Rāma, forthwith expressed each his own opinion politely as follows: (34)

अज्ञातं नास्ति ते किञ्चित् त्रिषु लोकेषु राघव ।
आत्मानं पूजयन् राम पृच्छस्यस्मान् सुहृत्तया ॥ ३५ ॥

“Nothing is unknown to you in all the three worlds, O scion of Raghu! You consult us all the same because of your goodwill towards us, thereby bestowing honour on us, who are your very selves, O Rāma! (35)

त्वं हि सत्यव्रतः शूरो धार्मिको दृढविक्रमः ।
परीक्ष्यकारी स्मृतिमान् निसृष्टात्मा सुहृत्सु च ॥ ३६ ॥

“Indeed, you are a man of unfailing vows, gallant, pious, endowed with unyielding prowess and discreet; you take action after full investigation, and have offered your very self to your near and dear ones. (36)

तस्मादेकैकशस्तावद् ब्रुवन्तु सचिवास्तव ।
हेतुतो मतिसम्पन्नाः समर्थाश्च पुनः पुनः ॥ ३७ ॥

“Therefore, let your counsellors, who are all richly endowed with intelligence and capable of judgment, too, likewise argue with reason, one after another, first of all. (37)

इत्युक्ते राघवायाथ मतिमानङ्गदोऽग्रतः ।
विभीषणपरीक्षार्थमुवाच वचनं हरिः ॥ ३८ ॥

This having been said, the sagacious monkey, Aṅgada, to begin with, immediately tendered to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) the following advice, which suggested the means of testing the bona fides of Vibhīṣaṇa: (38)

शत्रोः सकाशात् सम्प्राप्तः सर्वथा तर्क्य एव हि ।
विश्वासनीयः सहसा न कर्तव्यो विभीषणः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Vibhīṣaṇa should not be dealt with as trustworthy all at once inasmuch as, having arrived direct from the enemy’s presence, he yet deserves to be viewed with suspicion in every way. (39)

छादयित्वाऽऽत्मभावं हि चरन्ति शठबुद्धयः ।
प्रहरन्ति च रन्ध्रेषु सोऽनर्थः सुमहान् भवेत् ॥ ४० ॥

“For, people of perfidious mind move about concealing their motive and direct their blow at one’s weak points: that may prove to be a disaster of no small magnitude (40)

अर्थानर्थौ विनिश्चित्य व्यवसायं भजेत ह ।
गुणतः संग्रहं कुर्याद् दोषतस्तु विसर्जयेत् ॥ ४१ ॥

“Definitely ascertaining the advantages and disadvantages, which are likely to follow from a certain course of action, one should actually take one’s decision in the matter. One should adopt a course of action if advantages are likely to follow from it, and should reject it if it is thought to be disadvantageous. (41)

यदि दोषो महांस्तस्मिंस्त्यज्यतामविशङ्कितम् ।
गुणान् वापि बहून् ज्ञात्वा संग्रहः क्रियतां नृप ॥ ४२ ॥

“If there is great harm in accepting him, let him be boldly rejected. Or, let him be accepted, on the other hand, on coming to know of the many benefits that are likely to accrue from him, O protector of men!”(42)

शरभस्त्वथ निश्चित्य सार्थं वचनमब्रवीत् ।
क्षिप्रमस्मिन् नरव्याघ्र चारः प्रतिविधीयताम् ॥ ४३ ॥

Having duly made up his mind, Śarabha for his part now tendered the following advice, which was full of meaning: “Let a spy be immediately dispatched to shadow him, O tiger among men! (43)

प्रणिधाय हि चारेण यथावत् सूक्ष्मबुद्धिना ।
परीक्ष्य च ततः कार्यो यथान्यायं परिग्रहः ॥ ४४ ॥

“After sending out spies and thoroughly testing Vibhīṣaṇa through such a one of penetrating judgment, welcome should then be actually extended to him according to his deserts.” (44)

जाम्बवांस्त्वथ सम्प्रेक्ष्य शास्त्रबुद्ध्या विचक्षणः ।
वाक्यं विज्ञापयामास गुणवद् दोषवर्जितम् ॥ ४५ ॥

Deeply reflecting with a mind enlightened by knowledge of scriptures, the clear-sighted Jāmbavān for his part next made the following submission, which was full of excellences and free from faults: (45)

बद्धवैराच्च पापाच्च राक्षसेन्द्राद् विभीषणः ।
अदेशकाले सम्प्राप्तः सर्वथा शक्यतामयम् ॥ ४६ ॥

“Vibhiṣaṇa has come away deserting the sinful Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, who bears deep-rooted enmity to us, without regard to place and time. He should, therefore be viewed with suspicion in everyway.” (46)

ततो मैन्दस्तु सम्प्रेक्ष्य नयापनयकोविदः ।
वाक्यं वचनसम्पन्नो बभाषे हेतुमत्तरम् ॥ ४७ ॥

Deeply reflecting, Mainda for his part, who was adept in discriminating what is right and what is wrong and was rich in expression, tendered the following advice, which was exceedingly logical: (47)

अनुजो नाम तस्यैष रावणस्य विभीषणः ।
पृच्छतां मधुरेणायं शनैर्नरपतीश्वर ॥ ४८ ॥

“Vibhiṣaṇa is well-known to be the youngest (half-) brother of the celebrated Rāvaṇa. Let him be gently interrogated progressively, O ruler of kings! (48)

भावमस्य तु विज्ञाय तत्त्वतस्तं करिष्यसि ।
यदि दुष्टो न दुष्टो वा बुद्धिपूर्वं नरर्षभ ॥ ४९ ॥

“Having correctly read his mind by recourse to reason as to whether he is vicious or not, you should act accordingly, O jewel among men!” (49)

अथ संस्कारसम्पन्नो हनुमान् सचिवोत्तमः ।
उवाच वचनं श्लक्ष्णमर्थवन्मधुरं लघु ॥ ५० ॥

Hanumān, the foremost of counsellors, who was richly endowed with impressions left on his mind by the study of scriptures, made the following submission, which was faultless in expression, full of meaning, agreeable to the ear and concise: (50)

न भवन्तं मतिश्रेष्ठं समर्थं वदतां वरम् ।
अतिशाययितुं शक्तो बृहस्पतिरपि ब्रुवन् ॥ ५१ ॥

“Even Bṛhaspati, the preceptor of gods, while speaking, would not be able to outdo you, who are supreme in intelligence, powerful and the foremost of the eloquent. (51)

न वादानापि संघर्षान्नाधिक्यानं च कामतः ।
वक्ष्यामि वचनं राजन् यथार्थं राम गौरवात् ॥ ५२ ॥

“In view of the importance of the matter I shall speak, O King Rāma, only that which is correct, and not for the sake of argument, nor even in a spirit of emulation, nor with a sense of superiority, nor again through desire of any kind. (52)

अर्थानर्थनिमित्तं हि यदुक्तं सचिवैस्तव ।
तत्र दोषं प्रपश्यामि क्रिया न ह्युपपद्यते ॥ ५३ ॥

“I detect a fallacy in what has been submitted by your counsellors about ascertaining the advantages and disadvantages that are likely to accrue to us from Vibhiṣaṇa; for action in the shape of testing Vibhiṣaṇa is not possible at this stage. (53)

ऋते नियोगात् सामर्थ्यमवबोद्धुं न शक्यते ।
सहसा विनियोगोऽपि दोषवान् प्रतिभाति मे ॥ ५४ ॥

“His capacity of doing a good or evil turn cannot be ascertained without charging him with some duty. And entrusting him with some duty too all at once appears erroneous to me. (54)

चारप्रणिहितं युक्तं यदुक्तं सचिवैस्तव ।
अर्थस्यासम्भवात् तत्र कारणं नोपपद्यते ॥ ५५ ॥

“No justification can be given in favour of the suggestion offered by your counsellors that it is advisable to send out spies to ascertain the bona fides of Vibhiṣaṇa; for, no purpose will be served thereby. (55)

अदेशकाले सम्प्राप्त इत्ययं यद् विभीषणः ।
 विवक्षा तत्र मेऽस्तीयं तां निबोध यथामति ॥ ५६ ॥
 एष देशश्च कालश्च भवतीह यथा तथा ।
 पुरुषात् पुरुषं प्राप्य तथा दोषगुणावपि ॥ ५७ ॥
 दौरात्म्यं रावणे दृष्ट्वा विक्रमं च तथा त्वयि ।
 युक्तमागमनं ह्यत्र सदृशं तस्य बुद्धितः ॥ ५८ ॥

“In regard to the observation that yonder Vibhīṣaṇa has come away without regard to place and time, it is my desire presently to submit according to my own poor lights how this is the place and time fit for his arrival. Pray, listen to my argument. Judicious indeed and becoming of his wisdom too is his arrival at this place at the present moment in that he considers you superior, from the moral point of view, to Rāvaṇa, has also found merits in you and demerits in the latter and has duly perceived the evil-mindedness of Rāvaṇa and your extraordinary prowess likewise. (56—58)

अज्ञातरूपैः पुरुषैः स राजन् पृच्छ्यतामिति ।
 यदुक्तमत्र मे प्रेक्षा काचिदस्ति समीक्षिता ॥ ५९ ॥

“Regarding the suggestion which has been made by Mainda that Vibhīṣaṇa should be interrogated by spies of unknown identity, I have my own considered opinion to give, O king! (59)

पृच्छ्यमानो विशङ्केत सहसा बुद्धिमान् वचः ।
 तत्र मित्रं प्रदुष्येत मिथ्या पृष्टं सुखागतम् ॥ ६० ॥

“While being interrogated by an unknown person, a clever man would at once grow suspicious about the question which was being put to him. Nay, on coming to know that he was being interrogated to no purpose, a prospective friend arrived in search of relief, would get upset. (60)

अशक्यं सहसा राजन् भावो बोद्धुं परस्य वै ।
 अन्तरेण स्वैर्भिन्नैर्नैपुण्यं पश्यतां भृशम् ॥ ६१ ॥

“Moreover, the intention of an enemy cannot be found out all at once, O king! In the meantime you should fully discover the good intentions of Vibhīṣaṇa by means of his diversified tones. (61)

न त्वस्य ब्रुवतो जातु लक्ष्यते दुष्टभावता ।
 प्रसन्नं वदनं चापि तस्मान्मे नास्ति संशयः ॥ ६२ ॥

“Even as he speaks his malevolence is not detected in the least. His countenance too is placid. Therefore, no doubt whatsoever exists in my mind about him. (62)

अशङ्कितमतिः स्वस्थो न शठः परिसर्पति ।
 न चास्य दुष्टवागस्ति तस्मान्मे नास्ति संशयः ॥ ६३ ॥

“A deceitful person does not come with a mind free from misgiving and unembarrassed. Vibhīṣaṇa’s speech too is not faulty from the point of view of language or spirit. Hence no suspicion exists in my mind about him. (63)

आकारश्छाद्यमानोऽपि न शक्यो विनिगूहितुम् ।
 बलाद्धि विवृणोत्येव भावमन्तर्गतं नृणाम् ॥ ६४ ॥

“Even when it is being veiled, one’s intention cannot be fully concealed. The facial expression of men perforce reveals their inner feeling without doubt. (64)

देशकालोपपन्नं च कार्यं कार्यविदां वर ।
 सफलं कुरुते क्षिप्रं प्रयोगेणाभिसंहितम् ॥ ६५ ॥

“Nay, the action of Vibhīṣaṇa is conformable to place and time, O prince of those who know how to act! An action deliberately accomplished speedily crowns one with success. (65)

उद्योगं तव सम्प्रेक्ष्य मिथ्यावृत्तं च रावणम् ।
 वालिनं च हतं श्रुत्वा सुग्रीवं चाभिषेचितम् ॥ ६६ ॥

राज्यं प्रार्थयमानस्तु बुद्धिपूर्वमिहागतः ।
 एतावत् तु पुरस्कृत्य युज्यते तस्य संग्रहः ॥ ६७ ॥

Fully considering your endeavour (to storm Laṅkā, in the form of building a bridge across the sea) and realizing Rāvaṇa to be vainglorious and sinful of conduct, nay, hearing of Vāli, who went clockwise round the four oceans squeezing Rāvaṇa in his arm-pit, having been killed with a single arrow as well as of Sugrīva having been crowned king by you, Vibhīṣaṇa (who longed for sovereignty) has for his part deliberately come here. Taking all this into consideration it seems advisable in any case to accept him as our own. (66-67)

यथाशक्ति मयोक्तं तु राक्षसस्यार्जवं प्रति ।
प्रमाणं त्वं हि शेषस्य श्रुत्वा बुद्धिमतां वर ॥ ६८ ॥
“A plea has been given by me to the best of my ability in favour of the ogre’s sincerity. Having heard it, O prince of the wise, you are indeed the best judge to decide the rest what should be done.” (68)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तदशः सर्गः ॥ १७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventeen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टादशः सर्गः

Canto XVIII

Having heard the arguments of his counsellors, Śrī Rāma decides to accept Vibhīṣaṇa as his own

अथ रामः प्रसन्नात्मा श्रुत्वा वायुसुतस्य ह ।
प्रत्यभाषत दुर्धर्षः श्रुतवानात्मनि स्थितम् ॥ १ ॥

Delighted in his mind to hear from the mouth of Hanumān, son of the wind-god, what existed in his own mind, Śrī Rāma, who was difficult to overpower and was proficient in the sacred lore, forthwith replied as follows: (1)

ममापि च विवक्षास्ति काचित् प्रति विभीषणम् ।
श्रोतुमिच्छामि तत् सर्वं भवद्भिः श्रेयसि स्थितैः ॥ २ ॥

“There exists a desire in me too to say something about Vibhīṣaṇa. I would like to have all that heard by you, who are devoted to my welfare. (2)

मित्रभावेन सम्प्राप्तं न त्यजेयं कथंचन ।
दोषो यद्यपि तस्य स्यात् सतामेतदगर्हितम् ॥ ३ ॥

“I cannot refuse to receive under any circumstances him who has come to me in a friendly spirit. Even if there in any wickedness in him, his acceptance is not reprehensible in the eyes of good people.” (3)

सुग्रीवस्त्वथ तद्वाक्यमाभाष्य च विमृश्य च ।
ततः शुभतरं वाक्यमुवाच हरिपुङ्गवः ॥ ४ ॥

Reflecting on Śrī Rāma’s reply and also repeating it, Sugrīva, the foremost of monkeys, for his part thereupon immediately made the following eminently suitable submission: (4)

स दुष्टो वाप्यदुष्टो वा किमेष रजनीचरः ।
ईदृशं व्यसनं प्राप्तं भ्रातरं यः परित्यजेत् ॥ ५ ॥

“What does it matter if he is wicked or otherwise? He is a ranger of the night after all. When he can desert his own half-brother, fallen in such adversity, there is none on earth whom he would not betray.” (5)

को नाम स भवेत् तस्य यमेष न परित्यजेत् ।
वानराधिपतेर्वाक्यं श्रुत्वा सर्वानुदीक्ष्य तु ॥ ६ ॥
ईषदुत्समयमानस्तु लक्ष्मणं पुण्यलक्षणम् ।
इति होवाच काकुत्स्थो वाक्यं सत्यपराक्रमः ॥ ७ ॥

Hearing the submission of Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, and looking round on all. Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha) of unfailing prowess smiled and actually for his part spoke as follows, they say, to Lakṣmaṇa of saintly characteristics: (6-7)

अनधीत्य च शास्त्राणि वृद्धाननुपसेव्य च ।
न शक्यमीदृशं वक्तुं यदुवाच हरीश्वरः ॥ ८ ॥

“Without studying scriptures and serving one’s elders it is not possible to utter like what Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, has said. (8)

अस्ति सूक्ष्मतरं किञ्चिद् यथात्र प्रतिभाति मा ।
प्रत्यक्षं लौकिकं चापि वर्तते सर्वराजसु ॥ ९ ॥

“Something which is very subtle, nay, which is patent in all rulers and well known to all, vividly strikes me as present in Vibhīṣaṇa. (9)

अमित्रास्तत्कुलीनाश्च प्रातिदेश्याश्च कीर्तिताः ।
व्यसनेषु प्रहर्तारस्तस्मादयमिहागतः ॥ १० ॥

“One’s own kindred and the rulers of adjoining territories have been declared to be enemies and they strike in times of adversity. Therefore, he has come here. (10)

अपापास्तत्कुलीनाश्च मानयन्ति स्वकान् हितान् ।
एष प्रायो नरेन्द्राणां शङ्कनीयस्तु शोभनः ॥ ११ ॥

“Nay, relatives who are not malevolent look upon their own people as friend. In the case of kings (lit., rules of men), however, a kinsman is often worth suspecting, even though virtuous. (11)

यस्तु दोषस्त्वया प्रोक्तो ह्यादानेऽरिबलस्य च ।
तत्र ते कीर्तयिष्यामि यथाशास्त्रमिदं शृणु ॥ १२ ॥

“As regards the disadvantage which has actually been pointed out by you in accepting as one’s own an individual of the hostile party, I shall presently make a reply in conformity with the scriptures; please listen to it. (12)

न वयं तत्कुलीनाश्च राज्यकाङ्क्षी च राक्षसः ।
पण्डिता हि भविष्यन्ति तस्माद् ग्राह्यो विभीषणः ॥ १३ ॥

“We are not his relatives for that matter, while the ogre is covetous of sovereignty. Ogres are learned too sometimes; hence Vibhīṣaṇa is worth accepting. (13)

अव्यग्राश्च प्रहृष्टाश्च ते भविष्यन्ति संगताः ।
प्रणादश्च महानेषोऽन्योन्यस्य भयमागतम् ।
इति भेदं गमिष्यन्ति तस्माद् ग्राह्यो विभीषणः ॥ १४ ॥

“When united with us, they (Vibhīṣaṇa and others) will feel free from anxiety and highly rejoiced. Nay, this loud appeal of theirs for protection shows that fear of one another has seized the orges. In this way they will fall a prey to dissension. Hence Vibhīṣaṇa is deserving of acceptance. (14)

न सर्वे भ्रातरस्तात भवन्ति भरतोपमाः ।
मद्विधा वा पितुः पुत्राः सुहृदो वा भवद्विधाः ॥ १५ ॥

“All brothers, O dear Sugrīva, are not like Bharata, nor are all sons of a father like me, nor again are all friends like you.” (15)

एवमुक्तस्तु रामेण सुग्रीवः सहलक्ष्मणः ।
उत्थायेदं महाप्राज्ञः प्रणतो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ १६ ॥

“Getting up alongwith Lakṣmaṇa, when told as aforesaid by Śrī Rāma, Sugrīva, for his part, who was exceptionally sagacious, meekly submitted as follows: (16)

रावणेन प्रणिहितं तमवेहि निशाचरम् ।
तस्याहं निग्रहं मन्ये क्षमं क्षमवतां वर ॥ १७ ॥

“Know this ranger of the night to have been dispatched by Rāvaṇa. I, therefore, consider it advisable to take him captive, O prince of the righteous actions! (17)

राक्षसो जिह्याया बुद्ध्या संदिष्टोऽयमिहागतः ।
प्रहर्तुं त्वयि विश्वस्ते विश्वस्ते मयि वानघ ॥ १८ ॥
लक्ष्मणे वा महाबाहो स वध्यः सचिवैः सह ।
रावणस्य नृशंसस्य भ्राता ह्येष विभीषणः ॥ १९ ॥

“Prompted by a perfidious motive, this ogre has come here as directed by Rāvaṇa to deliver a blow at you when you are unsuspecting or at me when I stand inspired with confidence in him, or even at Lakṣmaṇa, O sinless one! He, therefore, deserves to be killed with his ministers. Yonder Vibhīṣaṇa indeed is a brother of the cruel Rāvaṇa, O mighty-armed prince!" (18-19)

एवमुक्त्वा रघुश्रेष्ठं सुग्रीवो वाहिनीपतिः ।

वाक्यज्ञो वाक्यकुशलं ततो मौनमुपागमत् ॥ २० ॥

Having submitted as aforesaid to Śrī Rāma (the foremost of the Raghus), who knew how to speak, Sugrīva then assumed silence. (20)

स सुग्रीवस्य तद् वाक्यं रामः श्रुत्वा विमृश्य च ।

ततः शुभतरं वाक्यमुवाच हरिपुङ्गवम् ॥ २१ ॥

Having heard and pondered the aforesaid submission of Sugrīva, Śrī Rāma thereupon addressed the following reply, which was nobler still, to Sugrīva, a bull among monkeys: (21)

स दुष्टो वाप्यदुष्टो वा किमेष रजनीचरः ।

सूक्ष्ममप्यहितं कर्तुं मम शक्तः कथंचन ॥ २२ ॥

"Be he malevolent or otherwise, is this ranger of the night capable of doing the subtlest mischief to me in any way? (22)

पिशाचान् दानवान् यक्षान् पृथिव्यां चैव राक्षसान् ।

अङ्गुल्यग्रेण तान् हन्यामिच्छन् हरिगणेश्वर ॥ २३ ॥

"I can, if I so desire, kill with my finger-tip all the well-known fiends, Dānavas, Yakṣas and ogres on earth, O ruler of monkey hordes! (23)

श्रूयते हि कपोतेन शत्रुः शरणमागतः ।

अर्चितश्च यथान्यायं स्वैश्च मांसैर्निमन्त्रितः ॥ २४ ॥

"It is related how while chasing a dove, a fowler (its enemy), arrived under the tree which served as its abode, was kindly received according to the rules of hospitality and further actually served with its own flesh. (24)

स हि तं प्रतिजग्राह भार्याहर्तारमागतम् ।

कपोतो वानरश्रेष्ठ किं पुनर्मद्विधो जनः ॥ २५ ॥

"The aforesaid dove actually received with kindness the fowler, even as he came near it, although he had carried away its mate (after catching it in a snare), O Jewel among monkeys! Much more should a man like myself do so. (25)

ऋषेः कण्वस्य पुत्रेण कण्डुना परमर्षिणा ।

शृणु गाथा पुरा गीता धर्मिष्ठा सत्यवादिना ॥ २६ ॥

"Hark! There is a string of sacred verses inculcating virtue and sung in the past by an eminent Ṛṣi (the seer of Vedic Mantras), son of Sage Kaṇva, Kaṇḍu by name, who always spoke the truth: (26)

बद्धाञ्जलिपुटं दीनं याचन्तं शरणागतम् ।

न हन्यादानृशंस्यार्थमपि शत्रुं परंतप ॥ २७ ॥

"In the name of humanity one should not strike even an enemy arrived at one's door and piteously solicting protection with joined palms, O scourge of your enemies! (27)

आर्तो वा यदि वा दृप्तः परेषां शरणं गतः ।

अरिः प्राणान् परित्यज्य रक्षितव्यः कृतात्मना ॥ २८ ॥

"An enemy come for protection against his enemies, be he distressed or even proud, should be protected even at the cost of one's life by one who has subdued one's mind. (28)

स चेद् भयाद् वा मोहाद् वा कामाद् वापि न रक्षति ।

स्वया शक्त्या यथान्यायं तत् पापं लोकगर्हितम् ॥ २९ ॥

"If from fear or folly or even from desire (of some gain) a man does not justly protect a refugee according to his capacity, the sin incurred by him is despised in the world. (29)

विनष्टः पश्यतस्तस्य रक्षिणः शरणं गतः ।

आनाय सुकृतं तस्य सर्वं गच्छेदरक्षितः ॥ ३० ॥

"If, remaining unprotected, a refugee perishes before the eyes of the man who is able to protect him, the former takes away all his merit. (30)

एवं दोषो महानत्र प्रपन्नानामरक्षणे ।

अस्वर्ग्यं चायशस्यं च बलवीर्यविनाशनम् ॥ ३१ ॥

"In this way a major sin is incurred by failure to protect refugees under such circumstances; for such failure shuts out heaven, brings infamy and puts an end to one's strength and virility. (31)

करिष्यामि यथार्थं तु कण्डोर्वचनमुत्तमम् ।
धर्मिष्ठं च यशस्यं च स्वर्ग्यं स्यात् तु फलोदये ॥ ३२ ॥

“I shall follow the excellent counsel of Kaṇḍu, which is in accordance with facts, is exceedingly righteous and is conducive to fame in this world and actually leads to heaven (after death) at the time of reward.
(32)

सकृदेव प्रपन्नाय तवास्मीति च याचते ।
अभयं सर्वभूतेभ्यो ददाम्येतद् व्रतं मम ॥ ३३ ॥

“I vouchsafe security against all living beings to him who comes to me only once and seeks protection from me, saying ‘I am yours’: such is my vow.
(33)

आनयैनं हरिश्रेष्ठ दत्तमस्याभयं मया ।
विभीषणो वा सुग्रीव यदि वा रावणः स्वयम् ॥ ३४ ॥

“Bring him hither, O Jewel among monkeys, be he Vibhiṣaṇa or Rāvaṇa himself, O Sugrīva! Security has already been granted in his favour by me.”
(34)

रामस्य तु वचः श्रुत्वा सुग्रीवः प्लवगेश्वरः ।
प्रत्यभाषत काकुत्स्थं सौहार्देनाभिपूरितः ॥ ३५ ॥

Filled with love to hear the speech of Śrī Rāma, Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, for his part replied as follows to Śrī Rāma,
a scion of Kakutstha:
(35)

किमत्र चित्रं धर्मज्ञ लोकनाथशिखामणे ।
यत् त्वमार्यं प्रभाषेथाः सत्त्ववान् सत्पथे स्थितः ॥ ३६ ॥

“What wonder, O crest-jewel of kings

(lit., protectors of the world), the knower of what is right, that you have spoken aright at this moment, full of goodness as you are and devoted to the path of the virtuous. (36)

मम चाप्यन्तरात्मायं शुद्धं वेत्ति विभीषणम् ।
अनुमानाच्च भावाच्च सर्वतः सुपरीक्षितः ॥ ३७ ॥

“This inner mind of mine too knows Vibhiṣaṇa to be sincere; moreover, he has also been fully tested in every way by Hanumān by recourse to inference based on his expression revealing the unperturbed state of his mind, by recourse to inference based on his expression revealing the unperturbed state of his mind. (37)

तस्मात् क्षिप्रं सहास्माभिस्तुल्यो भवतु राघव ।
विभीषणो महाप्राज्ञः सखित्वं चाभ्युपैतु नः ॥ ३८ ॥

“Therefore, let the highly sagacious Vibhiṣaṇa soon be in our company on equal terms with us. O scion of Raghu, and enjoy our friendship.”
(38)

ततस्तु सुग्रीववचो निशम्य त-द्धरीश्वरेणाभिहितं नरेश्वरः ।
विभीषणेनाशु जगाम संगमं
पतत्रिराजेन यथा पुरंदरः ॥ ३९ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid submission of Sugrīva, Śrī Rāma, a ruler of men, for his part thereupon speedily arranged a meeting with Vibhiṣaṇa as suggested by the lord of monkeys, even as Indra (a destroyer of strongholds) contrived a meeting with Garuḍa, the king of birds. (39)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टादशः सर्गः ॥ १८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनविंशः सर्गः

Canto XIX

Falling at the feet of Śrī Rāma on coming down to the earth alongwith his ministers, when he had received an assurance of safety from Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa submits to the former that, having been reprimanded by his eldest brother, Rāvaṇa, he has sought refuge with him, and on being questioned by Śrī Rāma tells him everything about Rāvaṇa.

राघवेणाभये दत्ते संनतो रावणानुजः ।
विभीषणो महाप्राज्ञो भूमिं समवलोकयत् ॥ १ ॥
खात् पपातावनिं हृष्टो भक्तैरनुचरैः सह ।
स तु रामस्य धर्मात्मा निपपात विभीषणः ॥ २ ॥
पादयोर्निपपाताथ चतुर्भिः सह राक्षसैः ।
अब्रवीच्च तदा वाक्यं रामं प्रति विभीषणः ॥ ३ ॥
धर्मयुक्तं च युक्तं च साम्प्रतं सम्प्रहर्षणम् ।
अनुजो रावणस्याहं तेन चास्म्यवमानितः ॥ ४ ॥
भवन्तं सर्वभूतानां शरण्यं शरणं गतः ।
परित्यक्ता मया लङ्का मित्राणि च धनानि च ॥ ५ ॥

An assurance of safety having been vouchsafed by Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the highly sagacious Vibhīṣaṇa, the younger brother of Rāvaṇa, who had bent low in submission, surveyed the earth below and descended joyously from the airspace to the ground with his devoted followers. The aforesaid Vibhīṣaṇa for his part, whose mind was set on virtue, fell prostrate at the feet of Śrī Rāma. Nay, he did so with all the four other ogres who had accompanied him. Again, Vibhīṣaṇa addressed to Śrī Rāma on that occasion the following appeal, which was full of righteousness, reasonable, opportune and thrilling: 'I am the youngest brother of Rāvaṇa and, having been insulted by him, have sought you, who are capable of affording shelter to all created beings, as my refuge. The city of Laṅkā has been abandoned by me as also my friends and possessions.

(1—5)

भवद्गतं हि मे राज्यं जीवितं च सुखानि च ।
तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा रामो वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ६ ॥
वचसा सान्त्वयित्वैनं लोचनाभ्यां पिबन्निव ।
आख्याहि मम तत्त्वेन राक्षसानां बलाबलम् ॥ ७ ॥

'My sovereignty, nay, even life and amenities are now centred in you.' Hearing his aforesaid appeal, and soothing him with his speech, Śrī Rāma spoke as follows, drinking him, as it were, with his eyes, full of love: "Please let me know in truth the strength as well as the weakness of the ogres."

(6-7)

एवमुक्तं तदा रक्षो रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
रावणस्य बलं सर्वमाख्यातुमुपचक्रमे ॥ ८ ॥

Commanded in these words by Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, the ogre, Vibhīṣaṇa, forthwith proceeded to recount as follows the entire strength of Rāvaṇa:

(8)

अवध्यः सर्वभूतानां गन्धर्वोरगपक्षिणाम् ।
राजपुत्र दशग्रीवो वरदानात् स्वयम्भुवः ॥ ९ ॥

"By virtue of a special boon granted by Brahmā (the self-born creator), O prince, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, is incapable of being killed by all created beings including Gandharvas (celestial musicians), serpents and birds.

(9)

रावणानन्तरो भ्राता मम ज्येष्ठश्च वीर्यवान् ।
कुम्भकर्णो महातेजाः शक्रप्रतिबलो युधि ॥ १० ॥

"My powerful elder brother, Kumbhakarna, who is younger to Rāvaṇa and is endowed with extraordinary prowess, is a match only for Indra, the ruler of gods, in combat. (10)

राम सेनापतिस्तस्य प्रहस्तो यदि ते श्रुतः ।
कैलासे येन समरे मणिभद्रः पराजितः ॥ ११ ॥

“His commander-in-chief, O Rāma, is Prahasta, by whom Manibhadra, the commander of Kubera’s forces, was vanquished in an encounter on Mount Kailāsa. May be you have heard about him. (11)

बद्धगोधाङ्गुलित्राणस्त्ववध्यकवचो युधि ।
धनुरादाय यस्तिष्ठन्नदृश्यो भवतीन्द्रजित् ॥ १२ ॥

“Indrajit, Rāvaṇa’s eldest son, who remains furnished with gloves made of the skin of an Iguana (to prevent injury from the bowstring) and protected with an invulnerable armour on the field of battle, goes out of sight while standing with a bow in hand. (12)

संग्रामे सुमहद्व्यूहे तर्पयित्वा हुताशनम् ।
अन्तर्धानगतः श्रीमानिन्द्रजिद्वन्ति राघव ॥ १३ ॥

“Having propitiated the god of fire (the consumer of oblations), O scion of Raghu, the glorious Indrajit strikes the enemy while remaining invisible on the field of battle with a huge military array (on both sides). (13)

महोदरमहापाश्वौ राक्षसश्चाप्यकम्पनः ।
अनीकपास्तु तस्यैते लोकपालसमा युधि ॥ १४ ॥

“Mahodara and Mahāpārśwa and the ogre Akampana, who vie with the guardians of the world in combat—they are commanders of his army. (14)

दशकोटिसहस्राणि रक्षसां कामरूपिणाम् ।
मांसशोणितभक्ष्याणां लङ्कापुरनिवासिनाम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Ten thousand crores (a hundred thousand millions ogres, able to change their form at will, living on flesh and blood, inhabit the city of Laṅkā. (15)

स तैस्तु सहितो राजा लोकपालानयोधयत् ।
सह देवैस्तु ते भग्ना रावणेन दुरात्मना ॥ १६ ॥

“Accompanied by them, their sovereign, Rāvaṇa, for his part gave battle to the guardians of the world. Alongwith the celestials the former for their part were routed by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa.” (16)

विभीषणस्य तु वचस्तच्छ्रुत्वा रघुसत्तमः ।
अन्वीक्ष्य मनसा सर्वमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १७ ॥

Having heard the foregoing report of Vibhiṣana and revolved everything in his mind, Śrī Rāma, the foremost of the Raghus, for his part observed as follows: (17)

यानि कर्मापदानानि रावणस्य विभीषण ।
आख्यातानि च तत्त्वेन ह्यवगच्छामि तान्यहम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Indeed I know, O Vibhiṣana, of the exploits which stand to the credit of Rāvaṇa and which have been recounted in their reality by you. (18)

अहं हत्वा दशग्रीवं सप्रहस्तं सहात्मजम् ।
राजानं त्वां करिष्यामि सत्यमेतच्छ्रुणोतु मे ॥ १९ ॥

“Hark! Killing Rāvaṇa the ten-headed monster along with Prahasta, his commander-in-chief, and the former’s sons. I shall crown you king of Laṅkā; hear this truth from me. (19)

रसातलं वा प्रविशेत् पातालं वापि रावणः ।
पितामहसकाशं वा न मे जीवन् विमोक्ष्यते ॥ २० ॥

“Rāvana may well enter Rasātala, the penultimate subterranean region, or seek the presence of Brahmā (the grandfather of the entire creation, which owes its existence to the ten Prajāpatis or lords of creation, his mind-born sons), he would not be allowed to escape from me alive. (20)

अहत्वा रावणं संख्ये सपुत्रजनबान्धवम् ।
अयोध्यां न प्रवेक्ष्यामि त्रिभिस्तैर्भ्रातृभिः शपे ॥ २१ ॥

“I swear by my three well-known brothers that I shall not return to Ayodhyā without killing Rāvaṇa with his sons, people and kinsfolk in combat.” (21)

श्रुत्वा तु वचनं तस्य रामस्याक्लिष्टकर्मणः ।
शिरसाऽऽबन्ध धर्मात्मा वक्तुमेवं प्रचक्रमे ॥ २२ ॥

Making obeisance with his head bent low on hearing the vow of the aforesaid Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, Vibhīṣaṇa, whose mind was set on virtue, for his part proceeded to submit as follows: (22)

राक्षसानां वधे साह्यं लङ्कायाश्च प्रधर्षणे ।
करिष्यामि यथाप्राणं प्रवेक्ष्यामि च वाहिनीम् ॥ २३ ॥

“I shall with all my strength render assistance to you in killing the ogres and storming Laṅkā and shall also break through the army of ogres.” (23)

इति ब्रुवाणं रामस्तु परिष्वज्य विभीषणम् ।
अब्रवील्लक्ष्मणं प्रीतः समुद्राज्जलमानय ॥ २४ ॥
तेन चेमं महाप्राज्ञमभिषिञ्च्य विभीषणम् ।
राजानं रक्षसां क्षिप्रं प्रसन्ने मयि मानद ॥ २५ ॥

Embracing Vibhīṣaṇa, while he was speaking as aforesaid, Śrī Rāma for his part joyfully said to Lakṣmaṇa, “Please fetch water from the sea and consecrate at once the highly sagacious Vibhīṣaṇa with it as the king of ogres, now that I am happy with him, O bestower of honour on others!” (24-25)

एवमुक्तस्तु सौमित्रिरभ्यषिञ्च्य विभीषणम् ।
मध्ये वानरमुख्यानां राजानं राजशासनात् ॥ २६ ॥

Spoken to in these words by Śrī Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) for his part consecrated Vibhīṣaṇa as the king of ogres in the midst of the foremost of monkeys at the command of his sovereign, Śrī Rāma. (26)

तं प्रसादं तु रामस्य दृष्ट्वा सद्यः प्लवङ्गमाः ।
प्रचुक्रुशुर्महात्मानं साधुसाध्विति चाब्रुवन् ॥ २७ ॥

Seeing this prompt exhibition of grace on the part of Śrī Rāma, the monkeys for their part raised a shout of joy and hailed Śrī Rāma in the words, “Excellent! Excellent!!” (27)

अब्रवीच्च हनूमांश्च सुग्रीवश्च विभीषणम् ।
कथं सागरमक्षोभ्यं तराम वरुणालयम् ।
सैन्यैः परिवृताः सर्वे वानराणां महौजसाम् ॥ २८ ॥

Nay, Hanumān and Sugrīva said to Vibhīṣaṇa, “How shall we all be able to cross the imperturbable sea, the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water, surrounded as we are by hordes of monkeys endowed with extraordinary energy? (28)

उपायैरभिगच्छाम यथा नदनदीपतिम् ।
तराम तरसा सर्वे ससैन्या वरुणालयम् ॥ २९ ॥

“By what means shall we approach Ocean (the lord of rivers and streams), so that we may cross the sea, the abode of Varuṇa, speedily with our troops?” (29)

एवमुक्तस्तु धर्मात्मा प्रत्युवाच विभीषणः ।
समुद्रं राघवो राजा शरणं गन्तुमर्हति ॥ ३० ॥

Questioned thus by Hanumān and Sugrīva, Vibhīṣaṇa, whose mind was set on virtue, replied as follows: “Prince Rāma, a scion of Raghu, ought to seek Ocean as his refuge. (30)

खानितः सगरेणायमप्रमेयो महोदधिः ।
कर्तुमर्हति रामस्य ज्ञातेः कार्यं महोदधिः ॥ ३१ ॥

“This immeasurable ocean was caused to be excavated by king Sagara. Ocean (certainly) ought to accomplish the work of Śrī Rāma, one of his own race.” (31)

एवं विभीषणेनोक्तो राक्षसेन विपश्चिता ।
आजगामाथ सुग्रीवो यत्र रामः सलक्ष्मणः ॥ ३२ ॥

Exhorted thus by the sagacious ogre, Vibhīṣaṇa, Sugrīva immediately arrived where Śrī Rāma, with Lakṣmaṇa, was. (32)

ततश्चाख्यातुमारेभे विभीषणवचः शुभम् ।
सुग्रीवो विपुलग्रीवः सागरस्योपवेशनम् ॥ ३३ ॥

The thick-necked Sugrīva then proceeded to convey the salutary counsel of Vibhīṣaṇa, exhorting Śrī Rāma to approach the sea (to allow him a passage). (33)

प्रकृत्या धर्मशीलस्य रामस्यास्याप्यरोचत ।
सलक्ष्मणं महातेजाः सुग्रीवं च हरीश्वरम् ॥ ३४ ॥
सत्क्रियार्थं क्रियादक्षं स्मितपूर्वमभाषत ।
विभीषणस्य मन्त्रोऽयं मम लक्ष्मण रोचते ॥ ३५ ॥

The counsel of Vibhiṣaṇa appealed even to Śrī Rāma, who was given to piety by nature and was capable of affording shelter to the whole universe. In order to do honour to Sugrīva, Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, smilingly spoke as follows to Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, who was skilled in action, as well as to Lakṣmaṇa: “This counsel of Vibhiṣaṇa finds favour with me, too, O Lakṣmaṇa ! (34-35)

सुग्रीवः पण्डितो नित्यं भवान् मन्त्रविचक्षणः ।
उभाभ्यां सम्प्रधार्यार्थं रोचते यत् तदुच्यताम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“Surgīva is learned and you too are always adept in giving counsel. Therefore, after fully considering the matter in hand, that which appeals to you both, may please be communicated to me.” (36)

एवमुक्तौ ततो वीराबुधौ सुग्रीवलक्ष्मणौ ।
समुदाचारसंयुक्तमिदं वचनमूचतुः ॥ ३७ ॥

Commanded thus by Śrī Rāma, both the heroes, Sugrīva and Lakṣmaṇa, made the following respectful reply: (37)

किमर्थं नौ नरव्याघ्र न रोचिष्यति राघव ।
विभीषणेन यत् तूक्तमस्मिन् काले सुखावहम् ॥ ३८ ॥

“Wherefore, O tiger among men, will the counsel, which has actually been given by Vibhiṣaṇa at this moment and which is conducive to happiness, not find favour with us, O scion of Raghu? (38)

अबद्ध्वा सागरे सेतुं घोरेऽस्मिन् वरुणालये ।
लङ्का नासादितुं शक्या सेन्द्रैरपि सुरासुरैः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Without throwing a bridge over this dread sea, the abode of Varuṇa (the god of water), Laṅkā will remain inaccessible even to gods and demons, including Indra, the ruler of gods. (39)

विभीषणस्य शूरस्य यथार्थं क्रियतां वचः ।
अलं कालात्ययं कृत्वा सागरोऽयं नियुज्यताम् ।
यथा सैन्येन गच्छाम पुरीं रावणपालिताम् ॥ ४० ॥

“Let the advice of the valiant Vibhiṣaṇa, which is in consonance with facts, be carried out. It is no use losing time; let Ocean over there be requested to help us so that we may reach the city protected by Rāvaṇa with our army.” (40)

एवमुक्तः कुशास्तीर्णे तीरे नदनदीपतेः ।
संविवेश तदा रामो वेद्यामिव हुताशनः ॥ ४१ ॥

Exhorted thus, Śrī Rāma forthwith sat on the shore of the ocean (the lord of rivers and streams), overspread with blades of the sacred Kuśa grass, even as fire finds its place on a sacrificial altar. (41)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनविंशः सर्गः ॥ १९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Nineteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

विंशः सर्गः

Canto XX

Told by an ogre, Śārdūla by name, that an army of monkeys led by Sugrīva was advancing towards Laṅkā, Rāvaṇa dispatched an ogre, Śuka by name, as an envoy to carry his message to Sugrīva. While commencing to deliver the message to Sugrīva, Śuka is captured by the monkeys; but Śrī Rāma causes him to be set free and he delivers the message to Sugrīva

ततो निविष्टां ध्वजिनीं सुग्रीवेणाभिपालिताम् ।
ददर्श राक्षसोऽभ्येत्य शार्दूलो नाम वीर्यवान् ॥ १ ॥
चारो राक्षसराजस्य रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ।
तां दृष्ट्वा सर्वतोऽव्यग्रां प्रतिगम्य स राक्षसः ॥ २ ॥
आविश्य लङ्कां वेगेन राजानमिदमब्रवीत् ।
एष वै वानरक्षौघो लङ्कां समभिवर्तते ॥ ३ ॥
अगाधश्चाप्रमेयश्च द्वितीय इव सागरः ।
पुत्रौ दशरथस्येमौ भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ४ ॥
उत्तमौ रूपसम्पन्नौ सीतायाः पदमागतौ ।
एतौ सागरमासाद्य संनिविष्टौ महाद्युते ॥ ५ ॥

Going near the army, defended on all sides by Sugrīva, in the meantime, a powerful ogre, Śārdūla by name, a spy of the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, beheld it camping there. Seeing it undisturbed on all sides and turning back, nay, entering Laṅkā with speed, the said ogre submitted to the king as follows: "Deep and immeasurable like another sea, this flood of monkeys and bears is heading towards Laṅkā. Those two brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, son of Daśaratha, foremost warriors, richly endowed with charm, have come to the succour of Sitā. Having reached the seashore, they have camped there, O ogre, endowed with extraordinary splendour! (1—5)

बलं चाकाशमावृत्य सर्वतो दशयोजनम् ।
तत्त्वभूतं महाराज क्षिप्रं वेदितुमर्हसि ॥ ६ ॥

"Nay, the army roughly covers a space of ten Yojanas (or eighty miles) in all directions. You ought to ascertain the real situation immediately. O great monarch! (6)

तव दूता महाराज क्षिप्रमर्हन्ति वेदितुम् ।
उपप्रदानं सान्त्वं वा भेदो वात्र प्रयुज्यताम् ॥ ७ ॥

"Your spies ought to know things quickly, O eminent king! The expedient of restitution or conciliation or sowing dissension in the enemy's ranks may then be employed, as you deem fit under such circumstances." (7)

शार्दूलस्य वचः श्रुत्वा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
उवाच सहसा व्यग्रः सम्प्रधार्यार्थमात्मनः ।
शुकं साधु तदा रक्षो वाक्यमर्थविदां वरम् ॥ ८ ॥

Perturbed all at once to hear the report of Śārdūla and instantly determining his course of action, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, forthwith addressed the following well-chosen words to the ogre Śuka, the foremost of those who know their duty: (8)

सुग्रीवं ब्रूहि गत्वाऽऽशु राजानं वचनान्मम ।
यथासंदेशमक्लीबं श्लक्ष्णया परया गिरा ॥ ९ ॥

"Departing at once, speak boldly to king Sugrīva on my behalf in a gentle and excellent tone according to my command, as follows: (9)

त्वं वै महाराजकुलप्रसूतो
महाबलश्चर्क्षरजःसुतश्च ।
न कश्चनार्थस्तव नास्त्यनर्थ-स्तथापि मे भ्रातृसमो हरीश ॥ १० ॥

"Born in a race of eminent kings, you are also endowed with extraordinary might and are a son of Ṛkṣarajā. No gain whatsoever nor any harm has accrued to you from me; nonetheless, you are like a brother to me O lord of monkeys! (10)

अहं यद्यहरं भार्या राजपुत्रस्य धीमतः ।
किं तत्र तव सुग्रीव किष्किन्धां प्रति गम्यताम् ॥ ११ ॥

“If I bore away the consort of the sagacious prince, what harm have I done to you thereby, O Sugrīvā? Therefore, return to Kiṣkindhā. (11)

नहीयं हरिभिर्लङ्का प्राप्तुं शक्या कथंचन ।
देवैरपि सगन्धर्वैः किं पुनर्नवानरैः ॥ १२ ॥

“Surely this Laṅka cannot be reached by any means by the monkeys. It cannot be acquired even by gods accompanied by Gandharvas (celestial musicians), much less by human beings and monkeys.” (12)

स तदा राक्षसेन्द्रेण संदिष्टो रजनीचरः ।
शुको विहंगमो भूत्वा तूर्णमाप्लुत्य चाम्बरम् ॥ १३ ॥

Turning into a bird when commanded as aforesaid by Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, the ogre Śuka rose apace in the air at that moment. (13)

स गत्वा दूरमध्वानमुपर्युपरि सागरम् ।
संस्थितो ह्यम्बरे वाक्यं सुग्रीवमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ १४ ॥

Nay, having flown a long way over the sea close to it, and remaining actually stationed in airspace, he delivered the aforesaid message to Sugrīva. (14)

सर्वमुक्तं यथाऽऽदिष्टं रावणेन दुरात्मना ।
तत् प्रापयन्तं वचनं तूर्णमाप्लुत्य वानराः ॥ १५ ॥
प्रापयन्त तदा क्षिप्रं लोभुं हन्तुं च मुष्टिभिः ।
सर्वैः प्लवंगैः प्रसभं निगृहीतो निशाचरः ॥ १६ ॥

Quickly springing up, even while the ogre was delivering that entire message given by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, as directed, the monkeys forthwith proceeded at that moment to tear off his wings and smite him with their fists. The ranger of the night was violently punished by the monkeys. (15-16)

गगनाद् भूतले चाशु प्रतिगृह्यावतारितः ।
वानरैः पीड्यमानस्तु शुको वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १७ ॥

Nay, after seizing him he was speedily brought down to the ground from the airspace. While being oppressed by the monkeys, Śuka, for his part, spoke as follows: (17)

न दूतान् घ्नन्ति काकुत्स्थ वार्यन्तां साधु वानराः ।
यस्तु हित्वा मतं भर्तुः स्वमतं सम्प्रधारयेत् ।
अनुक्तवादी दूतः सन् स दूतो वधमर्हति ॥ १८ ॥

“Kings do not kill envoys, O scion of Kakutstha! Let, therefore, the monkeys be effectively kept back. That envoy who, having abandoned the path chalked out by his master, gives utterance to his own view, is an envoy guilty of uttering that which has not been communicated through him, and merits death.” (18)

शुकस्य वचनं रामः श्रुत्वा तु परिदेवितम् ।
उवाच मावधिष्टेति घ्नतः शाखामृगर्षभान् ॥ १९ ॥

Hearing the plaintive appeal of Śuka, Śrī Rāma for his part spoke to the monkey leaders, who were belabouring him, saying, “(Please) do not kill him.” (19)

स च पत्रलघुर्भूत्वा हरिभिर्दर्शितेऽभये ।
अन्तरिक्षे स्थितो भूत्वा पुनर्वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २० ॥

Gaining speed with his wings on immunity having been granted to him by the monkeys, and remaining stationed in the airspace, Śuka now spoke again as follows: (20)

सुग्रीव सत्त्वसम्पन्न महाबलपराक्रम ।
किं मया खलु वक्तव्यो रावणो लोकरावणः ॥ २१ ॥

“In what words has Rāvaṇa, who makes people cry by his high-handedness, actually to be addressed by me on your behalf, O Sugrīva, who are full of spirit and endowed with extraordinary might and prowess?” (21)

स एवमुक्तः प्लवगाधिपस्तदा
प्लवंगमानामृषभो महाबलः ।
उवाच वाक्यं रजनीचरस्य
चारं शुकं शुद्धमदीनसत्त्वः ॥ २२ ॥

Spoken to as aforesaid, Sugrīva, the Suzerain lord of monkeys, the foremost of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary strength and undepressed in spirit, forthwith made the following faultless reply to Śuka, the spy of the ogre, Rāvaṇa: (22)

न मेऽसि मित्रं न तथानुकम्प्यो
न चोपकर्तासि न मे प्रियोऽसि।
अरिश्च रामस्य सहानुबन्ध-
स्ततोऽसि वालीव वधार्हं वध्यः ॥ २३ ॥

“(Address Rāvana on my behalf as follows:) You are neither my friend nor worthy of commiseration, nor are you my benefactor, nor beloved of me. You are (on the other hand) an enemy of Śrī Rāma and, therefore, merit death with your kinsfolk as Vāli did, O ogre deserving of death! (23)

निहन्म्यहं त्वां ससुतं सबन्धुं
सज्जातिवर्गं रजनीचरेश।
लङ्कां च सर्वा महता बलेन
सर्वैः करिष्यामि समेत्य भस्म ॥ २४ ॥

“Turning up with a large army and all others, I shall make short work of you with your sons and brothers including all your relations, O lord of ogres, and reduce the entire city of Laṅkā to ashes. (24)

न मोक्ष्यसे रावण राघवस्य
सुरैः सहेन्द्रैरपि मूढ गुप्तः।
अन्तर्हितः सूर्यपथं गतोऽपि
तथैव पातालमनुप्रविष्टः।
गिरीशपादाम्बुजसंगतो वा
हतोऽसि रामेण सहानुजस्त्वम् ॥ २५ ॥

“You shall not be spared by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, even though protected by gods including Indra (their ruler), O insensate Rāvaṇa ! You shall be slain by Śrī Rāma with your younger brother, Kumbhakarna, even if you have gone out of sight by virtue of a conjuring trick or risen to the heavens (lit., the sun’s orbit) or, likewise, penetrated deep into Pātāla, the nethermost subterranean region, or taken shelter at the lotus feet of Lord Śiva, the Lord of Kailāsa. (25)

तस्य ते त्रिषु लोकेषु न पिशाचं न राक्षसम्।
त्रातारं नानुपश्यामि न गन्धर्वं न चासुरम् ॥ २६ ॥

“I find no fiend, nor ogre, nor Gandharva, nor demon capable of protecting you as such in all the three worlds, viz., earth, heaven and the intermediate region. (26)

अवधीस्त्वं जरावृद्धं गृधराजं जटायुषम्।
किं नु ते रामसान्निध्ये सकाशे लक्ष्मणस्य च।
हता सीता विशालाक्षी यां त्वं गृह्य न बुध्यसे ॥ २७ ॥

“If you are powerful, why did you kill Jaṭāyu, the king of vultures, who, though long-lived, had been overtaken by old age? Again, why on earth was the large-eyed Sītā not borne away by you in the presence of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa? And having seized hold of Sītā, why don’t you foresee the impending calamity? (27)

महाबलं महात्मानं दुराधर्षं सुरैरपि।
न बुध्यसे रघुश्रेष्ठं यस्ते प्राणान् हरिष्यति ॥ २८ ॥

“Evidently you are not aware of Śrī Rāma (the foremost of the Raghus) being endowed with extraordinary might, high-souled and difficult to overcome even for gods—Śrī Rama, who will (surely) take your life.” (28)

ततोऽब्रवीद् वालिसुतोऽप्यङ्गदो हरिसत्तमः।
नायं दूतो महाराज चारकः प्रतिभाति मे ॥ २९ ॥

Thereupon Aṅgada too, son of Vāli and the foremost of monkeys, said, “This fellow, O great monarch, is no envoy; he appears to be a spy. (29)

तुलितं हि बलं सर्वमनेन तव तिष्ठता।
गृह्यतां मागमल्लङ्गामेतद्धि मम रोचते ॥ ३० ॥

“Your entire strength has surely been gauged by him (even) while standing here. Let him, therefore, be arrested, let him not return to Laṅkā: this indeed finds favour with me.” (30)

ततो राज्ञा समादिष्टाः समुत्पत्य वलीमुखाः।
जगृहुश्च बबन्धुश्च विलपन्तमनाथवत् ॥ ३१ ॥

Springing up, when commanded by their sovereign, the monkeys thereupon captured and bound the ogre, who was wailing all the time like a forlorn creature. (31)

शुकस्तु वानरैश्चण्डैस्तत्र तैः सम्प्रपीडितः ।
व्याचुक्रोश महात्मानं रामं दशरथात्मजम् ।
लप्येते मे बलात् पक्षौ भिद्येते मे तथाक्षिणी ॥ ३२ ॥

Excessively tormented by those furious monkeys, Śuka for his part called out at the top of his voice to the high-souled Śrī Rāma, sprung from the loins of Daśaratha, saying: “My wings are being violently torn off and my eyes are being put out. (32)

यां च रात्रिं मरिष्यामि जाये रात्रिं च यामहम् ।
एतस्मिन्नन्तरे काले यन्मया ह्यशुभं कृतम् ।
सर्वं तदुपपद्येथा जह्यां चेद् यदि जीवितम् ॥ ३३ ॥

“If I lose my life at this juncture, you will indeed take on your head all those sins that have been perpetrated by me during this interval since the night on which I was born till the night on which I shall give up the ghost.” (33)

नाघातयत् तदा रामः श्रुत्वा तत्परिदेवितम् ।
वानरानब्रवीद् रामो मुच्यतां दूत आगतः ॥ ३४ ॥

On hearing his wail, Śrī Rāma did not let him be killed. He said to the monkeys, “Let him be set free; he has come as an envoy.” (34)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे विंशः सर्गः ॥ २० ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXI

When the sea did not, even when requested, allow a passage to Śrī Rāma, who was keen to cross it, nor did the sea-god care to appear in person before him, Śrī Rāma discharges fierce arrows which cause a stir among the creatures inhabiting the sea and make the sea-water overflow

ततः सागरवेलायां दर्भानास्तीर्य राघवः ।
अञ्जलिं प्राङ्मुखः कृत्वा प्रतिशिश्ये महोदधे ॥ १ ॥
बाहुं भुजङ्गभोगाभमुपधायारिसूदनः ।
जातरूपमयैश्चैव भूषणैर्भूषितं पुरा ॥ २ ॥

Spreading blades of the sacred Kuśa grass on the seashore and joining his palms as a mark of respect to the ocean, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the destroyer of his foes, then lay down with his face turned towards the east and using as a pillow his arm, which looked like the coils of a serpent and was adorned in the past with ornaments of gold. (1-2)

मणिकाञ्चनकेयूरमुक्ताप्रवरभूषणैः ।
भुजैः परमनारीणामभिमृष्टमनेकधा ॥ ३ ॥
चन्दनागुरुभिश्चैव पुरस्तादभिसेवितम् ।
बालसूर्यप्रकाशैश्च चन्दनैरुपशोभितम् ॥ ४ ॥
शयने चोत्तमाङ्गेन सीतायाः शोभितं पुरा ।
तक्षकस्येव सम्भोगं गङ्गाजलनिषेवितम् ॥ ५ ॥

संयुगे युगसंकाशं शत्रूणां शोकवर्धनम् ।
 सुहृदां नन्दनं दीर्घं सागरान्तव्यपाश्रयम् ॥ ६ ॥
 अस्यता च पुनः सर्वं ज्याघातविहतत्वचम् ।
 दक्षिणो दक्षिणं बाहुं महापरिघसंनिभम् ॥ ७ ॥
 गोसहस्रप्रदातारं ह्युपधाय भुजं महत् ।
 अद्य मे तरणं वाथ मरणं सागरस्य वा ॥ ८ ॥
 इति रामो धृतिं कृत्वा महाबाहुर्महोदधिम् ।
 अधिशिष्ये च विधिवत् प्रयतो नियतो मुनिः ॥ ९ ॥

Actually using as a pillow his unusually long right-arm, strictly speaking, the portion above the elbow—which resembled a large club and had given away thousands of cows; which had been kneaded more than once (at the time of unction and bath) by the arms of excellent women, full of maternal affection, and which has been adorned with armlets of gems and gold and most excellent jewels of pearls; which was formerly perfumed with sandalwood and aloe and with saffron-pastes emitting the lustre of the rising sun; which was in the past graced by the head of Sītā on the (nuptial) couch covered with a white sheet and having been painted with saffron-paste, resembled the coils of Takṣaka (a serpent whose body has been depicted as possessing a red hue) supported on the water of the Gaṅgā (which is a fitting analogue to the white sheet in point of purity); which heightened the grief of his foes on the field of battle and conduced to the delight of his friends and was long like a yoke and served as a support for the entire earth bounded by the four oceans, and whose skin had been hardened by strokes of the bowstring while it propelled arrows to the left—(nay) having resolved that either the sea would be crossed by him or the sea-god would meet his death at his hands, the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma, who was full of consideration for others, lay down by the ocean with his body, speech and mind duly controlled. (3—9)

तस्य रामस्य सुप्तस्य कुशास्तीर्णे महीतले ।
 नियमादप्रमत्तस्य निशास्तिस्त्रोऽभिजग्मतुः ॥ १० ॥

Three nights actually rolled by even as Śrī Rāma lay on the earth's surface spread with the sacred Kuśa grass, remaining strictly devoted to his sacred vow. (10)

स त्रिरात्रोषितस्तत्र नयज्ञो धर्मवत्सलः ।
 उपासत तदा रामः सागरं सरितां पतिम् ॥ ११ ॥

Having lain down for three nights on that spot, the celebrated Śrī Rāma, who was skilled in policy and was fond of piety, waited on that occasion upon Ocean, the lord of rivers. (11)

न च दर्शयते रूपं मन्दो रामस्य सागरः ।
 प्रयतेनापि रामेण यथार्हमभिपूजितः ॥ १२ ॥

Though honoured according to his worth by the piously disposed Śrī Rāma, the indolent Ocean did not, all the same, manifest his personal form to Śrī Rāma. (12)

समुद्रस्य ततः क्रुद्धो रामो रक्तान्तलोचनः ।
 समीपस्थमुवाचेदं लक्ष्मणं शुभलक्षणम् ॥ १३ ॥

Enraged against Ocean, the outer corners of his eyes turned red. Śrī Rāma thereupon spoke as follows to Lakṣmana, endowed with auspicious bodily marks, who stood near: (13)

अवलेपः समुद्रस्य न दर्शयति यः स्वयम् ।

प्रशमश्च क्षमा चैव आर्जवं प्रियवादिता ॥ १४ ॥

असामर्थ्यफला ह्येते निर्गुणेषु सतां गुणाः ।

आत्मप्रशंसिनं दुष्टं धृष्टं विपरिधावकम् ॥ १५ ॥

सर्वत्रोत्सृष्टदण्डं च लोकः सत्कुरुते नरम् ।

न साम्ना शक्यते कीर्तिनं साम्ना शक्यते यशः ॥ १६ ॥

प्राप्तुं लक्ष्मण लोकेऽस्मिञ्जयो वा रणमूर्धनि ।

अद्य मद्भाणनिर्भगैर्मकरैर्मकरालयम् ॥ १७ ॥

निरुद्धतोयं सौमित्रे प्लवद्भिः पश्य सर्वतः ।

भोगिनां पश्य भोगानि मया भिन्नानि लक्ष्मण ॥ १८ ॥

महाभोगानि मत्स्यानां करिणां च करानिह ।

सशङ्खशुक्तिकाजालं समीनमकरं तथा ॥ १९ ॥

अद्य युद्धेन महता समुद्रं परिशोषये।
क्षमया हि समायुक्तं मामयं मकरालयः ॥ २० ॥
असमर्थं विजानाति धिक् क्षमामीदृशे जने।
न दर्शयति साम्ना मे सागरो रूपमात्मनः ॥ २१ ॥

“Oh the vanity of Ocean, who does not reveal himself in person (before me)! Indeed calmness (forbearance) and forgiveness, also guilelessness and politeness of speech—these virtues of the noble are misconstrued as weakness, when directed towards those bereft of these virtues. The world treats with respect a man who indulges in self-praise, is vile and impudent, runs about advertising himself and uses the rod of punishment everywhere indiscriminately. Neither fame nor popularity nor victory in the forefront of battle can be won in this world through a policy of conciliation, O Lakṣmana! See today the deep (lit., the abode of alligators) with its water screened on all sides by alligators split asunder by my arrows and floating dead, O son of Sumitrā! Also see with your own eyes, O Lakṣmaṇa, the coils of aquatic serpents, the large bodies of alligators as well as the trunks of sea elephants dwelling here divided into parts by me. By waging a formidable war against the deity presiding over it today I shall dry up the sea with its conches and pearl-shells, fishes and alligators. This Ocean (lit., an abode of alligators) accounts me powerless, endowed as I am with forbearance. Out with forbearance shown to such an individual! Due to my mildness the sea does not reveal its personal form before me. (14—21)

चापमानय सौमित्रे शरांश्चाशीविषोपमान्।
समुद्रं शोषयिष्यामि पद्भ्यां यान्तु प्लवंगमाः ॥ २२ ॥
“Therefore, bring me the bow and arrows resembling venomous snake, O son of Sumitrā! I shall presently dry up the sea. Let the monkeys proceed on foot to Lāṅkā. (22)

अद्याक्षोभ्यमपि क्रुद्धः क्षोभयिष्यामि सागरम्।
वेलासु कृतमर्यादं सहस्रोर्मिसमाकुलम् ॥ २३ ॥
“Provoked to anger I shall set into commotion the imperturbable sea, which though riotous with thousands of waves, has its limits fixed in the form of its shores (23)

निर्मर्यादं करिष्यामि सायकैर्वरुणालयम्।
महार्णवं क्षोभयिष्ये महादानवसंकुलम् ॥ २४ ॥
“I shall cause by my arrows the sea (lit., the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water) overstep its bounds and shall set into commotion the ocean, which is overcrowded with mighty demons.” (24)

एवमुक्त्वा धनुष्पाणिः क्रोधविस्फारितेक्षणः।
बभूव रामो दुर्धर्षो युगान्ताग्निरिव ज्वलन् ॥ २५ ॥
Blazing like fire at the end of the world cycle on having spoken thus, his eyes dilated through anger, Śrī Rāma, who held a bow in his hand, assumed the aspect of one who is hard to overcome. (25)

सम्पीड्य च धनुर्घोरं कम्पयित्वा शरैर्जगत्।
मुमोच विशिखानुग्रान् वज्रानिव शतक्रतुः ॥ २६ ॥
Forcibly bending his fearful bow (at one end), nay, gently stringing it and causing the world to tremble with its twang, he discharged fierce arrows as Indra (who is supposed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices as a condition precedent to his attaining that position) would hurl thunderbolts. (26)

ते ज्वलन्तो महावेगास्तेजसा सायकोत्तमाः।
प्रविशन्ति समुद्रस्य जलं वित्रस्तपन्नगम् ॥ २७ ॥
Flaming with lustre his excellent arrows, full of great impetuosity, penetrated deep into the sea-water, striking the serpents with terror. (27)

तोयवेगः समुद्रस्य समीनमकरो महान्।
स बभूव महाघोरः समारुतरवस्तथा ॥ २८ ॥
That great onrush of the sea-water with its fishes and alligators, assumed an exceptionally terrible aspect, attended as it was with the roaring of the wind. (28)

महोर्मिमालाविततः शङ्खशुक्तिसमावृतः ।
सधूमः परिवृत्तोर्मिः सहसासीन्महोदधिः ॥ २९ ॥

The ocean was all of a sudden covered all over with rows of mighty billows and overspread with conches and mothers-of-pearl; it was screened with smoke which rose from the flaming arrows as they entered into the waters and waves began to play on it. (29)

व्यथिताः पन्नगाश्चासन् दीप्तास्या दीमलोचनाः ।
दानवाश्च महावीर्याः पातालतलवासिनः ॥ ३० ॥

Nay, serpents with flaming hoods and burning eyes, as well as Dānavas, who were endowed with extraordinary virility and had their abode in the depths of Pātāla, the nethermost subterranean region, felt oppressed. (30)

ऊर्मयः सिन्धुराजस्य सनक्रमकरास्तथा ।
विन्ध्यमन्दरसंकाशाः समुत्पेतुः सहस्रशः ॥ ३१ ॥

Waves of the ocean (lit., the ruler of rivers), which closely resembled the Vindhya and Mandara mountains in height, rose high in thousands alongwith crocodiles and alligators. (31)

आघूर्णिततरङ्गाघः सम्भ्रान्तोरगराक्षसः ।
उद्धर्तितमहाग्राहः सघोषो वरुणालयः ॥ ३२ ॥

With its multitudes of waves tossed in a whirling motion, the Nāgas and ogres (inhabiting it) excited and huge alligators thrown upwards, the sea (lit., the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water, emitted a roar. (32)

ततस्तु तं राघवमुग्रवेगं
प्रकर्षमाणं धनुरग्रमेयम् ।
सौमित्रिरुत्पत्य विनिःश्वसन्तं
मामेति चोक्त्वा धनुराललम्बे ॥ ३३ ॥

Rushing towards the celebrated Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu)—who in his burning ardour was violently stretching once more his bow, which was immeasurably great, and breathing hard through anger—and saying “no farther, no farther”, Lakṣmaṇa seized hold of the bow. (33)

एतद्विनापि ह्युदधेस्तवाद्य
सम्पत्स्यते वीरतमस्य कार्यम् ।
भवद्विधाः क्रोधवशं न यान्ति
दीर्घं भवान् पश्यतु साधुवृत्तम् ॥ ३४ ॥

“Your purpose of taking the monkeys across the sea will surely be accomplished today (he continued) even without drying up the sea, the greatest hero as you are. People like you do not fall under the sway of anger. Therefore, devise some other noble and durable way of taking your army across the sea.” (34)

अन्तर्हितैश्चापि तथान्तरिक्षे
ब्रह्मर्षिभिश्चैव सुरर्षिभिश्च ।
शब्दः कृतः कष्टमिति ब्रुवद्भि-
र्मांमेति चोक्त्वा महता स्वरेण ॥ ३५ ॥

Nay, an alarm was raised at a high pitch by Brāhmaṇa Ṛṣis and celestial Ṛṣis too, who stood invisible in the sky, saying “Woe is me!” and crying “Hold! Hold!!” (35)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकविंशः सर्गः ॥ २१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्वाविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXII

Seized with terror to see a missile presided over by Brahmā
 (the creator) fitted to his bow by Śrī Rāma in fury, and appearing in person with joined palms, the sea-god undertakes to sustain on his bosom a bridge to be constructed by Nala, and goes out of sight. Nala accordingly builds a bridge across the sea

अथोवाच रघुश्रेष्ठः सागरं दारुणं वचः।
 अद्य त्वां शोषयिष्यामि सपातालं महार्णव ॥ १ ॥

Śrī Rāma (the foremost of the Raghus) then administered the following formidable threat to the god presiding over the sea:
 “I shall dry you up today with Pātāla
 (the nethermost subterranean region), O
 Ocean! (1)

शरनिर्दग्धतोयस्य परिशुष्कस्य सागर।
 मया निहतसत्त्वस्य पांसुरुत्पद्यते महान् ॥ २ ॥

“A vast stretch of sand will appear where you are when your water has been dried by my shaft, nay you have turned completely dry and the creatures inhabiting you have been wiped out by me, O Ocean! (2)

मत्कार्मुकविसृष्टेन शरवर्षेण सागर।
 परं तीरं गमिष्यन्ति पद्भिरेव प्लवंगमाः ॥ ३ ॥

“When you are reduced to this plight by a shower of shafts discharged from my bow, the monkeys shall cross to the other shore on foot, O Ocean! (3)

विचिन्वन्नाभिजानासि पौरुषं नापि विक्रमम्।
 दानवालय संतापं मत्तो नाम गमिष्यसि ॥ ४ ॥

“Storing, as you do, water disgorged by rivers, you are neither aware of my virility nor of my prowess, O abode of the Dānavas! As such you shall undoubtedly suffer agony at my hands.” (4)

ब्राह्मेणास्त्रेण संयोज्य ब्रह्मदण्डनिभं शरम्।
 संयोज्य धनुषि श्रेष्ठे विचकर्ष महाबलः ॥ ५ ॥

Fitting to his excellent bow an arrow, which resembled in severity the rod of Brahmā
 (the creator), after charging it with the potency of a missile presided over by Brahmā, Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary might, stretched it with vehemence. (5)

तस्मिन् विकृष्टे सहसा राघवेण शरासने।
 रोदसी सम्पफालेव पर्वताश्च चकम्पिरे ॥ ६ ॥

When that bow was stretched with full force all at once, heaven and earth seemed to be riven and the mountains shook. (6)

तमश्च लोकमावत्रे दिशश्च न चकाशिरे।
 प्रतिचक्षुभिरे चाशु सरांसि सरितस्तथा ॥ ७ ॥

Nay, darkness enveloped the world, and the quarters could not be distinguished.
 Nay, the lakes as well as the rivers felt agitated at once. (7)

तिर्यक् च सह नक्षत्रैः संगतौ चन्द्रभास्करो।
 भास्करांशुभिरादीप्तं तमसा च समावृतम् ॥ ८ ॥

Nay, the moon and the sun alongwith the lunar mansions moved obliquely from south to north instead of from east to west.
 And, though lit by the rays of the sun, the sky was fully enveloped in darkness. (8)

प्रचकाशे तदाऽऽकाशमुल्काशतविदीपितम्।
 अन्तरिक्षाच्च निर्घाता निर्जग्मुरतुलस्वनाः ॥ ९ ॥

Illumined by hundreds of meteors

(appearing all of a sudden), the sky then blazed forth. And, accompanied by unparalleled peals of thunder, flashes of lightning shot forth from the sky. (9)

वपुःप्रकर्षेण ववुर्दिव्यमारुतपङ्क्तयः ।

बभञ्ज च तदा वृक्षाञ्जलदानुद्वहन्मुहुः ॥ १० ॥

A great number of celestial winds known by the names of Parivaha and so on, blew with great vehemence. Nay, sweeping away clouds before them, the winds now tore up the trees again and again. (10)

आरुजंश्चैव शैलाग्रान् शिखराणि बभञ्ज च ।

दिवि च स्म महामेघाः संहताः समहास्वनाः ॥ ११ ॥

मुमुचुर्वैद्युतानग्नींस्ते महाशनयस्तदा ।

यानि भूतानि दृश्यानि चुक्रुशुश्चाशनेः समम् ॥ १२ ॥

अदृश्यानि च भूतानि मुमुचुर्भैरवस्वनम् ।

शिश्नियरे चाभिभूतानि संत्रस्तान्युद्विजन्ति च ॥ १३ ॥

Nay, chopping off the points of rocks, they pulled down mountain-peaks. In the sky mighty flashes of lightning, forming one mass, nay, possessing extraordinary velocity and accompanied by loud peals of thunder, shot fires of lightning. Beings which could be seen roared like thunder; while those which could not be seen emitted fearful cries. Thrown into confusion by the peals of thunder, greatly alarmed and trembling with fear, they lay prostrate. (11—13)

सम्प्रविव्यथिरे चापि न च पस्पन्दिरे भयात् ।

सह भूतैः सतोयोर्मिः सनागः सहराक्षसः ॥ १४ ॥

सहसाभूत् ततो वेगाद् भीमवेगो महोदधिः ।

योजनं व्यतिचक्राम वेलामन्यत्र सम्प्लवात् ॥ १५ ॥

Nay, others felt deeply agonized and could not stir through fear. Due to that fury of Śrī Rāma's arrow, the ocean with its mass of water and waves, the creatures inhabiting it, its serpents and ogres suddenly exhibited a terrible vehemence and surged beyond its confines to the extent of a Yojana (or eight miles), even though the final Deluge had not yet come. (14-15)

तं तथा समतिक्रान्तं नातिचक्राम राघवः ।

समुद्धतममित्रघ्नो रामो नदनदीपतिम् ॥ १६ ॥

Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the destroyer of his foes, did not retreat before the overweening Ocean (lit., the lord of rivers and streams), even though it had thus fully transgressed its limits. (16)

ततो मध्यात् समुद्रस्य सागरः स्वयमुत्थितः ।

उदयाद्रिमहाशैलान्मेरोरिव दिवाकरः ॥ १७ ॥

Then rose Ocean himself from mid sea even as the sun would emerge from behind the huge eastern mountain associated with the rising of the sun, an offshoot of Mount Meru. (17)

पन्नगैः सह दीप्तास्यैः समुद्रः प्रत्यदृश्यत ।

स्निग्धवैदूर्यसंकाशो जाम्बूनदविभूषणः ॥ १८ ॥

Shining brightly like a glossy cat's eye and decked with jewels inlaid in gold, the sea-god appeared in person in the company of serpents with flaming hoods. (18)

रक्तमाल्याम्बरधरः पद्मपत्रनिभेक्षणः ।

सर्वपुष्पमयीं दिव्यां शिरसा धारयन् स्रजम् ॥ १९ ॥

He was clad in red robes and wore a garland of red flowers, his eyes resembled the petals of a lotus and he bore on his head a celestial wreath of all kinds of flowers. (19)

जातरूपमयैश्चैव तपनीयविभूषणैः ।

आत्मजानां च रत्नानां भूषितो भूषणोत्तमैः ॥ २० ॥

धातुभिर्मण्डितः शैलो विविर्धैर्मवानिव ।

एकावलीमध्यगतं तरलं पाण्डरप्रभम् ॥ २१ ॥

विपुलेनोरसा बिभ्रत्कौस्तुभस्य सहोदरम् ।

आघूर्णिततरङ्गौघः कालिकानिलसंकुलः ॥ २२ ॥

गङ्गासिन्धुप्रधानाभिरापगाभिः समावृतः ।

उद्वर्तितमहाग्राहः सम्भ्रान्तोरगराक्षसः ॥ २३ ॥

देवतानां सुरूपाभिर्नानारूपाभिरीश्वरः ।

सागरः समुपक्रम्य पूर्वमामन्य वीर्यवान् ॥ २४ ॥

अब्रवीत् प्राञ्जलिर्वाक्यं राघवं शरपाणिनम् ॥ २५ ॥

Decked with jewels studded in refined gold as also with excellent ornaments of precious stones from his own domain, he looked like the Himālaya mountain embellished with precious minerals. He wore on his broad bosom a prominent jewel shedding a white lustre and resembling the well-known Kaustubha gem adorning the bosom of Lord Viṣṇu, and hanging in the middle of a single string of pearls. With a multitude of waves moving up and down by his side, he was impeded by a mass of clouds and winds and surrounded by deities presiding over rivers headed by the Gaṅgā and the Sindhu (Indus). Duly coming near in the company of the deities presiding over the aforesaid rivers—who were endowed with diverse forms and looked like so many goddesses—and accosting at the outset Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who had an arrow in his hand, the powerful sea-god, their ruler spoke as follows with joined palms, gigantic alligators being tossed up by the waves and serpent-demons as well as orges thrown into confusion: (20—25)

पृथिवी वायुराकाशमापो ज्योतिश्च राघव ।
स्वभावे सौम्य तिष्ठन्ति शाश्वतं मार्गमाश्रिताः ॥ २६ ॥

“Earth, air, ether, water and fire, O gentle scion of Raghu, remain fixed in their nature, abiding, as they do, by the eternal law of nature governing it. (26)

तत्स्वभावो ममाप्येष यदगाधोऽहमप्लवः ।
विकारस्तु भवेद् गाध एतत् ते प्रवदाम्यहम् ॥ २७ ॥

“My nature too, therefore, is such that I am fathomless and incapable of being swum across. Fordability would constitute a deviation from my natural state. Nonetheless, I tell you the following device of crossing me. (27)

न कामान्न च लोभाद् वा न भयात् पार्थिवात्मज ।
ग्राह्नक्राकुलजलं स्तम्भयेयं कथंचन ॥ २८ ॥

“Neither from covetousness, nor from avidity, nor again from fear, O Prince, may I allow, in any case, my waters infested as they are with alligators, and crocodiles, to solidify. (28)

विधास्ये येन गन्तासि विषहिष्येऽप्यहं तथा ।
न ग्राहा विधमिष्यन्ति यावत्सेना तरिष्यति ।
हरीणां तरणे राम करिष्यामि यथा स्थलम् ॥ २९ ॥

“Nevertheless, I shall make arrangements to see that you are able to cross over. I too shall bear everything that way. The alligators shall not be aggressive till the army will have reached the other shore. I shall strive so as to provide a foothold to enable the monkeys to cross over.” (29)

तमब्रवीत् तदा रामः शृणु मे वरुणालय ।
अमोघोऽयं महाबाणः कस्मिन् देशे निपात्यताम् ॥ ३० ॥

Śrī Rāma then said to the sea-god, “Listen to me, O Varuṇa, the god of water! In which region should this mighty and unfailing arrow be directed to descend?” (30)

रामस्य वचनं श्रुत्वा तं च दृष्ट्वा महाशरम् ।
महोदधिर्महातेजा राघवं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ३१ ॥

Hearing the question of Śrī Rāma and perceiving that mighty arrow, Ocean, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu: (31)

उत्तरेणावकाशोऽस्ति कश्चित् पुण्यतरो मम ।
द्रुमकुल्य इति ख्यातो लोके ख्यातो यथा भवान् ॥ ३२ ॥

“To my north there is a very holy region known by the name of Drumakulya and well-known in the world like you. (32)

उग्रदर्शनकर्माणो बहवस्तत्र दस्यवः ।
आभीरप्रमुखाः पापाः पिबन्ति सलिलं मम ॥ ३३ ॥

“Dwelling in that region, numerous sinful marauders of terrible aspect and deeds, the foremost of whom are Ābhirās by caste, drink my waters. (33)

तैर्न तत्स्पर्शनं पापं सहेयं पापकर्मभिः ।
अमोघः क्रियतां राम अयं तत्र शरोत्तमः ॥ ३४ ॥

“I cannot tolerate evil in the form of the contact of my waters with those people of sinful deeds. This excellent shaft may, therefore, be discharged to hit in the region.” (34)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा सागरस्य महात्मनः ।
मुमोच तं शरं दीप्तं परं सागरदर्शनात् ॥ ३५ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid request of the high-souled sea-god, Śrī Rāma let fly that flaming and supreme dart as desired by the former. (35)

तेन तन्मरुकान्तारं पृथिव्यां किल विश्रुतम् ।
निपातितः शरो यत्र वज्राशनिसमप्रभः ॥ ३६ ॥

The region where the dart, which flashed like lighting, was discharged by Śrī Rāma, became for that reason, they say, widely known as Marukāntāra (or Marujaṅgala, roughly extending over the modern territories of Mārwarā and Bikānera in Rājasthāna). (36)

ननाद च तदा तत्र वसुधा शल्यपीडिता ।
तस्माद् व्रणमुखात् तोयमुत्पपात रसातलात् ॥ ३७ ॥

Nay, pierced with the dart, the earth at that time shrieked on that spot. And the waters of Rasātala, the penultimate subterranean region, gushed forth from the mouth of that cleft. (37)

स बभूव तदा कूपो व्रण इत्येव विश्रुतः ।
सततं चोत्थितं तोयं समुद्रस्येव दृश्यते ॥ ३८ ॥

The cleft now turned into a well and became widely known as Vraṇa. The water constantly gushing forth from that well resembles sea-water in brackishness. (38)

अवदारणशब्दश्च दारुणः समपद्यत ।
तस्मात् तद् बाणपातेन अपः कुक्षिष्वशोषयत् ॥ ३९ ॥

A terrible sound vividly issued from the act of cleaving the earth. Through that sound caused by the hurling of that arrow, Śrī Rāma dried up the water existing in the cavities of the earth. (39)

विख्यातं त्रिषु लोकेषु मरुकान्तारमेव च ।
शोषयित्वा तु तं कुक्षिं रामो दशरथात्मजः ॥ ४० ॥
वरं तस्मै ददौ विद्वान् मरवेऽमरविक्रमः ॥ ४१ ॥

The region has ever since been widely known in all the three worlds precisely as Marukāntāra. Having dried up that cavity of the sea, the learned Śrī Rāma, sprung from the loins of Daśaratha, for his part, who was endowed with the valour of gods conferred the following boon on the land of Maru: (40-41)

पशव्यश्चाल्परोगश्च फलमूलरसायुतः ।
बहुस्नेहो बहुक्षीरः सुगन्धिर्विविधौषधिः ॥ ४२ ॥

“This land will be good for cattle, with few diseases, will be full on all sides with fruit, roots and honey, will abound in ghee and milk, will be rich in varied herbs and full of fragrance.” (42)

एवमेतैश्च संयुक्तो बहुभिः संयुतो मरुः ।
रामस्य वरदानाच्च शिवः पन्था बभूव ह ॥ ४३ ॥

Endowed thus with the aforesaid features and rich in many virtues due to Śrī Rāma’s conferring boon on it, the land of Maru, they say, turned out to be a charming region. (43)

तस्मिन् दग्धे तदा कुक्षौ समुद्रः सरितां पतिः ।
राघवं सर्वशास्त्रज्ञमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ४४ ॥

The aforesaid cavity of the sea having been dried up at that time, the sea-god, the lord of rivers, submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who was learned in all the scriptures: (44)

अयं सौम्य नलो नाम तनयो विश्वकर्मणः ।
पित्रा दत्तवरः श्रीमान् प्रीतिमान् विश्वकर्मणः ॥ ४५ ॥

“This glorious son of Viśwakarmā (the architect of gods), Nala by name, O gentle Sir, has been granted by his father a boon of proficiency in all crafts and is full of love for you, the maker of this universe. (45)

एष सेतुं महोत्साहः करोतु मयि वानरः ।
तमहं धारयिष्यामि यथा ह्येष पिता तथा ॥ ४६ ॥

“Let this monkey, who is full of great zeal, build a bridge over me. I will sustain it.

Indeed he is as good an architect as his father.” (46)

एवमुक्त्वोदधिर्नष्टः समुत्थाय नलस्ततः ।

अब्रवीद् वानरश्रेष्ठो वाक्यं रामं महाबलम् ॥ ४७ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid, the sea-god went out of sight. Springing on his feet, Nala, the foremost of the monkeys, thereupon submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary might: (47)

अहं सेतुं करिष्यामि विस्तीर्णे मकरालये ।

पितुः सामर्थ्यमासाद्य तत्त्वमाह महोदधिः ॥ ४८ ॥

“Acquiring the skill of my father by virtue of the boon granted by him, I shall build a bridge over the extensive deep (the abode of alligators). Ocean has spoken the bare truth. (48)

दण्ड एव वरो लोके पुरुषस्येति मे मतिः ।

दिक् क्षमामकृतज्ञेषु सान्त्वं दानमथापि वा ॥ ४९ ॥

“Punishment is the best course open to a man in the world in relation to the ungrateful; such is my mind. A plague on forbearance and conciliation and even so on gift in relation to such people! (49)

अयं हि सागरो भीमः सेतुकर्मदिदृक्षया ।

ददौ दण्डभयाद् गाधं राघवाय महोदधिः ॥ ५० ॥

“This formidable Ocean, excavated and expanded by Sāgara (a forbear of yours), has actually allowed a passage to Śrī Rāma (yourself) in fear of punishment rather than from gratitude, actuated as he was by a desire to witness the construction of a bridge across it. (50)

मम मातुर्वरो दत्तो मन्दरे विश्वकर्मणा ।

मया तु सदृशः पुत्रस्तव देवि भविष्यति ॥ ५१ ॥

“A boon was granted by Viśvakarmā to my mother on Mount Mandara; ‘A son actually like me will be born to you (through me), O godlike lady!’ (51)

औरसस्तस्य पुत्रोऽहं सदृशो विश्वकर्मणा ।

स्मारितोऽस्म्यहमेतेन तत्त्वमाह महोदधिः ।

न चाप्यहमनुक्तो वः प्रब्रूयामात्मनो गुणान् ॥ ५२ ॥

“I am Viśvakarmā’s son, sprung from his own loins, and am just like him in workmanship. I have been put in mind of al this by Ocean; he has spoken the bare truth. And I could not speak at length of my virtues unless questioned by someone. (52)

समर्थश्चाप्यहं सेतुं कर्तुं वै वरुणालये ।

तस्मादद्यैव बध्नुन्तु सेतुं वानरपुङ्गवाः ॥ ५३ ॥

“Nay, I am also undoubtedly capable of constructing a bridge over the sea (lit., the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water). Therefore, let the bulls among the monkeys collect the material for the bridge this very day.” (53)

ततो विसृष्टा रामेण सर्वतो हरिपुङ्गवाः ।

उत्पेततुर्महारण्यं हृष्टाः शतसहस्रशः ॥ ५४ ॥

Directed by Śrī Rāma, the leaders of monkeys, full of joy, thereupon sprang into the extensive forest in hundreds of thousands on every side. (54)

ते नगान् नगसंकाशाः शाखाभृगगणर्षभाः ।

बभञ्जुः पादपांस्तत्र प्रचकर्षुश्च सागरम् ॥ ५५ ॥

The aforesaid leaders of simian hordes, who resembled mountains in size, tore up rocks and trees in that forest and dragged them away to the sea. (55)

ते सालैश्चाश्वकर्णैश्च धवैर्वैशैश्च वानराः ।

कुटजैर्जुनैस्तालैस्तिलकैस्तिनिशैरपि ॥ ५६ ॥

बिल्वकैः सप्तपर्णैश्च कर्णिकारैश्च पुष्पितैः ।

चूतैश्चाशोकवृक्षैश्च सागरं समपूरयन् ॥ ५७ ॥

Those monkeys filled the sea with sal and Aśvakarṇa, as well as with Dhava and bamboo, Kuṭaja, Arjuna, Palmyra, Tilaka as also Tiniśa, Bilva and Saptaparṇa, as well as with Karṇikāra trees in blossom as also with mango and Aśoka trees. (56-57)

समूलांश्च विमूलांश्च पादपान् हरिसत्तमाः ।
 इन्द्रकेतूनिवोद्यम्य प्रजहुर्वानरास्तरून् ॥ ५८ ॥
 तालान् दाडिमगुल्मांश्च नारिकेलविभीतकान् ।
 करीरान् बकुलान् निम्बान् समाजहुरितस्ततः ॥ ५९ ॥

Lifting up trees, roots and all, and even without roots, like so many flag-staffs raised in honour of Indra (the rain-god), the monkeys, who were the foremost of their class, hurled them (into the sea). They brought together from all quarters palmyra trees and pomegranate shrubs, cocount and Vibhitaka, Karīra, Bakula and Nimba trees. (58-59)

हस्तिमात्रान् महाकायाः पाषाणांश्च महाबलाः ।
 पर्वतांश्च समुत्पाद्य यत्रैः परिवहन्ति च ॥ ६० ॥

Digging up rocks as big as elephants, as also mountains, the colossal monkeys, who were all endowed with extraordinary might, transported them to sea-coast by means of various devices. (60)

प्रक्षिप्यमाणैरचलैः सहसा जलमुद्धृतम् ।
 समुत्सर्प चाकाशमवासर्पत् ततः पुनः ॥ ६१ ॥

The water thrown up all of a sudden by the rocks even as they were hurled into the sea rose to the skies and then fell down again. (61)

समुद्रं क्षोभयामासुर्निपतन्तः समन्ततः ।
 सूत्राण्यन्ये प्रगृह्णन्ति ह्यायतं शतयोजनम् ॥ ६२ ॥
 नलश्चक्रे महासेतुं मध्ये नदनदीपतेः ।
 स तदा क्रियते सेतुर्वानरैर्घोरकर्मभिः ॥ ६३ ॥

Hurling (as they did) rocks which fell down on all sides, the monkeys actually stirred up the sea. Others drew up strings in order to keep the rocks in a straight line. Nala, for his part, constructed the extensive bridge, a hundred Yojanas long, in the heart of the sea, the lord of rivers and streams. The aforesaid bridge was at that time being built in co-operation with other monkeys of formidable exploits. (62-63)

दण्डानन्ये प्रगृह्णन्ति विचिन्वन्ति तथापरे ।
 वानरैः शतशस्तत्र रामस्याज्ञापुरःसरैः ॥ ६४ ॥
 मेघाभैः पर्वताभैश्च तृणैः काष्ठैर्बबन्धिरे ।
 पुष्पिताग्रैश्च तरुभिः सेतुं बध्नन्ति वानराः ॥ ६५ ॥

Some seized hold of staffs for measuring the length and breadth of the bridge, while others collected the material. Parts of the bridge over that sea were thus erected by means of reeds and logs by monkeys following the command of Śrī Rāma, nay, looking like clouds and mountains and numbering hundreds. Nay, the monkeys also erected the bridge by means of trees covered at the top of boughs with blossom. (64-65)

पाषाणांश्च गिरिप्रख्यान् गिरीणां शिखराणि च ।
 दृश्यन्ते परिधावन्तो गृह्य दानवसंनिभाः ॥ ६६ ॥

Rushing hither and thither seizing blocks of stones resembling mountains, as well as mountain-tops, they looked much like giants (lit., sons of Dānu), (66)

शिलानां क्षिप्यमाणानां शैलानां तत्र पात्यताम् ।
 बभूव तुमुलः शब्दस्तदा तस्मिन् महोदधौ ॥ ६७ ॥

A tumultuous sound arose from rocks being hurled and mountains being thrown into that extensive sea at that time. (67)

कृतानि प्रथमेनाह्ना योजनानि चतुर्दश ।
 प्रहृष्टैर्गजसंकाशैस्त्वरमाणैः प्लवङ्गमैः ॥ ६८ ॥

The very first day fourteen Yojanas or one hundred and twelve miles of masonry were set up by the monkeys, who felt exceedingly merry and were moving with speed, and who closely resembled elephants. (68)

द्वितीयेन तथैवाह्ना योजनानि तु विंशतिः ।
 कृतानि प्लवगैस्तूर्ण भीमकायैर्महाबलैः ॥ ६९ ॥

The second day, twenty Yojanas, or one hundred and sixty miles, and all were likewise set up quickly by the monkeys, who were formidable in size and endowed with extraordinary might. (69)

अह्ना तृतीयेन तथा योजनानि तु सागरे।

त्वरमाणैर्महाकायैरेकविंशतिरेव च ॥ ७० ॥

Again, twenty-one Yojanas (or one hundred and sixty-eight miles) all told (of structure) were thrown across the sea in the same way on the third day by the monkeys of gigantic form, who were moving briskly. (70)

चतुर्थेन तथा चाह्ना द्वाविंशतिरथापि वा।

योजनानि महावेगैः कृतानि त्वरितैस्ततः ॥ ७१ ॥

Nay, on the fourth day, twenty-two Yojanas, or one hundred and seventy six miles, more from that point onward were completed by the monkeys, who were endowed with great impetuosity and seized with flurry. (71)

पञ्चमेन तथा चाह्ना प्लवगैः क्षिप्रकारिभिः।

योजनानि त्रयोविंशत् सुवेलमधिकृत्य वै ॥ ७२ ॥

Again, on the fifth day twenty-three Yojanas (or one hundred and eighty-four miles) were covered right up to Mount Suvela (on the opposite shore) by the monkeys, who worked feverishly. (72)

स वानरवरः श्रीमान् विश्वकर्मात्मजो बली।

बबन्ध सागरे सेतुं यथा चास्य पिता तथा ॥ ७३ ॥

In this way, Nala, the foremost of monkeys and the glorious and mighty offspring of Viśwakarmā, set up a bridge across the sea. Nay, he was as good in workmanship as his father. (73)

स नलेन कृतः सेतुः सागरे मकरालये।

शुशुभे सुभगः श्रीमान् स्वातीपथ इवाम्बरे ॥ ७४ ॥

Erected by Nala across the sea, the home of alligators, the aforesaid lovely and glorious bridge looked charming like the milky way in the sky. (74)

ततो देवाः सगन्धर्वाः सिद्धाश्च परमर्षयः।

आगम्य गगने तस्थुर्द्रष्टुकामास्तदद्भुतम् ॥ ७५ ॥

Assembling at that time, gods accompanied by Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Siddhas (a class of demigods credited with mystical powers from their very birth) and topmost Ṛṣis stood in the airspace, keen as they were to behold that marvel. (75)

दशयोजनविस्तीर्णं शतयोजनमायतम्।

ददृशुर्देवगन्धर्वा नलसेतुं सुदुष्करम् ॥ ७६ ॥

The gods and Gandharvas gazed on the bridge constructed by Nala, which was ten Yojanas (or eighty miles) wide and a hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles) long, and which was exceedingly difficult to construct for others. (76)

आप्लवन्तः प्लवन्तश्च गर्जन्तश्च प्लवंगमाः।

तमचिन्त्यमसह्यं च ह्यद्भुतं लोमहर्षणम् ॥ ७७ ॥

ददृशुः सर्वभूतानि सागरे सेतुबन्धनम्।

तानि कोटिसहस्राणि वानराणां महौजसाम् ॥ ७८ ॥

बध्नन्तः सागरे सेतुं जग्मुः पारं महोदधेः।

विशालः सुकृतः श्रीमान् सुभूमिः सुसमाहितः ॥ ७९ ॥

अशोभत महान् सेतुः सीमन्त इव सागरे।

ततः पारे समुद्रस्य गदापाणिर्विभीषणः ॥ ८० ॥

परेषामभिघातार्थमतिष्ठत् सचिवैः सह।

सुग्रीवस्तु ततः प्राह रामं सत्यपराक्रमम् ॥ ८१ ॥

Taking long and short leaps and thundering, the monkeys beheld that inconceivable, marvellous and thrilling structure, which could not even be attempted by others. Nay, all other created beings too saw the construction of the bridge across the sea. Even while erecting the bridge across the sea, the aforesaid thousands of crores of monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary energy, reached the opposite shore of the vast sea. The extensive, well-constructed, magnificent, smooth and solidly cemented vast bridge across the sea cast its charm like the parting of a woman's hair. Thereupon Vibhiṣaṇa with his ministers stood, mace in hand, on the southern shore to repulse the enemies in case they should try to demolish the bridge. Sugrīva for his part then spoke as follows to Śrī Rāma of unfailing prowess: (77—81)

हनूमन्तं त्वमारोह अङ्गदं त्वथ लक्ष्मणः ।
 अयं हि विपुलो वीर सागरो मकरालयः ॥ ८२ ॥
 वैहायसौ युवामेतौ वानरौ धारयिष्यतः ।
 अग्रतस्तस्य सैन्यस्य श्रीमान् रामः सलक्ष्मणः ॥ ८३ ॥
 जगाम धन्वी धर्मात्मा सुग्रीवेण समन्वितः ।
 अन्ये मध्येन गच्छन्ति पार्श्वतोऽन्ये प्लवंगमाः ॥ ८४ ॥

“Mount you the back of Hanumān and let Lakṣmaṇa for his part mount the shoulder of Aṅgada. Vast indeed is this sea, the abode of alligators, O gallant prince! These two monkeys, who are capable of ranging the sky, will carry you.” Accompanied by Sugrīva, the glorious Śrī Rāma, who wielded a bow and whose mind was set on virtue, proceeded with Lakṣmaṇa in the van of that army. Some monkeys walked in the middle, while others strode in the flanks. (82—84)

सलिलं प्रपतन्त्यन्ये मार्गमन्ये प्रपेदिरे ।
 केचिद् वैहायसगताः सुपर्णा इव पुप्लुवुः ॥ ८५ ॥

Some leapt into the water and swam through it, others marched on the bridge; while springing into the airspace, others darted like eagles. (85)

घोषेण महता घोषं सागरस्य समुच्छ्रितम् ।
 भीममन्तर्दधे भीमा तरन्ती हरिवाहिनी ॥ ८६ ॥

Advancing to the other shore, the formidable army of monkeys drowned by its loud din the terrible and powerful roar of the sea. (86)

वानराणां हि सा तीर्णा वाहिनी नलसेतुना ।
 तीरे निविविशे राज्ञो बहुमूलफलोदके ॥ ८७ ॥

Having actually reached the other shore through the bridge constructed by Nala, the aforesaid army of monkeys was encamped by the king, Sugrīva, on the shore, abounding in roots, fruits and water. (87)

तदद्भुतं राघवकर्म दुष्करं
 समीक्ष्य देवाः सह सिद्धचारणैः ।
 उपेत्य रामं सहसा महर्षिभि-
 स्तमभ्यषिञ्चन् सुशुभैर्जलैः पृथक् ॥ ८८ ॥

Gazing on that marvellous achievement of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), which was difficult of accomplishment for others, and approaching Śrī Rāma all of a sudden with Siddhas, Cāraṇas (celestial bards) and eminent Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), the gods consecrated him with highly auspicious waters separately. (88)

जयस्व शत्रून् नरदेव मेदिनीं
 ससागरां पालय शाश्वतीः समाः ।
 इतीव रामं नरदेवसत्कृतं
 शुभैर्वचोभिर्विविधैरपूजयन् ॥ ८९ ॥

They further hailed Śrī Rāma, who was honoured by kings, (lit., lords of men), in the following auspicious expressions of various kinds: “Conquer your enemies, O king, and rule over the earth including the seas for numberless years!” (89)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्वाविंशः सर्गः ॥ २२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-two the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रयोविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXIII

Śrī Rāma speaks of evil portents to Lakṣmaṇa

निमित्तानि निमित्तज्ञो दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणपूर्वजः ।
सौमित्रिं सम्परिष्वज्य इदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Perceiving portents and closely embracing Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), Śrī Rāma, the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa who had knowledge of portents, spoke as follows:

(1)

परिगृह्योदकं शीतं वनानि फलवन्ति च ।
बलौघं संविभज्येयं व्यूह्य तिष्ठेम लक्ष्मण ॥ २ ॥

“Occupying a region provided with fresh water and woods, rich in fruit, nay, dividing this multitude of troops into battalions and drawing it up in battle-array, we should remain alert, O Lakṣmaṇa!

(2)

लोकक्षयकरं भीमं भयं पश्याम्युपस्थितम् ।
प्रवर्हणं प्रवीराणामृक्षवानररक्षसाम् ॥ ३ ॥

“I perceive a formidable danger imminent, which bodes destruction to the world and the extermination of eminent heroes among the bears, monkeys and ogres.

(3)

वाताश्च कलुषा वान्ति कम्पते च वसुंधरा ।
पर्वताग्राणि वेपन्ते पतन्ति च महीरुहाः ॥ ४ ॥

“Winds are blowing full of dust and the earth is quaking. Nay, mountain-peaks are shaking and trees are falling.

(4)

मेघाः क्रव्यादसंकाशाः परुषाः परुषस्वनाः ।
क्रूराः क्रूरं प्रवर्षन्ति मिश्रं शोणितबिन्दुभिः ॥ ५ ॥

“Fierce and unkind clouds closely resembling carnivorous animals and emitting a harsh sound are cruelly letting loose showers mingled with drops of blood.

(5)

रक्तचन्दनसंकाशा संध्या परमदारुणा ।
ज्वलतः प्रपतत्येतदादित्यादग्निमण्डलम् ॥ ६ ॥

“The evening twilight, resembling red sandalwood in colour, appears most lurid. From the blazing sun is falling a roundish mass of fire.

(6)

दीना दीनस्वराः क्रूराः सर्वतो मृगपक्षिणः ।
प्रत्यादित्यं विनर्दन्ति जनयन्तो महद्भयम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Wretched looking ferocious beasts and birds are crying on all sides in pitiful tones facing the sun, causing great fear.

(7)

रजन्यामप्रकाशस्तु संतापयति चन्द्रमाः ।
कृष्णरक्तांशुपर्यन्तो लोकक्षय इवोदितः ॥ ८ ॥

“Bereft of splendour even at night, the moon is radiating heat contrary to her nature. Invested with a black and red halo, she has risen as though at the time of universal dissolution.

(8)

ह्रस्वो रूक्षोऽप्रशस्तश्च परिवेषस्तु लोहितः ।
आदित्ये विमले नीलं लक्ष्म लक्ष्मण दृश्यते ॥ ९ ॥

“A short, dreary, inauspicious and coppery halo is actually seen round the sun and a blue spot appears in the cloudless sun, O Lakṣmaṇa!

(9)

रजसा महता चापि नक्षत्राणि हतानि च ।
युगान्तमिव लोकानां पश्य शंसन्ति लक्ष्मण ॥ १० ॥

“Lo! Obscured by a thick coat of dust, the stars too forebode, as it were, the destruction of all the world, O Lakṣmaṇa!

(10)

काकाः श्येनास्तथा नीचा गृध्राः परिपतन्ति च ।
शिवाश्चाप्यशुभान् नादान् नदन्ति सुमहाभयान् ॥ ११ ॥

“Crows, hawks and vile vultures also are falling on Laṅkā. And she-jackals too are emitting sinister howls, which instil great terror.

(11)

शैलैः शूलैश्च खड्गैश्च विमुक्तैः कपिराक्षसैः ।
भविष्यत्यावृता भूमिर्मांसशोणितकर्दमा ॥ १२ ॥

“The earth, it appears, will be covered with rocks, darts and swords hurled by monkeys and ogres and will be thick with a morass of flesh and blood. (12)

क्षिप्रमद्यैव दुर्धर्षा पुरीं रावणपालिताम् ।
अभियाम जवेनैव सर्वैर्हरिभिरावृताः ॥ १३ ॥

“Accompanied by all the monkeys, we should without delay march with all speed this very day towards the city of Laṅkā, ruled over by Rāvaṇa, which is difficult to assail.” (13)

इत्येवमुक्त्वा धन्वी स रामः संग्रामधर्षणः ।
प्रतस्थे पुरतो रामो लङ्कामभिमुखो विभुः ॥ १४ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid, the celebrated and powerful archer, Śrī Rāma, the delight of the people and the subduer of his foes on the field of battle, set forth in the van in the direction of Laṅkā. (14)

सविभीषणसुग्रीवाः सर्वे ते वानरर्षभाः ।
प्रतस्थिरे विनर्दन्तो धृतानां द्विषतां वधे ॥ १५ ॥

Accompanied by Vibhiṣaṇa and Sugrīva all the well-known jewels among the monkeys sallied forth, roaring for the destruction of their foes, the ogres, who were determined to fight. (15)

राघवस्य प्रियार्थं तु सुतरां वीर्यशालिनाम् ।
हरीणां कर्मचेष्टाभिस्तुतोष रघुनन्दनः ॥ १६ ॥

Śrī Rāma (the delight of the Raghus) for his part felt gratified by the actions and movements of the exceedingly powerful monkeys, who all intended to please Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (16)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रयोविंशः सर्गः ॥ २३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुर्विंशः सर्गः

Canto XXIV

Beholding Laṅka and applauding it, nay, drawing up his army in battle array, Śrī Rāma orders the release of Śuka (a spy of Rāvaṇa), who was captured earlier and kept under detention by the monkeys. Going back to Rāvaṇa the ogre speaks to him about the military strength of Śrī Rāma. Infuriated by this report, Rāvaṇa vauntingly harps on his own prowess

सा वीरसमिती राज्ञा विरराज व्यवस्थिता ।
शशिना शुभनक्षत्रा पौर्णमासीव शारदी ॥ १ ॥

Drawn up in battle array by the king, Sugrīva, that army of heroes looked exceptionally charming like an autumnal full-moon night presided over by the moon and illumined by bright stars. (1)

प्रचचाल च वेगेन त्रस्ता चैव वसुंधरा ।
पीड्यमाना बलौघेन तेन सागरवर्चसा ॥ २ ॥

Nay, being pressed under foot by that multitude of troops—glorious like a sea, and alarmed too, the earth violently shook because of the swift movement of the army. (2)

ततः शुश्रुवुराकुष्टं लङ्कायां काननौकसः ।
भेरीमृदङ्गसंघुष्टं तुमुलं लोमहर्षणम् ॥ ३ ॥

The monkeys, (lit., the denizens of the woods) now heard in Laṅkā a clamour as well as the tumultuous and deafening sound of kettledrums, and clay tomtoms, which made one's hair stand on end. (3)

बभूवुस्तेन घोषेण संहृष्टा हरियूथपाः ।
अमृष्यमाणास्तद् घोषं विनेदुर्घोषवत्तरम् ॥ ४ ॥

The commanders of monkey-troops felt highly rejoiced at that sound. Nay, not bearing that uproar, they roared at a still higher pitch. (4)

राक्षसास्तत् प्लवंगानां शुश्रुवुस्तेऽपि गर्जितम् ।
नर्दतामिव दृप्तानां मेघानामम्बरे स्वनम् ॥ ५ ॥

Those ogres too heard that roar of the monkeys, which resembled the thundering of overbearing clouds rumbling in space. (5)

दृष्ट्वा दाशरथिर्लङ्कां चित्रध्वजपताकिनीम् ।
जगाम मनसा सीतां दूयमानेन चेतसा ॥ ६ ॥

Seeing Laṅkā dressed with multicoloured flags and buntings, Śrī Rāma (son of Daśaratha) mentally sought Sītā with an afflicted mind. (6)

अत्र सा मृगशावाक्षी रावणेनोपरुध्यते ।
अभिभूता ग्रहेणेव लोहिताङ्गेन रोहिणी ॥ ७ ॥

He said to himself: "Here is that lady with eyes resembling those of a fawn, detained by Rāvaṇa even as (the lunar mansion) Rohiṇī is overshadowed by the red-bodied planet, Mars." (7)

दीर्घमुष्णं च निःश्वस्य समुद्रीक्ष्य च लक्ष्मणम् ।
उवाच वचनं वीरस्तत्कालहितमात्मनः ॥ ८ ॥

Heaving long and burning sighs and gazing at Lakṣmaṇa, the hero spoke the following words, which were conducive to his own good for the occasion: (8)

आलिखन्तीमिवाकाशमुत्थितां पश्य लक्ष्मण ।
मनसेव कृतां लङ्कां नगाग्रे विश्वकर्मणा ॥ ९ ॥

"Behold on the summit of a mountain the elevated city of Laṅkā, evolved as though with his own mind by Viśvakarmā, the architect of gods, and scraping the skies, as it were, O Lakṣmaṇa! (9)

विमानैर्बहुभिर्लङ्का संकीर्णा रचिता पुरा ।
विष्णोः पदमिवाकाशं छादितं पाण्डुभिर्धनैः ॥ १० ॥

"Laṅkā was brought into existence in the past, thick with numerous seven-storeyed mansions. It presents the appearance of the sky (lit., the orbit of the all-pervading Lord Viṣṇu, who traversed the heaven in a single stride) covered with white clouds. (10)

पुष्पितैः शोभिता लङ्का वनैश्चित्ररथोपमैः ।
नानापतगसंघुष्टफलपुष्पोपगैः शुभैः ॥ ११ ॥

"Laṅkā stands embellished with charming groves in blossom vying with Caitraratha, the garden of Kubera, the god of riches, and supplying fruits and flowers to the royal palace and filled with the songs of birds of all species. (11)

पश्य मत्तविहंगानि प्रलीनभ्रमराणि च ।
कोकिलाकुलखण्डानि दोधवीति शिवोऽनिलः ॥ १२ ॥

"Lo! The delightful breeze shakes again and again the clusters of trees which are inhabited by birds in heat, nay, in which bees remain hidden and which are crowded with cuckoos." (12)

इति दाशरथी रामो लक्ष्मणं समभाषत ।
बलं च तत्र विभजच्छास्त्रदृष्टेन कर्मणा ॥ १३ ॥

So did Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, speak in confidence to Lakṣmaṇa to divide the army camping there according to the rules found in the scriptures. (13)

शशास कपिसेनां तां बलादादाय वीर्यवान् ।
अङ्गदः सह नीलेन तिष्ठेदुरसि दुर्जयः ॥ १४ ॥

Śrī Rāma issued the following directions to that army of monkeys: "Taking his troops out of the army, the valiant Aṅgada, who is difficult to conquer, should take up his position alongwith Nīla at the bosom of the (human-shaped) formation in which the troops are going to be deployed. (14)

तिष्ठेद् वानरवाहिन्या वानरौघसमावृतः ।
आश्रितो दक्षिणं पार्श्वमृषभो नाम वानरः ॥ १५ ॥

“Surrounded by a battalion of monkeys, the monkey Rṣabha by name should remain stationed on the right wing of the simian army. (15)

गन्धहस्तीव दुर्धर्षस्तरस्वी गन्धमादनः ।
तिष्ठेद् वानरवाहिन्याः सव्यं पार्श्वमधिष्ठितः ॥ १६ ॥

“Let Gandhamādana, who is difficult to overpower and agile like an elephant in rut, remain stationed at the head of the left flank of the simian army. (16)

मूर्ध्नि स्थास्याम्यहं यत्तो लक्ष्मणेन समन्वितः ।
जाम्बवांश्च सुषेणश्च वेगदर्शी च वानरः ॥ १७ ॥
ऋक्षमुख्या महात्मानः कुक्षिं रक्षन्तु ते त्रयः ।
जघनं कपिसेनायाः कपिराजोऽभिरक्षतु ।
पश्चार्धमिव लोकस्य प्रचेतास्तेजसा वृतः ॥ १८ ॥

“Accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, I shall remain alert at the head of the formation. And let Jāmbavān and Suṣeṇa as well as the monkey Vegadarśī—these three highly intelligent leaders of bears and monkeys protect the belly. Let Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, protect on all sides the hips and lions even as Varuṇa, the god of water, who remains enveloped with glory, guards the western quarter of the earth.” (17-18)

सुविभक्तमहाव्यूहा महावानररक्षिता ।
अनीकिनी सा विबभौ यथा द्यौः साभ्रसम्प्लवा ॥ १९ ॥

Systematically disposed in the form of a huge formation and protected by eminent monkeys, that army looked exceptionally charming like the heavens with their mass of clouds. (19)

प्रगृह्य गिरिशृङ्गाणि महतश्च महीरुहान् ।
आसेदुर्वानरा लङ्कां मिमर्दयिषवो रणे ॥ २० ॥

Seizing peaks of mountains and gigantic trees, the monkeys reached Laṅkā, which they were keen to crush in the course of a combat. (20)

शिखरैर्विकिरामैनां लङ्कां मुष्टिभिरेव वा ।
इति स्म दधिरे सर्वे मनांसि हरिपुङ्गवाः ॥ २१ ॥

“Let us dash yonder Laṅkā to pieces with the peaks of mountains or with our bare fists,” so did all the leaders of monkeys resolve. (21)

ततो रामो महातेजाः सुग्रीवमिदमब्रवीत् ।
सुविभक्तानि सैन्यानि शुक्र एष विमुच्यताम् ॥ २२ ॥

Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, then spoke as follows to Sugrīva: “The troops have been marshalled thoroughly well. Let yonder Śuka be set free.” (22)

रामस्य तु वचः श्रुत्वा वानरेन्द्रो महाबलः ।
मोचयामास तं दूतं शुक्रं रामस्य शासनात् ॥ २३ ॥

Hearing the words of Śrī Rāma, Sugrīva (the lord of monkeys) for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, set at liberty the well-known envoy, Śuka, in obedience to the command of Śrī Rāma. (23)

मोचितो रामवाक्येन वानरैश्च निपीडितः ।
शुक्रः परमसंत्रस्तो रक्षोधिपमुपागमत् ॥ २४ ॥

Released under orders of Śrī Rāma and molested by the monkeys, Śuka, who was exceedingly terrified, sought the presence of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres. (24)

रावणः प्रहसन्नेव शुक्रं वाक्यमुवाच ह ।
किमिमौ ते सितौ पक्षौ लूनपक्षश्च दृश्यसे ॥ २५ ॥

Rāvaṇa, they say, put the following questions to Śuka, even while laughing to his heart's content: “How have these wings of yours been fastened? Nay, it looks as though they have been clipped. (25)

कच्चिन्नानेकचित्तानां तेषां त्वं वशमागतः ।
ततः स भयसंविग्रस्तेन राज्ञाभिचोदितः ।
वचनं प्रत्युवाचेदं राक्षसाधिपमुत्तमम् ॥ २६ ॥

“I hope you did not fall into theutches of those capricious monkeys.” Interrogated by king Rāvaṇa, Śuka, who was wrought up with fear, then replied as follows to the suzerain lord of ogres: (26)

सागरस्योत्तरे तीरेऽब्रुवं ते वचनं तथा ।
यथा संदेशमक्लिष्टं सान्त्वयन् श्लक्ष्णया गिरा ॥ २७ ॥

“Standing in the airspace over the northern seashore, I faithfully delivered, as enjoined, your message in an unembarrassed manner, reassuring the monkeys by means of gentle words. (27)

कुब्धैस्तैरहमुत्प्लुत्य दृष्टमात्रः प्लवंगमैः ।
गृहीतोऽस्म्यपि चारब्धो हन्तुं लोभं च मुष्टिभिः ॥ २८ ॥

“Having been barely caught sight of by monkeys, who were seized with fury at my very sight, I was caught hold of with a jump and began to be smitten with fists and shorn of my wings. (28)

न ते संभाषितुं शक्याः सम्प्रश्नोऽत्र न विद्यते ।
प्रकृत्या कोपनास्तीक्ष्णा वानरा राक्षसाधिप ॥ २९ ॥

“The monkeys are furious and violent by nature, O suzerain lord of ogres! They are not wont to being negotiated with. Nor was there any occasion at that time for asking them (as to why they had started pummelling me). (29)

स च हन्ता विराधस्य कबन्धस्य खरस्य च ।
सुग्रीवसहितो रामः सीतायाः पदमागतः ॥ ३० ॥

“Nay, accompanied by Sugrīva, the celebrated Rāma, the slayer of Virāḍha, Kabandha and Khara, has come to rescue Sitā after ascertaining her whereabouts. (30)

स कृत्वा सागरे सेतुं तीर्त्वा च लवणोदधिम् ।
एष रक्षांसि निर्धूय धन्वी तिष्ठति राघवः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Having thrown a bridge across the sea and crossed the salt sea and setting the ogres at nought, here stands Rāma (a scion of Raghu) armed with a bow. (31)

ऋक्षवानरसङ्घानामनीकानि सहस्रशः ।
गिरिमेघनिकाशानां छादयन्ति वसुंधराम् ॥ ३२ ॥

“Companies in thousands of hordes of bears and monkeys, resembling mountains and clouds, cover the earth. (32)

राक्षसानां बलौघस्य वानरेन्द्रबलस्य च ।
नैतयोर्विद्यते संधिर्देवदानवयोरिव ॥ ३३ ॥

“No alliance is possible between these two armies—the multitude of ogre troops and the army of Sugrīva (the lord of monkeys) any more than between the gods and the demons. (33)

पुरा प्राकारमायान्ति क्षिप्रमेकतरं कुरु ।
सीतां चास्मै प्रयच्छाशु युद्धं वापि प्रदीयताम् ॥ ३४ ॥

“Before they are able to reach the defensive wall, quickly follow either of the two courses being suggested. Restore Sitā to him without delay or battle may be given to him.” (34)

शुकस्य वचनं श्रुत्वा रावणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
रोषसंरक्तनयनो निर्दहन्निव चक्षुषा ॥ ३५ ॥

Hearing the submission of Śuka, Rāvaṇa replied as follows, his eyes blood-red with anger, as though he would consume him with his glance: (35)

यदि मां प्रति युद्धेन देवगन्धर्वदानवाः ।
नैव सीतां प्रदास्यामि सर्वलोकभयादपि ॥ ३६ ॥

“I would not give back Sitā in any case even if gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and demons were to contend with me, nay, not even through fear of the whole world. (36)

कदा समभिधावन्ति मामका राघवं शराः ।
वसन्ते पुष्पितं मत्ता भ्रमरा इव पादपम् ॥ ३७ ॥

“O, when will my shafts dart towards Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as intoxicated bees rush towards a flowered tree in the vernal season? (37)

कदा शोणितदिग्धाङ्गं दीप्तैः कार्मुकविच्युतैः ।
शरैरादीपयिष्यामि उल्काभिरिव कुञ्जरम् ॥ ३८ ॥

“O, when shall I consume with flaming arrows discharged from my bow, Rāma, whose body, pierced with my arrows, is stained with blood—even as they goad an elephant with firebrands. (38)

तच्चास्य बलमादास्ये बलेन महता वृतः ।
ज्योतिषामिव सर्वेषां प्रभामुद्यन् दिवाकरः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Surrounded by a huge army, I shall eclipse the aforesaid army of Rāma as the sun, even while rising, obscures the brilliance of all the other luminaries in the sky. (39)

सागरस्येव मे वेगो मारुतस्येव मे बलम् ।
न च दाशरथिर्वेद तेन मां योद्धुमिच्छति ॥ ४० ॥

“My impetuosity resembles the fury of the sea and my strength is like that of the wind. Rāma (son of Daśaratha), however, does not know this; hence he seeks to meet me in combat. (40)

न मे तूणीशयान् बाणान् सविषानिव पन्नगान् ।
रामः पश्यति संग्रामे तेन मां योद्धुमिच्छति ॥ ४१ ॥

“Rāma has not seen on a field of battle the arrows reposing in my quiver like venomous serpents. Hence he desires to fight with me. (41)

न जानाति पुरा वीर्यं मम युद्धे स राघवः ।
मम चापमयीं वीणां शरकोणैः प्रवादिताम् ॥ ४२ ॥
ज्याशब्दतुमुलां घोराभारतगीतमहास्वनाम् ।
नाराचतलसंनादां नदीमहितवाहिनीम् ।
अवगाह्य महारङ्गं वादयिष्याम्यहं रणे ॥ ४३ ॥

“He has not yet known my prowess in combat ever before. Nor does he know of my formidable Vīṇā in the form of a bow, which is played on with the heads of arrows, nay, which strikes a mild note in the form of a twang of the bowstring, a moderate note in the form of cries of anguish (uttered by the victims of those arrows) and a high-pitched note in the form of the sound produced by the base of steel arrows, and which I shall play on in the course of a conflict after entering a vast stage in the form of the enemy ranks advancing like a river. (42-43)

न वासवेनापि सहस्रचक्षुषा
युद्धेऽस्मि शक्यो वरुणेन वा स्वयम् ।
यमेन वा धर्षयितुं शराग्निना
महाहवे वैश्रवणेन वा पुनः ॥ ४४ ॥

“I am not prone to being overcome in a combat even by the thousand-eyed Indra (the deity presiding over the eastern quarter) or by Varuṇa (the deity presiding over the water) himself or by Yama (the deity presiding over the south) with the fire of his arrows or again by Kubera (the deity presiding over the north) in a major conflict.” (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुर्विंशः सर्गः ॥ २४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXV

On Śrī Rāma having crossed over to the other side of the sea, Rāvaṇa commands his ministers, Śuka and Sāraṇa, to enter the enemy's ranks and tell him everything about them. Detected while doing the work of a spy, they are captured by Vibhīṣaṇa, but let go by Śrī Rāma. Going back to Rāvaṇa, they exhort the latter to hand over Sītā to Śrī Rāma

सबले सागरं तीर्णे रामे दशरथात्मजे ।
अमात्यौ रावणः श्रीमानब्रवीच्छुकसारणौ ॥ १ ॥

Śrī Rāma, an offspring of Emperor Daśaratha having traversed the sea with his army, the glorious Rāvaṇa spoke (as follows) to his ministers, Śuka and Sāraṇa: (1)

समग्रं सागरं तीर्णं दुस्तरं वानरं बलम् ।
अभूतपूर्वं रामेण सागरे सेतुबन्धनम् ॥ २ ॥

"The entire army of monkeys has crossed the sea, which was difficult to cross, and a bridge has been thrown across the sea by Rāma, which is something unprecedented. (2)

सागरे सेतुबन्धं तं न श्रद्दध्यां कथंचन ।
अवश्यं चापि संख्येयं तन्मया वानरं बलम् ॥ ३ ॥

"I could not believe under any circumstances the aforesaid story of a bridge having been constructed across the sea. Nevertheless the numerical strength of that army of monkeys needs must be ascertained by me. (3)

भवन्तौ वानरं सैन्यं प्रविश्यानुपलक्षितौ ।
परिमाणं च वीर्यं च ये च मुख्याः प्लवंगमाः ॥ ४ ॥

मन्त्रिणो ये च रामस्य सुग्रीवस्य च सम्मताः ।
ये पूर्वमभिवर्तन्ते ये च शूराः प्लवंगमाः ॥ ५ ॥

स च सेतुर्यथा बद्धः सागरे सलिलार्णवे ।
निवेशं च यथा तेषां वानराणां महात्मनाम् ॥ ६ ॥

रामस्य व्यवसायं च वीर्यं प्रहरणानि च ।
लक्ष्मणस्य च वीरस्य तत्त्वतो ज्ञातुमर्हथः ॥ ७ ॥

"Entering the army of monkeys unperceived, you two ought to ascertain in reality the magnitude as well as the strength of the army as also who are the leading monkeys and who are the counsellors highly esteemed by Rāma and Sugrīva, again, who march in the front line and who are the heroic monkeys, how that bridge was thrown across the sea of salt water associated with the name of King Sagara, who excavated it, nay, how those high-spirited monkeys have been encamped, as also the resolve and prowess of Rāma as well as of the heroic Lakṣmaṇa and the weapons used by them. (4—7)

कश्च सेनापतिस्तेषां वानराणां महात्मनाम् ।
तच्च ज्ञात्वा यथातत्त्वं शीघ्रमागन्तुमर्हथः ॥ ८ ॥

"Nay, also ascertaining in accordance with facts who is the commander-in-chief of those high-spirited monkeys, you two ought to return apace." (8)

इति प्रतिसमादिष्टौ राक्षसौ शुकसारणौ ।
हरिरूपधरौ वीरौ प्रविष्टौ वानरं बलम् ॥ ९ ॥

Assuming the semblance of monkeys, when commanded thus, the two heroic ogres, Śuka and Sāraṇa, penetrated deep into the simian ranks. (9)

ततस्तद् वानरं सैन्यमचिन्त्यं लोमहर्षणम् ।
संख्यातुं नाध्यगच्छेतां तदा तौ शुकसारणौ ॥ १० ॥

The aforesaid Śuka and Sāraṇa did not, however, know at that time how to count from that place that simian army, whose number could not even be conceived, much less correctly known and which made one's hair stand on end. (10)

तत् स्थितं पर्वताग्रेषु निर्झरेषु गुहासु च।
समुद्रस्य च तीरेषु वनेषूपवनेषु च।
तरमाणं च तीर्णं च तर्तुकामं च सर्वशः ॥ ११ ॥

It was stationed on the summits of mountains, round about waterfalls as well as in caves, as also on the seashores as well as in woodlands and gardens. It was either in the process of traversing the sea or had traversed it or was intending to traverse it in its entirety. (11)

निविष्टं निविशच्चैव भीमनादं महाबलम्।
तद्बलार्णवमक्षोभ्यं ददृशाते निशाचरौ ॥ १२ ॥

Emitting a terrible roar, that huge army had either encamped or was still encamping. The two ogres beheld that imperturbable sea of an army. (12)

तौ ददर्श महातेजाः प्रतिच्छन्नौ विभीषणः।
आचक्षे स रामाय गृहीत्वा शुकसारणौ ॥ १३ ॥

Vibhīṣaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, saw Śuka and Sāraṇa in disguise and, capturing them, he submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma: (13)

तस्यैतौ राक्षसेन्द्रस्य मन्त्रिणौ शुकसारणौ।
लङ्कायाः समनुप्राप्तौ चारौ परपुरंजय ॥ १४ ॥

"Here are two ministers of Rāvaṇa the ruler of ogres, Śuka and Sāraṇa, duly arrived from Laṅkā as spies, O conqueror of hostile citadels!" (14)

तौ दृष्ट्वा व्यथितौ रामं निराशौ जीविते तथा।
कृताञ्जलिपुटौ भीतौ वचनं चेदमूचतुः ॥ १५ ॥

Having joined their palms, the two ogres, who were perturbed to see Śrī Rāma and had lost hope about their life, nay, who were seized with fear, spoke as follows: (15)

आवामिहागतौ सौम्य रावणप्रहितावुभौ।
परिज्ञातुं बलं सर्वं तदिदं रघुनन्दन ॥ १६ ॥

"Sent by Rāvaṇa, O good Sir, we both have come here to know everything about the whole army of yours, O delight of the Raghus!" (16)

तयोस्तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा रामो दशरथात्मजः।
अब्रवीत् प्रहसन् वाक्यं सर्वभूतहिते रतः ॥ १७ ॥

Laughing heartily to hear the aforesaid submission of the two ogres, Śrī Rāma, an offspring of Emperor Daśaratha, replied as follows, devoted as he was to the welfare of all created beings: (17)

यदि दृष्टं बलं सर्वं वयं वा सुसमाहिताः।
यथोक्तं वा कृतं कार्यं छन्दतः प्रतिगम्यताम् ॥ १८ ॥

"If the entire army has been seen by you, if we too have been carefully observed and if your mission has been accomplished, as directed by your master, you may return according to your sweet will. (18)

अथ किञ्चिददृष्टं वा भूयस्तद् द्रष्टुमर्हथः।
विभीषणो वा कात्स्न्येन पुनः संदर्शयिष्यति ॥ १९ ॥

"If, however, anything has remained uninvestigated, you ought to see it over again. Vibhīṣaṇa will once more show it to you fully. (19)

न चेदं ग्रहणं प्राप्य भेतव्यं जीवितं प्रति।
न्यस्तशस्त्रौ गृहीतौ च न दूतौ वधमर्हथः ॥ २० ॥

"Nor, having suffered this arrest, should you have any apprehension about your life. Having laid aside your arms, having been taken captive, and you two, envoys that you are, do not merit death. (20)

प्रच्छन्नौ च विमुञ्चेमौ चारौ रात्रिंचरावुभौ।
शत्रुपक्षस्य सततं विभीषण विकर्षिणौ ॥ २१ ॥

(Turning to the monkeys) nay, fully set free both these rangers of the night, who have come in disguise as spies, even though they have been constantly seeking to create dissidence in the hostile (opposite) ranks. (21)

प्रविश्य महतीं लङ्कां भवद्भ्यां धनदानुजः ।
वक्तव्यो रक्षसां राजा यथोक्तं वचनं मम ॥ २२ ॥

(Addressing the ogres again) “On returning to the great city of Laṅkā, Rāvaṇa (a younger half-brother of Kubera), the ruler of ogres, should be spoken to by you in my words as actually uttered by me: (22)

यद् बलं त्वं समाश्रित्य सीतां मे हृतवानसि ।
तद् दर्शय यथाकामं ससैन्यश्च सबान्धवः ॥ २३ ॥

“Display at will with your troops and kinsmen the strength relying on which you stole away my Sitā. (23)

श्वः काल्ये नगरीं लङ्कां सप्राकारां सतोरणाम् ।
रक्षसां च बलं पश्य शरैर्विध्वंसितं मया ॥ २४ ॥

“Tomorrow at break of day behold the city of Laṅkā, with its defensive walls and arches, as well as the army of ogres completely destroyed by me with arrows. (24)

क्रोधं भीममहं मोक्ष्ये ससैन्ये त्वयि रावण ।
श्वः काल्ये वज्रवान् वज्रं दानवेष्विव वासवः ॥ २५ ॥

“Tomorrow at daybreak I shall let loose my terrible wrath on you, including your forces, O Rāvaṇa, even as Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, discharges his thunderbolt on the demons.’ ” (25)

इति प्रतिसमादिष्टौ राक्षसौ शुकसारणौ ।
जयेति प्रतिनन्द्यैनं राघवं धर्मवत्सलम् ॥ २६ ॥

आगम्य नगरीं लङ्कामब्रूतां राक्षसाधिपम् ।
विभीषणगृहीतौ तु वधार्थं राक्षसेश्वर ॥ २७ ॥

दृष्ट्वा धर्मात्मना मुक्तौ रामेणामिततेजसा ।
एकस्थानगता यत्र चत्वारः पुरुषर्षभाः ॥ २८ ॥

लोकपालसमाः शूराः कृतास्त्रा दृढविक्रमाः ।
रामो दाशरथिः श्रीमाल्लक्ष्मणश्च विभीषणः ॥ २९ ॥

सुग्रीवश्च महातेजा महेन्द्रसमविक्रमः ।
एते शक्ताः पुरीं लङ्कां सप्राकारां सतोरणाम् ॥ ३० ॥

उत्पाट्य संक्रामयितुं सर्वे तिष्ठन्तु वानराः ।
यादृशं तद्धि रामस्य रूपं प्रहरणानि च ॥ ३१ ॥

वधिष्यति पुरीं लङ्कामेकस्तिष्ठन्तु ते त्रयः ।
रामलक्ष्मणगुप्ता सा सुग्रीवेण च वाहिनी ।
बभूव दुर्धर्षतरा सर्वैरपि सुरासुरैः ॥ ३२ ॥

Hailing the aforesaid Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, a lover of piety, in the words “Be victorious!” when commanded by Śrī Rāma as above and returning to the city of Laṅkā, the two ogres, Śuka and Sāraṇa submitted as follows to Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres: “On seeing us taken captive by Vibhiṣaṇa for killing us, O lord of ogres, we, for our part, were set free by Rāma, whose mind is given to piety and who is endowed with immense energy. Since these four jewels among men, who are valiant like the guardians of the world, skilled in archery and unyielding in prowess, viz., the glorious Rāma, son of Daśaratha, and Lakṣmaṇa, Vibhiṣaṇa, and Sugrīva, who is endowed with great energy and is equal to the mighty Indra in prowess, are at one place, they are able to transplant elsewhere, the city of Laṅkā with its protective walls and arches, after tearing up its foundations, even if all the monkeys keep aloof. Surely, he who possesses charm as well as weapons, the like of which are possessed by Śrī Rāma, would destroy the city of Laṅkā single-handed, even if the other three stand by. Protected by Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa as well as by Sugrīva, that army of monkeys has become exceedingly difficult to overcome even for all the gods and demons combined. (26—32)

प्रहृष्टयोधा ध्वजिनी महात्मनां
वनौकसां सम्प्रति योद्धुमिच्छताम् ।
अलं विरोधेन शमो विधीयतां
प्रदीयतां दाशरथाय मैथिली ॥ ३३ ॥

“The army of the gigantic monkeys (lit., the denizens of the woods), who are keen to fight just now, consists of warriors who feel highly rejoiced to get this opportunity of fighting. Therefore, have done with | Rāma and let Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, be antagonism. Let peace be concluded with | restored to Rāma (son of Daśaratha).” (33)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चविंशः सर्गः ॥ २५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic

षड्विंशः सर्गः

Canto XXVI

Climbing up the roof of his palace on hearing the submission of Sāraṇa and surveying the entire army of monkeys, Rāvaṇa inquires about the monkey leaders and Sāraṇa shows to him Hanumān and others alongwith their distinguishing marks

तद्वचः सत्यमक्लीबं सारणेनाभिभाषितम् ।
निशम्य रावणो राजा प्रत्यभाषत सारणम् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid truthful and intrepid submission made by Sāraṇa, King Rāvaṇa replied to Sāraṇa as follows: (1)

यदि मामभियुञ्जीरन् देवगन्धर्वदानवाः ।
नैव सीतामहं दद्यां सर्वलोकभयादपि ॥ २ ॥

“Even if the gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and demons should unitedly attack me, I would not, in any case, surrender Sitā, nay, not even for fear of the whole world. (2)

त्वं तु सौम्य परित्रस्तो हरिभिः पीडितो भृशम् ।
प्रतिप्रदानमद्यैव सीतायाः साधु मन्यसे ॥ ३ ॥

“Having been vehemently persecuted by the monkeys and, therefore, greatly alarmed, O gentle one, you, on the other hand, deem it proper to restore Sitā to Rāma this very day. (3)

को हि नाम सपत्नो मां समरे जेतुमर्हति ।
इत्युक्त्वा परुषं वाक्यं रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ॥ ४ ॥

आरुरोह ततः श्रीमान् प्रासादं हिमपाण्डुरम् ।
बहुतालसमुत्सेधं रावणोऽथ दिदृक्षया ॥ ५ ॥

“What adversary, however, can really conquer me in war?” Having made this unkind observation, the glorious Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, who made people cry by his tyranny, thereupon presently climbed up his snow-white palace, which had the height of many Palmyra trees, with intent to survey the army of monkeys.

(4—5)

ताभ्यां चराभ्यां सहितो रावणः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।
पश्यमानः समुद्रं तं पर्वतांश्च वनानि च ॥ ६ ॥
ददर्श पृथिवीदेशं सुसम्पूर्णं प्लवंगमैः ।
तदपारमसह्यं च वानराणां महाबलम् ॥ ७ ॥
आलोक्य रावणो राजा परिप्रच्छ सारणम् ।
एषां के वानरा मुख्याः के शूराः के महाबलाः ॥ ८ ॥

Surveying the sea as well as the mountains and forests with the aforesaid spies (Śuka and Sāraṇa), Rāvaṇa, who was excited with anger, saw the terrestrial region fully crowded with monkeys. Beholding that huge army of monkeys, which was unlimited and irresistible, King Rāvaṇa questioned Sāraṇa as follows: “Which monkeys of these are foremost? Which of them are valiant and which endowed with extraordinary might? (6—8)

के पूर्वमभिवर्तन्ते महोत्साहाः समन्ततः ।
केषां शृणोति सुग्रीवः के वा यूथपयूथपाः ॥ १॥

“Full of great zeal on all sides, they march in the van? To whose advice does Sugrīva listen and who are the commanders of commanders of monkey hordes? (9)

सारणाचक्ष्व मे सर्वं किं प्रभावाः प्लवंगमाः ।
सारणो राक्षसेन्द्रस्य वचनं परिपृच्छतः ॥ १० ॥
आबभाषेऽथ मुख्यज्ञो मुख्यांस्तत्र वनौकसः ।
एष योऽभिमुखो लङ्कां नर्दंस्तिष्ठति वानरः ॥ ११ ॥
यूथपानां सहस्राणां शतेन परिवारितः ।
यस्य घोषेण महता सप्राकारा सतोरणा ॥ १२ ॥
लङ्का प्रतिहता सर्वा सशैलवनकानना ।
सर्वशाखामुगेन्द्रस्य सुग्रीवस्य महात्मनः ॥ १३ ॥
बलाग्रे तिष्ठते वीरो नीलो नामैष यूथपः ।
बाहू प्रगृह्य यः पद्भ्यां महीं गच्छति वीर्यवान् ॥ १४ ॥
लङ्कामभिमुखः कोपादभीक्ष्णं च विजृम्भते ।
गिरिशृङ्गप्रतीकाशः पद्मकिंजल्कसंनिभः ॥ १५ ॥
स्फोटयत्यतिसंरब्धो लाङ्गूलं च पुनः पुनः ।
यस्य लाङ्गूलशब्देन स्वनन्ति प्रदिशो दश ॥ १६ ॥
एष वानरराजेन सुग्रीवेणाभिषेचितः ।
युवराजोऽङ्गदो नाम त्वामाह्वयति संयुगे ॥ १७ ॥

“Nay, how powerful are the monkeys? Tell me everything, O Sāraṇa!” Hearing the questionnaire of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres), who was questioning him as aforesaid, Sāraṇa, who knew the army chiefs, forthwith submitted as follows about the leading monkeys in that army: “The monkey who stands here roaring with his face turned towards Laṅkā and surrounded by one lakh of commanders of monkey hordes, nay, by whose powerful voice the entire Laṅkā with its defensive walls and arches and including its mountains, groves and wood-lands is repeatedly struck, and who has taken up his position at the head of the army of the lofty-minded Sugrīva, the ruler of all the monkeys, is the gallant and well-known commander of monkey hordes, Nīla by name. He who, lifting his arms, is walking on the earth with his feet, who, standing, as he does, with his face turned towards Laṅkā, yawns repeatedly in fury, who looks like the peak of a mountain in stature and resembles the filaments of a lotus in complexion, who getting highly excited, lashes his tail again and again, nay, with the swish of whose tail all the ten directions resound, is the Crown prince, Aṅgada by name, installed by Sugrīva, the king of monkeys. He challenges you to combat. (10—17)

वालिनः सदृशः पुत्रः सुग्रीवस्य सदा प्रियः ।
राघवार्थे पराक्रान्तः शक्रार्थे वरुणो यथा ॥ १८ ॥

“A son worthy of Vāli (his father), he is ever beloved of Sugrīva (his uncle) and is ready to display his prowess in the cause of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as Varuṇa (the god of water) in the cause of Indra, the ruler of gods. (18)

एतस्य सा मतिः सर्वा यद् दृष्टा जनकात्मजा ।
हनुमता वेगवता राघवस्य हितैषिणा ॥ १९ ॥

“That Sitā, daughter of Janaka, was seen by Hanumān, who is full of speed and is a well-wisher of Rāma (a scion of Raghu), was wholly the design of Aṅgada. (19)

बहूनि वानरेन्द्राणामेष यूथानि वीर्यवान् ।
परिगृह्याभियाति त्वां स्वेनानीकेन मर्दितुम् ॥ २० ॥

“Taking with him many battalions of the foremost of monkeys, this powerful monkey is marching forward to crush you with his army. (20)

अनुवालिसुतस्यापि बलेन महता वृतः।
वीरस्तिष्ठति संग्रामे सेतुहेतुरयं नलः ॥ २१ ॥

“Also, surrounded by a large army, here stands the valiant Nala, the builder of the bridge, behind the son of Vāli, ready for a battle. (21)

ये तु विष्टभ्य गात्राणि क्ष्वेडयन्ति नदन्ति च।
उत्थाय च विजृम्भन्ते क्रोधेन हरिपुङ्गवाः ॥ २२ ॥
एते दुष्प्रसहा घोराश्चण्डाश्चण्डपराक्रमाः।
अष्टौ शतसहस्राणि दशकोटिशतानि च।
य एनमनुगच्छन्ति वीराश्चन्दनवासिनः ॥ २३ ॥
एषैवाशंसते लङ्कां स्वेनानीकेन मर्दितुम्।
श्वेतो रजतसंकाशश्चपलो भीमविक्रमः ॥ २४ ॥
बुद्धिमान् वानरः शूरस्त्रिषु लोकेषु विश्रुतः।
तूर्णं सुग्रीवमागम्य पुनर्गच्छति वानरः ॥ २५ ॥
विभजन् वानरीं सेनामनीकानि प्रहर्षयन्।
यः पुरा गोमतीतीरे रम्यं पर्येति पर्वतम् ॥ २६ ॥
नाम्ना संरोचनो नाम नानानगयुतो गिरिः।
तत्र राज्यं प्रशास्त्येष कुमुदो नाम यूथपः ॥ २७ ॥

“These formidable and irate bulls among monkeys, of terrible prowess, numbering a thousand crore and eight lakhs, and difficult to resist, who, having stiffened their limbs, are roaring like lions and thundering, and who, springing up on their feet, stretch their limbs in fury, as also yonder valiant monkeys inhabiting the forest of sandalwood trees follow the lead of Nala, who also aspires to crush Laṅkā with his army. The clever, agile and brave monkey, Śweta, of terrible prowess, who is silver-like in hue, is widely known in all the three worlds. Quickly approaching Sugrīva, nay, dividing the army of monkeys and bringing great delight to the troops, he goes back. On the bank of the river Gomatī there is a mountain clothed with various trees, Saṁrocana by name. Here is a commander of monkey hordes, Kumuda by name, who in the days gone by used to roam about that lovely mountain and ruled his kingdom while living in that region. (22—27)

योऽसौ शतसहस्राणि सहर्षं परिकर्षति।
यस्य वाला बहुव्यामा दीर्घलाङ्गूलमाश्रिताः ॥ २८ ॥
ताम्राः पीताः सिताः श्वेताः प्रकीर्णा घोरदर्शनाः।
अदीनो वानरश्चण्डः संग्राममभिकाङ्क्षति।
एषोऽप्याशंसते लङ्कां स्वेनानीकेन मर्दितुम् ॥ २९ ॥

“He who joyfully draws in his train hundreds of thousands of monkeys and who has very long hair—coppery, yellow, pale and white and hideous to look at, thrown about on his tail is the intrepid monkey Caṇḍa, who yearns to fight. He too aspires to crush Laṅkā with his army. (28-29)

यस्त्वेष सिंहसंकाशः कपिलो दीर्घकेसरः।
निभृतः प्रेक्षते लङ्कां दिधक्षन्निव चक्षुषा ॥ ३० ॥
विन्ध्यं कृष्णगिरिं सह्यं पर्वतं च सुदर्शनम्।
राजन् सततमध्यास्ते स रम्भो नाम यूथपः।
शतं शतसहस्राणां त्रिंशच्च हरिपुङ्गवाः ॥ ३१ ॥
यं यान्तं वानरा घोराश्चण्डाश्चण्डपराक्रमाः।
परिवार्यानुगच्छन्ति लङ्कां मर्दितुमोजसा ॥ ३२ ॥

“He who is tawny of hue with long manes and looks, much like a lion, nay, who with an attentive mind gazes on Laṅkā as though he would consume it with his glance and who continuously dwells on the Vindhya, Kṛṣṇagiri, Sahya and Sudarśana mountains, O king, is a commander of monkey hordes, Rambha by name, surrounding whom, even as he marches, one crore and thirty bulls like monkeys, formidable, ferocious and of terrific prowess, follow in order to crush Laṅkā with their might. (30—32)

यस्तु कर्णो विवृणुते जृम्भते च पुनः पुनः।
न तु संविजते मृत्योर्न च सेनां प्रधावति ॥ ३३ ॥
प्रकम्पते च रोषेण तिर्यक् च पुनरीक्षते।
पश्य लाङ्गूलविक्षेपं क्ष्वेडत्येष महाबलः ॥ ३४ ॥

महाजवो वीतभयो रम्यं साल्वेयपर्वतम्।
राजन् सततमध्यास्ते शरभो नाम यूथपः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Look, he who dilates his ears and repeatedly yawns, who does not feel afraid of Death and does not run after an army, nay, who shakes violently through anger and also looks askance, who, lashing his tail, roars like a lion with great vigour and constantly dwells, O king, on the lovely Sālveya mountain, is a commander of monkey hordes, Śarabha by name, who is endowed with extraordinary might and is wholly devoid of fear. (33—35)

एतस्य बलिनः सर्वे विहारा नाम यूथपाः।
राजन् शतसहस्राणि चत्वारिंशत्तथैव च ॥ ३६ ॥

“Under his command there are one lakh and forty commanders of monkey hordes, known by the name of Vihāras, who are all full of might. (36)

यस्तु मेघ इवाकाशं महानावृत्य तिष्ठति।
मध्ये वानरवीराणां सुराणामिव वासवः ॥ ३७ ॥
भेरीणामिव संनादो यस्यैष श्रूयते महान्।
घोषः शाखामृगेन्द्राणां संग्राममभिकाङ्क्षताम् ॥ ३८ ॥
एष पर्वतमध्यास्ते पारियात्रमनुत्तमम्।
युद्धे दुष्प्रसहो नित्यं पनसो नाम यूथपः ॥ ३९ ॥

“The gigantic monkey who for his part stands enveloping space like a cloud, in the midst of monkey heroes, as Indra in the midst of gods, nay, whose roar resembling the roll of kettle-drums is heard at this moment in the midst of leaders of monkeys who are eager to fight, and who dwells on the most excellent Pāriyātra mountain, is a commander of monkey hordes, Panasa by name, who is ever difficult to resist in combat. (37—39)

एनं शतसहस्राणां शतार्धं पर्युपासते।
यूथपा यूथपश्रेष्ठं येषां यूथानि भागशः ॥ ४० ॥

“Troop-commanders, numbering fifty lakhs, and commanding separate units, remain at the beck and call of this leader of troop-commanders. (40)

यस्तु भीमां प्रवल्गन्तीं चमूं तिष्ठति शोभयन्।
स्थितां तीरे समुद्रस्य द्वितीय इव सागरः ॥ ४१ ॥
एष दर्दुरसंकाशो विनतो नाम यूथपः।
पिबंश्चरति यो वेणां नदीनामुत्तमां नदीम् ॥ ४२ ॥

“He who for his part stands here like another sea, lending charm to the formidable army stationed on the sea-shore, bounding for joy, is the commander, Vinata, who resembles the Dardura mountain in size and moves about drinking the waters of the river Veṇā, the foremost of all rivers. (41-42)

षष्टिः शतसहस्राणि बलमस्य प्लवंगमाः।
त्वामाह्वयति युद्धाय क्रोधनो नाम वानरः ॥ ४३ ॥
विक्रान्ता बलवन्तश्च यथा यूथानि भागशः।
यस्तु गैरिकवर्णाभं वपुः पुष्यति वानरः ॥ ४४ ॥
अवमत्य सदा सर्वान् वानरान् बलदर्पितः।
गवयो नाम तेजस्वी त्वां क्रोधादभिवर्तते ॥ ४५ ॥

“Sixty lakh monkeys constitute the unit under his command. The monkey Krodhana, under whose command there are valiant and powerful troop-commanders even as there are distinct units under their command, is challenging you to combat. The glorious monkey, who for his part nourishes his body having an ochre-like hue for the sake of war with you and, proud, as he is, of his might, stands facing you in fury, ever holding all the other monkeys in contempt, is Gavaya by name. (43—45)

एनं शतसहस्राणि सप्ततिः पर्युपासते।
एषैवाशंसते लङ्कां स्वेनानीकेन मर्दितुम् ॥ ४६ ॥

“Seventy lakh monkeys stand at his beck and call and he too aspires to lay Laṅkā in ruins with his army. (46)

एते दुष्प्रसहा वीरा येषां संख्या न विद्यते।
यूथपा यूथपश्रेष्ठास्तेषां यूथानि भागशः ॥ ४७ ॥

“The afore-mentioned troop-commanders, who are the foremost among generals and who cannot be numbered, are formidable heroes. They have distinct units under their command.” (47)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षड्विंशः सर्गः ॥ २६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic

सप्तविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXVII

Mentioning the names of other monkey-generals, Sāraṇa proceeds to describe their individual valour

तांस्तु ते सम्प्रवक्ष्यामि प्रेक्षमाणस्य यूथपान् ।
राघवार्थे पराक्रान्ता ये न रक्षन्ति जीवितम् ॥ १ ॥

“I for my part shall describe in detail to you, who are keenly observant, the monkey-generals who, being ready to show their valour in the cause of Rāma (a scion of Raghu), do not care even for their lives. (1)

स्निग्धा यस्य बहुव्यामा दीर्घलाङ्गूलमाश्रिताः ।
ताम्राः पीताः सिताः श्वेताः प्रकीर्णा घोरकर्मणः ॥ २ ॥
प्रगृहीताः प्रकाशन्ते सूर्यस्येव मरीचयः ।
पृथिव्यां चानुकृष्यन्ते हरो नामैष वानरः ॥ ३ ॥

“This monkey of terrible deeds is known by the name of Hara. The glossy hairs adhering to his long tail, which are coppery, yellow, brown and white and of great length, shine brightly like the sun’s rays, standing erect as they do, and, being thrown about, are dragged along the ground in his train. (2-3)

यं पृष्ठतोऽनुगच्छन्ति शतशोऽथ सहस्रशः ।
वृक्षानुद्यम्य सहसा लङ्कारोहणतत्पराः ॥ ४ ॥
यूथपा हरिराजस्य किंकराः समुपस्थिताः ।
नीलानिव महामेघांस्तिष्ठतो यांस्तु पश्यसि ॥ ५ ॥
असिताञ्जनसंकाशान् युद्धे सत्यपराक्रमान् ।
असंख्येयाननिर्देशान् परं पारमिवोदधेः ॥ ६ ॥

पर्वतेषु च ये केचिद् विषयेषु नदीषु च ।
एते त्वामभिवर्तन्ते राजनृक्षाः सुदारुणाः ॥ ७ ॥

“Lifting up trees and intent on storming Laṅkā, troop-commanders, numbering hundreds and thousands, who stand at the beck and call of Sugrīva (the king of monkeys), follow him close at hand. These warriors, again, whom you perceive ranging like huge sombre clouds, nay, who possess the hue of black collyrium and who are endowed with unfailing prowess on the field of battle, who cannot be numbered any more than the sands on the other sea-shore, much less mentioned by name, and who lived on mountains and some in plains, as also on river-banks, O king, are extremely ferocious bears, who are advancing towards you. (4—7)

एषां मध्ये स्थितो राजन् भीमाक्षो भीमदर्शनः ।
पर्जन्य इव जीमूतैः समन्तात् परिवारितः ॥ ८ ॥
ऋक्षवन्तं गिरिश्रेष्ठमध्यास्ते नर्मदां पिबन् ।
सर्वर्क्षाणामधिपतिर्धूम्रो नामैष यूथपः ॥ ९ ॥

“This warrior of dreadful eyes and fearful aspect standing in their midst, who is surrounded on all sides by bears as Parjanya, the god of rain, is by clouds, and who dwells on Ṛkṣavān, the foremost of mountains, drinking the water of the

Narmadā, is the suzerain lord of all bears and a commander of troops, Dhūmra by name. (8-9)

यवीयानस्य तु भ्राता पश्यैनं पर्वतोपमम्।
भ्रात्रा समानो रूपेण विशिष्टस्तु पराक्रमे ॥ १० ॥

“Again, there is a younger brother of Dhūmra, who, though like him in appearance, is decidedly superior in prowess. Look at him, resembling, as he does, a mountain. (10)

स एष जाम्बवान् नाम महायूथपयूथपः।
प्रशान्तो गुरुवर्ती च सम्प्रहारेष्वमर्षणः ॥ ११ ॥

“This warrior is Jāmbavān by name, a commander even of mighty generals. He is exceedingly placid, devoted to his elders and indignant in war. (11)

एतेन साह्यं तु महत् कृतं शक्रस्य धीमता।
दैवासुरे जाम्बवता लब्धाश्च बहवो वराः ॥ १२ ॥

“In the conflict between gods and demons, great assistance was actually rendered to Indra and numerous boons won by the intelligent Jāmbavān. (12)

आरुह्य पर्वताग्रेभ्यो महाभ्रविपुलाः शिलाः।
मुञ्चन्ति विपुलाकारा न मृत्योरुद्विजन्ति च ॥ १३ ॥
राक्षसानां च सदृशाः पिशाचानां च रोमशाः।
एतस्य सैन्या बहवो विचरन्त्यमितौजसः ॥ १४ ॥

“Scaling mountain-heights, his troops—who are like ogres and fiends in ferocity, are shaggy and endowed with immense energy, and roam about in large numbers—hurl from them massive rocks, as big as huge clouds, and do not tremble in the face of death. (13-14)

य एनमभिसंरब्धं प्लवमानमवस्थितम्।
प्रेक्षन्ते वानराः सर्वे स्थिता यूथपयूथपम् ॥ १५ ॥
एष राजन् सहस्राक्षं पर्युपास्ते हरीश्वरः।
बलेन बलसंयुक्तो दम्भो नामैष यूथपः ॥ १६ ॥

“This lord of monkeys—who is a commander of commanders, and at whom, whether he is leaping in fury or standing still, all the monkeys stand gazing, O king—is a commander of troops, Rambha by name, who, accompanied, as he is, by an army, ministers to Indra (the thousand-eyed god) with his army. (15-16)

यः स्थितं योजने शैलं गच्छन् पाश्वेन सेवते।
ऊर्ध्वं तथैव कायेन गतः प्राप्नोति योजनम् ॥ १७ ॥
यस्मात् तु परमं रूपं चतुष्पात्सु न विद्यते।
श्रुतः संनादनो नाम वानराणां पितामहः ॥ १८ ॥

“He who, while moving about, touches with his flanks a mountain situated at a distance of one Yojana (or eight miles) and, reaching likewise an object one Yojana high, grasps it with his body itself, nay, a form bigger than whom does not exist among the quadrupeds, is reported to be the grandfather of the monkeys, Saṁnādana by name. (17-18)

येन युद्धं तदा दत्तं रणे शक्रस्य धीमता।
पराजयश्च न प्राप्तः सोऽयं यूथपयूथपः ॥ १९ ॥

“Battle was once given by that intelligent monkey to Indra on a field of battle, but no defeat was sustained by him on that occasion. Such is that commander of commanders. (19)

यस्य विक्रममाणस्य शक्रस्येव पराक्रमः।
एष गन्धर्वकन्यायामुत्पन्नः कृष्णवर्त्मना ॥ २० ॥
तदा देवासुरे युद्धे साह्यार्थं त्रिदिवौकसाम्।
यत्र वैश्रवणो राजा जम्बूमपनिषेवते ॥ २१ ॥
यो राजा पर्वतेन्द्राणां बहुकिंनरसेविनाम्।
विहारसुखदो नित्यं भ्रातुस्ते राक्षसाधिप ॥ २२ ॥
तत्रैष रमते श्रीमान् बलवान् वानरोत्तमः।
युद्धेष्वकथनो नित्यं क्रथनो नाम यूथपः ॥ २३ ॥

“This monkey—whose prowess, even as he marches for a combat, equals that of Indra (ruler of gods)—was begotten by the god of fire through a Gandharva maiden for the purpose of helping the gods (lit., the denizens of heaven) in the conflict between the gods and the demons. This glorious and mighty jewel among the monkeys, a commander of troops, Krathana by name, who is ever unboastful in wars, revels on a mountain (Kailāsa), which is the king of rulers of mountains, frequented by numerous Kinnaras, a class of demigods with a human figure and the head of a horse or with a horse's body and the head of a man, nay, on which King Kubera (son of Sage Viśravā) takes his seat beneath a Jambū (a variety of rose-apple) tree, and which affords the delight of sport to your (said half-) brother, Kubera, O suzerain lord of ogres!

(20—23)

वृतः कोटिसहस्रेण हरीणां समवस्थितः।
एषैवाशंसते लङ्कां स्वेनानीकेन मर्दितुम्॥ २४॥

“Standing firm, surrounded by thousands of crores of monkeys, he too aspires to crush Laṅkā with his army. (24)

यो गङ्गामनुपर्येति त्रासयन् गजयूथपान्।
हस्तिनां वानराणां च पूर्ववैरमनुस्मरन्॥ २५॥
एष यूथपतिर्नेता गर्जन् गिरिगुहाशयः।
गजान् रोधयते वन्यानारुजंश्च महीरुहान्॥ २६॥

“Thundering and uprooting trees, this commander and leader of monkeys—who, remembering, as he does, the old antagonism between elephants and monkeys, roams along the banks of the Gaṅgā, sowing terror among the leaders of herds of elephants, and dwells in mountain caves—obstructs thereby the passage of wild elephants.

(25-26)

हरीणां वाहिनीमुख्यो नदीं हैमवतीमनु।
उशीरबीजमाश्रित्य मन्दरं पर्वतोत्तमम्॥ २७॥
रमते वानरश्रेष्ठो दिवि शक्र इव स्वयम्।
एनं शतसहस्राणां सहस्रमभिवर्तते॥ २८॥
वीर्यविक्रमदृष्टानां नर्दतां बाहुशालिनाम्।
स एष नेता चैतेषां वानराणां महात्मनाम्॥ २९॥

“Taking up his abode now on Mount Uśīrabija, along the bank of the Gaṅgā (having its source in the Himālayan range) and now on Mount Mandara, the foremost of mountains, the prince of monkeys, a leader of the simian troops, revels there as Indra, the ruler of gods, himself does in heaven. Ten crores of roaring monkeys proud of their virility and prowess and rich in strength of arms follow him; nay, he alone is the leader of these powerful monkeys.

(27—29)

स एष दुर्धरो राजन् प्रमाथी नाम यूथपः।
वातेनेवोद्धतं मेघं यमेनमनुपश्यसि॥ ३०॥
अनीकमपि संरब्धं वानराणां तरस्विनाम्।
उद्धूतमरुणाभासं पवनेन समन्ततः॥ ३१॥
विवर्तमानं बहुशो यत्रैतद्बहुलं रजः।
एतेऽसितमुखा घोरा गोलाङ्गूला महाबलाः॥ ३२॥
शतं शतसहस्राणि दृष्ट्वा वै सेतुबन्धनम्।
गोलाङ्गूलं महाराज गवाक्षं नाम यूथपम्॥ ३३॥
परिवार्याभिनर्दन्ते लङ्कां मर्दितुमोजसा।
भ्रमराचरिता यत्र सर्वकालफलद्रुमाः॥ ३४॥
यं सूर्यस्तुल्यवर्णाभमनुपर्येति पर्वतम्।
यस्य भासा सदा भान्ति तद्वर्णा मृगपक्षिणः॥ ३५॥
यस्य प्रस्थं महात्मानो न त्यजन्ति महर्षयः।
सर्वकामफला वृक्षाः सदा फलसमन्विताः॥ ३६॥
मधूनि च महार्हाणि यस्मिन् पर्वतसत्तमे।
तत्रैष रमते राजन् रम्ये काञ्चनपर्वते॥ ३७॥
मुख्यो वानरमुख्यानां केसरी नाम यूथपः।
षष्टिर्गिरिसहस्राणि रम्याः काञ्चनपर्वताः॥ ३८॥

“Difficult to resist, O king, is this celebrated general, Pramāthī by name, whom you see there, resembling a cloud propelled by the wind as also a furious band of agile monkeys, the smoke-coloured abundant dust raised by which is being repeatedly scattered in all directions by the wind. Here are formidable black-faced Golāṅgūlas (a species of large-tailed monkeys) endowed with extraordinary might and numbering a crore. Witnessing the construction of a bridge (across the sea), they stand surrounding the general, Gavākṣa by name, who is a Golāṅgūla himself and are roaring in their anxiety to demolish Laṅkā by dint of their might, O great king! The yonder general, Kesari by name, the foremost of leading monkeys, revels, O king, on the lovely Sumeru (the golden mountain), the most excellent of all mountains, the trees on which, yielding fruit in every season, are frequented by bees; which, casting as it does a splendour similar to that of the sun itself, is circumambulated by the sun clockwise; by virtue of whose lustre beasts and birds inhabiting that mountain appear golden; whose peaks are never forsaken by eminent high-souled Ṛṣis; the trees on which, yielding as they do all one's desired objects, are ever laden with fruit and on which highly valuable honeys of various varieties can be had. There are sixty thousand mountains, which are all lovely mountains of gold. (30—38)

तेषां मध्ये गिरिवरस्त्वमिवानघ रक्षसाम् ।
तत्रैके कपिलाः श्वेतास्ताम्रास्या मधुपिङ्गलाः ॥ ३९ ॥
निवसन्त्यन्तिमगिरौ तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रा नखायुधाः ।
सिंहा इव चतुर्दंष्ट्रा व्याघ्रा इव दुरासदाः ॥ ४० ॥

“In their midst stands out the foremost of mountains (Sāvarṇi-Meru by name), as you do among all the ogres, O sinless one! On the last (the northernmost) of those sixty thousand mountains dwell some monkeys, brown, white, coppery-faced and yellow like honey, with pointed teeth and having claws for their weapons, four-toothed as lions and dangerous to approach, as tigers. (39-40)

सर्वे वैश्वानरसमा ज्वलदाशीविषोपमाः ।
सुदीर्घाञ्चितलाङ्गूला मत्तमातङ्गसंनिभाः ॥ ४१ ॥

“They are all fire-like and resemble venomous serpents with flaming tongues. They have very long uplifted tails and look much like elephants in rut. (41)

महापर्वतसंकाशा महाजीमूतनिःस्वनाः ।
वृत्पिङ्गलनेत्रा हि महाभीमगतिस्वनाः ॥ ४२ ॥

“Nay, they resemble huge mountains in size and thunder like big clouds. Having round, grey eyes, they create a most appalling uproar while marching. (42)

मर्दयन्तीव ते सर्वे तस्थुर्लङ्कां समीक्ष्य ते ।
एष चैषामधिपतिर्मध्ये तिष्ठति वीर्यवान् ॥ ४३ ॥
जयार्थी नित्यमादित्यमुपतिष्ठति वीर्यवान् ।
नाम्ना पृथिव्यां विख्यातो राजन् शतबलीति यः ॥ ४४ ॥

“They all stand as though they would destroy your Laṅkā as soon as they gaze on it. Nay, here stands in their midst their valiant commander, widely known on earth, O king, by the name of Śatabali, who, clever as he is and desirous of victory, worships the sun-god every day. (43-44)

एषैवाशंसते लङ्कां स्वेनानीकेन मर्दितुम् ।
विक्रान्तो बलवान् शूरः पौरुषे स्वे व्यवस्थितः ॥ ४५ ॥

“He too aspires to demolish Laṅkā with his army. Valiant, powerful and daring, he banks on his own valour. (45)

रामप्रियार्थं प्राणानां दयां न कुरुते हरिः ।
गजो गवाक्षो गवयो नलो नीलश्च वानरः ॥ ४६ ॥

“The monkey would not spare his life in order to please Rāma. Besides the above-named, there are Gaja, Gavākṣa, Gavaya, Nala and the monkey Nīla. (46)

एकैकमेव योधानां कोटिभिर्दशभिवृतः ।
तथान्ये वानरश्रेष्ठा विन्ध्यपर्वतवासिनः ।
न शक्यन्ते बहुत्वात् तु संख्यातुं लघुविक्रमाः ॥ ४७ ॥

“Each one of them is surrounded by ten crores of warriors. Similarly, there are other leading monkeys inhabiting the Vindhyan range. Quick of gait, they cannot, however, be accounted due to their very large number. (47)

सर्वे महाराज महाप्रभावाः
सर्वे महाशैलनिकाशकायाः ।
सर्वे समर्थाः पृथिवीं क्षणेन
कर्तुं प्रविध्वस्तविकीर्णशैलाम् ॥ ४८ ॥

“All the aforesaid monkeys are endowed with extraordinary might. All have bodies resembling big mountains and all are capable of levelling in a trice the earth with its mountains razed to the ground and scattered,

O great king!" (48)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तविंशः सर्गः ॥ २७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टाविंशः सर्गः

Canto XXVIII

Śuka completes the account given by Sāraṇa

सारणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा रावणं राक्षसाधिपम् ।
बलमादिश्य तत् सर्वं शुको वाक्यमथाब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Śuka now spoke as follows to Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, when he had listened to the submission of Sāraṇa, who stood silent after describing the entire army of monkeys as mentioned above: (1)

स्थितान् पश्यसि यानेतान् मत्तानिव महाद्विपान् ।
न्यग्रोधानिव गाङ्गेयान् सालान् हैमवतानिव ॥ २ ॥
एते दुष्प्रसह्य राजन् बलिनः कामरूपिणः ।
दैत्यदानवसंकाशा युद्धे देवपराक्रमाः ॥ ३ ॥

"These monkeys, whom you see ranged like huge elephants in rut, like banian trees standing on the banks of the Gaṅgā or like sal trees growing on the Himālayas, O king, are difficult to resist, mighty and able to change their form at will. They look like Daityas and Dānavas and are endowed with the prowess of gods in war. (2-3)

एषां कोटिसहस्राणि नव पञ्च च सप्त च ।
तथा शङ्कुसहस्राणि तथा वृन्दशतानि च ॥ ४ ॥

"There are twenty-one thousand crore (or two hundred and ten thousand millions), a thousand Śaṅkus* and a hundred Vṛndas of these monkeys. (4)

एते सुग्रीवसचिवाः किष्किन्धानिलयाः सदा ।
हरयो देवगन्धर्वैरुत्पन्नाः कामरूपिणः ॥ ५ ॥

"These latter, who are the allies of Sugrīva and ever dwell in Kiṣkindhā itself, were begotten by gods and Gandharvas and are capable of changing their forms at will. (5)

यौ तौ पश्यसि तिष्ठन्तौ कुमारौ देवरूपिणौ ।
मैन्दश्च द्विविदश्चैव ताभ्यां नास्ति समो युधि ॥ ६ ॥

"The two monkeys whom you see standing over there, who resemble each other and are endowed with the appearance of gods, are Mainda and Dwivida by name; there is none equal to them in combat. (6)

ब्रह्मणा समनुज्ञातावमृतप्राशिनावुभौ ।
आशंसेते यथा लङ्कामेतौ मर्दितुमोजसा ॥ ७ ॥

"Duly permitted by Brahmā, the creator, both have quaffed the drink of immortality. These two monkeys too aspire duly to demolish Laṅkā by their own might. (7)

यं तु पश्यसि तिष्ठन्तं प्रभिन्नमिव कुञ्जरम् ।
यो बलात् क्षोभयेत् क्रुद्धः समुद्रमपि वानरः ॥ ८ ॥
एषोऽभिगन्ता लङ्कायां वैदेह्यास्तव च प्रभो ।
एनं पश्य पुरा दृष्टं वानरं पुनरागतम् ॥ ९ ॥

"The monkey whom you actually see

* The number exactly corresponding to a Śaṅku and a Vṛnda should be understood as calculated at the end of this canto.

standing here like an elephant in rut and who when enraged would violently churn up the sea itself went all the way to Laṅkā in search of Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) as well as of yourself, O lord. Behold this monkey seen (by you) before and come for a second time. (8-9)

ज्येष्ठः केसरिणः पुत्रो वातात्मज इति श्रुतः ।
हनुमानिति विख्यातो लङ्घितो येन सागरः ॥ १० ॥

“The eldest son of Kesari, he is also known as an offspring of the wind-god and is widely known as Hanumān, by whom the sea was crossed. (10)

कामरूपो हरिश्रेष्ठो बलरूपसमन्वितः ।
अनिवार्यगतिश्चैव यथा सततगः प्रभुः ॥ ११ ॥

“This prince of monkeys is able to change his form at will, is richly endowed with might and physical charm and cannot be stayed in his course any more than the powerful wind, which constantly blows. (11)

उद्यन्तं भास्करं दृष्ट्वा बालः किल बुभुक्षितः ।
त्रियोजनसहस्रं तु अध्वानमवतीर्य हि ॥ १२ ॥
आदित्यमाहरिष्यामि न मे क्षुत् प्रतियास्यति ।
इति निश्चित्य मनसा पुप्लुवे बलदर्पितः ॥ १३ ॥

“Seeing the rising sun when yet a child, feeling hungry, and resolving in his mind that ‘I shall eat up the sun inasmuch as my hunger will not be appeased otherwise,’ nay, actually bounding to a distance of three thousand Yojanas (or twenty-four thousand miles), they say, he leapt up in the sky, proud as he was of his own might. (12-13)

अनाधृष्यतमं देवमपि देवर्षिराक्षसैः ।
अनासाद्यैव पतितो भास्करोदयने गिरौ ॥ १४ ॥

“Unable as he was to reach the sun-god, who is most unassailable even to gods, Rṣis and ogres, he, however, fell on the eastern mountain on which the sun rises. (14)

पतितस्य कपेरस्य हनुरेका शिलातले ।
किञ्चिद् भिन्ना दृढहनुर्हनुमानेष तेन वै ॥ १५ ॥

“Even as the monkey fell on the surface of a rock, one of his jaws got slightly fractured; nevertheless it became all the more solid. Hence he actually came to be known as Hanumān. (15)

सत्यमागमयोगेन ममैष विदितो हरिः ।
नास्य शक्यं बलं रूपं प्रभावो वानुभाषितुम् ॥ १६ ॥

“Through association with the monkeys who came in contact with me, this monkey is known to me in reality. His strength, physical charm or glory is not capable of being described. (16)

एष आशंसते लङ्कामेको मथितुमोजसा ।
येन जाञ्चल्यतेऽसौ वै धूमकेतुस्तवाद्य वै ।
लङ्कायां निहितश्चापि कथं विस्मरसे कपिम् ॥ १७ ॥

“He aspires to destroy Laṅkā single-handed by his own might. How can you actually forget today the monkey by whom fire, which had been deprived of its lustre by your glory, was lighted on his tail at that time and also scattered in Laṅkā? (17)

यश्चैषोऽनन्तरः शूरः श्यामः पद्मनिभेक्षणः ।
इक्ष्वाकूणामतिरथो लोके विश्रुतपौरुषः ॥ १८ ॥
यस्मिन् न चलते धर्मो यो धर्मं नातिवर्तते ।
यो ब्राह्ममस्त्रं वेदांश्च वेद वेदविदां वरः ॥ १९ ॥
यो भिन्द्याद् गगनं बाणैर्मैदिनीं वापि दारयेत् ।
यस्य मृत्योरिव क्रोधः शक्रस्येव पराक्रमः ॥ २० ॥
यस्य भार्या जनस्थानात् सीता चापि हता त्वया ।
स एष रामस्त्वां राजन् योद्धुं समभिवर्तते ॥ २१ ॥

“Again, this valiant prince—who stands close by, nay, who is dark-brown of complexion and has lotus-like eyes, is a great car-warrior among the scions of Ikṣvāku, whose heroism is well-known in the world, in whom virtue never wavers, who never transgresses righteousness, who knows the use of the (mystic) missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator) as also the Vedas, nay, who is the foremost of the knowers of the Vedas, who can split the vault of heaven with his arrows and even rend the earth, whose wrath is like the wrath of Death and whose prowess is similar to that of Indra (the ruler of gods), and whose consort, Sītā, was borne away by you from Janasthāna. The selfsame Rāma is advancing to wage war on you, O king!

(18—21)

यस्यैष दक्षिणे पाश्वे शुद्धजाम्बूनदप्रभः ।
विशालवक्षास्ताम्राक्षो नीलकुञ्चितमूर्धजः ॥ २२ ॥
एषो हि लक्ष्मणो नाम भ्रातुः प्रियहिते रतः ।
नये युद्धे च कुशलः सर्वशस्त्रभृतां वरः ॥ २३ ॥

“He who actually stands here on the right side of Rāma, radiant as refined gold, with a broad chest, coppery eyes and dark curly locks, is Lakṣmaṇa by name. He is devoted to his eldest brother’s pleasure and interests, skilled in statecraft as well as in warfare and the foremost among all wielders of weapons.

(22-23)

अमर्षी दुर्जयो जेता विक्रान्तश्च जयी बली ।
रामस्य दक्षिणो बाहुर्नित्यं प्राणो बहिश्चरः ॥ २४ ॥

“He is unforgiving towards the enemies of Rāma, difficult to conquer, victorious, brave, conquering and mighty. He has always been the right arm of Rāma, nay, his very external life-breath.

(24)

नह्येष राघवस्यार्थे जीवितं परिरक्षति ।
एषैवाशंसते युद्धे निहन्तुं सर्वराक्षसान् ॥ २५ ॥

“Surely he does not spare his own self for the sake of Rāma (a scion of Raghu). He too aspires to exterminate all the ogres in battle.

(25)

यस्तु सव्यमसौ पक्षं रामस्याश्रित्य तिष्ठति ।
रक्षोगणपरिक्षिप्तो राजा ह्येष विभीषणः ॥ २६ ॥

“He who for his part stands over there sticking to the left flank of Rāma and surrounded by a party of ogres is King Vibhiṣaṇa indeed.

(26)

श्रीमता राजराजेन लङ्कायामभिषेचितः ।
त्वामसौ प्रतिसंरब्धो युद्धायैषोऽभिवर्तते ॥ २७ ॥

“Having been consecrated as a sovereign of Laṅkā by the glorious Rāma (the king of kings) and filled with rage, he is marching towards you for an encounter.

(27)

यं तु पश्यसि तिष्ठन्तं मध्ये गिरिमिवाचलम् ।
सर्वशाखामृगेन्द्राणां भर्तारममितौजसम् ॥ २८ ॥
तेजसा यशसा बुद्ध्या बलेनाभिजनेन च ।
यः कपीनतिबभ्राज हिमवानिव पर्वतः ॥ २९ ॥
किष्किन्धां यः समध्यास्ते गुहां सगहनद्रुमाम् ।
दुर्गां पर्वतदुर्गम्यां प्रधानैः सह यूथपैः ॥ ३० ॥
यस्यैषा काञ्चनी माला शोभते शतपुष्करा ।
कान्ता देवमनुष्याणां यस्यां लक्ष्मीः प्रतिष्ठिता ॥ ३१ ॥
एतां मालां च तारां च कपिराज्यं च शाश्वतम् ।
सुग्रीवो वालिनं हत्वा रामेण प्रतिपादितः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Sugrīva, whom indeed you see standing immovable like a rock in the centre, the lord of all monkey chiefs, endowed with immeasurable energy, who outshines all the monkeys in glory, renown, intelligence, might and pedigree, even as the Himālaya mountain outshines other mountains; who comfortably dwells with the principal monkey leaders in Kiṣkindhā, a cave with thickly growing trees and difficult of access, which cannot further be easily reached because of mountains; about whose neck shines a chain of gold wrought with a hundred lotuses and coveted by gods and men alike, in which Lakṣmī, the goddess of fortune, stands firmly installed—the same Sugrīva was granted this chain as well as Tārā (the consort of his elder brother Vāli) as also the lasting rulership of monkeys by Rāma after the latter had killed Vāli.

(28—32)

शतं शतसहस्राणां कोटिमाहुर्मनीषिणः ।
शतं कोटिसहस्राणां शङ्कुरित्यभिधीयते ॥ ३३ ॥

“The wise speak of a hundred thousand multiplied by hundred as a crore, while a lakh of such crores is called a Śaṅku. (33)

शतं शङ्कुसहस्राणां महाशङ्कुरिति स्मृतः ।
महाशङ्कुसहस्राणां शतं वृन्दमिहोच्यते ॥ ३४ ॥

“A lakh of Śaṅkus is known as a Mahāśaṅku. A lakh of Mahāśaṅkus is spoken of as a Vṛnda in this context. (34)

शतं वृन्दसहस्राणां महावृन्दमिति स्मृतम् ।
महावृन्दसहस्राणां शतं पद्ममिहोच्यते ॥ ३५ ॥

“A lakh of Vṛndas is known as a Mahāvṛnda. A lakh of Mahāvṛndas is spoken of in this context as a Padma. (35)

शतं पद्मसहस्राणां महापद्ममिति स्मृतम् ।
महापद्मसहस्राणां शतं खर्वमिहोच्यते ॥ ३६ ॥

“A lakh of Padmas is known as a Mahāpadma. A lakh of Mahāpadmas is spoken of in this context as a Kharva. (36)

शतं खर्वसहस्राणां महाखर्वमिति स्मृतम् ।
महाखर्वसहस्राणां समुद्रमभिधीयते ।
शतं समुद्रसाहस्रमोघ इत्यभिधीयते ॥ ३७ ॥

A lakh of Kharvas is known as a Mahākharva. A lakh of Mahākharvas is called a Samudra. A lakh of Samudras is called an Ogha. (37)

शतमोघसहस्राणां महौघा इति विश्रुतः ।
एवं कोटिसहस्रेण शङ्कूनां च शतेन च ।
महाशङ्कुसहस्रेण तथा वृन्दशतेन च ॥ ३८ ॥
महावृन्दसहस्रेण तथा पद्मशतेन च ।
महापद्मसहस्रेण तथा खर्वशतेन च ॥ ३९ ॥

समुद्रेण च तेनैव महौघेन तथैव च
एष कोटिमहौघेन समुद्रसदृशेन च ॥ ४० ॥
विभीषणेन वीरेण सचिवैः परिवारितः ।
सुग्रीवो वानरेन्द्रस्त्वां युद्धार्थमनुवर्तते ।
महाबलवृतो नित्यं महाबलपराक्रमः ॥ ४१ ॥

“A lakh of Oghas is popularly known as a Mahaugha. Surrounded according to this computation by a thousand crore and one hundred Śaṅkus and a thousand Mahāśaṅkus and likewise by a hundred Vṛndas, even so, by a thousand Mahāvṛndas and a hundred Padmas, in the same manner by a thousand Mahāpadmas and a hundred Kharvas, nay, by a hundred Samudras and similarly by a hundred Mahaughas and by a hundred crore Mahaughas of monkey warriors, as well as by the gallant Vibhiṣaṇa and his own ministers. Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, is following you for waging war—Sugrīva, who is thus surrounded by a huge army and ever endowed with extraordinary might and prowess. (38—41)

इमां महाराज समीक्ष्य वाहिनी-
मुपस्थितां प्रज्वलितग्रहोपमाम् ।
ततः प्रयत्नः परमो विधीयतां
यथा जयः स्यान् परैः पराभवः ॥ ४२ ॥

“Carefully observing, O great king, this army ranged like a blazing planet, a supreme effort may now be put forth so that your victory may be ensured and no discomfiture may follow at the hands of the enemies.” (42)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टाविंशः सर्गः ॥ २८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXIX

Snubbing Śuka and Sāraṇa, Rāvaṇa expels them from his court and dispatches Śārdūla and other ogres for espionage. Captured by the monkeys, the ogres are thrashed by them and get released by Śrī Rāma. Returning to Laṅkā, they too speak to Rāvaṇa about the army of monkeys

शुकेन तु समादिष्टान् दृष्ट्वा स हरियूथपान् ।
लक्ष्मणं च महावीर्यं भुजं रामस्य दक्षिणम् ॥ १ ॥
समीपस्थं च रामस्य भ्रातरं च विभीषणम् ।
सर्वानरराजं च सुग्रीवं भीमविक्रमम् ॥ २ ॥
अङ्गदं चापि बलिनं वज्रहस्तात्मजात्मजम् ।
हनूमन्तं च विक्रान्तं जाम्बवन्तं च दुर्जयम् ॥ ३ ॥
सुषेणं कुमुदं नीलं नलं च प्लवगर्षभम् ।
गजं गवाक्षं शरभं मैन्दं च द्विविदं तथा ॥ ४ ॥
किञ्चिदाविग्रहदयो जातक्रोधश्च रावणः ।
भर्त्स्यामास तौ वीरौ कथान्ते शुकसारणौ ॥ ५ ॥

A bit agitated at heart and enraged to behold the monkey leaders, duly pointed out by Śuka, as also Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary valour and was the right arm of Śrī Rāma, as well as his (own half-) brother Vibhiṣaṇa, standing close to Śrī Rāma, also Sugrīva of terrific prowess, the ruler of all the monkeys, and the mighty Aṅgada, sprung from the loins of Vālī (an offspring of Indra, who carries the thunderbolt in his hand), nay, the valiant Hanūmān as well as Jāmbavān, who was difficult to conquer, Suṣeṇa, Kumuda, Nila, Nala, the foremost of monkeys, and Gaja, Gavākṣa, Śarabha, Mainda and Dwivida too, Rāvaṇa for his part rebuked the aforesaid two heroes, Śuka and Sāraṇa, at the conclusion of their submission. (1—5)

अधोमुखौ तौ प्रणतावब्रवीच्छुकसारणौ ।
रोषगद्गदया वाचा संरब्धं परुषं तथा ॥ ६ ॥

In a voice strangled with fury he spoke indignantly and harshly as follows to the said Śuka and Sāraṇa, who stood with their heads bent low in supplication: (6)

न तावत् सदृशं नाम सच्चिवैरुपजीविभिः ।
विप्रियं नृपतेर्वक्तुं निग्रहे प्रग्रहे प्रभोः ॥ ७ ॥

“Really speaking, it is not at all fitting that unpalatable words should be uttered by dependent ministers in the presence of a ruler of men who has the power to mete out punishment or reward. (7)

रिपूणां प्रतिकूलानां युद्धार्थमभिवर्तताम् ।
उभाभ्यां सदृशं नाम वक्तुमप्रस्तवे स्तवम् ॥ ८ ॥

“Was it really becoming of you both to utter out of season the praises of enemies who are antagonistic to us and are advancing to wage war? (8)

आचार्या गुरवो वृद्धा वृथा वां पर्युपासिताः ।
सारं यद् राजशास्त्राणामनुजीव्यं न गृह्यते ॥ ९ ॥

“In vain have preceptors, parents and elders been waited upon by you in that the essence of scriptures on political wisdom, which deserved to be acted upon in your life, has not been imbibed by you. (9)

गृहीतो वा न विज्ञातो भारोऽज्ञानस्य बाह्यते ।
ईदृशैः सच्चिवैर्युक्तो मूर्खैर्दिष्ट्या धराम्यहम् ॥ १० ॥

“Even if it was grasped by you, it has not been retained in memory. The load of ignorance alone is being borne by you. Through sheer good luck I am able to retain my sovereignty even though conjoined with stupid ministers like these. (10)

किं नु मृत्योर्भयं नास्ति मां वक्तुं परुषं वचः ।

यस्य मे शासतो जिह्वा प्रयच्छति शुभाशुभम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Did no fear of death really haunt you when you made bold to speak such insolent words to me, your ruler, whose mere tongue can dispense good and evil to you? (11)

अप्येव दहनं स्पृष्ट्वा वने तिष्ठन्ति पादपाः ।

राजदण्डपरामृष्टास्तिष्ठन्ते नापराधिनः ॥ १२ ॥

“Trees in a forest may remain standing unscathed even on touching a forest conflagration. No evil-doers can, however, remain unpunished when made the target of a ruler's punishment. (12)

हन्यामहं त्विमौ पापौ शत्रुपक्षप्रशंसिनौ ।

यदि पूर्वोपकारैर्मे क्रोधो न मृदुतां व्रजेत् ॥ १३ ॥

“I should undoubtedly put to death these two sinful ogres hymning the praises of the hostile ranks, had my anger not been moderated by the thought of their past services. (13)

अपध्वंसत नश्यध्वं संनिकर्षादितो मम ।

नहि वां हन्तुमिच्छामि स्मराम्युपकृतानि वाम् ।

हतावेव कृतघ्नौ द्वौ मयि स्नेहपराङ्मुखौ ॥ १४ ॥

“Get out of my court for good and disappear from my presence. I do not wish to kill you since I am cognizant of your past services. You two stand killed all the same, ungrateful as you are and devoid of devotion to me.” (14)

एवमुक्तौ तु सब्रीडौ तौ दृष्ट्वा शुकसारणौ ।

रावणं जयशब्देन प्रतिनन्द्याभिनिःसृतौ ॥ १५ ॥

Feeling abashed when admonished in these words by Rāvaṇa, nay, looking at Rāvaṇa and cheering him in the words “Be victorious!”, Śuka and Sāraṇa, for their part, withdrew. (15)

अब्रवीच्च दशग्रीवः समीपस्थं महोदरम् ।

उपस्थापय मे शीघ्रं चारानिति निशाचरः ।

महोदरस्तथोक्तस्तु शीघ्रमाज्ञापयच्चरान् ॥ १६ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, further said to Mahodara, standing close to him, “Bring me other spies quickly.” Commanded thus, the ranger of the night, Mahodara, for his part speedily ordered spies to be present before the king. (16)

ततश्चाराः संत्वरिताः प्राप्ताः पार्थिवशासनात् ।

उपस्थिताः प्राञ्जलयो वर्धयित्वा जयाशिषः ॥ १७ ॥

Arrived posthaste in obedience to the royal command, spies thereupon stood in waiting before the king with joined palms, pronouncing benedictions wishing him victory. (17)

तानब्रवीत् ततो वाक्यं रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ।

चारान् प्रत्यायिकाञ्छूरां धीरान् विगतसाध्वसान् ॥ १८ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, then spoke as follows to those spies, who were trustworthy, brave, resolute and fearless: (18)

इतो गच्छत रामस्य व्यवसायं परीक्षितुम् ।

मन्त्रेष्वभ्यन्तरा येऽस्य प्रीत्या तेन समागताः ॥ १९ ॥

“Proceed from this place to ascertain the plans of Rāma as well as of those who are nearest to him in deliberations and who have got united with him through love. (19)

कथं स्वपिति जागर्ति किमद्य च करिष्यति ।

विज्ञाय निपुणं सर्वमागन्तव्यमशेषतः ॥ २० ॥

“Finding out definitely everything thoroughly as to how he goes to bed, how again he wakes up and what he intends to do today, you should come back. (20)

चारेण विदितः शत्रुः पण्डितैर्वसुधाधिपैः ।

युद्धे स्वल्पेन यत्नेन समासाद्य निरस्यते ॥ २१ ॥

“An enemy whose movements and strength have come to be known through a spy is repulsed by wise monarchs with very little effort after being assailed.” (21)

चारास्तु ते तथेत्युक्त्वा प्रहृष्टा राक्षसेश्वरम्।
शार्दूलमग्रतः कृत्वा ततश्चक्रुः प्रदक्षिणम् ॥ २२ ॥

Saying "Amen!" to Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres) and placing Śārdūla at their head, the aforesaid spies for their part thereupon went round Rāvaṇa clockwise, highly rejoiced. (22)

ततस्तं तु महात्मानं चारा राक्षससत्तमम्।
कृत्वा प्रदक्षिणं जग्मुर्यत्र रामः सलक्ष्मणः ॥ २३ ॥

Having gone round the gigantic Rāvaṇa, the foremost of ogres, clockwise, the spies for their part then left for the place where Śrī Rāma accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa was. (23)

ते सुवेलस्य शैलस्य समीपे रामलक्ष्मणौ।
प्रच्छन्ना ददृशुर्गत्वा ससुग्रीवविभीषणौ ॥ २४ ॥

Approaching the Suvela mountain in disguise, they saw Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, accompanied by Sugriva and Vibhiṣaṇa. (24)

प्रेक्षमाणाश्चमूं तां च बभूवुर्भयविह्वलाः।
ते तु धर्मात्मना दृष्टा राक्षसेन्द्रेण राक्षसाः ॥ २५ ॥

Nay, they were beside themselves with fear as they were observing the aforesaid army of monkeys. Meanwhile the said ogres were detected by Vibhiṣaṇa (the lord of ogres), whose mind was given to piety. (25)

विभीषणेन तत्रस्था निगृहीता यदृच्छया।
शार्दूलो ग्राहितस्त्वेकः पापोऽयमिति राक्षसः ॥ २६ ॥

Standing unexpectedly there, the ogres were scolded by Vibhiṣaṇa. The ogre Śārdūla alone was, however, pointed out by name on the plea that he was a sinner. (26)

मोचितः सोऽपि रामेण वध्यमानः प्लवंगमैः।
आनृशंस्येन रामेण मोचिता राक्षसाः परे ॥ २७ ॥

He too was, however, set free by Śrī Rāma, even while he was being smitten by the monkeys. Nay, the other ogres too were given their freedom by the humane, Śrī Rāma. (27)

वानरैरर्दितास्ते तु विक्रान्तैर्लघुविक्रमैः।
पुनर्लङ्कामनुप्राप्ताः श्वसन्तो नष्टचेतसः ॥ २८ ॥

Harassed all the same by the monkeys, who were all valiant and swift-footed, they returned to Laṅkā panting and stupefied. (28)

ततो दशग्रीवमुपस्थितास्ते
चारा बहिर्नित्यचरा निशाचराः।
गिरेः सुवेलस्य समीपवासिनं
न्यवेदयन् रामबलं महाबलाः ॥ २९ ॥

Arrived in the presence of Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, the aforesaid ogres, who were always ranging outside as spies and who were endowed with extraordinary might, reported the army of Śrī Rāma to be camping in the vicinity of the Suvela mountain. (29)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ २९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Twenty-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXX

Dispatched by Rāvaṇa to ascertain the strength of the simian army, the ogre Śārdūla acquaints his master with the topmost leaders of the monkeys

ततस्तमक्षोभ्यबलं लङ्काधिपतये चराः ।
सुवेले राघवं शैले निविष्टं प्रत्यवेदयन् ॥ १ ॥

The spies thereupon reported to Rāvaṇa
(the sovereign of Lāṅkā) about Śrī Rāma
(a scion of Raghu) having encamped with his unshakable army on the Suvela mountain. (1)

चाराणां रावणः श्रुत्वा प्राप्तं रामं महाबलम् ।
जातोद्वेगोऽभवत् किञ्चिच्छार्दूलं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Hearing from the mouth of his spies about Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having arrived at the very door of Lāṅkā, Rāvaṇa felt a bit perturbed and spoke to Śārdūla as follows: (2)

अयथावच्च ते वर्णो दीनश्चासि निशाचर ।
नासि कच्चिदमित्राणां क्रुद्धानां वशमागतः ॥ ३ ॥

“Your colour is not as it should be;
nay, you look wretched, too, O ranger of the night! I hope you did not fall into the sway of enraged enemies.” (3)

इति तेनानुशिष्टस्तु वाचं मन्दमुदीरयन् ।
तदा राक्षसशार्दूलं शार्दूलो भयविक्लवः ॥ ४ ॥

Questioned in these words by Rāvaṇa,
Śārdūla for his part, who had been unnerved by fear, then replied to Rāvaṇa (a tiger among the ogres) in faint accents as follows:
(4)

न ते चारयितुं शक्या राजन् वानरपुङ्गवाः ।
विक्रान्ता बलवन्तश्च राघवेण च रक्षिताः ॥ ५ ॥

“Those bulls among the monkeys are not liable to being spied upon, O king, valiant and mighty and protected by Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as they are. (5)

नापि सम्भाषितुं शक्याः सम्प्रश्नोऽत्र न लभ्यते ।
सर्वतो रक्ष्यते पन्था वानरैः पर्वतोपमैः ॥ ६ ॥

“They are not capable even of being talked with nor is there any scope for a question being put to them: for access to them is guarded on all sides by monkeys looking like mountains. (6)

प्रविष्टमात्रे ज्ञातोऽहं बले तस्मिन् विचारिते ।
बलाद् गृहीतो रक्षोभिर्बहुधास्मि विचारितः ॥ ७ ॥

“The aforesaid army was barely penetrated into by me and began to be examined when I was detected and forcibly seized by the ogres forming the retinue of Vibhiṣaṇa and was made to march hither and thither in various gaits. (7)

जानुभिर्मुष्टिभिर्दन्तैस्तलैश्चाभिहतो भृशम् ।
परिणीतोऽस्मि हरिभिर्बलमध्ये अमर्षणैः ॥ ८ ॥

“I was severely belaboured on all sides with knees, fists, teeth and palms by the indignant monkeys and paraded all through in the army. (8)

परिणीय च सर्वत्र नीतोऽहं रामसंसदि ।
रुधिरस्त्राविदीनाङ्गो विह्वलश्चलितेन्द्रियः ॥ ९ ॥

“After parading me everywhere I was led into the court of Rāma, unnerved as I was, my limbs bleeding and afflicted, and my senses perturbed. (9)

हरिभिर्वध्यमानश्च याचमानः कृताञ्जलिः ।
राघवेण परित्रातो मा मेति च यदृच्छया ॥ १० ॥

“While being smitten by the monkeys and asking for protection with joined palms,

I was unexpectedly delivered by Rāma saying "Stay! Stay!!" (10)

एष शैलशिलाभिस्तु पूरयित्वा महार्णवम्।
द्वारमाश्रित्य लङ्काया रामस्तिष्ठति सायुधः ॥ ११ ॥

"Having filled the extensive sea with rocks of mountains and taking up his position at the very gate of Laṅkā, Rāma stands there duly equipped with weapons. (11)

गरुडव्यूहमास्थाय सर्वतो हरिर्भिवृतः।
मां विसृज्य महातेजा लङ्कामेवातिवर्तते ॥ १२ ॥

"Having disposed his army in the form of Garuḍa (an eagle) and surrounded as he was on all sides by monkeys, nay, setting me free, Rāma, who is endowed with extraordinary energy, is advancing towards Laṅkā itself. (12)

पुरा प्राकारमायाति क्षिप्रमेकतरं कुरु।
सीतां वापि प्रयच्छाशु युद्धं वापि प्रदीयताम् ॥ १३ ॥

"Before he reaches the defensive wall do one thing or the other with all speed: either return Sītā immediately or battle may be given to him." (13)

मनसा तत् तदा प्रेक्ष्य तच्छ्रुत्वा राक्षसाधिपः।
शार्दूलं सुमहद्वाक्यमथोवाच स रावणः ॥ १४ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid submission and reviewing it in his mind then and there, the celebrated Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, now addressed the following highly momentous reply to Śārdūla: (14)

यदि मां प्रतियुध्यन्ते देवगन्धर्वदानवाः।
नैव सीतां प्रदास्यामि सर्वलोकभयादपि ॥ १५ ॥

"Even if gods, Gandharvas (the musicians of heaven) and demons were to fight against me, I shall under no circumstance restore Sītā even under stress of peril from all the worlds." (15)

एवमुक्त्वा महातेजा रावणः पुनरब्रवीत्।
चरिता भवता सेना केऽत्र शूराः प्लवंगमाः ॥ १६ ॥

Having replied as aforesaid, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, spoke again as follows: "The army stands explored by you. Who are the gallant monkeys in it? (16)

किं प्रभाः कीदृशाः सौम्य वानरा ये दुरासदाः।
कस्य पुत्राश्च पौत्राश्च तत्त्वमाख्याहि राक्षस ॥ १७ ॥

"Of what description are the monkeys who are difficult to approach, O gentle one, and how powerful are they? Nay, whose sons and grandsons are they? Speak the bare truth, O ogre! (17)

तथात्र प्रतिपत्स्यामि ज्ञात्वा तेषां बलाबलम्।
अवश्यं खलु संख्यानं कर्तव्यं युद्धमिच्छता ॥ १८ ॥

"Having known their strength and weakness, I shall take my decision on the matter accordingly. Indeed a calculation need must be made of one's own army as well as of the hostile ranks by him who courts war." (18)

अथैवमुक्तः शार्दूलो रावणेनोत्तमश्चरः।
इदं वचनमारेभे वक्तुं रावणसंनिधौ ॥ १९ ॥

Interrogated thus by Rāvaṇa, Śārdūla, the foremost spy, forthwith proceeded to speak as follows in the presence of the former: (19)

अथर्क्षरजसः पुत्रो युधि राजन् सुदुर्जयः।
गद्गदस्याथ पुत्रोऽत्र जाम्बवानिति विश्रुतः ॥ २० ॥

First, there is King Sugrīva (son of Rkṣarajā), who is very difficult to conquer in an encounter, O king! And here is a son of Gadgada*, widely known by the name of Jāmbavān. (20)

गद्गदस्याथ पुत्रोऽन्यो गुरुपुत्रः शतक्रतोः।
कदनं यस्य पुत्रेण कृतमेकेन रक्षसाम् ॥ २१ ॥

* Although Jāmbavān has been spoken of elsewhere as a progeny of Brahmā, he is referred to as a son of Gadgada in this context evidently because he was brought up by Gadgada.

“Here is also another son, Dhūmra by name of Gadgada. Further, there is Kesari (son of Sage Bṛhaspati, the preceptor of Indra—who is believed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices as a condition precedent to his attaining the position of Indra), by whose son, Hanumān, alone a holocaust of ogres was brought about. (21)

सुषेणश्चात्र धर्मात्मा पुत्रो धर्मस्य वीर्यवान्।

सौम्यः सोमात्मजश्चात्र राजन् दधिमुखः कपिः ॥ २२ ॥

“And here is the valiant son of Dharma (the deity presiding over righteousness), Suṣeṇa, whose mind is set on virtue. Again, here is the placid monkey Dadhimukha, sprung from the loins of Soma, the moon-god. (22)

सुमुखो दुर्मुखश्चात्र वेगदर्शी च वानरः।

मृत्युर्वानररूपेण नूनं सृष्टः स्वयंभुवा ॥ २३ ॥

“Here are Sumukha and Durmukha as well as the monkey Vegadarśī. Undoubtedly they are no other than Death, evolved in the form of monkeys by Brahmā, the self-born creator. (23)

पुत्रो हुतवहस्यात्र नीलः सेनापतिः स्वयम्।

अनिलस्य तु पुत्रोऽत्र हनूमानिति विश्रुतः ॥ २४ ॥

“Here is Nila himself, the commander-in-chief, a son of the god of fire (the bearer of sacrificial offerings). And here is the son of the wind-god, widely known as Hanumān. (24)

नप्ता शक्रस्य दुर्धर्षो बलवानङ्गदो युवा।

मैन्दश्च द्विविदश्चोभौ बलिनावशिवसम्भवौ ॥ २५ ॥

“The mighty and youthful Aṅgada is a grandson of Indra and difficult to overpower. Again, the mighty Mainda and Dwivida are both offsprings of Aświns (the twingods who are the physicians of gods). (25)

पुत्रा वैवस्वतस्याथ पञ्च कालान्तकोपमाः।

गजो गवाक्षो गवयः शरभो गन्धमादनः ॥ २६ ॥

Again, Gaja, Gavākṣa, Gavaya,

Śarabha and Gandhamādana, who vie with Kāla (the Time-Spirit) and Death, are the five sons of Yama (the god of retribution, a son of the sun-god) (26)

दश वानरकोट्यश्च शूराणां युद्धकाङ्क्षिणाम्।

श्रीमतां देवपुत्राणां शेषं नाख्यातुमुत्सहे ॥ २७ ॥

“Moreover, there are as many as ten crores of such monkeys, who are all valiant, bellicose, glorious and sons of gods. The rest I am not able to count. (27)

पुत्रो दशरथस्यैष सिंहसंहननो युवा।

दूषणो निहतो येन खरश्च त्रिशिरास्तथा ॥ २८ ॥

“The yonder youth, who is well-built like a lion, is Rāma (son of Daśaratha), by whom was killed Dūṣaṇa as well as Khara as also Trīśirā. (28)

नास्ति रामस्य सदृशे विक्रमे भुवि कश्चन।

विराधो निहतो येन कबन्धश्चान्तकोपमः ॥ २९ ॥

“No one on earth can compare in prowess with Rāma, by whom was killed Virādha as well as Kabandha, who vied with Death. (29)

वक्तुं न शक्तो रामस्य गुणान् कश्चिन्नरः क्षितौ।

जनस्थानगता येन तावन्तो राक्षसा हताः ॥ ३० ॥

“No human being on earth is able to recount the excellences of Rāma, by whom as many ogres as were present in Janasthāna were dispatched. (30)

लक्ष्मणश्चात्र धर्मात्मा मातंगानामिवर्षभः।

यस्य बाणपथं प्राप्य न जीवेदपि वासवः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Here is Lakṣmaṇa too, whose mind is set on virtue, who resembles the foremost of elephants, and falling within the range of whose arrows even Indra would not survive. (31)

श्वेतो ज्योतिर्मुखश्चात्र भास्करस्यात्मसम्भवौ।

वरुणस्याथ पुत्रोऽथ हेमकूटः प्लवंगमः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Here are Śweta and Jyotirmukha, sprung from the loins of the sun-god. And further there is the monkey, Hemakūṭa, son of Varuṇa, the god of water. (32)

विश्वकर्मसुतो वीरो नलः प्लवगसत्तमः ।

विक्रान्तो वेगवानत्र वसुपुत्रः स दुर्धरः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Nala, the foremost of monkeys is the gallant son of Viśwakarmā, the architect of gods. And here is the valiant and impetuous son of Vasu, the celebrated Durdhara. (33)

राक्षसानां वरिष्ठश्च तव भ्राता विभीषणः ।

प्रतिगृह्य पुरीं लङ्कां राघवस्य हिते रतः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Besides, there is your younger half-brother, Vibhiṣaṇa, the prince of ogres, who having secured the city of Laṅkā as a prospective gift from Rāma, remains devoted to the good of Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (34)

इति सर्वं समाख्यातं तथा वै वानरं बलम् ।

सुवेलेऽधिष्ठितं शैले शेषकार्ये भवान् गतिः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Thus has the entire army of monkeys, encamped near the Suvela mountain, been actually described at length by me in the way I have done. Now, you are the competent authority to decide what remains to be done”*. (35)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३० ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXI

Perturbed to learn from the spies sent by him that Śrī Rāma had taken up his position near the Suvela mountain, Rāvaṇa takes counsel with his ministers and, after dismissing them, approaches Sītā with Vidyujjihva, who was a past master in conjuring tricks. Telling her how her husband had been killed by him with his entire army, he produces before her as an evidence the counterfeit head of Śrī Rāma brought by Vidyujjihva

ततस्तमक्षोभ्यबलं लङ्कायां नृपतेश्वराः ।
सुवेले राघवं शैले निविष्टं प्रत्यवेदयन् ॥ १ ॥
Returning from the Suvela mountain to

Laṅkā, spies told the king about the celebrated Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) having encamped near the Suvela mountain

* The parentage of the principal monkeys given in this canto by Śārdūla will be found to differ in many cases from that given in Canto XVII of the Bālakāṇḍa of Vālmiki-Rāmāyaṇa Vol. I. While in the Bālakāṇḍa, Suṣeṇa, Śārabha and Gandhamādana have been spoken of as sprung from the loins of Varuṇa, Parjanya and Kubera respectively, in the present canto Suṣeṇa has been declared to be an offspring of the wind-god, while Śārabha and Gandhamādana have been called the offsprings of Yama (son of Visaswān). The commentators attribute this anomaly to the fact that the three monkeys referred to in the Bālakāṇḍa were different from the monkeys of the same name mentioned in this canto.

with his army, which could not be shaken (from its position by the enemy). (1)

चाराणां रावणः श्रुत्वा प्राप्तं रामं महाबलम् ।
जातोद्वेगोऽभवत् किञ्चित् सचिवानिदमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Having heard from the mouth of his spies about Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having arrived (at his door), Rāvaṇa felt a bit perturbed and spoke as follows to his ministers: (2)

मन्त्रिणः शीघ्रमायान्तु सर्वे वै सुसमाहिताः ।
अयं नो मन्त्रकालो हि सम्प्राप्त इति राक्षसाः ॥ ३ ॥

“Let all my counsellors come at once fully composed; for now indeed has the time duly arrived for us to take counsel together, O ogres!” (3)

तस्य तच्छासनं श्रुत्वा मन्त्रिणोऽभ्यागमन् द्रुतम् ।
ततः स मन्त्रयामास राक्षसैः सचिवैः सह ॥ ४ ॥

Hearing his aforesaid command, all his counsellors instantly came together. Then he began to confer with the ogres, his ministers. (4)

मन्त्रयित्वा तु दुर्धर्षः क्षमं यत् तदनन्तरम् ।
विसर्जयित्वा सचिवान् प्रविवेश स्वमालयम् ॥ ५ ॥

Having for his part discussed that which was called for immediately and after that having dismissed the ministers, Rāvaṇa (who was difficult to overpower) penetrated deep into his own palace. (5)

ततो राक्षसमादाय विद्युज्जिह्वं महाबलम् ।
मायाविनं महामायं प्राविशद् यत्र मैथिली ॥ ६ ॥

Then, taking with him the ogre named Vidyujjihva, who was endowed with extraordinary might, skilled in conjuring tricks, nay, a great sorcerer, Rāvaṇa entered in state the pleasance where Sītā (a princess of Mithilā) was. (6)

विद्युज्जिह्वं च मायाज्ञमब्रवीद् राक्षसाधिपः ।
मोहयिष्यावहे सीतां मायया जनकात्मजाम् ॥ ७ ॥

Nay, Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres) spoke as follows to Vidyujjihva, who was a knower of conjuring tricks: “We two shall confound Sītā, daughter of Janaka, by means of conjuring tricks. (7)

शिरो मायामयं गृह्य राघवस्य निशाचर ।
मां त्वं समुपतिष्ठस्व महच्च सशरं धनुः ॥ ८ ॥

“Fetching an illusory head of Rāma (a scion of Raghu) and a mighty bow with an arrow, duly present yourself before me, O ranger of the night!” (8)

एवमुक्तस्तथेत्याह विद्युज्जिह्वो निशाचरः ।
दर्शयामास तां मायां सुप्रयुक्तां स रावणे ॥ ९ ॥

Commanded thus by Rāvaṇa, the ogre Vidyujjihva said, “Amen!” Nay, he displayed before Rāvaṇa the said conjuring trick, dexterously managed. (9)

तस्य तुष्टोऽभवद् राजा प्रददौ च विभूषणम् ।
अशोकवनिकायां च सीतादर्शनलालसः ॥ १० ॥

नैर्ऋतानामधिपतिः संविवेश महाबलः ।
ततो दीनामदैन्द्यार्हा ददर्श धनदानुजः ॥ ११ ॥

अधोमुखीं शोकपरामुपविष्टां महीतले ।
भर्तारं समनुध्यान्तीमशोकवनिकां गताम् ॥ १२ ॥

उपास्यमानां घोराभी राक्षसीभिरदूरतः ।
उपसृत्य ततः सीतां प्रहर्षं नाम कीर्तयन् ॥ १३ ॥

इदं च वचनं धृष्टमुवाच जनकात्मजाम् ।
सान्त्वयमाना मया भद्रे यमाश्रित्य विमन्यसे ॥ १४ ॥

खरहन्ता स ते भर्ता राघवः समरे हतः ।
छिन्नं ते सर्वथा मूलं दर्पश्च निहतो मया ॥ १५ ॥

The king, Rāvaṇa, was pleased with him and parted in his favour with a precious ornament. Nay, eagerly longing, as he did, for a sight of Sītā, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, who was endowed with extraordinary might, duly entered the Aśoka grove. Thereupon Rāvaṇa (a younger brother of Kubera, the bestower of riches) beheld the wretched princess, Sītā, who did not deserve the miserable plight to which she was being subjected, seated on the earth’s surface in the Aśoka grove with her head bent low, given over, as she was, to grief and thinking all the time of her husband and being kept on eye on at close quarters by hideous ogresses. Approaching Sītā, and mentioning his own name with great delight, he then addressed the following impudent words to Janaka's daughter: "That husband of yours, Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the slayer of Khara, relying on whom you have been treating me with disdain while being coaxed by me, O blessed lady, has been killed in combat. Your roots stand completely severed and your vanity has been crushed by me. (10—15)

व्यसनेनात्मनः सीते मम भार्या भविष्यसि। विसृजैतां मतिं मूढे किं मृतेन करिष्यसि॥ १६ ॥

"Compelled by your misfortune in the shape of your husband's death, you will become my wife (of your own accord). Give up your present resolution of spurning my advances, O stupid woman! What will you do with your deceased husband? (16)

भवस्व भद्रे भार्याणां सर्वासामीश्वरी मम।
अल्पपुण्ये निवृत्तार्थे मूढे पण्डितमानिनि।
शृणु भर्तृवधं सीते घोरं वृत्रवधं यथा॥ १७ ॥

"Become, O blessed lady, the queen of all my consorts, now that your object in the shape of getting re-united with your husband has come to an end, O stupid woman of scant virtue, who deem yourself wise. Now hear, if you so please, the story of how your husband was killed, which is as hideous as that relating to the destruction of the demon Vṛtra at the hands of Indra. (17)

समायातः समुद्रान्तं हन्तुं मां किल राघवः।
वानरेन्द्रप्रणीतेन बलेन महता वृतः॥ १८ ॥

"Surrounded by a huge army collected by Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys), they say, Rāma, a scion of Raghu, duly reached the sea-shore to destroy me. (18)

संनिविष्टः समुद्रस्य पीड्य तीरमथोत्तरम्।
बलेन महता रामो व्रजत्यस्तं दिवाकरे॥ १९ ॥

"While the sun was going to set, Rāma with his vast army forthwith duly struck camp encroaching upon the northern shore. (19)

अथाध्वनि परिश्रान्तमर्धरात्रे स्थितं बलम्।
सुखसुप्तं समासाद्य चरितं प्रथमं चरैः॥ २० ॥

"Duly making their way at midnight to the army, which lay comfortably asleep, completely exhausted as it had been in the course of the journey, my spies first reconnoitred it. (20)

तत्प्रहस्तप्रणीतेन बलेन महता मम।
बलमस्य हतं रात्रौ यत्र रामः सलक्ष्मणः॥ २१ ॥

"The said army of Rāma was eventually destroyed during the night itself on the very spot where Rāma was encamping with Lakṣmaṇa, by my huge army led by Prahasta. (21)

पट्टिशान् परिघांश्चक्रानृष्टीन् दण्डान् महायुधान्।
बाणजालानि शूलानि भास्वरान् कूटमुद्गरान्॥ २२ ॥
यष्टीश्च तोमरान् प्रासांश्चक्राणि मुसलानि च।
उद्यम्योद्यम्य रक्षोभिर्वानरेषु निपातिताः॥ २३ ॥

"Uplifting again and again scimitars, iron bars, small discuses, javelins, staffs, large weapons, bundles of arrows, darts, sparkling maces bristling with nails, sticks, iron clubs, lances, large discuses and Musalas, the ogres hurled them against the monkeys. (22-23)

अथ सुप्तस्य रामस्य प्रहस्तेन प्रमाथिना।
असक्तं कृतहस्तेन शिरश्छिन्नं महासिना॥ २४ ॥

"The head of Rāma, who was lying asleep at that moment, was then severed at once with a big sword by the ferocious Prahasta, who is skilled in archery. (24)

विभीषणः समुत्पत्य निगृहीतो यदृच्छया।
दिशः प्रव्राजितः सैन्यैर्लक्ष्मणः प्लवगैः सह॥ २५ ॥

“Springing up, he casually took Vibhīṣaṇa captive; while Lakṣmaṇa with the monkey troops was made to flee in all directions. (25)

सुग्रीवो ग्रीवया सीते भग्नया प्लवगाधिपः ।
निरस्तहनुकः सीते हनूमान् राक्षसैर्हतः ॥ २६ ॥

“Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, lies prostrate with his neck broken; while Hanumān, with his lower jaw dashed off, has been killed by the ogres, O Sītā! (26)

जाम्बवानथ जानुभ्यामुत्पतन् निहतो युधि ।
पट्टिशैर्बहुभिश्छिन्नो निकृत्तः पादपो यथा ॥ २७ ॥

“While springing up, Jāmbavān was forthwith struck violently at the knees in a melee and, cut with many scimitars, was felled like a tree. (27)

मैन्दश्च द्विविदश्चोभौ तौ वानरवरर्षभौ ।
निःश्वसन्तौ रुदन्तौ च रुधिरेण परिप्लुतौ ॥ २८ ॥
असिना व्यायतौ छिन्नौ मध्ये ह्यरिनिषूदनौ ।
अनुश्वसिति मेदिन्यां पनसः पनसो यथा ॥ २९ ॥

“Nay, the gigantic Mainda and Dwivida, the foremost among the best of monkeys and the well-known slayers of their foes, who were breathing hard and groaning, bathed as they were in blood, have both been actually cut into two with a sword at the waist. Burst open like a ripe jack fruit, Panasa lies on the ground gasping for breath (28-29)

नाराचैर्बहुभिश्छिन्नः शेते दर्या दरीमुखः ।
कुमुदस्तु महातेजा निष्कूजन् सायकैर्हतः ॥ ३० ॥

“Pierced with numerous steel arrows, Darimukha is lying in a ravine; while Kumuda, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, lies shrieking, struck down with arrows. (30)

अङ्गदो बहुभिश्छिन्नः शरैरासाद्य राक्षसैः ।
परितो रुधिरोद्गारी क्षितौ निपतितोऽङ्गदः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Pierced by the ogres with many arrows after marching towards him, Aṅgada, who was adorned with armlets, lies fallen down on the ground, vomiting blood on all sides. (31)

हरयो मथिता नागै रथजालैस्तथापरे ।
शयाना मृदितास्तत्र वायुवेगैरिवाम्बुदाः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Lying asleep there, other monkeys were crushed by elephants and multitudes of chariots even as clouds are rent asunder by force of wind. (32)

प्रसूताश्च परे त्रस्ता हन्यमाना जघन्यतः ।
अनुद्रुतास्तु रक्षोभिः सिंहैरिव महाद्विपाः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Nay, pursued by ogres as huge elephants are by lions, still other monkeys fled panic-stricken while being struck in the back. (33)

सागरे पतिताः केचित् केचिद् गगनमाश्रिताः ।
ऋक्षा वृक्षानुपारूढा वानरीं वृत्तिमाश्रिताः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Some took a plunge into the sea, while others sought refuge in the air, nay, resorting to the ways of monkeys, the bears climbed up trees (in order to escape destruction at the hands of the ogres). (34)

सागरस्य च तीरेषु शैलेषु च वनेषु च ।
पिङ्गलास्ते विरूपाक्षे राक्षसैर्बहवो हताः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Nay, many more well-known monkeys have been killed by the ogres with fierce eyes on the shores of the sea, as well as in the midst of rocks as also in the woods. (35)

एवं तव हतो भर्ता ससैन्यो मम सेनया ।
क्षतजार्द्र रजोध्वस्तमिदं चास्याहृतं शिरः ॥ ३६ ॥

“In this way has your husband been destroyed with his forces by my army. Soaked in blood and smeared with dust, his head too has been brought here to convince you of his death.” (36)

ततः परमदुर्धर्षो रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
सीतायामुपशृण्वत्यां राक्षसीमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ३७ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, who was most difficult to overpower, then spoke as follows to an ogress within the close hearing of Sītā: (37)

राक्षसं क्रूरकर्माणं विद्युज्जिह्वं समानय ।
येन तद्गधवशिरः संग्रामात् स्वयमाहृतम् ॥ ३८ ॥

“Bring politely to my presence the ogre Vidyujjihva of cruel deeds, by whom has the well-known head of Rāma (a scion of Raghu) been personally brought from the field of battle.” (38)

विद्युज्जिह्वस्तदा गृह्य शिरस्तत्सशरासनम् ।
प्रणामं शिरसा कृत्वा रावणस्याग्रतः स्थितः ॥ ३९ ॥

Holding the aforesaid head alongwith a bow, and making a respectful salute with his head bent low, Vidyujjihva now stood in front of Rāvaṇa. (39)

तमब्रवीत् ततो राजा रावणो राक्षसं स्थितम् ।
विद्युज्जिह्वं महाजिह्वं समीपपरिवर्तिनम् ॥ ४० ॥

अग्रतः कुरु सीतायाः शीघ्रं दाशरथेः शिरः ।
अवस्थां पश्चिमां भर्तुः कृपणा साधु पश्यतु ॥ ४१ ॥

King Rāvaṇa thereupon spoke as follows to the said ogre, Vidyujjihva, who had a long tongue and stood nearby: “Place at once in front of Sītā the head of Rāma (son of Daśaratha). Let the poor woman clearly behold the ultimate condition of her husband.” (40-41)

एवमुक्तं तु तद् रक्षः शिरस्तत् प्रियदर्शनम् ।
उपनिक्षिप्य सीतायाः क्षिप्रमन्तरधीयत ॥ ४२ ॥

Placing that head, which was agreeable to look at, by the side of Sītā, when commanded as aforesaid, the said ogre for his part instantly vanished out of sight (42)

रावणश्चापि चिक्षेप भास्वरं कार्मुकं महत् ।
त्रिषु लोकेषु विख्यातं रामस्यैतदिति ब्रुवन् ॥ ४३ ॥

Nay, Rāvaṇa too cast down the brilliant and mighty bow, saying: “This is the bow, famed in all the three worlds, belonging to Rāma.” (43)

इदं तत् तव रामस्य कार्मुकं ज्यासमावृतम् ।
इह प्रहस्तेनानीतं तं हत्वा निशि मानुषम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“This is the bow,” he added, “belonging to your Rāma, duly provided with a string and brought hither by Prahasta after disposing of that mortal at night.” (44)

स विद्युज्जिह्वेन सहैव तच्छिरो
धनुश्च भूमौ विनिकीर्यमाणः ।
विदेहराजस्य सुतां यशस्विनीं
ततोऽब्रवीत् तां भव मे वशानुगा ॥ ४५ ॥

Casting the bow too on the ground at the same place where the aforesaid head had been placed by Vidyujjihva, Rāvaṇa then said to that illustrious daughter of Janaka (the ruler of the Videha territory), “Now submit to my will.” (45)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्वात्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXII

Sītā bursts into a wail at the sight of Śrī Rāma's head and bow, when Rāvaṇa is abruptly called away by an emissary and after consultation with his ministers prepares his forces for action against the army of Śrī Rāma

सा सीता तच्छिरो दृष्ट्वा तच्च कार्मुकमुत्तमम् ।
सुग्रीवप्रतिसंसर्गमाख्यातं च हनूमता ॥ १ ॥
नयने मुखवर्णं च भर्तुस्तत्सदृशं मुखम् ।
केशान् केशान्तदेशं च तं च चूडामणिं शुभम् ॥ २ ॥
एतैः सर्वैरभिज्ञानैरभिज्ञाय सुदुःखिता ।
विजगर्हेऽत्र कैकेयीं क्रोशन्ती कुररी यथा ॥ ३ ॥

Beholding that head as well as that excellent bow, nay, recalling the alliance of Śrī Rāma with Sugrīva, which accounted for the destruction of monkeys by the ogres, spoken of by Hanumān, the eyes, the hue of the countenance, the said countenance resembling that of her husband, the locks as well as the brow as also the well-known splendid jewel on the top, nay, identifying the head of her husband by means of these distinguishing marks, the aforesaid Sītā felt sore distressed and, crying like a female osprey, began to reproach Kaikeyī for this as follows: (1—3)

सकामा भव कैकेयि हतोऽयं कुलनन्दनः ।
कुलमुत्सादितं सर्वं त्वया कलहशीलया ॥ ४ ॥

“Be now satisfied, now that your desire has been fulfilled, O Kaikeyī, in that this delight of his House has been killed. The entire race has been uprooted by you, given as you were to quarrelling. (4)

आर्येण किं नु कैकेय्याः कृतं रामेण विप्रियम् ।
यन्मया चीरवसनं दत्त्वा प्रव्राजितो वनम् ॥ ५ ॥

“What offence, I wonder, was given by the noble Śrī Rāma to Kaikeyī, for which he was exiled into the forest with me, after presenting him with a robe of bark!” (5)

एवमुक्त्वा तु वैदेही वेपमाना तपस्विनी ।
जगाम जगतीं बाला छिन्ना तु कदली यथा ॥ ६ ॥

Trembling all over while saying so, the youthful lady, the poor Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, for her part fell prostrate to the ground like a plantain tree cut to the root. (6)

सा मुहूर्तात् समाश्वस्य परिलभ्याथ चेतनाम् ।
तच्छिरः समुपास्थाय विललापायतेक्षणा ॥ ७ ॥

Regaining consciousness after a while and taking heart, nay, sitting very near the head, that large-eyed lady began to lament as follows: “Alas! I am undone, O mighty-armed prince, faithful to your heroic vow of carrying out the command of your father till the last moment of your life! I have witnessed your final state, widowed as I am. (8)

हा हतास्मि महाबाहो वीरव्रतमनुव्रत ।
इमां ते पश्चिमावस्थां गतास्मि विधवा कृता ॥ ८ ॥

“The death of a husband before that of his wife is declared to be a catastrophe. A man of noble conduct, you have died before me, a woman of virtuous conduct! (9)

प्रथमं मरणं नार्या भर्तुर्वैगुण्यमुच्यते ।
सुवृत्तः साधुवृत्तायाः संवृत्तस्त्वं ममाग्रतः ॥ ९ ॥

“Even you, who were actually intent on delivering me, fallen in great adversity and swallowed up in an ocean of grief, have been struck down by the enemies! (10)

महद् दुःखं प्रपन्नाया मग्नायाः शोकसागरे ।
यो हि मामुद्यतस्त्रातुं सोऽपि त्वं विनिपातितः ॥ १० ॥

"My celebrated mother-in-law, Kausalyā, who was so fond of her offspring, O scion of Raghu, has been disunited from you, her son, even as a cow, who is fond of its calf, would get disunited from its calf. (11)

सा श्वश्रूर्मम कौसल्या त्वया पुत्रेण राघव।
वत्सेनेव यथा धेनुर्विवत्सा वत्सला कृता ॥ ११ ॥

"Your life was predicted to be long by astrologers, O scion of Raghu! Their prophecy, however, has proved to be false since your life has been so short, O Rāma! (12)

उद्दिष्टं दीर्घमायुस्ते दैवज्ञैरपि राघव।
अनृतं वचनं तेषामल्पायुरसि राघव ॥ १२ ॥

"Or, even though you were extremely sagacious, perhaps prudence disappeared in you, in that you fell into the enemy's hands while asleep. Indeed, this Time-Spirit alone, who is the cause of existence of all created beings, brings them to an end. (13)

अथवा नश्यति प्रज्ञा प्राज्ञस्यापि सतस्तव।
पचत्येनं तथा कालो भूतानां प्रभवो ह्ययम् ॥ १३ ॥
अदृष्टं मृत्युमापन्नः कस्मात् त्वं नयशास्त्रवित्।
व्यसनानामुपायज्ञः कुशलो ह्यसि वर्जने ॥ १४ ॥

"How did you meet with an unforeseen death—you, who were well-versed in the science of political ethics, nay, who knew the ways and means of warding off calamities and were skilled in employing them? (14)

तथा त्वं सम्परिष्वज्य रौद्रयातिनृशंसया।
कालरात्र्या ममाच्छिद्य हतः कमललोचन ॥ १५ ॥

"After tearing you from me and closely embracing you, O lotus-eyed one, you were in that condition of lying buried in sleep, borne away by the horrible and most cruel deity presiding over the night of destruction. (15)

इह शेषे महाबाहो मां विहाय तपस्विनीम्।
प्रियामिव यथा नारीं पृथिवीं पुरुषर्षभ ॥ १६ ॥

"Having deserted me, a pitiable woman, and embracing the earth like a darling, you are lying here, O mighty-armed jewel among men! (16)

अर्चितं सततं यत्नाद् गन्धमाल्यैर्मया तव।
इदं ते मत्प्रियं वीर धनुः काञ्चनभूषितम् ॥ १७ ॥

"Here lies your bow decked with gold, which was always meticulously worshipped by me with sandal paste and wreaths of flowers and which was so dear to me, O gallant prince! (17)

पित्रा दशरथेन त्वं श्वशुरेण ममानघ।
सर्वैश्च पितृभिः सार्धं नूनं स्वर्गे समागतः ॥ १८ ॥

"You have surely been re-united in heaven with your father and my father-in-law, King Daśaratha, as well as with all the manes, O sinless one! (18)

दिवि नक्षत्रभूतं च महत्कर्मकृतं तथा।
पुण्यं राजर्षिवंशं त्वमात्मनः समुपेक्षसे ॥ १९ ॥

"What a pity that you are deserting the saintly race of royal sages to which you belong—you, by whom such extraordinary exploits have been performed, which shine like luminaries in the sky! (19)

किं मां न प्रेक्षसे राजन् किं वा न प्रतिभाषसे।
बालां बालेन सम्प्राप्तां भार्या मां सहचारिणीम् ॥ २० ॥

"Why don't you look at me, O prince? And why don't you answer me, won by you when you were a mere boy, as a wife and companion of a tender age? (20)

संश्रुतं गृह्णता पाणिं चरिष्यामीति यत् त्वया।
स्मर तन्नाम काकुत्स्थ नय मामपि दुःखिताम् ॥ २१ ॥

"Call to mind, O scion of Kakutstha, the solemn promise that was actually made by you while taking my hand in yours, viz., that 'I shall practise virtue with you' and take me, the wretched one, too with you to the other world. (21)

कस्मान्मामपहाय त्वं गतो गतिमतां वर।
अस्माल्लोकादमुं लोकं त्यक्त्वा मामपि दुःखिताम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Wherefore, having brought me all the way from Ayodhyā to Janasthāna, O jewel among the resourceful, have you departed from this world to the other, deserting even me, the miserable woman? (22)

कल्याणै रुचिरं गात्रं परिष्वक्तं मयैव तु ।
क्रव्यादैस्तच्छरीरं ते नूनं विपरिकृष्यते ॥ २३ ॥

“That body of yours, which looked charming with festive decorations, and was till now embraced by me alone, is surely being violently dragged here and there by carnivorous beasts. (23)

अग्निष्टोमादिभिर्यज्ञैरिष्टवानामदक्षिणैः ।
अग्निहोत्रेण संस्कारं केन त्वं न तु लप्स्यसे ॥ २४ ॥

“Why are you not really going to secure the privilege of being cremated with a sacrificial fire even though you have worshipped the Lord through sacrificial performances such as Agniṣṭoma, in which handsome fees were paid to the officiating priests? (24)

प्रव्रज्यामुपपन्नानां त्रयाणामेकमागतम् ।
परिप्रेक्ष्यति कौसल्या लक्ष्मणं शोकलालसा ॥ २५ ॥

“What a pity that completely given up to grief, Kausalyā (your mother) will eagerly see returned Lakṣmaṇa alone of the three who went into exile from Ayodhyā! (25)

स तस्याः परिपृच्छन्त्या वधं मित्रबलस्य ते ।
तव चाख्यास्यते नूनं निशायां राक्षसैर्वधम् ॥ २६ ॥

“To her, when she keenly inquires about you, he will undoubtedly communicate to her the extermination at night by the ogres of the army of your ally, Sugrīva, as well as your own death. (26)

सा त्वां सुप्तं हतं ज्ञात्वा मां च रक्षोगृहं गताम् ।
हृदयेनावदीर्णेन न भविष्यति राघव ॥ २७ ॥

“Coming to know of your having been killed while asleep and of myself having found my way into the abode of the ogre, Rāvaṇa, she with a broken heart will not survive, O scion of Raghu! (27)

मम हेतोरनार्याया अनघः पार्थिवात्मजः ।
रामः सागरमुत्तीर्य वीर्यवान् गोष्पदे हतः ॥ २८ ॥

“How strange that having crossed the sea on my account, unworthy as I am, Śrī Rāma, a sinless prince, who was full of valour, has been killed in the footprint of a cow (without any struggle). (28)

अहं दाशरथेनोढा मोहात् स्वकुलपांसनी ।
आर्यपुत्रस्य रामस्य भार्या मृत्युरजायत ॥ २९ ॥

“The obloquy of my race, I was wedded by Śrī Rāma (a son of Daśaratha) through ignorance. The wife has eventually proved to be the death of Śrī Rāma, her consort, the son of a worthy father! (29)

नूनमन्यां मया जातिं वारितं दानमुत्तमम् ।
याहमद्यैव शोचामि भार्या सर्वातिथेरिह ॥ ३० ॥

“Undoubtedly in some other birth a supreme gift, viz., the gift of a girl in marriage, was obstructed by me in that I, the consort of one who was hospitable to all, grieve even at this age on this spot. (30)

साधु घातय मां क्षिप्रं रामस्योपरि रावण ।
समानय पतिं पत्न्या कुरु कल्याणमुत्तमम् ॥ ३१ ॥

“Kill me at once by all means, laying me on the body of Śrī Rāma, O Rāvaṇa! Unite a husband with his wife and thus practise a supreme virtue. (31)

शिरसा मे शिरश्चास्य कायं कायेन योजय ।
रावणानुगमिष्यामि गतिं भर्तुर्महात्मनः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Join my head with his head and my body with his body. I shall follow the way of my high-souled husband, O Rāvaṇa!” (32)

इतीव दुःखसंतप्ता विललापायतेक्षणा ।
भर्तुः शिरो धनुश्चैव ददर्श जनकात्मजा ॥ ३३ ॥

In these words did the large-eyed daughter of Janaka lament, tormented as she was with agony, and looked on her husband's head and bow. (33)

एवं लालप्यमानायां सीतायां तत्र राक्षसः ।
अभिचक्राम भर्तारमनीकस्थः कृताञ्जलिः ॥ ३४ ॥

While Sītā was wailing, as aforesaid, an ogre guarding the gate approached his master, Rāvaṇa, on that spot with joined palms. (34)

विजयस्वार्यपुत्रेति सोऽभिवाद्य प्रसाद्य च ।
न्यवेदयदनुप्राप्तं प्रहस्तं वाहिनीपतिम् ॥ ३५ ॥

Greeting Rāvaṇa with the words "Be victorious, my lord!" and thereby winning his pleasure, the ogre reported to him in the following words about Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief, having arrived: (35)

अमात्यैः सहितः सर्वैः प्रहस्तस्त्वामुपस्थितः ।
तेन दर्शनकामेन अहं प्रस्थापितः प्रभो ॥ ३६ ॥

"Accompanied by all the ministers, Prahasta has sought your presence. I have been dispatched by him, eager as he is to see you, my lord! (36)

नूनमस्ति महाराज राजभावात् क्षमान्वित ।
किञ्चिदात्ययिकं कार्यं तेषां त्वं दर्शनं कुरु ॥ ३७ ॥

"Surely there is some urgent work, O great monarch endowed with forgiveness as a mark of royalty, therefore, be pleased to see them." (37)

एतच्छ्रुत्वा दशग्रीवो राक्षसप्रतिवेदितम् ।
अशोकवनिकां त्यक्त्वा मन्त्रिणां दर्शनं ययौ ॥ ३८ ॥

Leaving the Aśoka grove on hearing the aforesaid submission of the ogre, Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) left to see the counsellors. (38)

स तु सर्वं समर्थ्यैव मन्त्रिभिः कृत्यमात्मनः ।
सभां प्रविश्य विदधे विदित्वा रामविक्रमम् ॥ ३९ ॥

Having come to know the prowess of Śrī Rāma, nay, entering the council-chamber and deciding upon his course of action in consultation with his counsellors, Rāvaṇa for his part proceeded to act accordingly. (39)

अन्तर्धानं तु तच्छीर्षं तच्च कार्मुकमुत्तमम् ।
जगाम रावणस्यैव निर्याणसमनन्तरम् ॥ ४० ॥

Immediately after the departure of Rāvaṇa, the aforesaid (illusory) head as well as that excellent bow vanished. (40)

राक्षसेन्द्रस्तु तैः सार्धं मन्त्रिभिर्भीमविक्रमैः ।
समर्थयामास तदा रामकार्यविनिश्चयम् ॥ ४१ ॥

In consultation with the aforesaid counsellors of terrible prowess, Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) for his part then arrived at a definite conclusion regarding the course of action to be taken against Śrī Rāma. (41)

अविदूरस्थितान् सर्वान् बलाध्यक्षान् हितैषिणः ।
अब्रवीत् कालसदृशं रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ॥ ४२ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, thereupon spoke in the following opportune words to all the troop commanders, who wished him well and stood not very far from him: (42)

शीघ्रं भेरीनिनादेन स्फुटं कोणाहतेन मे ।
समानयध्वं सैन्यानि वक्तव्यं च न कारणम् ॥ ४३ ॥

"Speedily collect in my presence the forces through the sounding of kettledrums, produced by beating them with drum-sticks. The reason for collecting the forces should not, however, be pointed out." (43)

ततस्तथेति प्रतिगृह्य तद्वच-स्तदैव दूताः सहसा महद् बलम् ।
समानयंश्चैव समागतं च

न्यवेदयन् भर्तरि युद्धकाङ्क्षिणि ॥ ४४ ॥

Bowing to his command in the words "Amen!", the envoys, who were present there, thereupon immediately collected a huge army in an unpremeditated way and further reported to their bellicose lord about the army having assembled. (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्वात्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रयस्त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXIII

Saramā reassures Sītā by telling her that the head brought before her was not of Śrī Rāma, who was alive and would soon be able to see her, and asks her not to be afraid

सीतां तु मोहितां दृष्ट्वा सरमा नाम राक्षसी ।
आससादाथ वैदेहीं प्रियां प्रणयिनी सखीम् ॥ १ ॥

Seeing Sītā distraught, an ogress, Saramā* by name, for her part, who was full of love for Sītā, forthwith approached the princess of the Videha territory, her beloved friend. (1)

मोहितां राक्षसेन्द्रेण सीतां परमदुःखिताम् ।
आश्वासयामास तदा सरमा मृदुभाषिणी ॥ २ ॥

Saramā, who was sweet of expression, then comforted Sītā, who, having been put off the scent by Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), was feeling extremely distressed. (2)

सा हि तत्र कृता मित्रं सीतया रक्ष्यमाणया ।
रक्षन्ती रावणादिष्टा सानुक्रोशा दृढव्रता ॥ ३ ॥

Taking care, as she did, of Sītā, as enjoined by Rāvaṇa (who was afraid lest Sītā might succumb to her grief, which was too much for her), nay, full of compassion and firm of resolve, she had actually been made friends with by Sītā, who was being taken care of by her. (3)

सा ददर्श सखी सीतां सरमा नष्टचेतनाम् ।
उपावृत्योत्थितां ध्वस्तां वडवामिव पांसुषु ॥ ४ ॥

Saramā, that friendly lady, found Sītā stupefied and just risen, as it were, after rolling in the dust and soiled like a mare. (4)

तां समाश्वासयामास सखीस्नेहेन सुव्रताम् ।
समाश्वसिहि वैदेहि मा भूत् ते मनसो व्यथा ।
उक्ता यद् रावणेन त्वं प्रयुक्तश्च स्वयं त्वया ॥ ५ ॥
सखीस्नेहेन तद् भीरु मया सर्वं प्रतिश्रुतम् ।
लीनया गहने शून्ये भयमुत्सृज्य रावणात् ।
तव हेतोर्विशालाक्षि नहि मे रावणाद् भयम् ॥ ६ ॥

Out of affection for her friend, Saramā began to console that princess of noble vows as follows: “Be fully restored to confidence, O princess of the Videha territory! Let there be no anguish in your mind. All that which you were told by Rāvaṇa and that which he was told in return by yourself was overheard by me out of affection for my friend, viz., yourself, while remaining concealed in a lonely thicket for your sake, O large-eyed lady, and shaking of all fear of Rāvaṇa; really speaking, I have no fear of Rāvaṇa (5-6)

स सम्भ्रान्तश्च निष्क्रान्तो यत्कृते राक्षसेश्वरः ।
तत्र मे विदितं सर्वमभिनिष्क्रम्य मैथिलि ॥ ७ ॥

* Saramā, according to the commentators, is the wife of Vibhīṣaṇa. She is full of reverence for Sītā.

“The reason for which that ruler of ogres has sallied forth agitated has also been ascertained by me on the spot after going out, O princess of Mithilā ! (7)

न शक्यं सौप्तिकं कर्तुं रामस्य विदितात्मनः ।
वधश्च पुरुषव्याघ्रे तस्मिन् नैवोपपद्यते ॥ ८ ॥

“It is not at all possible to kill Śrī Rāma, a knower of his Self, while he is asleep. Nay, even death is not possible in the case of that tiger among men. (8)

न त्वेवं वानरा हन्तुं शक्याः पादपयोधिनः ।
सुरा देवर्षभेणेव रामेण हि सुरक्षिताः ॥ ९ ॥

“Fighting, as they do, with trees, the monkeys too are not capable of being killed in that wise inasmuch as they stand fully protected by Śrī Rāma even as gods are by Indra, the foremost of gods. (9)

दीर्घवृत्तभुजः श्रीमान् महोरस्कः प्रतापवान् ।
धन्वी संनहनोपेतो धर्मात्मा भुवि विश्रुतः ॥ १० ॥
विक्रान्तो रक्षिता नित्यमात्मनश्च परस्य च ।
लक्ष्मणेन सह भ्रात्रा कुलीनो नयशास्त्रवित् ॥ ११ ॥
हन्ता परबलौघानामचिन्त्यबलपौरुषः ।
न हतो राघवः श्रीमान् सीते शत्रुनिर्बहणः ॥ १२ ॥

“Endowed with long rounded arms, a broad chest and a muscular body, the glorious and triumphant Śrī Rāma, an archer well-known in the world, the exterminator of hostile armies and the destroyer of his foes—who is full of fire and valour, whose mind is set on virtue, who, with his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, is ever capable of defending himself as well as others, is well-born and well-versed in the science of politics and is possessed of inconceivable might and manliness, has not been killed, O Sitā! (10—12)

अयुक्तबुद्धिकृत्येन सर्वभूतविरोधिना ।
एवं प्रयुक्ता रौद्रेण माया मायाविना त्वयि ॥ १३ ॥

“In this way a conjuring trick was played on you by the cruel Rāvaṇa, who is skilled in employing conjuring tricks, who is perverse in thought and action and is antagonistic to all created beings. (13)

शोकस्ते विगतः सर्वकल्याणं त्वामुपस्थितम् ।
ध्रुवं त्वां भजते लक्ष्मीः प्रियं ते भवति शृणु ॥ १४ ॥

“Your grief is now gone once for all, nay, every form of goodluck awaits you. Prosperity will surely attend on you and something agreeable is going to happen to you, hark! (14)

उत्तीर्य सागरं रामः सह वानरसेनया ।
संनिविष्टः समुद्रस्य तीरमासाद्य दक्षिणम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Having crossed the sea alongwith the army of monkeys and reached its southern shore, Śrī Rāma is settled in camp there. (15)

दृष्टो मे परिपूर्णार्थः काकुत्स्थः सहलक्ष्मणः ।
सहितैः सागरान्तस्थैर्बलैस्तिष्ठति रक्षितः ॥ १६ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, who stands fully accomplished of purpose, has been seen by me with Lakṣmaṇa. He stands protected by troops gathered together and stationed on the seashore. (16)

अनेन प्रेषिता ये च राक्षसा लघुविक्रमाः ।
राघवस्तीर्ण इत्येवं प्रवृत्तिस्तैरिहाहता ॥ १७ ॥

“Nay, by the swift-footed ogres, who were dispatched by Rāvaṇa, this very intelligence has been brought here that Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, has crossed the sea. (17)

स तां श्रुत्वा विशालाक्षि प्रवृत्तिं राक्षसाधिपः ।
एष मन्त्रयते सर्वैः सचिवैः सह रावणः ॥ १८ ॥

“Hearing the aforesaid news, O large-eyed lady, yonder Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, is busy holding consultation with all his ministers.” (18)

इति ब्रूवाणा सरमा राक्षसी सीतया सह ।
सर्वोद्योगेन सैन्यानां शब्दं शुश्राव भैरवम् ॥ १९ ॥

While talking thus with Sitā, the ogress

Saramā heard the terrible noise of troops engaged in every effort for war. (19)

दण्डनिर्घातवादिन्याः श्रुत्वा भेर्या महास्वनम् ।

उवाच सरमा सीतामिदं मधुरभाषिणी ॥ २० ॥

Hearing the crash of kettledrums sounding when beaten with a stick, Saramā, who had a sweet tongue, spoke to Sītā as follows: (20)

संनाहजननी ह्येषा भैरवा भीरु भेरिका ।

भेरीनादं च गम्भीरं शृणु तोयदनिःस्वनम् ॥ २१ ॥

“Indeed, here is a fearful kettledrum, producing a sound signifying preparations for war, being beaten, O timid lady! Also hear the deep-sounding crash of kettledrums, which resembles the rumbling of clouds. (21)

कल्प्यन्ते मत्तमातङ्गा युज्यन्ते रथवाजिनः ।

दृश्यन्ते तुरगारूढाः प्रासहस्ताः सहस्रशः ॥ २२ ॥

“Elephants in rut are being decorated and horses are being yoked to the chariots. Nay, carrying spears in their hands, horsemen are seen in their thousands. (22)

तत्र तत्र च संनद्धाः सम्पतन्ति सहस्रशः ।

आपूर्यन्ते राजमार्गाः सैन्धैरद्भुतदर्शनैः ॥ २३ ॥

वेगवद्भिर्नदद्भिश्च तोयौघैरिव सागरः ।

शस्त्राणां च प्रसन्नानां चर्मणां वर्मणां तथा ॥ २४ ॥

रथवाजिगजानां च राक्षसेन्द्रानुयायिनाम् ।

सम्भ्रमो रक्षसामेष हृषितानां तरस्विनाम् ॥ २५ ॥

प्रभां विसृजतां पश्य नानावर्णसमुत्थिताम् ।

वनं निर्दहतो घर्मे यथा रूपं विभावसोः ॥ २६ ॥

“Prepared for a fight, warriors are rushing hither and thither in their thousands. Nay, the principal roads are getting choked with roaring troops presenting a weird appearance and full of impetuosity, even as sea is filled with streams of water. Look at the sheen of polished weapons, shields and coats of mail, sending forth a lustre of many hues resembling the splendour of fire consuming a forest in summer. And here is seen the flurry of chariots, horses and elephants following the lead of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) as well as of ogres thrilled with joy and full of impetuosity. (23—26)

घण्टानां शृणु निर्घोषं स्थानां शृणु निःस्वनम् ।

हयानां हेषमाणानां शृणु तूर्यध्वनिं तथा ॥ २७ ॥

“Hear the ringing of bells, also hear the rattling of chariots, nay, listen to the cry of neighing horses as also to the flourish of trumpets. (27)

उद्यतायुधहस्तानां राक्षसेन्द्रानुयायिनाम् ।

सम्भ्रमो रक्षसामेष तुमुलो लोमहर्षणम् ॥ २८ ॥

श्रीस्त्वां भजति शोकघ्नी रक्षसां भयमागतम् ।

रामः कमलपत्राक्षो दैत्यानामिव वासवः ॥ २९ ॥

अवजित्य जितक्रोधस्तमचिन्त्यपराक्रमः ।

रावणं समरे हत्वा भर्ता त्वाधिगमिष्यति ॥ ३० ॥

“Here is the bustle of ogres carrying uplifted weapons in their hands and following the lead of Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres). Good fortune, which will bring your grief to an end, awaits you and a danger, which will make one’s hair stand on end, threatens the ogres. Vanquishing and killing the notorious Rāvaṇa in combat, even as Indra vanquished the Daityas, your husband, Śrī Rāma, whose eyes resemble the petals of a lotus, nay, who has conquered anger and whose prowess is inconceivable, will win you back. (28-30)

विक्रमिष्यति रक्षःसु भर्ता ते सहलक्ष्मणः ।

यथा शत्रुषु शत्रुघ्नो विष्णुना सह वासवः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, your husband will show his valour against the ogres, even as Indra, the destroyer of his foes, exhibited his prowess against his enemies (the demons) alongwith Lord Viṣṇu, who descended as his younger brother. (31)

आगतस्य हि रामस्य क्षिप्रमङ्गागतां सतीम् ।
अहं द्रक्ष्यामि सिद्धार्थं त्वां शत्रौ विनिपातिते ॥ ३२ ॥

“On the enemy being killed, I shall soon behold you, a virtuous lady, mounted on the lap of Śrī Rāma, actually arrived, your object being thus accomplished. (32)

अस्त्राण्यनन्दजानि त्वं वर्तयिष्यसि जानकि ।
समागम्य परिष्वक्ता तस्योरसि महोरसः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Hugged by him on getting united with him, you will shed tears of joy, O daughter of Janaka, on the bosom of that broad-chested prince. (33)

अचिरान्मोक्ष्यते सीते देवि ते जघनं गताम् ।
धृतामेकां बहून् मासान् वेणीं रामो महाबलः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, who is endowed with extraordinary might, will before long disentangle your single plait, which has been worn by you for many months past and has reached your very hinder part, O godlike Sītā! (34)

तस्य दृष्ट्वा मुखं देवि पूर्णचन्द्रमिवोदितम् ।
मोक्ष्यसे शोकजं वारि निर्मोकमिव पन्नगी ॥ ३५ ॥

“Beholding his countenance resembling the full moon just risen, O godlike lady, you will bid adieu to tears of grief even as the female snake casts off its slough. (35)

रावणं समरे हत्वा नचिरादेव मैथिलि ।
त्वया समग्रः प्रियया सुखार्हो लप्स्यते सुखम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“Killing Rāvaṇa in combat before long, O princess of Mithilā, Śrī Rāma, who deserves felicity, will enjoy happiness in the company of his darling, viz., yourself, his desire being fulfilled. (36)

सभाजिता त्वं रामेण मोदिष्यसि महात्मना ।
सुवर्षेण समायुक्ता यथा सस्येन मेदिनी ॥ ३७ ॥

“Honoured by the high-souled Śrī Rāma, you will rejoice in the same way as the earth becomes green with crops when blessed with a copious downpour. (37)

गिरिवरमभितो विवर्तमानो
हय इव मण्डलमाशु यः करोति ।
तमिह शरणमभ्युपैहि देवि
दिवसकरं प्रभवो ह्ययं प्रजानाम् ॥ ३८ ॥

“Seek at this juncture as your refuge the well-known sun-god (lit., he who brings the day), who, while coursing round the Meru (the foremost of mountains), revolves quickly like a horse, for he is the source of joy and suffering of all created beings.” (38)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रयस्त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुस्त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXIV

Urged by Sītā, Saramā discloses to her the definite plans of Rāvaṇa devised by him in consultation with his ministers

अथ तां जातसंतापां तेन वाक्येन मोहिताम् ।
सरमा ह्लादयामास महीं दग्धमिवाम्भसा ॥ १ ॥

In this way Saramā gladdened Sītā, who had been put off the scent by the aforesaid speech of Rāvaṇa and had felt agonized, even as the monsoon would gladden the parched earth with water (in the shape of rain). (1)

ततस्तस्या हितं सख्याश्चिकीर्षन्ती सखी वचः ।
उवाच काले कालज्ञा स्मितपूर्वाभिभाषिणी ॥ २ ॥

Wishing to do a good turn to her friend, Sītā, Saramā (who was her friend), who knew the time when a thing should be done and always smiled before she opened her lips, then spoke in time as follows: (2)

उत्सहेयमहं गत्वा त्वद्वाक्यमसितेक्षणे ।
निवेद्य कुशलं रामे प्रतिच्छन्ना निवर्तितुम् ॥ ३ ॥

“Going to the presence of Śrī Rāma and delivering your message as well as communicating your welfare to Śrī Rāma, I can come back hidden from view, O dark-eyed lady! (3)

नहि मे क्रममाणाया निरालम्बे विहायसि ।
समर्थो गतिमन्वेतुं पवनो गरुडोऽपि वा ॥ ४ ॥

“Neither the wind nor even Garuḍa (the king of winged creatures and the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu) will be able to follow my movement even as I course in the sky extending without any support.” (4)

एवं ब्रुवाणां तां सीता सरमामिदमब्रवीत् ।
मधुरं श्लक्ष्णया वाचा पूर्वशोकाभिपन्नया ॥ ५ ॥

To the aforesaid Saramā, who was speaking in this strain, Sītā sweetly replied as follows in gentle tones, overcome by former grief: (5)

समर्था गगनं गन्तुमपि च त्वं रसातलम् ।
अवगच्छाद्य कर्तव्यं कर्तव्यं ते मदन्तरे ॥ ६ ॥

“You are capable of ascending to the heavens and even of descending to the penultimate subterranean region. Know from me today the duty which has got to be performed by you with regard to myself. (6)

मत्प्रियं यदि कर्तव्यं यदि बुद्धिः स्थिरा तव ।
ज्ञातुमिच्छामि तं गत्वा किं करोतीति रावणः ॥ ७ ॥

“If what is pleasing to me must be done by you, and if your resolve is firm, I wish to know what Rāvaṇa is doing now. Approaching him, let me know this. (7)

स हि मायाबलः क्रूरो रावणः शत्रुरावणः ।
मां मोहयति दुष्टात्मा पीतमात्रेव वारुणी ॥ ८ ॥

“Rāvaṇa, who makes his enemies cry by his tyranny, is indeed cruel and is equipped with strength in the shape of conjuring tricks. The evil-minded fellow has confounded me in the same way as spirituous liquor confounds one the moment it is imbibed. (8)

तर्जापयति मां नित्यं भर्त्सापयति चासकृत् ।
राक्षसीभिः सुघोराभिर्यो मां रक्षति नित्यशः ॥ ९ ॥

“He causes me to be threatened all the time and snubbed off and on by most frightful ogresses, and keeps watch on me everyday. (9)

उद्विग्ना शङ्किता चास्मि न स्वस्थं च मनो मम ।
तद्भयाच्चाहमुद्विग्ना अशोकवनिकां गता ॥ १० ॥

“I remain perturbed and apprehensive, and my mind is not at ease. Nay, even though living in the Aśoka grove (far from his view), I continue to be agitated through fear of him. (10)

यदि नाम कथा तस्य निश्चितं वापि यद् भवेत् ।
निवेदयेथाः सर्वं तद् वरो मे स्यादनुग्रहः ॥ ११ ॥

“If his talk is going on with his ministers about releasing me or keeping me confined, report to me all that is decided. That would be a great act of kindness to me.” (11)

साध्येवं ब्रुवतीं सीतां सरमा मृदुभाषिणी ।
उवाच वदनं तस्याः स्पृशन्ती बाष्पविक्लवम् ॥ १२ ॥
एष ते यद्यभिप्रायस्तस्माद् गच्छामि जानकि ।
गृह्य शत्रोरभिप्रायमुपावर्तामि मैथिलि ॥ १३ ॥

Wiping Sītā's face covered with tears, Saramā too, who was gentle of expression, replied as follows to the former, who was hitherto speaking as aforesaid: “If such is your will, I leave in that case, O daughter of Janaka! Discovering the enemy's mind, I shall presently return, O princess of Mithilā!" (12-13)

एवमुक्त्वा ततो गत्वा समीपं तस्य रक्षसः ।
शुश्राव कथितं तस्य रावणस्य समन्त्रिणः ॥ १४ ॥

Saying so, and then moving to the presence of that ogre, she overheard the talk of the said Rāvaṇa as well as of his ministers. (14)

सा श्रुत्वा निश्चयं तस्य निश्चयज्ञा दुरात्मनः ।
पुनरेवागमत् क्षिप्रमशोकवनिकां शुभाम् ॥ १५ ॥

Having overheard the decision of that evil-minded fellow and understood it, she hastened once more to the charming Aśoka grove. (15)

सा प्रविष्टा ततस्तत्र ददर्श जनकात्मजाम् ।
प्रतीक्षमाणां स्वामेव भ्रष्टपद्मामिव श्रियम् ॥ १६ ॥

Having made good her entry in that grove, she then saw the daughter of Janaka waiting for her alone like Lakṣmī (the goddess of fortune and the spouse of Lord Viṣṇu) without the lotus. (16)

तां तु सीता पुनः प्राप्तां सरमां प्रियभाषिणीम् ।
परिष्वज्य च सुस्निग्धं ददौ च स्वयमासनम् ॥ १७ ॥

Embracing Saramā, who always spoke kindly to Sitā, and who had just come back, Sitā for her part personally and most tenderly offered her seat, saying: (17)

इहासीना सुखं सर्वमाख्याहि मम तत्त्वतः ।
क्रूरस्य निश्चयं तस्य रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ १८ ॥

"Seated here at ease, communicate to me accurately in toto the decision of that cruel and evil-minded Rāvaṇa." (18)

एवमुक्ता तु सरमा सीतया वेपमानया ।
कथितं सर्वमाचष्ट रावणस्य समन्त्रिणः ॥ १९ ॥

Requested in these words by Sitā, who was trembling all the while, Saramā for her part reproduced to her all the talk of

Rāvaṇa as well as of his ministers in the following words: (19)

जनन्या राक्षसेन्द्रो वै त्वन्मोक्षार्थं बृहद्वचः ।
अतिस्निग्धेन वैदेहि मन्त्रिवृद्धेन चोदितः ॥ २० ॥

"Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, O princess of the Videha territory, was actually tendered a lengthy advice in favour of discharging you by his own mother, Kaikāsī, as well as by an exceedingly affectionate and aged counsellor. (20)

दीयतामभिसत्कृत्य मनुजेन्द्राय मैथिली ।
निदर्शनं ते पर्याप्तं जनस्थाने यदद्भुतम् ॥ २१ ॥

(They said) 'Let Sitā, a princess of Mithilā, be restored to Rāma (a ruler of men) after receiving him hospitably. The astonishing exploit which was performed by him in Janasthāna (in the shape of exterminating fourteen thousand ogres led by such great warriors as Khara and Dūṣaṇa) should serve as a sufficient eye-opener to you. (21)

लङ्घनं च समुद्रस्य दर्शनं च हनूमतः ।
वधं च रक्षसां युद्धे कः कुर्यान्मानुषो युधि ॥ २२ ॥

'What mortal could leap across the sea, discover Sitā and destroy the ogres in combat, which was accomplished by Hanumān?' (22)

एवं स मन्त्रिवृद्धैश्च मात्रा च बहुबोधितः ।
न त्वामुत्सहते मोक्तुमर्थमर्थपरो यथा ॥ २३ ॥

Even though exhorted at length in the foregoing words by elderly counsellors as well as by his own mother, Rāvaṇa is not inclined to set you free any more than a miser would leave his hold on his treasure. (23)

नोत्सहत्यमृतो मोक्तुं युद्धे त्वामिति मैथिलि ।
सामात्यस्य नृशंसस्य निश्चयो ह्येष वर्तते ॥ २४ ॥

"Rāvaṇa is not prepared to leave you unless he gives up his ghost in combat, O princess of Mithilā! Such indeed is the resolve of the ruthless ogre made in consultation with his ministers. (24)

तदेषा सुस्थिरा बुद्धिर्मृत्युलोभादुपस्थिता ।
भयान्न शक्तस्त्वां मोक्तुमनिरस्तः स संयुगे ॥ २५ ॥
राक्षसानां च सर्वेषामात्मनश्च वधेन हि ।
निहत्य रावणं संख्ये सर्वथा निशितैः शरैः ।
प्रतिनेष्यति रामस्त्वामयोध्यामसितेक्षणे ॥ २६ ॥

“Therefore, due to infatuation caused by his impending death, his aforesaid determination is very steady. Unless and until he is actually frustrated in combat through the extermination of all the ogres as well as of himself, he will not be able to leave you through sheer fear. Wiping out Rāvaṇa with his sharp arrows in combat, Śrī Rāma will take you back to Ayodhyā, O dark-eyed lady!” (25-26)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे शब्दो भेरीशङ्खसमाकुलः ।
श्रुतो वै सर्वसैन्यानां कम्पयन् धरणीतलम् ॥ २७ ॥

In the meantime was actually heard the clamour of all the monkey troops, blended with the roll of kettledrums and the blast of conches, causing the earth to shake (27)

श्रुत्वा तु तं वानरसैन्यनादं
लङ्कागता राक्षसराजभृत्याः ।
हतौजसो दैन्यपरीतचेष्टाः
श्रेयो न पश्यन्ति नृपस्य दोषात् ॥ २८ ॥

Hearing the tumult of the monkey forces, the servants of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) present in Laṅkā felt debilitated and their movements were overcome by depression. Owing to the folly of their ruler they did not see any prospect of prosperity. (28)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुस्त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXV

Observing in Laṅkā evil portents and startling phenomena foreboding the destruction of ogres, Mālyavān exhorts Rāvaṇa to make peace with Śrī Rāma

तेन शङ्खविमिश्रेण भेरीशब्देन नादिना ।
उपयाति महाबाहू रामः परपुरुंजयः ॥ १ ॥

With the resonant roll of kettledrums blended with the blast of conches the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma, the conqueror of hostile cities, sallied forth against Laṅkā. (1)

तं निनादं निशम्याथ रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
मुहूर्तं ध्यानमास्थाय सचिवानभ्युदैक्षत ॥ २ ॥

Reflecting awhile on hearing that tumult,

Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, now looked at his ministers. (2)

अथ तान् सचिवांस्तत्र सर्वानाभाष्य रावणः ।
सभां संनादयन् सर्वमित्युवाच महाबलः ॥ ३ ॥
जगत्संतापनः क्रूरोऽगर्हयन् राक्षसेश्वरः ।
तरणं सागरस्यास्य विक्रमं बलपौरुषम् ॥ ४ ॥
यदुक्तवन्तो रामस्य भवन्तस्तन्मया श्रुतम् ।
भवतश्चाप्यहं वेद्मि युद्धे सत्यपराक्रमान् ।
तूष्णीकानीक्षतोऽन्योन्यं विदित्वा रामविक्रमम् ॥ ५ ॥

Addressing all the aforesaid ministers present there and causing the entire council-chamber to resound, Rāvaṇa, the cruel ruler of ogres and the scourge of the entire world, who was endowed with extraordinary might, spoke as follows, reproaching none: "That which you have said about Rāma's crossing the yonder sea, his prowess, might and virility has been heard by me. Nay, I know you too—who on coming to know of Rāma's prowess, stand mute, looking at one another—to be of unfailing prowess on the field of battle." (3—5)

ततस्तु सुमहाप्राज्ञो माल्यवान् नाम राक्षसः ।
रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा इति मातामहोऽब्रवीत् ॥ ६ ॥

Hearing the speech of Rāvaṇa, an ogre Mālyavān by name, his maternal grandfather, for his part, who was exceptionally sagacious, then submitted as follows: (6)

विद्यास्वभिविनीतो यो राजा राजन् नयानुगः ।
स शास्ति चिरमैश्वर्यमरींश्च कुरुते वशे ॥ ७ ॥

"That monarch, O king, who is well-versed in the fourteen sciences and follows the path of prudence, enjoys sovereignty for a long time and brings his enemies under subjection. (7)

संदधानो हि कालेन विगृह्णंश्चारिभिः सह ।
स्वपक्षे वर्धनं कुर्वन्महदैश्वर्यमश्नुते ॥ ८ ॥

"Concluding peace or contending with his enemies as occasion demands, and strengthening his own party, a ruler enjoys great power. (8)

हीयमानेन कर्तव्यो राज्ञा संधिः समेन च ।
न शत्रुमवमन्येत ज्यायान् कुर्वीत विग्रहम् ॥ ९ ॥

"Peace should be concluded by a ruler who is losing strength as well as by him who is equally matched in strength with his enemy. He should in no case under-rate his enemy and should wage war against him if he is superior in strength to his enemy. (9)

तन्मह्यं रोचते संधिः सह रामेण रावण ।
यदर्थमभियुक्तोऽसि सीता तस्मै प्रदीयताम् ॥ १० ॥

"Therefore, O Rāvaṇa, alliance with Rāma finds favour with me. Let Sītā, for whose sake you have been attacked by him, be restored to him. (10)

तस्य देवर्षयः सर्वे गन्धर्वाश्च जयैषिणः ।
विरोधं मा गमस्तेन संधिस्ते तेन रोचताम् ॥ ११ ॥

"Celestial sages as well as Gandharvas (heavenly musicians) all wish him victory. Therefore, do not antagonize him; let an alliance with him find favour with you. (11)

असृजद् भगवान् पक्षौ द्वावेव हि पितामहः ।
सुराणामसुराणां च धर्माधर्मौ तदाश्रयौ ॥ १२ ॥

"Indeed, the glorious Brahmā, the grandfather of the universe, which owes its existence to his mind-born sons, the ten Prajāpatis, evolved only two orders of creation, the celestial order and the devilish order. They take their stand on virtue and vice respectively. (12)

धर्मो हि श्रूयते पक्ष अमराणां महात्मनाम् ।
अधर्मो रक्षसां पक्षो ह्यसुराणां च राक्षस ॥ १३ ॥

"Virtue is actually known to be the sheet-anchor of the high-souled immortals; while unrighteousness indeed is the sheet-anchor of ogres as well as of demons, O ogre! (13)

धर्मो वै ग्रसतेऽधर्मं यदा कृतमभूद् युगम् ।
अधर्मो ग्रसते धर्मं यदा तिष्यः प्रवर्तते ॥ १४ ॥

"When Satya Yuga prevails, virtue actually eclipses evil. When, on the other hand, the Kali age prevails, evil swallows up virtue. (14)

तत् त्वया चरता लोकान् धर्मोऽपि निहतो महान् ।
अधर्मः प्रगृहीतश्च तेनास्मद् बलिनः परे ॥ १५ ॥

“Even virtue, which is so exalted, was struck at the root and evil embraced by you while ranging the worlds for conquest. Hence it is that our enemies, who have embraced virtue and renounced evil, are stronger than we. (15)

स प्रमादात् प्रवृद्धस्तेऽधर्मोऽहिर्गसते हि नः ।

विवर्धयति पक्षं च सुराणां सुरभावनः ॥ १६ ॥

“Nourished through your error, the aforesaid python in the form of evil is actually going to swallow us up; while virtue which is being practised by the gods is promoting the cause of the gods in the form of the monkeys, who are all sprung from the loins of gods. (16)

विषयेषु प्रसक्तेन यत्किञ्चित्कारिणा त्वया ।

ऋषीणामग्निकल्पानामुद्वेगो जनितो महान् ॥ १७ ॥

“Great molestation was caused to the Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), who resemble the god of fire in brilliance, by you, who are devoted to the pleasures of sense and do whatever you please. (17)

तेषां प्रभावो दुर्धर्षः प्रदीप्त इव पावकः ।

तपसा भावितात्मानो धर्मस्यानुग्रहे रताः ॥ १८ ॥

मुख्यैर्यज्ञैर्यजन्त्येते तैस्तैर्यज्ञे द्विजातयः ।

जुह्वत्यग्नींश्च विधिवद् वेदांश्चोच्चैरधीयते ॥ १९ ॥

“Their power is difficult to overcome like a blazing fire. Having purified their self through asceticism, they are intent on acquiring virtue, inasmuch as these afore said Brāhmaṇas (lit., the members of the twice-born class) worship the Lord through different principal sacrifices, also pour oblations into the sacred fires with due ceremony and read the Vedas in a loud voice. (18-19)

अभिभूय च रक्षांसि ब्रह्मघोषानुदीरयन् ।

दिशो विप्रद्रुताः सर्वाः स्तनयित्पुरिवोष्णगे ॥ २० ॥

“Having subdued the ogres, they continued to chant the Vedas, on hearing which the former got scattered in all directions as clouds during the hot season. (20)

ऋषीणामग्निकल्पानामग्निहोत्रसमुत्थितः ।

आदत्ते रक्षसां तेजो धूमो व्याप्य दिशो दश ॥ २१ ॥

“Enveloping the ten directions, the smoke risen from the oblations poured into the sacred fires by the Ṛṣis, who resemble the fire in brilliance, takes away the energy of the ogres. (21)

तेषु तेषु च देशेषु पुण्येष्वेव दृढव्रतैः ।

चर्यमाणं तपस्तीव्रं संतापयति रक्षसान् ॥ २२ ॥

“The burning austerities which are being practised in the various sacred regions by Ṛṣis firm of resolve are tormenting the ogres. (22)

देवदानवयक्षेभ्यो गृहीतश्च वरस्त्वया ।

मनुष्या वानरा ऋक्षा गोलाङ्गूला महाबलाः ।

बलवन्त इहागम्य गर्जन्ति दृढविक्रमाः ॥ २३ ॥

“Nay, a boon has been secured by you of immunity from death at the hands of gods, demons and Yakṣas (a class of demigods); while human beings, monkeys, bears and Golāṅgūlas (a species of monkeys with dark faces and tails as long as the tail of a cow), full of might, leading a large army and endowed with unyielding prowess are thundering after coming here. (23)

उत्पातान् विविधान् दृष्ट्वा घोरान् बहुविधान् बहून् ।

विनाशमनुपश्यामि सर्वेषां रक्षसामहम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Beholding numerous and multifarious dreadful portents foreboding evils of various kinds, I foresee the extermination of all the ogres. (24)

खराभिस्तनिता घोरा मेघाः प्रतिभयंकराः ।

शोणितेनाभिवर्षन्ति लङ्कामुष्णेन सर्वतः ॥ २५ ॥

“Formidable clouds striking horror and emitting a harsh peal of thunder are drenching Laṅkā with hot blood on all sides. (25)

रुदतां वाहनानां च प्रपतन्त्यश्रुबिन्दवः ।
रजोध्वस्ता विवर्णाश्च न प्रभान्ति यथापुरम् ॥ २६ ॥

“Tear-drops are falling from the eyes of weeping horses and elephants. Soiled with dust and discoloured, the quarters do not shine brightly as before. (26)

व्याला गोमायवो गृध्रा वाश्यन्ति च सुभैरवम् ।
प्रविश्य लङ्कामारामे समवायांश्च कुर्वन्ते ॥ २७ ॥

“Carnivorous animals, jackals and vultures are emitting exceedingly frightful shrieks; nay, penetrating deep into Laṅkā, they gather in gardens. (27)

कालिकाः पाण्डुरैर्दन्तैः प्रहसन्त्यग्रतः स्थिताः ।
स्त्रियः स्वप्नेषु मुष्णन्त्यो गृहाणि प्रतिभाष्य च ॥ २८ ॥

“Pillaging the dwellings after uttering unpleasant notes, coal-black women with yellowish teeth stand before us in dreams laughing heartily. (28)

गृहाणां बलिकर्माणि श्वानः पर्युपभुञ्जते ।
खरा गोषु प्रजायन्ते मूषका नकुलेषु च ॥ २९ ॥

“Dogs devour the offerings of food made to gods and other beings before the daily meal in houses. Donkeys are born of cows and rats of mongooses. (29)

मार्जारा द्वीपिभिः सार्धं सूकराः शुनकैः सह ।
किंनरा राक्षसैश्चापि समेयुर्मानुषैः सह ॥ ३० ॥

“Cats mate with leopards, pigs with dogs and Kinnaras (a species of demigods with a human figure and the head of a horse or with a horse's body and the head of a man) with ogres as well as with human beings. (30)

पाण्डुरा रक्तपादाश्च विहगाः कालचोदिताः ।
राक्षसानां विनाशाय कपोता विचरन्ति च ॥ ३१ ॥

“Nay, impelled by the Time-Spirit, white and red-footed doves move about in the air, boding the extermination of the ogres. (31)

चीचीकूचीति वाशन्यः शारिका वेश्मसु स्थिताः ।
पतन्ति ग्रथिताश्चापि निर्जिताः कलहैषिभिः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Making a chirping sound, minas living in households grapple with other bellicose birds and, ultimately drop down vanquished by them. (32)

पक्षिणश्च मृगाः सर्वे प्रत्यादित्यं रुदन्ति ते ।
करालो विकटो मुण्डः पुरुषः कृष्णपिङ्गलः ॥ ३३ ॥
कालो गृहाणि सर्वेषां काले कालेऽन्ववेक्षते ।
एतान्यन्यानि दुष्टानि निमित्तान्युत्पतन्ति च ॥ ३४ ॥

“Birds and beasts all utter plaintive cries, facing the sun. In the form of a frightful, monstrous blackish fellow with a shaven head, the Time-Spirit casts his eyes on the dwellings of us all at times. These and other sinister portents appear before us. (33-34)

विष्णुं मन्यामहे रामं मानुषं रूपमास्थितम् ।
नहि मानुषमात्रोऽसौ राघवो दृढविक्रमः ॥ ३५ ॥
येन बद्धः समुद्रे च सेतुः स परमाद्भुतः ।
कुरुष्व नरराजेन संधिं रामेण रावण ।
ज्ञात्वावधार्य कर्माणि क्रियतामायतिक्षमम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“We look upon Śrī Rāma as Lord Viṣṇu having assumed a human semblance. The aforesaid Śrī Rāma of unyielding prowess, by whom that most wonderful bridge has been constructed over the deep, is no mere human being. Therefore, conclude peace, O Rāvaṇa, with Śrī Rāma, a ruler of men. Having come to know of his exploits, as well as of the evil portents in Laṅkā, let that which is good for the future be done after mature consideration.” (35-36)

इदं वचस्तस्य निगद्य माल्यवान्
परीक्ष्य रक्षोधिपतेर्मनः पुनः ।
अनुत्तमेषूत्तमपौरुषो बली
बभूव तूष्णीं समवेक्ष्य रावणम् ॥ ३७ ॥

Having tendered this salutary advice and sounding the mind of Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres), once more, the | among the foremost of his counsellors, mighty Mālyavān, who was foremost in virility | became silent after eyeing him. (37)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्त्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXVI

Deriding the exhortation of Mālyavān, even though conducive to his good, nay, holding consultation with his ministers and detailing Prahasta (the Commander-in-Chief) and others to guard the four main gates against the inroads of the enemy, Rāvaṇa complacently retires into his gynaeceum

तत् तु माल्यवतो वाक्यं हितमुक्तं दशाननः ।
न मर्षयति दुष्टात्मा कालस्य वशमागतः ॥ १ ॥

The evil-minded Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), who had fallen under the sway of Death could not for his part brook the salutary advice tendered by Mālyavān. (1)

स बद्ध्वा भ्रुकुटिं वक्त्रे क्रोधस्य वशमागतः ।
अमर्षात् परिवृत्ताक्षो माल्यवन्तमथाब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Knitting his brows on his face, Rāvaṇa, who had fallen a prey to anger, presently spoke as follows to Mālyavān, his eyes rolling through anger: (2)

हितबुद्ध्या यदहितं वचः परुषमुच्यते ।
परपक्षं प्रविश्यैव नैतच्छ्रोत्रगतं मम ॥ ३ ॥

"This noxious and harsh utterance, which has been made by you, taking it to be salutary for me and taking sides with the enemy, has not caught my ears. (3)

मानुषं कृपणं राममेकं शाखामृगाश्रयम् ।
समर्थं मन्यसे केन त्यक्तं पित्रा वनाश्रयम् ॥ ४ ॥

रक्षसामीश्वरं मां च देवानां च भयंकरम् ।
हीनं मां मन्यसे केन अहीनं सर्वविक्रमैः ॥ ५ ॥

"On what grounds do you hold as powerful Rāma, a forlorn, wretched human being, who, having been forsaken by his father, has sought the protection of monkeys and has found his asylum in the forest? And how do you consider as deficient me, the ruler of ogres, the terror of gods, and endowed with all kinds of prowess? (4-5)

वीरद्वेषेण वा शङ्के पक्षपातेन वा रिपोः ।
त्वयाहं परुषाण्युक्तो परप्रोत्साहनेन वा ॥ ६ ॥

"I fear I have been told such harsh words by you either because of spitefulness to me, an illustrious warrior, or because of your predilection to the foe or because you were incited by the enemy to do so. (6)

प्रभवन्तं पदस्थं हि परुषं कोऽभिभाषते ।
पण्डितः शास्त्रतत्त्वज्ञो विना प्रोत्साहनेन वा ॥ ७ ॥

"Indeed without such instigation what learned man, who has grasped the truth of the scriptures would address harsh words to a mighty man still in power? (7)

आनीय च वनात् सीतां पद्महीनामिव श्रियम्।
किमर्थं प्रतिदास्यामि राघवस्य भयादहम् ॥ ८ ॥

“Nay, having borne away from the forest Sītā, who is like Lakṣmī (the goddess of fortune) without the lotus, wherefore shall I give her back through fear of Rāma (a scion of Raghu)? (8)

वृतं वानरकोटीभिः ससुग्रीवं सलक्ष्मणम्।
पश्य कैश्चिदहोभिश्च राघवं निहतं मया ॥ ९ ॥

“Nay, see Rāma (a scion of Raghu) killed by me in a few days alongwith Sugrīva and Lakṣmaṇa in the midst of crores of monkeys. (9)

द्वन्द्वे यस्य न तिष्ठन्ति दैवतान्यपि संयुगे।
स कस्माद् रावणो युद्धे भयमाहारयिष्यति ॥ १० ॥

“Of whom will Rāvaṇa entertain fear in an encounter—Rāvaṇa, whom even gods dare not withstand in a duel? (10)

द्विधा भज्येयमप्येवं न नमेयं तु कस्यचित्।
एष मे सहजो दोषः स्वभावो दुरतिक्रमः ॥ ११ ॥

“I would fain break into two but would never bend before anyone. This is my inherent weakness. Nature is hard to overcome. (11)

यदि तावत् समुद्रे तु सेतुर्बद्धो यदृच्छया।
रामेण विस्मयः कोऽत्र येन ते भयमागतम् ॥ १२ ॥

“If at all by chance a bridge has been thrown over the sea by Rāma, what marvel is there in it due to which fear has taken possession of you ? (12)

स तु तीर्त्वार्षां रामः सह वानरसेनया।
प्रतिजानामि ते सत्यं न जीवन् प्रतियास्यति ॥ १३ ॥

“Having crossed the sea alongwith an army of monkeys, Rāma, however, will not be able to return alive: I truly promise to you.” (13)

एवं ब्रुवाणं संरब्धं रुष्टं विज्ञाय रावणम्।
व्रीडितो माल्यवान् वाक्यं नोत्तरं प्रत्यपद्यत ॥ १४ ॥

Abashed to find Rāvaṇa full of keenness for war and offended while speaking, as aforesaid, Mālyavān made no reply. (14)

जयाशिषा तु राजानं वर्धयित्वा यथोचितम्।
माल्यवानभ्यनुज्ञातो जगाम स्वं निवेशनम् ॥ १५ ॥

Having cheered the king with benedictions of triumph in accordance with the rules of propriety, and duly permitted by him, Mālyavān for his part withdrew to his own residence. (15)

रावणस्तु सहामात्यो मन्त्रयित्वा विमृश्य च।
लङ्कायास्तु तदा गुप्तिं कारयामास राक्षसः ॥ १६ ॥

Having deliberated with his ministers and reflected awhile, the ogre Rāvaṇa for his part then actually made adequate arrangements for the defence of Laṅkā. (16)

व्यादिदेश च पूर्वस्यां प्रहस्तं द्वारि राक्षसम्।
दक्षिणस्यां महावीर्यो महापार्श्वमहोदरौ ॥ १७ ॥
पश्चिमायामथ द्वारि पुत्रमिन्द्रजितं तदा।
व्यादिदेश महामायं राक्षसैर्बहुभिर्वृतम् ॥ १८ ॥

He then posted the ogre Prahasta at the eastern gate, Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara, who were both endowed with extraordinary virility, at the southern and posted his eldest son, Indrajit, who was a great conjurer and was surrounded by numerous ogres, at the western gate at that juncture. (17-18)

उत्तरस्यां पुरद्वारि व्यादिश्य शुकसारणौ।
स्वयं चात्र गमिष्यामि मन्त्रिणस्तानुवाच ह ॥ १९ ॥

Nay, having placed Śuka and Sāraṇa at the northern gate of the city, he said to the aforesaid counsellors, “I shall personally visit and take up my position at the northern gate. (19)

राक्षसं तु विरूपाक्षं महावीर्यपराक्रमम्।
मध्यमेऽस्थापयद् गत्मे बहभिः सह राक्षसैः ॥ २० ॥

Again at the central military post he placed the ogre Virūpākṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary virility and prowess, alongwith numerous other ogres. (20)

एवं विधानं लङ्कायां कृत्वा राक्षसपुंगवः ।
कृतकृत्यमिवात्मानं मन्यते कालचोदितः ॥ २१ ॥

Having made arrangements as aforesaid in Laṅkā, Rāvaṇa (a bull among the ogres), under the sway of destiny, deemed his purpose accomplished, as it were. (21)

विसर्जयामास ततः स मन्त्रिणो
विधानमाज्ञाप्य पुरस्य पुष्कलम् ।
जयाशिषा मन्त्रिगणेन पूजितो
विवेश सोऽन्तःपुरमृद्धिमन्महत् ॥ २२ ॥

Having ordered adequate arrangements for the defence of the city of Laṅkā, he then let his counsellors depart. Nay, acclaimed by the body of counsellors with benedictions of triumph, he entered his sumptuous and extensive gynaeceum. (22)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे
षट्त्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तत्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXVII

While, on reaching the precincts of Laṅkā, Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva as well as other monkeys headed by Hanumān were deliberating as to how to achieve success in their expedition, Vibhīṣaṇa apprises them of the arrangements made by Rāvaṇa at the four gates for the defence of Laṅkā, as reported to him by his four ministers, who had entered Laṅkā in the disguise of birds and witnessed everything with their own eyes. Śrī Rāma too after detailing monkeys to storm the four gates climbs up the Suvela mountain with his army

नरवानरराजानौ स तु वायुसुतः कपिः ।
जाम्बवानृक्षराजश्च राक्षसश्च विभीषणः ॥ १ ॥
अङ्गदो वालिपुत्रश्च सौमित्रिः शरभः कपिः ।
सुषेणः सहदायादो मैन्दो द्विविद एव च ॥ २ ॥
गजो गवाक्षः कुमुदो नलोऽथ पनसस्तथा ।
अमित्रविषयं प्राप्ताः समवेताः समर्थयन् ॥ ३ ॥

Arrived in the enemy's territory and gathered together, Śrī Rāma and Sugrīva, the rulers of men and monkeys, respectively as also the celebrated monkey, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, also Jāmbavān, the king of bears, as well as the ogre Vibhīṣaṇa, nay, Aṅgada, son of Vāli, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), the monkey Śarabha, Suṣeṇa accompanied by his kinsfolk, Mainda as well as Dwivida, Gaja, Gavākṣa, Kumuda and Nala as also Panasa said to one another:

(1—3)

इयं सा लक्ष्यते लङ्का पुरी रावणपालिता ।
सासुरोरगगन्धर्वैरमरैरपि दुर्जया ॥ ४ ॥
कार्यसिद्धिं पुरस्कृत्य मन्त्रयध्वं विनिर्णये ।
नित्यं संनिहितो यत्र रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ॥ ५ ॥

“Here is to be seen the city of Laṅkā, protected by Rāvaṇa, which is hard to conquer even for the immortals accompanied by the demons, the Nāgas (serpent-demons) and Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and in which Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, is ever present. Now take counsel for determining our duty with a view to achieving success in our mission (viz., the overthrow of Rāvaṇa and the recovery of Sitā).” (4-5)

अथ तेषु ब्रुवाणेषु रावणावरजोऽब्रवीत् ।
वाक्यमग्राम्यपदवत् पुष्कलार्थं विभीषणः ॥ ६ ॥

While they were speaking as aforesaid, Vibhiṣaṇa, the youngest brother of Rāvaṇa, made the following submission, consisting of polished words and full of ample meaning:

(6)

अनलः पनसश्चैव सम्पातिः प्रमतिस्तथा ।
गत्वा लङ्कां ममामात्याः पुरीं पुनरिहागताः ॥ ७ ॥

“Having gone to the city of Laṅkā, my four ministers, Anala as well as Panasa, Sampāti and Pramati, have returned to this place.

(7)

भूत्वा शकुनयः सर्वे प्रविष्टाश्च रिपोर्बलम् ।
विधानं विहितं यच्च तद् दृष्ट्वा समुपस्थिताः ॥ ८ ॥

“Nay, assuming the semblance of birds, they all penetrated deep into the enemy’s ranks, and have duly turned up after seeing with their own eyes the arrangements which have been made for the defence of Laṅkā.

(8)

संविधानं यथाहुस्ते रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ।
राम तद् ब्रुवतः सर्वं याथातथ्येन मे शृणु ॥ ९ ॥

“Hear from me, O Rāma, as I speak in accordance with facts of all the defences organized by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa even as my ministers have described them to me.

(9)

पूर्वं प्रहस्तः सबलो द्वारमासाद्य तिष्ठति ।
दक्षिणं च महावीर्यो महापार्श्वमहोदरौ ॥ १० ॥

“Having reached the eastern gate with a division of the army, Prahasta (the Commander-in-Chief) stands there; while Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara, who are endowed with extraordinary virility, stand at the southern gate.

(10)

इन्द्रजित् पश्चिमं द्वारं राक्षसैर्बहुभिवृतः ।
पट्टिशासिधनुष्मद्भिः शूलमुद्गरपाणिभिः ॥ ११ ॥
नानाप्रहरणैः शूरैरावृतो रावणात्मजः ।
राक्षसानां सहस्रैस्तु बहुभिः शस्त्रपाणिभिः ॥ १२ ॥
युक्तः परमसंविग्नो राक्षसैः सह मन्त्रवित् ।
उत्तरं नगरद्वारं रावणः स्वयमास्थितः ॥ १३ ॥

“Surrounded by numerous ogres wielding sharp-edged spears, swords and bows and carrying darts and mallets in their hands, nay, accompanied by champions wielding various weapons, Indrajit, the eldest son of Rāvaṇa, is stationed at the western gate. Nay, accompanied by many thousands of ogres, bearing weapons in their hands, and extremely agitated, Rāvaṇa himself, who is skilled in counsel, has taken up his position at the northern gate.

(11—13)

विरूपाक्षस्तु महता शूलखड्गधनुष्मता ।
बलेन राक्षसैः सार्धं मध्यमं गुल्ममाश्रितः ॥ १४ ॥

“Virūpākṣa for his part is stationed with a huge force armed with pikes, swords and bows, as well as with other ogres at the central military post.

(14)

एतानेवं विधान् गुल्माल्लङ्कायां समुदीक्ष्य ते ।
मामका मन्त्रिणः सर्वे शीघ्रं पुनरिहागताः ॥ १५ ॥

“Having keenly observed these garrisons of the aforesaid description at Laṅkā, all my ministers returned apace to this place. (15)

गजानां दशसाहस्रं रथानामयुतं तथा ।
हयानामयुते द्वे च साग्रकोटिश्च रक्षसाम् ॥ १६ ॥

“The strength of elephants in the army of Rāvaṇa is ten thousand, that of chariots is also ten thousand; nay, that of horses is twenty thousand, while that of ogre-foot soldiers is over one crore. (16)

विक्रान्ता बलवन्तश्च संयुगेष्वाततायिनः ।
इष्टा रक्षसराजस्य नित्यमेते निशाचराः ॥ १७ ॥

“These rangers of the night, viz., Prahasta and others, are all valiant and mighty, cruel on the field of battle and are ever beloved of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres. (17)

एकैकस्यात्र युद्धार्थे रक्षसस्य विशाम्पते ।
परीवारः सहस्राणां सहस्रमुपतिष्ठते ॥ १८ ॥

“A body of adherents consisting of ten lakhs stands at the beck and call of each ogre of the afore-mentioned generals, O protector of the people!” (18)

एतां प्रवृत्तिं लङ्कायां मन्त्रिप्रोक्तां विभीषणः ।
एवमुक्त्वा महाबाहू रक्षसांस्तानदर्शयत् ॥ १९ ॥
लङ्कायां सचिवैः सर्वं रामाय प्रत्यवेदयत् ।
रामं कमलपत्राक्षमिदमुत्तरमब्रवीत् ॥ २० ॥
रावणावरजः श्रीमान् रामप्रियचिकीर्षया ।
कुबेरं तु यदा राम रावणः प्रतियुद्धयति ॥ २१ ॥
षष्टिः शतसहस्राणि तदा निर्यान्ति रक्षसाः ।
पराक्रमेण वीर्येण तेजसा सत्त्वगौरवात् ।
सदृशा ह्यत्र दर्पेण रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ २२ ॥

Having conveyed as above the aforesaid information concerning Laṅkā, furnished by his ministers, the mighty-armed Vibhiṣaṇa produced the said ogres before Śrī Rāma and caused everything concerning Laṅkā to be made known to Śrī Rāma by his ministers themselves. With intent to please Śrī Rāma, the glorious Vibhiṣaṇa (the youngest half-brother of Rāvaṇa) further submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma, whose eyes resembled the petals of a lotus: “When Rāvaṇa for his part, O Rāma, launched an offensive against (his own half-brother) Kubera (the god of riches), sixty lakh ogres sallied forth with him at that time—ogres who were actually compeers of the evil-minded Rāvaṇa in prowess, virility, energy, abundance of courage and steadfastness in battle. (19—22)

अत्र मन्युर्न कर्तव्यः कोपये त्वां न भीषये ।
समर्थो ह्यसि वीर्येण सुराणामपि निग्रहे ॥ २३ ॥

“No depression or indignation should be resorted to by you on this report. I do not mean to terrify you but am simply rousing your wrath; for, I know, you are capable of subduing even gods by virtue of your valour. (23)

तद्भवांश्चतुरङ्गेण बलेन महता वृतम् ।
व्यूहोदं वानरानीकं निर्मथिष्यसि रावणम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Disposing the yonder simian army in battle array in the same way as has been done by Rāvaṇa, you shall be able to crush Rāvaṇa who is surrounded by a huge army consisting of four limbs viz., elephants, chariots, cavalry and foot soldiers.” (24)

रावणावरजे वाक्यमेवं ब्रुवति राघवः ।
शत्रूणां प्रतिघातार्थमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २५ ॥

When Vibhiṣaṇa (the youngest half-brother of Rāvaṇa) made the foregoing speech, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) issued orders as follows for attacking the enemy: (25)

पूर्वद्वारं तु लङ्काया नीलो वानरपुङ्गवः ।
प्रहस्तं प्रतियोद्धा स्याद् वानरैर्बहुभिवृतः ॥ २६ ॥

“Making his way to the eastern gate, surrounded by numerous monkeys, Nīla, a veritable bull among the monkeys, for his part should fight against Prahasta. (26)

अङ्गदो वालिपुत्रस्तु बलेन महता वृतः।
दक्षिणे बाधतां द्वारे महापाश्वर्महोदरौ ॥ २७ ॥

“Nay, surrounded by a large army, Aṅgada, son of Vāli, should press and drive away Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara posted at the southern gate. (27)

हनुमान् पश्चिमद्वारं निष्पीड्य पवनात्मजः।
प्रविशत्वप्रमेयात्मा बहुभिः कपिभिवृतः ॥ २८ ॥

“Pressing against the western gate, surrounded by numerous monkeys, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, who is endowed with immeasurable firmness and sturdiness, should make good his entry into it. (28)

दैत्यदानवसङ्घानामृषीणां च महात्मनाम्।
विप्रकारप्रियः क्षुद्रो वरदानबलान्वितः ॥ २९ ॥

परिक्रमति यः सर्वान् लोकान् संतापयन् प्रजाः।
तस्याहं राक्षसेन्द्रस्य स्वयमेव वधे धृतः ॥ ३० ॥
उत्तरं नगरद्वारमहं सौमित्रिणा सह।

निपीड्याभिप्रवेक्ष्यामि सबलो यत्र रावणः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Pressing against the northern gate of the city of Laṅkā alongwith Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), personally bent as I am on the destruction of that petty-minded ruler of ogres—who is fond of oppressing multitudes of Daityas (giants) and Dānavas (demons) as well as the high-souled Ṛṣis, nay, who is armed with power derived from boons (conferred on him by Brahmā and others) and who ranges all the worlds persecuting created beings—I shall force my entry into that gate, where Rāvaṇa himself is stationed with his army. (29—31)

वानरेन्द्रश्च बलवानृक्षराजश्च वीर्यवान्।
राक्षसेन्द्रानुजश्चैव गुल्मे भवतु मध्यमे ॥ ३२ ॥

“Nay, let the mighty Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys and the powerful Jāmbavān, the king of bears, as well as Vibhīṣaṇa (the youngest half-brother of Rāvaṇa) be stationed at the central post. (32)

न चैव मानुषं रूपं कार्यं हरिभिराहवे।
एषा भवतु नः संज्ञा युद्धेऽस्मिन् वानरे बले ॥ ३३ ॥

“No human semblance should be assumed at any event by the monkeys on the field of battle. In the simian ranks let this serve as our distinctive mark in this battle. (33)

वानरा एव नश्चिह्नं स्वजनेऽस्मिन् भविष्यति।
वयं तु मानुषेणैव सप्त योत्स्यामहे परान् ॥ ३४ ॥

“The monkeys alone will be the sign of recognition in distinguishing our ranks in this conflict. Only we seven shall, however, fight the enemies in a human form. (34)

अहमेव सह भ्रात्रा लक्ष्मणेन महौजसा।
आत्मना पञ्चमश्चायं सखा मम विभीषणः ॥ ३५ ॥

“I myself will be one, with my younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary energy and who will be the second; while, of the other five, this friend of mine, Vibhīṣaṇa, in his own person will be the fifth over and above his four ministers.” (35)

स रामः कृत्यसिद्ध्यर्थमेवमुक्त्वा विभीषणम्।
सुवेलारोहणे बुद्धिं चकार मतिमान् प्रभुः।
रमणीयतरं दृष्ट्वा सुवेलस्य गिरेस्तटम् ॥ ३६ ॥

Having spoken to Vibhīṣaṇa as aforesaid with a view to the success of his undertaking, and beholding the excessively charming slopes of the Suvela mountain, the aforesaid sagacious and powerful Śrī Rāma made up his mind to climb up the Suvela mountain. (36)

ततस्तु रामो महता बलेन
प्रच्छाद्य सर्वा पृथिवीं महात्मा।
प्रहृष्टरूपोऽभिजगाम लङ्कां
कृत्वा मतिं सोऽरिवधे महात्मा ॥ ३७ ॥

Having fully covered the entire land of that region with his huge army and having resolved upon the destruction of his foes, that high-souled Śrī Rāma for his part, who was endowed with great firmness, then sallied forth towards Laṅkā with an exultant air. (37)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तत्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टात्रिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXVIII

Climbing up the Suvela mountain in consultation with and in the company of Lakṣmaṇa and Vibhīṣaṇa as well as of Sugrīva and others, Śrī Rāma surveys the city from that vantage-ground. The eminent heroes among the monkeys too, who were eager to fight, roar at the top of their voice and spend the night on the mountain itself with Śrī Rāma

स तु कृत्वा सुवेलस्य मतिमारोहणं प्रति ।
लक्ष्मणानुगतो रामः सुग्रीवमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥
विभीषणं च धर्मज्ञमनुरक्तं निशाचरम् ।
मन्त्रज्ञं च विधिज्ञं च श्लक्ष्णया परया गिरा ॥ २ ॥

Having made up his mind to climb up the Suvela mountain, Śrī Rāma for his part, who was followed by Lakṣmaṇa, spoke as follows in soft and excellent tone to Sugrīva, as well as to the devoted night-ranger, Vibhīṣaṇa, who knew what is right, was experienced in counsel and learned in ritual: (1-2)

सुवेलं साधु शैलेन्द्रमिमं धातुशतैश्चित् ।
अध्यारोहामहे सर्वे वत्स्यामोऽत्र निशामिमाम् ॥ ३ ॥

“Let us all duly ascend this ruler of mountains, Suvela, which is covered with hundreds of minerals. We shall spend this night on it. (3)

लङ्कां चालोकयिष्यामो निलयं तस्य रक्षसः ।
येन मे मरणान्ताय हता भार्या दुरात्मना ॥ ४ ॥

“We shall also be able to survey from its top Laṅkā, the abode of that ogre, Rāvaṇa, by whom, evil-minded as he is, was my consort borne away to his own destruction, the inevitable result of his action. (4)

येन धर्मो न विज्ञातो न वृत्तं न कुलं तथा ।
राक्षस्या नीचया बुद्ध्या येन तद् गर्हितं कृतम् ॥ ५ ॥
तस्मिन् मे वर्तते रोषः कीर्तिते राक्षसाधमे ।
यस्यापराधान्नीचस्य वधं द्रक्ष्यामि रक्षसाम् ॥ ६ ॥

“The moment his name is mentioned, my wrath is aroused towards that vile ogre, Rāvaṇa, by whom neither was virtue rightly understood, nor morality, nor was pedigree taken into consideration, but by whom the aforesaid reproachful act was perpetrated as prompted by his mean ogre-like mentality. I shall perceive with my own eyes the extermination of all the ogres due to the crime of that mean fellow. (5-6)

एको हि कुरुते पापं कालपाशवशं गतः ।
नीचेनात्मापचारेण कुलं तेन विनश्यति ॥ ७ ॥

“Fallen in the grip of the noose of Death, a single individual actually perpetrates a sin; while the entire race perishes on account of that vile fellow due to his wrong doing.” (7)

एवं सम्मन्त्रयन्नेव सक्रोधो रावणं प्रति।

रामः सुवेलं वासाय चित्रसानुमुपारुहत् ॥ ८ ॥

Talking as aforesaid, full of wrath as he was towards Rāvaṇa, Śrī Rāma ascended the Suvela mountain, distinguished by its lovely peaks, with a view to halting there. (8)

पृष्ठतो लक्ष्मणश्चैनमन्वगच्छत् समाहितः।

सशरं चापमुद्यम्य सुमहद्विक्रमे रतः ॥ ९ ॥

Lifting his bow alongwith an arrow, Lakṣmaṇa, who was fully alert and fond of showing extraordinary prowess, followed him at his back. (9)

तमन्वारोहत् सुग्रीवः सामात्यः सविभीषणः।

हनुमानङ्गदो नीलो मैन्दो द्विविद एव च ॥ १० ॥

गजो गवाक्षो गवयः शरभो गन्धमादनः।

पनसः कुमुदश्चैव हरो रम्भश्च यूथपः ॥ ११ ॥

जाम्बवांश्च सुषेणश्च ऋषभश्च महामतिः।

दुर्मुखश्च महातेजास्तथा शतवलिः कपिः ॥ १२ ॥

एते चान्ये च बहवो वानराः शीघ्रगामिनः।

ते वायुवेगप्रवणास्तं गिरिं गिरिचारिणः ॥ १३ ॥

अध्यारोहन्त शतशः सुवेलं यत्र राघवः।

ते त्वदीर्घेण कालेन गिरिमारुह्य सर्वतः ॥ १४ ॥

ददृशुः शिखरे तस्य विषक्तामिव खे पुरीम्।

तां शुभां प्रवरद्वारां प्राकारवरशोभिताम् ॥ १५ ॥

लङ्कां राक्षससम्पूर्णा ददृशुर्हरियूथपाः।

प्राकारवरसंस्थैश्च तथा नीलैश्च राक्षसैः ॥ १६ ॥

ददृशुस्ते हरिश्रेष्ठाः प्राकारमपरं कृतम् ॥ १७ ॥

Following him, Sugrīva with his ministers and Vibhīṣaṇa, nay, Hanumān, Aṅgada, Nila, Mainda as well as Dwivida, Gaja, Gavākṣa, Gavaya, Śarabha, Gandhamādana, Panasa and Kumuda as well, Hara and the troop-commander, Rambha, as also Jāmbavān and Suṣeṇa as well as the highly intelligent Ṛṣabha, as also Durmukha, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, and the monkey Śatabali—these as well as many other well-known swift-footed monkeys, who moved with the speed of the wind and used to range on hills, scaled the Suvela mountain in hundreds, reaching the spot where Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, was. Climbing up the mountain in a short time on all sides, and taking their stand on the top of that mountain, they, for their part, beheld the city suspended as it were in the air. The leaders of monkey-troops saw the splendid Laṅkā provided with most excellent gates, graced with an excellent defensive wall and packed with ogres. Nay, the aforesaid jewels among the monkeys noticed another wall formed (as it were on the original one) by the dark-hued ogres ranged in compact rows for defence on the excellent defensive walls. (10—17)

ते दृष्ट्वा वानराः सर्वे राक्षसान् युद्धकाङ्क्षिणः।

मुमुचुर्विविधान् नादांस्तस्य रामस्य पश्यतः ॥ १८ ॥

Beholding the ogres burning to fight, all the aforesaid monkeys raised clamours of various kinds while Śrī Rāma stood looking on. (18)

ततोऽस्तमगमत् सूर्यः संध्यया प्रतिरञ्जितः।

पूर्णचन्द्रप्रदीप्ता च क्षणा समतिवर्तत ॥ १९ ॥

Reddened by the evening twilight, the sun presently sank below the horizon, and, illumined by the full moon, the night duly set in. (19)

ततः स रामो हरिवाहिनीपति-

र्विभीषणेन प्रतिनन्द्य सत्कृतः।

सलक्ष्मणो यूथपयूथसंयुतः

सुवेलपृष्ठे न्यवसद् यथासुखम् ॥ २० ॥

Honoured by Vibhīṣaṇa after greeting him joyfully, nay, accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa and joined by a company of troop-commanders, the celebrated Śrī Rāma | thenceforward sojourned happily on the top of the Suvela mountain. (20)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टात्रिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XXXIX

Having passed the night on the summit of the Suvela mountain, the commanders of simian troops entered the parks and gardens in the outskirts of Laṅkā, which were laden with blossom etc., while others make their way into Laṅkā itself. Śrī Rāma, however, feels amazed to behold from the mountain-top Laṅkā, which was charming in every respect

तां रात्रिमुषितास्तत्र सुवेले हरियूथपाः ।
लङ्कायां ददृशुर्वीरा वनान्युपवनानि च ॥ १ ॥

Having passed that night on the said Suvela mountain, the valiant monkey generals surveyed the woods and groves of Laṅkā. (1)

समसौम्यानि रम्याणि विशालान्यायतानि च ।
दृष्टिरम्याणि ते दृष्ट्वा बभूवुर्जातविस्मयाः ॥ २ ॥

They were amazed to find them level and free from molestation by beasts of prey, lovely, long, extensive and agreeable to behold. (2)

चम्पकाशोकबकुलशालतालसमाकुला ।
तमालवनसंछन्ना नागमालासमावृता ॥ ३ ॥
हिन्तालैर्जुनैर्नीपैः सप्तपर्णैः सुपुष्पितैः ।
तिलकैः कर्णिकारैश्च पाटलैश्च समन्ततः ॥ ४ ॥
शुशुभे पुष्पिताग्रैश्च लतापरिगतैर्द्रुमैः ।
लङ्का बहुविधैर्दिव्यैर्यथेन्द्रस्यामरावती ॥ ५ ॥
विचित्रकुसुमोपेतै रक्तकोमलपल्लवैः ।
शाद्वलैश्च तथा नीलैश्चित्राभिर्वनराजिभिः ॥ ६ ॥

Thick with Campaka, Aśoka, Bakula, sal and palmyra trees, nay, covered with groves of Tamāla trees and surrounded with rows of Nāgakesara trees, Laṅkā looked charming on all sides like the city of Amarāvātī ruled over by Indra, the ruler of gods, with green grassy spots and charming avenues as well as with beautiful trees of various kinds, viz., Hintāla, Arjuna, Nīpa and Saptaparnā in full blossom, Tilaka, Karṇikāra and Pāṭala whose crests were laden with flowers and which were intertwined with climbers, nay, which were laden with diverse flowers and clothed with red tender leaves. (3—6)

गन्धाढ्यान्यतिरम्याणि पुष्पाणि च फलानि च ।
धारयन्त्यगमास्तत्र भूषणानीव मानवाः ॥ ७ ॥

The trees in that city bore fragrant and most lovely flowers and fruits in the same way as human beings wear ornaments. (7)

तच्चैत्ररथसंकाशं मनोज्ञं नन्दनोपमम् ।
वनं सर्वर्तुकं रम्यं शुशुभे षट्पदायुतम् ॥ ८ ॥

दात्यूहकोयष्टिबकैर्नृत्यमानैश्च बर्हिणैः ।
रुतं परभृतानां च शुश्रुवे वननिर्झरे ॥ ९ ॥

Vying with Caitraratha (the garden of Kubera, the god of riches) and resembling Nandana (the garden of Indra, the ruler of gods), the principal garden of Laṅkā—which was lovely and delightful to the mind, green in all seasons and full of bees—looked charming with gallinules, lapwings, herons and dancing peacocks. The warbling of cuckoos was also heard in that garden abounding in cascades. (8-9)

नित्यमत्तविहंगानि भमराचरितानि च ।
कोकिलाकुलखण्डानि विहंगाभिरुतानि च ॥ १० ॥
भृङ्गराजाधिगीतानि कुररस्वनितानि च ।
कोणालकविघुष्टानि सारसाभिरुतानि च ।
विविशुस्ते ततस्तानि वनान्युपवनानि च ॥ ११ ॥
हृष्टाः प्रमुदिता वीरा हरयः कामरूपिणः ।
तेषां प्रविशतां तत्र वानराणां महौजसाम् ॥ १२ ॥
पुष्पसंसर्गसुरभिर्ववौ घ्राणसुखोऽनिलः ।
अन्ये तु हरिवीराणां यूथान्निष्क्रम्य यूथपाः ।
सुग्रीवेणाभ्यनुज्ञाता लङ्कां जग्मुः पताकिनीम् ॥ १३ ॥
वित्रासयन्तो विहगान् ग्लापयन्तो मृगद्विपान् ।
कम्पयन्तश्च तां लङ्कां नादैः स्वैर्नदतां वराः ॥ १४ ॥
कुर्वन्तस्ते महावेगा महीं चरणपीडिताम् ।
रजश्च सहसैवोर्ध्वं जगाम चरणोत्थितम् ॥ १५ ॥

Moving from that mountain-top the valiant monkeys, who were able to change their form at will and felt highly rejoiced and thrilled with joy, entered the aforesaid groves and gardens, which were inhabited by birds constantly in heat and frequented by bees, whose clusters of trees were crowded with cuckoos, nay, which were rendered noisy by birds and filled with the music of fork-tailed drongoes and the cries of ospreys, and which resounded with the noise of wagtails and the cries of cranes. As the monkeys, who were all endowed with extraordinary energy, penetrated deep into that grove, a breeze redolent through contact with flowers and gentle as breath, blew. Breaking away from the company of monkey heroes, as permitted by Sugrīva, other well-known monkey leaders, however, the foremost of those capable of roaring sought Laṅkā, dressed with pennons, terrifying the birds, dispiriting the deer and elephants and shaking the aforesaid Laṅkā with their roars, nay, trampling down the earth in their great impetuosity. Nay, the dust raised by their footfalls rose upwards all at once. (10—15)

ऋक्षाः सिंहाश्च महिषा वारणाश्च मृगाः खगाः ।
तेन शब्देन वित्रस्ता जग्मुर्भीता दिशो दश ॥ १६ ॥

Alarmed by that roar, bears and lions, buffaloes, elephants, deer and birds ran in panic in all the ten directions. (16)

शिखरं तु त्रिकूटस्य प्रांशु चैकं दिविस्पृशम् ।
समन्तात् पुष्पसंछन्नं महारजतसंनिभम् ॥ १७ ॥
शतयोजनविस्तीर्णं विमलं चारुदर्शनम् ।
श्लक्ष्णं श्रीमन्महच्चैव दुष्प्रापं शकुनैरपि ॥ १८ ॥
मनसापि दुरारोहं किं पुनः कर्मणा जनैः ।
निविष्टा तस्य शिखरे लङ्का रावणपालिता ॥ १९ ॥

There was a lofty peak of the Trikūṭa mountain, which seemed to touch the skies, which was thickly covered with blossom on all sides and sparkled like gold, which extended over an area of one hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles), which was stainless, graceful to behold, smooth, splendid and vast too, difficult of access even to birds and hard to scale even in thought, much less in action, for men. Laṅkā, which was ruled over by Rāvaṇa, was situated on this peak of the aforesaid mountain. (17—19)

दशयोजनविस्तीर्णा विंशद्योजनमायता ।
सा पुरी गोपुरैरुच्चैः पाण्डुराम्बुदसंनिभैः ।
काञ्चनेन च शालेन राजतेन च शोभते ॥ २० ॥

Ten Yojanas (or eighty miles) wide and twenty Yojanas (or one hundred and sixty miles) long*, the said city looked charming with its towering gates, closely resembling white clouds and its gold and silver fortifications. (20)

प्रासादैश्च विमानैश्च लङ्का परमभूषिता।
घनैरिवातपापाये मध्यमं वैष्णवं पदम् ॥ २१ ॥

Highly embellished with palaces and seven-storeyed mansions too, Laṅkā looked like the sky (the region covered by the middle or second stride of Lord Viṣṇu in His descent as Trivikrama) graced with clouds at the end of summer, when the monsoon sets in. (21)

यस्यां स्तम्भसहस्रेण प्रासादः समलंकृतः।
कैलासशिखराकारो दृश्यते खमिवोल्लिखन् ॥ २२ ॥

In that city there existed a palace duly graced with a thousand pillars, which looked like a peak of Mount Kailāsa and appeared to scrape the skies. (22)

चैत्यः स राक्षसेन्द्रस्य बभूव पुरभूषणम्।
शतेन रक्षसां नित्यं यः समग्रेण रक्ष्यते ॥ २३ ॥

The aforesaid palace of Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, which was guarded at all times by a hundred fully armoured ogres, was an ornament of the city. (23)

मनोज्ञां काञ्चनवतीं पर्वतैरुपशोभिताम्।
नानाधातुविचित्रैश्च उद्यानैरुपशोभिताम् ॥ २४ ॥
नानाविहगसंगुष्टां नानामृगनिषेविताम्।
नानाकुसुमसम्पन्नां नानाराक्षससेविताम् ॥ २५ ॥

तां समृद्धां समृद्धार्थां लक्ष्मीवाँल्लक्ष्मणाग्रजः।
रावणस्य पुरीं रामो ददर्श सह वानरैः ॥ २६ ॥

Alongwith the monkeys, who remained with him, the glorious Rāma, the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa, beheld that prosperous golden city ruled over by Rāvaṇa, which was delightful to the mind and full of abundant resources, was graced with pleasure-mountains picturesque with various minerals, as well as with gardens, which was rendered noisy by birds of all species, frequented by varieties of deer, richly endowed with flowers of various kinds and inhabited by ogres of all classes. (24—26)

तां महागृहसम्बाधां दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणपूर्वजः।
नगरीं त्रिदिवप्रख्यां विस्मयं प्राप वीर्यवान् ॥ २७ ॥

The valiant Śrī Rāma, the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa, felt amazed to see the city, which was crammed with huge mansions and looked like paradise. (27)

तां रत्नपूर्णां बहुसंविधानां प्रासादमालाभिरलङ्कृतां च।
पुरीं महायन्त्रकवाटमुख्यां ददर्श रामो महता बलेन ॥ २८ ॥

Accompanied by his large army, Śrī Rāma contemplated that city full of jewels, abounding in products of creative genius, adorned with its main rows of palaces and endowed with strong gates fitted with huge devices. (28)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ३९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Thirty-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

* The length and breadth of the city as given here varies from that given elsewhere—which is a hundred Yojanas wide and thirty Yojanas long—शतयोजनविस्तीर्णा त्रिंशद्योजनमायता. This anomaly is reconciled by commentators by explaining the present verse as referring to the length and breadth of Laṅkā proper, which comprised the residence of Rāvaṇa.

चत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XL

Ascending the highest peak of the Suvela mountain alongwith a division of his army, Śrī Rāma catches sight of Rāvaṇa perched on the top of a gate of his palace. Infuriated at his very sight, Sugrīva springs upon him by surprise from the mountain-top, throws down the diadem from his head, struggles with him for a long time and, eluding him, returns victorious to the presence of Śrī Rāma

ततो रामः सुवेलाग्रं योजनद्वयमण्डलम् ।
उपारोहत् ससुग्रीवो हरियूथैः समन्वितः ॥ १ ॥

Accompanied by Sugrīva and followed by battalions of monkeys, Śrī Rāma thereupon ascended the top of the Suvela mountain, which had a circumference of two Yojanas (or sixteen miles). (1)

स्थित्वा मुहूर्तं तत्रैव दिशो दश विलोकयन् ।
त्रिकूटशिखरे रम्ये निर्मितां विश्वकर्मणा ॥ २ ॥
ददर्श लङ्कां सुन्यस्तां रम्यकाननशोभिताम् ।
तस्य गोपुरशृङ्गस्थं राक्षसेन्द्रं दुरासदम् ॥ ३ ॥
श्वेतचामरपर्यन्तं विजयच्छत्रशोभितम् ।
रक्तचन्दनसंलिप्तं रत्नाभरणभूषितम् ॥ ४ ॥
नीलजीमूतसंकाशं हेमसंछादिताम्बरम् ।
ऐरावतविषाणाग्रैरुत्कृष्टकिणवक्षसम् ॥ ५ ॥
शशलोहितरागेण संवीतं रक्तवाससा ।
संध्यातपेन संछन्नं मेघराशिमिवाम्बरे ॥ ६ ॥

Halting a while on that very spot and surveying all the ten directions, he caught sight of Laṅkā, which had been built by Viśwakarmā, the architect of gods, and beautifully laid out on a lovely peak of the Trikūṭa mountain and was adorned with delightful groves. He saw perched on the top of a gate of that city Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, who was difficult to approach, was being fanned with white whisks on both sides, was graced with a triumphal parasol held over his head, smeared all over with red sandal-paste and adorned with scarlet ornaments, who closely resembled a dark cloud in hue and was attired in raiment embroidered with gold, who bore on his breast scars of indentations made by the points of tusks of Airāvata (the elephant who carries Indra, the ruler of gods, on his back), nay, was covered by a red outer garment of the colour of a hare's blood and looked like a mass of clouds in the sky, enveloped with sunshine at sunset. (2—6)

पश्यतां वानरेन्द्राणां राघवस्यापि पश्यतः ।
दर्शनाद् राक्षसेन्द्रस्य सुग्रीवः सहस्रोत्थितः ॥ ७ ॥

At the very sight of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, Sugrīva got up all at once, while the monkey chiefs as well as Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) looked on. (7)

क्रोधवेगेन संयुक्तः सत्त्वेन च बलेन च ।
अचलाग्रादथोत्थाय पुप्लुवे गोपुरस्थले ॥ ८ ॥

Rising from the mountain-top, seized as he was with impetuosity, occasioned by wrath and endowed with courage and bodily strength, he sprang to the top of the gate, where Rāvaṇa was. (8)

स्थित्वा मुहूर्तं सम्प्रेक्ष्य निर्भयेनान्तरात्मना ।
तृणीकृत्य च तद् रक्षः सोऽब्रवीत् परुषं वचः ॥ ९ ॥

Pausing a while and gazing on Rāvaṇa with an intrepid mind, nay, taking that ogre to be a mere straw, he spoke harsh words to him as follows: (9)

लोकनाथस्य रामस्य सखा दासोऽस्मि राक्षस ।
न मया मोक्ष्यसेऽद्य त्वं पार्थिवेन्द्रस्य तेजसा ॥ १० ॥

“I am a friend and servant of Śrī Rāma, the ruler of the world, O ogre! You shall not be spared by me this day, endowed as I am with the strength of that king of kings.” (10)

इत्युक्त्वा सहस्रोत्पत्य पुप्लुवे तस्य चोपरि ।
आकृष्य मुकुटं चित्रं पातयामास तद् भुवि ॥ ११ ॥

Saying so and springing all of a sudden, Sugrīva leapt upon him and, snatching off the marvellous diadem from his head, threw it on the ground. (11)

समीक्ष्य तूर्णमायान्तं बभाषे तं निशाचरः ।
सुग्रीवस्त्वं परोक्षं मे हीनग्रीवो भविष्यसि ॥ १२ ॥

Perceiving Sugrīva coming with great speed towards him, the night-ranger spoke to him as follows: “You had a beautiful neck only so long as you were out of my sight; you shall be deprived of your neck now that you have come to my view.” (12)

इत्युक्त्वोत्थाय तं क्षिप्रं बाहुभ्यामाक्षिपत् तले ।
कन्दुवत् स समुत्थाय बाहुभ्यामाक्षिपद्भरिः ॥ १३ ॥

Saying so and rising from his seat, Rāvaṇa caught him with his arms and flung him to the ground. Bouncing up like a ball, the aforesaid monkey too lifted Rāvaṇa with his arms and dashed him to the ground. (13)

परस्परं स्वेदविदिग्धगात्रौ
परस्परं शोणितरक्तदेहौ ।
परस्परं श्लिष्टनिरुद्धचेष्टौ
परस्परं शाल्मलिकिंशुकाविव ॥ १४ ॥

Their limbs were first covered all over with perspiration by being pressed against each other; then their bodies got dyed red with blood by being scratched with the sharp nails of each other, and, lastly, while their bodies stood motionless when interlocked, they looked like a silk-cotton and Kīrṁśuka tree, overlapping each other. (14)

मुष्टिप्रहारैश्च तलप्रहारै- ररतिघातैश्च कराग्रघातैः ।
तौ चक्रतुर्युद्धमसह्यारूपं
महाबलौ राक्षसवानरेन्द्रौ ॥ १५ ॥

The said ruler of ogres and the lord of monkeys, who were both endowed with extraordinary might, carried on a duel which was unbearable (to each other) with blows of fists, slaps, blows of the forearm and blows of fingers. (15)

कृत्वा नियुद्धं भृशमुग्रवेगौ
कालं चिरं गोपुरवेदिमध्ये ।
उत्क्षिप्य चोत्क्षिप्य विनम्य देहौ
पादक्रमाद् गोपुरवेदिलग्नौ ॥ १६ ॥

Having wrestled hard for a long time in the centre of the flat roof of the gate, nay throwing up repeatedly and pressing down the bodies of each other, the two combatants, who were seized with terrific impetuosity, got stuck to the surface by moving their feet in a particular way. (16)

अन्योन्यमापीड्य विलग्नदेहौ
तौ पेततुः सालनिखातमध्ये ।
उत्पेततुर्भूमितलं स्पृशन्तौ
स्थित्वा मुहूर्तं त्वभिनिःश्वसन्तौ ॥ १७ ॥

Having squeezed one another, they dropped down between the defensive walls and the moat, their bodies still clung together. Having lain a while touching the ground and breathing hard, they, for their part, sprang on their feet again. (17)

आलिङ्ग्य चालिङ्ग्य च बाहुयोक्त्रैः
संयोजयामासतुराहवे तौ ।
संरम्भशिक्षाबलसम्प्रयुक्तौ
सुचेरतुः सम्प्रति युद्धमार्गैः ॥ १८ ॥

Repeatedly pressing one another to their bosom, the two champions, who were full of indignation, had received training in wrestling and were fully endowed with might, fastened one another with cords in the shape of their arms and now began to move adroitly by employing various wrestling devices in the combat. (18)

शार्दूलसिंहाविव जातदंष्ट्रौ
गजेन्द्रपोताविव सम्प्रयुक्तौ ।
संहत्य संवेद्य च तौ कराभ्यां
तौ पेततुर्वै युगपद् धरायाम् ॥ १९ ॥

Having pressed each other to their bosom and ascertained each other's strength through their hands, the two heroes who resembled a tiger and a lion, who had just teethed (attained maturity) or the two offsprings of a lordly elephant, that had duly tried their strength, actually fell on the ground synchronously. (19)

उद्यम्य चान्योन्यमधिक्षिपन्तौ
संचक्रमाते बहु युद्धमार्गे ।
व्यायामशिक्षाबलसम्प्रयुक्तौ
क्लमं न तौ जग्मतुराशु वीरौ ॥ २० ॥

Having endeavoured to overcome each other, and snubbing each other, the two heroes, who were full of military zeal, had been trained in wrestling and were richly endowed with might, moved adroitly in many ways according to the technique of wrestling; yet they did not feel exhausted soon. (20)

बाहूत्तमैर्वारणवारणाभै- र्निवारयन्तौ परवारणाभौ ।
चिरेण कालेन भृशं प्रयुद्धौ
संचेरतुर्मण्डलमार्गमाशु ॥ २१ ॥

Keeping back each other with their excellent arms, which resembled the trunks of elephants, the two warriors, who looked like a pair of elephants in rut, and who had fought hard for a long time, moved rapidly in a circle to elude the grip of each other. (21)

तौ परस्परमासाद्य यत्तावन्योन्यसूदने ।
मार्जाराविव भक्षार्थेऽवतस्थान्ते मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ २२ ॥

Approaching each other, intent as they were upon the destruction of the other, they stood growling again and again as a pair of cats would for the sake of food. (22)

मण्डलानि विचित्राणि स्थानानि विविधानि च ।
गोमूत्रकाणि चित्राणि गतप्रत्यागतानि च ॥ २३ ॥
तिरश्चीनगतान्येव तथा वक्रगतानि च ।
परिमोक्षं प्रहाराणां वर्जनं परिधावनम् ॥ २४ ॥
अभिद्रवणमाप्लावमवस्थानं सविग्रहम् ।
परवृत्तमपावृत्तमपद्रुतमवप्लुतम् ॥ २५ ॥
उपन्यस्तमपन्यस्तं युद्धमार्गविशारदौ ।
तौ विचेरतुरन्योन्यं वानरेन्द्रश्च रावणः ॥ २६ ॥

The two warriors, viz., Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, and Rāvaṇa, who were both skilled in wrestling, moved adroitly with a view to attacking each other, described numerous circles while moving and stood in diverse postures, moved in a curved line like an ox's urine and executed various forward and backward movements, made horizontal and oblique movements too, eluded the blows of each other by shifting their position, avoided the contingency of their own blows being baffled and circled round the opponent when he stood motionless, darted towards each other, moved slowly or leapt like a frog, stood facing the adversary after a trial of strength, retreated, turned sideways, rushed in a bent posture in order to catch hold of the knees of the adversary and ran lifting their foot to kick the opponent, pressed their arms to their own bosom in order to foil the attempt of the adversary to seize them, and stretched their own arms to catch hold of the opponent's. (23—26)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे रक्षो मायाबलमथात्मनः ।
आरब्धमुपसम्पदे ज्ञात्वा तं वानराधिपः ॥ २७ ॥
उत्पपात तदाऽऽकाशं जितकाशी जितक्लमः ।
रावणः स्थित एवात्र हरिराजेन वञ्चितः ॥ २८ ॥

(Finding it impossible to worst his formidable adversary by dint of prowess) the ogre in the meantime proceeded to exhibit forthwith his supernatural power. Knowing him about to do this, Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, who had assumed a triumphant air and overcome his fatigue, then sprang in the air; while, baffled by Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys), Rāvaṇa remained standing where he was. (27-28)

अथ हरिवरनाथः प्राप्तसंग्रामकीर्ति-

निशिचरपतिमाजौ योजयित्वा श्रमेण ।

गगनमतिविशालं लङ्घयित्वा र्कसूनु-

हंरिगणबलमध्ये रामपार्श्वं जगाम ॥ २९ ॥

Reducing Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres) to exhaustion in combat and traversing the very extensive sky, Sugrīva, a son of the sun-god, the lord of monkey-chiefs, who had won renown in combats, now arrived by the side of Śrī Rāma in the midst of the army of monkey battalions. (29)

इति स सवितृसूनुस्तत्र तत् कर्म कृत्वा

पवनगतिरनीकं प्राविशत् सम्प्रहृष्टः ।

रघुवरनृपसूनुर्वर्धयन् युद्धहर्षं

तरुमृगगणमुख्यैः पूज्यमानो हरीन्द्रः ॥ ३० ॥

Having accomplished on that spot the aforesaid feat, that son of the sun-god and ruler of monkeys, who was endowed with the speed of the wind, now rejoined the army of monkeys, extremely rejoiced, nay, heightening the military zeal of Śrī Rāma (son of a king), who was the foremost of the Raghus, and being adored by the foremost of the monkey troops. (30)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४० ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLI

Śrī Rāma is not very pleased with the daring act of Sugrīva inasmuch as he had seen evil portents. Warning him against such action on the ground of his being a sovereign, and commanding the monkey generals to besiege all the four gates of Laṅkā, he dispatches Aṅgada to expostulate with Rāvaṇa and bring him to reason. Aṅgada tries his best to bring him round, but in vain, and returns unsuccessful to the presence of Śrī Rāma after threatening the ogres

अथ तस्मिन् निमित्तानि दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणपूर्वजः ।
सुग्रीवं सम्परिष्वज्य रामो वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Observing the marks of a conflict on the person of Sugrīva, and closely embracing him, Śrī Rāma, the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa, forthwith spoke as follows to Sugrīva: (1)

असम्मन्त्र्य मया सार्धं तदिदं साहसं कृतम् ।
एवं साहसयुक्तानि न कुर्वन्ति जनेश्वराः ॥ २ ॥

Without duly holding consultation with me this aforesaid precipitate act has been done by you. Sovereigns do not undertake such daring acts. (2)

संशये स्थाप्य मां चेदं बलं चेमं विभीषणम् ।
कष्टं कृतमिदं वीर साहसं साहसप्रिय ॥ ३ ॥

“Exposing to risk me as well as this army as also Vibhīṣaṇa standing here, O hero fond of daring acts, this precipitate action causing agony has been done by you. (3)

इदानीं मा कृथा वीर एवंविधमरिंदम ।
त्वयि किञ्चित्समापन्ने किं कार्यं सीतया मम ॥ ४ ॥
भरतेन महाबाहो लक्ष्मणेन यवीयसा ।
शत्रुघ्नेन च शत्रुघ्न स्वशरीरेण वा पुनः ॥ ५ ॥

“Never repeat such an act any more, O tamer of foes! Had anything happened to you, I would have had nothing to do with Sītā, Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa and the still younger Śatrughna or even with my own person, O mighty-armed destroyer of your foes! (4-5)

त्वयि चानागते पूर्वमिति मे निश्चिता मतिः ।
जानतश्चापि ते वीर्यं महेन्द्रवरुणोपम ॥ ६ ॥
हत्वाहं रावणं युद्धे सपुत्रबलवाहनम् ।
अभिषिच्य च लङ्कायां विभीषणमथापि च ॥ ७ ॥
भरते राज्यमारोप्य त्यक्ष्ये देहं महाबल ।
तमेवं वादिनं रामं सुग्रीवः प्रत्यभाषत ॥ ८ ॥

“Even though I knew your valour, O compeer of the mighty Indra and Varuṇa, (the god of water), I had firmly resolved earlier, while you had not yet returned, that after making short work of Rāvaṇa, his sons, army, chariots and all in combat, nay, consecrating Vibhīṣaṇa as the king of Laṅkā and also installing Bharata on the throne of Ayodhyā, I should give up the ghost, O monkey! endowed with extraordinary might!” To Śrī Rāma, who was speaking in this strain, Sugrīva replied as follows: (6—8)

तव भार्यापहर्तारं दृष्ट्वा राघव रावणम् ।
मर्षयामि कथं वीर जानन् विक्रममात्मनः ॥ ९ ॥

“Perceiving, as I did, Rāvaṇa, who had borne away your consort, and knowing (as I did) my own prowess, O gallant scion of Raghu, how could I leave him just like that?” (9)

इत्येवं वादिनं वीरमभिनन्द्य च राघवः ।
लक्ष्मणं लक्ष्मिसम्पन्नमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १० ॥

Applauding the hero, who had submitted as aforesaid, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) spoke as follows to Lakṣmaṇa, who was richly endowed with loveliness: (10)

परिगृह्योदकं शीतं वनानि फलवन्ति च ।
बलौघं संविभज्येमं व्यूह्य तिष्ठाम लक्ष्मण ॥ ११ ॥

“Occupying a region provided with fresh water and woods, rich in fruit, nay, duly dividing this multitude of troops into battalions and drawing it up in battle array, we should remain alert, O Lakṣmaṇa! (11)

लोकक्षयकरं भीमं भयं पश्याम्युपस्थितम् ।
निबर्हणं प्रवीराणामृक्षवानररक्षसाम् ॥ १२ ॥

“I perceive a formidable danger imminent, which bodes destruction to the world and the extermination of eminent heroes among the bears, monkeys and ogres. (12)

वाता हि परुषं वान्ति कम्पते च वसुंधरा ।
पर्वताग्राणि वेपन्ते नदन्ति धरणीधराः ॥ १३ ॥

“Winds are actually blowing severely and the earth is quaking. Mountain-peaks are shaking and the elephants bearing the earth (in the four quarters and the four intermediate points) are trumpeting. (13)

मेघाः क्रव्यादसंकाशाः परुषाः परुषस्वराः ।
क्रूराः क्रूरं प्रवर्षन्ते मिश्रं शोणितबिन्दुभिः ॥ १४ ॥

“Fierce and unkind clouds closely resembling carnivorous animals and emitting a harsh sound are cruelly letting loose showers mingled with drops of blood. (14)

रक्तचन्दनसंकाशा संध्या परमदारुणा ।
ज्वलच्च निपतत्येतदादित्यादग्निमण्डलम् ॥ १५ ॥

“The evening twilight, resembling red sandalwood in colour, appears most lurid. And from the sun is falling this blazing mass of fire. (15)

आदित्यमभिवाश्यन्ति जनयन्तो महद्भयम्।
दीना दीनस्वरा घोरा अप्रशस्ता मृगद्विजाः ॥ १६ ॥

“Wretched-looking, dreadful and ominous beasts and birds are crying in pitiful tones facing the sun, inspiring great fear. (16)

रजन्यामप्रकाशश्च संतापयति चन्द्रमाः।
कृष्णरक्तांशुपर्यन्तो यथा लोकस्य संक्षये ॥ १७ ॥

“Nay, bereft of radiance even at night the moon is radiating heat contrary to its nature. It is invested with a black and red halo even as at the time of universal dissolution. (17)

ह्रस्वो रूक्षोऽप्रशस्तश्च परिवेषः सुलोहितः।
आदित्यमण्डले नीलं लक्ष्म लक्ष्मण दृश्यते ॥ १८ ॥

“A short, dreary, inauspicious and crimson halo as also a blue spot are seen in the solar orb, O Lakṣmaṇa! (18)

दृश्यन्ते न यथावच्च नक्षत्राण्यभिवर्तते।
युगान्तमिव लोकस्य पश्य लक्ष्मण शंसति ॥ १९ ॥

“The stars are not clearly seen as before. Lo! This phenomenon, O Lakṣmaṇa, forebodes to the living creation the dissolution of the world, as it were. (19)

काकाः श्येनास्तथा गृध्रा नीचैः परिपतन्ति च।
शिवाश्चाप्यशुभा वाचः प्रवदन्ति महास्वनाः ॥ २० ॥

“Crows, hawks and vultures too are descending to the ground, nay, crying aloud;
she-jackals also are emitting portentous howls. (20)

शैलैः शूलैश्च खड्गैश्च विमुक्तैः कपिराक्षसैः।
भविष्यत्यावृता भूमिर्मांसशोणितकर्दमा ॥ २१ ॥

“The earth it appears will be covered with rocks, darts and swords hurled by monkeys and ogres and will be thick with a morass of flesh and blood. (21)

क्षिप्रमद्य दुराधर्षा पुरीं रावणपालिताम्।
अभियाम जवेनैव सर्वतो हरिभिवृताः ॥ २२ ॥

“Surrounded by the monkeys on all sides, we should without delay march with all speed today towards the city of Laṅkā, ruled over by Rāvaṇa, which is difficult to storm.” (22)

इत्येवं तु वदन् वीरो लक्ष्मणं लक्ष्मणाग्रजः।
तस्मादवातरच्छीघ्रं पर्वताग्रान्महाबलः ॥ २३ ॥

While speaking as aforesaid to Lakṣmaṇa, the heroic Śrī Rāma, the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, rapidly descended from that mountain-peak. (23)

अवतीर्य तु धर्मात्मा तस्माच्छैलात् स राघवः।
परैः परमदुर्धर्षं ददर्श बलमात्मनः ॥ २४ ॥

Climbing down from that mountain, the celebrated Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) for his part, whose mind was set on virtue, held a review of his own army, which was supremely difficult to assail for the foes. (24)

संनह्य तु ससुग्रीवः कपिराजबलं महत्।
कालज्ञो राघवः काले संयुगायाभ्यचोदयत् ॥ २५ ॥

Having marshalled the huge army of Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys) in co-operation with the latter, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) for his part, who knew the right moment to act, commanded the army to advance at a propitious hour for military operations. (25)

ततः काले महाबाहुर्बलेन महता वृतः।
प्रस्थितः पुरतो धन्वी लङ्कामभिमुखः पुरीम् ॥ २६ ॥

Surrounded by a large contingent and armed with a bow, the mighty-armed prince then marched ahead at an auspicious moment, facing the city of Laṅkā. (26)

तं विभीषणसुग्रीवौ हनूमाञ्जाम्बवान् नलः।
ऋक्षराजस्तथा नीलो लक्ष्मणश्चान्वयुस्तदा ॥ २७ ॥

Vibhiṣaṇa and Sugrīva, Hanūmān,
Jāmbavān, the king of bears, Nala and Nila, as well as Lakṣmaṇa followed him at that moment. (27)

ततः पश्चात् सुमहती पृतनर्क्षवनौकसाम्।
प्रच्छाद्य महतीं भूमिमनुयाति स्म राघवम् ॥ २८ ॥

Fully covering a vast stretch of land, the huge army of bears and monkeys (lit., the denizens of the forest) then followed in the wake of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). (28)

शैलशृङ्गाणि शतशः प्रवृद्धांश्च महीरुहान्।
जगृहुः कुञ्जरप्रख्या वानराः परवारणाः ॥ २९ ॥

The monkeys, who were capable of warding off the enemy and resembled elephants in size, bore in their hands mountain-peaks and fully grown up trees in hundreds. (29)

तौ त्वदीर्घेण कालेन भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ।
रावणस्य पुरीं लङ्कामासेदतुरिन्दमौ ॥ ३० ॥
पताकामालिनीं रम्यामुद्यानवनशोभिताम्।
चित्रवप्रां सुदुष्प्रापामुच्चैः प्राकारतोरणाम् ॥ ३१ ॥

In a short while, those two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the tamers of their foes, for their part reached Laṅkā, the lovely city of Rāvaṇa, which was dressed with rows of flags, embellished with gardens and groves, enclosed with a wonderful defensive wall and provided with high walls and archways and as such exceedingly difficult of access. (30-31)

तां सुरैरपि दुर्धर्षा रामवाक्यप्रचोदिताः।
यथानिदेशं सम्पीड्य न्यविशन्त वनौकसः ॥ ३२ ॥

Besieging the aforesaid city—which was difficult to assail even for gods—as spurred by the command of Śrī Rāma, sticking to their posts (while doing so), the monkeys (lit., the denizens of the forest) entered it. (32)

लङ्कायास्तूत्तरद्वारं शैलशृङ्गमिवोन्नतम्।
रामः सहानुजो धन्वी जुगोप च रुरोध च ॥ ३३ ॥

Accompanied by his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, and armed with a bow, Śrī Rāma for his part blocked the northern gate of Laṅkā, which was lofty as a mountain-peak, and also gave succour to the besieging army. (33)

लङ्कामुपनिविष्टस्तु रामो दशरथात्मजः।
लक्ष्मणानुचरो वीरः पुरीं रावणपालिताम् ॥ ३४ ॥
उत्तरद्वारमासाद्य यत्र तिष्ठति रावणः।
नान्यो रामाद्धि तद् द्वारं समर्थः परिरक्षितुम् ॥ ३५ ॥
रावणाधिष्ठितं भीमं वरुणेनेव सागरम्।
सायुधै राक्षसैर्भीमैरभिगुप्तं समन्ततः ॥ ३६ ॥
लघूनां त्रासजननं पातालमिव दानवैः।
विन्यस्तानि च योधानां बहूनि विविधानि च ॥ ३७ ॥
ददर्शायुधजालानि तथैव कवचानि च।
पूर्वं तु द्वारमासाद्य नीलो हरिचमूपतिः ॥ ३८ ॥
अतिष्ठत् सह मैन्देन द्विविदेन च वीर्यवान्।
अङ्गदो दक्षिणद्वारं जग्राह सुमहाबलः ॥ ३९ ॥
ऋषभेण गवाक्षेण गजेन गवयेन च।
हनुमान् पश्चिमद्वारं ररक्ष बलवान् कपिः ॥ ४० ॥

Having reached the northern gate, at which Rāvaṇa himself had taken up his position, the valiant Śrī Rāma, an offspring of Emperor Daśaratha, for his part, who had Lakṣmaṇa for his follower, encamped near the city of Laṅkā, which was protected by Rāvaṇa. In fact, none other than Śrī Rāma was capable of protecting the army besieging that formidable gate, which was controlled by Rāvaṇa as the ocean is by Varuṇa (the god presiding over water), was guarded on all sides by terrible ogres equipped with arms even as Pātāla, the nethermost subterranean region, is by the Dānavas, and caused terror to the weak. Nay, Śrī Rāma saw properly arranged there numerous sets of weapons of every description and even so pieces of armour for the use of combatants. Reaching the eastern gate, Nila, the valiant Commander-in-Chief of the simian forces, for his part took up his position there with Mainda and Dwivida, Aṅgada, who was endowed with extraordinary might, occupied the southern gate with Rṣabha, Gavākṣa, Gaja and Gavaya. United with Pramāthī and Praghosa as well as with other heroes, the mighty monkey, Hanumān, blocked the western gate. (34—40)

प्रमाथिप्रघसाभ्यां च वीरैरन्यैश्च संगतः ।
मध्यमे च स्वयं गुल्मे सुग्रीवः समतिष्ठत ॥ ४१ ॥
सह सर्वैर्हरिश्चेष्टैः सुपर्णपवनोपमैः ।
वानराणां तु षट्त्रिंशत्कोट्यः प्रख्यातयूथपाः ॥ ४२ ॥
निपीड्योपनिविष्टाश्च सुग्रीवो यत्र वानरः ।
शासनेन तु रामस्य लक्ष्मणः सविभीषणः ॥ ४३ ॥
द्वारे द्वारे हरीणां तु कोटिं कोटीर्यवेशयत् ।
पश्चिमेन तु रामस्य सुषेणः सहजाम्बवान् ॥ ४४ ॥
अदूरान्मध्यमे गुल्मे तस्थौ बहुबलानुगः ।
ते तु वानरशार्दूलाः शार्दूला इव दंष्ट्रिणः ।
गृहीत्वा द्रुमशैलाग्रान् हृष्टा युद्धाय तस्थिरे ॥ ४५ ॥

Nay, alongwith all the monkey chiefs, who vied with Garuḍa of beautiful wings and the wind-god in speed, Sugrīva himself took up his position at the intermediate military post between the northern and western gates. Having exerted pressure on the ogres occupying that post, thirty six crores of monkeys, all highly renowned generals, for their part stood encamped where the monkey king, Sugrīva, was (viz., near the intermediate military post). Accompanied by Vibhiṣaṇa, Lakṣmaṇa for his part posted under order of Śrī Rāma a crore or crores of monkeys at each gate, as necessary. Accompanied by Jāmbavān and followed by a vast army, Suṣeṇa for his part took up his position at the intermediate post at the back of Śrī Rāma not far from him. Seizing trees and peaks of mountains, the aforesaid tigers among monkeys, who were endowed with sharp teeth like tigers, stood gladly waiting for an encounter. (41—45)

सर्वे विकृतलाङ्गूलाः सर्वे दंष्ट्रानखायुधाः ।
सर्वे विकृतचित्राङ्गाः सर्वे च विकृताननाः ॥ ४६ ॥

All had their tails lifted up in an unnatural way (on account of fury), all had teeth and nails for their weapons, their eyes etc., were distorted and looked strange, suffused as they were with blood, and their faces too were distorted through anger. (46)

दशनागबलाः केचित् केचिद् दशगुणोत्तराः ।
केचिन्नागसहस्रस्य बभूवुस्तुल्यविक्रमाः ॥ ४७ ॥

Some monkeys were endowed with the strength of ten elephants, while others were ten times as strong as the latter; while still others were equal in prowess to a thousand elephants. (47)

सन्ति चौघबलाः केचित् केचिच्छतगुणोत्तराः ।
अप्रमेयबलाश्चान्ये तत्रासन् हरियूथपाः ॥ ४८ ॥

Some commanders of monkey troops were endowed with the strength of an Ogha* of elephants, while others were a hundred times stronger than the latter. Still others possessed immeasurable strength. (48)

अद्भुतश्च विचित्रश्च तेषामासीत् समागमः ।
तत्र वानरसैन्यानां शलभानामिवोद्गमः ॥ ४९ ॥

Marvellous and astonishing too was the gathering in that area of those monkey troops, which resembled a flight of locusts. (49)

परिपूर्णमिवाकाशं सम्पूर्णैव च मेदिनी ।
लङ्कामुपनिविष्टैश्च सम्पतद्भिश्च वानरैः ॥ ५० ॥

The air was completely filled, as it were, with the monkeys bounding towards Laṅkā and the land round about Laṅkā was fully covered as it were with those that were already stationed beneath its walls. (50)

शतं शतसहस्राणां पृतनर्क्षवनौकसाम् ।
लङ्काद्वाराण्युपाजगमुर्न्ये योद्धुं समन्ततः ॥ ५१ ॥

A hundred divisions of one lakh bears and monkeys each marched to the four gates of Laṅkā to reinforce those already posted there; while others proceeded to fight on every side. (51)

आवृतः स गिरिः सर्वैस्तैः समन्तात् प्लवङ्गमैः ।
अयुतानां सहस्रं च पुरीं तामभ्यवर्तत ॥ ५२ ॥

The said mountain (the Trikūṭa mountain, on which Laṅkā had been built) was surrounded on all sides by all the aforesaid monkeys; while a crore of them ranged round that city in order to collect information about the monkeys assembled at the gates. (52)

वानरैर्बलवद्भिश्च बभूव द्रुमपाणिभिः ।
सर्वतः संवृता लङ्का दुष्प्रवेशाणि वायुना ॥ ५३ ॥

Nay, surrounded on all sides by mighty monkeys with uprooted trees in their hands, Laṅkā was difficult to penetrate even for the wind. (53)

राक्षसा विस्मयं जग्मुः सहसाभिनिपीडिताः ।
वानरैर्मघसंकाशैः शक्रतुल्यपराक्रमैः ॥ ५४ ॥

Besieged all of a sudden by monkeys, who resembled clouds in colour and equalled Indra (the ruler of gods) in prowess, the ogres gave way to wonder. (54)

महाज्जब्दोऽभवत् तत्र बलौघस्याभिवर्ततः ।
सागरस्येव भिन्नस्य यथा स्यात् सलिलस्वनः ॥ ५५ ॥

Even as the stream in the form of the monkey troops was advancing towards Laṅkā, there arose from it on the summit of Mount Trikūṭa a noise just like a roar in the water when an ocean transgresses its bounds. (55)

तेन शब्देन महता सप्राकारा सतोरणा ।
लङ्का प्रचलिता सर्वा सशैलवनकानना ॥ ५६ ॥

At this tumult, the entire Laṅkā with its defensive walls, archways, mountains, woods and forests violently shook. (56)

रामलक्ष्मणगुप्ता सा सुग्रीवेण च वाहिनी ।
बभूव दुर्धर्षतरा सर्वैरपि सुरासुरैः ॥ ५७ ॥

Protected by Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa and directed by Sugrīva, the aforesaid army of monkeys was exceedingly difficult to assail even for all the gods and the demons combined. (57)

राघवः संनिवेश्यैवं स्वसैन्यं रक्षसां वधे ।
सम्मन्त्र्य मन्त्रिभिः सार्धं निश्चित्य च पुनः पुनः ॥ ५८ ॥

आनन्तर्यमभिप्रेप्सुः क्रमयोगार्थतत्त्ववित् ।
विभीषणस्यानुमते राजधर्ममनुस्मरन् ॥ ५९ ॥

अङ्गदं वालितनयं समाहूयेदमब्रवीत् ।
गत्वा सौम्य दशग्रीवं ब्रूहि मद्वचनात् कपे ॥ ६० ॥

लङ्घयित्वा पुरीं लङ्कां भयं त्यक्त्वा गतव्यथः ।
भ्रष्टश्रीकं गतैश्चर्यं मुमूर्षानष्टचेतनम् ॥ ६१ ॥

Having thus drawn up his army in battle array with a view to the destruction of ogres, repeatedly deliberated at length with his counsellors and arrived at a decision, nay, calling to mind the duty of kings and duly summoning Aṅgada, the son of Vāli. Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who was eager to undertake what was to be done next, nay, who knew the truth about the consequences of the four expedients to be used against an enemy in the shape of conciliation, gift, sowing dissension and punishment, employed in succession, and who acted in concurrence with Vibhiṣaṇa, spoke as follows: "Crossing over the walls to the city of Laṅkā, and approaching Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), who has fallen from fortune, has lost his sovereignty and has been deprived of his wit because of his inclination to die, nay, shaking off fear and free from perturbation, admonish him on my behalf, O gentle monkey, in the following words: (58—61)

ऋषीणां देवतानां च गन्धर्वाप्सरसां तथा ।
नागानामथ यक्षाणां राज्ञां च रजनीचर ॥ ६२ ॥

यच्च पापं कृतं मोहादवलिप्तेन राक्षस ।
नूनं ते विगतो दर्पः स्वयंभूवरदानजः ।

तस्य पापस्य सम्प्राप्ता व्युष्टिरद्य दुरासदा ॥ ६३ ॥

"The period of retribution, which is dangerous to approach, has now duly arrived for the sins that have been committed by you through ignorance against Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras) and gods as well as against Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and celestial nymphs, as also against Nāgas (a class of semi-divine beings credited with a human face and serpent-like lower extremities), Yakṣas (a species of demigods) and human kings, conceited as you were, O ranger of the night! Surely your arrogance begotten of the boon that was conferred on you by Brahmā (the self-born creator) has gone asunder, O ogre! (62-63)

यस्य दण्डधरस्तेऽहं दाराहरणकर्षितः ।
दण्डं धारयमाणस्तु लङ्काद्वारे व्यवस्थितः ॥ ६४ ॥

“Wielding the rod of punishment, I, your chastiser, for my part have taken up my position firmly at the gates of Laṅkā, emaciated as I am due to the abduction of my consort. (64)

पदवीं देवतानां च महर्षीणां च राक्षस ।
राजर्षीणां च सर्वेषां गमिष्यसि युधि स्थिरः ॥ ६५ ॥

“Remaining firm in combat and giving up the ghost while fighting, you shall reach the destiny of gods and eminent Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras) as well as of all royal sages, O ogre! (65)

बलेन येन वै सीतां मायया राक्षसाधम ।
मामतिक्रमयित्वा त्वं हृतवांस्तन्निदर्शय ॥ ६६ ॥

“Display, O the vilest of ogres, the strength by virtue of which you actually bore away Sītā after putting me off the scent by recourse to deception. (66)

अराक्षसमिमं लोकं कर्तास्मि निशितैः शरैः ।
न चेच्छरणमभ्येषि तामादाय तु मैथिलीम् ॥ ६७ ॥

“I shall rid this world of ogres with my sharp arrows if you, for your part, do not seek me as a protector taking with you the aforesaid princess of Mithilā. (67)

धर्मात्मा राक्षसश्रेष्ठः सम्प्राप्तोऽयं विभीषणः ।
लङ्कैश्वर्यमिदं श्रीमान् ध्रुवं प्राप्नोत्यकण्टकम् ॥ ६८ ॥

“Vibhīṣaṇa, the foremost of ogres, whose mind is set on virtue, has also arrived with me here. The glorious ogre shall undoubtedly attain the sovereignty of Laṅkā without opposition. (68)

नहि राज्यमधर्मेण भोक्तुं क्षणमपि त्वया ।
शक्यं मूर्खसहायेन पापेनाविदितात्मना ॥ ६९ ॥

“Surely sovereignty cannot be enjoyed even a moment longer through unrighteousness by you, a sinner, with fools as your helpmates and by whom the Self has not been realized. (69)

युध्यस्व मा धृतिं कृत्वा शौर्यमालम्ब्य राक्षस ।
मच्छरैस्त्वं रणे शान्तस्ततः पूतो भविष्यसि ॥ ७० ॥

“Taking recourse to firmness and embracing gallantry, meet me in combat, O ogre! Getting extinct on the field of battle through my arrows, you will be purified thereby. (70)

यद्याविशसि लोकांस्त्रीन् पक्षीभूतो निशाचर ।
मम चक्षुःपथं प्राप्य न जीवन् प्रतियास्यसि ॥ ७१ ॥

“Entering the range of my sight, you shall never return alive even if you range all the three worlds in the form of a bird, O prowler of the night! (71)

ब्रवीमि त्वां हितं वाक्यं क्रियतामौर्ध्वदेहिकम् ।
सुदृष्टा क्रियतां लङ्का जीवितं ते मयि स्थितम् ॥ ७२ ॥

“I tender this salutary advice to you: let obsequies be performed by yourself for the benefit of your soul in advance; for no ogre will be left in the world to perform obsequies for your departed soul, and let Laṅkā be adequately seen by you for the last time; for your life is now dependent on me!” (72)

इत्युक्तः स तु तारेयो रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
जगामाकाशमाविश्य मूर्तिमानिव हव्यवाट् ॥ ७३ ॥

Ascending in the air when counselled in these words by Śrī Rāma, who was unwearied in action, Aṅgada (son of Tārā) for his part, who resembled fire-incarnate, left for Laṅkā. (73)

सोऽतिपत्य मुहूर्तेन श्रीमान् रावणमन्दिरम् ।
ददर्शासीनमव्यग्रं रावणं सचिवैः सह ॥ ७४ ॥

Crossing over the walls to the palace of Rāvaṇa in a moment, the glorious Aṅgada saw Rāvaṇa sitting unperturbed in the company of his ministers. (74)

ततस्तस्याविदूरेण निपत्य हरिपुंगवः ।
दीप्ताग्निमदृशस्तस्थावद्भदः कनकाद्भदः ॥ ७५ ॥

Descending at a short distance from him, Aṅgada, a veritable bull among the monkeys, who was adorned with armlets of gold, now stood like a blazing fire. (75)

तद् रामवचनं सर्वमन्यूनाधिकमुत्तमम् ।
सामात्यं श्रावयामास निवेद्यात्मानमात्मना ॥ ७६ ॥

Having made himself known through himself, he delivered to Rāvaṇa with his ministers in toto the excellent message of Śrī Rāma, neither subtracting nor adding anything of his own. (76)

दूतोऽहं कोसलेन्द्रस्य रामस्याक्लिष्टकर्मणः ।
वालिपुत्रोऽङ्गदो नाम यदि ते श्रोत्रमागतः ॥ ७७ ॥

He spoke as follows: “I am an envoy of Śrī Rāma, the king of Kosala, who is unwearied in action, Aṅgada by name, son of Vālī—I wonder if my name has ever reached your ears. (77)

आह त्वां राघवो रामः कौसल्यानन्दवर्धनः ।
निष्पत्य प्रतियुध्यस्व नृशंस पुरुषो भव ॥ ७८ ॥

“Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who enhances the joy of his mother, Kausalyā, speaks to you as follows: ‘Prove to be a man, O ruthless ogre, and, sallying forth, give battle to me. (78)

हन्तास्मि त्वां सहामात्यं सपुत्रज्ञातिबान्धवम् ।
निरुद्दिग्रास्त्रयो लोका भविष्यन्ति हते त्वयि ॥ ७९ ॥

“I shall make short work of you with your ministers, sons, relations and kinsfolk. All the three worlds will be rid of fear on your being killed. (79)

देवदानवयक्षाणां गन्धर्वोरगरक्षसाम् ।
शत्रुमद्योद्धरिष्यामि त्वामृषीणां च कण्टकम् ॥ ८० ॥

“‘I shall presently uproot you, an enemy of gods, demons and Yakṣas (a class of demigods), Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Nāgas (a class of semi-divine beings credited with the head of a man and the lower extremities of a serpent) and ogres and a virtual thorn in the side of Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras). (80)

विभीषणस्य चैश्वर्यं भविष्यति हते त्वयि ।
न चेत् सत्कृत्य वैदेहीं प्रणिपत्य प्रदास्यसि ॥ ८१ ॥

“‘Nay, unless you return Sitā (a princess of the Videha territory) after paying homage to her and bowing down respectfully to me, the royal fortune will descend to Vibhīṣaṇa on your being killed.’” (81)

इत्येवं परुषं वाक्यं ब्रुवाणे हरिपुङ्गवे ।
अमर्षवशमापन्नो निशाचरगणेश्वरः ॥ ८२ ॥

While Aṅgada, a bull among the monkeys, was making the foregoing harsh speech, Rāvaṇa, the ruler of hordes of ogres, was seized with fury. (82)

ततः स रोषमापन्नः शशास सचिवांस्तदा ।
गृह्यतामिति दुर्मेधा वध्यतामिति चासकृत् ॥ ८३ ॥

Swayed by passion, Rāvaṇa, thereupon repeatedly commanded his ministers in the following words at that moment: “Let this evil-minded monkey be seized and put to death.” (83)

रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा दीप्ताग्निमिव तेजसा ।
जगृहुस्तं ततो घोराश्रत्वारो रजनीचराः ॥ ८४ ॥

Hearing the command of Rāvaṇa, four terrible rangers of the night presently seized Aṅgada, who resembled a blazing fire in brilliance. (84)

ग्राहयामास तारेयः स्वयमात्मानमात्मवान् ।
बलं दर्शयितुं वीरो यातुधानगणे तदा ॥ ८५ ॥

In order to exhibit his strength before the host of ogres on that occasion, the resolute and valiant Aṅgada (son of Tārā) voluntarily allowed himself to be seized by the ogres. (85)

स तान् बाहुद्वयासक्तानादाय पतगानिव ।
प्रासादं शैलसंकाशमुत्पपाताङ्गदस्तदा ॥ ८६ ॥

Taking with him the four ogres clung to his arms like so many birds, the aforesaid Aṅgada then leapt on to the roof of the palace, which stood like a mountain. (86)

तस्योत्पतनवेगेन निर्धूतास्तत्र राक्षसाः ।
भूमौ निपतिताः सर्वे राक्षसेन्द्रस्य पश्यतः ॥ ८७ ॥

Violently shaken by the impetuosity of his bound, all the four ogres fell to the ground, while Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) stood looking on. (87)

ततः प्रासादशिखरं शैलशृङ्गमिवोन्नतम् ।
चक्राम राक्षसेन्द्रस्य वालिपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ॥ ८८ ॥

Thereupon the glorious Aṅgada, son of Vālī, set his feet on the top of the palace of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), which was lofty as a mountain-peak. (88)

पफाल च तदाक्रान्तं दशग्रीवस्य पश्यतः ।
पुरा हिमवतः शृङ्गं वज्रेणेव विदारितम् ॥ ८९ ॥

Nay, trampled by Aṅgada, the top of the palace cleft asunder—even as a peak of the Himalayan range did of yore when riven by the thunderbolt—while Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, stood gazing on. (89)

भङ्क्त्वा प्रासादशिखरं नाम विश्राव्य चात्मनः ।
विनद्य सुमहानादमुत्पपात विहायसा ॥ ९० ॥

Having shattered the top of the palace, nay, proclaiming his own name, and emitting a terrible roar, Aṅgada rose into the air. (90)

व्यथयन् राक्षसान् सर्वान् हर्षयंश्चापि वानरान् ।
स वानराणां मध्ये तु रामपार्श्वमुपागतः ॥ ९१ ॥

Causing pain to all the ogres and delighting the monkeys at the same time, Aṅgada for his part returned to the presence of Śrī Rāma in the midst of the monkeys. (91)

रावणस्तु परं चक्रे क्रोधं प्रासादधर्षणात् ।
विनाशं चात्मनः पश्यन् निःश्वासपरमोऽभवत् ॥ ९२ ॥

Rāvaṇa, on the other hand, exhibited great anger at the assault on his palace. Nay, foreseeing his own destruction, he gave himself up to sighing. (92)

रामस्तु बहुभिर्हृष्टैर्विनदद्भिः प्लवङ्गमैः ।
वृतो रिपुवधाकाङ्क्षी युद्वायैवाभ्यवर्तत ॥ ९३ ॥

Surrounded by numerous monkeys, who were roaring jubilantly, Śrī Rāma for his part, who was keen to destroy his enemy, pressed on for war alone. (93)

सुषेणस्तु महावीर्यो गिरिकूटोपमो हरिः ।
बहुभिः संवृतस्तत्र वानरैः कामरूपिभिः ॥ ९४ ॥

The monkey, Suṣeṇa, for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary virility and looked like a mountain-peak in size, stood close to Laṅkā, surrounded by numerous monkeys who were able to change their form at will. (94)

स तु द्वाराणि संयम्य सुग्रीववचनात् कपिः ।
पर्यक्रामत दुर्धर्षो नक्षत्राणीव चन्द्रमाः ॥ ९५ ॥

Controlling all the four gates of Laṅkā, the monkey for his part, who was hard to overcome, patrolled under orders of Sugrīva all the entrances even as the moon moves amidst the lunar mansions. (95)

तेषामक्षौहिणिशतं समवेक्ष्य वनौकसाम् ।
लङ्कामुपनिविष्टानां सागरं चाभिवर्तताम् ॥ ९६ ॥
राक्षसा विस्मयं जग्मुस्त्रासं जग्मुस्तथापरे ।
अपरे समरे हर्षाद्धर्मवोपपेदिरे ॥ ९७ ॥

The ogres were wonderstruck to observe a hundred Akṣauhiṇīs of the aforesaid monkeys, stationed round about Laṅkā, laying siege to it, and extending up to the sea; nay, others gay way to alarm;

while still others, recalling the joys of war, experienced joy alone at the prospect of fighting. (96-97)

कृत्स्नं हि कपिभिर्व्याप्तं प्राकारपरिखान्तरम् ।
ददृशू राक्षसा दीनाः प्राकारं वानरीकृतम् ।
हाहाकारमकुर्वन्त राक्षसा भयमागताः ॥ ९८ ॥

The entire space between the defensive walls and the surrounding moat was actually filled with monkeys. The downcast ogres saw the defensive walls converted, as it were, into monkeys themselves. Overwhelmed with fear, they raised an outcry of distress. (98)

तस्मिन् महाभीषणके प्रवृत्ते
कोलाहले राक्षसराजयोधाः ।
प्रगृह्य रक्षांसि महायुधानि
युगान्तवाता इव संविचेरुः ॥ ९९ ॥

Seizing hold of mighty weapons, when that most appalling tumult had set in, the soldiers of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, rushed like the winds raging at the dissolution of the worlds. (99)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLII

Approaching Rāvaṇa, the ogres break to him the news about Laṅkā having been laid siege to by the monkeys led by Śrī Rāma. Ascending the roof of his palace and taxing his brain about the means of putting an end to the monkeys, he casts a look at Śrī Rāma and the monkeys.

Pained at the thought that Sītā was being bullied by Rāvaṇa on his account, and commanding the monkeys to besiege all the four gates of Laṅkā and to destroy the ogres, Śrī Rāma, on the other side, takes up his position alongwith Lakṣmaṇa near the northern gate.

Apprised of these developments, Rāvaṇa mobilizes his army and, encouraged by him, the ogres beat their drums and emit a terrible roar

ततस्ते राक्षसास्तत्र गत्वा रावणमन्दिरम् ।
न्यवेदयन् पुरीं रुद्धां रामेण सह वानरैः ॥ १ ॥

Proceeding to the palace of Rāvaṇa in Laṅkā, the said ogres thereupon broke the news to him about the city having been laid siege to by Śrī Rāma, accompanied by the monkeys. (1)

रुद्धां तु नगरीं श्रुत्वा जातक्रोधो निशाचरः ।
विधानं द्विगुणं कृत्वा प्रासादं चाप्यरोहत ॥ २ ॥

Enraged to hear of the city having been besieged by the monkeys, nay, doubling the arrangements already made for the defence of the capital, the ranger of the night for his part ascended the palace. (2)

स ददर्श वृतां लङ्कां सशैलवनकाननाम् ।
असंख्येयैर्हरिगणैः सर्वतो युद्धकाङ्क्षिभिः ॥ ३ ॥

He saw Laṅkā with its mountains, woods and forests, besieged on all sides by innumerable monkeys, who were all eager to fight. (3)

स दृष्ट्वा वानरैः सर्वैर्वसुधां कपिलीकृताम् ।
कथं क्षपयितव्याः स्युरिति चिन्तापरोऽभवत् ॥ ४ ॥

Beholding the earth round about Laṅkā, rendered brown by all the monkeys gathered there, he became thoughtful as to how they were to be exterminated. (4)

स चिन्तयित्वा सुचिरं धैर्यमालम्ब्य रावणः ।
राघवं हरियूथांश्च ददर्शायतलोचनः ॥ ५ ॥

Having pondered for a pretty long time and embracing firmness, the notorious Rāvaṇa with dilated eyes gazed on Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) and the simian troops. (5)

राघवः सह सैन्येन मुदितो नाम पुप्लुवे ।
लङ्कां ददर्श गुप्तां वै सर्वतो राक्षसैर्वृताम् ॥ ६ ॥

Full of delight, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, pressed forward with his army and saw Laṅkā surrounded on all sides and guarded by ogres. (6)

दृष्ट्वा दाशरथिर्लङ्कां चित्रध्वजपताकिनीम् ।
जगाम सहसा सीतां दूयमानेन चेतसा ॥ ७ ॥

Seeing Laṅkā, which was dressed with picturesque flags and buntings, Śrī Rāma (son of Daśaratha) suddenly thought of Sitā with a mind which was being consumed with affliction. (7)

अत्र सा मृगशावाक्षी मत्कृते जनकात्मजा ।
पीड्यते शोकसंतप्ता कृशा स्थण्डिलशायिनी ॥ ८ ॥

He said to himself: "Here is that daughter of Janaka, with eyes resembling those of a fawn, undergoing suffering on my account, tormented, as she is, with grief, emaciated and reposing, as she does, on the ground." (8)

निपीड्यमानां धर्मात्मा वैदेहीमनुचिन्तयन् ।
क्षिप्रमाज्ञापयद् रामो वानरान् द्विषतां वधे ॥ ९ ॥

Thinking again and again of Sitā (a princess of the Videha territory), who was being sore oppressed by ogresses, Śrī Rāma, whose mind was set on virtue, speedily commanded the monkeys to make short work of the enemy. (9)

एवमुक्ते तु वचसि रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
संघर्षमाणाः प्लवगाः सिंहनादैरनादयन् ॥ १० ॥

When the aforesaid command was issued by Śrī Rāma, who was unwearied in action, the monkeys, who were struggling hard to outdo one another in advancing against the enemy, made Laṅkā resound with their shouts, resembling the roar of a lion. (10)

शिखरैर्विकिरामैतां लङ्कां मुष्टिभिरेव वा ।
इति स्म दधिरे सर्वे मनांसि हरियूथपाः ॥ ११ ॥

All the monkey-generals made the following resolve: 'Let us crush this Laṅkā with mountain-peaks or with our fists alone.' (11)

उद्यम्य गिरिशृङ्गाणि महान्ति शिखराणि च ।
तरुंश्चोत्पाट्य विविधांस्तिष्ठन्ति हरियूथपाः ॥ १२ ॥

Lifting up mountain-peaks as well as huge rocks, and uprooting trees of various kinds, the commanders of monkey troops stood prepared to launch an attack on Laṅkā. (12)

प्रेक्षतो राक्षसेन्द्रस्य तान्यनीकानि भागशः ।
राघवप्रियकामार्थं लङ्कामारुरुहुस्तदा ॥ १३ ॥

In order to accomplish Śrī Rāma's cherished desire, the aforesaid simian troops then began to scale the walls of Laṅkā in various parts, while Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, stood gazing. (13)

ते ताम्रवक्त्रा हेमाभा रामार्थे त्यक्तजीविताः ।
लङ्कामेवाभ्यवर्तन्त सालभूधरयोधिनः ॥ १४ ॥

Contending with sal trees and mountain-peaks for weapons, those monkeys of golden hue with coppery faces, who had dedicated their lives to the cause of Śrī Rāma, advanced towards Laṅkā itself. (14)

ते द्रुमैः पर्वताग्रैश्च मुष्टिभिश्च प्लवंगमाः ।
प्राकाराग्राण्यसंख्यानि ममन्थुस्तोरणानि च ॥ १५ ॥

By means of trees and mountain-tops as well as with their fists the said monkeys demolished the tops of countless defensive walls as well as archways. (15)

परिखान् पूरयन्तश्च प्रसन्नसलिलाशयान् ।
पांसुभिः पर्वताग्रैश्च तृणैः काष्ठैश्च वानराः ॥ १६ ॥

The monkeys stood filling the moats containing translucent water with sands, mountain-tops, grass and logs of wood. (16)

ततः सहस्रयूथाश्च कोटियूथाश्च यूथपाः ।
कोटियूथशताश्चान्ये लङ्कामारुरुहुस्तदा ॥ १७ ॥

The leaders of monkey troops then scaled the walls of Laṅkā taking with them battalions of monkeys in thousands, crores and even hundreds of crores. (17)

काञ्चनानि प्रमर्दन्तस्तोरणानि प्लवङ्गमाः ।
कैलासशिखराग्राणि गोपुराणि प्रमथ्य च ॥ १८ ॥
आप्लवन्तः प्लवन्तश्च गर्जन्तश्च प्लवङ्गमाः ।
लङ्कां तामभिधावन्ति महावारणसंनिभाः ॥ १९ ॥

The monkeys stood demolishing the archways of gold. Nay, having razed to the ground the gates with their tops resembling the peaks of Mount Kailāsa, the monkeys, who closely resembled huge elephants, rushed towards the said Laṅkā, springing on all sides and leaping the walls, nay, roaring all the time. (18-19)

जयत्युरुबलो रामो लक्ष्मणश्च महाबलः ।
राजा जयति सुग्रीवो राघवेणाभिपालितः ॥ २० ॥

“Victorious is Śrī Rāma, who is possessed of surpassing strength, and Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might! Victorious too is King Sugrīva, protected on all sides by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu!” (20)

इत्येवं घोषयन्तश्च गर्जन्तश्च प्लवंगमाः ।
अभ्यधावन्त लङ्कायाः प्राकारं कामरूपिणः ॥ २१ ॥

Shouting thus, the monkeys, who were all able to change their form at will, rushed roaring towards the defensive walls of Laṅkā. (21)

वीरबाहुः सुबाहुश्च नलश्च पनसस्तथा ।
निपीड्योपनिविष्टास्ते प्राकारं हरियूथपाः ।
एतस्मिन्नन्तरे चक्रुः स्कन्धावारनिवेशनम् ॥ २२ ॥

Storming the defensive walls, the monkey generals, Virabāhu and Subāhu, as also Nala and Panasa, took up their position on them. In the meantime they settled the beleaguering army in camps. (22)

पूर्वद्वारं तु कुमुदः कोटिभिर्दशभिवृतः ।
आवृत्य बलवांस्तस्थौ हरिभिर्जितकाशिभिः ॥ २३ ॥

Surrounded by monkeys, numbering ten crores, who all behaved like conquerors, the mighty Kumuda for his part stood besieging the eastern gate, while remaining stationed in north-east. (23)

सहायार्थं तु तस्यैव निविष्टः प्रघसो हरिः ।
पनसश्च महाबाहुर्वानरैरभिसंवृतः ॥ २४ ॥

Surrounded by other monkeys, the monkey Praghosa and the mighty-armed Panasa for their part took up their position by his side in order to assist Kumuda himself. (24)

दक्षिणद्वारमासाद्य वीरः शतबलिः कपिः ।
आवृत्य बलवांस्तस्थौ विंशत्या कोटिभिवृतः ॥ २५ ॥

Reaching the southern gate (while remaining stationed in the south-east), the valiant and mighty monkey Śatabali, who was accompanied by monkeys numbering twenty crores, stood besieging the aforesaid gate. (25)

सुषेणः पश्चिमद्वारं गत्वा तारापिता बली।
आवृत्य बलवांस्तस्थौ कोटिकोटिभिरावृतः ॥ २६ ॥

Seeking the western gate (while remaining stationed in the south-west), Suṣeṇa, the mighty father of Tārā (Vālī's wife), who was surrounded by crores and crores of monkeys, stood besieging that gate. (26)

उत्तरद्वारमागम्य रामः सौमित्रिणा सह।
आवृत्य बलवांस्तस्थौ सुग्रीवश्च हरीश्वरः ॥ २७ ॥

Making his way to the northern gate alongwith Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), (while remaining stationed in the north-west) the mighty Śrī Rāma as also Sugrīva, the king of monkeys, stood blockading that gate. (27)

गोलाङ्गूलो महाकायो गवाक्षो भीमदर्शना।
वृतः कोट्या महावीर्यस्तस्थौ रामस्य पार्श्वतः ॥ २८ ॥

Surrounded by a crore of monkeys, Gavākṣa of gigantic proportions and grim aspect, who belonged to the Golāṅgūla species of monkeys and was endowed with extraordinary virility, stood by the side of Śrī Rāma. (28)

ऋक्षाणां भीमकोपानां धूम्रः शत्रुनिबर्हणः।
वृतः कोट्या महावीर्यस्तस्थौ रामस्य पार्श्वतः ॥ २९ ॥

Accompanied by a crore of bears of redoubtable fury, Dhūmra, brother of Jāmbavān, the king of bears, the exterminator of his foes, nay, who was endowed with extraordinary valour, also took up his position by the side of Śrī Rāma. (29)

संनद्धस्तु महावीर्यो गदापाणिर्विभीषणः।
वृतो यत्तैस्तु सचिवैस्तस्थौ यत्र महाबलः ॥ ३० ॥

Clad in defensive armour and accompanied by his watchful ministers, Vibhiṣaṇa for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary virility, stood, mace in hand, where Śrī Rāma, who was possessed of great might, had taken up his position. (30)

गजो गवाक्षो गवयः शरभो गन्धमादनः।
समन्तात् परिधावन्तो ररक्षुर्हरिवाहिनीम् ॥ ३१ ॥

Rushing on all sides, Gaja, Gavākṣa, Gavaya, Śarabha and Gandhamādana defended the simian army. (31)

ततः कोपपरीतात्मा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः।
निर्याणं सर्वसैन्यानां द्रुतमाज्ञापयत् तदा ॥ ३२ ॥

With a mind possessed by anger on that score, Rāvaṇa the ruler of ogres, forthwith ordered a quick sally of all his forces. (32)

एतच्छ्रुत्वा तदा वाक्यं रावणस्य मुखेरितम्।
सहसा भीमनिर्घोषमुदघुष्टं रजनीचरैः ॥ ३३ ॥

Hearing this command issued from the lips of Rāvaṇa, a clamour was raised all of a sudden by the rangers of the night with a terrible roar. (33)

ततः प्रबोधिता भेर्यश्चन्द्रपाण्डुरपुष्कराः।
हेमकोणैरभिहता राक्षसानां समन्ततः ॥ ३४ ॥

Beaten with sticks of gold then sounded on every side the kettledrums of the ogres, with discs white as the moon. (34)

विनेदुश्च महाघोषाः शङ्खाः शतसहस्रशः।
राक्षसानां सुघोराणां मुखमारुतपूरिताः ॥ ३५ ॥

Blown with the wind from the mouth of most hideous ogres, sonorous conches also blared forth in their hundreds and thousands. (35)

ते बभुः शुभनीलाङ्गाः सशङ्खा रजनीचराः।
विद्युन्मण्डलसंनद्धाः सबलाका इवाम्बुदाः ॥ ३६ ॥

With their brilliant dark limbs decked with jewels, the aforesaid rangers of the night, who were equipped with conches, shone like dark clouds provided with armour in the shape of flashes of lightning and accompanied by rows of herons. (36)

निष्पतन्ति ततः सैन्या हृष्टा रावणचोदिताः।
समये पूर्यमाणस्य वेगा इव महोदधेः ॥ ३७ ॥

Urged by Rāvaṇa, the troops of ogres thereupon joyfully rushed forth like the waves of the ocean which is being swollen by clouds at the time of universal destruction. (37)

ततो वानरसैन्येन मुक्तो नादः समन्ततः ।
मलयः पूरितो येन ससानुप्रस्थकन्दरः ॥ ३८ ॥

A roar was then shouted on all sides by the simian army—a roar which filled the Malaya (Trikūṭa) mountain with its major and minor peaks and caves. (38)

शङ्खदुन्दुभिनिर्घोषः सिंहनादस्तरस्विनाम् ।
पृथिवीं चान्तरिक्षं च सागरं चाभ्यनादयत् ॥ ३९ ॥
गजानां बृंहितैः सार्धं हयानां हेषितैरपि ।
रथानां नेमिनिर्घोषै रक्षसां वदनस्वनैः ॥ ४० ॥

The blast of conches and the roll of drums as well as the leonine roar of monkey heroes, accompanied by the trumpeting of elephants, the neighing of horses, the clatter of chariot wheels and the shout of ogres, made the earth and the air as well as the sea resound. (39-40)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे घोरः संग्रामः समपद्यत ।
रक्षसां वानराणां च यथा देवासुरे पुरा ॥ ४१ ॥

In the meantime there ensued a terrible fight between the ogres and the monkeys as between the gods and the demons in the olden days. (41)

ते गदाभिः प्रदीप्ताभिः शक्तिशूलपरश्वधैः ।
निजघ्नुर्वानरान् सर्वान् कथयन्तः स्वविक्रमान् ॥ ४२ ॥

Vaunting their own prowess, the ogres began to strike all the monkeys with their flaming maces as well as with javelins, pikes and axes. (42)

तथा वृक्षैर्महाकायाः पर्वताग्रैश्च वानराः ।
निजघ्नुस्तानि रक्षांसि नखैर्दन्तैश्च वेगिनः ॥ ४३ ॥

Full of impetuosity the gigantic monkeys likewise struck those ogres with trees and mountain-tops as well as with their nails and teeth. (43)

राजा जयति सुग्रीव इति शब्दो महानभूत् ।
राजञ्जयजयेत्युक्त्वा स्वस्वनामकथां ततः ॥ ४४ ॥

There arose (in the simian ranks) a loud war-cry: "Victorious is King Sugrīva!" Shouting "Be triumphant! Be victorious, O king!" the ogres then proclaimed their own respective names. (44)

राक्षसास्त्वपरे भीमाः प्राकारस्था महीं गतान् ।
वानरान् भिन्दिपालैश्च शूलैश्चैव व्यदारयन् ॥ ४५ ॥

Standing on the walls, other redoubtable ogres for thier part pierced the monkeys standing on the ground below with their Bhindipālas (a javeline-like weapon) as well as with pikes. (45)

वानराश्चापि संकुद्धाः प्राकारस्थान् महीं गताः ।
राक्षसान् पातयामासुः खमाप्लुत्य स्वबाहुभिः ॥ ४६ ॥

Bounding into the air highly enraged, the monkeys too, who stood on the ground, dragged down the ogres stationed on the walls with their arms. (46)

स सम्प्रहारस्तुमुलो मांसशोणितकर्दमः ।
रक्षसां वानराणां च सम्बभूवाद्भुतोपमः ॥ ४७ ॥

The aforesaid fight between the ogres and the monkeys, confused as it was, could not be easily compared to any other conflict and left a mire of flesh and blood. (47)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्विचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLIII

In the course of duels the ogres and the monkeys, in which Aṅgada closes with Indrajit, the heads of Durdharṣa, Mitraghna, Agniketu and Yajñakopana are lopped off by Śrī Rāma and that of Nikumbha by Nīla and, killed by Suṣeṇa, Vidyunmālī drops down dead

युध्यतां तु ततस्तेषां वानराणां महात्मनाम् ।
रक्षसां सम्बभूवाथ बलरोषः सुदारुणः ॥ १ ॥

An exceedingly terrible fury forthwith burst forth on that occasion in the ranks of the aforesaid monkeys of gigantic proportions and the ogres, even while they were fighting at the sight of the strength of the hostile army. (1)

ते हयैः काञ्चनापीडैर्गजैश्चाग्निशिखोपमैः ।
रथैश्चादित्यसंकाशैः कवचैश्च मनोरमैः ॥ २ ॥
निर्ययू रक्षसा वीरा नादयन्तो दिशो दश ।
राक्षसा भीमकर्माणो रावणस्य जयैषिणः ॥ ३ ॥

Mounted on the back of steeds and elephants provided with golden trappings as well as on chariots bright as flames, and clad in soul ravishing coats of mail, dazzling like the sun, the said heroic ogres of terrible deeds, accompanied by other ogres, sallied forth seeking the triumph of Rāvaṇa and causing the ten directions resound with their clamour. (2-3)

वानराणामपि चमूर्बृहती जयमिच्छताम् ।
अभ्यधावत तां सेनां रक्षसां घोरकर्मणाम् ॥ ४ ॥

The huge army of the monkeys too, that likewise longed for Śrī Rāma's victory, rushed towards the army of ogres of terrible deeds. (4)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे तेषामन्योन्यमभिधावताम् ।
रक्षसां वानराणां च द्वन्द्वयुद्धमवर्तत ॥ ५ ॥

In the meantime there ensued duels between the aforesaid ogres and monkeys, each side rushing towards the other. (5)

अङ्गदेनेन्द्रजित्सार्धं वालिपुत्रेण राक्षसः ।
अयुध्यत महातेजास्त्र्यम्बकेण यथान्धकः ॥ ६ ॥

The oge Indrajit (the eldest son of Rāvaṇa), who was endowed with extraordinary energy, contended with Aṅgada, son of Vālī, even as the demon, Andhaka, did with Lord Śiva, endowed with three eyes. (6)

प्रजङ्घेन च सम्पातिर्नित्यं दुर्धर्षणो रणे ।
जम्बुमालिनमारब्धो हनूमानपि वानरः ॥ ७ ॥

Nay, Sampāti, who was always hard to overcome in an encounter, fought with Prajaṅgha; while the monkey, Hanumān, proceeded to give battle to Jambumālī. (7)

संगतस्तु महाक्रोधो राक्षसो रावणानुजः ।
समरे तीक्ष्णवेगेन शत्रुञ्जेन विभीषणः ॥ ८ ॥

The furious oge Vibhiṣaṇa, the youngest borthor of Rāvaṇa, for this part, closed on the field of battle with Śatrughna of fiery impetuosity. (8)

तपनेन गजः सार्धं राक्षसेन महाबलः ।
निकुम्भेन महातेजा नीलोऽपि समयुध्यत ॥ ९ ॥

The very mighty Gaja steadily fought with the oge Tapanā; and Nīla too, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, with Nikumbha. (9)

वानरेन्द्रस्तु सुग्रीवः प्रघसेन सुसंगतः ।
संगतः समरे श्रीमान् विरूपाक्षेण लक्ष्मणः ॥ १० ॥

Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, for his part closed well with Praghasa; while the glorious Lakṣmaṇa grappled in an encounter with Virūpākṣa. (10)

अग्रिकेतुः सुदुर्धर्षो रश्मिकेतुश्च राक्षसः ।
सुमघ्नो यज्ञकोपश्च रामेण सह संगताः ॥ ११ ॥

Agniketu, who was very hard to overcome as well as the ogres Raśmīketu, Suptaghna and Yajñakopa closed with Śrī Rāma. (11)

वज्रमुष्टिश्च मैन्देन द्विविदेनाशनिप्रभः ।
राक्षसाभ्यां सुघोराभ्यां कपिमुख्यौ समागतौ ॥ १२ ॥

Vajramuṣṭi grappled with Mainda and Aśaniprabha with Dwivida. The aforesaid two leaders of monkeys thus closed with two most formidable ogres. (12)

वीरः प्रतपनो घोरो राक्षसो रणदुर्धरः ।
समरे तीक्ष्णवेगेन नलेन समयुध्यत ॥ १३ ॥

The valiant and redoubtable ogre Pratapana, who was difficult to restrain on the field of battle, fought steadily with Nala of vehement impetuosity in combat. (13)

धर्मस्य पुत्रो बलवान् सुषेण इति विश्रुतः ।
स विद्युन्मालिना सार्धमयुध्यत महाकपिः ॥ १४ ॥

That great monkey, the mighty son of Dharma (the god of piety), widely known by the name of Suṣeṇa, fought with Vidyūnmālī. (14)

वानराश्चापरे घोरा राक्षसैरपरैः सह ।
द्वन्द्वं समीयुः सहसा युद्ध्वा च बहुभिः सह ॥ १५ ॥

Nay, having fought with many ogres at a time, other fierce monkeys too entered all of a sudden into a duel with other ogres. (15)

तत्रासीत् सुमहद् युद्धं तुमुलं रोमहर्षणम् ।
रक्षसां वानराणां च वीराणां जयमिच्छताम् ॥ १६ ॥

There raged on that occasion a fierce and confounding fight, which made one's hair stand on end, between the heroic ogres and monkeys, who sought victory for their own army. (16)

हरिराक्षसदेहेभ्यः प्रभूताः केशशाद्वलाः ।
शरीरसंघाटवहाः प्रसुप्ताः शोणितापगाः ॥ १७ ॥

Having issued from the bodies of monkeys and ogres, and strewn with duckweeds in the form of hair, streams of blood flowed rapidly, bearing away logs of wood in the form of dead bodies. (17)

आजघानेन्द्रजित् क्रुद्धो वज्रेणेव शतक्रतुः ।
अङ्गदं गदया वीरं शत्रुसैन्यविदारणम् ॥ १८ ॥

Filled with rage, Indrajit, the eldest son of Rāvaṇa, struck with his mace the valiant Aṅgada, the destroyer of hostile forces, even as Indra (who is presupposed to have performed in his previous births a hundred Aśwamedha sacrifices as a condition precedent to his attaining Indrahood) would attack his adversary with his thunderbolt. (18)

तस्य काञ्चनचित्राङ्गं रथं साश्वं ससारथिम् ।
जघान गदया श्रीमानङ्गदो वेगवान् हरिः ॥ १९ ॥

With the same mace, snatched from the ogre's hand, the glorious monkey, Aṅgada, who was full of impetuosity, in his turn struck Indrajit's chariot—the framework of which was bright with gold—horses, charioteer and all. (19)

सम्पातिस्तु प्रजङ्घेन त्रिभिर्बाणैः समाहतः ।
निजघानाश्वकर्णेन प्रजङ्घं रणमूर्धनि ॥ २० ॥

Grievously wounded with three arrows by Prajaṅgha, Sampāti for his part killed Prajaṅgha with an Aśwakarma tree in the van of the battle. (20)

जम्बुमाली रथस्थस्तु रथशक्त्या महाबलः ।
बिभेद समरे क्रुद्धो हनूमन्तं स्तनान्तरे ॥ २१ ॥

Taking up his position in a chariot and full of rage, Jambumālī for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, pierced Hunumān in the breast with a javelin kept in his chariot on the field of battle. (21)

तस्य तं रथमास्थाय हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
प्रमथत तलेनाशु सह तेनैव रक्षसा ॥ २२ ॥

Spiringing to that chariot of Jambumālī. Hanumān, son of the wind-god, destroyed it in no time alongwith that ogre himself with a blow of his palm. (22)

नदन् प्रतपनो घोरो नलं सोऽभ्यनुधावत ।
नलः प्रतपनस्याशु पातयामास चक्षुषी ॥ २३ ॥
भिन्नगात्रः शरैस्तीक्ष्णैः क्षिप्रहस्तेन रक्षसा ।
ग्रसन्तमिव सैन्यानि प्रघसं वानराधिपः ॥ २४ ॥
सुग्रीवः सप्तपर्णेन निजघान जवेन च ।
प्रपीड्य शरवर्षेण राक्षसं भीमदर्शनम् ॥ २५ ॥
निजघान विरूपाक्षं शरेणैकेन लक्ष्मणः ।
अग्निकेतुश्च दुर्धर्षो रश्मिकेतुश्च राक्षसः ।
सुप्तो यज्ञकोपश्च रामं निर्बिभिदुः शरैः ॥ २६ ॥

The notorious and fierce Pratapana rushed yelling towards Nala. With his limbs lacerated by the swift-handed ogre with his pointed arrows, Nala (in his turn) quickly gouged out his eyes. Nay, Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, speedily killed with a Saptaparna tree Praghosa, who was consuming as it were the monkey troops. Overwhelming in the first balance with a hail of shaft his adversary, Virūpākṣa of fearful aspect, Lakṣmaṇa eventually struk down the ogre with a single arrow. Agniketu, who was difficult to overcome, and the ogre Raśmiketū, as also Suptaghna and Yajñakopa, mangled Śrī Rāma with their arrows. (23—26)

तेषां चतुर्णां रामस्तु शिरांसि समरे शरैः ।
क्रुद्धश्चतुर्भिश्चिच्छेद घोरैरग्निशिखोपमैः ॥ २७ ॥

Filled with rage on the field of battle, Śrī Rāma for his part lopped off the heads of all the four ogres with four dread arrows bright like flames. (27)

वज्रमुष्टिस्तु मैन्देन मुष्टिना निहतो रणे ।
पपात सरथः साश्वः सुराट्ट इव भूतले ॥ २८ ॥

Struck down with his fist on the battlefield by Mainda, Vajramuṣṭī for his part fell to the ground, chariot, horses and all, like an aerial car of gods. (28)

निकुम्भस्तु रणे नीलं नीलाञ्जनचयप्रभम् ।
निर्बिभेद शरैस्तीक्ष्णैः करैर्मैघमिवांशुमान् ॥ २९ ॥

Even as the sun pierces a cloud with its rays, Nikumbha for his part pierced with his pointed arrows on the field of battle Nīla who looked like a mass of collyrium. (29)

पुनः शरशतेनाथ क्षिप्रहस्तो निशाचरः ।
बिभेद समरे नीलं निकुम्भः प्रजहास च ॥ ३० ॥

The nimble-handed ranger of the night, Nikumbha then pierced Nīla once more on the field of battle with a hundred arrows and heartily laughed. (30)

तस्यैव रथचक्रेण नीलो विष्णुरिवाहवे ।
शिरश्चिच्छेद समरे निकुम्भस्य च सारथे ॥ ३१ ॥

With a wheel of the chariot of Nikumbha himself, Nīla, in his turn, lopped off on the field of battle the former's head as well as that of his charioteer, even as Lord Viṣṇu, the Protector of the universe, severs the heads of his adversaries (the demons) in the course of His encounter with them. (31)

वज्राशनिसमस्पर्शो द्विविदोऽप्यशनिप्रभम् ।
जघान गिरिशृङ्गेण मिषतां सर्वरक्षसाम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Dwivida too, whose impact was hard as adamant as the thunderbolt, hit Aśaniprabha with the peak of a mountain, while all the ogres stood looking on. (32)

द्विविदं वानरेन्द्रं तु द्रुमयोधिनमाहवे ।
शरैरशनिसंकाशैः स विव्याधाशनिप्रभः ॥ ३३ ॥

The notorious Aśaniprabha for his part pierced with his arrows, flashing like lightning, monkey chief Dwivida, who fought with trees on the field of battle. (33)

स शरैरभिविद्धाङ्गो द्विविदः क्रोधर्मूच्छितः ।
सालेन सरथं साश्वं निजघानाशनिप्रभम् ॥ ३४ ॥

Infatuated with anger, the aforesaid Dwivida, whose limbs had been lacerated

by the shafts, struck down with a sal tree
Aśaniprabha with his chariot and horses.

(34)

विद्युन्माली रथस्थस्तु शरैः काञ्चनभूषणैः ।

सुषेणं ताडयामास ननाद च मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ ३५ ॥

Mounted on a chariot, Vidyunmālī for his part hit Suṣeṇa with his arrows encrusted with gold and roared again and again.

(35)

तं रथस्थमथो दृष्ट्वा सुषेणो वानरोत्तमः ।

गिरिशृङ्गेण महता रथमाशु न्यपातयत् ॥ ३६ ॥

Seeing him mounted on a chariot,
Suṣeṇa, the foremost of monkeys, knocked down his chariot in no time with a huge mountain peak.

(36)

लाघवेन तु संयुक्तो विद्युन्माली निशाचरः ।

अपक्रम्य रथात् तूर्णं गदापाणिः क्षितौ स्थितः ॥ ३७ ॥

Hastily jumping down from his chariot, the ranger of the night, Vidyunmālī, for his part, who was fully endowed with agility, stood on the ground, mace in hand.

(37)

ततः क्रोधसमाविष्टः सुषेणो हरिपुङ्गवः ।

शिलां सुमहतीं गृह्य निशाचरमभिद्रवत् ॥ ३८ ॥

Seizing a huge rock, Suṣeṇa, a bull among the monkeys, agitated as he was with anger, rushed towards the ranger of the night.

(38)

तमापतन्तं गदया विद्युन्माली निशाचरः ।

वक्षस्यभिजघानाशु सुषेणं हरिपुङ्गवम् ॥ ३९ ॥

The prowler of the night, Vidyunmālī, immediately struck Suṣeṇa, that bull among the monkeys, on the breast with a mace even as the latter was darting towards him.

(39)

गदाप्रहारं तं घोरमचिन्त्य प्लवगोत्तमः ।

तां तूष्णीं पातयामास तस्योरसि महामृधे ॥ ४० ॥

Not minding that terrible blow with the mace, Suṣeṇa (the foremost of the monkeys) quietly hurled that rock, which he bore in his hands, upon the ogre's breast in that mighty fight.

(40)

शिलाप्रहाराभिहतो विद्युन्माली निशाचरः ।

निष्पिष्टहृदयो भूमौ गतासुर्निपपात ह ॥ ४१ ॥

Struck by that blow with a rock, the prowler of the night, Vidyunmālī, whose chest had been crushed thereby, fell down dead to the ground; so the tradition goes.

(41)

एवं तैर्वानरैः शूरैः शूरास्ते रजनीचराः ।

द्वन्द्वे विमथितास्तत्र दैत्या इव दिवौकसैः ॥ ४२ ॥

In this way were those valiant prowlers of the night crushed in the course of those duels by the aforesaid heroic monkeys even as demons were crushed by gods, the denizens of heaven.

(42)

भल्लैश्चान्यैर्गदाभिश्च शक्तितोमरसायकैः ।

अपविद्धैश्चापि रथैस्तथा सांग्रामिकैर्हयैः ॥ ४३ ॥

निहतैः कुञ्जरैर्मत्तैस्तथा वानरराक्षसैः ।

चक्राक्षयुगदण्डैश्च भग्नैर्धरणिर्गणैः ॥ ४४ ॥

बभूवायोधनं घोरं गोमायुगणसेवितम् ।

कबन्धानि समुत्पेतुर्दिक्षु वानररक्षसाम् ।

विमर्दे तुमुले तस्मिन् देवासुररणोपमे ॥ ४५ ॥

The battlefield presented a ghastly appearance, strewn as it was with extraordinary spears and maces as well as with javelins, lances and arrows, shattered chariots, also steeds, elephants in rut as also monkeys and ogres which had been killed and wheels, axles and yokes which had been broken and had fallen to the ground, and frequented as it was by herds of jackals. In that confused fight, which resembled the conflict between gods and demons, the headless trunks of monkeys and ogres bounded here and there. (43—45)

निहन्यमाना हरिपुङ्गवैस्तदा

निशाचराः शोणितगन्धमूर्च्छिताः ।

पुनः सुयुद्धं तरसा समाश्रिता

दिवाकरस्यास्तमयाभिकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ ४६ ॥

Maddened by the smell of blood while being killed by the foremost of monkeys on that occasion and longing for sunset*, the prowlers of the night quickly embraced on a stubborn fight once more. (46)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रिचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुश्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLIV

During the nocturnal engagement the monkeys too dauntlessly offer a stiff fight to the ogres even though they were fighting against heavy odds inasmuch as the strength of ogres gets doubled at night, and felt highly rejoiced to find Indrajit vanquished by Aṅgada. Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa too put to flight numberless foes with their shower of arrows.

Eventually, however, they are both bound by Indrajit in a noose of serpents

युध्यतामेव तेषां तु तदा वानररक्षसाम्।
रविरस्तं गतो रात्रिः प्रवृत्ता प्राणहारिणी ॥ १ ॥

While the aforesaid monkeys and ogres were still fighting on the occasion, the sun actually sank below the horizon and the night fell, which proved destructive to life.

(1)

अन्योन्यं बद्धवैराणां घोराणां जयमिच्छताम्।
सम्प्रवृत्तं निशायुद्धं तदा वानररक्षसाम् ॥ २ ॥

Then ensued in full swing a nocturnal fight between the redoubtable monkeys and ogres, whose enmity for one another was deep-rooted and who were all yearning for victory.

(2)

राक्षसोऽसीति हरयो वानरोऽसीति राक्षसाः।
अन्योन्यं समरे जघ्नुस्तस्मिंस्तमसि दारुणे ॥ ३ ॥

The monkeys put the question to their antagonist: "Are you an ogre?"; while the ogres made the inquiry: "Are you a monkey?" Then alone they struck one another on the field of battle in that terrible gloom. (3)

हत दारय चैहीति कथं विद्रवसीति च।
एवं सुतुमुलः शब्दस्तस्मिन् सैन्ये तु शुश्रुवे ॥ ४ ॥

"Strike!", "Tear asunder!", "Come on!", "Why do you flee away?" Such was the tumultuous noise actually heard in that army of monkeys and ogres. (4)

कालाः काञ्चनसंनाहास्तस्मिंस्तमसि राक्षसाः।
सम्प्रदृश्यन्त शैलेन्द्रा दीप्तौषधिवना इव ॥ ५ ॥

Clad in golden armour, the dark-complexioned ogres could be clearly seen in that darkness like the foremost of mountains clothed with forests abounding in phosphorescent herbs. (5)

तस्मिंस्तमसि दुष्पारे राक्षसाः क्रोधमूर्च्छिताः।
परिपेतुर्मुहावेगा भक्षयन्तः प्लवङ्गमान् ॥ ६ ॥

* It is traditionally believed that the strength of ogres gets augmented after nightfall.

Smitten with anger, the ogres, who were endowed with great impetuosity, assailed the monkeys on all sides in that darkness, which was difficult to penetrate, devouring them. (6)

ते ह्यान् काञ्चनापीडान् ध्वजांश्चाशीविषोपमान् ।
आप्लुत्य दशनैस्तीक्ष्णैर्भीमकोपा व्यदारयन् ॥ ७ ॥

Springing up, the monkeys (in their turn) whose fury was terrible, tore with their sharp teeth the horses of the ogres, decked with golden ornaments, as well as their flags, which looked like venomous serpents. (7)

वानरा बलिनो युद्धेऽक्षोभयन् राक्षसीं चमूम् ।
कुञ्जरान् कुञ्जारोहान् पताकाध्वजिनो रथान् ॥ ८ ॥
चकर्षुश्च ददंशुश्च दशनैः क्रोधमूर्च्छिताः ।
लक्ष्मणश्चापि रामश्च शरैराशीविषोपमैः ॥ ९ ॥
दृश्यादृश्यानि रक्षांसि प्रवराणि निजघ्नतुः ।
तुंगखुरविध्वस्तं रथनेमिसमुत्थितम् ॥ १० ॥
रुरोध कर्णनेत्राणि युध्यतां धरणीरजः ।
वर्तमाने तथा घोरे संग्रामे लोमहर्षणे ।
रुधिरौघा महाघोरा नद्यस्तत्र विसुस्तुवुः ॥ ११ ॥

The mighty monkeys sowed confusion in the army of the ogres, nay, infatuated with fury, they dragged the elephants, those mounted upon them and the chariots, which were dressed with flags and pennons, and tore them with their teeth. With their arrows, resembling venomous snakes, Lakṣmaṇa and Śrī Rāma too killed the principal ogres, visible as well as invisible. Pulverized by the horses' hoofs and raised by the chariot wheels, the dust of the earth filled the ears as well as the eyes of the combatants. While that terrible conflict, which made one's hair stand on end, was raging as aforesaid, most dreadful streams carrying volumes of blood flowed on the battlefield. (8—11)

ततो भेरीमृदङ्गानां पणवानां च निःस्वनः ।
शङ्खनेमिस्वनोन्मिश्रः सम्बभूवाद्वतोपमः ॥ १२ ॥

Then there arose a marvellous sound of kettledrums, wooden tomtoms and drums mixed with the blast of conches and the rattling of wheels. (12)

हतानां स्तनमानानां राक्षसानां च निःस्वनः ।
शस्तानां वानराणां च सम्बभूवात्र दारुणः ॥ १३ ॥

There also arose on the battlefield a fearful wailing of wounded ogres groaning with pain, as well as of injured monkeys. (13)

हतैर्वानरमुख्यैश्च शक्तिशूलपरश्वधैः ।
निहतैः पर्वताकारै राक्षसैः कामरूपिभिः ॥ १४ ॥
शस्त्रपुष्पोपहारा च तत्रासीद् युद्धमेदिनी ।
दुर्ज्ञेया दुर्निवेशा च शोणितास्त्रावकर्दमा ॥ १५ ॥

With the foremost of monkeys lying wounded by javelins, pikes and axes, and ogres, huge as mountains and able to change their form at will, who had been killed, the battle-ground in Laṅkā, on which offerings of flowers in the form of weapons had been made and which had been rendered muddy by the flow of blood, had become difficult of recognition and were difficult of access. (14-15)

सा बभूव निशा घोरा हरिराक्षसहारिणी ।
कालरात्रीव भूतानां सर्वेषां दुरतिक्रमा ॥ १६ ॥

Like the night of dissolution, that fearful night, which proved destructive to the monkeys and ogres alike, was difficult to pass for all created beings. (16)

ततस्ते राक्षसास्तत्र तस्मिंस्तमसि दारुणे ।
राममेवाभ्यवर्तन्त संहृष्टाः शरवृष्टिभिः ॥ १७ ॥

Feeling highly delighted in that dreadful darkness, the aforesaid ogres then assailed Śrī Rāma himself with a hail of shafts on that battlefield. (17)

तेषामापततां शब्दः क्रुद्धानामपि गर्जताम् ।
उद्धर्त इव सप्तानां समुद्राणामभूत् स्वनः ॥ १८ ॥

The noise of those roaring ogres, rushing furiously towards Śrī Rāma, resembled the roar of all the seven oceans (dividing the seven Dwīpas or principal divisions of the terrestrial globe from one another) at the time of the final dissolution. (18)

तेषां रामः शरैः षड्भिः षड्जघान निशाचरान् ।
निमेषान्तरमात्रेण शरैरग्निशिखोपमैः ॥ १९ ॥

In the mere twinkling of an eye, Śrī Rāma struck down with six shafts, resembling tongues of flame, six principal prowlers of the night among the ogres. (19)

यज्ञशत्रुश्च दुर्धर्षो महापार्श्वमहोदरौ ।
वज्रदंष्ट्रो महाकायस्तौ चोभौ शुकसारणौ ॥ २० ॥

They were Yajñaśatru, who was difficult to overcome, Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara, the gigantic Vajradanṣṭra and both Śūka and Sāraṇa, mentioned before. (20)

ते तु रामेण बाणौघैः सर्वमर्मसु ताडिताः ।
युद्धादपसृतास्तत्र सावशेषायुषोऽभवन् ॥ २१ ॥

Pierced by Śrī Rāma with showers of arrows in their vital parts, the ogres, however, slipped away from the battle, and their life was saved thereby. (21)

निमेषान्तरमात्रेण घोरैरग्निशिखोपमैः ।
दिशश्चकार विमलाः प्रदिशश्च महारथः ॥ २२ ॥

In the mere twinkling of an eye, the great car-warrior, Śrī Rāma, lit up all the quarters as well as the intermediate points with his formidable arrows resembling tongues of flame. (22)

ये त्वन्ये राक्षसा वीरा रामस्याभिमुखे स्थिताः ।
तेऽपि नष्टाः समासाद्य पतङ्गा इव पावकम् ॥ २३ ॥

Those other ogre champions too who for their part stood in front of Śrī Rāma, perished as moths would on coming in contact with fire. (23)

सुवर्णपुङ्खैर्विशिखैः सम्पतद्भिः समन्ततः ।
बभूव रजनी चित्रा खद्योतैरिव शारदी ॥ २४ ॥

With golden-feathered arrows raining on all sides the night looked bright as an autumnal night illumined with fire-flies. (24)

राक्षसानां च निनदैर्भेरीणां चैव निःस्वनैः ।
सा बभूव निशा घोरा भूयो घोरतराभवत् ॥ २५ ॥

Nay, the said night, which was already dreadful, turned all the more fearful because of the yells of the ogres and the roll of kettledrums. (25)

तेन शब्देन महता प्रवृद्धेन समन्ततः ।
त्रिकूटः कंदराकीर्णः प्रव्याहरदिवाचलः ॥ २६ ॥

Resounding with that loud outcry, that had swelled on all sides, the Trikūṭa mountain, which was thickly set with caves, responded as it were to someone's call. (26)

गोलाङ्गूला महाकायास्तमसा तुल्यवर्चसः ।
सम्परिष्वज्य बाहुभ्यां भक्षयन् रजनीचरान् ॥ २७ ॥

Folding the prowlers of the night tightly in their arms, the gigantic Golāṅgūlas (long-tailed and black-faced monkeys), who were dark as night, crushed them to death and allowed them to be devoured by jackals and vultures etc. (27)

अङ्गदस्तु रणे शत्रून् निहन्तुं समुपस्थितः ।
रावणिं निजघानाशु सारथिं च हयानपि ॥ २८ ॥

Angada, for his part, who was determined to exterminate the enemies on the field of battle, wounded in no time Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), his charioteer and horses, too. (28)

इन्द्रजित् तु रथं त्यक्त्वा हताश्वो हतसारथिः ।
अङ्गदेन महाकायस्तत्रैवान्तरधीयत् ॥ २९ ॥

Leaving his chariot, Indrajit, on the other hand, whose horses and charioteer had been killed by Angada, vanished on that very spot, greatly fatigued as he was. (29)

तत् कर्म वालिपुत्रस्य सर्वे देवाः सहर्षिभिः ।
तुष्टुवुः पूजनाहंस्य तौ चोभौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ३० ॥

All the gods (who had been witnessing the combat from their aereal cars) alongwith Rṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras), as also both the brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa applauded the aforesaid exploit of Aṅgada (son of Vāli), who was worthy of praise for his valour. (30)

प्रभावं सर्वभूतानि विदुरिन्द्रजितो युधि ।
ततस्ते तं महात्मानं दृष्ट्वा तुष्टाः प्रधर्षितम् ॥ ३१ ॥

All created beings present there were aware of the might of Indrajit in war; therefore, they all felt gratified to find the latter, even though endowed with great courage, overpowered by Aṅgada. (31)

ततः प्रहृष्टाः कपयः ससुग्रीवविभीषणाः ।
साधुसाध्विति नेदुश्च दृष्ट्वा शत्रुं पराजितम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Highly rejoiced to see the enemy vanquished, the monkeys too, alongwith Sugrīva and Vibhīṣaṇa, cried out "Well done! Bravo!" (32)

इन्द्रजित् तु तदानेन निर्जितो भीमकर्मणा ।
संयुगे वालिपुत्रेण क्रोधं चक्रे सुदारुणम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Utterly routed in combat by the aforesaid Aṅgada (son of Vāli) of redoubtable deeds, Indrajit, for his part, then exhibited a terrible rage. (33)

सोऽन्तर्धानगतः पापो रावणी रणकर्षितः ।
ब्रह्मदत्तवरो वीरो रावणिः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ॥ ३४ ॥

अदृश्यो निशितान् बाणान् मुमोचाशनिवर्चसः ।
रामं च लक्ष्मणं चैव घोरैर्नागमयैः शरैः ॥ ३५ ॥

बिभेद समरे क्रुद्धः सर्वगात्रेषु राक्षसः ।
मायया संवृतस्तत्र मोहयन् राघवौ युधि ॥ ३६ ॥

अदृश्यः सर्वभूतानां कूटयोधी निशाचरः ।
बबन्ध शरबन्धेन भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ३७ ॥

Infatuated with anger, the notorious and gallant Indrajit, the sinful son of Rāvaṇa—who, having been enfeebled by his encounter with Aṅgada, had gone out of sight and on whom a boon had been conferred by Brahmā (the creator)—shot sharp arrows, bright as lightning, while remaining still invisible. Nay, enraged in battle, the ogre pierced Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, too, with formidable shafts, consisting of serpents, all over their limbs. Confounding the two scions of Raghu in the struggle, the ranger of the night, who was fully guarded by supernatural power and as such remained invisible to all created beings, and who fought treacherously, bound the two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, in a network of arrows. (34—37)

तौ तेन पुरुषव्याघ्रौ क्रुद्धेनाशीविषैः शरैः ।
सहसाभिहतौ वीरौ तदा प्रेक्षन्त वानराः ॥ ३८ ॥

At that time monkeys beheld those two heroes, who were veritable tigers among men, enmeshed by the furious ogre all of a sudden with darts in the form of venomous snakes. (38)

प्रकाशरूपस्तु यदा न शक्त-स्तौ बाधितुं राक्षसराजपुत्रः ।

मायां प्रयोक्तुं समुपाजगाम
बबन्ध तौ राजसुतौ दुरात्मा ॥ ३९ ॥

When Indrajit (son of the king of ogres) was not able to overcome them in his visible form, the evil-minded fellow duly proceeded to employ a conjuring trick and bound the two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. (39)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुश्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४४ ॥

Thus ends canto Forty-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLV

Distressed to perceive the two scions of Raghu bound by Indrajit in a network of arrows and pierced with other fierce arrows, the monkeys give way to utter despondency

स तस्य गतिमन्विच्छन् राजपुत्रः प्रतापवान्।
दिदेशातिबलो रामो दश वानरयूथपान् ॥ १ ॥

Seeking to find out the whereabouts of Indrajit, that glorious prince, Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with exceeding might, detailed ten monkey generals for the purpose. (1)

द्वौ सुषेणस्य दायादौ नीलं च प्लवगाधिपम्।
अङ्गदं वालिपुत्रं च शरभं च तरस्विनम् ॥ २ ॥
द्विविदं च हनूमन्तं सानुप्रस्थं महाबलम्।
ऋषभं चर्षभस्कन्धमादिदेश परंतपः ॥ ३ ॥

Śrī Rāma (the scourge of his enemies) deputed on this errand the two sons of Suṣeṇa and the monkey chief, Nīla, as also Aṅgada, son of Vālī, as well as the agile
Śarabha, also Dwivida and Hanumān, Sānuprastha, who was endowed with extraordinary might, R̥ṣabha and
R̥ṣabhaskandha. (2-3)

ते सम्प्रहृष्टा हरयो भीमानुद्यम्य पादपान्।
आकाशं विविशुः सर्वे मार्गमाणा दिशो दश ॥ ४ ॥

Lifting up formidable trees, all the aforesaid monkeys, who were feeling excessively rejoiced, sprang in the air, exploring all the ten directions. (4)

तेषां वेगवतां वेगमिषुभिर्वेगवन्तरैः।
अस्त्रवित् परमास्त्रस्तु वारयामास रावणिः ॥ ५ ॥

Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, however, who was skilled in the use of mystic weapons, arrested the onrush of those impetuous monkeys by means of his very swift arrows charged with the potency of the supreme mystic weapon (presided over by Brahmā). (5)

तं भीमवेगा हरयो नाराचैः क्षतविक्षताः।
अन्धकारे न ददृशुर्मधैः सूर्यमिवावृतम् ॥ ६ ॥

Even though pierced and lacerated by steel arrows, the monkeys, who were endowed with terrific impetuosity, could not discern him in the darkness any more than one would perceive the sun veiled by clouds. (6)

रामलक्ष्मणयोरेव सर्वदेहभिदः शरान्।
भृशमावेशयामास रावणिः समितिंजयः ॥ ७ ॥

Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), who held the field of battle, repeatedly dug into the person of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa alone shafts which pierced the whole body. (7)

निरन्तरशरीरौ तु तावुभौ रामलक्ष्मणौ।
क्रुद्धेनेन्द्रजिता वीरौ पन्नगैः शरतां गतैः ॥ ८ ॥

Both the aforesaid gallant princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, were, for their part, pierced by the furious Indrajit with serpents used as arrows in such a way that no part of their bodies remained unpierced. (8)

तयोः क्षतजमार्गेण सुस्त्राव रुधिरं बहु।
तावुभौ च प्रकाशेते पुष्पिताविव किंशुकौ ॥ ९ ॥

Blood flowed profusely from their wounds and they both appeared like two Kīṁśuka trees in flower. (9)

ततः पर्यन्तरक्ताक्षो भिन्नाञ्जनचयोपमः।
रावणिर्भातरौ वाक्यमन्तर्धानगतोऽब्रवीत् ॥ १० ॥

Thereupon Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), the outer corners of whose eyes had turned red through rage and looked like a mass of collyrium, spoke as follows to the two brothers, while remaining still invisible: (10)

युध्यमानमनालक्ष्यं शक्रोऽपि त्रिदशेश्वरः ।

द्रष्टुमासादितुं वापि न शक्तः किं पुनर्युवाम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Even Indra, the ruler of gods, will not be able even to discern me, much less approach me, while I am fighting imperceptibly, how much less you two! (11)

प्रापिताविषुजालेन राघवौ कङ्कपत्रिणा ।

एष रोषपरीतात्मा नयामि यमसादनम् ॥ १२ ॥

“My mind seized with anger, I hereby dispatch to the abode of Yama you two scions of Raghu, who have been enmeshed in a network of darts provided with the plumes of buzzards.” (12)

एवमुक्त्वा तु धर्मज्ञौ भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

निर्विभेद शितैर्बाणैः प्रजहर्ष ननाद च ॥ १३ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid, Indrajit, for his part, was exulted and roared and began to pierce with his pointed arrows the two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇ, who knew what is right. (13)

भिन्नाञ्जनचयश्यामो विस्फार्य विपुलं धनुः ।

भूय एव शरान् घोरान् विससर्ज महामृधे ॥ १४ ॥

Stretching his huge bow, Indrajit, who was dark as a mass of collyrium, let fly once more formidable arrows in that major conflict. (14)

ततो मर्मसु मर्मज्ञो मज्जयन् निशितान् शरान् ।

रामलक्ष्मणयोर्वीरो ननाद च मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ १५ ॥

Nay, digging sharp arrows into the vital parts of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇ, roared again and again. (15)

बद्धौ तु शरबन्धेन तावुभौ रणमूर्धनि ।

निमेषान्तरमात्रेण न शेकतुरवेक्षितुम् ॥ १६ ॥

Enmeshed in a net of arrows in the forefront of battle, both the princes for their part became incapable, in the mere twinkling of an eye, even of looking up. (16)

ततो विभिन्नसर्वाङ्गौ शरशल्याचितौ कृतौ ।

ध्वजाविव महेन्द्रस्य रज्जुमुक्तौ प्रकम्पितौ ॥ १७ ॥

Pierced in all their limbs and covered all over with the heads of arrows (transfixed in their bodies), the two princes then began to shake violently like a pair of banners raised in honour of the mighty Indra (the ruler of gods) and freed from their cords. (17)

तौ सम्प्रचलितौ वीरौ मर्मभेदेन कर्षितौ ।

निपेततुर्महेष्वासौ जगत्यां जगतीपती ॥ १८ ॥

Staggered and enfeebled on account of being pierced in their vital parts, the two gallant princes, who were sovereigns of the globe and wielded mighty bows, fell to the ground. (18)

तौ वीरशयने वीरौ शयानौ रुधिरोक्षितौ ।

शरवेष्टितसर्वाङ्गावतौ परमपीडितौ ॥ १९ ॥

Laying on the heroes' bed (in the form of the battle-ground), bathed in blood with all their limbs enmeshed by arrows (in the form of serpents) the aforesaid two heroes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, felt distressed and exceedingly afflicted. (19)

नह्यविद्धं तयोर्गात्रे बभूवाङ्गुलमन्तरम् ।

नानिर्विण्णं न चाध्वस्तमाकराग्रादजिह्वगैः ॥ २० ॥

Not a finger's breadth of space was left on their person, which was not actually pierced: and there was no organ from the tips of their fingers which remained unlacerated and unshaken by arrows. (20)

तौ तु क्रूरेण निहतौ रक्षसा कामरूपिणा ।

असृक् सुस्रुवतुस्तीव्रं जलं प्रस्रवणाविव ॥ २१ ॥

Struck down by that cruel ogre, who was able to change his form at will, the two princes for their part emitted blood copiously even as a pair of springs would pour forth water. (21)

पपात प्रथमं रामो विद्धो मर्मसु मार्गणैः ।

क्रोधादिन्द्रजिता येन पुरा शक्रो विनिर्जितः ॥ २२ ॥

Śrī Rāma fell first, pierced as he was in his vital parts with shafts discharged in fury by Indrajit, by whom Indra (the ruler of gods) was utterly vanquished of yore. (22)

रुक्मपुङ्खैः प्रसन्नाग्रै रजोगतिभिराशुगैः ।

नाराचैरर्धनाराचैर्भल्लैरञ्जलिकैरपि ।

विव्याध वत्सदन्तैश्च सिंहदंष्ट्रैः क्षुरैस्तथा ॥ २३ ॥

Indrajit pierced him with arrows known as Nārācas (with even and circular heads), Ardhanārācas (shaped as Nārācas only one-half their length), Bhallas (with axe-like heads), also Añjalikas (with heads shaped like joined palms), Vatsadantas (with heads resembling the teeth of a calf), Simhadamṣṭras (with heads resembling a lion's teeth) and also Kṣuras (with heads sharp as the edge of a razor), furnished with gold feathers, those with polished heads and those descending (unobstructed) like dust. (23)

स वीरशयने शिश्येऽविज्यमाविध्य कार्मुकम् ।

भिन्नमुष्टिपरीणाहं त्रिनतं रुक्मभूषितम् ॥ २४ ॥

Śrī Rāma lay on the heroes' bed, leaving his gold-plated bow, which was still strung and bent at three places (viz., the two ends and the middle), in that the grip of his fist had now relaxed due to his feebleness. (24)

बाणपातान्तरे रामं पतितं पुरुषर्षभम् ।

स तत्र लक्ष्मणो दृष्ट्वा निराशो जीवितेऽभवत् ॥ २५ ॥

Beholding Śrī Rāma, the foremost of human beings, fallen at an arrow's throw from him on the field of battle, the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa became despondent about his own life. (25)

रामं कमलपत्राक्षं शरण्यं रणतोषिणम् ।

शुशोच भ्रातरं दृष्ट्वा पतितं धरणीतले ॥ २६ ॥

He gave way to grief on seeing his eldest brother, Śrī Rāma, whose eyes resembled the petals of a lotus, who afforded shelter to all and whoever rejoiced in fighting. (26)

हरयश्चापि तं दृष्ट्वा संतापं परमं गताः ।

शोकार्ताश्चुकुशुर्घोरमश्रुपूरितलोचनाः ॥ २७ ॥

Nay, the monkeys too gave way to extreme agony on beholding him in that sad plight. Stricken with grief, they shrieked in agony, their eyes filled with tears. (27)

बद्धौ तु तौ वीरशये शयानौ

ते वानराः सम्परिवार्य तस्थुः ।

समागता

वायुसुतप्रमुख्या

विषादमार्ताः परमं च जग्मुः ॥ २८ ॥

The aforesaid monkeys for their part, who had collected there with Hanumān (son of the wind-god) as their foremost leader, stood completely surrounding the two princes lying bound in a net of snakes on the heroes' bed and gave way to extreme despondency, distressed as they were. (28)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLVI

Though itching to kill the enemy on beholding Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa enmeshed in a network of snakes, the monkeys, who were unable to perceive him, feel frustrated.

Vibhīṣaṇa exhorts Sugrīva, who was seized with fear on finding Indrajit hidden under the cloak of witchcraft, to take heart and not to give way to fear. Concluding the two brothers to be dead, Indrajit, for his part, triumphantly enters Laṅkā and is welcomed by his father

ततो द्यां पृथिवीं चैव वीक्षमाणा वनौकसः ।
ददृशुः संततौ बाणैर्भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ १ ॥

The ten monkeys (lit., denizens of the woods) who had been surveying the heavens and the earth in search of Indrajit, found on returning from their quest the two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, covered all over with arrows. (1)

वृष्ट्वोपरते देवे कृतकर्मणि राक्षसे ।
आजगामाथ तं देशं ससुग्रीवो विभीषणः ॥ २ ॥

The ogre, Indrajit, having retired after accomplishing his work even as Indra, the god of rain, would after raining. Vibhīṣaṇa, accompanied by Sugrīva, forthwith came to that spot. (2)

नीलश्च द्विविदो मैन्दः सुषेणः कुमुदोऽङ्गदः ।
तूर्णं हनुमता सार्धमन्वशोचन्त राघवौ ॥ ३ ॥
अचेष्टौ मन्दनिःश्वासौ शोणितेन परिप्लुतौ ।
शरजालाचितौ स्तब्धौ शयानौ शरतल्पगौ ॥ ४ ॥

Nilā and Dwivida, Mainda, Suṣeṇa, Kumuda and Aṅgada alongwith Hanumān forthwith began to grieve for the two scions of Raghu, who were lying inactive and motionless on a bed of arrows, breathing faintly, bathed in blood and covered all over with a network of darts. (3-4)

निःश्वसन्तौ यथा सर्पौ निश्चेष्टौ मन्दविक्रमौ ।
रुधिरस्त्रावदिग्धाङ्गौ तपनीयाविव ध्वजौ ॥ ५ ॥
तौ वीरशयने वीरौ शयानौ मन्दचेष्टितौ ।
यूथपैः स्वैः परिवृतौ बाष्पव्याकुललोचनैः ॥ ६ ॥
राघवौ पतितौ दृष्ट्वा शरजालसमन्वितौ ।
बभ्रुर्व्यथिताः सर्वे वानराः सविभीषणाः ॥ ७ ॥

All the monkeys alongwith Vibhīṣaṇa were pained to see the two celebrated and heroic scions of Raghu fallen motionless, and sometimes with a feeble movement, covered with a network of arrows, sighing like a pair of serpents, their prowess having grown faint, all their limbs smeared with a stream of blood and lying stretched on a heroes' couch like two golden standards, surrounded by their own generals, whose eyes were suffused with tears. (5—7)

अन्तरिक्षं निरीक्षन्तो दिशः सर्वाश्च वानराः ।
न चैनं मायया छन्नं ददृशू रावणिं रणे ॥ ८ ॥

Though surveying the sky as well as all the quarters, the monkeys could not even discover Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), who was veiled by his occult power during the fight. (8)

तं तु मायाप्रतिच्छन्नं माययैव विभीषणः ।
वीक्षमाणो ददर्शाग्रे भ्रातुः पुत्रमवस्थितम् ।
तमप्रतिमकर्माणमप्रतिद्वन्द्वमाहवे ॥ ९ ॥

Looking round with an occult eye (capable of discerning hidden objects) itself, Vibhiṣaṇa for his part beheld standing near-by his aforesaid nephew of incomparable exploits, unrivalled in combat, and veiled by his own occult power. (9)

ददर्शान्तर्हितं वीरं वरदानाद् विभीषणः ।
तेजसा यशसा चैव विक्रमेण च संयुतः ॥ १० ॥

Vibhiṣaṇa who was richly endowed with energy, as well as with glory and prowess, perceived the champion, who was hidden from view by virtue of a boon (conferred on him by Brahmā). (10)

इन्द्रजित् त्वात्मनः कर्म तौ शयानौ समीक्ष्य च ।
उवाच परमप्रीतो हर्षयन् सर्वराक्षसान् ॥ ११ ॥

Nay, supremely rejoiced to observe the two princes lying on the battlefied, Indrajit for his part proclaimed as follows his own feat, thereby bringing delight to all the ogres: (11)

दूषणस्य च हन्तारौ खरस्य च महाबलौ ।
सादितौ मामकैर्बाणैर्भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ १२ ॥

"The two brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the slayers of Dūṣaṇa as well as of Khara, who were endowed with extraordinary might, have been struck down by my darts! (12)

नेमौ मोक्षयितुं शक्यावेतस्मादिषुबन्धनात् ।
सर्वैरपि समागम्य सर्षिसङ्घैः सुरासुरैः ॥ १३ ॥

"They cannot be disengaged from this network of arrows even by all the gods, demons, including hosts of Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), exerting together. (13)

यत्कृते चिन्तयानस्य शोकार्तस्य पितुर्मम ।
अस्पृष्ट्वा शयनं गात्रैस्त्रियामा याति शर्वरी ॥ १४ ॥
कृत्स्नेयं यत्कृते लङ्का नदी वर्षास्विवाकुला ।
सोऽयं मूलहरोऽनर्थः सर्वेषां शमितो मया ॥ १५ ॥

"This well-known pest,—which was wearing away the very roots of us all, nay, on whose account the whole night (consisting of three watches of three hours each) slipped past my father, who remains absorbed in this thought and stricken with grief, so much so that he is unable even to touch his couch with his restless limbs—and because of whom the entire city of Laṅkā remains agitated like a river during rains—has at last been got rid of by me! (14-15)

रामस्य लक्ष्मणस्यैव सर्वेषां च वनौकसाम् ।
विक्रमा निष्फलाः सर्वे यथा शरदि तोयदाः ॥ १६ ॥

"All the exploits of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa as also of all the monkeys (lit., the dwellers of the woods) have been rendered void like the clouds in autumn." (16)

एवमुक्त्वा तु तान् सर्वान् राक्षसान् परिपश्यतः ।
यूथपानपि तान् सर्वास्ताडयत् स च रावणिः ॥ १७ ॥

Nay, having spoken as aforesaid to all the ogres, who were looking at him, the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa began to strike all the well-known monkey generals too. (17)

नीलं नवभिराहत्य मैन्दं सद्विविदं तथा ।
त्रिभिस्त्रिभिरमित्रघ्नस्तताप परमेषुभिः ॥ १८ ॥

Hitting Nila, the commander-in-Chief of the monkey forces, with nine excellent shafts, Indrajit (the slayer of his foes) tormented Mainda as well as Dwivida with three darts each. (18)

जाम्बवन्तं महेष्वासो विद्ध्वा बाणेन वक्षसि ।
हनुमतो वेगवतो विससर्ज शरान् दश ॥ १९ ॥

Having pierced Jāmbavān with an arrow in the breast, the ogre (who wielded a mighty bow) discharged ten shafts on the impetuous Hanumān. (19)

गवाक्षं शरभं चैव तावप्यमितविक्रमौ ।
द्वाभ्यां द्वाभ्यां महावेगो विव्याध युधि रावणिः ॥ २० ॥

Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), who was endowed with great agility, pierced Gavākṣa as well as Śarabha too, the two monkeys of immeasurable prowess, with two arrows each on the field of battle. (20)

गोलाङ्गुलेश्वरं चैव वालिपुत्रमथाङ्गदम्।
विव्याध बहुभिर्बाणैस्त्वरमाणोऽथ रावणिः ॥ २१ ॥

Nay, coursing swiftly, Indrajit pierced once more with numerous darts Gavākṣa, the ruler of Golāṅgūlas, and then Aṅgada (son of Vāli) too. (21)

तान् वानरवरान् भित्त्वा शरैरग्निशिखोपमैः।
ननाद बलवांस्तत्र महासत्त्वः स रावणिः ॥ २२ ॥

Having transfixed the aforesaid jewels among monkeys with his arrows resembling the tongues of fire, that mighty son of Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with great courage, began to roar in triumph. (22)

तानर्दयित्वा बाणौघैस्त्रासयित्वा च वानरान्।
प्रजहास महाबाहुर्वचनं चेदमब्रवीत् ॥ २३ ॥

Having hurt the monkeys with hails of arrows and struck terror into them, the mighty-armed ogre heartily laughed and exclaimed as follows: (23)

शरबन्धेन घोरेण मया बद्धौ चमूमुखे।
सहितौ भ्रातरावेतौ निशामयत राक्षसाः ॥ २४ ॥

“Behold, O ogres, these two brothers bound by me together in a formidable net of arrows in the forefront of battle.” (24)

एवमुक्तास्तु ते सर्वे राक्षसाः कूटयोधिनः।
परं विस्मयमापन्नाः कर्मणा तेन हर्षिताः ॥ २५ ॥

Spoken to as aforesaid, all those ogres for their part, who fought treacherously, were seized with great wonder and felt delighted by that exploit of his. (25)

विनेदुश्च महानादान् सर्वे ते जलदोपमाः।
हतो राम इति ज्ञात्वा रावणिं समपूजयन् ॥ २६ ॥

They all thundered like clouds, emitting loud shouts. Knowing that Śrī Rāma had been killed, they acclaimed Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa. (26)

निष्पन्दौ तु तदा दृष्ट्वा भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ।
वसुधायां निरुच्छ्वासौ हतावित्यन्वमन्यत ॥ २७ ॥

Beholding Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa lying on the ground without movement or breath at that time, Indrajit for his part concluded the two brothers to be dead. (27)

हर्षेण तु समाविष्ट इन्द्रजित् समितिञ्जयः।
प्रविवेश पुरीं लङ्कां हर्षयन् सर्वनैर्ऋतान् ॥ २८ ॥

Filled with joy, Indrajit, for his part, who was victorious in battles, entered in state the city of Laṅkā, bringing joy to all ogres. (28)

रामलक्ष्मणयोर्दृष्ट्वा शरीरे सायकैश्चित्ते।
सर्वाणि चाङ्गोपाङ्गानि सुग्रीवं भयमाविशत् ॥ २९ ॥

Fear took possession of Sugrīva on beholding the bodies as well as all the limbs and minor limbs of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa riddled with arrows. (29)

तमुवाच परित्रस्तं वानरेन्द्रं विभीषणः।
सबाष्पवदनं दीनं शोकव्याकुललोचनम् ॥ ३० ॥

Vibhiṣaṇa spoke as follows to Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys), whose face was bathed in tears, alarmed and afflicted as he was, his eyes bewildered with grief: (30)

अलं त्रासेन सुग्रीव बाष्पवेगो निगृह्यताम्।
एवं प्रायाणि युद्धानि विजयो नास्ति नैष्ठिकः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Have done with fear, O Sugrīva! Let the gush of tears be controlled. Conflicts are mostly of this nature (uncertain in their issue). Victory is never certain. (31)

सभाग्यशेषतास्माकं यदि वीर भविष्यति।
मोहमेतौ प्रहास्येते महात्मानौ महाबलौ ॥ ३२ ॥

“If the stock of our good fortune is not yet exhausted, these two high-souled princes, who are endowed with extraordinary might, shall shake off their swoon, O gallant monkey-king! (32)

पर्यवस्थापयात्मानमनाथं मां च वानर।
सत्यधर्माभिरक्तानां नास्ति मृत्युकृतं भयम् ॥ ३३ ॥

“Restore yourself to confidence, as well as me, forlorn as I am, O monkey! Fear of death does not haunt those who are devoted to truthfulness and piety.” (33)

एवमुक्त्वा ततस्तस्य जलक्लिन्नेन पाणिना ।
सुग्रीवस्य शुभे नेत्रे प्रममार्ज विभीषणः ॥ ३४ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid, Vibhiṣaṇa then wiped clean with his hand dipped in water the beautiful eyes of the celebrated Sugrīva. (34)

ततः सलिलमादाय विद्यया परिजप्य च ।
सुग्रीवनेत्रे धर्मात्मा प्रममार्ज विभीषणः ॥ ३५ ॥

Taking water in his hand and consecrating it with the utterance of a sacred text, Vibhiṣaṇa, whose mind was set on virtue, then washed with it the eyes of Sugrīva. (35)

विमृज्य वदनं तस्य कपिराजस्य धीमतः ।
अब्रवीत् कालसम्प्राप्तमसम्भ्रान्तमिदं वचः ॥ ३६ ॥

Having wiped clean the face of that sagacious ruler of monkeys, Vibhiṣaṇa addressed to him the following opportune words, which were free from perplexity: (36)

न कालः कपिराजेन्द्र वैक्लव्यमवलम्बितुम् ।
अतिस्नेहोऽपि कालेऽस्मिन् मरणायोपकल्पते ॥ ३७ ॥

“This is not the moment to give way to faint-heartedness, O suzerain lord of monkeys! Excessive emotion too at this juncture will lead to destruction. (37)

तस्मादुत्सृज्य वैक्लव्यं सर्वकार्यविनाशनम् ।
हितं रामपुरोगाणां सैन्यानामनुचिन्तय ॥ ३८ ॥

“Therefore, shaking off faint-heartedness, which frustrates all one’s ends, contemplate the good of the troops, which have Śrī Rāma for their leader. (38)

अथ वा रक्ष्यतां रामो यावत्संज्ञाविपर्ययः ।
लब्धसंज्ञौ हि काकुत्स्थौ भयं नौ व्यपनेष्यतः ॥ ३९ ॥

“Or, let Śrī Rāma be protected till his unconsciousness lasts. Having regained their consciousness, the two scions of Kakutstha will undoubtedly dispel our fear once for all. (39)

नैतत् किञ्चन रामस्य न च रामो मुमूर्षति ।
नह्येनं हास्यते लक्ष्मीर्दुर्लभा या गतायुषाम् ॥ ४० ॥

“This calamity is nothing to Śrī Rāma nor is Śrī Rāma going to die; for bodily splendour, which is difficult to retain for those whose sands of life have run out, is not abandoning him. (40)

तस्मादाश्वासयात्मानं बलं चाश्वासय स्वकम् ।
यावत् सैन्यानि सर्वाणि पुनः संस्थापयाम्यहम् ॥ ४१ ॥

“Therefore, reassure yourself and steady your life-breath till I restore all the ranks to confidence. (41)

एते हि फुल्लनयनास्त्रासादागतसाध्वसाः ।
कर्णे कर्णे प्रकथिता हरयो हरिसत्तम ॥ ४२ ॥

“Their eyes dilated through fear, the monkeys, who are seized with consternation, are actually carrying the news about Śrī Rāma’s swoon from ear to ear, O jewel among monkeys! (42)

मां तु दृष्ट्वा प्रधावन्तमनीकं सम्प्रहर्षितम् ।
त्यजन्तु हरयस्त्रासं भुक्तपूर्वामिव स्रजम् ॥ ४३ ॥

“Let the monkeys for their part shed all fear, even as one would discard a garland already enjoyed, on seeing me running about to reassure the ranks and beholding the army overjoyed on being reassured by me”. (43)

समाश्वास्य तु सुग्रीवं राक्षसेन्द्रो विभीषणः ।
विद्रुतं वानरानीकं तत् समाश्वासयत् पुनः ॥ ४४ ॥

Having restored Sugrīva to confidence, Vibhiṣaṇa the prospective ruler of ogres, for his part reassured once again the afore said army of monkeys, which had taken to its heels. (44)

इन्द्रजित् तु महामायः सर्वसैन्यसमावृतः ।
विवेश नगरीं लङ्कां पितरं चाभ्युपागमत् ॥ ४५ ॥

Indrajit, on the other side, who was a great conjurer, entered the city of Laṅkā, accompanied by all his troops, and approached his father. (45)

तत्र रावणमासाद्य अभिवाद्य कृताञ्जलिः ।
आचक्षे प्रियं पित्रे निहतौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ४६ ॥

Reaching the presence of Rāvaṇa there, and greeting him with joined palms, he broke to his father the delightful news that Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa had been killed. (46)

उत्पपात ततो हृष्टः पुत्रं च परिष्वजे ।
रावणो रक्षसां मध्ये श्रुत्वा शत्रू निपातितौ ॥ ४७ ॥

Rejoiced to hear of his two enemies (Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa) having been thrown down, Rāvaṇa forthwith sprang on his feet in the midst of other ogres and hugged his son, Indrajit. (47)

उपाघ्राय च तं मूर्ध्नि पप्रच्छ प्रीतमानसः ।
पृच्छते च यथावृत्तं पित्रे तस्मै न्यवेदयत् ॥ ४८ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षट्चत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLVII

Indrajit having re-entered Laṅkā, Hanumān and other monkeys encompass Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa and guard their bodies. Having dismissed Indrajit, Rāvaṇa commands the ogresses guarding Sītā to take her to the field of battle and show her the plight of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa.

The ogresses, headed by Trijaṭā, accordingly take her in the aerial car, known by the name of Puṣpaka, and show her the two princes lying unconscious and motionless on the ground. Sītā bursts into a piteous wail on seeing her husband and brother-in-law in that plight

यथा तौ शरबन्धेन निश्चेष्टौ निष्प्रभौ कृतौ ॥ ४९ ॥

Nay, smelling him on the head, Rāvaṇa made inquiries in the matter with a delighted mind. And to his inquisitive father, Rāvaṇa, Indrajit submitted, in accordance with facts, how the two princes (Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa) had been deprived of all movement and splendour by being entwined with arrows in the form of sankes. (48-49)

स हर्षवेगानुगतान्तरात्मा
श्रुत्वा गिरं तस्य महारथस्य ।
जहौ ज्वरं दाशरथेः समुत्थं
प्रहृष्टवाचाभिननन्द पुत्रम् ॥ ५० ॥

His inmost being flooded with a gush of joy on hearing the report of that great car-warrior, Rāvaṇa shed his agony caused on account of Śrī Rāma (son of Daśaratha) and acclaimed his son, Indrajit, with words full of excessive joy. (50)

तस्मिन् प्रविष्टे लङ्कायां कृतार्थे रावणात्मजे ।

राघवं परिवार्याथ ररक्षुर्वानरर्षभाः ॥ १ ॥

हनुमानङ्गदो नीलः सुषेणः कुमुदो नलः ।

गजो गवाक्षो गवयः शरभो गन्धमादनः ॥ २ ॥

जाम्बवानृषभः स्कन्धो रम्भः शतबलिः पृथुः ।
व्यूढानीकाश्च यत्ताश्च हुमानादाय सर्वतः ॥ ३ ॥

Encompassing Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), now that the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa had gone far into Laṅkā, his purpose accomplished, (nay) having drawn up their ranks in battle array and seizing trees, the foremost among the monkeys and bears, viz., Hanumān, Aṅgada. Nīla, Suṣeṇa, Kumuda, Nala, Gaja, Gavākṣa, Śarabha, Gandhamādana, Jāmbavān, Rṣabha, Skandha, Ramabha, Śatabali and Pṛthu, who were always alert, now guarded Śrī Rāma on all sides (lest some harm might come to him). (1—3)

वीक्षमाणा दिशः सर्वास्तिर्यगूर्ध्वं च वानराः ।
तृणेष्वपि च चेष्टत्सु राक्षसा इति मेनिरे ॥ ४ ॥

Surveying all the quarters, nay, looking up as well on either side, the monkeys thought that ogres had come even when blades of grass stirred. (4)

रावणश्चापि संहृष्टो विसृज्येन्द्रजितं सुतम् ।
आजुहाव ततः सीतारक्षणी राक्षसीस्तदा ॥ ५ ॥

Having dismissed his son, who had conquered Indra (the ruler of gods), Rāvaṇa too, who felt highly rejoiced, thereupon summoned the ogresses guarding Sītā. (5)

राक्षस्यस्त्रिजटा चापि शासनात् तमुपस्थिताः ।
ता उवाच ततो हृष्टो राक्षसी राक्षसाधिपः ॥ ६ ॥

The ogresses (in question) as also Trijaṭā waited upon him in response to his command. Full of joy, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, thereupon spoke as follows to the aforesaid ogresses: (6)

हताविन्द्रजिताख्यात वैदेह्या रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
पुष्पकं तत्समारोप्य दर्शयध्वं रणे हतौ ॥ ७ ॥

“Speak to Sītā (the princess of the Videha territory) about Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa having been killed by Indrajit. Placing her in the aerial car, Puṣpaka, then show to her the two princes killed in battle. (7)

यदाश्रयादवष्टब्धा नेयं मामुपतिष्ठते ।
सोऽस्या भर्ता सह भ्रात्रा निहतो रणमूर्धनि ॥ ८ ॥

“That husband of hers, being proud of whose support she does not submit to me, has been killed alongwith his younger brother in the van of a battle. (8)

निर्विशङ्का निरुद्विग्ना निरपेक्षा च मैथिली ।
मामुपस्थास्यते सीता सर्वाभरणभूषिता ॥ ९ ॥

“Rid of fear, free from perturbation and having lost all hope of meeting her husband, nay, adorned with all her jewels, Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, shall now wait upon me. (9)

अद्य कालवशं प्राप्तं रणे रामं सलक्ष्मणम् ।
अवेक्ष्य विनिवृत्ता सा चान्यां गतिमपश्यती ॥ १० ॥

अनपेक्षा विशालाक्षी मामुपस्थास्यते स्वयम् ।

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ ११ ॥

राक्षस्यस्तास्तथेत्युक्त्वा जग्मुर्वै यत्र पुष्पकम् ।

ततः पुष्पकमादाय राक्षस्यो रावणाज्ञया ॥ १२ ॥

अशोकवनिकास्थां तां मैथिलीं समुपानयन् ।

तामादाय तु राक्षस्यो भर्तृशोकपराजिताम् ॥ १३ ॥

सीतामारोपयामासुर्विमानं पुष्पकं तदा ।

ततः पुष्पकमारोप्य सीतां त्रिजटया सह ॥ १४ ॥

जग्मुर्दर्शयितुं तस्यै राक्षस्यो रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

रावणश्चारयामास पताकाध्वजमालिनीम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Having turned back (to the Aśoka grove) on seeing Rāma fallen under the sway of Death with Lakṣmaṇa on the field of battle, and finding no other haven, nay, rid of all hope, the large eyed lady will seek me of her own accord today.” Saying “Amen!” on hearing the aforesaid command of that evil-minded Rāvṇa, the ogresses in question moved to the place where Puṣpaka (the aerial car) was. Then, taking Puṣpaka, the ogresses conducted the car under orders of Rāvaṇa to the presence of the celebrated princess of Mithilā, staying in the Aśoka grove. Taking Sītā, who had been overpowered by grief caused by the report about the death of her husband, the ogresses for their part then helped her to ascend the aerial car, Puṣpaka. Then, placing Sītā alongwith Trijaṭā in Puṣpaka, the ogresses proceeded to show Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa to her. In this way Rāvaṇa caused her to fly over Laṅkā (the city dressed with rows of flags and pennons). (10—15)

प्राघोषयत हृष्टश्च लङ्कायां राक्षसेश्वरः ।
राघवो लक्ष्मणश्चैव हताविन्द्रजिता रणे ॥ १६ ॥

The delighted Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres) also had it widely proclaimed in Laṅkā that Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as also Lakṣmaṇa had been killed in combat by Indrajit. (16)

विमानेनापि गत्वा तु सीता त्रिजटया सह ।
ददर्श वानराणां तु सर्वं सैन्यं निपातितम् ॥ १७ ॥

Flying in the aerial car with Trijaṭā, Sītā for her part beheld a large army of the monkeys actually destroyed. (17)

प्रहृष्टमनसश्चापि ददर्श पिशिताशनान् ।
वानरांश्चातिदुःखार्तान् रामलक्ष्मणपार्श्वतः ॥ १८ ॥

Nay, she also found the ogres excessively delighted in mind and the monkeys, sore stricken with agony, standing by the side of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. (18)

ततः सीता ददर्शोभौ शयानौ शरतल्पगौ ।
लक्ष्मणं चैव रामं च विसंज्ञौ शरपीडितौ ॥ १९ ॥
विध्वस्तकवचौ वीरौ विप्रविद्धशरासनौ ।
सायकैश्छिन्नसर्वाङ्गौ शरस्तम्बमयौ क्षितौ ॥ २० ॥

Sītā then saw both the heroes, Lakṣmaṇa and Śrī Rāma, laying unconscious on the ground on a bed of arrows, their armour shattered and bows cast aside. (19-20)

तौ दृष्ट्वा भ्रातरौ तत्र प्रवीरौ पुरुषर्षभौ ।
शयानौ पुण्डरीकाक्षौ कुमाराविव पावकी ॥ २१ ॥
शरतल्पगतौ वीरौ तथाभूतौ नरर्षभौ ।
दुःखार्ता करुणं सीता सुभृशं विललाप ह ॥ २२ ॥

Stricken with agony to behold the two gallant brothers, the foremost of men, who were distinguished heroes and jewels among men and had lotus-like eyes, stretched on a bed of arrows in that wretched plight like the two sons of the fire-god (Śākha and Viśākha) lying on a bed of reeds, Sītā wailed piteously and vehemently. (21-22)

भर्तारमनवद्याङ्गी लक्ष्मणं चासितेक्षणा ।
प्रेक्ष्य पांसुषु चेष्टन्तौ रुरोद जनकात्मजा ॥ २३ ॥

Gazing on her husband as well as on Lakṣmaṇa tossing about in the dust, the dark-eyed Sītā (Janaka's daughter) of faultless limbs burst into sobs. (23)

सबाष्पशोकाभिहता समीक्ष्य
तौ भ्रातरौ देवसुतप्रभावौ ।
वितर्कयन्ती निधनं तयोः सा
दुःखान्विता वाक्यमिदं जगाद ॥ २४ ॥

Observing the aforesaid two brothers, who were powerful as the offspring of gods, and suspecting their death, Sītā, full of tears and agony, and smitten with grief, spoke as follows: (24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टचत्वारिंशः सर्गः

Canto XLVIII

“Those well-versed in physiognomy and palmistry had prophesied that I would never be widowed and would bear sons. How could their predictions prove untrue?” While Sītā was absorbed in these thoughts on beholding Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, Trijaṭa reassures her on the strength of good omens and, cheering her soul, takes her back to the Aśoka grove

भर्तारं निहतं दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणं च महाबलम् ।
विललाप भृशं सीता करुणं शोककर्षिता ॥ १ ॥

On seeing her husband as well as Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, struck down, Sītā who was already emaciated through grief lamented piteously and vehemently: (1)

ऊचुर्लाक्ष्णिका ये मां पुत्रिण्यविधवेति च ।
तेऽद्य सर्वे हते रामे ज्ञानिनोऽनृतवादिनः ॥ २ ॥

“Wise men, capable of reading the lineaments on the person of an individual, who had predicted with reference to me that I should bear sons and would never be widowed, have all turned out to be liars today in that Śrī Rāma has been killed. (2)

यज्वनो महिषीं ये मामूचुः पत्नीं च सत्रिणः ।
तेऽद्य सर्वे हते रामे ज्ञानिनोऽनृतवादिनः ॥ ३ ॥

“The wise men who had predicted about me that I should be the crowned consort of a performer of sacrifices and an undertaker of long-term sacrificial performances in which a number of priests officiated have proved to be liars today in that Śrī Rāma has been killed. (3)

वीरपार्थिवपत्नीनां ये विदुर्भर्तृपूजिताम् ।
तेऽद्य सर्वे हते रामे ज्ञानिनोऽनृतवादिनः ॥ ४ ॥

“Those wise men who prophesied about me that I should be held as venerable among the consorts of gallant monarchs and honoured by my husband have all proved to be liars today in that Śrī Rāma has been killed. (4)

ऊचुः संश्रवणे ये मां द्विजाः कार्तान्तिकाः शुभाम् ।
तेऽद्य सर्वे हते रामे ज्ञानिनोऽनृतवादिनः ॥ ५ ॥

“Those wise Brāhmaṇas, well-versed in astrology, who had predicted within my hearing that I should remain happy with my husband have all proved to be liars today in that Śrī Rāma has been killed. (5)

इमानि खलु पद्मानि पादयोर्वै कुलस्त्रियः ।
आधिराज्येऽभिषिच्यन्ते नरेन्द्रैः पतिभिः सह ॥ ६ ॥

“Indeed here are on my soles the marks of a lotus by virtue of which high-born women are actually consecrated on the imperial throne alongwith their lords, who are rulers of men. (6)

वैधव्यं यान्ति यैर्नार्योऽलक्षणैर्भाग्यदुर्लभाः ।
नात्मनस्तानि पश्यामि पश्यन्ती हतलक्षणा ॥ ७ ॥

“I do not find on my person those sinister marks by virtue of which women to whom good luck is difficult of access meet with widowhood. Even though seeing propitious marks on my limbs, they are proving ineffectual in my case. (7)

सत्यनामानि पद्मानि स्त्रीणामुक्तानि लक्षणैः ।
तान्यद्य निहते रामे वितथानि भवन्ति मे ॥ ८ ॥

“The marks of a lotus on the person of women, which have been declared as unfailing in their effect by those who are able to read the bodily marks of a man or woman, are proving false in my case today in that Śrī Rāma has been killed. (8)

केशाः सूक्ष्माः समा नीला भ्रुवौ चासंहते मम ।
वृत्ते चारोमके जङ्घे दन्ताश्चाविरला मम ॥ ९ ॥

“My locks are fine, of even length and dark, my eyebrows are not joined, nay my shanks are round and hairless and my teeth are closely set. (9)

शङ्खे नेत्रे करौ पादौ गुल्फावूरू समौ चितौ ।
अनुवृत्तनखाः स्निग्धाः समाश्चाङ्गुलयो मम ॥ १० ॥

“The pairs of my temporal bones, eyes, hands, feet, ankles and thighs are even-shaped and fleshy; nay, the fingers of both my hands are evenly matched, smooth and provided with rounded and well-proportioned nails. (10)

स्तनौ चाविरलौ पीनौ मामकौ मग्नचूचकौ ।
मग्ना चोत्सेधनी नाभिः पार्श्वोरस्कं च मे चितम् ॥ ११ ॥

“My breasts too are well-knit and fully developed and have depressed nipples; nay, my navel is deep with the surrounding region elevated; while my flanks and bosom are fleshy. (11)

मम वर्णो मणिनिभो मृदून्यङ्गरुहाणि च ।
प्रतिष्ठितां द्वादशभिर्मामूचुः शुभलक्षणाम् ॥ १२ ॥

“My complexion has the sheen of a polished gem, while the hair on my skin are soft. Nay, those who are able to read the bodily marks of an individual spoke of me as endowed with auspicious marks, in that I touched the ground with my twelve limbs, viz., the ten toes and the two soles. (12)

समग्रयवमच्छिद्रं पाणिपादं च वर्णवत् ।
मन्दस्मितेत्येव च मां कन्यालाक्षणिका विदुः ॥ १३ ॥

“Those capable of interpreting the bodily marks of maidens declared my hands and feet to be rosy, devoid of space between the fingers and toes and with the mark of a barley corn fully manifest on them and also spoke of me as distinguished by a gentle smile, which are all auspicious marks. (13)

आधिराज्येऽभिषेको मे ब्राह्मणैः पतिना सह ।
कृतान्तकुशलैरुक्तं तत् सर्वं वितथीकृतम् ॥ १४ ॥

“It was predicted by Brāhmaṇas well-versed in the principles of astrology that I should be consecrated alongwith my husband on the imperial throne. All that has, however, been falsified. (14)

शोधयित्वा जनस्थानं प्रवृत्तिमुपलभ्य च ।
तीर्त्वा सागरमक्षोभ्यं भ्रातरौ गोष्पदे हतौ ॥ १५ ॥

“Having scoured Janasthāna (in search of me), nay, having crossed the sea, which is incapable of being disturbed, after securing intelligence about me, the two scions of Raghu have been killed in the attempt to overcome the Māyā (sorcery) of Indrajit (which was like the imprint of a cow's hoof)! (15)

ननु वारुणमाग्नेयमैन्द्रं वायव्यमेव च ।
अस्त्रं ब्रह्मशिरश्चैव राघवौ प्रत्यपद्यत ॥ १६ ॥

“Surely Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two scions of Raghu, knew the use of the mystic missiles presided over by Varuṇa (the god of water), Agni (the god of fire), Indra (the god of rain) as well as of that presided over by Vāyu (the wind-god) as also the use of the missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator). How, then, did they not resort to the use of these missiles as a last resort? (16)

अदृश्यमानेन रणे मायया वासवोपमौ ।
मम नाथावनाथाया निहतौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ १७ ॥

“Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the protectors of this forlorn creature, who were compeers of Indra, have evidently been killed by Indrajit, who remained invisible on the field of battle through a conjuring trick. (17)

नहि दृष्टिपथं प्राप्य राघवस्य रणे रिपुः ।

जीवन् प्रतिनिवर्तेत यद्यपि स्यान्मनोजवः ॥ १८ ॥

“Having come within the range of sight of Śrī Rama (a scion of Raghu) in an encounter, no enemy could return alive, even though he were endowed with the swiftness of thought. (18)

न कालस्यातिभारोऽस्ति कृतान्तश्च सुदुर्जयः ।

यत्र रामः सह भ्रात्रा शेते युधि निपातितः ॥ १९ ॥

“Since Śrī Rāma lies struck down on the field of battle with his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, no burden is too heavy to shoulder for Providence (in the form of the Time-Spirit, who is capable of doing anything). Even ‘Death’ (which brings about the end of all) is not very difficult to conquer for Him. (19)

न शोचामि तथा रामं लक्ष्मणं च महारथम् ।

नात्मानं जननीं चापि यथा श्वश्रून् तपस्विनीम् ॥ २० ॥

“I do not grieve so much for Śrī Rāma and the great car-warrior Lakṣmaṇa nor for myself nor even for my own mother as for my unfortunate mother-in-law, Kausalyā. (20)

सा तु चिन्तयते नित्यं समाप्तव्रतमागतम् ।

कदा द्रक्ष्यामि सीतां च लक्ष्मणं च सराघवम् ॥ २१ ॥

“She, for her part, always remains absorbed in the thought ‘O, when shall I be able to see Lakṣmaṇa returned to Ayodhyā with Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, having completed his vow of remaining in exile in the woods for fourteen years, as also Sitā?’ ” (21)

परिदेवयमानां तां राक्षसी त्रिजटाब्रवीत् ।

मा विषादं कृथा देवि भर्तायं तव जीवति ॥ २२ ॥

The ogress Trijaṭā spoke as follows to her while Sitā was wailing as aforesaid: “Do not despair, O godlike lady! Your yonder lord is living. (22)

कारणानि च वक्ष्यामि महान्ति सदृशानि च ।

यथेमौ जीवतो देवि भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ २३ ॥

“I shall presently adduce mighty and cogent reasons which lead me to believe that these two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, are still surviving, O godlike lady! (23)

नहि कोपपरीतानि हर्षपर्युत्सुकानि च ।

भवन्ति युधि योधानां मुखानि निहते पतौ ॥ २४ ॥

“The ruler having been killed, the faces of the warriors operating on the field of battle are never seized by wrath nor are they animated with joy. (24)

इदं विमानं वैदेहि पुष्पकं नाम नामतः ।

दिव्यं त्वां धारयेन्नेदं यद्येतौ गतजीवितौ ॥ २५ ॥

“Had these two brothers been dead, O princess of the Videha territory, this aerial car, Puṣpaka by name, celestial as it is, would not in any case have borne you (a widowed lady). (25)

हतवीरप्रधाना हि गतोत्साहा निरुद्यमा ।

सेना भ्रमति संख्येषु हतकर्णेव नौर्जले ॥ २६ ॥

“Having lost its ardour and devoid of effort, an army, whose heroic leader is dead, actually moves to and fro on the field of battle like a vessel which has lost its helmsman. (26)

इयं पुनरसम्भ्रान्ता निरुद्विग्ना तपस्विनि ।

सेना रक्षति काकुत्स्थौ मया प्रीत्या निवेदितौ ॥ २७ ॥

“Not at all confused or perturbed, this army of monkeys, however, is guarding Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two scions of Kakutstha, who have just now been proclaimed by me out of love as alive, O lady given to austerities! (27)

सा त्वं भव सुविस्त्रब्धा अनुमानैः सुखोदयैः ।

अहतौ पश्य काकुत्स्थौ स्नेहादेतद् ब्रवीमि ते ॥ २८ ॥

“As such be you completely reassured on the strength of inferences resulting in joy and find the two scions of Kakutstha alive: I speak this to you out of affection for you. (28)

अनृतं नोक्तपूर्वं मे न च वक्ष्यामि मैथिलि।

चारित्रसुखशीलत्वात् प्रविष्टासि मनो मम ॥ २९ ॥

“No falsehood has ever been uttered by me in the past nor shall I ever tell a lie, O princess of Mithilā! You have found your way into my mind due to your amiable disposition which has proved to be a source of delight because of your spotless character. (29)

नेमौ शक्यौ रणे जेतुं सेन्द्रैरपि सुरासुरैः।

तादृशं दर्शनं दृष्ट्वा मया चोदीरितं तव ॥ ३० ॥

“These two princes are not vulnerable to being conquered even by gods and demons combined, including Indra, the ruler of gods. Nay, after observing such indications on the face of the two brothers as also on the face of the warriors guarding them, has the fact of the princes being alive been made known by me to you. (30)

इदं तु सुमहच्चित्रं शरैः पश्यस्व मैथिलि।

विसंज्ञौ पतितावेतौ नैव लक्ष्मीर्विमुञ्चति ॥ ३१ ॥

“Also see for yourself this very great wonder, O princess of Mithilā that bodily splendour does not completely desert these two princes, even though they have fallen unconscious on the ground hit by the arrows. (31)

प्रायेण गतसत्त्वानां पुरुषाणां गतायुषाम्।

दृश्यमानेषु वक्त्रेषु परं भवति वैकृतम् ॥ ३२ ॥

“An appalling change generally appears on the features, when being observed, of men whose sands of life have run out and whose life-breath has departed for good. (32)

त्यज शोकं च दुःखं च मोहं च जनकात्मजे।

रामलक्ष्मणयोरर्थे नाद्य शक्यमजीवितुम् ॥ ३३ ॥

“Banish grief and sorrow as well as infatuation on account of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, O Janaka’s daughter! It is not possible that they be not living at this moment.” (33)

श्रुत्वा तु वचनं तस्याः सीता सुरसुतोपमा।

कृताञ्जलिरुवाचेमामेवमस्त्विति मैथिली ॥ ३४ ॥

Hearing her assurance, the princess of Mithilā, Sītā, for her part, who resembled a daughter of gods, replied with joined palms to her, “May it be so!” (34)

विमानं पुष्पकं तत्तु संनिवर्त्य मनोजवम्।

दीना त्रिजटया सीता लङ्कामेव प्रवेशिता ॥ ३५ ॥

After duly sending back the aforesaid aerial car, Puṣpaka, which was swift as thought, the mournful Sītā was caused by Trijaṭā to enter Laṅkā once more. (35)

ततस्त्रिजटया सार्धं पुष्पकादवरुह्य सा।

अशोकवनिकामेव राक्षसीभिः प्रवेशिता ॥ ३६ ॥

Descending from Puspaka with Trijaṭā, she was then urged by the ogresses to enter the Aśoka grove again. (36)

प्रविश्य सीता बहुवृक्षखण्डां

तां राक्षसेन्द्रस्य विहारभूमिम्।

सम्प्रेक्ष्य संचिन्त्य च राजपुत्रौ

परं विषादं समुपाजगाम ॥ ३७ ॥

Having gone far into and keenly observing that pleasure ground of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, planted with numerous clusters of trees, nay, having keenly observed and pondered deeply on the two princes, she gave way to extreme despair. (37)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टचत्वारिंशः सर्गः ॥ ४८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto XLIX

Returning to consciousness, Śrī Rāma wails over the lot of Lakṣmaṇa and the monkeys too fall a prey to extreme despondency on seeing Śrī Rāma wailing as aforesaid. Seeing Vibhīṣaṇa approach Śrī Rāma in the meantime, they all take to their heels, mistaking him for Indrajit

घोरेण शरबन्धेन बद्धौ दशरथात्मजौ ।
निःश्वसन्तौ यथा नागौ शयानौ रुधिरोक्षितौ ॥ १ ॥
सर्वे ते वानरश्रेष्ठाः ससुग्रीवमहाबलाः ।
परिवार्य महात्मानौ तस्थुः शोकपरिप्लुताः ॥ २ ॥

All the aforesaid jewels among monkeys (mentioned in verses 2-3 of Canto XLVII above) including Sugrīva (their ruler), who were endowed with extraordinary might, stood plunged in grief surrounding the two high-souled sons of Emperor Daśaratha, who were lying bathed in blood, hissing like a pair of serpents, bound, as they were, in a formidable network of arrows. (1-2)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे रामः प्रत्यबुध्यत वीर्यवान् ।
स्थिरत्वात् सत्त्वयोगाच्च शरैः संदानितोऽपि सन् ॥ ३ ॥

In the meantime, by virtue of his hardihood and being endowed with exceptional courage, the powerful Śrī Rāma, though bound by arrows, regained his consciousness. (3)

ततो दृष्ट्वा सरुधिरं निषण्णं गाढमर्पितम् ।
भ्रातरं दीनवदनं पर्यदेवयदातुरः ॥ ४ ॥

Beholding his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, lying tightly bound with arrows, bathed in blood, his face downcast, Śrī Rāma thereupon lamented as follows, distressed as he was: (4)

किं नु मे सीतया कार्यं लब्धया जीवितेन वा ।
शयानं योऽद्य पश्यामि भ्रातरं युधि निर्जितम् ॥ ५ ॥

“What purpose of mine on earth will be accomplished through Sītā, if recovered, or even through my life if preserved when I perceive my younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, lying utterly vanquished in combat today? (5)

शक्या सीतासमा नारी मर्त्यलोके विचिन्वता ।
न लक्ष्मणसमो भ्राता सचिवः साम्पराधिकः ॥ ६ ॥

“A consort on a par with Sītā can be found in this world of mortals by me if I were to look for her. But a helpful and warlike brother like Lakṣmaṇa cannot be had. (6)

परित्यक्ष्याम्यहं प्राणान् वानराणां तु पश्यताम् ।
यदि पञ्चत्वमापन्नः सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनः ॥ ७ ॥

“I for my part shall yield up my life while the monkeys stand looking on, if Lakṣmaṇa (who enhances the joy of Sumitrā) meets with dissolution (lit. the disintegration of the five elements). (7)

किं नु वक्ष्यामि कौसल्यां मातरं किं नु कैकयीम् ।
कथमम्बां सुमित्रां च पुत्रदर्शनलालसाम् ॥ ८ ॥
विवत्सां वेपमानां च वेपन्तीं कुररीमिव ।
कथमाश्वासयिष्यामि यदि यास्यामि तं विना ९ ॥

“What on earth shall I say to mother Kausalyā and what on earth to Kaikeyī? And how, in what words shall I console mother Sumitrā, bereft of her darling, Lakṣmaṇa, nay, sighing for the sight of her son, trembling from agitation and crying like a female osprey, if I return to Ayodhyā without Lakṣmaṇa? (8-9)

कथं वक्ष्यामि शत्रुघ्नं भरतं च यशस्विनम् ।
मया सह वनं यातो विना तेनाहमागतः ॥ १० ॥

“How shall I tell Śatrughna and the illustrious Bharata that I have returned without Lakṣmaṇa, who had accompanied me to the woods? (10)

उपालम्भं न शक्यामि सोढुमम्बासुमित्रया।
इहैव देहं त्यक्ष्यामि नहि जीवितुमुत्सहे॥ ११॥

“I shall not be able to endure the blame which will be laid on me by mother Sumitrā. As such, I shall cast my body at this very place since I am not inclined to survive. (11)

धिङ्मां दुष्कृतकर्माणमनार्यं यत्कृते ह्यसौ।
लक्ष्मणः पतितः शेते शरतल्पे गतासुवत्॥ १२॥

“Woe be to me, an ignoble soul of sinful deeds, on account of whom the aforesaid Lakṣmaṇa lies fallen on a bed of arrows like one whose life has departed! (12)

त्वं नित्यं सुविषण्णं मामाश्वासयसि लक्ष्मण।
गतासुर्नाद्य शक्तोऽसि मामार्तमभिभाषितुम्॥ १३॥

Turning towards Lakṣmaṇa “You always comforted me when I felt sore dejected, O Lakṣmaṇa! Your life having departed, as it were, you are, however, not able even to speak to me today, distressed as I am. (13)

येनाद्य बहवो युद्धे निहता राक्षसाः क्षितौ।
तस्यामेवाद्य शूरस्त्वं शेषे विनिहतः शनैः॥ १४॥

“Gallant as you are, you lie struck down with darts today on the same ground on which numerous ogres have been killed by you in combat this very day! (14)

शयानः शरतल्पेऽस्मिन् सशोणितपरिस्तुतः।
शरभूतस्ततो भासि भास्करोऽस्तमिव व्रजन्॥ १५॥

“Lying on this bed of arrows, bathed in blood, and converted into a bundle of arrows, as it were, you look like the sun sinking below the horizon with the arrows transfixed in the body appearing like its numberless rays and the blood flowing from the numerous cuts accounting for the red glow of the evening sun. (15)

बाणाभिहतमर्मत्वान्न शक्नोषीह भाषितुम्।
रुजा चाब्रुवतो यस्य दृष्टिरागेण सूच्यते॥ १६॥

“Your vital parts having been pierced with arrows, you cannot even speak on this occasion. Nay, even though you are not speaking, your anguish is revealed by the redness of your eyes. (16)

यथैव मां वनं यान्तमनुयातो महाद्युतिः।
अहमप्यनुयास्यामि तथैवैनं यमक्षयम्॥ १७॥

“Even as this prince, who is clothed with an extraordinary splendour, followed me while I was retiring to the woods, so I too shall follow him to the abode of Yama. (17)

इष्टबन्धुजनो नित्यं मां च नित्यमनुव्रतः।
इमामद्य गतोऽवस्थां ममानार्यस्य दुर्नयैः॥ १८॥

“He who loved his kinsfolk and was ever devoted to me has reached this state through the misdeeds of my ignoble self today. (18)

सुरुष्टेनापि वीरेण लक्ष्मणेन न संस्मरे।
परुषं विप्रियं चापि श्रावितं तु कदाचन॥ १९॥

“I do not recollect that a harsh and even an unpalatable word was ever uttered by the gallant Lakṣmaṇa even when he was deeply provoked. (19)

विससर्जैकवेगेन पञ्चबाणशतानि यः।
इष्वस्त्रेष्वधिकस्तस्मात् कार्तवीर्याच्च लक्ष्मणः॥ २०॥

“Lakṣmaṇa, who shot five hundred arrows at a stretch, was as such superior even to Kārtavīra (who could do so only with his one thousand arms) in the art of shooting arrows. (20)

अस्त्रैस्त्राणि यो हन्याच्छक्रस्यापि महात्मनः।
सोऽयमुर्व्या हतः शेते महार्हशयनोचितः॥ २१॥

“The same Lakṣmaṇa, who could tear asunder the missiles even of the mighty Indra, the ruler of gods, and who was deserving of reposing on a precious couch, is lying here struck down on the bare ground! (21)

तत्तु मिथ्या प्रलसं मां प्रधक्ष्यति न संशयः ।
यन्मया न कृतो राजा राक्षसानां विभीषणः ॥ २२ ॥

“Since Vibhiṣaṇa has not been enthroned by me as the ruler of ogres, that vain prating of mine that Vibhiṣaṇa would be installed on the throne of Laṅkā will ever consume me: there is no doubt about it. (22)

अस्मिन् मुहूर्ते सुग्रीव प्रतियातुमितोऽर्हसि ।
मत्वा हीनं मया राजन् रावणोऽभिभविष्यति ॥ २३ ॥

“You ought to return from this place at this very hour, O Sugrīva; for Rāvaṇa will surely overcome you, knowing you to be bereft of me, O king! (23)

अङ्गदं तु पुरस्कृत्य ससैन्यं सपरिच्छदम् ।
सागरं तर सुग्रीव नीलेन च नलेन च ॥ २४ ॥

“Placing Aṅgada in the forefront alongwith your army and entourage, recross the sea alongwith Nīla and Nala too, O Sugrīva! (24)

कृतं हि सुमहत्कर्म यदन्यैर्दुष्करं रणे ।
ऋक्षराजेन तुष्यामि गोलाङ्गूलाधिपेन च ॥ २५ ॥

“Indeed, a very great exploit was accomplished by you on the field of battle—an exploit which was difficult to accomplish for others. I am also satisfied with Jāmbavān (the king of bears) as well as with Gavākṣa (the suzerain lord of Golāṅgūlas). (25)

अङ्गदेन कृतं कर्म मैन्देन द्विविदेन च ।
युद्धं केसरिणा संख्ये घोरं सम्पातिना कृतम् ॥ २६ ॥

“Acts of valour were performed by Aṅgada, Mainda and Dwivida too, while a formidable struggle was carried on the field of battle by Kesarī (the father of Hanumān) and Sampātī. (26)

गवयेन गवाक्षेण शरभेण गजेन च ।
अन्यैश्च हरिभिर्युद्धं मदर्थे त्यक्तजीवितैः ॥ २७ ॥

“A struggle was also carried out in my cause by Gavaya, Gavākṣa, Śarabha and Gaja as also by other monkeys, sacrificing their very lives for my sake. (27)

न चातिक्रामितुं शक्यं दैवं सुग्रीव मानुषैः ।
यत्तु शक्यं वयस्येन सुहृदा वा परं मम ॥ २८ ॥
कृतं सुग्रीव तत् सर्वं भवता धर्मभीरुणा ।
मित्रकार्यं कृतमिदं भवद्विर्वानरर्षभाः ॥ २९ ॥
अनुज्ञाता मया सर्वे यथेष्टं गन्तुमर्हथ ।
शुश्रुवुस्तस्य ये सर्वे वानराः परिदेवितम् ॥ ३० ॥
वर्तयांचक्रिरेऽश्रूणि नेत्रैः कृष्णोतरेक्षणाः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Destiny cannot be over-ridden by human beings, O Sugrīva! All that could be done by my best friend or ally has been done by you, scrupulous as you are in the matter of duty, O Sugrīva! The purpose of an ally has been accomplished by you, O Jewel among monkeys! Permitted by me, you should go where you will.” All the tawny-eyed monkeys who heard his lamentation as above dropped tears from their eyes. (28—31)

ततः सर्वाण्यनीकानि स्थापयित्वा विभीषणः ।
आजगाम गदापाणिस्त्वरितं यत्र राघवः ॥ ३२ ॥

Having settled all the forces, Vibhiṣaṇa hastened, mace in hand, to the place where Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) lay. (32)

तं दृष्ट्वा त्वरितं यान्तं नीलाञ्जनचयोपमम् ।
वानरा दुद्रुवुः सर्वे मन्यमानास्तु रावणिम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Seeing Vibhiṣaṇa, who resembled a mass of collyrium, proceeding in haste to the presence of Śrī Rāma and taking him to be Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), all the monkeys took to their heels. (33)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ४९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Forty-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto L

Beholding Vibhīṣaṇa, Sugrīva asks Jāmbavān to restore the fleeing monkeys to confidence and himself reassures Vibhīṣaṇa.

In the meantime, Garuḍa, the king of birds, makes his appearance on the scene and liberates Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa from their bondage

अथोवाच महातेजा हरिराजो महाबलः ।
किमियं व्यथिता सेना मूढवातेव नौर्जले ॥ १ ॥

Now Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and possessed of great might, inquired saying: "What for is this army disquieted like a bark caught in a whirlwind at sea?" (1)

सुग्रीवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा वालिपुत्रोऽङ्गदोऽब्रवीत् ।
न त्वं पश्यसि रामं च लक्ष्मणं च महारथम् ॥ २ ॥
शरजालाचितौ वीरावुभौ दशरथात्मजौ ।
शरतल्पे महात्मानौ शयानौ रुधरोक्षितौ ॥ ३ ॥

Hearing the question of Sugrīva, Aṅgada, son of Vālī, said, "Don't you see the two high-souled heroic sons of Emperor Daśaratha, Śrī Rāma and the great car-warrior, Lakṣmaṇa, lying on a bed of arrows, covered all over with darts and bathed in blood?" (2-3)

अथाब्रवीद् वानरेन्द्रः सुग्रीवः पुत्रमङ्गदम् ।
नानिमित्तमिदं मन्ये भवितव्यं भयेन तु ॥ ४ ॥

Thereupon Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, spoke as follows to his son (nephew) Aṅgada: "I do not account this stampede, among the monkeys without any immediate reason, other than the bondage of Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. There needs must be some danger ahead." (4)

विषण्णवदना ह्येते त्यक्तप्रहरणा दिशः ।
पलायन्तेऽत्र हरयस्त्रासादुत्फुल्ललोचनाः ॥ ५ ॥

"Their faces downcast and eyes distressed with terror, these monkeys are actually fleeing at his juncture in all directions, abandoning their arms. (5)

अन्योन्यस्य न लज्जन्ते न निरीक्षन्ति पृष्ठतः ।
विप्रकर्षन्ति चान्योन्यं पतितं लङ्घयन्ति च ॥ ६ ॥

"While doing so they do not blush at the sight of one another nor do they look behind. Nay, they drag one another (when interrupted) and leap over a fallen companion (without pausing to pick him up)." (6)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे वीरो गदापाणिर्विभीषणः ।
सुग्रीवं वर्धयामास राघवं च जयाशिषा ॥ ७ ॥

In the meantime, mace in hand, the heroic Vibhīṣaṇa appeared on the scene and cheered Sugrīva and Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, with benedictions of victory. (7)

विभीषणं च सुग्रीवो दृष्ट्वा वानरभीषणम् ।
ऋक्षराजं महात्मानं समीपस्थमुवाच ह ॥ ८ ॥

Beholding Vibhīṣaṇa, who had caused panic among the monkeys, Sugrīva, they say, spoke as follows to the high-souled Jāmbavān, the king of bears, who stood near: (8)

विभीषणोऽयं सम्प्राप्तो यं दृष्ट्वा वानरर्षभाः ।
द्रवन्त्यायतसंत्रासा रावणात्मजशङ्कया ॥ ९ ॥

"Here is Vibhīṣaṇa duly arrived, seeing whom the foremost of monkeys are fleeing under the suspicion that he is Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) seized as they are with panic at his very sight. (9)

शीघ्रमेतान् सुसंत्रस्तान् बहुधा विप्रधावितान् ।
पर्यवस्थापयाख्याहि विभीषणमुपस्थितम् ॥ १० ॥

“Quickly rally the yonder monkeys who have fled in many directions, greatly alarmed as they are; inform them of Vibhīṣaṇa, and not Indrajit, being present here”. (10)

सुग्रीवैणैवमुक्तस्तु जाम्बवानृक्षपार्थिवः ।
वानरान् सान्त्वयामास संनिवर्त्य प्रधावतः ॥ ११ ॥

Duly calling the fugitive monkeys back, when commanded as above by Sugrīva, Jāmbavān, the king of bears, for his part restored them to confidence. (11)

ते निवृत्ताः पुनः सर्वे वानरास्त्यक्तसाध्वसाः ।
ऋक्षराजवचः श्रुत्वा तं च दृष्ट्वा विभीषणम् ॥ १२ ॥

Shaking off their fear on hearing the call of Jāmbavān and perceiving the well-known Vibhīṣaṇa, all the aforesaid monkeys eventually retraced their steps. (12)

विभीषणस्तु रामस्य दृष्ट्वा गात्रं शरैश्चितम् ।
लक्ष्मणस्य तु धर्मात्मा बभूव व्यथितस्तदा ॥ १३ ॥

Vibhīṣaṇa for his part, whose mind was given to piety, felt distressed on that occasion to see the person of Śrī Rāma as also of Lakṣmaṇa covered with arrows. (13)

जलक्लिन्नेन हस्तेन तयोर्नेत्रे विमृज्य च ।
शोकसम्पीडितमना रुरोद विललाप च ॥ १४ ॥

Nay, having washed their eyes with his hand dipped in water, his mind tormented with grief, Vibhīṣaṇa wept and wailed (as follows): (14)

इमौ तौ सत्त्वसम्पन्नौ विक्रान्तौ प्रियसंयुगौ ।
इमामवस्थां गमितौ राक्षसैः कूटयोधिभिः ॥ १५ ॥

“These two well-known and powerful princes, who are endowed with energy and fond of combat, have been reduced to this predicament by ogres fighting in crafty ways! (15)

भ्रातृपुत्रेण चैतेन दुष्पुत्रेण दुरात्मना ।
राक्षस्या जिह्वाया बुद्ध्या वञ्चितावृजुविक्रमौ ॥ १६ ॥

“The two princes, who were exhibiting their prowess in a guileless manner, have been played foul by this evil-minded nephew of mine, an unworthy son of his father through his crooked judgment characteristic of ogres. (16)

शरैरिमावलं विद्धौ रुधिरेण समुक्षितौ ।
वसुधायामिमौ सुप्तौ दृश्येते शल्यकाविव ॥ १७ ॥

‘Pierced fiercely by arrows and bathed in blood, these two aforesaid princes are lying on the ground like two porcupines. (17)

ययोर्वीर्यमुपाश्रित्य प्रतिष्ठा काङ्क्षिता मया ।
ताविमौ देहनाशाय प्रसुप्तौ पुरुषर्षभौ ॥ १८ ॥

‘These two celebrated jewels among men, banking on whose prowess installation on the throne of Laṅka was sought by me are lying fast asleep, as it were, waiting for the dissolution of the body. (18)

जीवन्नद्य विपन्नोऽस्मि नष्टराज्यमनोरथः ।
प्राप्तप्रतिज्ञश्च रिपुः सकामो रावणः कृतः ॥ १९ ॥

‘My ambition for sovereignty having been frustrated, I am as good as dead, though alive, nay, having had his vow (of not returning Sītā) fulfilled, the enemy, Rāvaṇa, has been enabled by his son to realize his ambition of retaining Sītā in his possession.’ (19)

एवं विलपमानं तं परिष्वज्य विभीषणम् ।
सुग्रीवः सत्त्वसम्पन्नो हरिराजोऽब्रवीदिदम् ॥ २० ॥

Embracing Vibhīṣaṇa, who was lamenting as above, Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, who was endowed with energy, reassured him in the following words: (20)

राज्यं प्राप्स्यसि धर्मज्ञ लङ्कायां नेह संशयः ।
रावणः सह पुत्रेण स्वकामं नेह लप्स्यते ॥ २१ ॥

“You shall attain the sovereignty of Laṅkā, there is no doubt about it, O knower of what is right! With his son Indrajit, Rāvaṇa will not be able to attain the object of his desire in this life. (21)

गरुडाधिष्ठितावेतावुभौ राघवलक्ष्मणौ ।
त्यक्त्वा मोहं वधिष्येते सगणं रावणं रणे ॥ २२ ॥

“Having shaken off their spell of unconsciousness, and mounted on Garuḍa (the king of birds and the carrier of Lord viṣṇu), both Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) and Lakṣmaṇa will make short work of Rāvaṇa with his hordes on the field of battle.” (22)

तमेवं सान्त्वयित्वा तु समाश्रास्य तु राक्षसम् ।
सुषेणं श्वशुरं पार्श्वे सुग्रीवस्तमुवाच ह ॥ २३ ॥

Having consoled and reassured the aforesaid ogre, Vibhīsaṇa, in the foregoing words, Sugrīva for his part spoke as follows to his father-in-law, Suṣeṇa, standing by his side: (23)

सह शूरैर्हरिगणैर्लब्धसंज्ञावरिंदमौ ।
गच्छ त्वं भ्रातरौ गृह्य किष्किन्धां रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ २४ ॥

“Accompanied by heroic simian troops, proceed you to Kiṣkindhā, taking with you the two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the tamers of their enemies, as soon as they have regained consciousness. (24)

अहं तु रावणं हत्वा सपुत्रं सहबान्धवम् ।
मैथिलीमानयिष्यामि शक्रो नष्टामिव श्रियम् ॥ २५ ॥

“Having disposed of Rāvaṇa with his sons and relatives, I, for my part, shall bring back Sitā (a princess of Mithilā) even as Indra (the ruler of paradise) recovered his lost royal fortune from the hands of demons.” (25)

श्रुत्वैतद् वानरेन्द्रस्य सुषेणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
देवासुरं महायुद्धमनुभूतं पुरातनम् ॥ २६ ॥

Hearing this command of Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, Suṣeṇa submitted as follows: “A major conflict which took place between the gods and the demons in the days gone by was witnessed by me. (26)

तदा स्म दानवा देवान् शरसंस्पर्शकोविदान् ।
निजघ्नुः शस्त्रविदुषश्छादयन्तो मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ २७ ॥

“Concealing themselves by means of conjuring tricks on that occasion, the demons overwhelmed again and again the gods, even though the latter were skilled in aiming at their mark and adept in the use of arms. (27)

तानातान् नष्टसंज्ञांश्च गतासूंश्च बृहस्पतिः ।
विद्याभिर्मन्त्रयुक्ताभिरोषधीभिश्चिकित्सति ॥ २८ ॥

“Sage Bṛhaspati (the preceptor and arch-priest of gods) restored to health and life the gods who were wounded and rendered unconscious as also those who had lost their life, by means of prayers and remedies accompanied by the recitation of sacred texts. (28)

तान्यौषधान्यानयितुं क्षीरोदं यान्तु सागरम् ।
जवेन वानराः शीघ्रं सम्पातिपनसादयः ॥ २९ ॥

“Let monkeys headed by Sampāti and Panasa proceed quickly with a swift pace to the ocean of milk to fetch the aforesaid medicines. (29)

हरयस्तु विजानन्ति पार्वती ते महौषधी ।
संजीवकरणीं दिव्यां विशल्यां देवनिर्मिताम् ॥ ३० ॥

“Those monkeys (Sampāti and others) for their part correctly know two great mountain herbs, the wonderful Sañjivakaraṇī (bringing back to life) and Viśalyā (capable of healing wounds inflicted by arrows), evolved by Brahmā. (30)

चन्द्रश्च नाम द्रोणश्च क्षीरोदे सागरोत्तमे ।
अमृतं यत्र मथितं तत्र ते परमौषधी ॥ ३१ ॥

“On the bank of the ocean of milk, the foremost of oceans, from which was churned out nectar (the drink of immortality), are two mountains, Candra and Droṇa by name: the aforesaid two great herbs exist there. (31)

तौ तत्र विहितौ देवैः पर्वतौ तौ महोदधौ ।
अयं वायुसुतो राजन् हनूमांस्तत्र गच्छतु ॥ ३२ ॥

“Those two well-known mountains were placed in that ocean by the gods themselves. Let the yonder Hanumān, son of the wind-god, proceed there.” (32)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे वायुर्मैघाश्चापि सविद्युतः ।
पर्यस्य सागरे तोयं कम्पयन्निव पर्वतान् ॥ ३३ ॥

In the meantime there arose a wind—as well as clouds accompanied by flashes of lightning—which, having whipped up the sea-water, began to shake the mountains, as it were. (33)

महता पक्षवातेन सर्वद्वीपमहाद्रुमाः ।
निपेतुर्भृग्विटपाः सलिले लवणाम्भसि ॥ ३४ ॥

Their boughs broken by that mighty wind caused by the flutter of wings, large trees of the entire island of Laṅkā fell headlong into the water of the salt sea. (34)

अभवन् पन्नगास्त्रस्ता भोगिनस्तत्रवासिनः ।
शीघ्रं सर्वाणि यादांसि जग्मुश्च लवणार्णवम् ॥ ३५ ॥

The huge serpents inhabiting that island got alarmed, nay, all the sea-monsters, which had crawled to the shore, quickly (re-) entered the salt sea. (35)

ततो मुहूर्ताद् गरुडं वैनतेयं महाबलम् ।
वानरा ददृशुः सर्वे ज्वलन्तमिव पावकम् ॥ ३६ ॥

In an instant all the monkeys saw Garuḍa (the king of birds and a carrier of lord Viṣṇu), son of Vinatā, who is endowed with extraordinary might, and resembled a blazing fire in brilliance. (36)

तमागतमभिप्रेक्ष्य नागास्ते विप्रदुद्रुवुः ।
यैस्तु तौ पुरुषौ बद्धौ शरभूतैर्महाबलैः ॥ ३७ ॥

Perceiving him arrived on the scene, those serpents, for their part, by which, serving as arrows, the aforesaid two personages, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, had been bound and which were endowed with extraordinary might, fled away for good. (37)

ततः सुपर्णः काकुत्स्थौ स्पृष्ट्वा प्रत्यभिनन्द्य च ।
विमर्शं च पाणिभ्यां मुखे चन्द्रसमप्रभे ॥ ३८ ॥

Touching Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two scions of Kakutstha, and wishing them victory, Garuḍa, of beautiful wings, then wiped with his hands their faces which shone like the moon. (38)

वैनतेयेन संस्पृष्टास्तयोः संरुरुहूर्वणाः ।
सुवर्णे च तनू स्निग्धे तयोराशु बभूवतुः ॥ ३९ ॥

Duly touched by Garuḍa (son of Vinatā), their wounds got cicatrized and their bodies immediately turned bright and smooth. (39)

तेजो वीर्यं बलं चौज उत्साहश्च महागुणाः ।
प्रदर्शनं च बुद्धिश्च स्मृतिश्च द्विगुणा तयोः ॥ ४० ॥

Their majesty, prowess, strength and splendour as well as dash, perspicacity and intelligence as also memory got redoubled. (40)

तावुत्थाप्य महातेजा गरुडो वासवोपमौ ।
उभौ च सस्वजे हृष्टो रामश्चैनमुवाच ह ॥ ४१ ॥

Raising the two princes, who were the compeers of Indra (the ruler of gods), Garuḍa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, joyfully embraced them both; and Śrī Rāma, they say, spoke to him as follows: (41)

भवत्प्रसादाद् व्यसनं रावणिप्रभवं महत् ।
उपायेन व्यतिक्रान्तौ शीघ्रं च बलिनौ कृतौ ॥ ४२ ॥

“Thanks to your goodwill, we two have by recourse to a remedy passed over the great danger that proceeded from Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) and have also been quickly made strong again. (42)

यथा तातं दशरथं यथाजं च पितामहम् ।
तथा भवन्तमासाद्य हृदयं मे प्रसीदति ॥ ४३ ॥

“My heart rejoices to meet you in the same way as it would on meeting my father, Daśaratha, or my grandfather, Aja. (43)

को भवान् रूपसम्पन्नो दिव्यस्त्रगनुलेपनः ।
वसानो विरजे वस्त्रे दिव्याभरणभूषितः ॥ ४४ ॥

“By the way, who are you, richly endowed as you are with bodily charm, decked with celestial garlands and anointed with ethereal unguents, wearing a pair of garments free from dust and adorned with celestial jewels?” (44)

तमुवाच महातेजा वैनतेयो महाबलः ।
पतत्रिराजः प्रीतात्मा हर्षपर्याकुलेक्षणम् ॥ ४५ ॥

With a delighted mind Garuḍa (son of Vinatā), the king of birds, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and was full of great might, replied as follows to Śrī Rāma, whose eyes were wild with joy: (45)

अहं सखा ते काकुत्स्थ प्रियः प्राणो बहिश्वरः ।
गरुत्मानिह सम्प्राप्तो युवयोः साह्यकारणात् ॥ ४६ ॥

“I am Garuḍa, your beloved friend, nay, your very breath moving outside, arrived here for your help O scion of Kakutstha! (46)

असुरा वा महावीर्या दानवा वा महाबलाः ।
सुराश्चापि सगन्धर्वाः पुरस्कृत्य शतक्रतुम् ॥ ४७ ॥
नेमं मोक्षयितुं शक्ताः शरबन्धं सुदारुणम् ।
मायाबलादिन्द्रजिता निर्मितं क्रूरकर्मणा ॥ ४८ ॥

“Demons endowed with extraordinary prowess or giants possessed of great might, nay, even gods accompanied by Gandharvas, if they made their appearance here, placing Indra (who is presupposed to have performed a hundred sacrifices in his past life as a condition precedent for his attaining the position of Indra) at their head, would not have been able to undo these most formidable bonds wrought with arrows by Indrajit of ruthless deeds by dint of magic. (47-48)

एते नागाः काद्रवेयास्तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रा विषोल्बणाः ।
रक्षोमायाप्रभावेण शरभूतास्त्वदाश्रयाः ॥ ४९ ॥

“These snakes, which had fettered you, were no other than the sons of Kadrū with sharp fangs and full of poison, converted into arrows by dint of conjuring tricks employed by the ogre, Indrajit. (49)

सभाग्यश्चासि धर्मज्ञ राम सत्यपराक्रम ।
लक्ष्मणेन सह भ्रात्रा समरे रिपुघातिना ॥ ५० ॥

“Indeed you are lucky with your younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of his foes in combat, O Rāma of unfailing prowess, the knower of what is right! (50)

इमं श्रुत्वा तु वृत्तान्तं त्वरमाणोऽहमागतः ।
सहसैवावयोः स्नेहात् सखित्वमनुपालयन् ॥ ५१ ॥

“Hearing this news of your having been fettered by snakes, and vindicating the friendship existing between us two, I, for my part, have hastened to this place all at once out of affection for you. (51)

मोक्षितौ च महाघोरादस्मात् सायकबन्धनात् ।
अप्रमादश्च कर्तव्यो युवाभ्यां नित्यमेव हि ॥ ५२ ॥

“And you both have been liberated from this most formidable bond wrought with arrows. Nay, you should actually remain on your guard all the time. (52)

प्रकृत्या राक्षसाः सर्वे संग्रामे कूटयोधिनः ।
शूराणां शुद्धभावानां भवतामार्जवं बलम् ॥ ५३ ॥

“All ogres are by nature given to fighting treacherously on the field of battle; while guilelessness is the strength of you gallant souls with a pure mind. (53)

तन्न विश्वसनीयं वो राक्षसानां रणाजिरे ।
एतेनैवोपमानेन नित्यं जिह्वा हि राक्षसाः ॥ ५४ ॥

“On this very analogy you should never trust the ogres on the field of battle; for ogres are always crooked.” (54)

एवमुक्त्वा तदा रामं सुपर्णः स महाबलः ।
परिष्वज्य च सुस्निग्धमाप्रष्टुमुपचक्रमे ॥ ५५ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid and embraced Śrī Rāma most tenderly, the aforesaid Garuḍa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, proceeded to take leave of Śrī Rāma in the following words: (55)

सखे राघव धर्मज्ञ रिपूणामपि वत्सल।
अभ्यनुज्ञातुमिच्छामि गमिष्यामि यथासुखम् ॥ ५६ ॥

“I wish to take leave of you, my friend, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), a knower of what is right and fond even of your enemies! I shall now depart at ease. (56)

न च कौतूहलं कार्यं सखित्वं प्रति राघव।
कृतकर्मा रणे वीर सखित्वं प्रतिवेत्स्यसि ॥ ५७ ॥

“And you should not entertain any curiosity about our friendship, O scion of Raghu! On having accomplished your duty on the field of battle you will come to recognize our friendship, O gallant prince! (57)

बालवृद्धावशेषां तु लङ्कां कृत्वा शरोर्मिभिः।
रावणं तु रिपुं हत्वा सीतां त्वमुपलप्स्यसे ॥ ५८ ॥

“Having actually emptied Laṅkā of all its male population, except for its youngsters and the aged, with the volleys of your arrows having killed your enemy, Rāvaṇa, you will surely recover Sītā.” (58)

इत्येवमुक्त्वा वचनं सुपर्णः शीघ्रविक्रमः।
रामं च नीरुजं कृत्वा मध्ये तेषां वनौकसाम् ॥ ५९ ॥
प्रदक्षिणं ततः कृत्वा परिष्वज्य च वीर्यवान्।
जगामाकाशमाविश्य सुपर्णः पवनो यथा ॥ ६० ॥

Having made the aforesaid submission in the midst of those monkeys (lit., denizens of the forest), and rid Śrī Rāma of his pain, then walking clockwise round him as a mark of submission and embracing him, the valiant Garuḍa of beautiful wings and swift flight soared to the heavens with the speed of the wind. (59-60)

नीरुजौ राघवौ दृष्ट्वा ततो वानरयूथपाः।
सिंहनादं तदा नेदुर्लाङ्गलं दुधुवुश्च ते ॥ ६१ ॥

Seeing Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the two scions of Raghu, rid of anguish, the commanders of simian troops thereupon roared like lions at that time and lashed their tails. (61)

ततो भेरीः समाजघ्नुर्मृदङ्गांश्चाप्यवादयन्।
दध्मुः शङ्खान् सम्प्रहृष्टाः क्ष्वेलन्त्यपि यथापुरम् ॥ ६२ ॥

The monkeys then beat their kettle-drums and played upon their clay tomtoms, blew their conches in excessive joy and began to leap and jump as before. (62)

अपरे स्फोट्य विक्रान्ता वानरा नगयोधिनः।
द्रुमानुत्पाद्य विविधांस्तस्थुः शतसहस्रशः ॥ ६३ ॥

Uprooting trees of various species and brandishing them, other valiant monkeys, who fought with trees, stood ready to fight in hundreds of thousands. (63)

विसृजन्तो महानादांस्त्रासयन्तो निशाचरान्।
लङ्काद्वाराण्युपाजग्मुर्गोष्ठुकामाः प्लवंगमाः ॥ ६४ ॥

Emitting piercing cries and frightening the prowlers of the night, the bellicose monkeys reached the gates of Laṅkā. (64)

तेषां सुभीमस्तुमुलो निनादो
बभूव शाखामृगयूथपानाम्।
क्षये निदाघस्य यथा घनानां
नादः सुभीमो नदतां निशीथे ॥ ६५ ॥

An extremely appalling and tumultuous clamour arose amongst the aforesaid commanders of simian troops, which resembled the most terrible thundering of clouds rumbling at midnight at the end of summer. (65)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५० ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LI

Hearing the tumultuous noise of the monkeys, the servants of Rāvaṇa, detailed for the purpose, report to him how the two scions of Raghu were freed from the bondage of arrows. Depressed by this news, Rāvaṇa dispatches Dhūmrākṣa to dispose of Śrī Rāma. Though perturbed at the sight of evil portents, yet unwilling to retrace his steps on any account, Dhūmrākṣa surveys the army of the monkeys

तेषां तु तुमुलं शब्दं वानराणां महौजसाम्।
नर्दतां राक्षसैः सार्धं तदा शुश्राव रावणः ॥ १ ॥

Accompanied by ogres, Rāvaṇa for his part heard at that moment the tumultuous noise of those roaring monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary energy. (1)

स्निग्धगम्भीरनिर्घोषं श्रुत्वा तं निनदं भृशम्।
सचिवानां ततस्तेषां मध्ये वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Hearing that loud noise, producing a merry and deep sound, Rāvaṇa then spoke as follows in the midst of the aforesaid counsellors: (2)

यथासौ सम्प्रहृष्टानां वानराणामुपस्थितः।
बहूनां सुमहान् नादो मेघानामिव गर्जताम् ॥ ३ ॥
सुव्यक्तं महती प्रीतिरेतेषां नात्र संशयः।
तथाहि विपुलैर्नादैश्चक्षुभे लवणार्णवः ॥ ४ ॥

“From the way in which that very great uproar, resembling the thunder of rumbling clouds, has arisen from the innumerable overjoyed monkeys, it is sufficiently evident that their joy is great: there is no doubt about it. That is how the salt sea has been agitated by their mighty shouts. (3-4)

तौ तु बद्धौ शरैस्तीक्ष्णैर्भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ।
अयं च सुमहान् नादः शङ्कां जनयतीव मे ॥ ५ ॥

“While those two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, lie bound with sharp arrows, this tremendous outcry gives rise to a suspicion in my mind that the two brothers have been freed from their bondage.” (5)

एवं च वचनं चोक्त्वा मन्त्रिणो राक्षसेश्वरः।
उवाच नैर्ऋतांस्तत्र समीपपरिवर्तिनः ॥ ६ ॥

Having addressed the foregoing words to his counsellors, Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres) spoke as follows to the ogres standing near him on that spot: (6)

ज्ञायतां तूर्णमेतेषां सर्वेषां च वनौकसाम्।
शोककाले समुत्पन्ने हर्षकारणमुत्थितम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Let the cause of rejoicing that has sprung up for all these monkeys (lit., denizens of the woods) when an occasion for grief had already arisen, be speedily found out.” (7)

तथोक्तास्ते सुसम्भ्रान्ताः प्राकारमधिरुह्य च।
ददृशुः पालितां सेनां सुग्रीवेण महात्मना ॥ ८ ॥

Scaling the defensive wall, when commanded as above by Rāvaṇa, the ogres, who felt somewhat depressed, beheld the army protected by the high-souled Sugrīva. (8)

तौ च मुक्तौ सुघोरेण शरबन्धेन राघवौ।
समुत्थितौ महाभागौ विषेदुः सर्वराक्षसाः ॥ ९ ॥

Nay, all the ogres felt despondent on seeing those two highly fortunate scions of Raghu, viz., Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa fully active, freed, as they were, from their most formidable bondage wrought with arrows. (9)

संत्रस्तहृदयाः सर्वे प्राकारादवरुह्य ते।
विवर्णा राक्षसा घोरा राक्षसेन्द्रमुपस्थिताः ॥ १० ॥

Descending from the defensive wall, all those fierce ogres, who looked pale, greatly frightened as they were at heart, approached Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres. (10)

तदप्रियं दीनमुखा रावणस्य च राक्षसाः।
कृत्स्नं निवेदयामासुर्यथावद् वाक्यकोविदाः ॥ ११ ॥

Nay, with downcast mien the ogres, who were skilled in speech, faithfully communicated to Rāvaṇa the whole unpleasant tidings in the following words: (11)

यौ ताविन्द्रजिता युद्धे भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ।
निबद्धौ शरबन्धेन निष्प्रकम्पभुजौ कृतौ ॥ १२ ॥
विमुक्तौ शरबन्धेन दृश्येते तौ रणाजिरे।
पाशानिव गजौ छित्त्वा गजेन्द्रसमविक्रमौ ॥ १३ ॥

“Those two celebrated brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, who are powerful like two lordly elephants, nay, who had been tightly bound by Indrajit with bonds of arrows and whose arms had been pinioned (i.e. unshakeable), are seen on the field of battle, freed from their bonds of arrows like a pair of elephants that have snapped their fetters.” (12-13)

तच्छ्रुत्वा वचनं तेषां राक्षसेन्द्रो महाबलः।
चिन्ताशोकसमाक्रान्तो विवर्णवदनोऽभवत् ॥ १४ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid report of those ogres, Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres), who was endowed with extraordinary might, lost the colour of his face, overwhelmed as he was with anxiety and grief. (14)

घोरैर्दत्तवरैर्बद्धौ शरैराशीविषोपमैः।
अमोघैः सूर्यसंकाशैः प्रमथ्येन्द्रजिता युधि ॥ १५ ॥
तदस्त्रबन्धमासाद्य यदि मुक्तौ रिपू मम।
संशयस्थमिदं सर्वमनुपश्याम्यहं बलम् ॥ १६ ॥

He said to himself: “If my adversaries (Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa)—who had been tightly bound in combat by Indrajit with formidable and infallible arrows, which had been conferred on him as boons, which resembled serpents and shone brightly like the sun—have been liberated even or getting bound with missiles, I perceive my entire army in jeopardy. (15-16)

निष्फलाः खलु संवृत्ताः शराः पावकतेजसः।
आदत्तं यैस्तु संग्रामे रिपूणां जीवितं मम ॥ १७ ॥

“My darts, bright as fire, by which the life of my adversaries was unmistakably taken away in combat, have surely turned infructuous.” (17)

एवमुक्त्वा तु संक्रुद्धो निःश्वसन्नुरगो यथा।
अब्रवीद् राक्षसां मध्ये धूम्राक्षं नाम राक्षसम् ॥ १८ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid to himself and hissing like a serpent, infuriated as he was, Rāvaṇa commanded the ogre, Dhūmrākṣa by name, in the midst of other ogres as follows : (18)

बलेन महता युक्तो राक्षसां भीमविक्रम।
त्वं वधायाशु निर्याहि रामस्य सह वानरैः ॥ १९ ॥

“Sally you forth at once with a huge army of ogres for the destruction of Rāma with the monkeys, O ogre of redoubtable prowess !” (19)

एवमुक्तस्तु धूम्राक्षो राक्षसेन्द्रेण धीमता।
परिक्रम्य ततः शीघ्रं निर्जगाम नृपालयात् ॥ २० ॥

Walking round him when commanded as above by the crafty Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), Dhūmrākṣa for his part sallied forth without delay from that palace. (20)

अभिनिष्क्रम्य तद् द्वारं बलाध्यक्षमुवाच ह।
त्वरयस्व बलं शीघ्रं किं चिरेण युयुत्सतः ॥ २१ ॥

Issuing from the gate of that palace, he spoke as follows to the Commander-in-Chief of the army: “Mobilize the army speedily; what need is there for delay to a man courting war?” (21)

धूम्राक्षवचनं श्रुत्वा बलाध्यक्षो बलानुगः ।

बलमुद्योजयामास रावणस्याज्ञया भृशम् ॥ २२ ॥

Hearing the call of Dhūmrākṣa, the Commander-in-Chief, who was followed by a large contingent, quickly mobilized a battalion in obedience to the command of Rāvaṇa. (22)

ते बद्धघण्टा बलिनो घोररूपा निशाचराः ।

विनद्यमानाः संहृष्टा धूम्राक्षं पर्यवारयन् ॥ २३ ॥

Roaring exultantly, those mighty ogres of terrible aspect with girdles of bells fastened round their waist, ranged round Dhūmrākṣa. (23)

विविधायुधहस्ताश्च शूलमुद्गरपाणयः ।

गदाभिः पट्टिशैर्दण्डैरायसैर्मुसलैरपि ॥ २४ ॥

परिघैर्भिन्दिपालैश्च भल्लैः पाशैः परश्वधैः ।

निर्ययू राक्षसा घोरा नर्दन्तो जलदा यथा ॥ २५ ॥

Carrying weapons of every description such as pikes and mallets in their hands and armed with maces, sharp-edged spears, iron cudgels as well as with clubs, iron bars, Bhindipālas (a kind of sling for forcefully throwing stones), lances, nooses and axes, the redoubtable ogres sallied forth, thundering like clouds. (24-25)

रथैः कवचिनस्त्वन्ये ध्वजैश्च समलंकृतैः ।

सुवर्णजालविहितैः खरैश्च विविधाननैः ॥ २६ ॥

हयैः परमशीघ्रैश्च गजैश्चैव मदोत्कटैः ।

निर्ययुर्नैर्ऋतव्याघ्रा व्याघ्रा इव दुरासदाः ॥ २७ ॥

Clad in mail, other tigers among ogres issued forth, like tigers which are difficult to approach, in chariots magnificently dressed with flags and covered with a lattice-work of gold as well as on the back of donkeys with heads of every description as also exceedingly fleet horses and elephants maddened with ichor. (26-27)

वृकसिंहमुखैर्युक्तं खरैः कनकभूषितैः ।

आरुरोह रथं दिव्यं धूम्राक्षः खरनिःस्वनः ॥ २८ ॥

Dhūmrākṣa, whose voice resembled the braying of a donkey, mounted a wonderful chariot driven by donkeys with harness of gold and heads resembling those of a wolf and a lion. (28)

स निर्यातो महावीर्यो धूम्राक्षो राक्षसैर्वृतः ।

हसन् वै पश्चिमद्वाराद्धनूमान् यत्र तिष्ठति ॥ २९ ॥

Surrounded by ogres, the notorious Dhūmrākṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary prowess, actually set forth laughing through the western gate, where Hanumān had taken up his stand. (29)

रथप्रवरमास्थाय खरयुक्तं खरस्वनम् ।

प्रयान्तं तु महाघोरं राक्षसं भीमदर्शनम् ॥ ३० ॥

अन्तरिक्षगताः क्रूराः शकुनाः प्रत्यषेधयन् ।

रथशीर्षे महाभीमो गृध्रश्च निपपात ह ॥ ३१ ॥

Ferocious birds appearing in the air for their part deterred that exceedingly formidable ogre of terrible aspect, whose voice resembled the braying of a donkey, while he was sallying forth taking his seat in a highly excellent chariot driven by donkeys. Nay, an exceedingly terrible vulture alighted on the top of his chariot; so the tradition goes. (30-31)

ध्वजाग्रे ग्रथिताश्चैव निपेतुः कुणपाशनाः ।

रुधिराद्रौ महान् श्वेतः कबन्धः पतितो भुवि ॥ ३२ ॥

Birds feasting on dead bodies and interlocked with one another in combat also descended on the point of his standard. A huge headless lurid trunk, wet with blood, also fell on the ground before him. (32)

विस्वरं चोत्सृजन्नादान् धूम्राक्षस्य निपातितः ।

ववर्ष रुधिरं देवः संचचाल च मेदिनी ॥ ३३ ॥

The trunk hurled by someone in front of Dhūmrākṣa lay emitting cries discordantly. The rain-god poured down blood and the earth shook. (33)

प्रतिलोमं ववौ वायुर्निर्घातसमनिःस्वनः ।

तिमिरौघावृतास्तत्र दिशश्च न चकाशिरे ॥ ३४ ॥

The wind blew adversely with a thunder-like roar. And shrouded, as they were, with a mass of darkness, the quarters could not be discerned. (34)

स तूत्पातांस्ततो दृष्ट्वा राक्षसानां भयावहान् ।
प्रादुर्भूतान् सुघोरांश्च धूम्राक्षो व्यथितोऽभवत् ।
मुमुहू राक्षसाः सर्वे धूम्राक्षस्य पुरःसराः ॥ ३५ ॥

Dhūmrākṣa for his part felt perturbed at that time to behold most terrible portents, boding danger to the ogres, which had come to light before him. Nay, all the ogres marching in front of Dhūmrākṣa fainted. (35)

ततः सुभीमो बहुभिर्निशाचरै- र्वृतोऽभिनिष्क्रम्य रणोत्सुको बली ।
ददर्श तां राघवबाहुपालितां
महौघकल्पां बहु वानरीं चमूम् ॥ ३६ ॥

Sallying forth in front of his adversaries accompanied as he was by numerous ogres, the mighty and most redoubtable general, who was eager for a fight, beheld that army consisting of innumerable monkeys, nay, looking like the ocean at the time of universal dissolution and protected by the arms of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). (36)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LII

Dhūmrākṣa fights and is killed by Hanumān

धूम्राक्षं प्रेक्ष्य निर्यान्तं राक्षसं भीमविक्रमम् ।
विनेदुर्वानराः सर्वे प्रहृष्टा युद्धकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ १ ॥

Highly rejoiced, all the monkeys, who were itching for a combat, emitted loud cries on perceiving the ogre general, Dhūmrākṣa of terrible prowess, sallying forth. (1)

तेषां सुतुमुलं युद्धं संजज्ञे कपिरक्षसाम् ।
अन्योन्यं पादपैर्घोरैर्निघ्नतां शूलमुद्गरैः ॥ २ ॥

An exceedingly tumultuous conflict raged between those monkeys and the ogres, striking the other with formidable trees on one hand and pikes and clubs on the other. (2)

राक्षसैर्वानरा घोरा विनिकृताः समन्ततः ।
वानरै राक्षसाश्चापि द्रुमैर्भूमिसमीकृताः ॥ ३ ॥

The redoubtable monkeys were mowed down on all sides by the ogres and the ogres too were levelled to the ground by means of trees by the monkeys. (3)

राक्षसास्त्वभिसंकुद्धा वानरान् निशितैः शरैः ।
विव्यधुर्घोरसंकाशैः कङ्कपत्रैरजिह्वगैः ॥ ४ ॥

Highly enraged, the ogres for their part transfixed the monkeys with pointed arrows which were fearful to behold, were furnished with the plumes of a buzzard and flew straight to the target. (4)

ते गदाभिश्च भीमाभिः पट्टिशैः कूटमुद्गरैः ।
घोरैश्च परिवैश्चित्रैस्त्रिशूलैश्चापि संश्रितैः ॥ ५ ॥
विदार्यमाणा रक्षोभिर्वानरास्ते महाबलाः ।
अमर्षजनितोद्धर्षाश्चक्रुः कर्माण्यभीतवत् ॥ ६ ॥

Full of martial ardour born of indignation while being split asunder by the ogres with terrible maces, sharp-edged spears, iron and wooden mallets and formidable iron bars as well as with tridents of various kinds held in the hand, the aforesaid monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary might, accomplished deeds of valour as though they were intrepid. (5-6)

शरनिर्भिन्नगात्रास्ते शूलनिर्भिन्नदेहिनः ।
जगृहृस्ते द्रुमांस्तत्र शिलाश्च हरियूथपाः ॥ ७ ॥

Their limbs torn asunder with arrows and having their bodies split asunder with pikes, the aforesaid monkey generals seized hold of trees and rocks on the field of battle. (7)

ते भीमवेगा हरयो नर्दमानास्ततस्ततः ।
ममन्थू राक्षसान् वीरान् नामानि च बभाषिरे ॥ ८ ॥

Endowed, as they were, with terrific impetuosity, those monkeys crushed the valiant ogres here and there, roaring all the time and proclaimed their names. (8)

तद् बभूवाद्भुतं घोरं युद्धं वानररक्षसाम् ।
शिलाभिर्विविधाभिश्च बहुशाखैश्च पादपैः ॥ ९ ॥

That terrible conflict between the monkeys and the ogres, carried on with rocks of various kinds and trees consisting of numerous boughs, was wondrous indeed. (9)

राक्षसा मथिताः केचिद् वानरैर्जितकाशिभिः ।
प्रवेमू रुधिरं केचिन्मुखै रुधिरभोजनाः ॥ १० ॥

Some ogres were crushed by the monkeys, who had conquered fear; while other ogres, who fed on gore ejected blood from their mouths, being thrashed by monkeys. (10)

पार्श्वेषु दारिताः केचित् केचिद् राशीकृता द्रुमैः ।
शिलाभिश्चूर्णिताः केचित् केचिद् दन्तैर्विदारिताः ॥ ११ ॥

Some were torn in their sides, while others were reduced to pulp with trees. Still others were pulverized with rocks, while yet others were torn to pieces with teeth. (11)

ध्वजैर्विमथितैर्भग्नैः खड्गैश्च विनिपातितैः ।
रथैर्विध्वंसितैः केचिद् व्यथिता रजनीचराः ॥ १२ ॥

With their standards broken and crushed, swords struck down, and chariots smashed, some prowlers of the night felt agonized. (12)

गजेन्द्रैः पर्वताकारैः पर्वताग्रैर्वनौकसाम् ।
मथितैर्वाजिभिः कीर्णं सारोहैर्वसुधातलम् ॥ १३ ॥

The earth's surface was covered with lordly elephants looking like mountains and horses with their riders crushed with the summits of mountains hurled by the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods). (13)

वानरैर्भीमविक्रान्तैराप्लुत्योत्प्लुत्य वेगितैः ।
राक्षसाः करजैस्तीक्ष्णैर्मुखेषु विनिदारिताः ॥ १४ ॥

The ogres were lacerated in their faces with their nails by the monkeys of redoubtable prowess who were seized with impetuosity and bounded again and again. (14)

विषण्णवदना भूयो विप्रकीर्णशिरोरुहाः ।
मूढाः शोणितगन्धेन निपेतुर्धरणीतले ॥ १५ ॥

With downcast faces, and dishevelled hair and rendered unconscious by the smell of blood, they then dropped on the earth's surface. (15)

अन्ये तु परमक्रुद्धा राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ।
तलैरेवाभिधावन्ति वज्रस्पर्शसमैर्हरीन् ॥ १६ ॥

Extremely enraged, other ogres of terrible prowess for their part assailed the monkeys with their palms alone, whose impact was hard as adamant. (16)

वानरैः पातयन्तस्ते वेगिता वेगवत्तरैः ।
मुष्टिभिश्चरणैर्दन्तैः पादपैश्चावपोथिताः ॥ १७ ॥

Capable of felling down their adversaries when seized with impetuosity, they were crushed by the monkeys, who were full of greater impetuosity, with their fists, feet and teeth as well as with trees. (17)

सैन्यं तु विद्रुतं दृष्ट्वा धूम्राक्षो राक्षसर्षभः ।
रोषेण कदनं चक्रे वानराणां युयुत्सताम् ॥ १८ ॥

Seeing his army run away, Dhūmrākṣa, a bull among the ogres, for his part started playing havoc among the bellicose monkeys, in anger. (18)

प्रासैः प्रमथिताः केचिद् वानराः शोणितस्त्रवाः ।
मुद्गरैराहताः केचित् पतिता धरणीतले ॥ १९ ॥

Mutilated with lances, some monkeys began to spit blood; while, struck with wooden mallets, others fell on the earth's surface. (19)

परिघैर्मथिताः केचिद् भिन्दिपालैश्च दारिताः ।
पट्टिशैर्मथिताः केचिद् विह्वलन्तो गतासवः ॥ २० ॥

Some were pounded with iron bars, while others were torn with javelins. Staggering when mangled with sharp-edged spears, still others gave up the ghost. (20)

केचिद् विनिहता भूमौ रुधिरार्द्रा वनौकसः ।
केचिद् विद्राविता नष्टाः संक्रुद्धै राक्षसैर्युधि ॥ २१ ॥

Mowed down by the ogres, some monkeys (lit., denizens of the woods) dropped on the ground dripping with blood. Put to flight on the battlefield by the exasperated ogres, others made good their escape. (21)

विभिन्नहृदयाः केचिदेकपार्श्वेन शायिताः ।
विदारितास्त्रिशूलैश्च केचिदान्नैर्विनिःसृताः ॥ २२ ॥

Their hearts torn open, some were laid low on their side. Nay, slashed with tridents, others were divested of their entrails. (22)

तत् सुभीमं महद्युद्धं हरिराक्षससंकुलम् ।
प्रबभौ शस्त्रबहुलं शिलापादपसंकुलम् ॥ २३ ॥

That major conflict assumed most fearful proportions, in that monkeys and ogres promiscuously took part in it; nay, it abounded in weapons and was thick with rocks and trees. (23)

धनुर्ज्यातन्निमधुरं हिक्कातालसमन्वितम् ।
मन्दस्तनितगीतं तद् युद्धगान्धर्वमाबभौ ॥ २४ ॥

Rendered sweet by the sound of Vinas in the form of the twang of bowstrings, nay, accompanied by the sound of wooden cymbals in the form of the neighing of horses and vocal music in the form of the trumpeting of elephants, that conflict resembled a symphony. (24)

धूम्राक्षस्तु धनुष्याणिवानरान् रणमूर्धनि ।
हसन् विद्रावयामास दिशस्ताञ्छवृष्टिभिः ॥ २५ ॥

Bow in hand, Dhūmrākṣa for his part dispersed laughing the aforesaid monkeys in all directions with the showers of his arrows in the forefront of the battle. (25)

धूम्राक्षेणार्दितं सैन्यं व्यथितं प्रेक्ष्य मारुतिः ।
अभ्यवर्तत संक्रुद्धः प्रगृह्य विपुलां शिलाम् ॥ २६ ॥

Infuriated to behold his army perturbed when harassed by Dhūmrākṣa, Hanumān (son of the wind-god) turned towards the latter, seizing hold of a huge rock. (26)

क्रोधाद् द्विगुणताम्राक्षः पितुस्तुल्यपराक्रमः ।
शिलां तां पातयामास धूम्राक्षस्य रथं प्रति ॥ २७ ॥

His eyes having turned doubly red through anger, Hanumān (who was equal in prowess to his father) flung that rock at the chariot of Dhūmrākṣa. (27)

आपतन्तीं शिलां दृष्ट्वा गदामुद्यम्य सम्भ्रमात् ।
स्थादाप्लुत्य वेगेन वसुधायां व्यतिष्ठत ॥ २८ ॥

Leaping down from his chariot and lifting up his mace in a flurry on seeing the rock flying towards him, Dhūmrākṣa took up his position firmly on the ground. (28)

सा प्रमथ्य रथं तस्य निपपात शिला भुवि ।
सचक्रकूबरं साश्वं सध्वजं सशरासनम् ॥ २९ ॥

Smashing his chariot with its wheels, pole, horses, banner and bow, that rock rolled on the ground. (29)

स भङ्क्त्वा तु रथं तस्य हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
रक्षसां कदनं चक्रे सस्कन्धविटपैर्द्रुमैः ॥ ३० ॥

Having shattered his chariot, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, for his part started exterminating the ogres with trees, inclusive of their trunks and boughs. (30)

विभिन्नशिरसो भूत्वा राक्षसा रुधरोक्षिताः ।
द्रुमैः प्रमथिताश्चान्ये निपेतुर्धरणीतले ॥ ३१ ॥

Their heads smashed, the ogres were bathed in blood; while others, who were crushed by the trees, fell down to the earth's surface. (31)

विद्राव्य राक्षसं सैन्यं हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
गिरेः शिखरमादाय धूम्राक्षमभिदुद्रुवे ॥ ३२ ॥

Having dispersed the army of the ogres, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, rushed towards Dhūmrākṣa, seizing hold of the top of a mountain. (32)

तमापतन्तं धूम्राक्षो गदामुद्यम्य वीर्यवान् ।
विनर्दमानः सहसा हनूमन्तमभिद्रवत् ॥ ३३ ॥

Lifting up his mace on seeing Hanumān and rushing towards him, the powerful Dhūmrākṣa darted headlong towards him, roaring. (33)

तस्य क्रुद्धस्य रोषेण गदां तां बहुकण्टकाम् ।
पातयामास धूम्राक्षो मस्तकेऽथ हनूमतः ॥ ३४ ॥

Dhūmrākṣa in his rage forthwith brought down that mace, studded with numerous points, on the head of the celebrated

Hanumān, who was seized with fury. (34)

ताडितः स तया तत्र गदया भीमवेगया ।
स कपिर्मरुतबलस्तं प्रहारमचिन्तयन् ॥ ३५ ॥
धूम्राक्षस्य शिरोमध्ये गिरिशृङ्गमपातयत् ।
स विस्फारितसर्वाङ्गो गिरिशृङ्गेण ताडितः ॥ ३६ ॥
पपात सहसा भूमौ विकीर्ण इव पर्वतः ।
धूम्राक्षं निहतं दृष्ट्वा हतशेषा निशाचराः ।
त्रस्ताः प्रविविशुर्लङ्कां वध्यमानाः प्लवंगमैः ॥ ३७ ॥

Not minding in the least the aforesaid blow, when struck on the field of battle with that mace, which descended with tremendous violence, that celebrated monkey, who was mighty as the wind, flung the mountain-top on the skull of Dhūmrākṣa. With all his limbs shattered when struck with the mountain-top, the latter precipitately fell to the ground like a mountain that had broken into fragments. Seeing Dhūmrākṣa killed, the night-rangers, who had somehow survived, re-entered Lankā terrified, while being battered by the monkeys. (35—37)

स तु पवनसुतो निहत्य शत्रून्
क्षतजवहाः सरितश्च संविकीर्य ।
रिपुवधजनितश्रमो महात्मा
मुदमगमत् कपिभिः सुपूज्यमानः ॥ ३८ ॥

Having exterminated his enemies and causing streams of blood to flow, that high-souled son of the wind-god, who had been exhausted with the slaughter of enemies, experienced joy while being warmly acclaimed by the fellow monkeys. (38)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्विपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LIII

The monkeys' tough fight with the ogre Vajradamṣṭra dispatched by Rāvaṇa, who is provoked by the death of Dhūmrākṣa

धूम्राक्षं निहतं श्रुत्वा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
क्रोधेन महताऽऽविष्टो निःश्वसन्नुरगो यथा ॥ १ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, was filled with rage on hearing of Dhūmrākṣa having been killed, and stood hissing like a serpent. (1)

दीर्घमुष्णं विनिःश्वस्य क्रोधेन कलुषीकृतः ।
अब्रवीद् राक्षसं क्रूरं वज्रदंष्ट्रं महाबलम् ॥ २ ॥

Heaving a long and burning sigh, wrought up with anger as he was, he spoke as follows to the ferocious ogre, Vajradamṣṭra, who was endowed with extraordinary might: (2)

गच्छ त्वं वीर निर्याहि राक्षसैः परिवारितः ।
जहि दाशरथिं रामं सुग्रीवं वानरैः सह ॥ ३ ॥

“Proceed you, O champion! Sally forth, accompanied by other ogres and make short work of Rāma, son of Daśaratha, and Sugrīva, alongwith the monkeys.” (3)

तथेत्युक्त्वा द्रुततरं मायावी राक्षसेश्वरः ।
निर्जगाम बलैः सार्धं बहुभिः परिवारितः ॥ ४ ॥

Saying “Amen!”, the ogre chief, who was skilled in conjuring tricks, departed speedily with a number of troops and surrounded by many generals. (4)

नागैरश्वैः खरैरुष्ट्रैः संयुक्तः सुसमाहितः ।
पताकाध्वजचित्रैश्च बहुभिः समलंकृतः ॥ ५ ॥

He was accompanied by elephants, horses, donkeys and camels, was fully concentrated of mind and was rendered most charming by the presence of many generals distinguished by banners and pennons. (5)

ततो विचित्रकेयूरमुकुटेन विभूषितः ।
तनुत्रं स समावृत्य सधनुर्निर्ययौ द्रुतम् ॥ ६ ॥

Artistically decked with lovely armlets and a diadem, and donning a coat of mail, he then set out quickly with a bow in his hand. (6)

पताकालंकृतं दीप्तं तप्तकाञ्चनभूषितम् ।
रथं प्रदक्षिणं कृत्वा समारोहच्चमूपतिः ॥ ७ ॥

Walking clockwise round his brilliant chariot, dressed with pennants and decorated with pure gold, the general ascended it. (7)
ऋष्टिभिस्तोमरैश्चित्रैः श्लक्ष्णैश्च मुसलैरपि ।
भिन्दिपालैश्च चापैश्च शक्तिभिः पट्टिशैरपि ॥ ८ ॥
खड्गैश्चक्रैर्गदाभिश्च निशितैश्च परश्वधैः ।
पदातयश्च निर्यान्ति विविधाः शस्त्रपाणयः ॥ ९ ॥

Armed with double-edged swords, strange iron clubs, also polished mallets and slings as well as with bows, as also javelins and sharp-edged spears; swords, discuses and maces and sharp axes, foot soldiers of every description issued forth, weapons in hand. (8-9)

विचित्रवाससः सर्वे दीप्ता राक्षसपुङ्गवाः ।
गजा महोत्कटाः शूराश्चलन्त इव पर्वताः ॥ १० ॥

Clad in lovely raiment, all the bulls among the ogres looked splendid.
Intrepid elephants, forming part of the army of ogres, which were intoxicated with ichor and looked like moving hills also sallied forth. (10)

ते युद्धकुशला रूढास्तोमराङ्कुशपाणिभिः ।
अन्ये लक्षणसंयुक्ताः शूरारूढा महाबलाः ॥ ११ ॥

Mounted by mahouts carrying iron clubs and goads in their hands, they were skilled in warfare. Other animals, viz., horses, which were rich in noble characteristics and were mounted by gallant warriors and endowed with extraordinary might also took part in the conflict. (11)

तद् राक्षसबलं सर्वं विप्रस्थितमशोभत ।
प्रावृट्काले यथा मेघा नर्दमानाः सविद्युतः ॥ १२ ॥

Set out for a definite purpose, that entire army of ogres looked splendid like clouds thundering accompanied by flashes of lightning in the rainy season. (12)

निःसृता दक्षिणद्वारादङ्गदो यत्र यूथपः ।
तेषां निष्क्रममाणानामशुभं समजायत ॥ १३ ॥

The ogres issued forth through the southern gate at which the monkey general, Aṅgada, was stationed. Evil portents appeared even as they were filing out. (13)

आकाशाद् विघनात् तीव्रा उल्काश्चाभ्यपतन्तदा ।
वमन्तः पावकज्वालाः शिवा घोरा ववाशिरे ॥ १४ ॥

Dazzling meteors fell on all sides from the cloudless sky at that juncture. Nay, belching forth tongues of fire, fearful she-jackals howled. (14)

व्याहरन्त मृगा घोरा रक्षसां निधनं तदा ।
समापतन्तो योधास्तु प्रास्खलन्तस्त्र दारुणम् ॥ १५ ॥

Hideous beasts foretold the destruction of the ogres at that time; while the warriors stumbled miserably when pushing forward. (15)

एतानौत्पातिकान् दृष्ट्वा वज्रदंष्ट्रो महाबलः ।
धैर्यमालम्ब्य तेजस्वी निर्जगाम रणोत्सुकः ॥ १६ ॥

Taking recourse to firmness even on seeing these portentous phenomena, the heroic Vajradamṣṭra, who was endowed with extraordinary might, and was eager for fight, sallied forth. (16)

तांस्तु विद्रवतो दृष्ट्वा वानरा जितकाशिनः ।
प्रणेदुः सुमहानादान् दिशः शब्देन पूरयन् ॥ १७ ॥

Seeing them advancing rapidly, the monkeys, who had assumed a triumphant air, set up tremendous shouts and filled the quarters with their uproar. (17)

ततः प्रवृत्तं तुमुलं हरीणां राक्षसैः सह ।
घोराणां भीमरूपाणामन्योन्यवधकाङ्क्षिणाम् ॥ १८ ॥

Then followed a fierce encounter of the monkeys with the ogres, both of whom were formidable and fearful to look at and sought the destruction of the other party. (18)

निष्पतन्तो महोत्साहा भिन्नदेहशिरोधराः ।
रुधिरोक्षितसर्वाङ्गा न्यपतन् धरणीतले ॥ १९ ॥

Though rushing forward, full of martial ardour, they fell to the earth's surface, all their limbs bathed in blood, their trunks and necks being severed. (19)

केचिदन्योन्यमासाद्य शूराः परिघबाहवः ।
चिक्षिपुर्विविधान् शस्त्रान् समरेष्वनिवर्तिनः ॥ २० ॥

Approaching one another, some gallant warriors, whose arms resembled iron clubs, and who never turned their back on the field of battle, flung missiles of every kind on the adversary. (20)

द्रुमाणां च शिलानां च शस्त्राणां चापि निःस्वनः ।
श्रूयते सुमहांस्तत्र घोरो हृदयभेदनः ॥ २१ ॥

A very loud and fearful noise, which pierced the heart, produced by trees and rocks as well as by weapons used in the combat was heard on the field of battle. (21)

रथनेमिस्वनस्तत्र धनुषश्चापि घोरवत् ।
शङ्खभेरीमृदङ्गानां बभूव तुमुलः स्वनः ॥ २२ ॥

There followed on the battlefield the clatter of chariot wheels, the fearful twang of bows and the tumultuous noise of conches, kettledrums and clay tomtoms. (22)

केचिदस्त्राणि संत्यज्य बाहुयुद्धमकुर्वत ॥ २३ ॥
तलैश्च चरणैश्चापि मुष्टिभिश्च द्रुमैरपि ।

जानुभिश्च हताः केचिद् भग्नदेहाश्च राक्षसाः ।
शिलाभिश्चूर्णिताः केचिद् वानरैर्युद्धदुर्मदैः ॥ २४ ॥

Abandoning their weapons, some warriors began to wrestle with one another, and struck with palms as well as with feet and fists as also with trees and knees, some ogres had their bodies smashed; while others were crushed under rocks by monkeys maddened by fight. (23-24)

वज्रदंष्ट्रो भृशं बाणै रणे वित्रासयन् हरीन् ।
चचार लोकसंहारे पाशहस्त इवान्तकः ॥ २५ ॥

Repeatedly striking the monkeys by his arrows, causing consternation, Vajradanṣṭra rode the battlefield as Death would, noose in hand, for the destruction of the world. (25)

बलवन्तोऽस्त्रविदुषो नानाप्रहरणा रणे ।
जघ्नुर्वानरसैन्यानि राक्षसाः क्रोधमूर्च्छिताः ॥ २६ ॥

Distracted with anger, the mighty ogres, who knew the use of mystic missiles and were armed with weapons of every kind, destroyed the simian ranks in combat. (26)

जघ्ने तान् राक्षसान् सर्वान् धृष्टो बालिसुतो रणे ।
क्रोधेन द्विगुणाविष्टः संवर्तक इवानलः ॥ २७ ॥

Filled with redoubled anger, the fearless Aṅgada (son of Vāli) began to exterminate all the ogres on the battlefield like fire at the time of universal destruction. (27)

तान् राक्षसगणान् सर्वान् वृक्षमुद्यम्य वीर्यवान् ।
अङ्गदः क्रोधताम्राक्षः सिंहः क्षुद्रमृगानिव ॥ २८ ॥
चकार कदनं घोरं शक्रतुल्यपराक्रमः ।
अङ्गदाभिहतास्तत्र राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ॥ २९ ॥
विभिन्नशिरसः पेतुर्निकृत्ता इव पादपाः ।
रथैश्चित्रैर्ध्वजैरश्वैः शरीरैर्हरिरक्षसाम् ॥ ३० ॥
रुधिरौघेण संछन्ना भूमिर्भयकरी तदा ।
हारकेयूरवस्त्रैश्च शस्त्रैश्च समलंकृता ॥ ३१ ॥
भूमिर्भाति रणे तत्र शारदीव यथा निशा ।
अङ्गदस्य च वेगेन तद् राक्षसबलं महत् ।
प्राकम्प्यत तदा तत्र पवनेनाम्बुदो यथा ॥ ३२ ॥

Lifting up a tree, his eyes red with anger, the valiant Aṅgada, the equal of Indra, the ruler of gods, in prowess, began to play havoc with all those hordes of ogres even as a lion would with the smaller beasts. Struck down by Aṅgada on the field of battle, the ogres of terrible prowess fell like trees that have been cut down, their skulls smashed. Covered all over with chariots, picturesque ensigns, horses, the bodies of monkeys and ogres, as also with a stream of blood the earth looked fearful at that time. Fully decorated with necklaces, armlets and raiment as well as with weapons, the earth on the site of that conflict glowed like an autumnal night. Nay, under the impetuosity of Aṅgada, that huge army of the ogres violently shook on that occasion at that spot even as a cloud would under the pressure of the wind. (28—32)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रिपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुःपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LIV

An encounter between Vajradamṣṭra and Aṅgada, who kills the former

स्वबलस्य च घातेन अङ्गदस्य बलेन च ।
राक्षसः क्रोधमाविष्टो वज्रदंष्ट्रो महाबलः ॥ १ ॥

The ogre Vajradamṣṭra, who was endowed with extraordinary might, gave way to anger at the destruction of his army and the display of might on the part of Aṅgada. (1)

विस्फार्य च धनुर्घोरं शक्राशनिसमप्रभम् ।
वानराणामनीकानि प्राकिरच्छरवृष्टिभिः ॥ २ ॥

Nay, stretching his formidable bow, which cast its splendour like the thunderbolt of Indra, the ruler of gods, he assailed the simian ranks with showers of shafts. (2)

राक्षसाश्चापि मुख्यास्ते रथेषु समवस्थिताः ।
नानाप्रहरणाः शूराः प्रायुध्यन्त तदा रणे ॥ ३ ॥

Firmly seated in chariots and armed with weapons of every kind, the other well-known and valiant principal ogres too fought steadily at that juncture on the field of battle. (3)

वानराणां च शूरास्तु ते सर्वे प्लवगर्षभाः ।
अयुध्यन्त शिलाहस्ताः समवेताः समन्ततः ॥ ४ ॥

Gathered together on all sides, all the foremost of monkeys for their part, those who were gallant among them contended, rocks in hand. (4)

तत्रायुधसहस्राणि तस्मिन्नायोधने भृशम् ।
राक्षसाः कपिमुख्येषु पातयांचक्रिरे तदा ॥ ५ ॥

In that famous battle the ogres repeatedly hurled on the foremost of monkeys thousands of missiles at that time. (5)

वानराश्चैव रक्षःसु गिरिवृक्षान् महाशिलाः ।
प्रवीराः पातयामासुर्मत्तवारणसंनिभाः ॥ ६ ॥

Nay, the most heroic monkeys too, who closely resembled elephants in rut, showered down hillocks and trees as well as huge rocks on the ogres. (6)

शूराणां युध्यमानानां समरेष्वनिवर्तिनाम् ।
तद् राक्षसगणानां च सुयुद्धं समवर्तत ॥ ७ ॥

A furious struggle raged between the belligerent troops of monkeys and ogres, who were all valiant and never retreated in battle. (7)

प्रभिन्नशिरसः केचिच्छिन्नैः पादैश्च बाहुभिः ।
शस्त्रैरर्दितदेहास्तु रुधिरेण समुक्षिताः ॥ ८ ॥

Some had their heads severed, while others were seen with their arms and feet lopped off. Still others, whose bodies were mangled with weapons, were bathed in blood.
(8)

हरयो राक्षसाश्चैव शेरते गां समाश्रिताः ।
कङ्कगृध्रबलाढ्याश्च गोमायुकुलसंकुलाः ॥ ९ ॥

Monkeys and ogres too lay stretched on the ground, a prey to buzzards, vultures and crows and surrounded by troops of jackals. (9)

कबन्धानि समुत्पेतुर्भीरूणां भीषणानि वै ।
भुजपाणिशिरश्छिन्नाश्छिन्नकायाश्च भूतले ॥ १० ॥

Headless trunks leapt up, actually causing fear to the pusillanimous. Ogres whose arms, hands and heads had been severed and those whose trunks had been hacked to pieces lay on the earth's surface.
(10)

वानरा राक्षसाश्चापि निपेतुस्तत्र भूतले ।
ततो वानरसैन्येन हन्यमानं निशाचरम् ॥ ११ ॥

प्राभज्यत बलं सर्वं वज्रदंष्ट्रस्य पश्यतः ।
राक्षसान् भयवित्रस्तान् हन्यमानान् प्लवंगमैः ॥ १२ ॥

दृष्ट्वा स रोषताम्राक्षो वज्रदंष्ट्रः प्रतापवान्।
 प्रविवेश धनुष्याणिस्त्रासयन् हरिवाहिनीम्॥ १३॥
 शरैर्विदारयामास कङ्कपत्रैरजिह्वगैः।
 बिभेद वानरांस्तत्र समाप्यौ नव पञ्च च॥ १४॥
 विव्याध परमक्रुद्धो वज्रदंष्ट्रः प्रतापवान्।
 त्रस्ताः सर्वे हरिगणाः शरैः संकृत्तदेहिनः।
 अङ्गदं सम्प्रधावन्ति प्रजापतिमिव प्रजाः॥ १५॥

Monkeys and ogres too fell on the earth's surface on the field of battle. Being struck by the simian army, the entire army of ogres broke, while Vajradamṣṭra stood gazing. Seeing the ogres sore stricken with fear while being struck by monkeys, the glorious Vajradamṣṭra penetrated the army of monkeys, bow in hand, terrifying them, his eyes red with anger, and tore them with his arrows furnished with the plumes of a buzzard, which flew straight to the target. He pierced on the battlefield as many as seven, eight, nine or five monkeys together. Extremely enraged, the glorious Vajradamṣṭra thus pierced the monkeys. Struck with terror the monkeys, with their bodies hacked to pieces by arrows, flew for protection to Aṅgada even as created beings fly for protection to Brahmā (the lord of creation). (11—15)

ततो हरिगणान् भग्नान् दृष्ट्वा वालिसुतस्तदा।
 क्रोधेन वज्रदंष्ट्रं तमुदीक्षन्तमुदैक्षत॥ १६॥

Seeing the simian troops broken at that moment, Aṅgada (the son of Vāli) thereupon regarded the aforesaid Vajradamṣṭra, who was gazing on him with anger at that time. (16)

वज्रदंष्ट्रोऽङ्गदश्चोभौ योयुध्येते परस्परम्।
 चेरतुः परमक्रुद्धौ हरिमत्तगजाविव॥ १७॥

Vajradamṣṭra and Aṅgada both fought with each other and, extremely enraged, strode on the battle-field like a lion and an elephant intoxicated with ichor. (17)

ततः शतसहस्रेण हरिपुत्रं महाबलम्।
 जघान मर्मदेशेषु शरैरग्निशिखोपमैः॥ १८॥

Then Vajradamṣṭra hit Aṅgada (the son of Vāli), who was endowed with extraordinary might, in his vital parts with a hundred thousand arrows resembling tongues of fire. (18)

रुधिरोक्षितसर्वाङ्गो वालिसूनुर्महाबलः।
 चिक्षेप वज्रदंष्ट्राय वृक्षं भीमपराक्रमः॥ १९॥

Bathed in blood all over his limbs, Aṅgada (son of Vāli), who was endowed with terrific prowess and extraordinary might, hurled a tree at Vajradamṣṭra. (19)

दृष्ट्वा पतन्तं तं वृक्षमसम्भ्रान्तश्च राक्षसः।
 चिच्छेद बहुधा सोऽपि मथितः प्रापतद् भुवि॥ २०॥

Seeing it flying towards him, the ogre, who did not feel perplexed in the least, tore it into numerous pieces and having torn it into pieces, the latter too fell on the earth. (20)

तं दृष्ट्वा वज्रदंष्ट्रस्य विक्रमं प्लवगर्षभः।
 प्रगृह्य विपुलं शैलं चिक्षेप च ननाद च॥ २१॥

Breaking off a huge crag on seeing the prowess of Vajradamṣṭra referred to above, Aṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, hurled it at him and also thundered. (21)

तमापतन्तं दृष्ट्वा स रथादाप्लुत्य वीर्यवान्।
 गदापाणिरसम्भ्रान्तः पृथिव्यां समतिष्ठत॥ २२॥

Leaping down from his chariot on seeing it flying towards him, the valiant ogre, who did not feel perplexed at all, stood firmly on the ground, mace in hand. (22)

अङ्गदेन शिला क्षिप्ता गत्वा तु रणमूर्धनि।
 सचक्रकूबरं साश्वं प्रममाथ रथं तदा॥ २३॥

Flying in the forefront of the battle, the crag discharged by Aṅgada for its part forthwith shattered the chariot with its wheels, pole and horses. (23)

ततोऽन्यच्छिखरं गृह्य विपुलं द्रुमभूषितम्।
 वज्रदंष्ट्रस्य शिरसि पातयामास वानरः॥ २४॥

Seizing another huge crag adorned with trees, the monkey, Aṅgada, then hurled it on the head of Vajradamṣṭra. (24)

अभवच्छ्रेणितोद्गारी वज्रदंष्ट्रः समूर्च्छितः ।

मुहूर्तमभवन्मूढो गदामालिङ्ग्य निःश्वसन् ॥ २५ ॥

Vomiting blood, Vajradamṣṭra became fully unconscious. Claspings the mace to his bosom, and breathing heavily, he remained unconscious for a while. (25)

स लब्धसंज्ञो गदया वालिपुत्रमवस्थितम् ।

जघान परमक्रुद्धो वक्षोदेशे निशाचरः ॥ २६ ॥

Feeling extremely enraged on regaining his senses, the said ogre hit Aṅgada (the son of Vāli), who stood firmly, on the chest with his mace. (26)

गदां त्यक्त्वा ततस्तत्र मुष्टियुद्धमकुर्वत ।

अन्योन्यं जघ्नतुस्तत्र तावुभौ हरिराक्षसौ ॥ २७ ॥

Leaving the mace, the ogre then began to fight on that spot with his fists. Both the aforesaid monkey and the ogre began to strike each other with their fists. (27)

रुधिरौद्गारिणौ तौ तु प्रहारैर्जनितश्रमौ ।

बभूवतुः सुविक्रान्तावङ्गारकबुधाविव ॥ २८ ॥

Exhausted by the blows, the two warriors, for their part, who were exceedingly valiant like the deities presiding over the planets Mars and Mercury, began to spit out blood. (28)

ततः परमतेजस्वी अङ्गदः प्लवगर्षभः ।

उत्पाट्य वृक्षं स्थितवानासीत् पुष्पफलैर्युतः ॥ २९ ॥

Uprooting a tree, Aṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, who was supremely energetic, remained standing, adorned with flowers and fruit borne on the tree, which he held in his hand. (29)

जग्राह चार्षभं चर्म खड्गं च विपुलं शुभम् ।

किङ्किणीजालसंछन्नं चर्मणा च परिष्कृतम् ॥ ३० ॥

The ogre too seized hold of a shield made of the hide of a bull and a huge brilliant sword decorated with a bunch of tiny bells and encased in leather sheath. (30)

चित्रांश्च रुचिरान् मार्गाश्चेरतुः कपिराक्षसौ ।

जघ्नतुश्च तदान्योन्यं नर्दन्तौ जयकांक्षिणौ ॥ ३१ ॥

The monkey as well as the ogre began to wheel about in various graceful evolutions. Nay, they struck each other roaring and thirsting for victory. (31)

व्रणैः सास्त्रैरशोभेतां पुष्पिताविव किंशुकौ ।

युध्यमानौ परिश्रान्तौ जानुभ्यामवनीं गतौ ॥ ३२ ॥

With their wounds streaming with blood, they looked charming like a pair of Kiṁśuka trees in blossom. While contending, they felt exhausted and sank on their knees to the earth. (32)

निमेषान्तरमात्रेण अङ्गदः कपिकुञ्जरः ।

उदतिष्ठत दीप्ताक्षो दण्डाहत इवोरगः ॥ ३३ ॥

In the mere twinkling of an eye, Aṅgada, an elephant among the monkeys, rose up, his eyes inflamed through anger, like a serpent struck with a staff. (33)

निर्मलेन सुधौतेन खड्गेनास्य महच्छिरः ।

जघान वज्रदंष्ट्रस्य वालिसूनुर्महाबलः ॥ ३४ ॥

With his stainless sword that had been duly sharpened, Aṅgada (the son of Vāli) who was endowed with extraordinary might, lopped off the huge head of the aforesaid Vajradamṣṭra. (34)

रुधिरौक्षितगात्रस्य बभूव पतितं द्विधा ।

तच्च तस्य परीताक्षं शुभं खड्गहतं शिरः ॥ ३५ ॥

Nay, struck off with the sword of Aṅgada, that beautiful head of Vajradamṣṭra, whose limbs were bathed in blood, with its eyes rolling, was cleft in two when fallen on the ground. (35)

वज्रदंष्ट्रं हतं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसा भयमोहिताः ।

त्रस्ता ह्यभ्यद्रवँल्लङ्कां वध्यमानाः प्लवङ्गमैः ।

विषण्णवदना दीना ह्रिया किञ्चिदवाङ्मुखाः ॥ ३६ ॥

Wild with fear and panic-stricken, the ogres who were still being struck by the monkeys, fled in the direction of Laṅkā on seeing Vajradamṣṭra killed, their faces woe-begone and heads hung a bit in shame, miserable as they were. (36)

निहत्य तं वज्रधरः प्रतापवान्

स वालिसूनुः कपिसैन्यमध्ये ।

जगाम हर्षं महितो महाबलः

सहस्रनेत्रस्त्रिदशैरिवावृतः

॥ ३७ ॥

Honoured in the midst of the simian ranks, Aṅgada, son of Vāli, who was glorious like Indra (the wielder of the thunderbolt) and was endowed with extraordinary might, experienced joy on having struck down Vajradamṣṭra even as Indra, the thousand-eyed god, surrounded by gods. (37)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुःपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LV

Akampana and other ogres appear on the field of battle under orders of Rāvaṇa and wage a deadly conflict with the monkeys

वज्रदंष्ट्रं हतं श्रुत्वा वालिपुत्रेण रावणः ।
बलाध्यक्षमुवाचेदं कृताञ्जलिमुपस्थितम् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing of Vajradamṣṭra having been killed by Aṅgada (son of Vāli), Rāvaṇa spoke as follows to the Commander-in-Chief of his army, who stood near him with folded hands: (1)

शीघ्रं निर्यान्तुदुर्धर्षा राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ।
अकम्पनं पुरस्कृत्य सर्वशस्त्रास्त्रकोविदम् ॥ २ ॥

“Placing at their head Akampana, who was conversant with the use of all weapons and missiles, ogres of terrible prowess, who are difficult to overpower, should speedily go forth. (2)

एष शास्ता च गोप्ता च नेता च युधि सत्तमः ।
भूतिकामश्च मे नित्यं नित्यं च समरप्रियः ॥ ३ ॥

“He is a tamer of foes, nay, the protector of his own people and a commander of his forces on the field of battle. He is the foremost of warriors, nay, ever desirous of my welfare and ever fond of war. (3)

एष जेष्यति काकुत्स्थौ सुग्रीवं च महाबलम् ।
वानरांश्चापरान् घोरान् हनिष्यति न संशयः ॥ ४ ॥

“This ogre, Akampana, will conquer Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa (the two scions of Kakutstha) as well as Sugrīva, and is endowed with extraordinary might, and will exterminate the other formidable monkeys too, there is no doubt about it.” (4)

परिगृह्य स तामाज्ञां रावणस्य महाबलः ।
बलं सम्प्रेरयामास तदा लघुपराक्रमः ॥ ५ ॥

Accepting the aforesaid command of Rāvaṇa, the Commander-in-Chief of quick prowess, endowed as he was with extraordinary might, duly dispatched his army to fight with the monkeys. (5)

ततो नानाप्रहरणा भीमाक्षा भीमदर्शनाः ।
निष्पेतू राक्षसा मुख्या बलाध्यक्षप्रचोदिताः ॥ ६ ॥

Urged by the Commander-in-Chief, the principal ogres of fearful eyes and hideous aspect then rushed forward, armed with various weapons. (6)

रथमास्थाय विपुलं तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणम् ।
मेघाभो मेघवर्णश्च मेघस्वनमहास्वनः ॥ ७ ॥
राक्षसैः संवृतो घोरैस्तदा निर्यात्यकम्पनः ।
नहि कम्पयितुं शक्यः सुरैरपि महामृधे ॥ ८ ॥

Mounting his huge chariot, which was decked with jewels and pure gold, Akampana, who had the colour of a cloud and resembled a cloud in size, and whose loud voice resembled thunder, then sallied forth, surrounded by dreadful ogres. He could not be shaken in a major conflict by gods. (7-8)

अकम्पनस्ततस्तेषामादित्य इव तेजसा ।
तस्य निर्धावमानस्य संरब्धस्य युयुत्सया ॥ ९ ॥
अकस्माद् दैन्यमागच्छद्भयानां रथवाहिनाम् ।
व्यस्फुरन्नयनं चास्य सव्यं युद्धाभिनन्दिनः ॥ १० ॥

Hence he was known as Akampana and resembled the sun in brilliance among the ogres. Even as he was sallying forth excited with intent to give fight, the mind of the horses drawing his chariot experienced depression all of a sudden. Nay, his left eye twitched even though he delighted in war. (9-10)

विवर्णो मुखवर्णश्च गद्गदश्चाभवत् स्वनः ।
अभवत् सुदिने काले दुर्दिनं रूक्षमारुतम् ॥ ११ ॥

The lustre of his countenance grew faint and his voice got choked. At a time which was marked by fine weather, the day became cloudy and marred by a rough wind. (11)

ऊचुः खगमृगाः सर्वे वाचः क्रूरा भयावहाः ।
स सिंहोपचितस्कन्धः शार्दूलसमविक्रमः ॥ १२ ॥
तानुत्पातानचिन्त्यैव निर्जगाम रणाजिरम् ।
तथा निर्गच्छतस्तस्य रक्षसः सह राक्षसैः ॥ १३ ॥
बभूव सुमहान् नादः क्षोभयन्निव सागरम् ।
तेन शब्देन वित्रस्ता वानराणां महाचमूः ॥ १४ ॥

All the birds and beasts uttered unkind and fearful cries. Not minding those evil portents, the ogre, whose shoulders were fully developed like those of a lion, and who equalled a tiger in prowess, sallied forth to the battlefield. Even as the aforesaid ogre was issuing forth with other ogres, an immense tumult arose, convulsing the sea, as it were. The huge army of the monkeys was frightened by that clamour. (12—14)

द्रुमशैलप्रहाराणां योद्धुं समुपतिष्ठताम् ।
तेषां युद्धं महारौद्रं संजज्ञे कपिरक्षसाम् ॥ १५ ॥
रामरावणयोरर्थे समभित्यक्तदेहिनः ।
सर्वे ह्यतिबलाः शूराः सर्वे पर्वतसंनिभाः ॥ १६ ॥
हरयो राक्षसाश्चैव परस्परजिघांसया ।
तेषां विनर्दतां शब्दः संयुगोऽतितरस्विनाम् ॥ १७ ॥
शुश्रुवे सुमहान् कोपादन्योन्यमभिगर्जताम् ।
रजश्चारुणवर्णाभं सुभीममभवद् भृशम् ॥ १८ ॥
उद्धृतं हरिरक्षोभिः संरुरोध दिशो दश ।
अन्योन्यं रजसा तेन कौशेयोद्धतपाण्डुना ॥ १९ ॥
संवृतानि च भूतानि ददृशुर्न रणाजिरे ।
न ध्वजो न पताका वा चर्म वा तुरगोऽपि वा ॥ २० ॥
आयुधं स्यन्दनो वापि ददृशे तेन रेणुना ।
शब्दश्च सुमहांस्तेषां नर्दतामभिधावताम् ॥ २१ ॥
श्रूयते तुमुलो युद्धे न रूपाणि चकाशिरे ।
हरीनेव सुसंरुष्टा हरयो जघ्नुराहवे ॥ २२ ॥
राक्षसा राक्षसांश्चापि निजघ्नुस्तिमिरे तदा ।
ते परांश्च विनिघ्नन्तः स्वांश्च वानरराक्षसाः ॥ २३ ॥
रुधिरार्द्रां तदा चक्रुर्महीं पङ्कानुलेपनाम् ।
ततस्तु रुधिरौघेण सिक्तं ह्यपगतं रजः ॥ २४ ॥
शरीरशवसंकीर्णा बभूव च वसुंधरा ।
द्रुमशक्तिगदाप्रासैः शिलापरिघतोमरैः ॥ २५ ॥
राक्षसा हरयस्तूर्णं जघ्नुरन्योन्यमोजसा ।
बाहुभिः परिघाकारैर्युध्यन्तः पर्वतोपमान् ॥ २६ ॥
हरयो भीमकर्माणो राक्षसाञ्जघ्नुराहवे ।
राक्षसास्त्वभिसंकुब्धाः प्रासतोमरपाणयः ॥ २७ ॥
कपीन् निजघ्निरे तत्र शस्त्रैः परमदारुणैः ।
अकम्पनः सुसंकुब्धो राक्षसानां चमूपतिः ॥ २८ ॥
संहर्षयति तान् सर्वान् राक्षसान् भीमविक्रमान् ।
हरयस्त्वपि रक्षांसि महाद्रुममहाशमभिः ॥ २९ ॥
विदारयन्त्यभिक्रम्य शस्त्राण्याच्छिद्य वीर्यतः ।
एतस्मिन्नन्तरे वीरा हरयः कुमुदो नलः ॥ ३० ॥

मैन्दश्च द्विविदः क्रुद्धाश्चक्रुर्वेगमनुत्तमम् ।
 ते तु वृक्षैर्महावीरा राक्षसानां चमूमुखे ॥ ३१ ॥
 कदनं सुमहच्चक्रुर्लीलया हरिपुंगवाः ।
 ममन्थू राक्षसान् सर्वे नानाप्रहरणैर्भृशम् ॥ ३२ ॥

An exceedingly fearful struggle ensued between those monkeys and ogres, who were getting ready to fight by dealing blows with trees and rocks and who had dedicated their souls to the cause of Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, respectively. All the monkeys as well as the ogres were indeed endowed with exceeding might and valour and all closely resembled hills in size. The tremendous noise of the aforesaid warriors of exceeding impetuosity even as they thundered with intent to kill each one of his adversary, and bawled at one another, could be distinctly heard on the battlefield. Nay, there rose again and again an exceedingly terrible cloud of smoky dust raised by monkeys and ogres, and enveloped all the ten directions. Nay, the combatants could no longer discern the living beings on the battlefield, covered as they were by the dust raised by one another, which was whitish like a piece of silk shaken by the wind. Neither standard nor pennant, nor shield nor even horse, nor weapon, nor even chariot could be seen due to that dust. Although the terrific and tumultuous clamour of warriors roaring and rushing against one another was heard on the field of battle, no forms were visible. In the darkness on that occasion the monkeys, when extremely enraged, struck the monkeys themselves on the battle-field, while the ogres too killed the ogres. Exterminating the foes and friends too, the monkeys and ogres drenched the earth with blood on that occasion and covered it over with mud. Moistened with blood, the dust for its part now virtually settled and the earth was covered with dead bodies. The ogres and monkeys vigorously and rapidly struck each other with trees, javelins, maces and darts, rocks, iron bars and iron clubs. Contending with their arms resembling iron bars, the monkeys of terrible deeds assailed the ogres, who looked like mountains, on the field of battle. Highly enraged, the ogres on the other hand, who bore darts and iron clubs in their hands exterminated the monkeys with their most formidable weapons on the field of battle. Highly enraged, Akampana, the commander of the army of ogres, cheered all those ogres of terrible prowess. Assailing the ogres and snatching their weapons by dint of valour, the monkeys too mangled them with gigantic trees and huge rocks. In the meantime, filled with rage, the valiant monkeys, Kumuda, Nala, Mainda and Dwivida displayed unsurpassed impetuosity. All the aforesaid bulls among monkeys, for their part, who were exceedingly valiant, brought about in sport the terrible carnage of the ogres by means of trees in the van of the latter's army, and repeatedly crushed the ogres with weapons of every kind. (15—32)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्पञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LVI

Hanumān kills Akampana

तद् दृष्ट्वा सुमहत् कर्म कृतं वानरसत्तमैः ।
क्रोधमाहारयामास युधि तीव्रमकम्पनः ॥ १ ॥

Witnessing that very great exploit executed by the foremost of monkeys, Akampana exhibited violent rage on the field of battle. (1)

क्रोधमूर्च्छितरूपस्तु धुन्वन् परमकार्मुकम् ।
दृष्ट्वा तु कर्म शत्रूणां सारथिं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Assuming an air wild with anger, nay, brandishing his excellent bow, on witnessing the exploit of his enemies, Akampana for his part spoke as follows to his charioteer:
(2)

तत्रैव तावत् त्वरितो रथं प्रापय सारथे ।
एते च बलिनो घ्नन्ति सुबहून् राक्षसान् रणे ॥ ३ ॥

“Drive my chariot first of all, O charioteer, to that place alone, inasmuch as these mighty monkeys are exterminating very many ogres in combat. (3)

एते च बलवन्तो वा भीमकोपाश्च वानराः ।
द्रुमशैलप्रहरणास्तिष्ठन्ति प्रमुखे मम ॥ ४ ॥

“The yonder monkeys are mighty, as also terrible in their wrath, too. Nay, using trees and crags for their weapons, they stand right in front of me. (4)

एतान् निहन्तुमिच्छामि समरश्लाघिनो ह्यहम् ।
एतैः प्रमथितं सर्वं राक्षसां दृश्यते बलम् ॥ ५ ॥

“I really wish to exterminate these monkeys, who boast of their warfare. The entire army of ogres is seen completely crushed by them.” (5)

ततः प्रचलिताश्चेन रथेन रथिनां वरः ।
हरीनभ्यपतद् दूराच्छरजालैरकम्पनः ॥ ६ ॥

Mounted on his chariot drawn by fast-moving horses, Akampana, the foremost of car-warriors, then assailed the monkeys with showers of arrows from a distance. (6)

न स्थातुं वानराः शेकुः किं पुनर्योद्धुमाहवे ।
अकम्पनशरैर्भग्नाः सर्व एवाभिदुद्रुवुः ॥ ७ ॥

The monkeys could not even maintain their position, much less fight on the field of battle. Broken by the darts of Akampana, all took to their heels before him without exception. (7)

तान् मृत्युवशमापन्नानकम्पनशरानुगान् ।
समीक्ष्य हनुमाज्जातीनुपतस्थे महाबलः ॥ ८ ॥

Observing his kith and kin fallen under the sway of Death when pursued by Akampana's shafts, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might approached Akampana. (8)

तं महाप्लवगं दृष्ट्वा सर्वे ते प्लवगर्षभाः ।
समेत्य समरे वीराः संहृष्टाः पर्यवारयन् ॥ ९ ॥

Getting together once more on the field of battle on seeing that mighty monkey, all those gallant leaders of monkeys (Kumuda, Nala and others) surrounded him on all sides, fully delighted. (9)

व्यवस्थितं हनूमन्तं ते दृष्ट्वा प्लवगर्षभाः ।
बभूवुर्बलवन्तो हि बलवन्तमुपाश्रिताः ॥ १० ॥

Seeing Hanumān firmly established on the battlefield, those aforesaid jewels among monkeys, became strong again, having taken shelter under a powerful leader.
(10)

अकम्पनस्तु शैलाभं हनूमन्तमवस्थितम् ।
महेन्द्र इव धाराभिः शरैरभिववर्ष ह ॥ ११ ॥

Akampana for his part assailed with a hail of arrows Hanumān, who looked like a mountain, even as the mighty Indra would with torrents of rain, and stood firm all the while: so the tradition goes. (11)

अचिन्तयित्वा बाणौघाञ्छरीरे पातितान् कपिः ।
अकम्पनवधार्थाय मनो दध्ने महाबलः ॥ १२ ॥

Not minding the volleys of arrows discharged on his body, the monkey, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might, set his mind on the destruction of Akampana. (12)

स प्रहस्य महातेजा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
अभिदुद्राव तद्रक्षः कम्पयन्निव मेदिनीम् ॥ १३ ॥

Laughing heartily the exceedingly courageous Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, rushed towards that ogre, causing the earth to shake, as it were. (13)

तस्याथ नर्दमानस्य दीप्यमानस्य तेजसा ।
बभूव रूपं दुर्धर्षं दीप्तस्येव विभावसोः ॥ १४ ॥

The form of Hanumān, even as he roared glowing as he was with energy, forthwith became difficult to overpower even like a blazing fire. (14)

आत्मानं त्वप्रहरणं ज्ञात्वा क्रोधसमन्वितः ।
शैलमुत्पाटयामास वेगेन हरिपुङ्गवः ॥ १५ ॥

Full of anger on finding himself without any weapon, Hanumān, a bull among the monkeys, for his part speedily tore up a crag. (15)

गृहीत्वा सुमहाशैलं पाणिनैकेन मारुतिः ।
स विनद्य महानादं भ्रामयामास वीर्यवान् ॥ १६ ॥

Picking up that huge rock with one hand, and yelling a roar, that valiant son of the wind-god, Hanumān, whirled it round. (16)

ततस्तमभिदुद्राव राक्षसेन्द्रमकम्पनम् ।
पुरा हि नमुचिं संख्ये वज्रेणेव पुरंदरः ॥ १७ ॥

Then he rushed towards the ogre chief, Akampana, even as Indra (the destroyer of citadels) in the olden days rushed towards the demon, Namuci, with thunderbolt in his hand. (17)

अकम्पनस्तु तद् दृष्ट्वा गिरिशृङ्गं समुद्यतम् ।
दूरादेव महाबाणैरर्धचन्द्रैर्व्यदारयत् ॥ १८ ॥

Beholding that summit of a mountain uplifted on the field of battle, Akampana for his part tore it into pieces from a distance by means of mighty arrows with a crescent shaped head. (18)

तं पर्वताग्रमाकाशे रक्षोबाणविदारितम् ।
विकीर्णं पतितं दृष्ट्वा हनूमान् क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ॥ १९ ॥

Hanumān was distracted with anger on seeing that mountain peak fallen in pieces when torn asunder in the air by the ogre's shafts. (19)

सोऽश्वकर्णं समासाद्य रोषदर्पान्वितो हरिः ।
तूर्णमुत्पाटयामास महागिरिमिवोच्छ्रितम् ॥ २० ॥

Approaching an Aśwakarna tree, lofty as a big mountain, the aforesaid monkey, Hanumān, quickly uprooted it, seized as he was with anger and violence. (20)

तं गृहीत्वा महास्कन्धं सोऽश्वकर्णं महाद्युतिः ।
प्रगृह्य परया प्रीत्या भ्रामयामास संयुगे ॥ २१ ॥

Picking up that Aśwakarna tree with a huge trunk, and holding it firmly, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary splendour, brandished it with great delight. (21)

प्रधावन्नुरुवेगेन बभञ्ज तरसा द्रुमान् ।
हनूमान् परमक्रुद्धश्चरणैर्दारयन् महीम् ॥ २२ ॥

Running with great rapidity and tearing up the earth with his feet, Hanumān, who was extremely enraged, broke down the trees with impetuosity. (22)

गजांश्च सगजारोहान् सरथान् रथिनस्तथा ।
जघान हनुमान् धीमान् राक्षसांश्च पदातिगान् ॥ २३ ॥

The sagacious Hanumān struck down elephants with their mahouts, car-warriors with their chariots, as well as the ogres who fought on foot. (23)

तमन्तकमिव क्रुद्धं सद्रुमं प्राणहारिणम् ।
हनूमन्तमभिप्रेक्ष्य राक्षसा विप्रद्रुवुः ॥ २४ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid Hanumān, who was armed with a tree, enraged and taking their life like Death himself, the ogres took to their heels. (24)

तमापतन्तं संक्रुद्धं राक्षसानां भयावहम् ।
ददर्शाकम्पनो वीरश्चक्षुभे च ननाद च ॥ २५ ॥

The valiant Akampana saw Hanumān, who was highly enraged and caused terror in the ogres, rushing towards him and felt perturbed and roared. (25)

स चतुर्दशभिर्बाणैर्निशितैर्देहदारणैः ।
निर्विभेद महावीर्यं हनूमन्तमकम्पनः ॥ २६ ॥

The aforesaid Akampana pierced the exceedingly powerful Hanumān with fourteen pointed arrows which tore the flesh. (26)

स तथा विप्रकीर्णस्तु नाराचैः शितशक्तिभिः ।
हनूमान् ददृशे वीरः प्ररूढ इव सानुमान् ॥ २७ ॥

Riddled as aforesaid with steel arrows and sharp-edged javelins, the valiant Hanumān looked like a mountain overgrown with trees. (27)

विरराज महावीर्यो महाकायो महाबलः ।
पुष्पिताशोकसंकाशो विधूम इव पावकः ॥ २८ ॥

The gigantic monkey, who was endowed with exceeding valour and extraordinary might, shone brightly like an Aśoka tree in blossom or like a smokeless fire. (28)

ततोऽन्यं वृक्षमुत्पाद्य कृत्वा वेगमनुत्तमम् ।
शिरस्याभिजघानाशु राक्षसेन्द्रमकम्पनम् ॥ २९ ॥

Uprooting another tree and exhibiting unsurpassed impetuosity, Hanumān thereupon immediately struck with it the ogre chief, Akampana, on the head. (29)

स वृक्षेण हतस्तेन सक्रोधेन महात्मना ।
राक्षसो वानरेन्द्रेण पपात च ममार च ॥ ३० ॥

Struck with the tree by that high-souled monkey chief, Hanumān, full of anger, that ogre, Akampana, fell down and died. (30)

तं दृष्ट्वा निहतं भूमौ राक्षसेन्द्रमकम्पनम् ।
व्यथिता राक्षसाः सर्वे क्षितिकम्प इव द्रुमाः ॥ ३१ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid ogre chief, Akampana, lying killed on the ground, all the ogres felt distressed even as trees are shaken during an earthquake. (31)

त्यक्तप्रहरणाः सर्वे राक्षसास्ते पराजिताः ।
लङ्कामभिययुस्त्रासाद् वानरैस्तैरभिद्रुताः ॥ ३२ ॥

Having abandoned their arms all those vanquished ogres ran away in panic to Laṅkā when pursued by the aforesaid monkeys. (32)

ते मुक्तकेशाः सम्भ्रान्ता भग्नमानाः पराजिताः ।
भयाच्छ्रमजलैरङ्गैः प्रस्रवद्भिर्विदुद्रुवुः ॥ ३३ ॥

Seized with a flurry and defeated, their hair dishevelled and pride humbled, they fled in panic, their limbs dripping with sweat. (33)

अन्योन्यं ये प्रमथन्तो विविशुर्नगरं भयात् ।
पृष्ठतस्ते तु सम्मूढाः प्रेक्षमाणा मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ ३४ ॥

Crushing one another, in their haste, they re-entered Laṅkā through fear. Greatly bewildered, as they were, they, however, kept on repeatedly looking back while fleeing. (34)

तेषु लङ्कां प्रविष्टेषु राक्षसेषु महाबलाः ।
समेत्य हरयः सर्वे हनूमन्तमपूजयन् ॥ ३५ ॥
सोऽपि प्रवृद्धस्तान् सर्वान् हरीन् सम्प्रत्यपूजयत् ।
हनूमान् सत्त्वसम्पन्नो यथार्हमनुकूलतः ॥ ३६ ॥

Getting together, when the aforesaid ogres had re-entered Laṅkā, all the monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary might, paid their homage to Hanumān too, who was richly endowed with goodness, greatly honoured all those monkeys in return through friendly glances, words and gestures according to their worth. (35-36)

विनेदुश्च यथाप्राणं हरयो जितकाशिनः ।
चकृषुश्च पुनस्तत्र सप्राणानेव राक्षसान् ॥ ३७ ॥

Nay, assuming a triumphant air, the monkeys shouted with all their might and further began to drag the ogres, who were still alive on the battlefield. (37)

स वीरशोभामभजन्महाकपिः
समेत्य रक्षांसि निहत्य मारुतिः ।
महासुरं भीमममित्रनाशनं
विष्णुर्यथैवोरुबलं चमूमुखे ॥ ३८ ॥

Having encountered and killed the ogres, that great monkey, Hanumān (son of wind-god), enjoyed the glory appropriate to a hero much in the same way as Lord Viṣṇu did on killing in the front of the army in line of battle the redoubtable and great demons

(Madhu, Kaiṭabha and so on) who were endowed with great strength and were capable of destroying their enemies. (38)

अपूजयन् देवगणास्तदा कपिं
स्वयं च रामोऽतिबलश्च लक्ष्मणः ।
तथैव सुग्रीवमुखाः प्लवंगमा
विभीषणश्चैव महाबलस्तदा ॥ ३९ ॥

At that time hosts of gods, nay, Śrī Rāma himself as well as Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with exceeding might, even so, the monkeys headed by Sugrīva as also Vibhiṣaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, honoured the monkey, Hanumān. (39)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षट्पञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LVII

Under orders of Rāvaṇa, Prahasta sallies forthwith a large army for the battlefield

अकम्पनवधं श्रुत्वा क्रुद्धो वै राक्षसेश्वरः ।
किञ्चिद् दीनमुखश्चापि सचिवांस्तानुदैक्षत ॥ १ ॥

Enraged to hear of Akampana's death, nay, with his face a bit downcast, too, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, intently looked at his well-known counsellors. (1)

स तु ध्यात्वा मुहूर्तं तु मन्त्रिभिः संविचार्य च ।
ततस्तु रावणः पूर्वदिवसे राक्षसाधिपः ।
पुरीं परिययौ लङ्कां सर्वान् गुल्मानवेक्षितुम् ॥ २ ॥

Having reflected awhile, and then deliberated with his counsellors, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part then actually proceeded in the forenoon to the city of Laṅkā in order to inspect all the fortified posts. (2)

तां राक्षसगणैर्गुप्तां गुल्मैर्बहुभिरावृताम् ।
ददर्श नगरीं राजा पताकाध्वजमालिनीम् ॥ ३ ॥

The king found that city guarded by detachments of ogres, encompassed with numerous defences and dressed with rows of flags and pennants. (3)

रुद्धां तु नगरीं दृष्ट्वा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
उवाचात्महितं काले प्रहस्तं युद्धकोविदम् ॥ ४ ॥

Seeing the city besieged, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, for his part spoke as follows to Prahasta, who was skilled in warfare and wished well of him even at a critical time: (4)

पुरस्योपनिविष्टस्य सहसा पीडितस्य ह।
नान्ययुद्धात् प्रपश्यामि मोक्षं युद्धविशारद ॥ ५ ॥

"I do not see any deliverance, through fighting carried on by anyone else, for the city, which stands beleaguered and is hard pressed by the enemy, O warrior skilled in warfare! (5)

अहं वा कुम्भकर्णो वा त्वं वा सेनापतिर्मम।
इन्द्रजिद् वा निकुम्भो वा वहेयुर्भारमीदृशम् ॥ ६ ॥

"Either myself or Kumbhakarna or you, my Commander-in-Chief, or Indrajit or Nikumbha can undertake such a burden. (6)

स त्वं बलमतः शीघ्रमादाय परिगृह्य च।
विजयायाभिनिर्याहि यत्र सर्वे वनौकसः ॥ ७ ॥

"Therefore, taking a contingent with you and taking over its charge, speedily set you forth for conquest from this post to the place where all the monkeys stand gathered. (7)

निर्याणादेव तूर्णं च चलिता हरिवाहिनी।
नर्दतां राक्षसेन्द्राणां श्रुत्वा नादं द्रविष्यति ॥ ८ ॥

"Nay, unsettled in no time by your very sortie, the army of monkeys will take to flight on hearing the uproar of the thundering ogre chiefs. (8)

चपला ह्यविनीताश्च चलचित्ताश्च वानराः।
न सहिष्यन्ति ते नादं सिंहनादमिव द्विपाः ॥ ९ ॥

"The monkeys, who are volatile, undisciplined and fickle-minded, will not be able to endure your roar any more than elephants would endure the roaring of a lion. (9)

विद्रुते च बले तस्मिन् रामः सौमित्रिणा सह।
अवशस्ते निरालम्बः प्रहस्त वशमेष्यति ॥ १० ॥

"And helpless and deprived of all support, when the said army of monkeys has fled, Rāma alongwith Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) will be held captive by you, O Prahasta! (10)

आपत्संशयिता श्रेयो नात्र निःसंशयीकृता।
प्रतिलोमानुलोमं वा यत् तु नो मन्यसे हितम् ॥ ११ ॥

"Uncertain death in an encounter is desirable and not that which comes as a matter of course without risk. Suggest that which you for your part consider to be to our advantage, no matter whether it is palatable or unpalatable to me." (11)

रावणेनैवमुक्तस्तु प्रहस्तो वाहिनीपतिः।
राक्षसेन्द्रमुवाचेदमसुरेन्द्रमिवोशना ॥ १२ ॥

Commanded as above by Rāvaṇa, Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief, for his part submitted as follows to the king of ogres even as Uśanā, the preceptor of demons, would speak to Bali, the king of demons: (12)

राजन् मन्त्रितपूर्वं नः कुशलैः सह मन्त्रिभिः।
विवादश्चापि नो वृत्तः समवेक्ष्य परस्परम् ॥ १३ ॥

"This topic has been discussed in the past with expert counsellors and a controversy too arose amongst us on our examining the viewpoint of one another, (and we could not come to a unanimous decision). (13)

प्रदानेन तु सीतायाः श्रेयो व्यवसितं मया।
अप्रदाने पुनर्युद्धं दृष्टमेव तथैव नः ॥ १४ ॥

"It was my firm opinion that good would come to us only through restoration of Sītā; whereas war alone was foreseen as a result of our not restoring her. War has come upon us precisely as expected. (14)

सोऽहं दानैश्च मानैश्च सततं पूजितस्त्वया।
सान्त्वैश्च विविधैः काले किं न कुर्या हितं तव ॥ १५ ॥

"I, for my part, have ever been honoured by you with gifts and honours too as well as with various kind words. How shall I not render service to you when the time for it comes? (15)

नहि मे जीवितं रक्ष्यं पुत्रदारधनानि च।
त्वं पश्य मां जुहूषन्तं त्वदर्थे जीवितं युधि ॥ १६ ॥

“Neither life nor sons, wife and wealth are going to be spared by me at this juncture. You see me with your own eyes, willing to sacrifice my life for your sake in combat.”
(16)

एवमुक्त्वा तु भर्तारं रावणं वाहिनीपतिः ।
उवाचेदं बलाध्यक्षान् प्रहस्तः पुरतः स्थितान् ॥ १७ ॥

Having submitted as aforesaid to his master, Rāvaṇa, Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief, commanded as follows the troop leaders standing before him: (17)

समानयत मे शीघ्रं राक्षसानां महाबलम् ।
मद्वाणानां तु वेगेन हतानां च रणाजिरे ॥ १८ ॥
अद्य तृष्यन्तु मांसादाः पक्षिणः काननौकसाम् ।
तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा बलाध्यक्षा महाबलाः ॥ १९ ॥
बलमुद्योजयामासुस्तस्मिन् राक्षसमन्दिरे ।
सा बभूव मुहूर्तेन भीमैर्नानाविधायुधैः ॥ २० ॥
लङ्का राक्षसवीरैस्तैर्गजैरिव समाकुला ।
हुताशनं तर्पयतां ब्राह्मणांश्च नमस्यताम् ॥ २१ ॥
आज्यगन्धप्रतिवहः सुरभिर्मारुतो बवौ ।
स्रजश्च विविधाकारा जगृहुस्त्वभिमन्त्रिताः ॥ २२ ॥
संग्रामसज्जाः संहृष्टा धारयन् राक्षसास्तदा ।
सधनुष्काः कवचिनो वेगादाप्लुत्य राक्षसाः ॥ २३ ॥
रावणं प्रेक्ष्य राजानं प्रहस्तं पर्यवारयन् ।
अथामन्य तु राजानं भेरीमाहत्य भैरवाम् ॥ २४ ॥
आरुरोह रथं युक्तः प्रहस्तः सज्जकल्पितम् ।
हयैर्महाजवैर्युक्तं सम्यक्सूतं सुसंयतम् ॥ २५ ॥
महाजलदनिर्घोषं साक्षाच्चन्द्रार्कभास्वरम् ।
उरगध्वजदुर्धर्षं सुवरूथं स्वपस्करम् ॥ २६ ॥
सुवर्णजालसंयुक्तं प्रहसन्तमिव श्रिया ।
ततस्तं रथमास्थाय रावणार्पितशासनः ॥ २७ ॥
लङ्काया निर्ययौ तूर्णं बलेन महता वृतः ।
ततो दुन्दुभिनिर्घोषः पर्जन्यनिनदोपमः ।
वादित्राणां च निनदः पूरयन्निव मेदिनीम् ॥ २८ ॥
शुश्रुवे शङ्खशब्दश्च प्रयाते वाहिनीपतौ ।
निनदन्तः स्वरान् घोरान् राक्षसा जग्मुर्ग्रतः ॥ २९ ॥
भीमरूपा महाकायाः प्रहस्तस्य पुरःसराः ।
नरान्तकः कुम्भहनुर्महानादः समुन्नतः ।
प्रहस्तसचिवा ह्येते निर्ययुः परिवार्य तम् ॥ ३० ॥

“Bring together before me at once a huge army of ogres. Let carnivorous birds be sated this day with the flesh of the monkeys (lit., denizens of the woods), struck down on the battlefield with the force of my arrows.” Hearing his aforesaid command the commanders of the army, who were endowed with extraordinary might, mobilized an army near that palace of the ogre, Rāvaṇa. In less than an hour the aforesaid Laṅkā was thronged with redoubtable ogre champions of renown, resembling elephants and armed with weapons of every kind. A fragrant breeze bearing the scent of ghee blew past the ogres, who were propitiating the god of fire (who feeds on oblations) and bowing down to the Brāhmaṇas. Greatly rejoiced on that occasion, the ogres took hold of garlands of different shapes consecrated by reciting sacred texts and put on military accoutrements. Springing up with impetuosity on perceiving king Rāvaṇa, the ogres, who were armed with bows and clad in armour, stood round Prahasta on all sides.

Taking leave of the king and causing a kettledrum of dreadful sound to be beaten, the active Prahasta ascended his chariot which was ready with all equipment and had been furnished with every kind of weapon, was drawn by horses endowed with great speed, driven by a skilled charioteer and fully controlled by him, which thundered like a mighty cloud, shone like the very sun and the moon, distinguished by its ensign, bearing the device of a serpent and was difficult to overpower, which was provided with a wooden fence or fender as a defence against collision and consisted of beautiful parts, (nay) which was covered with a net of gold and was laughing as it were in its splendour. Taking his seat in that chariot, Prahasta, to whom directions had been given by Rāvaṇa, thereupon immediately set out from Laṅkā, surrounded by a large army.

Even as the Commander-in-Chief departed, a roll of kettledrums, which resembled the rumbling of clouds, as well as a blast of fanfares, which seemed to fill the earth, as also a blast of conches was forthwith heard. Emitting fearful cries, gigantic ogres of terrible aspect and marching in front of Prahasta proceeded in the van. Narāntaka, Kumbhahanu, Mahānāda and Samunnata—these four adjutants of Prahasta, also sallied forth, surrounding him on all sides. (18—30)

व्यूढेनैव सुघोरेण पूर्वद्वारात् स निर्ययौ ।
गजयूथनिकाशेन बलेन महता वृतः ॥ ३१ ॥

Surrounded by a mighty force, which stood already disposed in battle-array and was exceedingly formidable, and which closely resembled a herd of elephants, he emerged from the eastern gate. (31)

सागरप्रतिमौघेन वृतस्तेन बलेन सः ।
प्रहस्तो निर्ययौ क्रुद्धः कालान्तकयमोपमः ॥ ३२ ॥

Surrounded by that army, consisting of a stream of ogres which resembled the sea in its vastness, Prahasta, who looked like Kāla (the Time-Spirit), Antaka (Death) and Yama (the god of retribution), sallied forth in rage. (32)

तस्य निर्याणघोषेण राक्षसानां च नर्दताम् ।
लङ्कायां सर्वभूतानि विनेदुर्विकृतैः स्वरैः ॥ ३३ ॥

At the sound of kettledrums etc., beaten at the time of his departure as also at the noise of the roaring ogres, all created beings in Laṅkā began to shriek in unnatural tones. (33)

व्यभ्रमाकाशमाविश्य मांसशोणितभोजनाः ।
मण्डलान्यपसव्यानि खगाश्चक्रु रथं प्रति ॥ ३४ ॥

Rising in the air, birds subsisting on flesh and blood circled anti-clockwise round the chariot. (34)

वमन्त्यः पावकज्वालाः शिवा घोरा ववाशिरे ।
अन्तरिक्षात् पपातोल्का वायुश्च परुषं ववौ ॥ ३५ ॥

Vomiting forth tongues of fire, fearful she-jackals howled. A meteor fell from the heavens and a piercing wind blew. (35)

अन्योन्यमभिसंरब्धा ग्रहाश्च न चकाशिरे ।
मेघाश्च खरनिर्घोषा रथस्योपरि रक्षसः ॥ ३६ ॥
ववर्षू रुधिरं चास्य सिषिचुश्च पुरःसरान् ।
केतुमूर्धनि गृध्रस्तु विलीनो दक्षिणामुखः ॥ ३७ ॥
नदन्नुभयतः पार्श्वं समग्रां श्रियमाहरत् ।
सारथेर्बहुशश्चास्य संग्राममवगाहतः ॥ ३८ ॥
प्रतोदो न्यपतद्धस्तात् सूतस्य हयसादिनः ।
निर्याणश्रीश्च या च स्याद् भास्वरा च सुदुर्लभा ॥ ३९ ॥
सा ननाश मुहूर्तेन समे च स्खलिता हयाः ।
प्रहस्तं तं हि निर्यान्तं प्रख्यातगुणपौरुषम् ।
युधि नानाप्रहरणा कपिसेनाभ्यवर्तत ॥ ४० ॥

Nay, knitted against one another, planets did not shine brightly. Again, making a sound resembling the braying of a donkey, clouds showered blood on the chariot of the ogre and drenched those marching in front of him. A croaking vulture, on the other hand, perched facing the south, on the top of its standard scratching both its sides and thereby snatched away his entire good fortune. Nay, the whip slipped again and again from the hand of his charioteer, a Sūta (the son of a Kṣatriya by a Brāhmaṇa woman), busy controlling the horses, even as he entered the battlefield. That rare resplendent lustre which clothed Prahasta at the time of his leaving, disappeared in a moment and his horses stumbled even on the level ground. Equipped with various weapons, the simian army actually went forward to meet in combat Prahasta, whose excellences and manliness were widely known, even as he sallied forth. (36—40)

अथ घोषः सुतुमुलो हरीणां समजायत ।
वृक्षानारुजतां चैव गुर्वीर्वै गृह्णतां शिलाः ॥ ४१ ॥

An exceedingly tumultuous clamour forthwith arose among the monkeys even as they tore up trees and seized hold of heavy rocks. (41)

नदतां राक्षसानां च वानराणां च गर्जताम् ।
उभे प्रमुदिते सैन्ये रक्षोगणवनौकसाम् ॥ ४२ ॥
वेगितानां समर्थानामन्योन्यवधकाङ्क्षिणाम् ।
परस्परं चाह्वयतां निनादः श्रूयते महान् ॥ ४३ ॥

The loud noise of the yelling ogres and the roaring monkeys, who were both seized with impetuosity, and were powerful, nay, who sought the destruction of one another and challenged one another, was being heard. Both the armies, namely, those of the ogres and the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods) felt highly rejoiced. (42-43)

ततः प्रहस्तः कपिराजवाहिनी-
मभिप्रतस्थे विजयाय दुर्मतिः ।
विवृद्धवेगां च विवेश तां चमूं
यथा मुमूर्षुः शलभो विभावसुम् ॥ ४४ ॥

Then Prahasta, whose mind was perverted, advanced towards the army of Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys) for conquest and tried to force his way into that army, whose tempo had immensely grown, even as a moth would enter a flame. (44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टपञ्चाशः सर्गः

Canto LVIII

Nīla kills Prahasta

ततः प्रहस्तं निर्यान्तं दृष्ट्वा रणकृतोद्यमम् ।
उवाच सस्मितं रामो विभीषणमरिंदमः ॥ १ ॥

Seeing Prahasta sallying forth, duly prepared for war, Śrī Rāma, the tamer of his enemies, forthwith spoke with a smile to Vibhīṣaṇa as follows: (1)

क एष सुमहाकायो बलेन महता वृतः ।
आगच्छति महावेगः किंरूपबलपौरुषः ॥ २ ॥

“Who comes this colossus, surrounded by a huge army and endowed with great impetuosity? What are his might and manliness like? (2)

आचक्ष्व मे महाबाहो वीर्यवन्तं निशाचरम् ।
राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा प्रत्युवाच विभीषणः ॥ ३ ॥

“Make known to me this powerful ranger of the night, O mighty-armed ogre (Vibhīṣaṇa).” Hearing the question of Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa replied as follows: (3)

एष सेनापतिस्तस्य प्रहस्तो नाम राक्षसः ।
लङ्कायां राक्षसेन्द्रस्य त्रिभागबलसंवृतः ।
वीर्यवानस्त्रविच्छूरः सुप्रख्यातपराक्रमः ॥ ४ ॥

“He is an ogre, Prahasta by name, the Commander-in-Chief of Rāvaṇa’s army. Surrounded by a third of the army of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), in Laṅkā, he is powerful, conversant with the use of mystic weapons and valiant. His prowess is very widely known.” (4)

ततः प्रहस्तं निर्यान्तं भीमं भीमपराक्रमम् ।
गर्जन्तं सुमहाकायं राक्षसैरभिसंवृतम् ॥ ५ ॥
ददर्श महती सेना वानराणां बलीयसाम् ।
अभिसंजातघोषाणां प्रहस्तमभिगर्जताम् ॥ ६ ॥

The huge army of the exceedingly mighty monkeys, thereupon saw the terrible and gigantic Prahasta of redoubtable prowess sallying forth roaring, surrounded on all sides by ogres. An uproar arose among them and they began to roar at Prahasta. (5-6)

खड्गशक्त्यूष्टिशूलाश्च बाणानि मुसलानि च ।
गदाश्च परिघाः प्रासा विविधाश्च परश्वधाः ॥ ७ ॥
धनूंषि च विचित्राणि राक्षसानां जयैषिणाम् ।
प्रगृहीतान्यराजन्त वानरानभिधावताम् ॥ ८ ॥

Swords, javelins, double-edged swords and pikes, arrows and mallets, nay, maces, iron bars, sharp-edged spears, axes of various kinds and bows of every variety, borne by the ogres rushing towards the monkeys and seeking victory, shone brightly. (7-8)

जगृहुः पादपांश्चापि पुष्पितांस्तु गिरींस्तथा ।
शिलाश्च विपुला दीर्घा योद्धुकामाः प्लवंगमाः ॥ ९ ॥

The monkeys for their part, who were burning to fight, seized trees in flower as well as peaks of mountains as also huge and lofty rocks. (9)

तेषामन्योन्यमासाद्य संग्रामः सुमहानभूत् ।
बहूनामश्मवृष्टिं च शरवर्षं च वर्षताम् ॥ १० ॥

A major conflict ensued between the vast number of monkeys and ogres, who, approaching each other, showered down a hail of stones and shafts. (10)

बहवो राक्षसा युद्धे बहून् वानरपुङ्गवान् ।
वानरा राक्षसांश्चापि निजघ्नुर्बहवो बहून् ॥ ११ ॥

In the course of the struggle numerous ogres exterminated numerous bulls among monkeys and many monkeys killed many ogres too. (11)

शूलैः प्रमथिताः केचित् केचित् तु परमायुधैः ।
परिघैराहताः केचित् केचिच्छिन्नाः परश्वधैः ॥ १२ ॥

Some monkeys were exterminated with pikes, while others were cut down with discuses. Others were smashed with iron bars, while still others were hacked with axes. (12)

निरुच्छ्वासाः पुनः केचित् पतिता जगतीतले ।
विभिन्नहृदयाः केचिदिषुसंधानसाधिताः ॥ १३ ॥

Deprived of their life and breath, some fell down to the ground; while others who were struck down with the discharge of arrows, had their heart split into pieces. (13)

केचिद् द्विधा कृताः खड्गैः स्फुरन्तः पतिता भुवि ।
वानरा राक्षसैः शूरैः पार्श्वतश्च विदारिताः ॥ १४ ॥

Cut into two with swords, some monkeys fell bounding to the ground, while others were cleft in their sides by valiant ogres. (14)

वानरैश्चापि संक्रुद्धै राक्षसौघाः समन्ततः ।
पादपैर्गिरिशृङ्गैश्च सम्पिष्टा वसुधातले ॥ १५ ॥

Nay, multitudes of ogres too were completely crushed on all sides against the earth's surface by the infuriated monkeys with trees and mountain tops. (15)

वज्रस्पर्शतलैर्हस्तैर्मुष्टिभिश्च हता भृशम् ।
वमन् शोणितमास्येभ्यो विशीर्णदशनेक्षणाः ॥ १६ ॥

Struck again and again with hands, whose palms had the impact of the thunderbolt, as well as with fists, the ogres vomited blood from their mouths, their teeth and eyes having been smashed. (16)

आर्तस्वनं च स्वनतां सिंहनादं च नर्दताम् ।
बभूव तुमुलः शब्दो हरीणां रक्षसामपि ॥ १७ ॥

A tumultuous clamour arose among the monkeys and ogres too while they emitted cries of distress or roared like lions. (17)

वानरा राक्षसाः क्रुद्धा वीरमार्गमनुव्रताः ।
विवृत्तवदनाः क्रूराश्चक्रुः कर्माण्यभीतवत् ॥ १८ ॥

Following the path of heroes, their mouths distended, the infuriated and hard-hearted monkeys and ogres alike accomplished deeds of valour fearlessly. (18)

नरान्तकः कुम्भहनुर्महानादः समुन्ततः ।
एते प्रहस्तसचिवाः सर्वे जघ्नुर्वनौकसः ॥ १९ ॥

Narāntaka, Kumbhahanu, Mahānāda

and Samunnata all these four adjutants of Prahasta made short work of the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods). (19)

तेषां निपततां शीघ्रं निघ्नतां चापि वानरान्।
द्विविदो गिरिशृङ्गेण जघानैकं नरान्तकम् ॥ २० ॥

Of the aforesaid four ogres, who were rushing with speed and also killing the monkeys, Dwivida struck down with a mountain peak one viz., Narāntaka. (20)

दुर्मुखः पुनरुत्थाय कपिः सविपुलद्रुमम्।
राक्षसं क्षिप्रहस्तं तु समुन्नतमपोथयत् ॥ २१ ॥

Springing on his feet with a giant tree in his hand, the monkey Durmukha for his part then killed the quick-handed Samunnata. (21)

जाम्बवांस्तु सुसंकुब्धः प्रगृह्य महतीं शिलाम्।
पातयामास तेजस्वी महानादस्य वक्षसि ॥ २२ ॥

Firmly seizing hold of a huge rock, the energetic Jāmbavān for his part, who was highly enraged, hurled it on the chest of Mahānāda. (22)

अथ कुम्भहनुस्तत्र तारेणासाद्य वीर्यवान्।
वृक्षेण महता सद्यः प्राणान् संत्याजयद् रणे ॥ २३ ॥

Meeting with Tāra, the powerful Kumbhahanu closed with him; and the former deprived him of his life with a huge tree. (23)

अमृष्यमाणस्तत्कर्म प्रहस्तो रथमास्थितः।
चकार कदनं घोरं धनुष्पाणिर्वनौकसाम् ॥ २४ ॥

Intolerant of this exploit, and mounted on his chariot, bow in hand, Prahasta caused a dreadful havoc among the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods). (24)

आवर्त इव संजज्ञे सेनयोरुभयोस्तदा।
क्षुभितस्याप्रमेयस्य सागरस्येव निःस्वनः ॥ २५ ॥

With the rapid manoeuvring of both the armies there arose at that time an uproar resembling the roar of a vast tempestuous sea. (25)

महता हि शरौघेण राक्षसो रणदुर्मदः।
अर्दयामास संकुब्धो वानरान् परमाहवे ॥ २६ ॥

Getting infuriated, the ogre, Prahasta, who was maddened by combat, actually began to torment the monkeys with an immense stream of arrows in that major conflict. (26)

वानराणां शरीरैस्तु राक्षसानां च मेदिनी।
बभूवातिचिता घोरैः पर्वतैरिव संवृता ॥ २७ ॥

Strewn excessively with the heaps of dead bodies of monkeys and ogres, the earth was covered with fearful mountains, as it were. (27)

सा मही रुधिरौघेण प्रच्छन्ना सम्प्रकाशते।
संछन्ना माधवे मासि पलाशैरिव पुष्पितैः ॥ २८ ॥

Veiled by torrents of blood, the earth shone brightly as if it were fully clothed with Palāśa trees in blossom in the month of Vaiśākha (the second month of the vernal season). (28)

हतवीरौघवप्रां तु भग्रायुधमहाद्रुमाम्।
शोणितौघमहातोयां यमसागरगामिनीम् ॥ २९ ॥

यकृत्प्लीहमहापङ्कां विनिकीर्णान्त्रिशैवलाम्।
भिन्नकायशिरोमीनामङ्गावयवशाद्वलाम् ॥ ३० ॥

गृध्रहंसवराकीर्णां कङ्कसारससेविताम्।
मेदःफेनसमाकीर्णामार्तस्तनितनिःस्वनाम् ॥ ३१ ॥

तां कापुरुषदुस्तरां युद्धभूमिमयीं नदीम्।
नदीमिव घनापाये हंससारससेविताम् ॥ ३२ ॥

राक्षसाः कपिमुख्यास्ते तेरुस्तां दुस्तरां नदीम्।
यथा पद्मरजोर्ध्वस्तां नलिनीं गजयूथपाः ॥ ३३ ॥

The ogres as well as the foremost of monkeys for their part crossed the river in the shape of the battle-field, which had heaps of slain warriors for its banks, broken weapons for large trees (standing on its banks) and the torrents of blood for its vast sheet of water; which was rushing towards the sea of Death; which had livers and spleens for its vast mire, the scattered entrails for its duckweeds, severed trunks and heads for its fish and fingers etc., (parts of limbs of the body) for the grass growing on its banks; which was crowded with the foremost of swans in the shape of vultures, and frequented by cranes in the shape of buzzards; which was overspread with foam in the shape of fat, and had the groans of the wounded for its murmur, and which was difficult to cross for cowards—even as they would cross a river frequented by swans and cranes at the end of the monsoon, when they become fordable. Nay, they swam across that river, even though it was difficult to cross as easily as leaders of herds of elephants would cross a lotus-pond covered with the pollen of lotuses. (29—33)

ततः सृजन्तं बाणौघान् प्रहस्तं स्यन्दने स्थितम् ।
ददर्श तरसा नीलो विधमन्तं प्लवंगमान् ॥ ३४ ॥

Presently Nila (the Commander-in-Chief of the simian army) saw Prahasta discharging volleys of shafts and exterminating the monkeys with impetuosity while seated in his chariot. He, therefore, began to exterminate with vehemence the army of the ogres even as a tempestuous wind would blow away a huge mass of clouds in the sky. (34)

उद्धूत इव वायुः खे महदभ्रबलं बलात् ।
समीक्ष्याभिद्रुतं युद्धे प्रहस्तो वाहिनीपतिः ॥ ३५ ॥
रथेनादित्यवर्णेन नीलमेवाभिद्रुतुवे ।
स धनुर्धन्विनां श्रेष्ठो विकृष्य परमाहवे ॥ ३६ ॥
नीलाय व्यसृजद् बाणान् प्रहस्तो वाहिनीपतिः ।
ते प्राप्य विशिखा नीलं विनिर्भिद्य समाहिताः ॥ ३७ ॥
महीं जग्मुर्महावेगा रोषिता इव पन्नगाः ।
नीलः शरैरभिहतो निशितैर्चलनोपमैः ॥ ३८ ॥
स तं परमदुर्धर्षमापतन्तं महाकपिः ।
प्रहस्तं ताडयामास वृक्षमुत्पाट्य वीर्यवान् ॥ ३९ ॥

Perceiving Nila rushing with violence towards him for an engagement, Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief, darted towards Nila alone in his chariot, bright as the sun. Stretching his bow fully in that supreme struggle, that prince of archers, General Prahasta, began to aim arrows a Nila. Reaching Nila and piercing him right through, the aforesaid arrows went straight into the earth with great rapidity like infuriated serpents. Uprooting a tree when wounded by the pointed arrows, resembling tongues of fire, that mighty and valiant monkey struck the said Prahasta, who was most difficult to overpower, and was rushing towards him. (35—39)

स तेनाभिहतः क्रुद्धो नर्दन् राक्षसपुंगवः ।
ववर्ष शरवर्षाणि प्लवंगानां चमूपतौ ॥ ४० ॥

Roaring when struck by Nila, that furious bull among the ogres began to rain down showers of arrows on the Commander-in-Chief of the monkeys. (40)

तस्य बाणगणानेव राक्षसस्य दुरात्मनः ।
अपारयन् वारयितुं प्रत्यगृह्णान्निमीलितः ।
यथैव गोवृषो वर्षं शारदं शीघ्रमागतम् ॥ ४१ ॥
एवमेव प्रहस्तस्य शरवर्षान् दुरासदान् ।
निमीलिताक्षः सहसा नीलः सेहे दुरासदान् ॥ ४२ ॥

Not being able to check the streams of arrows of that evil-minded ogre, Nila received them with closed eyes. Even as a bull would receive an autumnal shower come all of a sudden, precisely in the same way Nila suffered with closed eyes the shower of shafts discharged by Prahasta, which were difficult to endure, nay, difficult to meet. (41-42)

रोषितः शरवर्षेण सालेन महता महान् ।
प्रजघान हयान् नीलः प्रहस्तस्य महाबलः ॥ ४३ ॥

Provoked by that hail of arrows, the great Nila, who was endowed with extraordinary might, struck down the horses of Prahasta with a huge sal tree. (43)

ततो रोषपरीतात्मा धनुस्तस्य दुरात्मनः ।
बभञ्ज तरसा नीलो ननाद च पुनः पुनः ॥ ४४ ॥

With a mind seized with anger, Nila then shattered with violence the bow of that evil-minded Prahasta and roared again and again. (44)

विधनुः स कृतस्तेन प्रहस्तो वाहिनीपतिः ।
प्रगृह्य मुसलं घोरं स्यन्दनादवपुष्वुवे ॥ ४५ ॥

Firmly seizing hold of a formidable mallet, when rendered bowless by him, the said Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief, leapt down from his chariot. (45)

तावुभौ वाहिनीमुख्यौ जातवैरौ तरस्विनौ ।
स्थितौ क्षतजसिक्ताङ्गौ प्रभिन्नाविव कुञ्जरोः ॥ ४६ ॥

Both the Commanders-in-Chief, who were full of impetuosity and in whom enmity had sprung up for each other, stood bathed all over in blood like two elephants in rut. (46)

उल्लिखन्तौ सुतीक्ष्णाभिर्दंष्ट्राभिरितरेतरम् ।
सिंहशार्दूलसदृशौ सिंहशार्दूलचेष्टितौ ॥ ४७ ॥

Tearing each other with their exceedingly sharp teeth they looked like a lion and an elephant and also behaved like a lion and an elephant, respectively. (47)

विक्रान्तविजयौ वीरौ समरेष्वनिवर्तिनौ ।
काङ्क्षमाणौ यशः प्राप्तुं वृत्रवासवयोरिव ॥ ४८ ॥

The two heroes had well-nigh scored a victory, they never turned their back on the field of battle and sought to attain the glory which had fallen to the lot of the demon Vṛtra and Indra, the ruler of gods. (48)

आजघान तदा नीलं ललाटे मुसलेन सः ।
प्रहस्तः परमायत्तस्ततः सुस्त्राव शोणितम् ॥ ४९ ॥

At that time Prahasta, who was supremely active, struck Nila with a mallet on the forehead, from which blood began to flow. (49)

ततः शोणितदिग्धाङ्गः प्रगृह्य च महातरुम् ।
प्रहस्तस्योरसि क्रुद्धो विससर्ज महाकपिः ॥ ५० ॥

Firmly seizing hold of a huge tree, the great monkey, Nila, his limbs covered with gore, angrily flung it on Prahasta chest. (50)

तमचिन्त्यप्रहारं स प्रगृह्य मुसलं महत् ।
अभिदुद्राव बलिनं बलानीलं प्लवङ्गमम् ॥ ५१ ॥

Not minding that blow and firmly grasping an enormous mallet, the latter violently rushed towards the mighty monkey, Nila. (51)

तमुग्रवेगं संरब्धमापतन्तं महाकपिः ।
ततः सम्प्रेक्ष्य जग्राह महावेगो महाशिलाम् ॥ ५२ ॥

Perceiving the furious ogre advancing with terrible rapidity towards him, the great monkey, Nila, who was endowed with extraordinary impetuosity, then pulled up a mighty rock. (52)

तस्य युद्धाभिकामस्य मृधे मुसलयोधिनः ।
प्रहस्तस्य शिलां नीलो मूर्ध्नि तूर्णमपातयत् ॥ ५३ ॥

Nila quickly flung the rock on the head of Prahasta, who courted war and fought with a mallet on the field of battle. (53)

नीलेन कपिमुख्येन विमुक्ता महती शिला ।
बिभेद बहुधा घोरा प्रहस्तस्य शिरस्तदा ॥ ५४ ॥

Hurled at that moment by Nila, the foremost of monkeys, the huge and formidable rock broke the head of Prahasta into many pieces. (54)

स गतासुर्गतश्रीको गतसत्त्वो गतेन्द्रियः ।
पपात सहसा भूमौ छिन्नमूल इव द्रुमः ॥ ५५ ॥

His life as well as his splendour, strength and senses having departed, he fell precipitately to the ground like a tree cut at the root. (55)

विभिन्नशिरसस्तस्य बहु सुस्त्राव शोणितम् ।
शरीरादपि सुस्त्राव गिरेः प्रस्त्रवणं यथा ॥ ५६ ॥

Like a spring from a mountain, blood flowed copiously from his shattered head as also from his body. (56)

हते प्रहस्ते नीलेन तदकम्प्यं महाबलम् ।
राक्षसानामहृष्टानां लङ्कामभिजगाम ह ॥ ५७ ॥

Prahasta having been made short work of by Nila, that huge and unshakable army of ogres, who had grown cheerless, withdrew to Lāṅkā: so the tradition goes. (57)

न शेकुः समवस्थातुं निहते वाहिनीपतौ।
सेतुबन्धं समासाद्य विशीर्णं सलिलं यथा ॥ ५८ ॥

Their Commander-in-Chief having been killed, the troops could not remain stationary any more than water on reaching a breached dam. (58)

हते तस्मिंश्चमूमुख्ये राक्षसास्ते निरुद्यमाः।
रक्षःपतिगृहं गत्वा ध्यानमूकत्वमागताः ॥ ५९ ॥

Marching to the abode of Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, devoid of all effort, the commander of their army having been killed, the aforesaid ogres were reduced to speechlessness due to worry. (59)

प्राप्ताः शोकार्णवं तीव्रं विसंज्ञा इव तेऽभवन् ॥ ६० ॥

Nay, fallen into a burning ocean of grief, they became unconscious, as it were. (60)

ततस्तु नीलो विजयी महाबलः
प्रशस्यमानः सुकृतेन कर्मणा।
समेत्य रामेण सलक्ष्मणेन
प्रहृष्टरूपस्तु बभूव यूथपः ॥ ६१ ॥

Getting (re-) united with Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, while being acclaimed for his well-accomplished deed, the victorious commander, Nīla, for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, thereupon actually felt highly exultant. (61)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टपञ्चाशः सर्गः ॥ ५८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LIX

Disconsolate at the death of Prahasta, Rāvaṇa himself appears on the battle-field for an encounter. After a tough fight with Sugrīva, Lakṣmaṇa, Hanumān and Nīla, Rāvaṇa meets Śrī Rāma and, sustaining an ignominious defeat at the latter's hands and escaping with his life, withdraws to Laṅkā

तस्मिन् हते राक्षससैन्यपाले
प्लवंगमानामृषभेण युद्धे।
भीमायुधं सागरवेगतुल्यं
विदुद्रुवे राक्षसराजसैन्यम् ॥ १ ॥

Prahasta, the Commander-in-Chief of the army of ogres, having been made short work of in the encounter with Nīla, the foremost of monkeys, the army of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres), which was armed with dreadful weapons and vied with the sea in fury, took to flight. (1)

गत्वा तु रक्षोधिपतेः शशंसुः
सेनापतिं पावकसूनुशस्तम्।
तच्चापि तेषां वचनं निशम्य
रक्षोधिपः क्रोधवशं जगाम ॥ २ ॥

Seeking the presence of Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres), the survivors told him of Prahasta, their Commander-in-Chief, having been killed by Nila, an offspring of the fire-god. And the overlord of ogres fell a prey to anger on hearing their aforesaid report. (2)

संख्ये प्रहस्तं निहतं निशम्य
क्रोधादितः शोकपरीतचेताः ।

उवाच तान् राक्षसयूथमुख्या- निन्द्रो यथा निर्जरयूथमुख्यान् ॥ ३ ॥

Tormented with anger, his mind overwhelmed with grief on hearing of Prahasta having been killed in combat, Rāvaṇa spoke as follows to those leaders of ogre troops even as Indra, the ruler of gods, would to the commanders of celestial troops: (3)

नावज्ञा रिपवे कार्या यैरिन्द्रबलसादनः ।
सूदितः सैन्यपालो मे सानुयात्रः सकुञ्जरः ॥ ४ ॥

“No low opinion should be entertained with regard to an enemy by whom my Commander-in-Chief, who was capable of exterminating the army of Indra, the ruler of gods, has been killed alongwith his followers and elephants. (4)

सोऽहं रिपुविनाशाय विजयायाविचारयन् ।
स्वयमेव गमिष्यामि रणशीर्षं तदद्भुतम् ॥ ५ ॥

“I shall, therefore, unhesitatingly proceed to the incredible scene of battle for the extermination of the enemies and our own conquest. (5)

अद्य तद् वानरानीकं रामं च सहलक्ष्मणम् ।
निर्दहिष्यामि बाणौघैर्वनं दीप्तैरिवाग्निभिः ।
अद्य संतर्पयिष्यामि पृथिवीं कपिशोणितैः ॥ ६ ॥

“I shall with the streams of my arrows burn up this very day that army of monkeys as also Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa even as one would burn a forest with luminous flames. I shall satiate the earth with the blood of the monkeys today.” (6)

स एवमुक्त्वा ज्वलनप्रकाशं
रथं तुरंगोत्तमराजियुक्तम् ।

प्रकाशमानं वपुषा ज्वलन्तं
समारुरोहामरराजशत्रुः ॥ ७ ॥

Saying so, that enemy of Indra (the ruler of immortals) duly ascended his splendid chariot, which shone like fire and was yoked to a team of the foremost of horses and was blazing by virtue of its golden frame. (7)

स शङ्खभेरीपणवप्रणादै-
रास्फोटितक्ष्वेडितसिंहनादैः ।
पुण्यैः स्तवैश्चापि सुपूज्यमान-
स्तदा ययौ राक्षसराजमुख्यः ॥ ८ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the foremost of ogre chiefs, went forth at that moment while being honoured by means of the blast of conches; the beating of kettle-drums, by the clapping of arms, menacing sounds and leonine roars as well as by means of agreeable encomiums. (8)

स शैलजीमूतनिकाशरूपै- र्मासाशनैः पावकदीप्तनेत्रैः ।
बभौ वृतो राक्षसराजमुख्यो
भूतैर्वृतो रुद्र इवामरेशः ॥ ९ ॥

Surrounded by ogres (lit., eaters of flesh), whose forms closely resembled mountains and clouds, and whose eyes blazed like fire, that suzerain lord of ogres, shone brightly like Rudra (the god of destruction), the lord of immortals, surrounded by genii. (9)

ततो नगर्याः सहसा महौजा
निष्क्रम्य तद् वानरसैन्यमुग्रम् ।
महार्णवाभ्रस्तनितं ददर्श
समुद्यतं पादपशैलहस्तम् ॥ १० ॥

Issuing all at once from the city of Laṅkā, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, beheld that formidable army of monkeys, fully prepared for combat with trees and rocks in their hands, and roaring like an ocean and thundering like a mass of clouds. (10)

तद् राक्षसानीकमतिप्रचण्ड-
मालोक्य रामो भुजगेन्द्रबाहुः ।
विभीषणं शस्त्रभृतां वरिष्ठ-
मुवाच सेनानुगतः पृथुश्रीः ॥ ११ ॥

Seeing that exceedingly furious army of ogres, Śrī Rāma, whose arms resembled the king of serpents in their tenacity and smoothness, nay, who was followed by an army and was endowed with abundant splendour, spoke as follows to Vibhīṣaṇa, the foremost of the wielders of the weapons: (11)

नानापताकाध्वजछत्रजुष्टं
प्रासासिशूलायुधशस्त्रजुष्टम् ।
कस्येदमक्षोभ्यमभीरुजुष्टं
सैन्यं महेन्द्रोपमनागजुष्टम् ॥ १२ ॥

“Under whose command stands this unshakable army, furnished with pennants and standards and canopies of every kind, nay, armed with missiles and weapons like darts, swords and spikes, made up of intrepid soldiers and elephants resembling the Mahendra mountain in size?” (12)

ततस्तु रामस्य निशम्य वाक्यं
विभीषणः शक्रसमानवीर्यः ।
शशंस रामस्य बलप्रवेकं
महात्मनां राक्षसपुंगवानाम् ॥ १३ ॥

Hearing the question of Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa, the equal of Indra in valour, pointed out to Śrī Rāma the superior strength of the foremost of ogres, who were endowed with extraordinary firmness: (13)

योऽसौ गजस्कन्धगतो महात्मा
नवोदितार्कोपमताम्रवक्त्रः ।
संकम्पयन्नागशिरोऽभ्युपैति
ह्यकम्पनं त्वेनमवेहि राजन् ॥ १४ ॥

“Know for certain that gigantic ogre, to be none else than Akampana*, whose coppery countenance resembles the newly risen sun in splendour and who comes mounted on the back of an elephant, and is causing by his weight the head of the elephant to sway, O prince! (14)

योऽसौ रथस्थो मृगराजकेतु- र्धुन्वन् धनुः शक्रधनुःप्रकाशम् ।
करीव भ्रातृप्रविवृत्तदंष्ट्रः
स इन्द्रजिन्नाम वरप्रधानः ॥ १५ ॥

“That celebrated ogre—who is mounted on a chariot, is distinguished by a standard bearing the ensign of a lion (the king of beasts) and is brandishing his bow, splendid as the bow of Indra (the ruler of gods) who with his exposed fearful teeth, looks like an elephant, and has become pre-eminent by virtue of boons (conferred on him by Brahmā)—is Indrajit by name. (15)

यश्चैष विन्ध्यास्तमहेन्द्रकल्पो
धन्वी रथस्थोऽतिरथोऽतिवीरः ।
विस्फारयंश्चापमतुल्यमानं
नाम्नातिकायोऽतिविवृद्धकायः ॥ १६ ॥

“Again, the yonder archer, who resembles the Vindhya hill, the western mountain (behind which the sun is supposed to withdraw at sunset) and the Mahendra mountain in size, is mounted on a chariot, is a superior car-warrior and is a great champion, who is stretching his bow, unequalled in size, and is distinguished by a huge body, is Atikāya by name. (16)

योऽसौ नवार्कोदितताम्रचक्षु- रारुह्य घण्टानिनदप्रणादम् ।
गजं खरं गर्जति वै महात्मा
महोदरो नाम स एष वीरः ॥ १७ ॥

The yonder well-known hero, whose eyes are coppery like the newly risen sun, and who, riding an elephant whose

* This Akampana as also Nikumbha mentioned in verse 21 are evidently different from their namesakes: killed by Hanumān and Nīla respectively (vide verse 31 of Canto LVI and verse 31 of canto XLIII above.

trumpeting resembles the pealing of bells, roars in harsh tones and is endowed with extraordinary courage, is Mahodara by name. (17)

योऽसौ हयं काञ्चनचित्रभाण्ड-मारुह्य संध्याभ्रगिरिप्रकाशम् ।
प्रासं समुद्यम्य मरीचिनद्धं
पिशाच एषोऽशनितुल्यवेगः ॥ १८ ॥

“He who comes riding a horse decked with golden jewels of various kinds and, therefore, shining as a mountain crowned with an evening cloud (tinged with the sun’s rays), and uplifting a dart clothed with lustre, is Piśāca, who vies with the thunderbolt in velocity. (18)

यश्चैष शूलं निशितं प्रगृह्य
विद्युत्प्रभं किंकरवज्रवेगम् ।
वृषेन्द्रमास्थाय शशिप्रकाश-
मायाति योऽसौ त्रिशिरा यशस्वी ॥ १९ ॥

“Again, he who comes over there firmly seizing a pointed pike shining like lightning and surpassing the thunderbolt in velocity, and riding a lordly bull, bright as the moon, is the illustrious Triśirā. (19)

असौ च जीमूतनिकाशरूपः
कुम्भः पृथुव्यूहसुजातवक्षाः ।
समाहितः पन्नगराजकेतु-
र्विस्फारयन् याति धनुर्विधुन्वन् ॥ २० ॥

“There comes Kumbha, endowed with a form resembling a cloud, who has a fleshy, broad and shapely chest, who is distinguished by a standard bearing the ensign of Vāsuki (the king of serpents) and who is coming fully prepared, stretching and brandishing his bow. (20)

यश्चैष जाम्बूनदवज्रजुष्टं
दीप्तं सधूमं परिधं प्रगृह्य ।
आयाति रक्षोबलकेतुभूतो
योऽसौ निकुम्भोऽद्भुतघोरकर्मा ॥ २१ ॥

“Again, he who comes over there firmly seizing an iron club studded with gold and diamonds and as such radiant as fire and also smoky, studded with sapphires, and who is the principal figure in the army of ogres, is Nikumbha* of prodigious and terrible deeds. (21)

यश्चैष चापासिशरौघजुष्टं
पताकिनं पावकदीप्तरूपम् ।
रथं समास्थाय विभात्युदग्रो
नरान्तकोऽसौ नगशृङ्गयोधी ॥ २२ ॥

“Again the tall fellow who shines brightly over there, occupying a chariot equipped with a multitude of bows, swords and arrows, nay, distinguished by a flag and blazing like fire is Narāntaka, who fights with mountain tops. (22)

यश्चैष नानाविधघोररूपै-
र्व्याघ्रोष्ट्रनागेन्द्रमृगाश्ववक्त्रैः ।
भूतैर्वृतो भाति विवृत्तनेत्रै-
र्योऽसौ सुराणामपि दर्पहन्ता ॥ २३ ॥
यत्रैतदिन्दुप्रतिमं विभाति
छत्रं सितं सूक्ष्मशलाकमग्र्यम् ।
अत्रैष रक्षोधिपतिर्महात्मा
भूतैर्वृतो रुद्र इवावभाति ॥ २४ ॥

“Surrounded by ghosts of various hideous forms with rolling eyes and heads of tigers, camels, lordly elephants, deer and horses, even as Rudra (the god of destruction) is by genii, stands over there that suzerain lord of ogres, who humbles the pride even of gods and is endowed with extraordinary courage, and over whom shines brightly an excellent white canopy resembling the moon and endowed with slender ribs. (23-24)

असौ किरीटी चलकुण्डलास्यो
नगेन्द्रविन्ध्योपमभीमकायः ।
महेन्द्रवैवस्वतदर्पहन्ता
रक्षोधिपः सूर्य इवावभाति ॥ २५ ॥

“There shines like the sun the overlord of ogres, who is decked with a diadem, whose countenance is graced with swinging earrings, whose terrible form resembles the Himālaya (the ruler of mountains) and the Vindhya mountains in size and who has humbled the pride of the mighty Indra and Yama (son of the sun-god).” (25)

प्रत्युवाच ततो रामो विभीषणमरिंदमः ।

अहो दीप्तमहातेजा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ २६ ॥

Thereupon Śrī Rāma, the scourge of his enemies, spoke as follows to Vibhīṣaṇa: “Oh! Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, is invested with an extraordinary luminous glory! (26)

आदित्य इव दुष्प्रेक्ष्यो रश्मिभिर्भाति रावणः ।

न व्यक्तं लक्ष्ये ह्यस्य रूपं तेजःसमावृतम् ॥ २७ ॥

“Like the sun, Rāvaṇa is difficult to gaze on because of his rays of light. I do not actually discern his form, fully endowed as it is with effulgence. (27)

देवदानववीराणां वपुर्नैवंविधं भवेत् ।

यादृशं राक्षसेन्द्रस्य वपुरेतद् विराजते ॥ २८ ॥

“The body even of celestial and demon heroes may not be so bright as the body of the king of ogres is shining brightly. (28)

सर्वे पर्वतसंकाशाः सर्वे पर्वतयोधिनः ।

सर्वे दीप्तायुधधरा योधास्तस्य महात्मनः ॥ २९ ॥

“The warriors fighting on the side of Rāvaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary courage, are all mountain-like in size, all fight with tops of mountains and all wield fiery weapons. (29)

विभाति रक्षोराजोऽसौ प्रदीप्तैर्भीमदर्शनैः ।

भूतैः परिवृतस्तीक्ष्णैर्देहवद्भिरिवान्तकः ॥ ३० ॥

“Surrounded by fiery ghosts of terrible aspect, the yonder ruler of ogres looks like Death surrounded by furious genii endowed with hideous forms. (30)

दिष्ट्यायमद्य पापात्मा मम दृष्टिपथं गतः ।

अद्य क्रोधं विमोक्ष्यामि सीताहरणसम्भवम् ॥ ३१ ॥

“By good luck this sinful-minded fellow has come within the range of my sight today. I shall give free vent to my wrath born of Sītā’s abduction today.” (31)

एवमुक्त्वा ततो रामो धनुरादाय वीर्यवान् ।

लक्ष्मणानुचरस्तस्थौ समुद्धृत्य शरोत्तमम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Saying so, nay, taking up his bow and drawing out an excellent arrow from his quiver, the powerful Śrī Rāma, stood with Lakṣmaṇa as his follower. (32)

ततः स रक्षोधिपतिर्महात्मा

रक्षांसि तान्याह महाबलानि ।

द्वारेषु चर्यागृहगोपुरेषु

सुनिर्वृतास्तिष्ठत निर्विशङ्काः ॥ ३३ ॥

Thereupon that overlord of ogres, who was endowed with great courage, spoke as follows to the aforesaid ogres, who accompanied him and, who were endowed with extraordinary might: “Fully confident and free from apprehension, remain stationed at the main city gates as well as at the gates of the buildings on the principal streets. (33)

इहागतं मां सहितं भवद्भि-

र्वनौकसश्छिद्रमिदं विदित्वा ।

शून्यां पुरीं दुष्प्रसहं प्रमथ्य

प्रधर्षयेयुः सहसा समेताः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Coming to know of my having come this side with you, nay, taking this to be a weak point, and storming the desolate city, which is otherwise difficult to overpower, the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods) may, when united, devastate it all of a sudden.” (34)

विसर्जयित्वा सचिवांस्ततस्तान्

गतेषु रक्षःसु यथानियोगम् ।

व्यदारयद् वानरसागरौघं

महाझषः पूर्णमिवार्णवौघम् ॥ ३५ ॥

Having dismissed his well-known counsellors, and the ogres, who accompanied him, having departed as directed, Rāvaṇa began to split asunder the waters of the sea of monkeys' army in the same way as a gigantic fish would rend the entire expanse of a sea. (35)

तमापतन्तं सहसा समीक्ष्य
दीपेषुचापं युधि राक्षसेन्द्रम् ।
महत् समुत्पाट्य महीधराग्रं
दुद्राव रक्षोधिपतिं हरीशः ॥ ३६ ॥

Tearing up the huge peak of a mountain on perceiving the aforesaid Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), advancing all of a sudden, armed with a radiant bow and arrows, on the battlefield, Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, darted towards the king of ogres. (36)

तच्छैलशृङ्गं बहुवृक्षसानुं
प्रगृह्य चिक्षेप निशाचराय ।
तमापतन्तं सहसा समीक्ष्य
चिच्छेद बाणैस्तपनीयपुङ्खैः ॥ ३७ ॥

Firmly seizing that mountain top, whose slopes were clothed with numerous trees, he hurled it at Rāvaṇa, the prowler of the night. On perceiving it flying precipitately towards himself, Rāvaṇa, however, tore it asunder with his arrows fitted with golden shafts. (37)

तस्मिन् प्रवृद्धोत्तमसानुवृक्षे
शृङ्गे विदीर्णे पतिते पृथिव्याम् ।
महाहिकल्पं शरमन्तकाभं
समादधे राक्षसलोकनाथः ॥ ३८ ॥

The aforesaid peak, whose slopes were covered with excellent fully-grown trees, having fallen to the ground torn into pieces, Rāvaṇa (the lord of the ogre world) fitted to his bow an arrow which resembled a huge serpent and looked like Death himself. (38)

स तं गृहीत्वानिलतुल्यवेगं
सविस्फुलिङ्गज्वलनप्रकाशम् ।
बाणं महेन्द्राशनितुल्यवेगं
चिक्षेप सुग्रीववधाय रुष्टः ॥ ३९ ॥

Taking up that arrow, which rivalled the wind in fury, nay, shone like a fire emitting sparks and vied with the thunderbolt of the mighty Indra (the ruler of gods) in velocity, he discharged it in rage for the destruction of Sugrīva. (39)

स सायको रावणबाहुमुक्तः
शक्राशनिप्रख्यवपुःप्रकाशम् ।
सुग्रीवमासाद्य बिभेद वेगाद्
गुहेरिता क्रौञ्चमिवोग्रशक्तिः ॥ ४० ॥

Reaching Sugrīva, who shone with his body, which resembled the thunderbolt of Indra (the ruler of gods), the said arrows, discharged by Rāvaṇa's arm, pierced him in its flight even as the fierce javelin propelled by Kārtikeya, son of Lord Śiva and the Commander-in-Chief of the celestial army, penetrated the Krauñca mountain. (40)

स सायकार्तो विपरीतचेताः
कूजन् पृथिव्यां निपपात वीरः ।
तं वीक्ष्य भूमौ पतितं विसंजं
नेदुः प्रहृष्टा युधि यातुधानाः ॥ ४१ ॥

Stupefied when struck by that arrow, that hero, Sugrīva, fell groaning to the ground. Perceiving him fallen to the ground deprived of his senses, the ogres on the battlefield shouted exultantly. (41)

ततो गवाक्षो गवयः सुषेण-
स्त्वथर्षभो ज्योतिमुखो नलश्च ।
शैलान् समुत्पाट्य विवृद्धकायाः
प्रदुद्रुवुस्तं प्रति राक्षसेन्द्रम् ॥ ४२ ॥

Tearing up crags, Gavākṣa, Gavaya, Suṣeṇa as also Ṛṣabha, Jyotirmukha and Nala of colossal size for their part then rushed towards that lord of ogres. (42)

तेषां प्रहारान् स चकार मोघान्
रक्षोधिपो बाणशतैः शिताग्रैः ।
तान् वानरेन्द्रानपि बाणजालै-
र्विभेद जाम्बूनदचित्रपुङ्खैः ॥ ४३ ॥

ते वानरेन्द्रास्त्रिदशारिबाणै-
 र्भिन्ना निपेतुर्भुवि भीमकायाः ।
 ततस्तु तद् वानरसैन्यमुग्रं
 प्रच्छादयामास स बाणजालैः ॥ ४४ ॥

With hundreds of sharp-pointed arrows that overlord of ogres rendered their blows ineffectual. He also pierced those monkey-chiefs with streams of arrows endowed with lovely golden shafts. Pierced by the arrows of Rāvaṇa (the enemy of gods), the aforesaid monkey-chiefs of terrifying proportions, however, fell to the ground. Then Rāvaṇa for his part covered that formidable army of monkeys with streams of arrows. (43-44)

ते वध्यमानाः पतिताश्च वीरा
 नानद्यमाना भयशल्यविद्धाः ।
 शाखामृगा रावणसायकार्ता
 जग्मुः शरण्यं शरणं स्म रामम् ॥ ४५ ॥

And, pierced with the darts of terror, while being struck by Rāvaṇa, the aforesaid heroes fell down shrieking. Hard pressed by the arrows of Rāvaṇa, the monkeys sought Śrī Rāma, who is capable of affording shelter to all, as their refuge. (45)

ततो महात्मा स धनुर्धनुष्मा- नादाय रामः सहसा जगाम ।
 तं लक्ष्मणः प्राञ्जलिरभ्युपेत्य
 उवाच रामं परमार्थयुक्तम् ॥ ४६ ॥

Seizing his bow, the said high-souled Śrī Rāma, who was armed with an excellent bow, went forth all at once. Approaching him with joined palms, Lakṣmaṇa addressed to Rāma the following words consonant with truth: (46)

काममार्यं सुपर्याप्तो वधायास्य दुरात्मनः ।
 विधमिष्याम्यहं चैतमनुजानीहि मां विभो ॥ ४७ ॥

“I am fully equal to the destruction of this evil-minded fellow, O noble brother and I shall certainly exterminate him. Pray, grant me leave to do this, O mighty prince!” (47)

तमब्रवीन्महातेजा रामः सत्यपराक्रमः ।
 गच्छ यत्नपरश्चापि भव लक्ष्मण संयुगे ॥ ४८ ॥

Śrī Rāma of unfailing prowess, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, replied to him as follows: “Go, O Lakṣmaṇa, and also be strenuous in conflict (48)

रावणो हि महावीर्यो रणेऽद्भुतपराक्रमः ।
 त्रैलोक्येनापि संक्रुद्धो दुष्प्रसहो न संशयः ॥ ४९ ॥

“Indeed, Rāvaṇa is endowed with extraordinary valour and exhibits marvellous prowess in combat. When enraged, he is difficult to withstand even for all the three worlds. (49)

तस्यच्छिद्राणि मार्गस्व स्वच्छिद्राणि च लक्ष्य ।
 चक्षुषा धनुषाऽऽत्मानं गोपायस्व समाहितः ॥ ५० ॥

“Seek out his vulnerable points and keep an eye on your own weak points. And remaining wide awake, defend yourself with your eyes as well as with your bow.” (50)

राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा सम्परिष्वज्य पूज्य च ।
 अभिवाद्य च रामाय ययौ सौमित्रिराहवे ॥ ५१ ॥

Hearing the advice of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, nay, closely embracing and honouring and greeting him, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) sallied forth for an encounter with the ogres. (51)

स रावणं वारणहस्तबाहुं
 ददर्श भीमोद्यतदीप्तचापम् ।
 प्रच्छादयन्तं शरवृष्टिजालै-

स्तान् वानरान् भिन्नविकीर्णदेहान् ॥ ५२ ॥

He beheld Rāvaṇa with arms resembling the trunks of elephants and his dread and fiery bow uplifted, covering the monkeys with showers of arrows, their bodies torn into pieces thereby. (52)

तमालोक्य महातेजा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
 निवार्य शरजालानि विदुद्राव स रावणम् ॥ ५३ ॥

Seeing him and intercepting the streams of his arrows by hurling rocks etc., the celebrated Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, who was endowed with extraordinary courage, darted towards Rāvaṇa. (53)

रथं तस्य समासाद्य बाहुमुद्यम्य दक्षिणम् ।
त्रासयन् रावणं धीमान् हनूमान् वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ५४ ॥

Approaching his chariot, nay lifting his right arm and menacing him, the sagacious Hanumān spoke to him as follows: (54)

देवदानवगन्धर्वैर्यक्षैश्च सह राक्षसैः ।
अवध्यत्वं त्वया प्राप्तं वानरेभ्यस्तु ते भयम् ॥ ५५ ॥

“The boon of immunity from death at the hands of gods, demons and Gandharvas (celestial musicians) as also of Yakṣas (a class of demigods) and ogres has been secured by you from Brahmā; but there is danger to you from the monkeys. (55)

एष मे दक्षिणो बाहुः पञ्चशाखः समुद्यतः ।
विधमिष्यति ते देहे भूतात्मानं चिरोषितम् ॥ ५६ ॥

“Duly raised, this right hand of mine, consisting of five branches (in the shape of the thumb and the four fingers) will expel from your body the Jivātmā and constituting one’s very Self, which has long dwelt in your body.” (56)

श्रुत्वा हनूमतो वाक्यं रावणो भीमविक्रमः ।
संरक्तनयनः क्रोधादिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ५७ ॥

Hearing the challenge of Hanumān, Rāvaṇa of terrible prowess, his eyes inflamed with anger, retorted as follows: (57)

क्षिप्रं प्रहर निःशङ्कं स्थिरां कीर्तिमवाप्नुहि ।
ततस्त्वां ज्ञातविक्रान्तं नाशयिष्यामि वानर ॥ ५८ ॥

“Strike at once without fear and earn lasting renown. Then I shall destroy you, your prowess having been ascertained thereby, O monkey!” (58)

रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा वायुसूनुर्वचोऽब्रवीत् ।
प्रहतं हि मया पूर्वमक्षं तव सुतं स्मर ॥ ५९ ॥

Hearing the reply of Rāvaṇa, Hanumān (son of the wind-god) rejoined as follows: “Call to your mind your son, Akṣa, having been actually killed by me in the past.” (59)

एवमुक्तो महातेजा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
आजघानानिलसुतं तलेनोरसि वीर्यवान् ॥ ६० ॥

Spoken to as aforesaid, the powerful Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, gave a blow to the son of the wind-god on the chest. (60)

स तलाभिहतस्तेन चचाल च मुहुर्मुहुः ।
स्थितो मुहूर्तं तेजस्वी स्थैर्यं कृत्वा महामतिः ॥ ६१ ॥
आजघान च संकुद्धस्तलेनैवामरद्विषम् ।
ततः स तेनाभिहतो वानरेण महात्मना ॥ ६२ ॥
दशग्रीवः समाधूतो यथा भूमितलेऽचलः ।
संग्रामे तं तथा दृष्ट्वा रावणं तलताडितम् ॥ ६३ ॥
ऋषयो वानराः सिद्धा नेदुर्देवाः सहासुरैः ।
अथाश्वस्य महातेजा रावणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ६४ ॥

Smacked by him, Hanumān reeled again and again. Shortly recovering his balance, however, the highly intelligent Hanumān, who was endowed with energy, stood firm again and, getting infuriated, struck the enemy of gods with his palm alone. Struck by that high-souled monkey, the celebrated Rāvaṇa, a ten-headed monster, was thereupon violently shaken as a mountain during an earthquake. Seeing the said Rāvaṇa struck so hard in combat, Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), the monkeys, Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers by virtue of their very birth) and gods alongwith demons raised a shout of joy. Recovering his breath, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with high spirits forthwith said: (61—64)

साधु वानर वीर्येण श्लाघनीयोऽसि मे रिपुः ।
रावणेनैवमुक्तस्तु मारुतिर्वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ६५ ॥

“Well done, O monkey! You are an adversary worthy of my praise in point of valour.” Applauded in these words, Hanumān (son of the wind-god), however, replied as follows: (65)

धिगस्तु मम वीर्यस्य यत् त्वं जीवसि रावण ।
सकृत् तु प्रहरेदानीं दुर्बुद्धे किं विकत्थसे ॥ ६६ ॥

“Woe be to my valour in that you still survive, O Rāvaṇa! Strike now only once, O evil-minded fellow! Why do you brag? (66)

ततस्त्वां मामको मुष्टिर्नयिष्यति यमक्षयम् ।
ततो मारुतिवाक्येन कोपस्तस्य प्रज्ज्वले ॥ ६७ ॥

“My fist will then dispatch you to the abode of Yama, the god of retribution.” Rāvaṇa’s wrath blazed up as a result of Hanumān’s threat. (67)

संरक्तनयनो यत्नान्मुष्टिमावृत्य दक्षिणम् ।
पातयामास वेगेन वानरोरसि वीर्यवान् ॥ ६८ ॥

Strenuously clenching his right fist, the powerful ogre, his eyes inflamed with anger, struck it with great velocity at the monkey’s chest. (68)

हनूमान् वक्षसि व्यूढे संचचाल पुनः पुनः ।
विह्वलं तु तदा दृष्ट्वा हनूमन्तं महाबलम् ॥ ६९ ॥
रथेनातिरथः शीघ्रं नीलं प्रति समभ्यगात् ।
राक्षसानामधिपतिर्दशग्रीवः प्रतापवान् ॥ ७० ॥

Struck on his broad chest, Hanumān reeled again and again. Seeing Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might, beside himself with anguish at that time, the fiery Rāvaṇa, a ten-headed monster, a warrior of a superior order and the suzerain lord of ogres, however, speedily drove in his chariot towards Nila. (69-70)

पन्नगप्रतिमैर्भीमैः परमर्माभिभेदनैः ।
शरैरादीपयामास नीलं हरिचमूपतिम् ॥ ७१ ॥

With his dreaded arrows, resembling serpents and capable of piercing the vital parts of his enemies, he began to torment

Nila, the Commander-in-Chief of the monkeys. (71)

स शरौघसमायस्तो नीलो हरिचमूपतिः ।
करेणैकेन शैलाग्रं रक्षोधिपतयेऽसृजत् ॥ ७२ ॥

Tearing up the top of a mountain with one hand, Nila, the Commander-in-Chief of the monkeys, who was hard pressed with streams of arrows, hurled it at Rāvaṇa, the overlord of ogres. (72)

हनूमानपि तेजस्वी समाश्वस्तो महामनाः ।
विप्रेक्षमाणो युद्धेप्सुः सरोषमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ७३ ॥
नीलेन सह संयुक्तं रावणं राक्षसेश्वरम् ।
अन्येन युध्यमानस्य न युक्तमभिधावनम् ॥ ७४ ॥

Gazing on Rāvaṇa, seeking, as he did, an encounter with him, the brilliant high-minded Hanumān too, who felt fully refreshed by now, angrily spoke as follows to Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, already come to grips with Nila: “It would not be meet and proper to attack one contending with another.” (73-74)

रावणोऽथ महातेजास्तं शृङ्गं सप्तभिः शरैः ।
आजघान सुतीक्ष्णाग्रैस्तद् विकीर्णं पपात ह ॥ ७५ ॥

Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, forthwith struck the said mountain-top with seven exceedingly sharp-pointed arrows and the crag, they say, fell in pieces. (75)

तद् विकीर्णं गिरेः शृङ्गं दृष्ट्वा हरिचमूपतिः ।
कालाग्निरिव ज्ज्वाल कोपेन परवीरहा ॥ ७६ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid peak shattered, Nila, the Commander-in-Chief of the monkeys, the destroyer of hostile champions, glowed with wrath like the fire at the time of universal destruction. (76)

सोऽश्वकर्णद्रुमान् शालांश्रूतांश्चापि सुपुष्पितान् ।
अन्यांश्च विविधान् वृक्षान् नीलश्चिक्षेप संयुगे ॥ ७७ ॥

The said Nila began to fling aśwakarna and sal as well as mango trees, fully in blossom as also other trees of various species in the course of his combat with Rāvaṇa. (77)

स तान् वृक्षान् समासाद्य प्रतिचिच्छेद रावणः ।
अभ्यवर्षच्च घोरेण शरवर्षेण पावकिम् ॥ ७८ ॥

Finding those trees near, the celebrated Rāvaṇa cut them in pieces and covered Nila (son of the fire-god) with a formidable hail of shafts. (78)

अभिवृष्टः शरौघेण मेघेनेव महाचलः ।
ह्रस्वं कृत्वा ततो रूपं ध्वजाग्रे निपपात ह ॥ ७९ ॥

Reducing his form to a diminutive size when rained upon by a hail of shafts as a huge mountain is by a cloud, Nila thereupon leapt on to the top of Rāvaṇa's standard. (79)

पावकात्मजमालोक्य ध्वजाग्रे समवस्थितम् ।
जज्वाल रावणः क्रोधात् ततो नीलो ननाद च ॥ ८० ॥

Beholding the offspring of the fire-god perched on the point of his standard, Rāvaṇa blazed with fury and Nila thereupon gave forth a shout. (80)

ध्वजाग्रे धनुषश्चाग्रे किरीटाग्रे च तं हरिम् ।
लक्ष्मणोऽथ हनूमांश्च रामश्चापि सुविस्मिताः ॥ ८१ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa and Hanumān and again Śrī Rāma too were greatly astonished to see that monkey now on the apex of the banner and now at the end of the bow and again on the peak of the diadem. (81)

रावणोऽपि महातेजाः कपिलाघवविस्मितः ।
अस्त्रमाहारयामास दीप्तमाग्रेयमद्भुतम् ॥ ८२ ॥

Wonder-struck at the agility of the monkey, Rāvaṇa too, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, invoked the marvellous missile presided over by the fire-god. (82)

ततस्ते चुक्रुशुर्हृष्टा लब्धलक्षाः प्लवंगमाः ।
नीललाघवसम्भ्रान्तं दृष्ट्वा रावणमाहवे ॥ ८३ ॥

Thereupon those monkeys, who felt rejoiced to see Rāvaṇa nonplussed at the agility of Nila and had found an occasion for jubilation, shouted with joy. (83)

वानराणां च नादेन संरब्धो रावणस्तदा ।
सम्भ्रमाविष्टहृदयो न किञ्चित् प्रत्यपद्यत ॥ ८४ ॥

Provoked by the clamour of the monkeys, his heart possessed with flurry, Rāvaṇa did not know what to do. (84)

आग्नेयेनापि संयुक्तं गृहीत्वा रावणः शरम् ।
ध्वजशीर्षस्थितं नीलमुदैक्षत निशाचरः ॥ ८५ ॥

Taking up an arrow charged with the missile presided over by the fire-god, the prowler of the night looked at Nila perched on the tip of his standard. (85)

ततोऽब्रवीन्महातेजा रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
कपे लाघवयुक्तोऽसि मायया परया सह ॥ ८६ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, who was endowed with high spirits, then spoke as follows: "You are endowed with agility combined with supreme deceptive power. (86)

जीवितं खलु रक्षस्व यदि शक्तोऽसि वानर ।
तानि तान्यात्मरूपाणि सृजसि त्वमनेकशः ॥ ८७ ॥
तथापि त्वां मया मुक्तः सायकोऽस्त्रप्रयोजितः ।
जीवितं परिरक्षन्तं जीविताद् भ्रंशयिष्यति ॥ ८८ ॥

"Indeed, save your life if you are able to do so, O monkey! Even though you accomplish numerous deeds of various kinds worthy of your own self, nevertheless the arrow charged with a mystic missile and discharged by me will deprive of your life, you, who are sedulously preserving it." (87-88)

एवमुक्त्वा महाबाहू रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
संधाय बाणमस्त्रेण चमूपतिमताडयत् ॥ ८९ ॥

Saying so and charging an arrow with a mystic missile, the mighty-armed Rāvaṇa struck Nila, the Commander-in-Chief, with it. (89)

सोऽस्त्रमुक्तेन बाणेन नीलो वक्षसि ताडितः ।
निर्दह्यमानः सहसा स पपात महीतले ॥ ९० ॥

Being burnt all over when struck in the chest with the arrow propelled by a mystic missile, the celebrated Nila fell to the earth's surface all at once. (90)

पितृमाहात्म्यसंयोगादात्मनश्चापि तेजसा ।
जानुभ्यामपतद् भूमौ न तु प्राणैर्वियुज्यत ॥ ९१ ॥

By virtue of his father's greatness and his own energy, however, Nila only fell down with his knees to the ground, but was not deprived of his life. (91)

विसंज्ञं वानरं दृष्ट्वा दशग्रीवो रणोत्सुकः ।
रथेनाम्बुदनादेन सौमित्रिमभिदुद्रुवे ॥ ९२ ॥

Finding the monkey unconscious, Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), who was eager for combat, darted towards Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) in his chariot, whose rattling resembled the rumbling of clouds. (92)

आसाद्य रणमध्ये तं वारयित्वा स्थितो ज्वलन् ।
धनुर्विस्फारयामास राक्षसेन्द्रः प्रतापवान् ॥ ९३ ॥

Approaching Lakṣmaṇa after intercepting others and standing in his glory, the powerful Rāvaṇa (the lord of ogres) twanged his bow. (93)

तमाह सौमित्रिरदीनसत्त्वो
विस्फारयन्तं धनुरप्रमेयम् ।
अवेहि मामद्य निशाचरेन्द्र
न वानरांस्त्वं प्रतियोद्धुमर्हसि ॥ ९४ ॥

Undepressed in spirits, Lakṣmaṇa, the son of Sumitrā, challenged in the following words the ogre, who was twanging his bow: "Be aware of me today, O king of ogres! You ought no longer to fight the monkeys." (94)

स तस्य वाक्यं प्रतिपूर्णघोषं
ज्याशब्दमुग्रं च निशम्य राजा ।
आसाद्य सौमित्रिमुपस्थितं तं
रोषान्वितं वाचमुवाच रक्षः ॥ ९५ ॥

Hearing his challenge as well as the formidable twang of his bowstring, generating sonorous vibrations, and drawing near to the aforesaid son of Sumitrā, standing close by, the aforesaid ogre king made the following wrathful reply: (95)

दिष्ट्यासि मे राघव दृष्टिमार्गं
प्राप्तोऽन्तगामी विपरीतबुद्धिः ।
अस्मिन् क्षणे यास्यसि मृत्युलोकं
संसाद्यमानो मम बाणजालैः ॥ ९६ ॥

"Luckily enough for me you have fallen within my sight—you, who are soon going to meet your end, perverted of mind that you are. Being hard pressed with the streams of my arrows, you will reach the region of death this very moment, O scion of Raghu!" (96)

तमाह सौमित्रिरविस्मयानो
गर्जन्तमुद्वृत्तशिताग्रदंष्ट्रम् ।
राजन् न गर्जन्ति महाप्रभावा
विकथ्यसे पापकृतां वरिष्ठ ॥ ९७ ॥

Not feeling in the least surprised, the son of Sumitrā replied as follows to Rāvaṇa, who was blustering and displaying his fierce and sharp-edged teeth: "Those endowed with extraordinary valour do not bluster, while you are talking boastfully, O prince of sinners!" (97)

जानामि वीर्यं तव राक्षसेन्द्र
बलं प्रतापं च पराक्रमं च ।
अवस्थितोऽहं शरचापपाणि-
रागच्छ किं मोघविकथनेन ॥ ९८ ॥

"I know your valour, strength, greatness and prowess too, O ruler of ogres! I stand firmly, arrows and bow in hand; come on, what will you gain by bragging?" (98)

स एवमुक्तः कुपितः ससर्ज
रक्षोधिपः सप्त शरान् सुपुङ्खान् ।
ताँल्लक्ष्मणः काञ्चनचित्रपुङ्खै- श्चिच्छेद बाणैर्निशिताग्रधारैः ॥ ९९ ॥

Filled with rage when challenged in these words, Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres) shot seven arrows with beautiful plumes. Lakṣmaṇa, however, cut them to pieces with his wonderful gold-shafted, sharp pointed and sharp-headed arrows. (99)

तान् प्रेक्षमाणः सहसा निकृत्तान्
निकृत्तभोगानिव पन्नगेन्द्रान् ।
लङ्केश्वरः क्रोधवशं जगाम
ससर्ज चान्यान् निशितान् पृषत्कान् ॥ १०० ॥

Perceiving the arrows cut down like lordly serpents, whose coils have been hacked to pieces, Rāvaṇa (the king of Laṅkā) gave way to wrath and shot other sharp arrows. (100)

स बाणवर्षं तु ववर्ष तीव्रं
रामानुजः कार्मुकसम्प्रयुक्तम् ।
क्षुरार्धचन्द्रोत्तमकर्णिभल्लैः
शरांश्च चिच्छेद न चुक्षुभे च ॥ १०१ ॥

That younger brother of Śrī Rāma for his part showered a piercing hail of arrows by his bow. Nay, he cut asunder the arrows of his enemy with his own arrows of the varieties known by the names of Kṣura, Ardhaçandra, the excellent Karṇi and Bhalla, and did not feel perturbed in the least. (101)

स बाणजालान्यपि तानि तानि
मोघानि पश्यंस्त्रिदशारिराजः ।
विसिस्मिये लक्ष्मणलाघवेन
पुनश्च बाणान् निशितान् मुमोच ॥ १०२ ॥

Finding all those streams of arrows also ineffectual, the ruler of ogres (the enemies of gods) felt astonished at Lakṣmaṇa's skill and began to discharge pointed arrows anew. (102)

स लक्ष्मणश्चापि शिताञ्जिताग्रान्
महेन्द्रतुल्योऽशनिभीमवेगान् ।
संधाय चापे ज्वलनप्रकाशान्
ससर्ज रक्षोधिपतेर्वधाय ॥ १०३ ॥

Nay, fitting to his bow sharp arrows with whetted points, flying with terrible velocity of lightning and shining like fire, the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa, too, a compeer of the mighty

Indra, shot them for the destruction of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres. (103)

स तान् प्रचिच्छेद हि राक्षसेन्द्रः
शिताञ्जराँल्लक्ष्मणमाजघान ।
शरेण कालाग्निसमप्रभेण
स्वयंभुदत्तेन ललाटदेशे ॥ १०४ ॥

The aforesaid ruler of ogres, however, cut to pieces those pointed arrows and struck Lakṣmaṇa in the forehead with a shaft resplendent as the fire of Universal Dissolution, gifted to him by Brahmā, the self-born creator. (104)

स लक्ष्मणो रावणसायकार्त-
श्चचाल चापं शिथिलं प्रगृह्य ।
पुनश्च संज्ञां प्रतिलभ्य कृच्छ्रा-
च्चिच्छेद चापं त्रिदशेन्द्रशत्रोः ॥ १०५ ॥

Grasping his bow feebly when hurt by the arrow of Rāvaṇa, the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa reeled. Regaining his senses with difficulty, however, he tore asunder the bow of the enemy of Indra, the ruler of gods. (105)

निकृत्तचापं त्रिभिराजघान
बाणैस्तदा दाशरथिः शिताग्रैः ।
स सायकार्तो विचचाल राजा
कृच्छ्राच्च संज्ञां पुनराससाद ॥ १०६ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa (son of Daśaratha) then struck Rāvaṇa (whose bow had been cut to pieces) with three sharp-pointed arrows. Hurt by the shafts, the aforesaid king swooned and recovered his consciousness with difficulty. (106)

स कृत्तचापः शरताडितश्च
मेदार्द्रगात्रो रुधिरावसिक्तः ।
जग्राह शक्तिं स्वयमुग्रशक्तिः
स्वयंभुदत्तां युधि देवशत्रुः ॥ १०७ ॥

Struck with arrows and bathed in blood, his bow having been cut, and his limbs splattered with fat, Rāvaṇa (the enemy of gods), who was himself endowed with formidable energy, seized on the battlefield a javelin, gifted to him by Brahmā, the self-born creator. (107)

स तां सधूमानलसंनिकाशां
वित्रासनां संयति वानराणाम् ।
चिक्षेप शक्तिं तरसा ज्वलन्तीं
सौमित्रये राक्षसराष्ट्रनाथः ॥ १०८ ॥

That guardian of the ogre kingdom flung with fury at Lakṣmaṇa that flaming javelin, which shone brightly like a fire crowned with smoke and constituted the terror of the monkeys on the field of battle. (108)

तामापतन्तीं भरतानुजोऽस्त्रै- र्जघान बाणैश्च हुताग्निकल्पैः ।
तथापि सा तस्य विवेश शक्ति-
र्भुजान्तरं दाशरथेर्विशालम् ॥ १०९ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa (a younger brother of Bharata) struck the javelin, even as it came flying towards him with weapons and flame-like shafts. Nevertheless that javelin entered the broad chest of Lakṣmaṇa, the aforesaid son of Daśaratha. (109)

स शक्तिमाञ्शक्तिसमाहतः सन्
जज्वाल भूमौ स रघुप्रवीरः ।
तं विह्वलन्तं सहसाभ्युपेत्य
जग्राह राजा तरसा भुजाभ्याम् ॥ ११० ॥

Grievously hurt by the javelin, that well-known, powerful and pre-eminent hero among the Raghus began to burn with pain as he lay on the ground. Approaching him all of a sudden while he was losing his consciousness, the king of ogres caught him vehemently in his arms. (110)

हिमवान् मन्दरो मेरुस्त्रैलोक्यं वा सहामरैः ।
शक्यं भुजाभ्यामुद्धर्तुं न शक्यो भरतानुजः ॥ १११ ॥

But Lakṣmaṇa (a younger brother of Bharata) could not be raised by the same arms of Rāvaṇa, by which the Himālaya, the Mandara and the Meru mountains or even all the three worlds (viz., heaven, earth and the intermediate aerial region) including gods could be easily lifted up. (111)

शक्त्या ब्राह्म्या तु सौमित्रिस्ताडितोऽपि स्तनान्तरे ।
विष्णोरमीमांस्यभागमात्मानं प्रत्यनुस्मरत् ॥ ११२ ॥

Even though wounded in the space in between the two breasts by a javelin (which originally belonged to Brahmā), Lakṣmaṇa recalled himself to be an inconceivable part of Lord Viṣṇu. (112)

ततो दानवदर्पघ्नं सौमित्रिं देवकण्ठकः ।
तं पीडयित्वा बाहुभ्यां न प्रभुर्लङ्घनेऽभवत् ॥ ११३ ॥

Therefore, even on pressing between his arms Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), who was capable of crushing the pride of demons, Rāvaṇa (a thorn in the side of gods) was not able to lift him up. (113)

ततः क्रुद्धो वायुसुतो रावणं समभिद्रवत् ।
आजघानोरसि क्रुद्धो वज्रकल्पेन मुष्टिना ॥ ११४ ॥

Filled with rage, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, thereupon darted towards Rāvaṇa. Full of fury he struck the latter in the chest with his fist, which came as a thunderbolt. (114)

तेन मुष्टिप्रहारेण रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
जानुभ्यामगमद् भूमौ चचाल च पपात च ॥ ११५ ॥

Under that blow of his fist, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, fell to the floor of his chariot on his knees, reeled and lay prostrate. (115)

आस्यैश्च नेत्रैः श्रवणैः पपात रुधिरं बहु ।
विघूर्णमानो निश्चेष्टो रथोपस्थ उपाविशत् ॥ ११६ ॥

Blood flowed copiously through his mouths, eyes and ears. Nay, rolling about, he sank motionless into the hinder-part of his chariot. (116)

विसंज्ञो मूर्च्छितश्चासीन्न च स्थानं समालभत् ।
विसंज्ञं रावणं दृष्ट्वा समरे भीमविक्रमम् ॥ ११७ ॥

ऋषयो वानराश्चैव नेदुर्देवाश्च सासुराः ।
 हनूमानथ तेजस्वी लक्ष्मणं रावणार्दितम् ॥ ११८ ॥
 आनयद् राघवाभ्याशं बाहुभ्यां परिगृह्य तम् ।
 वायुसूनोः सुहृत्त्वेन भक्त्या परमया च सः ।
 शत्रूणामप्यकम्प्योऽपि लघुत्वमगमत् कपेः ॥ ११९ ॥

Rāvaṇa fainted, and as such lost his consciousness and could not know where he was. Seeing Rāvaṇa of redoubtable prowess in combat, senseless, the Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras) as well as the monkeys as also the gods including the demons (invisibly present on the scene) shouted in joy. Claspings Lakṣmaṇa, wounded by Rāvaṇa, with his arms, the courageous Hanumān forthwith brought him to the presence of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). Due to Hanumān's affection and extreme devotion to him, Lakṣmaṇa became light for the former, even though he was unshakable for his enemies. (117—119)

तं समुत्सृज्य सा शक्तिः सौमित्रिं युधि निर्जितम् ।
 रावणस्य रथे तस्मिन् स्थानं पुनरुपागमत् ॥ १२० ॥

Leaving for good Sumitrā's son, who had been well-nigh vanquished in battle, the aforesaid javelin returned to its allotted position in the well-known chariot of Rāvaṇa. (120)

रावणोऽपि महातेजाः प्राप्य संज्ञां महाहवे ।
 आददे निशितान् बाणाञ्जग्राह च महद्भुजः ॥ १२१ ॥

Regaining his consciousness in the course of the major conflict, Rāvaṇa too, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, took up sharp arrows and further seized a large bow. (121)

आश्वस्तश्च विशल्यश्च लक्ष्मणः शत्रुसूदनः ।
 विष्णोर्भागममीमांस्यमात्मानं प्रत्यनुस्मरन् ॥ १२२ ॥

Recollecting himself to be an inconceivable part of Lord Viṣṇu, Lakṣmaṇa too, the destroyer of his enemies, regained his consciousness and had his wounds healed up. (122)

निपातितमहावीरां वानराणां महाचमूम् ।
 राघवस्तु रणे दृष्ट्वा रावणं समभिद्रवत् ॥ १२३ ॥

Finding that the huge army of monkeys had its mighty heroes struck down on the battlefield, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) for his part duly assailed Rāvaṇa. (123)

अथैनमनुसंक्रम्य हनूमान् वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
 मम पृष्ठं समारुह्य राक्षसं शास्तुमर्हसि ॥ १२४ ॥
 विष्णुर्यथा गरुत्मन्तमारुह्यामरवैरिणम् ।
 तच्छ्रुत्वा राघवो वाक्यं वायुपुत्रेण भाषितम् ॥ १२५ ॥
 अथारुरोह सहसा हनूमन्तं महाकपिम् ।
 रथस्थं रावणं संख्ये ददर्श मनुजाधिपः ॥ १२६ ॥

Approaching him, Hanumān forthwith submitted as follows: "You should subdue the ogre only after climbing on my shoulders even as Lord Viṣṇu tamed Madhu (an enemy of gods) after mounting the back of Garuḍa (the king of birds, His own carrier)." Hearing the aforesaid prayer uttered by Hanumān (son of the wind-god), Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) thereupon precipitately climbed on the shoulders of the great monkey, Hanumān. Śrī Rāma (the suzerain lord of human beings) saw Rāvaṇa mounted on his chariot on the field of battle. (124—126)

तमालोक्य महातेजाः प्रदुद्राव स रावणम् ।
 वैरोचनमिव क्रुद्धो विष्णुरभ्युद्यतायुधः ॥ १२७ ॥

Beholding him, Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, rushed furiously towards Rāvaṇa, even as Viṣṇu darted with his discus upraised against the demon Bali, son of Virocana. (127)

ज्याशब्दमकरोत् तीव्रं वज्रनिष्पेषनिष्ठुरम् ।
 गिरा गम्भीरया रामो राक्षसेन्द्रमुवाच ह ॥ १२८ ॥

He caused the string of his bow to make a sharp ringing sound, piercing as a clap of thunder by drawing it and spoke as follows to Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, in a deep voice, so the tradition goes: (128)

तिष्ठ तिष्ठ मम त्वं हि कृत्वा विप्रियमीदृशम् ।

क्व नु राक्षसशार्दूल गत्वा मोक्षमवाप्स्यसि ॥ १२९ ॥

“Forbear, forbear, O tiger among ogres!
Going whither will you get deliverance after giving me such offence? (129)

यदीन्द्रवैवस्वतभास्करान् वा
स्वयंभुवैश्वानरशंकरान् वा ।
गमिष्यसि त्वं दशधा दिशो वा
तथापि मे नाद्य गतो विमोक्ष्यसे ॥ १३० ॥

“If you fly for protection either to Indra
(the ruler of gods), Yama (son of the sun-god) and the sun-god (himself) or to Brahmā
(the self-born creator), the god of fire, or Lord Śiva (who brings prosperity to all) or in the ten directions; nevertheless you shall not escape from my hands today even if gone there. (130)

यश्चैष शक्त्या निहतस्त्वयाद्य
गच्छन् विषादं सहसाभ्युपेत्य ।
स एष रक्षोगणराज मृत्युः
सपुत्रपौत्रस्य तवाद्य युद्धे ॥ १३१ ॥

“The same Lakṣmaṇa who, on having fallen a prey to insensibility when grievously hurt by you with a javelin today, you having arrived in my presence shall prove to be death not only of yourself but also of your sons and grandsons on the battlefield. (131)

एतेन चात्यद्भुतदर्शनानि
शरैर्जनस्थानकृतालयानि ।
चतुर्दशान्यात्तवरायुधानि

रक्षःसहस्राणि निषूदितानि ॥ १३२ ॥

“By this adversary of yours, viz., myself, were exterminated with his arrows fourteen thousand ogres of exceedingly weird looks, who had taken up their abode in Janasthāna and pressed excellent weapons into their service.” (132)

राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रो महाबलः ।
वायुपुत्रं महावेगं वहन्तं राघवं रणे ॥ १३३ ॥

रोषेण महताऽऽविष्टः पूर्ववैरमनुस्मरन् ।
आजघान शरैर्दीप्तैः कालानलशिखोपमैः ॥ १३४ ॥

Seized with violent anger on hearing the speech of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), and recollecting his former enmity, Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), who was endowed with extraordinary might, struck with flaming arrows, resembling the tongues of the destructive fire at the time of Universal Dissolution, Hanumān (son of the wind-god), who was full of great impetuosity and bore Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) on the field of battle, severely injuring him. (133-34)

राक्षसेनाहवे तस्य ताडितस्यापि सायकैः ।
स्वभावतेजोयुक्तस्य भूयस्तेजोऽभ्यवर्धत ॥ १३५ ॥

The vigour of Hanumān, who was endowed with native energy, grew all the more even when he was struck with arrows
by the ogre, Rāvaṇa, on the battlefield.
(135)

ततो रामो महातेजा रावणेन कृतव्रणम् ।
दृष्ट्वा प्लवगशार्दूलं क्रोधस्य वशमेयिवान् ॥ १३६ ॥

Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, was seized with anger on seeing Hanumān (a tiger among the monkeys) wounded by Rāvaṇa. (136)

तस्याभिसंक्रम्य रथं सचक्रं
साश्वध्वजच्छत्रमहापताकम् ।
ससारथिं साशनिशूलखड्गं
रामः प्रचिच्छेद शितैः शराग्रैः ॥ १३७ ॥

Finding Rāvaṇa, advancing towards his chariots, Śrī Rāma tore it into pieces with its wheels, horses, standard, canopy, huge pennon, charioteer, Aśanis (a kind of missile), pikes and swords with the sharp heads of his arrows. (137)

अथेन्द्रशत्रुं तरसा जघान
बाणेन वज्राशनिसंनिभेन ।
भुजान्तरे व्यूढसुजातरूपे
वज्रेण मेरुं भगवानिवेन्द्रः ॥ १३८ ॥

Then with his shaft shining brightly as the thunderbolt and Aśani, Śrī Rāma now struck with vehemence Rāvaṇa (the enemy of Indra) in his broad and lovely-looking chest (lit., the space between the arms), even as the mighty Indra would strike the Meru mountain with his thunderbolt. (138)

यो वज्रपाताशनिसंनिपाता- न चुक्षुभे नापि चचाल राजा ।
स रामबाणाभिहतो भृशार्त-
श्चचाल चापं च मुमोच वीरः ॥ १३९ ॥
तं विह्वलन्तं प्रसमीक्ष्य रामः
समाददे दीप्तमथार्धचन्द्रम् ।
तेनार्कवर्णं सहसा किरीटं
चिच्छेद रक्षोधिपतेर्महात्मा ॥ १४० ॥

That heroic monarch who never felt disturbed, much less shook under the impact of the thunderbolt of Indra or of lightning, reeled when struck by the arrow of Śrī Rāma, greatly agonized as he was and let fall his bow. Seeing him swooning, the high-souled Śrī Rāma forthwith took up a flaming arrow with a crescent-shaped head and hastily shattered with it the diadem of Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres), which was bright as the sun. (139-140)

तं निर्विषाशीविषसंनिकाशं
शान्तार्चिषं सूर्यमिवाप्रकाशम् ।
गतश्रियं कृत्तकिरीटकूट-
मुवाच रामो युधि राक्षसेन्द्रम् ॥ १४१ ॥

Śrī Rāma then spoke as follows to the ruler of ogres who closely resembled a venomous snake rid of its poison and was divested of his splendour like the sun whose rays had disappeared and whose glory had departed, his diadems having been torn asunder: (141)

कृतं त्वया कर्म महत् सुभीमं
हतप्रवीरश्च कृतस्त्वयाहम् ।
तस्मात् परिश्रान्त इति व्यवस्य
न त्वां शरैर्मृत्युवशं नयामि ॥ १४२ ॥

“A great and exceedingly terrible feat has been accomplished by you and my pre-eminent champions have been killed by you. Knowing that you have been fully exhausted thereby, I shall not put you under the sway of Death with my shafts. (142)

प्रयाहि जानामि रणार्दितस्त्वं
प्रविश्य रात्रिंचरराज लङ्काम् ।
आश्वस्य निर्याहि रथी च धन्वी
तदा बलं प्रेक्ष्यसि मे रथस्थः ॥ १४३ ॥

“I know you stand agonized through continued fighting. Therefore, depart for the present, O king of the rangers of the night! Re-entering Laṅkā and resting awhile, sally forth again, duly mounted on a chariot and armed with a bow, then, remaining seated in your car, you shall witness my might.” (143)

स एवमुक्तो हतदर्पहर्षो
निकृत्तचापः स हताश्वसूतः ।
शरार्दितो भग्नमहाकिरीटो
विवेश लङ्कां सहसा स्म राजा ॥ १४४ ॥

Consoled in these words, the celebrated king—whose vanity and joy had been crushed, whose bow had been lacerated to pieces, whose horses and charioteer had been killed, whose big diadem had been shattered and who had been wounded with arrows—hastily (re-) entered Laṅkā. (144)

तस्मिन् प्रविष्टे रजनीचरेन्द्रे
महाबले दानवदेवशत्रौ ।
हरीन् विशल्यान् सह लक्ष्मणेन
चकार रामः परमाहवागे ॥ १४५ ॥

The aforesaid lord of the prowlers of the night, the enemy of gods and demons alike, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having withdrawn, Śrī Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa drew out the arrows from the bodies of the monkeys in the forefront of the vast battle-field. (145)

तस्मिन् प्रभगे त्रिदशेन्द्रशत्रौ
 सुरासुरा भूतगणा दिशश्च ।
 ससागराः सर्षिमहोरगाश्च
 तथैव भूम्यम्बुचराः प्रहृष्टाः ॥ १४६ ॥
 On that enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods) having been routed, the gods as well as the guardians of the four quarters including the seas, the Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras) and large serpents and, even so, the creatures of land and water felt highly rejoiced. (146)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ५९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Fifty-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LX

The slumbering Kumbhakarṇa is roused by the ogres under orders of their king, who felt disconsolate at his own defeat, and the monkeys get alarmed to see the former

स प्रविश्य पुरीं लङ्कां रामबाणभयार्दितः ।
 भग्नदर्पस्तदा राजा बभूव व्यथितेन्द्रियः ॥ १ ॥

Entering the city of Laṅkā stricken with the fear of Śrī Rāma's arrows, the king, who had his vanity crushed, felt troubled in mind. (1)

मातंग इव सिंहेन गरुडेनेव पन्नगः ।
 अभिभूतोऽभवद् राजा राघवेण महात्मना ॥ २ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the king was overcome by the high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as an elephant is by a lion and a serpent by Garuḍa, the king of birds. (2)

ब्रह्मदण्डप्रतीकानां विद्युच्चलितवर्चसाम् ।
 स्मरन् राघवबाणानां विव्यथे राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ ३ ॥

The king of ogres felt disquieted while recalling the arrows of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), which resembled Brahmaṇḍa (a fiery comet appearing at the time of universal dissolution) and emitted an unsteady light like lightning. (3)

स काञ्चनमयं दिव्यमाश्रित्य परमासनम् ।
 विप्रेक्षमाणो रक्षांसि रावणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ४ ॥

Having taken his seat on his magnificent and excellent throne of gold and letting his gaze wander over the ogres, Rāvaṇa spoke as follows: (4)

सर्वं तत् खलु मे मोघं यत् तप्तं परमं तपः ।
 यत् समानो महेन्द्रेण मानुषेण विनिर्जितः ॥ ५ ॥

“All that asceticism of the supreme type, which was practised by me, has undoubtedly proved infructuous in that I, the equal of the mighty Indra (the ruler of gods) have been utterly defeated by a mere mortal. (5)

इदं तद् ब्रह्मणो घोरं वाक्यं मामभ्युपस्थितम् ।
 मानुषेभ्यो विजानीहि भयं त्वमिति तत्तथा ॥ ६ ॥

“That terrible warning of Brahmā in the words: ‘Know you for certain of danger from humans!’ has now flashed upon me. It is coming true. (6)

देवदानवगन्धर्वैर्यक्षराक्षसपन्नगैः ।
 अवध्यत्वं मया प्रोक्तं मानुषेभ्यो न याचितम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Immunity from death at the hands of gods, demons, Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Yakṣas (a class of demigods), ogres and serpents was sought by me, but not at the hands of mortals. (7)

तमिमं मानुषं मन्ये रामं दशरथात्मजम्।
 इक्ष्वाकुकुलजातेन अनरण्येन यत् पुरा ॥ ८ ॥
 उत्पत्स्यति हि मद्वंशपुरुषो राक्षसाधम।
 यस्त्वां सपुत्रं सामात्यं सबलं साश्वसारथिम् ॥ ९ ॥
 निहनिष्यति संग्रामे त्वां कुलाधम दुर्मते।
 शमोऽहं वेदवत्या च यथा सा धर्षिता पुरा ॥ १० ॥

“I conclude this Rāma, an offspring of Daśaratha, to be that mortal of whom mention was made by King Anarāya, born in the race of Ikṣvāku, by whom I was formerly cursed in the following words: ‘In my house will undoubtedly be born a man, who will exterminate on the field of battle you with your sons, ministers, army, horses and charioteers, O evil-minded bane of your race, the vilest of ogres!’ I was further cursed by one, Vedavati, as she was violated by me of old. (8—10)

सेयं सीता महाभागा जाता जनकनन्दिनी।
 उमा नन्दिश्वरश्चापि रम्भा वरुणकन्यका ॥ ११ ॥
 यथोक्तास्तनमया प्राप्तं न मिथ्या ऋषिभाषितम्।
 एतदेव समागम्य यत्नं कर्तुमिहार्हम् ॥ १२ ॥
 राक्षसाश्चापि तिष्ठन्तु चर्यागोपुरमूर्धसु।
 स चाप्रतिमगाम्भीर्यो देवदानवदर्पहा ॥ १३ ॥
 ब्रह्मशापाभिभूतस्तु कुम्भकर्णो विबोध्यताम्।
 समरे जितमात्मानं प्रहस्तं च निषूदितम् ॥ १४ ॥
 ज्ञात्वा रक्षोबलं भीममादिदेश महाबलः।
 द्वारेषु यत्नः क्रियतां प्राकारश्चाधिरुह्यताम् ॥ १५ ॥
 निद्रावशसमाविष्टः कुम्भकर्णो विबोध्यताम्।
 सुखं स्वपिति निश्चिन्तः कामोपहतचेतनः ॥ १६ ॥

“The same highly blessed lady has been born as this daughter of Janaka. The result, which Umā (the divine Consort of Lord Śiva), Nandiśwara (a monkey-faced attendant of Lord Śiva), Rambhā (a celestial nymph) and Puñjikasthālā (another celebrated nymph, daughter of Varuṇa) predicted, has also been attained by me.* The prediction made by those endowed with prophetic vision can never be untrue. Knowing this very fact, you ought to strive to conquer the enemy. And let ogres too take up their position on the main roads as well as on the top of gates. Nay, let Kumbhakarna for his part, who is unparalleled in profundity and is capable of crushing the vanity of gods and demons alike and who remains overwhelmed with slumber due to the execration of Brahmā, be fully roused.” Knowing himself to have been conquered in combat, and Prahasta to have been killed, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, commanded the army of ogres as follows: “Remaining stationed at the gates, let an attempt be made to guard them; and let the defensive walls be scaled (and a watch be kept at the enemy). Also, Kumbhakarna be fully roused. His understanding vitiated by lust, he is slumbering at ease, free from all cares. (11—16)

नव सप्त दशाष्टौ च मासान् स्वपिति राक्षसः।
 मन्त्रं कृत्वा प्रसुप्तोऽयमितस्तु नवमेऽहनि ॥ १७ ॥
 “The ogre sleeps for nine, ten or eight months. Having deliberated with me, he for his part fell fast asleep nine months ago from now. (17)

तं तु बोधयत क्षिप्रं कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम्।
 स हि संख्ये महाबाहुः ककुदं सर्वरक्षसाम्।
 वानरान् राजपुत्रौ च क्षिप्रमेव हनिष्यति ॥ १८ ॥

* Frightened on the occasion of Rāvaṇa’s lifting up the Kailāsa mountain, Goddess Umā pronounced the imprecation that a woman would be the ultimate cause of his death. Nandiśwara, who was laughed at by Rāvaṇa because of his monkey-like features, cursed him saying that those akin to him in features and prowess would bring about the destruction of his race. Nalakūbera (son of Kubera) on behalf of Rambhā and Brahmā on behalf of Puñjikasthālā uttered the curse that Rāvaṇa would meet his death if he ravished any woman.

“Therefore speedily rouse Kumbhakarna, who is endowed with extraordinary might. That mighty armed ogre, the foremost of all ogres, will undoubtedly strike down at once the monkeys as well as the two princes (Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa). (18)

एष केतुः परं संख्ये मुख्यो वै सर्वरक्षसाम् ।
कुम्भकर्णः सदा शेते मूढो ग्राम्यसुखे रतः ॥ १९ ॥

“Addicted as he is to a vulgar delight in the form of sleep, this insensate Kumbhakarna, who is the most distinguished in combat, and is actually the foremost of all ogres—remains ever asleep. (19)

रामेणाभिनिरस्तस्य संग्रामेऽस्मिन् सुदारुणे ।
भविष्यति न मे शोकः कुम्भकर्णे विबोधिते ॥ २० ॥
किं करिष्याम्यहं तेन शक्रतुल्यबलेन हि ।
ईदृशे व्यसने घोरे यो न साह्याय कल्पते ॥ २१ ॥

“On Kumbhakarna being fully roused, the grief preying on those who stand vanquished by Rāma in this most terrible struggle, will cease. Even though he is the equal of Indra in might, what shall I do of him if he is not able to assist me even in such a terrible calamity.” (20-21)

ते तु तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रस्य राक्षसाः ।
जग्मुः परमसम्भ्रान्ताः कुम्भकर्णनिवेशनम् ॥ २२ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid speech of Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, the said ogres proceeded to the residence of Kumbhakarna, extremely puzzled for they did not know how to rouse Kumbhakarna before time. (22)

ते रावणसमादिष्टा मांसशोणितभोजनाः ।
गन्धं माल्यं महद्भक्ष्यमादाय सहसा ययुः ॥ २३ ॥

Taking with them perfumery, garlands and immense food, when duly commanded by Rāvaṇa, the said ogres, who fed on flesh and blood, left all at once for Kumbhakarna's residence. (23)

तां प्रविश्य महाद्वारां सर्वतो योजनायताम् ।
कुम्भकर्णगुहां रम्यां पुष्पगन्धप्रवाहिनीम् ॥ २४ ॥

कुम्भकर्णस्य निःश्वासादवधूता महाबलाः ।
प्रतिष्ठमानाः कृच्छ्रेण यत्नात् प्रविविशुर्गुहाम् ॥ २५ ॥

Having penetrated deep into that lovely subterranean abode of Kumbhakarna, which was provided with enormous gates, nay, which was one Yojana (or eight miles) in extent on every side, and from which issued a stream of odour of flowers—the ogres, though endowed with extraordinary might, were pushed back by force of the wind from the nostrils of Kumbhakarna and, pressing forward with difficulty, forced their way into the cave with effort. (24-25)

तां प्रविश्य गुहां रम्यां रत्नकाञ्चनकुट्टिमाम् ।
ददृशुर्नैऋतव्याघ्राः शयानं भीमविक्रमम् ॥ २६ ॥

Penetrating deep into the delightful underground dwelling with its pavement of precious stones and gold, the aforesaid tigers among ogres beheld Kumbhakarna of terrible prowess sleeping. (26)

ते तु तं विकृतं सुप्तं विकीर्णमिव पर्वतम् ।
कुम्भकर्णं महानिद्रं समेताः प्रत्यबोधयन् ॥ २७ ॥

Those ogres for their part collectively began to waken the said Kumbhakarna, who, while lying asleep in an unnatural state, looked like a scattered mountain, and was buried in deep slumber. (27)

ऊर्ध्वलोमाञ्चिततनुं श्वसन्तमिव पन्नगम् ।
भ्रामयन्तं विनिःश्वासैः शयानं भीमविक्रमम् ॥ २८ ॥
भीमनासापुटं तं तु पातालविपुलाननम् ।
शयने न्यस्तसर्वाङ्गं मेदोरुधिरगन्धिनम् ॥ २९ ॥
काञ्चनाङ्गदन्द्वाङ्गं किरीटेनार्कवर्चसम् ।
ददृशुर्नैऋतव्याघ्रं कुम्भकर्णमरिंदमम् ॥ ३० ॥

They, for their part, found Kumbhakarna of terrible prowess, a veritable tiger among the ogres (scions of Nirṛti, the ogre presiding over the south-west) and the tamer of his enemies, hissing like a serpent, nay, making people turn back by the force of his outgoing breaths, while sleeping, distinguished by horrible nostrils and a mouth enormous as

Pātāla (the lowest subterranean region), emitting an odour of fat and blood from his unrinsed mouth and shining as the sun because of his diadem, his body covered with bristling hair, all his limbs stretched on a bed and his arms adorned with armlets of gold. (28—30)

ततश्चकुर्महात्मानः कुम्भकर्णस्य चाग्रतः ।
भूतानां मेरुसंकाशं राशिं परमतर्पणम् ॥ ३१ ॥

The gigantic ogres then placed before Kumbhakarna a heap of animals, resembling Mount Meru, which was calculated to bring him supreme satiation. (31)

मृगाणां महिषाणां च वराहाणां च संचयान् ।
चकुर्नैर्ऋतशार्दूला राशिमन्नस्य चाद्भुतम् ॥ ३२ ॥

The said tigers among ogres also piled up hillocks of antelopes, buffaloes and swine as well as a prodigious mound of victuals. (32)

ततः शोणितकुम्भांश्च मांसानि विविधानि च ।
पुरस्तात् कुम्भकर्णस्य चकुस्त्रिदशशत्रवः ॥ ३३ ॥

After that the enemies of gods placed before Kumbhakarna pails of blood and meats of every variety as well. (33)

लिलिपुश्च परार्घ्येन चन्दनेन परंतपम् ।
दिव्यैराश्वासयामासुर्मात्यैर्गन्धैश्च गन्धिभिः ॥ ३४ ॥

Again, the ogres daubed Kumbhakarna (the scourge of his enemies) with a superb sandal-paste and communicated odour to him through fragrant garlands and sweet perfumes. (34)

धूपगन्धांश्च समृजुस्तुष्टुवुश्च परंतपम् ।
जलदा इव चानेदुर्यातुधानास्ततस्ततः ॥ ३५ ॥

They also burnt incense and extolled Kumbhakarna, the scourge of his enemies. The ogres also thundered like clouds on every side. (35)

शङ्खान्श्च पूरयामासुः शशाङ्कसदृशप्रभान् ।
तुमुलं युगपच्चापि विनेदुश्चाप्यमर्षिताः ॥ ३६ ॥

Nay, they blew with full cheeks their conches shining brightly like the sun and synchronously raised a tumultuous uproar, seized with anger, as they were. (36)

नेदुरास्फोटयामासुश्चिक्षिपुस्ते निशाचराः ।
कुम्भकर्णविबोधार्थं चक्रुस्ते विपुलं स्वरम् ॥ ३७ ॥

The rangers of the night roared, clapped on their arms and pushed the limbs of Kumbhakarna. They further set up a great clamour in order to awaken him fully. (37)

सशङ्खभेरीपणवप्रणादं
सास्फोटितक्ष्वेलितसिंहनादम् ।
दिशो द्रवन्तस्त्रिदिवं किरन्तः
श्रुत्वा विहंगाः सहसा निपेतुः ॥ ३८ ॥

On hearing the aforesaid slapping of arms, thundering and leonine roar, combined with the blast of conches and the roll of kettledrums and drums, while flying rapidly in all the ten directions and soaring into the sky, birds fell down all at once. (38)

यदा भृशं तैर्निन्दैर्महात्मा
न कुम्भकर्णो बुबुधे प्रसुप्तः ।
ततो भुशुण्डीर्मुसलानि सर्वे
रक्षोगणास्ते जगृहुर्गदाश्च ॥ ३९ ॥

When the colossal Kumbhakarna, who was fast asleep, could not be roused even by means of those aforesaid sounds, repeatedly set up, all those troops of ogres seized hold of Bhuṣuṇḍis (a particular kind of mallet), mallets and maces. (39)

तं शैलशृङ्गैर्मुसलैर्गदाभि- र्वक्षःस्थले मुद्गरमुष्टिभिश्च ।
सुखप्रसुप्तं भुवि कुम्भकर्णं
रक्षांस्युदग्राणि तदा निजघ्नुः ॥ ४० ॥

The mighty ogres then began to strike hard the celebrated Kumbhakarna, lying fast asleep comfortably on the ground, with mountain peaks, pestles, maces, mallets and fists too on the chest. (40)

तस्य निःश्वासवातेन कुम्भकर्णस्य रक्षसः ।
रक्षसाः कुम्भकर्णस्य स्थातुं शेकुर्न चाग्रतः ॥ ४१ ॥

Repulsed by the wind in the form of the outgoing breath of the celebrated ogre, Kumbhakarna, however, the ogres could not stand before him. (41)

ततः परिहिता गाढं राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ।
मृदङ्गपणवान् भेरीः शङ्खकुम्भगणास्तथा ॥ ४२ ॥

Tightly dressed (in order to be able to stand firmly) the aforesaid ogres of terrible prowess began to beat clay tomtoms and drums, kettledrums and pails as well. (42)

दश राक्षससाहस्रं युगपत्पर्यवारयत् ।
नीलाञ्जनचयाकारं ते तु तं प्रत्यबोधयन् ॥ ४३ ॥
अभिघ्नन्तो नदन्तश्च न च सम्बुबुधे तदा ।
यदा चैनं न शेकुस्ते प्रतिबोधयितुं तदा ॥ ४४ ॥
ततो गुरुतरं यत्नं दारुणं समुपाक्रमन् ।
अश्वानुष्टान् खरान् नागाञ्जघ्नुर्दण्डकशाङ्कुशैः ॥ ४५ ॥
भेरीशङ्खमृदङ्गांश्च सर्वप्राणैरवादयन् ।
निजघ्नुश्चास्य गात्राणि महाकाष्ठकटकैः ॥ ४६ ॥
मुद्गरैर्मुसलैश्चापि सर्वप्राणसमुद्यतैः ।
तेन नादेन महता लङ्का सर्वा प्रपूरिता ।
सपर्वतवना सर्वा सोऽपि नैव प्रबुध्यते ॥ ४७ ॥

Ten thousand ogres surrounded at a time Kumbhakarna, who resembled a mass of black coal. Striking him on all sides and roaring, they for their part tried to rouse him; nevertheless he did not wake fully then. Nay, when they could not waken him at that time, they initiated a more effective and violent method (of rousing him) than before. They struck horses, camels, donkeys and elephants with staffs, whips and goads and urged them to tread on him. They also sounded kettledrums, conches and clay tomtoms with all their might—and pounded his limbs with bundles of heavy logs, mallets and pestles too lifted with all their strength. The entire Laṅkā, mountains, woods and all, was filled with that noise; yet Kumbhakarna too did not wake at all. (43—47)

ततो भेरीसहस्रं तु युगपत् समहन्यत ।
मृष्टकाञ्चनकोणानामसक्तानां समन्ततः ॥ ४८ ॥

Then was sounded all at once a thousand of kettledrums ceaselessly beaten with sticks of polished gold on all sides. (48)

एवमप्यतिनिद्रस्तु यदा नैव प्रबुध्यते ।
शापस्य वशमापन्नस्ततः क्रुद्धा निशाचराः ॥ ४९ ॥

When, however, the ogre, who was wrapt in excessive slumber under the spell of a curse uttered by Brahmā, could not be wakened at all in the aforesaid manner, the prowlers of the night were filled with rage. (49)

ततः कोपसमाविष्टाः सर्वे भीमपराक्रमाः ।
तद् रक्षो बोधयिष्यन्तश्चक्रुरन्ये पराक्रमम् ॥ ५० ॥

Completely dominated by anger, all other ogres (of terrible prowess) tried their strength to rouse that ogre. (50)

अन्ये भेरीः समाजघ्नुरन्ये चक्रुर्महास्वनम् ।
केशानन्ये प्रलुलुपुः कर्णानन्ये दशन्ति च ॥ ५१ ॥

Some beat kettledrums with full force, others raised a shout, still others tore out his hair, while yet others bit his ears. (51)

उदकुम्भशतानन्ये समसिञ्चन्त कर्णयोः ।
न कुम्भकर्णः पस्पन्दे महानिद्रावशं गतः ॥ ५२ ॥

Some more poured hundreds of pails of water into them. Kumbhakarna, however, who had fallen under the sway of deep slumber, did not stir. (52)

अन्ये च बलिनस्तस्य कूटमुद्गरपाणयः ।
मूर्ध्नि वक्षसि गात्रेषु पातयन् कूटमुद्गरान् ॥ ५३ ॥

Other mighty ogres too, who had mallets studded with nails, in their hands, let their mallets too fall on his head, chest and other limbs. (53)

रज्जुबन्धनबद्धाभिः शतघ्नीभिश्च सर्वतः ।
वध्यमानो महाकायो न प्राबुध्यत राक्षसः ॥ ५४ ॥

Nay, the colossal ogre did not wake, though being struck on all sides with Śataghñis (a kind of mace) fastened with cords and thongs. (54)

वारणानां सहस्रं च शरीरेऽस्य प्रधावितम्।
कुम्भकर्णस्तदा बुद्ध्वा स्पर्शं परमबुध्यत ॥ ५५ ॥

A thousand of elephants were also made to run up and down his body. Waking only then, he felt a mere touch. (55)

स पात्यमानैर्गिरिशृङ्गवृक्षै- रचिन्तयंस्तान् विपुलान् प्रहारान्।
निद्राक्षयात् क्षुब्धयपीडितश्च
विजृम्भमाणः सहस्रोत्पपात ॥ ५६ ॥

Tormented by the bugbear of hunger due to interruption in his sleep, though not feeling in the least the heavy blows dealt with the mountain-tops and trees, which were still being made to descend on him, nay, stretching his limbs from drowsiness, he sprang to his feet all at once. (56)

स नागभोगाचलशृङ्गकल्पौ
विक्षिप्य बाहू जितवज्रसारौ।
विवृत्य वक्त्रं वडवामुखाभं
निशाचरोऽसौ विकृतं जजृम्भे ॥ ५७ ॥

Stretching out his arms, which resembled the coils of a cobra in length and the peaks of a mountain (in stiffness), nay, which had conquered rivals with an adamant frame, and opening his mouth, loathsome as a submarine fire, the said ranger of the night yawned. (57)

तस्य जाजृम्भमाणस्य वक्त्रं पातालसंनिभम्।
ददृशे मेरुशृङ्गाग्रे दिवाकर इवोदितः ॥ ५८ ॥

The mouth of Kumbhakarna, which resembled Pātāla (the lowest subterranean region), while he was repeatedly yawning, appeared like the sun risen over the top of a summit of Mount Meru. (58)

स जृम्भमाणोऽतिबलः प्रबुद्धस्तु निशाचरः।
निःश्वासश्चास्य संजज्ञे पर्वतादिव मारुतः ॥ ५९ ॥

Yawning in this way, that prowler of the night, who was endowed with extraordinary might, woke up fully. And breath escaped from his mouth even as he yawned like the wind blowing from a mountain. (59)

रूपमुत्तिष्ठतस्तस्य कुम्भकर्णस्य तद् बभौ।
युगान्ते सर्वभूतानि कालस्येव दिधक्षतः ॥ ६० ॥

The well-known form of Kumbhakarna even as he rose, looked like Kāla (the Time-Spirit) seeking, as it were, to consume all created beings at the time of universal dissolution. (60)

तस्य दीप्ताग्निसदृशे विद्युत्सदृशवर्चसी।
ददृशाते महानेत्रे दीप्ताविव महाग्रहौ ॥ ६१ ॥

His enormous eyes, which resembled a blazing fire and were dazzling like lightning, looked like two luminous major planets. (61)

ततस्त्वदर्शयन् सर्वान् भक्ष्यांश्च विविधान् बहून्।
वराहान् महिषांश्चैव बभक्ष स महाबलः ॥ ६२ ॥

Thereupon the ogres for their part showed to him all the plentiful victuals of various kinds. The ogre, who was endowed with extraordinary might, ate up the meat of boars as well as buffaloes. (62)

आदद् बुभुक्षितो मांसं शोणितं तृषितोऽपिबत्।
मेदःकुम्भांश्च मद्यांश्च पपौ शक्ररिपुस्तदा ॥ ६३ ॥

Feeling hungry, the enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods) ate meat; and, feeling thirsty, he quaffed blood as well as pails of fat and wines at that time. (63)

ततस्तृप्त इति ज्ञात्वा समुत्पेतुर्निशाचराः।
शिरोभिश्च प्रणम्यैनं सर्वतः पर्यवारयन् ॥ ६४ ॥

Realizing that he was sated, the rangers of the night then came up before him and, respectfully greeting him with their heads bent low, surrounded him on all sides. (64)

निद्राविशदनेत्रस्तु कलुषीकृतलोचनः।
चारयन् सर्वतो दृष्टिं तान् ददर्श निशाचरान् ॥ ६५ ॥

Casting his glance on all sides, Kumbhakarna for his part, whose eyes were half-closed due to sleepiness, nay, whose vision was still clouded, looked at the rangers of the night. (65)

स सर्वान् सान्त्वयामास नैर्ऋतान् नैर्ऋतर्षभः ।

बोधनाद् विस्मितश्चापि राक्षसानिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ६६ ॥

That bull among the ogres (lit., scions of Nirṛti, the ogre presiding over the south-west) soothed all the ogres. And, also astonished at being awakened prematurely, he questioned the ogres as follows: (66)

किमर्थमहमादृत्य भवद्भिः प्रतिबोधितः ।

कच्चित् सुकुशलं राज्ञो भयं वा नेह किञ्चन ॥ ६७ ॥

“What for have I been roused by you with effort? I hope all is well with the king and no danger has arisen here. (67)

अथवा ध्रुवमन्येभ्यो भयं परमुपस्थितम् ।

यदर्थमेव त्वरितैर्भवद्भिः प्रतिबोधितः ॥ ६८ ॥

“Or, without doubt a great peril has come from the enemies, for warding off which I have been hastily woken by you. (68)

अद्य राक्षसराजस्य भयमुत्पाटयाम्यहम् ।

दारयिष्ये महेन्द्रं वा शीतयिष्ये तथानलम् ॥ ६९ ॥

“I shall uproot the fear of Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, today. I shall tear asunder the Mahendra mountain or shall freeze fire, if necessary. (69)

न ह्यल्पकारणे सुप्तं बोधयिष्यति मादृशम् ।

तदाख्यातार्थतत्त्वेन मत्प्रबोधनकारणम् ॥ ७० ॥

“Surely he would not rouse me, when asleep, for a trivial reason. Therefore, point out to me in reality the cause of waking me.” (70)

एवं ब्रुवाणं संरब्धं कुम्भकर्णमरिंदमम् ।

यूपाक्षः सचिवो राज्ञः कृताञ्जलिरभाषत ॥ ७१ ॥

To Kumbhakarna, the tamer of his enemies, who was speaking as aforesaid, full of rage, Yūpākṣa, a minister of the king, replied as follows with joined palms: (71)

न नो देवकृतं किञ्चिद् भयमस्ति कदाचन ।

मानुषान् नो भयं राजंस्तुमुलं सम्प्रबाधते ॥ ७२ ॥

“No danger can ever be brought upon us by gods. A formidable danger from a mortal is, however, pressing hard upon us, O prince! (72)

न दैत्यदानवेभ्यो वा भयमस्ति न नः क्वचित् ।

यादृशं मानुषं राजन् भयमस्मानुपस्थितम् ॥ ७३ ॥

“The kind of danger which has come upon us, O prince, has never come even from the Daityas (giants) and Dānavas (demons). (73)

वानरैः पर्वताकारैर्लङ्केयं परिवारिता ।

सीताहरणसंतप्ताद् रामान्स्तुमुलं भयम् ॥ ७४ ॥

“This city of Laṅkā has been laid siege to by monkeys resembling mountains in size and formidable is the danger to us from Rāma, who is distressed on account of the abduction of his wife, Sitā. (74)

एकेन वानरेणेयं पूर्वं दग्धा महापुरी ।

कुमारो निहतश्चाक्षः सानुयात्रः सकुञ्जरः ॥ ७५ ॥

“Latterly this large city was set fire to and Prince Akṣa was made short work of, with his elephant and followers, by a single monkey. (75)

स्वयं रक्षोधिपश्चापि पौलस्त्यो देवकण्टकः ।

व्रजेति संयुगे मुक्तो रामेणादित्यवर्चसा ॥ ७६ ॥

“Nay, even Rāvaṇa himself, a scion of Sage Pulasti, the suzerain lord of ogres and a thorn in the side of gods, was let go in an encounter with the word ‘Depart!’ by Rāma, possessing the splendour of the sun. (76)

यन्न देवैः कृतो राजा नापि दैत्यैर्न दानवैः ।

कृतः स इह रामेण विमुक्तः प्राणसंशयात् ॥ ७७ ॥

“The king was this time reduced to a plight to which he had never been reduced either by the Daityas or even by Dānavas, and just escaped from a peril to his life.” (77)

स यूपाक्षवचः श्रुत्वा भ्रातुर्युधि पराभवम् ।

कुम्भकर्णो विवृत्ताक्षो यूपाक्षमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ७८ ॥

Hearing the report of Yūpākṣa concerning the discomfiture of his elder brother, Kumbhakarna with rolling eyes replied to Yūpākṣa as follows: (78)

सर्वमद्यैव यूपाक्ष हरिसैन्यं सलक्ष्मणम् ।
राघवं च रणे जित्वा ततो द्रक्ष्यामि रावणम् ॥ ७९ ॥

“Conquering this very day, O Yūpākṣa, the entire army of monkeys as also Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa, I shall see Rāvaṇa only then. (79)

राक्षसांस्तर्पयिष्यामि हरीणां मांसशोणितैः ।
रामलक्ष्मणयोश्चापि स्वयं पास्यामि शोणितम् ॥ ८० ॥

“I shall gorge the ogres with the flesh and blood of monkeys and shall quaff the blood of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa myself.” (80)

तत् तस्य वाक्यं ब्रुवतो निशम्य
सर्गवितं रोषविवृद्धदोषम् ।
महोदरो नैर्ऋतयोधमुख्यः
कृताञ्जलिर्वाक्यमिदं बभाषे ॥ ८१ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid reply of Kumbhakarna, even as he was speaking, which was full of arrogance, Mahodara, the foremost of ogre warriors, submitted as follows with joined palms to Kumbhakarna, whose anger had enhanced his violent temper beyond measure: (81)

रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा गुणदोषौ विमृश्य च ।
पश्चादपि महाबाहो शत्रून् युधि विजेष्यसि ॥ ८२ ॥

“You should conquer the enemies in combat only after hearing the command of Rāvaṇa and weighing the advantages and disadvantages of the course you are going to take, O mighty-armed one!” (82)

महोदरवचः श्रुत्वा राक्षसैः परिवारितः ।
कुम्भकर्णो महातेजाः सम्प्रतस्थे महाबलः ॥ ८३ ॥

Hearing the advice of Mahodara and surrounded by ogres, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and possessed of great might, prepared to depart. (83)

सुप्तमुत्थाप्य भीमाक्षं भीमरूपपराक्रमम् ।
राक्षसास्त्वरिता जग्मुर्दशग्रीवनिवेशनम् ॥ ८४ ॥

Having roused Kumbhakarna of frightful eyes and of terrible aspect and prowess, who was lying asleep, the ogres hastily returned to the palace of Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster). (84)

तेऽभिगम्य दशग्रीवमासीनं परमासने ।
ऊचुर्बद्धाञ्जलिपुटाः सर्व एव निशाचराः ॥ ८५ ॥

Approaching Rāvaṇa, seated on an excellent throne, all the aforesaid ogres submitted to him as follows with joined palms: (85)

कुम्भकर्णः प्रबुद्धोऽसौ भ्राता ते राक्षसेश्वर ।
कथं तत्रैव निर्यातु द्रक्ष्यसे तमिहागतम् ॥ ८६ ॥

“Kumbhakarna, your younger brother, O lord of ogres, is fully awake. How should he proceed? Should he sally forth straight to the battlefield or would you see him arrived here?” (86)

रावणस्त्वब्रवीद्धृष्टो राक्षसांस्तानुपस्थितान् ।
द्रष्टुमेनमिहेच्छामि यथान्यायं च पूज्यताम् ॥ ८७ ॥

Feeling rejoiced, Rāvaṇa for his part replied to the aforesaid ogres, standing near. “I wish to see him here. Nay, let him be honoured as propriety demands.” (87)

तथेत्युक्त्वा तु ते सर्वे पुनरागम्य राक्षसाः ।
कुम्भकर्णमिदं वाक्यमूचू रावणचोदिताः ॥ ८८ ॥

Saying “Amen!” and coming back forthwith, all those ogres submitted to Kumbhakarna as follows, as commanded by Rāvaṇa: (88)

द्रष्टुं त्वां काङ्क्षते राजा सर्वराक्षसपुङ्गवः ।
गमने क्रियतां बुद्धिभ्रातरं सम्प्रहर्षय ॥ ८९ ॥

“The king, who is a veritable bull among all the ogres, desires to see Your Royal Highness. Therefore, let your mind be made up to depart. Be pleased to bring excessive joy to your elder brother.” (89)

कुम्भकर्णस्तु दुर्धर्षो भ्रातुराज्ञाय शासनम् ।
तथेत्युक्त्वा महावीर्यः शयनादुत्पपात ह ॥ ९० ॥

Coming to know the behest of his elder brother, and saying "Be it so," Kumbhakarna for his part, who was difficult to overcome and was endowed with extraordinary prowess, leapt up from his bed: so the tradition goes. (90)

प्रक्षाल्य वदनं हृष्टः स्नातः परमहर्षितः ।
पिपासुस्त्वरयामास पानं बलसमीरणम् ॥ ९१ ॥

Joyfully washing his face, and feeling extremely delighted on having bathed, he ordered some drink, which was calculated to enhance his strength, to be speedily brought to him from the palace of Rāvaṇa as he was feeling thirsty. (91)

ततस्ते त्वरितास्तत्र राक्षसा रावणाज्ञया ।
मद्यं भक्ष्यांश्च विविधान् क्षिप्रमेवोपहारयन् ॥ ९२ ॥

Thereupon those ogres, who had gone to summon him, hurriedly brought thither under orders of Rāvaṇa wine and dishes of various kinds in no time. (92)

पीत्वा घटसहस्रे द्वे गमनायोपचक्रमे ।
ईषत्समुत्कटो मत्तस्तेजोबलसमन्वितः ॥ ९३ ॥

Having quaffed two thousand pails of wine, Kumbhakarna, who felt a bit excited and inebriated and was replenished with energy and strength—prepared to depart. (93)

कुम्भकर्णो बभौ रुष्टः कालान्तकयमोपमः ।
भ्रातुः स भवनं गच्छन् रक्षोबलसमन्वितः ।
कुम्भकर्णः पदन्यासैरकम्पयत मेदिनीम् ॥ ९४ ॥

Filled with rage, Kumbhakarna looked like Yama (the god of retribution) bent on destroying the creation at the time of universal dissolution. Marching to the palace of his elder brother, surrounded by an army of ogres, the said Kumbhakarna shook the earth with his strides. (94)

स राजमार्गं वपुषा प्रकाशयन्
सहस्ररश्मिर्धरणीमिवांशुभिः ।
जगाम तत्राञ्जलिमालया वृतः
शतक्रतुर्गेहमिव स्वयंभुवः ॥ ९५ ॥

Illuminating the king's highway with the splendour of his body even as the sun, the thousand-rayed luminary, illumines the earth with its rays, Kumbhakarna proceeded to the royal palace surrounded by a circle of joined palms of the ogres accompanying him even as Indra (who is presupposed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices in his previous life or lives as a condition precedent to his attaining the position of Indra) would to the abode of Brahmā (the self-born creator). (95)

तं राजमार्गस्थममित्रघातिनं
वनौकसस्ते सहसा बहिःस्थिताः ।
दृष्ट्वाप्रमेयं गिरिशृङ्गकल्पं
वितत्रसुस्ते सह यूथपालैः ॥ ९६ ॥

Beholding all of a sudden Kumbhakarna, the destroyer of his enemies, who was immeasurably tall and looked like the peak of a mountain, marching along the main road, those well-known monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods), standing outside the city, got alarmed together with their troop-commanders. (96)

केचिच्छरण्यं शरणं स्म रामं
व्रजन्ति केचिद् व्यथिताः पतन्ति ।
केचिद् दशश्च व्यथिताः पतन्ति
केचिद् भयार्ता भुवि शेरते स्म ॥ ९७ ॥

Some sought Śrī Rāma, who was capable of affording shelter to them, as their asylum; while others fell down, filled with agony. Nay, still others, seized with panic, fled in all directions; while yet others, stricken with fear, lay down on the earth. (97)

तमद्रिशृङ्गप्रतिमं किरीटिनं
 स्पृशन्तमादित्यमिवात्मतेजसा ।
 वनौकसः प्रेक्ष्य विवृद्धमद्भुतं
 भयार्दिता दुद्रुविरे यतस्ततः ॥ ९८ ॥
 Oppressed with fear to behold the prodigy, who resembled the peak of a mountain and was adorned with a diadem, who was touching the sun, as it were, with the brilliance of his person and had grown immensely in size, the monkeys ran hither and thither. (98)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षष्ठितमः सर्गः ॥ ६० ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXI

Vibhīṣaṇa acquaints Śrī Rāma with Kumbhakarna and the monkeys take up their position firmly at the gates of Laṅkā for an encounter under orders of Śrī Rāma

ततो रामो महातेजा धनुरादाय वीर्यवान् ।
 किरीटिनं महाकायं कुम्भकर्णं ददर्श ह ॥ १ ॥
 Taking up his bow, the valiant Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, beheld the gigantic Kumbhakarna, adorned with a diadem. (1)

तं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसश्रेष्ठं पर्वताकारदर्शनम् ।
 क्रममाणमिवाकाशं पुरा नारायणं यथा ॥ २ ॥

Perceiving that prince of ogres, who looked like a mountain, taking strides across space, as it were, like Lord Nārāyaṇa (manifested in the form of Trivikrama, who measured the whole universe in a couple of strides), he became alert. (2)

सतोयाम्बुदसंकाशं काञ्चनाङ्गदभूषणम् ।
 दृष्ट्वा पुनः प्रदुद्राव वानराणां महाचमूः ॥ ३ ॥

Catching sight of the ogre, who closely resembled a cloud charged with rain and was adorned with gold armlets, the huge army of monkeys fled with full speed again. (3)

विद्रुतां वाहिनीं दृष्ट्वा वर्धमानं च राक्षसम् ।
 सविस्मितमिदं रामो विभीषणमुवाच ह ॥ ४ ॥

Seeing the army scared away, and the ogre becoming larger in size, Śrī Rāma with astonishment asked Vibhīṣaṇa as follows: (4)

कोऽसौ पर्वतसंकाशः किरीटी हरिलोचनः ।
 लङ्कायां दृश्यते वीरः सविद्युदिव तोयदः ॥ ५ ॥

“Who is that with a diadem and tawny eyes and resembling a mountain? He is seen in Laṅkā, like a cloud riven by lightning. (5)

पृथिव्यां केतुभूतोऽसौ महानेकोऽत्र दृश्यते ।
 यं दृष्ट्वा वानराः सर्वे विद्रवन्ति ततस्ततः ॥ ६ ॥

“The colossal ogre is seen here like a solitary comet on earth, beholding whom all the monkeys are fleeing in every direction. (6)

आचक्ष्व सुमहान् कोऽसौ रक्षो वा यदि वासुरः ।
 न मयैवंविधं भूतं दृष्टपूर्वं कदाचन ॥ ७ ॥

“Please point out to me who that colossus is, an ogre or a demon? No such being was ever seen by me before.” (7)

सम्पृष्टो राजपुत्रेण रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
 विभीषणो महाप्राज्ञः काकुत्स्थमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ८ ॥

Questioned in these words by Prince Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, the highly sagacious Vibhiṣaṇa replied to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, as follows: (8)

येन वैवस्वतो युद्धे वासवश्च पराजितः ।
सैष विश्रवसः पुत्रः कुम्भकर्णः प्रतापवान् ।
अस्य प्रमाणसदृशो राक्षसोऽन्यो न विद्यते ॥ १ ॥

“He is the well-known son of sage Viśravā, the fiery Kumbhakarna, by whom Yama (son of the sun-god) as well as Indra were vanquished. There is no other ogre vying with him in size. (9)

एतेन देवा युधि दानवाश्च
यक्षा भुजंगाः पिशिताशनाश्च ।

गन्धर्वविद्याधरकिंनराश्च

सहस्रशो राघव सम्प्रभगाः ॥ १० ॥

“By him were completely routed in their thousands in combat Dānavas (demons) and Yakṣas (a class of demigods), serpents and ogres (lit., flesh-eaters), Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Vidyādharas (celestial artistes) and Kinnaras (semi-divine beings with a human figure and the head of a horse), O scion of Raghu! (10)

शूलपाणिं विरूपाक्षं कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम् ।
हन्तुं न शेकुस्त्रिदशाः कालोऽयमिति मोहिताः ॥ ११ ॥

“Deluded to think that he was Death personified, the gods could not kill Kumbhakarna, who is endowed with extraordinary might and hideous eyes and stood pike in hand. (11)

प्रकृत्या ह्येष तेजस्वी कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ।
अन्येषां राक्षसेन्द्राणां वरदानकृतं बलम् ॥ १२ ॥

“The yonder Kumbhakarna is daring and endowed with extraordinary might by nature. The strength of other ogre chiefs, however, is attributable to boons (conferred on them by gods). (12)

बालेन जातमात्रेण क्षुधार्तेन महात्मना ।
भक्षितानि सहस्राणि प्रजानां सुबहून्यपि ॥ १३ ॥

“Very many thousands of created beings were devoured by the colossus, oppressed with hunger, while he was yet a new-born babe. (13)

तेषु सम्भक्ष्यमाणेषु प्रजा भयनिपीडिताः ।
यान्ति स्म शरणं शक्रं तमप्यर्थं न्यवेदयन् ॥ १४ ॥

“Sore-stricken with fear on their being devoured by the monster, the created beings sought Indra as their refuge and reported that matter to him. (14)

स कुम्भकर्णं कुपितो महेन्द्रो
जघान वज्रेण शितेन वज्री ।
स शक्रवज्राभिहतो महात्मा
चचाल कोपाच्च भृशं ननाद ॥ १५ ॥

“Moved to anger, the mighty Indra, who was armed with a thunderbolt, struck Kumbhakarna with his sharp thunderbolt. Struck with Indra’s thunderbolt, the colossus reeled and emitted a tremendous roar. (15)

तस्य नानद्यमानस्य कुम्भकर्णस्य रक्षसः ।
श्रुत्वा निनादं वित्रस्ताः प्रजा भूयो वितत्रसुः ॥ १६ ॥

“Hearing the roar of the ogre, Kumbhakarna, who was repeatedly roaring, the created beings, who were already greatly afraid, felt frightened all the more. (16)

ततः क्रुद्धो महेन्द्रस्य कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ।
निष्कृष्यैरावताद् दन्तं जघानोरसि वासवम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Tearing out a tusk from the mouth of Airāvata, carrying Indra on its back, the enraged Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, then struck Indra in the breast with it. (17)

कुम्भकर्णप्रहारार्तो विजज्वाल स वासवः ।
ततो विषेदुः सहसा देवा ब्रह्मर्षिदानवाः ॥ १८ ॥

“Agonized by the blow of Kumbhakarna, the aforesaid Indra felt tormented. Thereupon the gods, the Brāhmaṇa Ṛṣis and the demons grew despondent all at once. (18)

प्रजाभिः सह शक्रश्च ययौ स्थानं स्वयंभुवः ।
कुम्भकर्णस्य दौरात्म्यं शशंसुस्ते प्रजापतेः ॥ १९ ॥

“Accompanied by those created beings, Indra sought the realm of Brahmā. They complained to Brahmā (the lord of created beings) about the wickedness of Kumbhakarna. (19)

प्रजानां भक्षणं चापि देवानां चापि धर्षणम् ।
आश्रमध्वंसनं चापि परस्त्रीहरणं भृशम् ॥ २० ॥

“They also told him how he devoured created beings, assailed gods, laid waste the hermitages of sages and repeatedly carried off others’ wives. (20)

एवं प्रजा यदि त्वेष भक्षयिष्यति नित्यशः ।
अचिरेणैव कालेन शून्यो लोको भविष्यति ॥ २१ ॥

“‘If he for his part consumes created beings in this way from day to day’, they continued, ‘the world will turn desolate at no distant date.’ (21)

वासवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा सर्वलोकपितामहः ।
रक्षांस्यावाहयामास कुम्भकर्णं ददर्श ह ॥ २२ ॥

“Hearing the complaint of Indra and others, Brahmā (the grandfather of the entire creation, which owes its origin to his ten mind-born sons) conjured the ogres and saw Kumbhakarna too alongwith them: so the tradition goes. (22)

कुम्भकर्णं समीक्ष्यैव वितत्रास प्रजापतिः ।
कुम्भकर्णमथाश्नास्तः स्वयंभूरिदमब्रवीत् ॥ २३ ॥

“Brahmā (the lord of created beings), got alarmed merely on beholding Kumbhakarna. Restored to confidence in the meantime, however, Brahmā (the self-born creator) spoke to him as follows: (23)

ध्रुवं लोकविनाशाय पौलस्त्येनासि निर्मितः ।
तस्मात् त्वमद्यप्रभृति मृतकल्पः शयिष्यसे ॥ २४ ॥

“‘Surely you have been begotten by Viśravā (son of Pulasti, one of my mind-born sons) to the destruction of the world.

Therefore, from this day onward you shall remain buried in sleep like one dead.’ (24)

ब्रह्मशापाभिभूतोऽथ निपपाताग्रतः प्रभोः ।
ततः परमसम्भ्रान्तो रावणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ २५ ॥

“Overpowered by the curse pronounced by Brahmā, Kumbhakarna forthwith fell down before the king, Rāvaṇa. Exceedingly perturbed, Rāvaṇa thereupon submitted to Brahmā as follows: (25)

प्रवृद्धः काञ्चनो वृक्षः फलकाले निकृत्यते ।
न नसारं स्वकं न्याय्यं शमुमेवं प्रजापते ॥ २५ ॥

“‘A tree yielding gold (as its fruit) is never hewed down at the time of fructification. It is not equitable on your part to curse your own great grandson as you have done, O lord of created beings! (26)

न मिथ्यावचनश्च त्वं स्वप्स्यत्येव न संशयः ।
कालस्तु क्रियतामस्य शयने जागरे तथा ॥ २७ ॥

“‘And your words can never prove to be false, so that sleep he must: there is no doubt about it. A period of time may kindly be fixed for his sleep as well as for his waking.’ (27)

रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा स्वयंभूरिदमब्रवीत् ।
शयिता ह्येष षण्मासमेकाहं जागरिष्यति ॥ २८ ॥

“Hearing Rāvaṇa’s appeal, Brahmā (the self-born creator) spoke as follows: ‘He shall sleep continuously for six months and shall keep awake only for a day. (28)

एकेनाह्ना त्वसौ वीरश्चरन् भूमिं बुभुक्षितः ।
व्यात्तास्यो भक्षयेल्लोकान् संवृद्ध इव पावकः ॥ २९ ॥

“‘Ranging the earth with his mouth wide open, when hungry, the said hero for his part may consume the world like a swollen fire in the course of a single day.’ (29)

सोऽसौ व्यसनमापन्नः कुम्भकर्णमबोधयत् ।
त्वत्पराक्रमभीतश्च राजा सम्प्रति रावणः ॥ ३० ॥

“Fallen in adversity and afraid of your prowess, this aforesaid king, Rāvaṇa, has just awakened Kumbhakarna. (30)

स एष निर्गतो वीरः शिबिराद् भीमविक्रमः ।

वानरान् भृशसंकुद्धो भक्षयन् परिधावति ॥ ३१ ॥

“Having emerged from his royal retreat, extremely enraged, this champion of terrible prowess is darting to and fro, devouring the monkeys. (31)

कुम्भकर्णं समीक्ष्यैव हरयोऽद्य प्रदुद्रुवुः ।

कथमेनं रणे क्रुद्धं वारयिष्यन्ति वानराः ॥ ३२ ॥

“The monkeys have run away merely on beholding Kumbhakarna today. How then will the monkeys be able to check him on seeing him enraged in combat? (32)

उच्यन्तां वानराः सर्वे यन्त्रमेतत् समुच्छ्रितम् ।

इति विज्ञाय हरयो भविष्यन्तीह निर्भयाः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Let the monkeys be told that it is a mere mechanical device standing very high, which they see before them. The monkeys will be rid of fear on coming to know this on this occasion.” (33)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा हेतुमत् सुमुखोद्गतम् ।

उवाच राघवो वाक्यं नीलं सेनापतिं तदा ॥ ३४ ॥

Hearing the speech of Vibhīṣaṇa, which was full of reason and had been made with a pleasing air, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, spoke to Nila, the Commander-in-Chief, as follows: (34)

गच्छ सैन्यानि सर्वाणि व्यूह्य तिष्ठस्व पावके ।

द्वाराण्यादाय लङ्कायाश्चर्याश्चास्याथ संक्रमान् ॥ ३५ ॥

शैलशृङ्गाणि वृक्षांश्च शिलाश्चाप्युपसंहरन् ।

भवन्तः सायुधाः सर्वे वानराः शैलपाणयः ॥ ३६ ॥

“Go, disposing all the troops in battle array, nay, occupying the gates, highways and bridges of Laṅkā and getting together mountain-tops, trees and rocks too, stand ready for operation, O son of the fire-god! And, armed with weapons and rocks in hand, you too remain alert, O monkeys!” (35-36)

राघवेण समादिष्टो नीलो हरिचमूपतिः ।

शशास वानरानीकं यथावत् कपिकुञ्जरः ॥ ३७ ॥

Duly instructed as above, Nila, the Commander-in-Chief of the simian army, an elephant among the monkeys, commanded the army of the monkeys as it should be. (37)

ततो गवाक्षः शरभो हनूमानङ्गदस्तथा ।

शैलशृङ्गाणि शैलाभा गृहीत्वा द्वारमभ्ययुः ॥ ३८ ॥

Taking peaks of mountains, Gavākṣa, Śarabha, Hanumān and Aṅgada, who looked like mountains themselves, thereupon marched to the gate of Laṅkā. (38)

रामवाक्यमुपश्रुत्य हरयो जितकाशिनः ।

पादपैर्दयन् वीरा वानराः परवाहिनीम् ॥ ३९ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, the heroic monkeys, who were bent upon taking the life of their enemies, and who had assumed a triumphant air, began to strike the hostile army guarding the precincts of the city outside the gates. (39)

ततो हरीणां तदनीकमुग्रं

रराज शैलोद्यतवृक्षहस्तम् ।

गिरेः समीपानुगतं यथैव

महन्महाम्भोधरजालमुग्रम् ॥ ४० ॥

Carrying rocks and uplifted trees in their hands, that formidable army of monkeys shone precisely like a terrible and huge mass of clouds hanging close to a mountain. (40)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXII

Kumbhakarṇa enters the palace of Rāvaṇa, who warns him of the danger from Śrī Rāma and urges him to destroy the enemy's army

स तु राक्षसशार्दूलो निद्रामदसमाकुलः ।
राजमार्गं श्रिया जुष्टं ययौ विपुलविक्रमः ॥ १ ॥

Heavy with sleep and inebriety, that tiger among the ogres, for his part, who was endowed with immense prowess, marched along the king's highway which was full of splendour. (1)

राक्षसानां सहस्रैश्च वृतः परमदुर्जयः ।
गृहेभ्यः पुष्पवर्षेण कीर्यमाणस्तदा ययौ ॥ २ ॥

Nay, surrounded by thousands of ogres, Kumbhakarṇa (who was exceedingly difficult to conquer) moved on, being covered all along with a shower of flowers from the houses lining the road. (2)

स हेमजालविततं भानुभास्वरदर्शनम् ।
ददर्श विपुलं रम्यं राक्षसेन्द्रनिवेशनम् ॥ ३ ॥

He saw the vast and lovely abode of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), which was covered with a lattice-work of gold and as such looked bright as the sun. (3)

स तत्तदा सूर्य इवाभ्रजालं
प्रविश्य रक्षोधिपतेर्निवेशनम् ।
ददर्श दूरेऽग्रजमासनस्थं
स्वयंभुवं शक्र इवासनस्थम् ॥ ४ ॥

Penetrating deep into the residence of Rāvaṇa (the suzerain lord of ogres), even as the sun would disappear into a mass of clouds, he saw from afar his elder brother, Rāvaṇa, seated on his throne, even as Indra would behold Brahmā (the self-born creator) sitting on his seat. (4)

भ्रातुः स भवनं गच्छन् रक्षोगणसमन्वितः ।
कुम्भकर्णः पदन्यासैरकम्पयत मेदिनीम् ॥ ५ ॥

Proceeding to the dwelling of his elder brother, duly accompanied by a host of ogres, Kumbhakarṇa caused the earth to tremble with his strides. (5)

सोऽभिगम्य गृहं भ्रातुः कक्ष्यामभिविगाह्य च ।
ददर्शोद्विग्नमासीनं विमाने पुष्पके गुरुम् ॥ ६ ॥

Reaching the palace of his elder brother, and stepping beyond the enclosure, he beheld his elder brother seated in his aerial car, Puṣpaka, in a perturbed state. (6)

अथ दृष्ट्वा दशग्रीवः कुम्भकर्णमुपस्थितम् ।
तूर्णमुत्थाय संहृष्टः संनिकर्षमुपानयत् ॥ ७ ॥

Getting up immediately on seeing Kumbhakarṇa arrived, Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), who felt highly rejoiced, brought him to his side. (7)

अथासीनस्य पर्यङ्के कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ।
भ्रातुर्वन्दे चरणौ किं कृत्यमिति चाब्रवीत् ॥ ८ ॥

Kumbhakarṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, forthwith bowed down at the feet of his elder brother, reclining on a couch, and inquired, "What service is required of me?" (8)

उत्पत्य चैनं मुदितो रावणः परिष्वजे ।
स भ्रात्रा सम्परिष्वक्तो यथावच्चाभिनन्दितः ॥ ९ ॥

Springing up from his seat once more, Rāvaṇa, who was filled with joy, clasped him to his bosom. In this way he was tightly embraced by his elder brother and duly hailed with joy. (9)

कुम्भकर्णः शुभं दिव्यं प्रतिपेदे वरासनम् ।
स तदासनमाश्रित्य कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ॥ १० ॥

संरक्तनयनः क्रोधाद् रावणं वाक्यमब्रवीत्।
किमर्थमहमादृत्य त्वया राजन् प्रबोधितः॥ ११॥

Kumbhakarna occupied a splendid, heavenly, excellent seat. Having taken up his position on that seat, the said Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, submitted as follows to Rāvaṇa, his eyes blood-red with anger: "What for have I been awakened by you with effort, O king? (10-11)

शंस कस्माद् भयं तेऽत्र को वा प्रेतो भविष्यति।
भ्रातरं रावणः क्रुद्धं कुम्भकर्णमवस्थितम्॥ १२॥
रोषेण परिवृत्ताभ्यां नेत्राभ्यां वाक्यमब्रवीत्।
अद्य ते सुमहान् कालः शयानस्य महाबल॥ १३॥
सुषुप्तस्त्वं न जानीषे मम रामकृतं भयम्।
एष दाशरथिः श्रीमान् सुग्रीवसहितो बली॥ १४॥
समुद्रं लङ्घयित्वा तु मूलं नः परिक्रन्ति।
हन्त पश्यस्व लङ्कायां वनान्युपवनानि च॥ १५॥
सेतुना सुखमागत्य वानरैर्कार्णवं कृतम्।
ये राक्षसा मुख्यतमा हतास्ते वानरैर्युधि॥ १६॥

"Say from whom springs your fear and who is going to die (at my hands today)." His eyes rolling through indignation, Rāvaṇa spoke as follows to his younger brother, Kumbhakarna, firmly seated by his side: "A very long time has rolled past you till now, while you remained asleep, O brother, endowed with extraordinary might! Having remained buried in deep slumber, you could not know of the fear that has been engendered for me by Rāma. Having crossed the sea, this glorious and mighty son of Daśaratha, accompanied by Sugrīva, for his part is cutting at our very roots. Alas! see how after arriving with ease in Laṅkā, the groves and gardens in Laṅkā have been converted into a single sea of monkeys. Those ogres who were the foremost leaders have been killed by the monkeys in combat. (12—16)

वानराणां क्षयं युद्धे न पश्यामि कथंचन।
न चापि वानरा युद्धे जितपूर्वाः कदाचन॥ १७॥

"I do not, however, envisage the destruction of the monkeys on the battlefield in anyway. Nor have the monkeys been conquered at any time before. (17)

तदेतद् भयमुत्पन्नं त्रायस्वेह महाबल।
नाशय त्वमिमानद्य तदर्थं बोधितो भवान्॥ १८॥

"Such is the fear engendered by Rāma. Save us at this juncture, O brother, endowed with extraordinary might! You destroy them today. For this you have been awakened. (18)

सर्वक्षपितकोशं च स त्वमभ्युपपद्य माम्।
त्रायस्वेमां पुरीं लङ्कां बालवृद्धावशेषिताम्॥ १९॥

"Nay, obliging me, whose resources have been totally exhausted, save you as such this city of Laṅkā, in which children and the aged alone have been left. (19)

भ्रातुरर्थे महाबाहो कुरु कर्म सुदुष्करम्।
मयैवं नोक्तपूर्वो हि भ्राता कश्चित् परंतप॥ २०॥

"For the sake of your brother myself, O mighty-armed one, accomplish a feat which is very difficult to accomplish (for others). Surely no brother was requested by me like this ever before, O scourge of your enemies! (20)

त्वय्यस्ति मम च स्नेहः परा सम्भावना च मे।
देवासुरेषु युद्धेषु बहुशो राक्षसर्वभ॥ २१॥
त्वया देवाः प्रतिव्यूह्य निर्जिताश्चासुरा युधि॥ २२॥

"There is affection in my heart for you and my supreme hope is also fastened on you. On many an occasion in the wars between the gods and demons, O bull among the ogres, were the gods as well as the demons utterly routed by you on the battlefield after joining the opposite ranks. (21-22)

तदेतत् सर्वमातिष्ठ वीर्यं भीमपराक्रम।
नहि ते सर्वभूतेषु दृश्यते सदृशो बली॥ २३॥

"Therefore accomplish all the aforesaid deeds of valour, O brother of terrific prowess!

Indeed, no one mighty as you is seen among all created beings. (23)

कुरुष्व मे प्रियहितमेतदुत्तमं
यथाप्रियं प्रियरण बान्धवप्रिय।
स्वतेजसा व्यथय सपत्नवाहिनीं
शरद्घनं पवन इवोद्यतो महान् ॥ २४ ॥

“Do this supreme, helpful act and service to me keeping in view your love for me, O lover of war and lover of kins-folk!
Torment the hostile army with your fiery spirit in the same way as an active, mighty wind would dissipate an autumnal cloud.”
(24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्विषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिषष्टितमः सर्गः Canto LXIII

Kumbhakarna twits Rāvaṇa for all his misdeeds and, reassuring him, shows his determination for a conflict

तस्य राक्षसराजस्य निशम्य परिदेवितम्।
कुम्भकर्णो बभाषेदं वचनं प्रजहास च ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the lament of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres), Kumbhakarna heartily laughed and made the following reply: (1)

दृष्टो दोषो हि योऽस्माभिः पुरा मन्त्रविनिर्णये।
हितेष्वनभियुक्तेन सोऽयमासादितस्त्वया ॥ २ ॥

“The same disaster which was actually envisaged by us before while taking the final decision after consultation with Vibhīṣaṇa and others has now been reaped by you, who were distrustful towards your well-wishers. (2)

शीघ्रं खल्वभ्युपेतं त्वां फलं पापस्य कर्मणः।
निरयेष्वेव पतनं यथा दुष्कृतकर्मणः ॥ ३ ॥

“Speedily enough has the fruit of your sinful deed in the shape of Sītā’s abduction come upon you, even as damnation would visit a person of sinful deeds. (3)

प्रथमं वै महाराज कृत्यमेतदचिन्तितम्।
केवलं वीर्यदर्पेण नानुबन्धो विचारितः ॥ ४ ॥

“Initially, of course, was this course of action not weighed by you. Nor was the consequence taken into account in the sheer pride of your prowess, O great king !

(4)

यः पश्चात्पूर्वकार्याणि कुर्यादैश्वर्यमास्थितः।
पूर्वं चोत्तरकार्याणि न स वेद नयानयौ ॥ ५ ॥

“Confident of his power, he who defers duties which ought to be performed earlier and accomplishes earlier, duties which can be deferred, does not know what is right and what is wrong. (5)

देशकालविहीनानि कर्माणि विपरीतवत्।
क्रियमाणानि दुष्यन्ति हवींष्यप्रयतेष्विव ॥ ६ ॥

“Actions which are performed without regard to time and place prove disastrous like those done at an adverse time and place, even as oblations poured into fires which have not been consecrated get foiled.
(6)

त्रयाणां पञ्चधा योगं कर्मणां यः प्रपद्यते।
सचिवैः समयं कृत्वा स सम्यग् वर्तते पथि ॥ ७ ॥

“Holding consultation with his ministers, he who takes into consideration the five aspects* of the threefold† duties with reference to hostile kings, moves along the right path. (7)

यथागमं च यो राजा समयं च चिकीर्षति ।
बुध्यते सचिवैर्बुद्ध्या सुहृदश्चानुपश्यति ॥ ८ ॥

“A king who seeks to determine his duty in accordance with the science of polity and perceives his friends too alongwith the ministers understands aright. (8)

धर्ममर्थं हि कामं वा सर्वान् वा रक्षसां पते ।
भजेत पुरुषः काले त्रीणि द्वन्द्वानि वा पुनः ॥ ९ ॥

“Indeed a man should pursue virtue, worldly gain or sensuous pleasure or all the three combined, or, again, two of them at a time at the appointed time,‡ O lord of ogres ! (9)

त्रिषु चैतेषु यच्छ्रेष्ठं श्रुत्वा तन्नावबुध्यते ।
राजा वा राजमात्रो वा व्यर्थं तस्य बहुश्रुतम् ॥ १० ॥

“Extensive learning on the part of a sovereign or a crown prince, who, having heard of that viz., virtue, which is the foremost of the above-named three, does not recognize it as such, is in vain. (10)

उपप्रदानं सान्त्वं च भेदं काले च विक्रमम् ।
योगं च रक्षसां श्रेष्ठं तावुभौ च नयानयौ ॥ ११ ॥
काले धर्मार्थकामान् यः सम्मन्य सचिवैः सह ।
निषेवेतात्मवाँल्लोके न स व्यसनमाप्नुयात् ॥ १२ ॥

“The self-controlled king who, having duly deliberated with his ministers, bestows gifts, takes to (expedients of) conciliation and, sowing dissension among the hostile ranks, exhibits prowess, O prince of ogres, or resorts to them (all) together and takes recourse both to right action and the reverse of it at the right time and pursues virtue, worldly gain and sensuous pleasure at the proper time never meets with disaster in the world. (11-12)

हितानुबन्धमालोक्य कुर्यात् कार्यमिहात्मनः ।
राजा सहायार्थतत्त्वज्ञैः सचिवैर्बुद्धिजीविभिः ॥ १३ ॥

“A king should take action only after considering what is salutary in consequence to him, in consultation with his ministers, who make their living by their intelligence and know the reality of things. (13)

अनभिज्ञाय शास्त्रार्थान् पुरुषाः पशुबुद्धयः ।
प्रागल्भ्याद् वक्तुमिच्छन्ति मन्त्रिष्वभ्यन्तरीकृताः ॥ १४ ॥

“People whose mental level is in no way higher than that of beasts and yet who have been allowed to take their seat among the counsellors, desire all the same to express their views through sheer impudence, without fully knowing the import of the scriptures. (14)

अशास्त्रविदुषां तेषां कार्यं नाभिहितं वचः ।
अर्थशास्त्रानभिज्ञानां विपुलां श्रियमिच्छताम् ॥ १५ ॥

“The advice tendered by such people,

* The five aspects of an action are: (1) The method of initiating an action, (2) personality and material to be worked upon, (3) The time and place of action, (4) provision against mischance, and (5) the chances of success.

† The threefold duties of a king with reference to his enemies are: (1) conclusion of peace through conciliation (साम), (2) acceptance of allegiance (समाश्रयण) through gift (दान), and (3) invasion (यान), as a method of coercion (दण्ड). The first of these courses of action is resorted to when one's own strength and that of the enemy are equally matched; the second is adopted when one's own power is declining, while the enemy is in a thriving state; and the third course is advised when one finds oneself in a flourishing condition while the enemy is declining in power.

‡ The scriptures lay down that virtue should be pursued in the morning, worldly gain in the afternoon and sensuous pleasure at night. As an alternative, one is called upon to pursue virtue and worldly gain in the morning, worldly gain and virtue in the afternoon and sensuous pleasure and worldly gain at night. He who pursues sensuous pleasure alone throughout the day is the worst of all.

who having no knowledge of the scriptures, are equally ignorant of the science of wealth and seek immense wealth ought not to be followed. (15)

अहितं च हिताकारं धाष्टर्याज्जल्पन्ति ये नराः ।
अवश्यं मन्त्रबाह्यास्ते कर्तव्याः कृत्यदूषकाः ॥ १६ ॥

“Men who tender unwholesome advice in a salutary garb through sheer impudence should be excluded from deliberation as they mar the very purpose of the deliberation. (16)

विनाशयन्तो भर्तारं सहिताः शत्रुभिर्बुधैः ।
विपरीतानि कृत्यानि कारयन्तीह मन्त्रिणः ॥ १७ ॥

“Getting united with shrewd enemies, evil-minded counsellors in this world prevail upon their master to undertake wrong actions in order to bring him to ruin. (17)

तान् भर्ता मित्रसंकाशानमित्रान् मन्त्रनिर्णये ।
व्यवहारेण जानीयात् सचिवानुपसंहितान् ॥ १८ ॥

“A ruler should make out the reality of those ministers who have been won over by the enemy to their side through bribe etc., and as such are enemies, though appearing as friends, through their actual behaviour when a final decision is being taken after deliberation. (18)

चपलस्येह कृत्यानि सहसानुप्रधावतः ।
छिद्रमन्ये प्रपद्यन्ते क्रौञ्चस्य खमिव द्विजाः ॥ १९ ॥

“Aliens find out the weakness of a ruler who is (easily) led away by false appearances and rushes headlong into actions, even as birds discover the hole made by the lance of Skanda, the Commander-in-Chief of the gods, in the Krauñca mountain. (19)

यो हि शत्रुमवज्ञाय आत्मानं नाभिरक्षति ।
अवाप्नोति हि सोऽनर्थान् स्थानाच्च व्यवरोप्यते ॥ २० ॥

“A king who, disregarding the enemy, does not actually protect himself, undoubtedly meets with reverses and is dragged down from his position. (20)

यदुक्तमिह ते पूर्वं प्रियया मेऽनुजेन च ।
तदेव नो हितं वाक्यं यथेच्छसि तथा कुरु ॥ २१ ॥

“The advice alone which was tendered to you on a previous occasion by your beloved consort, Mandodarī, as well as by my younger brother, Vibhīṣaṇa, is salutary to us. However, do as you will.” (21)

तत्तु श्रुत्वा दशग्रीवः कुम्भकर्णस्य भाषितम् ।
भ्रुकुटिं चैव संचक्रे क्रुद्धश्चैनमभाषत ॥ २२ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid speech of Kumbhakarna, Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) for his part frowned and filled with rage spoke to him as follows: (22)

मान्यो गुरुरिवाचार्यः किं मां त्वमनुशाससे ।
किमेवं वाक्श्रमं कृत्वा यद् युक्तं तद् विधीयताम् ॥ २३ ॥

“Why do you instruct me like a father or a teacher worthy of respect? What avail is it to weary your tongue as you have done? Let that which is meet be done. (23)

विभ्रमाच्चित्तमोहाद् वा बलवीर्याश्रयेण वा ।
नाभिपन्नमिदानीं यद् व्यर्था तस्य पुनः कथा ॥ २४ ॥

“It is futile at this hour to repeat that counsel which was not accepted by me at that time through misconception, obtuseness of understanding or through dependence on my strength and prowess. (24)

अस्मिन् काले तु यद् युक्तं तदिदानीं विचिन्त्यताम् ।
गतं तु नानुशोचन्ति गतं तु गतमेव हि ॥ २५ ॥

“Let that alone which is advisable at this moment may now be thoroughly investigated. The wise do not at all grieve for the bygone. The bygone is after all irretrievably bygone, no doubt. (25)

ममापनयजं दोषं विक्रमेण समीकुरु ।
यदि खल्वस्ति मे स्नेहो विक्रमं वाधिगच्छसि ॥ २६ ॥

यदि कार्यं ममैतत्ते हृदि कार्यतमं मतम् ।
स सुहृद् यो विपन्नार्थं दीनमभ्युपपद्यते ॥ २७ ॥
स बन्धुर्योऽपनीतेषु साहाय्यायोपकल्पते ।
तमथैवं ब्रुवाणं स वचनं धीरदारुणम् ॥ २८ ॥

रुष्टोऽयमिति विज्ञाय शनैः श्लक्ष्णमुवाच ह ।
 अतीव हि समालक्ष्य भ्रातरं क्षुभितेन्द्रियम् ॥ २९ ॥
 कुम्भकर्णः शनैर्वाक्यं बभाषे परिसान्त्वयन् ।
 शृणु राजन्नवहितो मम वाक्यमरिन्दम ॥ ३० ॥

“Nullify with your prowess the evil sprung from my misconduct, if at all there exists love in you for me or if you recognize your own prowess or this purpose of mine is deemed by you in your heart of hearts as supremely worth accomplishing. A friend is he who obliges an afflicted soul, whose fortune is at stake. And a kinsman is he, who is able to render help to those who have deviated from the right course.” Concluding about Rāvaṇa, who was speaking in grave and harsh tones as above, that he was angry, Kumbhakarna gently submitted to him in soothing words as follows: Clearly perceiving his elder brother exceedingly agitated in mind in reality, Kumbhakarna slowly submitted to him as follows, restoring him to confidence in everyway: “Listen, O king, to my submission, O scourge of your enemies ! (26—30)

अलं राक्षसराजेन्द्र संतापमुपपद्य ते ।
 रोषं च सम्प्रित्यज्य स्वस्थो भवितुमर्हसि ॥ ३१ ॥

“It is no use your giving way to agony, O suzerain lord of ogres! Nay, shaking off anger completely, you ought to be your normal self again. (31)

नैतन्मनसि कर्तव्यं मयि जीवति पार्थिव ।
 तमहं नाशयिष्यामि यत् कृते परितप्यते ॥ ३२ ॥

“Such despondency should not be entertained in your mind so long as I live, O ruler of the earth! I shall exterminate him on whose account you feel agonized. (32)

अवश्यं तु हितं वाच्यं सर्वावस्थं मया तव ।
 बन्धुभावादभिहितं भ्रातृस्नेहाच्च पार्थिव ॥ ३३ ॥

“Salutary advice, of course, needs must be tendered by me to you under all circumstances. And that which is good to you, has been spoken by me through kinship and brotherly affection, O ruler of the earth ! (33)

सदृशं यच्च कालेऽस्मिन् कर्तुं स्नेहेन बन्धुना ।
 शत्रूणां कदनं पश्य क्रियमाणं मया रणे ॥ ३४ ॥

“Nay, see that which is fit to be done out of affection at this juncture by a brother viz., the wholesale destruction of the enemy in combat. (34)

अद्य पश्य महाबाहो मया समरमूर्धनि ।
 हते रामे सह भ्रात्रा द्रवन्तीं हरिवाहिनीम् ॥ ३५ ॥

“See today, O mighty-armed brother, the army of monkeys fleeing, on Rāma being killed by me with his brother in the forefront of battle. (35)

अद्य रामस्य तद् दृष्ट्वा मयाऽऽनीतं रणाच्छिरः ।
 सुखी भव महाबाहो सीता भवतु दुःखिता ॥ ३६ ॥

“Feel gratified today to see the well-known head of Rāma brought by me from the field of battle, O mighty-armed brother ! And let Sītā feel agonized in her turn. (36)

अद्य रामस्य पश्यन्तु निधनं सुमहत् प्रियम् ।
 लङ्कायां राक्षसाः सर्वे ये ते निहतबान्धवाः ॥ ३७ ॥

“Let all those ogres in Laṅkā whose kinsfolk have been killed in combat witness today the death of Rāma, which will be something exceedingly welcome to them. (37)

अद्य शोकपरीतानां स्वबन्धुवधशोचिनाम् ।
 शत्रोर्युधि विनाशेन करोम्यश्रुप्रमार्जनम् ॥ ३८ ॥

“Through the destruction of the enemy in battle, I shall dry today the tears of those who are bewailing the loss of their kinsfolk and are overcome with grief on that account. (38)

अद्य पर्वतसंकाशं ससूर्यमिव तोयदम् ।
 विकीर्णं पश्य समरे सुग्रीवं प्लवगेश्वरम् ॥ ३९ ॥

“See today Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, who closely resembles a mountain (in size), thrown about, bathed in blood, on the battlefield like a cloud illumined by the evening sun. (39)

कथं च राक्षसैरभिर्मया च परिसान्त्वितः ।

जिघांसुभिर्दाशरथिं व्यथसे त्वं सदानघ ॥ ४० ॥

“Nay, why do you feel vexed all the time, O sinless one, though reassured by these ogres as well as by myself, who are eager to kill Rāma (son of Daśaratha)? (40)

मां निहत्य किल त्वां हि निहनिष्यति राघवः ।

नाहमात्मनि संतापं गच्छेयं राक्षसाधिप ॥ ४१ ॥

“Surely, Rāma, a scion of Raghu, will be able to kill you only after killing me. I, however, never give way to misgiving on that account, O suzerain lord of ogres ! (41)

कामं त्विदानीमपि मां व्यादिश त्वं परंतप ।

न परः प्रेक्षणीयस्ते युद्धायातुलविक्रम ॥ ४२ ॥

“Therefore, command me at will to wage war even at this moment, O scourge of your enemies! No one else should be sought for by you for this purpose, O incomparable hero ! (42)

अहमुत्सादयिष्यामि शत्रूंस्तव महाबलान् ।

यदि शक्रो यदि यमो यदि पावकमारुतौ ॥ ४३ ॥

तानहं योधयिष्यामि कुबेरवरुणावपि ।

गिरिमात्रशरीरस्य शितशूलधरस्य मे ॥ ४४ ॥

नर्दतस्तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रस्य बिभीयाद् वै पुरंदरः ।

अथ वा त्यक्तशस्त्रस्य मृदतस्तरसा रिपून् ॥ ४५ ॥

न मे प्रतिमुखः कश्चित् स्थातुं शक्तो जिजीविषुः ।

नैव शक्त्या न गदया नासिना निशितैः शरैः ॥ ४६ ॥

“I shall exterminate your enemies, though endowed with extraordinary might. Even if it is Indra, the ruler of gods, or, again, if it is Yama, the god of retribution, or even if they are the god of fire and the wind-god, I shall contend with them, nay, even with Kubera and Varuṇa. Even Indra, the destroyer of citadels, will dread me, endowed as I am with a body as big as a mountain and pointed teeth and wielding a sharpened pike for a weapon, even as I roar. Again, none will be able to withstand, if he wishes to survive, even if I begin to crush the enemies with impetuosity, abandoning the arms. I shall in no case fight with a javelin, nor with a mace, nor, again, with a sword, much less with whetted shafts. (43—46)

हस्ताभ्यामेव संरभ्य हनिष्यामि सवज्रिणम् ।

यदि मे मुष्टिवेगं स राघवोऽद्य सहिष्यति ॥ ४७ ॥

ततः पास्यन्ति बाणौघा रुधिरं राघवस्य मे ।

चिन्तया तप्यसे राजन् किमर्थं मयि तिष्ठति ॥ ४८ ॥

“Getting enraged, I shall make short work of Rāma, even if he is accompanied by Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, with my bare hands. If the said scion of Raghu will be able to withstand the force of my fists today, the volleys of my arrows will in that case drink the blood of Rāma. Why do you feel tormented with anxiety, O king, so long as I exist! (47-48)

सोऽहं शत्रुविनाशाय तव निर्यातुमुद्यतः ।

मुञ्च रामाद् भयं घोरं निहनिष्यामि संयुगे ॥ ४९ ॥

राघवं लक्ष्मणं चैव सुग्रीवं च महाबलम् ।

हनुमन्तं च रक्षोघ्नं येन लङ्का प्रदीपिता ॥ ५० ॥

“I, for my part, am prepared to sally forth for the extermination of your enemies. Give up the violent fear proceeding from Rāma. I shall without doubt make short work on the battlefield of Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as well as of Lakṣmaṇa as also of Sugrīva, who is endowed with extraordinary might, and shall also dispose of Hanumān, the destroyer of ogres, by whom Laṅkā was set on fire. (49-50)

हरींश्च भक्षयिष्यामि संयुगे समुपस्थिते ।

असाधारणमिच्छामि तव दातुं महद् यशः ॥ ५१ ॥

“Nay, I shall devour the monkeys when a struggle is quite at hand. I wish to confer uncommon and great glory on you. (51)

यदि चेन्द्राद् भयं राजन् यदि चापि स्वयंभुवः ।

ततोऽहं नाशयिष्यामि नैशं तम इवांशुमान् ॥ ५२ ॥

“Again, if fear of Indra (the ruler of gods) and even of Brahmā (the self-born creator) haunts you, I shall forthwith drive it away even as the sun disperses the darkness of the night. (52)

अपि देवाः शयिष्यन्ते मयि क्रुद्धे महीतले ।

यमं च शमयिष्यामि भक्षयिष्यामि पावकम् ॥ ५३ ॥

“Even gods will fall flat on the earth’s surface on my getting enraged. Nay, I shall quell Yama, the god of retribution, and devour the god of fire. (53)

आदित्यं पातयिष्यामि सनक्षत्रं महीतले ।

शतक्रतुं वधिष्यामि पास्यामि वरुणालयम् ॥ ५४ ॥

“I shall hurl down on the earth the sun alongwith the constellations. Nay, I shall kill Indra (who is presupposed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices in his previous birth or births as a condition precedent for his attaining Indrahood) and drink up the ocean (the abode of Varuṇa, the god of water). (54)

पर्वतांश्चूर्णयिष्यामि दारयिष्यामि मेदिनीम् ।

दीर्घकालं प्रसुप्तस्य कुम्भकर्णस्य विक्रमम् ॥ ५५ ॥

अद्य पश्यन्तु भूतानि भक्ष्यमाणानि सर्वशः ।

न त्विदं त्रिदिवं सर्वमाहारो मम पूर्यते ॥ ५६ ॥

“I shall pulverize mountains and rend the earth. Let the created beings who are going to be devoured by me on all sides witness the prowess of Kumbhakarṇa (myself), who remained fast asleep for long, i.e., till now. If all the three worlds, viz., heaven, earth and the intermediate region, are offered to me as food, my stomach will not be filled thereby. (55-56)

वधेन ते दाशरथेः सुखावहं

सुखं समाहर्तुमहं ब्रजामि ।

निहत्य रामं सह लक्ष्मणेन

खादामि सर्वान् हरियूथमुख्यान् ॥ ५७ ॥

“Through the destruction of Rāma (son of Daśaratha), I proceed to bring to you happiness which may prove conducive to more and more happiness in future. After killing Rāma alongwith Lakṣmaṇa, I shall devour all the leaders of monkey troops. (57)

रमस्व राजन् पिब चाद्य वारुणीं

कुरुष्व कृत्यानि विनीय दुःखम् ।

मयाद्य रामे गमिते यमक्षयं

चिराय सीता वशगा भविष्यति ॥ ५८ ॥

“Revel, O king, and drink wine today. Nay, banishing agony, discharge your duties. When Rāma is dispatched by me to the abode of Yama, the god of retribution, today, Sītā will submit to your will for long.” (58)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रिषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुःषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXIV

Mahodara twits Kumbhakarṇa and suggests to Rāvaṇa a device to achieve his end without a struggle

तदुक्तमतिकायस्य बलिनो बाहुशालिनः ।

कुम्भकर्णस्य वचनं श्रुत्वोवाच महोदरः ॥ १ ॥

the colossal and mighty Kumbhakarṇa, who was adorned with brawny arms, Mahodara spoke as follows: (1)

Hearing the aforesaid braggadocio of कुम्भकर्ण कुले जातो धृष्टः प्राकृतदर्शनः।

अवलितो न शक्नोषि कृत्यं सर्वत्र वेदितुम् ॥ २ ॥

“Though born in a noble race, you are insolent and arrogant and possessed of an unsophisticated intellect and as such unable to know what should be done under all circumstances. (2)

नहि राजा न जानीते कुम्भकर्ण नयानयौ।
त्वं तु कैशोरकाद् धृष्टः केवलं वक्तुमिच्छसि ॥ ३ ॥

“It is not that His Majesty does not know what is politic and what is impolitic, O Kumbhakarna! You are, however, insolent from your very juvenescence and only feel inclined to speak. (3)

स्थानं वृद्धिं च हानिं च देशकालविधानवित्।
आत्मनश्च परेषां च बुध्यते राक्षसर्षभः ॥ ४ ॥

“Rāvaṇa, a bull among the ogres, is conversant with the laws of time and place and knows his own progress, decline and status quo, as well as of the enemies. (4)

यत् त्वशक्यं बलवता वक्तुं प्राकृतबुद्धिना।
अनुपासितवृद्धेन कः कुर्यात् तादृशं बुधः ॥ ५ ॥

“What wise man would, however, attempt to undertake that which cannot be achieved by one who is possessed of an unsophisticated intellect and has not waited upon his elders. (5)

यांस्तु धर्मार्थकामांस्त्वं ब्रवीषि पृथगाश्रयान्।
अवबोद्धुं स्वभावेन नहि लक्षणमस्ति तान् ॥ ६ ॥

“The capacity to know virtue, worldly gain and sensuous pleasure in their true character does not exist in you in that you speak of them as incompatible (lit., existing in different individuals). (6)

कर्म चैव हि सर्वेषां कारणानां प्रयोजनम्।
श्रेयः पापीयसां चात्र फलं भवति कर्मणाम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Again, action is the root of all the three means to happiness, viz., virtue, worldly gain and sensuous pleasure; moreover, the fruit of actions, both noble and exceedingly sinful, in this world accrues to the same agent. (7)

निःश्रेयसफलावेव धर्मार्थावितरावपि।
अधर्मानर्थयोः प्राप्तं फलं च प्रत्यवायिकम् ॥ ८ ॥

“Virtue in the shape of muttering of prayers, meditation etc., which have no dependence on wealth, and the performance of sacrifices and practice of charity etc., for the accomplishment of which wealth is indispensable, though conducive to final beatitude alone, if pursued in a disinterested spirit, also lead, if pursued with some interested motive, to goals other than final beatitude such as heavenly bliss and worldly prosperity. From the omission of an obligatory virtue follow unrighteousness and evil, and alongwith them, the bitter fruit of the offence of omission. (8)

ऐहलौकिकपारक्यं कर्म पुंभिर्निषेव्यते।
कर्मण्यपि तु कल्याणि लभते काममास्थितः ॥ ९ ॥

“The fruit of past actions, good or bad, is reaped by living beings in this as well as in the other world. He, however, who remains sedulously devoted to actions with a view to attaining sensuous pleasure perceptibly enjoys blessings even in this life and not hereafter as in the case of virtue and material gain. (9)

तत्र क्लृप्तमिदं राज्ञा हृदि कार्यं मतं च नः।
शत्रौ हि साहसं यत् तत् किमिवात्रापनीयते ॥ १० ॥

“In such circumstances the pursuit of sensuous pleasure (in the form of retaining Sītā and trying to win her over), which has been cherished by the king in his heart and is also approved of by us, must be indulged in by him*. What wrong is there in

* The hedonistic theory which has been propounded here by Mahodara in order to win the pleasure of Rāvaṇa is fallacious. Of the three objects of human pursuit, viz., virtue, material gain and sensuous pleasure, virtue alone is worth pursuing as that alone can lead all to happiness.

accomplishing that which is surely to be a daring act against the enemy? (10)

एकस्यैवाभियाने तु हेतुर्यः प्राहृतस्त्वया।
तत्राप्यनुपपन्नं ते वक्ष्यामि यदसाधु च॥ ११॥

“As for the reason, viz., your extraordinary might, which you have adduced for marching all alone for an encounter, I shall presently point out to you what is ill-considered and wrong about it. (11)

येन पूर्वं जनस्थाने बहवोऽतिबला हताः।
राक्षसा राघवं तं त्वं कथमेको जयिष्यसि॥ १२॥

“How will you be able to conquer single-handed that scion of Raghu by whom numerous ogres endowed with exceeding might were made short work of in Janasthāna in the past? (12)

ये पूर्वं निर्जितास्तेन जनस्थाने महौजसः।
राक्षसांस्तान् पुरे सर्वान् भीतानद्य न पश्यसि॥ १३॥

“Don't you see all those ogres, endowed with extraordinary strength, who were put to flight by him in the past in Janasthāna, living in fear in the city even today? (13)

तं सिंहमिव संक्रुद्धं रामं दशरथात्मजम्।
सर्पं सुप्तमहो बुद्ध्वा प्रबोधयितुमिच्छसि॥ १४॥

“You desire to meet in combat Rāma, an offspring of Daśaratha, who is like an enraged lion, and knowingly seek to awaken a serpent which is asleep. (14)

ज्वलन्तं तेजसा नित्यं क्रोधेन च दुरासदम्।
कस्तं मृत्युमिवासह्यमासादयितुमर्हति॥ १५॥

“Who would dare to encounter Rāma, who is ever burning with spirit, and is difficult to approach in fury and unbearable as Death? (15)

संशयस्थमिदं सर्वं शत्रोः प्रतिसमासने।
एकस्य गमनं तात नहि मे रोचते भृशम्॥ १६॥

“This entire army of ogres would be involved in danger on standing face to face with the aforesaid enemy. In such circumstances, O beloved one, your going alone to meet Rāma does not find favour with me at all. (16)

हीनार्थस्तु समृद्धार्थं को रिपुं प्राकृतं यथा।
निश्चितं जीवितत्यागे वशमानेतुमिच्छति॥ १७॥

“Bereft of resources, who would feel inclined to reduce to submission an enemy who is rich in resources and determined to lay down his life, as a common enemy? (17)

यस्य नास्ति मनुष्येषु सदृशो राक्षसोत्तम।
कथमाशंससे योद्धुं तुल्येनेन्द्रविवस्वतोः॥ १८॥

“How do you wish to enter into combat with him, who is an equal of Indra and the sun-god, and whose compeer there is none among human beings, O prince of ogres?” (18)

एवमुक्त्वा तु संरब्धं कुम्भकर्णं महोदरः।
उवाच रक्षसां मध्ये रावणं लोकरावणम्॥ १९॥

Having spoken thus to the enraged Kumbhakarna, Mahodara for his part submitted as follows in the midst of other ogres to Rāvaṇa, who made people cry by his tyranny: (19)

लब्ध्वा पुरस्ताद् वैदेहीं किमर्थं त्वं विलम्बसे।
यदीच्छसि तदा सीता वशगा ते भविष्यति॥ २०॥

“Having laid your hands already on Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), why do you procrastinate? Sītā will submit to your will the moment you would have her do so. (20)

दृष्टः कश्चिदुपायो मे सीतोपस्थानकारकः।
रुचितश्चेत् स्वया बुद्ध्या राक्षसेन्द्र ततः शृणु॥ २१॥

“A means of bringing her round has been discovered by me. Listen to it, O lord of ogres! Ponder it with your intellect and act according to it if it is found acceptable. (21)

अहं द्विजिह्वः संह्लादी कुम्भकर्णो वितर्दनः।
पञ्च रामवधायैते निर्यान्तीत्यवघोषय॥ २२॥

“Have it proclaimed by beat of drum that Dwijihwa, Samhrādi, Kumbhakarna,

Vitardana and myself—these five are going forth to kill Rāma. (22)

ततो गत्वा वयं युद्धं दास्यामस्तस्य यत्नतः ।
जेष्मामो यदि ते शत्रून् नोपायैः कार्यमस्ति नः ॥ २३ ॥

“Sallying forth, we shall then give battle to him with zeal. If we are able to conquer your enemies, no purpose of ours will be served by other expedients. (23)

अथ जीवति नः शत्रुर्वयं च कृतसंयुगाः ।
ततः समभिपत्स्यामो मनसा यत् समीक्षितम् ॥ २४ ॥

“If, however, our enemy survives the encounter and we too survive after we have fought a battle with him, then we shall fall back upon the plan which has been revolved by us in the mind. (24)

वयं युद्धादिहैष्यामो रुधिरेण समुक्षिताः ।
विदार्य स्वतनुं बाणै रामनामाङ्कितैः शरैः ॥ २५ ॥

“Bathed in blood on having our body cruelly torn with deadly darts marked with the name of Rāma (engraved on them), we shall return from the battlefield to this place. (25)

भक्षितो राघवोऽस्माभिर्लक्ष्मणश्चेति वादिनः ।
ततः पादौ ग्रहीष्यामस्त्वं नः कामं प्रपूरय ॥ २६ ॥

“Then we shall clasp your feet saying, ‘Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as well as Lakṣmaṇa have been devoured by us.’ Pray, fully grant you our desire. (26)

ततोऽवघोषय पुरे गजस्कन्धेन पार्थिव ।
हतो रामः सह भ्रात्रा ससैन्य इति सर्वतः ॥ २७ ॥

“Then have it proclaimed by beat of drum on all sides on the back of an elephant O ruler of the earth, that Rāma has been got rid of alongwith Lakṣmaṇa and his army. (27)

प्रीतो नाम ततो भूत्वा भृत्यानां त्वमरिंदम ।
भोगांश्च परिवारांश्च कामान् वसु च दापय ॥ २८ ॥

“Getting pleased, as it were, O tamer of your enemies, cause you to be bestowed on your servants objects of enjoyment and other desired objects as well as slaves and gold. (28)

ततो माल्यानि वासांसि वीराणामनुलेपनम् ।
पेयं च बहु योधेभ्यः स्वयं च मुदितः पिब ॥ २९ ॥

“Then confer garlands, garments, cosmetics and drink on champions and abundant gifts to other warriors and also drink yourself joyfully. (29)

ततोऽस्मिन् बहुलीभूते कौलीने सर्वतो गते ।
भक्षितः ससुहृद् रामो राक्षसैरिति विश्रुते ॥ ३० ॥
प्रविश्याश्वास्य चापि त्वं सीतां रहसि सान्त्वयन् ।
धनधान्यैश्च कामैश्च रत्नैश्चैनां प्रलोभय ॥ ३१ ॥

“Approaching Sītā in private and also restoring her to confidence, nay, conciliating her, when the thick rumour that Rāma, with his brother and accomplices has been devoured by the ogres reaches everywhere and is clearly heard even by Sītā, tempt her with offers of gold and grain as also luxuries and precious stones. (30-31)

अनयोपधया राजन् भूयः शोकानुबन्धया ।
अकामा त्वद्वशं सीता नष्टनाथा गमिष्यति ॥ ३२ ॥

“Imposed upon by means of this trick, which will further intensify her grief, Sītā, though lacking in love for you, will submit to your will because of her having lost her protector, O king! (32)

रमणीयं हि भर्तारं विनष्टमधिगम्य सा ।
नैराश्यात् स्त्रीलघुत्वाच्च त्वद्वशं प्रतिपत्स्यते ॥ ३३ ॥

“Actually believing her lovely husband to have perished, she will in despair accept dependence on you due to womanly frailty. (33)

सा पुरा सुखसंवृद्धा सुखार्हा दुःखकर्षिता ।
त्वय्यधीनं सुखं ज्ञात्वा सर्वथैव गमिष्यति ॥ ३४ ॥

“Realizing her happiness as depending on you alone, Sītā, who has been brought up in (the lap of) prosperity in the past, is deserving of felicity and is already tormented with agony, will completely submit to your will. (34)

एतत् सुनीतं मम दर्शनेन
 रामं हि दृष्ट्वैव भवेदनर्थः ।
 इहैव ते सेत्स्यति मोत्सुको भू-
 र्महानयुद्धेन सुखस्य लाभः ॥ ३५ ॥

“This will be the best course to my mind. Disaster in the shape of death is sure to come to you as soon as you behold Rāma. Therefore, don’t be eager for an encounter. Great enjoyment of bliss will accrue to you in Laṅkā itself without a struggle. (35)

अनष्टसैन्यो ह्यनवाप्तसंशयो
 रिपुं त्वयुद्धेन जयञ्जनाधिपः ।
 यशश्च पुण्यं च महान्महीपते
 श्रियं च कीर्तिं च चिरं समश्नुते ॥ ३६ ॥

“Conquering his enemies without a contest, a mighty ruler of the earth for his part fully enjoys for long renown and religious merit too, as also prosperity and placidity, without meeting with danger, O overlord of the people, his army too remaining intact.” (36)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुःषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चषष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXV

Kumbhakarṇa’s sally for an encounter

स तथोक्तस्तु निर्भर्त्स्य कुम्भकर्णो महोदरम् ।
 अब्रवीद् राक्षसश्रेष्ठं भ्रातरं रावणं ततः ॥ १ ॥

Upbraiding Mahodara, when spoken to as aforesaid, Kumbhakarṇa for his part then submitted as follows to his elder brother, Rāvaṇa, the foremost of ogres: (1)

सोऽहं तव भयं घोरं वधात् तस्य दुरात्मनः ।
 रामस्याद्य प्रमार्जामि निर्वैरो हि सुखी भव ॥ २ ॥

“For what I am, I shall without doubt dispel today your formidable fear by killing that evil-minded fellow, Rāma. Rid of animosity, be happy. (2)

गर्जन्ति न वृथा शूरा निर्जला इव तोयदाः ।
 पश्य सम्पद्यमानं तु गर्जितं युधि कर्मणा ॥ ३ ॥

“Heroes do not thunder in vain like clouds bereft of water. Note for your part the roar which is going to be emitted by me on the battlefield through action. (3)

न मर्षयन्ति चात्मानं सम्भावयितुमात्मना ।
 अदर्शयित्वा शूरास्तु कर्म कुर्वन्ति दुष्करम् ॥ ४ ॥

“Warriors do not seek to glorify themselves with their own lips. On the other hand, they accomplish deeds which are hard to accomplish, without displaying them. (4)

विक्रवानां ह्यबुद्धीनां राज्ञां पण्डितमानिनाम् ।
 रोचते त्वद्वचो नित्यं कथ्यमानं महोदर ॥ ५ ॥

“Your advice, even while it is being tendered, would undoubtedly appeal at all times to kings who are cowardly and devoid of intellect and account themselves wise, O Mahodara! (5)

युद्धे कापुरुषैर्नित्यं भवद्भिः प्रियवादिभिः ।
 राजानमनुगच्छद्भिः सर्वं कृत्यं विनाशितम् ॥ ६ ॥

“All undertakings have always been marred by you people, who are cowards in combat, utter pleasing words and say ditto to the king during deliberations. (6)

राजशेषा कृता लङ्का क्षीणः कोशो बलं हतम् ।
राजानमिममासाद्य सुहृच्चिह्नममित्रकम् ॥ ७ ॥

“The king alone is left in Laṅkā that has been divested of its population, its exchequer depleted, and army destroyed. Nay, having found access to this king, enemies, masquerading as friends, have gathered round him. (7)

एष निर्याम्यहं युद्धमुद्यतः शत्रुनिर्जये ।
दुर्नयं भवतामद्य समीकर्तुं महाहवे ॥ ८ ॥

“Bent on conquering the enemy, I hereby sally forth to the battlefield in order to redeem in a major conflict today the disastrous policy initiated by you all.” (8)

एवमुक्तवतो वाक्यं कुम्भकर्णस्य धीमतः ।
प्रत्युवाच ततो वाक्यं प्रहसन् राक्षसाधिपः ॥ ९ ॥

Laughing heartily, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, then replied as follows to the submission of the sagacious Kumbhakarna, who had just spoken as aforesaid : (9)

महोदरोऽयं रामात् तु परित्रस्तो न संशयः ।
न हि रोचयते तात युद्धं युद्धविशारद ॥ १० ॥

“This Mahodara for his part is greatly afraid of Rāma: there is no doubt about it. Surely he does not relish war, O dear brother, well-versed in the art of warfare ! (10)

कश्चिन्मे त्वत्समो नास्ति सौहृदेन बलेन च ।
गच्छ शत्रुवधाय त्वं कुम्भकर्णं जयाय च ॥ ११ ॥

“There is none equal to you in affection and might in my eyes. As such march you to the battlefield for the destruction of the enemy and attaining victory, O Kumbhakarna! (11)

शयानः शत्रुनाशार्थं भवान् सम्बोधितो मया ।
अयं हि कालः सुमहान् राक्षसनामरिन्दम ॥ १२ ॥

“Asleep as you were, you have been duly awakened by me for the extermination of the enemies; for, the present is an exceedingly momentous period for the ogres, O tamer of enemies! (12)

संगच्छ शूलमादाय पाशहस्त इवान्तकः ।
वानरान् राजपुत्रौ च भक्षयादित्यतेजसौ ॥ १३ ॥

“Therefore, taking a pike, duly proceed to the battlefield as Death would, with a noose in hand. Nay, devour the monkeys as well as the two princes, bright as the sun. (13)

समालोक्य तु ते रूपं विद्रविष्यन्ति वानराः ।
रामलक्ष्मणयोश्चापि हृदये प्रस्फुटिष्यतः ॥ १४ ॥

“Vividly perceiving your very form, the monkeys will flee away, and the hearts of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa will break asunder.” (14)

एवमुक्त्वा महातेजाः कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम् ।
पुनर्जातमिवात्मानं मेने राक्षसपुङ्गवः ॥ १५ ॥

Having spoken thus to Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, Rāvaṇa (a bull among ogres), who was possessed of great energy, thought himself regenerated. (15)

कुम्भकर्णबलाभिज्ञो जानंस्तस्य पराक्रमम् ।
बभूव मुदितो राजा शशाङ्क इव निर्मलः ॥ १६ ॥

Fully aware of Kumbhakarna's might and knowing, as he did, his prowess, the king felt delighted and shone like the cloudless moon. (16)

इत्येवमुक्तः संहृष्टो निर्जगाम महाबलः ।
राज्ञस्तु वचनं श्रुत्वा योद्धुमुद्युक्तवांस्तदा ॥ १७ ॥

Spoken to in these words, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, sallied forth, highly rejoiced. Nay, hearing the king's speech at that time, he for his part prepared to fight. (17)

आददे निशितं शूलं वेगाच्छत्रुनिर्बहणः ।
सर्वं कालायसं दीप्तं तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणम् ॥ १८ ॥

The ogre, who was capable of destroying his enemies, vigorously seized a whetted and flaming dart, which was all made of iron and was embellished with refined gold. (18)

इन्द्राशनिसमप्रख्यं वज्रप्रतिमगौरवम् ।
देवदानवगन्धर्वयक्षपन्नगसूदनम् ॥ १९ ॥

It shone like Indra's thunderbolt and was equally heavy and was capable of destroying gods, Dānavas, Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Yakṣas (a class of demi-gods) and Nāgas (semi-divine beings credited with a human face and the tail of a serpent). (19)

रक्तमाल्यमहादामं स्वतश्चोद्गतपावकम् ।
आदाय विपुलं शूलं शत्रुशोणितरञ्जितम् ॥ २० ॥
कुम्भकर्णो महातेजा रावणं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
गमिष्याम्यहमेकाकी तिष्ठत्विह बलं मम ॥ २१ ॥

It was wreathed in garlands of crimson flowers and emitted flames by itself. Taking the enormous dart which was stained with the gore of his enemies, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary energy submitted as follows to Rāvaṇa: "I will proceed alone. Let my army remain here. (20-21)

अद्य तान् क्षुधितः क्रुद्धो भक्षयिष्यामि वानरान् ।
कुम्भकर्णवचः श्रुत्वा रावणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ २२ ॥

"Feeling hungry and enraged, I shall devour the monkeys today." Hearing the submission of Kumbhakarna, Rāvaṇa replied as follows: (22)

सैन्यैः परिवृतो गच्छ शूलमुद्गरपाणिभिः ।
वानरा हि महात्मानः शूराः सुव्यवसायिनः ॥ २३ ॥

"Go out accompanied by troops carrying pikes and mallets in their hands; for the monkeys are gigantic, valiant and full of great perseverance. (23)

एकाकिनं प्रमत्तं वा नयेयुर्दशनैः क्षयम् ।
तस्मात् परमदुर्धर्षः सैन्यैः परिवृतो व्रज ।
रक्षसामहितं सर्वं शत्रुपक्षं निषूदय ॥ २४ ॥

"They are sure to destroy with their teeth anyone who is alone or off one's guard. Therefore, go out surrounded by troops. Rendered exceedingly difficult to assail you in this way, exterminate the entire army of the enemy, which is so pernicious to the ogres." (24)

अथासनात् समुत्पत्य स्त्रजं मणिकृतान्तराम् ।
आबबन्ध महातेजाः कुम्भकर्णस्य रावणः ॥ २५ ॥

Springing up from his throne, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, now placed round the neck of Kumbhakarna a gold necklace interspersed with gems. (25)

अङ्गदान्यङ्गुलीवेष्टान् वराण्याभरणानि च ।
हारं च शशिसंकाशमाबबन्ध महात्मनः ॥ २६ ॥

He also placed on the person of the colossus armlets, rings, other excellent jewels as well as a pearl necklace sparkling as the moon. (26)

दिव्यानि च सुगन्धीनि माल्यदामानि रावणः ।
गात्रेषु सज्जयामास श्रोत्रयोश्चास्य कुण्डले ॥ २७ ॥

Rāvaṇa further placed on his different limbs wonderful fragrant garlands and suspended earrings in his ears. (27)

काञ्चनाङ्गदकेयूरनिष्काभरणभूषितः ।
कुम्भकर्णो बृहत्कर्णः सुहृतोऽग्निरिवाबभौ ॥ २८ ॥

Thus adorned with gold armlets, bracelets and Niṣkas (an ornament for the neck), Kumbhakarna, who was distinguished by large ears, shone like fire, well-fed with oblations. (28)

श्रोणीसूत्रेण महता मेचकेन व्यराजत ।
अमृतोत्पादने नद्धो भुजङ्गेनेव मन्दरः ॥ २९ ॥

Decked with an enormous dark-blue girdle, he shone brightly like Mount Mandara encircled by Vāsuki, the king of serpents, at the time of churning nectar out of the milk ocean. (29)

स काञ्चनं भारसहं निवातं
विद्युत्प्रभं दीप्तमिवात्मभासा ।
आबध्यमानः कवचं रराज
संध्याभ्रसंवीत इवाद्रिराजः ॥ ३० ॥

Donning an impenetrable golden coat-of-mail capable of resisting heavy blows, nay, brilliant as lightning and flaming with its native effulgence, he shone like the western mountain, the king of mountains, encircled by evening clouds. (30)

सर्वाभरणसर्वाङ्गः शूलपाणिः स राक्षसः ।
त्रिविक्रमकृतोत्साहो नारायण इवाबभौ ॥ ३१ ॥

Decked all over his limbs with all kinds of jewels and pike in hand, that ogre trod like Lord Nārāyaṇa, (in His all-embracing form) determined to take the three long strides which were intended to cover the entire universe. (31)

भ्रातरं सम्परिष्वज्य कृत्वा चापि प्रदक्षिणम् ।
प्रणम्य शिरसा तस्मै प्रतस्थे स महाबलः ॥ ३२ ॥

Tightly embracing his elder brother and also going round him as a token of respect clockwise and respectfully bowing down to him, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, sallied forth. (32)

तमाशीर्भिः प्रशस्ताभिः प्रेषयामास रावणः ।
शङ्खदुन्दुभिनिर्घोषैः सैन्यैश्चापि वरायुधैः ॥ ३३ ॥

Rāvaṇa bid him proceed with excellent benedictions to the sound of conches and drums and also alongwith troops armed with the best of weapons. (33)

तं गजैश्च तुरंगैश्च स्यन्दनैश्चाम्बुदस्वनैः ।
अनुजग्मुर्महात्मानो रथिनो रथिनां वरम् ॥ ३४ ॥

Gigantic car-warriors followed that prince of car-warriors on the back of elephants and horses as also in chariots, emitting a thunder-like sound. (34)

सर्पैरुष्टैः खरैश्चैव सिंहद्विपमृगद्विजैः ।
अनुजग्मुश्च तं घोरं कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम् ॥ ३५ ॥

Ogres also accompanied the celebrated and redoubtable Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, on serpents, camels and donkeys too as well as on lions, elephants, antelopes and birds. (35)

स पुष्पवर्षैरवकीर्यमाणो
धृतातपत्रः शितशूलपाणिः ।
मदोत्कटः शोणितगन्धमत्तो
विनिर्ययौ दानवदेवशत्रुः ॥ ३६ ॥

Being covered with showers of blossoms, a parasol held over his head, nay, bearing a pointed pike in his hand, excited by drink and maddened by the smell of blood, that enemy of demons and gods alike sallied forth in state. (36)

पदातयश्च बहवो महानादा महाबलाः ।
अन्वयू राक्षसा भीमा भीमाक्षाः शस्त्रपाणयः ॥ ३७ ॥
रक्ताक्षाः सुबहुव्यामा नीलाञ्जनचयोपमाः ।
शूलानुद्यम्य खड्गांश्च निशितांश्च परश्वधान् ॥ ३८ ॥
भिन्दिपालांश्च परिघान् गदाश्च मुसलानि च ।
तालस्कन्धांश्च विपुलान् क्षेपणीयान् दुरासदान् ॥ ३९ ॥

Lifting up pikes and swords as well as whetted axes as also Bhindipālas (small javelins thrown by the hand), iron clubs and maces and mallets, enormous trunks of palmyra trees and slings which were difficult to meet, and raising a great uproar, numerous formidable ogres with hideous coppery eyes, endowed with extraordinary might, measuring very many Vyāmas* in height, and resembling a mass of collyrium in hue, also followed him on foot, weapon in hand. (37—39)

अथान्यद्वपुरादाय दारुणं घोरदर्शनम् ।
निष्पपात महातेजाः कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ॥ ४० ॥

Now assuming another formidable form, terrible to look at, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and possessed of great might, rushed forth. (40)

* A measure of length equal to the space between the tips of the middle fingers of both hands when the arms are extended.

धनुःशतपरीणाहः स षट्शतसमुच्छ्रितः ।
 रौद्रः शकटचक्राक्षो महापर्वतसंनिभः ॥ ४१ ॥
 संनिपत्य च रक्षांसि दग्धशैलोपमो महान् ।
 कुम्भकर्णो महावक्त्रः प्रहसन्निदमब्रवीत् ॥ ४२ ॥

Nay, deploying the ogres in battle-array, the mighty Kumbhakarna, who was now a hundred bows in breadth and six hundred in height, was fierce with eyes resembling the wheels of a chariot and presented the appearance of a huge mountain (in size), was endowed with an enormous mouth and looked like a charred mountain in hue, spoke as follows, laughing heartily as he spoke:

(41-42)

अद्य वानरमुख्यानां तानि यूथानि भागशः ।
 निर्दहिष्यामि संकुद्धः पतङ्गानिव पावकः ॥ ४३ ॥

“Filled with fury, I shall severally consume today, even as a flame would consume moths, the battalions of the foremost of monkeys.

(43)

नापराध्यन्ति मे कामं वानरा वनचारिणः ।
 जातिरस्मद्विधानां सा पुरोद्यानविभूषणम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“The monkeys, who are wont to roam about in the woods, have never given me offence of their own will. The species, in fact, serve as an ornament of the urban gardens of people like us.

(44)

पुरोधस्य मूलं तु राघवः सहलक्ष्मणः ।
 हते तस्मिन् हतं सर्वं तं वधिष्यामि संयुगे ॥ ४५ ॥

“The cause of the city being besieged, however, is Rāma (a scion of Raghu) accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa? I shall, therefore, first of all get rid of him in combat. He being disposed of, all will be destroyed.”

(45)

एवं तस्य ब्रुवाणस्य कुम्भकर्णस्य राक्षसाः ।
 नादं चक्रुर्महाघोरं कम्पयन्त इवार्णवम् ॥ ४६ ॥

While the bellicose Kumbhakarna was speaking in this strain, the ogres, who accompanied him, raised an exceedingly terrible uproar, agitating the sea, as it were.

(46)

तस्य निष्पततस्तूर्णं कुम्भकर्णस्य धीमतः ।
 बभूवुर्घोररूपाणि निमित्तानि समन्ततः ॥ ४७ ॥

Even as the said Kumbhakarna, who was full of intelligence, rushed forth with impetuosity, portents of fearful aspect appeared on all sides.

(47)

उल्काशनियुता मेघा बभूवुर्गर्दभारुणाः ।
 ससागरवना चैव वसुधा समकम्पत ॥ ४८ ॥

Clouds ashy in colour like donkeys appeared alongwith shooting stars and strokes of lightning. And the earth too, with its seas and forests, violently shook.

(48)

घोररूपाः शिवा नेदुः सज्वालकवलैर्मुखैः ।
 मण्डलान्यपसव्यानि बबन्धुश्च विहंगमाः ॥ ४९ ॥

She-jackals of hideous aspect howled with flaming morsels in their mouths. And birds flew in circle round from right to left.

(49)

निष्पपात च गृध्रोऽस्य शूले वै पथि गच्छतः ।
 प्रास्फुरन्नयनं चास्य सव्यो बाहुरकम्पत ॥ ५० ॥

A vulture actually alighted on his pike as he was marching along the road. His left eye twitched and his left arm throbbed.

(50)

निष्पपात तदा चोल्का ज्वलन्ती भीमनिःस्वना ।
 आदित्यो निष्प्रभश्चासीन वाति च सुखोऽनिलः ॥ ५१ ॥

Nay, a flaming meteor then fell with a terrible crash. The sun too lost its brilliance and no delightful wind blew.

(51)

अचिन्तयन् महोत्पातानुदितान् रोमहर्षणान् ।
 निर्ययौ कुम्भकर्णस्तु कृतान्तबलचोदितः ॥ ५२ ॥

Not minding in the least the mighty portents, which appeared and which made one's hair stand on end, Kumbhakarna, however, sallied forth, propelled as he was by the force of destiny.

(52)

स लङ्घयित्वा प्राकारं पद्भ्यां पर्वतसंनिभः ।
 ददर्शाभ्रघनप्रख्यं वानरानीकमद्भुतम् ॥ ५३ ॥

Having crossed the defensive wall with his feet alone, the ogre, who closely resembled a mountain in height, surveyed the wonderful army of the monkeys, which looked like a mass of clouds. (53)

ते दृष्ट्वा राक्षसश्रेष्ठं वानराः पर्वतोपमम् ।
वायुनुना इव घना ययुः सर्वा दिशस्तदा ॥ ५४ ॥

Beholding the foremost of ogres, who resembled a mountain, the monkeys immediately dispersed in all directions even like clouds propelled by wind. (54)

तद् वानरानीकमतिप्रचण्डं
दिशो द्रवद्भिन्नमिवाभ्रजालम् ।
स कुम्भकर्णः समवेक्ष्य हर्षा- न्नाद भूयो घनवद्घनाभः ॥ ५५ ॥

Perceiving that most powerful army of monkeys scattered to the four quarters, like a mass of clouds, melting away, the notorious Kumbhakarna who also looked like a cloud, repeatedly emitted a roar like thunder. (55)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्षष्टितमः सर्गः

Canto LXVI

Āṅgada reassures and rallies the monkeys scared away by Kumbhakarna; their carnage at the hands of Kumbhakarna puts them to flight again and Āṅgada restores them to confidence once more

स लङ्घयित्वा प्राकारं गिरिकूटोपमो महान् ।
निर्ययौ नगरात् तूर्णं कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ॥ १ ॥
न्नाद च महानादं समुद्रमभिनादयन् ।
विजयन्निव निर्घातान् विधमन्निव पर्वतान् ॥ २ ॥

ते तस्य घोरं निनदं निशम्य
यथा निनादं दिवि वारिदस्य ।
पेतुर्धरण्यां बहवः प्लवङ्गा
निकृत्तमूला इव शालवृक्षाः ॥ ५६ ॥

Hearing his terrible roar, which resembled the rumbling of a cloud in the sky, numerous monkeys fell to the ground like sal trees whose roots have been severed. (56)

विपुलपरिघवान् स कुम्भकर्णो
रिपुनिधनाय विनिःसृतो महात्मा ।
कपिगणभयमाददत् सुभीमं
प्रभुरिव किंकरदण्डवान् युगान्ते ॥ ५७ ॥

Armed with a huge iron club in addition to a pike, and causing tremendous fear to the simian ranks, that colossal Kumbhakarna rushed forth for the destruction of the enemy, even like Lord Kālarudra (the god of destruction appearing in a dark form at the time of universal dissolution) armed with his rod of punishment waiting upon him in a living form like a servant, at the end of the world cycle. (57)

Stepping across the defensive wall, the gigantic Kumbhakarna, who resembled the peak of a mountain and was endowed with extraordinary might, rapidly issued out of the city and emitted a tremendous roar, making the sea reverberate, nay, causing mountains to quake and drowning thunder-claps, as it were. (1-2)

तमवध्यं मघवता यमेन वरुणेन वा।
प्रेक्ष्य भीमाक्षमायान्तं वानरा विप्रद्रुवुः ॥ ३ ॥

Perceiving that ogre of fierce eyes—who could not be killed by Indra (the ruler of gods), Yama (the god of retribution) or even by Varuṇa (the god of water)—approaching, the monkeys stampeded. (3)

तांस्तु विप्रद्रुतान् दृष्ट्वा राजपुत्रोऽङ्गदोऽब्रवीत्।
नलं नीलं गवाक्षं च कुमुदं च महाबलम् ॥ ४ ॥

Seeing them put to flight, Prince Aṅgada for his part spoke as follows to Nala, Nīla and Gavākṣa, as also to Kumuda, who was endowed with extraordinary might : (4)

आत्मनस्तानि विस्मृत्य वीर्याण्यभिजनानि च।
क्व गच्छत भयत्रस्ताः प्राकृता हरयो यथा ॥ ५ ॥

“Forgetting your well-known exploits and high pedigree, where are you fleeing panic-stricken like ordinary monkeys? (5)

साधु सौम्या निवर्तध्वं किं प्राणान् परिरक्षथ।
नालं युद्धाय वै रक्षो महतीयं विभीषिका ॥ ६ ॥

“Enough, O good fellows ! Please return. Why do you defend your lives? Surely this ogre is not capable of contending with us; he is a great bugbear. (6)

महतीमुत्थितामेनां राक्षसानां विभीषिकाम्।
विक्रमाद् विधमिष्यामो निवर्तध्वं प्लवङ्गमाः ॥ ७ ॥

“We shall dispel by our prowess this colossal nightmare of the ogres, come into being. Therefore, come back, O monkeys!” (7)

कृच्छ्रेण तु समाश्रस्य संगम्य च ततस्ततः।
वृक्षान् गृहीत्वा हरयः सम्प्रतस्थू रणाजिरे ॥ ८ ॥

Regaining confidence somehow and getting together once more from here and there, and seizing hold of trees, the monkeys for their part duly proceeded to the battlefield. (8)

ते निवर्त्य तु संरब्धाः कुम्भकर्णं वनौकसः।
निजघ्नुः परमक्रुद्धाः समदा इव कुञ्जराः ॥ ९ ॥
प्रांशुभिर्गिरिशृङ्गैश्च शिलाभिश्च महाबलाः।
पादपैः पुष्पिताग्रैश्च हन्यमानो न कम्पते ॥ १० ॥

Turning back extremely enraged and determined to fight, the aforesaid monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods), who were endowed with extraordinary might and looked like elephants in rut, hit him with lofty mountain peaks and rocks as well as with trees whose crests were covered with blossom. Though being hit (as above), Kumbhakarna, however, was not shaken. (9-10)

तस्य गात्रेषु पतिता भिद्यन्ते बहवः शिलाः।
पादपाः पुष्पिताग्राश्च भग्नाः पेतुर्महीतले ॥ ११ ॥

Fallen on his limbs, numerous rocks got split asunder, and trees with blossomed crests fell shattered on the earth's surface. (11)

सोऽपि सैन्यानि संक्रुद्धौ वानराणां महौजसाम्।
ममन्थ परमायत्तो वनान्यग्निरिवोत्थितः ॥ १२ ॥

Highly enraged and supremely active, Kumbhakarna too began to destroy the ranks of the monkeys, although they were endowed with extraordinary vigour, even as a forest fire burst into flames would consume forests. (12)

लोहिताद्रास्तु बहवः शेरते वानरर्षभाः।
निरस्ताः पतिता भूमौ ताम्रपुष्पा इव द्रुमाः ॥ १३ ॥

Fallen like trees with coppery blossom when tossed up by the ogre, numerous bulls among monkeys lay senseless on the ground, bespattered with blood. (13)

लङ्घयन्तः प्रधावन्तो वानरा नावलोकयन्।
केचित् समुद्रे पतिताः केचिद् गगनमास्थिताः ॥ १४ ॥

Leaping while running fast, the monkeys did not look ahead or behind or sideways, so that some dropped into the sea while others remained sailing in the air. (14)

वध्यमानास्तु ते वीरा राक्षसेन च लीलया।

सागरं येन ते तीर्णाः पथा तेनैव दुद्रुवुः ॥ १५ ॥

Nay, while being struck by the ogre in mere sport, the monkey heroes for their part fled along the same route by which they had crossed the sea. (15)

ते स्थलानि तदा निम्नं विवर्णवदना भयात्।

ऋक्षा वृक्षान् समारूढाः केचित् पर्वतमाश्रिताः ॥ १६ ॥

They rushed towards the plains, taking a downward course, their faces rendered pale through fear. The bears climbed up trees, while others sought asylum on mountains. (16)

ममज्जुरर्णवे केचिद् गुहाः केचित् समाश्रिताः।

निपेतुः केचिदपरे केचिन्नैवावतस्थिरे।

केचिद् भूमौ निपतिताः केचित् सुप्ता मृता इव ॥ १७ ॥

Some monkeys and bears got drowned in the sea, while others took shelter in caves. Some others fell down, while others could not stand firmly. Some more fell flat on the ground, while others lay stretched as though they were dead. (17)

तान् समीक्ष्याङ्गदो भग्नान् वानरानिदमब्रवीत्।

अवतिष्ठत युध्यामो निवर्तध्वं प्लवंगमाः ॥ १८ ॥

Seeing them routed, Aṅgada spoke to them as follows: "Stay. We shall fight. Return, O monkeys ! (18)

भग्नानां वो न पश्यामि परिक्रम्य महीमिमाम्।

स्थानं सर्वे निवर्तध्वं किं प्राणान् परिरक्षथ ॥ १९ ॥

"I do not see any refuge for you, routed as you are, even if you range this entire globe. Therefore, come back. Why do you seek to preserve your life? (19)

निरायुधानां क्रमतामसङ्गतिपौरुषाः।

दारा ह्युपहसिष्यन्ति स वै घातः सुजीवताम् ॥ २० ॥

"O monkeys ! whose movement or valour knows no obstruction, your very wives will ridicule you if you run away abandoning your arms. That would be death indeed even for those leading an easy life. (20)

कुलेषु जाताः सर्वेऽस्मिन् विस्तीर्णेषु महत्सु च।

क्व गच्छत भयत्रस्ताः प्राकृता हरयो यथा।

अनार्याः खलु यद्धीतास्त्यक्त्वा वीर्यं प्रधावत ॥ २१ ॥

"Even though you are all born in widely spread and noble families, where are you fleeing panic-stricken like ordinary monkeys? You are indeed unworthy in that you are fleeing terrified, casting your prowess to the wind. (21)

विकत्थनानि वो यानि भवद्विर्जनसंसदि।

तानि वः क्व नु यातानि सोदग्राणि हितानि च ॥ २२ ॥

"Where have those braggadocios of yours melted away, in which you indulged in a popular assembly, as also your tall claims of friendly acts done to your master? (22)

भीरोः प्रवादाः श्रूयन्ते यस्तु जीवति धिक्कृतः।

मार्गः सत्पुरुषैर्जुष्टः सेव्यतां त्यज्यतां भयम् ॥ २३ ॥

"Words of reproach are heard with reference to a coward, saying 'Woe to him who lives even though censured by good men!' Let the path trodden by the virtuous be followed and let fear be shaken off. (23)

श्यामहे वा निहताः पृथिव्यामल्पजीविताः।

प्राप्नुयामो ब्रह्मलोकं दुष्प्रापं च कुयोधिभिः ॥ २४ ॥

"If, in the event of our span of life being brief, we lie down killed by the enemy, we shall attain the realm of Brahmā, which is difficult to attain for bad warriors, who are afraid of an encounter. (24)

अवाप्नुयामः कीर्तिं वा निहत्वा शत्रुमाह्वे।

निहता वीरलोकस्य भोक्ष्यामो वसु वानराः ॥ २५ ॥

"Killing the enemy in combat, we shall acquire glory. If struck down, on the other hand, we shall enjoy the riches of Brahmaloṇa, the realm attained by heroes, O monkeys! (25)

न कुम्भकर्णः काकुत्स्थं दृष्ट्वा जीवन् गमिष्यति ।
दीप्यमानमिवासाद्य पतङ्गो ज्वलनं यथा ॥ २६ ॥

“Kumbhakarṇa will never escape alive on coming face to face with Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha) any more than a moth on approaching a blazing fire. (26)

पलायनेन चोद्दिष्टाः प्राणान् रक्षामहे वयम् ।
एकेन बहवो भग्ना यशो नाशं गमिष्यति ॥ २७ ॥

“If, though distinguished in war, we preserve our life by fleeing, when routed by one, even though many, our glory will come to an end.” (27)

एवं ब्रुवाणं तं शूरमङ्गदं कनकाङ्गदम् ।
द्रवमाणास्ततो वाक्यमूचुः शूरविगर्हितम् ॥ २८ ॥

To the said heroic Aṅgada, who was adorned with armlets of gold, even while he was speaking as aforesaid, the monkeys, who were still fleeing, made the following reply, which was condemned by the valiant: (28)

कृतं नः कदनं घोरं कुम्भकर्णेन रक्षसा ।
न स्थानकालो गच्छामो दयितं जीवितं हि नः ॥ २९ ॥

“Terrible havoc has been made of us by the ogre Kumbhakarṇa. It is not the moment to stay. We are going; for life is dear to us.” (29)

एतावदुक्त्वा वचनं सर्वे ते भेजिरे दिशः ।
भीमं भीमाक्षमायान्तं दृष्ट्वा वानरयूथपाः ॥ ३० ॥

Having uttered only so many words, all the aforesaid commanders of monkey troops scattered in all directions on seeing the redoubtable ogre with frightful eyes coming. (30)

द्रवमाणास्तु ते वीरा अङ्गदेन बलीमुखाः ।
सान्त्वनैश्चानुमानैश्च ततः सर्वे निवर्तिताः ॥ ३१ ॥

Though still fleeing, all the aforesaid heroic monkeys for their part were then caused to return from where they were by Aṅgada by means of heartening words and arguments too establishing the invincibility of Śrī Rāma. (31)

प्रहर्षमुपनीताश्च वालिपुत्रेण धीमताः ।
आज्ञाप्रतीक्षास्तस्थुश्च सर्वे वानरयूथपाः ॥ ३२ ॥

Nay, restored to their high spirits, by the sagacious Aṅgada (son of Vāli), all the (aforesaid) commanders of monkey troops stood awaiting his command. (32)

ऋषभशरभमैन्दधूम्रनीलाः
कुमुदसुषेणगवाक्षरम्भताराः ।
द्विविदपनसवायुपुत्रमुख्या-

स्वरिततराभिमुखं रणं प्रयाताः ॥ ३३ ॥

Rṣabha, Śarabha, Mainda, Dhūmra and Nīla, Kumuda, Suṣeṇa, Gavākṣa, Rambha and Tāra headed by Dwivida, Panasa and Hanumān (son of the wind-god), marched ahead to the battle-field with quicker steps. (33)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षट्षष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तषष्ठितमः सर्गः

Canto LXVII

Kumbhakarna's terrible encounter with
Śrī Rāma and death at his hands

ते निवृत्ता महाकायाः श्रुत्वाङ्गदवचस्तदा ।
नैष्ठिकीं बुद्धिमास्थाय सर्वे संग्रामकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ १ ॥

Having arrived at a firm resolution, all those giants returned on hearing the exhortation of Aṅgada, longing for an encounter. (1)

समुदीरितवीर्यास्ते समारोपितविक्रमाः ।
पर्यवस्थापिता वाक्यैरङ्गदेन बलीयसा ॥ २ ॥

Reminded of their past valour, and restored to confidence by means of his words by the exceedingly mighty Aṅgada, they exhibited their prowess once more. (2)

प्रयाताश्च गता हर्षं मरणे कृतनिश्चयाः ।
चक्रुः सुतुमुलं युद्धं वानरास्त्यक्तजीविताः ॥ ३ ॥

Having returned to Aṅgada and been restored to their spirits, the monkeys who had staked their life and were resolved to die, carried on a fierce struggle. (3)

अथ वृक्षान् महाकायाः सानूनि सुमहान्ति च ।
वानरास्तूर्णमुद्यम्य कुम्भकर्णमभिद्रवन् ॥ ४ ॥

Lifting up huge trees and mountain peaks, the colossal monkeys now rushed towards Kumbhakarna with all speed. (4)

कुम्भकर्णः सुसंकुद्धो गदामुद्यम्य वीर्यवान् ।
धर्षयन् स महाकायः समन्ताद् व्यक्षिपद् रिपून् ॥ ५ ॥

Raising his mace and displaying his audacity, the valiant and gigantic Kumbhakarna, who got extremely enraged, struck down the enemies on all sides. (5)

शतानि सप्त चाष्टौ च सहस्राणि च वानराः ।
प्रकीर्णाः शेरते भूमौ कुम्भकर्णेन ताडिताः ॥ ६ ॥

Struck by Kumbhakarna, eight thousand and seven hundred monkeys lay thrown about on the ground. (6)

षोडशाष्टौ च दश च विंशत्त्रिंशत्तथैव च ।
परिक्षिप्य च बाहुभ्यां खादन् स परिधावति ।
भक्षयन् भृशसंकुद्धो गरुडः पन्नगानिव ॥ ७ ॥

Folding in his arms as many as sixteen, eight or ten or twenty and, likewise, even thirty monkeys at a time, extremely infuriated, he ran about devouring them, even as Garuḍa would wheel round consuming serpents. (7)

कृच्छ्रेण च समाश्रस्ताः संगम्य च ततस्ततः ।
वृक्षाद्रिहस्ता हरयस्तस्थुः संग्राममूर्धनि ॥ ८ ॥

Restored to confidence with great difficulty, nay, rallying from here and there, trees and mountain-tops in hand, the monkeys remained standing in the forefront of the battle. (8)

ततः पर्वतमुत्पाद्य द्विविदः प्लवगर्षभः ।
दुद्राव गिरिशृङ्गाभं विलम्ब इव तोयदः ॥ ९ ॥

Tearing up a rock, Dwivida, a bull among the monkeys, who looked like a threatening cloud, darted towards Kumbhakarna, who resembled a mountain peak. (9)

तं समुत्पाद्य चिक्षेप कुम्भकर्णाय वानरः ।
तमप्राप्य महाकायं तस्य सैन्येऽपतत् ततः ॥ १० ॥

Tearing up a rock, the monkey flung it at Kumbhakarna. Missing the colossus, the rock, however, fell on his army instead. (10)

ममर्दाश्चान् गजांश्चापि रथांश्चापि गजोत्तमान् ।
तानि चान्यानि रक्षांसि एवं चान्यद्दिरेः शिरः ॥ ११ ॥

It crushed the horses as well as the elephants as also the chariots and lordly elephants; while another mountain peak crushed other well-known ogres. (11)

तच्छैलवेगाभिहतं हताश्वं हतसारथिम् ।
रक्षसां रुधिरक्लिन्नं बभूवायोधनं महत् ॥ १२ ॥

That vast battle-field, on which havoc was played by the tremendous velocity of the rock, horses killed and charioteers struck down, got wetted with the blood of ogres. (12)

रथिनो वानरेन्द्राणां शरैः कालान्तकोपमैः ।
शिरांसि नर्दतां जहुः सहसा भीमनिःस्वनाः ॥ १३ ॥

Emitting a terrible roar, car-warriors precipitately severed the heads of the yelling monkey chiefs with their arrows, which were deadly like the destructive darts appearing at the time of universal dissolution. (13)

वानराश्च महात्मानः समुत्पाट्य महाद्रुमान् ।
रथानश्चान् गजानुष्टान् राक्षसानभ्यसूदयन् ॥ १४ ॥

Uprooting large trees, the gigantic monkeys too in their turn began to destroy the chariots, horses, elephants, camels and ogres. (14)

हनूमाञ्शैलशृङ्गाणि शिलाश्च विविधान् द्रुमान् ।
ववर्ष कुम्भकर्णस्य शिरस्यम्बरमास्थितः ॥ १५ ॥

Remaining stationed in the air, Hanumān, for his part, rained mountain peaks, rocks and trees of every kind on the head of Kumbhakarna. (15)

तानि पर्वतशृङ्गाणि शूलेन स बिभेद ह ।
बभञ्ज वृक्षवर्षं च कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ॥ १६ ॥

The said Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, split those mountain peaks and intercepted the shower of trees with his pike. (16)

ततो हरीणां तदनीकमुग्रं
दुद्राव शूलं निशितं प्रगृह्य ।
तस्थौ स तस्यापततः परस्ता-
न्महीधराग्रं हनुमान् प्रगृह्य ॥ १७ ॥

Firmly seizing hold of his sharpened pike, he then rushed towards that formidable army of monkeys. Tightly holding a mountain peak, the celebrated Hanumān stood before him even as he advanced. (17)

स कुम्भकर्णं कुपितो जघान
वेगेन शैलोत्तमभीमकायम् ।
संचुक्षुभे तेन तदाभिभूतो
मेदार्द्रगात्रो रुधिरावसिक्तः ॥ १८ ॥

Getting enraged, Hanumān struck with vehemence Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with a body formidable as the foremost of hills. Overpowered by that blow, the ogre was thoroughly upset, and bespattered with fat and bathed in blood. (18)

स शूलमाविध्य तडित्प्रकाशं
गिरिं यथा प्रच्वलिताग्निशृङ्गम् ।
बाह्वन्तरे मारुतिमाजघान
गुहोऽचलं क्रौञ्चमिवोग्रशक्त्या ॥ १९ ॥

Brandishing his pike which was bright as lightning, and resembled a mountain crowned with a blazing fire, he struck with it Hanumān (son of the wind-god) in the breast (lit., the space between the arms), even as Kārtikeya (son of Lord Śiva) struck the Krauñca mountain with his formidable javelin. (19)

स शूलनिर्भिन्नमहाभुजान्तरः
प्रविह्वलः शोणितमुद्रमन् मुखात् ।
ननाद भीमं हनुमान् महाहवे
युगान्तमेघस्तनितस्वनोपमम् ॥ २० ॥

Ejecting blood from his mouth, Hanumān, who was thrown completely out of his wits, his broad chest being pierced with a pike by Kumbhakarna, gave forth in that major conflict a terrific cry of anguish, which resembled the thunder-clap of clouds at the end of the world-cycle. (20)

ततो विनेदुः सहसा प्रहृष्टा
रक्षोगणास्तं व्यथितं समीक्ष्य ।
प्लवंगमास्तु व्यथिता भयार्ताः
प्रदुद्रुवुः संयति कुम्भकर्णात् ॥ २१ ॥

Highly rejoiced to see him agonized, the ranks of ogres forthwith burst into a loud cheer; while the monkeys, who were seized with agony and stricken with fear of Kumbhakarna, fled from the battlefield. (21)

ततस्तु नीलो बलवान् पर्यवस्थापयन् बलम् ।
प्रविचिक्षेप शैलाग्रं कुम्भकर्णाय धीमते ॥ २२ ॥

Restoring his army to confidence, the mighty Nila for his part then flung with vehemence a mountain peak at the intelligent Kumbhakarna. (22)

तदापतन्तं सम्प्रेक्ष्य मुष्टिनाभिजघान ह ।
मुष्टिप्रहाराभिहतं तच्छैलाग्रं व्यशीर्यत ।
सविस्फुलिङ्गं सज्वालं निपपात महीतले ॥ २३ ॥

Seeing it approaching, the latter struck it with his fist. Struck with a blow of his fist, that mountain peak was split into pieces and dropped on the earth's surface emitting sparks and flames. (23)

ऋषभः शरभो नीलो गवाक्षो गन्धमादनः ।
पञ्च वानरशार्दूलाः कुम्भकर्णमुपाद्रवन् ॥ २४ ॥

Five tigers among monkeys, viz., R̥ṣabha, Śarabha, Nila, Gavākṣa and Gandhamādana attacked Kumbhakarna. (24)

शैलैर्वृक्षैस्तलैः पादैर्मुष्टिभिश्च महाबलाः ।
कुम्भकर्णं महाकायं निजघ्नुः सर्वतो युधि ॥ २५ ॥

Endowed with extraordinary might the aforesaid monkeys struck the colossal Kumbhakarna on all sides with crags, trees, the palms of their hands, feet and fists on the battlefield. (25)

स्पर्शानिव प्रहारांस्तान् वेदयानो न विव्यथे ।
ऋषभं तु महावेगं बाहुभ्यां परिष्वजे ॥ २६ ॥

Feeling the aforesaid blows as no more than soft touches, he did not experience any pain at all. And he encircled R̥ṣabha, who was full of great impetuosity, with his arms. (26)

कुम्भकर्णभुजाभ्यां तु पीडितो वानरर्षभः ।
निपपातर्षभो भीमः प्रमुखागतशोणितः ॥ २७ ॥

Pressed hard with the arms of Kumbhakarna, however, the redoubtable R̥ṣabha, a veritable bull among the monkeys, fell down, blood having oozed from his mouth in profusion. (27)

मुष्टिना शरभं हत्वा जानुना नीलमाहवे ।
आजघान गवाक्षं तु तलेनेन्द्रिपुस्तदा ।
पादेनाभ्यहनत् क्रुद्धस्तरसा गन्धमादनम् ॥ २८ ॥

Striking Śarabha with his fist, Kumbhakarna (the enemy of Indra) hit Nila with his knee on the battlefield and slapped Gavākṣa. Then, filled with rage, he kicked Gandhamādana with vehemence. (28)

दत्तप्रहारव्यथिता मुमुहुः शोणितोक्षिताः ।
निपेतुस्ते तु मेदिन्यां निकृत्ता इव किंशुकाः ॥ २९ ॥

Agonized by the blows dealt by Kumbhakarna, they all fainted and fell to the ground, drenched in blood, like Kirmśuka trees, bearing red blossom that have been cut down. (29)

तेषु वानरमुख्येषु पातितेषु महात्मसु ।
वानराणां सहस्राणि कुम्भकर्णं प्रदुद्रुवुः ॥ ३० ॥

The aforesaid gigantic leaders of monkeys having been struck down, thousands of monkeys darted towards Kumbhakarna. (30)

तं शैलमिव शैलाभाः सर्वे तु प्लवगर्षभाः ।
समारुह्य समुत्पत्य ददंशुश्च महाबलाः ॥ ३१ ॥

Jumping and climbing on him, even as one would ascend a mountain, all the leaders of monkeys for their part, who themselves looked like mountains and were endowed with extraordinary might, began to bite him, too. (31)

तं नखैर्दशनैश्चापि मुष्टिभिर्बाहुभिस्तथा ।
कुम्भकर्णं महाबाहुं निजघ्नुः प्लवगर्षभाः ॥ ३२ ॥

The foremost of monkeys attacked the said Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with mighty arms, with their nails and teeth as also with their fists and arms. (32)

स वानरसहस्रैस्तु विचितः पर्वतोपमः ।
रराज राक्षसव्याघ्रो गिरिरात्मरुहैरिव ॥ ३३ ॥

Covered by thousands of monkeys that mountain-like tiger among ogres looked charming like a mountain overgrown with trees. (33)

बाहुभ्यां वानरान् सर्वान् प्रगृह्य स महाबलः ।
भक्षयामास संक्रुद्धो गरुडः पन्नगानिव ॥ ३४ ॥

Tightly seizing hold of all the monkeys with his arms, highly enraged as he was,
Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, began to devour them even as Garuḍa would devour serpents.
(34)

प्रक्षिप्ताः कुम्भकर्णेन वक्त्रे पातालसंनिभे ।
नासापुटाभ्यां संजग्मुः कर्णाभ्यां चैव वानराः ॥ ३५ ॥

Thrust into his mouth, which closely resembled Pātāla (the nethermost subterranean region), by Kumbhakarna, the monkeys issued forth through his nostrils as well as through his ears. (35)

भक्षयन् भृशसंक्रुद्धो हरीन् पर्वतसंनिभः ।
बभञ्ज वानरान् सर्वान् संक्रुद्धो राक्षसोत्तमः ॥ ३६ ॥

While devouring the monkeys, highly enraged as he was, the prince of ogres, who looked like a mountain and repeatedly mutilated the monkeys. (36)

मांसशोणितसंक्लेदां कुर्वन् भूमिं स राक्षसः ।
चचार हरिसैन्येषु कालाग्निरिव मूर्च्छितः ॥ ३७ ॥

Covering the earth with flesh and blood, the said ogre ranged through the simian ranks like the augmented fire of universal dissolution. (37)

वज्रहस्तो यथा शक्रः पाशहस्त इवान्तकः ।
शूलहस्तो बभौ युद्धे कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ॥ ३८ ॥

Pike in hand, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, shone like Indra (the ruler of gods) holding the thunderbolt in his hand, or like Death, bearing a noose in his hand. (38)

यथा शुष्काण्यरण्यानि ग्रीष्मे दहति पावकः ।
तथा वानरसैन्यानि कुम्भकर्णो ददाह सः ॥ ३९ ॥

The ill-famed Kumbhakarna consumed the simian ranks even as a forest fire would consume dry forests in summer. (39)

ततस्ते वध्यमानास्तु हतयूथाः प्लवंगमाः ।
वानरा भयसंविग्ना विनेदुर्विकृतैः स्वरैः ॥ ४० ॥

Wild with terror, the aforesaid monkeys for their part, who moved about leaping, and who had lost many of their battalions, yelled in unnatural tones while being destroyed as above by Kumbhakarna. (40)

अनेकशो वध्यमानाः कुम्भकर्णेन वानराः ।
राघवं शरणं जग्मुर्व्यथिता भिन्नचेतसः ॥ ४१ ॥

Agonized and dispirited while being exterminated in large numbers by Kumbhakarna, the monkeys sought Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, as their refuge. (41)

प्रभग्नान् वानरान् दृष्ट्वा वज्रहस्तात्मजात्मजः ।
अभ्यधावत वेगेन कुम्भकर्णं महाहवे ॥ ४२ ॥

Seeing the monkeys completely routed, the son of Vālī (sprung from the loins of Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt) rushed with impetuosity at Kumbhakarna in the great struggle. (42)

शैलशृङ्गं महद् गृह्य विनदन् स मुहुर्मुहुः ।
त्रासयन् राक्षसान् सर्वान् कुम्भकर्णपदानुगान् ॥ ४३ ॥
चिक्षेप शैलशिखरं कुम्भकर्णस्य मूर्धनि ।
स तेनाभिहतो मूर्ध्नि शैलेनेन्द्ररिपुस्तदा ॥ ४४ ॥
कुम्भकर्णः प्रज्ज्वाल क्रोधेन महता तदा ।
सोऽभ्यधावत वेगेन वालिपुत्रममर्षणः ॥ ४५ ॥

Seizing hold of a huge mountain peak, roaring again and again and frightening all the ogres who followed the footsteps of Kumbhakarna, he flung the mountain top on Kumbhakarna's head. Struck on the head with that crag, Kumbhakarna, the well-known enemy of Indra, burnt up with great rage.
The intolerant ogre then rushed at Aṅgada
(son of Vālī) with vehemence. (43—45)

कुम्भकर्णो महानादस्त्रासयन् सर्ववानरान्।
शूलं ससर्ज वै रोषादङ्गदे तु महाबलः ॥ ४६ ॥

Making a great noise, and terrifying all the monkeys, Kumbhakarna for his part who was endowed with extraordinary might, forthwith hurled his pike in rage at Aṅgada. (46)

तदापतन्तं बलवान् युद्धमार्गविशारदः।
लाघवान्मोक्षयामास बलवान् वानरर्षभः ॥ ४७ ॥

The mighty Aṅgada, a bull among the monkeys, who was an adept in the technique of warfare, dodged the approaching pike with agility. (47)

उत्पत्य चैनं तरसा तलेनोरस्यताडयत्।
स तेनाभिहतः कोपात् प्रमुमोहाचलोपमः ॥ ४८ ॥

Nay, jumping up, he gave the ogre a blow with vehemence on the chest. Struck by Aṅgada with fury, the ogre, who resembled a mountain (in size), fainted. (48)

स लब्धसंज्ञोऽतिबलो मुष्टिं संगृह्य राक्षसः।
अपहस्तेन चिक्षेप विसंज्ञः स पपात ह ॥ ४९ ॥

Doubling his fist, when he regained his senses, the notorious ogre, who was endowed with exceeding might, dealt a blow with the back of his hand, and Aṅgada fell down unconscious: so the tradition goes. (49)

तस्मिन् प्लवगशार्दूले विसंज्ञे पतिते भुवि।
तच्छूलं समुपादाय सुग्रीवमभिदुहुवे ॥ ५० ॥

Seizing that pike, when the aforesaid tiger among monkeys had dropped unconscious on the ground, the ogre rushed towards Sugrīva. (50)

तमापतन्तं सम्प्रेक्ष्य कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम्।
उत्पपात तदा वीरः सुग्रीवो वानराधिपः ॥ ५१ ॥

Perceiving the notorious Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, approaching, the heroic Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, bounded in the air. (51)

स पर्वताग्रमुत्क्षिप्य समाविध्य महाकपिः।
अभिदुद्राव वेगेन कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम् ॥ ५२ ॥

Lifting up a mountain peak and flourishing it, that mighty monkey darted towards Kumbhakarna, who was possessed of great might. (52)

तमापतन्तं सम्प्रेक्ष्य कुम्भकर्णः प्लवंगमम्।
तस्थौ विवृत्तसर्वाङ्गो वानरेन्द्रस्य सम्मुखः ॥ ५३ ॥

Perceiving that monkey advancing, Kumbhakarna stood facing the lord of monkeys, with all his limbs braced. (53)

कपिशोणितदिग्धाङ्गं भक्षयन्तं महाकपीन्।
कुम्भकर्णं स्थितं दृष्ट्वा सुग्रीवो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ५४ ॥

Seeing Kumbhakarna who stood devouring the colossal monkeys and whose limbs were smeared with their blood, Sugrīva spoke to him as follows : (54)

पातिताश्च त्वया वीराः कृतं कर्म सुदुष्करम्।
भक्षितानि च सैन्यानि प्राप्तं ते परमं यशः ॥ ५५ ॥

“A feat exceedingly difficult to perform has been accomplished by you, in that champions have been struck down, battalions devoured and the highest renown attained by you. (55)

त्यज तद् वानरानीकं प्राकृतैः किं करिष्यसि।
सहस्रैकं निपातं मे पर्वतस्यास्य राक्षस ॥ ५६ ॥

“Let alone that army of monkeys. What are you to do with the rank and file? Stand only the exclusive impact of this mountain going to be hurled by me, O ogre!” (56)

तद् वाक्यं हरिराजस्य सत्त्वधैर्यसमन्वितम्।
श्रुत्वा राक्षसशार्दूलः कुम्भकर्णोऽब्रवीद् वचः ॥ ५७ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid challenge of Sugrīva (the ruler of monkeys), which was full of courage and fortitude, Kumbhakarna, a tiger among ogres, made the following reply: (57)

प्रजापतेस्तु पौत्रस्त्वं तथैवर्क्षरजःसुतः।
धृतिपौरुषसम्पन्नस्तस्माद् गर्जसि वानर ॥ ५८ ॥

“You are a grandson of Brahmā (the lord of created beings) and even so son of Rkṣaraja (sprung from the yawn of Brahmā) and richly endowed with fortitude and valour. Hence you roar, O monkey!" (58)

स कुम्भकर्णस्य वचो निशम्य
व्याविध्य शैलं सहसा मुमोच ।
तेनाजघानोरसि कुम्भकर्णं
शैलेन वज्राशनिसंनिभेन ॥ ५९ ॥

Hearing the reply of Kumbhakarṇa and balancing the mountain top, Sugrīva precipitately discharged it, and struck Kumbhakarṇa in the chest with that crag, resembling the thunderbolt and a shooting star. (59)

तच्छैलशृङ्गं सहसा विभिन्नं
भुजान्तरे तस्य तदा विशाले ।
ततो विषेदुः सहसा प्लवंगा
रक्षोगणाश्चापि मुदा विनेदुः ॥ ६० ॥

The aforesaid crag forthwith smashed on his huge chest all at once. The monkeys thereupon despaired all of a sudden, while the ranks of the ogres thundered with joy. (60)

स शैलशृङ्गाभिहतश्चुकोप
ननाद रोषाच्च विवृत्य वक्त्रम् ।
व्याविध्य शूलं स तडित्प्रकाशं
चिक्षेप हर्यृक्षपतेर्वधाय ॥ ६१ ॥

Struck with that mountain top, the ogre flew into a rage and dilating his mouth in anger, roared again and again. Nay, flourishing his pike, which flashed as lightning, he hurled it for the destruction of Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys and bears. (61)

तत् कुम्भकर्णस्य भुजप्रगुणं
शूलं शितं काञ्चनधामयष्टिम् ।
क्षिप्रं समुत्पत्य निगृह्य दोर्भ्यां
बभञ्ज वेगेन सुतोऽनिलस्य ॥ ६२ ॥

Bounding at once and seizing hold with his arms of that sharp pike propelled by Kumbhakarṇa's arm, whose shaft was adorned with chains of gold, Hanumān (son of the wind-god) broke it with vehemence. (62)

कृतं भारसहस्रस्य शूलं कालायसं महत् ।
बभञ्ज जानुमारोप्य तदा हृष्टः प्लवंगमः ॥ ६३ ॥

Placing on his knee that huge iron pike, which was made of iron weighing a thousand Bhāras*, the monkey joyfully broke it at once. (63)

शूलं भग्नं हनुमता दृष्ट्वा वानरवाहिनी ।
हृष्टा ननाद बहुशः सर्वतश्चापि दुद्रुवे ॥ ६४ ॥

Rejoiced to see the pike broken by Hanumān, the army of monkeys repeatedly roared and rushed up from all sides. (64)

बभूवाथ परित्रस्तो राक्षसो विमुखोऽभवत् ।
सिंहनादं च ते चक्रुः प्रहृष्टा वनगोचराः ।
मारुतिं पूजयांचक्रुर्दृष्ट्वा शूलं तथागतम् ॥ ६५ ॥

The ogre, on the other hand, got dismayed and downcast; while highly rejoiced monkeys (lit., rangers of the woods) roared like lions and applauded the son of the wind-god, on beholding the pike broken into pieces. (65)

स तत् तथा भग्नमेक्ष्य शूलं
चुकोप रक्षोधिपतिर्महात्मा ।
उत्पाट्य लङ्कामलयात् स शृङ्गं
जघान सुग्रीवमुपेत्य तेन ॥ ६६ ॥

That colossal overlord of ogres, Kumbhakarṇa, flew into a rage on seeing that pike broken in that wise by Hanumān. Tearing off a peak of the Malaya mountain standing in the vicinity of Lankā and approaching Sugrīva, he struck him with it. (66)

स शैलशृङ्गाभिहतो विसंज्ञः
पपात भूमौ युधि वानरेन्द्रः ।
तं वीक्ष्य भूमौ पतितं विसंज्ञं
नेदुः प्रहृष्टा युधि यातुधानाः ॥ ६७ ॥

Struck with the crag, that ruler of monkeys fell senseless on the battlefield. Highly rejoiced to see him fallen unconscious on the battleground, the ogres let forth a roar of triumph. (67)

समभ्युपेत्याद्भुतघोरवीर्यं

स कुम्भकर्णो युधि वानरेन्द्रम् ।

जहार सुग्रीवमभिप्रगृह्य

यथानिलो मेघमिव प्रचण्डः ॥ ६८

Approaching on the battlefield Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, who was endowed with marvellous and terrific prowess, nay, pressing him in his arm-pit, the notorious Kumbhakarna bore him away even as a tempestuous wind would sweep away a cloud. (68)

स तं महामेघनिकाशरूप-

मुत्पाट्य गच्छन् युधि कुम्भकर्णः ।

रराज मेरुप्रतिमानरूपो

मेरुर्यथा व्युच्छिन्नघोरशृङ्गः ॥ ६९ ॥

Departing after lifting up Sugrīva, whose form resembled a huge cloud, the said Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with a form resembling Mount Meru (in size), shone on the battlefield like the said Mount Meru, distinguished by its exceedingly lofty and formidable peak. (69)

ततस्तमादाय जगाम वीरः

संस्तूयमानो युधि राक्षसेन्द्रः ।

शृण्वन् निनादं त्रिदिवालयानां

प्लवङ्गराजग्रहविस्मितानाम् ॥ ७० ॥

Seizing hold of Sugrīva, the heroic Kumbhakarna (the lord of ogres) left for Laṅkā, being duly extolled by the ogres on the battlefield and hearing the outcry of gods (the denizens of heaven) who were taken aback at the capture of Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys. (70)

ततस्तमादाय तदा स मेने

हरीन्द्रमिन्द्रोपममिन्द्रवीर्यः ।

अस्मिन् हते सर्वमिदं हतं स्यात्

सराघवं

सैन्यमितीन्द्रशत्रुः ॥ ७१ ॥

Having seized hold at that moment of the aforesaid ruler of monkeys, Sugrīva, who vied with Indra (the ruler of gods), that enemy of Indra, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with the valour of Indra, thereupon concluded that, Sugrīva having been killed, this entire army of monkeys, including Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), would be automatically destroyed. (71)

विद्रुतां वाहिनीं दृष्ट्वा वानराणामितस्ततः ।

कुम्भकर्णेन सुग्रीवं गृहीतं चापि वानरम् ॥ ७२ ॥

हनूमांश्चिन्तयामास मतिमान् मारुतात्मजः ।

एवं गृहीते सुग्रीवे किं कर्तव्यं मया भवेत् ॥ ७३ ॥

Beholding the army of monkeys scattered here and there and the monkey Sugrīva, too, captured by Kumbhakarna, the sagacious Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, thought to himself: 'What should be done by me when Sugrīva has been captured in this way? (72-73)

यद्धि न्याय्यं मया कर्तुं तत् करिष्याम्यसंशयम् ।

भूत्वा पर्वतसंकाशो नाशयिष्यामि राक्षसम् ॥ ७४ ॥

'I shall undoubtedly do that which is fit to be done by me. Growing to the size of a mountain, I shall kill the ogre. (74)

मया हते संयति कुम्भकर्णे

महाबले

मुष्टिविशीर्णदेहे ।

विमोचिते

वानरपार्थिवे

च

भवन्तु हृष्टाः प्लवगाः समग्राः ॥ ७५ ॥

'When Kumbhakarna, who is endowed with extraordinary might, has been killed by me in a duel, his body being shattered with my fist, and the king of monkeys delivered, let all the monkeys feel rejoiced. (75)

अथवा स्वयमप्येष मोक्षं प्राप्स्यति वानरः ।

गृहीतोऽयं यदि भवेत् त्रिदशैः सासुरोरगैः ॥ ७६ ॥

'Or, this monkey, Sugrīva, will win his freedom back himself, even if he is captured by gods including demons and Nāgas (serpent-demons having the face of a man and the tail of a serpent). (76)

मन्ये न तावदात्मानं बुध्यते वानराधिपः ।
शैलप्रहाराभिहतः कुम्भकर्णेन संयुगे ॥ ७७ ॥

‘Struck with the blow of a crag by Kumbhakarna on the battlefield, the overlord of monkeys, I presume, is not yet conscious of his self. (77)

अयं मुहूर्तात् सुग्रीवो लब्धसंज्ञो महाहवे ।
आत्मनो वानराणां च यत् पथ्यं तत् करिष्यति ॥ ७८ ॥

‘Having regained his senses in a short while, in this major conflict, this Sugriva will do what is good for himself as well as for the monkeys. (78)

मया तु मोक्षितस्यास्य सुग्रीवस्य महात्मनः ।
अप्रीतिश्च भवेत् कष्टा कीर्तिनाशश्च शाश्वतः ॥ ७९ ॥

‘Grievous displeasure will certainly be caused to the high-souled Sugriva on his being delivered by me, nay, his reputation will be lost forever. (79)

तस्मान्मुहूर्तं काङ्क्षिष्ये विक्रमं मोक्षितस्य तु ।
भिन्नं च वानरानीकं तावदाश्वासयाम्यहम् ॥ ८० ॥

‘I shall for my part, therefore, await awhile the exhibition of prowess on his part on his being restored to freedom. Till then I shall restore to confidence the scattered army of the monkeys.’ (80)

इत्येवं चिन्तयित्वाथ हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
भूयः संस्तम्भयामास वानराणां महाचमूम् ॥ ८१ ॥

Pondering thus, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, once more brought firmness to the huge army of the monkeys. (81)

स कुम्भकर्णोऽथ विवेश लङ्कां
स्फुरन्तमादाय महाहरिं तम् ।
विमानचर्यागृहगोपुरस्थैः
पुष्पाग्रचवर्षैरभिपूज्यमानः ॥ ८२ ॥

Bearing the great monkey, Sugriva, who had now begun to shake, the notorious Kumbhakarna now entered Laṅkā, being hailed on all sides by people dwelling in seven-storeyed mansions, houses lining the roads and the gates of buildings with showers of excellent flowers. (82)

लाजगन्धोदवर्षैस्तु सेच्यमानः शनैः शनैः ।
राजवीथ्यास्तु शीतत्वात् संज्ञां प्राप महाबलः ॥ ८३ ॥

Being gently sprinkled with showers of fried grains of paddy and scented water and due to the coolness of the king’s highway, Sugriva, who was endowed with extraordinary might, gradually regained consciousness. (83)

ततः स संज्ञामुपलभ्य कृच्छाद्
बलीयसस्तस्य भुजान्तरस्थः ।
अवेक्षमाणः पुराजमार्गं
विचिन्तयामास मुहुर्महात्मा ॥ ८४ ॥

Having regained consciousness with difficulty, while yet in the arms of Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with exceeding might, and gazing on the king’s highway in the city, Sugriva, the high-souled monkey, then repeatedly pondered as follows: (84)

एवं गृहीतेन कथं नु नाम
शक्यं मया सम्प्रतिकर्तुमद्य ।
तथा करिष्यामि यथा हरीणां
भविष्यतीष्टं च हितं च कार्यम् ॥ ८५ ॥

‘How on earth can it at all be possible to retaliate at this moment for me, who have been taken captive in this way? Therefore, I shall take action in such a way as may prove agreeable and advantageous to the monkeys.’ (85)

ततः करग्रैः सहसा समेत्य
राजा हरीणाममरेन्द्रशत्रोः ।
खरैश्च कर्णौ दशनैश्च नासां
ददंश पादैर्विददार पाश्वौ ॥ ८६ ॥

Reaching this conclusion, the king of monkeys tore off with his sharp nails all of a sudden the lower end of the ears of Kumbhakarna, the enemy of the ruler of gods, nay, bit off the latter's nose with his teeth and split open his sides with the nails of his toes. (86)

स कुम्भकर्णो हतकर्णनासो
विदारितस्तेन रदैर्नखैश्च ।
रोषाभिभूतः क्षतजार्द्रगात्रः
सुग्रीवमाविध्य पिपेष भूमौ ॥ ८७ ॥

Overwhelmed with anger when deprived of a part of his ears and nose by Sugriva and split open in the sides with the latter's teeth and nails, his limbs bespattered with blood, nay, spinning Sugriva down, the notorious Kumbhakarna pounded him with ferocity against the ground. (87)

स भूतले भीमबलाभिपिष्टः
सुरारिभिस्तैरभिहन्यमानः ।
जगाम खं कन्दुकवज्जवेन
पुनश्च रामेण समाजगाम ॥ ८८ ॥

Rubbed against the earth's surface by Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with terrific might, and while being struck by those enemies of gods (who stood by his side), Sugriva bounced in the air like a ball and got re-united with all speed with Śrī Rāma. (88)

कर्णनासाविहीनस्तु कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ।
रराज शोणितोत्सिक्तो गिरिः प्रस्त्रवणैरिव ॥ ८९ ॥

Deprived of the lower ends of his ears and nose and bathed in blood, Kumbhakarna for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, shone like a mountain with springs. (89)

शोणिताद्रौ महाकायो राक्षसो भीमदर्शनः ।
युद्धायाभिमुखो भूयो मनश्चक्रे निशाचरः ॥ ९० ॥

Drenched in blood, the colossal and terrible-looking ogre, a ranger of the night, made up his mind once more to fight with his face turned towards the enemy. (90)

अमर्षाच्छोणितोद्गारी शुशुभे रावणानुजः ।
नीलाञ्जनचयप्रख्यः ससंध्य इव तोयदः ॥ ९१ ॥

Vomiting blood in indignation, Kumbhakarna (a younger brother of Rāvaṇa) who resembled a mass of collyrium, shone like an evening cloud with a reddish tinge. (91)

गते च तस्मिन् सुरराजशत्रुः
क्रोधात् प्रदुद्राव रणाय भूयः ।
अनायुधोऽस्मीति विचिन्त्य रौद्रो
घोरं तदा मुद्गरमाससाद ॥ ९२ ॥

Nay, Sugriva having escaped, Kumbhakarna (an enemy of the ruler of gods) furiously rushed for an encounter once more. Reflecting within himself that 'I am weaponless', the ferocious ogre then seized hold of a formidable mallet. (92)

ततः स पुर्याः सहसा महौजा
निष्क्रम्य तद् वानरसैन्यमुग्रम् ।
बभक्ष रक्षो युधि कुम्भकर्णः
प्रजा युगान्ताग्निरिव प्रवृद्धः ॥ ९३ ॥

Issuing all of a sudden from the city, the aforesaid ogre, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary vigour, then began to consume the redoubtable army of monkeys on the battlefield even as the fire swollen at the end of the world-cycle would consume created beings. (93)

बुभुक्षितः शोणितमांसगृध्नः
प्रविश्य तद् वानरसैन्यमुग्रम् ।
चखाद रक्षांसि हरीन् पिशाचा-
नृक्षांश्च मोहाद् युधि कुम्भकर्णः ।
यथैव मृत्युर्हर्ते युगान्ते
स भक्षयामास हरींश्च मुख्यान् ॥ ९४ ॥

Penetrating deep into that formidable army of monkeys, Kumbhakarna, who, being famished, was covetous of flesh and blood, began to devour ogres, monkeys, fiends and bears (alike) on the battlefield through infatuation. Nay, he ate up, among others, the principal monkeys in the same way as Death sweeps away living beings at the end of the world-cycle. (94)

एकं द्वौ त्रीन् बहून् क्रुद्धो वानरान् सह राक्षसैः ।
समादायैकहस्तेन प्रचिक्षेप त्वरन् मुखे ॥ ९५ ॥

Seizing together with one hand, one, two, three or more monkeys alongwith ogres, the ogre hastily thrust them into his mouth. (95)

सम्प्रस्रवंस्तदा मेदः शोणितं च महाबलः ।
वध्यमानो नगेन्द्राग्रैर्भक्षयामास वानरान् ॥ ९६ ॥

Pouring forth in streams fat and blood from the corners of his mouth at that time, the ogre feasted on the monkeys even while being struck with peaks of the foremost of mountains. (96)

ते भक्ष्यमाणा हरयो रामं जग्मुस्तदा गतिम् ।
कुम्भकर्णो भृशं क्रुद्धः कपीन् खादन् प्रधावति ॥ ९७ ॥

While being devoured by the ogre, the aforesaid monkeys sought Śrī Rāma as their refuge at that time. Kumbhakarṇa, on the other hand, who was highly enraged, ran about with all speed devouring the monkeys. (97)

शतानि सप्त चाष्टौ च विंशत्त्रिंशत् तथैव च ।
सम्परिष्वज्य बाहुभ्यां खादन् विपरिधावति ॥ ९८ ॥

Tightly enfolding with his arms as many as seven and eight, nay, twenty, thirty and even so hundreds at a time, he ran fast devouring them on all sides. (98)

मेदोवसाशोणितदिग्धगात्रः

कर्णावसक्तग्रथितान्त्रमालः ।

ववर्ष शूलानि सुतीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रः

कालो युगान्तस्थ इव प्रवृद्धः ॥ ९९ ॥

His limbs besmeared with fat, marrow and blood and wreaths of tangled entrails hung over his ears, the ogre, who was endowed with exceptionally sharp teeth, rained darts (on the monkeys) even like Kāla, the Time-Spirit, grown immensely (in size) at the end of the world-cycle. (99)

तस्मिन् काले सुमित्रायाः पुत्रः परबलार्दनः ।
चकार लक्ष्मणः क्रुद्धो युद्धं परपुरंजयः ॥ १०० ॥

At that juncture, Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā, the scourage of hostile forces and the conqueror of hostile citadels commenced fighting in rage. (100)

स कुम्भकर्णस्य शरान् शरीरे सप्त वीर्यवान् ।
निचखानाददे चान्यान् विससर्ज च लक्ष्मणः ॥ १०१ ॥

The valliant Lakṣmaṇa, dug seven arrows into the person of Kumbhakarṇa. He took up more and discharged them too. (101)

पीड्यमानस्तदस्त्रं तु विशेषं तत् स राक्षसः ।
ततश्चुकोप बलवान् सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनः ॥ १०२ ॥

Being tormented (by the arrows), the aforesaid ogre for his part put an end to these missiles of Lakṣmaṇa with his own. Thereupon the mighty Lakṣmaṇa (who enhanced the joy of Sumitrā, his mother) flew into a rage. (102)

अथास्य कवचं शुभ्रं जाम्बूनदमयं शुभम् ।
प्रच्छादयामास शरैः संध्याभ्रमिव मारुतः ॥ १०३ ॥

He then completely covered the glittering and charming golden armour of Kumbhakarṇa with his arrows even as the wind would make an evening cloud completely disappear by dispersing it. (103)

नीलाञ्जनचयप्रख्यः शरैः काञ्चनभूषणैः ।
आपीड्यमानः शुशुभे मेघैः सूर्य इवांशुमान् ॥ १०४ ॥

Being covered by arrows decked with gold, the ogre, who resembled a mass of collyrium, shone like the sun with its rays being screened by clouds. (104)

ततः स राक्षसो भीमः सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनम् ।
सावज्ञमेव प्रोवाच वाक्यं मेघौघनिःस्वनः ॥ १०५ ॥

Thereupon that terrible ogre, whose voice resembled the rumbling of a multitude of clouds spoke as follows to Lakṣmaṇa (who enhanced the joy of his mother, Sumitrā) rather disdainfully: (105)

अन्तकस्याप्यकष्टेन युधि जेतारमाहवे ।
युध्यता मामभीतेन ख्यापिता वीरता त्वया ॥ १०६ ॥

“Valour has surely been exhibited by you on the battlefield while giving battle undauntedly to me, who would conquer even Death in an encounter without difficulty. (106)

प्रगृहीतायुधस्येह मृत्योरिव महामृधे ।
तिष्ठन्नप्यग्रतः पूज्यः किमु युद्धप्रदायकः ॥ १०७ ॥

“Worthy of honour is he who is able in this world even to face me, a rival of Death ready for a major conflict, weapon in hand, much more so, the one who gives battle to me. (107)

ऐरावतं समारूढो वृतः सर्वामरैः प्रभुः ।
नैव शक्रोऽपि समरे स्थितपूर्वः कदाचन ॥ १०८ ॥

“Duly mounted on his elephant, Airāvata and surrounded by all the gods, even the mighty Indra never stood before me in an encounter in the past. (108)

अद्य त्वयाहं सौमित्रे बालेनापि पराक्रमैः ।
तोषितो गन्तुमिच्छामि त्वामनुज्ञाप्य राघवम् ॥ १०९ ॥

“Gratified by you with your feats of valour today, O son of Sumitrā, even though you are a youngster, yet I wish to meet Rāma (a sion of Raghu), taking leave of you. (109)

यत् तु वीर्यबलोत्साहैस्तोषितोऽहं रणे त्वया ।
राममेवैकमिच्छामि हन्तुं यस्मिन् हते हतम् ॥ ११० ॥

“Inasmuch as I have been gratified by you with your prowess, strength and martial ardour in combat, I, for my part, seek precisely to kill Rāma alone; for, when he is dispatched, the entire army of monkeys will stand destroyed. (110)

रामे मयात्र निहते येऽन्ये स्थास्यन्ति संयुगे ।
तानहं योधयिष्यामि स्वबलेन प्रमाथिना ॥ १११ ॥

“When Rāma has been got rid of by me in this struggle, I shall force those others, who will remain on the battlefield, to fight with my devastating army.” (111)

इत्युक्तवाक्यं तद् रक्षः प्रोवाच स्तुतिसंहितम् ।
मृधे घोरतरं वाक्यं सौमित्रिः प्रहसन्निव ॥ ११२ ॥

To that exceedingly formidable ogre, when he had made this boastful reply, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) addressed the following rejoinder, full of praise, on the battlefield, as though heartily laughing: (112)

यस्त्वं शक्रादिभिर्देवैरसह्यः प्राप्य पौरुषम् ।
तत् सत्यं नान्यथा वीर दृष्टस्तेऽद्य पराक्रमः ॥ ११३ ॥

“Your assertion that, having acquired extraordinary prowess, you have grown irresistible for even gods headed by Indra, their ruler, is true; it is not otherwise, O champion! Your valour has been witnessed by me today. (113)

एष दाशरथी रामस्तिष्ठत्यद्रिरिवाचलः ।

इति श्रुत्वा ह्यनादृत्य लक्ष्मणं स निशाचरः ॥ ११४ ॥

अतिक्रम्य च सौमित्रिं कुम्भकर्णो महाबलः ।

राममेवाभिदुद्राव कम्पयन्निव मेदिनीम् ॥ ११५ ॥

“Here stands Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, immovable as a mountain.” Hearing this rejoinder, nay, disregarding Lakṣmaṇa and passing him by, that prowler of the night, Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, rushed towards Śrī Rāma alone, causing the earth to shake even as he sped along. (114-115)

अथ दाशरथी रामो रौद्रमस्त्रं प्रयोजयन् ।

कुम्भकर्णस्य हृदये ससर्ज निशितान् शरान् ॥ ११६ ॥

Making use of mystic missile presided over by Rudra (the god of destruction), Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, forthwith dug pointed arrows into the breast of Kumbhakarna. (116)

तस्य रामेण विद्धस्य सहसाभिप्रधावतः ।

अङ्गारमिश्राः क्रुद्धस्य मुखानिश्चेरुरर्घिषः ॥ ११७ ॥

As the latter darted in fury all at once towards Śrī Rāma, when hurt by him, flames mixed with embers shot forth from his mouth. (117)

रामास्त्रविद्धो घोरं वै नर्दन् राक्षसपुङ्गवः ।

अभ्यधावत संक्रुद्धो हरीन् विद्रावयन् रणे ॥ ११८ ॥

Highly enraged when pierced by the arrows of Śrī Rāma, Kumbhakarna (a veritable bull among the ogres) rushed towards him terribly roaring and dispersing the monkeys on the battle-field. (118)

तस्योरसि निमग्रास्ते शरा बर्हिणवाससः ।

हस्ताच्चास्य परिभ्रष्टा गदा चोर्व्या पपात ह ॥ ११९ ॥

Adorned with peacock's plumes, the said arrows disappeared into his breast. Nay, fallen from his hand, his mace too dropped to the ground; so the tradition goes. (119)

आयुधानि च सर्वाणि विप्रकीर्यन्त भूतले ।

स निरायुधमात्मानं यदा मेने महाबलः ॥ १२० ॥

मुष्टिभ्यां च कराभ्यां च चकार कदनं महत् ।

स बाणैरतिविद्धाङ्गः क्षतजेन समुक्षितः ।

रुधिरं परिसुम्नाव गिरिः प्रस्रवणं यथा ॥ १२१ ॥

All his other weapons too were scattered on the earth's surface. When the ogre, who was endowed with extraordinary might, realized himself to be unarmed, he played great havoc among the monkeys with his fists and hands too. His limbs pierced beyond measure with arrows and bathed in blood, he poured forth blood even as a mountain would pour out streams. (120-121)

स तीव्रेण च कोपेन रुधिरेण च मूर्च्छितः ।

वानरान् राक्षसानृक्षान् खादन् स परिधावति ॥ १२२ ॥

Overcome with violent anger and covered all over with blood as well, the notorious ogre ran about devouring the monkeys, ogres and bears alike. (122)

अथ शृङ्गं समाविध्य भीमं भीमपराक्रमः ।

चिक्षेप राममुद्दिश्य बलवानन्तकोपमः ॥ १२३ ॥

Firmly seizing hold of a formidable mountain peak, the mighty ogre, who was endowed with terrific prowess and resembled Death himself, hurled it towards Śrī Rāma. (123)

अप्राप्तमन्तरा रामः सप्तभिस्तमजिह्वगैः ।

चिच्छेद गिरिशृङ्गं तं पुनः संधाय कार्मुकम् ॥ १२४ ॥

Making use of his well-known bow once more, Śrī Rāma, however, split that mountain peak, while it was still on its way and had not yet reached him, with seven straight going arrows. (124)

ततस्तु रामो धर्मात्मा तस्य शृङ्गं महत् तदा ।

शरैः काञ्चनचित्राङ्गैश्चिच्छेद भरताग्रजः ॥ १२५ ॥

Thereupon Śrī Rāma, the elder brother of Bharata, for his part, whose mind was set on virtue, split up the huge mountain peak, hurled by the ogre, with golden-stripped arrows. (125)

तन्मेरुशिखराकारं द्योतमानमिव श्रिया ।

द्वे शते वानराणां च पतमानमपातयत् ॥ १२६ ॥

While falling down, the aforesaid crag, which looked like a peak of Mount Meru and was shining, as it were, with splendour, knocked down two hundred monkeys too. (126)

तस्मिन् काले स धर्मात्मा लक्ष्मणो राममब्रवीत् ।

कुम्भकर्णवधे युक्तो योगान् परिमृशन् बहून् ॥ १२७ ॥

At that moment the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa, whose mind was set on virtue, nay, who had been attentive all the time and who was busy devising numerous plans of killing Kumbhakarna submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma: (127)

नैवायं वानरान् राजन् न विजानाति राक्षसान् ।

मत्तः शोणितगन्धेन स्वान् परांश्चैव खादति ॥ १२८ ॥

“Intoxicated, as he is, with the smell of blood, this fellow, O prince, can no longer discriminate the monkeys and ogres and is indiscriminately devouring friends and foes alike. (128)

साध्वेनमधिरोहन्तु सर्वतो वानरर्षभाः ।

यूथपाश्च यथा मुख्यास्तिष्ठन्त्वस्मिन् समन्ततः ॥ १२९ ॥

“Let the foremost of the monkeys as well as the commanders of troops climb straight upon him from all sides and duly stay on him. (129)

अद्यायं दुर्मतिः काले गुरुभारप्रपीडितः ।

प्रचरन् राक्षसो भूमौ नान्यान् हन्यात् प्लवंगमान् ॥ १३० ॥

“Sore oppressed by the heavy weight of the monkeys, this evil-minded ogre will no longer be able to kill the other monkeys while moving about on the earth.” (130)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राजपुत्रस्य धीमतः ।

ते समारुरुहुर्हृष्टाः कुम्भकर्णं महाबलाः ॥ १३१ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid direction of the sagacious prince, the monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary might, climbed joyfully upon Kumbhakarna. (131)

कुम्भकर्णस्तु संक्रुद्धः समारूढः प्लवंगमैः ।

व्यधूनयत् तान् वेगेन दुष्टहस्तीव हस्तिपान् ॥ १३२ ॥

Highly enraged when climbed upon by the monkeys, Kumbhakarna for his part shook them off with vehemence as a refractory elephant would shake off his mahout. (132)

तान् दृष्ट्वा निर्धुतान् रामो रुष्टोऽयमिति राक्षसम् ।

समुत्पपात वेगेन धनुरुत्तममाददे ॥ १३३ ॥

Finding them shaken off and concluding that the ogre was enraged, Śrī Rāma darted towards him with impetuosity, holding in his hand his excellent bow. (133)

क्रोधरक्तेक्षणो धीरो निर्दहन्निव चक्षुषा ।

राघवो राक्षसं वेगादभिदुद्राव वेगितः ।

यूथपान् हर्षयन् सर्वान् कुम्भकर्णबलार्दितान् ॥ १३४ ॥

He eyes red with fury, as if he was going to burn his adversary with his very glance, and seized with impetuosity, the intrepid Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) rushed towards the ogre with vehemence bringing delight to all his troop-commanders who were oppressed by the might of Kumbhakarna. (134)

स चापमादाय भुजंगकल्पं

दृढज्यमुग्रं तपनीयचित्रम् ।

हरीन् समाश्वास्य समुत्पपात

रामो निबद्धोत्तमतूणबाणः ॥ १३५ ॥

Taking in his hand his formidable bow, which resembled a serpent, was strung with a stout cord and looked charming with its ornamental crust of gold, nay, fully restoring the monkeys to confidence, the celebrated Śrī Rāma bounded forward, a quiver full of excellent arrows fastened at his back. (135)

स वानरगणैस्तैस्तु वृतः परमदुर्जयैः ।

लक्ष्मणानुचरो वीरः सम्प्रतस्थे महाबलः ॥ १३६ ॥

Surrounded by the aforesaid troops of monkeys who were extremely difficult to conquer, the aforesaid hero, who was endowed with extraordinary might, duly proceeded to meet Kumbhakarna, followed by Lakṣmaṇa. (136)

स ददर्श महात्मानं किरीटिनमरिंदमम् ।

शोणिताप्लुतरक्ताक्षं कुम्भकर्णं महाबलः ॥ १३७ ॥

Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary might, saw the colossal Kumbhakarna, the tamer of his enemies, adorned with a diadem and bathed in blood, his eyes red with fury. (137)

सर्वान् समभिधावन्तं यथा रुष्टं दिशागजम् ।

मार्गमाणं हरीन् क्रुद्धं राक्षसैः परिवारितम् ॥ १३८ ॥

Surrounded by ogres and hunting for the monkeys, full of rage, he was pursuing them all like a furious elephant guarding one of the quarters. (138)

विन्ध्यमन्दरसंकाशं काञ्चनाङ्गदभूषणम् ।
स्रवन्तं रुधिरं वक्त्राद् वर्षमेघमिवोत्थितम् ॥ १३९ ॥

Adorned with armlets of gold, he resembled the Vindhya or the Mandara mountain (in size) and was sprouting blood from his mouth even like a towering cloud pouring down rain. (139)

जिह्वया परिलिह्यन्तं सृक्किणी शोणितोक्षिते ।
मृद्गन्तं वानरानीकं कालान्तकयमोपमम् ॥ १४० ॥

With his tongue he was licking the corners of his mouth, which were wet with blood, and was crushing the army of monkeys even like Yama (the god of retribution) figuring as Death at the time of universal dissolution. (140)

तं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसश्रेष्ठं प्रदीप्तानलवर्चसम् ।
विस्फारयामास तदा कार्मुकं पुरुषर्षभः ॥ १४१ ॥

Seeing that prince of ogres, who shone like inflamed fire, Śrī Rāma, the foremost of men, forthwith pulled the string of his bow. (141)

स तस्य चापनिर्घोषात् कुपितो राक्षसर्षभः ।
अमृष्यमाणस्तं घोषमभिदुद्राव राघवम् ॥ १४२ ॥

Enraged to hear the twang of his bow, and unable to bear that sound, that bull among the ogres rushed towards Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu).* (142)

ततस्तु वातोद्धतमेघकल्पं
भुजंगराजोत्तमभोगबाहुः ।
तमापतन्तं धरणीधराभ-
मुवाच रामो युधि कुम्भकर्णम् ॥ १४३ ॥

Thereupon Śrī Rāma for his part, whose arms resembled in thickness and length the coils of Vāsuki (the king of serpents) spoke on the battle-field as follows to the said Kumbhakarna, who came rushing like a cloud driven by the wind and resembled a mountain (in size): (143)

आगच्छ रक्षोऽधिप मा विषाद-मवस्थितोऽहं प्रगृहीतचापः ।
अवेहि मां राक्षसवंशनाशनं
यस्त्वं मुहूर्ताद् भविता विचेताः ॥ १४४ ॥

“Come, O lord of ogres! Don’t give way to despondency. I stand with my bow held firmly in my hand. Know me to be the destroyer of the ogre race. You too would be deprived of your life after a short while.” (144)

रामोऽयमिति विज्ञाय जहास विकृतस्वनम् ।
अभ्यधावत संकुद्धो हरीन् विद्रावयन् रणे ॥ १४५ ॥

Coming to know that he was Śrī Rāma, the ogre laughed in an unnatural tone and

* Verse 142 above is followed in certain editions by a few verses, which are reproduced below followed by their translation :

पुरस्ताद् राघवस्यार्थं गदायुक्ता विभीषणः । अभिदुद्राव वेगेन भ्राता भ्रातरमाहवे ॥
विभीषणं पुरो दृष्ट्वा कुम्भकर्णोऽब्रवीदिदम् । प्रहरस्व रणे शीघ्रं क्षत्रधर्मे स्थिरो भव ॥
भ्रातृस्नेहं परित्यज्य राघवस्य प्रियं कुरु । अस्मत्कार्यं कृतं वत्स यस्त्वं राममुपागतः ॥
त्वमेको रक्षसां लोके सत्यधर्माभिरक्षिता । नास्ति धर्माभिरक्तानां व्यसनं तु कदाचन ॥
संतानार्थं त्वमेवैकः कुलस्यास्य भविष्यसि । राघवस्य प्रसादात् त्वं रक्षसां राज्यमाप्स्यसि ॥
प्रकृत्या मम दुर्धर्ष शीघ्रं मार्गादपक्रम । न स्थातव्यं पुरस्तात्मे सम्भ्रमात्रष्टचेतसः ॥
न वेत्ति संयुगे सक्रः स्वान् परान् वा निशाचर । रक्षणीयोऽसि मे वत्स सत्यमेतद् ब्रवीमि ते ॥
एवमुक्त्वा वचस्तेन कुम्भकर्णेन धीमता । विभीषणो महाबाहुः कुम्भकर्णमुवाच ह ॥
गदितं मे कुलस्यास्य रक्षणार्थमरिंदम । न श्रुतं सर्वरक्षोभिस्ततोऽहं राममागतः ॥
कृतं तु तन्महाभाग सुकृतं दुष्कृतं तु वा ।
एवमुक्त्वाश्रुपूर्णाक्षो गदापाणिर्विभीषणः । एकान्तमाश्रितो भूत्वा चिन्तयामास संस्थितः ॥

[Armed with a mace, Vibhīṣaṇa, Kumbhakarna’s (younger) brother darted with violence towards his (own elder) brother on the battlefield, ahead of Śrī Rāma, to fight on his behalf. Seeing Vibhīṣaṇa in front, Kumbhakarna spoke as follows: ‘Strike at once on the battlefield and remain firmly devoted to rushed forward in great rage, scattering the monkeys on the battle-field. (145)

दारयन्निव सर्वेषां हृदयानि वनौकसाम्।
प्रहस्य विकृतं भीमं स मेघस्तनितोपमम्॥ १४६॥
कुम्भकर्णो महातेजा राघवं वाक्यमब्रवीत्।
नाहं विराधो विज्ञेयो न कबन्धः खरो न च।
न वाली न च मारीचः कुम्भकर्णः समागतः॥ १४७॥

Heartily laughing in an unnatural and hideous way, producing a sound like the rumbling of a cloud, and, therefore, rending as it were the hearts of all the monkeys (lit., the dwellers in the wood s). Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, spoke to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as follows: "I should neither be accounted Virādha nor Kabandha nor Khara nor Vālī nor Mārica. It is Kumbhakarna arrived here. (146-147)

पश्य मे मुद्वरं भीमं सर्वं कालायसं महत्।
अनेन निर्जिता देवा दानवाश्च पुरा मया॥ १४८॥

"Behold my dreadful and mighty club wrought entirely of iron. With this gods and demons were formerly conquered by me. (148)

विकर्णनास इति मां नावज्ञातुं त्वमर्हसि।
स्वल्पापि हि न मे पीडा कर्णनासाविनाशनात्॥ १४९॥

"You ought not to hold me in contempt in that I have been deprived of my nose and ears. Not the least pain is experienced by me due to the loss of my ears and nose.(149)

दर्शयेक्ष्वाकुशार्दूल वीर्यं गात्रेषु मेऽनघ।
ततस्त्वां भक्षयिष्यामि दृष्टपौरुषविक्रमम्॥ १५०॥

"Exhibit your prowess on my limbs, O tiger among the Ikṣvākus! I shall then devour you as soon as your manliness and prowess have been witnessed (by me), O sinless warrior!" (150)

स कुम्भकर्णस्य वचो निशम्य
रामः सुपुङ्गवन् विससर्ज बाणान्।
तैराहतो वज्रसमप्रवेगै-
र्न चुक्षुभे न व्यथते सुरारिः॥ १५१॥

Hearing the braggadocio of Kumbhakarna, Śrī Rāma shot plumed arrows at him; struck with those arrows, which flew with tremendous speed, vying with the speed of lightning, Kumbhakarna (the enemy of gods) felt neither disturbed nor agonized. (151)

यैः सायकैः सालवरा निकृता
वाली हतो वानरपुङ्गवश्च।
ते कुम्भकर्णस्य तदा शरीरं
वज्रोपमा न व्यथयाम्प्रचक्रुः॥ १५२॥

Those very arrows by which the foremost of sal trees were cut down and the duty of a warrior. Bidding adieu to your affection for a brother, do what is pleasing to Rāma (a scion of Raghu). Our work has been accomplished my darling, in that you have sought refuge with Śrī Rāma. You are the solitary figure in the world of ogres, who has vindicated truth and virtue. Misfortune can never befall those who are devoted to righteousness. You alone will make for the perpetuation of this race of Pulastya. By the grace of Rāma (a scion of Raghu) you will attain the sovereignty of the ogres. Familiar, as you are, with my nature, O brother, who are difficult to overcome, pray, get out of my way soon. You should not tarry before me, my judgment having been lost due to confusion. Engaged in combat, I cannot discriminate friends from enemies, O prowler of the night! You, however, deserve protection at my hands, my child! I tell you this truth.' Spoken to in these words by the sagacious Kumbhakarna, the mighty-armed Vibhīṣaṇa replied to Kumbhakarna as follows: 'Advice was tendered by me for the preservation of this race, O tamer of enemies! But it went unheeded by all the ogres. Hence I came away to Śrī Rāma. That has in any case been done by me, O highly fortunate brother, be it virtuous or sinful.' Saying so, with eyes full of tears, and retiring to a lonely corner, Vibhīṣaṇa, mace in hand, stood reflecting.]

Vālī, a veritable bull among the monkeys, killed, and which vied with the thunderbolt in velocity did not cause much pain and discomfort to the body of Kumbhakarna on that occasion. (152)

स वारिधारा इव सायकांस्तान्
पिबन् शरीरेण महेन्द्रशत्रुः ।
जघान रामस्य शरप्रवेगं
व्याविध्य तं मुद्गरमुग्रवेगम् ॥ १५३ ॥

Drinking up through his body those aforesaid arrows as a mountain would drink up so many torrents of water, nay, flourishing his afore-mentioned club with terrible speed, Kumbhakarna (the enemy of the mighty Indra), obstructed the tremendous speed of Śrī Rāma's arrows. (153)

ततस्तु रक्षः क्षतजानुलिप्तं
वित्रासनं देवमहाचमूनाम् ।
व्याविध्य तं मुद्गरमुग्रवेगं
विद्रावयामास चमूं हरीणाम् ॥ १५४ ॥

Brandishing with fearful speed the aforesaid club, which caused terror to the mighty celestial forces and was smeared with blood, the ogre, for his part, scattered the army of the monkeys. (154)

वायव्यमादाय ततोऽपरास्त्रं
रामः प्रचिक्षेप निशाचराय ।
समुद्रं तेन जहार बाहुं
स कृत्तबाहुस्तुमुलं ननाद ॥ १५५ ॥

Taking up another mystic missile, presided over by the wind-god, Śrī Rāma then shot it against the prowler of the night, severed with it his right arm with which he held the mace. His arm thus cut off, the ogre let out an uproarious cry. (155)

स तस्य बाहुर्गिरिशृङ्गकल्पः
समुद्रो राघवबाणकृत्तः ।
पपात तस्मिन् हरिराजसैन्ये
जघान तां वानरवाहिनीं च ॥ १५६ ॥

Severed by the arrow of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, that arm of Kumbhakarna, which resembled a mountain-peak fell alongwith the mace on the army of Śugrīva, the king of monkeys, and killed well-nigh a regiment of the monkeys. (156)

ते वानरा भग्नहावशेषाः
पर्यन्तमाश्रित्य तदा विषण्णाः ।
प्रपीडिताङ्गा ददृशुः सुघोरं
नरेन्द्रक्षोऽधिपसंनिपातम् ॥ १५७ ॥

Taking their stand by the side of the fallen arm, those monkeys who had escaped being mutilated or killed by that arm, although their limbs had all the same been squeezed by the impact of the arm and who were feeling despondent, witnessed at that moment the most terrible combat of Śrī Rāma, a ruler of men, and Kumbhakarna, the overlord of the ogres. (157)

स कुम्भकर्णोऽस्त्रनिकृत्तबाहु- र्महासिकृत्ताग्र इवाचलेन्द्रः ।
उत्पाटयामास करेण वृक्षं
ततोऽभिदुद्राव रणे नरेन्द्रम् ॥ १५८ ॥

With his arm torn off by the missile, the said Kumbhakarna looked like a huge mountain whose summit had been cloven with a big sword. He tore up a palmyra tree with his other arm and then rushed towards Śrī Rāma, a ruler of men, on the field of battle. (158)

तं तस्य बाहुं सहतालवृक्षं
समुद्यतं पन्नगभोगकल्पम् ।
ऐन्द्रास्त्रयुक्तेन जघान रामो
बाणेन जाम्बूनदचित्रितेन ॥ १५९ ॥

With an arrow decked with gold and charged with a mystic missile presided over by Indra (the ruler of gods), Śrī Rāma severed his uplifted arm, which held the palmyra tree and looked like the coils of a serpent. (159)

स कुम्भकर्णस्य भुजो निकृत्तः
पपात भूमौ गिरिसंनिकाशः ।

विचेष्टमानो निजघान वृक्षा-
ज्जैलाञ्जिलावानरराक्षसांश्च ॥ १६० ॥

When torn off, that arm of Kumbhakarna which resembled a mountain (in size), fell tossing about on the ground and crushed under its weight many trees, crags, rocks, monkeys and ogres, even as it fell. (160)

तं छिन्नबाहुं समवेक्ष्य रामः
समापतन्तं सहसा नदन्तम् ।
द्वावर्धचन्द्रौ निशितौ प्रगृह्य
चिच्छेद पादौ युधि राक्षसस्य ॥ १६१ ॥

Beholding him rushing violently all at once with a roar, both his arms severed, and seizing hold of two sharp crescent shaped arrows Śrī Rāma severed the ogre's feet as well on the battle-field. (161)

तौ तस्य पादौ प्रदिशो दिशश्च
गिरेर्गुहाश्चैव महार्णवं च ।
लङ्कां च सेनां कपिराक्षसानां
विनादयन्तौ विनिपेततुश्च ॥ १६२ ॥

The feet of the ogre also precipitately fell down, making the four quarters as well as the four intermediate corners, nay, even the caves of the Trikūta mountain as also the vast sea, the city of Laṅka and the armies of the monkeys and ogres resound with the thud. (162)

निकृत्तबाहुर्विनिकृत्तपादो
विदार्य वक्त्रं वडवामुखाभम् ।
दुद्राव रामं सहसाभिगर्जन्
राहुयथा चन्द्रमिवान्तरिक्षे ॥ १६३ ॥

Dilating his mouth, incandescent as the submarine fire, the ogre, who had his arms torn off and his feet, too, severed, rushed vehemently, raising savage cries, towards Śrī Rāma, even as Rāhu would towards the full-moon in the sky. (163)

अपूरयत् तस्य मुखं शिताग्रै
रामः शरैर्हेमपिन्द्रपुङ्खैः ।

सम्पूर्णवक्त्रो न शशाक वक्तुं
चुकूज कृच्छ्रेण मुमूर्च्छ चापि ॥ १६४ ॥

Śrī Rāma filled his mouth with sharp-pointed arrows provided with gold-encrusted shafts. With his mouth fully packed, he could not speak and even moaned with difficulty and swooned too. (164)

अथाददे सूर्यमरीचिकल्पं
स ब्रह्मदण्डान्तककालकल्पम् ।
अरिष्टमैन्द्रं निशितं सुपुङ्खं
रामः शरं मारुततुल्यवेगम् ॥ १६५ ॥

The celebrated Śrī Rāma now took up a sharpened arrow with charming feathers, which was effulgent as a sunbeam, nay, which resembled the rod of Brahmā, the creator, and the destructive Kāla (Time-Spirit), was fatal to the enemies, was charged with a missile presided over by Indra, the ruler of gods, and vied with the wind in speed. (165)

तं वज्रजाम्बूनदचारुपुङ्खं
प्रदीप्तसूर्यज्वलनप्रकाशम् ।
महेन्द्रवज्राशानितुल्यवेगं
रामः प्रचिक्षेप निशाचराय ॥ १६६ ॥

Śrī Rāma discharged against the prowler of the night that arrow, whose shaft was inlaid with diamonds and gold, nay, which was brilliant as the dazzling sun and fire set ablaze and which resembled the thunderbolt of the mighty Indra, and the weapon Aśani. (166)

स सायको राघवबाहुचोदितो
दिशःस्वभासा दश सम्प्रकाशयन् ।
विधूमवैश्वानरभीमदर्शनो
जगाम शक्राशनिभीमविक्रमः ॥ १६७ ॥

Illumining the ten directions with its effulgence, the aforesaid arrow, propelled by the arm of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, which was formidable of aspect like a smokeless fire, flew with terrific speed, which vied with the thunderbolt of Indra, the ruler of gods. (167)

स तन्महापर्वतकूटसंनिभं
सुवृत्तदंष्ट्रं चलचारुकुण्डलम् ।
चकर्त रक्षोऽधिपतेः शिरस्तदा
यथैव वृत्रस्य पुरा पुरंदरः ॥ १६८ ॥

The aforesaid arrow immediately tore off the well-known head of Kumbhakarna (the overlord of ogres), which closely resembled the peak of a huge mountain, was distinguished by beautifully globular teeth and swinging lovely earrings, even as Indra (the destroyer of citadels) severed the head of Vṛtra in the hoary past. (168)

कुम्भकर्णशिरो भाति कुण्डलालंकृतं महत् ।
आदित्येऽभ्युदिते रात्रौ मध्यस्थ इव चन्द्रमाः ॥ १६९ ॥

Adorned with a pair of earrings, Kumbhakarna's enormous head shone like the moon located in mid heavens when the constellation Punarvasu (presided over by Aditi, the mother of gods and consisting of twin-stars) has risen at the close of night. (169)

तद् रामबाणाभिहतं पपात
रक्षःशिरः पर्वतसंनिकाशम् ।
बभञ्ज चर्यागृहगोपुराणि
प्राकारमुच्चं तमपातयच्च ॥ १७० ॥

Torn off by Śrī Rāma's arrow, the aforesaid head of the ogre, which closely resembled the peak of a mountain, fell down and demolished the buildings on the king's highway as well as their gates and pulled down the high defensive wall (even as it fell). (170)

तच्चातिकायं हिमवत् प्रकाशं
रक्षस्तदा तोयनिधौ पपात ।
ग्राहान् परान् मीनवरान् भुजंगमान्
ममर्द भूमिं च तथा विवेश ॥ १७१ ॥

And the colonel ogre (himself) who shone like the Himālaya mountain (in size) forthwith fell into the sea. There it crushed under its weight the principal alligators, the foremost of fishes and aquatic serpents and entered the bowels of the earth. (171)

तस्मिन् हते ब्राह्मणदेवशत्रौ
महाबले संयति कुम्भकर्णे ।
चचाल भूर्भूमिधराश्च सर्वे
हर्षाच्च देवास्तुमुलं प्रणेदुः ॥ १७२ ॥

The aforesaid Kumbhakarna, the enemy of the Brāhmanas and gods, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having been killed in combat, the earth as well as all the mountains shook and the gods raised an uproarious shout of joy. (172)

ततस्तु देवर्षिमहर्षिपन्नगाः
सुराश्च भूतानि सुपर्णगुह्यकाः ।
सयक्षगन्धर्वगणा नभोगताः
प्रहर्षिता रामपराक्रमेण ॥ १७३ ॥

Thereupon celestial sages, eminent Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) and serpents as also gods, genii, Suparṇas (a class of bird-like beings of a semi-divine character), Guhyakas (another class of demi-gods) including hosts of Yakṣas and Gandharvas (celestial musicians) standing in the air felt highly rejoiced at the prowess of Śrī Rāma. (173)

ततस्तु ते तस्य वधेन भूरिणा
मनस्विनो नैर्ऋतराजबान्धवाः ।
विनेदुरुच्चैर्व्यथिता रघूत्तमं
हरिं समीक्ष्यैव यथा मतंगजाः ॥ १७४ ॥

At the very sight of Śrī Rāma, the foremost of the Raghus, the well-known kinsfolk of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres) for their part, who, though resolute of mind, were pained by the momentous fall of Kumbhakarna, and let out loud cries even as elephants would at the sight of a lion. (174)

स देवलोकस्य तमो निहत्य
सूर्यो यथा राहुमुखाद् विमुक्तः ।

तथा व्यभासीद्धरिसैन्यमध्ये
निहत्य रामो युधि कुम्भकर्णम् ॥ १७५ ॥
Having made short work of Kumbhakarna in combat, the celebrated Śrī Rāma shone brightly in the midst of the simian ranks in the same way as the sun would when delivered from the mouth of Rāhu, after dispersing the darkness of the celestial world. (175)

प्रहर्षमीयुर्बहवश्च वानराः
प्रबुद्धपद्मप्रतिमैरिवाननैः ।
अपूजयन् राघवमिष्टभागिनं
हते रिपौ भीमबले नृपात्मजम् ॥ १७६ ॥
Numerous monkeys, who were distinguished by faces resembling full-blown lotuses, experienced great joy on an enemy endowed with terrible might having been got rid of, and extolled Prince Rāma, who had achieved their desired end. (176)

स कुम्भकर्णं सुरसैन्यमर्दनं
महत्सु युद्धेषु कदाचनाजितम् ।
ननन्द हत्वा भरताग्रजो रणे
महासुरं वृत्रमिवामराधिपः ॥ १७७ ॥

Śrī Rāma, the elder brother of Bharata, felt rejoiced on having disposed of in combat Kumbhakarna, the destroyer of celestial armies, who had never been conquered in major conflicts, even as Indra, the suzerain lord of gods, did on making short work of the mighty demon, Vṛtra. (177)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तषष्ठितमः सर्गः ॥ ६७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टषष्ठितमः सर्गः

Canto LXVIII

Rāvaṇa's lament over Kumbhakarna's fall

कुम्भकर्णं हतं दृष्ट्वा राघवेण महात्मना ।
राक्षसा राक्षसेन्द्राय रावणाय न्यवेदयन् ॥ १ ॥

Seeing Kumbhakarna killed by the the high-souled Śrī Rāma. the ogres present on the field of battle reported the matter in the following words to Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres:
(1)

राजन् स कालसंकाशः संयुक्तः कालकर्मणा ।
विद्राव्य वानरीं सेनां भक्षयित्वा च वानरान् ॥ २ ॥
प्रतपित्वा मुहूर्तं तु प्रशान्तो रामतेजसा ।
कायेनार्धप्रविष्टेन समुद्रं भीमदर्शनम् ॥ ३ ॥
निकृत्तनासाकर्णेन विक्षरद्गुधिरेण च ।
रुद्ध्वा द्वारं शरीरेण लङ्कायाः पर्वतोपमः ॥ ४ ॥
कुम्भकर्णस्तव भ्राता काकुत्स्थशरपीडितः ।
अगण्डभूतो विवृतो दावदग्ध इव द्रुमः ॥ ५ ॥

‘Having scattered the simian ranks and devoured the monkeys and exhibited his prowess for a space, O king, Kumbhakarna, who vied with Yama (the god of retribution) has been claimed by death. Tormented by the arrows of Rāma (a scion of Kākutstha), nay, quelled by his superior strength, your celebrated younger brother, Kumbhakarna for his part, who resembled a mountain in size, lies reduced to a headless and limbless mass, resembling a tree scorched by a forest conflagration, with his trunk half submerged in the terrible-looking sea and blocking the main gate of Laṅka with his head, which has its nose and ears lopped off and from which blood is streaming profusely.” (2—5)

श्रुत्वा विनिहतं संख्ये कुम्भकर्णं महाबलम् ।
रावणः शोकसंतप्तो मुमोह च पपात च ॥ ६ ॥

Tormented with grief on hearing of Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having been struck down dead in combat, Rāvaṇa fainted and sank down. (6)

पितृव्यं निहतं श्रुत्वा देवान्तकनरान्तकौ ।
त्रिशिराश्चातिकायश्च रुरुदुः शोकपीडिताः ॥ ७ ॥

Afflicted with grief on hearing of their uncle having been killed, Rāvaṇa's sons, Devāntaka and Narāntaka, Trisira and Atikāya too burst into a wail. (7)

भ्रातरं निहतं श्रुत्वा रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
महोदरमहापाश्र्वौ शोकाक्रान्तौ बभूवतुः ॥ ८ ॥

Rāvaṇa's half-brothers, Mahodara and Mahāpārśwa were overwhelmed with grief on hearing of their half-brother, Kumbhakarna, having been killed by Śrī Rāma of unwearied action. (8)

ततः कृच्छ्रात् समासाद्य संज्ञां राक्षसपुङ्गवः ।
कुम्भकर्णवधाद् दीनो विललापाकुलेन्द्रियः ॥ ९ ॥

Regaining consciousness with difficulty, Rāvaṇa (a bull among the ogres), who felt miserable due to Kumbhakarna's fall, then began to wail as follows, distracted in mind as he was: (9)

हा वीर रिपुदर्पञ्च कुम्भकर्णं महाबल ।
त्वं मां विहाय वै दैवाद् यातोऽसि यमसादनम् ॥ १० ॥

"Alas, having deserted me, O heroic Kumbhakarna who crushed the pride of your enemies and were endowed with extraordinary might, you have, by divine will, actually departed to the abode of Death! (10)

मम शल्यमनुद्धृत्य बान्धवानां महाबल ।
शत्रुसैन्यं प्रताप्यैकः क्व मां संत्यज्य गच्छसि ॥ ११ ॥

"Having tormented the hostile army and leaving me, whither are you going alone without extracting the thorn from my side as well as from that of my kinsfolk, O ogre endowed with extraordinary might? (11)

इदानीं खल्वहं नास्मि यस्य मे पतितो भुजः ।
दक्षिणोऽयं समाश्रित्य न बिभेमि सुरासुरात् ॥ १२ ॥

"Surely, I shall no longer survive now that this right arm of mine, depending on whom I had no fear of any god or demon, has fallen. (12)

कथमेवंविधो वीरो देवदानवदर्पहा ।
कालाग्निप्रतिमो ह्यद्य राघवेण रणे हतः ॥ १३ ॥

"I wonder how such a warrior, who quelled the pride of the gods and the demons alike and who resembled the fire of destruction at the time of universal dissolution, has been killed in combat by Rāma today. (13)

यस्य ते वज्रनिष्पेषो न कुर्याद् व्यसनं सदा ।
स कथं रामबाणार्तः प्रसुप्तोऽसि महीतले ॥ १४ ॥

"Afflicted by the arrows of Rāma, how are you, the celebrated warrior, whom not even a stroke of lightning ever caused any harm, lying buried in eternal sleep on the earth's surface? (14)

एते देवगणाः सार्धमृषिभिर्गणे स्थिताः ।
निहतं त्वां रणे दृष्ट्वा निनदन्ति प्रहर्षिताः ॥ १५ ॥

"Standing in space greatly delighted to see you killed in battle, the yonder hosts of gods alongwith Ṛṣis are raising a shout of applause. (15)

ध्रुवमद्यैव संहृष्टा लब्धलक्षाः प्लवंगमाः ।
आरोक्ष्यन्तीह दुर्गाणि लङ्काद्वाराणि सर्वशः ॥ १६ ॥

"Highly rejoiced on having found a suitable opportunity, the monkeys will on this occasion assuredly scale this very day the gates of Lankā, which were difficult of access heretofore, on all sides. (16)

राज्येन नास्ति मे कार्यं किं करिष्यामि सीतया । कुम्भकर्णविहीनस्य जीविते नास्ति मे मतिः ॥ १७ ॥

"No purpose of mine will be served any longer by a kingdom and what shall I do with Sitā? Nay, bereft of Kumbhakarna, I have no mind even to preserve my life. (17)

यद्यहं भ्रातृहन्तारं न हन्मि युधि राघवम्।
ननु मे मरणं श्रेयो न चेदं व्यर्थजीवितम् ॥ १८ ॥

“If I do not kill in combat Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the destroyer of my brother, surely death is best for me; but in no case this life has no meaning for me now. (18)

अद्यैव तं गमिष्यामि देशं यत्रानुजो मम।
नहि भ्रातृन् समुत्सृज्य क्षणं जीवितमुत्सहे ॥ १९ ॥

“I shall proceed this very day to that region where my younger brother, Kumbhakarna, is. Indeed, sending away my brothers, I dare not survive even for an instant. (19)

देवा हि मां हसिष्यन्ति दृष्ट्वा पूर्वापकारिणम्।
कथमिन्द्रं जयिष्यामि कुम्भकर्णं हते त्वयि ॥ २० ॥

“Surely on seeing me, who have wronged them in the past, the gods will mock me. Now that you have been killed, how shall I, O Kumbhakarna, be able to conquer Indra, the ruler of gods? (20)

तदिदं मामनुप्राप्तं विभीषणवचः शुभम्।
यदज्ञानान्मया तस्य न गृहीतं महात्मनः ॥ २१ ॥

“This calamity, which was adumbrated

by that high-souled Vibhiṣaṇa, has fallen upon me only because his wholesome advice was not accepted by me through ignorance. (21)

विभीषणवचस्तावत् कुम्भकर्णप्रहस्तयोः।
विनाशोऽयं समुत्पन्नो मां व्रीडयति दारुणः ॥ २२ ॥

“Ever since the cruel end of Kumbhakarna and Prahasta came about the other day, the admonition of Vibhiṣaṇa is making me blush. (22)

तस्यायं कर्मणः प्राप्तो विपाको मम शोकदः।
यन्मया धार्मिकः श्रीमान् स निरस्तो विभीषणः ॥ २३ ॥

“Since the pious and fortunate Vibhiṣaṇa was expelled by me, this bitter fruit of that action, which is a source of grief, has come to me.” (23)

इति बहुविधमाकुलान्तरात्मा
कृपणमतीव विलप्य कुम्भकर्णम्।
न्यपतदपि दशाननो भृशार्त-
स्तमनुजमिन्द्ररिपुं हतं विदित्वा ॥ २४ ॥

Having thus lamented piteously and profusely in various ways on coming to know of his aforesaid younger brother, Kumbhakarna, an enemy of Indra, having been killed, Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), whose inmost mind was agitated, sank down sore distressed. (24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टषष्टितमः सर्गः ॥ ६८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXIX

Rāvaṇa's sons and brothers sally forth for an encounter and Narāntaka meets with his death at the hands of Aṅgada

एवं विलपमानस्य रावणस्य दुरात्मनः।
श्रुत्वा शोकाभिभूतस्य त्रिशिरा वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the utterance of the evil-minded

Rāvaṇa, who was lamenting as aforesaid, overcome as he was with grief, Triśirā (one of his sons) submitted as follows:

एवमेव महावीर्यो हतो नस्तातमध्यमः ।
न तु सत्पुरुषा राजन् विलपन्ति यथा भवान् ॥ २ ॥

“It is quite true that Kumbhakarna (the middle of our father and uncles), who was endowed with extraordinary prowess, has been killed. Good men, however, do not wail as you are doing, O king! (2)

नूनं त्रिभुवनस्यापि पर्याप्तस्त्वमसि प्रभो ।
स कस्मात् प्राकृत इव शोचस्यात्मानमीदृशम् ॥ ३ ॥

“Surely you are capable of conquering even the three worlds. O lord! As such why do you, like a common man, allow yourself to be overwhelmed with grief in this way? (3)

ब्रह्मदत्तास्ति ते शक्तिः कवचं सायको धनुः ।
सहस्रखरसंयुक्तो रथो मेघसमस्वनः ॥ ४ ॥

“A javelin bestowed on you by Brahmā (the creator), nay, a coat of mail, an arrow, a bow, all gifted by Brahmā as well as a chariot provided with a thousand donkeys and emitting a sound resembling the rumbling of a cloud, still continue in your possession. (4)

त्वयासकृद्धि शस्त्रेण विशस्ता देवदानवाः ।
स सर्वायुधसम्पन्नो राघवं शास्तुमर्हसि ॥ ५ ॥

“Gods and Dānavas (giants) have actually been killed by you with a single weapon more than once. As such you can chastise Rāma when equipped with all sorts of weapons. (5)

कामं तिष्ठ महाराज निर्गमिष्याम्यहं रणे ।
उद्धरिष्यामि ते शत्रून् गरुडः पन्नगानिव ॥ ६ ॥

“Stay on in Laṅkā if you will, O great king! I will sally forth to the field of battle and root out your enemies, even as Garuḍa, the king of birds, would uproot serpents. (6)

शम्बरो देवराजेन नरको विष्णुना यथा ।
तथाद्य शयिता रामो मया युधि निपातितः ॥ ७ ॥

“Struck down by me on the battle-field, Rāma shall fall this day in the same way as did the demon, Śambara, overthrown by Indra (the ruler of gods) and Naraka* by Lord Viṣṇu.” (7)

श्रुत्वा त्रिशिरसो वाक्यं रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ।
पुनर्जातमिवात्मानं मन्यते कालचोदितः ॥ ८ ॥

Hearing the assurance of Triśirā, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, as impelled by Destiny, thought himself as though born anew. (8)

श्रुत्वा त्रिशिरसो वाक्यं देवान्तकनरान्तकौ ।
अतिकायश्च तेजस्वी बभूवुर्युद्धर्षिताः ॥ ९ ॥

Hearing the speech of Triśirā, Devāntaka and Narāntaka as also Atikāya, who was full of martial ardour, got impatient for an encounter. (9)

ततोऽहमहमित्येवं गर्जन्तो नैर्ऋतर्षभाः ।
रावणस्य सुता वीराः शक्रतुल्यपराक्रमाः ॥ १० ॥

Thereupon the valiant sons of Rāvaṇa, who were veritable bulls among the ogres and equalled Indra, the ruler of gods, in prowess, stood roaring with the words “I will lead! I will take the lead!!” (10)

अन्तरिक्षगताः सर्वे सर्वे मायाविशारदाः ।
सर्वे त्रिदशदर्पघ्नाः सर्वे समरदुर्मदाः ॥ ११ ॥

All were capable of coursing in the air, all were adept in conjuring tricks, all were able to crush the pride of gods and all were fierce in combat. (11)

सर्वे सुबलसम्पन्नाः सर्वे विस्तीर्णकीर्तयः ।
सर्वे समरमासाद्य न श्रूयन्ते स्म निर्जिताः ॥ १२ ॥
देवैरपि सगन्धर्वैः सकिंनरमहोरगैः ।

* Naraka mentioned in this verse was procreated by the Dānava Vipracitti through Simhikā His six brothers were Vātāpi, Namuci, Ilwala, Śmāra, Andhaka and Kālanābha. Naraka, son of Mother Earth, who met with his death at the hands of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa in the Dwāpara Age was different from the demon mentioned here. The former did not even see the light during the lifetime of Rāvaṇa.

सर्वेऽस्त्रविदुषो वीराः सर्वे युद्धविशारदाः ।
सर्वे प्रवरविज्ञानाः सर्वे लब्धवरास्तथा ॥ १३ ॥

All were richly endowed with great might, all enjoyed widespread renown. All were such as had never been heard of as vanquished even by gods accompanied by Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and united with Kinnaras (another class of demigods credited with a human figure and the head of a horse or with a horse's body and head of a man) on reaching the battlefield. All were adept in the use of mystic missiles and were heroic, all were skilled in warfare, all were endowed with great wisdom of the scriptures and all had received boons by virtue of their austerities. (12-13)

स तैस्तथा भास्करतुल्यवर्चसैः
सुतैर्वृतः शत्रुबलश्रियार्दनैः ।
रराज राजा मघवान् यथामरै-
वृत्तो महादानवदर्पनाशनैः ॥ १४ ॥

Surrounded as aforesaid by his said sons, who vied with the sun in brilliance and were capable of crushing the might and glory of the enemy, King Rāvaṇa shone as Indra, surrounded by immortals, capable of quelling the vanity of mighty Dānavas. (14)

स पुत्रान् सम्परिष्वज्य भूषयित्वा च भूषणैः ।
आशीर्भिश्च प्रशस्ताभिः प्रेषयामास वै रणे ॥ १५ ॥

Closely embracing his aforesaid sons, nay, decking them with ornaments and enriching them with auspicious benedictions, he actually sent them out for an encounter. (15)

युद्धोन्मत्तं च मत्तं च भ्रातरौ चापि रावणः ।
रक्षणार्थं कुमारानां प्रेषयामास संयुगे ॥ १६ ॥

He also dispatched his two brothers, Yuddhonmatta (better known as Mahāpārśwa) and Matta (more familiarly known as Mahodara) to the field of battle for the defence of the princes. (16)

तेऽभिवाद्य महात्मानं रावणं लोकरावणम् ।
कृत्वा प्रदक्षिणं चैव महाकायाः प्रतस्थिरे ॥ १७ ॥

Saluting the gigantic Rāvaṇa, (who made people scream with terror) and also walking clockwise about him as a token of submission, those colossal warriors departed for the battle-field. (17)

सर्वौषधीभिर्गन्धैश्च समालभ्य महाबलाः ।
निर्जग्मुर्नैर्ऋतश्रेष्ठाः षडेते युद्धकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ १८ ॥

Anointing themselves with all the ten medicinal herbs (credited with the property of warding off injury caused by weapons) as well as with perfumes, the following six jewels among the ogres, who were endowed with extraordinary might, and longed for a fight, sallied forth: (18)

त्रिशिराश्चातिकायश्च देवान्तकनरान्तकौ ।
महोदरमहापाश्र्वौ निर्जग्मुः कालचोदिताः ॥ १९ ॥

Triśirā and Atikāya, Devāntaka and Narāntaka, Mahodara and Mahāpārśwa set out under the sway of destiny. (19)

ततः सुदर्शनं नागं नीलजीमूतसंनिभम् ।
ऐरावतकुले जातमारुरोह महोदरः ॥ २० ॥

Thereupon Mahodara mounted an elephant, Sudarśana by name, closely resembling a dark cloud in hue and born in the race of Airāvata, the transport of Indra, the ruler of gods. (20)

सर्वायुधसमायुक्तस्तूणीभिश्चाप्यलंकृतः ।
रराज गजमास्थाय सवितेवास्तमूर्धनि ॥ २१ ॥

Taking his seat on the elephant, nay, equipped with all kinds of weapons and furnished with quivers too, he shone like the sun on the summit of the western mountain and as such about to disappear. (21)

हयोत्तमसमायुक्तं सर्वायुधसमाकुलम् ।
आरुरोह रथश्रेष्ठं त्रिशिरा रावणात्मजः ॥ २२ ॥

Triśirā, sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa, ascended an excellent chariot drawn by the best of horses and fully equipped with all kinds of weapons. (22)

त्रिशिरा रथमास्थाय विरराज धनुर्धरः ।
सविद्युदुल्कः सज्वालः सेन्द्रचाप इवाम्बुदः ॥ २३ ॥

Taking his seat in the chariot, Trisīrā, who carried a bow, shone brightly like a rainy cloud attended by lightning, meteors, light and rainbow. (23)

त्रिभिः किरीटैस्त्रिशिराः शुशुभे स रथोत्तमे ।
हिमवानिव शैलेन्द्रस्त्रिभिः काञ्चनपर्वतैः ॥ २४ ॥

With his three diadems adorning his three heads, Trisīrā shone in his excellent chariot like the Himālaya, the lord of mountains, with its three golden offshoots constituting its peaks. (24)

अतिकायोऽतितेजस्वी राक्षसेन्द्रसुतस्तदा ।
आरुरोह रथश्रेष्ठं श्रेष्ठः सर्वधनुष्मताम् ॥ २५ ॥
सुचक्राक्षं सुसंयुक्तं स्वनुकर्षं सुकूबरम् । तूणीबाणासनैर्दीप्तं प्रासासिपरिघाकुलम् ॥ २६ ॥

Then Atikāya another son of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), the foremost of all archers, who was full of exceeding martial ardour, mounted his superb chariot with excellent wheels and axles, magnificent horses, strong Anukarṣas (axle-trees) and stout Kūbaras (poles to which the yoke is fixed), nay, radiant with quivers and bows and fully furnished with spears, swords and clubs studded or tipped with iron. (25-26)

स काञ्चनविचित्रेण किरीटेन विराजता ।
भूषणैश्च बभौ मेरुः प्रभाभिरिव भासयन् ॥ २७ ॥

With his sparkling coronet encrusted with gold and ornaments, he looked like Mount Meru shining in its own splendour. (27)

स रराज रथे तस्मिन् राजसूनुर्महाबलः ।
वृतो नैर्ऋतशार्दूलैर्वज्रपाणिरिवामरैः ॥ २८ ॥

Surrounded by the foremost of ogres, the said prince, who was endowed with extraordinary might, shone in that chariot like Indra, who carries the thunderbolt in his hand, surrounded by immortals. (28)

हयमुच्चैःश्रवःप्रख्यं श्वेतं कनकभूषणम् ।
मनोजवं महाकायमारुरोह नरान्तकः ॥ २९ ॥

Narāntaka ascended a huge white horse resembling Uccaiśravā, the mount of Indra, evolved out of the churning of the ocean of milk, nay, harnessed with gold and swift as thought. (29)

गृहीत्वा प्रासमुल्काभं विरराज नरान्तकः ।
शक्तिमादाय तेजस्वी गुहः शिखिगतो यथा ॥ ३० ॥

Holding a spear shining as a meteor, Narāntaka shone brightly like the glorious Kārtikeya, son of Lord Śiva mounted on his peacock taking a javelin in his hand. (30)

देवान्तकः समादाय परिघं हेमभूषणम् ।
परिगृह्य गिरिं दोर्भ्यां वपुर्विष्णोर्विडम्बयन् ॥ ३१ ॥

Firmly grasping his club tipped with iron and decked with gold, Devāntaka stood resembling the figure of Lord Viṣṇu holding (as he did) the Mandara mountain in His arms while proceeding to churn the ocean of milk for drawing out nectar. (31)

महापार्श्वो महातेजा गदामादाय वीर्यवान् ।
विरराज गदापाणिः कुबेर इव संयुगे ॥ ३२ ॥

Bearing a mace, the valiant Mahāpārśwa, who was endowed with martial ardour, shone brightly like Kubera (the god of riches) standing mace in hand on the field of battle. (32)

ते प्रतस्थुर्महात्मानोऽमरावत्याः सुरा इव ।
तान् गजैश्च तुरङ्गैश्च रथैश्चाम्बुदनिःस्वनैः ॥ ३३ ॥
अनूत्येतुर्महात्मानो राक्षसाः प्रवरायुधाः ।
ते विरेजुर्महात्मानः कुमाराः सूर्यवर्चसः ॥ ३४ ॥
किरीटिनः श्रिया जुष्टा ग्रहा दीप्ता इवाम्बरे ।
प्रगृहीता बभौ तेषां शस्त्राणामवलिः सिता ॥ ३५ ॥
शरदभ्रप्रतीकाशा हंसावलिरिवाम्बरे ।
मरणं वापि निश्चित्य शत्रूणां वा पराजयम् ॥ ३६ ॥
इति कृत्वा मतिं वीराः संजग्मुः संयुगार्थिनः ।
जगर्जुश्च प्रणेदुश्च चिक्षिपुश्चापि सायकान् ॥ ३७ ॥

जगृहृश्च महात्मानो निर्यान्तो युद्धदुर्मदाः ।
 क्ष्वेडितास्फोटितानां वै संचचालेव मेदिनी ॥ ३८ ॥
 रक्षसां सिंहनादैश्च संस्फोटितमिवाम्बरम् ।
 तेऽभिनिष्क्रम्य मुदिता राक्षसेन्द्रा महाबलाः ॥ ३९ ॥
 ददृशुर्वानरानीकं समुद्यतशिलानगम् ।
 हरयोऽपि महात्मानो ददृशू राक्षसं बलम् ॥ ४० ॥
 हस्त्यश्वरथसम्बाधं किङ्किणीशतनादितम् ।
 नीलजीमूतसंकाशं समुद्यतमहायुधम् ॥ ४१ ॥

The aforesaid colossi sallied forth (from Laṅkā) as did gods from Amarāvati (the city of immortals, the capital of heaven). Gigantic ogres armed with superb weapons rushed at their heels on the back of elephants and horses as well as in chariots, thundering like clouds. Wearing diadems on their heads, nay, resplendent as the sun and endowed with splendour, those colossal princes shone brightly like planets glowing in the heavens. The white row of weapons lightly grasped by them shone like a flock of cranes shining like autumnal clouds in the sky. Making up their mind either to embrace death positively or to rout the enemies, the champions proceeded in search of an encounter. While sallying forth, the colossi, who were fierce in combat, thundered and roared and seized arrows and also discharged them. The earth for its part violently shook as it were, thanks to their roars and their clapping of arms. Nay, the sky got breached as it were by the leonine roars of the ogres. Sallying forth with joy, those leaders of ogres, who were endowed with extraordinary might, beheld the simian army standing with uplifted rocks and trees. The gigantic monkeys too saw the army of ogres crowded with elephants, horses and chariots and rendered noisy by hundreds of circlets of tiny bells worn by their animals as well as by the ogres themselves, nay, resembling a mass of dark clouds and carrying huge uplifted weapons.

(33—41)

दीप्तानलरविप्रख्यैर्नैऋतैः सर्वतो वृतम् ।
 तद् दृष्ट्वा बलमायातं लब्धलक्षाः प्लवङ्गमाः ॥ ४२ ॥
 समुद्यतमहाशैलाः सम्प्रणेदुर्महुर्मुहुः ।
 अमृष्यमाणा रक्षांसि प्रतिनर्दन्त वानराः ॥ ४३ ॥

Seeing that army—flanked as it was on all sides by ogres, brilliant as a flaming fire or the sun—arrived, the monkeys, who had found an objective for their attack, thundered again and again with huge uplifted rocks in their hands. Intolerant of the roars of the ogres, the monkeys roared in return.

(42-43)

ततः समुत्कृष्टरवं निशम्य
 रक्षोगणा वानरयूथपानाम् ।
 अमृष्यमाणाः परहर्षमुग्रं
 महाबला भीमतरं प्रणेदुः ॥ ४४ ॥

Hearing the exceptionally loud roar of the leaders of monkey troops, the ocre ranks, who were endowed with extraordinary might and could not brook the riotous festivity of their enemies, roared all the more fiercely.

(44)

ते राक्षसबलं घोरं प्रविश्य हरियूथपाः ।
 विचेरुरुद्यतैः शैलैर्नगाः शिखरिणो यथा ॥ ४५ ॥

Penetrating deep into the formidable army of ogres, the leaders of monkey troops ranged with uplifted crags like mountains crowned with peaks.

(45)

केचिदाकाशमाविश्य केचिदुर्व्या प्लवङ्गमाः ।
 रक्षसैन्येषु संक्रुद्धाः केचिद् द्रुमशिलायुधाः ॥ ४६ ॥

Springing in the air, armed with trees and rocks, and feeling enraged at the ocre troops, some monkeys reconnoitred there, while seizing trees with huge stems, other bulls among monkeys ranged on the earth. The ferocious fight which ensued between the ogres and the monkeys was terrible.

(46-47)

द्रुमांश्च विपुलस्कन्धान् गृह्य वानरपुङ्गवाः ।
 तद् युद्धमभवद् घोरं रक्षोवानरसंकुलम् ॥ ४७ ॥

ते पादपशिलाशैलैश्चक्रुर्वृष्टिमनूपमाम् ।
बाणौघैर्वार्यमाणाश्च हरयो भीमविक्रमाः ॥ ४८ ॥

While being intercepted by the ogres with volleys of arrows, the said monkeys of redoubtable prowess discharged an unparalleled shower of trees, rocks and crags. (48)

सिंहनादान् विनेदुश्च रणे राक्षसवानराः ।
शिलाभिश्चूर्णयामासुर्यातुधानान् प्लवङ्गमाः ॥ ४९ ॥
निर्जघ्नुः संयुगे क्रुद्धाः कवचाभरणावृतान् ।
केचिद् रथगतान् वीरान् गजवाजिगतानपि ॥ ५० ॥
निर्जघ्नुः सहसाऽऽप्लुत्य यातुधानान् प्लवङ्गमाः ।
शैलशृङ्गान्विताङ्गास्ते मुष्टिभिर्वान्तलोचनाः ॥ ५१ ॥
चेलुः पेतुश्च नेदुश्च तत्र राक्षसपुङ्गवाः ।
राक्षसाश्च शरैस्तीक्ष्णैर्बिभिदुः कपिकुञ्जरान् ॥ ५२ ॥
शूलमुद्गरखड्गैश्च जघ्नुः प्रासैश्च शक्तिभिः ।
अन्योन्यं पातयामासुः परस्परजयैषिणः ॥ ५३ ॥
रिपुशोणितदिग्धाङ्गास्तत्र वानरराक्षसाः ।
ततः शैलैश्च खड्गैश्च विसृष्टैर्हरिराक्षसैः ॥ ५४ ॥
मुहूर्तेनावृता भूमिरभवच्छ्रेणितोक्षिता ।
विकीर्णैः पर्वताकारै रक्षोभिरभिमर्दितैः ।
आसीद् वसुमती पूर्णा तदा युद्धमदान्वितैः ॥ ५५ ॥

Nay, the ogres and monkeys alike emitted leonine roars on the field of battle. Furious in combat, the monkeys pounded the ogres—who were clad in armour and decked with ornaments—with rocks and killed them. Springing up all of a sudden, some monkeys, for their part, killed the heroic ogres seated in their chariots and mounted on the back of elephants and horses. Their bodies covered by mountain-peaks, and eyes stuck out by the blows of fists of the monkeys, the foremost of the ogres on the battle-field staggered and fell and shrieked. The ogres too pierced the foremost among the monkeys with their sharp arrows and struck them with pikes, mallets and swords as also with lances and javelins. Their limbs stained with the blood of their enemies, the monkeys as well as the ogres, who were eager to conquer one another, struck one another down on the battle-field. In an instant thereupon the field of battle was covered with crags and swords thrown by the monkeys and the ogres, and got drenched with blood. The battle-field was at that time littered with ogres looking like mountains and drunk with martial ardour, who had been crushed by the monkeys and were lying scattered in pieces. (49—55)

आक्षिप्ताः क्षिप्यमाणाश्च भग्नशैलाश्च वानराः ।
पुनरङ्गैस्तदा चक्रुरासन्ना युद्धमद्भुतम् ॥ ५६ ॥

Already thrown out of order and still being thrown out of order by the ogres, at that time, the monkeys, whose rocks had been shattered, once more put up a wonderful fight with their limbs alone at close quarters. (56)

वानरान् वानरैरेव जघ्नुस्ते नैर्ऋतर्षभाः ।
राक्षसान् राक्षसैरेव जघ्नुस्ते वानरा अपि ॥ ५७ ॥

The aforesaid ogre chiefs struck the monkeys with other monkeys, while the said monkeys too struck the ogres with other ogres. (57)

आक्षिप्य च शिलाः शैलाञ्जघ्नुस्ते राक्षसास्तदा ।
तेषां चाच्छिद्य शस्त्राणि जघ्नु रक्षांसि वानराः ॥ ५८ ॥

Nay, snatching the rocks and crags from the hands of the monkeys, the aforesaid ogres struck their enemies with them; and tearing the weapons of the ogres, the monkeys, in their turn, struck the ogres with them. (58)

निर्जघ्नुः शैलशृङ्गैश्च बिभिदुश्च परस्परम् ।
सिंहनादान् विनेदुश्च रणे राक्षसवानराः ॥ ५९ ॥

On the field of battle the ogres as well as the monkeys struck one another with mountain-peaks, cut them asunder and emitted leonine roars. (59)

छिन्नवर्मतनुत्राणा राक्षसा वानरैर्हताः ।
रुधिरं प्रसृतास्तत्र रससारमिव द्रुमाः ॥ ६० ॥

Their shields and armours broken, the ogres struck by the monkeys shed blood profusely on the field of battle even as trees exude their sap. (60)

रथेन च रथं चापि वारणेनापि वारणम् ।
हयेन च हयं केचिन्निर्जघ्नुर्वानरा रणे ॥ ६१ ॥

Nay, some monkeys struck down on the battle-field a chariot with another chariot, an elephant too with another elephant, and a horse with another horse. (61)

क्षुरप्रैरर्थचन्द्रैश्च भल्लैश्च निशितैः शरैः ।
राक्षसा वानरेन्द्राणां विभिदुः पादपान् शिलाः ॥ ६२ ॥

By means of their sharp arrows with a sharp horse-shoe-shaped head, those with a crescent-shaped head and those with a spear-like head, the ogres shattered the trees and rocks of monkey chiefs. (62)

विकीर्णाः पर्वतास्तैश्च द्रुमच्छिन्नैश्च संयुगे ।
हतैश्च कपिरक्षोभिर्दुर्गमा वसुधाभवत् ॥ ६३ ॥

The earth became difficult to tread on, strewn as it was with mountains which had been thrown as also with trees which had been cut down and with the monkeys and ogres that had been killed. (63)

ते वानरा गर्वितहृष्टचेष्टाः
संग्राममासाद्य भयं विमुच्य ।
युद्धं स्म सर्वे सह राक्षसैस्ते
नानायुधाश्चक्रुर्दीनसत्त्वाः ॥ ६४ ॥

Reaching the field of battle and leaving behind all fear, all the aforesaid monkeys, whose demeanour was full of pride and martial ardour, nay, who were armed with various weapons snatched from the ogres and their own in the shape of trees, rocks, teeth and nails and were ever undepressed in spirit, waged war with the ogres. (64)

तस्मिन् प्रवृत्ते तुमुले विमर्दे
प्रहृष्यमाणेषु वलीमुखेषु ।
निपात्यमानेषु च राक्षसेषु
महर्षयो देवगणाश्च नेदुः ॥ ६५ ॥

While that tumultuous conflict going on, the monkeys were feeling exultant and the ogres were being struck down, the great Ṛsis and hosts of gods shouted joyously. (65)

ततो हयं मारुततुल्यवेग-मारुह्य शक्तिं निशितां प्रगृह्य ।
नरान्तको वानरसैन्यमुग्रं
महार्णवं मीन इवाविवेश ॥ ६६ ॥

Mounting his horse, swift as the wind, and tightly grasping his sharpened javelin, Narāntaka thereupon plunged into the formidable simian army even as a fish would enter the ocean. (66)

स वानरान् सप्त शतानि वीरः
प्रासेन दीप्तेन विनिर्बिभेद ।
एकः क्षणेनेन्द्ररिपुर्महात्मा
जघान सैन्यं हरिपुङ्गवानाम् ॥ ६७ ॥

That gigantic champion pierced single-handed seven hundred monkeys with his effulgent spear. In this way that enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods) exterminated the army of the monkey chiefs in a trice. (67)

ददृशुश्च महात्मानं हयपृष्ठप्रतिष्ठितम् ।
चरन्तं हरिसैन्येषु विद्याधरमहर्षयः ॥ ६८ ॥

Nay, Vidyādhara (heavenly artists) and great Ṛsis saw the colossus moving in the midst of monkey troops, seated on horseback. (68)

स तस्य ददृशे मार्गो मांसशोणितकर्दमः ।
पतितैः पर्वताकारैर्वानरैरभिसंवृतः ॥ ६९ ॥

The pathway carved out by him was found full of mire in the form of flesh and blood and covered with monkeys, resembling mountains that had fallen. (69)

यावद् विक्रमितुं बुद्धिं चक्रुः प्लवगपुङ्गवाः ।
तावदेतानतिक्रम्य निर्बिभेद नरान्तकः ॥ ७० ॥

Slipping past the monkey chiefs even as they thought of displaying their valour, Narāntaka clove their ranks. (70)

ज्वलन्तं प्रासमुद्यम्य संग्रामाग्रे नरान्तकः ।
ददाह हरिसैन्यानि वनानीव विभावसुः ॥ ७१ ॥

Uplifting his flaming lance in the van of the battle, Narāntaka consumed the monkey troops even as fire would burn up forests. (71)

यावदुत्पाटयामासुर्वृक्षान् शैलान् वनौकसः ।
तावत् प्रासहताः पेतुर्वन्नृक्ता इवाचलाः ॥ ७२ ॥

Struck with his lance, the monkeys fell like mountains uprooted by lightning, even as they tore up trees and crags. (72)

दिक्षु सर्वासु बलवान् विचचार नरान्तकः ।
प्रमृद्न सर्वतो युद्धे प्रावृट्काले यथानिलः ॥ ७३ ॥

Crushing down everything, the mighty Narāntaka ranged over the battle-field on all sides even as the wind in the rainy season. (73)

न शेकुर्धावितुं वीरा न स्थातुं स्पन्दितुं भयात् ।
उत्पतन्तं स्थितं यान्तं सर्वान् विव्याध वीर्यवान् ॥ ७४ ॥

The monkey heroes could neither flee nor stand nor move through fear. The valiant ogre, Narāntaka, pierced all with his lance no matter whether one was springing up, stationary or moving. (74)

एकेनान्तककल्पेन प्रासेनादित्यतेजसा ।
भग्नानि हरिसैन्यानि निपेतुर्धरणीतले ॥ ७५ ॥

Struck down by that one lance, which looked like Death and was bright as the sun, the simian ranks fell down on the earth's surface. (75)

वज्रनिष्पेषसदृशं प्रासस्याभिनिपातनम् ।
न शेकुर्वानराः सोढुं ते विनेदुर्महास्वनम् ॥ ७६ ॥

The monkeys could not stand the impact of the lance, which resembled the stroke of lightning. Hence they cried loudly.
(76)

पततां हरिवीराणां रूपाणि प्रचकाशिरे ।
वज्रभिन्नाग्रकूटानां शैलानां पततामिव ॥ ७७ ॥

The forms of the monkey heroes falling down shone brightly like the mountains which fell down even as their peaks were shattered by the thunderbolt of Indra. (77)

ये तु पूर्वं महात्मानः कुम्भकर्णेन पातिताः ।
ते स्वस्था वानरश्रेष्ठाः सुग्रीवमुपतस्थिरे ॥ ७८ ॥

Those high-souled jewels among the monkeys, who for their part had been struck down by Kumbhakarna earlier, sought the presence of Sugrīva, now that they were their normal selves again. (78)

प्रेक्षमाणः स सुग्रीवो ददृशे हरिवाहिनीम् ।
नरान्तकभयत्रस्तां विद्रवन्तीं यतस्ततः ॥ ७९ ॥

Looking all-round, the said Sugrīva saw the simian army running helter-skelter in all directions, stricken, as it was, with the fear of Narāntaka. (79)

विद्रुतां वाहिनीं दृष्ट्वा स ददर्श नरान्तकम् ।
गृहीतप्रासमायान्तं हयपृष्ठप्रतिष्ठितम् ॥ ८० ॥

Seeing the army in stampede, he now beheld Narāntaka, mounted on horseback, advancing with a lance held by him. (80)

दृष्ट्वोवाच महातेजाः सुग्रीवो वानराधिपः ।
कुमारमङ्गदं वीरं शक्रतुल्यपराक्रमम् ॥ ८१ ॥

Perceiving him, Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, spoke as follows to the gallant Prince, Aṅgada, a compeer of Indra, the ruler of gods, in prowess: (81)

गच्छैनं राक्षसं वीरं योऽसौ तुरगमास्थितः ।
क्षोभयन्तं हरिबलं क्षिप्रं प्राणैर्वियोजय ॥ ८२ ॥

“March against the younger heroic ogre, striking terror into the simian army, I mean, the fellow who is seen mounted on the back of a horse over there, and speedily deprive him of his life-breath.” (82)

स भर्तुर्वचनं श्रुत्वा निष्पपाताङ्गदस्तदा ।
अनीकान्मेघसंकाशादंशुमानिव वीर्यवान् ॥ ८३ ॥

Hearing the command of his master, the valiant Aṅgada rushed forth at once from his army, which resembled a huge cloud, even as the sun would break away from a cloud. (83)

शैलसंघातसंकाशो हरीणामुत्तमोऽङ्गदः ।
रराजाङ्गदसंनद्धः सधातुरिव पर्वतः ॥ ८४ ॥

Adorned with armlets of gold, Angada, the foremost of monkeys, who closely resembled a mass of rocks, glittered like a mountain with its metallic veins. (84)

निरायुधो महातेजाः केवलं नखदंष्ट्रवान् ।
नरान्तकमभिक्रम्य वालिपुत्रोऽब्रवीद् वचः ॥ ८५ ॥

Approaching Narāntaka, Aṅgada (son of Vālī), who, though endowed with extraordinary energy, was wholly unarmed except for his nails and teeth, spoke to him as follows: (85)

तिष्ठ किं प्राकृतैरभिर्हरिभिस्त्वं करिष्यसि ।
अस्मिन् वज्रसमस्पर्शं प्रासं क्षिप्रं ममोरसि ॥ ८६ ॥

“Tarry! What will you do with these common monkeys? Throw your spear, whose impact is hard to bear like that of lightning, at this breast of mine.” (86)

अङ्गदस्य वचः श्रुत्वा प्रचुक्रोध नरान्तकः ।
संदश्य दशनैरोष्ठं निःश्वस्य च भुजंगवत् ।
अभिगम्याङ्गदं क्रुद्धो वालिपुत्रं नरान्तकः ॥ ८७ ॥

Hearing the challenge of Aṅgada, Narāntaka flew into a rage. Biting his lip with his teeth and hissing like a serpent, the furious Narāntaka stood facing Aṅgada, son of Vālī. (87)

स प्रासमाविध्य तदाङ्गदाय
समुज्ज्वलन्तं सहसोत्ससर्ज ।
स वालिपुत्रोरसि वज्रकल्पे
बभूव भग्नो न्यपतच्च भूमौ ॥ ८८ ॥

Brandishing his flaming lance, he hurled it all of a sudden at Aṅgada. The spear, however, broke against the breast of Aṅgada (son of Vālī), which was hard as adamant, and fell to the ground. (88)

तं प्रासमालोक्य तदा विभग्नं
सुपर्णकृतोरगभोगकल्पम् ।
तलं समुद्यम्य स वालिपुत्र-
स्तुरंगमस्याभिजघान मूर्ध्नि ॥ ८९ ॥

Seeing that lance shattered at that moment like the coils of a serpent sundered by Garuḍa of beautiful wings, and duly raising his palm, the aforesaid son of Vālī violently struck with it at the head of Narāntaka's horse. (89)

निमग्नपादः स्फुटिताक्षितारो
निष्क्रान्तजिह्वोऽचलसंनिकाशः ।
स तस्य वाजी निपपात भूमौ
तलप्रहारेण विकीर्णमूर्धा ॥ ९० ॥

Its feet having sunk deep into the earth, the pupils of its eyes burst asunder, its tongue hung out and its skull smashed by the stroke of his palm, the said horse of Narāntaka, which looked like a mountain, fell to the ground. (90)

नरान्तकः क्रोधवशं जगाम
हतं तुरंगं पतितं समीक्ष्य ।
स मुष्टिमुद्यम्य महाप्रभावो
जघान शीर्षे युधि वालिपुत्रम् ॥ ९१ ॥

Gazing on his horse fallen dead, Narāntaka flew into a rage. Raising his fist, the ogre, who was endowed with extraordinary might, struck Aṅgada (son of Vālī) on his head on the field of battle. (91)

अथाङ्गदो मुष्टिविशीर्णमूर्धा
सुस्त्राव तीव्रं रुधिरं भृशोष्णम् ।
मुहुर्विज्ज्वाल मुमोह चापि
संज्ञां समासाद्य विसिस्मिये च ॥ ९२ ॥

His skull having been smashed by the blow of the ogre's fist, Aṅgada forthwith shed exceedingly hot blood profusely. He felt a burning sensation and also swooned now and again and, on regaining consciousness, felt wonder-struck. (92)

अथाङ्गदो मृत्युसमानवेगं
संवर्त्य मुष्टिं गिरिशृङ्गकल्पम् ।
निपातयामास तदा महात्मा
नरान्तकस्योरसि वालिपुत्रः ॥ ९३ ॥

Clenching his fist, whose vehemence equalled the vehemence of Death, and which descended like a mountain-peak, Aṅgada, the high-souled son of Vālī, then immediately brought it down on Narāntaka's breast. (93)

स मुष्टिनिर्भिन्ननिमग्रवक्षा
ज्वाला वमञ्छोणितदिग्धगात्रः ।
नरान्तको भूमितले पपात
यथाचलो वज्रनिपातभग्नः ॥ ९४ ॥

His chest having been split asunder by the blow of Aṅgada's fist and having sunk deep, and his limbs stained with blood, Narāntaka fell to the earth's surface vomiting flaming blood like a mountain shattered by a stroke of lightning. (94)

तदान्तरिक्षे त्रिदशोत्तमानां
वनौकसां चैव महाप्रणादः ।

बभूव तस्मिन् निहतेऽग्रवीर्ये
नरान्तके वालिसुतेन संख्ये ॥ ९५ ॥

When the aforesaid Narāntake, who was foremost in prowess, was killed by Aṅgada (son of Vālī) in the encounter, a great shout of joy rose from the foremost of gods in the heavens as well as from the monkeys on the battle-field. (95)

अथाङ्गदो राममनःप्रहर्षणं
सुदुष्करं तं कृतवान् हि विक्रमम् ।
विसिस्मिये सोऽप्यथ भीमकर्मा
पुनश्च युद्धे स बभूव हर्षितः ॥ ९६ ॥

Aṅgada actually performed on this occasion the aforesaid feat of valour which was exceedingly difficult to perform and which brought excessive delight to the mind of Śrī Rāma, so much so that the latter too was struck with wonder. Nay, Aṅgada of terrific valiant deeds was infused with vigour once more for a fight.
(96)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ६९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Sixty-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXX

Death of Devāntaka and Triśirā at the hands of Hanumān, of Mahodara at the hands of Nīla and of Mahāpārśwa at the hands of R̥ṣabha

नरान्तकं हतं दृष्ट्वा चुकुशुर्नैर्ऋतर्षभाः ।
देवान्तकस्त्रिमूर्धा च पौलस्त्यश्च महोदरः ॥ १ ॥

Seeing Narāntaka killed, Devāntaka and Triśirā, a scion of Pulasti, as well as Mahodara, who were veritable bulls among the ogres (scions of Nirṛti), cried.

(1)

आरूढो मेघसंकाशं वारणेन्द्रं महोदरः ।
वालिपुत्रं महावीर्यमभिदुद्राव वेगवान् ॥ २ ॥

Mounted on the foremost of elephants, which closely resembled a cloud, Mahodara, who was full of impetuosity, darted towards Aṅgada (son of Vālī), who was endowed with extraordinary prowess. (2)

भ्रातृव्यसनसंतप्तस्तदा देवान्तको बली ।
आदाय परिघं घोरमङ्गदं समभिद्रवत् ॥ ३ ॥

Seizing a formidable club tipped with iron, the mighty Devāntaka, who felt distressed on account of the fall of his brother, Narāntaka, forthwith rushed straight towards Aṅgada. (3)

रथमादित्यसंकाशं युक्तं परमवाजिभिः ।
आस्थाय त्रिशिरा वीरो वालिपुत्रमथाभ्यगात् ॥ ४ ॥

Taking his seat in a chariot effulgent as the sun and drawn by excellent horses, the valiant Trisīrā too marched against Aṅgada (son of Vālī). (4)

स त्रिभिर्देवदर्पघ्नै रक्षसेन्द्रैरभिद्रुतः ।
वृक्षमुत्पाटयामास महाविटपमङ्गदः ॥ ५ ॥

Attacked by the three ogre-chiefs, who were capable of crushing the pride of gods, the aforesaid Aṅgada pulled up a tree with mighty boughs. (5)

देवान्तकाय तं वीरश्चिक्षेप सहसाङ्गदः ।
महावृक्षं महाशाखं शक्रो दीप्तामिवाशनम् ॥ ६ ॥

The gallant Aṅgada precipitately hurled that huge tree with immense branches at Devāntaka even as Indra would hurl his flaming thunderbolt. (6)

त्रिशिरास्तं प्रचिच्छेद शरैराशीविषोपमैः ।
स वृक्षं कृत्तमालोक्य उत्पपात तदाङ्गदः ॥ ७ ॥

Trisīrā tore the tree into pieces with his arrows resembling venomous serpents. Seeing the tree severed, the said Aṅgada forthwith sprang up. (7)

स ववर्ष ततो वृक्षाञ्जिलाश्च कपिकुञ्जरः ।
तान् प्रचिच्छेद संक्रुद्धस्त्रिशिरा निशितैः शरैः ॥ ८ ॥

That elephant among the monkeys thereupon showered trees and rocks. Getting enraged, Trisīrā tore them into pieces with his whetted shafts. (8)

परिघाग्रेण तान् वृक्षान् बभञ्ज स महोदरः ।
त्रिशिराश्चाङ्गदं वीरमभिदुद्राव सायकैः ॥ ९ ॥

The notorious Mahodara shattered those trees with the head of his club, while Trisīrā attacked the heroic Aṅgada with his arrows. (9)

गजेन समभिद्रुत्य वालिपुत्रं महोदरः ।
जघानोरसि संक्रुद्धस्तोमैर्वैवज्रसनिभैः ॥ १० ॥

Hotly pursuing, on the back of his elephant, the son of Vālī, Mahodara struck him in the breast with clubs, which flashed as lightning, enraged as he was. (10)

देवान्तकश्च संक्रुद्धः परिघेण तदाङ्गदम् ।
उपगम्याभिहत्याशु व्यपचक्राम वेगवान् ॥ ११ ॥

Approaching Aṅgada and striking him with his club, infuriated as he was, the agile Devāntaka quickly retreated. (11)

स त्रिभिर्नैर्ऋतश्रेष्ठैर्युगपत् समभिद्रुतः ।
न विव्यथे महातेजा वालिपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ॥ १२ ॥

Simultaneously attacked by the three jewels among ogres, the mighty son of Vālī, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, did not feel the least alarmed. (12)

स वेगवान् महावेगं कृत्वा परमदुर्जयः ।
तलेन समभिद्रुत्य जघानास्य महागजम् ॥ १३ ॥

Exhibiting extraordinary impetuosity and duly assaulting the huge elephant of Mahodara, the agile Aṅgada, who was exceedingly difficult to conquer, struck it with his palm. (13)

तस्य तेन प्रहारेण नागराजस्य संयुगे ।
पेततुर्नयने तस्य विननाश स कुञ्जरः ॥ १४ ॥

As a result of that blow dealt by Aṅgada on the field of battle, the eyes of that lordly elephant fell down and the said elephant perished. (14)

विषाणं चास्य निष्कृष्य वालिपुत्रो महाबलः ।
देवान्तकमभिद्रुत्य ताडयामास संयुगे ॥ १५ ॥

Pulling out a tusk of the elephant and darting against Devāntaka, the son of Vālī, Aṅgada, who was endowed with extraordinary might, dealt him a blow with it on the battlefield. (15)

स विह्वलस्तु तेजस्वी वातोद्धूत इव द्रुमः ।
लाक्षारससवर्णं च सुस्त्राव रुधिरं महत् ॥ १६ ॥

Thrown into disorder like a tree shaken by the wind, the heroic ogre for his part shed profuse blood which had a colour resembling that of lacquer. (16)

अथाश्वस्य महातेजाः कृच्छ्राद् देवान्तको बली ।
आविध्य परिघं वेगादाजघान तदाङ्गदम् ॥ १७ ॥

Recovering his breath with difficulty and brandishing his club with impetuosity, the mighty Devāntaka, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, then struck Aṅgada with it. (17)

परिघाभिहतश्चापि वानरेन्द्रात्मजस्तदा ।
जानुभ्यां पतितो भूमौ पुनरेवोत्पपात ह ॥ १८ ॥

Though struck with the club and fallen on his knees to the ground, Aṅgada (son of the king of monkeys), they say, forthwith sprang up once more. (18)

तमुत्पतन्तं त्रिशिरास्त्रिभिर्बाणैरजिह्वगैः ।
घोरैर्हरिपतेः पुत्रं ललाटेऽभिजघान ह ॥ १९ ॥

While he was doing so, Trisīrā struck Aṅgada (son of the Lord of the monkeys) with three formidable straight-going arrows on the brow; so the legend goes. (19)

ततोऽङ्गदं परिक्षिप्तं त्रिभिर्नैर्ऋतपुङ्गवैः ।
हनूमानथ विज्ञाय नीलश्चापि प्रतस्थतुः ॥ २० ॥

Finding him surrounded by three of the foremost of ogres, Hanumān as well as Nīla then set out at once to help him. (20)

ततश्चिक्षेप शैलाग्रं नीलस्त्रिशिरसे तदा ।
तद् रावणसुतो धीमान् बिभेद निशितैः शरैः ॥ २१ ॥

Thereupon Nīla forthwith hurled a mountain-peak at Trisīrā. The sagacious son of Rāvaṇa, however, shattered it with his whetted shafts. (21)

तद्वाणशतनिर्भिन्नं विदारितशिलातलम् ।
सविस्फुलिङ्गं सज्वालं निपपात गिरेः शिरः ॥ २२ ॥

Smashed by hundreds of arrows discharged by Trisīrā, the mountain-peak, which had all its rocky bases split up, fell down with sparks and flames that rose from it. (22)

स विजृम्भितमालोक्य हर्षाद् देवान्तको बली ।
परिघेणाभिदुद्राव मारुतात्मजमाहवे ॥ २३ ॥

Witnessing with joy the exploit of Trisīrā in the form of smashing the mountain-peak, the mighty Devāntaka assaulted Hanumān (son of the wind-god) with a club on the battle-field. (23)

तमापतन्तमुत्पत्य हनूमान् कपिकुञ्जरः ।
आजघान तदा मूर्ध्नि वज्रकल्पेन मुष्टिना ॥ २४ ॥

Springing up, Hanumān, an elephant among the monkeys, forthwith struck on the head Devāntaka even as he was rushing forward, with his fist, which was hard as adamant. (24)

शिरसि प्राहरद् वीरस्तदा वायुसुतो बली ।
नादेनाकम्पयच्चैव राक्षसान् स महाकपिः ॥ २५ ॥

The valiant and mighty son of the wind-god, Hanumān, then dealt a blow on Devāntaka head once more and by means of his roar that great monkey positively caused the ogres to tremble. (25)

स मुष्टिनिष्पिष्टविभिन्नमूर्धा
निर्वान्तदन्ताक्षिविलम्बिजिह्वः ।
देवान्तको राक्षसराजसूनु-
र्गतासुरुर्व्या सहसा पपात ॥ २६ ॥

His skull shattered by the blow of Hanumān's fist, nay, his teeth, eyes and lolling tongue forced out, Devāntaka, son of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) precipitately fell dead on the ground. (26)

तस्मिन् हते राक्षसयोधमुख्ये
महाबले संयति देवशत्रौ ।

क्रुद्धस्त्रिशीर्षा निशितास्त्रमुग्रं
ववर्ष नीलोरसि बाणवर्षम् ॥ २७ ॥

When that enemy of gods, the foremost of ogre-warriors, who was endowed with extraordinary might, was killed in the encounter with the monkeys, the furious Triśirā discharged on the breast of Nīla a fearful shower of whetted arrows. (27)

महोदरस्तु संक्रुद्धः कुञ्जरं पर्वतोपमम् ।
भूयः समधिरुह्याशु मन्दरं रश्मिवानिव ॥ २८ ॥
ततो बाणमयं वर्षं नीलस्योपर्यपातयत् ।
गिरौ वर्षं तडिच्चक्रचापवानिव तोयदः ॥ २९ ॥

Quickly mounting once more an elephant resembling a mountain, even as the sun would ascend the Mandara mountain, the infuriated Mahodara for his part thereupon let fall a hail of arrows on Nīla even as a rainy cloud distinguished by a circle of lightning and a rainbow would pour a shower on a mountain. (28-29)

ततः शरौघैरभिवृष्यमाणो
विभिन्नगात्रः कपिसैन्यपालः ।
नीलो बभूवाथ विसृष्टगात्रो
विष्टम्भितस्तेन महाबलेन ॥ ३० ॥

While being covered on all sides with volleys of arrows, Nīla, the commander-in-Chief of the simian army, whose limbs were pierced by said arrows forthwith found his body inert, rendered powerless as he was by the ogre, who was endowed with extraordinary might. (30)

ततस्तु नीलः प्रतिलब्धसंज्ञः
शैलं समुत्पाट्य सवृक्षखण्डम् ।
ततः समुत्पत्य महोग्रवेगो
महोदरं तेन जघान मूर्ध्नि ॥ ३१ ॥

Tearing up a crag covered with a thicket, and then springing up, Nīla for his part, who had now regained his consciousness, and who was endowed with terrific impetuosity, struck Mahodara with it on the head, (31)

ततः स शैलाभिनिपातभग्नो
महोदरस्तेन महाद्विपेन ।
व्यामोहितो भूमितले गतासुः
पपात वज्राभिहतो यथाद्रिः ॥ ३२ ॥

Smashed by the impact of the crag alongwith the aforesaid huge elephant, and rendered unconscious, the said Mahodara fell dead on the earth's surface like a mountain struck by lightning. (32)

पितृव्यं निहतं दृष्ट्वा त्रिशिराश्चापमाददे ।
हनूमन्तं च संक्रुद्धो विव्याध निशितैः शरैः ॥ ३३ ॥

Enraged to see his uncle, Mahodara, killed, Triśirā seized his bow and pierced Hanumān with his whetted shafts. (33)

स वायुसूनुः कुपितश्चिक्षेप शिखरं गिरेः ।
त्रिशिरास्तच्छरैस्तीक्ष्णैर्बिभेद बहुधा बली ॥ ३४ ॥

Full of fury the aforesaid son of the wind-god flung a mountain-peak at the ogre. The mighty Triśirā, however, split it with his sharp arrows into several pieces. (34)

तद् व्यर्थं शिखरं दृष्ट्वा द्रुमवर्षं तदा कपिः ।
विससर्ज रणे तस्मिन् रावणस्य सुतं प्रति ॥ ३५ ॥

Finding the aforesaid mountain-peak ineffectual, the monkey, Hanumān, then hurled a shower of trees on the son of Rāvaṇa, Triśirā, in that combat. (35)

तमापतन्तमाकाशे द्रुमवर्षं प्रतापवान् ।
त्रिशिरा निशितैर्बाणैश्चच्छेद च ननाद च ॥ ३६ ॥

The powerful Triśirā, however, tore with his whetted shafts that shower of trees falling through the airspace, and roared too. (36)

हनूमांस्तु समुत्पत्य हयं त्रिशिरसस्तदा ।
विददार नखैः क्रुद्धो नागेन्द्रं मृगराडिव ॥ ३७ ॥

Springing up in fury, Hanumān for his part then tore the horse of Triśirā with his nails even as a lion (lit., the king of beasts) would claw a lordly elephant. (37)

अथ शक्तिं समासाद्य कालरात्रिमिवान्तकः ।
चिक्षेपानिलपुत्राय त्रिशिरा रावणात्मजः ॥ ३८ ॥

Seizing hold of his javelin, even as Death would take in his service Kālarātri (a sister of Kāla, the deity presiding over the night of destruction at the end of the world cycle), Triśirā, sprung from the lions of Rāvaṇa, hurled it at the son of the wind-god. (38)

दिवः क्षिप्तमिवोल्कां तां शक्तिं क्षिप्तमसङ्गताम् ।
गृहीत्वा हरिशार्दूलो बभञ्ज च ननाद च ॥ ३९ ॥

Catching that javelin flung by Triśirā, which came unobstructed like a meteor shot from the heavens, Hanumān (a tiger among the monkeys) snapped it and roared, too. (39)

तां दृष्ट्वा घोरसंकाशां शक्तिं भग्नां हनूमता ।
प्रहृष्टा वानरगणा विनेदुर्जलदा यथा ॥ ४० ॥

Seeing that javelin of formidable aspect destroyed by Hanumān, the simian hosts felt overjoyed and thundered like rainy clouds. (40)

ततः खड्गं समुद्यम्य त्रिशिरा राक्षसोत्तमः ।
निचखान तदा खड्गं वानरेन्द्रस्य वक्षसि ॥ ४१ ॥

Lifting up his sword, Triśirā, the foremost of ogres, thereupon immediately hit with vehemence the breast of the monkey-chief, Hanumān. (41)

खड्गप्रहाराभिहतो हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
आजघान त्रिमूर्धानं तलेनोरसि वीर्यवान् ॥ ४२ ॥

Wounded by the thrust of his sword, the valiant Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, struck the ogre, Triśirā, with his palm on the breast. (42)

स तलाभिहतस्तेन स्रस्तहस्तायुधो भुवि ।
निपपात महातेजास्त्रिशिरास्त्यक्तचेतनः ॥ ४३ ॥

Slapped by him, though endowed with extraordinary energy, Triśirā dropped unconscious to the ground, the weapon in his hand having slipped. (43)

स तस्य पततः खड्गं तमाच्छिद्य महाकपिः ।
ननाद गिरिसंकाशस्त्रासयन् सर्वराक्षसान् ॥ ४४ ॥

Snatching away that sword of the ogre even as he was falling down, the mighty monkey, Hanumān, who looked like a mountain, let out a roar, striking terror in all the ogres. (44)

अमृष्यमाणस्तं घोषमुत्पपात निशाचरः ।
उत्पत्य च हनूमन्तं ताडयामास मुष्टिना ॥ ४५ ॥

Unable to bear that roar, the prowler of the night sprang on his feet; and, jumping up, he struck Hanumān with his fist. (45)

तेन मुष्टिप्रहारेण संचुकोप महाकपिः ।
कुपितश्च निजग्राह किरीटे राक्षसर्षभम् ॥ ४६ ॥

The great monkey flew into a rage at the aforesaid blow to Triśirā's fist and, full of fury, seized hold of Triśirā (the foremost of ogres) by his head covered with a diadem. (46)

स तस्य शीर्षाण्यसिना शितेन
किरीटजुष्टानि सकुण्डलानि ।
क्रुद्धः प्रचिच्छेद सुतोऽनिलस्य
त्वष्टुः सुतस्येव शिरांसि शक्रः ॥ ४७ ॥

Getting enraged, that son of the wind-god completely severed with his sharp sword all the three heads of Triśirā, covered with diadems and adorned with ear-rings, in the same way as Indra, the ruler of gods, lopped off in the past the three heads of Viśwarūpa, son of Twaṣṭā. (47)

तान्यायताक्षाण्यगसंनिभानि
प्रदीप्तवैश्वानरलोचनानि ।
पेतुः शिरांसीन्द्ररिपोः पृथिव्यां
ज्योतींषि मुक्तानि यथार्कमार्गात् ॥ ४८ ॥

The aforesaid heads of Triśirā (an enemy of Indra), which were distinguished by enormous sense-organs (apertures of the eyes, ears and nose) were huge as rocks and had eyes glowing like a flaming fire—fell to the ground like stars fallen down from the sky (lit., the orbit of the sun). (48)

तस्मिन् हते देवरिपौ त्रिशीर्षे
हनूमता शक्रपराक्रमेण ।

नेदुः प्लवंगाः प्रचचाल भूमी
रक्षांस्यथो दुद्रुविरे समन्तात् ॥ ४९ ॥

When that enemy of gods, Triśirā, was killed by Hanumān, who was endowed with the prowess of Indra (the ruler of gods), the monkey, Hanumān, roared in triumph, the earth shook and the ogres took to their heels on all sides. (49)

हतं त्रिशिरसं दृष्ट्वा तथैव च महोदरम् ।
हतौ प्रेक्ष्य दुराधर्षौ देवान्तकनरान्तकौ ॥ ५० ॥
चुकोप परमामर्षी मत्तो राक्षसपुङ्गवः ।
जग्राहार्चिष्मतीं चापि गदां सर्वायसीं तदा ॥ ५१ ॥
हेमपट्टपरिक्षिप्तं मांसशोणितफेनिलात् ।
विराजमानां विपुलां शत्रुशोणिततर्पिताम् ॥ ५२ ॥
तेजसा सम्प्रदीप्ताग्रां रक्तमाल्यविभूषिताम् ।
ऐरावतमहापद्मसार्वभौमभयावहाम् ॥ ५३ ॥

Finding Triśirā killed and Mahodara too and likewise perceiving Devāntaka and Narāntaka, who were difficult to overpower, made short work of, the highly indignant Matta (more popularly known by the name of Mahāpārśwa) a veritable bull among the ogres, flew into a rage and forthwith seized hold of a huge flaming and glittering mace entirely made of iron, though plated with gold, which was covered with foam of flesh and blood when used against the enemy and had been saturated with the enemy's blood, whose head was inflamed with lustre, which was decked with crimson flowers and brought terror to Airāvata, Mahāpadma and Sārvabhauma (three of the four elephants supporting the four quarters). (50—53)

गदामादाय संक्रुद्धो मत्तो राक्षसपुङ्गवः ।
हरीन् समभिदुद्राव युगान्ताग्रिरिव ज्वलन् ॥ ५४ ॥

Seizing the mace, filled with fury, and flaring up like the fire of universal destruction at the end of the world cycle, Matta, a veritable bull among the ogres, scattered the monkeys. (54)

अथर्षभः समुत्पत्य वानरो रावणानुजम् ।
मत्तानीकमुपागम्य तस्थौ तस्याग्रतो बली ॥ ५५ ॥

Springing up and approaching Mattānika (Mahāpārśwa), a younger brother of Rāvaṇa, the mighty monkey Rṣabha stood facing him. (55)

तं पुरस्तात् स्थितं दृष्ट्वा वानरं पर्वतोपमम् ।
आजघानोरसि क्रुद्धो गदया वज्रकल्पया ॥ ५६ ॥

Enraged to behold that monkey, who looked like a mountain, standing in front of him, the ogre struck him on the chest with his mace, which was hard as adamant. (56)

स तयाभिहतस्तेन गदया वानरर्षभः ।
भिन्नवक्षाः समाधूतः सुस्त्राव रुधिरं बहु ॥ ५७ ॥

Struck by him with that mace and staggered, that bull among the monkeys, who had his chest cleft, shed copious blood. (57)

स सम्प्राप्य चिरात् संज्ञामृषभो वानरेश्वरः ।
क्रुद्धो विस्फुरमाणौष्ठो महापार्श्वमुदैक्षत ॥ ५८ ॥

Fully regaining consciousness after a long time, Rṣabha, the monkey-chief, cast a glance at Mahāpārśwa, enraged as he was, his lips quivering with rage. (58)

स वेगवान् वेगवदभ्युपेत्य
तं राक्षसं वानरवीरमुख्यः ।
संवर्त्य मुष्टिं सहसा जघान
बाह्वन्तरे शैलनिकाशरूपः ॥ ५९ ॥

Approaching that ogre with impetuosity and clenching his fist, that agile leader of monkey heroes, whose exterior presented the appearance of a mountain, precipitately struck him on the chest (lit. the space between the two arms). (59)

स कृत्तमूलः सहसेव वृक्षः
क्षितौ पपात क्षतजोक्षिताङ्गः ।
तां चास्य घोरां यमदण्डकल्पां
गदां प्रगृह्याशु तदा ननाद ॥ ६० ॥

Like a tree whose roots have been severed, the ogre suddenly fell to the ground, bathed all over in blood. Nay, quickly seizing hold of that formidable mace of the ogre, which resembled the rod of Yama (the god of retribution), the monkey, R̥ṣabha, forthwith roared. (60)

मुहूर्तमासीत् स गतासुकल्पः
प्रत्यागतात्मा सहसा सुरारिः ।
उत्पत्य संध्याभ्रसमानवर्ण-
स्तं वारिराजात्मजमाजघान ॥ ६१ ॥

For a while Mahāpārśwa remained all but dead. Springing on his feet all of a sudden, his life-breath having returned, the enemy of gods, whose colour resembled that of an evening cloud, struck the aforesaid son of the lord of waters, R̥ṣabha. (61)

स मूर्च्छितो भूमितले पपात
मुहूर्तमुत्पत्य पुनः ससंज्ञः ।
तामेव तस्याद्रिवराद्रिकल्पां
गदां समाविध्य जघान संख्ये ॥ ६२ ॥

The monkey lay unconscious on the earth's surface awhile. Springing up, when he was conscious again, and brandishing that very mace of the ogre, which looked like a rock of the foremost of mountains, R̥ṣabha struck him with it on the battle-field. (62)

सा तस्य रौद्रा समुपेत्य देहं
रौद्रस्य देवाध्वरविप्रशत्रोः ।
बिभेद वक्षः क्षतजं च भूरि
सुस्त्राव धात्वम्भ इवाद्विराजः ॥ ६३ ॥

Reaching the body of that ferocious enemy of gods, sacrificial performances and Brāhmaṇas, that terrible mace clove his breast; and the ogre shed profuse blood even as the Himālaya mountain (the lord of mountains) lets out water charged with minerals (like ochre). (63)

अभिदुद्राव वेगेन गदां तस्य महात्मनः ।
तां गृहीत्वा गदां भीमामाविध्य च पुनः पुनः ॥ ६४ ॥
मत्तानीकं महात्मा स जघान रणमूर्धनि ।
स स्वया गदया भग्नो विशीर्णदशनेक्षणः ॥ ६५ ॥
निपपात तदा मत्तो वज्राहत इवाचलः ।
विशीर्णनयने भूमौ गतसत्त्वे गतायुषि ।
पतिते राक्षसे तस्मिन् विद्रुतं राक्षसं बलम् ॥ ६६ ॥

The ogre now darted towards the mace held in the hand of that gigantic monkey, R̥ṣabha. Clutching that terrible mace and brandishing it again and again, the high-souled R̥ṣabha struck Mahāpārśwa with it in the forefront of the battle. Smashed with his own mace, his teeth and eyes fallen down, Matta (Mahāpārśwa) forthwith dropped down like a mountain struck with lightning. When that ogre, whose eyes had been crushed, dropped unconscious and lifeless on the ground, the army of ogres fled. (64—66)

तस्मिन् हते भ्रातरि रावणस्य
तनैर्ऋतानां बलमर्णवाभम् ।
त्यक्तायुधं केवलजीवितार्थं
दुद्राव भिन्नार्णवसंनिकाशम् ॥ ६७ ॥

When the aforesaid younger brother of Rāvaṇa was killed, the aforesaid army of ogres (the scions of Nirṛti), which resembled an ocean, fled for life, casting away weapons, and presenting the appearance of an ocean which has burst its shores. (67)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७० ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a R̥ṣi and the oldest epic.

एकसप्ततिम सर्गः

Canto LXXI

Atikāya puts up a fierce fight and is killed by Lakṣmaṇa

स्वबलं व्यथितं दृष्ट्वा तुमुलं लोमहर्षणम् ।
भ्रातृंश्च निहतान् दृष्ट्वा शक्रतुल्यपराक्रमान् ॥ १ ॥
पितृव्यौ चापि संदृश्य समरे संनिपातितौ ।
युद्धोन्मत्तं च मत्तं च भ्रातरौ राक्षसोत्तमौ ॥ २ ॥
चुकोप च महातेजा ब्रह्मदत्तवरो युधि ।
अतिकायोऽद्रिसंकाशो देवदानवदर्पहा ॥ ३ ॥

Seeing his own army—which created uproars in the hostile ranks and caused the enemy's hair to stand on end—in trouble, nay, finding his brothers, who were equal to Indra in prowess, killed, and also witnessing has uncles, the two brothers Yuddhonmatta (Mahodara) and Matta (Mahāpārśwa) the foremost of ogres, struck down in combat, Atikāya, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and resembled a mountain (in size), who had crushed the pride of gods and demons alike and on whom Brahmā, the creator, had bestowed a boon of invincibility, flew into a rage on the field of battle. (1—3)

स भास्करसहस्रस्य संघातमिव भास्वरम् ।
रथमारुह्य शक्रारिरभिदुद्राव वानरान् ॥ ४ ॥

Ascending his chariot, brilliant as a concatenation of a thousand suns, that enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods) darted towards the monkeys (4)

स विस्फार्य तदा चापं किरीटी मृष्टकुण्डलः ।
नाम संश्रावयामास ननाद च महास्वनम् ॥ ५ ॥

Twanging his bow, Atikāya, who was adorned with a diadem and polished earrings, forthwith proclaimed his name and emitted a tremendous roar. (5)

तेन सिंहप्रणादेन नामविश्रावणेन च ।
ज्याशब्देन च भीमेन त्रासयामास वानरान् ॥ ६ ॥

By that leonine roar, the proclamation of his name and the terrible ringing sound caused by the plucking of his bowstring, he struck terror in the monkeys. (6)

ते दृष्ट्वा देहमाहात्म्यं कुम्भकर्णोऽयमुत्थितः ।
भयार्ता वानराः सर्वे संश्रयन्ते परस्परम् ॥ ७ ॥

Thinking on beholding the immensity of his proportions that it was Kumbhakarna who had sprung into life again, and stricken with fear, all the aforesaid monkeys sought shelter, one with the other. (7)

ते तस्य रूपमालोक्य यथा विष्णोस्त्रिविक्रमे ।
भयाद् वानरयोधास्ते विद्रवन्ति ततस्ततः ॥ ८ ॥

Witnessing his colossal form, resembling the form assumed by Lord Viṣṇu at the time of measuring the three worlds with His strides, those celebrated monkey warriors fled in various directions through panic. (8)

तेऽतिकायं समासाद्य वानरा मूढचेतसः ।
शरण्यं शरणं जग्मुर्लक्ष्मणाग्रजमाहवे ॥ ९ ॥

Confused in mind on reaching the presence of Atikāya, the aforesaid monkeys sought Śrī Rāma (the eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa), who was capable of affording shelter to them, as their refuge on the field of battle. (9)

ततोऽतिकायं काकुत्स्थो रथस्थं पर्वतोपमम् ।
ददर्श धन्विनं दूराद् गर्जन्तं कालमेघवत् ॥ १० ॥

Thereupon Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha) beheld from afar Atikāya, who resembled a mountain in size, seated in a chariot, armed with a bow, and rumbling like a cloud appearing at the time of universal dissolution. (10)

स तं दृष्ट्वा महाकायं राघवस्तु सुविस्मितः ।
वानरान् सान्त्वयित्वा च विभीषणमुवाच ह ॥ ११ ॥

The aforesaid Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, for his part felt greatly amazed to behold that colossus and reassuring the monkeys, they say, spoke as follows to Vibhīṣaṇa: (11)

कोऽसौ पर्वतसंकाशो धनुष्मान् हरिलोचनः ।
युक्ते ह्यसहस्रेण विशाले स्यन्दने स्थितः ॥ १२ ॥
य एष निशितैः शूलैः सुतीक्ष्णैः प्रासतोमरैः ।
अर्चिष्मद्भिर्वृतो भाति भूतैरिव महेश्वरः ॥ १३ ॥
कालजिह्वाप्रकाशाभिर्य एषोऽभिविराजते ।
आवृतो रथशक्तीभिर्विद्युद्भिरिव तोयदः ॥ १४ ॥

“Who is that archer, closely resembling a mountain, with leonine eyes, seated in a vast chariot drawn by a thousand horses, who in the midst of whetted pikes, very sharp and flaming spears and lances, shines over there like Lord Śiva surrounded by genii, and who amidst the javelins placed in his chariot and gleaming like the tongues of Kāla (the Time-Spirit) is shining brightly like a cloud encircled by flashes of lightning? (12—14)

धनूंषि चास्य सज्जानि हेमपृष्ठानि सर्वशः ।
शोभयन्ति रथश्रेष्ठं शक्रचापमिवाम्बरम् ॥ १५ ॥
“Nay, bows with golden backs ranged on every side (in his chariot) adorn his excellent chariot in the same way as rainbow would adorn the sky. (15)

य एष रक्षःशार्दूलो रणभूमिं विराजयन् ।
अभ्येति रथिनां श्रेष्ठो रथेनादित्यवर्चसा ॥ १६ ॥
“This tiger among the ogres, the foremost of car-warriors, is advancing in his chariot resplendent as the sun, illuminating the battle-field! (16)

ध्वजशृङ्गप्रतिष्ठेन राहुणाभिविराजते ।
सूर्यरश्मिप्रभैर्बाणैर्दिशो दश विराजयन् ॥ १७ ॥
“He is distinguished by an emblem of Rāhu installed on the point of his standard and is lighting up the ten directions with his arrows possessing the splendour of sunbeams. (17)

त्रिनतं मेघनिर्हादं हेमपृष्ठमलंकृतम् ।
शतक्रतुधनुःप्रख्यं धनुश्चास्य विराजते ॥ १८ ॥
“Nay, his triply curved golden-backed and ornamented bow, shining as the rainbow, whose twang resembles the thundering of a cloud, is casting its splendour all round. (18)

सध्वजः सपताकश्च सानुकर्षो महारथः ।
चतुःसादिसमायुक्तो मेघस्तनितनिःस्वनः ॥ १९ ॥
“Provided with a standard, flags and axle-tree, his huge chariot, which is driven by four charioteers, his chariot is emitting a sound resembling the thundering of a cloud. (19)

विंशतिर्दश चाष्टौ च तूणास्य रथमास्थिताः ।
कार्मुकाणि च भीमानि ज्याश्च काञ्चनपिङ्गलाः ॥ २० ॥
“Twenty quivers, ten dreadful bows and eight bowstrings, golden and reddish-brown of hue, lie arranged in his chariot. (20)
द्वौ च खड्गौ च पार्श्वस्थौ प्रदीप्तौ पार्श्वशोभितौ ।
चतुर्हस्तत्सरुयुतौ व्यक्तहस्तदशायतौ ॥ २१ ॥

“Nay, hanging on its sides, two flaming swords, clearly ten cubits long and provided with hilts measuring four cubits are casting their splendour on his two sides. (21)
रक्तकण्ठगुणो धीरो महापर्वतसंनिभः ।
कालः कालमहावक्त्रो मेघस्थ इव भास्करः ॥ २२ ॥

“With a red garland adorning his neck, a mouth enormous as that of Death, the resolute ogre, resembling a huge mountain and dark of hue, looks like the sun veiled by a cloud. (22)

काञ्चनाङ्गदनद्धाभ्यां भुजाभ्यामेष शोभते ।
शृङ्गाभ्यामिव तुङ्गाभ्यां हिमवान् पर्वतोत्तमः ॥ २३ ॥
“By virtue of his arms adorned with gold armlets, the yonder ogre shines like the Himālaya, the foremost of mountains, with two lofty peaks. (23)

कुण्डलाभ्यामुभाभ्यां च भाति वक्त्रं सुभीषणम् ।
पुनर्वस्वन्तरगतं परिपूर्णो निशाकरः ॥ २४ ॥

“Nay, with both ear-rings, his most dreadful countenance shines like the full moon appearing between the two stars constituting the constellation Punarvasu. (24)

आचक्ष्व मे महाबाहो त्वमेनं राक्षसोत्तमम् ।
यं दृष्ट्वा वानराः सर्वे भयार्ता विद्रुता दिशः ॥ २५ ॥

“Introduce you to me, O mighty-armed one, this jewel among the ogres, seeing whom the monkeys have all fled panic-stricken in all directions.” (25)

स पृष्टो राजपुत्रेण रामेणामिततेजसा ।
आचक्ष्वे महातेजा राघवाय विभीषणः ॥ २६ ॥

Questioned as aforesaid by Prince Śrī Rāma of immense energy, Vibhiṣaṇa, who too was endowed with extraordinary energy, submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu: (26)

दशग्रीवो महातेजा राजा वैश्रवणानुजः ।
भीमकर्मा महात्मा हि रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ २७ ॥

“The ten-headed and gigantic King Rāvaṇa, a younger (half-) brother of Kubera, son of Viśravā, the lord of ogres, who is endowed with extraordinary energy, is well known for his terrific exploits. (27)

तस्यासीद् वीर्यवान् पुत्रो रावणप्रतिमो बले ।
वृद्धसेवी श्रुतिधरः सर्वास्त्रविदुषां वरः ॥ २८ ॥

“To him was born a valiant son, who is a compeer of Rāvaṇa in might, has waited upon his elders, has mastered the Vedas and is the foremost of all those well-versed in the use of mystic missiles. (28)

अश्वपृष्ठे नागपृष्ठे खड्गे धनुषि कर्षणे ।
भेदे सान्त्वे च दाने च नये मन्त्रे च सम्मतः ॥ २९ ॥

“He is highly esteemed in riding on horse-back as well as on the back of an elephant, in the use of a sword, as well as of a bow, in pulling the string of a bow, in sowing dissension in the enemy’s ranks and making peace, as also in making gifts, in political wisdom as well as in counsel. (29)

यस्य बाहुं समाश्रित्य लङ्का भवति निर्भया ।
तनयं धान्यमालिन्या अतिकायमिमं विदुः ॥ ३० ॥

“People know this warrior as Atikāya, son of Dhānyamālinī (another consort of Rāvaṇa) resting on whose arm Laṅkā feels secure. (30)

एतेनाराधितो ब्रह्मा तपसा भावितात्मना ।
अस्त्राणि चाप्यवाप्तानि रिपवश्च पराजिताः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Brahmā, the creator, was propitiated by this ogre of purified intellect through askesis; nay, mystic missiles of various kinds were acquired from the aforesaid god by way of boons and enemies subdued. (31)

सुरासुरैरवध्यत्वं दत्तमस्मै स्वयंभुवा ।
एतच्च कवचं दिव्यं रथश्च रविभास्वरः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Exemption from death at the hands of gods and demons alike has been granted in his favour by Brahmā (the self-born creator) as well as this heavenly armour as also this chariot, bright as the sun. (32)

एतेन शतशो देवा दानवाश्च पराजिताः ।
रक्षितानि च रक्षांसि यक्षाश्चापि निषूदिताः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Gods and devils too have been overcome by him in hundreds, nay, ogres have been protected and Yakṣas (a class of demigods), too, have been exterminated. (33)

वज्रं विष्टम्भितं येन बाणैरिन्द्रस्य धीमता ।
पाशः सलिलराजस्य युद्धे प्रतिहतस्तथा ॥ ३४ ॥
एषोऽतिकायो बलवान् राक्षसानामथर्षभः ।
स रावणसुतो धीमान् देवदानवदर्पहा ॥ ३५ ॥

Here is the notorious Atikāya, the mighty and intelligent son of Rāvaṇa, a veritable bull among the ogres and the queller of the pride of gods and devils, by whom, wise as he is, was the thunderbolt of Indra stayed with his arrows and the noose of Varuṇa, the lord of waters, was repelled in combat. (34-35)

तदस्मिन् क्रियतां यत्नः क्षिप्रं पुरुषपुङ्गव।
पुरा वानरसैन्यानि क्षयं नयति सायकैः ॥ ३६ ॥

“Therefore, O bull among men, let your efforts be speedily directed towards him before he brings the monkey troops to an end with his arrows.” (36)

ततोऽतिकायो बलवान् प्रविश्य हरिवाहिनीम्।
विस्फारयामास धनुर्ननाद च पुनः पुनः ॥ ३७ ॥

Penetrating deep into the simian ranks, the mighty Atikāya thereupon twanged his bow and roared again and again. (37)

तं भीमवपुषं दृष्ट्वा रथस्थं रथिनां वरम्।
अभिपेतुर्महात्मानः प्रधाना ये वनौकसः ॥ ३८ ॥

Beholding that ogre of fearful proportions, the foremost of car-warriors, seated in his chariot, those gigantic monkeys, who ranked foremost, rushed to meet him. (38)

कुमुदो द्विविदो मैन्दो नीलः शरभ एव च।
पादपैर्गिरिशृङ्गैश्च युगपत् समभिद्रवन् ॥ ३९ ॥

Kumuda, Dwivida, Mainda, Nila and Śarabha too assailed him all at once with trees and mountain-peaks. (39)

तेषां वृक्षांश्च शैलांश्च शरैः कनकभूषणैः।
अतिकायो महातेजाश्चिच्छेदास्त्रविदां वरः ॥ ४० ॥

Atikāya, however, the foremost of those well versed in the use of mystic missiles, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, tore the trees and crags hurled by monkeys with his shafts decked with gold. (40)

तांश्चैव सर्वान् स हरीन् शरैः सर्वायसैर्बली।
विव्याधाभिमुखान् संख्ये भीमकायो निशाचरः ॥ ४१ ॥

That mighty ogre (lit., a prowler of the night) of tremendous proportions also pierced all those monkeys, who stood facing him on the battle-field, with his arrows entirely made of iron. (41)

तेज्जिता बाणवर्षेण भिन्नगात्राः पराजिताः।
न शेकुरतिकायस्य प्रतिकर्तुं महाहवे ॥ ४२ ॥

Hard pressed by his hail of arrows and worsted, their limbs broken, they could not resist Atikāya in that major conflict. (42)

तत् सैन्यं हरिवीराणां त्रासयामास राक्षसः।
मृगयूथमिव क्रुद्धो हरियौवनदर्पितः ॥ ४३ ॥

The ogre struck terror in that army of monkey champions even as a furious lion puffed up with pride of youth, would strike terror in a flock of deer. (43)

स राक्षसेन्द्रो हरियूथमध्ये
नायुध्यमानं निजघान कंचित्।
उत्पत्य रामं स धनुःकलापी
सगर्वितं वाक्यमिदं बभाषे ॥ ४४ ॥

That ruler of ogres would not strike anyone among the simian ranks who was not fighting. Rushing towards Śrī Rāma, the ogre, who was armed with a bow and quiver, addressed the following proud challenge to him: (44)

रथे स्थितोऽहं शरचापपाणि-
र्न प्राकृतं कंचन योधयामि।
यस्यास्ति शक्तिर्व्यवसाययुक्तो
ददातु मे शीघ्रमिहाद्य युद्धम् ॥ ४५ ॥

“Seated in a chariot with an arrow and a bow in my hands, I would not give battle to a common warrior. Let him, who has strength and is endowed with martial ardour, speedily give fight to me on this field of battle today.” (45)

तत् तस्य वाक्यं ब्रुवतो निशम्य
चुकोप सौमित्रिरमित्रहन्ता।
अमृष्यमाणश्च समुत्पपात
जग्राह चापं च ततः स्मयित्वा ॥ ४६ ॥

Hearing the aforeesaid challenge of Atikāya, even as he was uttering it, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), the destroyer of his enemies, flew into a rage. Nay, not enduring his utterance, he darted forward, and then seized his bow disdainfully. (46)

क्रुद्धः सौमित्रिरुत्पत्य तूणादाक्षिप्य सायकम्।
पुरस्तादतिकायस्य विचकर्ष महद्भुनुः ॥ ४७ ॥

Springing up in fury and pulling a shaft from his quiver, the son of Sumitrā, Lakṣmaṇa, stretched his huge bow to full length before Atikāya. (47)

पूरयन् स महीं सर्वामाकाशं सागरं दिशः ।
ज्याशब्दो लक्ष्मणस्योग्रस्त्रासयन् रजनीचरान् ॥ ४८ ॥

Filling the entire earth, the airspace, the ocean as well as the quarters, and striking terror in the prowlers of the night, the twang of Lakṣmaṇa's bowstring was terrible. (48)

सौमित्रेश्चापनिर्घोषं श्रुत्वा प्रतिभयं तदा ।
विसिस्मिये महातेजा राक्षसेन्द्रात्मजो बली ॥ ४९ ॥

The mighty Atikāya, sprung from the loins of the king of orgres, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, was astonished on that occasion to hear the fearful twang of the bow of Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā). (49)

तदातिकायः कुपितो दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणमुत्थितम् ।
आदाय निशितं बाणमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ५० ॥

Enraged to behold Lakṣmaṇa active and seizing hold of a whetted shaft, Atikāya then spoke to Lakṣmaṇa as follows: (50)

बालस्त्वमसि सौमित्रे विक्रमेष्वविचक्षणः ।
गच्छ किं कालसंकाशं मां योधयितुमिच्छसि ॥ ५१ ॥

"You are still a youngster, O son of Sumitra, unskilled in exhibiting valour. Therefore, depart! Why do you seek to measure your strength with me, a replica of Kāla (the Time-Spirit)? (51)

नहि मद्बाहुसृष्टानां बाणानां हिमवानपि ।
सोढुमुत्सहते वेगमन्तरिक्षमथो मही ॥ ५२ ॥

"Not even the Himālaya mountain, nor the atmosphere nor even the earth can withstand the force of the arrows discharged by my arm. (52)

सुखप्रसुप्तं कालाग्निं विबोधयितुमिच्छसि ।
न्यस्य चापं निवर्तस्व प्राणान् जहि मद्गतः ॥ ५३ ॥

"Do you seek to rouse the fire of universal dissolution, comfortably buried in slumber? Casting away your bow, go back. Confronting me, do not lose your life. (53)

अथवा त्वं प्रतिस्तब्धो न निवर्तितुमिच्छसि ।
तिष्ठ प्राणान् परित्यज्य गमिष्यसि यमक्षयम् ॥ ५४ ॥

"Or, if, being stubborn, you do not wish to return, tarry. Yielding up your life, you shall proceed to the abode of Yama (the god of retribution). (54)

पश्य मे निशितान् बाणान् रिपुदर्पनिषूदनान् ।
ईश्वरायुधसंकाशांस्तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणान् ॥ ५५ ॥

"Behold my whetted shafts, capable of crushing the pride of the enemy, nay, resembling the weapon, trident of Lord Śiva, and decked with refined gold. (55)

एष ते सर्पसंकाशो बाणः पास्यति शोणितम् ।
मृगराज इव क्रुद्धो नागराजस्य शोणितम् ।
इत्येवमुक्त्वा संक्रुद्धः शरं धनुषि संदधे ॥ ५६ ॥

"This arrow, resembling a serpent, shall quaff your blood even as a furious lion would drink the blood of a lordly elephant." Having spoken as aforesaid, Atikāya, who was seized with fury, put an arrow to his bow. (56)

श्रुत्वातिकायस्य वचः सरोषं
सगर्वितं संयति राजपुत्रः ।
स संचुक्रोपातिबलो मनस्वी
उवाच वाक्यं च ततो महार्थम् ॥ ५७ ॥

Hearing the furious and proud utterance of Atikāya on the field of battle, the high-minded Prince Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with surpassing strength, flew into a rage and then made the following reply, which was full of great significance: (57)

न वाक्यमात्रेण भवान् प्रधानो
न कथ्यनात् सत्पुरुषा भवन्ति ।
मयि स्थिते धन्विनि बाणपाणौ
निदर्शयस्वात्मबलं दुरात्मन् ॥ ५८ ॥

"You cannot claim to be pre-eminent by mere speech nor can people become good men through sheer braggadocio. While I stand before you armed with a bow, arrow in hand, demonstrate your strength, O evil-minded one! (58)

कर्मणा सूचयात्मानं न विकत्थितुमर्हसि।
पौरुषेण तु यो युक्तः स तु शूर इति स्मृतः ॥ ५९ ॥

“Reveal yourself through your action; you ought not to blow your own trumpet. He alone who is actually endowed with prowess is recognized as a hero. (59)

सर्वायुधसमायुक्तो धन्वी त्वं रथमास्थितः।
शरैर्वा यदि वाप्यस्त्रैर्दर्शयस्व पराक्रमम् ॥ ६० ॥

“Fully equipped with all kinds of weapons and armed with a bow, you are seated in a chariot. Therefore, manifest your prowess either with your arrows or with your mystic missiles. (60)

ततः शिरस्ते निशितैः पातयिष्याम्यहं शरैः।
मारुतः कालसम्पक्वं वृन्तात् तालफलं यथा ॥ ६१ ॥

“Then shall I strike down your head with my whetted shafts even as the wind detaches a palm fruit ripened in process of time from its stem. (61)

अद्य ते मामका बाणास्तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणाः।
पास्यन्ति रुधिरं गात्राद् बाणशल्यान्तरोत्थितम् ॥ ६२ ॥

“My arrows decked with refined gold shall drink the blood ejected from your body through the holes made by the points of my arrows. (62)

बालोऽयमिति विज्ञाय न चावज्ञातुमर्हसि।
बालो वा यदि वा वृद्धो मृत्युं जानीहि संयुगे ॥ ६३ ॥

“Nor should you underestimate me thinking that I am a mere boy. Whether I am a child or grown-up, know me to be your death on the field of battle. (63)

बालेन विष्णुना लोकास्त्रयः क्रान्तास्त्रिविक्रमैः।
लक्ष्मणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा हेतुम् परमार्थवत्।
अतिकायः प्रचुक्रोध बाणं चोत्तममाददे ॥ ६४ ॥

“The three worlds were covered in three strides of Lord Viṣṇu, descended as Lord Vāmana, while He was yet a child.” Hearing the reply of Lakṣmaṇa, which was full of reason and contained the whole truth, Atikāya flew into a rage and laid hold of an excellent arrow. (64)

ततो विद्याधरा भूता देवा दैत्या महर्षयः।
गुह्यकाश्च महात्मानस्तद् युद्धं द्रष्टुमागमन् ॥ ६५ ॥

Thereupon Vidyādhara (heavenly artistes), ghosts, gods, giants and eminent Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras) as well as high-minded Guhyakas, Yakṣas arrived to witness the duel. (65)

ततोऽतिकायः कुपितश्चापमारोप्य सायकम्।
लक्ष्मणाय प्रचिक्षेप संक्षिपन्निव चाम्बरम् ॥ ६६ ॥

Putting an arrow to his bow, Atikāya thereupon furiously discharged it against Lakṣmaṇa, shrinking up space as it were (66)

तमापतन्तं निशितं शरमाशीविषोपमम्।
अर्धचन्द्रेण चिच्छेद लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा ॥ ६७ ॥

Lakṣman, the destroyer of hostile champions, however, split with his arrow, having a crescent-shaped head, that sharpened shaft, which came flying like a venomous serpent. (67)

तं निकृत्तं शरं दृष्ट्वा कृत्तभोगमिवोरगम्।
अतिकायो भृशं क्रुद्धः पञ्च बाणान् समादधे ॥ ६८ ॥

Enraged to find that arrow torn like a serpent whose hood has been severed, Atikāya fitted five arrows to his bow. (68)

तान् शरान् सम्प्रचिक्षेप लक्ष्मणाय निशाचरः।
तानप्राप्तान् शितैर्बाणैश्चिच्छेद भरतानुजः ॥ ६९ ॥

The ranger of the night, Atikāya, discharged the aforesaid arrows with full force against Lakṣmaṇa. The younger brother of Bharata, Lakṣmaṇa, however, split them with his whetted arrows while they had not yet reached him. (69)

स तान् छित्त्वा शितैर्बाणैर्लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा ।
आददे निशितं बाणं ज्वलन्तमिव तेजसा ॥ ७० ॥

Having torn them with his sharp arrows, Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of hostile champions, seized a whetted shaft, which was flaming as it were with splendour. (70)

तमादाय धनुःश्रेष्ठे योजयामास लक्ष्मणः ।
विचकर्ष च वेगेन विससर्ज च सायकम् ॥ ७१ ॥

Laying hold of it, Lakṣmaṇa set it to his excellent bow, pulled its string to full stretch and shot the shaft with impetuosity. (71)

पूर्णायतविसृष्टेन शरेण नतपर्वणा ।
ललाटे राक्षसश्रेष्ठमाजघान स वीर्यवान् ॥ ७२ ॥

Nay, with that flat-jointed arrow, which was discharged after the string had been stretched to full length, the valiant Lakṣmaṇa struck Atikāya (the foremost of ogres) in the brow. (72)

स ललाटे शरो मग्नस्तस्य भीमस्य रक्षसः ।
ददृशे शोणितेनाक्तः पन्नगेन्द्र इवाचले ॥ ७३ ॥

Sunk into the forehead of that terrible ogre and stained with blood, that arrow looked like a ruler of serpents clinging to a mountain. (73)

राक्षसः प्रचकम्पेऽथ लक्ष्मणेषु प्रपीडितः ।
रुद्रबाणहतं घोरं यथा त्रिपुरगोपुरम् ॥ ७४ ॥

Severely injured by the shaft of Lakṣmaṇa, the ogre forthwith shook violently like the formidable gate of Tripura (a city built of gold, silver and iron in the heaven, in the airspace as well as on the earth by the demon Maya and burnt by Rudra) struck with the arrow of Rudra (the god of destruction). (74)

चिन्तयामास चाश्वास्य विमृश्य च महाबलः ।
साधु बाणनिपातेन श्लाघनीयोऽसि मे रिपुः ॥ ७५ ॥

Nay, recovering his breath and reflecting for a moment, the ogre, who was endowed with extraordinary might, contemplated upon his course of action.

“By discharging this arrow against me, as you have done, you have turned out an enemy eminently worthy of praise by me!” (75)

विधायैवं विदार्यास्यं नियम्य च महाभुजौ ।
स रथोपस्थमास्थाय रथेन प्रचचार ह ॥ ७६ ॥

Distending his mouth and speaking to him as aforesaid, nay, controlling his mighty arms and taking his seat in the rear of the chariot, he pressed forward in his chariot. (76)

एवं त्रीन् पञ्च सप्तेति सायकान् राक्षसर्षभः ।
आददे संदधे चापि विचकर्षोत्ससर्ज च ॥ ७७ ॥

Atikāya, a bull among the ogres, seized hold of one, three, five and seven arrows (respectively) and put them to his bow, stretched the string to full length and let them fly. (77)

ते बाणाः कालसंकाशा राक्षसेन्द्रधनुश्च्युताः ।
हेमपुङ्खा रविप्रख्याश्चक्रुर्दीप्तमिवाम्बरम् ॥ ७८ ॥

Shot from the bow of Atikāya (a ruler of ogres), those golden-feathered arrows, which resembled Death and shone like the sun, set the firmament ablaze, as it were. (78)

ततस्तान् राक्षसोत्सृष्टान् शरौघान् राघवानुजः ।
असम्भ्रान्तः प्रचिच्छेद निशितैर्बहुभिः शरैः ॥ ७९ ॥

Remaining unruffled, the younger brother of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) thereupon cut off with his numerous whetted shafts the aforesaid volleys of arrows discharged by the ogre. (79)

ताञ्शरान् युधि सम्प्रेक्ष्य निकृत्तान् रावणात्मजः ।
चुकोप त्रिदशेन्द्रारिर्जग्राह निशितं शरम् ॥ ८० ॥

Duly perceiving those arrows cut down on the field of battle. Atikāya (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa), an enemy of Indra, the ruler of gods, flew into a rage and took hold of a sharpened arrow. (80)

स संधाय महातेजास्तं बाणं सहस्रोत्सृजत् ।
तेन सौमित्रिमायान्तमाजघान स्तनान्तरे ॥ ८१ ॥

Putting that arrow to his bow, Atikāya, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, precipitately shot it. With that he struck Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), as he was aiming at his breast. (81)

अतिकायेन सौमित्रिस्ताडितो युधि वक्षसि।
सुस्त्राव रुधिरं तीव्रं मदं मत्त इव द्विपः ॥ ८२ ॥

Hit in the breast by Atikāya on the battlefield, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) began to bleed profusely even as an elephant in rut would discharge ichor. (82)

स चकार तदात्मानं विशल्यं सहसा विभुः।
जग्राह च शरं तीक्ष्णमस्त्रेणापि समाददे ॥ ८३ ॥

The all-powerful Lakṣmaṇa (who was a part manifestation of Lord Viṣṇu) then speedily rid himself of the shaft, seized hold of a sharp arrow and also charged it with a mystic spell. (83)

आग्नेयेन तदास्त्रेण योजयामास सायकम्।
स जज्वाल तदा बाणो धनुष्यस्य महात्मनः ॥ ८४ ॥

On that occasion he charged his arrow with the missile presided over by the god of fire. Placed on the bow of the high-souled prince, that arrow shot forth flames. (84)

अतिकायोऽतितेजस्वी रौद्रमस्त्रं समाददे।
तेन बाणं भुजङ्गाभं हेमपुङ्खमयोजयत् ॥ ८५ ॥

Atikāya, who was endowed with surpassing energy, pressed into service a fearful mystic missile and charged a serpent-like golden-feathered arrow with it. (85)

तदस्त्रं ज्वलितं घोरं लक्ष्मणः शरमाहितम्।
अतिकायाय चिक्षेप कालदण्डमिवान्तकः ॥ ८६ ॥

In the meantime, Lakṣmaṇa shot at Atikāya that flaming and formidable arrow in the form of a mystic missile charged with occult power, even as Death would hurl his rod of destruction. (86)

आग्नेयास्त्राभिसंयुक्तं दृष्ट्वा बाणं निशाचरः।
उत्ससर्ज तदा बाणं रौद्रं सूर्यास्त्रयोजितम् ॥ ८७ ॥

Seeing the arrow charged with a missile presided over by the god of fire, the prowler of the night, Atikāya, forthwith discharged an arrow charged with a missile presided over by the sun-god. (87)

तावुभावम्बरे बाणावन्योन्यमभिजघ्नतुः।
तेजसा सम्प्रदीमाग्नौ क्रुद्धाविव भुजङ्गमौ ॥ ८८ ॥

Both the aforesaid arrows, whose heads were flaming with fire, struck each other in space like two furious serpents. (88)

तावन्योन्यं विनिर्दह्य पेततुः पृथिवीतले ॥ ८९ ॥

Having burnt each other, they fell to the earth's surface. (89)

निरर्घिषौ भस्मकृतौ न भ्राजेते शरोत्तमौ।
तावुभौ दीप्यमानौ स्म न भ्राजेते महीतले ॥ ९० ॥

The two excellent arrows, even though they were both glowing, did not shine forth any longer on the earth's surface, in that they had ceased to emit flames and had been reduced to ashes. (90)

ततोऽतिकायः संक्रुद्धस्त्वाष्ट्रमैषीकमुत्सृजत्।
ततश्चिच्छेद सौमित्रिरस्त्रमैन्द्रेण वीर्यवान् ॥ ९१ ॥

Seized with fury, Atikāya thereupon discharged an arrow of reed charged with a missile presided over by Twaṣṭā (the architect of gods). The valiant son of Sumitrā, Lakṣmaṇa, thereupon split it with a missile presided over by Indra, ruler of gods. (91)

ऐषीकं निहतं दृष्ट्वा कुमारो रावणात्मजः।
याम्येनास्त्रेण संक्रुद्धो योजयामास सायकम् ॥ ९२ ॥

Enraged to find his arrow of reed struck down by Lakṣmaṇa, Prince Atikāya, sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa, charged an arrow with a missile presided over by Yama (the god of retribution). (92)

ततस्तदस्त्रं चिक्षेप लक्ष्मणाय निशाचरः।
वायव्येन तदस्त्रेण निजघान स लक्ष्मणः ॥ ९३ ॥

The ranger of the night then shot it at Lakṣmaṇa. The celebrated Lakṣmaṇa, however, struck it down with a missile presided over by the wind-god. (93)

अथैनं शरधाराभिर्धाराभिरिव तोयदः ।
अभ्यवर्षत संक्रुद्धो लक्ष्मणो रावणात्मजम् ॥ ९४ ॥

Seized with fury, Lakṣmaṇa now covered this son of Rāvaṇa with hails of arrows even as a rainy cloud would cover one with torrents. (94)

तेऽतिकायं समासाद्य कवचे वज्रभूषिते ।
भग्नाग्रशल्याः सहसा पेतुर्बाणा महीतले ॥ ९५ ॥

Duly reaching Atikāya, those arrows, however, had their points at the upper end shattered against his coat of mail, which was encrusted with diamonds, and precipitately fell to the earth's surface. (95)

तान्मोघानभिसम्प्रेक्ष्य लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा ।
अभ्यवर्षत बाणानां सहस्रेण महायशाः ॥ ९६ ॥

Perceiving them infructuous, the illustrious Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of hostile champions, covered him with a thousand arrows. (96)

स वृष्यमाणो बाणौघैरतिकायो महाबलः ।
अवध्यकवचः संख्ये राक्षसो नैव विव्यथे ॥ ९७ ॥

Though being covered with volleys of arrows on the battle-field, the aforesaid ogre, Atikāya, who was endowed with extraordinary might and whose cuirass was invulnerable, did not feel tormented at all. (97)

शरं चाशीविषाकारं लक्ष्मणाय व्यपासृजत् ।
स तेन विद्धः सौमित्रिर्मर्मदेशे शरेण ह ॥ ९८ ॥
मुहूर्तमात्रं निःसंज्ञो ह्यभवच्छत्रुतापनः ।
ततः संज्ञामुपालभ्य चतुर्भिः सायकोत्तमैः ॥ ९९ ॥
निजघान हयान् संख्ये सारथिं च महाबलः ।
ध्वजस्योन्मथनं कृत्वा शरवर्षैररिंदमः ॥ १०० ॥

Nay, he discharged an arrow resembling a venomous serpent at Lakṣmaṇa. Pierced in a vital part by that arrow, the said son of Sumitrā, the tormentor of his enemies, actually fainted awhile: so the tradition goes. Tearing off the standard of his enemy with hails of his arrows on regaining his consciousness, Lakṣmaṇa, the tamer of his adversaries, who was endowed with extraordinary might, struck down on the battle-field the horses as well as the charioteer of Atikāya with four excellent arrows. (98—100)

असम्भ्रान्तः स सौमित्रिस्ताञ्शरानभिलक्षितान् ।
मुमोच लक्ष्मणो बाणान् वधार्थं तस्य रक्षसः ॥ १०१ ॥

Remaining unconfounded, the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā, discharged some well-known and selected arrows for the destruction of that ogre. (101)

न शशाक रुजं कर्तुं युधि तस्य नरोत्तमः ।
अथैनमभ्युपागम्य वायुर्वाक्यमुवाच ह ॥ १०२ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa, the foremost of men, could not, however, inflict any injury on his person in combat. Approaching him, the wind-god presently spoke to him as follows, so the tradition goes: (102)

ब्रह्मदत्तवरो ह्येष अवध्यकवचावृतः ।
ब्राह्मेणास्त्रेण भिन्ध्येनमेष वध्यो हि नान्यथा ।
अवध्य एष ह्यन्येषामस्त्राणां कवची बली ॥ १०३ ॥

“This ogre, on whom a boon having been conferred by Brahmā, the creator, is actually clad in impenetrable armour. Therefore, pierce him with a missile presided over by Brahmā; for he cannot be killed otherwise. Protected with armour and full of might as he is, he is incapable of being killed with other missiles.” (103)

ततस्तु वायोर्वचनं निशम्य
सौमित्रिरिन्द्रप्रतिमानवीर्यः ।
समादधे बाणमथोग्रवेगं
तद्बाह्यमस्त्रं सहसा नियुज्य ॥ १०४ ॥

Hearing the admonition of the wind-god and pressing into service the well-known missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator), the son of Sumitrā for his part, who was a compeer of Indra (the ruler of gods) in prowess, thereupon precipitately fitted to his bow an arrow of terrific velocity. (104)

तस्मिन् वरास्रे तु नियुज्यमाने
सौमित्रिणा बाणवरे शिताग्रे ।
दिशश्च चन्द्रार्कमहाग्रहाश्च
नभश्च तत्रास ररास चोर्वी ॥ १०५ ॥

While that excellent missile, presided over by Brahmā, was for its part being infused into the foremost of arrows with a sharp point by the son of Sumitrā, the four quarters as well as the moon and the sun and the other major planets as also the vault of heaven shook and the earth creaked. (105)

तं ब्रह्मणोऽस्त्रेण नियुज्य चापे
शरं सपुङ्खं यमदूतकल्पम् ।
सौमित्रिरिन्द्रारिसुतस्य तस्य
ससर्ज बाणं युधि वज्रकल्पम् ॥ १०६ ॥

Having charged that arrow, feathers and all, with the missile presided over by Brahmā, the creator, and placed it on his bow, the son of Sumitrā discharged that shaft, which now looked like a messenger of Death and was hard as adamant, at the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa (an enemy of Indra) on the field of battle. (106)

तं लक्ष्मणोत्सृष्टविवृद्धवेगं
समापतन्तं श्वसनोग्रवेगम् ।
सुपर्णवज्रोत्तमचित्रपुङ्खं
तदातिकायः समरे ददर्श ॥ १०७ ॥

Atikāya forthwith beheld on the battle-field the arrow shot by Lakṣmaṇa, which possessed the terrific velocity of the wind, was provided with lovely feathers resembling the wings of Garuḍa (the king of birds) and decked with excellent diamonds—flying towards Atikāya with redoubled speed. (107)

तं प्रेक्षमाणः सहसातिकायो
जघान बाणैर्निशितैरनेकैः ।

स सायकस्तस्य सुपर्णवेग-
स्तथातिवेगेन जगाम पार्श्वम् ॥ १०८ ॥

Closely observing it, Atikāya forcibly struck it with numerous whetted shafts. Possessing as it did the swiftness of Garuḍa, that arrow none the less drew near him with terrific speed. (108)

तमागतं प्रेक्ष्य तदातिकायो
बाणं प्रदीप्तान्तककालकल्पम् ।
जघान शक्त्यृष्टिगदाकुठारैः
शूलैः शरैश्चाप्यविपन्नचेष्टः ॥ १०९ ॥

Perceiving that flaming arrow terrible as Death and the Time-Spirit arrived, Atikāya forthwith struck it with javelins, spears, maces and axes as also with pikes and arrows with unceasing endeavour. (109)

तान्यायुधान्यद्भुतविग्रहाणि
मोघानि कृत्वा स शरोऽग्निदीप्तः ।
प्रगृह्य तस्यैव किरीटजुष्टं
तदातिकायस्य शिरो जहार ॥ ११० ॥

Rendering all the aforesaid weapons of wonderful shapes ineffectual, and transfixing the head of the selfsame Atikāya, which was covered with a diadem, that arrow blazing like fire forthwith severed it. (110)

तच्छिरः सशिरस्त्राणं लक्ष्मणेषुप्रमर्दितम् ।
पपात सहसा भूमौ शृङ्गं हिमवतो यथा ॥ १११ ॥
Cut off by the arrow of Lakṣmaṇa, the aforesaid head with its diadem precipitately fell to the ground like a peak of the Himālaya mountain. (111)

तं भूमौ पतितं दृष्ट्वा विक्षिप्ताम्बरभूषणम् ।
बभूवुर्व्यथिताः सर्वे हतशेषा निशाचराः ॥ ११२ ॥

All the ogres who had escaped being killed, felt distressed to behold the prince fallen on the ground, his raiment and adornments in disarray. (112)

ते विषण्णमुखा दीनाः प्रहारजनितश्रमाः ।
विनेदुरुच्चैर्बहवः सहसा विस्वरैः स्वरैः ॥ ११३ ॥

With their faces downcast, nay, feeling miserable and exhausted with blows, many of them burst into a loud wail in discordant tone. (113)

ततस्तत्परितं याता निरपेक्षा निशाचराः ।
पुरीमभिमुखा भीता द्रवन्तो नायके हते ॥ ११४ ॥

Their leader having been killed, the rangers of the night, who had now become listless, hastily withdrew running from that place, frightened as they were, with their faces turned towards the city. (114)

प्रहर्षयुक्ता बहवस्तु वानराः
प्रफुल्लपद्मप्रतिमाननास्तदा ।
अपूजयँल्लक्ष्मणमिष्टभागिनं
हते रिपौ भीमबले दुरासदे ॥ ११५ ॥ Filled with extreme delight on their enemy, who was endowed with terrible might and was difficult to approach, having been killed, numerous monkeys for their part, whose faces resembled full-blown lotuses, forthwith paid their homage to Lakṣmaṇa, who had secured victory for them. (115)

अतिबलमतिकायमभ्रकल्पं

युधि विनिपात्य स लक्ष्मणः प्रहृष्टः ।

त्वरितमथ तदा स रामपाश्वर्षं

कपिनिवहैश्च सुपूजितो जगाम ॥ ११६ ॥

Greatly rejoiced and highly honoured by hosts of monkeys on having struck down in a duel Atikāya, who was endowed with surpassing might and looked like a mass of cloud, the aforesaid celebrated Lakṣmaṇa forthwith hastily sought the presence of Śrī Rāma on that occasion. (116)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Rṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXII

Rāvaṇa feels anxious for the safety of Laṅkā and enjoins the ogres to guard the city jealously

अतिकायं हतं श्रुत्वा लक्ष्मणेन महात्मना ।
उद्वेगमगमद् राजा वचनं चेदमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

On hearing of Atikāya having been killed by the high-souled Lakṣmaṇa, the king of Laṅkā gave way to anxiety and spoke as follows: (1)

धूम्राक्षः परमामर्षी सर्वशस्त्रभृतां वरः ।
अकम्पनः प्रहस्तश्च कुम्भकर्णस्तथैव च ॥ २ ॥
एते महाबला वीरा राक्षसा युद्धकाङ्क्षिणः ।
जेतारः परसैन्यानां परैर्नित्यापराजिताः ॥ ३ ॥

“Dhūmrākṣa, who was supremely intolerant, as well as Akampana, the foremost of all those skilled in the use of arms, as also Prahasta and, even so, Kumbhakarna—these gallant ogres, the conquerors of hostile forces, were endowed with extraordinary might, nay, longed for combat and remained ever unconquered by their enemies. (2-3)

ससैन्यास्ते हता वीरा रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
राक्षसाः सुमहाकाया नानाशस्त्रविशारदाः ॥ ४ ॥

The aforesaid valiant ogres of tremendous proportions, who were well-versed in the use of all weapons, have been killed with their battalions by Rāma of unwearied action.

(4)

अन्ये च बहवः शूरा महात्मानो निपातिताः ।
प्रख्यातबलवीर्येण पुत्रेणेन्द्रजिता मम ॥ ५ ॥
तौ भ्रातरौ तदा बद्धौ घोरैर्दत्तवरैः शरैः ।
यन् शक्यं सुरैः सर्वैरसुरैर्वा महाबलैः ॥ ६ ॥
मोक्तुं तद्वन्धनं घोरं यक्षगन्धर्वपन्नगैः ।
तन् जाने प्रभावैर्वा मायया मोहनेन वा ॥ ७ ॥

Many other heroes of gigantic proportions have also been struck down. The aforesaid two brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, were bound the other day with formidable arrows, on which boons of infallibility had been conferred by Brahmā, by my eldest son, Indrajit, whose strength and prowess are widely known. That formidable bond of theirs, which could not be undone by all the gods or even by demons endowed with extraordinary might nor even by Yakṣas (a class of demigods), Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Nāgas (a class of semi-divine beings having the face of a man and the tail of a serpent) became free by virtue of their superhuman powers or some conjuring trick or magical charm, which I do not know. (5—7)

शरबन्धाद् विमुक्तौ तौ भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
ये योधा निर्गताः शूरा राक्षसा मम शासनात् ॥ ८ ॥
ते सर्वे निहता युद्धे वानरैः सुमहाबलैः ।
तं न पश्याम्यहं युद्धे योऽद्य रामं सलक्ष्मणम् ॥ ९ ॥
नाशयेत् सबलं वीरं ससुग्रीवं विभीषणम् ।
अहो सुबलवान् रामो महदस्त्रबलं च वै ॥ १० ॥
यस्य विक्रममासाद्य राक्षसा निधनं गताः ।
तं मन्ये राघवं वीरं नारायणमनामयम् ॥ ११ ॥
तद्वयाद्धि पुरी लङ्का पिहितद्वारतोरणा ।
अप्रमत्तैश्च सर्वत्र गुल्मे रक्ष्या पुरी त्वियम् ॥ १२ ॥
अशोकवनिका चैव यत्र सीताभिरक्ष्यते ।
निष्क्रमो वा प्रवेशो वा ज्ञातव्यः सर्वदैव नः ॥ १३ ॥

The aforesaid two brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, got liberated anyhow from the network of arrows. Nay, all the gallant ogre warriors who sallied forth at my command were killed in combat by the monkeys, who are endowed with exceptional might.

“I do not see the warrior who should be able to make short work in combat today of the heroic Rāma with Lakṣmaṇa and his army as well as Vibhīṣaṇa accompanied by Sugrīva. Oh, really great is the power of Rāma’s missiles and exceptionally mighty is Rāma, on reaching the range of whose prowess the ogres have met their death. I recognize that heroic scion of Raghu to be no other than Lord Nārāyaṇa, who is proof against all ailment. Indeed, it is through fear of him that Laṅkā has its doors and outer gates ever closed. Nay, let this city of Laṅkā for its part, and especially the Aśoka grove, where Sītā is being guarded on all sides, be defended alongwith its garrisons by you, who have survived destruction, remaining vigilant all the time. Every exit from and entry into the city and the grove must be definitely known by us at all times.

(8—13)

यत्र यत्र भवेद् गुल्मस्तत्र तत्र पुनः पुनः ।
सर्वतश्चापि तिष्ठध्वं स्वैः स्वैः परिवृता बलैः ॥ १४ ॥

“Wherever there is a garrison, exit and entry should be checked again and again. Surrounded by your respective troops, remain posted on all sides. (14)

द्रष्टव्यं च पदं तेषां वानराणां निशाचराः ।
प्रदोषे वार्धरात्रे वा प्रत्यूषे वापि सर्वशः ॥ १५ ॥

“Nay, the movements of the aforesaid monkeys should be watched by you, O prowlers of the night, in every way, whether there is dusk or midnight or even sunrise.

(15)

नावज्ञा तत्र कर्तव्या वानरेषु कदाचन ।
द्विषतां बलमुद्युक्तमापतत् किं स्थितं यथा ॥ १६ ॥

“No indifference should be shown to the monkeys at any time. It should be constantly observed whether the hostile army is zealously active, is advancing towards Laṅkā or stands where it was.” (16)

ततस्ते राक्षसाः सर्वे श्रुत्वा लङ्काधिपस्य तत् ।
वचनं सर्वमातिष्ठन् यथावत् तु महाबलाः ॥ १७ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid command of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of Laṅkā, all those ogres for their part, who were endowed with extraordinary might, duly carried it out forthwith in its entirety. (17)

तान् सर्वान् हि समादिश्य रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ।
मन्युशल्यं वहन् दीनः प्रविवेश स्वमालयम् ॥ १८ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्विसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXIII

A missile presided over by Brahmā and shot by Indrajit renders Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa as well as the whole army of monkeys unconscious

ततो हतान् राक्षसपुङ्गवांस्तान्
देवान्तकादित्रिशिरोऽतिकायान् ।
रक्षोगणास्तत्र हतावशिष्टा- स्ते रावणाय त्वरिताः शशंसुः ॥ १ ॥

Those ogre hosts who had survived those who had been killed, thereupon hastily reported to Rāvaṇa about the well-known bulls among ogres as had been made short work of, viz., Devāntaka, Trisīrā, Atikāya and others. (1)

ततो हतांस्तान् सहसा निशम्य
राजा महाबाष्पपरिप्लुताक्षः ।
पुत्रक्षयं भ्रातृवधं च घोरं
विचिन्त्य राजा विपुलं प्रदध्यौ ॥ २ ॥

Having duly enjoined them all as aforesaid, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, actually penetrated deep into his palace, carrying the thorn of wrath in his bosom, miserable as he was. (18)

ततः स संदीपितकोपवह्नि-
निशाचराणामधिपो महाबलः ।
तदेव पुत्रव्यसनं विचिन्तयन्
मुहुर्मुहुश्चैव तदा विनिःश्वसन् ॥ १९ ॥

The fire of wrath having been inflamed in him, that suzerain lord of ogres, who was endowed with extraordinary might, then remained brooding on the self same fall of his son, Atikāya, and also sighing again and again at that time. (19)

Hearing all of a sudden of those who had been killed, the king found his eyes bathed in copious tears. Brooding on the destruction of his sons as well as on the terrible fall of his brothers, the king became exceedingly thoughtful. (2)

ततस्तु राजानमुदीक्ष्य दीनं
शोकार्णवे सम्परिपुप्लुवानम् ।
रथर्षभो राक्षसराजसूनु-
स्तमिन्द्रजिद् वाक्यमिदं बभाषे ॥ ३ ॥

Perceiving the king disconsolate and deeply plunged in an ocean of grief, Indrajit for his part, the eldest son of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, and the foremost of car-warriors, thereupon submitted to him as follows: (3)

न तात मोहं परिगन्तुमर्हसे
यत्रेन्द्रजिज्जीवति नैर्ऋतेश्च ।
नेन्द्रारिबाणाभिहतो हि कश्चित्
प्राणान् समर्थः समरेऽभिपातुम् ॥ ४ ॥

“While Indrajit, your son, is alive, O lord of ogres (the progeny of Nirṛti), you ought not to give way to despair, dear father; for, struck with the arrows of Indra’s enemy (in my person) none is able to preserve his life on the battlefield. (4)

पश्याद्य रामं सह लक्ष्मणेन
मद्वाणनिर्भिन्नविकीर्णदेहम् ।
गतायुषं भूमितले शयानं
शितैः शरैराचितसर्वगात्रम् ॥ ५ ॥

“Behold Rāma lying dead alongwith Lakṣmaṇa on the earth’s surface today, his body thrown about, torn to pieces by my shafts, and covered all over with my sharp arrows clinging fast to it (the body). (5)

इमां प्रतिज्ञां शृणु शक्रशत्रोः
सुनिश्चितां पौरुषदैवयुक्ताम् ।
अद्यैव रामं सह लक्ष्मणेन
संतर्पयिष्यामि शरैरमोघैः ॥ ६ ॥

“Listen to the following vow of Indra’s enemy (myself), which is fully determined and is backed by manliness and divine blessing: I shall this very day overwhelm Rāma alongwith Lakṣmaṇa with my arrows that never miss their target. (6)

अद्येन्द्रवैवस्वतविष्णुरुद्र-साध्याश्च वैश्वानरचन्द्रसूर्याः ।
द्रक्ष्यन्ति मे विक्रममप्रमेयं
विष्णोरिवोग्रं बलियज्ञवाटे ॥ ७ ॥

“Today Indra (the ruler of gods), Yama (son of the sun-god), Viṣṇu (the Protector of the universe), Rudra (the god of destruction) and the Sādhyas (a class of gods), the god of fire, the moon-god and the sun-god will witness my immeasurable prowess even as they did the terrible prowess of Viṣṇu (as a dwarf in the form of measuring the entire universe in a couple of strides) in the enclosure where a sacrifice was being performed by the demon king, Bali.” (7)

स एवमुक्त्वा त्रिदशेन्द्रशत्रु- रापृच्छ राजानमदीनसत्त्वः ।
समारुरोहानिलतुल्यवेगं
रथं खरश्रेष्ठसमाधियुक्तम् ॥ ८ ॥

Having bragged as aforesaid, and taking leave of the king, that enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods), who was undepressed in spirit, duly ascended his chariot, swift as the wind, which was drawn by donkeys and was equipped with implements of war (in the shape of a bow, sword etc.). (8)

समास्थाय महातेजा रथं हरिरथोपमम् ।
जगाम सहसा तत्र यत्र युद्धमरिदमः ॥ ९ ॥

Duly taking his seat in the chariot, which resembled the chariot of Indra, Indrajit (the tamer of his enemies), who was endowed with extraordinary energy, precipitately sought the battlefield. (9)

तं प्रस्थितं महात्मानमनुजगमुर्महाबलाः ।
संहर्षमाणा बहवो धनुःप्रवरपाणयः ॥ १० ॥

Showing great enthusiasm, numerous ogres, who were endowed with extraordinary might and carried excellent bows in their hands, followed the gigantic prince, even as he departed. (10)

गजस्कन्धगताः केचित् केचित् परमवाजिभिः ।
व्याघ्रवृश्चिकमार्जारखरोष्ट्रैश्च भुजङ्गमैः ॥ ११ ॥
वराहैः श्वापदैः सिंहैर्जम्बुकैः पर्वतोपमैः ।
काकहंसमयूरैश्च राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ॥ १२ ॥

Some ogres of terrible prowess rode on the back of elephants, while others rode on the back of excellent horses, tigers, scorpions, cats, donkeys and camels as well as on (the back of) serpents, boars, beasts of prey such as lions, jackals as large as hills, as also on the back of crows, swans and peacocks. (11-12)

प्रासपट्टिशनिस्त्रिंशपरश्वधगदाधराः ।

भुशुण्डिमुद्रारायष्टिशतघ्नीपरिघायुधाः ॥ १३ ॥

They carried lances, sharp-edged spears, swords, axes and maces and were armed with Bhuṣuṇḍis (probably a kind of fire-arm), mallets, Āyaṣṭis, Śataghñis (a stone or cylindrical piece of wood studded with iron pikes) and Parighas (an iron bludgeon or club studded with iron). (13)

स शङ्खनिनदैः पूर्णेर्भेरीणां चापि निःस्वनैः ।

जगाम त्रिदशेन्द्रारिराजिं वेगेन वीर्यवान् ॥ १४ ॥

Accompanied by full blasts of conches as well as by the sounds of kettledrums, that valiant enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods) proceeded with all speed to the field of battle. (14)

स शङ्खशशिवर्णेन छत्रेण रिपुसूदनः ।

रराज प्रतिपूर्णेन नभश्चन्द्रमसा यथा ॥ १५ ॥

With his parasol white as conch and the moon, that destroyer of his enemies shone like the firmament with the full moon. (15)

वीज्यमानस्ततो वीरो हैमैर्हेमविभूषणः ।

चारुचामरमुख्यैश्च मुख्यः सर्वधनुष्मताम् ॥ १६ ॥

The hero, who was the foremost of all archers and was decked with gold ornaments, was being fanned at that time with the foremost of lovely whisks with handles of gold. (16)

स तु दृष्ट्वा विनिर्यान्तं बलेन महता वृतम् ।

राक्षसाधिपतिः श्रीमान् रावणः पुत्रमब्रवीत् ॥ १७ ॥

Seeing his son, Indrajit, sallying forth surrounded by a huge army, the glorious Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part spoke to him as follows: (17)

त्वमप्रतिरथः पुत्र त्वया वै वासवो जितः ।

किं पुनर्मानुषं धृष्यं निहनिष्यसि राघवम् ॥ १८ ॥

“There is no warrior who can stand as your rival, my son; by you Indra (the ruler of gods) was actually conquered. Much more will you (be able to) kill a mortal, Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who is subject to being assailed.” (18)

तथोक्तो राक्षसेन्द्रेण प्रत्यगृह्णामहाशिषः ।

ततस्त्विन्द्रजिता लङ्का सूर्यप्रतिमतेजसा ॥ १९ ॥

रराजाप्रतिवीर्येण द्यौरिवार्केण भास्वता ।

स सम्प्राप्य महातेजा युद्धभूमिमरिंदमः ॥ २० ॥

स्थापयामास रक्षांसि रथं प्रति समन्ततः ।

ततस्तु हुतभोक्तारं हुतभुक्सदृशप्रभः ॥ २१ ॥

जुहुवे राक्षसश्रेष्ठो विधिवन्मन्त्रसत्तमैः ।

स हविलाजसत्कारैर्माल्यगन्धपुरस्कृतैः ॥ २२ ॥

जुहुवे पावकं तत्र राक्षसेन्द्रः प्रतापवान् ।

शस्त्राणि शरपत्राणि समिधोऽथ बिभीतकाः ॥ २३ ॥

लोहितानि च वासांसि स्रुवं कार्ष्णायसं तथा ।

स तत्राग्निं समास्तीर्य शरपत्रैः सतोमरैः ॥ २४ ॥

छागस्य कृष्णवर्णस्य गलं जग्राह जीवतः ।

सकृदेव समिद्धस्य विधूमस्य महार्चिषः ॥ २५ ॥

बभूवुस्तानि लिङ्गानि विजयं यान्यदर्शयन् ।

प्रदक्षिणावर्तं शिखस्तप्तकाञ्चनसंनिभः ॥ २६ ॥

हविस्तत् प्रतिजग्राह पावकः स्वयमुत्थितः ।

सोऽस्त्रमाहारयामास ब्राह्ममस्त्रविशारदः ॥ २७ ॥

धनुश्चात्सर्यं चैव सर्वं तत्राभ्यमन्त्रयत् ।

तस्मिन्नाहूयमानेऽस्त्रे हूयमाने च पावके ।

सार्कग्रहेन्दुनक्षत्रं वितत्रास नभस्थलम् ॥ २८ ॥

Encouraged as aforesaid by the ruler of ogres, the prince gladly accepted his mighty blessings. Thereupon Lankā for its part shone with Indrajit, who vied with the sun in brilliance and who was matchless in valour, even as the firmament with the brilliant sun. Duly reaching the battlefield, Indrajit, the tamer of his foes, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, ranged the ogres around his chariot on all sides. Thereupon Indrajit, the foremost of ogres, who vied with the god of fire in brilliance, worshipped the fire according to the traditional rites, while reciting the best of Mantras (sacred texts). Having worshipped the sacred fire on the battlefield with offerings of parched grains of rice preceded by flowers and sandal-paste, that mighty ogre chief poured oblation into it. In that sacrificial performance weapons served the purpose of reeds (which are strewn about the fire to ward off evil forces), nay, chips of a Bibhītaka tree served as fuel for the sacrificial fire, again red pieces of cloth alone were used and the sacrificial ladle was made of iron. Duly strewing the fire there with reeds (in the form of other weapons) accompanied by lances, Indrajit elaped the neck of a live goat of dark hue (for offering it to the fire). From the fire, which was set ablaze by that offering having been thrown into it but once, and was free from smoke and had burst into mighty flames, appeared such signs as had betokened victory in the past. Risen into view, the god of fire, who shone brightly like refined gold and whose flames turned towards the right, accepted that offering in person. Indrajit, who was an adept in the use of mystic missiles, invoked the missile presided over by Brahmā, the creator, and charged the bow as well as his chariot and all with the invocatory spell on the field of battle. While that missile was being invoked and the sacrificial fire was being propitiated through oblations, the vault of heaven including the sun, the moon and other planets and lunar mansions shook with fear. (19—28)

स पावकं पावकदीप्ततेजा
हुत्वा महेन्द्रप्रतिमप्रभावः ।

सचापबाणासिरथाश्वसूतः

खेऽन्तर्दधेऽऽत्मानमचिन्त्यवीर्यः ॥ २९ ॥

Having propitiated the fire with offerings,

Indrajit, who was flaming with lustre like fire and vied with the mighty Indra, the ruler of gods, in might, and who was endowed with inconceivable prowess, hid himself from view in the sky with bow, arrows, sword, chariot, horses, charioteer and all. (29)

ततो ह्यरथाकीर्णं पताकाध्वजशोभितम् ।
निर्ययौ राक्षसबलं नर्दमानं युयुत्सया ॥ ३० ॥

Thereupon the army of ogres, which was crowded with horses and chariots and graced with pennants and flags, sallied forth roaring with a longing to fight. (30)

ते शरैर्बहुभिश्चित्रैस्तीक्ष्णवेगैरलंकृतैः ।
तोमरैरङ्कुशैश्चापि वानराञ्जघ्नुराहवे ॥ ३१ ॥

They began to strike the monkeys on the battlefield with many wonderful and ornamented arrows of great velocity, lances and goads, too. (31)

रावणिस्तु सुसंकुद्धस्तान् निरीक्ष्य निशाचरान् ।
हृष्टा भवन्तो युध्यन्तु वानराणां जिघांसया ॥ ३२ ॥

Keenly observing those prowlers of the night, Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, for his part, who was highly enraged, said to them, “Be of good cheer and fight with the intention of making short work of the monkeys.” (32)

ततस्ते राक्षसाः सर्वे गर्जन्तो जयकाङ्क्षिणः ।
अभ्यवर्षस्ततो घोरं वानरान् शरवृष्टिभिः ॥ ३३ ॥

Roaring and longing for a victory, all those ogres thereupon terribly covered the monkeys on all sides with hails of arrows. (33)

स तु नालीकनाराचैर्गदाभिर्मुसलैरपि ।
रक्षोभिः संवृतः संख्ये वानरान् विचकर्ष ह ॥ ३४ ॥

Remaining concealed from view by the ogres, Indrajit for his part began to destroy the monkeys on the battlefield with his Nālikas (broad-headed arrows), steel arrows, maces and clubs too: so the tradition goes. (34)

ते वध्यमानाः समरे वानराः पादपायुधाः ।
अभ्यवर्षन्त सहसा रावणिं शैलपादपैः ॥ ३५ ॥

While being struck on the battlefield by Indrajit, as aforesaid, all the monkeys, who were armed with trees, covered the son of Rāvaṇa all of a sudden (where he stood concealed and from where he discharged his arrows and other weapons) with crags and trees. (35)

इन्द्रजित् तु तदा क्रुद्धो महातेजा महाबलः ।
वानराणां शरीराणि व्यधमद् रावणात्मजः ॥ ३६ ॥

Seized with wrath, the exceptionally mighty Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, for his part,
who was endowed with extraordinary energy,
then began to tear into pieces the bodies of the monkeys. (36)

शरेणैकेन च हरीन् नव पञ्च च सप्त च ।
बिभेद समरे क्रुद्धो राक्षसान् सम्प्रहर्षयन् ॥ ३७ ॥

Nay, filled with rage, Indrajit pierced with a single arrow as many as nine, five and seven monkeys, respectively, on the field of battle, bringing excessive delight to the ogres. (37)

स शरैः सूर्यसंकाशैः शातकुम्भविभूषणैः ।
वानरान् समरे वीरः प्रमथाथ सुदुर्जयः ॥ ३८ ॥

The heroic Indrajit, who was exceedingly difficult to conquer, exterminated the monkeys on the field of battle with his arrows, which glittered like the sun and were decorated with gold. (38)

ते भिन्नगात्राः समरे वानराः शरपीडिताः ।
पेतुर्मथितसंकल्पाः सुरैरिव महासुराः ॥ ३९ ॥

Overwhelmed by the arrows, the aforesaid monkeys, whose limbs were pierced, and whose designs had been frustrated, fell like great demons oppressed by gods with their arrows. (39)

ते तपन्तमिवादित्यं घोरैर्बाणगभस्तिभिः ।
अभ्यधावन्त संक्रुद्धाः संयुगे वानरर्षभाः ॥ ४० ॥

Highly enraged, the said bulls among the monkeys, rushed on the field of battle in the direction of Indrajit, who was blazing like the sun with his rays in the form of arrows.

(40)

ततस्तु वानराः सर्वे भिन्नदेहा विचेतसः ।
व्यथिता विद्रवन्ति स्म रुधिरेण समुक्षिताः ॥ ४१ ॥

Bathed in blood, their bodies mutilated, nay, agonized and distressed, all the monkeys for their part thereupon stampeded. (41)

रामस्यार्थे पराक्रम्य वानरास्त्यक्तजीविताः ।
नर्दन्तस्तेऽनिवृत्तास्तु समरे सशिलायुधाः ॥ ४२ ॥

Having exhibited their prowess, the monkeys, who had staked their lives in the cause of Śrī Rāma, did not retrace their steps and kept roaring on the battlefield, armed with rocks. (42)

ते द्रुमैः पर्वताग्रैश्च शिलाभिश्च प्लवंगमाः ।
अभ्यवर्षन्त समरे रावणिं समवस्थिताः ॥ ४३ ॥

Remaining firm on the battlefield, the aforesaid monkeys began to cover the son of Rāvaṇa with trees, mountain peaks and rocks. (43)

तं द्रुमाणां शिलानां च वर्षं प्राणहरं महत् ।
व्यपोहत महातेजा रावणिः समितिंजयः ॥ ४४ ॥

Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, who was ever victorious in combat and was endowed with extraordinary energy, dispersed that mighty and deadly hail of trees and rocks. (44)

ततः पावकसंकाशैः शरैराशीविषोपमैः ।
वानराणामनीकानि बिभेद समरे प्रभुः ॥ ४५ ॥

The mighty ogre thereupon began to split the simian ranks on the battlefield with his arrows, which shone brightly as fire and resembled venomous serpents. (45)

अष्टादशशरैस्तीक्ष्णैः स विद्ध्वा गन्धमादनम् ।
विव्याध नवभिश्चैव नलं दूरादवस्थितम् ॥ ४६ ॥

Having pierced Gandhamādana with eighteen penetrating arrows, he struck Nala too, standing some way off, with nine others. (46)

सप्तभिस्तु महावीर्यो मैन्दं मर्मविदारणैः ।
पञ्चभिर्विशिखैश्चैव गजं विव्याध संयुगे ॥ ४७ ॥

Indrajit, who was endowed with extraordinary prowess, for his part assailed Mainda with seven shafts, which tore his vital parts and pierced Gaja on the battle-field with five. (47)

जाम्बवन्तं तु दशभिर्नीलं त्रिंशद्विरेव च ।
सुग्रीवमृषभं चैव सोऽङ्गदं द्विविदं तथा ॥ ४८ ॥
घोरैर्दत्तवैस्तीक्ष्णैर्निष्प्राणानकरोत् तदा ।
अन्यानपि तथा मुख्यान् वानरान् बहुभिः शरैः ॥ ४९ ॥
अर्दयामास संक्रुद्धः कालाग्रिरिव मूर्च्छितः ।
स शरैः सूर्यसंकाशैः सुमुक्तैः शीघ्रगामिभिः ॥ ५० ॥
वानराणामनीकानि निर्ममथ महारणे ।
आकुलां वानरीं सेनां शरजालेन पीडिताम् ॥ ५१ ॥
हृष्टः स परया प्रीत्या ददर्श क्षतजोक्षिताम् ।
पुनरेव महातेजा राक्षसेन्द्रात्मजो बली ॥ ५२ ॥

He for his part struck Jāmbavān with ten and Nila with thirty arrows; and with dreadful and sharp arrows, on which a boon of infallibility had been bestowed by Brahmā he forthwith rendered lifeless as it were Sugrīva as well as R̥ṣabha, Aṅgada and Dwivida. Infuriated like the swollen fire of universal destruction, he tormented likewise with many shafts other leading monkeys too. With his swift-going arrows shot with skill and shining brightly like the sun he thoroughly agitated the simian ranks in that major conflict. Feeling rejoiced, that mighty son of the king of ogres, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, beheld once more with supreme gratification the army of monkeys overwhelmed with a rain of arrows and, therefore, agitated and bathed in blood. (48—52)

संसृज्य बाणवर्षं च शस्त्रवर्षं च दारुणम् ।
ममर्दं वानरानीकं परितस्त्विन्द्रजिद् बली ॥ ५३ ॥

Pouring a hail of shafts and a cruel shower of missiles, the mighty Indrajit crushed the army of monkeys on all sides. (53)

स्वसैन्यमुत्सृज्य समेत्य तूर्णं
महाहवे वानरवाहिनीषु ।
अदृश्यमानः शरजालमुग्रं
ववर्ष नीलाम्बुधरो यथाम्बु ॥ ५४ ॥

Leaving the part of space above his own army and moving speedily to the space above the monkey forces in that major conflict while remaining still invisible, Indrajit let fall a formidable hail of shafts even as a dark rainy cloud would pour water. (54)

ते शक्रजिह्वाणविशीर्णदेहा
मायाहता विस्वरमुन्नदन्तः ।
रणे निपेतुर्ह्रयोऽद्रिकल्पा
यथेन्द्रवज्राभिहता नगेन्द्राः ॥ ५५ ॥

Victims of his conjuring tricks, their bodies torn into pieces by the arrows of Indrajit, the aforesaid monkeys, who resembled mountains in size, fell in the fray shrieking in discordant tones like lordly mountains struck by the thunderbolt of Indra, the ruler of gods. (55)

ते केवलं संददृशुः शिताग्रान्
बाणान् रणे वानरवाहिनीषु ।
मायाविगूढं च सुरेन्द्रशत्रुं
न चात्र तं राक्षसमप्यपश्यन् ॥ ५६ ॥

They perceived only sharp-pointed shafts descending in the course of the conflict on the simian ranks. They could not, however, see there that ogre, the enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods), who remained fully concealed by his magical power. (56)

ततः स रक्षोधिपतिर्महात्मा
सर्वा दिशो बाणगणैः शिताग्रैः ।
प्रच्छादयामास रविप्रकाशै-
र्विदारयामास च वानरेन्द्रान् ॥ ५७ ॥

Thereupon that gigantic ruler of ogres thickly covered all the four quarters with volleys of his sharp-pointed shafts, shining like the sun, and destroyed the monkey chiefs. (57)

स शूलनिस्त्रिंशपरश्वधानि
व्याविद्धदीप्तानलसप्रभाणि ।
सविस्फुलिङ्गोज्ज्वलपावकानि
ववर्ष तीव्रं प्लवगेन्द्रसैन्ये ॥ ५८ ॥

He let fall on the army of monkey chiefs a violent shower of pikes, swords and axes, shining like a swollen and flaming fire and shooting forth incandescent flames with sparks. (58)

ततो ज्वलनसंकाशैर्बाणैर्वानरयूथपाः ।
ताडिताः शक्रजिह्वाणैः प्रफुल्ला इव किंशुकाः ॥ ५९ ॥

Struck with the arrows of Indrajit—arrows which shone brightly as fire—the monkey generals thereupon looked like Kimśuka trees bearing crimson flowers. (59)

तेऽन्योन्यमभिसर्पन्तो निनदन्तश्च विस्वरम् ।
राक्षसेन्द्रास्त्रनिर्भिन्ना निपेतुर्वानरर्षभाः ॥ ६० ॥

Gliding towards one another when pierced by the missiles of Indrajit, the ruler of ogres, the aforesaid bulls among monkeys fell down screaming in discordant tones. (60)

उदीक्षमाणा गगनं केचिन्नेत्रेषु ताडिताः ।
शरैर्विविशुरन्योन्यं पेतुश्च जगतीतले ॥ ६१ ॥

Struck with arrows in their eyes while looking up towards the sky, some monkeys clasped one another and fell down on the earth's surface. (61)

हनूमन्तं च सुग्रीवमङ्गदं गन्धमादनम् ।
जाम्बवन्तं सुषेणं च वेगदर्शिनमेव च ॥ ६२ ॥
मैन्दं च द्विविदं नीलं गवाक्षं गवयं तथा ।
केसरिं हरिलोमानं विद्युददंष्ट्रं च वानरम् ॥ ६३ ॥
सूर्याननं ज्योतिर्मुखं तथा दधिमुखं हरिम् ।
पावकाक्षं नलं चैव कुमुदं चैव वानरम् ॥ ६४ ॥
प्रासैः शूलैः शितैर्बाणैरिन्द्रजिन्मन्त्रसंहितैः ।
विव्याध हरिशार्दूलान् सर्वास्तान् राक्षसोत्तमः ॥ ६५ ॥

With lances, pikes and sharp arrows charged with sacred formula (Mantras), Indrajit, the foremost of ogres, pierced all the well-known tigers among monkeys, viz., Hanumān and Sugrīva, Aṅgada, Gandhamādana, Jāmbavān and Suṣeṇa as well as Vegadarśi and Mainda, Dwivida, Nīla, Gavākṣa, Gavaya and Kesari, Harilomā and the monkey Vidyuddaṁṣṭra, Sūryānana, Jyotirmukha, and the monkey Dadhimukha, Pāvakākṣa as also Nala as well as the monkey Kumuda. (62—65)

स वै गदाभिर्हरियूथमुख्यान्
निर्भिद्य बाणैस्तपनीयवर्णैः ।
ववर्ष रामं शरवृष्टिजालैः
सलक्ष्मणं भास्कररश्मिकल्पैः ॥ ६६ ॥

Having wounded the leaders of monkey hosts with his maces and arrows of a golden hue, he actually covered Śrī Rāma as well as Lakṣmaṇa with showers of shafts shining like sunbeams. (66)

स बाणवर्षैरभिवृष्यमाणो
धारानिपातानिव तानचिन्त्य ।
समीक्षमाणः परमाद्भुतश्री-
रामस्तदा लक्ष्मणमित्युवाच ॥ ६७ ॥

Not minding the arrows any more than torrents of rain, while being covered with showers of shafts, and gazing on Lakṣmaṇa, the celebrated Śrī Rāma, who was shining with a prodigious splendour, spoke as follows to him at that moment: (67)

असौ पुनर्लक्ष्मण राक्षसेन्द्रो
ब्रह्मास्त्रमाश्रित्य सुरेन्द्रशत्रुः ।
निपातयित्वा हरिसैन्यमस्मान्-
शितैः शरैरर्दयति प्रसक्तम् ॥ ६८ ॥

“Falling back upon the missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator), which has been secured by him, O Lakṣmaṇa, and striking down the army of monkeys, the yonder prince of ogres, an avowed enemy of Indra (the ruler of gods), is now tormenting us with his sharp arrows. (68)

स्वयंभुवा दत्तवरो महात्मा
समाहितोऽन्तर्हितभीमकायः ।
कथं नु शक्यो युधि नष्टदेहो
निहन्तुमद्येन्द्रजिदुद्यतास्त्रः ॥ ६९ ॥

“How can the highly intelligent Indrajit—on whom a boon of invincibility has been bestowed by Brahmā (the self-born creator), nay, who is steadfast of purpose and has concealed his terrible form and who stands with his weapons uplifted, even though his body is invisible—be struck down in combat today? (69)

मन्ये स्वयंभूर्भगवानचिन्त्य-स्तस्यैतदस्त्रं प्रभवश्च योऽस्य ।
बाणावपातं त्वमिहाद्य धीमन्
मया सहाव्यग्रमनाः सहस्व ॥ ७० ॥

“I know the self-born Lord Brahmā—who is the source (the creator) of this universe—is inconceivable in his essence and the missile used is presided over by him. Therefore, remaining undisturbed in mind, O wise one, endure you with me today the hail of arrows on this spot. (70)

प्रच्छादयत्येष हि राक्षसेन्द्रः
सर्वा दिशः सायकवृष्टिजालैः ।
एतच्च सर्वं पतिताग्रशूरं
न भ्राजते वानरराजसैन्यम् ॥ ७१ ॥

“Indeed this prince of ogres is thickly covering all the four quarters with the showers of his shafts. And this entire army of Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, whose leading heroes have fallen, looks charming no more. (71)

आवां तु दृष्ट्वा पतितौ विसंजौ
निवृत्तयुद्धौ हतहर्षरोषौ ।
ध्रुवं प्रवेक्ष्यत्यमराविवास-
मसौ समासाद्य रणाग्रलक्ष्मीम् ॥ ७२ ॥

“Finding us fallen unconscious and bereft of joy and anger, having desisted from fighting, nay, winning laurels in combat, he will surely return to Laṅkā, the abode of the enemies of gods.” (72)

ततस्तु ताविन्द्रजितोऽस्त्रजालै- र्बभूवतुस्तत्र तदा विशस्तौ ।
स चापि तौ तत्र विषादयित्वा
ननाद हर्षाद् युधि राक्षसेन्द्रः ॥ ७३ ॥

Thereupon the two princes for their part got grievously hurt on the battlefield by the missiles of Indrajit on that occasion. And, having reduced the two brothers to straits in that struggle, that prince of ogres shouted for joy. (73)

ततस्तदा वानरसैन्यमेवं
रामं च संख्ये सह लक्ष्मणेन ।
विषादयित्वा सहसा विवेश
पुरीं दशग्रीवभुजाभिगुप्ताम् ।
संस्तूयमानः स तु यातुधानैः
पित्रे च सर्वं हृषितोऽभ्युवाच ॥ ७४ ॥

Having prostrated in combat as aforesaid the army of monkeys as well as Śrī Rāma alongwith Lakṣmaṇa on that occasion, Indrajit thereupon withdrew all at once to the city protected by the arms of Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster. Nay, filled with delight while being duly extolled by ogres, he for his part related everything in extenso to his father. (74)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रिसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुःसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXIV

Under instructions from Jāmbavān, the lord of bears, Hanumān fetched a hillock covered with celestial herbs; and inhaling the odour of those herbs, Śrī Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa and all the monkeys regained their normal health

तयोस्तदासादितयो रणाग्रे
मुमोह सैन्यं हरियूथपानाम् ।
सुग्रीवनीलाङ्गदजाम्बवन्तो
न चापि किञ्चित् प्रतिपेदिरे ते ॥ १ ॥

On the two brothers having been knocked down senseless in the forefront of battle, the army of the monkey troop-commanders got nonplussed. Nor could the celebrated Sugrīva, Nila, Aṅgada and Jāmbavān do anything. (1)

ततो विषण्णं समवेक्ष्य सर्वं
विभीषणो बुद्धिमतां वरिष्ठः ।
उवाच शाखामृगराजवीरा-
नाश्वासयन्प्रतिमैर्वचोभिः ॥ २ ॥

Observing everyone despondent,
Vibhīṣaṇa, the foremost of the wise, thereupon spoke as follows, reassuring the champions of Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, with his incomparable words: (2)

मा भैष्ट नास्त्यत्र विषादकालो
यदार्यपुत्रौ ह्यवशौ विषण्णौ ।
स्वयंभुवो वाक्यमथोद्वहन्तौ
यत्सादिताविन्द्रजितास्त्रजालैः ॥ ३ ॥

“Do not be afraid, there is no occasion for despondency at this moment;
because the two sons of Daśaratha are actually feeling helpless and afflicted and have allowed themselves to be overwhelmed by the missiles of Indrajit, honouring as they did the spell sacred to the self-born creator, with which the missile presided over by him has been invoked. (3)

तस्मै तु दत्तं परमास्त्रमेतत्
स्वयंभुवा ब्राह्मममोघवीर्यम् ।
तन्मानयन्तौ युधि राजपुत्रौ
निपातितौ कोऽत्र विषादकालः ॥ ४ ॥

“This supreme missile of unfailing potency presided over by Brahmā has for its part been bestowed on him (Indrajit) by the self-born creator himself and the two princes have been overthrown in combat, honouring as they did the aforesaid missile.
What occasion is there for despondency in this event?” (4)

ब्राह्ममस्त्रं ततो धीमान् मानयित्वा तु मारुतिः ।
विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा हनूमानिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ५ ॥

Hearing the speech of Vibhīṣaṇa and paying honour to the missile presided over by Brahmā, the creator, the sagacious Hanumān, son of the wind-god, for his part then spoke as follows: (5)

अस्मिन्नस्त्रहते सैन्ये वानराणां तरस्विनाम् ।
यो यो धारयते प्राणांस्तं तमाश्वासयावहे ॥ ६ ॥

“Let us two restore to confidence whosoever is still breathing in this army of powerful monkeys, which has been struck down by the missile shot by Indrajit.” (6)

तावुभौ युगपद् वीरौ हनूमद्राक्षसोत्तमौ ।
उल्काहस्तौ तदा रात्रौ रणशीर्षे विचेरतुः ॥ ७ ॥

Torch in hand, both the aforesaid heroes, Hanumān alongwith Vibhīṣaṇa, the foremost ogre, then began to range the battlefield together at night. (7)

भिन्नलाङ्गूलहस्तोरुपादाङ्गुलिशिरोधरैः ।
 स्रवद्भिः क्षतजं गात्रैः प्रस्रवद्भिः समन्ततः ॥ ८ ॥
 पतितैः पर्वताकारैर्वानरैरभिसंवृताम् ।
 शस्त्रैश्च पतितैर्दीमैर्ददृशाते वसुंधराम् ॥ ९ ॥

The two warriors saw the earth covered all over with monkeys resembling mountains—who lay fallen on earth, letting out blood from their bodies whose tails, hands, thighs, feet, fingers and necks had been severed, and who were discharging urine all round—as well as with flaming weapons that had fallen. (8-9)

सुग्रीवमङ्गदं नीलं शरभं गन्धमादनम् ।
 जाम्बवन्तं सुषेणं च वेगदर्शिनमेव च ॥ १० ॥
 मैन्दं नलं ज्योतिर्मुखं द्विविदं चापि वानरम् ।
 विभीषणो हनूमांश्च ददृशाते हतान् रणे ॥ ११ ॥

Vibhīṣaṇa and Hanumān saw struck down on the battlefield Sugrīva, Aṅgada, Nila, Śarabha, Gandhamādana, Jāmbavān and Suṣeṇa as well as Vegadarśī, Mainda, Nala, Jyotirmukha and the monkey Dwivida too. (10-11)

सप्तषष्टिर्हताः कोट्यो वानराणां तरस्विनाम् ।
 अह्नः पञ्चमशेषेण वल्लभेन स्वयंभुवः ॥ १२ ॥

By the fifth and last* period of the day (viz., evening) sixty-seven crores of powerful monkeys were laid prostrate by the missile cherished by Brahmā (the self-born creator). (12)

सागरौघनिभं भीमं दृष्ट्वा बाणार्दितं बलम् ।
 मार्गते जाम्बवन्तं च हनूमान् सविभीषणः ॥ १३ ॥

Looking on the formidable army—which resembled the tide of a sea—overwhelmed by the shafts of Indrajit, Hanumān, accompanied by Vibhīṣaṇa, began to search for Jāmbavān. (13)

स्वभावजरया युक्तं वृद्धं शरशतैश्चितम् ।
 प्रजापतिसुतं वीरं शाम्यन्तमिव पावकम् ॥ १४ ॥
 दृष्ट्वा समभिसंक्रम्य पौलस्त्यो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
 कच्चिदार्य शरैस्तीक्ष्णैर्न प्राणा ध्वंसितास्तव ॥ १५ ॥

Seeing the heroic Jāmbavān, a son of Brahmā, the lord of creation—who was naturally weighed down by age and was advanced in wisdom, too, nay, who was covered with hundreds of shafts and looked like a dying fire—and duly approaching him, Vibhīṣaṇa (a scion of Pulasti, one of the mind-born sons of Brahmā), spoke to him as follows: “I hope, O venerable Sir, that your life has not been put an end to by the penetrating shafts shot by Indrajit.” (14-15)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा जाम्बवानृक्षपुङ्गवः ।
 कृच्छ्रादभ्युद्गिरन् वाक्यमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ १६ ॥

Hearing the question of Vibhīṣaṇa and uttering words with difficulty, Jāmbavān, the foremost of the bears, replied as follows: (16)

नैर्ऋतेन्द्र महावीर्यं स्वरेण त्वाभिलक्ष्ये ।
 विद्धगात्रः शितैर्बाणैर्न त्वां पश्यामि चक्षुषा ॥ १७ ॥

“O Vibhīṣaṇa (a ruler of ogres), who are endowed with extraordinary prowess, I recognize you by your voice alone. Pierced all over with sharp arrows, I no longer see you with my eyes. (17)

अञ्जना सुप्रजा येन मातरिश्वा च सुव्रत ।
 हनूमान् वानरश्रेष्ठः प्राणान् धारयते क्वचित् ॥ १८ ॥

“Does Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, because of whom Añjanā, his mother, and the wind-god, his procreator, are recognized as blessed parents, still survive anywhere, O pious, one?” (18)

* The twelve hours of the day were commonly divided into five parts consisting of six Ghaṭikās (or two hours and twenty-four minutes) each. They were known by the names of Prātaḥ (morning), Sangave (forenoon), Madhyāhṇa (Midday), Aparāhṇa (afternoon) and Sāyāhṇa (evening).

श्रुत्वा जाम्बवतो वाक्यमुवाचेदं विभीषणः ।
आर्यपुत्रावतिक्रम्य कस्मात् पृच्छसि मारुतिम् ॥ १९ ॥

Hearing the query of Jāmbavān, Vibhīṣaṇa made the following reply: "Passing over the two sons of Daśaratha, wherefore do you inquire about Hanumān (son of the wind-god)? (19)

नैव राजनि सुग्रीवे नाङ्गदे नापि राघवे ।
आर्य संदर्शितः स्नेहो यथा वायुसुते परः ॥ २० ॥

"The way in which the utmost affection has been clearly manifested by you for Hanumān, son of the wind-god, has not at all been shown for King Sugrīva, nor for Aṅgada, nor even for Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu." (20)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा जाम्बवान् वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
शृणु नैर्ऋतशार्दूल यस्मात् पृच्छामि मारुतिम् ॥ २१ ॥

Hearing the observation of Vibhīṣaṇa, Jāmbavān replied as follows: "Listen, O tiger among the ogres (lit, the progeny of Nirṛti), why I inquire solely about Hanumān, son of the wind-god: (21)

अस्मिञ्जीवति वीरे तु हतमप्यहतं बलम् ।
हनूमत्युज्झितप्राणे जीवन्तोऽपि मृता वयम् ॥ २२ ॥

"If this hero, Hanumān, for his part is still breathing, our army is intact, even though destroyed. If Hanumān, on the other hand, has given up the ghost, we are all dead, even though living. (22)

धरते मारुतिस्तात मारुतप्रतिमो यदि ।
वैश्वानरसमो वीर्ये जीविताशा ततो भवेत् ॥ २३ ॥

"If Hanumān, son of the wind-god, a compeer of the wind-god, who vies with the god of fire in prowess, is still living, O dear one, there may be some hope of our survival in that case." (23)

ततो वृद्धमुपागम्य विनयेनाभ्यवादयत् ।
गृह्य जाम्बवतः पादौ हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ॥ २४ ॥

Approaching the aged bear and clasping

the feet of Jāmbavān, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, thereupon greeted him with humility. (24)

श्रुत्वा हनूमतो वाक्यं तदा विव्यथितेन्द्रियः ।
पुनर्जातमिवात्मानं मन्यते स्मर्क्षपुङ्गवः ॥ २५ ॥

Hearing the words of Hanumān, Jāmbavān, a bull among the bears, whose mind was sore afflicted through agony caused by his wounds, thought himself as though born again. (25)

ततोऽब्रवीन्महातेजा हनूमन्तं स जाम्बवान् ।
आगच्छ हरिशार्दूल वानरांस्त्रातुमर्हसि ॥ २६ ॥

Thereupon the aforesaid Jāmbavān, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, spoke as follows to Hanumān: "Come along, O tiger among the monkeys! You ought to deliver the monkeys. (26)

नान्यो विक्रमपर्याप्तस्त्वमेषां परमः सखा ।
त्वत्पराक्रमकालोऽयं नान्यं पश्यामि कञ्चन ॥ २७ ॥

"None other than you is consummate in prowess. Moreover, you are the greatest friend of the monkeys. This is the time for exhibiting your prowess and I see no one else capable of doing that. (27)

ऋक्षवानरवीराणामनीकानि प्रहर्षय ।
विशलयौ कुरु चाप्येतौ सादितौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ २८ ॥

"Bring excessive joy to the ranks of the champions among the bears and monkeys. And also heal the yonder Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, who are lying wounded of their arrow-wounds. (28)

गत्वा परममध्वानमुपर्युपरि सागरम् ।
हिमवन्तं नगश्रेष्ठं हनूमन् गन्तुमर्हसि ॥ २९ ॥

"Covering a long distance over the sea, O Hanumān, you ought to proceed to the Himālaya mountain, the highest of all mountains. (29)

ततः काञ्चनमत्युच्चमृषभं पर्वतोत्तमम् ।
कैलासशिखरं चात्र द्रक्ष्यस्यरिनिषूदन ॥ ३० ॥

“From that mountain you will be able to see the golden and very lofty R̥ṣabha mountain, the foremost of mountains, and (climbing) on that mountain you will be able to behold the peak of Mount Kailāsa, O exterminator of your enemies! (30)

तयोः शिखरयोर्मध्ये प्रदीप्तमतुलप्रभम् ।
सर्वौषधियुतं वीर द्रक्ष्यस्योषधिपर्वतम् ॥ ३१ ॥

“Between the two aforesaid peaks, O gallant monkey, you will be able to perceive a flaming mountain covered with medicinal herbs, casting a matchless splendour and abounding in all kinds of herbs. (31)

तस्य वानरशार्दूल चतस्रो मूर्ध्नि सम्भवाः ।
द्रक्ष्यस्योषधयो दीप्ता दीपयन्तीर्दिशो दश ॥ ३२ ॥
मृतसञ्जीवनीं चैव विशल्यकरणीमपि ।
सुवर्णकरणीं चैव संधानीं च महौषधीम् ॥ ३३ ॥

“Growing on the summit of that mountain, O tiger among monkeys, you will discover four flaming herbs illuminating all the ten directions, viz., (1) Mṛtasamjivani (capable of restoring the dead to life) and also (2) Viśalyakaraṇi (capable of extracting weapons and healing all wounds inflicted by weapons), as well as (3) Suvarṇakaraṇi (restoring the body to its original complexion) and (4) the great herb Sandhāni (capable of joining severed limbs or fractured bones). (32-33)

ताः सर्वा हनुमन् गृह्य क्षिप्रमागन्तुमर्हसि ।
आश्वासय हरीन् प्राणैर्यौज्य गन्धवहात्मज ॥ ३४ ॥

“Taking all the four aforesaid herbs, O Hanumān, you ought to come back with all speed. Nay, reassure the monkeys after uniting them back with life, O offspring of the wind-god!” (34)

श्रुत्वा जाम्बवतो वाक्यं हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
आपूर्यत बलोद्धर्षैर्वायुवैरिवार्षावः ॥ ३५ ॥

Hearing the advice of Jāmbavān, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, was infused with tremendous power even as the ocean heaves with the force of the wind. (35)

स पर्वततटाग्रस्थः पीडयन् पर्वतोत्तमम् ।
हनूमान् दृश्यते वीरो द्वितीय इव पर्वतः ॥ ३६ ॥

Standing on the summit of the Trikūṭa mountain, pressing the foremost of mountains under his feet, the aforesaid hero, Hanumān, looked like a second mountain. (36)

हरिपादविनिर्भग्नो निषसाद स पर्वतः ।
न शशाक तदात्मानं वोढुं भृशनिपीडितः ॥ ३७ ॥

Trodden down by the monkey's feet, the said mountain sank. Nay, violently pressed by them, it could no longer stand its weight. (37)

तस्य पेतुर्नगा भूमौ हरिवेगाच्च जज्वलुः ।
शृङ्गाणि च व्यकीर्यन्त पीडितस्य हनूमता ॥ ३८ ॥

The trees standing on the mountain pressed by Hanumān fell to the ground, while some caught fire due to the impetuosity of the monkey, and its peaks too got shattered. (38)

तस्मिन् सम्पीड्यमाने तु भग्नद्रुमशिलातले ।
न शेकुर्वानराः स्थातुं घूर्णमाने नगोत्तमे ॥ ३९ ॥

The monkeys for their part could no longer stand on that prince of mountains, which began to reel while being pressed hard by Hanumān so that the trees standing on it as well as its rocks began to be shattered. (39)

सा घूर्णितमहाद्वारा प्रभग्नगृहगोपुरा ।
लङ्का त्रासाकुला रात्रौ प्रनृत्तेवाभवत् तदा ॥ ४० ॥

Stricken with panic, the city of Lāṅkā, whose mighty gates were shaken and whose dwellings and main gates were shattered, appeared to be dancing at night on that occasion. (40)

पृथिवीधरसंकाशो निपीड्य पृथिवीधरम् ।
पृथिवीं क्षोभयामास सार्णावां मारुतात्मजः ॥ ४१ ॥

Pressing the mountain (lit., the support of the earth) hard under his feet, Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god), who resembled a mountain himself, caused the earth with its oceans to quake. (41)

आरुरोह तदा तस्माद्धरिर्मलयपर्वतम् ।
मेरुमन्दरसंकाशं नानाप्रस्त्रवणाकुलम् ॥ ४२ ॥
नानाद्रुमलताकीर्णं विकासिकमलोत्पलम् ।
सेवितं देवगन्धर्वैः षष्टियोजनमुच्छ्रितम् ॥ ४३ ॥
विद्याधरैर्मुनिगणैरप्सरोगैर्भिर्निषेवितम् ।
नानामृगगणाकीर्णं बहुकन्दरशोभितम् ॥ ४४ ॥

From that mountain the monkey then sprang to the Malaya mountain, which rose like the Meru and Mandara mountains and was thickly set with various springs, which was replete with trees and climbers of every description, abounded in blossoming lotuses and lilies, was frequented by gods and Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and was sixty Yojanas (or four hundred and eighty miles) high, which was visited by Vidyādhara (heavenly artistes) celestial nymphs and hosts of hermits, was crowded with herds of deer of every species and adorned with numerous caves. (42—44)

सर्वानाकुलयंस्तत्र यक्षगन्धर्वकिन्नरान् ।
हनूमान् मेघसंकाशो ववृधे मारुतात्मजः ॥ ४५ ॥

Throwing into confusion all the Yakṣas (a class of demigods), Gandharvas and Kinnaras (another class of demigods credited with a human head and the form of a horse) living there, Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, who looked like a cloud, grew in size. (45)

पद्भ्यां तु शैलमापीड्य वडवामुखवन्मुखम् ।
विवृत्योग्रं ननादोच्चैस्त्रासयन् रजनीचरान् ॥ ४६ ॥

Pressing the mountain fully with his feet and opening his mouth, which shone like a submarine fire, the monkey for his part fearfully roared in order to strike terror in the prowlers of the night. (46)

तस्य नानद्यमानस्य श्रुत्वा निनदमुत्तमम् ।
लङ्कास्था राक्षसव्याघ्रा न शेकुः स्पन्दितुं क्वचित् ॥ ४७ ॥

Hearing the formidable roar of the thundering monkey, the very tigers among the ogres dwelling in Laṅkā could not stir anywhere. (47)

नमस्कृत्वा समुद्राय मारुतिर्भीमविक्रमः ।
राघवार्थं परं कर्म समीहत परंतपः ॥ ४८ ॥

Bowing to the sea-god, Hanumān (son of the wind-god) of redoubtable prowess, the scourge of his enemies, made up his mind to embark on a great undertaking for the sake of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (48)

स पुच्छमुद्यम्य भुजङ्गकल्पं
विनम्य पृष्ठं श्रवणे निकुच्य ।
विवृत्य वक्त्रं वडवामुखाभ-
मापुप्लुवे व्योम्नि स चण्डवेगः ॥ ४९ ॥

Raising his tail resembling a serpent, depressing his back, nay, contracting his ears and opening his mouth, which shone like a submarine fire, Hanumān sprang into the air with a terrible bound. (49)

स वृक्षखण्डांस्तरसा जहार
शैलान् शिलाः प्राकृतवानरांश्च ।
बाहूरुवेगोद्गतसम्प्रणुना-
स्ते क्षीणवेगाः सलिले निपेतुः ॥ ५० ॥

He drew with him in his impetuosity clumps of trees, crags and rocks as well as ordinary monkeys inhabiting the mountain. Uprooted and borne away by the movement of his arms and thighs, they fell into the water when their velocity had diminished. (50)

स तौ प्रसार्योरगभोगकल्पौ
भुजौ भुजंगारिनिकाशवीर्यः ।
जगाम शैलं नगराजमग्रं
दिशः प्रकर्षन्निव वायुसूनुः ॥ ५१ ॥

Stretching his well-known arms, resembling the coils of serpents, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, who vied with Garuḍa (an enemy of serpents) in prowess, made for the Himālaya mountain, the king of mountains, the highest mountain, drawing away the four quarters, as it were. (51)

स सागरं घूर्णितवीचिमालं
तदम्भसा भ्रामितसर्वसत्त्वम् ।
समीक्षमाणः सहसा जगाम
चक्रं यथा विष्णुकराग्रमुक्तम् ॥ ५२ ॥

Gazing on the sea, whose waves alongwith its water were made to revolve and all whose creatures were caused to whirl round by the wind generated by his movement), Hanumān shot forth like the discus discharged by the fingers of Lord Viṣṇu. (52)

स पर्वतान् पक्षिगणान् सरांसि
नदीस्तटाकानि पुरोत्तमानि ।
स्फीताञ्जनांस्तानपि सम्प्रवीक्ष्य
जगाम वेगात् पितृतुल्यवेगः ॥ ५३ ॥

Surveying mountains, flocks of birds, lakes, rivers, ponds, the foremost of cities as also the well-known and prosperous territories, the monkey, who vied with his father in swiftness, sped forth with all speed. (53)

आदित्यपथमाश्रित्य जगाम स गतश्रमः ।
हनूमांस्त्वरितो वीरः पितुस्तुल्यपराक्रमः ॥ ५४ ॥

The celebrated and heroic Hanumān, who was a match for his father, the wind-god, in prowess, coursed hastily and unweariedly through the heavens (lit., the orbit of the sun). (54)

जवेन महता युक्तो मारुतिर्वातरंहसा ।
जगाम हरिशार्दूलो दिशः शब्देन नादयन् ॥ ५५ ॥

Full of great speed, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, a tiger among the monkeys, proceeded with the speed of the wind-god, making the quarters resound with his roar. (55)

स्मरञ्जाम्बवतो वाक्यं मारुतिर्भीमविक्रमः ।
ददर्श सहसा चापि हिमवन्तं महाकपिः ॥ ५६ ॥

Recollecting the admonition of Jāmbavān, the great monkey, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, of redoubtable prowess suddenly sighted the Himālaya mountain too. (56)

नानाप्रस्रवणोपेतं बहुकन्दरनिर्झरम् ।
श्वेताभ्रचयसंकाशैः शिखरैश्चारुदर्शनैः ।
शोभितं विविधैर्वृक्षैरगमत् पर्वतोत्तमम् ॥ ५७ ॥

He forthwith reached the foremost of mountains, which was adorned with springs of every description, consisted of many caves and cascades and was graced with peaks which were lovely to behold and looked like masses of white clouds, as well as with trees of every species. (57)

स तं समासाद्य महानगेन्द्र-मतिप्रवृद्धोत्तमहेमशृङ्गम् ।
ददर्श पुण्यानि महाश्रमाणि
सुरर्षिसङ्घोत्तमसेवितानि ॥ ५८ ॥

Duly reaching that mighty lord of mountains with much elevated excellent golden peaks, the monkey beheld holy and extensive hermitages frequented by eminent hosts of celestial sages. (58)

स ब्रह्मकोशं रजतालयं च
शक्रालयं रुद्रशरप्रमोक्षम् ।
हयाननं ब्रह्मशिरश्च दीप्तं
ददर्श वैवस्वतकिंकरांश्च ॥ ५९ ॥

He saw there the seat of Hiraṇyagarbha (Brahmā) as well as the abode of Rajatanābha (another form of Brahmā), the abode of Indra (the ruler of gods), the spot from which Rudra (the god of destruction) is believed to have discharged an arrow (at the city of Tripura), the abode of Lord Hayagrīva (a manifestation of Lord Viṣṇu with the neck of a horse) as also the blazing abode of the deity presiding over Brahmāstra

(the missile presided over by Brahmā) as well as the servants of Yama, son of the sun-god. (59)

वह्म्यालयं वैश्रवणालयं च
सूर्यप्रभं सूर्यनिबन्धनं च ।
ब्रह्मालयं शङ्करकार्मुकं च
ददर्श नाभिं च वसुन्धरायाः ॥ ६० ॥

He also beheld the abode of Agni (the god of fire), the abode of Kubera (son of sage Viśravā) shining like the sun, the spot where the sun was tied down (for being scrapped by Viśwakarmā, the craftsman of gods, for the satisfaction of his wife, Chāyā), the abode of the four-faced Brahmā, the creator, the abode of the bow belonging to Lord Śiva as well as the navel of the earth (containing the hole through which one can enter Pātāla, the nethermost subterranean region). (60)

कैलासमग्र्यं हिमवच्छिलां च
तं वै वृषं काञ्चनशैलमग्र्यम् ।
प्रदीप्तसर्वौषधिसम्प्रदीप्तं
ददर्श सर्वौषधिपर्वतेन्द्रम् ॥ ६१ ॥

He further beheld the excellent mountain Kailāsa (the abode of Lord Śiva), Ugra (the mighty Lord Śiva) as well as the rock of the Himālaya mountain (on which Lord Śiva is believed to have practised austerities and abstract meditation), the well-known bull (the transport of Lord Śiva) and the lofty golden mountain, Rṣabha, and the lord of mountains on which all the simples grew and which was highly illumined by all flaming herbs. (61)

स तं समीक्ष्यानलराशिदीप्तं
विसिस्मिये वासवदूतसूनुः ।
आप्लुत्य तं चौषधिपर्वतेन्द्रं
तत्रौषधीनां विचयं चकार ॥ ६२ ॥

Hanumān (son of the wind-god, a messenger of Indra) was astonished to gaze on that mountain, blazing like a collection of fires, and bounding to that lord of mountains, rich in medicinal herbs, began to search for the herbs, described by Jāmbavān, there. (62)

स योजनसहस्राणि समतीत्य महाकपिः ।
दिव्यौषधिधरं शैलं व्यचरन्मारुतात्मजः ॥ ६३ ॥

Having covered a distance of thousands of Yojanas in order to reach the place, that mighty monkey, Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god) began to range the mountain bearing celestial herbs on its bosom. (63)

महौषध्यस्ततः सर्वास्तस्मिन् पर्वतसप्तमे ।
विज्ञायार्थिनमायान्तं ततो जग्मुर्दर्शनम् ॥ ६४ ॥

Perceiving a seeker coming, all the sovereign herbs growing on that prince of mountains thereupon disappeared from the view of Hanumān. (64)

स ता महात्मा हनुमानपश्यं- श्लुकोप रोषाच्च भृशं ननाद ।
अमृष्यमाणोऽग्निसमानचक्षु-
र्महीधरेन्द्रं तमुवाच वाक्यम् ॥ ६५ ॥

Not being able to identify them, the said high-souled Hanumān grew angry and in his wrath emitted a tremendous roar. Unable to endure their disappearance, his eyes burning like fire, the monkey spoke as follows to that lord of mountains: (65)

किमेतदेवं सुविनिश्चितं ते
यद् राघवे नासि कृतानुकम्पः ।
पश्याद्य मद्बाहुबलाभिभूतो
विकीर्णमात्मानमथो नगेन्द्र ॥ ६६ ॥

“Since you have not shown any compassion even for Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, this kind of rigidity of yours is despicable. Overcome by the strength of my arms, find yourself immediately shattered to pieces today, O lord of mountains!” (66)

स तस्य शृङ्गं सनगं सनागं
सकाञ्चनं धातुसहस्रजुष्टम् ।
विकीर्णकूटं ज्वलिताग्रसानुं
प्रगृह्य वेगात् सहसोन्ममाथ ॥ ६७ ॥

Vehemently seizing hold of the top of that mountain, which was adorned with thousands of minerals, with its trees, elephants and gold, Hanumān broke it off at once with the result that its projections got shattered and the crest of its plateau was set on fire. (67)

स तं समुत्पाट्य खमुत्पपात
वित्रास्य लोकान् ससुरासुरेन्द्रान् ।
संस्तूयमानः खचरैरनेकै-
र्जगाम वेगाद् गरुडोग्रवेगः ॥ ६८ ॥

Uprooting it and striking terror into the worlds including the leaders of gods and demons inhabiting them, the monkey sprang with it into the air and sped away with the terrible speed of Garuḍa, being acclaimed all the while by numerous aerial beings. (68)

स भास्कराध्वानमनुप्रपन्न-
स्तं भास्कराभं शिखरं प्रगृह्य ।
बभौ तदा भास्करसंनिकाशो
रवेः समीपे प्रतिभास्कराभः ॥ ६९ ॥

Having reached the heavens (lit., the orbit of the sun) carrying that mountain-peak, radiant as the sun, Hanumān, who closely resembled the sun, appeared in the vicinity of the solar orb to be its very image at that time. (69)

स तेन शैलेन भृशं रराज
शैलोपमो गन्धवहात्मजस्तु ।
सहस्रधारेण सपावकेन
चक्रेण खे विष्णुरिवार्पितेन ॥ ७० ॥

Coursing in the airspace with that crag, that offspring of the wind-god (lit., the wafter of odour), for his part, who resembled a mountain himself, looked most charming like

Lord Viṣṇu with His flaming discus with a thousand edges, borne in His hand. (70)

तं वानराः प्रेक्ष्य तदा विनेदुः
स तानपि प्रेक्ष्य मुदा ननाद ।
तेषां समुत्कृष्टरवं निशम्य
लङ्कालया भीमतरं विनेदुः ॥ ७१ ॥

Observing him come, the monkeys emitted tremendous roars on that occasion and Hanumān too in his turn roared with joy on perceiving them. Nay, hearing their loud noise, the denizens of Laṅkā set up a still more terrible roar. (71)

ततो महात्मा निपपात तस्मिन्
शैलोत्तमे वानरसैन्यमध्ये ।
हर्युत्तमेभ्यः शिरसाभिवाद्य
विभीषणं तत्र च सस्वजे सः ॥ ७२ ॥

Hanumān (of gigantic proportions) then descended on that prince of mountains, Trikūṭa, in the midst of the simian ranks. And having greeted the jewels among the monkeys with his head bent low, he embraced Vibhiṣaṇa standing there. (72)

तावप्युभौ मानुषराजपुत्रौ
तं गन्धमाघ्राय महौषधीनाम् ।
बभूवतुस्तत्र तदा विशल्या-
वुत्तस्थुरन्ये च हरिप्रवीराः ॥ ७३ ॥

Inhaling the unique fragrance of the powerful herbs, both the aforesaid sons of a ruler of men were healed of their wounds then and there; and other eminent heroes among the monkeys, who were lying unconscious on the battlefield, sprang on their feet. (73)

सर्वे विशल्या विरुजाः क्षणेन
हरिप्रवीराश्च हताश्च ये स्युः ।
गन्धेन तासां प्रवरौषधीनां
सुप्ता निशान्तेष्विव सम्प्रबुद्धाः ॥ ७४ ॥

Nay, even those eminent heroes among the monkeys, who had been killed, were healed of their wounds and rid of their pain in an instant by inhaling the fragrance of these most excellent herbs even as those who are asleep would feel when fully awake at the close of night. (74)

यदाप्रभृति लङ्कायां युध्यन्ते हरिराक्षसाः ।
तदाप्रभृति मानार्थमाज्ञया रावणस्य च ॥ ७५ ॥
ये हन्यन्ते रणे तत्र राक्षसाः कपिकुञ्जरैः ।
हता हतास्तु क्षिप्यन्ते सर्व एव तु सागरे ॥ ७६ ॥

From the time the monkeys and ogres began to fight in Laṅkā, the ogres, for their part, who were killed in combat there by the foremost of monkeys, were all without exception cast away into the sea as soon as killed under orders of Rāvaṇa so that their number may not be known to the monkeys. (75-76)

ततो हरिर्गन्धवहात्मजस्तु
तमोषधीशैलमुदग्रवेगः ।
निनाय वेगाद्धिमवन्तमेव
पुनश्च रामेण समाजगाम ॥ ७७ ॥

Thereupon the monkey, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god (lit., the wafter of odour) for his part, who was endowed with tremendous speed, bore the aforesaid mountain, full of medicinal simples, with all speed right to the Himālaya mountain, and joined Śrī Rāma once more. (77)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुःसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXV

Laṅkā is set fire to by the monkeys, on which a terrible conflict ensues between the ogres and the monkeys

ततोऽब्रवीन्महातेजाः सुग्रीवो वानरेश्वरः ।
अर्थ्यं विज्ञापयंश्चापि हनूमन्तमिदं वचः ॥ १ ॥

Nay, in order to make known to Hanumān what they should do next, Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, thereupon spoke as follows: (1)

यतो हतः कुम्भकर्णः कुमारश्च निषूदिताः ।
नेदानीमुपनिर्हारं रावणो दातुमर्हति ॥ २ ॥

“Inasmuch as Kumbhakarna has been killed and the youthful princes (the sons of Rāvaṇa other than Indrajit) have been destroyed, Rāvaṇa can no longer put up any defence. (2)

ये ये महाबलाः सन्ति लघवश्च प्लवंगमाः ।
लङ्कामभिपतन्त्वाशु गृह्योल्काः प्लवगर्षभाः ॥ ३ ॥

“Therefore, taking torches in their hands, the foremost of monkeys viz., all the monkeys, who are endowed with extraordinary might and are agile, should speedily invade Laṅkā.” (3)

ततोऽस्तं गत आदित्ये रौद्रे तस्मिन् निशामुखे ।
लङ्कामभिमुखाः सोल्का जग्मुस्ते प्लवगर्षभाः ॥ ४ ॥

The sun having set, the aforesaid bulls among the monkeys marched with their faces turned towards Laṅkā in the course of that dreadful evening. (4)

उल्काहस्तैर्हरिगणैः सर्वतः समभिद्रुताः ।
आरक्षस्था विरूपाक्षाः सहसा विप्रदुद्रुवुः ॥ ५ ॥

Steadily assailed on all sides by the simian troops, torch in hand, the ogres posted at the gates suddenly took to their heels. (5)

गोपुराद्गुप्रतोलीषु चर्यासु विविधासु च ।
प्रासादेषु च संहृष्टाः समृजुस्ते हुताशनम् ॥ ६ ॥

Feeling overjoyed at the flight of the guards, the monkeys set fire to the towering gates, attics and streets as also to the various byways as well as to the mansions. (6)

तेषां गृहसहस्राणि ददाह हुतभुक् तदा ।
प्रासादाः पर्वताकाराः पतन्ति धरणीतले ॥ ७ ॥

The fire (lit., the consumer of oblations) consumed on that occasion thousands of their dwellings. Mansions looking like mountains toppled down to the earth's surface. (7)

अगुरुर्दह्यते तत्र परं चैव सुचन्दनम् ।
मौक्तिका मणयः स्निग्धा वज्रं चापि प्रवालकम् ॥ ८ ॥

Aloe as well as excellent sandalwood of great value, pearls, glossy gems, diamonds and corals too were being burnt there. (8)

क्षौमं च दह्यते तत्र कौशेयं चापि शोभनम् ।
आविकं विविधं चौर्णं काञ्चनं भाण्डमायुधम् ॥ ९ ॥

Nay, linen as also charming silk, blankets of sheep's wool, as also various articles of rams' wool, gold ornaments and weapons too were being consumed. (9)

नानाविकृतसंस्थानं वाजिभाण्डपरिच्छदम् ।
गजगैवेयकक्ष्याश्च रथभाण्डांश्च संस्कृतान् ॥ १० ॥

तनुत्राणि च योधानां हस्त्यश्वानां च वर्म च ।
खड्गा धनूंषि ज्याबाणास्तोमराङ्कुशशक्तयः ॥ ११ ॥

रोमजं वालजं चर्म व्याघ्रजं चाण्डजं बहु ।
मुक्तामणिविचित्रांश्च प्रासादांश्च समन्ततः ॥ १२ ॥

विविधानस्त्रसंघातानग्निर्दहति तत्र वै ।
नानाविधान् गृहांश्चित्रान् ददाह हुतभुक् तदा ॥ १३ ॥

The fire raging on all sides there burnt

the ornaments and saddle etc., of diverse peculiar designs of horses, nay, the chains worn round the neck of elephants as well as their girths as also the polished ornaments meant for the chariots, also the coats of mail of the warriors and the armour for the elephants and the horses, swords, bows, bow-strings and arrows, lances, goads and javelins, blankets and rugs made of the hair of animals, whisks etc., (made of the hair of tails), the skins of tigers, abundant musk (produced from the scrotum of a male musk-deer) as well as the palaces inlaid with pearls and gems as well as stores of arms of every kind. The fire consumed picturesque dwellings of various kinds on that occasion. (10—13)

आवासान् राक्षसानां च सर्वेषां गृहगृध्रानाम् ।

हेमचित्रतनुत्राणां स्त्रग्भाण्डाम्बरधारिणाम् ॥ १४ ॥

सीधुपानचलाक्षाणां मदविह्वलगामिनाम् ।

कान्तालम्बितवस्त्राणां शत्रुसंजातमन्युनाम् ॥ १५ ॥

गदाशूलासिहस्तानां खादतां पिबतामपि ।

शयनेषु महार्हेषु प्रसुप्तानां प्रियैः सह ॥ १६ ॥

त्रस्तानां गच्छतां तूर्णं पुत्रानादाय सर्वतः ।

तेषां शतसहस्राणि तदा लङ्कानिवासिनाम् ॥ १७ ॥

अदहत् पावकस्तत्र जज्वाल च पुनः पुनः ।

सारवन्ति महार्हाणि गम्भीरगुणवन्ति च ॥ १८ ॥

हेमचन्द्रार्धचन्द्राणि चन्द्रशालोन्नतानि च ।

तत्र चित्रगवाक्षाणि साधिष्ठानानि सर्वशः ॥ १९ ॥

मणिविद्रुमचित्राणि स्पृशन्तीव दिवाकरम् ।

क्रौञ्चबर्हिणवीणानां भूषणानां च निःस्वनैः ॥ २० ॥

नादितान्यचलाभानि वेश्मान्यग्निर्ददाह सः ।

ज्वलनेन परीतानि तोरणानि चकाशिरे ॥ २१ ॥

विद्युद्भिरिव नद्धानि मेघजालानि घर्मगे ।

ज्वलनेन परीतानि गृहाणि प्रचकाशिरे ॥ २२ ॥

दावाग्निदीप्तानि यथा शिखराणि महागिरेः ।

विमानेषु प्रसुप्ताश्च दह्यमाना वराङ्गनाः ॥ २३ ॥

त्यक्ताभरणसंयोगा हाहेत्युच्चैर्विचुक्रुशुः ।

तत्र चाग्निपरीतानि निपेतुर्भवनान्यपि ॥ २४ ॥

वज्रिवज्रहतानीव शिखराणि महागिरेः ।

तानि निर्दह्यमानानि दूरतः प्रचकाशिरे ॥ २५ ॥

हिमवच्छिखराणीव दह्यमानानि सर्वशः ।
 हर्म्याग्रैर्दह्यमानैश्च ज्वालाप्रज्वलितैरपि ॥ २६ ॥
 रात्रौ सा दृश्यते लङ्का पुष्पितैरिव किंशुकैः ।
 हस्त्यध्यक्षैर्गजैर्मुक्तैर्मुक्तैश्च तुरगैरपि ।
 बभूव लङ्का लोकान्ते भ्रान्तग्राह इवार्णवः ॥ २७ ॥

The fire burnt on the said occasion in Laṅkā lakhs of houses of all the well-known ogres dwelling in Laṅkā—who were fond of their homes, were protected by coats of mail encrusted with gold and were decked with garlands and jewels and wore garments on their person, their eyes wild with inebriation, who walked slowly due to intoxication, whose garments were supported by their loved ones (even as they walked), who were seized with fury against their enemy, who carried maces, pikes and swords in their hands, who were eating and drinking too, or lay fast asleep on sumptuous beds with their loved ones, or who were hurriedly moving panic-stricken on all sides taking their sons with them—and flared up again and again. The aforesaid fire wholly consumed the houses in Laṅkā, which were strong and costly, were endowed with the virtue of impenetrability (provided as they were with many enclosures, defensive walls, secret doors, gates and posterns) and had been constructed with gold in the shape of the full moon or the crescent, nay, which rose high with their top rooms, were provided all round with beautiful eye-holes and furnished with seats and couches etc., were decorated with gems and corals and appeared to touch the sun, and were rendered noisy with the notes of herons and peacocks as well as with those of Viṇās and the jingling of ornaments and looked like mountains. Enveloped with fire, the archways shone like clouds girt round with lightning when the summer had just passed. Wrapped up in fire, the houses shone brightly like the peaks of a large mountain inflamed with a forest fire. Having given up all connection with their ornaments (which were melting due to excessive heat) when getting scorched with fire while lying fast asleep in their seven-storeyed mansions, lovely women screamed at the top of their voice, saying “Alas! Woe is me!!” Like the peaks of a huge mountain, struck with the thunderbolt of Indra (the wielder of the thunderbolt), the houses too, which were wreathed in fire, collapsed. While being burnt, they shone from afar like the peaks of the Himālaya mountain burning on all sides. With its burning house-tops set ablaze by the flames during the night, Laṅkā looked as if adorned with Kuruśuka trees in blossom. With elephants set free by their keepers and horses let loose (in order to save them from fire) Laṅkā looked like a sea with alligators running wild (with fear) at the end of the world-cycle. (14—27)

अश्वं मुक्तं गजो दृष्ट्वा क्वचिद् भीतोऽपसर्पति ।
 भीतो भीतं गजं दृष्ट्वा क्वचिदश्वो निवर्तते ॥ २८ ॥

Here an elephant ran away alarmed to see a horse let loose, while there a horse turned back terror-stricken to see the alarmed elephant. (28)

लङ्कायां दह्यमानायां शुशुभे च महोदधिः ।
 छायासंसक्तसलिलो लोहितोद इवार्णवः ॥ २९ ॥

With its image reflected on its waters while Laṅkā was burning, the ocean looked charming like a sea of red waters. (29)

सा बभूव मुहूर्तेन हरिभिर्दीपिता पुरी ।
 लोकस्यास्य क्षये घोरे प्रदीप्तेव वसुन्धरा ॥ ३० ॥

Set fire to by the monkeys, the said city assumed in less than an hour the appearance of the earth in flames at the dread destruction of this world. (30)

नारीजनस्य धूमेन व्याप्तस्योच्चैर्विनेदुषः ।
 स्वनो ज्वलनतप्तस्य शुश्रुवे शतयोजनम् ॥ ३१ ॥

The clamour of the womenfolk of Laṅkā, enveloped in smoke, scorched with fire and shrieking at the top of their voice could be heard up to one hundred Yojanas (or eight hundred miles). (31)

प्रदग्धकायानपरान् राक्षसान् निर्गतान् बहिः ।

सहसा ह्युत्पतन्ति स्म हरयोऽथ युयुत्सवः ॥ ३२ ॥

Nay, the monkeys, who were eager to come to blows, would actually assail all of a sudden other ogres, whose bodies had been badly burnt and who rushed out of the city to save their lives. (32)

उद्घुष्टं वानराणां च राक्षसानां च निःस्वनम् ।

दिशो दश समुद्रं च पृथिवीं च व्यानादयत् ॥ ३३ ॥

The clamour of the monkeys as well as the cry of distress of the ogres caused all the ten directions as well as the sea and the earth to resound. (33)

विशल्यौ च महात्मानौ तावुभौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

असम्भ्रान्तौ जगृहतुस्ते उभे धनुषी वरे ॥ ३४ ॥

Healed of their wounds and not the least nonplussed, both those high-souled princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, seized hold of both their well-known excellent bows. (34)

ततो विस्फारयामास रामश्च धनुरुत्तमम् ।

बभूव तुमुलः शब्दो राक्षसानां भयावहः ॥ ३५ ॥

Nay, thereupon Śrī Rāma drew his excellent bow and as a result of it there arose a tumultuous twang, which struck terror in the ogres. (35)

अशोभत तदा रामो धनुर्विस्फारयन् महत् ।

भगवानिव संकुद्धो भवो वेदमयं धनुः ॥ ३६ ॥

Bending his great bow, Śrī Rāma shone at that time as Lord Śiva (the Source of the universe) stretching His bow, consisting of the Vedas, in great fury at the time of the dissolution of the universe. (36)

उद्घुष्टं वानराणां च राक्षसानां च निःस्वनम् ।

ज्याशब्दस्तावुभौ शब्दावति रामस्य शुश्रुवे ॥ ३७ ॥

The twang of Śrī Rāma's bow-string could be heard above both the aforesaid sounds, viz., the clamour of the monkeys and the cry of distress of the ogres, too. (37)

वानरोद्घुष्टघोषश्च राक्षसानां च निःस्वनः ।

ज्याशब्दश्चापि रामस्य त्रयं व्याप दिशो दश ॥ ३८ ॥

Nay, the shout of victory raised by the monkeys, as also the wailing of the ogres as well as the twang of Śrī Rāma's bow-string—the three sounds filled all the ten directions. (38)

तस्य कार्मुकनिर्मुक्तैः शरैस्तत्पुरगोपुरम् ।

कैलासशृङ्गप्रतिमं विकीर्णमभवद् भुवि ॥ ३९ ॥

Under the shafts discharged from Śrī Rāma's bow, the principal gate of the aforesaid city, which resembled a peak of Mount Kailāsa (the abode of Lord Śiva), crumbled to the ground. (39)

ततो रामशरान् दृष्ट्वा विमानेषु गृहेषु च ।

संनाहो राक्षसेन्द्राणां तुमुलः समपद्यत ॥ ४० ॥

On beholding the arrows of Śrī Rāma descending on the seven-storeyed mansions and other houses of Laṅkā, the war-effort of the ogre chiefs thereupon waxed fierce. (40)

तेषां संनह्यमानानां सिंहनादं च कुर्वताम् ।

शर्वरी राक्षसेन्द्राणां रौद्रीव समपद्यत ॥ ४१ ॥

As the aforesaid ogre chiefs were preparing for a sortie and emitting leonine roars night came upon them even as the night of final dissolution presided over by Rudra, the god of destruction. (41)

आदिष्टा वानरेन्द्रास्ते सुग्रीवेण महात्मना ।

आसन्नं द्वारमासाद्य युध्यध्वं च प्लवंगमाः ॥ ४२ ॥

The celebrated monkey chiefs were commanded by the high-souled Sugrīva as follows: "Attacking the nearest gate, begin to fight, O monkeys! (42)

यश्च वो वितथं कुर्यात् तत्र तत्राप्युपस्थितः ।
स हन्तव्योऽभिसम्प्लुत्य राजशासनदूषकः ॥ ४३ ॥

“Nay, even though present on the scene of fighting, he among you who makes good his escape without fighting should be overtaken and made short work of in that he will be guilty of flouting the royal command.” (43)

तेषु वानरमुख्येषु दीमोल्कोज्ज्वलपाणिषु ।
स्थितेषु द्वारमाश्रित्य रावणं क्रोध आविशत् ॥ ४४ ॥

When the aforesaid leaders of monkeys had taken up their position at the gate, their hands bright with burning torches, fury took possession of Rāvaṇa. (44)

तस्य जृम्भितविक्षेपाद् व्यामिश्रा वै दिशो दश ।
रूपवानिव रुद्रस्य मन्युर्गात्रेष्वदृश्यत ॥ ४५ ॥

All the ten directions were actually thrown into confusion as a result of the violent disturbance of the atmosphere occasioned by his yawning (through fear and wrath) and he looked like the wrath manifest in the limbs of Lord Rudra, endowed with a form. (45)

स कुम्भं च निकुम्भं च कुम्भकर्णात्मजावुभौ ।
प्रेषयामास संक्रुद्धो राक्षसैर्बहुभिः सह ॥ ४६ ॥

Seized with fury he sent out both Kumbha and Nikumbha, sprung from the loins of Kumbhakarna, alongwith many other ogres. (46)

यूपाक्षः शोणिताक्षश्च प्रजङ्घः कम्पनस्तथा ।
निर्ययुः कौम्भकर्णिभ्यां सह रावणशासनात् ॥ ४७ ॥

Yūpākṣa and Śoṇitākṣa, Prajaṅgha and Kampana set out with the two sons of Kumbhakarna under the order of Rāvaṇa. (47)

शशास चैव तान् सर्वान् राक्षसान् स महाबलान् ।
राक्षसा गच्छताद्यैव सिंहनादं च नादयन् ॥ ४८ ॥

Nay, roaring like a lion, he further commanded as follows all the aforesaid ogres, who were endowed with extraordinary might: “Proceed, O ogres, this very instant.” (48)

ततस्तु चोदितास्तेन राक्षसा ज्वलितायुधाः ।
लङ्काया निर्ययुर्वीराः प्रणदन्तः पुनः पुनः ॥ ४९ ॥

Goaded by him, the gallant ogres for their part thereupon—sallied forth with their shining weapons, roaring again and again. (49)

रक्षसां भूषणस्थाभिर्भाभिः स्वाभिश्च सर्वशः ।
चक्रुस्ते सप्रभं व्योम हरयश्चाग्निभिः सह ॥ ५० ॥

The ogres fully illumined the firmament over their heads with the splendour of their jewels as well as with their own, while the monkeys did the same with their torches. (50)

तत्र ताराधिपस्याभा ताराणां भा तथैव च ।
तयोराभरणाभा च ज्वलिता द्यामभासयत् ॥ ५१ ॥

The light of the moon (the suzerain lord of the stars) and even so the light of the stars as also the brilliant splendour of the ornaments of the two armies irradiated the heavens. (51)

चन्द्राभा भूषणाभा च ग्रहाणां ज्वलतां च भा ।
हरिराक्षससैन्यानि भ्राजयामास सर्वतः ॥ ५२ ॥

The moonlight as well as the splendour of the ornaments as also the light of the shining planets lit up the ranks of the monkeys and the ogres on all sides. (52)

तत्र चार्धप्रदीप्तानां गृहाणां सागरः पुनः ।
भाभिः संसक्तसलिलश्चलोर्मिः शुशुभेऽधिकम् ॥ ५३ ॥

Nay, the sea with its rolling waves shone all the more brightly on its waters getting united (in the form of their reflection) with the flames of the half-burnt houses standing in Laṅkā. (53)

पताकाध्वजसंयुक्तमुत्तमासिपरश्वधम् ।
भीमाश्वरथमातङ्गं नानापत्तिसमाकुलम् ॥ ५४ ॥
दीप्तशूलगदाखड्गप्रासतोमरकार्मुकम् ।
तद् राक्षसबलं भीमं घोरविक्रमपौरुषम् ॥ ५५ ॥

Endowed with flags and pennons, equipped with excellent axes shaped like swords, nay, consisting of formidable horses, chariots and elephants, crowded with foot soldiers of every description and distinguished by shining pikes, maces, swords, spears, lances and bows, that terrible army of ogres was noted for its redoubtable valour and prowess. (54-55)

ददृशे ज्वलितप्रासं किङ्किणीशतनादितम् ।
 हेमजालाचितभुजं व्यावेष्टितपरश्वधम् ॥ ५६ ॥
 व्याघूर्णितमहाशस्त्रं बाणसंसक्तकार्मुकम् ।
 गन्धमाल्यमधूत्सेकसम्मोदितमहानिलम् ॥ ५७ ॥
 घोरं शूरजनाकीर्णं महाम्बुधरनिःस्वनम् ।
 तद् दृष्ट्वा बलमायातं राक्षसानां दुरासदम् ॥ ५८ ॥
 संचचाल प्लवंगानां बलमुच्चैर्ननाद च ।
 जवेनाप्लुत्य च पुनस्तद् बलं रक्षसां महत् ॥ ५९ ॥
 अभ्ययात् प्रत्यरिबलं पतंगा इव पावकम् ।
 तेषां भुजपरामर्शव्यामृष्टपरिघाशनि ॥ ६० ॥
 राक्षसानां बलं श्रेष्ठं भूयः परमशोभत ।
 तत्रोन्मत्ता इवोत्पेतुर्हरयोऽथ युयुत्सवः ॥ ६१ ॥
 तरुशैलैरभिघ्नन्तो मुष्टिभिश्च निशाचरान् ।
 तथैवापततां तेषां हरीणां निशितैः शरैः ॥ ६२ ॥
 शिरांसि सहसा जहू राक्षसा भीमविक्रमाः ।
 दशनैर्हतकर्णाश्च मुष्टिभिर्भिन्नमस्तकाः ।
 शिलाप्रहारभग्नाङ्गा विचेरुस्तत्र राक्षसाः ॥ ६३ ॥

It looked dreadful with its shining lances, was rendered noisy by hundreds of tiny bells tied round the chariots and elephants etc., and the arms of its warriors were adorned with sets of gold ornaments. Axes were being brandished, mighty weapons were being waved about and arrows were being fitted to the bows. The extensive atmosphere of the battlefield was rendered fragrant by the abundance of sandal-paste, garlands and wine. The army was crowded with gallant warriors and thundered like huge clouds. Beholding the aforesaid army of ogres—which was difficult to assail—arrived, the army of monkeys marched forth to meet it and let forth loud cries. Nay, springing forward with all speed, that mighty army of ogres rushed once more towards the hostile army as moths would towards a flame. The excellent army of ogres, in which iron clubs and Aśanis (a kind of missile) were being brandished through the action of their arms shone all the more brightly. As though frenzied, the monkeys there, who were eager to fight, rushed forth at once, striking the night-stalkers with trees, crags and fists. Likewise with their whetted shafts the ogres of redoubtable prowess precipitately tore off the heads of those monkeys even as they came rushing forward. Their ears bitten off with the teeth of the monkeys, their skulls smashed with the fists of the monkeys and their limbs broken with the blows of rocks hurled by the monkeys, the ogres moved about in the streets of Laṅkā. (56—63)

तथैवाप्यपरे तेषां कपीनामसिभिः शितैः ।
 प्रवरानभितो जघ्नुर्घोररूपा निशाचराः ॥ ६४ ॥

Even so the other night-stalkers of grim aspect struck the foremost of the aforesaid monkeys on all sides with their sharp swords. (64)

घ्नन्तमन्यं जघनान्यः पातयन्तमपातयत् ।
 गर्हमाणं जगर्हान्यो दशन्तमपरोऽदशत् ॥ ६५ ॥

One warrior struck his adversary striking another; a second one threw down his adversary throwing down another; a third one reproached his opponent reproaching another, while a fourth one bit his rival biting another. (65)

देहीत्यन्यो ददात्यन्यो ददामीत्यपरः पुनः ।
 किं क्लेशयसि तिष्ठेति तत्रान्योन्यं बभाषिरे ॥ ६६ ॥

“Give battle to me,” said one, on which the other offered to fight with him; while still another intervened, saying: “I offer resistance to him, tarry; why do you subject yourself to unnecessary suffering?" So did the warriors of the two contending armies spoke to one another in the streets of Laṅkā. (66)

विप्रलम्भितशस्त्रं च विमुक्तकवचायुधम् ।
समुद्यतमहाप्रासं मुष्टिशूलासिकुन्तलम् ॥ ६७ ॥
प्रावर्तत महारौद्रं युद्धं वानररक्षसाम् ।
वानरान् दश सप्तेति राक्षसा जघ्नुराहवे ॥ ६८ ॥
राक्षसान् दश सप्तेति वानराश्चाभ्यपातयन् ।
विप्रलम्भितवस्त्रं च विमुक्तकवचध्वजम् ।
बलं राक्षसमालम्ब्य वानराः पर्यवारयन् ॥ ६९ ॥

Presently there ensued an exceedingly fearful struggle between the monkeys and the ogres, in which arms were dodged, weapons were dug into armours, long lances were lifted up for being hurled against the enemy and fists, pikes, swords and spears were freely used as weapons of war. The ogres killed the monkeys at the rate of ten to seven at a time in the course of the combat and the monkeys too in their turn struck down the ogres at the rate of ten to seven at a time. Intercepting the army of ogres—whose raiment was kept in order with difficulty and whose coats of mail and standards had been thrown away—the monkeys surrounded it on all sides. (67—69)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षट्सप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXVI

Death of Kampana and Prajaṅgha at the hands of Aṅgada, of Śoṇitākṣa at the hands of Dwivida, of Yūpākṣa at the hands of Mainda and of Kumbha at the hands of Sugrīva

प्रवृत्ते संकुले तस्मिन् घोरे वीरजनक्षये ।
अङ्गदः कम्पनं वीरमाससाद रणोत्सुकः ॥ १ ॥

While that appalling melee—which brought about the destruction of so many heroic warriors was in progress, Aṅgada, who was eager for an encounter, assailed the gallant Kampana. (1)

आहूय सोऽङ्गदं कोपात् ताडयामास वेगितः ।
गदया कम्पनः पूर्वं स चचाल भृशाहतः ॥ २ ॥

Challenging Aṅgada and seized with impetuosity, Kampana furiously struck him with a mace in anticipation, so that, grievously hurt, Aṅgada reeled. (2)

स संज्ञां प्राप्य तेजस्वी चिक्षेप शिखरं गिरेः ।
अर्दितश्च प्रहारेण कम्पनः पतितो भुवि ॥ ३ ॥

Regaining his consciousness, Aṅgada, who was full of energy, hurled the top of a mountain at him; and, wounded by the blow, Kampana fell dead to the ground. (3)

ततस्तु कम्पनं दृष्ट्वा शोणिताक्षो हतं रणे ।
रथेनाभ्यपतत् क्षिप्रं तत्राङ्गदमभीतवत् ॥ ४ ॥

Seeing Kampana made short work of in combat, Śoṇitākṣa for his part thereupon speedily darted in his chariot towards Aṅgada like a fearless warrior. (4)

सोऽङ्गदं निशितैर्बाणैस्तदा विव्याध वेगितः ।
शरीरदारणैस्तीक्ष्णैः कालाग्रिसमविग्रहैः ॥ ५ ॥

Seized with impetuosity, he then pierced Aṅgada with his sharp and piercing shafts, which tore the flesh and resembled the fire raging at the time of universal dissolution. (5)

क्षुरक्षुरप्रनाराचैर्वत्सदनैः शिलीमुखैः ।
कर्णिशल्यविपाठैश्च बहुभिर्निशितैः शरैः ॥ ६ ॥
अङ्गदः प्रतिविद्धाङ्गो वालिपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ।
धनुरुग्रं रथं बाणान् ममर्द तरसा बली ॥ ७ ॥

His limbs pierced with numerous sharp arrows known by the names of Kṣura,¹ Kṣurapra,² Nārāca,³ Vatsadanta,⁴ Śīlimukha,⁵ Karṇi,⁶ Śalya⁷ and Vipāṭha,⁸ the mighty and powerful Aṅgada, son of Vālī, crushed with his might the formidable bow, chariot and arrows of Śoṇitākṣa. (6-7)

शोणिताक्षस्ततः क्षिप्रमसिचर्म समाददे ।
उत्पपात तदा क्रुद्धो वेगवानविचारयन् ॥ ८ ॥

Śoṇitākṣa thereupon instantly took up his sword and shield. Full of impetuosity he then leapt down from his chariot in rage unhesitatingly. (8)

तं क्षिप्रतरमाप्लुत्य परामृश्याङ्गदो बली ।
करेण तस्य तं खड्गं समाच्छिद्य ननाद च ॥ ९ ॥

Springing forward even more nimbly, nay, seizing hold of him and wresting his aforesaid sword with his hand, the mighty Aṅgada roared. (9)

तस्यांसफलके खड्गं निजघान ततोऽङ्गदः ।
यज्ञोपवीतवच्चैनं चिच्छेद कपिकुञ्जरः ॥ १० ॥

Aṅgada then dug the sword into the flat surface of his shoulder and the monkey chief cut him diagonally. (10)

तं प्रगृह्य महाखड्गं विनद्य च पुनः पुनः ।
वालिपुत्रोऽभिदुद्राव रणशीर्षे परानरीन् ॥ ११ ॥

Tightly holding that huge sword and roaring at the top of his voice again and again, the son of Vālī darted in the direction of other enemies in the forefront of the battle. (11)

प्रजङ्घसहितो वीरो यूपाक्षस्तु ततो बली ।
रथेनाभिययौ क्रुद्धो वालिपुत्रं महाबलम् ॥ १२ ॥

Accompanied by Prajaṅgha, the heroic and mighty Yūpākṣa for his part then furiously drove in his chariot towards Aṅgada (son of Vālī), who was endowed with extraordinary might. (12)

आयसीं तु गदां गृह्य स वीरः कनकाङ्गदः ।
शोणिताक्षः समाश्वस्य तमेवानुपपात ह ॥ १३ ॥

Recovering himself, and seizing his steel mace, the aforesaid Śoṇitākṣa for his part, who was adorned with gold armlets, rushed behind Aṅgada himself: so the tradition goes. (13)

प्रजङ्घस्तु महावीरो यूपाक्षसहितो बली ।
गदयाभिययौ क्रुद्धो वालिपुत्रं महाबलम् ॥ १४ ॥

Accompanied by Yūpākṣa, the mighty Prajaṅgha for his part, who was an eminent hero, assailed furiously with his mace Aṅgada (son of Vālī), who was endowed with extraordinary might. (14)

तयोर्मध्ये कपिश्रेष्ठः शोणिताक्षप्रजङ्घयोः ।
विशाखयोर्मध्यगतः पूर्णचन्द्र इवाबभौ ॥ १५ ॥

Between the two warriors, Śoṇitākṣa and Prajaṅgha, Aṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, shone like the full moon between the two asterisms known by the name of Viśākhā. (15)

1. An arrow with a razor-shaped head: 2. An arrow with a crescent-shaped head: 3. An arrow entirely made of steel: 4. An arrow with its head shaped like the teeth of a calf. 5. An arrow with its head shaped like the feathers of a buzzard: 6. An arrow provided with earlike protuberances on both sides: 7. An arrow with a long head: 8. An arrow with its head resembling the leaf of a Karavira tree.

अङ्गदं परिरक्षन्तौ मैन्दो द्विविद एव च ।
तस्य तस्थतुरभ्याशे परस्परदिदृक्षया ॥ १६ ॥

Protecting Aṅgada on all sides, Mainda and Dwivida too (maternal uncles of the prince) took up their position by his side with intent to exhibit each his own martial skill. (16)

अभिपेतुर्महाकायाः प्रतियत्ता महाबलाः ।
राक्षसा वानरान् रोषादसिबाणगदाधराः ॥ १७ ॥

Bearing swords, arrows and maces, gigantic ogres, who were vigilant and were endowed with extraordinary might, assailed the monkeys on all sides in fury. (17)

त्रयाणां वानरेन्द्राणां त्रिभी राक्षसपुंगवैः ।
संसक्तानां महद् युद्धमभवद् रोमहर्षणम् ॥ १८ ॥

A momentous conflict, causing the hair to stand on end, was waged by the three monkey chiefs, who found themselves embroiled with the three bulls among the ogres. (18)

ते तु वृक्षान् समादाय सम्प्रचिक्षिपुराहवे ।
खड्गेन प्रतिचिक्षेप तान् प्रजङ्घो महाबलः ॥ १९ ॥

Seizing hold of trees, the monkeys for their part steadily and violently hurled them against the ogre chiefs on the battlefield. Prajaṅgha, however, who was endowed with extraordinary might, cut them down with his sword. (19)

स्थानश्वान् द्रुमाञ्छैलान् प्रतिचिक्षिपुराहवे ।
शरौघैः प्रतिचिच्छेद तान् यूपाक्षो महाबलः ॥ २० ॥

The monkeys hurled trees and crags against the chariots and horses of the enemy in the course of the encounter. Yūpākṣa, however, who was endowed with extraordinary might, tore them off with volleys of his arrows. (20)

सृष्टान् द्विविदमैन्दाभ्यां द्रुमानुत्पाट्य वीर्यवान् ।
बभञ्ज गदया मध्ये शोणिताक्षः प्रतापवान् ॥ २१ ॥

The valiant and powerful Śoṇitākṣa smashed midway with his mace the trees which were hurled by Dwivida and Mainda after tearing them up. (21)

उद्यम्य विपुलं खड्गं परमर्मविदारणम् ।
प्रजङ्घो वालिपुत्राय अभिदुद्राव वेगितः ॥ २२ ॥

Raising his huge sword, which was capable of splitting asunder the vital parts of the enemies, and seized with impetuosity, Prajaṅgha rushed towards the son of Vālī. (22)

तमभ्याशगतं दृष्ट्वा वानरेन्द्रो महाबलः ।
आजघानाश्वकर्णेन द्रुमेणातिबलस्तदा ॥ २३ ॥
बाहुं चास्य सनिस्त्रिंशमाजघान स मुष्टिना ।
वालिपुत्रस्य घातेन स पपात क्षितावसिः ॥ २४ ॥

Seeing him arrived near, Aṅgada (the ruler of monkeys), who was endowed with extraordinary strength and was exceedingly mighty, then struck him with an Aśwakarna tree. He further struck with his fist the arm of his adversary, holding a sword, and the latter dropped on the ground under the impact of Aṅgada's blow. (23-24)

तं दृष्ट्वा पतितं भूमौ खड्गं मुसलसंनिभम् ।
मुष्टिं संवर्तयामास वज्रकल्पं महाबलः ॥ २५ ॥

Seeing his aforesaid sword, which closely resembled a pestle in shape, fallen on the ground, Prajaṅgha, who was endowed with extraordinary might, clenched his fist, which was hard as adamant, (25)

स ललाटे महावीर्यमङ्गदं वानरर्षभम् ।
आजघान महातेजाः स मुहूर्तं चचाल ह ॥ २६ ॥

Śoṇitākṣa (who was endowed with extraordinary energy) struck in the forehead Aṅgada, the foremost of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary valour; and the latter staggered for a while; they say. (26)

स संज्ञां प्राप्य तेजस्वी वालिपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ।
प्रजङ्घस्य शिरः कायात् पातयामास मुष्टिना ॥ २७ ॥

Regaining his consciousness, that energetic and powerful son of Vālī dashed the head of Prajaṅgha off his trunk with his fist. (27)

स यूपाक्षोऽश्रुपूर्णाक्षः पितृव्ये निहते रणे ।
अवरुह्य रथात् क्षिप्रं क्षीणेषुः खड्गमाददे ॥ २८ ॥

Quickly alighting from his chariot, his eyes full of tears, on his uncle having been killed in an encounter, the notorious Yūpākṣa took up his sword, his stock of arrows having been exhausted. (28)

तमापतन्तं सम्प्रेक्ष्य यूपाक्षं द्विविदस्त्वरन् ।
आजघानोरसि क्रुद्धो जग्राह च बलाद् बली ॥ २९ ॥

Perceiving Yūpākṣa rushing towards him and marching quickly, the mighty Dwivida struck him in the bosom with fury and caught hold of him with force. (29)

गृहीतं भ्रातरं दृष्ट्वा शोणिताक्षो महाबलः ।
आजघान महातेजा वक्षसि द्विविदं ततः ॥ ३० ॥

Seeing his brother made captive, Śoṇitākṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary might and was exceptionally energetic, thereupon struck Dwivida in the chest with his mace. (30)

स ततोऽभिहतस्तेन चचाल च महाबलः ।
उद्यतां च पुनस्तस्य जहार द्विविदो गदाम् ॥ ३१ ॥

Though endowed with extraordinary strength, Dwivida forthwith reeled when struck by Śoṇitākṣa. He, however, snatched the latter's mace when uplifted again. (31)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे मैन्दो द्विविदाभ्याशमागमत् ।
यूपाक्षं ताडयामास तलेनोरसि वीर्यवान् ॥ ३२ ॥

Meanwhile the valiant Mainda arrived by the side of Dwivida and struck Yūpākṣa in the breast with his palm. (32)

तौ शोणिताक्षयूपाक्षौ प्लवंगाभ्यां तरस्विनौ ।
चक्रतुः समरे तीव्रमाकर्षोत्पाटनं भृशम् ॥ ३३ ॥

The aforesaid Śoṇitākṣa and Yūpākṣa, who were full of impetuosity, carried on with the two monkeys a keen contest on the battlefield in the form of violently pulling and overthrowing one another. (33)

द्विविदः शोणिताक्षं तु विददार नखैर्मुखे ।
निष्पिपेष स वीर्येण क्षितावाविध्य वीर्यवान् ॥ ३४ ॥

The valiant Dwivida for his part tore Śoṇitākṣa in the face with his nails and, dashing him against the ground, crushed him. (34)

यूपाक्षमभिसंकुद्धो मैन्दो वानरपुङ्गवः ।
पीडयामास बाहुभ्यां पपात स हतः क्षितौ ॥ ३५ ॥

Getting highly enraged, Mainda, a veritable bull among the monkeys, pressed Yūpākṣa in his arms so that the latter fell down dead on the ground. (35)

हतप्रवीरा व्यथिता राक्षसेन्द्रचमूस्तथा ।
जगामाभिमुखी सा तु कुम्भकर्णात्मजो यतः ॥ ३६ ॥

Feeling distressed on account of its principal heroes having been killed in the aforesaid manner, the said army of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) for its part moved with its face turned towards the region where Kumbha (son of Kumbhakarna) was fighting. (36)

आपतन्तीं च वेगेन कुम्भस्तां सान्त्वयच्चमूम् ।
अथोत्कृष्टं महावीर्यैर्लब्धलक्षैः प्लवंगमैः ॥ ३७ ॥

निपातितमहावीरां दृष्ट्वा रक्षश्चमूं तदा ।
कुम्भः प्रचक्रे तेजस्वी रणे कर्म सुदुष्करम् ॥ ३८ ॥

Kumbha, however, restored to confidence that army advancing with all speed towards him. Nay, seeing the army, whose eminent heroes had been struck down by monkeys who were endowed with extraordinary valour and had found a favourable opportunity, Kumbha, the eminent ogre, who was full of martial ardour, performed at that time a feat which was extremely difficult for others to perform on the battlefield. (37-38)

स धनुर्धन्विनां श्रेष्ठः प्रगृह्य सुसमाहितः ।
मुमोचाशीविषप्रख्याञ्छरान् देहविदारणान् ॥ ३९ ॥

Seizing hold of his bow, that prince of archers, who was fully composed, discharged arrows resembling venomous serpents and capable of tearing the flesh of the enemy. (39)

तस्य तच्छुशुभे भूयः सशरं धनुरुत्तमम्।
विद्युदैरावतार्चिष्मद्वितीयेन्द्रधनुर्यथा ॥ ४० ॥

Endowed with an arrow, that excellent bow of Kumbha shone brightly like a second bow of Indra (the rain-god) illumined by flashes of lightning and the splendour of Airāvata (the elephant bearing Indra on his back). (40)

आकर्णकृष्टमुक्तेन जघान द्विविदं तदा।
तेन हाटकपुट्टेन पत्रिणा पत्रवाससा ॥ ४१ ॥

He struck Dwivida on that occasion with a golden-shafted plumed arrow, which was discharged after being pulled with the bow-string up to the ear. (41)

सहसाभिहतस्तेन विप्रमुक्तपदः स्फुरन्।
निपपात त्रिकूटाभो विह्वलन् प्लवगोत्तमः ॥ ४२ ॥

Staggering when struck all of a sudden with the arrow, Dwivida, the foremost of monkeys, who resembled the Trikūṭa mountain in size, dropped down wriggling, his legs fully outstretched. (42)

मैन्दस्तु भ्रातरं तत्र भग्नं दृष्ट्वा महाहवे।
अभिदुद्राव वेगेन प्रगृह्य विपुलां शिलाम् ॥ ४३ ॥

Seizing hold of a huge rock on seeing his brother, Dwivida, overthrown in that great combat, Mainda for his part rushed forward with impetuosity. (43)

तां शिलां तु प्रचिक्षेप राक्षसाय महाबलः।
बिभेद तां शिलां कुम्भः प्रसन्नैः पञ्चभिः शरैः ॥ ४४ ॥

The monkey, who was endowed with extraordinary might, for his part violently hurled that rock at the ogre. Kumbha, however, shattered that rock with five whetted shafts. (44)

संधाय चान्यं सुमुखं शरमाशीविषोपमम्।
आजघान महातेजा वक्षसि द्विविदाग्रजम् ॥ ४५ ॥

Nay, putting another arrow with a beautiful head and resembling a venomous serpent, Kumbha, who was endowed with extra-ordinary energy, struck the elder brother of Dwivida in the breast. (45)

स तु तेन प्रहारेण मैन्दो वानरयूथपः।
मर्मण्यभिहतस्तेन पपात भुवि मूर्च्छितः ॥ ४६ ॥

Struck by the ogre in his vitals with that blow, the aforesaid leader of monkey hordes, Mainda, fell unconscious to the ground. (46)

अङ्गदो मातुलौ दृष्ट्वा मथितौ तु महाबलौ।
अभिदुद्राव वेगेन कुम्भमुद्यतकार्मुकम् ॥ ४७ ॥

Seeing his two maternal uncles wounded, though endowed with extraordinary might, Aṅgada for his part rushed headlong towards Kumbha, who stood with his bow uplifted. (47)

तमापतन्तं विव्याध कुम्भः पञ्चभिरायसैः।
त्रिभिश्चान्यैः शितैर्बाणैर्मार्तंगमिव तोमरैः।
सोऽङ्गदं बहुभिर्बाणैः कुम्भो विव्याध वीर्यवान् ॥ ४८ ॥

Kumbha pierced Aṅgada, even as he was advancing, with five steel arrows and three other penetrating shafts even as one would pierce an elephant with goads. The aforesaid Kumbha, who was full of valour, pierced Aṅgada with numerous shafts. (48)

अकुण्ठधारैर्निशितैस्तैक्ष्णैः कनकभूषणैः।
अङ्गदः प्रतिविद्धाङ्गो वालिपुत्रो न कम्पते ॥ ४९ ॥

Though pierced all over his body with whetted steel arrows decked with gold, whose points were still sharp, Aṅgada, son of Vālī, remained unshaken. (49)

शिलापादपवर्षाणि तस्य मूर्ध्नि ववर्ष ह।
स प्रचिक्षेद तान् सर्वान् बिभेद च पुनः शिलाः ॥ ५० ॥
कुम्भकर्णात्मजः श्रीमान् वालिपुत्रसमीरितान्।
आपतन्तं च सम्प्रेक्ष्य कुम्भो वानरयूथपम् ॥ ५१ ॥

भ्रुवौ विव्याध बाणाभ्यामुल्काभ्यामिव कुञ्जरम् ।
तस्य सुस्त्राव रुधिरं पिहिते चास्य लोचने ॥ ५२ ॥

He, in his turn, let fall showers of rocks and trees on the head of Kumbha: so the tradition goes. That glorious son of Kumbhakarna, however, tore asunder all those trees and rocks hurled by the son of Vāli. Nay, perceiving the leader of monkey hordes advancing towards him, Kumbha pierced his eyebrows with two arrows even as one would strike an elephant with a pair of firebrands. Blood flowed from his eyebrows and his eyes got veiled thereby. (50—52)

अङ्गदः पाणिना नेत्रे पिधाय रुधिरोक्षिते ।
सालमासन्नमेकेन परिजग्राह पाणिना ॥ ५३ ॥

Protecting his eyes, bathed in blood, with one hand, Aṅgada seized hold of a sal tree, standing near, with the other. (53)

सम्पीड्योरसि सस्कन्धं करेणाभिनविश्य च ।
किञ्चिदभ्यवनम्यैनमुन्ममाथ महारणे ॥ ५४ ॥

Propping it, branches and all, on his chest, nay, pressing it tightly with one hand and bending its twigs to some extent, he tore it up in that great combat. (54)

तमिन्द्रकेतुप्रतिमं वृक्षं मन्दरसंनिभम् ।
समुत्सृजत वेगेन मिषतां सर्वरक्षसाम् ॥ ५५ ॥

He hurled with velocity the aforesaid tree—which was tall like the banner of Indra and closely resembled Mount Mandara in size—at Kumbha while all the ogres present there stood looking on. (55)

स चिच्छेद शितैर्बाणैः सप्तभिः कायभेदनैः ।
अङ्गदो विव्यथेऽभीक्ष्णं स पपात मुमोह च ॥ ५६ ॥

Kumbha, however, tore it asunder with seven sharp arrows, capable of cleaving the body. Aṅgada felt greatly disturbed at this; he fell down and swooned. (56)

अङ्गदं पतितं दृष्ट्वा सीदन्तमिव सागरे ।
दुरासदं हरिश्रेष्ठा राघवाय न्यवेदयन् ॥ ५७ ॥

Seeing Aṅgada, who was difficult to assail, fallen down and sinking into despondency as though in a sea, the leaders of the monkeys reported the matter to Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (57)

रामस्तु व्यथितं श्रुत्वा वालिपुत्रं महाहवे ।
व्यादिदेश हरिश्रेष्ठाञ्जाम्बवत्प्रमुखांस्ततः ॥ ५८ ॥

Hearing of Aṅgada (the son of Vāli) being seized with anguish in a major conflict, Śrī Rāma for his part thereupon sent out for his help the leaders of monkeys headed by Jāmbavān. (58)

ते तु वानरशार्दूलाः श्रुत्वा रामस्य शासनम् ।
अभिपेतुः सुसंकुद्धाः कुम्भमुद्यतकार्मुकम् ॥ ५९ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, the aforesaid tigers among the monkeys rushed in great fury towards Kumbha, who stood with an uplifted bow. (59)

ततो द्रुमशिलाहस्ताः कोपसंरक्तलोचनाः ।
रिरक्षिषन्तोऽभ्यपतन्ङ्गदं वानरर्षभाः ॥ ६० ॥

Keen to protect Aṅgada, the leaders of monkeys thereupon darted towards Kumbha, bearing trees and rocks in their hands, their eyes blood-red through anger. (60)

जाम्बवांश्च सुषेणश्च वेगदर्शी च वानरः ।
कुम्भकर्णात्मजं वीरं कुद्धाः समभिदुद्रुवुः ॥ ६१ ॥

Full of fury, Jāmbavān and Suṣeṇa as also the monkey Vegadarśī assailed the heroic son of Kumbhakarna in a body. (61)

समीक्ष्यापततस्तांस्तु वानरेन्द्रान् महाबलान् ।
आववार शरौघेण नगेनेव जलाशयम् ॥ ६२ ॥

Perceiving the aforesaid monkey chiefs, who were endowed with extraordinary might, advancing towards him, Kumbha for his part intercepted them with a volley of shafts even as one would obstruct the course of a torrent by means of a rock. (62)

तस्य बाणपथं प्राप्य न शेकुरपि वीक्षितुम् ।
वानरेन्द्रा महात्मानो वेलामिव महोदधिः ॥ ६३ ॥

Reaching the range of his arrows, the gigantic monkey chiefs could not even look at him, much less advance towards him any more than an ocean would overstep its shores. (63)

तांस्तु दृष्ट्वा हरिगणान् शरवृष्टिभिरर्दितान् ।
अङ्गदं पृष्ठतः कृत्वा भ्रातृजं प्लवगेश्वरः ॥ ६४ ॥
अभिदुद्राव सुग्रीवः कुम्भकर्णात्मजं रणे ।
शैलसानुचरं नागं वेगवानिव केसरी ॥ ६५ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid simian ranks tormented by hails of shafts, and placing his nephew, Aṅgada, in the rear, Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, for his part, assailed the son of Kumbhakarna on the battle-field even as an impetuous lion would pounce upon an elephant roaming on the slopes of a mountain. (64-65)

उत्पाट्य च महावृक्षानश्वकर्णादिकान् बहून् ।
अन्यांश्च विविधान् वृक्षांश्चिक्षेप स महाकपिः ॥ ६६ ॥

Nay, tearing up numerous huge trees such as the Aśwakarna, as well as various other trees, that mighty monkey hurled them against the ogre. (66)

तां छादयन्तीमाकाशं वृक्षवृष्टिं दुरासदाम् ।
कुम्भकर्णात्मजः श्रीमांश्चिच्छेद स्वशरैः शितैः ॥ ६७ ॥

The glorious son of Kumbhakarna, however, tore asunder with his sharp arrows that shower of trees, which covered the space and was difficult to approach. (67)

अभिलक्ष्येण तीव्रेण कुम्भेन निशितैः शरैः ।
आचितास्ते द्रुमा रेजुर्यथा घोराः शतघ्नयः ।
द्रुमवर्षं तु तद् भिन्नं दृष्ट्वा कुम्भेन वीर्यवान् ॥ ६८ ॥
वानराधिपतिः श्रीमान् महासत्त्वो न विव्यथे ।
स विध्यमानः सहसा सहमानस्तु ताञ्छ्रान् ॥ ६९ ॥
कुम्भस्य धनुराक्षिप्य बभञ्जेन्द्रधनुःप्रभम् ।
अवप्लुत्य ततः शीघ्रं कृत्वा कर्म सुदुष्करम् ॥ ७० ॥
अब्रवीत् कुपितः कुम्भं भग्नशृङ्गमिव द्विपम् ।
निकुम्भाग्रज वीर्यं ते बाणवेगं तदद्भुतम् ॥ ७१ ॥
संनतिश्च प्रभावश्च तव वा रावणस्य वा ।
प्रह्लादबलिवृत्रघ्नकुबेरवरुणोपम ॥ ७२ ॥

Covered all over with arrows by the impetuous Kumbha, who was skilled in aiming at the target, those trees shone like so many formidable Śataghñis (stones or cylindrical pieces of wood studded with iron spikes). The valiant and glorious Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, for his part who was highly courageous, did not feel the least tormented on seeing the aforesaid shower of trees dispersed by Kumbha. Snatching all at once (after springing to his chariot) the bow of Kumbha, which shone like a rainbow (the bow of Indra), while he was still being pierced by his arrows and was standing those arrows, Sugrīva for his part snapped the bow. Speedily leaping down from the chariot after performing the said feat, which was exceedingly difficult for others to perform, he angrily spoke as follows to Kumbha, who now resembled an elephant whose tusks have been broken: “Your well-known prowess, which lends impetus to your arrows, is wonderful, O elder brother of Nikumbha! Complaisance towards the ogres as well as majesty exist in you or in Rāvaṇa, O compeer of Prahārāda, Bali, Indra (the destroyer of the demon Vṛtra), Kubera (the god of riches) and Varuṇa (the god of water)! (68—72)

एकस्त्वमनुजातोऽसि पितरं बलवत्तरम् ।
त्वामेवैकं महाबाहुं शूलहस्तमरिंदमम् ॥ ७३ ॥
त्रिदशा नातिवर्तन्ते जितेन्द्रियमिवाधयः ।
विक्रमस्व महाबुद्धे कर्माणि मम पश्य च ॥ ७४ ॥

“You alone have taken after your father, Kumbhakarna, who was exceedingly mighty. It is you alone, the mighty-armed tamer of your enemies, who bear a pike in your hand, that the gods are not able to overcome, any more than mental agonies would overwhelm a master of his senses. Therefore, exhibit your prowess, O highly intelligent prince, and witness my exploits. (73-74)

वरदानात् पितृव्यस्ते सहते देवदानवान्।
कुम्भकर्णस्तु वीर्येण सहते च सुरासुरान् ॥ ७५ ॥

“Your uncle, Rāvaṇa, is able to withstand the gods and the demons alike by virtue of the boon conferred on him by Brahmā and Lord Śiva, while Kumbhakarna, your father, was able to withstand the gods and the demons by virtue of his prowess. You are rich in both and excel in this respect your uncle as well as your father. (75)

धनुषीन्द्रजितस्तुल्यः प्रतापे रावणस्य च।
त्वमद्य रक्षसां लोके श्रेष्ठोऽसि बलवीर्यतः ॥ ७६ ॥

“You vie with Indrajit in archery and are a peer of Rāvaṇa in might. You are the foremost in point of strength and prowess in the world of ogres as on this day. (76)

महाविमर्दं समरे मया सह तवाद्भुतम्।
अद्य भूतानि पश्यन्तु शक्रशम्बरयोरिव ॥ ७७ ॥

“Let created beings witness your prodigious and mighty encounter with me on the battlefield today, as they did the conflict between Indra and the demon Śambara. (77)

कृतमप्रतिमं कर्म दर्शितं चास्त्रकौशलम्।
पतिता हरिवीराश्च त्वयैते भीमविक्रमाः ॥ ७८ ॥

“A feat which has no equal has been performed by you and skill in the use of mystic missiles exhibited. These monkey heroes of redoubtable prowess have also been struck down by you. (78)

उपालम्भभयाच्चैव नासि वीर मया हतः।
कृतकर्मपरिश्रान्तो विश्रान्तः पश्य मे बलम् ॥ ७९ ॥

“And you, O champion, have not been made short work of by me only for fear of incurring reproach, inasmuch as you stand fully exhausted by the exploits performed by you. Therefore, having enjoyed well-earned rest, witness my strength.” (79)

तेन सुग्रीववाक्येन सावमानेन मानितः।
अग्रेराज्यहृतस्येव तेजस्तस्याभ्यवर्धत ॥ ८० ॥

Kumbha felt flattered by the foregoing compliment of Sugrīva, though it was accompanied by disdain, with the result that his martial ardour was redoubled in the same way as the brightness of a fire fed with ghee. (80)

ततः कुम्भस्तु सुग्रीवं बाहुभ्यां जगृहे तदा।
गजाविवातीतमदौ निःश्वसन्तौ मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ ८१ ॥
अन्योन्यगात्रग्रथितौ घर्षन्तावितरेतरम्।
सधूमां मुखतो ज्वालां विसृजन्तौ परिश्रमात् ॥ ८२ ॥

Thereupon Kumbha for his part clasped Sugrīva in his arms. Then the two warriors, fastened by each other's limbs, stood breathing heavily again and again like two elephants intoxicated with ichor, nay, rubbing each other and emitting flames mingled with smoke from their mouths due to exertion. (81-82)

तयोः पादाभिघाताच्च निमग्ना चाभवन्मही।
व्याघूर्णिततरङ्गश्च चुक्षुभे वरुणालयः ॥ ८३ ॥

Nay, the earth sank under the trampling of their feet, while the sea (lit., the abode of Varuṇa) with its rolling waves became turbulent. (83)

ततः कुम्भं समुत्क्षिप्य सुग्रीवो लवणाम्भसि।
पातयामास वेगेन दर्शयन्नुदधेस्तलम् ॥ ८४ ॥

Lifting up Kumbha, Sugrīva then threw him with violence into the salt sea, showing him the bottom of the sea. (84)

ततः कुम्भनिपातेन जलराशिः समुत्थितः।
विन्ध्यमन्दरसंकाशो विससर्प समन्ततः ॥ ८५ ॥

Due to the falling down of Kumbha there rose a mass of water as high as the Vindhya and Mandara mountains and spread on all sides. (85)

ततः कुम्भः समुत्पत्य सुग्रीवमभिपात्य च।
आजघानोरसि क्रुद्धो वज्रकल्पेन मुष्टिना ॥ ८६ ॥

Springing up and throwing down Sugrīva, Kumbha thereupon furiously struck him on the bosom with his adamantine fist. (86)

तस्य वर्म च पुस्फोट संजज्ञे चापि शोणितम् ।
तस्य मुष्टिर्महावेगः प्रतिजघ्नेऽस्थिमण्डले ॥ ८७ ॥

The armour of the monkey was split asunder and blood too gushed forth from his chest. The fist of the ogre, which descended with great ferocity struck against the framework of bones of Sugrīva. (87)

तस्य वेगेन तत्रासीत् तेजः प्रज्वलितं महत् ।
वज्रनिष्पेषसंजाता ज्वाला मेरोर्यथा गिरेः ॥ ८८ ॥

Due to the force exerted by the fist shot forth in that region a mighty flame resembling the fire that bursts up on Mount Meru from a stroke of lightning. (88)

स तत्राभिहतस्तेन सुग्रीवो वानरर्षभः ।
मुष्टिं संवर्तयामास वज्रकल्पं महाबलः ॥ ८९ ॥

Struck on the bosom by Kumbha, that bull among the monkeys, Sugrīva, who was endowed with extraordinary might, clenched his fist, which was hard as adamant. (89)

अर्चिःसहस्रविकचरविमण्डलवर्चसम् ।
स मुष्टिं पातयामास कुम्भस्योरसि वीर्यवान् ॥ ९० ॥

The powerful Sugrīva brought the fist, which shone like the solar disc encircled by a thousand rays, down on the breast of Kumbha. (90)

स तु तेन प्रहारेण विह्वलो भृशपीडितः ।
निपपात तदा कुम्भो गताच्चिरिव पावकः ॥ ९१ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षट्सप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

Severely tormented by that blow, Kumbha, for his part, who was out of his wits, forthwith collapsed like a fire whose brightness had disappeared. (91)

मुष्टिनाभिहतस्तेन निपपाताशु राक्षसः ।
लोहिताङ्ग इवाकाशाद् दीप्तरश्मिर्यदृच्छया ॥ ९२ ॥

Struck with his fist by Sugrīva, the ogre instantly fell down even as the planet Mars of brilliant rays would drop down from the heavens by the will of Providence. (92)

कुम्भस्य पततो रूपं भग्नस्योरसि मुष्टिना ।
बभौ रुद्राभिपन्नस्य यथा रूपं गवां पतेः ॥ ९३ ॥

The body of Kumbha, while he was falling when wounded in the chest by the fist of Sugrīva, shone like the form of the sun-god overpowered by Rudra, the god of destruction. (93)

तस्मिन् हते भीमपराक्रमेण
प्लवंगमानामृषभेण युद्धे ।

मही सशैला सवना चचाल
भयं च रक्षांस्यधिकं विवेश ॥ ९४ ॥

When he was killed in an encounter by Sugrīva (the foremost of monkeys) of terrible prowess, the earth with its mountains and forests shook and fear seized the ogres all the more. (94)

सप्तसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXVII

Nikumbha's death at the hands of Hanumān

निकुम्भो भ्रातरं दृष्ट्वा सुग्रीवेण निपातितम् ।
प्रदहन्निव कोपेन वानरेन्द्रमुदैक्षत ॥ १ ॥

Seeing his elder brother, Kumbha, struck down by Sugrīva, Nikumbha gazed on the (aforesaid) ruler of monkeys as though the ogre would consume him with his wrath. (1)

ततः स्रग्दामसंनद्धं दत्तपञ्चाङ्गुलं शुभम् ।
आददे परिघं धीरो महेन्द्रशिखरोपमम् ॥ २ ॥
हेमपट्टपरिक्षिप्तं वज्रविद्रुमभूषितम् ।
यमदण्डोपमं भीमं रक्षसां भयनाशनम् ॥ ३ ॥

The brave ogre forthwith took hold of his brilliant club, which was festooned with wreaths and provided with iron plates measuring five digits in breadth, nay, which resembled a peak of the Mahendra mountain in size, was further plated with gold and decked with diamonds and corals, was terrible as the rod of Yama, the god of retribution, and dispelled the fear of ogres. (2-3)

तमाविध्य महातेजाः शक्रध्वजसमौजसम् ।
निननाद विवृत्तास्यो निकुम्भो भीमविक्रमः ॥ ४ ॥

Brandishing the weapon, which vied with the banner of Indra in splendour, Nikumbha of redoubtable prowess, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, roared with his mouth wide open. (4)

उरोगतेन निष्केण भुजस्थैरङ्गदैरपि ।
कुण्डलाभ्यां च चित्राभ्यां मालया च सचित्रया ॥ ५ ॥
निकुम्भो भूषणैर्भाति तेन स्म परिघेण च ।
यथेन्द्रधनुषा मेघः सविद्युत्स्तनयितुमान् ॥ ६ ॥

With his jewels such as a golden ornament adorning his breast, also armlets encircling his arms as well as with charming earrings and a lovely garland, as also with that club, the aforesaid Nikumbha shone even as a cloud shot with lightning and accompanied by thunder looks bright with a rainbow. (5-6)

परिघाग्रेण पुस्फोट वातग्रन्थिर्महात्मनः ।
प्रज्ज्वाल सघोषश्च विधूम इव पावकः ॥ ७ ॥

The conjunction of the seven winds or bands of air (Pravaha, Āvaha and so on) burst on coming in contact with the tip of the club of the gigantic ogre and the club glowed like a smokeless flame with a crash. (7)

नगर्या विटपावत्या गन्धर्वभवनोत्तमैः ।
सतारागणनक्षत्रं सचन्द्रसमहाग्रहम् ।
निकुम्भपरिघाघूर्णं भ्रमतीव नभस्थलम् ॥ ८ ॥

The vault of heaven with the city of Viṭapāvati (Alakā), the excellent mansions of the Gandharvas (the celestial musicians), the hosts of stars and lunar mansions, the moon and other major planets appeared to spin round as though it were caused to revolve by the motion of Nikumbha's club. (8)

दुरासदश्च संजज्ञे परिघाभरणप्रभः ।
क्रोधेन्धनो निकुम्भाग्रिर्युगान्ताग्रिरिवोत्थितः ॥ ९ ॥

Nay, having burst into flames like the fire at the end of the world-cycle, the fire in the shape of Nikumbha, which had the club and his ornaments for its flames and his wrath for its fuel, became difficult to assail. (9)

राक्षसा वानराश्चापि न शेकुः स्पन्दितुं भयात् ।
हनुमांस्तु विवृत्योरस्तस्थौ प्रमुखतो बली ॥ १० ॥

In their terror neither the ogres nor the monkeys dared to move. Baring his bosom, the mighty Hanumān, however, stood in front of him. (10)

परिघोपमबाहुस्तु परिघं भास्करप्रभम् ।
बली बलवतस्तस्य पातयामास वक्षसि ॥ ११ ॥

The mighty ogre for his part, whose arms resembled iron bars in stiffness, struck his club, which shone like the sun, on the breast of the mighty monkey, Hanumān. (11)

स्थिरे तस्योरसि व्यूढे परिघः शतधा कृतः ।
विकीर्यमाणः सहसा उत्काशतमिवाम्बरे ॥ १२ ॥

Split into a hundred splinters as soon as it impinged on his solid and broad chest, the club shone like a hundred meteors crumbling in the air all at once. (12)

स तु तेन प्रहारेण न चचाल महाकपिः ।

परिधेण समाधूतो यथा भूमिचलेऽचलः ॥ १३ ॥

Though struck with the club, that great monkey did not shake under that blow any more than a mountain in an earthquake. (13)

स तथाभिहतस्तेन हनूमान् प्लवगोत्तमः ।

मुष्टिं संवर्तयामास बलेनातिमहाबलः ॥ १४ ॥

Struck as aforesaid by the ogre, the celebrated Hanumān, the foremost of the monkeys, who was endowed with exceeding might, clenched his fist with vehemence. (14)

तमुद्यम्य महातेजा निकुम्भोरसि वीर्यवान् ।

अभिचिक्षेप वेगेन वेगवान् वायुविक्रमः ॥ १५ ॥

Raising it, the powerful and agile monkey, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and vied with the wind-god in prowess, dashed it with impetuosity on the chest of Nikumbha. (15)

तत्र पुस्फोट वर्मास्य प्रसुस्त्राव च शोणितम् ।

मुष्टिना तेन संजज्ञे मेघे विद्युदिवोत्थिता ॥ १६ ॥

The armour of Nikumbha in that region got split up and blood shot forth under the impact of that fist. It appeared on his breast as lightning sprung from a cloud. (16)

स तु तेन प्रहारेण निकुम्भो विचचाल च ।

स्वस्थश्चापि निजग्राह हनूमन्तं महाबलम् ॥ १७ ॥

Nay, the notorious Nikumbha for his part staggered under that blow. Recovering himself, however, he caught hold of Hanumān, even though the latter was endowed with extraordinary might. (17)

चुक्रुशुश्च तदा संख्ये भीमं लङ्कानिवासिनः ।

निकुम्भेनोद्यतं दृष्ट्वा हनूमन्तं महाबलम् ॥ १८ ॥

Seeing Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary strength, captured by Nikumbha on the field of battle, the inhabitants of Lāṅkā terribly roared on that occasion. (18)

स तथा ह्रियमाणोऽपि हनूमांस्तेन रक्षसा ।

आजघानानिलसुतो वज्रकल्पेन मुष्टिना ॥ १९ ॥

Even while being carried off as aforesaid by that ogre, Hanumān, son of the wind-god, struck him with his fist, which was hard as adamant. (19)

आत्मानं मोक्षयित्वाथ क्षितावभ्यवपद्यत ।

हनूमानुन्मथाशु निकुम्भं मारुतात्मजः ॥ २० ॥

Disengaging himself from his grip, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, forthwith leapt to the ground and speedily struck Nikumbha down. (20)

निक्षिप्य परमायत्तो निकुम्भं निष्पिपेष च ।

उत्पत्य चास्य वेगेन पपातोरसि वेगवान् ॥ २१ ॥

Having thrown Nikumbha down Hanumān, who was supremely active, crushed him. Nay, springing up, the agile monkey jumped impetuously on his chest. (21)

परिगृह्य च बाहुभ्यां परिवृत्य शिरोधराम् ।

उत्पाटयामास शिरो भैरवं नदतो महत् ॥ २२ ॥

Taking hold of the ogre's neck and twisting it, Hanumān tore off his huge head while the ogre continued to emit a terrible cry. (22)

अथ निनदति सादिते निकुम्भे

पवनसुतेन रणे बभूव युद्धम् ।

दशरथसुतराक्षसेन्द्रसून्वो-

भृशतरमागतरोषयोः सुभीमम् ॥ २३ ॥

When Nikumbha, who was crying loudly, was killed in combat by the son of the wind-god, there ensued forthwith an exceedingly formidable struggle between Śrī Rāma (son of Emperor Daśaratha) and Makarākṣa (son of Khara, a ruler of ogres), who were seized with terrible anger. (23)

व्यपेते तु जीवे निकुम्भस्य हृष्टा
 विनेदुः प्लवंगा दिशः सस्वनुश्च।
 चचालेव चोर्वी पपातेव सा द्यौ-
 बलं राक्षसानां भयं चाविवेश ॥ २४ ॥
 When Nikumbha's life had departed, the monkeys emitted loud cries of joy and the quarters resounded. Nay, the earth seemed to quake, the heavens appeared to crumble and fear took possession of the army of ogres. (24)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टसप्ततितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXVIII

Makarākṣa sets out for an encounter
 under orders of Rāvaṇa

निकुम्भं निहतं श्रुत्वा कुम्भं च विनिपातितम्।
 रावणः परमामर्षी प्रजज्वालानलो यथा ॥ १ ॥

Filled with extreme indignation on hearing of Nikumbha having been killed and Kumbha laid low, Rāvaṇa flared up as fire.
 (1)

नैर्ऋतः क्रोधशोकाभ्यां द्वाभ्यां तु परिमूर्च्छितः।
 खरपुत्रं विशालाक्षं मकराक्षमचोदयत् ॥ २ ॥

Overcome by anger and grief both, the ogre for his part commanded Makarākṣa, the large-eyed son of Khara as follows:
 (2)

गच्छ पुत्र मयाऽऽज्ञप्तो बलेनाभिसमन्वितः।
 राघवं लक्ष्मणं चैव जहि तौ सवनौकसौ ॥ ३ ॥

"Enjoined by me and accompanied by an army, go, my son, and make short work of the two brothers alongwith the monkeys (lit., the dwellers in the woods)." (3)

रावणस्य वचः श्रुत्वा शूरमानी खरात्मजः।
 बाढमित्यब्रवीद्धृष्टो मकराक्षो निशाचरम् ॥ ४ ॥

Rejoiced to hear the command of Rāvaṇa, Khara's son, Makarākṣa who accounted himself a hero, answered to the night-ranger, "Amen!" (4)

सोऽभिव्राद्य दशग्रीवं कृत्वा चापि प्रदक्षिणम्।
 निर्जगाम गृहाच्छुभ्राद् रावणस्याज्ञया बली ॥ ५ ॥

Having greeted Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) and also walked clockwise round him as a mark of submission, the mighty warrior emerged from the shining palace of Rāvaṇa in obedience to his command.
 (5)

समीपस्थं बलाध्यक्षं खरपुत्रोऽब्रवीद् वचः।
 रथमानीयतां तूर्णं सैन्यं त्वानीयतां त्वरात् ॥ ६ ॥

The son of Khara spoke as follows to the Commander-in-Chief standing near: "Let my chariot be brought at once and let the army be mobilized expeditiously." (6)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा बलाध्यक्षो निशाचरः।
 स्यन्दनं च बलं चैव समीपं प्रत्यपादयत् ॥ ७ ॥

Hearing his aforesaid command, the night-stalker in command of the army of Lankā placed his chariot as well as a contingent by his side. (7)

प्रदक्षिणं रथं कृत्वा समारुह्य निशाचरः।
 सूतं संचोदयामास शीघ्रं वै रथमावह ॥ ८ ॥

Walking clockwise round the chariot and duly ascending it, the prowler of the night urged the charioteer in the following words: "Take the chariot with all speed to the battlefield." (8)

अथ तान् राक्षसान् सर्वान् मकराक्षोऽब्रवीदिदम् ।
यूयं सर्वे प्रयुध्यध्वं पुरस्तान्मम राक्षसाः ॥ १ ॥

Makarākṣa then commanded all those ogres, who marched with him, as follows: "Fight you all vehemently, remaining ahead of me, O ogres!" (9)

अहं राक्षसराजेन रावणेन महात्मना ।
आज्ञप्तः समरे हन्तुं तावुभौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ १० ॥

"I have been commanded by the high-souled Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, to kill both the princes, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, in combat." (10)

अद्य रामं वधिष्यामि लक्ष्मणं च निशाचराः ।
शाखामृगं च सुग्रीवं वानरांश्च शरोत्तमैः ॥ ११ ॥

"I shall make short work with my excellent shafts today of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa as well as of the monkey, Sugrīva and the other monkeys, O prowlers of the night!" (11)

अद्य शूलनिपातैश्च वानराणां महाचमूम् ।
प्रदहिष्यामि सम्प्राप्तां शुष्केन्धनमिवानलः ॥ १२ ॥

"Nay, hurling pikes, I shall exterminate today the huge army of monkeys the moment it has duly arrived, even as a fire would consume dry wood." (12)

मकराक्षस्य तच्छ्रुत्वा वचनं ते निशाचराः ।
सर्वे नानायुधोपेता बलवन्तः समाहिताः ॥ १३ ॥
ते कामरूपिणः क्रूरा दंष्ट्रिणः पिङ्गलेक्षणाः ।

मातंगा इव नर्दन्तो ध्वस्तकेशा भयावहाः ॥ १४ ॥
परिवार्य महाकाया महाकायं खरात्मजम् ।

अभिजग्मुस्ततो हृष्टाश्चालयन्तो वसुन्धराम् ॥ १५ ॥

Rejoiced to hear the aforesaid braggadocio of Makarākṣa and surrounding the colossal son of Khara, all those mighty, cruel and gigantic rangers of the night, who were armed with all sorts of weapons, were steadfast and able to change their form at will, had protruding teeth, reddish brown eyes and dishevelled hair and as such inspired terror, then joyously marched forward roaring as elephants and shaking the earth. (13—15)

शङ्खभेरीसहस्राणामाहतानां समन्ततः ।
श्वेलितास्फोटितानां च तत्र शब्दो महानभूत् ॥ १६ ॥

There arose on that occasion a great tumult as thousands of conches and kettledrums sounded on all sides, as well as of leonine roars and the clapping of arms. (16)

प्रभ्रष्टोऽथ करात् तस्य प्रतोदः सारथेस्तदा ।
पपात सहसा दैवाद् ध्वजस्तस्य तु रक्षसः ॥ १७ ॥

The long whip slipped all of a sudden at that moment from the hands of Makarākṣa's charioteer and the standard of that ogre also suddenly fell down by the will of Providence. (17)

तस्य ते रथसंयुक्ता हया विक्रमवर्जिताः ।
चरणैराकुलैर्गत्वा दीनाः सास्त्रमुखा ययुः ॥ १८ ॥

Proceeding with faltering steps, the well-known horses yoked to the chariot of Makarākṣa, who had given up their diversified gait, trudged along dolefully with tears in their eyes. (18)

प्रवाति पवनस्तस्मिन् सपांसुः खरदारुणः ।
निर्याणे तस्य रौद्रस्य मकराक्षस्य दुर्मतेः ॥ १९ ॥

At the time of the aforesaid departure of that fierce and evil-minded Makarākṣa, a violent and fearful dust-storm raged. (19)

तानि दृष्ट्वा निमित्तानि राक्षसा वीर्यवत्तमाः ।
अचिन्त्य निर्गताः सर्वे यत्र तौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ २० ॥

Seeing those portents, yet ignoring them, all the ogres, who were exceedingly valiant, set out to the region where the aforesaid princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, were. (20)

घनगजमहिषाङ्गतुल्यवर्णाः

समरमुखेष्वसकृद्दासिभिन्नाः ।

अहमहमिति युद्धकौशलास्ते

रजनिचराः परिबभ्रुर्मुहुस्ते ॥ २१ ॥

Saying again and again: "I shall take the lead!", those notorious prowlers of the night, who resembled clouds, elephants and buffaloes in hue, and who had been wounded more than once by maces and swords in the forefront of battle and who were skilled in fighting, moved to and fro on the battlefield. (21)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टसप्ततितमः सर्गः ॥ ७८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनाशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXIX

Death of Makarākṣa at the hands of Śrī Rāma

निर्गतं मकराक्षं ते दृष्ट्वा वानरपुंगवाः ।

आप्लुत्य सहसा सर्वे योद्धुकामा व्यवस्थिताः ॥ १ ॥

Leaping all at once on seeing Makarākṣa come out, all the celebrated monkey chiefs stood arrayed with intent to give battle. (1)

ततः प्रवृत्तं सुमहत् तद् युद्धं लोमहर्षणम् ।

निशाचरैः प्लवंगानां देवानां दानवैरिव ॥ २ ॥

Then there ensued the well-known and desperate encounter of the monkeys with the rangers of the night, which caused one's hair to stand on end like the encounter of the gods with the devils. (2)

वृक्षशूलनिपातैश्च गदापरिघपातनैः ।

अन्योन्यं मर्दयन्ति स्म तदा कपिनिशाचराः ॥ ३ ॥

The monkeys as well as the night-stalkers each began to crush his opponent on that occasion by hurling trees and pikes, respectively and bringing down maces and clubs on their adversaries. (3)

शक्तिखड्गगदाकुतैस्तोमरैश्च निशाचराः ।

पट्टिशैर्भिन्दिपालैश्च बाणपातैः समन्ततः ॥ ४ ॥

पाशमुद्गरदण्डैश्च निर्घातैश्चापरैस्तथा ।

कदनं कपिसिंहानां चक्रुस्ते रजनीचराः ॥ ५ ॥

The aforesaid prowlers of the night made havoc of the lions among the monkeys by means of their javelins and swords, maces, spears and lances, sharp-edged spears and Bhindipālas (slings for throwing stones), nooses, mallets and staffs, Aśanis and other weapons, and by discharging arrows on all sides. (4-5)

बाणौघैरर्दिताश्चापि खरपुत्रेण वानराः ।

सम्भ्रान्तमनसः सर्वे दुद्रुवुर्भयपीडिताः ॥ ६ ॥

Nay, wounded with volleys of shafts by the son of Khara and stricken with fear, all the monkeys fled, bewildered as they were in mind. (6)

तान् दृष्ट्वा राक्षसाः सर्वे द्रवमाणान् वनौकसः ।

नेदुस्ते सिंहवद् दृष्ट्वा राक्षसा जितकाशिनः ॥ ७ ॥

Seeing those monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods) fleeing, those arrogant ogres, who were followed by many more ogres and had assumed a triumphant air, roared like lions. (7)

विद्रवत्सु तदा तेषु वानरेषु समन्ततः ।

रामस्तान् वारयामास शरवर्षेण राक्षसान् ॥ ८ ॥

While the well-known monkeys were fleeing in all directions, Śrī Rāma intercepted the aforesaid ogres on that occasion with a hail of shafts. (8)

वारितान् राक्षसान् दृष्ट्वा मकराक्षो निशाचरः ।
कोपानलसमाविष्टो वचनं चेदमब्रवीत् ॥ १॥

Seeing the ogres intercepted, the prowler of the night, Makarākṣa, was filled with the fire of anger and spoke as follows: (9)

तिष्ठ राम मया सार्धं द्वन्द्वयुद्धं भविष्यति ।
त्याजयिष्यामि ते प्राणान् धनुर्मूकैः शितैः शरैः ॥ १० ॥

“Tarry, O Rāma! Your duel will take place with me. With sharp arrows shot from my bow I shall relieve you of your life. (10)

यत् तदा दण्डकारण्ये पितरं हतवान् मम ।
तदग्रतः स्वकर्मस्थं स्मृत्वा रोषोऽभिवर्धते ॥ ११ ॥

“Inasmuch as you killed my father the other day in the Daṇḍaka forest, my wrath grows violent when I think of you engaged in such nefarious acts from that time on. (11)

दह्यन्ते भृशमङ्गानि दुरात्मन् मम राघव ।
यन्मयासि न दृष्टस्त्वं तस्मिन् काले महावने ॥ १२ ॥

“My limbs were being wildly consumed, O evil-minded scion of Raghu, in that you were not seen by me in that large forest at that time. (12)

दिष्ट्यासि दर्शनं राम मम त्वं प्राप्तवानिह ।
कांक्षितोऽसि क्षुधार्तस्य सिंहस्येवेतरो मृगः ॥ १३ ॥

“By good fortune you have caught my sight here. You were sought by me even as an ordinary animal is sought by a lion afflicted with hunger, O Rāma! (13)

अद्य मद्भाणवेगेन प्रेतराड्विषयं गतः ।
ये त्वया निहताः शूराः सह तैश्च वसिष्यसि ॥ १४ ॥

“Nay, having reached the realm of Yama (the ruler of the departed) through the impetuosity of my arrows today, you shall dwell with those very champions who have been killed by you. (14)

बहुनात्र किमुक्तेन शृणु राम वचो मम ।
पश्यन्तु सकला लोकास्त्वां मां चैव रणाजिरे ॥ १५ ॥

“What will be gained through much talk on this topic? Listen, O Rāma to my advice. Let all people see you as well as me trying our strength on the field of battle. (15)

अस्त्रैर्वा गदया वापि बाहुभ्यां वा रणाजिरे ।
अभ्यस्तं येन वा राम वर्ततां तेन वा मृधम् ॥ १६ ॥

“Let our trial of strength commence on the battlefield with mystic missiles, or with maces or with arms, or with any other weapon with which you may have carried on your military practice, O Rāma!” (16)

मकराक्षवचः श्रुत्वा रामो दशरथात्मजः ।
अब्रवीत् प्रहसन् वाक्यमुत्तरोत्तरवादिनम् ॥ १७ ॥

Heartily laughing on hearing the challenge of Makarākṣa, Śrī Rāma, sprung from the loins of Emperor Daśaratha, replied as follows to the ogre, who was speaking further and further without interruption: (17)

कथसे किं वृथा रक्षो बहून्यसदृशानि ते ।
न रणे शक्यते जेतुं विना युद्धेन वाग्बलात् ॥ १८ ॥

“Why do you indulge in self-praise in vain, O ogre? Many things have been said by you, which are unworthy of you. No victory can be scored on the battlefield by sheer force of speech without an encounter. (18)

चतुर्दश सहस्राणि रक्षसां त्वत्पिता च यः ।
त्रिशिरा दूषणश्चापि दण्डके निहतो मया ॥ १९ ॥

“Fourteen thousand of ogres as also Khara, who was your father, Triśirā and Dūṣaṇa too were killed by me in the Daṇḍaka forest. (19)

स्वाशिताश्चापि मांसेन गृध्रगोमायुवायसाः ।
भविष्यन्त्यद्य वै पाप तीक्ष्णतुण्डनखाङ्कुशाः ॥ २० ॥

“Nay, vultures, jackals and crows with sharp beaks and goad-like claws were sated with their flesh. Today too they shall likewise be sated with your flesh, O sinful one!” (20)

राघवेणैवमुक्तस्तु मकराक्षो महाबलः ।
बाणौघानमुचत् तस्मै राघवाय रणाजिरे ॥ २१ ॥

Spoken to in these words by Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), Makarākṣa for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, shot volleys of shafts on the aforesaid scion of Raghu on the field of battle. (21)

ताञ्छराञ्छरवर्षेण रामश्चिच्छेद नैकधा ।
निपेतुर्भुवि विच्छिन्ना रुक्मपुङ्गवाः सहस्रशः ॥ २२ ॥

Śrī Rāma, however, tore those arrows into pieces with a hail of arrows. The ogre's arrows, which were provided with shafts of gold, fell to the ground, when torn in thousands. (22)

तद् युद्धमभवत् तत्र समेत्यान्योन्यमोजसा ।
खरराक्षसपुत्रस्य सूनोर्दशरथस्य च ॥ २३ ॥

On their meeting each other at close quarters, a notable encounter furiously raged between Makarākṣa (son of the ogre Khara) and Śrī Rāma (son of Daśaratha). (23)

जीमूतयोरिवाकाशे शब्दो ज्यातलयोरिव ।
धनुर्मुक्तः स्वनोऽन्योन्यं श्रूयते च रणाजिरे ॥ २४ ॥

The sound released by the bows as produced by the friction of the hands and the bow-string (of the two warriors) was mutually heard on the field of battle on that occasion, like the rumbling of clouds in space. (24)

देवदानवगन्धर्वाः किंनराश्च महोरगाः ।
अन्तरिक्षगताः सर्वे द्रष्टुकामास्तदद्भुतम् ॥ २५ ॥

Gods, devils and Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Kinnaras (a class of demigods with a human figure and the head of a horse) and huge serpents stood in the air to witness that astounding combat. (25)

विद्धमन्योन्यगात्रेषु द्विगुणं वर्धते बलम् ।
कृतप्रतिकृतान्योन्यं कुरुतां तौ रणाजिरे ॥ २६ ॥

The limbs of both were pierced by each other, yet their strength was redoubled. The two warriors inflicted wounds on each other on the battlefield and each returned the blows of the other. (26)

राममुक्तांस्तु बाणौघान् राक्षसस्त्वच्छिन्द रणे ।
रक्षोमुक्तांस्तु रामो वै नैकधा प्राच्छिन्नच्छरैः ॥ २७ ॥

The ogre for his part actually tore the volleys of shafts shot by Śrī Rāma; while Śrī Rāma actually split into pieces with his arrows the shafts discharged by the ogre. (27)

बाणौघवितताः सर्वा दिशश्च प्रदिशस्तथा ।
संछन्ना वसुधा चैव समन्तान् प्रकाशते ॥ २८ ॥

All the four quarters as well as the intermediate points were covered with volleys of shafts; nay, the earth itself was entirely obscured on all sides and could not be seen. (28)

ततः क्रुद्धो महाबाहुर्धनुश्चिच्छेद संयुगे ।
अष्टाभिरथ नाराचैः सूतं विव्याध राघवः ॥ २९ ॥

Full of anger, the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma thereupon split asunder the bow of Makarākṣa in the course of the combat. The scion of Raghu further pierced the charioteer with as many as eight steel arrows. (29)

भित्त्वा रथं शरै रामो हत्वा अश्वानपातयत् ।
विरथो वसुधास्थः स मकराक्षो निशाचरः ॥ ३० ॥

Having split asunder the chariot with his arrows and struck the horses, he laid them low. Deprived of his chariot, that prowler of the night, Makarākṣa, stood on the ground. (30)

तत्तिष्ठद् वसुधां रक्षः शूलं जग्राह पाणिना ।
त्रासनं सर्वभूतानां युगान्ताग्निसमप्रभम् ॥ ३१ ॥

Standing on the ground, the aforesaid ogre seized hold of his pike, which struck terror into all created beings and shone like the fire at the end of the world-cycle. (31)

दुरवापं महच्छूलं रुद्रदत्तं भयंकरम् ।
जाज्वल्यमानमाकाशे संहारास्त्रमिवापरम् ॥ ३२ ॥
यं दृष्ट्वा देवताः सर्वा भयार्ता विद्रुता दिशः ।
विभ्राम्य च महच्छूलं प्रज्वलन्तं निशाचरः ॥ ३३ ॥
स क्रोधात् प्राहिणोत् तस्मै राघवाय महाहवे ।
तमापतन्तं ज्वलितं खरपुत्रकराच्च्युतम् ॥ ३४ ॥
बाणैश्चतुर्भिराकाशे शूलं चिच्छेद राघवः ।
स भिन्नो नैकधा शूलो दिव्यहाटकमण्डितः ।
व्यशीर्यत महोल्केव रामबाणार्दितो भुवि ॥ ३५ ॥

Nay, brandishing the great flaming pike, which was difficult to lay one's hands on and had been bestowed on him by Rudra (the god of destruction), which inspired terror and shone brightly in the air like another weapon of universal destruction and seeing which all the gods fled panic-stricken in all directions—the night-stalker furiously hurled it against Śrī Rāma in that major conflict. Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, split with four arrows that flaming pike discharged from the hand of Khara's son, even as it came flying and while it was still in the air. Struck by the arrows of Śrī Rāma and split into many pieces, the aforesaid pike, which was decked with ethereal gold, crumbled on the ground like a colossal meteor. (32—35)

तच्छूलं निहतं दृष्ट्वा रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ।
साधु साध्विति भूतानि व्याहरन्ति नभोगताः ॥ ३६ ॥

Seeing that pike destroyed by Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, the beings standing in the air cried out: "Well done! Bravo!!" (36)

तं दृष्ट्वा निहतं शूलं मकराक्षो निशाचरः ।
मुष्टिमुद्यम्य काकुत्स्थं तिष्ठ तिष्ठेति चाब्रवीत् ॥ ३७ ॥

Seeing that pike destroyed and raising his fist, the prowler of the night, Makarākṣa, called out to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), "Wait, tarry!" (37)

स तं दृष्ट्वा पतन्तं तु प्रहस्य रघुनन्दनः ।
पावकास्त्रं ततो रामः संदधे तु शरासने ॥ ३८ ॥

Seeing him advancing and laughing heartily, Śrī Rāma, the delight of the Raghus, for his part thereupon put to his bow a mystic missile presided over by the god of fire. (38)

तेनास्त्रेण हतं रक्षः काकुत्स्थेन तदा रणे ।
संछिन्नहृदयं तत्र पपात च ममार च ॥ ३९ ॥

Struck on the battlefield with that missile by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, the ogre, who had his heart split open, fell down then and there and died. (39)

दृष्ट्वा ते राक्षसाः सर्वे मकराक्षस्य पातनम् ।
लङ्कामेव प्रधावन्त रामबाणभयार्दिताः ॥ ४० ॥

Stricken with fear of Śrī Rāma's arrows on witnessing the fall of Makarākṣa, all the ogres present ran away straight to Laṅkā. (40)

दशरथनृपसूनुबाणवेगै
रजनिचरं निहतं खरात्मजं तम् ।
प्रददृशुरथ देवताः प्रहृष्टा
गिरिमिव वज्रहतं यथा विकीर्णम् ॥ ४१ ॥

Highly rejoiced, the gods present at the scene watched the aforesaid night-ranger, the son of Khara, killed by the force of the shafts of Śrī Rāma (son of King Daśaratha), and resembling a mountain struck by lightning and shattered. (41)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनाशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ७९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Seventy-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXX

Indrajit puts up a formidable fight under orders of Rāvaṇa and Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa discuss the ways and means of putting an end to him

मकराक्षं हतं श्रुत्वा रावणः समितिंजयः ।
रोषेण महताविष्टो दन्तान् कटकटाय्य च ॥ १ ॥
कुपितश्च तदा तत्र किं कार्यमिति चिन्तयन् ।
आदिदेशाथ संकुद्धो रणायेन्द्रजितं सुतम् ॥ २ ॥

Possessed with violent anger, on hearing of Makarākṣa having been killed, and grinding his teeth in rage, reflecting as to what should be done on that occasion and in that situation, Rāvaṇa, who had (always) been victorious in war, and was filled with fury, forthwith enjoined in the following words his eldest son, Indrajit, to take the field: (1-2)

जहि वीर महावीर्यौ भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
अदृश्यो दृश्यमानो वा सर्वथा त्वं बलाधिकः ॥ ३ ॥

“Remaining invisible or visible (as you please), make short work, O heroic prince, of the two brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, who are endowed with extraordinary prowess; for you are in every way superior to them in might. (3)

त्वमप्रतिमकर्माणमिन्द्रं जयसि संयुगे ।
किं पुनर्मानुषौ दृष्ट्वा न वधिष्यसि संयुगे ॥ ४ ॥

“You have conquered in combat even Indra, the ruler of gods, of incomparable deeds. Will you not then be able to kill two mortals on seeing them on the battlefield?”
(4)

तथोक्तो राक्षसेन्द्रेण प्रतिगृह्य पितुर्वचः ।
यज्ञभूमौ स विधिवत् पावकं जुहुवेन्द्रजित् ॥ ५ ॥

Bowing to the command of his father when enjoined as aforesaid by Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, the said Indrajit poured oblations into the sacred fire with due ceremony on the sacrificial ground. (5)

जुह्वतश्चापि तत्राग्निं रक्तोष्णीषधराः स्त्रियः ।
आजगमुस्तत्र सम्भ्रान्ता राक्षस्यो यत्र रावणिः ॥ ६ ॥

Even as he was pouring oblations into the sacred fire, ogresses working as female attendants at the sacrifice and carrying red turbans (for the use of the priests), nay, seized with a flurry, arrived on the spot where the son of Rāvaṇa was. (6)

शस्त्राणि शरपत्राणि समिधोऽथ बिभीतकाः ।
लोहितानि च वासांसि स्रुवं कार्णायसं तथा ॥ ७ ॥

Weapons such as a lance served as blades of Śara grass for being spread around the sacrificial fire, chips of wood of the Bibhitaka tree (a species of myrobalan tree) which serve as wooden sticks to feed the sacrificial fire, in its place red robes and iron ladles were used in that sacrifice. (7)

सर्वतोऽग्निं समास्तीर्य शरपत्रैः सतोमरैः ।
छागस्य सर्वकृष्णस्य गलं जग्राह जीवतः ॥ ८ ॥

Having strewn the ground on all sides of the fire with other weapons accompanied by lances, the ogre seized hold with reeds of the neck of a live goat entirely black and consigned it to the fire. (8)

सकृद्धोमसमिद्धस्य विधूमस्य महार्चिषः ।
बभूवुस्तानि लिङ्गानि विजयं दर्शयन्ति च ॥ ९ ॥

Such omens as betokened triumph, appeared in the smokeless fire which burst into mighty flames when it was fully aroused by that single offering. (9)

प्रदक्षिणावर्तशिखस्तप्तहाटकसंनिभः ।
हविस्तत् प्रतिजग्राह पावकः स्वयमुत्थितः ॥ १० ॥

Burst into view in person, the god of fire, who was shooting out flames towards the right and who shone brightly like refined gold, received that offering. (10)

हुत्वाग्निं तर्पयित्वाथ देवदानवराक्षसान् ।
आरुरोह रथश्रेष्ठमन्तर्धानगतं शुभम् ॥ ११ ॥

Having offered oblations to the fire and gratified the gods, devils and ogres connected with a sacrifice carried out with a malevolent intention, Indrajit ascended an excellent and splendid chariot capable of going out of sight. (11)

स वाजिभिश्चतुर्भिस्तु बाणैस्तु निशितैर्युतः ।
आरोपितमहाचापः शुशुभे स्यन्दनोत्तमः ॥ १२ ॥

Drawn by four horses, nay, provided with whetted shafts and with a mighty bow placed on it, that excellent chariot looked charming. (12)

जाज्वल्यमानो वपुषा तपनीयपरिच्छदः ।
मृगैश्चन्द्रार्धचन्द्रैश्च स रथः समलंकृतः ॥ १३ ॥

With its appurtenances of gold the aforesaid chariot glittered on account of its frame and was decorated with carved images of antelopes, full moons and crescents. (13)

जाम्बूनदमहाकम्बुर्दीप्तपावकसंनिभः ।
बभूवेन्द्रजितः केतुर्वैदूर्यसमलंकृतः ॥ १४ ॥

Provided with large rings of gold and adorned with cat's-eye gems, the standard of Indrajit shone like a flaming fire. (14)

तेन चादित्यकल्पेन ब्रह्मास्त्रेण च पालितः ।
स बभूव दुराधर्षो रावणिः सुमहाबलः ॥ १५ ॥

Nay, protected by that chariot, effulgent as the sun, as well as by the missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator), the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with exceptional might, was difficult to overpower. (15)

सोऽभिनिर्याय नगरादिन्द्रजित् समितिंजयः ।
हुत्वाग्निं राक्षसैर्मन्त्रैरन्तर्धानगतोऽब्रवीत् ॥ १६ ॥

Issuing out of the city and having acquired the power of going out of sight by pouring oblations into the sacred fire with the utterance of spells sacred to Nirṛti (the progenitor of the race of ogres), the said ogre, Indrajit, who had always been victorious in war, bragged as follows: (16)

अद्य हत्वा रणे यौ तौ मिथ्या प्रव्रजितौ वने ।
जयं पित्रे प्रदास्यामि रावणाय रणेऽधिकम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Having made short work of two mortal princes, who have passed their exile in the forest in vain, I shall indeed secure an eminent victory for my father, Rāvaṇa, today. (17)

अद्य निर्वाणरामुर्वी हत्वा रामं च लक्ष्मणम् ।
करिष्ये परमां प्रीतिमित्युक्त्वान्तरधीयत ॥ १८ ॥

“Having rid the earth of monkeys and dispatched Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, I shall bring supreme felicity to my father today.” Saying so, he became invisible. (18)

आपपाताथ संक्रुद्धो दशग्रीवेण चोदितः ।
तीक्ष्णकार्मुकनाराचैस्तीक्ष्णस्त्विन्द्ररिपू रणे ॥ १९ ॥

Directed by Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, and equipped with a fierce bow and steel shafts, the ardent adversary of Indra, for his part now rushed furiously into the fray. (19)

स ददर्श महावीर्यो नागौ त्रिशिरसाविव ।
सृजन्ताविषुजालानि वीरौ वानरमध्यगौ ॥ २० ॥

He beheld the two heroic princes (Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa), who were endowed with extraordinary prowess and resembled two three-headed serpents* standing in the midst of monkeys and discharging volleys of arrows. (20)

* With the end of their bows rising above their right shoulders and that of their quivers above their left-like two more heads, the two princes are compared here with threeheaded serpents.

इमौ ताविति संचिन्त्य सज्यं कृत्वा च कार्मुकम् ।
संततानेषुधाराभिः पर्जन्य इव वृष्टिमान् ॥ २१ ॥

Concluding that they were the two princes whom he was seeking, nay, stringing his bow, the ogre covered the quarters with streams of arrows as a raining cloud would with torrents of rain. (21)

स तु वैहायसरथो युधि तौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
अचक्षुर्विषये तिष्ठन् विव्याध निशितैः शरैः ॥ २२ ॥

Seated in his aerial car, and remaining out of sight, Indrajit for his part pierced with whetted shafts the two princes, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, standing on the battlefield below. (22)

तौ तस्य शरवेगेन परीतौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
धनुषी सशरे कृत्वा दिव्यमस्त्रं प्रचक्रतुः ॥ २३ ॥

Fitting arrows to their bows when covered by the fury of his shafts, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa revealed divine missiles. (23)

प्रच्छादयन्तौ गगनं शरजालैर्महाबलौ ।
तमस्त्रैः सूर्यसंकाशैर्नैव पस्पर्शतुः शरैः ॥ २४ ॥

Though covering the sky with streams of arrows, the two princes, who were endowed with extraordinary might, could not even touch Indrajit with their arrows, charged with mystic missiles and effulgent as the sun. (24)

स हि धूमान्धकारं च चक्रे प्रच्छादयन्भः ।
दिशश्चान्तर्दधे श्रीमान् नीहारतमसा वृताः ॥ २५ ॥

Nay, the glorious prince actually brought about, by dint of conjuring tricks, darkness accompanied by smoke, thereby obscuring the sky and also rendered the quarters invisible, enveloped as they were by him with the darkness of fog. (25)

नैव ज्यातलनिर्घोषो न च नेमिखुरस्वनः ।
शुश्रुवे चरतस्तस्य न च रूपं प्रकाशते ॥ २६ ॥

Even though he kept moving about, neither the sound produced by the impact of his palm on the bow-string, nor the sound of his chariot's wheels or the clattering of hoofs of the horses, could be heard, nor did his form come to view. (26)

घनान्धकारे तिमिरे शिलावर्षमिवाद्भुतम् ।
स ववर्ष महाबाहुर्नाराचशरवृष्टिभिः ॥ २७ ॥

In the midst of the thick darkness, which rendered one blind, the mighty-armed prince appeared to discharge a marvellous shower of rocks with hails of his steel arrows. (27)

स रामं सूर्यसंकाशैः शरैर्दत्तवरैर्भृशम् ।
विव्याध समरे क्रुद्धः सर्वगात्रेषु रावणिः ॥ २८ ॥

Getting enraged, the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa grievously pierced Śrī Rāma on the battlefield in all limbs with arrows, effulgent as the sun, which had been bestowed (on him) by way of a boon. (28)

तौ हन्यमानौ नाराचैर्धाराभिरिव पर्वतौ ।
हेमपुङ्खान् नरव्याघ्रौ तिग्मान् मुमुचतुः शरान् ॥ २९ ॥

While being hit with steel arrows as a pair of mountains with torrents, the two celebrated tigers among men shot piercing golden-shafted arrows. (29)

अन्तरिक्षे समासाद्य रावणिं कङ्कपत्रिणः ।
निकृत्य पतगा भूमौ पेतुस्ते शोणिताप्लुताः ॥ ३० ॥

Duly reaching the son of Rāvaṇa in the air and piercing him, those shafts, adorned with the plumes of a buzzard, fell to the ground soaked in blood. (30)

अतिमात्रं शरौघेण दीप्यमानौ नरोत्तमौ ।
तानिषून् पततो भल्लैरनेकैर्विचकर्तुः ॥ ३१ ॥

Shining beyond measure with a mass of arrows (clinging to their body), the two foremost of men began to tear asunder those arrows which were falling on them with numerous arrows called by the name of Bhallas. (31)

यतो हि ददृशाते तौ शरान् निपतिताञ्छितान् ।
ततस्तु तौ दाशरथी ससृजातेऽस्त्रमुत्तमम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Those two sons of Daśaratha for their part directed their excellent missiles in the direction from which they saw the aforesaid sharp arrows dropping. (32)

रावणिस्तु दिशः सर्वा रथेनातिरथोऽपतत् ।
विव्याध तौ दाशरथी लघ्वस्त्रो निशितैः शरैः ॥ ३३ ॥

Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, for his part, who was a superior car-warrior, and was swift in discharging missiles, coursed in his chariot on all sides, pierced the aforesaid two sons of Daśaratha with whetted shafts. (33)

तेनातिविद्धौ तौ वीरौ रुक्मपुङ्खैः सुसंहतैः ।
बभूवतुर्दाशरथी पुष्पिताविव किंशुकौ ॥ ३४ ॥

Pierced deeply with well-crafted golden-shafted arrows, those heroic sons of Daśaratha appeared like two Kimśuka trees in blossom. (34)

नास्य वेगगतिं कश्चिन्न च रूपं धनुः शरान् ।
न चास्य विदितं किञ्चित् सूर्यस्येवाभ्रसम्लवे ॥ ३५ ॥

None could perceive the rapid movement nor the form, much less the bow and arrows of Indrajit. Nor could anything about him be known any more than the position of the sun when the sky is thickly overcast with clouds. (35)

तेन विद्धाश्च हरयो निहताश्च गतासवः ।
बभूवुः शतशस्तत्र पतिता धरणीतले ॥ ३६ ॥

Nay, pierced and struck down by him on the battlefield, monkeys dropped dead on the earth's surface in hundreds. (36)

लक्ष्मणस्तु ततः क्रुद्धो भ्रातरं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ।
ब्राह्ममस्त्रं प्रयोक्ष्यामि वधार्थं सर्वरक्षसाम् ॥ ३७ ॥

Roused to anger, Lakṣmaṇa for his part thereupon submitted as follows to his eldest brother, Śrī Rāma: "I shall now fall back upon the mystic missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator) with a view to the destruction of all the ogres." (37)

तमुवाच ततो रामो लक्ष्मणं शुभलक्षणम् ।
नैकस्य हेतो रक्षांसि पृथिव्यां हन्तुमर्हसि ॥ ३८ ॥

Thereupon Śrī Rāma admonished in the following words the aforesaid Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with auspicious bodily marks: "To get square with one individual you ought not to exterminate all the ogres on the surface of the earth. (38)

अयुध्यमानं प्रच्छन्नं प्राञ्जलिं शरणागतम् ।
पलायमानं मत्तं वा न हन्तुं त्वमिहर्हसि ॥ ३९ ॥

"You ought not to kill on this earth one who is not actually fighting, lies hidden, has come for protection with joined palms, is fleeing for life or is intoxicated. (39)

तस्यैव तु वधे यत्नं करिष्यामि महाभुज ।
आदेक्ष्यावो महावेगानस्त्रानाशीविषोपमान् ॥ ४० ॥

"I for one shall make an earnest endeavour for the destruction of Indrajit alone, O mighty-armed one! We two shall press into service mystic missiles endowed with great impetuosity and resembling venomous serpents. (40)

तमेनं मायिनं क्षुद्रमन्तर्हितरथं बलात् ।
राक्षसं निहनिष्यन्ति दृष्ट्वा वानरयूथपाः ॥ ४१ ॥

"On seeing him the commanders of monkey troops will forcibly kill this petty ogre, who is skilled in conjuring tricks and whose chariot remains invisible. (41)

यद्येष भूमिं विशते दिवं वा
रसातलं वापि नभस्तलं वा ।

एवं विगूढोऽपि ममास्त्रदग्धः
पतिष्यते भूमितले गतासुः ॥ ४२ ॥

"Consumed by my mystic missiles, he will fall dead on the ground even if he makes his way into the earth or into heaven, enters the subterranean world or penetrates the vault of heaven, and remains completely hidden in the aforesaid manner." (42)

इत्येवमुक्त्वा वचनं महार्थं
 रघुप्रवीरः प्लवगर्षभैर्वृतः ।
 वधाय रौद्रस्य नृशंसकर्मण-
 स्तदा महात्मा त्वरितं निरीक्षते ॥ ४३ ॥
 Having made the foregoing speech, which was full of great significance, the high-souled Śrī Rāma, the foremost hero of the Raghus, who was surrounded by the foremost of the monkeys, now began to reflect on the speedy means of putting an end to the fierce ogre of cruel deeds. (43)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८० ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकाशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXI

Indrajit kills an illusory living image of Sītā

विज्ञाय तु मनस्तस्य राघवस्य महात्मनः ।
 स निवृत्त्याह्वात् तस्मात् प्रविवेश पुरं ततः ॥ १ ॥

Withdrawing from that encounter on divining the intention of that high-souled scion of Raghu, Indrajit for his part thereupon re-entered the city. (1)

सोऽनुस्मृत्य वधं तेषां राक्षसानां तरस्विनाम् ।
 क्रोधताम्रेक्षणः शूरो निर्जगामाथ रावणिः ॥ २ ॥

Recalling the destruction of those mighty ogres, the heroic son of Rāvaṇa sallied forth for an encounter immediately, his eyes blood-shot through anger. (2)

स पश्चिमेन द्वारेण निर्ययौ राक्षसैर्वृतः ।
 इन्द्रजित् सुमहावीर्यः पौलस्त्यो देवकण्ठकः ॥ ३ ॥

Surrounded by other ogres, the notorious Indrajit, a scion of Sage Pulastya (one of the nine mind-born sons of Brahmā entrusted with the duty of creating the world) and a thorn in the side of gods, who was endowed with exceptional prowess, issued through the western gate. (3)

इन्द्रजित् ततो दृष्ट्वा भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ।
 रणायाभ्युद्यतौ वीरौ मायां प्रादुष्करोत् तदा ॥ ४ ॥

Seeing the two gallant brothers, Śrī

Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, prepared for an encounter in everyway, Indrajit for his part thereupon revealed on that occasion his proficiency in conjuring tricks. (4)

इन्द्रजित् रथे स्थाप्य सीतां मायामयीं तदा ।
 बलेन महतावृत्य तस्या वधमरोचयत् ॥ ५ ॥

Placing an illusory living image of Sītā on his chariot and with a huge army surrounding it, he intended to kill her. (5)

मोहनार्थं तु सर्वेषां बुद्धिं कृत्वा सुदुर्मतिः ।
 हन्तुं सीतां व्यवसितो वानराभिमुखो ययौ ॥ ६ ॥

Making up his mind to hoodwink all who were present there, and resolved to kill 'Sītā', the exceptionally evil-minded ogre for his part advanced to meet the monkeys. (6)

तं दृष्ट्वा त्वभिनिर्यान्तं सर्वे ते काननौकसः ।
 उत्पेतुरभिसंकुद्धाः शिलाहस्ता युयुत्सवः ॥ ७ ॥

Infuriated to see him sallying forth for an encounter, all those denizens of the forest rushed towards him with rocks in their hands, agitated as they were to fight. (7)

हनूमान् पुरतस्तेषां जगाम कपिकुञ्जरः ।
 प्रगृह्य सुमहच्छृङ्गं पर्वतस्य दुरासदम् ॥ ८ ॥

Seizing hold of an enormous mountain peak, which was difficult even to reach for others, Hanumān, an elephant among the monkeys, marched at their head. (8)

स ददर्श हतानन्दां सीतामिन्द्रजितो रथे ।
एकवेणीधरां दीनामुपवासकृशाननाम् ॥ ९ ॥
परिक्लिष्टैकवसनाममृजां राघवप्रियाम् ।
रजोमलाभ्यामालिप्तैः सर्वगात्रैर्वरस्त्रियम् ॥ १० ॥

He beheld in the chariot of Indrajit the cheerless and wretched 'Sītā', the darling of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), a lovely lady, wearing a single tress, clad in a single soiled garment and unadorned, all her limbs covered with dust and mud and her face emaciated through fasts. (9-10)

तां निरीक्ष्य मुहूर्तं तु मैथिलीमध्यवस्य च ।
बभूवाचिरदृष्टा हि तेन सा जनकात्मजा ॥ ११ ॥

Gazing on her awhile and concluding her to be no other than Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, Hanumān for his part became melancholy. He took no time in recognizing her inasmuch as Sītā, daughter of Janaka, had been seen by him before long. (11)

अब्रवीत् तां तु शोकार्ता निरानन्दां तपस्विनीम् ।
दृष्ट्वा रथस्थितां दीनां राक्षसेन्द्रसुतश्रिताम् ॥ १२ ॥
किं समर्थितमस्येति चिन्तयन् स महाकपिः ।
सह तैर्वानरश्रेष्ठैरभ्यधावत रावणिम् ॥ १३ ॥

Seeing that joyless and miserable ascetic woman seated in the chariot stricken with grief, under the sway of Indrajit (son of the ruler of ogres), and wondering what his intention might be in bringing her in his chariot to the battlefield, that great monkey for his part spoke about it to the leaders of monkeys and rushed towards the son of Rāvaṇa with those monkey leaders. (12-13)

तद् वानरबलं दृष्ट्वा रावणिः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।
कृत्वा विकोशं निस्त्रिंशं मूर्ध्नि सीतामकर्षयत् ॥ १४ ॥

Filled with rage on seeing that simian army rushing towards him and unsheathing his sword, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) pulled

'Sītā' by the hair on her head. (14)

तां स्त्रियं पश्यतां तेषां ताडयामास राक्षसः ।
क्रोशन्तीं राम रामेति मायया योजितां रथे ॥ १५ ॥

The ogre began to strike that woman, who had been placed in the chariot by dint of legerdemain, and was crying "Rāma! O Rāma", while the monkeys stood looking on. (15)

गृहीतमूर्धजां दृष्ट्वा हनूमान् दैन्यमागतः ।
दुःखजं वारि नेत्राभ्यामुत्सृजन् मारुतात्मजः ॥ १६ ॥

Dropping tears of agony from his eyes on perceiving her seized by the hair, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, gave way to affliction. (16)

तां दृष्ट्वा चारुसर्वाङ्गीं रामस्य महिषीं प्रियाम् ।
अब्रवीत् परुषं वाक्यं क्रोधाद् राक्षोधिपात्मजम् ॥ १७ ॥

Beholding that cherished consort of Śrī Rāma, who was lovely of all limbs, he angrily addressed the following harsh rebuke to Indrajit (son of the suzerain lord of ogres): (17)

दुरात्मन्नात्मनाशाय केशपक्षे परामृशः ।
ब्रह्मर्षीणां कुले जातो राक्षसीं योनिमाश्रितः ॥ १८ ॥

"It is to your own destruction, O evil-minded one, that you have seized her by the hair on her head. Though descended in the line of Brāhmaṇa Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic Mantras), you have lived in the womb of an ogress. (18)

धिक् त्वां पापसमाचारं यस्य ते मतिरीदृशी ।
नृशंसानार्यं दुर्वृत्तं क्षुद्रं पापपराक्रम ।
अनार्यस्येदृशं कर्म घृणा ते नास्ति निर्घृण ॥ १९ ॥

"Woe be to you of sinful conduct, in whom such a resolve has taken place. O cruel, ignoble and mean scoundrel of sinful prowess, such an act is worthy of a barbarian alone. Obviously there is no pity in you, O ruthless one! (19)

च्युता गृहाच्च राज्याच्च रामहस्ताच्च मैथिली ।
किं तवैषापराद्धा हि यदेनां हंसि निर्दय ॥ २० ॥

“Torn from her home, and her kingdom too as well as from the protection of Śrī Rāma, what wrong has this princess of Mithilā done to you that you are killing her, O pitiless one? (20)

सीतां हत्वा तु न चिरं जीविष्यसि कथंचन।
वधार्हं कर्मणा तेन मम हस्तगतो ह्यसि॥ २१॥

“After dispatching Sītā you shall undoubtedly not survive long in any case. It is due to such a deed that you have actually fallen into my hands, O creature deserving of death! (21)

ये च स्त्रीघातिनां लोका लोकवध्यैश्च कुत्सिताः।
इह जीवितमुत्सृज्य प्रेत्य तान् प्रति लप्स्यसे॥ २२॥

“Yielding up your life in this world, you shall after death descend to those worlds which are the lot of killers of women and are condemned even by those who deserve to be killed by the people.” (22)

इति बुवाणो हनुमान् सायुधैर्हरिर्भिवृतः।
अभ्यधावत् सुसंकुब्धो राक्षसेन्द्रसुतं प्रति॥ २३॥

Speaking thus and attended by monkeys equipped with weapons of destruction such as trees and rocks, Hanumān rushed in great fury towards Indrajit, son of the ruler of ogres. (23)

आपतन्तं महावीर्यं तदनीकं वनौकसाम्।
रक्षसां भीमकोपानामनीकेन न्यवारयत्॥ २४॥

With an army of ogres of redoubtable fury Indrajit intercepted that army of the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods), which was endowed with extraordinary prowess and was advancing towards him. (24)

स तां बाणसहस्रेण विक्षोभ्य हरिवाहिनीम्।
हनूमन्तं हरिश्रेष्ठमिन्द्रजित् प्रत्युवाच ह॥ २५॥

Having caused a stir in that simian army with his thousand arrows, the aforesaid Indrajit, they say, replied as follows to Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys: (25)

सुग्रीवस्त्वं च रामश्च यन्निमित्तमिहागताः।
तां वधिष्यामि वैदेहीमद्यैव तव पश्यतः॥ २६॥

“I am going to make short work this very day, while you stand looking on, of that Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), for whose sake Sugrīva as well as you and Rāma have come hither. (26)

इमां हत्वा ततो रामं लक्ष्मणं त्वां च वानर।
सुग्रीवं च वधिष्यामि तं चानार्यं विभीषणम्॥ २७॥

“Having disposed her of, I shall then make short work of Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa and yourself, O monkey, as also of Sugrīva as well as of that unworthy, Vibhīṣaṇa. (27)

न हन्तव्याः स्त्रियश्चेति यद् ब्रवीषि प्लवंगम्।
पीडाकरममित्राणां यच्च कर्तव्यमेव तत्॥ २८॥

“Nay, what you have said just now, viz., that women should not be killed, is quite correct, O monkey! But that which causes annoyance to one’s enemies need must be done.” (28)

तमेवमुक्त्वा रुदतीं सीतां मायामयीं च ताम्।
शितधारेण खड्गेन निजघानेन्द्रजित् स्वयम्॥ २९॥

Nay, having spoken as aforesaid to Hanumān, Indrajit personally made short work with his sharp-edged sword, of that illusory Sītā, who had been sobbing all the while. (29)

यज्ञोपवीतमार्गेण छिन्ना तेन तपस्विनी।
सा पृथिव्यां पृथुश्रोणी पपात प्रियदर्शना॥ ३०॥

Split asunder by him diagonally that poor lady of broad hips and pleasing aspect sank on the ground. (30)

तामिन्द्रजित् स्त्रियं हत्वा हनूमन्तमुवाच ह।
मया रामस्य पश्येमां प्रियां शस्त्रनिषूदिताम्।
एषा विशस्ता वैदेही निष्फलो वः परिश्रमः॥ ३१॥

Having killed that illusory woman, Indrajit spoke as follows to Hanumān: “Behold this darling of Rāma destroyed by me with a weapon. Here is Sītā, a princess of Videha territory killed. Now vain is your exertion to secure her.” (31)

ततः खड्गेन महता हत्वा तामिन्द्रजित्स्वयम् ।
हृष्टः स रथमास्थाय ननाद च महास्वनम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Nay, mounting his chariot after he had personally done ‘her’ to death with his mighty sword, Indrajit joyfully raised a loud shout. (32)

वानराः शुश्रुवुः शब्दमदूरे प्रत्यवस्थिताः ।
व्यादितास्यस्य नदतस्तद्दुर्गं संश्रितस्य तु ॥ ३३ ॥

Arrayed not far from him, the monkeys heard his roar even as he shouted with his mouth wide open while comfortably seated in that aerial chariot, which was actually difficult of access for others. (33)

तथा तु सीतां विनिहत्य दुर्मतिः
प्रहृष्टचेताः स बभूव रावणिः ।
तं हृष्टरूपं समुदीक्ष्य वानरा
विषण्णरूपाः समभिप्रदुद्रुवुः ॥ ३४ ॥

Having disposed of Sītā as aforesaid, that evil-minded son of Rāvaṇa for his part felt greatly rejoiced in mind. Assuming a melancholy air on seeing him cheerful of aspect, the monkeys fled en masse precipitately. (34)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकाशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic

द्व्यशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXII

Led by Hanumān, the monkeys meet the ogres in an encounter; Hanumān returns to the presence of Śrī Rāma and Indrajit pours oblations into the sacred fire at the sanctuary of Nikumbhilā

श्रुत्वा तु भीमनिर्ह्रादं शक्राशनिसमस्वनम् ।
वीक्ष्यमाणा दिशः सर्वा दुद्रुवुर्वानरा भृशम् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the terrible roar of Indrajit, the monkeys for their part fled with great speed in all directions, gazing on Indrajit whose roar resembled the peal of thunder. (1)

तानुवाच ततः सर्वान् हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
विषण्णवदनान् दीनांस्त्रस्तान् विद्रवतः पृथक् ॥ २ ॥

Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, thereupon spoke as follows to all those monkeys, who wore melancholy looks, were feeling miserable and alarmed and were fleeing singly: (2)

कस्माद् विषण्णवदना विद्रवध्वं प्लवंगमाः ।
त्यक्तयुद्धसमुत्साहाः शूरत्वं क्व नु वो गतम् ॥ ३ ॥

“Having lost your zeal for fighting, why are you fleeing with a downcast mien, O monkey? Where on earth has your valour gone? (3)

पृष्ठतोऽनुव्रजध्वं मामग्रतो यान्तमाहवे ।
शूरैरभिजनोपेतैरयुक्तं हि निवर्तितुम् ॥ ४ ॥

“Return, close on my heels, to the battle while I am marching ahead. It is ill-advised indeed for champions of noble descent to shrink back from the battlefield.” (4)

एवमुक्ताः सुसंकुब्धा वायुपुत्रेण धीमता ।
शैलशृङ्गान् द्रुमांश्चैव जगृहुर्हृष्टमानसाः ॥ ५ ॥

Admonished in these words by the sagacious son of the wind-god, the monkeys, who now felt delighted in mind, seized hold of mountain-peaks and trees as well in great fury. (5)

अभिपेतुश्च गर्जन्तो राक्षसान् वानरर्षभाः ।
परिवार्य हनूमन्तमन्वयुश्च महाहवे ॥ ६ ॥

Nay, surrounding Hanumān on all sides, the leaders of monkeys followed him in the great fight and rushed roaring towards the ogres. (6)

स तैर्वानरमुख्यैस्तु हनूमान् सर्वतो वृतः ।
हुताशन इवार्चिष्मानदहच्छत्रुवाहिनीम् ॥ ७ ॥

Surrounded on all sides by those monkey leaders, the said Hanumān began to annihilate the hostile army like a flaming fire. (7)

स राक्षसानां कदनं चकार सुमहाकपिः ।
वृतो वानरसैन्येन कालान्तकयमोपमः ॥ ८ ॥

Accompanied by the simian army, that exceptionally mighty monkey, who resembled Yama assuming the role of Death at the time of universal dissolution, played havoc among the ogres. (8)

स तु शोकेन चाविष्टः कोपेन महता कपिः ।
हनूमान् रावणिरथे महतीं पातयच्छिलाम् ॥ ९ ॥

Filled with inordinate grief and anger, the aforesaid monkey, Hanumān, for his part hurled a huge rock on the chariot of Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa). (9)

तामापतन्तीं दृष्ट्वैव रथः सारथिना तदा ।
विधेयाश्वसमायुक्तः विदूरमपवाहितः ॥ १० ॥

The moment his charioteer saw the rock coming towards the chariot, the chariot, which was drawn by obedient horses, was now driven aside to a long distance by him. (10)

तमिन्द्रजितमप्राप्य रथस्थं सहसारथिम् ।
विवेश धरणीं भित्त्वा सा शिला व्यर्थमुद्यता ॥ ११ ॥

Failing to reach the aforesaid Indrajit seated in his chariot alongwith the charioteer, the rock in question, which was employed in vain, entered the bowels of the earth after splitting it open. (11)

पतितायां शिलायां तु व्यथिता रक्षसां चमूः ।
निपतन्त्या च शिलया राक्षसा मथिता भृशम् ॥ १२ ॥

As the rock fell, the army of the ogres for its part felt disquieted; nay, the ogres were violently crushed by the rock even as it fell. (12)

तमभ्यधावन् शतशो नदन्तः काननौकसः ।
ते द्रुमांश्च महाकाया गिरिशृङ्गाणि चोद्यताः ॥ १३ ॥

Monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods) in their hundreds rushed roaring towards Indrajit. Nay, seizing hold of trees and mountain-tops too, those colossal monkeys became fully active. (13)

क्षिपन्तीन्द्रजितं संख्ये वानरा भीमविक्रमाः ।
वृक्षशैलमहावर्षं विसृजन्तः प्लवंगमाः ॥ १४ ॥

शत्रूणां कदनं चक्रुर्नेदुश्च विविधैः स्वनैः ।
वानरैस्तैर्महाभीमैर्घोररूपा निशाचराः ॥ १५ ॥

वीर्यादभिहता वृक्षैर्व्यचेष्टन्त रणक्षितौ ।
स सैन्यमभिवीक्ष्याथ वानरार्दितमिन्द्रजित् ॥ १६ ॥

प्रगृहीतायुधः क्रुद्धः परानभिमुखो ययौ ।
स शरौघानवसृजन् स्वसैन्येनाभिसंवृतः ॥ १७ ॥

जघान कपिशार्दूलान् सुबहून् दृढविक्रमः ।
शूलैरशनिभिः खड्गैः पट्टिशैः शूलमुद्गैः ॥ १८ ॥

The monkeys of redoubtable prowess began to rail Indrajit on the battlefield. Nay, discharging a mighty shower of trees and rocks, the monkeys created havoc among the enemies and shouted in various tones. Vehemently struck on all sides with trees by those exceptionally redoubtable monkeys, the rangers of the night of hideous aspect rolled about restlessly on the battlefield.

Seizing hold of his weapons in fury on perceiving the army handled roughly by the monkeys, the aforesaid Indrajit forthwith marched against the enemies. Discharging streams of arrows while surrounded by his contingent, Indrajit of unyielding prowess struck numerous tigers among the monkeys with pikes, Aśanis, swords, sharp-edged spears and Kūṭamudgaras (a concealed weapon similar to a mallet). (14—18)

ते चाप्यनुचरांस्तस्य वानरा जघ्नुराहवे ।
सुस्कन्धविटपैः शैलैः शिलाभिश्च महाबलः ॥ १९ ॥
हनूमान् कदनं चक्रे रक्षसां भीमकर्मणाम् ।
संनिवार्य परानीकमब्रवीत् तान् वनौकसः ॥ २० ॥
हनूमान् संनिवर्तध्वं न नः साध्यमिदं बलम् ।
त्यक्त्वा प्राणान् विचेष्टन्तो रामप्रियचिकीर्षवः ॥ २१ ॥
यन्निमित्तं हि युध्यामो हता सा जनकात्मजा ।
इममर्थं हि विज्ञाप्य रामं सुग्रीवमेव च ॥ २२ ॥
तौ यत् प्रतिविधास्येते तत् करिष्यामहे वयम् ।
इत्युक्त्वा वानरश्रेष्ठो वारयन् सर्ववानरान् ॥ २३ ॥
शनैः शनैरसंत्रस्तः सबलः संन्यवर्तत ।
ततः प्रेक्ष्य हनूमन्तं व्रजन्तं यत्र राघवः ॥ २४ ॥
स होतुकामो दुष्टात्मा गतश्चैत्यं निकुम्भिलाम् ।
निकुम्भिलामधिष्ठाय पावकं जुहवेन्द्रजित् ॥ २५ ॥

Those monkeys too killed his followers in combat. Hanumān, on the other hand, who was endowed with extraordinary might, played havoc among the ogres of terrible deeds with sal trees distinguished by excellent trunks and boughs as well as with rocks. Keeping the hostile army back, Hanumān spoke as follows to those monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods): “Retreat! This army need not be conquered by us any more. That daughter of Janaka—for whom indeed we have fought so far, risking our lives and making a special effort to win, seeking as we did to do what is pleasing to Śrī Rāma—has been killed. Making this fact known to Śrī Rāma as well as to Sugrīva, we shall certainly do that which they will enjoin us to do in return.” Perceiving Hanumān withdrawing to the place where Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) was, the evil-minded ogre proceeded to the sanctuary known by the name of Nikumbhilā, seeking as he did to pour oblations into the sacred fire. Reaching Nikumbhilā, Indrajit poured oblations into the sacred fire. (19—25)

यज्ञभूम्यां ततो गत्वा पावकस्तेन रक्षसा ।
हूयमानः प्रज्ज्वाल होमशोणितभुक् तदा ॥ २६ ॥

While being propitiated with oblations by that ogre on arriving at the sacrificial ground, the sacrificial fire blazed up on consuming the oblations of blood on that occasion. (26)

साचिःपिनद्धो ददृशे होमशोणिततर्पितः ।
संध्यागत इवादित्यः सुतीव्रोऽग्निः समुत्थितः ॥ २७ ॥

Swollen up when propitiated with oblations of blood, the fierce fire, which resembled the evening sun, was seen wrapped in flames. (27)

अथेन्द्रजिद् राक्षसभूतये तु
जुहाव हव्यं विधिना विधानवित् ।
दृष्ट्वा व्यतिष्ठन्त च राक्षसास्ते
महासमूहेषु नयानयज्ञाः ॥ २८ ॥

For the prosperity of the ogres in general, Indrajit for his part, who was well-versed in the technique pertaining to sacrifices, forthwith poured oblations into the sacrificial fire according to the scriptural ordinance. Nay, beholding this, the well-known ogres, who knew what was right and wrong in major conflicts, stood firm by his side. (28)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्व्यशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXIII

Śrī Rāma faints away on being told that Sītā has been done to death.
After consoling him, Lakṣmaṇa prepares for action

राघवश्चापि विपुलं तं राक्षसवनौकसाम्।
श्रुत्वा संग्रामनिर्घोषं जाम्बवन्तमुवाच ह ॥ १ ॥

Nay, hearing that great tumult following the encounter between the ogres and the monkeys (lit., dwellers in the woods), Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) too spoke as follows to Jāmbavān: (1)

सौम्य नूनं हनुमता कृतं कर्म सुदुष्करम्।
श्रूयते च यथा भीमः सुमहानायुधस्वनः ॥ २ ॥

“From the way in which a terrible and exceptionally loud rattling of arms is heard, it appears that a feat exceedingly difficult (to perform for others) has undoubtedly been performed by Hanumān, O dear one! (2)

तद्गच्छ कुरु साहाय्यं स्वबलेनाभिसंवृतः।
क्षिप्रमृक्षपते तस्य कपिश्रेष्ठस्य युध्यतः ॥ ३ ॥

“Therefore, accompanied by your own army (of bears), go and instantly lend your aid, O lord of bears, to that prince of monkeys, who is fighting.” (3)

ऋक्षराजस्तथेत्युक्त्वा स्वेनानीकेन संवृतः।
आगच्छत्पश्चिमं द्वारं हनूमान् यत्र वानरः ॥ ४ ॥

Saying “Amen”, and surrounded by his own army, Jāmbavān (the lord of bears) sought the western gate, where the monkey, Hanumān, was. (4)

अथायान्तं हनूमन्तं ददर्शर्क्षपतिस्तदा।
वानरैः कृतसंग्रामैः श्वसद्भिरभिसंवृतम् ॥ ५ ॥

The lord of bears forthwith saw Hanumān returning at that time accompanied by monkeys, who had given fight and were sighing (on account of grief caused by the destruction of ‘Sītā’). (5)

दृष्ट्वा पथि हनूमांश्च तदृक्षबलमुद्यतम्।
नीलमेघनिभं भीमं संनिवार्य न्यवर्तत ॥ ६ ॥

Beholding that redoubtable army of bears, resembling a dark cloud, on their way, ready for an encounter, and effectively intercepting it, Hanumān retreated with them all. (6)

स तेन सह सैन्येन संनिकर्षं महायशाः।
शीघ्रमागम्य रामाय दुःखितो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ७ ॥

Speedily seeking the presence of Śrī Rāma with that army, the highly illustrious Hanumān sorrowfully submitted to him as follows: (7)

समरे युध्यमानानामस्माकं प्रेक्षतां च सः।
जघान रुदतीं सीतामिन्द्रजिद्रावणात्मजः ॥ ८ ॥

“While we, who were carrying on a fight on the battlefield, stood looking on, that offspring of Rāvaṇa, Indrajit, killed ‘Sītā’, even though she continued to weep. (8)

उद्भ्रान्तचित्तस्तां दृष्ट्वा विषण्णोऽहमरिंदम।
तदहं भवतो वृत्तं विज्ञापयितुमागतः ॥ ९ ॥

Bewildered in mind and dejected on seeing her, O tamer of enemies, I have come back to break the aforesaid news to you.” (9)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राघवः शोकमूर्च्छितः।
निपपात तदा भूमौ छिन्नमूल इव द्रुमः ॥ १० ॥

Rendered insensible through grief on hearing the aforesaid submission of Hanumān, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) forthwith fell to the ground like a tree whose roots have been severed. (10)

तं भूमौ देवसंकाशं पतितं दृश्य राघवम्।
अभिप्रेतुः समुत्पत्य सर्वतः कपिसत्तमाः ॥ ११ ॥

आसिञ्चन् सलिलैश्चैनं पद्मोत्पलसुगन्धिभिः ।

प्रदहन्तमसंहार्यं सहसाग्रिमिवोत्थितम् ॥ १२ ॥

Seeing that scion of Raghu, who looked like a god, fallen, the leaders of monkeys hastened towards him springing from all sides and sprinkled him with water fragrant with the scent of lotuses and lilies even as one would sprinkle an inextinguishable fire which has just flared up, all of a sudden and is burning all. (11-12)

तं लक्ष्मणोऽथ बाहुभ्यां परिष्वज्य सुदुःखितः ।

उवाच राममस्वस्थं वाक्यं हेत्वर्थसंयुतम् ॥ १३ ॥

Encircling Śrī Rāma with his arms, Lakṣmaṇa, who was seized with great agony, forthwith addressed to Śrī Rāma, who was feeling ill at ease, the following submission, which was full of reason and fraught with meaning: (13)

शुभे वर्त्मनि तिष्ठन्तं त्वामार्यं विजितेन्द्रियम् ।

अनर्थेभ्यो न शक्नोति त्रातुं धर्मो निरर्थकः ॥ १४ ॥

“Virtue, O worthy brother, cannot save you, who are sticking to the noble path and have fully mastered the senses, from reverses and is, therefore, useless. (14)

भूतानां स्थावराणां च जङ्गमानां च दर्शनम् ।

यथास्ति न तथा धर्मस्तेन नास्तीति मे मतिः ॥ १५ ॥

“Just as joy is experienced by created beings, both inanimate and animate, virtue is not likewise perceived to be the cause of their happiness. Hence virtue is not the cause of happiness: such is my conclusion. (15)

यथैव स्थावरं व्यक्तं जङ्गमं च तथाविधम् ।

नायमर्थस्तथा युक्तस्त्वद्विधो न विपद्यते ॥ १६ ॥

“Even as it is evident that the inanimate creation is happy (without the concomitant practice of virtue), the animate creation too is happy likewise. Therefore, the presumption that virtue alone prospers is not warranted; for, in that case a purely virtuous man like you would not suffer. (16)

यद्यधर्मो भवेद्भूतो रावणो नरकं व्रजेत् ।

भवांश्च धर्मसंयुक्तो नैव व्यसनमाप्नुयात् ॥ १७ ॥

“Had unrighteousness been effective, Rāvaṇa should have descended into hell; while you, who are endowed with virtue, would never suffer adversity. (17)

तस्य च व्यसनाभावाद्व्यसनं चागते त्वयि ।

धर्मो भवत्यधर्मश्च परस्परविरोधिनौ ॥ १८ ॥

“Nay, since Rāvaṇa is free from calamity, while you have met with misfortune, virtue and vice, which were the contraries of each other, have changed the roles with each other (the one turning into the other). (18)

धर्मेणोपलभेद्धर्ममधर्मं चाप्यधर्मतः ।

यद्यधर्मेण युज्येयुर्येष्वधर्मः प्रतिष्ठितः ॥ १९ ॥

न धर्मेण वियुज्येरन्नाधर्मरुचयो जनाः ।

धर्मेणाचरतां तेषां तथा धर्मफलं भवेत् ॥ २० ॥

“If one invariably attained the fruit of virtue, viz., happiness through virtue and likewise the fruit of unrighteousness alone through unrighteousness, those in whom unrighteousness is rooted would be burdened with the fruit of unrighteousness, viz., suffering. Nor would people who have no leaning towards unrighteousness would be ever deprived of the fruit of virtue, viz., joy. Nay, the fruit of virtue alone would accrue to those holding by the latter. (19-20)

यस्मादर्था विवर्धन्ते येष्वधर्मः प्रतिष्ठितः ।

क्लिश्यन्ते धर्मशीलाश्च तस्मादेतौ निरर्थकौ ॥ २१ ॥

“Since the resources of those in whom unrighteousness is rooted, develop, while those who are given to the practice of virtue suffer; hence these two viz., righteousness and unrighteousness are useless. (21)

वध्यन्ते पापकर्माणो यद्यधर्मेण राघव ।

वधकर्महतोऽधर्मः स हतः कं वधिष्यति ॥ २२ ॥

If it is alleged that those of sinful deeds are destroyed by their own unrighteousness, O scion of Raghu, the unrighteousness itself, consisting as it does in an act of killing etc., will be forthwith destroyed inasmuch as an action is momentary. Whom will that unrighteousness destroy, which is itself destroyed in the course of three seconds? (22)

अथवा विहितेनायं हन्यते हन्ति चापरम्।
विधिः स लिप्यते तेन न स पापेन कर्मणा ॥ २३ ॥

“Or, if a man is destroyed by recourse to a malevolent ritual prescribed in the scriptures or kills another by recourse to such a ritual, the destiny (alone) which is engendered by the aforesaid ritual is tainted by that sinful act and not the agent. (23)

अदृष्टप्रतिकारेण अव्यक्तेनासता सता।
कथं शक्यं परं प्राप्तुं धर्मेणारिविकर्षण ॥ २४ ॥

“How can another, viz., the person going to be destroyed, be reached, O destroyer of enemies, by righteousness in the form of a malevolent ritual, which, being unconscious, has never known how to retaliate, is unmanifest and is, therefore, as good as non-existent? (24)

यदि सत्स्यात्सतां मुख्य नासत्स्यात् तव किंचन।
त्वया यदीदृशं प्राप्तं तस्मात् तन्नोपपद्यते ॥ २५ ॥

“If a good destiny (engendered by a virtuous act) existed, O jewel among the virtuous, no evil would ever accrue to you. Since, however, such evil has been reaped by you, therefore, the hypothesis that the destiny engendered by good acts is real is not proved.* (25)

अथवा दुर्बलः क्लीबो बलं धर्मोऽनुवर्तते।
दुर्बलो हतमर्यादो न सेव्य इति मे मतिः ॥ २६ ॥

“If being feeble and ineffective, virtue needs the help of might, the former, which lacks strength and has been deprived of its capacity, should no longer be pursued: such is my view. (26)

बलस्य यदि चेद्धर्मो गुणभूतः पराक्रमैः।
धर्ममुत्सृज्य वर्तस्व यथा धर्मे तथा बले ॥ २७ ॥

“Giving up the predominance of virtue by plucking up courage, if the former is subordinate to might, depend on might as you do now on virtue. (27)

अथ चेत्सत्यवचनं धर्मः किल परंतप।
अनृतं त्वय्यकरणे किं न बद्धस्त्वया विना ॥ २८ ॥

If, on the other hand, it is urged by you that virtue in the form of redeeming the truthfulness of your father is being followed by you, O scourge of your enemies, your father was disunited from you by force of the mendacity which was resorted to by him in not redeeming his announcement made regarding installing you as the Prince Regent. Were you not bound by that announcement too? (28)

यदि धर्मो भवेद्भूत अधर्मो वा परंतप।
न स्म हत्वा मुनिं वज्री कुर्यादित्यां शतक्रतुः ॥ २९ ॥

“Had virtue alone been worth pursuing (to the exclusion of unrighteousness) or unrighteousness (to the exclusion of virtue), O scourge of your enemies, Indra (who is presupposed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices as a condition precedent to his attaining Indrahood), the wielder of the

* The dissertation contained in verses 14 to 25 above disproving the existence of good and evil destiny engendered by good and evil acts respectively was apparently given by Lakṣmana in a mood of frustration which had come upon him on seeing Śrī Rāma disconsolate over the ‘death’ of his beloved spouse. Even as falling a prey to grief on the part of the divine Śrī Rāma at the destruction of an illusory living image of his darling was a mere sport of love, the utterance of such apparently incoherent words on the part of Lakṣmana too in a fit of agony on seeing Śrī Rāma agonized shows his agitation caused by love. Later on, as his grief subsides, Lakṣmana himself says in verse 44 below that he had given expression to such things only to assuage the grief of Śrī Rāma and spur him on to action.

thunderbolt, would not have performed a horse-sacrifice (to atone for the sin of having killed a Brāhmaṇa) on killing a hermit (viz., Viśwarūpa, son of Twaṣṭā*). (29)

अधर्मसंश्रितो धर्मो विनाशयति राघव।

सर्वमेतद्यथाकामं काकुत्स्थ कुरुते नरः ॥ ३० ॥

“Virtue destroys enemies only when united with strength (something other than virtue), O scion of Raghu! Therefore, a wise man takes recourse to every such means (viz., virtue and strength both) at will, O scion of Kakutstha! (30)

मम चेदं मतं तात धर्मोऽयमिति राघव।

धर्ममूलं त्वया छिन्नं राज्यमुत्सृजता तदा ॥ ३१ ॥

“Nay my opinion is that righteousness consists in such recourse to both the aforesaid expedients (viz., virtue and strength). The very roots of Dharma in the shape of earthly gain have been severed by you in that you spurned sovereignty the other day (when it was being offered to you). (31)

अर्थेभ्योऽथ प्रवृद्धेभ्यः संवृतेभ्यस्ततस्ततः।

क्रियाः सर्वाः प्रवर्तन्ते पर्वतेभ्य इवापगाः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Even as streams flow from mountains, all undertakings (those conducive to union with God as well as those conducive to material enjoyment) follow from riches brought from place to place and augmented. (Those carried on in a disinterested spirit lead to union with God, while those actuated by interested motives make for enjoyment). (32)

अर्थेन हि विमुक्तस्य पुरुषस्याल्पचेतसः।

विच्छिद्यन्ते क्रियाः सर्वा ग्रीष्मे कुसरितो यथा ॥ ३३ ॥

“All the undertakings of a man of meagre intelligence, forsaken by wealth, are interrupted even like small streams in summer. (33)

सोऽयमर्थं परित्यज्य सुखकामः सुखैधितः।

पापमाचरते कर्तुं तदा दोषः प्रवर्तते ॥ ३४ ॥

“Renouncing wealth within easy reach, a man brought up in comfort and seeking comfort then proceeds to commit sin (in the shape of thieving etc.,) and evil (in the form of punishment) follows from it. (34)

यस्यार्थास्तस्य मित्राणि यस्यार्थास्तस्य बान्धवाः।

यस्यार्थाः स पुमाल्लोके यस्यार्थाः स च पण्डितः ॥ ३५ ॥

“Friends gather round him in whom riches abide; kinsfolk too stand by him in whom riches have found their way. He alone is honourable, in whom riches find their place; nay, he alone is learned, in whom riches have found their abode. (35)

यस्यार्थाः स च विक्रान्तो यस्यार्थाः स चबुद्धिमान्।

यस्यार्थाः स महाभागो यस्यार्थाः स गुणाधिकः ॥ ३६ ॥

“Nay, he alone is gallant, to whom riches have flown; and he alone is clever, in whom riches have come to stay. He alone is highly fortunate, in whom riches exist; again he alone is superior in excellences, in whom riches have found their receptacle. (36)

अर्थस्यैते परित्यागे दोषाः प्रव्याहृता मया।

राज्यमुत्सृजता धीर येन बुद्धिस्त्वया कृता ॥ ३७ ॥

“The evils attendant on the abjuration of wealth have been dwelt upon by me here in the shape of their contraries (verses 35-36 above). The ground on which the resolve was made by you to sacrifice your all, while forswearing the kingdom, O resolute one, is not known to me. (37)

यस्यार्था धर्मकामार्थास्तस्य सर्वं प्रदक्षिणम्।

अधनेनार्थकामेन नार्थः शक्यो विचिन्विता ॥ ३८ ॥

“The other ends too in the shape of—virtue and pleasure—of a man in whom riches abide are easily accomplished; nay, everything turns exceedingly favourable to him. Wealth, however, cannot be attained without endeavour by a penniless man seeking wealth and even hunting for it.

(38)

हर्षः कामश्च दर्पश्च धर्मः क्रोधः शमो दमः ।

अर्थादेतानि सर्वाणि प्रवर्तन्ते नराधिप ॥ ३९ ॥

“Delight and sensuous pleasure, pride, virtue, anger and control of the mind and the senses—all these become effective through wealth alone, O ruler of men!

(39)

येषां नश्यत्ययं लोकश्चरतां धर्मचारिणाम् ।

तेऽर्थास्त्वयि न दृश्यन्ते दुर्दिनेषु यथा ग्रहाः ॥ ४० ॥

“Those riches due to renunciation of which worldly happiness of those practising austerities and treading the path of virtue goes to the dogs are not found in you any more than the nine planets are seen on cloudy days.

(40)

त्वयि प्रव्रजिते वीर गुणेश्च वचने स्थिते ।

रक्षसापहृता भार्या प्राणैः प्रियतरा तव ॥ ४१ ॥

“While you have been in exile, faithful to the pledge of your father, your consort, who was dearer to you than life itself, was borne away by the ogre, Rāvaṇa, O heroic prince!

(41)

तदद्य विपुलं वीर दुःखमिन्द्रजिता कृतम् ।

कर्मणा व्यपनेष्यामि तस्मादुत्तिष्ठ राघव ॥ ४२ ॥

“I shall fully dispel with my exploits today the great agony caused by Indrajit, O gallant prince! Therefore, rise, O scion of Raghu! (42)

उत्तिष्ठ नरशार्दूल दीर्घबाहो धृतव्रत ।

किमात्मानं महात्मानमात्मानं नावबुध्यसे ॥ ४३ ॥

“Get up, O tiger among men! Why don’t you recognize yourself to be the Supreme Spirit, endowed with vast intelligence, O long-armed prince, who have kept your vows? (43)

अयमनघ तवोदितः प्रियार्थं

जनकसुतानिधनं निरीक्ष्य रुष्टः ।

सरथ्रगजहयां सराक्षसेन्द्रां

भृशमिषुभिर्विनिपातयामि लङ्काम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“This submission has been made by me to win your pleasure. Enraged to learn about the destruction of Janaka’s daughter, I shall completely destroy with my arrows Laṅkā with its chariots, elephants and horses, alongwith Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, O sinless one!”

(44)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्र्यशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुरशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXIV

Telling Śrī Rāma the secret of the conjuring trick practised by Indrajit, Vibhīṣaṇa assures him of Sītā being still alive and urges him to send Lakṣmaṇa with an army to the sanctuary of Nikumbhilā

राममाश्वासमाने तु लक्ष्मणे भ्रातृवत्सले ।

निक्षिप्य गुल्मान् स्वस्थाने तत्रागच्छद् विभीषणः ॥ १ ॥

नानाप्रहरणैर्वीरैश्चतुर्भिरभिसंवृतः ।

नीलाञ्जनचयाकारैर्मातंगैरिव

यूथपैः ॥ २ ॥

Having restored the simian troops to their position while Lakṣmaṇa, who was so fond of his elder brother, was reassuring Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa for his part made his appearance there, surrounded by four champions armed with various weapons and resembling elephants, who were leaders of their herds and looked like heaps of collyrium. (1-2)

सोऽभिगम्य महात्मानं राघवं शोकलालसम् ।
वानरांश्चापि ददृशे बाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणान् ॥ ३ ॥

Approaching the high-souled Lakṣmaṇa, a scion of Raghu, he found him entirely given up to grief and the monkeys too with their eyes full of tears. (3)

राघवं च महात्मानमिक्ष्वाकुकुलनन्दनम् ।
ददर्श मोहमापन्नं लक्ष्मणस्याङ्गमाश्रितम् ॥ ४ ॥

He also beheld the high-souled Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the delight of Ikṣvāku's race, fallen into a swoon and lying in the lap of Lakṣmaṇa. (4)

व्रीडितं शोकसंतप्तं दृष्ट्वा रामं विभीषणः ।
अन्तर्दुःखेन दीनात्मा किमेतदिति सोऽब्रवीत् ॥ ५ ॥

Vibhīṣaṇa felt depressed in spirits due to mental anguish on seeing Śrī Rāma put out of countenance and tormented with grief. He said, "What is this?" (5)

विभीषणमुखं दृष्ट्वा सुग्रीवं तांश्च वानरान् ।
लक्ष्मणोवाच मन्दार्थमिदं बाष्पपरिप्लुतः ॥ ६ ॥

Fixing his gaze on the face of Vibhīṣaṇa and looking at Sugrīva and the celebrated monkeys, Lakṣmaṇa, who was bathed in tears, spoke in the following terse language: (6)

हता इन्द्रजिता सीता इति श्रुत्वैव राघवः ।
हनूमद्वचनात् सौम्य ततो मोहमुपाश्रितः ॥ ७ ॥

"Immediately on hearing through the words of Hanumān that Sītā has been killed by Indrajit, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, O friend, has fallen into a swoon for that reason." (7)

कथयन्तं तु सौमित्रिं संनिवार्य विभीषणः ।
पुष्कलार्थमिदं वाक्यं विसंज्ञं राममब्रवीत् ॥ ८ ॥

Restraining the son of Sumitrā even while he was speaking, Vibhīṣaṇa, for his part, made the following submission, which was full of ample meaning, to Śrī Rāma, who was lying unconscious: (8)

मनुजेन्द्रार्तरूपेण यदुक्तस्त्वं हनूमता ।
तदयुक्तमहं मन्ये सागरस्येव शोषणम् ॥ ९ ॥

"I hold that what you have been told by Hanumān with a sorrowful mien, O ruler of men, to be absurd as the drying up of the sea. (9)

अभिप्रायं तु जानामि रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ।
सीतां प्रति महाबाहो न च घातं करिष्यति ॥ १० ॥

"I, for my part, know the design of the evil-minded Rāvaṇa with reference to Sītā, O mighty-armed one! He would never cause her to be killed. (10)

याच्यमानः सुबहुशो मया हितचिकीर्षुणा ।
वैदेहीमुत्सृजस्वेति न च तत् कृतवान् वचः ॥ ११ ॥

"Nay, even though being solicited very often by me, who wished well of him, in the words: 'Give up the princess of the Videha territory!' he would never heed that advice of mine. (11)

नैव साम्रा न दानेन न भेदेन कुतो युधा ।
सा द्रष्टुमपि शक्येत नैव चान्येन केनचित् ॥ १२ ॥

"She cannot even be perceived in any wise, much less killed, by anyone else by recourse to persuasion, gift or sowing dissension, much less by recourse to war. (12)

वानरान् मोहयित्वा तु प्रतियातः स राक्षसः ।
मायामयीं महाबाहो तां विद्धि जनकात्मजाम् ॥ १३ ॥

"That ogre, Indrajit, for his part withdrew from the battlefield after hoodwinking the monkeys. Know that daughter of Janaka, who was seemingly killed by him, to be illusory, O mighty-armed one! (13)

चैत्यं निकुम्भिलामद्य प्राप्य होमं करिष्यति ।
 हुतवानुपयातो हि देवैरपि सवासवैः ॥ १४ ॥
 दुराधर्षो भवत्येष संग्रामे रावणात्मजः ।
 तेन मोहयता नूनमेषा माया प्रयोजिता ॥ १५ ॥
 विघ्नमन्विच्छता तत्र वानराणां पराक्रमे ।
 ससैन्यास्तत्र गच्छामो यावत्तन्न समाप्यते ॥ १६ ॥

“Duly reaching the sanctuary known by the name of Nikumbhilā today, he will pour oblations into the sacred fire. Having returned after pouring oblations into the sacred fire, Indrajit, sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa, will undoubtedly prove difficult to overcome in battle even for gods including Indra, the ruler of gods. Surely this conjuring trick (in the shape of killing an illusory living effigy of Sītā) was employed by him in order to put us off the scent, anticipating, as he did, interruption in his sacrificial performance at the hands of the monkeys in the event of their prowess remaining unchecked on the battlefield. We shall, therefore, proceed to that place with an army while the sacrificial performance is not yet over. (14—16)

त्यजैनं नरशार्दूल मिथ्या संतापमागतम् ।
 सीदते हि बलं सर्वं दृष्ट्वा त्वां शोककर्षितम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Shake off, O tiger among men, this agony which has come upon you without any real cause. Seeing you stricken with grief, the entire army is feeling distressed. (17)

इह त्वं स्वस्थहृदयस्तिष्ठ सत्त्वसमुच्छ्रितः ।
 लक्ष्मणं प्रेषयास्माभिः सह सैन्यानुकर्षिभिः ॥ १८ ॥

“Very elevated as you are in courage, stay you here, confident at heart, and dispatch Lakṣmaṇa with us, who are taking the army alongwith us. (18)

एष तं नरशार्दूलो रावणिं निशितैः शरैः ।
 त्याजयिष्यति तत्कर्म ततो वध्यो भविष्यति ॥ १९ ॥

“With his whetted shafts this tiger among men will compel the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa to discontinue that ritual; then he will be prone to being dispatched. (19)

तस्यैते निशितास्तीक्ष्णाः पत्रिपत्राङ्गवाजिनः ।
 पतत्रिण इवासौम्याः शराः पास्यन्ति शोणितम् ॥ २० ॥

“These whetted and piercing arrows of Lakṣmaṇa, which fly swiftly, furnished as they are with the limbs of birds in the form of their feathers, will drink Indrajit’s blood like cruel birds. (20)

तत् संदिश महाबाहो लक्ष्मणं शुभलक्षणम् ।
 राक्षसस्य विनाशाय वज्रं वज्रधरो यथा ॥ २१ ॥

“Therefore, O mighty-armed one, dispatch Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with auspicious bodily marks, for the destruction of the ogre, Indrajit, even as Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, would employ the thunderbolt for the destruction of his enemies, the demons. (21)

मनुजवर न कालविप्रकर्षो
 रिपुनिधनं प्रति यत्क्षमोऽद्य कर्तुम् ।
 त्वमतिसृज रिपोर्वधाय वज्रं
 दिविजरिपोर्मथने यथा महेन्द्रः ॥ २२ ॥

“Since, O jewel among human beings (the progeny of Manu), loss of time in compassing the death of the enemy, Indrajit, is no longer desirable in anyway, send Lakṣmaṇa for making short work of the enemy even as the mighty Indra, the ruler of gods, would hurl his thunderbolt for the destruction of an enemy of gods (lit., those born in heaven). (22)

समाप्तकर्मा हि स राक्षसर्षभो
 भवत्यदृश्यः समरे सुरासुरैः ।
 युयुत्सता तेन समाप्तकर्मणा
 भवेत् सुराणामपि संशयो महान् ॥ २३ ॥

“On concluding the ritual, that prince of ogres will turn invisible on the battlefield to gods and demons alike. There will be great danger even to gods in fighting with him when he has concluded the ritual and feels inclined to fight.” (23)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुरशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चाशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXV

Importuned by Vibhīṣaṇa, Śrī Rāma commands Lakṣmaṇa to march against Indrajit to make short work of him, and Lakṣmaṇa arrives with an army near the sanctuary of Nikumbhilā

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राघवः शोककर्षितः ।
नोपधारयते व्यक्तं यदुक्तं तेन रक्षसा ॥ १ ॥

Even on hearing the aforesaid submission of Vibhīṣaṇa, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who was stricken with grief, could not make out clearly what was submitted by that ogre. (1)

ततो धैर्यमवष्टभ्य रामः परपुंजयः ।
विभीषणमुपासीनमुवाच कपिसंनिधौ ॥ २ ॥

Plucking up courage, Śrī Rāma, the conqueror of hostile citadels, spoke as follows to Vibhīṣaṇa, seated by his side, in the presence of the monkey, Hanumān: (2)

नैर्ऋताधिपते वाक्यं यदुक्तं ते विभीषण ।
भूयस्तच्छ्रोतुमिच्छामि ब्रूहि यत्ते विवक्षितम् ॥ ३ ॥

“I wish to hear once more, O suzerain lord of ogres (lit., the progeny of Nirṛti, the ogre presiding over the south-west), that submission which was made by you, O Vibhīṣaṇa! Repeat that which was sought to be conveyed by you.” (3)

राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा वाक्यं वाक्यविशारदः ।
यत् तत् पुनरिदं वाक्यं बभाषेऽथ विभीषणः ॥ ४ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma,

a scion of Raghu, Vibhīṣaṇa, who was skilled in expression, forthwith repeated as follows the same submission, which was made by him before: (4)

यथाऽऽज्ञप्तं महाबाहो त्वया गुल्मनिवेशनम् ।
तत् तथानुष्ठितं वीर त्वद्वाक्यसमनन्तरम् ॥ ५ ॥

“Immediately after your command, the marshalling of troops was done by me in the same way as was enjoined by you, O mighty-armed hero! (5)

तान्यनीकानि सर्वाणि विभक्तानि समन्ततः ।
विन्यस्ता यूथपाश्चैव यथान्यायं विभागशः ॥ ६ ॥

“All those troops have been divided and arrayed all-round and their commanders too have been allotted their respective posts according to their rank. (6)

भूयस्तु मम विज्ञाप्यं तच्छृणुष्व महाप्रभो ।
त्वय्यकारणसंतप्ते संतप्तहृदया वयम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Now hear, O mighty lord, that which remains to be submitted by me yet. When you are afflicted without any cause, we too feel pained at heart. (7)

त्यज राजन्मिमं शोकं मिथ्या संतापमागतम् ।
यदियं त्यज्यतां चिन्ता शत्रुहर्षविवर्धिनी ॥ ८ ॥

“Therefore, shake off, O prince, this grief and agony, which have appeared in you without any ostensible reason. This anxiety too should be given up inasmuch as it considerably enhances the joy of the enemy. (8)

उद्यमः क्रियतां वीर हर्षः समुपसेव्यताम्।
प्राप्तव्या यदि ते सीता हन्तव्याश्च निशाचराः ॥ १ ॥

“Let a strenuous and continuous effort be made, O hero, and let enthusiasm be fully resorted to, if Sitā is to be recovered by you and the rangers of the night are to be exterminated. (9)

रघुनन्दन वक्ष्यामि श्रूयतां मे हितं वचः।
साध्वयं यातु सौमित्रिर्बलेन महता वृतः ॥ १० ॥
निकुम्भिलायां सम्प्राप्तं हन्तुं रावणिमाहवे।
धनुर्मण्डलनिर्मुक्तैराशीविषविषोपमैः ॥ ११ ॥
शरैर्हन्तुं महेष्वासो रावणिं समितिजयः।
तेन वीरेण तपसा वरदानात् स्वयंभुवः।
अस्त्रं ब्रह्मशिरः प्राप्तं कामगाश्च तुरङ्गमाः ॥ १२ ॥

“Pray, listen carefully, O delight of the Raghus, to my salutary counsel, which I am presently going to submit. Accompanied by a huge army, this son of Sumitrā should proceed to dispatch in an encounter Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, duly arrived in the sanctuary of Nikumbhilā. Lakṣmaṇa, who is armed with a mighty bow, who has ever been victorious in combat, is capable of killing the son of Rāvaṇa with the arrows deadly as the poison of a venomous serpent, shot from his bow, which assumes a circular shape when stretched at full length. A mystic missile known by the name of Brahmaśira (so-called because it is presided over by Brahmā) as well as horses coursing at his will has been well-nigh secured* by that hero by virtue of a boon granted by Brahmā (the self-born creator) pleased with his asceticism. (10—12)

स एष किल सैन्येन प्राप्तः किल निकुम्भिलाम्।
यद्युत्तिष्ठेत् कृतं कर्म हतान् सर्वाश्च विद्धि नः ॥ १३ ॥

“Nay, they say he has already actually reached Nikumbhilā with his army. If he gets up after concluding the ritual undertaken by him, take us all as killed. (13)

निकुम्भिलामसम्प्राप्तमकृताग्निं च यो रिपुः।
त्वामाततायिनं हन्यादिन्द्रशत्रो स ते वधः ॥ १४ ॥

“‘That enemy of yours who strikes you while you are marching against him with a stretched bow, and while you have not yet reached the foot of the banyan tree known by the name of Nikumbhilā or even while you have not yet propitiated the fire, will prove to be the cause of your death, O enemy of Indra!’ (14)

वरो दत्तो महाबाहो सर्वलोकेश्वरेण वै।
इत्येवं विहितो राजन् वधस्तस्यैष धीमतः ॥ १५ ॥

“Such was the boon granted in his favour by Brahmā, the ruler of all the worlds, O mighty-armed prince, and in this way has the end of that sagacious ogre been ordained. (15)

वधायेन्द्रजितो राम संदिशस्व महाबलम्।
हते तस्मिन् हतं विद्धि रावणं ससुहृद्व्रणम् ॥ १६ ॥

“Therefore, depute, O Rāma, Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary might, for compassing the destruction of Indrajit. When he is killed, take Rāvaṇa as killed with the host of his kinsfolk.” (16)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा रामो वाक्यमथाब्रवीत्।
जानामि तस्य रौद्रस्य मायां सत्यपराक्रमम् ॥ १७ ॥

* The boon granted by Brahmā was that at the conclusion of the pouring of oblations into the sacrificial fire by Indrajit the ogre would receive from the god of fire a chariot drawn by horses coursing at his will as the mystic missile known by the name of Brahmaśira and that by virtue of that mystic missile he would remain death-proof till he had discharged the first arrow.

Hearing the plea of Vibhīṣaṇa, Śrī Rāma forthwith made the following reply: “I am aware, O ogre of unfailing prowess, of the conjuring skill practised by that fierce ogre. (17)

स हि ब्रह्मास्त्रवित् प्राज्ञो महामायो महाबलः ।
करोत्यसंज्ञान् संग्रामे देवान् सवरुणानपि ॥ १८ ॥

“Skilled in the use of the mystic missile presided over by Brahmā (the creator) and highly intelligent, nay, a great master of conjuring tricks and endowed with extraordinary might, he can actually render unconscious in combat even gods including Varuṇa. (18)

तस्यान्तरिक्षे चरतः सरथस्य महायशः ।
न गतिर्ज्ञायते वीर सूर्यस्येवाभ्रसम्प्लवे ॥ १९ ॥

“When he drives in the air in his chariot, his movement, O highly illustrious hero, cannot be perceived any more than that of the sun coursing behind a mass of clouds.” (19)

राघवस्तु रिपोर्ज्ञात्वा मायावीर्यं दुरात्मनः ।
लक्ष्मणं कीर्तिसम्पन्नमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २० ॥

Knowing, as he did, the power of the conjuring tricks of the evil-minded enemy, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, for his part spoke as follows to the illustrious Lakṣmaṇa: (20)

यद् वानरेन्द्रस्य बलं तेन सर्वेण संवृतः ।
हनूमत्प्रमुखैश्चैव यूथपैः सह लक्ष्मण ॥ २१ ॥
जाम्बवेनर्क्षपतिना सह सैन्येन संवृतः ।
जहि तं राक्षससुतं मायाबलसमन्वितम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Surrounded by the entire army which stands at the disposal of Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, and also accompanied by troop-commanders with Hanumān as their leader and protected by Jāmbavān, the lord of bears, who, too, will be accompanied by an army, make short work, O Lakṣmaṇa, of that son of an ogre, rich in the power of magic. (21-22)

अयं त्वां सचिवैः सार्धं महात्मा रजनीचरः ।
अभिज्ञस्तस्य मायानां पृष्ठतोऽनुगमिष्यति ॥ २३ ॥

“This high-souled night-ranger, Vibhīṣaṇa, who is fully aware of his conjuring tricks, will follow you at your heels with his ministers.” (23)

राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा लक्ष्मणः सविभीषणः ।
जग्राह कार्मुकश्रेष्ठमन्यद् भीमपराक्रमः ॥ २४ ॥

Hearing the command of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, Lakṣmaṇa of redoubtable prowess, who was accompanied by Vibhīṣaṇa, took up another bow, the foremost of bows. (24)

संनद्धः कवची खड्गी सशरी वामचापभृत् ।
रामपादावुपस्पृश्य हृष्टः सौमित्रिरब्रवीत् ॥ २५ ॥

Touching the feet of Śrī Rāma and feeling delighted, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) who was fully equipped for an encounter, clad in armour and armed with a sword and excellent arrows, and bore the bow in his left hand, submitted as follows: (25)

अद्य मत्कार्मुकोन्मुक्ताः शरा निर्भिद्य रावणिम् ।
लङ्कामभिपतिष्यन्ति हंसाः पुष्करिणीमिव ॥ २६ ॥

“Piercing Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) today, the arrows shot from my bow will drop into Laṅkā even as swans descend into a lotus-pond. (26)

अद्यैव तस्य रौद्रस्य शरीरं मामकाः शराः ।
विधमिष्यन्ति भित्त्वा तं महाचापगुणच्युताः ॥ २७ ॥

“Splitting the body of that violent ogre when shot from the string of my mighty bow, my arrows will make short work of him this very day.” (27)

एवमुक्त्वा तु वचनं द्युतिमान् भ्रातुरग्रतः ।
स रावणिवधाकांक्षी लक्ष्मणस्त्वरितं ययौ ॥ २८ ॥

Having made the aforesaid submission in the presence of his eldest brother, Śrī

Rāma, the brilliant Lakṣmaṇa for his part departed with all speed, longing as he did to dispose of Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa. (28)

सोऽभिवाद्य गुरोः पादौ कृत्वा चापि प्रदक्षिणम् ।
निकुम्भिलामभिययौ चैत्वं रावणिपालितम् ॥ २९ ॥

Having saluted the feet of his eldest brother and also walked round him clockwise, he set out for the sanctuary of Nikumbhilā, protected by Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa. (29)

विभीषणेन सहितो राजपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ।
कृतस्वस्त्ययनो भ्रात्रा लक्ष्मणस्त्वरितो ययौ ॥ ३० ॥

Accompanied by Vibhīṣaṇa, the mighty Prince, Lakṣmaṇa, for whom Mantras invoking good-luck were recited by his own eldest brother, hastened away. (30)

वानराणां सहस्रैस्तु हनूमान् बहुभिर्वृतः ।
विभीषणश्च सामात्यो लक्ष्मणं त्वरितं ययौ ॥ ३१ ॥

Hanumān, who was surrounded by several thousands of monkeys, and Vibhīṣaṇa, who was accompanied by his ministers, followed Lakṣmaṇa quickly. (31)

महता हरिसैन्येन सवेगमभिसंवृतः ।
ऋक्षराजबलं चैव ददर्श पथि विष्टितम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Followed with impetuosity by a large army of monkeys, Lakṣmaṇa also beheld the army of Jāmbavān, the ruler of bears, stationed on the way. (32)

स गत्वा दूरमध्वानं सौमित्रिर्मित्रनन्दनः ।
राक्षसेन्द्रबलं दूरादपश्यद् व्यूहमाश्रितम् ॥ ३३ ॥

Having covered a great distance, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), the delight of his friends, perceived from afar the army of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, ranged in battle-array. (33)

स सम्प्राप्य धनुष्याणिर्मायायोगमरिंदमः ।
तस्थौ ब्रह्मविधानेन विजेतुं रघुनन्दनः ॥ ३४ ॥

Duly reaching Nikumbhilā, that tamer of his enemies, Lakṣmaṇa (the delight of the Raghus), stood, bow in hand, to vanquish utterly Indrajit (who took recourse to conjuring tricks as an expedient in war) in conformity with Brahmā's ordinance in the form of the boon granted by him in favour of Indrajit (vide verse 14 above). (34)

विभीषणेन सहितो राजपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ।
अङ्गदेन च वीरेण तथानिलसुतेन च ॥ ३५ ॥
विविधममलशस्त्रभास्वरं तद्
ध्वजगहनं गहनं महारथैश्च ।

प्रतिभयतममप्रमेयवेगं

तिमिरमिव द्विषतां बलं विवेश ॥ ३६ ॥

Accompanied by Vibhīṣaṇa as also by the valiant Aṅgada as well as by Hanumān (son of the wind-god), the mighty prince, Lakṣmaṇa, penetrated that heterogeneous army of the enemy, which was resplendent with spotless weapons and thick with ensigns, and which abounded in huge chariots, was exceedingly formidable and was endowed with immeasurable impetuosity—even as one would penetrate a thick veil of darkness. (35-36)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चाशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षडशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXVI

In the course of an encounter of the monkeys with the ogres, Hanumān plays havoc among the hostile army and challenges Indrajit to a duel and Lakṣmaṇa catches sight of the ogre

अथ तस्यामवस्थायां लक्ष्मणं रावणानुजः ।
परेषामहितं वाक्यमर्थसाधकमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

In that situation Vibhīṣaṇa, the youngest brother of Rāvaṇa, forthwith tendered to Lakṣmaṇa an advice, which was conducive to his interest and detrimental to the enemies.

(1)

यदेतद् राक्षसानीकं मेघश्यामं विलोक्यते ।
एतदायोध्यतां शीघ्रं कपिभिश्च शिलायुधैः ॥ २ ॥

“Let this army of ogres, which is seen here, dark as a cloud, be quickly engaged in battle by the monkeys, using rocks as their weapon.

(2)

तस्यानीकस्य महतो भेदने यत लक्ष्मण ।
राक्षसेन्द्रसुतोऽप्यत्र भिन्ने दृश्यो भविष्यति ॥ ३ ॥

“Nay, make an effort in the direction of overthrowing that mighty army, O Lakṣmaṇa!
When the yonder army is destroyed, Indrajit, son of the ruler of ogres, too will become visible here.

(3)

स त्वमिन्द्राशनिप्रख्यैः शरैरवकिरन् परान् ।
अभिद्रवाशु यावद् वै नैतत् कर्म समाप्यते ॥ ४ ॥

“Therefore, so long as this undertaking of Indrajit is not actually carried through, promptly assail you the enemies, covering them with your arrows resembling the thunderbolt of Indra, the ruler of gods.

(4)

जहि वीर दुरात्मानं मायापरमधार्मिकम् ।
रावणिं क्रूरकर्माणं सर्वलोकभयावहम् ॥ ५ ॥

“Destroy, O hero, the evil-minded and unrighteous Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, of cruel deeds, who is given up to conjuring tricks and is the terror of all the worlds.”

(5)

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा लक्ष्मणः शुभलक्षणः ।
ववर्ष शरवर्षेण राक्षसेन्द्रसुतं प्रति ॥ ६ ॥

Hearing the counsel of Vibhīṣaṇa, Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with auspicious bodily marks, began to cover the army of ogres with a rain of shafts in order that it may descend on Indrajit, son of the ruler of ogres.

(6)

ऋक्षाः शाखामृगाश्चैव द्रुमप्रवरयोधिनः ।
अभ्यधावन्त सहितास्तदनीकमवस्थितम् ॥ ७ ॥

Bears and monkeys, too, who fought with big trees in this hands, rushed together towards that army drawn up in battle-array.

(7)

राक्षसाश्च शितैर्बाणैरसिभिः शक्तितोमरैः ।
अभ्यवर्तन्त समरे कपिसैन्यजिघांसवः ॥ ८ ॥

Eager to exterminate the simian army, ogres too launched a counter-attack on the battlefield with their sharp arrows, swords, javelins and lances.

(8)

स सम्प्रहारस्तुमुलः संजज्ञे कपिरक्षसाम् ।
शब्देन महता लङ्कां नादयन् वै समन्ततः ॥ ९ ॥

That encounter between the monkeys and ogres proved to be a tumultuous one, rendering Laṅkā noisy, as it did on all sides with its mighty uproar.

(9)

शस्त्रैश्च विविधाकारैः शितैर्बाणैश्च पादपैः ।
उद्यतैर्गिरिशृङ्गैश्च घोरैराकाशमावृतम् ॥ १० ॥

The sky on that battlefield was covered with weapons of various shapes as well as with sharp arrows and uplifted trees and formidable mountain-peaks.

(10)

राक्षसा वानरेन्द्रेषु विकृताननबाहवः ।
निवेशयन्तः शस्त्राणि चक्रुस्ते सुमहद्भयम् ॥ ११ ॥

Directing their weapons towards the monkey-chiefs, ogres of mis-shapen faces and arms created great terror. (11)

तथैव सकलैर्वृक्षैर्गिरिशृङ्गैश्च वानराः ।
अभिजघ्नुर्निजघ्नुश्च समरे सर्वराक्षसान् ॥ १२ ॥

The monkeys, too, likewise, wounded and struck down all the ogres on the battlefield with full trees and mountain-peaks. (12)

ऋक्षवानरमुख्यैश्च महाकायैर्महाबलैः ।
राक्षसां युध्यमानानां महद्भयमजायत ॥ १३ ॥

A great fear was caused among the ogres, fighting as they did with the foremost of bears and monkeys endowed with gigantic forms and extraordinary might. (13)

स्वमनीकं विषण्णं तु श्रुत्वा शत्रुभिरर्दितम् ।
उदतिष्ठत दुर्धर्षः स कर्मण्यननुष्ठिते ॥ १४ ॥

Hearing of his own army being dispirited, assailed as it was heavily by the enemy, Indrajit, who was difficult to overpower, got up even while the ritual had not yet been carried through. (14)

वृक्षान्धकारान्निर्गत्य जातक्रोधः स रावणिः ।
आरुरोह रथं सज्जं पूर्वयुक्तं सुसंयतम् ॥ १५ ॥

Emerging from the darkness occasioned by the trees in whose shade he was pouring oblations into the sacred fire, the aforesaid Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), whose indignation was aroused by the disconcerting report, mounted his firmly equipped chariot, to which horses had already been harnessed and stood ready. (15)

स भीमकार्मुकशरः कृष्णाञ्जनचयोपमः ।
रक्तास्यनयनो भीमो बभौ मृत्युरिवान्तकः ॥ १६ ॥

With his coppery face and red eyes, the redoubtable ogre, who was armed with a formidable bow and arrow and resembled a heap of black collyrium, looked like the all-destroying Death. (16)

दृष्ट्वैव तु रथस्थं तं पर्यवर्तत तद् बलम् ।
राक्षसां भीमवेगानां लक्ष्मणेन युयुत्सताम् ॥ १७ ॥

Immediately on seeing him seated in his chariot, the aforesaid army of ogres of terrible impetuosity, who were eager to fight with Lakṣmaṇa, ranged round Indrajit. (17)

तस्मिंस्तु काले हनुमानरुजत् स दुरासदम् ।
धरणीधरसंकाशो महावृक्षमरिंदमः ॥ १८ ॥

At that time the celebrated Hanumān, the tamer of his enemies, for his part, who resembled a mountain, uprooted a huge tree, which was difficult to wield. (18)

स राक्षसानां तत् सैन्यं कालाग्निरिव निर्दहन् ।
चकार बहुभिर्वृक्षैर्निःसंजं युधि वानरः ॥ १९ ॥

Consuming that army of ogres like the fire of universal destruction, the aforesaid monkey, Hanumān, rendered it unconscious on the battlefield by battering it with numerous trees. (19)

विध्वंसयन्तं तरसा दृष्ट्वैव पवनात्मजम् ।
राक्षसानां सहस्राणि हनूमन्तमवाकिरन् ॥ २० ॥

Immediately on perceiving the son of the wind-god playing havoc with his might, thousands of ogres pounded Hanumān with a hail of weapons. (20)

शितशूलधराः शूलैरसिभिश्चासिपाणयः ।

शक्तिहस्ताश्च शक्तीभिः पट्टिशैः पट्टिषायुधाः ॥ २१ ॥

परिघैश्च गदाभिश्च कुन्तैश्च शुभदर्शनैः ।

शतशश्च शतघ्नीभिरायसैरपि मुद्गरैः ॥ २२ ॥

घोरैः परशुभिश्चैव भिन्दिपालैश्च राक्षसाः ।

मुष्टिभिर्वज्रकल्पैश्च तलैरशनिसनिभैः ॥ २३ ॥

अभिजघ्नुः समासाद्य समन्तात् पर्वतोपमम् ।

तेषामपि च संकुद्धश्चकार कदनं महत् ॥ २४ ॥

Approaching Hanumān, who looked like a mountain, ogres bearing pointed pikes struck him on all sides with pikes, those carrying swords in their hands, with swords;

those carrying javelins in their hands, with javelins; those armed with sharp-edged spears, with spears; and others with iron bludgeons and maces as also with bright-looking spears and Śataghnīs (stones or cylindrical pieces of wood studded with iron spikes and used as a missile) in their hundreds, as also with steel hammers and even so with formidable axes and Bhindipālas (a kind of sling for throwing stones) as also with their fists, which descended like lightning, and slaps, which fell like the thunderbolt. Seized with a fury, Hanumān played great havoc even among them. (21—24)

स ददर्श कपिश्रेष्ठमचलोपममिन्द्रजित्।

सूदमानमसंत्रस्तममित्रान् पवनात्मजम् ॥ २५ ॥

The notorious Indrajit beheld Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god), the foremost of the monkeys, who resembled a mountain, fearlessly destroying his adversaries. (25)

स सारथिमुवाचेदं याहि यत्रैष वानरः।

क्षयमेव हि नः कुर्याद् राक्षसानामुपेक्षितः ॥ २६ ॥

He spoke to his charioteer as follows:

“Drive to the spot where the yonder monkey is seen. If ignored, he will undoubtedly compass the destruction of all of us, ogres.” (26)

इत्युक्तः सारथिस्तेन ययौ यत्र स मारुतिः।

वहन् परमदुर्धर्षं स्थितमिन्द्रजितं रथे ॥ २७ ॥

Transporting Indrajit, who was exceedingly difficult to overcome, seated as he was in the chariot, when commanded as aforesaid by him, the charioteer drove in his chariot to the place where that son of the wind-god was. (27)

सोऽभ्युपेत्य शरान् खड्गान् पट्टिशांश्च परश्वधान्।

अभ्यवर्षत दुर्धर्षः कपिमूर्धनि राक्षसः ॥ २८ ॥

Going near, that ogre, who was difficult to overpower, let fall arrows, swords, sharp-edged spears and axes on the head of the monkey, Hanumān. (28)

तानि शस्त्राणि घोराणि प्रतिगृह्य स मारुतिः।

रोषेण महताविष्टो वाक्यं चेदमुवाच ह ॥ २९ ॥

Being attacked with those deadly weapons on his own head, they say, that son of the wind-god was seized with great fury and spoke as follows: (29)

युध्यस्व यदि शूरोऽसि रावणात्मज दुर्मते।

वायुपुत्रं समासाद्य न जीवन् प्रतियास्यसि ॥ ३० ॥

“Fight if you are a hero, O evil-minded Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa)! Having met the son of the wind-god in me, you shall not be able to return alive. (30)

बाहुभ्यां सम्प्रयुध्यस्व यदि मे द्वन्द्वमाहवे।

वेगं सहस्व दुर्बुद्धे ततस्त्वं रक्षसां वरः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Strive with me with your arms, if you enter into a duel with me on the field of battle. Withstand my impetuosity, O evil-minded one! Then only will you be accounted as the foremost of the ogres.” (31)

हनूमन्तं जिघांसन्तं समुद्यतशरासनम्।

रावणात्मजमाचष्टे लक्ष्मणाय विभीषणः ॥ ३२ ॥

Vibhiṣaṇa pointed out Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa) to Lakṣmaṇa in the following words, while, with bow upraised, Indrajit was seeking to make short work of Hanumān. (32)

यः स वासवनिर्जेता रावणस्यात्मसम्भवः।

स एष रथमास्थाय हनूमन्तं जिघांसति ॥ ३३ ॥

“Having taken his seat in a chariot, the yonder son of Rāvaṇa, Indrajit, who is the reputed conqueror of Indra (the ruler of gods), seeks to kill Hanumān. (33)

तमप्रतिमसंस्थानैः शरैः शत्रुनिवारणैः।

जीवितान्तकैर्यौरेः सौमित्रे रावणिं जहि ॥ ३४ ॥

“Pray, make short work, O son of Sumitrā, of that son of Rāvaṇa with your formidable arrows of incomparable workmanship, capable of repulsing the enemy and putting an end to one's life." (34)

इत्येवमुक्तस्तु तदा महात्मा
विभीषणेनारिविभीषणेन ।
ददर्श तं पर्वतसंनिकाशं
रथस्थितं भीमबलं दुरासदम् ॥ ३५ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षडशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्ताशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXVII

Exchange of hot words between Indrajit and Vibhīṣaṇa

एवमुक्त्वा तु सौमित्रिं जातहर्षो विभीषणः ।
धनुष्याणि तमादाय त्वरमाणो जगाम सः ॥ १ ॥

Taking Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), who bore a bow in his hand, after having spoken to him as aforesaid, Vibhīṣaṇa, who felt rejoiced, hastened away. (1)

अविदूरं ततो गत्वा प्रविश्य तु महद् वनम् ।
अदर्शयत् तत्कर्म लक्ष्मणाय विभीषणः ॥ २ ॥

Moving not very far from that place and penetrating deep into an extensive thicket, Vibhīṣaṇa for his part showed to Lakṣmaṇa the place where Indrajit was going to pour oblations into the sacred fire. (2)

नीलजीमूतसंकाशं न्यग्रोधं भीमदर्शनम् ।
तेजस्वी रावणभ्राता लक्ष्मणाय न्यवेदयत् ॥ ३ ॥

The glorious brother of Rāvaṇa showed to Lakṣmaṇa a banyan tree of fearful aspect, resembling a dark cloud and spoke as follows: (3)

इहोपहारं भूतानां बलवान् रावणात्मजः ।
उपहृत्य ततः पश्चात् संग्राममभिवर्तते ॥ ४ ॥

"Having offered oblations to the spirits

Spoken to in these words at that time by Vibhīṣaṇa, the terror of his enemies, the high-souled Lakṣmaṇa for his part gazed on that ogre of terrific might, who, seated in his chariot, closely looked like a mountain and was difficult to approach. (35)

at this place, the mighty Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa) proceeds to the battlefield after that. (4)

अदृश्यः सर्वभूतानां ततो भवति राक्षसः ।
निहन्ति समरे शत्रून् बध्नाति च शरोत्तमैः ॥ ५ ॥

"The ogre then becomes invisible to all created beings and in that state destroys his enemies in combat and, also ensnares them, by means of his excellent arrows. (5)

तमप्रविष्टं न्यग्रोधं बलिनं रावणात्मजम् ।
विध्वंसय शरैर्दीप्तैः सरथं साश्वसारथिम् ॥ ६ ॥

"Destroy with your flaming shafts the mighty Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa) with his chariot, horses and charioteer while he has not yet reached the banyan tree." (6)

तथेत्युक्त्वा महातेजाः सौमित्रिर्मित्रनन्दनः ।
बभूवावस्थितस्तत्र चित्रं विस्फारयन् धनुः ॥ ७ ॥

Saying "Amen!", Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), the delight of his friends, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, took his stand there, twanging his marvellous bow at full length. (7)

स रथेनाग्निवर्णेन बलवान् रावणात्मजः ।
इन्द्रजित् कवची खड्गी सध्वजः प्रत्यदृश्यत ॥ ८ ॥

Instantly there appeared the mighty
Indrajit, sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa, clad in armour, armed with a sword and distinguished by his ensign, in a chariot which shone like fire. (8)

तमुवाच महातेजाः पौलस्त्यमपराजितम् ।
समाह्वये त्वां समरे सम्यग् युद्धं प्रयच्छ मे ॥ ९ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary ardour, spoke as follows to that scion of Sage Pulastya, who had never been vanquished in combat before: "I challenge you to an encounter. Pray, give battle to me in a straight contest." (9)

एवमुक्तो महातेजा मनस्वी रावणात्मजः ।
अब्रवीत् परुषं वाक्यं तत्र दृष्ट्वा विभीषणम् ॥ १० ॥

Challenged in these words, the strong-minded Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa), who was endowed with extraordinary energy, uttered the following harsh words on seeing Vibhiṣaṇa there:
(10)

इह त्वं जातसंवृद्धः साक्षात् भ्राता पितुर्मम ।
कथं द्रुहसि पुत्रस्य पितृव्यो मम राक्षस ॥ ११ ॥

"Born and brought up in this race of Sage Pulastya, you are a real brother of my father, and are my uncle. How then do you bear hostility to me, your nephew (son),
O ogre? (11)

न ज्ञातित्वं न सौहार्दं न जातिस्तव दुर्मते ।
प्रमाणं न च सौंदर्यं न धर्मो धर्मदूषण ॥ १२ ॥

"There is neither feeling of consanguinity, nor friendliness, nor pride of birth, nor again right judgement, nor brotherly feeling, nor piety in you, O perverse one,
the obloquy of virtue! (12)

शोच्यस्त्वमसि दुर्बुद्धे निन्दनीयश्च साधुभिः ।
यस्त्वं स्वजनमुत्सृज्य परभृत्यत्वमागतः ॥ १३ ॥

"You are pitiable, nay, deserve to be reproached by the virtuous in that, having abandoned your own kind, you have sought service with the enemy, O evil-minded one! (13)

नैतच्छिथिलया बुद्ध्या त्वं वेत्सि महदन्तरम् ।
क्व च स्वजनसंवासः क्व च नीच पराश्रयः ॥ १४ ॥

"With your slack understanding you do not discern the great difference between the two. The two are poles apart: living together with one's kindred and taking refuge with strangers, O vile ogre! (14)

गुणवान् वा परजनः स्वजनो निर्गुणोऽपि वा ।
निर्गुणः स्वजनः श्रेयान् यः परः पर एव सः ॥ १५ ॥

"Even if a stranger is endowed with all excellences and one's own kinsman is devoid of virtues, a relation, though wanting in merit, is preferable; he, however, who is a stranger is always a stranger. (15)

यः स्वपक्षं परित्यज्य परपक्षं निषेवते ।
स स्वपक्षे क्षयं याते पश्चात् तैरेव हन्यते ॥ १६ ॥

"He who, renouncing his own kind, takes sides with a stranger is destroyed by those people of the other side themselves, when his own kinsfolk have met their end at their hands. (16)

निरनुक्रोशता चेयं यादृशी ते निशाचर ।
स्वजनेन त्वया शक्यं पौरुषं रावणानुज ॥ १७ ॥

"The ruthlessness of the kind shown by you in pointing out my vulnerable point,
O ranger of the night, and the manliness exhibited by you in escorting Lakṣmaṇa to this spot, could be shown by you, a kinsman alone, O youngest brother of Rāvaṇa!"
(17)

इत्युक्तो भ्रातृपुत्रेण प्रत्युवाच विभीषणः ।
अजानन्निव मच्छीलं किं राक्षस विकथ्यसे ॥ १८ ॥

Taunted in these words by his brother's son, Indrajit, Vibhiṣaṇa replied as follows:
"Why do you speak perversely like this,

O ogre, as though you were unaware of my disposition? (18)

राक्षसेन्द्रसुतासाधो पारुष्यं त्यज गौरवात् ।
कुले यद्यप्यहं जातो रक्षसां क्रूरकर्मणाम् ।
गुणो यः प्रथमो नृणां तन्मे शीलमराक्षसम् ॥ १९ ॥

“Give up harshness of speech in view of my seniority, O impious son of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres! Even though I was born in the race of ogres of cruel deeds, my disposition, consisting as it does of Sattva or goodness (the foremost virtue of human beings), is not ogre-like. (19)

न रमे दारुणेनाहं न चाधर्मेण वै रमे ।
भ्रात्रा विषमशीलोऽपि कथं भ्राता निरस्यते ॥ २० ॥

“I do not delight in cruel action, nor indeed do I revel in unrighteousness. But how can a brother be expelled by his brother, even though the former’s disposition is dissimilar? (20)

धर्मात् प्रच्युतशीलं हि पुरुषं पापनिश्चयम् ।
त्यक्त्वा सुखमवाप्नोति हस्तादाशीविषं यथा ॥ २१ ॥

“Renouncing a man of sinful resolve, whose conduct has swerved from righteousness, one undoubtedly attains happiness even as one who shakes off a venomous serpent from his hand. (21)

परस्वहरणे युक्तं परदाराभिमर्शकम् ।
त्याज्यमाहुर्दुर्गुत्मानं वेश्म प्रच्वलितं यथा ॥ २२ ॥

“The wise speak of the evil-minded fellow, who is intent on seizing other’s property and has intercourse with another’s wife, as worth shunning in the same way as a house in flames. (22)

परस्वानां च हरणं परदाराभिमर्शनम् ।
सुहृदामतिशङ्का च त्रयो दोषाः क्षयावहाः ॥ २३ ॥

“To take possession of other’s property and have intercourse with another’s wife and over-suspiciousness with regard to one’s friends—are the three faults which lead to destruction. (23)

महर्षीणां वधो घोरः सर्वदेवैश्च विग्रहः ।
अभिमानश्च रोषश्च वैरत्वं प्रतिकूलता ॥ २४ ॥
एते दोषा मम भ्रातुर्जीवितैश्वर्यनाशनाः ।
गुणान् प्रच्छादयामासुः पर्वतानिव तोयदाः ॥ २५ ॥

“The terrible slaughter of eminent Ṛṣis and war on all the gods, nay, haughtiness, irascibility, lasting animosity and refractoriness—these failings, which put an end to one’s life and lordship, have obscured the good qualities of my eldest brother, Rāvaṇa, as clouds would veil mountains. (24-25)

दोषैरैतैः परित्यक्तो मया भ्राता पिता तव ।
नेयमस्ति पुरी लङ्का न च त्वं न च ते पिता ॥ २६ ॥

“My brother, and your father, was abandoned by me on account of the vices enumerated above. Neither will this city of Lāṅkā exist any longer, nor you, nor your father. (26)

अतिमानश्च बालश्च दुर्विनीतश्च राक्षस ।
बद्धस्त्वं कालपाशेन ब्रूहि मां यद् यदिच्छसि ॥ २७ ॥

“Full of great pride, nay, foolish and ill-mannered, and caught in the noose of Death, as you are, say whatsoever you will, O ogre! (27)

अद्येह व्यसनं प्राप्तं यन्मां परुषमुक्तवान् ।
प्रवेष्टुं न त्वया शक्यं न्यग्रोधं राक्षसाधम ॥ २८ ॥

“This calamity has come to you today because you have spoken harshly to me. The banyan tree can no longer be reached by you, O vile ogre! (28)

धर्षयित्वा च काकुत्स्थं न शक्यं जीवितुं त्वया ।
युध्यस्व नरदेवेन लक्ष्मणेन रणे सह ।
हतस्त्वं देवताकार्यं करिष्यसि यमक्षयम् ॥ २९ ॥

“Nay, on attacking Lakṣmaṇa (a scion of Kakutstha), it will not be possible for you to survive. Strive with Prince Lakṣmaṇa on the battlefield. Reaching the abode of Yama, the god of retribution, when made short work of by Lakṣmaṇa, you will accomplish the purpose of gods by causing satisfaction to them. (29)

निदर्शयस्वात्मबलं समुद्यतं
 कुरुष्व सर्वायुधसायकव्यम् ।
 न लक्ष्मणस्यैत्य हि बाणगोचरं
 त्वमद्य जीवन् सबलो गमिष्यसि ॥ ३० ॥

“Displaying your fully developed might, exhaust all your weapons and arrows.
 Reaching, however, the range of Lakṣmaṇa’s arrows, you shall not return alive with your army today.” (30)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्ताशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टाशीतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXVIII

Exchange of hot words between Lakṣmaṇa and Indrajit, followed by a fierce fight

विभीषणवचः श्रुत्वा रावणिः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।
 अब्रवीत् परुषं वाक्यं क्रोधेनाभ्युत्पपात च ॥ १ ॥

Filled with anger on hearing the reply of Vibhīṣaṇa, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) spoke harsh words again in fury. (1)

उद्यतायुधनिस्त्रिंशो रथे सुसमलंकृते ।
 कालाश्वयुक्ते महति स्थितः कालान्तकोपमः ॥ २ ॥
 महाप्रमाणमुद्यम्य विपुलं वेगवद् दृढम् ।
 धनुर्भीमबलो भीमं शरांश्चामित्रनाशनान् ॥ ३ ॥

Lifting his enormous, strong and terrible bow of considerable length, which was endowed with great momentum, and arrows which were capable of destroying the enemy, the ogre, who was endowed with terrible might and was seated in a huge chariot artistically decorated and drawn by black horses with his sword and other weapons upraised, looked like Death, the destroyer of all. (2-3)

तं ददर्श महेष्वासो रथस्थः समलंकृतः ।
 अलंकृतममित्रघ्नो रावणस्यात्मजो बली ॥ ४ ॥
 हनूमत्पृष्ठमारूढमुदयस्थरविप्रभम् ।
 उवाचैनं सुसंरब्धः सौमित्रिं सविभीषणम् ॥ ५ ॥

तांश्च वानरशार्दूलान् पश्यध्वं मे पराक्रमम् ।
 अद्य मत्कार्मुकोत्सृष्टं शरवर्षं दुरासदम् ॥ ६ ॥
 मुक्तवर्षमिवाकाशे धारयिष्यथ संयुगे ।
 अद्य वो मामका बाणा महाकार्मुकनिःसृताः ।
 विधमिष्यन्ति गात्राणि तूलराशिमिवानलः ॥ ७ ॥

The mighty Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), the destroyer of his enemies, who was armed with a large bow and was seated in a chariot and fully adorned, beheld Lakṣmaṇa, who, mounted on the shoulders of Hanumān and embellished by his own splendour, shone like the sun appearing on the eastern hill. Highly enraged, he spoke as follows to Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), accompanied by Vibhīṣaṇa, as well as to those tigers among the monkeys:
 “Behold my prowess. You will forthwith sustain on the battlefield today a hail of shafts discharged from my bow, which will be difficult to approach like a shower poured by clouds in the air. Today my arrows shot from this mighty bow will consume your bodies as fire would consume a pile of cotton. (4—7)

तीक्ष्णसायकनिर्भिन्नान् शूलशक्त्यृष्टितोमरैः ।
अद्य वो गमयिष्यामि सर्वानेव यमक्षयम् ॥ ८ ॥

“Armed with pikes, javelins and lances, I shall dispatch you all, once you are pierced with my sharp arrows, to the abode of Yama (the god of retribution) today. (8)

सृजतः शरवर्षाणि क्षिप्रहस्तस्य संयुगे ।
जीमूतस्येव नदतः कः स्थास्यति ममाग्रतः ॥ ९ ॥

“Who dare stand before me as I shot hails of shafts on the battlefield with a swift hand, thundering like a cloud? (9)

रात्रियुद्धे तदा पूर्वं वज्राशनिसमैः शरैः ।
शायितौ तौ मया भूयो विसंज्ञौ सपुरःसरौ ॥ १० ॥

“Formerly in the course of a night engagement on that day you two celebrated princes were laid low by me with my shafts, which were equal to the thunderbolt and the weapon Aśani, and then lay unconscious with your leading warriors, Sugriva and others. (10)

स्मृतिर्न तेऽस्ति वा मन्ये व्यक्तं यातो यमक्षयम् ।
आशीविषसमं क्रुद्धं यन्मां योद्धुमुपस्थितः ॥ ११ ॥

“Since, however, you are here to give battle to me, enraged as I am like a venomous serpent, I presume the thought of it no longer exists in your mind or evidently you are on the road to the abode of Yama.” (11)

तच्छ्रुत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रस्य गर्जितं राघवस्तदा ।
अभीतवदनः क्रुद्धो रावणिं वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ १२ ॥

Enraged to hear the foregoing braggadocio of Indrajit, a ruler of the ogres, Lakṣmaṇa, a scion of Rāghu, replied as follows to the son of Rāvaṇa with an intrepid mien. (12)

उक्तश्च दुर्गमः पारः कार्याणां राक्षस त्वया ।
कार्याणां कर्मणा पारं यो गच्छति स बुद्धिमान् ॥ १३ ॥

“The successful conclusion of your undertakings has been proclaimed by you,

O ogre, even though it is difficult to achieve. He alone is clever, who carries through his undertakings indeed, and not in words alone. (13)

स त्वमर्थस्य हीनार्थो दुरवापस्य केनचित् ।
वाचा व्याहृत्य जानीषे कृतार्थोऽस्मीति दुर्मते ॥ १४ ॥

“Proclaiming through words alone the achievement of your end in the shape of worsting me, which is difficult to attain for anyone; though lacking in the capacity to achieve your purpose, you think that you have accomplished your end, O evil-minded one! (14)

अन्तर्धानगतेनाजौ यत्त्वया चरितस्तदा ।
तत्कराचरितो मार्गो नैष वीरनिषेवितः ॥ १५ ॥

“The path which was adopted by you, viz., remaining invisible on the battlefield, is the one trodden by thieves; it is not the path chosen by heroes. (15)

यथा बाणपथं प्राप्य स्थितोऽस्मि तव राक्षस ।
दर्शयस्वाद्य तत्तेजो वाचा त्वं किं विकथ्यसे ॥ १६ ॥

“Having reached the range of your shafts, I duly stand before you, O ogre! Exhibit your well-known prowess today. Why should you brag with your tongue?” (16)

एवमुक्तो धनुर्भीमं परामृश्य महाबलः ।
ससर्ज निशितान् बाणानिन्द्रजित् समितिंजयः ॥ १७ ॥

Seizing hold of his dreaded bow when challenged thus by Lakṣmaṇa, Indrajit, who was endowed with extraordinary might and was ever victorious in combat, discharged whetted arrows on his adversary. (17)

तेन सृष्टा महावेगाः शराः सर्पविषोपमाः ।
सम्प्राप्य लक्ष्मणं पेतुः श्वसन्त इव पन्नगाः ॥ १८ ॥

Duly reaching Lakṣmaṇa, the arrows discharged by Indrajit, which flew with great velocity and were deadly as the venom of snakes, hit Lakṣmaṇa, hissing like serpents. (18)

शरैरतिमहावेगैर्वेगवान् रावणात्मजः ।
सौमित्रिमिन्द्रजिद् युद्धे विव्याध शुभलक्षणम् ॥ १९ ॥

With the aforesaid arrows of extreme velocity the impetuous Indrajit, sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa, pierced in combat Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), who was endowed with auspicious bodily marks. (19)

स शरैरतिविद्धाङ्गो रुधिरेण समुक्षितः ।
शुशुभे लक्ष्मणः श्रीमान् विधूम इव पावकः ॥ २० ॥

Bathed in blood, his limbs cruelly pierced with arrows, the said glorious Lakṣmaṇa shone like a smokeless flame. (20)

इन्द्रजित् त्वात्मनः कर्म प्रसमीक्ष्याभिगम्य च ।
विनद्य सुमहानादमिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २१ ॥

Contemplating his own feat, nay, approaching Lakṣmaṇa and emitting an exceedingly loud cry, Indrajit for his part spoke to him as follows: (21)

पत्रिणः शितधारास्ते शरा मत्कार्मुकच्युताः ।
आदास्यन्तेऽद्य सौमित्रे जीवितं जीवितान्तकाः ॥ २२ ॥

“The sharp-pointed and deadly arrows discharged from my bow provided as they are with feathers will take your life today, O son of Sumitrā! (22)

अद्य गोमायुसङ्गाश्च श्येनसङ्गाश्च लक्ष्मण ।
गृध्राश्च निपतन्तु त्वां गतासुं निहतं मया ॥ २३ ॥

“Let packs of jackals and hawks as well as vultures descend upon you when, struck by me, you have fallen dead. (23)

क्षत्रबन्धुं सदानार्यं रामः परमदुर्मतिः ।
भक्तं भ्रातरमद्यैव त्वां द्रक्ष्यति हतं मया ॥ २४ ॥

“The extremely stupid Rāma will see you, his devoted younger brother, a Kṣatriya in name only, ever ignoble, killed by me this very day. (24)

विस्त्रस्तकवचं भूमौ व्यपविद्धशरासनम् ।
हतोत्तमाङ्गं सौमित्रे त्वामद्य निहतं मया ॥ २५ ॥

“He will find you with your armour fallen on the ground, your bow thrown about and your head severed when struck down by me today, O son of Sumitrā!” (25)

इति ब्रुवाणं संक्रुद्धः परुषं रावणात्मजम् ।
हेतुमद् वाक्यमर्थज्ञो लक्ष्मणः प्रत्युवाच ह ॥ २६ ॥

To Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa), who was speaking harshly as aforesaid, Lakṣmaṇa, who knew his purpose and felt highly enraged, gave the following logical answer: so the tradition goes: (26)

वाग्बलं त्यज दुर्बुद्धे क्रूरकर्मन् हि राक्षस ।
अथ कस्माद् वदस्येतत् सम्पादय सुकर्मणा ॥ २७ ॥

“Give up strength of speech in the shape of empty words, O evil-minded ogre of cruel deeds! Now why do you indulge in such idle talk? Accomplish what you say in well-executed action. (27)

अकृत्वा कथसे कर्म किमर्थमिह राक्षस ।
कुरु तत् कर्म येनाहं श्रद्धेयं तव कथनम् ॥ २८ ॥

“Wherefore do you brag without accomplishing a feat, O ogre? Accomplish that deed of which you boast so that I may believe your braggadocio. (28)

अनुक्त्वा परुषं वाक्यं किञ्चिदप्यनवक्षिपन् ।
अविकथन् वधिष्यामि त्वां पश्य पुरुषादन ॥ २९ ॥

“Lo! I shall kill you, O devourer of human beings, without offering a harsh remark against you, reviling you in the least or playing the braggart.” (29)

इत्युक्त्वा पञ्च नाराचानाकर्णापूरितान् शरान् ।
विजघान महावेगाल्लक्ष्मणो राक्षसोरसि ॥ ३० ॥

Saying so, Lakṣmaṇa dug into the ogre’s breast with great impetuosity five steel arrows drawn with the bowstring up to the ear. (30)

सुपत्रवाजिता बाणा ज्वलिता इव पन्नगाः ।
नैर्ऋतोरस्यभासन्त सवितू रश्मयो यथा ॥ ३१ ॥

The arrows shot by Lakṣmaṇa, which had been rendered swift by beautiful feathers fixed at their end and looked like flaming serpents, shone in the ogre's breast like the rays of the sun. (31)

स शरैराहतस्तेन सरोषो रावणात्मजः ।
सुप्रयुक्तैस्त्रिभिर्बाणैः प्रतिविव्याध लक्ष्मणम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Roused to anger when struck with arrows by Lakṣmaṇa, Indrajit, sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa, pierced Lakṣmaṇa in return with three well-aimed arrows. (32)

स बभूव महाभीमो नरराक्षससिंहयोः ।
विमर्दस्तुमुलो युद्धे परस्परजयैषिणोः ॥ ३३ ॥

The aforesaid struggle between Lakṣmaṇa, a lion among men, and Indrajit, a lion among ogres, who sought to gain a victory over the other in combat, was most dreadful and tumultuous. (33)

विक्रान्तौ बलसम्पन्नावुभौ विक्रमशालिनौ ।
उभौ परमदुर्जयावतुल्यबलतेजसौ ॥ ३४ ॥

Valiant and richly endowed with strength, both were distinguished for their prowess. Nay, peerless in might and courage, both were exceedingly difficult to conquer. (34)

युयुधाते तदा वीरौ ग्रहाविव नभोगतौ ।
बलवृत्राविव हि तौ युधि वै दुष्प्रधर्षणौ ॥ ३५ ॥

The two heroes strove at that moment like two planets figuring in the heavens. Indeed, the two were actually difficult to overcome in combat like Indra and the demon Vṛtra. (35)

युयुधाते महात्मानौ तदा केसरिणाविव ।
बहूनवसृजन्तौ हि मार्गणौघानवस्थितौ ।
नरराक्षसमुख्यौ तौ प्रहृष्टावभ्ययुध्यताम् ॥ ३६ ॥

The two warriors, who were endowed with extraordinary courage, fought at that time like two lions. Standing firmly while discharging numerous streams of arrows, the aforesaid jewels among human beings and ogres, respectively, actually strove with extreme ardour. (36)

ततः शरान् दाशरथिः संधायामित्रकर्षणः ।
ससर्ज राक्षसेन्द्राय क्रुद्धः सर्प इव श्वसन् ॥ ३७ ॥

Putting arrows to his bow, nay hissing like an enraged serpent, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Daśaratha), the scourge of his enemies, thereupon shot arrows aiming at Indrajit, a ruler of the ogres. (37)

तस्य ज्यातलनिर्घोषं स श्रुत्वा राक्षसाधिपः ।
विवर्णवदनो भूत्वा लक्ष्मणं समुदैक्षत ॥ ३८ ॥

Growing pale-faced on hearing the twang of the bowstring of Lakṣmaṇa produced by the action of his palm, Indrajit, the aforesaid ruler of ogres, fixed his gaze on Lakṣmaṇa. (38)

विवर्णवदनं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसं रावणात्मजम् ।
सौमित्रिं युद्धसंयुक्तं प्रत्युवाच विभीषणः ॥ ३९ ॥

Seeing the ogre sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa pale-faced, Vibhiṣaṇa spoke as follows to Sumitrā's son, fully engaged in combat: (39)

निमित्तान्युपपश्यामि यान्यस्मिन् रावणात्मजे ।
त्वर तेन महाबाहो भग्न एष न संशयः ॥ ४० ॥

"I conclude on the strength of the indications, such as pallor on the face, which I perceive in this offspring of Rāvaṇa that he is already reduced to despair: there is no doubt about it. Therefore, make haste to dispatch him, O mighty-armed prince!" (40)

ततः संधाय सौमित्रिः शरानाशीविषोपमान् ।
मुमोच विशिखांस्तस्मिन् सर्पानिव विषोल्बणान् ॥ ४१ ॥

Fitting to his bow arrows resembling venomous snakes, the son of Sumitrā thereupon shot those shafts, which resembled serpents full of venom, aiming at Indrajit. (41)

शक्राशनिसमस्पर्शैर्लक्ष्मणेनाहतः शरैः ।
मुहूर्तमभवन्मूढः सर्वसंक्षुभितेन्द्रियः ॥ ४२ ॥

Struck by Lakṣmaṇa with arrows, which impinged on the body like Indra's thunderbolt,

Indrajit stood stupefied awhile, all his senses fully excited. (42)

उपलभ्य मुहूर्तेन संज्ञां प्रत्यागतेन्द्रियः ।
ददर्शवस्थितं वीरमाजौ दशरथात्मजम् ।
सोऽभिचक्राम सौमित्रिं रोषात् संरक्तलोचनः ॥ ४३ ॥

Regaining his consciousness after a while, his senses having returned to normalcy, Indrajit beheld the valiant Lakṣmaṇa (sprung from the loins of Daśaratha) standing immovable on the field of battle and advanced towards the son of Sumitrā, his eyes having turned crimson with anger. (43)

अब्रवीच्चैनमासाद्य पुनः स परुषं वचः ।
किं न स्मरसि तद् युद्धे प्रथमे मत्पराक्रमम् ।
निबद्धस्त्वं सह भ्रात्रा यदा युधि विचेष्टसे ॥ ४४ ॥

Nay, approaching Lakṣmaṇa, he spoke harsh words to him again as follows: “Don’t you remember my prowess in that first encounter with me, when I bound you with your brother and you writhed on the battlefield? (44)

युवां खलु महायुद्धे वज्राशनिसमैः शरैः ।
शायितौ प्रथमं भूमौ विसंज्ञौ सपुरःसरौ ॥ ४५ ॥

“Formerly in the course of a major conflict you two brothers were laid low with my arrows, which were equal to thunderbolts and the weapon Aśani, and lay unconscious on the ground with your foremost warriors. (45)

स्मृतिर्वा नास्ति ते मन्ये व्यक्तं वा यमसादनम् ।
गन्तुमिच्छसि यन्मां त्वमार्धयितुमिच्छसि ॥ ४६ ॥

“Or, I presume the thought of it no longer exists in your mind or you evidently desire to proceed to the abode of Yama, the god of retribution, since you seek to overpower me. (46)

यदि ते प्रथमे युद्धे न दृष्टो मत्पराक्रमः ।
अद्य त्वां दर्शयिष्यामि तिष्ठेदानीं व्यवस्थितः ॥ ४७ ॥

“If my prowess was not witnessed by you at our first encounter, I will demonstrate it to you today. Remain immovably fixed on this spot now.” (47)

इत्युक्त्वा सप्तभिर्बाणैरभिविव्याध लक्ष्मणम् ।
दशभिस्तु हनूमन्तं तीक्ष्णधारैः शरोत्तमैः ॥ ४८ ॥

Saying so, Indrajit pierced Lakṣmaṇa with seven shafts and Hanumān with ten excellent sharp-edged arrows. (48)

ततः शरशतेनैव सुप्रयुक्तेन वीर्यवान् ।
क्रोधाद् द्विगुणसंरब्धो निर्बिभेद विभीषणम् ॥ ४९ ॥

Doubly enraged, the valiant ogre then pierced Vibhiṣaṇa in fury with a hundred well-aimed arrows. (49)

तद् दृष्ट्वेन्द्रजिता कर्म कृतं रामानुजस्तदा ।
अचिन्तयित्वा प्रहसनैतत् किञ्चिदिति ब्रुवन् ॥ ५० ॥
मुमोच च शरान् घोरान् संगृह्य नरपुंगवः ।
अभीतवदनः क्रुद्धो रावणिं लक्ष्मणो युधि ॥ ५१ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid feat accomplished by Indrajit, yet not minding it, nay, laughing heartily and saying: “This is nothing!”, and taking up dreadful shafts, Lakṣmaṇa, a younger brother of Śrī Rāma and a bull among men, then shot them in anger at the son of Rāvaṇa on the field of battle with an intrepid mien. (50-51)

नैवं रणगताः शूराः प्रहरन्ति निशाचर ।
लघवश्चाल्पवीर्याश्च शरा हीमे सुखास्तव ॥ ५२ ॥

“He said, “Heroes on the battlefield do not strike like this, O ranger of the night! Light and of little strength, these arrows of yours are indeed conducive to my delight. (52)

नैवं शूरास्तु युध्यन्ते समरे युद्धकाङ्क्षिणः ।
इत्येवं तं ब्रुवन् धन्वी शरैरभिववर्ष ह ॥ ५३ ॥

“Champions seeking an encounter on the battlefield for their part do not fight in this way.” Speaking thus, the archer, Lakṣmaṇa, covered Indrajit with arrows, they say. (53)

तस्य बाणैः सुविध्वस्तं कवचं काञ्चनं महत् ।
व्यशीर्यत रथोपस्थे ताराजालमिवाम्बरात् ॥ ५४ ॥

Completely shattered by the aforesaid shafts, the heavy golden armour of Indrajit fell to pieces in the interior of the chariot like a mass of stars from the heavens. (54)

विधूतवर्मा नाराचैर्बभूव स कृतव्रणः ।
इन्द्रजित् समरे वीरः प्रत्यूषे भानुमानिव ॥ ५५ ॥

His coat of mail shattered by the steel arrows of Lakṣmaṇa, the aforesaid champion, Indrajit, was wounded in combat and bathed in blood looked like the morning sun. (55)

ततः शरसहस्रेण संक्रुद्धो रावणात्मजः ।
बिभेद समरे वीरो लक्ष्मणं भीमविक्रमः ॥ ५६ ॥

Fully roused to anger, the heroic Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa) of redoubtable prowess, pierced Lakṣmaṇa with a thousand arrows on the battlefield. (56)

व्यशीर्यत महद्विष्यं कवचं लक्ष्मणस्य तु ।
कृतप्रतिकृतान्योन्यं बभूवतुररिंदमौ ॥ ५७ ॥

The mighty and celestial armour of Lakṣmaṇa too got shattered. The two warriors, the tamers of their enemies, took the offensive and also retaliated. (57)

अभीक्ष्णं निःश्वसन्तौ तौ युध्येतां तुमुलं युधि ।
शरसंकृतसर्वाङ्गौ सर्वतो रुधिरोक्षितौ ॥ ५८ ॥

Breathing heavily again and again, they fought vehemently on the battlefield, their limbs got lacerated by arrows and they were bathed all over in blood. (58)

सुदीर्घकालं तौ वीरावन्योन्यं निशितैः शरैः ।
ततक्षतुर्महात्मानौ रणकर्मविशारदौ ।
बभूवतुश्चात्मजये यत्तौ भीमपराक्रमौ ॥ ५९ ॥

For a pretty long time the two heroes of redoubtable prowess, who were endowed with extraordinary courage and were skilled in fighting, tore each other with whetted shafts and were strenuously engaged in securing victory each for himself. (59)

तौ शरौघैस्तथाकीर्णौ निकृत्तकवचध्वजौ ।
सृजन्तौ रुधिरं चोष्णं जलं प्रस्रवणाविव ॥ ६० ॥

Covered all over with arrows, which had stuck to their bodies, their armour and standards torn to pieces, they stood emitting hot blood as two waterfalls gushing hot water. (60)

शरवर्षं ततो घोरं मुञ्चतोर्भीमनिःस्वनम् ।
सासारयोरिवाकाशे नीलयोः कालमेघयोः ॥ ६१ ॥
तयोरथ महान् कालो व्यतीयाद् युध्यमानयोः ।
न च तौ युद्धवैमुख्यं क्लमं चाप्युपजग्मतुः ॥ ६२ ॥

A considerable time slipped by while the two warriors fought, shooting a formidable hail of shafts with a dreadful clamour like two dark destructive clouds pouring a hard shower from the heavens. They, however, neither turned their back on the battlefield nor experienced any fatigue. (61-62)

अस्त्राण्यस्त्रविदां श्रेष्ठौ दर्शयन्तौ पुनः पुनः ।
शरानुच्चावचाकारानन्तरिक्षे बबन्धतुः ॥ ६३ ॥

Displaying their missiles time and again, the two warriors, who were the foremost among those skilled in the use of missiles, set up as network of arrows, both large and small, in the airspace. (63)

व्यपेतदोषमस्यन्तौ लघु चित्रं च सुष्ठु च ।
उभौ तु तुमुलं घोरं चक्रतुर्नराक्षसौ ॥ ६४ ॥

Shooting their arrows with agility and grace in a wonderful way, which was entirely free from reproach, both the man and the ogre for their part carried on a vehement and formidable struggle. (64)

तयोः पृथक् पृथग् भीमः शुश्रुवे तलनिस्वनः ।
स कम्पं जनयामास निर्घात इव दारुणः ॥ ६५ ॥

The appalling sound produced by the impact of the palms of the two warriors on their bowstrings could be heard apart. Like a violent thunderstorm it made people tremble. (65)

तयोः स भ्राजते शब्दस्तथा समरमत्तयोः ।
सुघोरयोर्निष्टनतोगंगने मेघयोरिव ॥ ६६ ॥

The aforementioned clamour of those two warriors, who were engaged in action, as aforesaid, resembled the rumbling of two dreadful thundering clouds in the sky. (66)

सुवर्णपुंखैर्नाराचैर्बलवन्तौ कृतव्रणौ ।
प्रसुप्नुवाते रुधिरं कीर्तिमन्तौ जये धृतौ ॥ ६७ ॥

Wounded with golden-shafted steel arrows, the two mighty and glorious warriors, who were determined to gain victory over one another, were profusely giving out blood. (67)

ते गात्रयोर्निपतिता रुक्मपुंखाः शरा युधि ।
असृग्दिग्धा विनिष्पेतुर्विविशुर्धरणीतलम् ॥ ६८ ॥

Struck on the bodies of each other, the golden-shafted arrows shot by the two warriors, dropped (through their bodies) on the field of battle, covered with blood, and penetrated into the earth's surface. (68)

अन्ये सुनिशितैः शस्त्रैराकाशे संजघट्टिरे ।
बभञ्जुश्चिच्छिदुश्चैव तयोर्बाणाः सहस्रशः ॥ ६९ ॥

Other arrows of the two warriors clashed in thousands in the air with duly whetted weapons of the adversary and shattered and tore them. (69)

स बभूव रणो घोरस्तयोर्बाणमयश्चयः ।
अग्निभ्यामिव दीप्ताभ्यां सत्रे कुशमयश्चयः ॥ ७० ॥

That struggle between the two warriors turned out to be formidable. The mass of arrows strewn over the battlefield in that struggle appeared like a mass of the sacred Kuśa grass spread on the altar by the side of two flaming fires viz., Gārhapatya and Āhavanīya fire at a sacrifice. (70)

तयोः कृतव्रणौ देहौ शुशुभाते महात्मनोः ।
सुपुष्पाविव निष्पत्रौ वने किंशुकशाल्मली ॥ ७१ ॥

The wounded bodies of those two warriors, endowed with extraordinary courage, shone like Kimśuka flowers and

Śālmali (silk-cotton) trees in full blossom and shorn of their leaves in a forest. (71)

चक्रतुस्तुमुलं घोरं संनिपातं मुहुर्मुहुः ।
इन्द्रजिल्लक्ष्मणश्चैव परस्परजयैषिणौ ॥ ७२ ॥

Eager to conquer each other, Indrajit and Lakṣmaṇa too carried on a tumultuous and formidable struggle again and again. (72)

लक्ष्मणो रावणिं युद्धे रावणिश्चापि लक्ष्मणम् ।
अन्योन्यं तावभिघ्नन्तौ न श्रमं प्रतिपद्यताम् ॥ ७३ ॥

Striking each other—Lakṣmaṇa striking Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) and Indrajit too striking Lakṣmaṇa in combat (in his turn)—the two warriors did not experience any fatigue. (73)

बाणजालैः शरीरस्थैरवगाढैस्तरस्विनौ ।
शुशुभाते महावीर्यौ प्ररूढाविव पर्वतौ ॥ ७४ ॥

With multitudes of arrows dug deep into their bodies the two mighty heroes, who were endowed with extraordinary prowess, shone like two mountains overgrown with trees. (74)

तयो रुधिरसिक्तानि संवृतानि शरैर्भृशम् ।
बभ्राजुः सर्वगात्राणि ज्वलन्त इव पावकाः ॥ ७५ ॥

Bathed in blood and thickly covered with arrows, all the limbs of the aforesaid two warriors shone like blazing fires. (75)

तयोरथ महान् कालो व्यतीयाद् युध्यमानयोः ।
न च तौ युद्धवैमुख्यं श्रमं चाप्यभिजग्मतुः ॥ ७६ ॥

A considerable time elapsed in the meanwhile past the two warriors even as they fought with each other. They, however, neither turned their face away from the combat nor gave way to exhaustion. (76)

अथ समरपरिश्रमं निहन्तुं
समरमुखेष्वजितस्य लक्ष्मणस्य ।

प्रियहितमुपपादयन् महात्मा
समरमुपेत्य विभीषणोऽवतस्थे ॥ ७७ ॥

Reaching the battlefield in the meantime, the high-souled Vibhīṣaṇa took up his position there in order to relieve the fatigue, occasioned by the combat, of Lakṣmaṇa, who was invincible in the forefront of battle, thereby affording him pleasure and doing a good turn to him. (77)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टाशीतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto LXXXIX

Vibhīṣaṇa takes the offensive against the ogres and encourages the commanders of monkey-troops to carry on the struggle. Lakṣmaṇa kills the charioteer of Indrajit and the monkeys make short work of his horses

युध्यमानौ ततो दृष्ट्वा प्रसक्तौ नरराक्षसौ ।
प्रभिन्नाविव मातङ्गौ परस्परजयैषिणौ ॥ १ ॥
तयोर्युद्धं द्रष्टुकामो वरचापधरो बली ।
शूरः स रावणभ्राता तस्थौ संग्राममूर्धनि ॥ २ ॥

Seeing Lakṣmaṇa (a man) and Indrajit (an ogre), who were fond of fighting, striving like two elephants in rut, desirous as they were of overcoming each other, the valiant Vibhīṣaṇa, the mighty youngest brother of Rāvaṇa, who was eager to witness their combat, and carried an excellent bow, thereupon took up his position in the forefront of the battle. (1-2)

ततो विस्फारयामास महद् धनुरवस्थितः ।
उत्ससर्ज च तीक्ष्णाग्रान् राक्षसेषु महाशरान् ॥ ३ ॥

Standing firm, he now pulled the string of his mighty bow and shot long, sharp-pointed arrows against the ogres. (3)

ते शराः शिखिसंस्पर्शा निपतन्तः समाहिताः ।
राक्षसान् द्रावयामासुर्वज्राणीव महागिरीन् ॥ ४ ॥

Falling thick and fast, the aforesaid shafts, which impinged like fire, tore the ogres to pieces as thunderbolts would cleave mighty mountains. (4)

विभीषणस्यानुचरास्तेऽपि शूलासिपट्टिणः ।
चिच्छिदुः समरे वीरान् राक्षसान् राक्षसोत्तमाः ॥ ५ ॥

The well-known followers of Vibhīṣaṇa, too, who were the foremost of ogres, rent asunder the heroic ogres in combat with their pikes, swords and sharp-edged spears. (5)

राक्षसैस्तैः परिवृतः स तदा तु विभीषणः ।
बभौ मध्ये प्रधृष्टानां कलभानामिव द्विपः ॥ ६ ॥

Surrounded by those ogres, Vibhīṣaṇa for his part shone at that time like an elephant in the midst of proud young tuskers. (6)

ततः संचोदमानो वै हरीन् रक्षोवधप्रियान् ।
उवाच वचनं काले कालज्ञो रक्षसां वरः ॥ ७ ॥

Emboldening the monkeys, who were really fond of destroying the ogres, Vibhīṣaṇa (the foremost of ogres), who knew what was befitting to the occasion, thereupon spoke the following opportune words: (7)

एकोऽयं राक्षसेन्द्रस्य परायणमवस्थितः ।
एतच्छेषं बलं तस्य किं तिष्ठत हरीश्वराः ॥ ८ ॥

“Here stands before you one who is the last support of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres). And this is all that is left of his army. Why then, O monkey chiefs, do you stand idle? (8)

अस्मिंश्च निहते पापे राक्षसे रणमूर्धनि ।
रावणं वर्जयित्वा तु शेषमस्य बलं हतम् ॥ ९ ॥

“Nay, when this wicked ogre is disposed of in the forefront of the battle, the remaining army of his, save Rāvaṇa himself, is as good as killed. (9)

प्रहस्तो निहतो वीरो निकुम्भश्च महाबलः ।
कुम्भकर्णश्च कुम्भश्च धूम्राक्षश्च निशाचरः ॥ १० ॥
जम्बुमाली महामाली तीक्ष्णवेगोऽग्निप्रभः ।
सुप्तघ्नो यज्ञकोपश्च वज्रदंष्ट्रश्च राक्षसः ॥ ११ ॥
संहादी विकटोऽरिघ्नस्तपनो मन्द एव च ।
प्रघासः प्रघसश्चैव प्रजङ्घो जङ्घ एव च ॥ १२ ॥
अग्निकेतुश्च दुर्धर्षो रश्मिकेतुश्च वीर्यवान् ।
विद्युज्जिह्वो द्विजिह्वश्च सूर्यशत्रुश्च राक्षसः ॥ १३ ॥
अकम्पनः सुपाश्वश्च चक्रमाली च राक्षसः ।
कम्पनः सत्त्ववन्तौ तौ देवान्तकनरान्तकौ ॥ १४ ॥

“The heroic Prahasta has been made short work of as well as Nikumbha, who was endowed with extraordinary might, as also Kumbhakarna and Kumbha and the night-ranger Dhūmrākṣa, Jambumālī, Mahāmālī, Tikṣṇavega, Aśaniprabha, Suptaghna and Yajñakopa as also the ogre Vajradamaṣṭra, Samhrādī, Vikāṭa, Arighna, Tapanā as well as Manda, Praghāsa as well as Praghāsa, Prajaṅgha as well as Jaṅgha, as also Agniketu, who was difficult to overcome, and the valiant Raśmīketu, Vidyujjihva and Dwijihva and the ogre Sūryaśatru, Akampana and Supārśwa as well as the ogre Cakramālī, Kampana, and those two warriors, Devāntaka and

Narāntaka, who were full of energy. (10—14)

एतान् निहत्यातिबलान् बहून् राक्षससत्तमान् ।
बाहुभ्यां सागरं तीर्त्वा लङ्घ्यतां गोष्पदं लघु ॥ १५ ॥

“Having destroyed the aforesaid numerous ogre chiefs, who were endowed with exceeding might, and thereby swum a sea, as it were, let this tiny hoof-mark of a cow be promptly crossed. (15)

एतावदेव शेषं वो जेतव्यमिति वानराः ।
हताः सर्वे समागम्य राक्षसा बलदर्पिताः ॥ १६ ॥

“This much alone of the hostile army remains to be conquered by you, O monkeys. All the ogres, proud of their might, were killed on encountering you. (16)

अयुक्तं निधनं कर्तुं पुत्रस्य जनितुर्मम ।
घृणामपास्य रामार्थे निहन्त्यां भ्रातुरात्मजम् ॥ १७ ॥

“It is not meet for me, an uncle, who is as good as a father, to compass the death of my own nephew, who is as good as my own son. Casting to the winds all tenderness for the sake of Śrī Rāma, however, I may take the life of my own brother's offspring, Indrajit. (17)

हन्तुकामस्य मे बाष्पं चक्षुश्चैव निरुध्यति ।
तमेवैष महाबाहुर्लक्ष्मणः शमयिष्यति ॥ १८ ॥

“Nay, even as I wish to kill him, tears cloud my vision. Hence the younger mighty-armed Prince Lakṣmaṇa alone shall make short work of him. (18)

वानरा घ्नत सम्भूय भृत्यानस्य समीपगान् ।
इति तेनातिशया राक्षसेनाभिचोदिताः ॥ १९ ॥

“Coming together, therefore, O monkeys, destroy his army standing by him.” Encouraged in these words by that highly illustrious ogre, Vibhīṣaṇa, the monkey chiefs rejoiced and lashed their tails as a token of their joy. (19)

वानरेन्द्रा जहृषिरे लाङ्गूलानि च विव्यधुः ।
ततस्तु कपिशार्दूलाः क्ष्वेडन्तश्च पुनः पुनः ।
मुमुचुर्विविधान् नादान् मेघान् दृष्ट्वेव बर्हिणः ॥ २० ॥

Roaring like lions again and again, the aforesaid tigers among the monkeys for their part then emitted warbling sound of various kinds even like peacocks on beholding clouds. (20)

जाम्बवानपि तैः सर्वैः स्वयूथैरभिसंवृतः ।
तेऽश्मभिस्ताडयामासुर्नखैर्दन्तैश्च राक्षसान् ॥ २१ ॥

Surrounded by all the well-known troops of his own kind, Jāmbavān too as also the monkeys began to strike the ogres with stones as well as with their nails and teeth. (21)

निघ्नन्तमृक्षाधिपतिं राक्षसास्ते महाबलाः ।
परिववृर्भयं त्यक्त्वा तमनेकविधायुधाः ॥ २२ ॥

Shaking off all fear, the aforesaid ogres, who were endowed with extraordinary might
and armed with every variety of weapons, surrounded Jāmbavān, the suzerain lord of bears, who was playing havoc among the ogre hordes. (22)

शरैः परशुभिस्तीक्ष्णैः पट्टिशैर्यष्टितोमरैः ।
जाम्बवन्तं मृधे जघ्नुर्निघ्नन्तं राक्षसीं चमूम् ॥ २३ ॥

They assailed Jāmbavān, who was destroying the army of ogres on the battlefield on all sides, with arrows, sharp axes, sharp-edged spears, staffs and iron clubs. (23)

स सम्प्रहारस्तुमुलः संजज्ञे कपिरक्षसाम् ।
देवासुराणां क्रुद्धानां यथा भीमो महास्वनः ॥ २४ ॥

Accompanied with a loud clamour, that vehement encounter between the monkeys, and ogres, who were fired with wrath, was terrible like the well-known conflict between the gods and the demons, which took place in the hoary past. (24)

हनूमानपि संक्रुद्धः सालमुत्पाट्य पर्वतात् ।
स लक्ष्मणं स्वयं पृष्ठादवरोप्य महामनाः ॥ २५ ॥
रक्षसां कदनं चक्रे दुरासादः सहस्रशः ।
स दत्त्वा तुमुलं युद्धं पितृव्यस्येन्द्रजिद् बली ॥ २६ ॥

लक्ष्मणं परवीरघ्नः पुनरेवाभ्यधावत् ।
तौ प्रयुद्धौ तदा वीरौ मृधे लक्ष्मणराक्षसौ ॥ २७ ॥
शरौघानभिवर्षन्तौ जघ्नतुस्तौ परस्परम् ।
अभीक्ष्णमन्तर्दधतुः शरजालैर्महाबलौ ॥ २८ ॥
चन्द्रादित्याविवोष्णान्ते यथा मेघैस्तरस्विनौ ।
नह्यादानं न संधानं धनुषो वा परिग्रहः ॥ २९ ॥
न विप्रमोक्षो बाणानां न विकर्षो न विग्रहः ।
न मुष्टिप्रतिसंधानं न लक्ष्यप्रतिपादनम् ॥ ३० ॥
अदृश्यत तयोस्तत्र युध्यतोः पाणिलाघवात् ।
चापवेगप्रयुक्तैश्च बाणजालैः समन्ततः ॥ ३१ ॥
अन्तरिक्षेऽभिसम्पन्ने न रूपाणि चकाशिरे ।
लक्ष्मणो रावणिं प्राप्य रावणिश्चापि लक्ष्मणम् ॥ ३२ ॥
अव्यवस्था भवत्युग्रा ताभ्यामन्योन्यविग्रहे ।
ताभ्यामुभाभ्यां तरसा प्रसृष्टैर्विशिखैः शितैः ॥ ३३ ॥
निरन्तरमिवाकाशं बभूव तमसा वृतम् ।
तैः पतद्भिश्च बहुभिस्तयोः शरशतैः शितैः ॥ ३४ ॥
दिशश्च प्रदिशश्चैव बभूवुः शरसंकुलाः ।
तमसा विहितं सर्वमासीत् प्रतिभयं महत् ॥ ३५ ॥

Causing Lakṣmaṇa to dismount from his back, and tearing up a sal tree from a mountain, the high-minded Hanumān too, who felt enraged and was difficult to approach for his enemies, himself began to exterminate the ogres in their thousands. Giving a fearful fight to his uncle, Vibhiṣaṇa, the mighty Indrajit, the destroyer of hostile champions, rushed once more towards Lakṣmaṇa.
Strenuously engaged in fighting on the battlefield, the two celebrated heroes, Lakṣmaṇa and the ogre, Indrajit, began to assail each other, showering streams of arrows on their adversary. The two warriors, who were endowed with extraordinary might,
covered each other off and on with multitudes of arrows in the same way as the powerful sun and moon are veiled by clouds at the end of summer. Due to quickness of hand even as they fought there it could not be distinctly perceived when they shuffled the bow from one hand to the other, tightly held the bow as well as the string with the fist, drew out the arrows from their quiver, selected or separated them, put them to the bow, stretched the bow at full length, discharged the arrows and hit the mark. The sky having been covered on all sides with streams of arrows discharged with force exerted by the bows, no object could be distinguished. Meeting Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), Lakṣmaṇa fought with him, and meeting Lakṣmaṇa (in his turn), Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) too took the offensive. As they contended with each other, a terrible confusion ensued in both the contending armies as a sequel to the destruction of their followers, who did not take active part in the struggle. The sky was thickly covered, as it were, with the sharp arrows shot with impetuosity by them both leaving no empty space and was consequently shrouded in darkness. Nay, even the four quarters as well as the intermediate points were overspread with shafts on account of those sharp arrows of the two warriors speeding in many hundreds. Everything was enveloped in darkness and presented an exceedingly dreadful appearance. (25—35)

अस्तं गते सहस्रांशौ संवृते तमसा च वै।

रुधिरौघा महानद्यः प्रावर्तन्त सहस्रशः ॥ ३६ ॥

When the orb of thousand rays sank below the horizon and everything was entirely enveloped in shadow, large streams carrying a flood of blood actually began to flow in thousands. (36)

क्रव्यादा दारुणा वाग्भिश्चक्षिपुर्भीमनिःस्वनान्।

न तदानीं ववौ वायुर्न च जज्वाल पावकः ॥ ३७ ॥

Hideous carnivorous birds such as vultures and jackals emitted frightful cries with their tongues. No wind blew at that time nor did fire burn. (37)

स्वस्त्यस्तु लोकेभ्य इति जजल्पुस्ते महर्षयः।

सम्प्रेतुश्चात्र संतप्ता गन्धर्वाः सह चारणैः ॥ ३८ ॥

“May all be well with the worlds !” murmured the eminent sages present on the occasion. Nay, feeling distressed, the Gandharvas, who happened to be there, fled away alongwith the cāraṇas (celestial bards). (38)

अथ राक्षससिंहस्य कृष्णान् कनकभूषणान्।

शरैश्चतुर्भिः सौमित्रिर्विव्याध चतुरो हयान् ॥ ३९ ॥

Meanwhile Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) pierced with four arrows the four black horses yoked to the chariot of Indrajit (a lion among the ogres), decked with ornaments of gold. (39)

ततोऽपरेण भल्लेन पीतेन निशितेन च।

सम्पूर्णायतमुक्तेन सुपत्रेण सुवर्चसा ॥ ४० ॥

महेन्द्राशनिकल्पेन सूतस्य विचरिष्यतः।

स तेन बाणाशनिना तलशब्दानुनादिना ॥ ४१ ॥

लाघवाद् राघवः श्रीमान् शिरः कायादपाहरत्।

स यन्तरि महातेजा हते मन्दोदरीसुतः ॥ ४२ ॥

स्वयं सारथ्यमकरोत् पुनश्च धनुरस्पृशत्।

तदद्भुतमभूत् तत्र सारथ्यं पश्यतां युधि ॥ ४३ ॥

Then, with another gilded, sharp and splendid arrow of the variety known by the name of Bhalla, which was shot with full force, was furnished with beautiful plumes and was deadly as the thunderbolt and vied with Indra's own weapon and which resounded with the clang of the gauntlet, the celebrated and glorious Lakṣmaṇa (a scion of Raghu) severed the head of the charioteer of Indrajit, even as he was circling round, from his shoulders with alacrity. The charioteer having been killed, Indrajit (son of Mandodari), who was endowed with extraordinary energy, played up the role of a charioteer himself and also wielded the bow. It was marvellous on his part to play the additional role of a charioteer in the course of the struggle in the eyes of the onlookers. (40—43)

हयेषु व्यग्रहस्तं तं विव्याध निशितैः शरैः।

धनुष्यथ पुनर्व्यग्रं हयेषु मुमुचे शरान् ॥ ४४ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa pierced him with whetted shafts while his hands were occupied with the horses; and he discharged arrows at the horses while he was busy once more with his bow. (44)

छिद्रेषु तेषु बाणौघैर्विचरन्तमभीतवत् ।
अर्दयामास समरे सौमित्रिः शीघ्रकृत्तमः ॥ ४५ ॥

On such occasions Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), who acted with extreme alacrity, wounded with the streams of his arrows Indrajit, who was ranging the battlefield as though undaunted. (45)

निहतं सारथिं दृष्ट्वा समरे रावणात्मजः ।
प्रजहौ समरोद्धर्षं विषण्णः स बभूव ह ॥ ४६ ॥

Seeing his charioteer killed in combat, the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa completely lost his zest for combat and grew despondent, they say. (46)

विषण्णवदनं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसं हरियूथपाः ।
ततः परमसंहृष्टा लक्ष्मणं चाभ्यपूजयन् ॥ ४७ ॥

Beholding the ogre dejected in appearance, the commanders of simian troops thereupon felt extremely delighted and acclaimed Lakṣmaṇa. (47)

ततः प्रमाथी रभसः शरभो गन्धमादनः ।
अमृष्यमाणाश्चत्वारश्चक्रुर्वेगं हरीश्वराः ॥ ४८ ॥

Getting impatient, four monkey chiefs, viz., Pramāthī, Rabhasa, Śarabha and Gandhamādana thereupon gave vent to their impetuosity. (48)

ते चास्य हयमुख्येषु तूर्णमुत्पत्य वानराः ।
चतुर्षु सुमहावीर्या निपेतुर्भीमविक्रमाः ॥ ४९ ॥

Nay, springing up rapidly, the aforesaid monkeys, who were endowed with remarkable valour and terrific prowess, fell on the four excellent horses of Indrajit. (49)

तेषामधिष्ठितानां तैर्वानरैः पर्वतोपमैः ।
मुखेभ्यो रुधिरं व्यक्तं हयानां समवर्तत ॥ ५० ॥

Blood perceptibly gushed forth from the mouths of those horses pressed under the weight of those monkeys, huge as mountains. (50)

ते हया मथिता भग्ना व्यसवो धरणीं गताः ।
ते निहत्य हयांस्तस्य प्रमथ्य च महारथम् ।
पुनरुत्पत्य वेगेन तस्थुर्लक्ष्मणपार्श्वतः ॥ ५१ ॥

Crushed and mutilated, the aforesaid horses sank lifeless to the ground. Having killed his horses and crushing his huge chariot, nay, bounding again with impetuosity, they stood once more by the side of Lakṣmaṇa. (51)

स हताश्ववादवप्लुत्य रथान्मथितसारथिः ।
शरवर्षेण सौमित्रिमभ्यधावत रावणिः ॥ ५२ ॥

Leaping down from his chariot, whose horses had been killed, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), whose charioteer too had already been made short work of, assailed Lakṣmaṇa with a hail of shafts. (52)

ततो महेन्द्रप्रतिमः स लक्ष्मणः
पदातिनं तं निहतैर्हयोत्तमैः ।

सृजन्तमाजौ निशितान् शरोत्तमान्
भृशं तदा बाणगणैर्व्यदारयत् ॥ ५३ ॥

Thereupon, the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa, who vied with the mighty Indra, grievously mangled with volleys of his shafts Indrajit, who was discharging excellent whetted arrows on the battlefield at that time while moving on foot due to his stately horses having been killed. (53)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ८९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Eighty-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

नवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XC

A fierce contest between Indrajit and Lakṣmaṇa and Indrajit's fall

स हताश्वो महातेजा भूमौ तिष्ठन् निशाचरः ।
इन्द्रजित् परमक्रुद्धः सम्प्रजज्वाल तेजसा ॥ १ ॥

Standing on the ground, extremely enraged, the horses of his chariot having been killed the night-stalker, Indrajit, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, flamed with spirit. (1)

तौ धन्विनौ जिघांसन्तावन्योन्यमिषुभिर्भृशम् ।
विजयेनाभिनिष्क्रान्तौ वने गजवृषाविव ॥ २ ॥

Exceedingly eager to make short work of each other with their arrows, the said two archers closed with each other like two lordly elephants that had sallied forth with a view to conquest. (2)

निबर्हयन्तश्चान्योन्यं ते राक्षसवनौकसः ।
भर्तारं न जहुर्युद्धे सम्पतन्तस्ततस्ततः ॥ ३ ॥

The ogres as well as the monkeys (lit., the denizens of the woods) kept rushing this way and that, each killing his adversary, but did not forsake their master in the combat. (3)

ततस्तान् राक्षसान् सर्वान् हर्षयन् रावणात्मजः ।
स्तुन्वानो हर्षमाणश्च इदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ४ ॥

Applauding and cheering all the aforesaid ogres, nay, feeling delighted himself, Indrajit (sprung from the loins of Rāvaṇa) thereupon spoke as follows: (4)

तमसा बहुलेनेमाः संसक्ताः सर्वतो दिशः ।
नेह विज्ञायते स्वो वा परो वा राक्षसोत्तमाः ॥ ५ ॥

"These quarters stand enveloped on all sides by a profound darkness. Hence it is difficult to ascertain at this time whether one belongs to one's own army or is an enemy, O jewel among the ogres! (5)

धृष्टं भवन्तो युध्यन्तु हरीणां मोहनाय वै ।
अहं तु रथमास्थाय आगमिष्यामि संयुगे ॥ ६ ॥

"Boldly strive you so as to dumbfold the monkeys. Ascending another chariot (in the meantime), I shall for my part return to the battlefield. (6)

तथा भवन्तः कुर्वन्तु यथेमे हि वनौकसः ।
न युध्येयुर्महात्मानः प्रविष्टे नगरं मयि ॥ ७ ॥

"Manage things in such a way that these monkeys (lit., denizens of the woods), endowed, as they are, with extraordinary courage, may not carry on the struggle with me when I have started entering the city (so as to interfere with my safe entry)." (7)

इत्युक्त्वा रावणसुतो वञ्चयित्वा वनौकसः ।
प्रविवेश पुरीं लङ्कां रथहेतोरमित्रहा ॥ ८ ॥

Saying so, and putting the monkeys off the scent, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), the slayer of his enemies, entered deep into the city of Lāṅkā in order to provide himself with another chariot. (8)

स रथं भूषयित्वाथ रुचिरं हेमभूषितम् ।
प्रासासिशरसंयुक्तं युक्तं परमवाजिभिः ॥ ९ ॥
अधिष्ठितं हयज्ञेन सूतेनाप्तोपदेशिना ।
आरुरोह महातेजा रावणिः समितिंजयः ॥ १० ॥

Causing a splendid chariot—which was decked with gold, was furnished with darts, swords and arrows, yoked to excellent horses, and directed by a charioteer who could read the mind of his horses and tendered good counsel—to be decorated,
Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), a victor in combat,
who was endowed with extraordinary energy forthwith ascended it. (9-10)

स राक्षसगणैर्मुखैर्वृतो मन्दोदरीसुतः ।
निर्ययौ नगराद् वीरः कृतान्तबलचोदितः ॥ ११ ॥

Surrounded by selected ogre battalions and impelled by the force of destiny, that gallant son of Mandodarī, Indrajit, sallied forth once more from the city. (11)

सोऽभिनिष्क्रम्य नगरादिन्द्रजित् परमौजसा ।
अभ्ययाज्जवनैरश्वैर्लक्ष्मणं सविभीषणम् ॥ १२ ॥

Rushing out of the city in his chariot drawn by swift horses, Indrajit assailed Lakṣmaṇa and Vibhiṣaṇa with exceeding impetuosity. (12)

ततो रथस्थमालोक्य सौमित्रो रावणात्मजम् ।
वानराश्च महावीर्या राक्षसश्च विभीषणः ॥ १३ ॥

Seeing Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) seated in a chariot, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) as well as the monkeys, who were endowed with extraordinary prowess, as also the ogre Vibhiṣaṇa thereupon experienced great wonder on recalling the agility of that sagacious ogre. (13)

विस्मयं परमं जग्मुर्लाघवात् तस्य धीमतः ।
रावणिश्चापि संकुब्धो रणे वानरयूथपान् ॥ १४ ॥

Filled with rage, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) too struck down with the streams of his arrows the commanders of simian troops in their hundreds and thousands. (14)

पातयामास बाणौघैः शतशोऽथ सहस्रशः ।
स मण्डलीकृतधनू रावणिः समितिंजयः ॥ १५ ॥
हरीनभ्यहनत् क्रुद्धः परं लाघवमास्थितः ।
ते वध्यमाना हरयो नाराचैर्भीमविक्रमाः ॥ १६ ॥
सौमित्रिं शरणं प्राप्ताः प्रजापतिमिव प्रजाः ।
ततः समरकोपेन ज्वलितो रघुनन्दनः ।
चिच्छेद कार्मुकं तस्य दर्शयन् पाणिलाघवम् ॥ १७ ॥

Stretching his bow in wrath to a circle and exhibiting supreme agility, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), victorious in combat, began to strike down the monkeys. While being struck with steel arrows, the aforesaid monkeys, though endowed with redoubtable prowess, sought Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) as their refuge even as created beings would approach Brahmā, the lord of created beings, for protection. Inflamed with anger roused by the struggle, Lakṣmaṇa (the delight of the Raghus), tore Indrajit's bow, thereby demonstrating fleetness of his hand. (15—17)

सोऽन्यत्कार्मुकमादाय सज्यं चक्रे त्वरन्निव ।
तदप्यस्य त्रिभिर्बाणैर्लक्ष्मणो निरकृन्तत ॥ १८ ॥

Seizing hold of another bow, Indrajit hastily strung it. Lakṣmaṇa, however, split that bow too with three arrows. (18)

अथैनं छिन्नधन्वानमाशीविषविषोपमैः ।
विव्याधोरसि सौमित्रो रावणिं पञ्चभिः शरैः ॥ १९ ॥

With five arrows, which were deadly as the poison of a venomous serpent, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) forthwith pierced in the bosom of Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), who had his bow rent. (19)

ते तस्य कायं निर्भिद्य महाकार्मुकनिःसृताः ।
निपेतुर्धरणीं बाणा रक्ता इव महोरगाः ॥ २० ॥

Penetrating through the latter's body, the aforesaid arrows, shot from the huge bow of Lakṣmaṇa, fell to the ground like huge red serpents. (20)

स छिन्नधन्वा रुधिरं वमन् वक्त्रेण रावणिः ।
जग्राह कार्मुकश्रेष्ठं दृढज्यं बलवत्तरम् ॥ २१ ॥

Ejecting blood, through his mouth, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa), who had his bow split, took hold of his excellent bow, which was stronger than the former and had a stout cord. (21)

स लक्ष्मणं समुद्दिश्य परं लाघवमास्थितः ।
ववर्ष शरवर्षाणि वर्षाणीव पुरंदरः ॥ २२ ॥

Aiming at Lakṣmaṇa he discharged with utmost agility hails of arrows even like Indra (the destroyer of citadels) releasing downpours. (22)

मुक्तमिन्द्रजिता तत्तु शरवर्षमरिंदमः ।
आवारयदसम्भ्रान्तो लक्ष्मणः सुदुरासदम् ॥ २३ ॥

Remaining unperplexed, Lakṣmaṇa, the tamer of his enemies, for his part intercepted the aforesaid hail of shafts, let loose by Indrajit, even though it was most difficult to resist. (23)

संदर्शयामास तदा रावणिं रघुनन्दनः ।
असम्भ्रान्तो महातेजास्तदद्भुतमिवाभवत् ॥ २४ ॥

Not the least unnerved, Lakṣmaṇa (the delight of the Raghus), who was endowed with extraordinary energy, then demonstrated to Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) his prowess, which was marvellous indeed. (24)

ततस्तान् राक्षसान् सर्वास्त्रिभिरेकैकमाहवे ।
अविध्यत् परमक्रुद्धः शीघ्रास्त्रं सम्प्रदर्शयन् ।
राक्षसेन्द्रसुतं चापि बाणौघैः समताडयत् ॥ २५ ॥

Getting extremely enraged, Lakṣmaṇa thereupon pierced all the aforesaid ogres who stood on the battlefield with three arrows each, thereby manifesting his fleetness in discharging missiles, and also hit Indrajit (son of the ruler of ogres) hard with streams of arrows. (25)

सोऽतिविद्धो बलवता शत्रुणा शत्रुघातिना ।
असक्तं प्रेषयामास लक्ष्मणाय बहून् शरान् ॥ २६ ॥

Grievously wounded by his mighty enemy, Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of enemies, he ceaselessly directed a number of arrows at Lakṣmaṇa. (26)

तानप्राप्तान् शितैर्बाणैश्चिच्छेद परवीरहा ।
सारथेरस्य च रणे रथिनो रथसत्तमः ॥ २७ ॥
शिरो जहार धर्मात्मा भल्लेनानतपर्वणा ।
असूतास्ते हयास्तत्र रथमूहुरविक्लवाः ॥ २८ ॥
मण्डलान्यभिधावन्ति तदद्भुतमिवाभवत् ।
अमर्षवशमापन्नः सौमित्रिर्दृढविक्रमः ॥ २९ ॥
प्रत्यविध्यद्धयांस्तस्य शरैर्वित्रासयन् रणे ।
अमर्षमाणस्तत्कर्म रावणस्य सुतो रणे ॥ ३० ॥

विव्याध दशभिर्बाणैः सौमित्रिं तममर्षणम् ।
ते तस्य वज्रप्रतिमाः शराः सर्पविषोपमाः ।
विलयं जग्मुरागत्य कवचं काञ्चनप्रभम् ॥ ३१ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa the destroyer of hostile champions, the foremost of car-warriors, whose mind was set on virtue, tore with his sharp arrows the aforesaid shafts even before they reached him and with a flat-pointed arrow belonging to the species known by the name of Bhalla he cut off on the battlefield the head of the charioteer of that car-warrior, Indrajit. Though left without a charioteer, the aforesaid horses of Indrajit's chariot continued to draw the chariot on the field of battle without getting perplexed and describing circles even as they advanced. That was marvellous indeed. Swayed by wrath, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) of untiring prowess pierced the horses of Indrajit with arrows, thus throwing them into panic on the battlefield. Intolerant of the aforesaid act (of Lakṣmaṇa), the son of Rāvaṇa pierced the aforesaid indignant son of Sumitrā with ten arrows on the battlefield. Those arrows of Indrajit, which resembled thunderbolts and were deadly as the venom of a serpent, gave way on reaching the Lakṣmaṇa's armour, which shone like gold. (27—31)

अभेद्यकवचं मत्वा लक्ष्मणं रावणात्मजः ।
ललाटे लक्ष्मणं बाणैः सुपुङ्खैस्त्रिभिरिन्द्रजित् ॥ ३२ ॥
अविध्यत् परमक्रुद्धः शीघ्रमस्त्रं प्रदर्शयन् ।
तैः पृषत्कैर्ललाटस्थैः शुशुभे रघुनन्दनः ॥ ३३ ॥
रणाग्रे समरश्लाघी त्रिशूङ्ग इव पर्वतः ।
स तथाप्यर्दितो बाणैः राक्षसेन तदा मृधे ॥ ३४ ॥
तमाशु प्रतिविव्याध लक्ष्मणः पञ्चभिः शरैः ।
विकृध्येन्द्रजितो युद्धे वदने शुभकुण्डले ॥ ३५ ॥

Believing Lakṣmaṇa to be protected by an impenetrable coat of mail* and

* We have already seen in LXXXVIII. 57 above how the mighty celestial armour of Lakṣmana was shattered by Indrajit. It is presumed on the strength of this verse that he had in the meantime provided himself with another impenetrable coat of mail.

demonstrating his fleetness in discharging missiles, Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, who felt extremely enraged, pierced Lakṣmaṇa in the forehead with three arrows provided with beautiful plumes. With the aforesaid arrows imbedded in his brow Lakṣmaṇa (the delight of the Raghus), who was fond of fighting, looked charming in the forefront of battle like a three-peaked mountain. Stretching his bow, though wounded on that occasion in combat by the ogre with his arrows as aforesaid, the celebrated Lakṣmaṇa instantly pierced Indrajit in return on the battlefield with five arrows in his face adorned with splendid earrings. (32—35)

लक्ष्मणेन्द्रजितौ वीरौ महाबलशरासनौ ।
अन्योन्यं जघ्नतुर्वीरौ विशिखैर्भीमविक्रमौ ॥ ३६ ॥

The two valiant champions of terrific prowess, Lakṣmaṇa and Indrajit, who were both endowed with extraordinary might and armed with huge bows, struck each other with arrows. (36)

ततः शोणितदिग्धाङ्गौ लक्ष्मणेन्द्रजितावुभौ ।
रणे तौ रेजतुर्वीरौ पुष्पिताविव किंशुकौ ॥ ३७ ॥

Smeared all over with blood, both the aforesaid heroes, Lakṣmaṇa and Indrajit, thereupon shone on the battlefield like two Kīmśuka trees in flower. (37)

तौ परस्परमभ्येत्य सर्वगात्रेषु धन्विनौ ।
घोरैर्विविधतुर्बाणैः कृतभावावुभौ जये ॥ ३८ ॥

Meeting each other, the said two archers, who had both set their mind on victory, pierced their opponent in all limbs with formidable arrows. (38)

ततः समरकोपेन संयुतो रावणात्मजः ।
विभीषणं त्रिभिर्बाणैर्विव्याध वदने शुभे ॥ ३९ ॥

Filled with wrath, occasioned by the conflict, Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) then struck Vibhiṣaṇa with three arrows, in his charming countenance. (39)

अयोमुखैस्त्रिभिर्विद्ध्वा राक्षसेन्द्रं विभीषणम् ।
एकैकेनाभिविव्याध तान् सर्वान् हरियूथपान् ॥ ४० ॥

Nay, having pierced Vibhiṣaṇa, the ogre chief, with three iron-tipped arrows he struck all those celebrated commanders of simian troops with one arrow each. (40)

तस्मै दृढतरं क्रुद्धो जघान गदया हयान् ।
विभीषणो महातेजा रावणेः स दुरात्मनः ॥ ४१ ॥

Violently enraged at him, the aforesaid Vibhiṣaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, struck down with his mace the horses of the evil-minded son of Rāvaṇa. (41)

स हताश्वादवप्लुत्य रथान्निहतसारथेः ।
अथ शक्तिं महातेजाः पितृव्याय मुमोच ह ॥ ४२ ॥

Leaping down from the chariot, knowing that the horses had been killed, the charioteer having already been made short work of, the highly energetic Indrajit now hurled his javelin on his uncle: so the tradition goes. (42)

तामापतन्तीं सम्प्रेक्ष्य सुमित्रानन्दवर्धनः ।
चिच्छेद निशितैर्बाणैर्दशधापातयद् भुवि ॥ ४३ ॥

Perceiving the javelin darting towards Vibhiṣaṇa, Lakṣmaṇa (who enhanced the delight of Sumitrā) split it in ten pieces with his sharpened arrows and felled it on the ground. (43)

तस्मै दृढधनुः क्रुद्धो हताश्वाय विभीषणः ।
वज्रस्पर्शसमान् पञ्च ससर्जोरसि मार्गणान् ॥ ४४ ॥

Feeling angry at Indrajit (whose horses had been killed), Vibhiṣaṇa, who was armed with a strong bow, dug into his bosom five arrows, whose impact was as hard as that of lightning. (44)

ते तस्य कायं भित्त्वा तु रुक्मपुङ्खा निमित्तगाः ।
बभूवुर्लोहितादिग्धा रक्ता इव महोरगाः ॥ ४५ ॥

Having penetrated through his body, the aforesaid arrows for their part, which were provided with golden feathers and flew straight to their target, got stained with blood and looked like huge red serpents. (45)

स पितृव्यस्य संक्रुद्ध इन्द्रजिच्छमाददे ।
उत्तमं रक्षसां मध्ये यमदत्तं महाबलः ॥ ४६ ॥

Infuriated at his uncle, Indrajit, who was endowed with extraordinary might, and stood in the midst of ogres, seized hold of an excellent arrow gifted to him by Yama (the god of retribution). (46)

तं समीक्ष्य महातेजा महेषु तेन संहितम् ।
लक्ष्मणोऽप्याददे बाणमन्यद् भीमपराक्रमः ॥ ४७ ॥
कुबेरेण स्वयं स्वप्ने यद् दत्तममितात्मना ।
दुर्जयं दुर्विषह्यं च सेन्द्रैरपि सुरासुरैः ॥ ४८ ॥

Perceiving that mighty arrow set by him to his bow, Lakṣmaṇa too of terrific prowess, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, took hold of another arrow, the know-how of which had been gifted to him in the course of a dream by Kubera (the god of riches) of immense glory himself, nay, which was difficult to resist and much more difficult to get the better of even for gods and demons including Indra, the ruler of gods. (47-48)

तयोस्तु धनुषी श्रेष्ठे बाहुभिः परिघोषमैः ।
विकृष्यमाणे बलवत् क्रौञ्चाविव चुकूजतुः ॥ ४९ ॥

While being stretched at full length with violence by their arms, which resembled a pair of iron bludgeons, the excellent bows, of the two warriors for their part emitted a piercing sound like a pair of cranes. (49)

ताभ्यां तु धनुषि श्रेष्ठे संहितौ सायकोत्तमौ ।
विकृष्यमाणौ वीराभ्यां भृशं जज्वलतुः श्रिया ॥ ५० ॥

The two excellent arrows fitted by the aforesaid heroes on their pre-eminent bows, shone brightly with splendour while being pulled with the bow-string. (50)

तौ भासयन्तावाकाशं धनुर्भ्यां विशिखौ च्युतौ ।
मुखेन मुखमाहत्य संनिपेततुरोजसा ॥ ५१ ॥

Hitting the head of the other with their own, when shot from the bows, the two arrows collided with each other with violence lighting up the heavens as they did so. (51)

संनिपातस्तयोश्चासीच्छयोर्घोररूपयोः ।
सधूमविस्फुलिङ्गश्च तज्जोऽग्निर्दारुणोऽभवत् ॥ ५२ ॥

Nay, born of the impact which was thus brought about between the two arrows of formidable aspect, there broke out a fierce fire accompanied by smoke and sparks. (52)

तौ महाग्रहसंकाशावन्योन्यं संनिपत्य च ।
संग्रामे शतधा यातौ मेदिन्यां चैव पेततुः ॥ ५३ ॥

Hitting each other like two major planets, the two arrows flew into a hundred pieces in their encounter and fell on the ground. (53)

शरौ प्रतिहतौ दृष्ट्वा तावुभौ रणमूर्धनि ।
व्रीडितौ जातरोषौ च लक्ष्मणेन्द्रजितौ तदा ॥ ५४ ॥

Finding their arrows brought to nought in the forefront of battle, both the aforesaid warriors, Lakṣmaṇa and Indrajit, felt abashed and provoked at that moment. (54)

सुसंरब्धस्तु सौमित्रिरस्त्रं वारुणमाददे ।
रौद्रं महेन्द्रजिद् युद्धेऽप्यसृजद् युधि निष्ठितः ॥ ५५ ॥

Feeling enraged, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) for his part took hold of a missile presided over by Varuṇa, the god of water. Nay, skilled in warfare, the great Indrajit too shot a missile presided over by Rudra (the god of destruction) in the encounter with Lakṣmaṇa. (55)

तेन तद्विहितं शस्त्रं वारुणं परमाद्भुतम् ।
ततः क्रुद्धो महातेजा इन्द्रजित् समितिंजयः ।
आग्नेयं संदधे दीप्तं स लोकं संक्षिपन्निव ॥ ५६ ॥

That most wonderful weapon presided over by Varuṇa was rendered ineffectual by the missile presided over by Rudra (the god of destruction). Feeling provoked, the said

Indrajit, a victor in combat, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, thereupon put to his bow a flaming missile presided over by the god of fire, as if he was going to destroy the world with it. (56)

सौरेणास्त्रेण तद् वीरो लक्ष्मणः पर्यवारयत् ।

अस्त्रं निवारितं दृष्ट्वा रावणिः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ॥ ५७ ॥

The gallant Lakṣmaṇa, however, diverted it with a missile presided over by the sun-god. Seeing the missile repelled, Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa was filled with anger. (57)

आददे निशितं बाणमासुरं शत्रुदारणम् ।

तस्माच्चापाद् विनिष्येतुर्भास्वराः कूटमुद्गराः ॥ ५८ ॥

शूलानि च भुशुण्ड्यश्च गदाः खड्गाः परश्वधाः ।

तद् दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणः संख्ये घोरमस्त्रमथासुरम् ॥ ५९ ॥

अवार्यं सर्वभूतानां सर्वशस्त्रविदारणम् ।

माहेश्वरेण द्युतिमांस्तदस्त्रं प्रत्यवारयत् ॥ ६० ॥

He seized hold of a sharp arrow used by demons and capable of destroying the enemy. The moment he set it to his bow shining Kūṭamudgaras (a concealed weapon similar to a hammer), darts as well as Bhuśuṇḍis, maces, swords and axes issued from his bow. Seeing that formidable missile, popular among the demons, which could not be repelled even by all created beings taken together and was capable of destroying all weapons, the glorious Lakṣmaṇa diverted it by means of a missile presided over by Maheśwara, the mighty Lord Śiva. (58—60)

तयोः समभवद् युद्धमद्भुतं रोमहर्षणम् ।

गगनस्थानि भूतानि लक्ष्मणं पर्यवारयन् ॥ ६१ ॥

There ensued between them a wonderful contest, which made one's hair stand on end. Created beings standing in the air surrounded Lakṣmaṇa in order to ensure his protection. (61)

भैरवाभिरुते भीमे युद्धे वानररक्षसाम् ।

भूतैर्बहुभिराकाशं विस्मितैरावृतं बभौ ॥ ६२ ॥

In the course of that terrible conflict between the monkeys and ogres, which was accompanied by frightful yells, the sky, which was filled with numerous created beings that stood astonished, looked charming. (62)

ऋषयः पितरो देवा गन्धर्वगुरुडोरगाः ।

शतक्रतुं पुरस्कृत्य ररक्षुर्लक्ष्मणं रणे ॥ ६३ ॥

Placing Indra (who is supposed to have performed in his previous existence a hundred horse-sacrifices as a condition precedent for his attaining Indrahood) at their head, Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), manes, gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians), eagles and serpents protected Lakṣmaṇa on the field of battle against all evil by uttering shouts of victory. (63)

अथान्यं मार्गणश्रेष्ठं संदधे राघवानुजः ।

हुताशनसमस्पर्शं रावणात्मजदारणम् ॥ ६४ ॥

सुपत्रमनुवृत्ताङ्गं सुपर्वाणं सुसंस्थितम् ।

सुवर्णविकृतं वीरः शरीरान्तकरं शरम् ॥ ६५ ॥

दुरावारं दुर्विषहं राक्षसानां भयावहम् ।

आशीविषविषप्रख्यं देवसंघैः समर्चितम् ॥ ६६ ॥

येन शक्रो महातेजा दानवानजयत् प्रभुः ।

पुरा देवासुरे युद्धे वीर्यवान् हरिवाहनः ॥ ६७ ॥

In the meantime Lakṣmaṇa, a younger brother of Rāma, put to his bow another excellent arrow, whose impact was similar to that of fire and which was capable of destroying Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa, was provided with lovely feathers, well-jointed, which consisted of rounded parts, was skilfully fashioned and decked with gold, which was capable of destroying the body of enemies, and was not only difficult to keep off but difficult even to bear, which was a source of terror to the ogres and deadly as the venom of poisonous snakes and was duly honoured by hosts of gods, and with the help of which the powerful and valiant Indra, who has green horses yoked to his chariot and who is endowed with extraordinary energy, was able to conquer the demons in the conflict which raged on the field of battle between gods and demons in the past. (64—67)

अथैन्द्रमस्त्रं सौमित्रिः संयुगेष्वपराजितम् ।
शरश्रेष्ठं धनुश्रेष्ठे विकर्षन्निदमब्रवीत् ॥ ६८ ॥
लक्ष्मीर्वाँल्लक्ष्मणो वाक्यमर्थसाधकमात्मनः ।
धर्मात्मा सत्यसंधश्च रामो दाशरथिर्यदि ।
पौरुषे चाप्रतिद्वन्द्वस्तदैर्न जहि रावणिम् ॥ ६९ ॥
इत्युक्त्वा बाणमाकर्णं विकृष्य तमजिह्वागम् ।
लक्ष्मणः समरे वीरः ससर्जेन्द्रजितं प्रति ।
ऐन्द्रास्त्रेण समायुज्य लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा ॥ ७० ॥

Fitting a missile presided over by Indra, the ruler of gods, the foremost of arrows, which had never been got the better of in contests, to his excellent bow and drawing it at full length with the bow-string, the glorious Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā, now addressed the following prayer, which was calculated to achieve his purpose to the deity presiding over the arrow: "If Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, has set his mind on virtue and is true to his promise and is unrivalled in prowess, make short work, then, of this son of Rāvaṇa." Saying so, and drawing up to the ear that arrow, which went straight to the target, and charging it with the missile presided over by Indra, the ruler of gods, the heroic and glorious Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of hostile champions in combat, let it fly towards Indrajit. (68—70)

तच्छिरः सशिरस्त्राणं श्रीमज्ज्वलितकुण्डलम् ।
प्रमथ्येन्द्रजितः कायात् पातयामास भूतले ॥ ७१ ॥

Severing the shining head of Indrajit, which was adorned with flaming earrings, casque and all, from his trunk, Lakṣmaṇa felled it to the earth's surface. (71)

तद् राक्षसतनूजस्य भिन्नस्कन्धं शिरो महत् ।
तपनीयनिभं भूमौ ददृशे रुधिरोक्षितम् ॥ ७२ ॥

Separated from the shoulders and bathed in blood, that huge head of Indrajit (sprung from the loins of an ogre) was seen lying on the ground, shining like gold. (72)

हतः स निपपाताथ धरण्यां रावणात्मजः ।
कवची सशिरस्त्राणो विप्रविद्धशरासनः ॥ ७३ ॥

Having been killed, the aforesaid son of Rāvaṇa, forthwith fell to the ground alongwith his armour and helmet, his bow thrown off. (73)

चुकुशुस्ते ततः सर्वे वानराः सविभीषणाः ।
हृष्यन्ते निहते तस्मिन् देवा वृत्रवधे यथा ॥ ७४ ॥

Indrajit having been killed, all those monkeys present on the battlefield, including Vibhiṣaṇa then rejoiced and shouted even as the gods did on the death of the demon Vṛtra. (74)

अथान्तरिक्षे देवानामृषीणां च महात्मनाम् ।
जज्ञेऽथ जयसंवादो गन्धर्वाप्सरसामपि ॥ ७५ ॥

Now there rose in the heavens a shout of victory from the mouth of gods and high-souled Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) as well as from the mouth of Gandharvas (heavenly musicians) and celestial nymphs. (75)

पतितं समभिज्ञाय राक्षसी सा महाचमूः ।
वध्यमाना दिशो भेजे हरिभिर्जितकाशिभिः ॥ ७६ ॥

Finding Indrajit fallen, the aforesaid army of ogres sought the quarters while being destroyed by the monkeys, who had assumed a triumphant air. (76)

वानरैर्वध्यमानास्ते शस्त्राण्युत्सृज्य राक्षसाः ।
लङ्कामभिमुखाः सस्त्रुर्भ्रष्टसंज्ञाः प्रधाविताः ॥ ७७ ॥

Flinging down their weapons while being struck by the monkeys, the said ogres moved towards Laṅkā running fast stupefied. (77)

दुद्रुवुर्बहुधा भीता राक्षसाः शतशो दिशः ।
त्यक्त्वा प्रहरणान् सर्वे पट्टिशासिपरश्वधान् ॥ ७८ ॥

Throwing away their weapons sharp-edged spears, swords and axes, all the ogres, panic stricken, as they were fled in various directions in their hundreds. (78)

केचिल्लङ्कां परित्रस्ताः प्रविष्टा वानरार्दिताः ।

समुद्रे पतिताः केचित् केचित् पर्वतमाश्रिताः ॥ ७९ ॥

Harried by the monkeys, some, who were greatly alarmed, penetrated deep into Laṅkā; others dropped into the sea; while still others took refuge on the Trikūṭa mountain. (79)

हतमिन्द्रजितं दृष्ट्वा शयानं च रणक्षितौ ।

राक्षसानां सहस्रेषु न कश्चित् प्रत्यदृश्यत ॥ ८० ॥

Finding Indrajit killed and lying on the battlefield, not one among the thousands of ogres was to be seen. (80)

यथास्तं गत आदित्ये नावतिष्ठन्ति रश्मयः ।

तथा तस्मिन् निपतिते राक्षसास्ते गता दिशः ॥ ८१ ॥

Even as sunbeams stay no longer when the sun has sunk below the horizon, so the said ogres fled in all directions when Indrajit had fallen. (81)

शान्तरश्मिरिवादित्यो निर्वाण इव पावकः ।

बभूव स महाबाहुर्व्यपास्तगतजीवितः ॥ ८२ ॥

Thrown asunder and shorn of life, that mighty-armed warrior, Indrajit, looked like the sun whose rays have cooled down and a fire which has gone out. (82)

प्रशान्तपीडाबहुलो विनष्टारिः प्रहर्षवान् ।

बभूव लोकः पतिते राक्षसेन्द्रमुते तदा ॥ ८३ ॥

Indrajit, son of the ruler of ogres, having fallen, the world had its suffering allayed in a large measure now that its enemy had been destroyed and it experienced a thrill of delight. (83)

हर्षं च शक्रो भगवान् सह सर्वैर्महर्षिभिः ।

जगाम निहते तस्मिन् राक्षसे पापकर्मणि ॥ ८४ ॥

That ogre of sinful deeds having been made short work of, the glorious Indra, the ruler of gods, too rejoiced with all eminent Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras). (84)

आकाशे चापि देवानां शुश्रुवे दुन्दुभिस्वनः ।

नृत्यद्विरप्सरोभिश्च गन्धर्वैश्च महात्मभिः ॥ ८५ ॥

In the heavens too the roll of large drums played upon by gods could be heard alongwith the melody produced by dancing celestial nymphs and the songs of high-souled Gandharvas. (85)

ववर्षुः पुष्पवर्षाणि तदद्भुतमिवाभवत् ।

प्रशशाम हते तस्मिन् राक्षसे क्रूरकर्मणि ॥ ८६ ॥

Gods sent down showers of flowers; for the death of Indrajit came as a marvel to them. Nay, the dust, which was hanging on the battlefield settled, now that the aforesaid ogre of cruel deeds had been killed and the fighting had forthwith ceased as a matter of course. (86)

शुद्धा आपो नभश्चैव जह्मर्देवदानवाः ।

आजग्मुः पतिते तस्मिन् सर्वलोकभयावहे ॥ ८७ ॥

ऊचुश्च सहितास्तुष्टा देवगन्धर्वदानवाः ।

विज्वराः शान्तकलुषा ब्राह्मणा विचरन्त्विति ॥ ८८ ॥

The waters became limpid and the sky too became clear; nay, gods and demons alike rejoiced since that ogre, who was the terror of all the worlds, had now fallen. Feeling gratified, gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Dānavas (devils), arrived on the scene in a body and said, "Let the Brāhmaṇas move about free from anxiety now that their torment had ceased." (87-88)

ततोऽभ्यनन्दन् संहृष्टाः समरे हरियूथपाः ।

तमप्रतिबलं दृष्ट्वा हतं नैर्ऋतपुङ्गवम् ॥ ८९ ॥

Feeling overjoyed to see that bull among the ogres, who was unrivalled in combat, made short work of, the commanders of monkey troops exulted over their victory. (89)

विभीषणो हनूमांश्च जाम्बवांश्चर्क्षयूथपः ।

विजयेनाभिनन्दन्तस्तुष्टुवुश्चापि लक्ष्मणम् ॥ ९० ॥

Felicitating Lakṣmaṇa on his victory, Vibhiṣaṇa and Hanumān as also Jāmbavān, the commander of the army of bears, applauded him too. (90)

क्ष्वेडन्तश्च प्लवन्तश्च गर्जन्तश्च प्लवंगमाः ।
लब्धलक्षा रघुसुतं परिवार्योपतस्थिरे ॥ ९१ ॥

Nay, roaring, bounding for joy and thundering, the monkeys, who had found an occasion for rejoicing, stood surrounding Lakṣmaṇa, a scion of Raghu. (91)

लाङ्गूलानि प्रविध्यन्तः स्फोटयन्तश्च वानराः ।
लक्ष्मणो जयतीत्येव वाक्यं विश्रावयन्तदा ॥ ९२ ॥

Wagging their tails and lashing them, the monkeys then gave forth the slogan "Victorious is Lakṣmaṇa !" (92)

अन्योन्यं च समाश्लिष्य हरयो हृष्टमानसाः ।
चक्रुरुच्चावचगुणा राघवाश्रयसत्कथाः ॥ ९३ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे नवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९० ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCI

Lakṣmaṇa, Vibhīṣaṇa and others approach Śrī Rāma with the news of Indrajit's fall. Delighted with the news, Śrī Rāma embraces Lakṣmaṇa and applauds him and gets Lakṣmaṇa and others treated by Suśeṇa

रुधिरक्लिन्नगात्रस्तु लक्ष्मणः शुभलक्षणः ।
बभूव हृष्टस्तं हत्वा शत्रुजेतारमाहवे ॥ १ ॥

Graced with auspicious bodily marks, Lakṣmaṇa for his part, whose limbs were bathed in blood, felt rejoiced on having killed in combat Indrajit, the conqueror of his enemies. (1)

ततः स जाम्बवन्तं च हनूमन्तं च वीर्यवान् ।
संनिपत्य महातेजास्तांश्च सर्वान् वनौकसः ॥ २ ॥
आजगाम ततः शीघ्रं यत्र सुग्रीवराघवौ ।
विभीषणमवष्टभ्य हनूमन्तं च लक्ष्मणः ॥ ३ ॥

Nay, embracing one another, the monkeys, who felt delighted in mind and were endowed with manifold virtues, indulged in a charming talk about Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (93)

तदसुकरमथाभिवीक्ष्य हृष्टाः
प्रियसुहृदो युधि लक्ष्मणस्य कर्म ।
परममुपलभन्मनःप्रहर्षं

विनिहतमिन्द्ररिपुं निशम्य देवाः ॥ ९४ ॥

The monkeys (the beloved friends of Lakṣmaṇa) now felt rejoiced to witness his aforesaid feat on the field of battle, which was not easy to accomplish for others, while the gods too experienced supreme delight of mind on perceiving Indrajit (Indra's adversary) killed. (94)

Taking with him Jāmbavān and Hanumān too, as well as all the aforesaid monkeys (lit., the denizens of the woods), the celebrated and valiant Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, thereupon speedily returned from the field of battle to the spot where Sugrīva and Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) were, leaning on Vibhīṣaṇa and Hanumān. (2-3)

ततो राममभिक्रम्य सौमित्रिरभिवाद्य च ।
तस्थौ भ्रातृसमीपस्थः शक्रस्येन्द्रानुजो यथा ॥ ४ ॥

Going clockwise round Śrī Rāma and greeting him, the son of Sumitrā then stood rooted beside his eldest half brother even as Lord Vāmana, the younger brother of Indra, would stand beside Indra, the ruler of gods. (4)

निष्टनन्निव चागत्य राघवाय महात्मने।
आचचक्षे तदा वीरो घोरमिन्द्रजितो वधम्॥५॥

Making his appearance and vociferating, as it were, by his very return with a cheerful look on his face, the heroic Vibhīṣaṇa then reported to the high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) the ghastly end of Indrajit. (5)

रावणेस्तु शिरश्छिन्नं लक्ष्मणेन महात्मना।
न्यवेदयत रामाय तदा हृष्टो विभीषणः॥६॥

Filled with delight, Vibhīṣaṇa, for his part, forthwith submitted to Śrī Rāma that the head of Indrajit (son of Rāvaṇa) had been severed by the high-souled Lakṣmaṇa. (6)

श्रुत्वैव तु महावीर्यो लक्ष्मणेनेन्द्रजिद्वधम्।
प्रहर्षमतुलं लेभे वाक्यं चेदमुवाच ह॥७॥

Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary prowess, for his part, experienced immense joy the very moment he heard about the fall of Indrajit at the hands of Lakṣmaṇa and uttered the following words; so the tradition goes: (7)

साधु लक्ष्मण तुष्टोऽस्मि कर्म चासुकरं कृतम्।
रावणेर्हि विनाशेन जितमित्युपधारय॥८॥

“Well done, O Lakṣmaṇa ! I feel gratified with what you have done. Nay, a feat which was not easy to accomplish (for others) has been performed by you. Know it for certain that victory has actually been scored by us through the destruction of Indrajit, son of Rāvaṇa.” (8)

स तं शिरस्युपाघ्राय लक्ष्मणं कीर्तिवर्धनम्।
लज्जमानं बलात् स्नेहादङ्कमारोप्य वीर्यवान्॥९॥
उपवेश्य तमुत्सङ्गे परिष्वज्यावपीडितम्।
भ्रातरं लक्ष्मणं स्निग्धं पुनः पुनरुदैक्षत॥१०॥

Smelling the head of the aforesaid Lakṣmaṇa, who had enhanced his glory and yet who was feeling abashed to hear himself being praised, nay, forcibly drawing him to his lap and placing him on it and embracing him, wounded as he was, the valiant Śrī Rāma tenderly gazed upon his fortunate brother again and again. (9-10)

शल्यसम्पीडितं शस्तं निःश्वसन्तं तु लक्ष्मणम्।
रामस्तु दुःखसंतप्तं तं तु निःश्वासपीडितम्॥११॥
मूर्ध्नि चैनमुपाघ्राय भूयः संस्पृश्य च त्वरन्।
उवाच लक्ष्मणं वाक्यमाश्वास्य पुरुषर्षभः॥१२॥

Smelling once more as a token of affection the head of Lakṣmaṇa, who was feeling greatly tormented by the arrows that had penetrated into his body, who had been lacerated, nay, who was breathing hard due to excessive exertion, was afflicted with agony and was feeling pained at the time of respiration—and hurriedly stroking him and restoring him to confidence (with a view to relieving him of his pain), Śrī Rāma, a bull among men, for his part spoke to him as follows: (11-12)

कृतं परमकल्याणं कर्म दुष्करकर्मणा।
अद्य मन्ये हते पुत्रे रावणं निहतं युधि॥१३॥

“A feat which was supremely beneficial has been accomplished by you, whose exploits are difficult to perform for others. I account Rāvaṇa killed in combat now that his son has been made short work of. (13)

अद्याहं विजयी शत्रौ हते तस्मिन् दुरात्मनि।
रावणस्य नृशंसस्य दिष्ट्या वीर त्वया रणे॥१४॥
छिन्नो हि दक्षिणो बाहुः स हि तस्य व्यपाश्रयः।
विभीषणहनूमदभ्यां कृतं कर्म महद् रणे॥१५॥

“I am victorious today inasmuch as that evil-minded adversary of ours has been despatched. Luckily enough, O hero, has the right arm of the merciless Rāvaṇa been actually severed by you. Indeed, Indrajit was his sheet-anchor. A remarkable exploit was performed even by Vibhiṣaṇa and Hanumān on the field of battle. (14-15)

अहोरात्रैस्त्रिभिर्वीरः कथंचिद् विनिपातितः ।

निरमित्रः कृतोऽस्म्यद्य निर्यास्यति हि रावणः ॥ १६ ॥

“In the course of three days and nights the champion has somehow been made short work of and I have been rid of my enemy today. Rāvaṇa will undoubtedly sally forth now. (16)

बलव्यूहेन महता निर्यास्यति हि रावणः ।

बलव्यूहेन महता श्रुत्वा पुत्रं निपातितम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Hearing of his eldest son having been struck down with a large formation of army, Rāvaṇa will surely come forth with a vast formation of army. (17)

तं पुत्रवधसंतप्तं निर्यान्तं राक्षसाधिपम् ।

बलेनावृत्य महता निहनिष्यामि दुर्जयम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Surrounding with a huge army that suzerain lord of ogres, who is tormented by the death of his son, even as he sallies forth, I shall make short work of him, even though he is difficult to conquer. (18)

त्वया लक्ष्मण नाथेन सीता च पृथिवी च मे ।

न दुष्प्रापा हते तस्मिन् शक्रजेतरि चाहवे ॥ १९ ॥

“With you as my protector, O Lakṣmaṇa, neither Sītā nor the earth will be hard to regain, now that the aforesaid conqueror of Indra has been killed in combat.” (19)

स तं भ्रातरमाश्वास्य परिष्वज्य च राघवः ।

रामः सुषेणं मुदितः समाभाष्येदमब्रवीत् ॥ २० ॥

Having restored his aforesaid younger brother to confidence and hugged him, and accosting Suṣeṇa, the celebrated Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, joyfully spoke to him as follows: (20)

विशल्योऽयं महाप्राज्ञ सौमित्रिर्मित्रवत्सलः ।

यथा भवति सुस्वस्थस्तथा त्वं समुपाचर ॥ २१ ॥

“Treat Lakṣmaṇa properly in such a way, O highly intelligent one, that this son of Sumitrā, who is fond of his friends, may be rid of pain caused by the arrows that have penetrated into his body and may be completely healed. (21)

विशल्यः क्रियतां क्षिप्रं सौमित्रिः सविभीषणः ।

ऋक्षवानरसैन्यानां शूराणां द्रुमयोधिनाम् ॥ २२ ॥

ये चाप्यन्येऽत्र युध्यन्ति सशल्या वणिनस्तथा ।

तेऽपि सर्वे प्रयत्नेन क्रियन्ते सुखिनस्त्वया ॥ २३ ॥

“Let the son of Sumitrā alongwith Vibhiṣaṇa be speedily rid of pain caused by the arrows that have penetrated into their body. Nay, let all others too among the gallant bear and monkey warriors fighting with trees, who have fought on the battlefield and stand pierced with arrows and wounded, be healed by you with all care.” (22-23)

एवमुक्तः स रामेण महात्मा हरियूथपः ।

लक्ष्मणाय ददौ नस्तः सुषेणः परमौषधम् ॥ २४ ॥

Requested as aforesaid by Śrī Rāma, the high-souled Suṣeṇa, a commander of monkey troops, administered a sovereign remedy to Lakṣmaṇa through the nose. (24)

स तस्य गन्धमाघ्राय विशल्यः समपद्यत ।

तदा निर्वेदनश्चैव संरूढव्रण एव च ॥ २५ ॥

Inhaling the odour of the herb, Lakṣmaṇa was freed from arrows then and there and rid of his pain and his wounds too got completely cicatrized. (25)

विभीषणमुखानां च सुहृदां राघवाज्ञया ।

सर्ववानरमुख्यानां चिकित्सामकरोत् तदा ॥ २६ ॥

At the command of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) Suṣeṇa also forthwith treated his friends Vibhiṣaṇa and others as also all the monkey chiefs. (26)

ततः प्रकृतिमापन्नो हृतशल्यो गतक्लमः ।

सौमित्रिर्मुमुदे तत्र क्षणेन विगतज्वरः ॥ २७ ॥

Restored to his normal state and freed from the arrows, his lassitude having gone and his anguish disappeared in an instant,

Lakṣmaṇa, the son of Sumitrā, felt delighted on that occasion. (27)

तदैव रामः प्लवगाधिपस्तथा
विभीषणश्चक्षुर्क्षपतिश्च वीर्यवान्।
अवेक्ष्य सौमित्रिमरोगमुत्थितं
मुदा ससैन्याः सुचिरं जहर्षि ॥ २८ ॥

On that very occasion Śrī Rāma as well as Sugrīva, the suzerain lord of monkeys, as also Vibhīṣaṇa and the valiant Jāmbavān, the lord of bears, with their troops rejoiced for a pretty long time on beholding Lakṣmaṇa, sound, active and full of joy. (28)

अपूजयत् कर्म स लक्ष्मणस्य
सुदुष्करं दाशरथिर्महात्मा।
बभूव हृष्टो युधि वानरेन्द्रो
निशम्य तं शक्रजितं निपातितम् ॥ २९ ॥

That high-souled son of Daśaratha, Śrī Rāma, applauded the feat of Lakṣmaṇa, which was exceedingly difficult to accomplish for others. The king of monkeys, Sugrīva, too felt delighted to hear of the notorious Indrajit having been struck down in combat. (29)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९१ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्विनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCII

Stricken with grief at the death of Indrajit, Rāvaṇa proceeds to kill Sītā, who, he feels was the root of all trouble, but desists from this dastardly act at the intercession of Supārśwa

ततः पौलस्त्यसचिवाः श्रुत्वा चेन्द्रजितो वधम्।
आचक्षुरभिज्ञाय दशग्रीवाय सत्वराः ॥ १ ॥

Hearing of Indrajit's fall and having directly perceived it, the ministers of Rāvaṇa (a scion of Pulasti) reported the matter in all haste to the ten-headed monster in the following words: (1)

युद्धे हतो महाराज लक्ष्मणेन तवात्मजः।
विभीषणसहायेन मिषतां नो महाद्युतिः ॥ २ ॥

"Your highly glorious son, Indrajit, O great king, has been killed in combat by Lakṣmaṇa, assisted by Vibhīṣaṇa, while we stood looking on. (2)

शूरः शूरेण संगम्य संयुगेष्वपराजितः।
लक्ष्मणेन हतः शूरः पुत्रस्ते विबुधेन्द्रजित् ॥ ३ ॥

"Closing with a hero, your heroic son, Indrajit, the conqueror of the ruler of gods, who had never been vanquished in battles, has been made short work of by Lakṣmaṇa. (3)

गतः स परमाँल्लोकान् शरैः संतर्प्य लक्ष्मणम्।
स तं प्रतिभयं श्रुत्वा वधं पुत्रस्य दारुणम् ॥ ४ ॥
घोरमिन्द्रजितः संख्ये कश्मलं प्राविशन्महत्।
उपलभ्य चिरात् संज्ञां राजा राक्षसपुंगवः ॥ ५ ॥
पुत्रशोकाकुलो दीनो विललापाकुलेन्द्रियः।
हा राक्षसचमूमुख्य मम वत्स महाबल ॥ ६ ॥
जित्वेन्द्रं कथमद्य त्वं लक्ष्मणस्य वशं गतः।
ननु त्वमिषुभिः क्रुद्धो भिन्द्याः कालान्तकावपि ॥ ७ ॥
मन्दरस्यापि शृङ्गाणि किं पुनर्लक्ष्मणं युधि।
अद्य वैवस्वतो राजा भूयो बहुमतो मम ॥ ८ ॥

येनाद्य त्वं महाबाहो संयुक्तः कालधर्मणा ।
एष पन्थाः सुयोधानां सर्वाभरणेष्वपि ।
यः कृते हन्यते भर्तुः स पुमान् स्वर्गमृच्छति ॥ ९ ॥

“Having gratified Lakṣmaṇa with his arrows, he has ascended to the highest worlds.” Hearing of that terrible, cruel and ghastly end of his son, Indrajit, on the battlefield, Rāvaṇa gave way to a protracted swoon. Regaining his consciousness after a long time, King Rāvaṇa (the foremost among the ogres), who was beside himself with grief on account of his son’s death, his mind distracted, lamented as follows, afflicted as he was: “Having conquered Indra, Ah! my child, the leader of the army of ogres, endowed as you were with extraordinary might, how have you been overpowered by Lakṣmaṇa today? Surely, when provoked, you could pierce with your arrows in combat even Death and Yama (the god of retribution) as well as the peaks of Mount Mandara, much more so Lakṣmaṇa. Highly esteemed in my eyes is King Yama (son of the sun-god), by whom, O mighty-armed one, you have been subjected to the ravages of Time today. This is the path trodden by noble warriors even among the celestial hosts. The man who is killed for the cause of his lord attains heaven. (4—9)

अद्य देवगणाः सर्वे लोकपाला महर्षयः ।
हतमिन्द्रजितं श्रुत्वा सुखं स्वप्स्यन्ति निर्भयाः ॥ १० ॥

“Hearing of Indrajit having been disposed of, and being rid of all fear, all the hosts of heaven, the guardians of the world and eminent Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) will repose comfortably today. (10)

अद्य लोकास्त्रयः कृत्स्ना पृथिवी च सकानना ।
एकेनेन्द्रजिता हीना शून्येव प्रतिभाति मे ॥ ११ ॥

“Devoid of Indrajit alone, the entire globe with its forests, nay, all the three worlds, viz., heaven, earth and the intermediate region, appear desolate to me. (11)

अद्य नैर्ऋतकन्यानां श्रोष्याम्यन्तःपुरे खम् ।
करेणुसङ्घस्य यथा निनादं गिरिगह्वरे ॥ १२ ॥

“I shall hear today the cries of the ogress maidens in the gynaeceum even as one would hear the roar of female-elephants in a mountain cave. (12)

यौवराज्यं च लङ्कां च रक्षांसि च परंतप ।
मातरं मां च भार्याश्च क्व गतोऽसि विहाय नः ॥ १३ ॥

“Relinquishing the office of Prince-Regent, nay, abandoning Laṅkā as well as the ogres inhabiting it as also us, viz., your mother and myself as well as your consorts, where have you gone, O scourge of your enemies? (13)

मम नाम त्वया वीर गतस्य यमसादनम् ।
प्रेतकार्याणि कार्याणि विपरीते हि वर्तसे ॥ १४ ॥

“Really speaking, obsequies in my honour ought to have been performed by you when I would have departed to the abode of Death, O hero! You have, however, acted in a contrary way by preceding me to the abode of Yama. (14)

स त्वं जीवति सुग्रीवे लक्ष्मणे च सराघवे ।
मम शल्यमनुद्धृत्य क्व गतोऽसि विहाय नः ॥ १५ ॥

“Deserting us without extracting my thorn, while Sugrīva is still living as also Lakṣmaṇa, accompanied by Rāma (a scion of Raghu), where have you gone?” (15)

एवमादिविलापार्तं रावणं राक्षसाधिपम् ।
आविवेश महान् क्रोधः पुत्रव्यसनसम्भवः ॥ १६ ॥

A violent anger born of his son’s death took possession of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, while he was feeling distressed through lamentation as aforesaid. (16)

प्रकृत्या कोपनं ह्येनं पुत्रस्य पुनराधयः ।
दीप्तं संदीपयामासुर्धर्मेऽर्कमिव रश्मयः ॥ १७ ॥

Indeed, pangs occasioned by the death of his son further inflamed Rāvaṇa, who was irascible and fiery by nature, even as sunbeams make the bright sun brighter in summer. (17)

ललाटे भ्रुकुटीभिश्च संगताभिव्यरोचत ।
युगान्ते सह नक्रैस्तु महोर्मिभिरिवोदधिः ॥ १८ ॥

Nay, with eyebrows contracted on his forehead, he shone brightly like the ocean at the end of a world-cycle with crocodiles and large waves. (18)

कोपाद् विजृम्भमाणस्य वक्त्राद् व्यक्तमिवज्वलन् ।
उत्पपात सधूमाग्निर्वृत्रस्य वदनादिव ॥ १९ ॥

From the mouth of Rāvaṇa, even as he yawned in rage, burst forth a flame with smoke as though visibly burning, as it actually did from the mouth of the demon Vṛtra in the former days. (19)

स पुत्रवधसंतप्तः शूरः क्रोधवशं गतः ।
समीक्ष्य रावणो बुद्ध्या वैदेह्या रोचयद् वधम् ॥ २० ॥

Pondering with his mind, the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, who, though heroic, had fallen a prey to anger, afflicted as he was with the fall of his son, resolved upon the destruction of Sitā. (20)

तस्य प्रकृत्या रक्ते च रक्ते क्रोधाग्निनापि च ।
रावणस्य महाघोरे दीप्ते नेत्रे बभूवतुः ॥ २१ ॥

The eyes of the aforesaid Rāvaṇa, which were naturally red and were glowing red through the fire of anger, looked very dreadful. (21)

घोरं प्रकृत्या रूपं तत् तस्य क्रोधाग्निमूर्च्छितम् ।
बभूव रूपं क्रुद्धस्य रुद्रस्येव दुरासदम् ॥ २२ ॥

The aspect of Rāvaṇa, which was terrible by nature, and was overcome by the fire of wrath, became threatening like that of Rudra, the god of destruction, in rage. (22)

तस्य क्रुद्धस्य नेत्राभ्यां प्रापतन्श्रुबिन्दवः ।
दीपाभ्यामिव दीप्ताभ्यां सार्चिषः स्नेहबिन्दवः ॥ २३ ॥

Tears fell from the eyes of the angry Rāvaṇa like flaming drops of oil from a pair of burning lamps. (23)

दन्तान् विदशतस्तस्य श्रूयते दशनस्वनः ।
यन्त्रस्याकृष्यमाणस्य मथ्नतो दानवैरिव ॥ २४ ॥

The sound produced by the friction of his teeth even as he ground them was heard like the noise of the rod (in the shape of Mount Mandara) which churned the ocean of milk while being revolved by the Dānavas (devils) in collaboration with gods. (24)

कालाग्निरिव संक्रुद्धो यां यां दिशमवैक्षत ।
तस्यां तस्यां भयत्रस्ता राक्षसाः संविलित्यरे ॥ २५ ॥

Stricken with fear, ogres hid themselves (behind pillars etc.) in the very quarter to which he directed his look, infuriated as he was like the fire of universal destruction. (25)

तमन्तकमिव क्रुद्धं चराचरचिखादिषुम् ।
वीक्षमाणं दिशः सर्वा राक्षसा नोपचक्रमुः ॥ २६ ॥

Ogres dared not approach Rāvaṇa, who was surveying all the four quarters, eager as he was like enraged Death to devour both the mobile and immobile creation. (26)

ततः परमसंक्रुद्धो रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ।
अब्रवीद् रक्षसां मध्ये संस्तम्भयिषुराहवे ॥ २७ ॥

Eager to rally the ogres on the field of battle, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, who was extremely enraged, spoke as follows in their midst: (27)

मया वर्षसहस्राणि चरित्वा परमं तपः ।
तेषु तेष्ववकाशेषु स्वयंभूः परितोषितः ॥ २८ ॥

“Having practised rigorous austerities for thousands of years, I propitiated Brahmā, the self-born creator, at the conclusion of those austerities. (28)

तस्यैव तपसो व्युष्ट्या प्रसादाच्च स्वयंभुवः ।
नासुरेभ्यो न देवेभ्यो भयं मम कदाचन ॥ २९ ॥

“As a reward of those very austerities and through the grace of the self-born creator, there is no danger to me at any time either from the demons or from the gods. (29)

कवचं ब्रह्मदत्तं मे यदादित्यसमप्रभम् ।
देवासुरविमर्देषु न छिन्नं वज्रमुष्टिभिः ॥ ३० ॥

“The coat of mail bestowed on me by Brahmā, which is effulgent like the sun, could not be pierced in the course of my conflicts with the gods and demons, even by those who held the thunderbolt in their fists. (30)

तेन मामद्य संयुक्तं रथस्थमिह संयुगे।
प्रतीयात् कोऽद्य मामाजौ साक्षादपि पुरंदरः ॥ ३१ ॥

“Who will, be it Indra, the destroyer of strongholds, himself dare to withstand on the battlefield today me when mounted on my chariot on this field of battle and duly equipped with the aforesaid armour? (31)

यत् तदाभिप्रसन्नेन सशरं कार्मुकं महत्।
देवासुरविमर्देषु मम दत्तं स्वयंभुवा ॥ ३२ ॥
अद्य तूर्यशतैर्भीमं धनुरुत्थाप्यतां मम।
रामलक्ष्मणयोरेव वधाय परमाहवे ॥ ३३ ॥

“Nay, let that mighty and redoubtable bow of mine, which was bestowed at that time on me alongwith arrows by Brahmā (the self-born creator), gratified on the occasion of my conflicts with the gods and demons, be transported today to the accompaniment of hundreds of trumpets for making short work of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa exclusively in a major encounter.” (32-33)

स पुत्रवधसंतप्तः क्रूरः क्रोधवशं गतः।
समीक्ष्य रावणो बुद्ध्या सीतां हन्तुं व्यवस्यत ॥ ३४ ॥

Deeply pondering with his mind, the cruel Rāvaṇa, who was tormented by the death of his eldest son, Indrajit, and, overpowered by anger, resolved to kill Sītā. (34)

प्रत्यवेक्ष्य तु ताम्राक्षः सुघोरो घोरदर्शनः।
दीनो दीनस्वरान् सर्वास्तानुवाच निशाचरान् ॥ ३५ ॥

Looking fixedly with bloodshot eyes on all the aforesaid rangers of the night, who were making plaintive sounds, the ferocious Rāvaṇa for his part, who had assumed a terrible aspect, though feeling distressed, spoke to them as follows: (35)

मायया मम वत्सेन वञ्चनार्थं वनौकसाम्।
किञ्चिदेव हतं तत्र सीतेयमिति दर्शितम् ॥ ३६ ॥

“In order to hoodwink the monkeys (lit., the denizens of the forest) something which had been killed on the field of battle was displayed by recourse to Māyā (conjuring tricks), as Sītā by my child, Indrajit. (36)

तदिदं तथ्यमेवाहं करिष्ये प्रियमात्मनः।
वैदेहीं नाशयिष्यामि क्षत्रबन्धुमनुव्रताम् ॥ ३७ ॥

“I shall presently convert that hoax into a hard reality and thereby do that which is pleasing to me. I shall finish Sītā (a princess of the Videha kingdom), who is devoted to Rāma, a vile Kṣatriya.” (37)

इत्येवमुक्त्वा सचिवान् खड्गमाशु परामृशत्।
उद्धृत्य गुणसम्पन्नं विमलाम्बरवर्चसम् ॥ ३८ ॥

Having spoken as aforesaid to his ministers and drawing his excellent sword, which was bright as the stainless sky, Rāvaṇa instantly seized hold of it. (38)

निष्पपात स वेगेन सभार्यः सचिवैर्वृतः।
रावणः पुत्रशोकेन भृशमाकुलचेतनः ॥ ३९ ॥

Nay, taking the sword, and feeling highly enraged, the aforesaid Rāvaṇa, who was accompanied by his principal spouse, Mandodarī, and surrounded by his ministers, and whose understanding was utterly confused through grief caused by the death of his eldest son, precipitately rushed with impetuosity to the place where Sītā, the princess of Mithilā, was. Perceiving the ogre marching, his ministers emitted leonine roars. Nay, hugging one another on perceiving the ogre infuriated, they spoke as follows: “Both the aforesaid brothers, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, will tremble to see this ogre today. (39—41)

संकुब्धः खड्गमादाय सहसा यत्र मैथिली।
व्रजन्तं राक्षसं प्रेक्ष्य सिंहनादं विचुकुशुः ॥ ४० ॥
ऊचुश्चान्योन्यमालिङ्ग्य संकुब्धं प्रेक्ष्य राक्षसम्।
अद्यैनं तावुभौ दृष्ट्वा भ्रातरौ प्रव्यथिष्यतः ॥ ४१ ॥

लोकपाला हि चत्वारः क्रुद्धेनानेन निर्जिताः ।

बहवः शत्रवश्चान्ये संयुगेष्वभिपातिताः ॥ ४२ ॥

“By this ogre in fury all the four guardians of the world have been utterly vanquished. Many other enemies too have been struck down by him in the course of conflicts.

(42)

त्रिषु लोकेषु रत्नानि भुङ्क्ते आहत्य रावणः ।

विक्रमे च बले चैव नास्त्यस्य सदृशो भुवि ॥ ४३ ॥

“Fetchng treasures existing in all the three worlds, Rāvaṇa enjoys them. Nay, there is none equal to him on earth in prowess and might too.”

(43)

तेषां संजल्पमानानामशोकवनिकां गताम् ।

अभिदुद्राव वैदेहीं रावणः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ॥ ४४ ॥

While they were talking thus, Rāvaṇa, who was filled with anger, darted towards Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, present in the Aśoka grove.

(44)

वार्यमाणः सुसंकुद्धः सुहृद्भिर्हितबुद्धिभिः ।

अभ्यधावत संकुद्धः खे ग्रहो रोहिणीमिव ॥ ४५ ॥

Even though being kept back by friends whose mind was set on his welfare, Rāvaṇa, who was highly enraged, ran towards Sitā, even as an evil planet in the sky would dart in fury towards the constellation Rohiṇī.

(45)

मैथिली रक्ष्यमाणा तु राक्षसीभिरनिन्दिता ।

ददर्श राक्षसं क्रुद्धं निस्त्रिंशवरधारिणम् ॥ ४६ ॥

While being guarded by ogresses, the irreproachable princess of Mithilā, Sitā, for her part beheld the furious ogre bearing an excellent sword to make short work of her.

(46)

तं निशम्य सनिस्त्रिंशं व्यथिता जनकात्मजा ।

निवार्यमाणं बहुशः सुहृद्भिरनिवर्तिनम् ॥ ४७ ॥

Sitā (daughter of Janaka) felt distressed to see Rāvaṇa armed with a sword, who was being repeatedly kept back by friends, yet who was not receding.

(47)

सीता दुःखसमाविष्टा विलपन्तीदमब्रवीत् ।

यथायं मामभिक्रुद्धः समभिद्रवति स्वयम् ॥ ४८ ॥

वधिष्यति सनाथां मामनाथामिव दुर्मतिः ।

बहुशश्चोदयामास भर्तारं मामनुव्रताम् ॥ ४९ ॥

भार्या मम भवस्वेति प्रत्याख्यातो ध्रुवं मया ।

सोऽयं मामनुपस्थाने व्यक्तं नैराश्यमागतः ॥ ५० ॥

क्रोधमोहसमाविष्टो व्यक्तं मां हन्तुमुद्यतः ।

अथवा तौ नरव्याघ्रौ भ्रातरौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ५१ ॥

मन्मिन्मनार्येण समरेऽद्य निपातितौ ।

भैरवो हि महान् नादो राक्षसानां श्रुतो मया ॥ ५२ ॥

बहूनामिह हृष्टानां तथा विक्रोशतां प्रियम् ।

अहो धिङ्मन्मिन्मिन्तोऽयं विनाशो राजपुत्रयोः ॥ ५३ ॥

Possessed with sorrow and, therefore, wailing, Sitā spoke as follows: “From the way in which this fellow himself is rushing headlong towards me in fury, I fear the evil-minded ogre is going to kill me as if I were protectorless, even though I have a protector in my husband. He entreated me on many an occasion, devoted as I am to my husband, saying, “Be my consort !” He was, however, uncompromisingly repulsed by me every time. Having evidently fallen a prey to despair on my refusing to wait upon him, nay, filled with anger and infatuation, this Rāvaṇa is obviously intent on killing me. Or, those two brothers, Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, who are tigers among men, have been struck down in combat by this unworthy fellow on my account today. A loud and terrific noise of numerous jubilant ogres calling loudly to their loved ones was actually heard by me. Woe be to me if the aforesaid destruction of the two princes was brought about on my account.

(48—53)

अथवा पुत्रशोकेन अहत्वा रामलक्ष्मणौ ।

विधमिष्यति मां रौद्रो राक्षसः पापनिश्चयः ॥ ५४ ॥

“Or, having not been able to kill Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, the fierce ogre of sinful resolve is going to make short work of me, stricken as he is with grief over his son. (54)

हनूमतस्तु तद् वाक्यं न कृतं क्षुद्रया मया ।
 यद्यहं तस्य पृष्ठेन तदायासमनिर्जिता ॥ ५५ ॥
 नाद्यैवमनुशोचेयं भर्तुरङ्कगता सती ।
 मन्ये तु हृदयं तस्याः कौसल्यायाः फलिष्यति ॥ ५६ ॥
 एकपुत्रा यदा पुत्रं विनष्टं श्रोष्यते युधि ।
 सा हि जन्म च बाल्यं च यौवनं च महात्मनः ॥ ५७ ॥
 धर्मकार्याणि रूपं च रुदती संस्मरिष्यति ।
 निराशा निहते पुत्रे दत्त्वा श्राद्धमचेतना ॥ ५८ ॥
 अग्रिमावेक्ष्यते नूनमपो वापि प्रवेक्ष्यति ।
 धिगस्तु कुब्जामसतीं मन्थरां पापनिश्चयाम् ॥ ५९ ॥
 यन्निमित्तमिमं शोकं कौसल्या प्रतिपत्स्यते ।
 इत्येवं मैथिलीं दृष्ट्वा विलपन्तीं तपस्विनीम् ॥ ६० ॥
 रोहिणीमिव चन्द्रेण बिना ग्रहवशं गताम् ।
 एतस्मिन्नन्तरे तस्य अमात्यः शीलवान् शुचिः ॥ ६१ ॥
 सुपाश्वर्यो नाम मेधावी रावणं रक्षसां वरम् ।
 निवार्यमाणः सचिवैरिदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ६२ ॥

“Alas! That sane counsel of Hanumān was not followed by me, vile that I am. Had I left at that time, mounted on his back, though not won back by my husband, I would not have grieved as I am doing today, as I should be resting in that case in the lap of my husband. I am sure the heart of the blessed Kausalyā Śrī Rāma’s mother will actually break asunder when the lady, who has only one son, hears of her son having perished in the fight. Weeping, she, for her part, will vividly recall the birth and childhood as well as the youth of the high-souled prince, as also his pious acts and comeliness. Having offered up the obsequies on her son having been killed and getting despondent and unconscious, the lady will surely enter the flame or be drowned in water. Woe be to the vile hunchback Mantharā, of sinful resolve, on whose account Kausalyā will suffer this grief.”

In the meantime, seeing the unfortunate princess of Mithilā wailing, as aforesaid, like Rohiṇī (the deity presiding over a constellation of this name) fallen under the sway of the planet Mars when away from the moon-god (her husband), a good-natured, upright and highly intelligent minister of Rāvaṇa, Supārśva by name spoke as follows to Rāvaṇa, the foremost of ogres, in spite of his being restrained by other ministers: (55—62)

कथं नाम दशग्रीव साक्षाद्वैश्रवणानुज ।
 हन्तुमिच्छसि वैदेहीं क्रोधाद् धर्ममपास्य च ॥ ६३ ॥

“How on earth do you, O ten-headed monarch, a younger brother of Kubera (the god of riches and a guardian of the world) himself, seek to put Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) to death in a fit of anger, casting righteousness to the winds? (63)

वेदविद्याव्रतस्नातः स्वकर्मनिरतस्तथा ।
 स्त्रियः कस्माद् वधं वीर मन्यसे राक्षसेश्वर ॥ ६४ ॥

“Ever since you completed the vow of celibacy essential for a study of the Vedic lore, you have remained engaged in the religious observances incumbent on you (in the shape of Agnihotra). How then do you deem it fit to kill a woman, O valiant king of ogres? (64)

मैथिलीं रूपसम्पन्नां प्रत्यवेक्षस्व पार्थिव ।
 तस्मिन्नेव सहास्माभिराहवे क्रोधमुत्सृज ॥ ६५ ॥

“Take care of Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, who is richly endowed with comeliness, O ruler of the earth, and vent your wrath on Rāma alone, alongwith us all, in an encounter. (65)

अभ्युत्थानं त्वमद्यैव कृष्णपक्षचतुर्दशी ।
 कृत्वा निर्याह्यमावास्यां विजयाय बलैर्वृतः ॥ ६६ ॥

“Girding yourself for the offensive this very day, today being the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight, march you to victory on the morrow, which is a moonless day, surrounded by troops. (66)

शूरो धीमान् रथी खड्गी रथप्रवरमास्थितः ।
 हत्वा दाशरथिं रामं भवान् प्राप्स्यति मैथिलीम् ॥ ६७ ॥

“A gallant and shrewd car-warrior, fighting with a sword in the foremost of your chariots, you will be able to lay your hands on the princess of Mithilā only on making short work of Rāma, son of Daśaratha.”

(67)

स तद् दुरात्मा सुहृदा निवेदितं
वचः सुधर्म्यं प्रतिगृह्य रावणः।

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्विनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९२ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रिनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCIII

Destruction of ogre-troops at the hands of Śrī Rāma

स प्रविश्य सभां राजा दीनः परमदुःखितः।
निषसादासने मुख्ये सिंहः क्रुद्ध इव श्वसन् ॥ १ ॥

Entering in state the assembly hall, the aforesaid monarch, who was feeling miserable and greatly distressed, sank down on a pre-eminent seat, snorting like a furious lion.

(1)

अब्रवीच्च स तान् सर्वान् बलमुख्यान् महाबलः।
रावणः प्राञ्जलिर्वाक्यं पुत्रव्यसनकर्षितः ॥ २ ॥

Afflicted by the death of his eldest son, Indrajit, the said Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, spoke as follows with joined palms to all those leaders of his army assembled there:

(2)

सर्वे भवन्तः सर्वेण हस्त्यश्वेन समावृताः।
निर्यान्तु रथसङ्घैश्च पादातैश्चोपशोभिताः ॥ ३ ॥

“Surrounded by the entire army of elephants and horses, nay, graced with columns of chariots and foot soldiers, march you all.

(3)

एकं रामं परिक्षिप्य समरे हन्तुमर्हथ।
वर्षन्तः शरवर्षाणि प्रावृट्काल इवाम्बुदाः ॥ ४ ॥

गृहं जगामाथ ततश्च वीर्यवान्
पुनः सभां च प्रययौ सुहृद्धृतः ॥ ६८ ॥

Accepting the aforesaid advice tendered by a friend, which was fully consonant with righteousness, the evil-minded yet powerful ogre Rāvaṇa forthwith withdrew to his palace and then proceeded once more to the council chamber, accompanied by his friends.(68)

“Nay, encompassing Rāma, the leader of the enemies, you ought to kill him in combat, discharging hails of arrows even as clouds pour showers during the monsoon.

(4)

अथवाहं शरैस्तीक्ष्णैर्भिन्नगात्रं महाहवे।
भवद्भिः श्वो निहन्तास्मि रामं लोकस्य पश्यतः ॥ ५ ॥

“Or, I shall easily dispatch him tomorrow, while the world stands looking on, once his limbs have been torn by you with your sharp arrows in a major conflict.”

(5)

इत्येतद् वाक्यमादाय राक्षसेन्द्रस्य राक्षसाः।
निर्ययुस्ते रथैः शीघ्रैर्नानाकैश्च संयुताः ॥ ६ ॥

Accompanied by diverse battalions, the aforesaid ogres sallied forth in their swift-moving chariots on hearing this command of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres.

(6)

परिघान् पट्टिशांश्चैव शरखड्गपरश्वधान्।
शरीरान्तकरान् सर्वे चिक्षिपुर्वानरान् प्रति ॥ ७ ॥

They threw iron clubs as well as sharp-edged pikes, arrows, swords and axes, capable of destroying life, at the monkeys.

(7)

वानराश्च द्रुमान् शैलान् राक्षसान् प्रति चिक्षिपुः ।
स संग्रामो महाभीमः सूर्यस्योदयनं प्रति ॥ ८ ॥
रक्षसां वानराणां च तुमुलः समपद्यत ।
ते गदाभिश्च चित्राभिः प्रासैः खड्गैः परश्वधैः ॥ ९ ॥
अन्योन्यं समरे जघ्नुस्तदा वानरराक्षसाः ।
एवं प्रवृत्ते संग्रामे ह्यद्भुतं सुमहद्व्रजः ॥ १० ॥
रक्षसां वानराणां च शान्तं शोणितविस्रवैः ।
मातंगरथकूलाश्च शरमत्स्या ध्वजद्रुमाः ॥ ११ ॥
शरीरसंघाटवहाः प्रसस्तुः शोणितापगाः ।
ततस्ते वानराः सर्वे शोणितौघपरिप्लुताः ॥ १२ ॥
ध्वजवर्मरथानश्वान् नानाप्रहरणानि च ।
आप्लुत्याप्लुत्य समरे वानरेन्द्रा बभञ्जिरे ॥ १३ ॥

The monkeys too in their turn hurled trees and rocks on the ogres. Towards sunrise that fierce fight between the ogres and the monkeys became tumultuous. The aforesaid monkeys and ogres then proceeded to strike each his opponent with multi-coloured maces, darts, swords and axes on the battlefield. Curiously enough, when fight was thus in progress, the enormous dust raised by the two contending armies was actually settled down by the streams of blood proceeding from the ogres and monkeys. With elephants and chariots for their banks, arrows for the fish, ensigns for the trees on the banks and carrying dead bodies for logs of wood, rivers of blood flowed on the battlefield. Leaping hither and thither on the battlefield, bathed in streams of blood, all the aforesaid monkeys in general, and the monkey chiefs in particular destroyed the ensigns, armour and chariots, horses and weapons of every kind.

(8—13)

केशान् कर्णललाटं च नासिकाश्च प्लवंगमाः ।
रक्षसां दशनैस्तीक्ष्णैर्नखैश्चापि व्यकर्तयन् ॥ १४ ॥

Nay, the monkeys tore off with their sharp teeth and nails too the hair, ears and brows as well as the noses of the ogres.

(14)

एकैकं राक्षसं संख्ये शतं वानरपुंगवाः ।
अभ्यधावन्त फलिनं वृक्षं शकुनयो यथा ॥ १५ ॥

A hundred leaders of monkeys rushed at each single ogre on the battlefield even as birds would fly towards a tree laden with fruits.

(15)

तदा गदाभिर्गुर्वीभिः प्रासैः खड्गैः परश्वधैः ।
निर्जघ्नुर्वानरान् घोरान् राक्षसाः पर्वतोपमाः ॥ १६ ॥

Thereupon the ogres too, who resembled mountains in size, struck down the redoubtable monkeys with their heavy maces, darts, swords and axes.

(16)

राक्षसैर्वध्यमानानां वानराणां महाचमूः ।
शरण्यं शरणं याता रामं दशरथात्मजम् ॥ १७ ॥

The mighty army of the monkeys, who were being struck down by the ogres, sought as its refuge Śrī Rāma, son of Daśaratha, who was fit to protect them.

(17)

ततो रामो महातेजा धनुरादाय वीर्यवान् ।
प्रविश्य राक्षसं सैन्यं शरवर्षं ववर्ष च ॥ १८ ॥

Taking up his bow and penetrating deep into the ogre ranks, the powerful Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, thereupon rained a hail of arrows on them.

(18)

प्रविष्टं तु तदा रामं मेघाः सूर्यमिवाम्बरे ।
नाधिजग्मुर्महाघोरा निर्दहन्तं शराग्निना ॥ १९ ॥

The fierce rangers of the night for their part dared not approach Śrī Rāma—who, having penetrated deep into the lines of the ogres, was consuming them with the fire of his shafts on that occasion—any more than clouds would approach the scorching sun in the sky.

(19)

कृतान्येव सुघोराणि रामेण रजनीचराः ।
रणे रामस्य ददृशुः कर्माण्यसुकराणि ते ॥ २० ॥

Those night-stalkers were able to perceive on the battlefield the most terrific deeds of Śrī Rāma, which were difficult to perform for others, only when they had actually been performed by him and not while they were being performed, his movement being quick as lightning. (20)

चालयन्तं महासैन्यं विधमन्तं महारथान्।
ददृशुस्ते न वै रामं वातं वनगतं यथा ॥ २१ ॥

They could not actually behold Śrī Rāma while he was dispersing the huge army of the ogres and destroying great car-warriors, any more than one could see a blast blowing in a forest. (His presence could be detected only by his deeds). (21)

छिन्नं भिन्नं शरैर्दग्धं प्रभङ्गं शस्त्रपीडितम्।
बलं रामेण ददृशुर्न रामं शीघ्रकारिणम् ॥ २२ ॥

They beheld the army torn and pierced with arrows, consumed and broken down and tormented with weapons by Śrī Rāma, but could not discern Śrī Rāma, who was so quick of action. (22)

प्रहरन्तं शरीरेषु न ते पश्यन्ति राघवम्।
इन्द्रियार्थेषु तिष्ठन्तं भूतात्मानमिव प्रजाः ॥ २३ ॥

The ogres did not perceive Śrī Rāma hitting their bodies any more than created beings are able to perceive their soul enjoying the sense-objects. (23)

एष हन्ति गजानीकमेष हन्ति महारथान्।
एष हन्ति शरैस्तीक्ष्णैः पदातीन् वाजिभिः सह ॥ २४ ॥

“Here is Rāma exterminating the army of elephants!” “There is Rāma making short work of great car-warriors!” “Here is Rāma killing with his sharp arrows foot-soldiers alongwith horses!” (24)

इति ते राक्षसाः सर्वे रामस्य सदृशान् रणे।
अन्योन्यं कुपिता जघ्नुः सादृश्याद् राघवस्य तु ॥ २५ ॥

Saying so, all the aforesaid ogres for their part struck one another in rage on the battlefield, who seemed to resemble Śrī Rāma in one respect or the other, because of their supposed similarity with Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (25)

न ते ददृशिरे रामं दहन्तमपि वाहिनीम्।
मोहिताः परमास्त्रेण गान्धर्वेण महात्मना ॥ २६ ॥

Having been thrown into confusion by the high-souled Śrī Rāma with the excellent mystic missile presided over by the Gandharvas, the ogres could not perceive Śrī Rāma even though he was consuming their army. (26)

ते तु रामसहस्राणि रणे पश्यन्ति राक्षसाः।
पुनः पश्यन्ति काकुत्स्थमेकमेव महाहवे ॥ २७ ॥

The aforesaid ogres for their part beheld thousands of Rāmas on the battlefield, while at other times they saw only one Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, during that major conflict. (27)

भ्रमन्तीं काञ्चनीं कोटिं कार्मुकस्य महात्मनः।
अलातचक्रप्रतिमां ददृशुस्ते न राघवम् ॥ २८ ॥

They perceived the curved golden ends of the bow of the high-souled prince, Śrī Rāma, revolving like a firebrand, but not Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (28)

शरीरनाभि सत्त्वाग्निः शरारं नेमिकार्मुकम्।
ज्याघोषतलनिर्घोषं तेजोबुद्धिगुणप्रभम् ॥ २९ ॥
दिव्यास्त्रगुणपर्यन्तं निघ्नन्तं युधि राक्षसान्।
ददृशू रामचक्रं तत् कालचक्रमिव प्रजाः ॥ ३० ॥

The created beings beheld the aforesaid Śrī Rāma in the form of a discus, which was exterminating the ogres on the battlefield like the Wheel of Time, nay, which had the middle part of the body of Śrī Rāma for its navel, his strength for its flame, the arrows discharged by Śrī Rāma for its spokes, his bow for its belly, the twanging of the bow-string and the clanging of the gauntlet for the sound produced by its revolution, his energy, intelligence and other virtues for its radiance and the power of his mystic missiles for its edge. (29-30)

अनीकं दशसाहस्रं रथानां वातरंहसाम्।
अष्टादश सहस्राणि कुञ्जराणां तरस्विनाम् ॥ ३१ ॥
चतुर्दश सहस्राणि सारोहाणां च वाजिनाम्।
पूर्णे शतसहस्रे द्वे राक्षसानां पदातिनाम् ॥ ३२ ॥
दिवसस्याष्टभागेन शरैरग्निशिखोपमैः।
हतान्येकेन रामेण रक्षसां कामरूपिणाम् ॥ ३३ ॥

In the eighth part of a day (one hour and a half) an army of ogres capable of changing their form at will, nay, consisting of a myriad chariots possessing the swiftness of the wind, also eighteen thousand fleet-footed elephants, fourteen thousand horses with their riders, and full two lakhs of ogres fighting on foot, was exterminated by Śrī Rāma single-handed with his arrows resembling tongues of fire. (31—33)

ते हताश्वा हतरथाः शान्ता विमथितध्वजाः।
अभिपेतुः पुरीं लङ्कां हतशेषा निशाचराः ॥ ३४ ॥

Their horses killed, chariots destroyed and standards broken, those rangers of the night who had escaped the carnage quietly ran away to the city of Lāṅkā. (34)

हतैर्गजपदात्यश्वैस्तद् बभूव रणाजिरम्।
आक्रीडभूमिः क्रुद्धस्य रुद्रस्येव महात्मनः ॥ ३५ ॥

With the elephants, foot-soldiers and horses that had been killed, that battlefield resembled the ground where the mighty Rudra (the god of destruction) disports himself in fury. (35)

ततो देवाः सगन्धर्वाः सिद्धाश्च परमर्षयः।
साधु साध्विति रामस्य तत् कर्म समपूजयन् ॥ ३६ ॥

Thereupon gods accompanied by Gandharvas (celestial musicians) Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic power from their very birth) and eminent Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) applauded that achievement of Śrī Rāma, saying "Well done! Bravo!!" (36)

अब्रवीच्च तदा रामः सुग्रीवं प्रत्यनन्तरम्।
विभीषणं च धर्मात्मा हनूमन्तं च वानरम् ॥ ३७ ॥
जाम्बवन्तं हरिश्रेष्ठं मैन्दं द्विविदमेव च।
एतदस्त्रबलं दिव्यं मम वा त्र्यम्बकस्य वा ॥ ३८ ॥

On that occasion Śrī Rāma too, whose mind was set on virtue, remarked to Sugrīva, who stood close by, as also to Vibhīṣaṇa and to the monkey, Hanumān, Jāmbavān, the king of bears, Mainda, the foremost of monkeys, and Dwivida too: "Such wonderful power of using the mystic missiles exists either in me, who am no other than Lord Viṣṇu, or in Lord Śiva, (the three-eyed Divinity)." (37-38)

निहत्य तां राक्षसराजवाहिनीं
रामस्तदा शक्रसमो महात्मा।
अस्त्रेषु शस्त्रेषु जितक्लमश्च
संस्तूयते देवगणैः प्रहृष्टैः ॥ ३९ ॥

Having destroyed that army of Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, the high-souled Śrī Rāma, a compeer of Indra (the ruler of gods), who had conquered fatigue incidental to the use of missiles and weapons, began to be extolled by the celestial hosts, who were feeling exceedingly jubilant. (39)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रिनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९३ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुर्नवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCIV

Lament of the ogresses

तानि नागसहस्राणि सारोहाणि च वाजिनाम् ।
 रथानां त्वग्निवर्णानां सध्वजानां सहस्रशः ॥ १ ॥
 राक्षसानां सहस्राणि गदापरिघयोधिनाम् ।
 काञ्चनध्वजचित्राणां शूराणां कामरूपिणाम् ॥ २ ॥
 निहतानि शरैर्दीप्तैस्तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणैः ।
 रावणेन प्रयुक्तानि रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ॥ ३ ॥

Dispatched by Rāvaṇa, the aforesaid thousands of elephants and thousands of horses with their riders, nay, thousands of chariots bright as fire and bearing ensigns as also thousands of valiant ogres able to change their form at will, nay, fighting with maces and iron bludgeons and conspicuous with their golden banners, were destroyed by Śrī Rāma of unwearied action with his flaming arrows decorated with refined gold.

(1-3)

दृष्ट्वा श्रुत्वा च सम्भ्रान्ता हतशेषा निशाचराः ।
 राक्षस्यश्च समागम्य दीनाश्चिन्तापरिप्लुताः ॥ ४ ॥

Meeting together on beholding this and hearing of this from others, the prowlers of the night who had escaped the carnage, as well as the ogresses felt nonplussed and miserable and were overwhelmed with anxiety.

(4)

विधवा हतपुत्राश्च क्रोशन्त्यो हतबान्धवाः ।
 राक्षस्यः सह संगम्य दुःखार्ताः पर्यदेवयन् ॥ ५ ॥

Coming together in groups and crying, ogresses, who had lost their husband, sons and kinsfolk wailed as follows, stricken as they were with sorrow:

(5)

कथं शूर्पणखा वृद्धा कराला निर्णतोदरी ।
 आससाद वने रामं कंदर्पसमरूपिणम् ॥ ६ ॥

“Alas, how did the old and hideous Śūrpaṇakhā of sunken belly dare to approach in the forest Rāma, who is charming like the god of love?

(6)

सुकुमारं महासत्त्वं सर्वभूतहिते रतम् ।
 तं दृष्ट्वा लोकवध्या सा हीनरूपा प्रकामिता ॥ ७ ॥

“How strange that beholding that tender youth, endowed with extraordinary might, and devoted to the good of all created beings, that ugly woman, who deserves to be killed by the people, was stung with ardent love !

(7)

कथं सर्वगुणैर्हीना गुणवन्तं महौजसम् ।
 सुमुखं दुर्मुखी रामं कामयामास राक्षसी ॥ ८ ॥

“How did that hideous ogress, who is devoid of all excellences, dare to make love to Rāma, who is full of excellences, endowed with great bodily strength and is possessed of comely features?

(8)

जनस्यास्याल्पभाग्यत्वाद् वलिनी श्वेतमूर्धजा ।
 अकार्यमपहास्यं च सर्वलोकविगर्हितम् ॥ ९ ॥
 राक्षसानां विनाशाय दूषणस्य खरस्य च ।
 चकाराप्रतिरूपा सा राघवस्य प्रधर्षणम् ॥ १० ॥

“Because of our bad luck and to the destruction of the ogre race in general and of Dūṣaṇa and Khara, in particular, that grey-haired misshapen woman, who had developed wrinkles on her person tried to profane by her unholy touch Rāma, a scion of Raghu, a misdeed which was worth ridiculing and condemnation by the whole world.

(9-10)

तन्निमित्तमिदं वैरं रावणेन कृतं महत् ।
 वधाय सीता साऽऽनीता दशग्रीवेण रक्षसा ॥ ११ ॥

“It was on account of Śūrpaṇakhā that this bitter enmity has been conceived by Rāvaṇa and the reputed Sitā was borne away by the ten-headed ogre, to his own destruction. (11)

न च सीतां दशग्रीवः प्राप्नोति जनकात्मजाम्।
बद्धं बलवता वैरमक्षयं राघवेण च ॥ १२ ॥

“The ten-headed monster, however, will not be able to lay his hands on Sītā, Janaka’s daughter, although undying enmity has been contracted by him with the mighty Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (12)

वैदेहीं प्रार्थयानं तं विराधं प्रेक्ष्य राक्षसम्।
हतमेकेन रामेण पर्याप्तं तन्निदर्शनम् ॥ १३ ॥

“On perceiving the notorious ogre Virāḍha solicitous of Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) the fellow was made short work of by Rāma single-handed. That example should have proved sufficient to convince Rāvaṇa of Rāma’s invincibility. (13)

चतुर्दश सहस्राणि रक्षसां भीमकर्मणाम्।
निहतानि जनस्थाने शरैरग्निशिखोपमैः ॥ १४ ॥

“Nay, as many as fourteen thousand of ogres of terrible deeds were destroyed by Rāma in Janasthāna with his arrows resembling tongues of fire. (14)

खरश्च निहतः संख्ये दूषणस्त्रिशिरास्तथा।
शरैरादित्यसंकाशैः पर्याप्तं तन्निदर्शनम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Khara too was struck down in combat as also Dūṣaṇa and Trīśirā with his shafts which shone brightly like the sun. That example too should have been sufficient to open the eyes of Rāvaṇa. (15)

हतो योजनबाहुश्च कबन्धो रुधिराशनः।
क्रोधान्नादं नदन् सोऽथ पर्याप्तं तन्निदर्शनम् ॥ १६ ॥

“The notorious Kabandha too, whose arms were a Yojana (eight miles) long, nay, who lived on blood, and came roaring in wrath, was dispatched forthwith. His example too should have been sufficient to prove Rāma’s extraordinary might. (16)

जघान बलिनं रामः सहस्रनयनात्मजम्।
वालिनं मेरुसंकाशं पर्याप्तं तन्निदर्शनम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Rāma also killed the mighty Vālī, sprung from the loins of Indra (the thousand-eyed god), who resembled Mount Meru in size. His example too should have been sufficient to serve as an eye-opener to Rāvaṇa. (17)

ऋष्यमूके वसंश्चैव दीनो भग्नमनोरथः।
सुग्रीवः प्रापितो राज्यं पर्याप्तं तन्निदर्शनम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Living disconsolate on Mount R̥ṣyamūka, his ambitions dashed to pieces, Sugrīva too was restored to the throne. That example too should have proved sufficient to make Rāvaṇa realize the greatness of Rāma. (18)

धर्मार्थसहितं वाक्यं सर्वेषां रक्षसां हितम्।
युक्तं विभीषणेनोक्तं मोहात् तस्य न रोचते ॥ १९ ॥

“The reasonable advice tendered by Vibhiṣaṇa, which was not only in consonance with righteousness but redounded to the worldly interest of Rāvaṇa, nay, which was conducive to the good of all the ogres, did not find favour with Rāvaṇa due to his folly. (19)

विभीषणवचः कुर्याद् यदि स्म धनदानुजः।
श्मशानभूता दुःखार्ता नेयं लङ्का भविष्यति ॥ २० ॥

“Had Rāvaṇa, the younger brother of Kubera, followed the advice of Vibhiṣaṇa, this city of Laṅkā would not have been afflicted with sorrow and turned a crematorium. (20)

कुम्भकर्णं हतं श्रुत्वा राघवेण महाबलम्।
अतिकायं च दुर्मर्षं लक्ष्मणेन हतं तदा।
प्रियं चेन्द्रजितं पुत्रं रावणो नावबुध्यते ॥ २१ ॥

“Rāvaṇa has not realized the greatness of Rāma even on hearing of Kumbhakarna, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having been killed by Rāma, a scion of Raghu, as well as Atikāya, who was difficult to disregard, and his beloved son, Indrajit, having been made short work of by Lakṣmaṇa the other day. (21)

मम पुत्रो मम भ्राता मम भर्ता रणे हतः ।

इत्येष श्रूयते शब्दो राक्षसीनां कुले कुले ॥ २२ ॥

“My son, my own brother, my husband has been killed in action!’ : such is the cry heard from the lips of the ogresses in every family. (22)

रथाश्वनागाश्च हतास्तत्र तत्र सहस्रशः ।

रणे रामेण शूरेण हताश्चापि पदातयः ॥ २३ ॥

“Chariots, horses and elephants and foot-soldiers too have been struck down in their thousands everywhere on the battlefield by the heroic Rāma. (23)

रुद्रो वा यदि वा विष्णुर्महेन्द्रो वा शतक्रतुः ।

हन्ति नो रामरूपेण यदि वा स्वयमन्तकः ॥ २४ ॥

“Either it is Rudra (the god of destruction) or Lord Viṣṇu (the Protector of the three worlds) or the great Indra (the ruler of the three worlds), who is presupposed to have performed a hundred horse sacrifices in his past existences as a condition precedent to his attaining Indrahood, or it is Death himself who is destroying us in the disguise of Rāma. (24)

हतप्रवीरा रामेण निराशा जीविते वयम् ।

अपश्यन्त्यो भयस्यान्तमनाथा विलपाहमे ॥ २५ ॥

“Our pre-eminent heroes having been killed, we have lost all hope of life. Failing to perceive the end of our fear, we are wailing our lot, deprived as we are of our protectors. (25)

रामहस्ताद् दशग्रीवः शूरो दत्तमहावरः ।

इदं भयं महाघोरं समुत्पन्नं न बुद्ध्यते ॥ २६ ॥

“Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), who is heroic and on whom a great boon has been conferred by Brahmā, the creator, does not perceive this appalling peril which has cropped up at the hands of Rāma. (26)

तं न देवा न गन्धर्वा न पिशाचा न राक्षसाः ।

उपसृष्टं परित्रातुं शक्ता रामेण संयुगे ॥ २७ ॥

“Neither gods nor Gandharvas (celestial musicians) nor Piśācas (fiends) nor ogres will be able to protect Rāvaṇa when he is attacked in combat by Rāma. (27)

उत्पाताश्चापि दृश्यन्ते रावणस्य रणे रणे ।

कथयन्ति हि रामेण रावणस्य निबर्हणम् ॥ २८ ॥

“Evil portents too are perceived in the course of every encounter of Rāvaṇa with his enemies. They unmistakably foreshadow the destruction of Rāvaṇa by Rāma. (28)

पितामहेन प्रीतेन देवदानवराक्षसैः ।

रावणस्याभयं दत्तं मनुष्येभ्यो न याचितम् ॥ २९ ॥

“Fearlessness against gods, devils and ogres has been vouchsafed to Rāvaṇa by Brahmā, the grandfather of the universe, which was actually created by his mind-born sons, the ten Prajāpatis or lords of creation, when the latter was gratified by his austerities. No such security against human beings was, however, sought by him. (29)

तदिदं मानुषं मन्ये प्राप्तं निःसंशयं भयम् ।

जीवितान्तकरं घोरं रक्षसां रावणस्य च ॥ ३० ॥

“Therefore, since no fearlessness against human beings has been secured by Rāvaṇa, I account this impending and formidable peril from human beings as undoubtedly fatal to the ogres as well as to Rāvaṇa himself. (30)

पीड्यमानास्तु बलिना वरदानेन रक्षसा ।

दीप्तेस्तपोभिर्विबुधाः पितामहमपूजयन् ॥ ३१ ॥

“While being oppressed by the mighty ogre, Rāvaṇa, by virtue of the bestowal of a boon by Brahmā, as well as of his severe austerities, the gods for their part worshipped Brahmā, the grandfather of the universe. (31)

देवतानां हितार्थाय महात्मा वै पितामहः ।

उवाच देवतास्तुष्ट इदं सर्वा महद्वचः ॥ ३२ ॥

“Feeling gratified by their worship, the high-souled Brahmā, the grandfather of the universe, actually gave to them all the following momentous assurances for the good of the gods: (32)

अद्यप्रभृति लोकांस्त्रीन् सर्वे दानवराक्षसाः ।

भयेन प्रभृता नित्यं विचरिष्यन्ति शाश्वतम् ॥ ३३ ॥

“From this day onward all the devils and ogres will ever range the three worlds, constantly filled with fear.’ (33)

दैवतैस्तु समागम्य सर्वैश्चेन्द्रपुरोगमैः ।

वृषध्वजस्त्रिपुरहा महादेवः प्रतोषितः ॥ ३४ ॥

“Nay, coming together in the meantime, all the gods headed by Indra propitiated the great divinity Lord Śiva, the destroyer of three cities (Tripura) built by the demon, Maya, and whose ensign bears the device of a bull. (34)

प्रसन्नस्तु महादेवो देवानेतद् वचोऽब्रवीत् ।

उत्पत्स्यति हितार्थं वो नारी रक्षःक्षयावहा ॥ ३५ ॥

“Feeling gratified, Lord Śiva, the great divinity, for his part gave to the gods the following assurance: ‘For your good will appear a woman, who will bring about the destruction of the ogres.’ (35)

एषा देवैः प्रयुक्ता तु क्षुद् यथा दानवान् पुरा ।

भक्षयिष्यति नः सर्वान् राक्षसघ्नी सरावणान् ॥ ३६ ॥

“Employed by the gods, this woman, for her part, who is destined to put an end to the ogres, will, as hunger consumed the devils in the past, devour us all including Rāvaṇa. (36)

रावणस्यापनीतेन दुर्विनीतस्य दुर्मतेः ।

अयं निष्ठानको घोरः शोकेन समभिप्लुतः ॥ ३७ ॥

“Thanks to the misconduct of the evil-minded and wicked Rāvaṇa, this terrible destruction attended by grief stares us in the face. (37)

तं न पश्यामहे लोके यो नः शरणदो भवेत् ।

राघवेणोपसृष्टानां कालेनेव युगक्षये ॥ ३८ ॥

“We do not perceive anyone in the world who may be able to afford protection to us, threatened as we are with destruction by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, even as created beings are threatened with destruction by the Time-Spirit at the end of the world-cycle. (38)

नास्ति नः शरणं किञ्चिद् भये महति तिष्ठताम् ।

दावाग्निवेष्टितानां हि करेणूनां यथा वने ॥ ३९ ॥

“There is no haven for us who stand in great peril any more than there is any shelter for female elephants encompassed by a wild fire in a forest. (39)

प्राप्तकालं कृतं तेन पौलस्त्येन महात्मना ।

यत एव भयं दृष्टं तमेव शरणं गतः ॥ ४० ॥

“Something opportune was done by the high-souled Vibhīṣaṇa, a scion of sage Pulastya, who sought as a refuge him alone from whom danger was suspected by him.” (40)

इतीव सर्वा रजनीचरस्त्रियः

परस्परं सम्परिरभ्य बाहुभिः ।

विषेदुरार्तातिभयाभिपीडिता

विनेदुरुच्चैश्च तदा सुदारुणम् ॥ ४१ ॥

Tightly folding one another in their arms, so did all the ogresses give way to despondency at that moment and cried at the top of their voice in heart-rending tones, afflicted as they were and sore-stricken with dismay. (41)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुर्नवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९४ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCV

Rāvaṇa calls together his generals and, marching with them to the field of battle, exhibits his valour against the enemy

आर्तानां राक्षसीनां तु लङ्कायां वै कुले कुले ।
रावणः करुणं शब्दं शुश्राव परिदेवितम् ॥ १ ॥

Rāvaṇa for his part actually heard the piteous and plaintive cry of the afflicted ogresses in every house in Laṅkā. (1)

स तु दीर्घं विनिःश्वस्य मुहूर्तं ध्यानमास्थितः ।
बभूव परमक्रुद्धो रावणो भीमदर्शनः ॥ २ ॥

Sighing for a long time, and remaining engrossed in thought awhile, the aforesaid Rāvaṇa for his part got highly enraged and assumed a terrible aspect. (2)

संदश्य दशनैरोष्ठं क्रोधसंरक्तलोचनः ।
राक्षसैरपि दुर्दर्शः कालाग्निरिव मूर्तिमान् ॥ ३ ॥
उवाच च समीपस्थान् राक्षसान् राक्षसेश्वरः ।
क्रोधाव्यक्तकथस्तत्र निर्दहन्निव चक्षुषा ॥ ४ ॥

Nipping his lips with his teeth, his eyes crimson with wrath, the king of ogres, who looked like the fire of dissolution-incarnate, and whose sight was difficult to endure even for the ogres, commanded the ogres standing near on that spot, viz., Mahodara, Mahāpārśwa and the ogre Virūpākṣa, as follows, in words indistinct through anger, as though consuming them with his glance: (3-4)

महोदरं महापाश्र्वं विरूपाक्षं च राक्षसम् ।
शीघ्रं वदत सैन्यानि निर्यातेति ममाज्ञया ॥ ५ ॥

“Speedily instruct the troops at my command, as follows: ‘March out to the battlefield!’ ” (5)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राक्षसास्ते भयार्दिताः ।
चोदयामासुरव्यग्रान् राक्षसांस्तान् नृपाज्ञया ॥ ६ ॥

Hearing his aforesaid command, the said ogres, who were stricken with fear, enjoined the afore-mentioned ogres, who were quite unruffled, in accordance with the king’s order. (6)

ते तु सर्वे तथेत्युक्त्वा राक्षसा भीमदर्शनाः ।
कृतस्वस्त्ययनाः सर्वे ते रणाभिमुखा ययुः ॥ ७ ॥

Saying “Amen!” and having performed a religious rite preparatory to all sacred undertakings for averting evil, all the aforesaid ogres of terrible aspect for their part sallied forth with their faces turned towards the battlefield. (7)

प्रतिपूज्य यथान्यायं रावणं ते महारथाः ।
तस्थुः प्राञ्जलयः सर्वे भर्तुर्विजयकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ ८ ॥

Paying reverence to Rāvaṇa according to the rules of propriety, all those great car-warriors stood with joined palms wishing triumph to their master. (8)

ततोवाच प्रहस्यैतान् रावणः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।
महोदरमहापाश्र्वौ विरूपाक्षं च राक्षसम् ॥ ९ ॥

Laughing heartily in sneer, Rāvaṇa, who was filled with anger, then spoke as follows to the said warriors, viz., Mahodara and Mahāpārśwa and the ogre Virūpākṣa: (9)

अद्य बाणैर्धनुर्मुक्तैर्युगान्तादित्यसंनिभैः ।
राघवं लक्ष्मणं चैव नेष्यामि यमसादनम् ॥ १० ॥

“With the shafts discharged from my bow and resembling the sun as seen at the end of the world-cycle, I shall dispatch Rāma (a scion of Raghu) as well as Lakṣmaṇa to the abode of Yama (the god of retribution) today. (10)

खरस्य कुम्भकर्णस्य प्रहस्तेन्द्रजितोस्तथा ।
करिष्यामि प्रतीकारमद्य शत्रुवधादहम् ॥ ११ ॥

“Through the death of my aforesaid enemies, I shall avenge the death of Khara, Kumbhakarna, Prahasta and Indrajit today. (11)

नैवान्तरिक्षं न दिशो न च द्यौर्नापि सागराः ।
प्रकाशत्वं गमिष्यन्ति मद्बाणजलदावृताः ॥ १२ ॥

“Overcast with clouds in the shape of my arrows, neither airspace nor the four quarters nor again heaven, nor even the seas will come to view. (12)

अद्य वानरमुख्यानां तानि यूथानि भागशः ।
धनुषा शरजालेन वधिष्यामि पतत्रिणा ॥ १३ ॥

“With a succession of plumed arrows joined with my bow I shall wipe out by turns the well-known battalions of the foremost of monkeys today. (13)

अद्य वानरसैन्यानि रथेन पवनौजसा ।
धनुःसमुद्रादुद्धूतैर्मधिष्यामि शरोर्मिभिः ॥ १४ ॥

“Mounted on my chariot, swift as the wind, I shall knock down the simian ranks with waves in the shape of arrows arisen from the ocean of my bow. (14)

व्याकोशपद्मवक्त्राणि पद्मकेसरवर्चसाम् ।
अद्य यूथतटाकानि गजवत् प्रमथाम्यहम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Like an elephant I shall lay waste today ponds in the form of battalions of the monkeys shining like the filaments of a lotus with their faces resembling open lotuses. (15)

सशरैरद्य वदनैः संख्ये वानरयूथपाः ।
मण्डयिष्यन्ति वसुधां सनालैरिव पङ्कजैः ॥ १६ ॥

“With their heads transfixed with arrows, the commanders of monkey troops lying on the battlefield will adorn the earth as with lotuses accompanied by stalks. (16)

अद्य यूथप्रचण्डानां हरीणां द्रुमयोधिनाम् ।
मुक्तैकैषुणा युद्धे भेतस्यामि च शतं शतम् ॥ १७ ॥

“With each one arrow discharged in the course of the combat, I shall pierce today full one hundred of monkeys fighting with trees and the most violent of their division. (17)

हतो भ्राता च येषां वै येषां च तनयो हतः ।
वधेनाद्य रिपोस्तेषां करोम्यश्रुप्रमार्जनम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Through the destruction of my adversary today, I shall fully wipe the tears of those whose brother has actually been killed and whose son has been struck down. (18)

अद्य मद्बाणनिर्भिन्नैः प्रस्तीर्णैर्गतचेतनैः ।
करोमि वानरैर्युद्धे यत्नावेक्ष्यतलां महीम् ॥ १९ ॥

“With the monkeys pierced with my shafts and lying scattered on the battlefield deprived of life, I shall carpet the earth so fully that it would be possible to discern its surface only with effort. (19)

अद्य काकाश्च गृध्राश्च ये च मांसाशिणोऽपरे ।
सर्वास्तांस्तर्पयिष्यामि शत्रुमांसैः शराहतैः ॥ २० ॥

“Whatever crows and vultures and other carnivorous animals or birds there are, I shall sate them all with the flesh of my enemies killed by my arrows. (20)

कल्प्यतां मे रथः शीघ्रं क्षिप्रमानीयतां धनुः ।
अनुप्रयान्तु मां युद्धे येऽत्र शिष्टा निशाचराः ॥ २१ ॥

“Let my chariot be got ready with all speed and let my bow be brought without delay. Let the rangers of the night, who have survived, this time follow me to the battlefield.” (21)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा महापाश्र्वोऽब्रवीद् वचः ।
बलाध्यक्षान् स्थितांस्तत्र बलं संत्वर्यतामिति ॥ २२ ॥

Hearing the foregoing speech of Rāvaṇa, Mahāpārśwa enjoined the troop-commanders standing there as follows: “Let the army be mobilized with all speed.” (22)

बलाध्यक्षास्तु संयुक्ता राक्षसांस्तान् गृहे गृहे ।
चोदयन्तः परिययुर्लङ्कां लघुपराक्रमाः ॥ २३ ॥

When enjoined as aforesaid, the troop-commanders for their part went round Laṅkā at a swift pace, urging on the well-known ogres in every house to march to the battlefield. (23)

ततो मुहूर्तान्निष्येत् राक्षसा भीमदर्शनाः ।
नदन्तो भीमवदना नानाप्रहरणैर्भुजैः ॥ २४ ॥
असिभिः पट्टिशैः शूलैर्गदाभिर्मुसलैर्हलैः ।
शक्तिभिस्तीक्ष्णधाराभिर्महद्भिः कूटमुद्गरैः ॥ २५ ॥
यष्टिभिर्विविधैश्चक्रैर्निशितैश्च परश्वधैः ।
भिन्दिपालैः शतघ्नीभिरन्यैश्चापि वरायुधैः ॥ २६ ॥

Thereupon ogres of terrible aspect with hideous faces presently ran out roaring, their arms equipped with weapons of every kind, viz., swords, sharp-edged darts, pikes, maces, clubs, Halas (plough-like weapons), sharp-pointed javelins and huge Kūṭamudgaras, staffs, discuses of every kind, sharpened axes, Bhindipālas (a kind of sling for throwing stones), Śataghnis (a stone or cylindrical piece of wood studded with iron pikes) and other excellent weapons. (24—26)

अथानयन् बलाध्यक्षाश्चत्वारो रावणाज्ञया ।
स्थानां नियुतं साग्रं नागानां नियुतत्रयम् ॥ २७ ॥

At the king's command four troop-commanders then led to the battlefield more than a lakh of chariots and three lakhs of elephants. (27)

अश्वानां षष्टिकोट्यस्तु खरोष्ट्राणां तथैव च ।
पदातयस्त्वसंख्याता जग्मुस्ते राजशासनात् ॥ २८ ॥
Nay, six crores of horses and the same number of mules and camels and innumerable foot-soldiers marched to the battlefield at the king's command. (28)

बलाध्यक्षाश्च संस्थाप्य राज्ञः सेनां पुरःस्थिताम् ।
एतस्मिन्नन्तरे सूतः स्थापयामास तं रथम् ॥ २९ ॥
दिव्यास्त्रवरसम्पन्नं नानालंकारभूषितम् ।
नानायुधसमाकीर्णं किङ्किणीजालसंयुतम् ॥ ३० ॥
नानारत्नपरिक्षिप्तं रत्नस्तम्भैर्विराजितम् ।
जाम्बूनदमयैश्चैव सहस्रकलशैर्वृतम् ॥ ३१ ॥ ॥

Having duly rallied the king's army stationed in the city, the troop-commanders too marched to the battlefield. In the meantime the king's charioteer placed on the battlefield his well-known chariot equipped with the foremost of celestial missiles, adorned with various jewels, filled with weapons of every kind, furnished with rows of small bells encrusted with precious stones of various kinds, beautified with bejewelled pillars and covered with thousands of round gold pinnacles. (29—31)

तं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसाः सर्वे विस्मयं परमं गताः ।
तं दृष्ट्वा सहस्रोत्थाय रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ ३२ ॥
कोटिसूर्यप्रतीकाशं ज्वलन्तमिव पावकम् ।
द्रुतं सूतसमायुक्तं युक्ताष्टतुरगं रथम् ।
आरुरोह तदा भीमं दीप्यमानं स्वतेजसा ॥ ३३ ॥

All the ogres were struck with great wonder to behold the chariot. Springing up from his seat on seeing the swift-going formidable chariot, which resembled a blazing fire and shone like crores of suns, was controlled by a charioteer, had eight horses yoked to it and was effulgent with its own splendour, Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, forthwith ascended it on that occasion. (32-33)

ततः प्रयातः सहसा राक्षसैर्बहुभिवृतः ।
रावणः सत्त्वगाम्भीर्याद् दारयन्निव मेदिनीम् ॥ ३४ ॥

Surrounded by numerous ogres, Rāvaṇa thus precipitately set out from Laṅkā rending the earth as it were by the abundance of his might. (34)

ततश्चासीन्महानादस्तूर्याणां च ततस्ततः ।
मृदङ्गैः पटहैः शङ्खैः कलहैः सह रक्षसाम् ॥ ३५ ॥
Then there burst forth on all sides a loud flourish of trumpets accompanied by the roll of clay tomtoms and tabors, the blast of conches and the clamour of ogres. (35)

आगतो रक्षसां राजा छत्रचामरसंयुतः ।
सीतापहारी दुर्वृत्तो ब्रह्मघ्नो देवकण्ठकः ।
योद्धुं रघुवरेणेति शुश्रुवे कलहध्वनिः ॥ ३६ ॥

"There comes the ruler of ogres, the abductor of Sitā, the destroyer of Brāhmaṇas, the thorn in the sides of gods, notorious for his bad conduct and accompanied by his canopy and pair of whisks to try his strength with Rāma, the foremost of the Raghus!" Such was the clamour heard on all sides. (36)

तेन नादेन महता पृथिवी समकम्पत ।
तं शब्दं सहसा श्रुत्वा वानरा दुद्रुवुर्भयात् ॥ ३७ ॥

The earth violently shook at that loud din. The monkeys precipitately fled in panic on hearing that noise. (37)

रावणस्तु महाबाहुः सचिवैः परिवारितः ।
आजगाम महातेजा जयाय विजयं प्रति ॥ ३८ ॥

Surrounded by his ministers, the mighty-armed Rāvaṇa for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, turned up on the battlefield for the avowed purpose of victory. (38)

रावणेनाभ्यनुज्ञातौ महापार्श्वमहोदरौ ।
विरूपाक्षश्च दुर्धर्षो रथानारुरुहुस्तदा ॥ ३९ ॥

Duly permitted by Rāvaṇa, Mahāpārśwa and Mahodara as also Virūpākṣa, who was difficult to overpower, then mounted their chariots. (39)

ते तु हृष्टाभिनर्दन्तो भिन्दन्त इव मेदिनीम् ।
नादं घोरं विमुञ्चन्तो निर्ययुर्जकाङ्क्षिणः ॥ ४० ॥

Roaring exultantly as though rending the earth and raising a formidable uproar, they set out eager for victory. (40)

ततो युद्धाय तेजस्वी रक्षोगणबलैर्वृतः ।
निर्ययावुद्यतधनुः कालान्तकयमोपमः ॥ ४१ ॥

Surrounded by battalions consisting of hordes of ogres, the energetic monarch, who vied with Yama, playing the role of Death at the time of universal Dissolution, set out for the combat with his bow uplifted. (41)

ततः प्रजविताश्वेन रथेन स महारथः ।
द्वारेण निर्ययौ तेन यत्र तौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ४२ ॥

In his chariot, drawn by exceedingly swift horses, that great car-warrior then made his exit through the northern gate where the celebrated Śrī Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa were. (42)

ततो नष्टप्रभः सूर्यो दिशश्च तिमिरावृताः ।
द्विजाश्च नेदुर्घोराश्च संचचाल च मेदिनी ॥ ४३ ॥

At that moment the sun lost its brilliance and the four quarters were enveloped in gloom. Nay, the birds emitted fearful notes and the earth too violently shook. (43)

ववर्ष रुधिरं देवश्चस्खलुश्च तुरंगमाः ।
ध्वजाग्रे न्यपतद् गृध्रो विनेदुश्चाशिवं शिवाः ॥ ४४ ॥

Again, the cloud rained blood and the horses of Rāvaṇa stumbled. A vulture perched on the top of his ensign, while she-jackals shrieked sinister howls. (44)

नयनं चास्फुरद् वामं वामो बाहुरकम्पत ।
विवर्णवदनश्चासीत् किञ्चिदभ्रश्यत स्वनः ॥ ४५ ॥

His eye twitched and his left arm quivered. His face grew pale and his voice turned a bit hoarse. (45)

ततो निष्पततो युद्धे दशग्रीवस्य रक्षसः ।
रणे निधनशंसीनि रूपाण्येतानि जज्ञिरे ॥ ४६ ॥

Again, even as the ten-headed ogre, Rāvaṇa, set forth for an encounter the following evil phenomena presaging his death appeared on the battlefield. (46)

अन्तरिक्षात् पपातोल्का निर्घातसमनिःस्वना ।
विनेदुरशिवा गृध्रा वायसैरभिमिश्रिताः ॥ ४७ ॥

A meteor fell from the sky with a crash resembling a peal of thunder. United with crows, vultures emitted sinister cries. (47)

एतानचिन्तयन् घोरानुत्पातान् समवस्थितान् ।
निर्ययौ रावणो मोहाद् वधार्थं कालचोदितः ॥ ४८ ॥

Not minding these fearful portents unmistakably present before him, impelled as he was by Death, Rāvaṇa rushed madly to his doom. (48)

तेषां तु रथघोषेण राक्षसानां महात्मनाम् ।
वानराणामपि चमूर्युद्धायैवाभ्यवर्तत ॥ ४९ ॥

At the sound of the chariots of those gigantic ogres, the simian army too stood ready facing them for an encounter. (49)

तेषां तु तुमुलं युद्धं बभूव कपिरक्षसाम् ।
अन्योन्यमाह्वयानानां क्रुद्धानां जयमिच्छताम् ॥ ५० ॥

A tumultuous contest actually ensued between the monkeys and the ogres, who challenged each his adversary, enraged as they were and eager for victory. (50)

ततः क्रुद्धो दशग्रीवः शरैः काञ्चनभूषणैः ।
वानराणामनीकेषु चकार कदनं महत् ॥ ५१ ॥

Provoked to anger, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, thereupon played great havoc among the simian ranks with his arrows decked with gold. (51)

निकृत्तशिरसः केचिद् रावणेन वलीमुखाः ।
केचिद् विच्छिन्नहृदयाः केचिच्छ्रोत्रविवर्जिताः ॥ ५२ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९५ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षण्णवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCVI

Destruction of the army of ogres at the hands of Sugrīva and the fall of Virūpākṣa

तथा तैः कृत्तगात्रैस्तु दशग्रीवेण मार्गणैः ।
बभूव वसुधा तत्र प्रकीर्णा हरिभिस्तदा ॥ १ ॥

The battle-field of Laṅka for its part was strewn on that occasion with those monkeys whose limbs had thus been torn asunder by the ten-headed monster with his arrows. (1)

रावणस्याप्रसह्यं तं शरसम्पातमेकतः ।
न शेकुः सहितुं दीप्तं पतङ्गा ज्वलनं यथा ॥ २ ॥

Some monkeys had their heads cut off by Rāvaṇa; others had their hearts pierced and still others were deprived of their ears. (52)

निरुच्छ्वासा हताः केचित् केचित् पार्श्वेषु दारिताः ।
केचिद् विभिन्नशिरसः केचिच्चक्षुर्विनाकृताः ॥ ५३ ॥

Some were struck down lifeless, others were split in the flanks; some more had their skulls smashed and still others were deprived of their eyes. (53)

दशाननः क्रोधविवृत्तनेत्रो
यतो यतोऽभ्येति रथेन संख्ये ।
ततस्ततस्तस्य शरप्रवेगं
सोढुं न शेकुर्हरियूथपास्ते ॥ ५४ ॥

Wheresoever the ten-headed monster drove in his chariot on the battlefield, his eyes rolling in fury, the celebrated commanders of monkey troops stationed in that quarter could no withstand the mad fury of his arrows. (54)

The monkeys could not stand even for an instant the irresistible hail of shafts discharged by Rāvaṇa, any more than moths would stand a blazing fire. (2)

तेऽर्दिता निशितैर्बाणैः क्रोशन्तो विप्रदुद्रुवुः ।
पावकार्चिः समाविष्टा दह्यमाना यथा गजाः ॥ ३ ॥

Tormented by those sharp arrows, they fled screaming like elephants enveloped in flames and getting scorched by them. (3)

प्लवंगानामनीकानि महाभ्राणीव मारुतः ।
संययौ समरे तस्मिन् विधमन् रावणः शरैः ॥ ४ ॥

Rāvaṇa advanced in that fray destroying the simian ranks with his arrows in the same way as the wind would dissipate large clouds. (4)

कदनं तरसा कृत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रो वनौकसाम् ।
आससाद ततो युद्धे त्वरितं राघवं रणे ॥ ५ ॥

Having brought about with speed the destruction of the monkeys (lit., the denizens of the woods), Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, then hurriedly confronted Śrī Rāma, a scion of Rāghu, on the battlefield. (5)

सुग्रीवस्तान् कपीन् दृष्ट्वा भग्नान् विद्रावितान् रणे ।
गुल्मे सुषेणं निक्षिप्य चक्रे युद्धे द्रुतं मनः ॥ ६ ॥

Seeing the aforesaid monkeys routed in combat and put to flight, and placing Suṣeṇa in charge of the division, Sugrīva immediately threw his mind into the fight. (6)

आत्मनः सदृशं वीरं स तं निक्षिप्य वानरम् ।
सुग्रीवोऽभिमुखं शत्रुं प्रतस्थे पादपायुधः ॥ ७ ॥

Appointing as his substitute the aforesaid monkey, who was a hero as good as himself, the celebrated Sugrīva marched towards the enemy, armed with a tree. (7)

पार्श्वतः पृष्ठतश्चास्य सर्वे वानरयूथपाः ।
अनुजग्मुर्महाशैलान् विविधांश्च वनस्पतीन् ॥ ८ ॥

Seizing hold of enormous rocks and trees of various kinds, all the commanders of monkey-troops, excepting Suṣeṇa, followed at his side as well as at his heels. (8)

ननर्द युधि सुग्रीवः स्वरेण महता महान् ।
पोथयन् विविधांश्चान्यान् ममन्थोत्तमराक्षसान् ॥ ९ ॥

The mighty Sugrīva roared at a high pitch on the battlefield and destroyed the foremost ogres, annihilating various other ogres too. (9)

ममर्द च महाकायो राक्षसान् वानरेश्वरः ।
युगान्तसमये वायुः प्रवृद्धानगमानिव ॥ १० ॥

Nay, the gigantic king of monkeys killed the ogres even as the wind knocks down at the end of a world-cycle trees which have grown to a mammoth size. (10)

राक्षसानामनीकेषु शैलवर्षं ववर्ष ह ।
अश्मवर्षं यथा मेघः पक्षिसङ्घेषु कानने ॥ ११ ॥

He let fall on the ogre troops, they say, a shower of rocks even as a cloud would let loose a shower of hailstones in the midst of flocks of birds in a forest. (11)

कपिराजविमुक्तैस्तैः शैलवर्षैस्तु राक्षसाः ।
विकीर्णशिरसः पेतुर्विकीर्णा इव पर्वताः ॥ १२ ॥

Their heads smashed by those showers of rocks let fall by the king of monkeys, the ogres for their part toppled down like crumbling mountains. (12)

अथ संक्षीयमाणेषु राक्षसेषु समन्ततः ।
सुग्रीवेण प्रभग्नेषु नदत्सु च पतसु च ॥ १३ ॥
विरूपाक्षः स्वकं नाम धन्वी विश्राव्य राक्षसः ।
रथादाप्लुत्य दुर्धर्षो गजस्कन्धमुपारुहत् ॥ १४ ॥

Leaping down from his chariot, proclaiming his own name, while the ogres, completely routed by Sugrīva, were being annihilated on all sides and were toppling down roaring, the ogre, Virūpākṣa, who was armed with a bow and was difficult to overpower, forthwith mounted on the back of an elephant. (13-14)

स तं द्विपमथारुह्य विरूपाक्षो महाबलः ।
ननर्द भीमनिर्ह्रादं वानरानभ्यधावत ॥ १५ ॥

Ascending that elephant, Virūpākṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, immediately let forth a terrific roar and rushed towards the monkeys. (15)

सुग्रीवे स शरान् घोरान् विससर्ज चमूमुखे ।
स्थापयामास चोद्विग्नान् राक्षसान् सम्प्रहर्षयन् ॥ १६ ॥

He rained formidable arrows on Sugrīva in the forefront of battle and stabilized

the frightened ogres, duly cheering them up. (16)

सोऽतिविद्धः शितैर्बाणैः कपीन्द्रस्तेन रक्षसा ।

चुक्रोश च महाक्रोधो वधे चास्य मनो दधे ॥ १७ ॥

Deeply pierced with sharp arrows by that ogre, the said king of monkeys, who was seized with great anger, roared and set his mind on killing him. (17)

ततः पादपमुद्धृत्य शूरः सम्प्रधनो हरिः ।

अभिपत्य जघानास्य प्रमुखे तं महागजम् ॥ १८ ॥

Tearing up a tree and springing forward, the valiant monkey, Sugrīva, who also fought well, struck that huge elephant-like, Virūpākṣa, standing opposite to him. (18)

स तु प्रहाराभिहतः सुग्रीवेण महागजः ।

अपासर्पद् धनुर्मात्रं निषाद ननाद च ॥ १९ ॥

Overwhelmed with his blow by Sugrīva, the colossal elephant for its part receded to a distance of four cubits only, sank down and roared. (19)

गजात् तु मथितात् तूर्णमपक्रम्य स वीर्यवान् ।

राक्षसोऽभिमुखः शत्रुं प्रत्युदगम्य ततः कपिम् ॥ २० ॥

आर्षभं चर्म खड्गं च प्रगृह्य लघुविक्रमः ।

भर्त्सयन्निव सुग्रीवमाससाद व्यवस्थितम् ॥ २१ ॥

Jumping down with all speed from his wounded elephant, nay, seizing hold of his shield made of a bull's hide, and sword and advancing with rapid paces towards the monkey-king, Sugrīva, with his face turned towards him, that powerful ogre for his part approached his enemy—who stood firm to meet him—threatening him, as it were. (20-21)

स हि तस्याभिसंक्रुद्धः प्रगृह्य विपुलां शिलाम् ।

विरूपाक्षस्य चिक्षेप सुग्रीवो जलदोषमाम् ॥ २२ ॥

Seizing hold of a huge rock, which looked like a cloud, the celebrated Sugrīva, who felt highly enraged, actually hurled it on the aforesaid Virūpākṣa. (22)

स तां शिलामापतन्तीं दृष्ट्वा राक्षसपुंगवः ।

अपक्रम्य सुविक्रान्तः खड्गेन प्राहरत् तदा ॥ २३ ॥

Seeing that rock falling and jumping aside, that bull among the ogres, who was exceedingly powerful, then struck sugrīva with his sword. (23)

तेन खड्गप्रहारेण रक्षसा बलिना हतः ।

मुहूर्तमभवद् भूमौ विसृज्य इव वानरः ॥ २४ ॥

Wounded by the mighty ogre, Virūpākṣa, with a stroke of his sword, the monkey, Sugrīva, lay awhile on the ground unconscious, as it were. (24)

सहसा स तदोत्पत्य राक्षसस्य महाहवे ।

मुष्टिं संवर्त्य वेगेन पातयामास वक्षसि ॥ २५ ॥

Springing up all at once and whirling his fist, Sugrīva brought it down violently on the ogre's chest in that major conflict. (25)

मुष्टिप्रहाराभिहतो विरूपाक्षो निशाचरः ।

तेन खड्गेन संक्रुद्धः सुग्रीवस्य चमूमुखे ॥ २६ ॥

कवचं पातयामास पद्भ्यामभिहतोऽपतत् ।

स समुत्थाय पतितः कपिस्तस्य व्यसर्जयत् ॥ २७ ॥

तलप्रहारमशनेः समानं भीमनिःस्वनम् ।

तलप्रहारं तद् रक्षः सुग्रीवेण समुद्यतम् ॥ २८ ॥

नैपुण्यान्मोचयित्वैनं मुष्टिनोरसि ताडयत् ।

ततस्तु संक्रुद्धतरः सुग्रीवो वानरेश्वरः ॥ २९ ॥

Filled with rage when wounded by the blow of Sugrīva's fist, the night-ranger, Virūpākṣa, destroyed the former's armour with that sword in the forefront of his army. Nay, kicked by him, Sugrīva fell down. Spiriting to his feet when fallen, the monkey gave the ogre a slap which produced a terrific thunder-like crash.

Dodging by his adroitness the slap, which was about to be dealt by Sugrīva, the ogre, Virūpākṣa, struck the latter on the chest with his fist. Sugrīva, the monkey king, for his part thereupon grew all the more furious. (26—29)

मोक्षितं चात्मनो दृष्ट्वा प्रहारं तेन रक्षसा ।

स ददर्शान्तरं तस्य विरूपाक्षस्य वानरः ॥ ३० ॥

Nay, seeing his blow parried by that ogre, the aforesaid monkey sought an opportunity to strike the said Virūpākṣa. (30)

ततोऽन्यं पातयत् क्रोधाच्छङ्खदेशे महातलम्।
महेन्द्राशनिकल्पेन तलेनाभिहतः क्षितौ ॥ ३१ ॥
पपात रुधिरक्लिन्नः शोणितं हि समुद्रिन्।
स्रोतोभ्यस्तु विरूपाक्षो जलं प्रस्त्रवणादिव ॥ ३२ ॥

Sugrīva then angrily brought down on the region of his temple-bone a violent blow with his palm. Struck with the palm, which descended like the thunderbolt of the mighty Indra, Virūpākṣa, for his part, fell to the ground bathed in blood, emitting blood as he did from all the nine apertures of his body, viz, the two eyes, the two nostrils, the two ears, the mouth, the penis and the anus, as water flows from a spring. (31-32)

विवृत्तनयनं क्रोधात् सफेनं रुधिराप्लुतम्।
ददृशुस्ते विरूपाक्षं विरूपाक्षतरं कृतम् ॥ ३३ ॥

The monkeys saw Virūpākṣa bathed in foaming blood, his eyes rolling through anger, and as such rendered all the more monstrous.* (33)

स्फुरन्तं परिवर्तन्तं पाश्वेन रुधिरोक्षितम्।
करुणं च विनर्दन्तं ददृशुः कपयो रिपुम् ॥ ३४ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षण्णवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९६ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्तनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCVII

The fearful encounter of Mahodara with Surgīva and his fall at the latter's hands

हन्यमाने बले तूर्णमन्योन्यं ते महामृधे।
सरसीव महाघर्मे सूपक्षीणे बभूवतुः ॥ १ ॥

Being destroyed by each other in that

Nay, the monkeys beheld their enemy bathed in blood, tossing about, changing sides and bellowing piteously. (34)

तथा तु तौ संयति सम्प्रयुक्तौ
तरस्विनौ वानरराक्षसानाम्।
बलार्णवौ सस्वनतुश्च भीमौ
महार्णवौ द्वाविब भिन्नसेतू ॥ ३५ ॥

Closely united for a hand-to-hand fight on the battlefield in that way, the two redoubtable armies, the army of the monkeys and that of the ogres, for their part, which were extensive as seas and full of impetuosity, roared like two oceans, which had burst their strands. (35)

विनाशितं प्रेक्ष्य विरूपनेत्रं
महाबलं तं हरिपार्थिवेन।
बलं समेतं कपिराक्षसाना-
मुद्वृत्तगङ्गाप्रतिमं बभूव ॥ ३६ ॥

Perceiving the notorious Virūpākṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, made short work of by Sugrīva, the king of monkeys, the united army of the monkeys and the ogres looked like the holy Gaṅgā in spate. (36)

major conflict, the aforesaid two armies were soon considerably attenuated like two lakes in midsummer when sunshine is the brightest. (1)

* There is a pun here on the word Virūpākṣa which means one with mis-shapen eyes.

स्वबलस्य तु घातेन विरूपाक्षवधेन च ।
बभूव द्विगुणं क्रुद्धो रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ॥ २ ॥

Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part, got doubly enraged by the destruction of his own army and the fall of virūpākṣa. (2)

प्रक्षीणं स्वबलं दृष्ट्वा वध्यमानं वलीमुखैः ।
बभूवास्य व्यथा युद्धे दृष्ट्वा दैवविपर्ययम् ॥ ३ ॥

He felt agonized to find his own army greatly thinned while being destroyed by the monkeys and to see the adverseness of his fate. (3)

उवाच च समीपस्थं महोदरमनन्तरम् ।
अस्मिन् काले महाबाहो जयाशा त्वयि मे स्थिता ॥ ४ ॥

And he spoke as follows to Mahodara, standing immediately beside him: "At this juncture, O mighty armed one, the hope of my victory is centred in you. (4)

जहि शत्रुचमूं वीर दर्शयाद्य पराक्रमम् ।
भर्तृपिण्डस्य कालोऽयं निर्वेष्टुं साधु युध्यताम् ॥ ५ ॥

"Exhibit your valour today and exterminate the hostile army. This is the time for you to repay the debt of your master (in the shape of subsistence received from him). Fight well." (5)

एवमुक्तस्तथेत्युक्त्वा राक्षसेन्द्रो महोदरः ।
प्रविवेशारिसेनां स पतङ्ग इव पावकम् ॥ ६ ॥

Saying "Amen!" when encouraged in these words, that ogre chief, Mahodara, penetrated deeply into the hostile army even as a moth would rush into a flame. (6)

ततः स कदनं चक्रे वानराणां महाबलः ।
भर्तृवाक्येन तेजस्वी स्वेन वीर्येण चोदितः ॥ ७ ॥

Emboldened by the word of his master, the ogre who was endowed with extraordinary might and full of energy, then started playing havoc among the monkeys by dint of his own prowess. (7)

वानराश्च महासत्त्वाः प्रगृह्य विपुलाः शिलाः ।
प्रविश्यारिबलं भीमं जघ्नुस्ते सर्वराक्षसान् ॥ ८ ॥

Seizing hold of huge rocks and penetrating into the redoubtable hostile army, the aforesaid monkeys too, who were highly courageous, started destroying all the ogres. (8)

महोदरः सुसंकुद्धः शरैः काञ्चनभूषणैः ।
चिच्छेद पाणिपादोरु वानराणां महाहवे ॥ ९ ॥

Getting highly infuriated, Mahodara severed with his arrows, decked with gold, the hands, feet and thighs of the monkeys in that major combat. (9)

ततस्ते वानराः सर्वे राक्षसैरदिता भृशम् ।
दिशो दश द्रुताः केचित् केचित् सुग्रीवमाश्रिताः ॥ १० ॥

All the aforesaid monkeys were struck hard by the ogres. Some of them fled into the ten directions, while others took refuge with Sugrīva. (10)

प्रभग्नं समरे दृष्ट्वा वानराणां महाबलम् ।
अभिदुद्राव सुग्रीवो महोदरमनन्तरम् ॥ ११ ॥

Seeing the mighty army of the monkeys routed in the encounter, Sugrīva, rushed towards Mahodara, who stood nearby. (11)

प्रगृह्य विपुलां घोरां महीधरसमां शिलाम् ।
चिक्षेप च महातेजास्तद्वधाय हरीश्वरः ॥ १२ ॥

Firmly seizing hold of a huge and a formidable rock, which looked like a mountain, the king of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, hurled it with a view to killing the ogre. (12)

तामापतन्तीं सहसा शिलां दृष्ट्वा महोदरः ।
असम्भ्रान्तस्ततो बाणैर्निर्बिभेद दुरासदाम् ॥ १३ ॥

Seeing that rock falling all of a sudden, Mahodara, who was not the least agitated, forthwith cut it to pieces with his arrows, even though it was difficult to approach. (13)

रक्षसा तेन बाणौघैर्निकृता सा सहस्रधा ।
निपपात तदा भूमौ गृध्रचक्रमिवाकुलम् ॥ १४ ॥

Torn into a thousand and one fragments

by that ogre with the streams of his shafts, the rock forthwith descended on the ground like a flock of frightened vultures. (14)

तां तु भिन्नां शिलां दृष्ट्वा सुग्रीवः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।

सालमुत्पाट्य चिक्षेप तं स चिच्छेद नैकधा ॥ १५ ॥

Filled with fury on beholding that rock broken, and tearing up a sal tree, the celebrated Sugrīva for his part flung it at his adversary and Mahodara split it into many pieces. (15)

शरैश्च विददारैनं शूरः परबलार्दनः ।

स ददर्श ततः क्रुद्धः परिघं पतितं भुवि ॥ १६ ॥

The hero, who was the scourge of hostile forces, also lacerated Sugrīva with his shafts. Provoked to anger, the latter then beheld an iron bludgeon lying on the ground. (16)

आविध्य तु स तं दीप्तं परिघं तस्य दर्शयन् ।

परिघेणोग्रवेगेन जघानास्य हयोत्तमान् ॥ १७ ॥

Brandishing that flashing bludgeon and exhibiting his own quickness of hand to his adversary, Sugrīva for his part struck down the former's excellent steeds with that bludgeon of terrific velocity. (17)

तस्माद्धतहयाद् वीरः सोऽवप्लुत्य महारथात् ।

गदां जग्राह संक्रुद्धो राक्षसोऽथ महोदरः ॥ १८ ॥

Leaping down from that huge chariot, whose team of horses had been killed, highly provoked as he was, that valiant ogre, Mahodara, forthwith seized hold of his mace. (18)

गदापरिघहस्तौ तौ युधि वीरौ समीयतुः ।

नर्दन्तौ गोवृषप्रख्यौ घनाविव सविद्युतौ ॥ १९ ॥

Carrying a mace and an iron bludgeon respectively in their hands, and roaring like two bulls and resembling two clouds charged with lightning, those two heroes closed in an encounter. (19)

ततः क्रुद्धो गदां तस्मै चिक्षेप रजनीचरः ।

ज्वलन्तीं भास्कराभासां सुग्रीवाय महोदरः ॥ २० ॥

Provoked to anger, the night-ranger, Mahodara, thereupon flung at the celebrated Sugrīva his flaming mace, which shone like the sun. (20)

गदां तां सुमहाघोरामापतन्तीं महाबलः ।

सुग्रीवो रोषताम्राक्षः समुद्यम्य महाहवे ॥ २१ ॥

आजघान गदां तस्य परिघेण हरीश्वरः ।

पपात तरसा भिन्नः परिघस्तस्य भूतले ॥ २२ ॥

Seeing that exceedingly terrible mace, falling, and lifting up his bludgeon, Sugrīva, the lord of monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary might and whose eyes had turned coppery through rage, struck the mace of the ogre with his bludgeon, so that the mace fell to the ground and his bludgeon too yielded to the velocity of the mace. (21-22)

ततो जग्राह तेजस्वी सुग्रीवो वसुधातलात् ।

आयसं मुसलं घोरं सर्वतो हेमभूषितम् ॥ २३ ॥

The spirited Sugrīva thereupon picked up from the earth's surface a formidable steel club encrusted with gold on all sides. (23)

स तमुद्यम्य चिक्षेप सोऽप्यस्य प्राक्षिपद् गदाम् ।

भिन्नावन्योन्यमासाद्य पेततुस्तौ महीतले ॥ २४ ॥

Lifting it up, Sugrīva hurled it at the ogre and the ogre too flung his mace at Sugrīva. Colliding each with the other, the two missiles broke and fell to the ground. (24)

ततो भिन्नप्रहरणौ मुष्टिभ्यां तौ समीयतुः ।

तेजोबलसमाविष्टौ दीप्ताविव हुताशनौ ॥ २५ ॥

Their weapons shattered, the two warriors, who were fully endowed with ardour and strength and resembled two lit fires, now contended with their fists. (25)

जघ्नतुस्तौ तदान्योन्यं नदन्तौ च पुनः पुनः ।

तलैश्चान्योन्यमासाद्य पेततुश्च महीतले ॥ २६ ॥

Nay, roaring again and again, they then slapped each other and, meeting each other, rolled on the earth's surface. (26)

उत्पेततुस्तदा तूर्णं जघ्नतुश्च परस्परम्।
भुजैश्चिक्षिपतुर्वीरावन्योन्यमपराजितौ ॥ २७ ॥

They sprang on their feet at once and began to strike each other once more. Remaining undiscomfited, the two heroes pushed each other with their arms. (27)

जग्मतुस्तौ श्रमं वीरौ बाहुयुद्धे परंतपौ।
आजहार तदा खड्गमदूरपरिवर्तिनम् ॥ २८ ॥
राक्षसश्चर्मणा सार्धं महावेगो महोदरः।
तथैव च महाखड्गं चर्मणा पतितं सह।
जग्राह वानरश्रेष्ठः सुग्रीवो वेगवत्तरः ॥ २९ ॥

The two champions, the scourge of their enemy, felt exhausted in the course of their wrestling. The ogre Mahodara, who was endowed with great impetuosity then picked up a sword alongwith a shield lying not very far. Likewise, Sugriva, the foremost of the monkeys, too, who was even more impetuous, seized of a huge sword with a shield. (28-29)

ततो रोषपरीताङ्गौ नदन्तावभ्यधावताम्।
उद्यतासी रणे हृष्टौ युधि शस्त्रविशारदौ ॥ ३० ॥

Thereupon the two warriors, who were adept in the use of weapons on the battlefield and whose limbs were seized with anger, sprang forward roaring with joy to meet each other with their swords upraised. (30)

दक्षिणं मण्डलं चोभौ सुतूर्णं सम्परीयतुः।
अन्योन्यमभिसंक्रुद्धौ जये प्रणिहितावुभौ ॥ ३१ ॥

Both moved with great rapidity from left to right and from right to left of each other to parry the strokes of their adversary. Both were enraged at each other and intent on conquering each other. (31)

स तु शूरो महावेगो वीर्यश्लाघी महोदरः।
महावर्मणि तं खड्गं पातयामास दुर्मतिः ॥ ३२ ॥

The evil-minded hero, Mahodara, for his part, who was endowed with great impetuosity and was proud of his own virility, let fall his aforesaid sword on the heavy mail of Sugriva. (32)

लग्नमुत्कर्षतः खड्गं खड्गेन कपिकुञ्जरः।
जहार सशिरस्त्राणं कुण्डलोपगतं शिरः ॥ ३३ ॥

Sugriva (an elephant among the monkeys) severed with his own sword the head of Mahodara, which was adorned with ear-rings, helmet and all, even while the latter was extracting his sword, which had got stuck into Sugriva's armour. (33)

निकृत्तशिरसस्तस्य पतितस्य महीतले।
तद् बलं राक्षसेन्द्रस्य दृष्ट्वा तत्र न दृश्यते ॥ ३४ ॥

Beholding the fall of Mahodara, the ogre chief, who lay on the earth's surface, his head having been severed, his army could no longer be seen on the battlefield. (34)

हत्वा तं वानरैः सार्धं ननाद मुदितो हरिः।
चुक्रोध च दशग्रीवो बभौ हृष्टश्च राघवः ॥ ३५ ॥

Having made short work of Mahodara, the monkey, Sugriva, began to cheer with the monkeys, delighted as he was; while Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, flew into a rage and Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, looked happy. (35)

विषण्णवदनाः सर्वे राक्षसा दीनचेतसः।
विद्रवन्ति ततः सर्वे भयवित्रस्तचेतसः ॥ ३६ ॥

With their faces downcast all the ogres felt dejected. Nay, their mind stricken with fear, all fled away from the battlefield. (36)

महोदरं तं विनिपात्य भूमौ
महागिरिः कीर्णमिवैकदेशम्।

सूर्यात्मजस्तत्र रराज लक्ष्म्या
सूर्यः स्वतेजोभिरिवाप्रधृष्यः ॥ ३७ ॥

Having thrown to the ground the aforesaid Mahodara, who looked like a part of a huge mountain broken off, Sugriva, son of the sun-god, shone in his glory on the battlefield like the sun, which is unassailable on account of its rays. (37)

अथ विजयमवाप्य वानरेन्द्रः
समरमुखे सुरसिद्धयक्षसङ्घैः।

अवनितलगतैश्च भूतसङ्घै-
 ह्रूषसमाकुलितैर्निरीक्ष्यमाणः ॥ ३८ ॥
 Having scored a victory in the forefront of the battle, Sugriva, the king of monkeys, continued to be gazed upon by the hosts of gods, Siddhas (a class of demigods who are endowed with mystic powers by virtue of their very birth) and Yakṣas (another class of demigods attending upon Kubera, the god of riches) as well as the multitudes of beings standing on the earth's surface, who all felt overwhelmed with delight. (38)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ १७ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टनवतितमः सर्गः

Canto XCVIII

Fall of Mahāpārśwa at the hands of Aṅgada

महोदरे तु निहते महापाश्वो महाबलः ।
 सुग्रीवेण समीक्ष्याथ क्रोधात् संरक्तलोचनः ॥ १ ॥
 अङ्गदस्य चमूं भीमां क्षोभयामास मार्गणैः ।
 स वानराणां मुख्यानामुत्तमाङ्गानि राक्षसः ॥ २ ॥
 पातयामास कायेभ्यः फलं वृन्तादिवानिलः ।
 केषांचिदिषुभिर्बाहूँश्चिच्छेदाथ स राक्षसः ॥ ३ ॥
 वानराणां सुसंरब्धः पार्श्वं केषांचिदाक्षिपत् ।
 तेऽर्दिता बाणवर्षेण महापाश्वेन वानराः ॥ ४ ॥
 विषादविमुखाः सर्वे बभूवुर्गतचेतसः ।
 निशम्य बलमुद्विग्नमङ्गदो राक्षसार्दितम् ॥ ५ ॥
 वेगं चक्रे महावेगः समुद्र इव पर्वसु ।
 आयसं परिधं गृह्य सूर्यरश्मिसमप्रभम् ॥ ६ ॥
 समरे वानरश्रेष्ठो महापाश्वेन न्यपातयत् ।
 स तु तेन प्रहारेण महापाश्वो विचेतनः ॥ ७ ॥
 ससूतः स्यन्दनात् तस्माद् विसंज्ञश्चापतद् भुवि ।
 तस्यर्क्षराजस्तेजस्वी नीलाञ्जनचयोपमः ॥ ८ ॥
 निष्पत्य सुमहावीर्यः स्वयूथान्मेघसंनिभात् ।
 प्रगृह्य गिरिशृङ्गाभां क्रुद्धः स विपुलां शिलाम् ॥ ९ ॥
 अश्वाञ्जघान तरसा बभञ्ज स्यन्दनं च तम् ।
 मुहूर्ताल्लब्धसंज्ञस्तु महापाश्वो महाबलः ॥ १० ॥
 अङ्गदं बहुभिर्बाणैर्भूयस्तं प्रत्यविध्यत ।
 जाम्बवन्तं त्रिभिर्बाणैराजघान स्तनान्तरे ॥ ११ ॥

ऋक्षराजं गवाक्षं च जघान बहुभिः शरैः ।
 गवाक्षं जाम्बवन्तं च स दृष्ट्वा शरपीडितौ ॥ १२ ॥
 जग्राह परिधं घोरमङ्गदः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।
 तस्याङ्गदः सरोषाक्षो राक्षसस्य तमायसम् ॥ १३ ॥
 दूरस्थितस्य परिधं रविरश्मिसमप्रभम् ।
 द्वाभ्यां भुजाभ्यां संगृह्य भ्रामयित्वा च वेगवत् ॥ १४ ॥
 महापाश्वस्य चिक्षेप वधार्थं वालिनः सुतः ।
 स तु क्षिप्तो बलवता परिघस्तस्य रक्षसः ॥ १५ ॥
 धनुश्च सशरं हस्ताच्छिरस्त्राणं च पातयत् ।
 तं समासाद्य वेगेन वालिपुत्रः प्रतापवान् ॥ १६ ॥
 तलेनाभ्यहनत् क्रुद्धः कर्णमूले सकुण्डले ।
 स तु क्रुद्धो महावेगो महापाश्वो महाद्युतिः ॥ १७ ॥
 करेणैकेन जग्राह सुमहान्तं परश्वधम् ।
 तं तैलधौतं विमलं शैलसारमयं दृढम् ॥ १८ ॥
 राक्षसः परमक्रुद्धो वालिपुत्रे न्यपातयत् ।
 तेन वामांसफलके भृशं प्रत्यवपातितम् ॥ १९ ॥
 अङ्गदो मोक्षयामास सरोषः स परश्वधम् ।
 स वीरो वज्रसंकाशमङ्गदो मुष्टिमात्मनः ॥ २० ॥
 संवर्तयत् सुसंक्रुद्धः पितुस्तुल्यपराक्रमः ।
 राक्षसस्य स्तनाभ्याशे मर्मज्ञो हृदयं प्रति ॥ २१ ॥
 इन्द्राशनिसमस्पर्शं स मुष्टिं विन्यपातयत् ।
 तेन तस्य निपातेन राक्षसस्य महामृधे ॥ २२ ॥

पफाल हृदयं चास्य स पपात हतो भुवि।
 तस्मिन् विनिहते भूमौ तत् सैन्यं सम्प्रचुक्षुभे ॥ २३ ॥
 अभवच्च महान् क्रोधः समरे रावणस्य तु।
 वानराणां प्रहृष्टानां सिंहादः सुपुष्कलः ॥ २४ ॥

Gazing on Sugrīva when Mahodara had been struck down by the latter, Mahāpārśwa for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, and whose eyes had turned crimson through anger, forthwith set up a commotion with his shafts in the formidable ranks of Aṅgada. Nay, that ogre severed the heads of the leading monkeys from their trunks even as the wind would detach a fruit from its stalk. Again, with his arrows he also cut off the arms of some monkeys: while, getting infuriated, he tore off the region of the ribs of the others. Oppressed with a hail of shafts by Mahāpārśwa, all the monkeys wore a dejected look from despondency and lost heart. Seeing his army frightened on being hard pressed by the ogre, Mahāpārśwa. Aṅgada, who was endowed with great impetuosity, exhibited his tempo like a sea on the full-moon days. Seizing hold of an iron bludgeon, which shone like the rays of the sun, Aṅgada, the foremost of the monkeys, flung it at Mahāpārśwa on the battlefield. Stunned by that blow, Mahāpārśwa for his part dropped senseless on the ground from his chariot alongwith the charioteer. Rushing forward from his battalion, which closely resembled a dark cloud, and seizing in fury a huge rock, resembling a mountain-peak, the celebrated Jāmbavān (the king of bears), who was full of ardour and exceedingly powerful and looked like a heap of black antimony, struck down his horses with impetuosity and shattered his well-known chariot. Having regained his consciousness after a while, Mahāpārśwa for his part, who was endowed with extraordinary might, pierced the celebrated Aṅgada once more with numerous arrows and struck Jāmbavān, the ruler of bears, with three arrows in the chest. He also struck Gavākṣa, with numerous shafts. Seized with anger on seeing Gavākṣa as well as Jāmbavān tormented with arrows, Aṅgada picked up a formidable iron bludgeon. Firmly grasping that iron bludgeon, which shone like the rays of the sun, with both hands and brandishing it with force, Aṅgada, son of Vālī, his eyes red with anger, hurled it with the intention of killing the ogre, Mahāpārśwa, who stood at a distance. Thrown by the mighty Aṅgada, that bludgeon for its part knocked the bow with the arrow set to it from the ogre's hand as also his helmet. Nay, approaching the ogre with all speed, the glorious Aṅgada, son of Vālī, full of rage, slapped him on the temple (root of the ear), shining with an earring. Provoked to anger, Mahāpārśwa, for his part, who was endowed with great impetuosity and extraordinary splendour, seized a huge axe in one hand. Extremely enraged, the ogre hurled that stainless and solid axe, which had been washed in oil and sharpened thereby, and was made of steel, at the son of Vālī. Full of fury, the celebrated Aṅgada however, evaded the axe, which had been aimed with violence at his left shoulder bone. The aforesaid Aṅgada, who was the equal of his deceased father in prowess and was extremely enraged, clenched his adamant-like fist. Nay, knowing, as he did, the vital parts of the body, he let fall the fist, which impinged like the thunderbolt on the bosom of the ogre in the vicinity of his breasts. Due to its impact the bosom of the ogre burst open and he fell down dead on the ground in that major conflict. On Mahāpārśwa having been struck down on the ground, his army got confused, while a violent rage actually took possession of Rāvaṇa on the battlefield. A very high-pitched roar rose among the monkeys, who felt greatly rejoiced. (1—24)

स्फोटयन्निव शब्देन लङ्कां साट्टालगोपुराम्।
सहेन्द्रेणेव देवानां नादः समभवन्महान् ॥ २५ ॥

A loud clamour, which resembled the noise of gods, accompanied by their ruler, Indra, followed, rendering asunder, as it were, with its vibrations the city of Laṅkā, including its attics and ornamental gates. (25)

अथेन्द्रशत्रुस्त्रिदशालयानां

वनौकसां चैव महाप्रणादम्।

श्रुत्वा सरोषं युधि राक्षसेन्द्रः

पुनश्च युद्धाभिमुखोऽवतस्थे ॥ २६ ॥

Nay, hearing to his rage the loud uproar of the gods (lit., the dwellers in heaven) as well as of the monkeys (the denizens of the forest), Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, the avowed enemy of Indra, stood on the battlefield once more, prepared for a conflict. (26)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टनवतितमः सर्गः ॥ ९८ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकोनशततमः सर्गः

Canto XCIX

Śrī Rāma's encounter with Rāvaṇa

महोदरमहापाश्वर्ी हतौ दृष्ट्वा स रावणः।
तस्मिंश्च निहते वीरे विरूपाक्षे महाबले ॥ १ ॥
आविवेश महान् क्रोधो रावणं तु महामृधे।
सूतं संचोदयामास वाक्यं चेदमुवाच ह ॥ २ ॥

On seeing Mahodara and Mahāpārśwa killed, nay, the notorious champion Virūpākṣa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, having already been struck down, a great rage actually seized Rāvaṇa in the course of the great conflict. Nay, he urged on his charioteer and addressed to him the following words: so the tradition goes: (1-2)

निहतानाममात्यानां रुद्धस्य नगरस्य च।
दुःखमेवापनेष्यामि हत्वा तौ रामलक्ष्मणौ ॥ ३ ॥

“Killing the two princes, Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa, I shall certainly get rid of the suffering caused to me on account of the ministers who have been killed and the city which has been laid siege to by the monkeys. (3)

रामवृक्षं रणे हन्मि सीतापुष्पफलप्रदम्।
प्रशाखा यस्य सुग्रीवो जाम्बवान् कुमुदो नलः ॥ ४ ॥
द्विविदश्चैव मैन्दश्च अङ्गदो गन्धमादनः।
हनुमांश्च सुषेणश्च सर्वे च हरियूथपाः ॥ ५ ॥

“In the fight, I shall cut down the tree in the shape of Rāma, which is going to yield fruit through its blossom in the form of Sītā, nay, whose principal boughs are Sugrīva, Jāmbavān, Kumuda, Nala, as well as Dwivida and Mainda, Aṅgada, Gandhamādana as also Hanumān and Suṣeṇa and all the other commanders of monkey troops.” (4-5)

स दिशो दश घोषेण रथस्यातिरथो महान्।
नादयन् प्रययौ तूर्णं राघवं चाभ्यधावत ॥ ६ ॥

Saying so and causing all the ten directions to resound with the rattling of his chariot, that mighty and surpassing car-warrior drove rapidly and rushed towards Śrī Rāma, a scion of Rāghu. (6)

पूरिता तेन शब्देन सनदीगिरिकानना।
संचचाल मही सर्वा त्रस्तसिंहमृगद्विजा ॥ ७ ॥

Filled by that sound the entire globe including rivers, mountains and forests, trembled throwing the lions and other beasts as well as birds into a fright. (7)

तामसं सुमहाघोरं चकारास्त्रं सुदारुणम्।
निर्ददाह कपीन् सर्वास्ते प्रपेतुः समन्ततः ॥ ८ ॥

He manifested an exceedingly formidable and terrific, mystic missile presided over by Rāhu (a giant presiding over the planet of that name and consisting of darkness), and with it he began to consume all the monkeys, who started falling down on all sides. (8)

उत्पपात रजो भूमौ तैर्भग्नैः सम्प्रधावितैः।
नहि तत् सहितुं शेकुर्ब्रह्मणा निर्मितं स्वयम् ॥ ९ ॥

Dust rose on the earth as they ran with all speed when frustrated, for they could no longer endure the missile, which had been brought into being by Brahmā, the creator, himself. (9)

तान्यनीकान्यनेकानि रावणस्य शरोत्तमैः।
दृष्ट्वा भग्नानि शतशो राघवः पर्यवस्थितः ॥ १० ॥

Seeing those numerous divisions of the monkeys routed in hundreds by the excellent arrows of Rāvaṇa, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Rāghu took his stand firmly on the battlefield. (10)

ततो राक्षसशार्दूलो विद्राव्य हरिवाहिनीम्।
स ददर्श ततो रामं तिष्ठन्तमपराजितम् ॥ ११ ॥
लक्ष्मणेन सह भ्रात्रा विष्णुना वासवं यथा।
आलिखन्तमिवाकाशमवष्टभ्य महद् धनुः ॥ १२ ॥
पद्मपत्रविशालाक्षं दीर्घबाहुमरिंदमम्।
ततो रामो महातेजाः सौमित्रिसहितो बली ॥ १३ ॥

वानरांश्च रणे भग्नानापतन्तं च रावणम्।
समीक्ष्य राघवो हृष्टो मध्ये जग्राह कार्मुकम् ॥ १४ ॥

Having put the army of the monkeys to flight, that tiger among the ogres then beheld Śrī Rāma, the tamer of his enemies, who was endowed with long arms and eyes large as lotus petals standing unconquered with his younger brother, Lakṣmaṇa, like Indra accompanied by his younger brother, Upendra, Lord Viṣṇu—holding up his bow as though scraping the sky. Nay, perceiving the monkeys routed in combat and Rāvaṇa approaching, the mighty Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and was accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, thereupon joyfully took hold of his bow at the middle. (11—14)

विस्फारयितुमारेभे ततः स धनुरुत्तमम्।
महावेगं महानादं निर्भिन्दन्निव मेदिनीम् ॥ १५ ॥

He then began to stretch the excellent bow, which was endowed with great impelling force, loud and sonorous, as though he was going to rend the globe asunder. (15)

रावणस्य च बाणौघैः रामविस्फारितेन च।
शब्देन राक्षसास्तेन पेतुश्च शतशस्तदा ॥ १६ ॥

Nay, ogres fell to the ground in their hundreds at the well-known buzzing sound produced by the streams of Rāvaṇa's as well as by the twang of Śrī Rāma's bow. (16)

तयोः शरपथं प्राप्य रावणो राजपुत्रयोः।
स बभौ च यथा राहुः समीपे शशिसूर्ययोः ॥ १७ ॥

Again, coming within the range of the aforesaid two princes, Lakṣmana and Śrī Rāma, the notorious Rāvaṇa resembled Rāhu (the Daitya presiding over the planet of that name, who is held by the Purāṇas to be responsible for the solar as well as the lunar eclipses standing in the vicinity of the moon and the sun). (17)

तमिच्छन् प्रथमं योद्धुं लक्ष्मणो निशितैः शरैः।
मुमोच धनुरायम्य शरानग्निशिखोपमान् ॥ १८ ॥

Desiring to engage him with his own sharpened arrows in the first instance and stretching his bow, Lakṣmaṇa shot his shafts resembling tongues of fire. (18)

तान् मुक्तमात्रानाकाशे लक्ष्मणेन धनुष्मता ।
बाणान् बाणैर्महातेजा रावणः प्रत्यवारयत् ॥ १९ ॥

Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, intercepted in the air with his own arrows the aforesaid arrows as soon as they were shot by Lakṣmaṇa, an excellent archer. (19)

एकमेकेन बाणेन त्रिभिस्त्रीन् दशभिर्दश ।
लक्ष्मणस्य प्रचिच्छेद दर्शयन् पाणिनाघवम् ॥ २० ॥

Demonstrating his lightness of hand, he split the arrows of Lakṣmaṇa one with one, three with three and ten with ten arrows. (20)

अभ्यतिक्रम्य सौमित्रिं रावणः समितिंजयः ।
आससाद रणे रामं स्थितं शैलमिवापरम् ॥ २१ ॥

Overpassing Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), Rāvaṇa, who ever won battles, approached Śrī Rāma, standing like another mountain on the battlefield. (21)

स राघवं समासाद्य क्रोधसंरक्तलोचनः ।
व्यसृजच्छरवर्षाणि रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ २२ ॥

Duly approaching Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), his eyes turning crimson through anger, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, discharged showers of shafts upon him. (22)

शरधारास्ततो रामो रावणस्य धनुश्च्युताः ।
दृष्ट्वैवापतिताः शीघ्रं भल्लाञ्जग्राह सत्वरम् ॥ २३ ॥

Immediately on beholding the volleys of arrows discharged from the bow of Rāvaṇa approaching, Śrī Rāma thereupon quickly seized hold in all haste of Bhallas (a variety of arrows with a crescent-shaped head). (23)

ताञ्छरौघांस्ततो भल्लैस्तीक्ष्णैश्चिच्छेद राघवः ।
दीप्यमानान् महाघोराञ्छरानाशीविषोपमान् ॥ २४ ॥

Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, then tore asunder with sharp-edged Bhallas those streams of flaming arrows—arrows which were very formidable and resembled venomous serpents. (24)

राघवो रावणं तूर्णं रावणो राघवं तथा ।
अन्योन्यं विविधैस्तीक्ष्णैः शरवर्षैर्ववर्षतुः ॥ २५ ॥

Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, and Rāvaṇa rapidly covered each other with showers of sharp-pointed shafts of various kinds—Śrī Rāma covering Rāvaṇa and vice versa. (25)

चेरतुश्च चिरं चित्रं मण्डलं सव्यदक्षिणम् ।
बाणवेगात् समुत्क्षिप्तावन्योन्यमपराजितौ ॥ २६ ॥

Pushing back each other with the onrush of their arrows and remaining undefeated, the two warriors described circles of various kinds round each other from left to right. (26)

तयोर्भूतानि वित्रेसुर्युगपत् सम्प्रयुध्यतोः ।
रौद्रयोः सायकमुचोर्यमान्तकनिकाशयोः ॥ २७ ॥

All beings were seized with terror even as the two redoubtable heroes, who resembled the god of retribution and the god of death, respectively, simultaneously struck with violence shooting arrows at each other. (27)

सततं विविधैर्बाणैर्बभूव गगनं तदा ।
घनैरिवातपापाये विद्युन्मालासमाकुलैः ॥ २८ ॥

The sky was overcast at that time with arrows of various kinds even as it is covered during the monsoon with clouds crowded with flashes of lightning. (28)

गवाक्षितमिवाकाशं बभूव शरवृष्टिभिः ।
महावेगैः सुतीक्ष्णाग्रैर्गृध्रपत्रैः सुवाजितैः ॥ २९ ॥

The vault of heaven was studded with eye-holes, as it were, by showers of shafts of extraordinary velocity, which were extremely sharp-pointed, were adorned with plumes of vultures and were discharged with great impetuosity. (29)

शरान्धकारमाकाशं चक्रतुः परमं तदा ।
गतेऽस्तं तपने चापि महामेघाविवोत्थितौ ॥ ३० ॥

Like two huge clouds risen into view at a time when the sun had set and even when it rose, the two warriors enveloped the sky with great darkness with their arrows. (30)

तयोरभून्महायुद्धमन्योन्यवधकांक्षिणोः ।
अनासाद्यमचिन्त्यं च वृत्रवासवयोरिव ॥ ३१ ॥

Like the duel that took place in the hoary past between the demon Vṛtra and Indra, an unapproachable and unimaginable major conflict ensued between the two warriors, who sought the destruction of each other. (31)

उभौ हि परमेष्वासावुभौ युद्धविशारदौ ।
उभावस्त्रविदां मुख्यावुभौ युद्धे विचेरतुः ॥ ३२ ॥

Indeed, both were armed with excellent bows, both were skilled in fighting, both were the foremost of those adept in the use of missiles and both moved unhampered on the battlefield. (32)

उभौ हि येन व्रजतस्तेन तेन शरोर्मयः ।
ऊर्मयो वायुना विद्धा जग्मुः सागरयोरिव ॥ ३३ ॥

Indeed, whichever course they both took in their manoeuvrings streams of shafts were set in motion like waves in two oceans, whipped up by the wind. (33)

ततः संसक्तहस्तस्तु रावणो लोकरावणः ।
नाराचमालां रामस्य ललाटे प्रत्यमुञ्चत ॥ ३४ ॥

Then Rāvaṇa for his part, who made people cry wherever he went and whose hands were constantly engaged in discharging arrows, dug into the brow of Śrī Rāma a succession of steel arrows, which adorned it like a chaplet. (34)

रौद्रचापप्रयुक्तां तां नीलोत्पलदलप्रभाम् ।
शिरसाधारयद् रामो न व्यथामभ्यपद्यत ॥ ३५ ॥

Śrī Rāma bore that chaplet, discharged from the terrible bow of Rāvaṇa and shining like the petals of a blue lotus, on his head and did not experience any pain. (35)

अथ मन्त्रानपि जपन् रौद्रमस्त्रमुदीरयन् ।
शरान् भूयः समादाय रामः क्रोधसमन्वितः ॥ ३६ ॥
मुमोच च महातेजाश्चापमायम्य वीर्यवान् ।
तान् शरान् राक्षसेन्द्राय चिक्षेपाच्छिन्नसायकः ॥ ३७ ॥

Then, seizing hold of more arrows, nay, reciting sacred formulas and thereby invoking the mystic missile sought for and making use of the missile presided over by Rudra (the god of destruction), and stretching his bow, the valiant Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, and was seized with anger, let fly those arrows in uninterrupted succession against the king of ogres. (36-37)

ते महामेघसंकाशे कवचे पतिताः शराः ।
अवध्ये राक्षसेन्द्रस्य न व्यथां जनयन्तदा ॥ ३८ ॥

Fallen on the impenetrable armour of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, which looked like a large cloud, the aforesaid arrows did not cause any pain to him at the time. (38)

पुनरेवाथ तं रामो रथस्थं राक्षसाधिपम् ।
ललाटे परमास्त्रेण सर्वास्त्रकुशलोऽभिनत् ॥ ३९ ॥

Śrī Rāma, who was an adept in the use of all mystic missiles, forthwith pierced that suzerain lord of ogres, seated in his chariot, once more in the forehead with an excellent missile. (39)

ते भित्त्वा बाणरूपाणि पञ्चशीर्षा इवोरगाः ।
श्वसन्तो विविशुर्भूमिं रावणप्रतिकूलिताः ॥ ४० ॥

Having pierced the excellent arrows of Rāvaṇa, the arrows of Śrī Rāma, generated by the missile, penetrated like five-headed hissing serpents into the earth, when repelled by Rāvaṇa (40)

निहत्य राघवस्यास्त्रं रावणः क्रोधमूर्च्छितः ।
आसुरं सुमहाघोरमस्त्रं प्रादुश्चकार सः ॥ ४१ ॥

Rendering the missile of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, void, the aforesaid Rāvaṇa, who was filled with wrath, manifested an exceedingly dreadful missile, presided over by demoniac forces. (41)

सिंहव्याघ्रमुखांश्चापि कङ्ककोकमुखानपि ।
गृध्रश्येनमुखांश्चापि शृगालवदनांस्तथा ॥ ४२ ॥
ईहामृगमुखांश्चापि व्यादितास्यान् भयावहान् ।
पञ्चास्याल्लेलिहानांश्च ससर्ज निशितान् शरान् ॥ ४३ ॥
शरान् खरमुखांश्चान्यान् वराहमुखसंश्रितान् ।
श्वानकुक्कुटवक्त्रांश्च मकराशीविषाननान् ॥ ४४ ॥

He discharged arrows having the heads of lions and tigers, those of buzzards and red geese, even of vultures and falcons, as well as those of jackals and wolves, also shafts having the heads of terrible lions with their mouths wide open and even resembling serpents, also those having the heads of donkeys and others having the heads of boars, dogs and cocks, alligators and venomous snakes. (42—44)

एतांश्चान्यांश्च मायाभिः ससर्ज निशिताञ्छरान् ।
रामं प्रति महातेजाः क्रुद्धः सर्प इव श्वसन् ॥ ४५ ॥

Hissing like a serpent provoked to anger, Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, let go against Śrī Rāma by his conjuring tricks these and other whetted arrows. (45)

आसुरेण समाविष्टः सोऽस्त्रेण रघुपुङ्गवः ।
ससर्जास्त्रं महोत्साहं पावकं पावकोपमः ॥ ४६ ॥

Overwhelmed by that missile presided over by demoniac forces, that prince of the Raghus, who was endowed with extraordinary animation and resembled the god of fire in brilliance, employed the missile presided over by the god of fire. (46)

अग्निदीप्तमुखान् बाणांस्तत्र सूर्यमुखानपि ।
चन्द्रार्धचन्द्रवक्त्रांश्च धूमकेतुमुखानपि ।
ग्रहनक्षत्रवर्णांश्च महोल्कामुखसंस्थितान् ॥ ४७ ॥

विद्युज्जिह्वोपमांश्चापि ससर्ज विविधाञ्छरान् ।
ते रावणशरा घोरा राघवास्त्रसमाहताः ॥ ४८ ॥
विलयं जग्मुराकाशे जघ्नुश्चैव सहस्रशः ।
तदस्त्रं निहतं दृष्ट्वा रामेणाक्लिष्टकर्मणा ॥ ४९ ॥
हृष्टा नेदुस्ततः सर्वे कपयः कामरूपिणः ।
सुग्रीवाभिमुखा वीराः सम्परिक्षिप्य राघवम् ॥ ५० ॥

He produced through it arrows of every description, some with heads bright as fire, others with heads shining like the sun, the moon, the crescent, a comet and a huge meteor respectively, others shining like planets and lunar mansions and some resembling flashes of lightning. Pierced by the missile employed by Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, those formidable arrows of Rāvaṇa melted away in the air; yet, before they did so, they killed the monkeys in thousands. Rejoiced to see that missile, presided over by demoniac forces, rendered void by Śrī Rāma of unwearied action, and encompassing Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), all the monkeys, who were capable of changing their form at will, thereupon raised a clamour facing Sugriva. (47—50)

ततस्तदस्त्रं विनिहत्य राघवः
प्रसह्य तद् रावणबाहुनिःसृतम् ।
मुदान्वितो दाशरथिर्महात्मा
विनेदुरुच्चैर्मुदिताः कपीश्वराः ॥ ५१ ॥

The high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), son of Daśaratha, was then filled with joy on having forcibly rendered void that well-known missile which had flown from the arms of Rāvaṇa; while the valiant monkey chiefs, full of joy, shouted at the top of their voice. (51)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकोनशततमः सर्गः ॥ ९९ ॥

Thus ends Canto Ninety-nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

शततमः सर्गः

Canto C

Encounter of Śrī Rāma with Rāvaṇa; Lakṣmaṇa swoons under a blow of Rāvaṇa's javelin and Rāvaṇa flees away from the battlefield

तस्मिन् प्रतिहतेऽस्त्रे तु रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ।
क्रोधं च द्विगुणं चक्रे क्रोधाच्चास्त्रमनन्तरम् ॥ १ ॥
मयेन विहितं रौद्रमन्यदस्त्रं महाद्युतिः ।
उत्स्रष्टुं रावणो भीमं राघवाय प्रचक्रमे ॥ २ ॥

The aforesaid missile having been counteracted by Śrī Rāma, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part doubled his fury and in his wrath the latter, who was endowed with extraordinary might, forthwith proceeded to aim at Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) another fearful missile presided over by Rudra (the god of destruction) and produced by the demon Maya. (1-2)

ततः शूलानि निश्चेरुर्गदाश्च मुसलानि च ।
कार्मुकाद् दीप्यमानानि वज्रसाराणि सर्वशः ॥ ३ ॥
मुद्गराः कूटपाशाश्च दीप्ताश्चाशनयस्तथा ।
निष्पेतुर्विविधास्तीक्ष्णा वाता इव युगक्षये ॥ ४ ॥

Then issued forth on all sides from his bow flaming pikes and maces as well as clubs, hard as adamant, mallets, deceptive nooses and fiery thunderbolts of various kinds like piercing gales at the end of the world-cycle. (3-4)

तदस्त्रं राघवः श्रीमानुत्तमास्त्रविदां वरः ।
जघान परमास्त्रेण गान्धर्वेण महाद्युतिः ॥ ५ ॥

The glorious Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the foremost of those proficient in the use of excellent missiles, who was endowed with extraordinary splendour, neutralized that missile with the excellent missile presided over by the Gandharvas (celestial musicians). (5)

तस्मिन् प्रतिहतेऽस्त्रे तु राघवेण महात्मना ।
रावणः क्रोधताम्राक्षः सौरमस्त्रमुदीरयत् ॥ ६ ॥

The aforesaid missile having been rendered void by the high-souled Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, Rāvaṇa for his part, his eyes coppery with wrath, employed the missile presided over by the sun-god. (6)

ततश्चक्राणि निष्पेतुर्भास्वराणि महान्ति च ।
कार्मुकाद् भीमवेगस्य दशग्रीवस्य धीमतः ॥ ७ ॥

Thereupon issued brilliant and large discuses from the bow of the resourceful Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) of terrific impetuosity. (7)

तैरासीद् गगनं दीप्तं सम्पतद्भिः समन्ततः ।
पतद्भिश्च दिशो दीप्ताश्चन्द्रसूर्यग्रहैरिव ॥ ८ ॥

Even as they rose into view and struck on all sides, the sky was lit up and the quarters illuminated as by the sun, the moon and other planets. (8)

तानि चिच्छेद बाणौघैश्चक्राणि तु स राघवः ।
आयुधानि च चित्राणि रावणस्य चमूमुखे ॥ ९ ॥

The celebrated Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, however, split those discuses and other strange weapons with the streams of his shafts in the forefront of Rāvaṇa's army. (9)

तदस्त्रं तु हतं दृष्ट्वा रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ।
विव्याध दशभिर्बाणै रामं सर्वेषु मर्मसु ॥ १० ॥

Seeing that missile frustrated, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part struck hard Śrī Rāma with ten arrows in all his vital parts. (10)

स विद्धो दशभिर्बाणैर्महाकार्मुकनिःसृतैः ।
रावणेन महातेजा न प्राक्कम्पत राघवः ॥ ११ ॥

Though grievously hurt by Rāvaṇa with ten shafts which had been shot forth from his huge bow, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, did not flinch. (11)

ततो विव्याध गात्रेषु सर्वेषु समितिंजयः ।
राघवस्तु सुसंकुद्धो रावणं बहुभिः शरैः ॥ १२ ॥

Extremely enraged, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), for his part, who ever won battles, thereupon pierced Rāvaṇa in all his limbs with numerous arrows. (12)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे क्रुद्धो राघवस्यानुजो बली ।
लक्ष्मणः सायकान् सप्त जग्राह परवीरहा ॥ १३ ॥

Provoked to anger, in the meantime the mighty Lakṣmaṇa, younger brother of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the destroyer of hostile champions, seized hold of seven arrows. (13)

तैः सायकैर्महावेगै रावणस्य महाद्युतिः ।
ध्वजं मनुष्यशीर्षं तु तस्य चिच्छेद नैकधा ॥ १४ ॥

With those shafts, which were impelled with great force, Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary splendour, for his part tore (to begin with) into a number of pieces the standard of Rāvaṇa, which bore the device of a man's head. (14)

सारथेश्चापि बाणेन शिरो ज्वलितकुण्डलम् ।
जहार लक्ष्मणः श्रीमान् नैर्ऋतस्य महाबलः ॥ १५ ॥

With a single arrow the glorious Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, also severed the head of the ogre's charioteer, which was adorned with flaming earrings. (15)

तस्य बाणैश्च चिच्छेद धनुर्गजकरोपमम् ।
लक्ष्मणो राक्षसेन्द्रस्य पञ्चभिर्निशितैस्तदा ॥ १६ ॥

Nay, with five whetted shafts Lakṣmaṇa then split asunder the bow of that king of ogres, which resembled the proboscis of an elephant. (16)

नीलमेघनिभांश्चास्य सदश्वान् पर्वतोपमान् ।
जघानाप्लुत्य गदया रावणस्य विभीषणः ॥ १७ ॥

And bounding forward, Vibhīṣaṇa struck down with his mace Rāvaṇa's excellent horses which resembled a dark cloud in hue and were tall as hills. (17)

हताश्वात् तु तदा वेगादवप्लुत्य महारथात् ।
कोपमाहारयत् तीव्रं भ्रातरं प्रति रावणः ॥ १८ ॥

Leaping down with all speed from his huge chariot, whose horses had been killed, Rāvaṇa for his part then exhibited a violent rage against his youngest brother. (18)

ततः शक्तिं महाशक्तिः प्रदीप्तामशनीमिव ।
विभीषणाय चिक्षेप राक्षसेन्द्रः प्रतापवान् ॥ १९ ॥

Thereupon the powerful king of ogres, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, flung at Vibhīṣaṇa a flaming javelin, which resembled the thunderbolt. (19)

अप्राप्तमेव तां बाणैस्त्रिभिश्चिच्छेद लक्ष्मणः ।
अथोदतिष्ठत् संनादो वानराणां महारणे ॥ २० ॥

With three shafts Lakṣmaṇa, however, tore it asunder even before it reached him. A loud cheer forthwith rose among the monkeys in that major conflict. (20)

सम्पपात त्रिधा छिन्ना शक्तिः काञ्चनमालिनी ।
सविस्फुलिङ्गा ज्वलिता महोल्केव दिवश्च्युता ॥ २१ ॥

Split into three fragments, the javelin, which was wreathed in gold, struck the target like an enormous flaming meteor, emitting sparks, fallen from the heavens. (21)

ततः सम्भाविततरां कालेनापि दुरासदाम् ।
जग्राह विपुलां शक्तिं दीप्यमानां स्वतेजसा ॥ २२ ॥

Rāvaṇa thereupon seized hold of a big javelin, which was highly renowned for its infallibility, was difficult to approach even for Death, and was shining with its own splendour. (22)

सा वेगिता बलवता रावणेन दुरात्मना ।
जज्वाल सुमहातेजा दीप्ताशनिसमप्रभा ॥ २३ ॥

Brandished with violence by the mighty and evil-minded Rāvaṇa, that immensely splendid javelin, which shone like a flaming thunderbolt, gave out a lurid gleam. (23)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे वीरो लक्ष्मणस्तं विभीषणम्।
प्राणसंशयमापन्नं तूर्णमभ्यवपद्यत ॥ २४ ॥

In the meantime, the heroic Lakṣmaṇa speedily came to the rescue of the aforesaid Vibhīṣaṇa, who had reached a stage in which his life was in danger. (24)

तं विमोक्षयितुं वीरश्चापमायम्य लक्ष्मणः।
रावणं शक्तिहस्तं वै शरवर्षैरवाकिरत् ॥ २५ ॥

Stretching his bow, the gallant Lakṣmaṇa, in order to save Vibhīṣaṇa, actually overwhelmed with volleys of arrows Rāvaṇa, who stood, javelin in hand. (25)

कीर्यमाणः शरौघेण विमृष्टेन महात्मना।
न प्रहर्तुं मनश्चक्रे विमुखीकृतविक्रमः ॥ २६ ॥

Being covered, as aforesaid, with a stream of shafts discharged by the high-souled Lakṣmaṇa, Rāvaṇa, whose prowess stood balked in this way, no longer felt spirited to strike. (26)

मोक्षितं भ्रातरं दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणेन स रावणः।
लक्ष्मणाभिमुखस्तिष्ठन्निदं वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ २७ ॥

Standing with his face turned towards Lakṣmaṇa, on seeing his younger brother, Vibhīṣaṇa, rescued by Lakṣmaṇa, the notorious Rāvaṇa spoke as follows: (27)

मोक्षितस्ते बलश्लाघिन् यस्मादेवं विभीषणः।
विमुच्य राक्षसं शक्तिस्त्वयीयं विनिपात्यते ॥ २८ ॥

“Letting off the ogre, Vibhīṣaṇa, this javelin is being violently hurled on you inasmuch as Vibhīṣaṇa has thus been rescued by you, O vaunter of your strength!” (28)

एषा ते हृदयं भित्त्वा शक्तिर्लोहितलक्षणा।
मद्बाहुपरिघोत्सृष्टा प्राणानादाय यास्यति ॥ २९ ॥

“Piercing your heart, as soon as hurled by my bludgeon-like arm, and stained with your blood, this javelin will depart only after taking your life.” (29)

इत्येवमुक्त्वा तां शक्तिमष्टघण्टां महास्वनाम्।
मयेन मायाविहिताममोघां शत्रुघातिनीम् ॥ ३० ॥
लक्ष्मणाय समुद्दिश्य ज्वलन्तीमिव तेजसा।
रावणः परमक्रुद्धश्चिक्षेप च ननाद च ॥ ३१ ॥

Saying so and aiming at Lakṣmaṇa that infallible javelin, which was adorned with eight bells and made a loud noise in the course of its flight, nay, which had been designed by the domon Maya by dint of magic, was capable of destroying the enemy and shone, as it were, with splendour, Rāvaṇa, who was extremely enraged, hurled it and roared. (30-31)

सा क्षिप्ता भीमवेगेन वज्राशनिसमस्वना।
शक्तिरभ्यपतद् वेगाल्लक्ष्मणं रणमूर्धनि ॥ ३२ ॥

Flung with terrible impetuosity and cracking like a thunderbolt, that javelin flew with force towards Lakṣmaṇa in the forefront of the battle. (32)

तामनुव्याहरच्छक्तिमापतन्तीं स राघवः।
स्वस्त्यस्तु लक्ष्मणायेति मोघा भव हतोद्यमा ॥ ३३ ॥

Addressing that javelin even as it was striking at Lakṣmaṇa, that scion of Raghu, Śrī Rāma imprecated it as follows: “May all be well with Lakṣmaṇa! May you prove ineffectual! May your attempt to kill Lakṣmaṇa be frustrated!!” (33)

रावणेन रणे शक्तिः क्रुद्धेनाशीविषोपमा।
मुक्ताऽऽशूरस्यभीतस्य लक्ष्मणस्य ममज्ज सा ॥ ३४ ॥

Released by the enraged Rāvaṇa on the battlefield, that javelin, which was deadly as a venomous snake, struck at once at the bosom of Lakṣmaṇa, who stood fearless. (34)

न्यपतत् सा महावेगा लक्ष्मणस्य महोरसि।
जिह्वेवोरगराजस्य दीप्यमाना महाद्युतिः ॥ ३५ ॥

Flying with great violence and flaming like the tongue of Vāsuki (the lord of serpents), the javelin, which was full of extraordinary splendour, descended on the broad chest of Lakṣmaṇa. (35)

ततो रावणवेगेन सुदूरमवगाढया ।
शक्त्या विभिन्नहृदयः पपात भुवि लक्ष्मणः ॥ ३६ ॥

Pierced grievously by the javelin, which had penetrated very deep due to the tremendous force exerted by Rāvaṇa, Lakṣmaṇa thereupon fell to the ground. (36)

तदवस्थं समीपस्थो लक्ष्मणं प्रेक्ष्य राघवः ।
भ्रातृस्नेहान्महातेजा विषण्णहृदयोऽभवत् ॥ ३७ ॥

Observing Lakṣmaṇa reduced to that predicament, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who stood near, felt despondent at heart because of brotherly affection, even though he was endowed with extraordinary courage. (37)

स मुहूर्तमिव ध्यात्वा बाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणः ।
बभूव संरब्धतरो युगान्त इव पावकः ॥ ३८ ॥

Reflecting awhile as it were, his eyes bedimmed with tears, he felt all the more enraged even like the fire at the end of a world-cycle. (38)

न विषादस्य कालोऽयमिति संचिन्त्य राघवः ।
चक्रे सुतुमुलं युद्धं रावणस्य वधे धृतः ।
सर्वयत्नेन महता लक्ष्मणं परिवीक्ष्य च ॥ ३९ ॥

Realizing that it was not the time for feeling disconsolate, and gazing on Lakṣmaṇa, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, resumed the fierce struggle with a mighty and whole-hearted endeavour, resolved as he was upon the destruction of Rāvaṇa. (39)

स ददर्श ततो रामः शक्त्या भिन्नं महाहवे ।
लक्ष्मणं रुधिरादिग्धं सपन्नगमिवाचलम् ॥ ४० ॥

The aforesaid Śrī Rāma then beheld Lakṣmaṇa pierced with a javelin in the great struggle and bathed in blood, and resembling a mountain with a snake penetrating its centre. (40)

तामपि प्रहितां शक्तिं रावणेन बलीयसा ।
यत्नतस्ते हरिश्रेष्ठा न शेकुरवमर्दितुम् ॥ ४१ ॥

अर्दिताश्चैव बाणौघैस्ते प्रवेकेण रक्षसाम् ।
सौमित्रेः सा विनिर्भिद्य प्रविष्टा धरणीतलम् ॥ ४२ ॥

The jewels among the monkeys could not extract even with effort that javelin, propelled as it was by the exceedingly mighty Rāvaṇa and also because they were overwhelmed by the stream of arrows discharged by the king of ogres. Nay, passing through the body of Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), it had penetrated into the surface of the earth. (41-42)

तां कराभ्यां परामृश्य रामः शक्तिं भयावहाम् ।
बभञ्ज समरे क्रुद्धो बलवान् विचकर्ष च ॥ ४३ ॥

Seizing hold of the terrible javelin with his hands, the mighty Rāma drew it out and, getting enraged, snapped it in the course of the struggle. (43)

तस्य निष्कर्षतः शक्तिं रावणेन बलीयसा ।
शराः सर्वेषु गात्रेषु पातिता मर्मभेदिनः ॥ ४४ ॥

While he was busy extracting the javelin, arrows which pierced his vital parts were hurled by the exceedingly mighty Rāvaṇa on all his limbs. (44)

अचिन्तयित्वा तान् बाणान् समाश्लिष्य च लक्ष्मणम् ।
अब्रवीच्च हनूमन्तं सुग्रीवं च महाकपिम् ॥ ४५ ॥

Not minding those arrows, and embracing Lakṣmaṇa, he spoke as follows to Hanumān and the great monkey, Sugrīva: (45)

लक्ष्मणं परिवार्यैवं तिष्ठध्वं वानरोत्तमाः ।
पराक्रमस्य कालोऽयं सम्प्राप्तो मे चिरेप्सितः ॥ ४६ ॥
पापात्मायं दशग्रीवो वध्यतां पापनिश्चयः ।
कांक्षितं चातकस्येव घर्मान्ते मेघदर्शनम् ॥ ४७ ॥

“Remain encompassing Lakṣmaṇa as you are doing, O princes of monkeys. The occasion, long sought by me to manifest my prowess, has come. Let this ten-headed monster of sinful mind and sinful resolve be made short work of. His death is sought by me as the sight of a cloud by a Cātaka bird at the end of summer. (46-47)

अस्मिन् मुहूर्ते नचिरात् सत्यं प्रतिशृणोमि वः ।

आरावणमरामं वा जगद् द्रक्ष्यथ वानराः ॥ ४८ ॥

“I take this unfailing vow before you at this hour, O monkeys, that before long you will see the world devoid of Rāvaṇa or Rāma (myself). (48)

राज्यनाशं वने वासं दण्डके परिधावनम् ।

वैदेह्याश्च परामर्शो रक्षोभिश्च समागमम् ॥ ४९ ॥

“I suffered the loss of my sovereignty, exile in the forest, peregrination in the woods of Daṇḍaka and the insult offered to Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) by the ogre, Rāvaṇa. (49)

प्राप्तं दुःखं महाघोरं क्लेशश्च निरयोपमः ।

अद्य सर्वमहं त्यक्ष्ये निहत्वा रावणं रणे ॥ ५० ॥

“In this way great and terrible agony has been suffered by me as also bodily torment approaching the tortures in hell. Making short work of Rāvaṇa in combat, I shall have done with all this today. (50)

यदर्थं वानरं सैन्यं समानीतमिदं मया ।

सुग्रीवश्च कृतो राज्ये निहत्वा वालिनं रणे ।

यदर्थं सागरः क्रान्तः सेतुर्बद्धश्च सागरे ॥ ५१ ॥

सोऽयमद्य रणे पापश्चक्षुर्विषयमागतः ।

चक्षुर्विषयमागत्य नायं जीवितुमर्हति ॥ ५२ ॥

“This sinful ogre on whose account this army of monkeys has been dragged by me to this distant land, Sugrīva has been installed on the throne of Kiṣkindhā after disposing of Vālī in combat, and on whose account the sea has been crossed and a bridge thrown over it, has fallen within the range of my vision on the battlefield today. Having come within my sight, he does not deserve to survive any longer. (51-52)

दृष्टिं दृष्टिविषयस्येव सर्पस्य मम रावणः ।

यथा वा वैनतेयस्य दृष्टिं प्राप्तो भुजंगमः ॥ ५३ ॥

“Having fallen within my view, Rāvaṇa cannot survive any more than one who has entered the range of vision of a snake injecting deadly venom with his very glance, or, than a serpent who has fallen under the gaze of Garuḍa, the king of birds and enemy of serpents. (53)

सुखं पश्यत दुर्धर्षा युद्धं वानरपुङ्गवाः ।

आसीनाः पर्वताग्रेषु ममेदं रावणस्य च ॥ ५४ ॥

“Perched on mountain-peaks, O bulls among the monkeys, witness at ease you, who are so difficult to overpower, this trial of strength between myself and Rāvaṇa. (54)

अद्य पश्यन्तु रामस्य रामत्वं मम संयुगे ।

त्रयो लोकाः सगन्धर्वाः सदेवाः सर्षिचारणाः ॥ ५५ ॥

“Let all the three worlds (viz., earth, heaven and the intermediate region) including the Gandharvas (celestial musicians), gods, Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) and Cāraṇas (celestial bards) behold with their own eyes today the Rāmahood of Rāma in the course of my combat. (55)

अद्य कर्म करिष्यामि यल्लोकाः सचराचराः ।

सदेवाः कथयिष्यन्ति यावद् भूमिर्धरिष्यति ।

समागम्य सदा लोके यथा युद्धं प्रवर्तितम् ॥ ५६ ॥

“I shall accomplish today a feat which people in the world including all living beings, mobile as well immobile, gods not excepted, will ever recount together, describing how the combat proceeded, as long as the earth is able to support those inhabiting it.” (56)

एवमुक्त्वा शितैर्बाणैस्तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणैः ।

आजघान रणे रामो दशग्रीवं समाहितः ॥ ५७ ॥

Saying so, Śrī Rāma steadily proceeded to strike Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster) on the battlefield with penetrating shafts embellished with refined gold. (57)

तथा प्रदीप्तैर्नाराचैर्मुसलैश्चापि रावणः ।

अभ्यवर्षत् तदा रामं धाराभिरिव तोयदः ॥ ५८ ॥

Rāvaṇa too likewise covered Śrī Rāma on that occasion with flaming steel arrows and clubs even as a cloud would cover a mountain with torrents of rain. (58)

रामरावणमुक्तानामन्योन्यमभिनिघ्नताम् ।
वराणां च शराणां च बभूव तुमुलः स्वनः ॥ ५९ ॥

Nay, a confused din arose from the excellent arrows shot by Śrī Rāma, on the one hand, and Rāvaṇa, on the other, as each struck his opponent. (59)

विच्छिन्नाश्च विकीर्णाश्च रामरावणयोः शराः ।
अन्तरिक्षात् प्रदीप्ताग्रा निपेतुर्धरणीतले ॥ ६० ॥

Split asunder and scattered, the shafts with flaming points of Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa fell from the airspace to the earth's surface. (60)

तयोर्य्यातलनिर्घोषो रामरावणयोर्महान् ।
त्रासनः सर्वभूतानां सम्बभूवाद्वतोपमः ॥ ६१ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे शततमः सर्गः ॥ १०० ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CI

Śrī Rāma laments over the precarious condition of Lakṣmaṇa.

The latter regains consciousness under the treatment of the monkey Suṣeṇa with the help of a herb brought at his instance all the way from the Himālaya mountain by Hanumān

शक्त्या निपातितं दृष्ट्वा रावणेन बलीयसा ।
लक्ष्मणं समरे शूरं शोणितौघपरिप्लुतम् ॥ १ ॥
स दत्त्वा तुमुलं युद्धं रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ।
विसृजन्नेव बाणौघान् सुषेणमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ २ ॥

Beholding the heroic Lakṣmaṇa soaked in a stream of blood, when struck down in combat with a javelin by the exceedingly mighty Rāvaṇa, and having offered a fierce combat to the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, Śrī Rāma spoke as follows to the monkey chief, Suṣeṇa, even while discharging streams of

The mighty sound produced by the impact of the bow-string on the palms of the two heroes, which struck terror in all living beings, was astonishing, as it were, to hear. (61)

स कीर्यमाणः शरजालवृष्टिभि- र्महात्मना दीप्तधनुष्मतादितः ।
भयात् प्रदुद्राव समेत्य रावणो
यथानिलेनाभिहतो बलाहकः ॥ ६२ ॥

Being covered by hails of shafts and overwhelmed by the high-souled Śrī Rāma, who was armed with a flaming bow, on closing with Rāvaṇa, who took to his heels out of fear, even as a cloud would disperse when propelled by a gale. (62)

shafts at his mighty opponent: (1-2)
एष रावणवीर्येण लक्ष्मणः पतितो भुवि ।
सर्पवच्चेष्टते वीरो मम शोकमुदीरयन् ॥ ३ ॥

“Fallen on the ground yielding to the prowess of Rāvaṇa, here is the gallant Lakṣmaṇa writhing like a serpent and causing grief to me. (3)

शोणितार्द्रमिमं वीरं प्राणैः प्रियतरं मम ।
पश्यतो मम का शक्तिर्योद्धुं पर्याकुलात्मनः ॥ ४ ॥

“My strength to fight is failing even as I behold this hero, who is dearer to me than life itself, drenched with blood, my mind being greatly agitated. (4)

अयं स समरश्लाघी भ्राता मे शुभलक्षणः ।
यदि पञ्चत्वमापन्नः प्राणैर्मे किं सुखेन वा ॥ ५ ॥

“If, God forbid, this well-known brother of mine, who is endowed with auspicious bodily marks and always speaks highly of war, meets with his death, of what use is life or happiness to me? (5)

लज्जतीव हि मे वीर्यं भ्रश्यतीव कराद् धनुः ।
सायका व्यवसीदन्ति दृष्टिर्बाष्पवशं गता ॥ ६ ॥

“My valour is feeling shy, as it were; my bow seems to slip from my hand; arrows are dropping down and my vision has been overpowered by tears. (6)

अवसीदन्ति गात्राणि स्वप्नयाने नृणामिव ।
चिन्ता मे वर्धते तीव्रा मुमूर्षापि च जायते ॥ ७ ॥
भ्रातरं निहतं दृष्ट्वा रावणेन दुरात्मना ।
विष्टनन्तं तु दुःखार्तं मर्मण्यभिहतं भृशम् ॥ ८ ॥

“My limbs are failing even like those of men in sleep; my acute anxiety is growing and I even wish to die on seeing my younger brother, who has been struck down by the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, seriously wounded in his vital parts, stricken with agony and groaning.” (7-8)

राघवो भ्रातरं दृष्ट्वा प्रियं प्राणं बहिश्चरम् ।
दुःखेन महताविष्टो ध्यानशोकपरायणः ॥ ९ ॥

Seeing his beloved younger brother, who was his very life-breath moving outside, as it were, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who was seized with great agony, gave himself up to anxiety and grief. (9)

परं विषादमापन्नो विललापाकुलेन्द्रियः ।
भ्रातरं निहतं दृष्ट्वा लक्ष्मणं रणपांसुषु ॥ १० ॥

Beholding Lakṣmaṇa lying wounded in the dust of the battlefield, he fell a prey to extreme despondency and lamented as follows, distracted in mind as he was: (10)

विजयोऽपि हि मे शूर न प्रियायोपकल्पते ।
अचक्षुर्विषयश्चन्द्रः कां प्रीतिं जनयिष्यति ॥ ११ ॥

“Even victory, O hero, will not really conduce to my pleasure. What delight will the moon afford if it appears before a man who has lost his vision? (11)

किं मे युद्धेन किं प्राणैर्युद्धकार्यं न विद्यते ।
यत्रायं निहतः शेते रणमूर्धनि लक्ष्मणः ॥ १२ ॥

“What purpose of mine will be served by fighting or even by life? I have no use for the war as a result of which Lakṣmaṇa lies killed in the forefront of battle here? (12)

यथैव मां वनं यान्तमनुयाति महाद्युतिः ।
अहमप्यनुयास्यामि तथैवैनं यमक्षयम् ॥ १३ ॥

“Even as Lakṣmaṇa, who is endowed with extraordinary splendour, followed me when I retired to the forest, I, too, shall likewise follow him to the abode of Death. (13)

इष्टबन्धुजनो नित्यं मां स नित्यमनुव्रतः ।
इमामवस्थां गमितो राक्षसैः कूटयोधिभिः ॥ १४ ॥

“Alas! Lakṣmaṇa, who always loved his kinsfolk like me and was ever devoted to me, has been led to this pass by the ogres, who are given to treacherous warfare. (14)

देशे देशे कलत्राणि देशे देशे च बान्धवाः ।
तं तु देशं न पश्यामि यत्र भ्राता सहोदरः ॥ १५ ॥

“Wives may be found everywhere and kinsmen too can be had everywhere. I however, see no place where a uterine (real) brother could be had. (15)

किं नु राज्येन दुर्धर्षलक्ष्मणेन विना मम ।
कथं वक्ष्याम्यहं त्वम्बां सुमित्रां पुत्रवत्सलाम् ॥ १६ ॥

“What object of mine on earth will be achieved by sovereignty without Lakṣmaṇa, who was difficult to overpower? What shall I actually say to mother Sumitrā, who is so fond of her son? (16)

उपालम्भं न शक्यामि सोढुं दत्तं सुमित्रया ।
किं नु वक्ष्यामि कौसल्यां मातरं किं नु कैकयीम् ॥ १७ ॥

“I shall not be able to endure the reproach which will be levelled at me by

Sumitrā. Oh, what on earth shall I say to mother Kausalyā and what shall I say to Kaikeyī? (17)

भरतं किं नु वक्ष्यामि शत्रुघ्नं च महाबलम्।
सह तेन वनं यातो विना तेनागतः कथम्॥ १८ ॥

“Again, what shall I say to Bharata as well as to Śatrughna, who are endowed with extraordinary might, when they ask me, how I came back without Lakṣmaṇa even though I retired to the forest alongwith him? (18)

इहैव मरणं श्रेयो न तु बन्धुविगर्हणम्।
किं मया दुष्कृतं कर्म कृतमन्यत्र जन्मनि॥ १९ ॥
येन मे धार्मिको भ्राता निहतश्चाग्रतः स्थितः।
हा भ्रातर्मनुजश्रेष्ठ शूराणां प्रवर प्रभो॥ २० ॥
एकाकी किं नु मां त्यक्त्वा परलोकाय गच्छसि।
विलपन्तं च मां भ्रातः किमर्थं नावभाषसे॥ २१ ॥

“It is better to give up the ghost at this very place rather than hear the reproaches of one’s own people. What sinful deed was perpetrated by me in a former existence, due to which my pious younger brother lies killed before me? O my powerful brother, the foremost of men and the prince of heroes, how are you actually departing to the other world alone, deserting me? Nay, why don’t you actually speak to me, even though I am lamenting, O brother? Rise and look around? Why are you lying down? (19—21)

उत्तिष्ठ पश्य किं शेषे दीनं मां पश्य चक्षुषा।
शोकार्तस्य प्रमत्तस्य पर्वतेषु वनेषु च॥ २२ ॥
विषण्णस्य महाबाहो समाश्वासयिता मम।
राममेवं ब्रुवाणं तु शोकव्याकुलितेन्द्रियम्॥ २३ ॥
आश्वासयन्नुवाचेदं सुषेणः परमं वचः।
त्यजेमां नरशार्दूल बुद्धिं वैक्लव्यकारिणीम्॥ २४ ॥
शोकसंजननीं चिन्तां तुल्यां बाणैश्चमूमुखे।
नैव पञ्चत्वमापन्नो लक्ष्मणो लक्ष्मिवर्धनः॥ २५ ॥
नह्यस्य विकृतं वक्त्रं न च श्यामत्वमागतम्।
सुप्रभं च प्रसन्नं च मुखमस्य निरीक्ष्यताम्॥ २६ ॥

“Look at me with your own eyes, miserable as I am. You have been my comforter, whenever stricken with grief, I roamed listlessly amidst the mountains and woods or felt despondent, O mighty-armed one!” Comforting Śrī Rāma, who was wailing as aforesaid, his mind distracted with grief. Suṣeṇa for his part addressed the following excellent words: “Give up this idea which causes affliction to you, this anxiety, which gives rise to grief and is as piercing as shafts in the forefront of battle, O tiger among men! Surely Lakṣmaṇa, the enhancer of prosperity, has not met his death (lit., returned to the five elements); for his features have not changed, nor have they grown dark. His countenance may yet be seen very bright and cheerful. (22—26)

पद्मपत्रतलौ हस्तौ सुप्रसन्ने च लोचने।
नेदृशं दृश्यते रूपं गतासूनां विशां पते॥ २७ ॥

“The palms of his hands still resemble the petals of a lotus and his eyes are very bright. The appearance of those whose life has departed is not observed to be such, O ruler of the people! (27)

विषादं मा कृथा वीर सप्राणोऽयमरिंदम।
आख्याति तु प्रसुप्तस्य स्रस्तगात्रस्य भूतले॥ २८ ॥
सोच्छ्वासं हृदयं वीर कम्पमानं मुहुर्मुहुः।
एवमुक्त्वा महाप्राज्ञः सुषेणो राघवं वचः॥ २९ ॥
समीपस्थमुवाचेदं हनूमन्तं महाकपिम्।
सौम्य शीघ्रमितो गत्वा पर्वतं हि महोदयम्॥ ३० ॥
पूर्वं तु कथितो योऽसौ वीर जाम्बवता तव।
दक्षिणे शिखरे जातां महौषधिमिहानय॥ ३१ ॥

“Do not give way to despondency, O hero! He is still alive, O tamer of your enemies! The repeatedly throbbing heart of Lakṣmaṇa, who is lying on the earth’s surface fast asleep with his limbs relaxed, proclaims him to be living, O gallant prince!” Having addressed the foregoing words to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the highly sagacious Suṣeṇa spoke as follows to the great monkey, Hanumān, who stood near:

“Bounding with all speed from this place, O gentle one, to the Mahodaya mountain, the one which has already been made fully known to you by Jāmbavān, O gallant one, bring here the valuable herb, which has sprung up on its southern peak. (28—31)

विशल्यकरणीं नाम्ना सावर्ण्यकरणीं तथा ।
संजीवकरणीं वीर संधानीं च महौषधीम् ॥ ३२ ॥
संजीवनार्थं वीरस्य लक्ष्मणस्य त्वमानय ।
इत्येवमुक्तो हनुमान् गत्वा चौषधिपर्वतम् ।
चिन्तामध्यगमच्छ्रीमानजानंस्ता महौषधीः ॥ ३३ ॥

“Bring you for restoring the heroic Lakṣmaṇa to consciousness the precious herb Viśalyakaraṇī¹ by name, Sāvarnyakaraṇī,² Saṁjivakaraṇī,³ and the precious herb, Saṁdhānī,⁴ gallant one!” Springing to the said mountain, rich in herbs, when spoken to as aforesaid, the glorious Hanumān became thoughtful, unable as he was to recognize those valuable herbs. (32-33)

तस्य बुद्धिः समुत्पन्ना मारुतेरमितौजसः ।
इदमेव गमिष्यामि गृहीत्वा शिखरं गिरेः ॥ ३४ ॥

The thought came to that son of the wind-god, whose strength was immeasurable, ‘I shall go back taking this mountain peak itself. (34)

अस्मिंस्तु शिखरे जातामोषधीं तां सुखावहाम् ।
प्रतर्केणावगच्छामि सुषेणो ह्येवमब्रवीत् ॥ ३५ ॥

‘By recourse to reasoning I conclude that curative herb to be growing on this peak alone; for Suṣeṇa has said so. (35)

अगृह्य यदि गच्छामि विशल्यकरणीमहम् ।
कालात्ययेन दोषः स्याद् वैक्लव्यं च महद् भवेत् ॥ ३६ ॥

‘If I return without taking the herb

Viśalyakaraṇī, harm may come to Lakṣmaṇa, through passage of time and a great perplexity may arise.’ (36)

इति संचिन्त्य हनुमान् गत्वा क्षिप्रं महाबलः ।
आसाद्य पर्वतश्रेष्ठं त्रिः प्रकम्य गिरेः शिरः ॥ ३७ ॥
फुल्लनानातरुगणं समुत्पाद्य महाबलः ।
गृहीत्वा हरिशार्दूलो हस्ताभ्यां समतोलयत् ॥ ३८ ॥

Reflecting thus, and moving rapidly and reaching the Mahodaya, the foremost of the mountains, nay, violently shaking thrice the mountain-peak, which was clothed with multitudinous trees in flower, and breaking it up and holding it in his two hands, Hanumān, a tiger among monkeys, who was endowed with extraordinary might, balanced it. (37-38)

स नीलमिव जीमूतं तोयपूर्णं नभस्तलात् ।
उत्पपात गृहीत्वा तु हनूमान् शिखरं गिरेः ॥ ३९ ॥

Seizing hold of the mountain-peak, which resembled a dark rainy cloud, the said Hanumān for his part bounded from the earth’s surface in the airspace. (39)

समागम्य महावेगः संन्यस्य शिखरं गिरेः ।
विश्रम्य किञ्चिद्धनुमान् सुषेणमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ४० ॥

Approaching Suṣeṇa, nay, setting down the mountain-peak and resting awhile, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary swiftness, spoke as follows: (40)

औषधीर्नावगच्छामि ता अहं हरिपुङ्गव ।
तदिदं शिखरं कृत्स्नं गिरेस्तस्याहृतं मया ॥ ४१ ॥

“Since I did not identify those herbs, O bull among monkeys, here is a whole summit of that mountain brought by me in consequence.” (41)

1. A herb credited with the virtue of expelling an arrow etc., from the body, healing the wound and relieving pain.

2. Another herb supposed to possess the property of counteracting the discolouration caused by a wound, burn etc., and restoring the original colour of the skin.

3. Another herb believed to possess the virtue of bringing back an unconscious person to consciousness.

4. A herb credited with the property of joining a fractured bone.

एवं कथयमानं तु प्रशस्य पवनात्मजम्।
सुषेणो वानरश्रेष्ठो जग्राहोत्पाट्य चौषधीः ॥ ४२ ॥

Applauding Hanumān (sprung from the loins of the wind-god), who was speaking as aforesaid, and pulling out the herbs, Suṣeṇa, the foremost of monkeys, for his part took hold of them. (42)

विस्मितास्तु बभूवुस्ते सर्वे वानरपुङ्गवाः।
दृष्ट्वा तु हनुमत्कर्म सुरैरपि सुदुष्करम् ॥ ४३ ॥

All those bulls among monkeys, who were present there, for their part were amazed to witness the feat of Hanumān, which was really most difficult to perform even for gods. (43)

ततः संक्षोदयित्वा तामोषधीं वानरोत्तमः।
लक्ष्मणस्य ददौ नस्तः सुषेणः सुमहाद्युतिः ॥ ४४ ॥

Crushing that herb, Suṣeṇa, the foremost of monkeys, who was endowed with exceptional splendour, thereupon administered it to Lakṣmaṇa through his nostrils. (44)

सशल्यः स समाघ्राय लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा।
विशल्यो विरुजः शीघ्रमुदतिष्ठन्महीतलात् ॥ ४५ ॥

Duly inhaling it, Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of hostile champions, who still retained the javelin in his body, instantly rose from the earth's surface, rid as he was of the javelin as also of his pain. (45)

तमुत्थितं तु हरयो भूतलात् प्रेक्ष्य लक्ष्मणम्।
साधुसाध्विति सुप्रीता लक्ष्मणं प्रत्यपूजयन् ॥ ४६ ॥

Overjoyed to perceive the aforesaid Lakṣmaṇa, who was endowed with auspicious marks, risen from the earth's surface, the monkeys for their part applauded him, saying "Excellent! Excellent!!" (46)

एहोहीत्यब्रवीद् रामो लक्ष्मणं परवीरहा।
सस्वजे गाढमालिङ्ग्य बाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणः ॥ ४७ ॥

Śrī Rāma, the destroyer of hostile heroes, said to Lakṣmaṇa, "Come, come." Nay, tightly folding him in his arms, he pressed him to his bosom, his eyes bedimmed with tears. (47)

अब्रवीच्च परिष्वज्य सौमित्रिं राघवस्तदा।
दिष्ट्या त्वां वीर पश्यामि मरणात् पुनरागतम् ॥ ४८ ॥

Nay, after embracing Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā), Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu then said to him, "Luckily enough, O gallant one, I see you returned from the jaws of Death. (48)

नहि मे जीवितेनार्थः सीतया च जयेन वा।
को हि मे जीवितेनार्थस्त्वयि पञ्चत्वमागते ॥ ४९ ॥

"Indeed, no purpose of mine would have been served by my own life, nor by Sītā, nor by victory. What end of mine would be achieved by my survival had you returned to the five elements?" (49)

इत्येवं ब्रुवतस्तस्य राघवस्य महात्मनः।
खिन्नः शिथिलया वाचा लक्ष्मणो वाक्यमब्रवीत् ॥ ५० ॥

Pained by the irresolute talk of the high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who was speaking in this strain, Lakṣmaṇa submitted as follows: (50)

तां प्रतिज्ञां प्रतिज्ञाय पुरा सत्यपराक्रम।
लघुः कश्चिदिवासत्त्वो नैवं त्वं वक्तुमर्हसि ॥ ५१ ॥

"Having solemnly taken that pledge of killing Rāvaṇa and crowning Vibhīṣaṇa on the throne of Laṅkā before, O prince of unfailing prowess, you ought not to speak as you have done like a weak and spiritless man. (51)

नहि प्रतिज्ञां कुर्वन्ति वितथां सत्यवादिनः।
लक्षणं हि महत्त्वस्य प्रतिज्ञापरिपालनम् ॥ ५२ ॥

"Those who always speak the truth never render their vow futile; for the fulfilment of one's vow is the mark of greatness. (52)

नैराश्यमुपगन्तुं च नालं ते मत्कृतेऽनघ।
वधेन रावणस्याद्य प्रतिज्ञामनुपालय ॥ ५३ ॥

"Moreover, it is not becoming of you to give way to despair on my account, O sinless one! Pray, redeem your pledge by killing Rāvaṇa today. (53)

न जीवन् यास्यते शत्रुस्तव बाणपथं गतः ।

नर्दतस्तीक्ष्णदंष्ट्रस्य सिंहस्येव महागजः ॥ ५४ ॥

“Fallen a victim to your shafts, your adversary cannot escape alive any more than an elephant fallen in the clutches of a roaring lion, possessing sharp teeth. (54)

अहं तु वधमिच्छामि शीघ्रमस्य दुरात्मनः ।

यावदस्तं न यात्येष कृतकर्मा दिवाकरः ॥ ५५ ॥

“I, for my part, wish to see this evil-minded fellow die quickly before the yonder sun sinks below the horizon, its task

(of going round the sky) accomplished. (55)

यदि वधमिच्छसि रावणस्य संख्ये

यदि च कृतां हि तवेच्छसि प्रतिज्ञाम् ।

यदि तव राजसुताभिलाष आर्य

कुरु च वचो मम शीघ्रमद्य वीर ॥ ५६ ॥

“If you seek to kill Rāvaṇa on the field of battle and if you wish to fulfil the vow actually taken by you and there is a longing in you for the daughter of Janaka, O worthy hero, pray, do what I tell you without delay.” (56)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०१ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and one in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्व्यधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CII

Seated in a chariot sent by Indra (the ruler of gods),

Śrī Rāma renews his combat with Rāvaṇa

लक्ष्मणेन तु तद् वाक्यमुक्तं श्रुत्वा स राघवः ।

संदधे परवीरघ्नो धनुरादाय वीर्यवान् ॥ १ ॥

रावणाय शरान् घोरान् विससर्ज चमूमुखे ।

अथान्यं रथमास्थाय रावणो राक्षसाधिपः ॥ २ ॥

अभ्यधावत काकुत्स्थं स्वर्भानुरिव भास्करम् ।

दशग्रीवो रथस्थस्तु रामं वज्रोपमैः शरैः ।

आजघान महाशैलं धाराभिरिव तोयदः ॥ ३ ॥

Seizing hold of his bow on hearing the aforesaid counsel tendered by Lakṣmaṇa, that valiant scion of Raghu, Śrī Rāma, the destroyer of hostile champions, for his part put formidable shafts to it and discharged them on Rāvaṇa at the head of his army. Taking his seat in another chariot, Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, forthwith rushed against Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kakutstha, as the planet Rāhu (the demon presiding over the planet of that name) would rush towards the sun on the eve of a solar eclipse. Seated in his chariot, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster for his part struck Śrī Rāma with shafts hard as adamant, even as a rainy cloud would lash a huge mountain with torrents. (1—3)

दीप्तपावकसंकाशैः शरैः काञ्चनभूषणैः ।

अभ्यवर्षद् रणे रामो दशग्रीवं समाहितः ॥ ४ ॥

Śrī Rāma steadily covered the ten-headed monster on the battlefield with arrows decked with gold and shining like a blazing fire. (4)

भूमौ स्थितस्य रामस्य रथस्थस्य स रक्षसः ।

न समं युद्धमित्याहुर्देवगन्धर्वकिंनराः ॥ ५ ॥

“The combat between Śrī Rāma, who is standing on the ground, and the ogre, who is seated in a chariot, is not well-matched,” so declared the gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Kinnaras (a class of demigods credited with a human figure and the head of a horse). (5)

ततो देववरः श्रीमान् श्रुत्वा तेषां वचोऽमृतम् ।
आहूय मातलिं शक्रो वचनं चेदमब्रवीत् ॥ ६ ॥

Summoning his charioteer, Mātali, on hearing their talk, sweet as nectar, the glorious Indra, the foremost of gods, thereupon spoke as follows: (6)

रथेन मम भूमिष्ठं शीघ्रं याहि रघूत्तमम् ।
आहूय भूतलं यात कुरु देवहितं महत् ॥ ७ ॥

“Proceed with all speed in my chariot to Śrī Rāma, the foremost of the Raghus, who stands on the ground; and, on reaching the earth, invite him to mount the chariot, and thus render a signal service to the gods thereby.” (7)

इत्युक्तो देवराजेन मातलिर्देवसारथिः ।
प्रणम्य शिरसा देवं ततो वचनमब्रवीत् ॥ ८ ॥

Saluting the god with his head bent low, when commanded as aforesaid by Indra, the ruler of gods, Mātali, the charioteer of gods, thereupon submitted as follows: (8)

शीघ्रं यास्यामि देवेन्द्र सारथ्यं च करोम्यहम् ।
ततो हयैश्च संयोज्य हरितैः स्यन्दनोत्तमम् ॥ ९ ॥

“I shall proceed immediately, O lord of gods, and perform the duty of a charioteer to Śrī Rāma.” Nay, provided with green horses, the excellent chariot of Indra, the ruler of gods, he forthwith brought it to the presence of Indra. (9)

ततः काञ्चनचित्राङ्गः किङ्किणीशतभूषितः ।
तरुणादित्यसंकाशो वैदूर्यमयकूबरः ।
सदृशैः काञ्चनापीडैर्युक्तः श्वेतप्रकीर्णकैः ॥ १० ॥
हरिभिः सूर्यसंकाशैर्हमजालविभूषितैः ।
रुक्मवेणुध्वजः श्रीमान् देवराजरथो वरः ॥ ११ ॥

Then came the glorious and excellent chariot of Indra (the ruler of gods), bearing a standard raised on a golden staff, the body of which was wrought with gold and looked splendid, nay, which was fitted up with hundreds of tiny bells and with its pole of cat’s-eye gems shone like the morning sun, and which was yoked to excellent green horses, decked with gold ornaments and white whisks and covered with nets of gold and shining like the sun. (10-11)

देवराजेन संदिष्टो रथमारुह्य मातलिः ।
अभ्यवर्तत काकुत्स्थमवतीर्य त्रिविष्टपात् ॥ १२ ॥

Mounting the chariot as enjoined by Indra (the ruler of gods), and descending from paradise, Mātali stood before Śrī Rāma, a scion of Kākutstha. (12)

अब्रवीच्च तदा रामं सप्रतोदो रथे स्थितः ।
प्राञ्जलिर्मातलिर्वाक्यं सहस्राक्षस्य सारथिः ॥ १३ ॥

Nay, remaining seated in his chariot, armed with a lash, Mātali, the charioteer of Indra (the thousand-eyed god), then made with joined palms the following submission to Śrī Rāma: (13)

सहस्राक्षेण काकुत्स्थ रथोऽयं विजयाय ते ।
दत्तस्तव महासत्त्व श्रीमन् शत्रुनिर्बहण ॥ १४ ॥

“This chariot has been sent to you by Indra (the thousand-eyed god) to bring you victory, O glorious scion of Kākutstha, the exterminator of your enemies, endowed as you are with extraordinary courage. (14)

इदमैन्द्रं महच्चापं कवचं चाग्निसंनिभम् ।
शराश्चादित्यसंकाशाः शक्तिश्च विमला शिवा ॥ १५ ॥

“Here is the mighty bow belonging to Indra, as well as his armour shining as fire, nay, his arrows bright as the sun and his stainless auspicious javelin. (15)

आरुह्येमं रथं वीर राक्षसं जहि रावणम् ।
मया सारथिना देव महेन्द्र इव दानवान् ॥ १६ ॥

“Mounting this chariot, O gallant prince, with me as your charioteer, make short work of the ogre Rāvaṇa even as the mighty Indra killed the giants, my lord!" (16)

इत्युक्तः सम्परिक्रम्य रथं तमभिवाद्य च।

आरुरोह तदा रामो लोकाँल्लक्ष्म्या विराजयन् ॥ १७ ॥

Duly walking round that chariot clockwise (as a mark of respect) and saluting it, when requested, as aforesaid by Mātali, Śrī Rāma then ascended the chariot, illumining all the three worlds by his splendour. (17)

तद् बभौ चाद्भुतं युद्धं द्वैरथं रोमहर्षणम्।

रामस्य च महाबाहो रावणस्य च रक्षसः ॥ १८ ॥

Then ensued a wonderful and thrilling duel, between the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma and the ogre, Rāvaṇa. (18)

स गान्धर्वेण गान्धर्वं दैवं दैवेन राघवः।

अस्त्रं राक्षसराजस्य जघान परमास्त्रवित् ॥ १९ ॥

That scion of Raghu, who was supremely skilled in the use of excellent missiles, destroyed the missile presided over by Gandharvas as well as that presided over by gods, discharged by Rāvaṇa, by means of missiles of the same kind. (19)

अस्त्रं तु परमं घोरं राक्षसं राक्षसाधिपः।

ससर्ज परमक्रुद्धः पुनरेव निशाचरः ॥ २० ॥

Greatly enraged, Rāvaṇa (a ranger of the night), the suzerain lord of ogres, for his part once more discharged an exceedingly formidable missile presided over by ogres. (20)

ते रावणधनुर्मुक्ताः शराः काञ्चनभूषणाः।

अभ्यवर्तन्त काकुत्स्थं सर्पा भूत्वा महाविषाः ॥ २१ ॥

Turning into highly venomous serpents, the aforesaid arrows, discharged from the bow of Rāvaṇa, which were decked with gold, rushed towards Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha). (21)

ते दीप्तवदना दीप्तं वमन्तो ज्वलनं मुखैः।

राममेवाभ्यवर्तन्त व्यादितास्या भयानकाः ॥ २२ ॥

With flaming mouths wide open, and vomiting a blazing fire from them, those dreadful arrows darted towards Śrī Rāma alone. (22)

तैर्वासुक्तिसमस्पर्शैर्दीप्तभोगैर्महाविषैः।

दिशश्च संतताः सर्वा विदिशश्च समावृताः ॥ २३ ॥

By those highly venomous reptiles with flaming coils, whose impact was hard as that of Vāsuki (the king of serpents), all the quarters stood covered and the corners between the quarters too stood enveloped. (23)

तान् दृष्ट्वा पन्नगान् रामः समापतत आह्वे।

अस्त्रं गारुत्मतं घोरं प्रादुश्चक्रे भयावहम् ॥ २४ ॥

Seeing those reptiles flying at him on the battlefield, Śrī Rāma discharged the formidable and fearful missile presided over by Garuḍa, the king of birds (an avowed enemy of serpents). (24)

ते राघवधनुर्मुक्ता रुक्मपुङ्खाः शिखिप्रभाः।

सुपर्णाः काञ्चना भूत्वा विचेरुः सर्पशत्रवः ॥ २५ ॥

Turning into golden eagles, the natural enemies of snakes, those golden-feathered arrows discharged from the bow of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, which shone like flames, flew about. (25)

ते तान् सर्वान् शराञ्जघ्नुः सर्परूपान् महाजवान्।

सुपर्णरूपा रामस्य विशिखाः कामरूपिणः ॥ २६ ॥

Appearing in the form of eagles, the aforesaid arrows of Śrī Rāma, which were able to change their form at will, destroyed all those shafts which flew with great speed in the form of snakes. (26)

अस्त्रे प्रतिहते क्रुद्धो रावणो राक्षसाधिपः।

अभ्यवर्षत् तदा रामं घोराभिः शरवृष्टिभिः ॥ २७ ॥

Provoked to anger on his missile having been frustrated by Śrī Rāma, the suzerain lord of ogres, then covered Śrī Rāma with formidable showers of shafts. (27)

ततः शरसहस्रेण राममक्लिष्टकारिणम्।

अर्दयित्वा शरीरघेण मातलिं प्रत्यविध्यत ॥ २८ ॥

Having overwhelmed Śrī Rāma of unwearied action with a thousand arrows, he then pierced Mātali with a stream of shafts.

(28)

चिच्छेद केतुमुद्दिश्य शरेणैकेन रावणः ।
पातयित्वा रथोपस्थे रथात् केतुं च काञ्चनम् ॥ २९ ॥
ऐन्द्रानपि जघानाश्वान् शरजालेन रावणः ।
विषेदुर्देवगन्धर्वचारणा दानवैः सह ॥ ३० ॥
राममार्तं तदा दृष्ट्वा सिद्धाश्च परमर्षयः ।
व्यथिता वानरेन्द्राश्च बभूवुः सविभीषणाः ॥ ३१ ॥

He tore the standard of Indra's chariot with a single arrow aimed at it, and having felled the golden ensign from the top of the chariot down to the seat of the chariot, Rāvaṇa struck Indra's horses as well with a series of arrows. Seeing Śrī Rāma afflicted, the gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Cāraṇas (celestial bards) alongwith the devils as also the Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers by virtue of their very birth) and the foremost Ṛṣis became despondent; while monkey chiefs alongwith Vibhīṣaṇa felt troubled.

(29—31)

रामचन्द्रमसं दृष्ट्वा ग्रस्तं रावणराहुणा ।
प्राजापत्यं च नक्षत्रं रोहिणीं शशिनः प्रियाम् ॥ ३२ ॥
समाक्रम्य बुधस्तस्थौ प्रजानामहितावहः ।
सधूमपरिवृत्तोर्मिः प्रज्वलन्निव सागरः ॥ ३३ ॥
उत्पपात तदा क्रुद्धः स्पृशन्निव दिवाकरम् ।
शस्त्रवर्णः सुपुरुषो मन्दरश्मिर्दिवाकरः ॥ ३४ ॥
अदृश्यत कबन्धाङ्कः संसक्तो धूमकेतुना ।
कोसलानां च नक्षत्रं व्यक्तमिन्द्राग्निदैवतम् ॥ ३५ ॥
आहत्याङ्गारकस्तस्थौ विशाखमपि चाम्बरे ।
दशास्यो विंशतिभुजः प्रगृहीतशरासनः ॥ ३६ ॥
अदृश्यतः दशग्रीवो मैनाक इव पर्वतः ।
निरस्यमानो रामस्तु दशग्रीवेण रक्षसा ॥ ३७ ॥
नाशक्नोदभिसंधातुं सायकान् रणमूर्धनि ।
स कृत्वा भ्रुकुटिं क्रुद्धः किञ्चित् संरक्तलोचनः ॥ ३८ ॥
जगाम सुमहाक्रोधं निर्दहन्निव राक्षसान् ।
तस्य क्रुद्धस्य वदनं दृष्ट्वा रामस्य धीमतः ।
सर्वभूतानि वित्रेसुः प्राकम्पत च मेदिनी ॥ ३९ ॥

Seeing the moon in the shape of Śrī Rāma eclipsed by the planet Rāhu in the shape of Rāvaṇa, the planet Mercury stood assailing the constellation Rohiṇī—presided over by the god Prajāpati (the lord of creation), the beloved of the moon, spelling disaster to all created beings. Burning as it were in fury, the ocean rose high at that time as though it was going to touch the sun, its mist-wreathed waves turning round. Looking ashy in colour and assuming a stern aspect, its rays grown faint, the sun appeared with a headless trunk in its lap and united with a comet. The planet Mars too evidently stood assailing in the heavens the constellation Viśākhā, presided over by the gods, Indra and Agni (the god of fire), which is propitious to the kings of Kosala. A bow held tightly in his hands, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, with his ten faces and twenty arms looked like the Maināka mountain. Being overwhelmed by the ten-headed ogre, Śrī Rāma for his part could not even set his arrows to his bow in the forefront of the battle. Knitting his brows, his eyes turned slightly crimson, he gave way to a fierce rage as though he would consume the ogres. Casting their eyes at the countenance of the sagacious Śrī Rāma, who was provoked to anger, all created beings were seized with terror and the earth began to quake.

(32—39)

सिंहशार्दूलवाञ्छैलः संचचाल चलद् द्रुमः ।
बभूव चापि क्षुभितः समुद्रः सरितां पतिः ॥ ४० ॥

Full of lions and tigers, Trikūṭa mountain shook, its trees swaying to and fro. The lord of rivers, the ocean too was agitated.

(40)

खराश्च खरनिर्घोषा गगने परुषा घनाः ।
औत्पातिकाश्च नर्दन्तः समन्तात् परिचक्रमुः ॥ ४१ ॥

Nay, looking like donkeys and emitting a harsh sound, nay, assuming a stern aspect, portentous clouds circled in the sky on all sides, thundering all the time. (41)

रामं दृष्ट्वा सुसंकुद्धमुत्पातांश्चैव दारुणान्।
वित्रेसुः सर्वभूतानि रावणस्याभवद् भयम् ॥ ४२ ॥

Finding Śrī Rāma extremely enraged and also beholding fearful portents, all created beings felt dismayed and fear seized Rāvaṇa, too. (42)

विमानस्थास्तदा देवा गन्धर्वाश्च महोरगाः।
ऋषिदानवदैत्याश्च गरुत्मन्तश्च खेचराः ॥ ४३ ॥
ददृशुस्ते तदा युद्धं लोकसंवर्तसंस्थितम्।
नानाप्रहरणैर्भीमैः शूरयोः सम्प्रयुध्यतोः ॥ ४४ ॥

Seated in their aerial cars, gods and Gandharvas (celestial musicians), great Nāgas (semi-divine beings having the face of a man and the tail of a serpent and said to inhabit Pātāla, the nethermost subterranean region), as well as Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), devils and giants and eagles remaining in the air, they all witnessed at that time the combat of the two heroes, fighting steadily with various dreadful weapons—a combat which presented the appearance of the final dissolution of the world. (43-44)

ऊचुः सुरासुराः सर्वे तदा विग्रहमागताः।
प्रेक्षमाणा महायुद्धं वाक्यं भक्त्या प्रहृष्टवत् ॥ ४५ ॥

Thrilled with delight on observing the momentous struggle, all the gods and demons who had come to witness the contest at that time spoke with devotion as follows: (45)

दशग्रीवं जयेत्याहुरसुराः समवस्थिताः।
देवा राममथोचुस्ते त्वं जयेति पुनः पुनः ॥ ४६ ॥

Firmly established in their respective position, the demons cried out to the ten-headed monster: “Be victorious!!” The aforesaid gods, on the other side, called to Śrī Rāma, saying again and again, “Be you triumphant!!” (46)

एतस्मिन्नन्तरे क्रोधाद् राघवस्य च रावणः।
प्रहर्तुकामो दुष्टात्मा स्पृशन् प्रहरणं महत् ॥ ४७ ॥
वज्रसारं महानादं सर्वशत्रुनिर्बहणम्।
शैलशृङ्गनिभैः कूटैश्चित्तदृष्टिभयावहम् ॥ ४८ ॥
सधूममिव तीक्ष्णाग्रं युगान्ताग्निचयोपमम्।
अतिरौद्रमनासाद्यं कालेनापि दुरासदम् ॥ ४९ ॥
त्रासनं सर्वभूतानां दारणं भेदनं तथा।
प्रदीप्त इव रोषेण शूलं जग्राह रावणः ॥ ५० ॥

Nay, in the meantime, stroking an immense weapon, viz., an exceedingly fearful and unassailable dart—which was powerful as the thunderbolt, which made a loud noise when hurled at its target, and was capable of exterminating all enemies and dreadful to conceive, much more to behold, furnished as it was with spikes resembling mountain peaks, nay, which with its sharp point resembled a smoke-crested mass of fire blazing at the end of the world-cycle, again which was difficult to approach even for Death, and which was the terror of all living beings, capable as it was of tearing and splitting them—the evil-minded Rāvaṇa, so-called because he made others cry, who was keen to strike in rage Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), and was blazing as it were with anger, seized hold of that dart. (47—50)

तच्छूलं परमक्रुद्धो जग्राह युधि वीर्यवान्।
अनीकैः समरे शूरै राक्षसैः परिवारितः ॥ ५१ ॥

Surrounded by ogres—heroic in combat and formed into battalions—and extremely enraged, the valiant Rāvaṇa took hold of that dart on the field of battle. (51)

समुद्यम्य महाकायो ननाद युधि भैरवम्।
संरक्तनयनो रोषात् स्वसैन्यमभिहर्षयन् ॥ ५२ ॥

Duly raising the dart, the colossus terribly roared on the field of battle, thereby bringing excessive joy all round to his army, his eyes blood-red with anger. (52)

पृथिवीं चान्तरिक्षं च दिशश्च प्रदिशस्तथा ।
प्राकम्पयत् तदा शब्दो राक्षसेन्द्रस्य दारुणः ॥ ५३ ॥

The frightful roar of Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, caused the earth as well as the heavens as also the four quarters and the intermediate points of the compass to shake at that time. (53)

अतिकायस्य नादेन तेन तस्य दुरात्मनः ।
सर्वभूतानि वित्रेसुः सागरश्च प्रचुक्षुभे ॥ ५४ ॥

All living beings were alarmed at the aforesaid roar of that evil-minded colossus, and the ocean was set in commotion. (54)

स गृहीत्वा महावीर्यः शूलं तद् रावणो महत् ।
विनद्य सुमहानादं रामं परुषमब्रवीत् ॥ ५५ ॥

Seizing hold of that enormous dart, and emitting a very loud roar, the aforesaid Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary valour, addressed the following harsh words to Śrī Rāma: (55)

शूलोऽयं वज्रसारस्ते राम रोषान्मयोद्यतः ।
तव भ्रातृसहायस्य सद्यः प्राणान् हरिष्यति ॥ ५६ ॥

“Raised in fury by me, O Rāma, this dart, which is as powerful as the thunderbolt, will instantly take away your life as well as that of your younger brother, who stands by you as your helpmate. (56)

रक्षसामद्य शूराणां निहतानां चमूमुखे ।
त्वां निहत्य रणश्लाघिन् करोमि तरसा समम् ॥ ५७ ॥

“Making short work of you, I, who always commend warfare, shall speedily level you today with the heroic ogres who have been killed by you at the head of the army. (57)

तिष्ठेदानीं निहन्मि त्वामेष शूलेन राघव ।
एवमुक्त्वा स चिक्षेप तच्छूलं राक्षसाधिपः ॥ ५८ ॥

“Wait a bit, I shall presently strike you down with this dart, O scion of Raghu!” Saying so, that suzerain lord of ogres hurled the aforesaid dart at Śrī Rāma. (58)

तद् रावणकरान्मुक्तं विद्युन्मालासमावृतम् ।
अष्टघण्टं महानादं वियद्वतमशोभत ॥ ५९ ॥

Discharged from the hand of Rāvaṇa, the dart flashed in the air, wreathed as it was in a circle of lightning, and making a loud noise, provided as it was with eight bells. (59)

तच्छूलं राघवो दृष्ट्वा ज्वलन्तं घोरदर्शनम् ।
ससर्ज विशिखान् रामश्चापमायम्य वीर्यवान् ॥ ६० ॥

Seeing that flaming dart, terrible to behold, and stretching his bow, the gallant Śrī Rāma shot a number of arrows. (60)

आपतन्तं शरौघेण वारयामास राघवः ।
उत्पतन्तं युगान्ताग्निं जलौघैरिव वासवः ॥ ६१ ॥

Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, tried to intercept the dart even as it came flying, with a stream of darts just as Indra, the ruler of gods, would endeavour to stay the fire emerging at the end of the world-cycle with showers. (61)

निर्ददाह स तान् बाणान् रामकार्मुकनिःसृतान् ।
रावणस्य महान् शूलः पतङ्गानिव पावकः ॥ ६२ ॥

That huge spear of Rāvaṇa consumed those arrows shot from the bow of Śrī Rāma even as a flame would consume moths. (62)

तान् दृष्ट्वा भस्मसाद्भूतान् शूलसंस्पर्शचूर्णितान् ।
सायकानन्तरिक्षस्थान् राघवः क्रोधमाहरत् ॥ ६३ ॥

Seeing those arrows pulverized by the impact of the dart and reduced to ashes even in air, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, gave vent to his fury. (63)

स तां मातलिना नीतां शक्तिं वासवसम्पताम् ।
जग्राह परमकुद्धो राघवो रघुनन्दनः ॥ ६४ ॥

Feeling extremely enraged, that scion of Raghu, the delight of the Raghus, seized hold of the celebrated javelin, esteemed by Indra (the ruler of gods) and brought by his charioteer, Mātali. (64)

सा तोलिता बलवता शक्तिर्घण्टाकृतस्वना ।
नभः प्रज्वालयामास युगान्तोल्केव सप्रभा ॥ ६५ ॥

Lifted up by the mighty prince, that brilliant javelin, which was rendered sonorous by its bells, lit up the sky like a meteor appearing at the end of the world-cycle. (65)

सा क्षिप्ता राक्षसेन्द्रस्य तस्मिञ्छूले पपात ह।

भिनः शक्त्या महान् शूलो निपपात गतद्युतिः ॥ ६६ ॥

The javelin hurled by Śrī Rāma fell on that dart of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres): so the tradition goes. Split up by the javelin and bereft of its splendour, the enormous dart fell down. (66)

निर्विभेद ततो बाणैर्हयानस्य महाजवान्।

रामस्तीक्ष्णैर्महावेगैर्वज्रकल्पैरजिह्वगैः ॥ ६७ ॥

Śrī Rāma then pierced the exceedingly fleet horses of Rāvaṇa with his sharp arrows resembling the thunderbolt, which flew with great speed and went straight to their target. (67)

निर्विभेदोरसि तदा रावणं निशितैः शरैः।

राघवः परमायत्तो ललाटे पत्रिभिस्त्रिभिः ॥ ६८ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्व्यधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०२ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and two in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्र्यधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CIII

Śrī Rāma upbraids Rāvaṇa, who, when wounded by the former is removed from the battlefield by his charioteer

स तु तेन तदा क्रोधात् काकुत्स्थेनार्दितो भृशम्।

रावणः समरश्लाघी महाक्रोधमुपागमत् ॥ १ ॥

Hard pressed by the celebrated scion of Kakutstha in fury at that time, the said Rāvaṇa, for his part, who was given to bragging on the field of battle, flew into great rage. (1)

स दीप्तनयनोऽमर्षाच्चापमुद्यम्य वीर्यवान्।

अभ्यर्दयत् सुसंकुब्धो राघवं परमाहवे ॥ २ ॥

Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) who was extremely energetic, then pierced Rāvaṇa in the breast with whetted shafts and also in the forehead with three arrows. (68)

स शरैर्भिनःसर्वाङ्गो गात्रप्रस्नुतशोणितः।

राक्षसेन्द्रः समूहस्थः फुल्लाशोक इवाबभौ ॥ ६९ ॥

Pierced with arrows all over his body, blood flowing from his limbs, Rāvaṇa, the ruler of ogres, standing in the midst of a gathering of ogre-warriors, shone like an Aśoka tree in blossom. (69)

स रामबाणैरतिविद्धगात्रो

निशाचरेन्द्रः क्षतजार्द्रगात्रः।

जगाम खेदं च समाजमध्ये

क्रोधं च चक्रे सुभृशं तदानीम् ॥ ७० ॥

His limbs severely pierced with the arrows of Śrī Rāma and his body bathed in blood, the aforesaid ruler of ogres (lit., rangers of the night) felt exhausted in the midst of his warriors and at the same time gave vent to a violent rage at that moment. (70)

Raising his bow, his eyes flaming with anger, extremely enraged as he was, the gallant Rāvaṇa pressed Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) hard in that major conflict. (2)

बाणधारासहस्रैस्तैः स तोयद इवाम्बरात्।

राघवं रावणो बाणैस्तटाकमिव पूरयन् ॥ ३ ॥

He for his part continued to cover

Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) with arrows in the same way as a rainy cloud would fill a pond with thousands of arrow-like torrents falling from the heavens. (3)

पूरितः शरजालेन धनुर्मुक्तेन संयुगे।
महागिरिरिवाकम्प्यः काकुत्स्थो न प्रकम्पते ॥ ४ ॥

Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), who was unshakable like a big mountain, did not flinch even though covered with a stream of arrows discharged from the bow of Rāvaṇa on the field of battle. (4)

स शरैः शरजालानि वारयन् समरे स्थितः।
गभस्तीनिव सूर्यस्य प्रतिजग्राह वीर्यवान् ॥ ५ ॥

The heroic prince stood intercepting the streams of arrows discharged by Rāvaṇa with his own arrows on the battlefield and bore them like the rays of the sun. (5)

ततः शरसहस्राणि क्षिप्रहस्तो निशाचरः।
निजघानोरसि क्रुद्धो राघवस्य महात्मनः ॥ ६ ॥

Provoked to anger, the quick-handed night-stalker then dug thousands of arrows into the breast of the high-souled scion of Raghu. (6)

स शोणितसमादिग्धः समरे लक्ष्मणाग्रजः।
दृष्टः फुल्ल इवारण्ये सुमहान् किंशुकद्रुमः ॥ ७ ॥

Covered with blood on the battlefield, that eldest brother of Lakṣmaṇa was seen like a huge Kiṁśuka tree with flowers in a forest. (7)

शराभिघातसंरब्धः सोऽभिजग्राह सायकान्।
काकुत्स्थः सुमहातेजा युगान्तादित्यवर्चसः ॥ ८ ॥

Angered by the impact of the arrows of Rāvaṇa, that scion of Kakutstha, endowed as he was with immense energy, took up arrows which shone like the sun blazing at the end of the world-cycle. (8)

ततोऽन्योन्यं सुसंरब्धौ तावुभौ रामरावणौ।
शरान्धकारे समरे नोपलक्ष्यतां तदा ॥ ९ ॥

Though greatly enraged, both the aforesaid warriors, Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, could not thereupon see each other at that time on the battlefield, which was shrouded in darkness by the hail of arrows. (9)

ततः क्रोधसमाविष्टो रामो दशरथात्मजः।
उवाच रावणं वीरः प्रहस्य परुषं वचः ॥ १० ॥

Laughing heartily, though filled with anger, the valiant Śrī Rāma, son of Emperor Daśaratha, then administered the following harsh rebuke to Rāvaṇa: (10)

मम भार्या जनस्थानादज्ञानाद् राक्षसाधम।
हता ते विवशा यस्मात् तस्मात् त्वं नासि वीर्यवान् ॥ ११ ॥

“Since my consort was borne away by you from Janasthāna, helpless as she was, through unawareness about my real strength, O vile ogre, hence you are not heroic. (11)

मया विरहितां दीनां वर्तमानां महावने।
वैदेहीं प्रसभं हत्वा शूरोऽहमिति मन्यसे ॥ १२ ॥

“Having carried away by force the miserable Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), while she was in the great forest away from me, you think: ‘I am a hero’. (12)

स्त्रीषु शूर विनाथासु परदाराभिमर्शनम्।
कृत्वा कापुरुषं कर्म शूरोऽहमिति मन्यसे ॥ १३ ॥

“Having perpetrated the cowardly act of laying your hands on another’s wife, O ogre, posing as a champion in relation to ladies without a protector, you think: ‘I am a hero’. (13)

भिन्नमर्यादं निर्लज्जं चारित्रेष्वनवस्थित।
दर्पान्मृत्युमुपादाय शूरोऽहमिति मन्यसे ॥ १४ ॥

“O shameless creature, who have transgressed the bounds of morality and are unstable of character, having laid hold through vanity of death in the form of Sītā, you think: ‘I am a hero’. (14)

शूरेण धनदभ्रात्रा बलैः समुदितेन च।
श्लाघनीयं महत्कर्म यशस्यं च कृतं त्वया ॥ १५ ॥

“Indeed, a laudable, momentous and glorious act has been performed by you, a heroic brother of Kubera (the god of wealth), rich in might? (15)

उत्सेकेनाभिपन्नस्य गर्हितस्याहितस्य च ।
कर्मणः प्राप्नुहीदानीं तस्याद्य सुमहत् फलम् ॥ १६ ॥

“Reap today and this very moment the rich fruit of that detested and pernicious act perpetrated through sheer vanity. (16)

शूरोऽहमिति चात्मानमवगच्छसि दुर्मते ।
नैव लज्जास्ति ते सीतां चौरवद् व्यपकर्षतः ॥ १७ ॥

“Although, O evil-minded one, you think yourself: ‘I am a hero’, shame did not stand in your way at all when you were bearing Sītā away like a thief. (17)

यदि मत्संनिधौ सीता धर्षिता स्यात् त्वया बलात् ।
भ्रातरं तु खरं पश्येस्तदा मत्सायकैर्हतः ॥ १८ ॥

“Had Sītā been forcibly laid hands upon by you in my presence, you would have surely joined your cousin, Khara, that very moment, when struck with my shafts. (18)

दिष्ट्यासि मम मन्दात्मंश्चक्षुर्विषयमागतः ।
अद्य त्वां सायकैस्तीक्ष्णैर्नयामि यमसादनम् ॥ १९ ॥

“By good fortune, O dull-witted one, you have fallen within the range of my sight. I shall dispatch you to the abode of Death with my sharp arrows today. (19)

अद्य ते मच्छरैश्छिन्नं शिरो ज्वलितकुण्डलम् ।
क्रव्यादा व्यपकर्षन्तु विकीर्णं रणपांसुषु ॥ २० ॥

“Let carnivorous birds and beasts drag away here and there today your head severed by my arrows and lying scattered in the dust of the battlefield with its dazzling earrings. (20)

निपत्योरसि गृध्रास्ते क्षितौ क्षिप्तस्य रावण ।
पिबन्तु रुधिरं तर्षाद् बाणशल्यान्तरोत्थितम् ॥ २१ ॥

“Let vultures, swooping on your breast when you have been thrown down on the ground, O Rāvaṇa, quaff with avidity your blood gushing forth from the outlet made by the head of my arrow. (21)

अद्य मदबाणभिन्नस्य गतासोः पतितस्य ते ।
कर्षन् त्वन्त्राणि पतगा गरुत्मन्त इवोरगान् ॥ २२ ॥

“Let birds such as crows and vultures tear out your entrails as eagles would pluck off snakes when you fall dead pierced by my arrows today.” (22)

इत्येवं स वदन् वीरो रामः शत्रुनिर्बहणः ।
राक्षसेन्द्रं समीपस्थं शरवर्षैरवाकिरत् ॥ २३ ॥

Saying so, the valiant Śrī Rāma, the well-known exterminator of his enemies, covered Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres), who stood near, with showers of arrows. (23)

बभूव द्विगुणं वीर्यं बलं हर्षश्च संयुगे ।
रामस्यास्त्रबलं चैव शत्रोर्निधनकांक्षिणः ॥ २४ ॥

The prowess, might and martial ardour as well as the force of the missiles of Śrī Rāma, who sought the destruction of his enemy, was redoubled. (24)

प्रादुर्बभूवुरस्त्राणि सर्वाणि विदितात्मनः ।
प्रहर्षाच्च महातेजाः शीघ्रहस्ततरोऽभवत् ॥ २५ ॥

All the mystic missiles appeared before Śrī Rāma, who was rich in self-knowledge. Nay, in his excessive joy, born of his martial ardour, the prince, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, became more nimble-handed in discharging arrows. (25)

शुभान्येतानि चिह्नानि विज्ञायात्मगतानि सः ।
भूय एवार्दयद् रामो रावणं राक्षसान्तकृत् ॥ २६ ॥

Perceiving these auspicious prognostications in himself, the aforesaid Śrī Rāma, the exterminator of ogres, began to strike Rāvaṇa even more vehemently. (26)

हरीणां चाश्मनिकरैः शरवर्षैश्च राघवात् ।
हन्यमानो दशग्रीवो विघूर्णहृदयोऽभवत् ॥ २७ ॥

While being struck with volleys of stones hurled by the monkeys and the showers of arrows coming from Śrī Rāma, (a scion of Raghu) the ten-headed monster felt bewildered at heart. (27)

यदा च शस्त्रं नारेभे न चकर्ष शरासनम् ।
नास्य प्रत्यकरोद् वीर्यं विक्लवेनान्तरात्मना ॥ २८ ॥
क्षिप्ताश्चाशु शरास्तेन शस्त्राणि विविधानि च ।
मरणार्थाय वर्तन्ते मृत्युकालोऽभ्यवर्तत ॥ २९ ॥

When, on account of his mind being confused, he could no longer take up weapons nor stretch his bow, nor, again, could he oppose Śrī Rāma's valour, while the arrows and other weapons of all kinds swiftly discharged by Śrī Rāma, had his death for their objective, the hour of his death appeared imminent. (28-29)

सूतस्तु रथनेतास्य तदवस्थं निरीक्ष्य तम् ।
शनैर्युद्धादसम्भ्रान्तो रथं तस्यापवाहयत् ॥ ३० ॥

Perceiving him reduced to such a plight, the charioteer, who controlled his chariot, for his part, calmly drove his chariot out of the fray. (30)

रथं च तस्याथ जवेन सारथि-
निवार्य भीमं जलदस्वनं तदा ।
जगाम भीत्या समरान्महीपतिं
निरस्तवीर्यं पतितं समीक्ष्य ॥ ३१ ॥

Turning in haste the chariot of Rāvaṇa, which was rumbling like a cloud, on perceiving the king (the lord of ogres) sunk down, bereft of energy, the charioteer forthwith sneaked away in dismay from the battlefield. (31)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्र्यधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०३ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and three in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुरधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CIV

Rāvaṇa reproaches the charioteer and the latter after satisfying his master with his reply drives his chariot back to the battlefield

स तु मोहात् सुसंकुब्धः कृतान्तबलचोदितः ।
क्रोधसंरक्तनयनो रावणः सूतमब्रवीत् ॥ १ ॥

Feeling extremely enraged due to infatuation, his eyes blood-red through anger, Rāvaṇa, impelled by force of destiny, spoke as follows to his charioteer: (1)

हीनवीर्यमिवाशक्तं पौरुषेण विवर्जितम् ।
भीरुं लघुमिवासत्त्वं विहीनमिव तेजसा ॥ २ ॥
विमुक्तमिव मायाभिरस्त्रैरिव बहिष्कृतम् ।
मामवज्ञाय दुर्बुद्धे स्वया बुद्ध्या विचेष्टसे ॥ ३ ॥

“Disdaining me as though I were deficient in prowess, powerless, bereft of manliness, cowardly and petty-minded, devoid of energy, forsaken by conjuring tricks and abandoned by mystic missiles, O evil-minded fellow, you act according to your own discretion! (2-3)

किमर्थं मामवज्ञाय मच्छन्दमनवेक्ष्य च ।
त्वया शत्रुसमक्षं मे रथोऽयमपवाहितः ॥ ४ ॥

What for was this chariot of mine removed by you in the presence of the enemy, belittling me and without ascertaining my will? (4)

त्वयाद्य हि ममानार्य चिरकालमुपार्जितम् ।
यशो वीर्यं च तेजश्च प्रत्ययश्च विनाशितः ॥ ५ ॥

“By you, O unworthy soul, have my glory, which was earned through a long period, nay, my valour, dignity and peoples' faith in my bravery too been wiped out. (5)

शत्रोः प्रख्यातवीर्यस्य रञ्जनीयस्य विक्रमैः ।
पश्यतो युद्धलुब्धोऽहं कृतः कापुरुषस्त्वया ॥ ६ ॥

“While my adversary, whose prowess is widely known, and who deserved to be gratified through feats of valour, stood looking on, myself, who was covetous of fighting, was made a coward of by you! (6)

यत् त्वं कथमिदं मोहान्न चेद् वहसि दुर्मते ।
सत्योऽयं प्रतितर्को मे परेण त्वमुपस्कृतः ॥ ७ ॥

“In case you do not through perversity drive the chariot at any event against the enemy, O evil-minded fellow, my suspicion that you stand corrupted by the enemy will be justified. (7)

नहि तद् विद्यते कर्म सुहृदो हितकांक्षिणः ।
रिपूणां सदृशं त्वेतद् यत् त्वयैतदनुष्ठितम् ॥ ८ ॥

“This act which has been done by you in the shape of removing me from the battlefield, is worthy of an enemy alone. Surely it cannot be the work of a well-wisher wishing well of his well-wisher. (8)

निवर्तय रथं शीघ्रं यावन्नापैति मे रिपुः ।
यदि वाध्युषितोऽसि त्वं स्मर्यते यदि मे गुणः ॥ ९ ॥

“Speedily drive the chariot back to the battlefield till my enemy does not withdraw, if you have lived with me long enough and if the benefits received from me are still remembered by you.” (9)

एवं परुषमुक्तस्तु हितबुद्धिरबुद्धिना ।
अब्रवीद् रावणं सूतो हितं सानुनयं वचः ॥ १० ॥

Spoken to in these harsh words by the insensate Rāvaṇa, the charioteer for his part, who thought well of him, made to Rāvaṇa the following friendly and courteous reply: (10)

न भीतोऽस्मि न मूढोऽस्मि नोपजप्तोऽस्मि शत्रुभिः ।
न प्रमत्तो न निःस्नेहो विस्मृता न च सत्क्रिया ॥ ११ ॥

“I was neither afraid nor perplexed, nor was I won over by the enemies, nor was I negligent, nor disloyal, nor (again) have the benefits conferred by you been forgotten by me. (11)

मया तु हितकामेन यशश्च परिरक्षता ।
स्नेहप्रसन्नमनसा हितमित्यप्रियं कृतम् ॥ १२ ॥

“An act which was not to your taste was nevertheless done by me as something conducive to your interest with a mind affectionately disposed towards you through attachment, desiring, as I did, to be of service to you, safeguarding your glory. (12)

नास्मिन्नर्थे महाराज त्वं मां प्रियहिते रतम् ।
कश्चिल्लघुरिवानार्यो दोषतो गन्तुमर्हसि ॥ १३ ॥

“Like a petty-minded and unworthy man you ought not to hold me, devoted as I am to your pleasure and good, guilty in this matter of taking you away from the field of battle, O monarch! (13)

श्रूयतां प्रति दास्यामि यन्निमित्तं मया रथः ।
नदीवेग इवाम्भोभिः संयुगे विनिवर्तितः ॥ १४ ॥

“Kindly listen: I will make answer to your query as to why your chariot was taken back by me from the battlefield, even as the onrush of a stream disgorging itself into a sea is pushed back by a tide. (14)

श्रमं तवावगच्छामि महता रणकर्मणा ।
नहि ते वीर्यसौमुख्यं प्रकर्षं नोपधारये ॥ १५ ॥

“I took note of the exhaustion occasioned by your strenuous fighting. Indeed, there was no exhibition of valour on your part, nor did I notice any superiority to your adversary in you. (15)

रथोद्वहनखिन्नाश्च भग्ना मे रथवाजिनः ।
दीना घर्मपरिश्रान्ता गावो वर्षहता इव ॥ १६ ॥

“The steeds of my chariot too, which had been exhausted by drawing the chariot and broken down and, being worn out with sunshine, felt miserable like cows lashed by a downpour. (16)

निमित्तानि च भूयिष्ठं यानि प्रादुर्भवन्ति नः ।

तेषु तेष्वभिपन्नेषु लक्षयाम्यप्रदक्षिणम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Moreover in the event of those portents, which appear in large numbers before our eyes today proving true, I foresee only that which is unpropitious to us. (17)

देशकालौ च विज्ञेयौ लक्षणानीङ्गतानि च ।

दैन्यं हर्षश्च खेदश्च रथिनश्च बलाबलम् ॥ १८ ॥

(Propitious and unpropitious) time and place as well as (good and evil) omens, facial expressions, depression and liveliness, the measure of fatigue as also the strength and weakness of the warrior occupying the chariot, must be ascertained by a charioteer. (18)

स्थलनिम्नानि भूमेश्च समानि विषमाणि च ।

युद्धकालश्च विज्ञेयः परस्यान्तरदर्शनम् ॥ १९ ॥

“Nay, the eminences and depressions of the earth’s surface, as well as the parts which are level and rugged, the time opportune for combat and the visible weak points of the enemy too must be known by a charioteer. (19)

उपयानापयाने च स्थानं प्रत्यपसर्पणम् ।

सर्वमेतद् रथस्थेन ज्ञेयं रथकुटुम्बिना ॥ २० ॥

“How to advance towards the enemy and how to recede, how to hold one’s position and how to make good a retreat—all this must be known by a charioteer seated in his chariot. (20)

तव विश्रामहेतोस्तु तथैषां रथवाजिनाम् ।

रौद्रं वर्जयता खेदं क्षमं कृतमिदं मया ॥ २१ ॥

“This meet action of removing you from the battlefield was evidently taken by me in order to give rest to you as well as to these steeds of the chariot and to relieve your terrible fatigue. (21)

स्वेच्छया न मया वीर रथोऽयमपवाहितः ।

भर्तुः स्नेहपरीतेन मयेदं यत् कृतं प्रभो ॥ २२ ॥

“Your chariot was not wilfully removed by me, O gallant warrior. What was done by me was done because I was overwhelmed with affection for my master, O lord! (22)

आज्ञापय यथातत्त्वं वक्ष्यस्यरिनिषूदन ।

तत् करिष्याम्यहं वीर गतानृण्येन चेतसा ॥ २३ ॥

“Command me with an eye to the reality of things, O valiant exterminator of your enemies! Now with a mind which feels relieved of all obligations on having come to your rescue on the field of battle, I shall do that which you will enjoin me to do.” (23)

संतुष्टस्तेन वाक्येन रावणस्तस्य सारथेः ।

प्रशस्येनं बहुविधं युद्धलुब्धोऽब्रवीदिदम् ॥ २४ ॥

Satisfied with the foregoing explanation of the aforesaid charioteer, nay, applauding him in many ways, Rāvaṇa, who was covetous of fighting, replied as follows: (24)

रथं शीघ्रमिमं सूत राघवाभिमुखं नय ।

नाहत्वा समरे शत्रून् निर्वर्तिष्यति रावणः ॥ २५ ॥

“Speedily drive this chariot, O charioteer, towards Rāma (a scion of Raghu). Rāvaṇa would not turn back without killing his enemies in combat.” (25)

एवमुक्त्वा रथस्थस्य रावणो राक्षसेश्वरः ।

ददौ तस्य शुभं ह्येकं हस्ताभरणमुत्तमम् ।

श्रुत्वा रावणवाक्यानि सारथिः संन्यवर्तत ॥ २६ ॥

Saying so, Rāvaṇa, the lord of ogres, actually bestowed on the charioteer, even while the latter remained seated in the chariot, an excellent and brilliant ornament for the hand. Hearing the instructions of Rāvaṇa, the charioteer drove the chariot back to the battlefield. (26)

ततो द्रुतं रावणवाक्यचोदितः
 प्रचोदयामास ह्यान् स सारथिः ।
 स राक्षसेन्द्रस्य ततो महारथः
 क्षणेन रामस्य रणाग्रतोऽभवत् ॥ २७ ॥
 Urged on by the command of Rāvaṇa, the aforesaid charioteer then immediately drove the horses forward and that huge chariot of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of ogres) thereupon stood in an instant before Śrī

 Rāma on the battlefield. (27)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुरधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०४ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and four in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CV

Sage Agastya advises Śrī Rāma to recite the ‘Āditya-Hṛdaya’, a collection of verses in praise of the sun-god, with a view to gaining victory

ततो युद्धपरिश्रान्तं समरे चिन्तया स्थितम् ।
 रावणं चाग्रतो दृष्ट्वा युद्धाय समुपस्थितम् ॥ १ ॥
 दैवतैश्च समागम्य द्रष्टुमभ्यागतो रणम् ।
 उपगम्याब्रवीद् राममगस्त्यो भगवांस्तदा ॥ २ ॥

Beholding Śrī Rāma, standing absorbed in thought on the battlefield, exhausted
 (as he was) by the fight, and Rāvaṇa facing him, duly prepared for an encounter, and approaching Śrī Rāma, the glorious sage Agastya, who had come in the company of gods to witness the epoch-making encounter of Śrī Rāma with Rāvaṇa now spoke as follows: (1-2)

राम राम महाबाहो शृणु गुह्यं सनातनम् ।
 येन सर्वानरीन् वत्स समरे विजयिष्यसे ॥ ३ ॥
 आदित्यहृदयं पुण्यं सर्वशत्रुविनाशनम् ।
 जयावहं जपं नित्यमक्षयं परमं शिवम् ॥ ४ ॥
 सर्वमङ्गलमाङ्गल्यं सर्वपापप्रणाशनम् ।
 चिन्ताशोकप्रशमनमायुर्वर्धनमुत्तमम् ॥ ५ ॥

“Rāma, O mighty-armed Śrī Rāma, hearken to the following eternal secret—in the form of a holy, eternal, immortal and supremely blessed and excellent encomium, entitled “Āditya-Hṛdaya”, which is intended to propitiate Brahmā, installed in the heart of the orb of the sun, the blessing of all blessings, by means of which, my child, you will be able to conquer once for all your adversaries on the battlefield, and which is calculated to bring victory, root out all sins, allay all anxiety and grief once for all and prolong life. (3—5)

रश्मिमन्तं समुद्यन्तं देवासुरनमस्कृतम् ।
 पूजयस्व विवस्वन्तं भास्करं भुवनेश्वरम् ॥ ६ ॥

“Worship you the sun-god, the ruler of the worlds, who is crowned with rays, nay, who appears at the horizon everyday without fail, who is greeted by gods and demons alike and brings light to the world. (6)

सर्वदेवात्मको ह्येष तेजस्वी रश्मिभावनः ।
 एष देवासुरगणाल्लोकान् पाति गभस्तिभिः ॥ ७ ॥

“Indeed, he is the embodiment of all gods and full of glory and creates and sustains the gods and the demons as well as their worlds by his rays. (7)

एष ब्रह्मा च विष्णुश्च शिवः स्कन्दः प्रजापतिः ।
 महेन्द्रो धनदः कालो यमः सोमो ह्यपां पतिः ॥ ८ ॥
 पितरो वसवः साध्या अश्विनौ मरुतो मनुः ।
 वायुर्वह्निः प्रजाः प्राण ऋतुकर्ता प्रभाकरः ॥ ९ ॥
 आदित्यः सविता सूर्यः खगः पूषा गभस्तिमान् ।
 सुवर्णसदृशो भानुर्हिरण्यरेता दिवाकरः ॥ १० ॥

“Indeed, he is the same as Brahmā (the Creator) as well as Viṣṇu (the Protector of the universe), Lord Śiva (the god of destruction), Skanda (son of Lord Śiva), Prajāpati (the lord of creation), the mighty Indra (the ruler of gods), Kubera (the bestower of riches), Kāla (the Time-spirit), Yama (the god of retribution), Soma (the moon-god), Varuṇa (the ruler of the waters), the Pitṛs (manes), the eight Vasus, the twelve Sādhyas, the two Aświs (the physicians of gods), the forty-nine Maruts (wind-gods); Manu (a progenitor of the human race), Vāyu (the wind-god) and the god of fire. He constitutes all created beings, he is the life-breath of the universe, the source of the seasons, the storehouse of light, an offspring of Aditi, the progenitor of all, the sun-god, the courser in the heavens, the nourisher of all, the possessor of rays, the golden, the brilliant, the one whose energy constitutes the seed of the universe and the maker of day. (8—10)

हरिदश्वः सहस्रार्चिः सप्तसप्तिर्मीरिचिमान् ।
 तिमिरोन्मथनः शम्भुस्त्वष्टा मार्तण्डकोऽशुमान् ॥ ११ ॥
 हिरण्यगर्भः शिशिरस्तपनोऽहस्करो रविः ।
 अग्निगर्भोऽदितेः पुत्रः शङ्खुः शिशिरनाशनः ॥ १२ ॥
 व्योमनाथस्तमोभेदी ऋग्यजुःसामपारगः ।
 घनवृष्टिरपां मित्रो विन्ध्यवीथीप्लवंगमः ॥ १३ ॥
 आतपी मण्डली मृत्युः पिङ्गलः सर्वतापनः ।
 कविर्विश्वो महातेजा रक्तः सर्वभवोद्भवः ॥ १४ ॥
 नक्षत्रग्रहताराणामधिपो विश्वभावनः ।
 तेजसामपि तेजस्वी द्वादशात्मन् नमोऽस्तु ते ॥ १५ ॥

“He has seven green horses yoked to his chariot, is myriad-rayed, full of rays, the destroyer of darkness, the source of happiness, the mitigator of the suffering of his devotees, the infuser of life in the lifeless cosmic egg, all-pervading and the cause of the creation, preservation and destruction of the universe. He is blissful by nature, the ruler of all, the bringer of day and the Teacher. A son of Aditi, he bears the fire of dissolution in his womb, is bliss personified and all-enveloping like space, the destroyer of cold, the lord of the heavens, the disperser of darkness, a master of the three Vedas (Ṛk, Sāma and Yajur), the sender of thick showers and the producer (giver) of water. He courses swiftly along his own orbit, carries in him the resolve to evolve the universe and is adorned with a circle of rays. He is death itself, tawny of hue and the destroyer of all. He is omniscient, all-formed, endowed with extraordinary brilliance, coppery, the source of all evolutes, the controller of all lunar mansions, planets and stars, the creator of all, the resplendent among the splendid. O sun-god! appearing in twelve forms in the shape of twelve months of the year, hail to you! (11—15)

नमः पूर्वाय गिरये पश्चिमायाद्रये नमः ।
 ज्योतिर्गणानां पतये दिनाधिपतये नमः ॥ १६ ॥

“Hail to you in the form of the eastern mountain and hail to the western mountain. Hail to the lord of hosts of luminaries, the lord of the day. (16)

जयाय जयभद्राय हर्यश्वाय नमो नमः ।
 नमो नमः सहस्रार्चो आदित्याय नमो नमः ॥ १७ ॥

“Hail to you, the giver of victory, hail to you, the joy born of victory! Hail to you, the god having green horses yoked to your chariot. Hail, hail to you with thousands of rays! Hail, hail to you, son of Aditi! (17)

नम उग्राय वीराय सारङ्गाय नमो नमः ।
 नमः पद्मप्रबोधाय प्रचण्डाय नमोऽस्तु ते ॥ १८ ॥

“Hail to you, the subduer of the senses, the valiant one! Hail to you as denoted by the mystic syllable OM! Hail to you, the awakener of the lotus! Hail to you, the fierce one! (18)

ब्रह्मेशानाच्युतेशाय सूरयादित्यवर्चसे ।
भास्वते सर्वभक्षाय रौद्राय वपुषे नमः ॥ १९ ॥

“Hail to you, the ruler of Brahmā, Lord Śiva and Lord Viṣṇu, the infallible! Hail to you, the sun-god, the (spiritual) light indwelling the solar orb, the resplendent one, the devourer of all, appearing in the form of Rudra, who drives away ignorance. (19)

तमोघ्नाय हिमघ्नाय शत्रुघ्नायामितात्मने ।
कृतघ्नघ्नाय देवाय ज्योतिषां पतये नमः ॥ २० ॥

“Hail to you, the dispeller of darkness, the destroyer of cold, the exterminator of foes, the one whose extent is immeasurable, the destroyer of the ungrateful, the god who is the ruler of all lights! (20)

तप्तचामीकराभाय हरये विश्वकर्माणे ।
नमस्तमोऽभिनिघ्नाय रुचये लोकसाक्षिणे ॥ २१ ॥

“Hail to you, possessing the lustre of refined gold, the dispeller of ignorance, the architect of the universe, the uprooter of darkness, splendour-incarnate, the onlooker of the world! (21)

नाशयत्येष वै भूतं तमेव सृजति प्रभुः ।
पायत्येष तपत्येष वर्षत्येष गभस्तिभिः ॥ २२ ॥

“The aforesaid Lord alone actually destroys, brings into existence and sustains all that has come into being. He alone radiates heat by his rays and sends showers. (22)

एष सुप्तेषु जागर्ति भूतेषु परिनिष्ठितः ।
एष चैवाग्निहोत्रं च फलं चैवाग्निहोत्रिणाम् ॥ २३ ॥

“Planted in all created beings as their Inner Controller, he remains awake when they have fallen asleep. Nay, he himself is the act of pouring oblations into the sacred fire as well as the fruit attained by those who pour such oblations. (23)

देवाश्च क्रतवश्चैव क्रतूनां फलमेव च ।
यानि कृत्यानि लोकेषु सर्वेषु परमप्रभुः ॥ २४ ॥

“Nay, he comprises all the gods as well as the sacrifices as also the fruit of sacrifices. Again, he is the Supreme Controller of all activities which are found in all living beings. (24)

एनमापत्सु कृच्छ्रेषु कान्तारेषु भयेषु च ।
कीर्तयन् पुरुषः कश्चिन्नावसीदति राघव ॥ २५ ॥

“No individual, celebrating the aforesaid Lord through the foregoing encomium, in straits, in difficulties, in the woods as well as in times of peril comes to grief, O scion of Raghu! (25)

पूजयस्वैनमेकाग्रो देवदेवं जगत्पतिम् ।
एतत् त्रिगुणितं जप्त्वा युद्धेषु विजयिष्यति ॥ २६ ॥
अस्मिन् क्षणे महाबाहो रावणं त्वं जहिष्यसि ।
एवमुक्त्वा ततोऽगस्त्यो जगाम स यथागतम् ॥ २७ ॥

“Worship the aforesaid Lord of the universe, the adored of all gods, with a concentrated mind. Muttering this praise as many as three times, one will come out victorious in combats. You will be able to make short work of Rāvaṇa this very moment, O mighty-armed one!” Saying so, the celebrated Sage Agastya thereupon left in the same way as he had come. (26-27)

एतच्छ्रुत्वा महातेजा नष्टशोकोऽभवत् तदा ।
धारयामास सुप्रीतो राघवः प्रयतात्मवान् ॥ २८ ॥

Hearing this advice, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who was endowed with extraordinary energy and had a subdued mind, found his grief immediately dissipated. Nay, feeling greatly delighted, he retained the alleluia in his memory. (28)

आदित्यं प्रेक्ष्य जप्त्वेदं परं हर्षमवाप्तवान् ।
त्रिराचम्य शुचिर्भूत्वा धनुरादाय वीर्यवान् ॥ २९ ॥
रावणं प्रेक्ष्य हृष्टात्मा जयार्थं समुपागमत् ।
सर्वयत्नेन महता वृत्तस्तस्य वधेऽभवत् ॥ ३० ॥

Sipping water thrice with the name of the Lord on his lips and getting purified in this way, nay, looking intently on the orb of the sun and repeating this prayer, the valiant one experienced supreme felicity. Seizing hold of his bow afterwards and fixing his eyes on Rāvaṇa, the hero, who felt delighted in mind, advanced on the battlefield with a view to attaining victory in combat. He stood vowed to kill Rāvaṇa with an intense and all-encompassing effort. (29—30)

अथ रविरवदन्निरीक्ष्य रामं
मुदितमनाः परमं प्रहृष्यमाणः ।
निशिचरपतिसंक्षयं विदित्वा
सुरगणमध्यगतो वचस्त्वेति ॥ ३१ ॥

Delighted in mind to gaze on Śrī Rāma, nay, feeling supremely exhilarated on perceiving the destruction of Rāvaṇa (the ruler of the night-stalkers) at hand, the sun-god, standing in person in the midst of a host of gods, exclaimed: "Make haste!" (31)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०५ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and five in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षडधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CVI

Catching sight of Rāvaṇa's chariot, Śrī Rāma asks Mātali to be on his guard. A description of portents prognosticating the fall of Rāvaṇa and good omens predicting the victory of Śrī Rāma

सारथिः स रथं हृष्टः परसैन्यप्रधर्षणम् ।
गन्धर्वनगराकारं समुच्छ्रितपताकिनम् ॥ १ ॥
युक्तं परमसम्पन्नैर्वाजिभिर्हेममालिभिः ।
युद्धोपकरणैः पूर्णं पताकाध्वजमालिनम् ॥ २ ॥
ग्रसन्तमिव चाकाशं नादयन्तं वसुंधराम् ।
प्रणाशं परसैन्यानां स्वसैन्यस्य प्रहर्षणम् ॥ ३ ॥
रावणस्य रथं क्षिप्रं चोदयामास सारथिः ।
तमापतन्तं सहसा स्वनवन्तं महाध्वजम् ॥ ४ ॥
रथं राक्षसराजस्य नरराजो ददर्श ह ।
कृष्णवाजिसमायुक्तं युक्तं रौद्रेण वर्चसा ॥ ५ ॥
दीप्यमानमिवाकाशे विमानं सूर्यवर्चसम् ।
तडित्पताकागहनं दर्शितेन्द्रायुधप्रभम् ॥ ६ ॥
शरधारा विमुञ्चन्तं धाराधरमिवाम्बुदम् ।
स दृष्ट्वा मेघसंकाशमापतन्तं रथं रिपोः ॥ ७ ॥

गिरेर्वज्राभिमृष्टस्य दीर्यतः सदृशस्वनम् ।
विस्फारयन् वै वेगेन बालचन्द्रानतं धनुः ॥ ८ ॥
उवाच मातलिं रामः सहस्राक्षस्य सारथिम् ।
मातले पश्य संरब्धमापतन्तं रथं रिपोः ॥ ९ ॥
यथापसव्यं पतता वेगेन महता पुनः ।
समरे हन्तुमात्मानं तथानेन कृता मतिः ॥ १० ॥

Feeling delighted, that charioteer, the charioteer of Rāvaṇa, drove forward with speed his chariot, a chariot which was capable of crushing the enemy's army and was a wonderful piece of art (like the city of the Gandharvas), which bore exceptionally lofty pennons and was drawn by horses richly endowed with excellent qualities and adorned with gold necklaces, which was fully equipped with implements of war and adorned with rows of flags and pennons, which was swallowing space as it were and was making the earth resound with its sound, nay, which was the doom of the enemy's forces and brought immense joy to its owner. Śrī Rāma, the ruler of men, they say, saw advancing precipitately towards him the aforesaid chariot of Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, which bore a huge standard and was noisy, nay, which was drawn by sombre steeds and clothed with a dreadful lustre and was shining in space like an aerial car, bright as the sun, and which, crowded as it was with pennons that flashed like lightning and displaying as it did the splendours of a rainbow because of its decorations, looked like a cloud holding streams of water and releasing torrents in the shape of arrows. Beholding the enemy's chariot advancing like a cloud and making noise like a mountain bursting asunder when struck with lightning, and stretching with impetuosity his bow, which, when bent, looked like the crescent moon, Śrī Rāma spoke as follows to Mātali, the charioteer of Indra (the god with a thousand eyes): "From the way in which he is darting forward from left to right with great impetuosity once more it appears that his heart has been set by him upon destroying himself in combat. (1—10)

तदप्रमादमातिष्ठ प्रत्युद्गच्छ रथं रिपोः ।
विध्वंसयितुमिच्छामि वायुर्मैघमिवोत्थितम् ॥ ११ ॥

"Therefore, take care and advance towards the enemy's chariot. I wish to destroy it completely even as the wind would blow away an engulfing cloud. (11)

अविक्लवमसम्भ्रान्तमव्यग्रहृदयेक्षणम् ।
रश्मिसंचारनियतं प्रचोदय रथं द्रुतम् ॥ १२ ॥

Without confusion or getting flurried and with a steady heart and vision and the movement of the reins fully controlled, drive the chariot swiftly. (12)

कामं न त्वं समाधेयः पुरंदरशोचितः ।
युयुत्सुरहमेकाग्रः स्मारये त्वां न शिक्षये ॥ १३ ॥

"True, you need not be instructed by me accustomed as you are to drive the chariot of Indra, the destroyer of strongholds. Keen as I am to fight with one-pointed attention, I just refresh your memory and do not admonish you." (13)

परितुष्टः स रामस्य तेन वाक्येन मातलिः ।
प्रचोदयामास रथं सुरसारथिरुत्तमः ॥ १४ ॥

Extremely gratified with the foregoing apology of Śrī Rāma, Mātali, the excellent charioteer of gods, drove the chariot on. (14)

अपसव्यं ततः कुर्वन् रावणस्य महारथम् ।
चक्रसम्भूतरजसा रावणं व्यवधूनयत् ॥ १५ ॥

Passing the huge chariot of Rāvaṇa on the right, Śrī Rāma then set Rāvaṇa a-trembling by the dust risen from the wheels of his own chariot. (15)

ततः क्रुद्धो दशग्रीवस्ताम्रविस्फारितेक्षणः ।
रथप्रतिमुखं रामं सायकैरवधूनयत् ॥ १६ ॥

With his coppery eyes wide open, angered as he was, Rāvaṇa thereupon struck Śrī Rāma, who stood facing his chariot, with arrows. (16)

धर्षणामर्षितो रामो धैर्यं रोषेण लम्बयन् ।
जग्राह सुमहावेगमैन्द्रं युधि शरासनम् ॥ १७ ॥
शरांश्च सुमहावेगान् सूर्यरश्मिसमप्रभान् ।
तदुपोढं महद् युद्धमन्योन्यवधकांक्षिणोः ।
परस्परभिमुखयोर्दृप्तयोरिव सिंहयोः ॥ १८ ॥

Joining patience with anger, though provoked by the assault, Śrī Rāma seized hold on the battlefield of Indra's bow, which was possessed of extraordinary impulse, as also arrows of exceeding swiftness, which were brilliant like sunbeams. Then ensued a major conflict between the two warriors, Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, who stood facing each other like two proud lions, desirous of killing each other. (17-18)

ततो देवाः सगन्धर्वाः सिद्धाश्च परमर्षयः ।
समीयुर्द्वैरथं द्रष्टुं रावणक्षयकाक्षिणः ॥ १९ ॥

Thereupon gods accompanied by Gandharvas (celestial musicians), Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth) and great Ṛṣis too assembled to witness the duel, longing as they did for the destruction of Rāvaṇa. (19)

समुत्पेतुरथोत्पाता दारुणा रोमहर्षणाः ।
रावणस्य विनाशाय राघवस्योदयाय च ॥ २० ॥

Then burst into view fearful portents that caused one's hair to stand on end, giving a warning of doom to Rāvaṇa and prosperity to the scion of Raghu. (20)

ववर्ष रुधिरं देवो रावणस्य रथोपरि ।
वाता मण्डलिनस्तीव्रा व्यपसव्यं प्रचक्रमुः ॥ २१ ॥

The god of rain rained blood on the chariot of Rāvaṇa, while violent whirlwinds blew from left to right. (21)

महद्गृध्रकुलं चास्य भ्रममाणं नभस्थले ।
येन येन रथो याति तेन तेन प्रधावति ॥ २२ ॥

Hovering in the aerial region, a large flock of vultures followed the evolutions of his chariot. (22)

संध्यया चावृता लङ्का जपापुष्पनिकाशया ।
दृश्यते सम्प्रदीप्तेव दिवसेऽपि वसुंधरा ॥ २३ ॥

Nay, Laṅkā looked enshrouded in dusk, hued like a red Japa flower even in the daytime and the region round about appeared aglow with it. (23)

सनिर्घाता महोल्काश्च सम्प्रपेतुर्घास्वनाः ।
विषादयंस्ते रक्षांसि रावणस्य तदाहिताः ॥ २४ ॥

Huge meteors accompanied by thunder fell with a great sound at that time. Foreboding evil to Rāvaṇa, they filled the ogres with despondency at that time. (24)

रावणश्च यतस्तत्र प्रचचाल वसुंधरा ।
रक्षसां च प्रहरतां गृहीता इव बाहवः ॥ २५ ॥

Nay, the earth shook in whichever direction Rāvaṇa moved and the arms of the ogres were clasped as it were even as they struck. (25)

ताम्राः पीताः सिताः श्वेताः पतिताः सूर्यरश्मयः ।
दृश्यन्ते रावणस्याग्रे पर्वतस्येव धातवः ॥ २६ ॥

Fallen before Rāvaṇa, the rays of the sun appeared coppery, yellow, white and dark like ores on a mountain. (26)

गृधैरनुगताश्चास्य वमन्त्यो ज्वलनं मुखैः ।
प्रणेदुर्मुखमीक्षन्त्यः संरब्धमशिवं शिवाः ॥ २७ ॥

Nay, beholding the angry mien of Rāvaṇa and vomiting fire from their mouths, she-jackals, followed by vultures, uttered sinister howls. (27)

प्रतिकूलं ववौ वायू रणे पांसून् समुत्किरन् ।
तस्य राक्षसराजस्य कुर्वन् दृष्टिविलोपनम् ॥ २८ ॥

Raising the clouds of dust over the battlefield and clouding the vision of that king of ogres, the wind blew in a direction unfavourable to him. (28)

निपेतुरिन्द्राशनयः सैन्ये चास्य समन्ततः ।
दुर्विषह्यस्वरा घोरा विना जलधरोदयम् ॥ २९ ॥

Nay, without the appearance of any cloud fearful thunderbolts of Indra, the god of rain, fell on his army, on all sides with a noise which was hard to endure. (29)

दिशश्च प्रदिशः सर्वा बभूवुस्तिमिरावृताः ।
पांसुवर्षेण महता दुर्दर्शं च नभोऽभवत् ॥ ३० ॥

All the quarters as well as the intermediate points of the compass were shrouded in darkness; and due to a shower of dust the sky became obscure. (30)

कुर्वन्त्यः कलहं घोरं सारिकास्तद्रथं प्रति ।
निपेतुः शतशस्तत्र दारुणा दारुणारुताः ॥ ३१ ॥

Carrying on a desperate fight among themselves and emitting sharp cries fearful minas fell in hundreds on his chariot on that battlefield. (31)

जघनेभ्यः स्फुलिङ्गाश्च नेत्रेभ्योऽश्रूणि संततम् ।
मुमुचुस्तस्य तुरगास्तुल्यमग्निं च वारि च ॥ ३२ ॥

The horses of his chariot incessantly let out sparks from their hips and loins and tears from their eyes, releasing out in this way fire and water both at a time. (32)

एवंप्रकारा बहवः समुत्पाता भयावहाः ।
रावणस्य विनाशाय दारुणाः सम्प्रजज्ञिरे ॥ ३३ ॥

Foreboding disaster to Rāvaṇa, many such appalling and fearful portents appeared. (33)

रामस्यापि निमित्तानि सौम्यानि च शिवानि च ।
बभूवुर्जयशंसीनि प्रादुर्भूतानि सर्वशः ॥ ३४ ॥
निमित्तानीह सौम्यानि राघवः स्वजयाय वै ।
दृष्ट्वा परमसंहृष्टो हतं मेने च रावणम् ॥ ३५ ॥

Before Śrī Rāma too appeared on all

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षडधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०६ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and six in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

सप्ताधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CVII

Fierce encounter of Śrī Rāma with Rāvaṇa

ततः प्रवृत्तं सुक्रूरं रामरावणयोस्तदा ।
सुमहद् द्वैरथं युद्धं सर्वलोकभयावहम् ॥ १ ॥

Then ensued on that occasion a fierce and prolonged duel between Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, which struck terror in all the worlds. (1)

ततो राक्षससैन्यं च हरीणां च महद्बलम् ।
प्रगृहीतप्रहरणं निश्चेष्टं समवर्तत ॥ २ ॥

At that time the army of ogres as well as the huge army of the monkeys stood motionless with their weapons held fast in their hands. (2)

सम्प्रयुद्धौ तु तौ दृष्ट्वा बलवन्नराक्षसौ ।
व्याक्षिप्तहृदयाः सर्वे परं विस्मयमागताः ॥ ३ ॥ sides omens which were delightful and propitious and foreboded victory to him. Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, was really overjoyed to behold on this occasion delightful omens foretelling his own triumph, and regarded Rāvaṇa as already killed. (34-35)

ततो निरीक्ष्यात्मगतानि राघवो
रणे निमित्तानि निमित्तकोविदः ।
जगाम हर्षं च परां च निर्वृतिं
चकार युद्धे ह्यधिकं च विक्रमम् ॥ ३६ ॥

Śrī Rāma, who was well-versed in the science of omens, now experienced delight, nay, supreme felicity on observing the propitious omens appearing on his own person on the battlefield and exhibited even greater prowess in combat. (36)

Distracted in heart to behold the two warriors, a human being and an ogre, both full of might, engaged in a desperate duel, all for their part experienced great wonderment. (3)

नानाप्रहरणैर्व्यग्रैर्भुजैर्विस्मितबुद्धयः ।
तस्थुः प्रेक्ष्य च संग्रामं नाभिजग्मुः परस्परम् ॥ ४ ॥

Their arms, which were ready with weapons and impatient for action, the warriors on both sides stood amazed in mind to witness the encounter and did not attack one another. (4)

रक्षसां रावणं चापि वानराणां च राघवम् ।
पश्यतां विस्मिताक्षाणां सैन्यं चित्रमिवाबभौ ॥ ५ ॥

The army of the ogres, who were looking on Rāvaṇa, as well as of the monkeys, who were gazing on Śrī Rāma with astonished eyes, appeared as though they were paintings. (5)

तौ तु तत्र निमित्तानि दृष्ट्वा राघवरावणौ।
कृतबुद्धी स्थिरामर्षौ युयुधाते ह्यभीतवत् ॥ ६ ॥

Indeed, having made up their minds to carry the contest through and firm in their indignation, the aforesaid Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, and Rāvaṇa for their part fought fearlessly, as it were, on witnessing the omens on the field of battle. (6)

जेतव्यमिति काकुत्स्थो मर्तव्यमिति रावणः।
धृतौ स्ववीर्यसर्वस्वं युद्धेऽदर्शयतां तदा ॥ ७ ॥

Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), who was convinced that he was going to win in combat and Rāvaṇa, who firmly believed that he would die, exhibited their entire prowess in the struggle on that occasion. (7)

ततः क्रोधाद् दशग्रीवः शरान् संधाय वीर्यवान्।
मुमोच ध्वजमुद्दिश्य राघवस्य रथे स्थितम् ॥ ८ ॥

Putting arrows to his bow, the valiant Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), thereupon discharged them in his wrath at the standard fixed on the chariot of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). (8)

ते शरास्तमनासाद्य पुरंदररथध्वजम्।
रथशक्तिं परामृश्य निपेतुर्धरणीतले ॥ ९ ॥

Failing to reach the aforesaid ensign on the chariot of Indra (a destroyer of citadels) and glancing off the staff supporting the banner, those arrows fell on the earth's surface. (9)

ततो रामोऽपि संकुब्धश्चापमाकृष्य वीर्यवान्।
कृतप्रतिकृतं कर्तुं मनसा सम्प्रचक्रमे ॥ १० ॥

Stretching his bow in great fury, the valiant, Śrī Rāma too duly proceeded with his mind to return blow for blow. (10)

रावणध्वजमुद्दिश्य मुमोच निशितं शरम्।
महासर्पमिवासह्यं ज्वलन्तं स्वेन तेजसा ॥ ११ ॥

He shot a whetted shaft, irresistible as a great snake and splendid with its own glory, aiming it at the banner of Rāvaṇa. (11)

रामश्चिक्षेप तेजस्वी केतुमुद्दिश्य सायकम्।
जगाम स महीं छित्त्वा दशग्रीवध्वजं शरः ॥ १२ ॥

The glorious Śrī Rāma let fly the arrow aiming it at the standard of Rāvaṇa. Tearing asunder the ensign of Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), that arrow entered the earth. (12)

स निकृत्तोऽपतद् भूमौ रावणस्यन्दनध्वजः।
ध्वजस्योन्मथनं दृष्ट्वा रावणः स महाबलः ॥ १३ ॥
सम्प्रदीप्तोऽभवत् क्रोधादमर्षात् प्रदहन्निव।
स रोषवशमापन्नः शरवर्षं ववर्ष ह ॥ १४ ॥

Torn down, the flag of Rāvaṇa's chariot fell to the ground. The notorious Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary might, was inflamed with fury on perceiving the destruction of his standard and stood blazing, as it were, with indignation. Fallen a prey to anger, he discharged a hail of arrows; so the tradition goes. (13—14)

रामस्य तुरगान् दीप्तैः शरैर्विव्याध रावणः।
ते दिव्या हरयस्तत्र नास्खलन्नापि बभ्रमुः ॥ १५ ॥
बभ्रुवुः स्वस्थहृदयाः पद्मनालैरिवाहताः।
तेषामसम्भ्रमं दृष्ट्वा वाजिनां रावणस्तदा ॥ १६ ॥
भूय एव सुसंकुब्धः शरवर्षं मुमोच ह।
गदाश्च परिघांश्चैव चक्राणि मुसलानि च ॥ १७ ॥
गिरिशृङ्गाणि वृक्षांश्च तथा शूलपरश्वधान्।
मायाविहितमेतत् तु शस्त्रवर्षमपातयत्।
सहस्रशस्तदा बाणानश्रान्तहृदयोद्यमः ॥ १८ ॥

Nay, with his flaming arrows, Rāvaṇa pierced the horses of the chariot of Śrī Rāma. The aforesaid heavenly steeds, however, neither staggered nor reeled, but remained composed at heart as they would feel when struck with lotus stalks. Infuriated to perceive the nonchalance of those horses on that occasion, Rāvaṇa they say, discharged a further shower of shafts as also maces as well as iron clubs, discuses and mallets, mountain peaks and trees as well as pikes and axes. He, however, let fall this rain of weapons as a creation of magic. Unwearied at heart as well as in effort, he discharged more arrows in thousands on that occasion. (15—18)

तुमुलं त्रासजननं भीमं भीमप्रतिस्वनम् ।
तद् वर्षमभवद् युद्धे नैकशस्त्रमयं महत् ॥ १९ ॥
विमुच्य राघवरथं समन्ताद् वानरे बले ।
सायकैरन्तरिक्षं च चकार सुनिरन्तरम् ॥ २० ॥
मुमोच च दशग्रीवो निःसङ्गेनान्तरात्मना ।
व्यायच्छमानं तं दृष्ट्वा तत्परं रावणं रणे ॥ २१ ॥
प्रहसन्निव काकुत्स्थः संदधे निशितान् शरान् ।
स मुमोच ततो बाणान् शतशोऽथ सहस्रशः ॥ २२ ॥

Leaving alone the chariot of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), that tumultuous, alarming, fearful and great shower of numerous weapons, which was attended with a terrible echo, descended on the simian army on all sides on the battlefield. Nay, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, shot arrows with a mind which had given up all hope of survival, and wholly covered the space. Seeing the notorious Rāvaṇa putting forth great effort in the struggle, the celebrated Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha) thereupon put whetted shafts to his bow as though laughing and then shot them in hundreds and thousands. (19—22)

तान् दृष्ट्वा रावणश्चक्रे स्वशरैः खं निरन्तरम् ।
ताभ्यां नियुक्तेन तदा शरवर्षेण भास्वता ॥ २३ ॥
शरबद्धमिवाभाति द्वितीयं भास्वदम्बरम् ।
नानिमित्तोऽभवद् बाणो नानिर्भेत्ता न निष्फलः ॥ २४ ॥

Seeing those arrows, Rāvaṇa completely covered the sky with his own. Due to that dazzling shower of shafts discharged by the two contending warriors at that time, the shining space looked like a second heaven raised with a network of arrows. No arrow (discharged by them) failed to reach the mark; there was not one which failed to pierce its target and not one which was discharged in vain. (23-24)

अन्योन्यमभिसंहत्य निपेतुर्धरणीतले ।
तथा विसृजतोर्बाणान् रामरावणयोर्मृधे ॥ २५ ॥
प्रायुध्येतामविच्छिन्नमस्यन्तौ सव्यदक्षिणम् ।
चक्रतुश्च शरैर्घोरैर्निरुच्छ्वासमिवाम्बरम् ॥ २६ ॥

Colliding with one another, the arrows of Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, who were shooting them on the battlefield, as aforesaid, fell to the ground. Discharging arrows to their right and left, the two warriors fought vehemently without interruption and covered the sky with their formidable arrows so as not to leave even breathing space between them, as it were. (25-26)

रावणस्य हयान् रामो हयान् रामस्य रावणः ।
जघ्नतुस्तौ तदान्योन्यं कृतानुकृतकारिणौ ॥ २७ ॥

Exchanging blow for blow, the two warriors struck each other on that occasion, Śrī Rāma hitting the steeds of Rāvaṇa and the latter those of Śrī Rāma. (27)

एवं तु तौ सुसंकुद्धौ चक्रतुर्युद्धमुत्तमम् ।
मुहूर्तमभवद् युद्धं तुमुलं रोमहर्षणम् ॥ २८ ॥

Extremely enraged, the two warriors for their part thus carried on a keen contest. For an hour or so, there raged a fierce struggle which caused one's hair to stand on end. (28)

तौ तथा युध्यमानौ तु समरे रामरावणौ ।
ददृशुः सर्वभूतानि विस्मितेनान्तरात्मना ॥ २९ ॥

All created beings present there for their part gazed with an astonished mind on the said Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, fighting as aforesaid on the battlefield. (29)

अर्दयन्तौ तु समरे तयोस्तौ स्यन्दनोत्तमौ ।
परस्परमभिकुद्धौ परस्परमभिद्रुतौ ॥ ३० ॥

परस्परवधे युक्तौ घोररूपौ बभूवतुः ।
मण्डलानि च वीथीश्च गतप्रत्यागतानि च ॥ ३१ ॥
दर्शयन्तौ बहुविधां सूतौ सारथ्यजां गतिम् ।
अर्दयन् रावणं रामो राघवं चापि रावणः ॥ ३२ ॥
गतिवेगं समापन्नौ प्रवर्तननिवर्तने ।
क्षिपतोः शरजालानि तयोस्तौ स्यन्दनोत्तमौ ॥ ३३ ॥
चेरतुः संयुगमहीं सासारौ जलदाविव ।
दर्शयित्वा तदा तौ तु गतिं बहुविधां रणे ॥ ३४ ॥
परस्परस्याभिमुखौ पुनरेव च तस्थतुः ।
धुरं धुरेण रथयोर्वक्त्रं वक्त्रेण वाजिनाम् ॥ ३५ ॥
पताकाश्च पताकाभिः समीयुः स्थितयोस्तदा ।
रावणस्य ततो रामो धनुर्मुक्तैः शितैः शरैः ॥ ३६ ॥
चतुर्भिश्चतुरो दीप्तान् हयान् प्रत्यपसर्पयत् ।
स क्रोधवशमापन्नो हयानामपसर्पणे ॥ ३७ ॥
मुमोच निशितान् बाणान् राघवाय दशाननः ।
सोऽतिविद्धो बलवता दशग्रीवेण राघवः ॥ ३८ ॥
जगाम न विकारं च न चापि व्यथितोऽभवत् ।
चिक्षेप च पुनर्बाणान् वज्रसारसमस्वनान् ॥ ३९ ॥
सारथिं वज्रहस्तस्य समुद्दिश्य दशाननः ।
मातलेस्तु महावेगाः शरीरे पतिताः शराः ॥ ४० ॥
न सूक्ष्ममपि सम्मोहं व्यथां वा प्रददुर्युधि ।
तथा धर्षणया क्रुद्धो मातलेर्न तथाऽऽत्मनः ॥ ४१ ॥
चकार शरजालेन राघवो विमुखं रिपुम् ।
विंशतिं त्रिंशतिं षष्टिं शतशोऽथ सहस्रशः ॥ ४२ ॥
मुमोच राघवो वीरः सायकान् स्यन्दने रिपोः ।
रावणोऽपि ततः क्रुद्धो रथस्थो राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ ४३ ॥
गदामुसलवर्षेण रामं प्रत्यर्दयद् रणे ।
तत् प्रवृत्तं पुनर्युद्धं तुमुलं रोमहर्षणम् ॥ ४४ ॥

Furiously attacking and injuring each other on the battlefield, nay, intent on destroying each other, the aforesaid excellent chariots of the two warriors for their part assumed a terrible aspect. The two charioteers too went on displaying multifarious movements of their chariots born of their driving skill, such as moving in a circle, moving straight and darting forward and receding forthwith. The two warriors had recourse to impetuosity of movement in their forward and backward motion, Śrī

Rāma wounding Rāvaṇa and vice versa. Those excellent chariots of the two warriors, who were discharging streams of arrows, ranged the battle-ground like two clouds pouring showers. Having displayed movements of many kinds, on the field of battle, the two chariots once more stood facing each other. The shafts of the two chariots even as they stood at that moment met one with the other; the muzzles of the horses of the one closed with those of the horses of the other and the pennons too of the one closed with those of the other. With four sharp arrows discharged from his bow Śrī Rāma thereupon drove back the four spirited horses of Rāvaṇa. Fallen a prey to anger, on the retreating of his horses, that ten-headed monster let fly his whetted shafts against Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). Though grievously wounded by the mighty Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), the said scion of Raghu neither felt agitated nor disquieted. The ten-headed monster then directed arrows which emitted a sound like a stroke of lightning at the charioteer of Indra (who carries the thunderbolt in his hand). Fallen on the body of Mātali, the arrows for their part, which were shot with great impetuosity, did not cause the least confusion or torment to him on the battlefield. Angered by that assault on Mātali, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who for his part did not feel provoked by the assault on himself, made his adversary averse to fighting by directing a stream of his arrows against him. The valiant scion of Raghu discharged twenty, thirty, sixty and hundreds and thousands of arrows on the enemy's chariot. Provoked to anger, while seated in his chariot, the king of ogres, Rāvaṇa too thereupon tormented Śrī Rāma with a shower of maces and mallets in return. Then there ensued once more a tumultuous struggle, which caused one's hair to stand on end. (30—44)

गदानां मुसलानां च परिघाणां च निःस्वनैः ।
शराणां पुद्बुवातैश्च क्षुभिताः सप्त सागराः ॥ ४५ ॥

Nay, all the seven seas were thrown into agitation by the sound of maces, mallets and iron bludgeons and the gusts raised by the plumes adorning the flying arrows. (45)

क्षुब्धानां सागराणां च पातालतलवासिनः ।
व्यथिता दानवाः सर्वे पन्नगाश्च सहस्रशः ॥ ४६ ॥

All the devils as well as the snakes inhabiting in their thousands the nethermost subterranean region situated underneath the agitated seas felt disquieted. (46)

चक्रम्पे मेदिनी कृत्स्ना सशैलवनकानना ।
भास्करो निष्प्रभश्चासीन्न ववौ चापि मारुतः ॥ ४७ ॥

The entire globe shook with its mountains, forests and jungles. Nay, the sun (the source of light) lost its brilliance and the wind too ceased to blow. (47)

ततो देवाः सगन्धर्वाः सिद्धाश्च परमर्षयः ।
चिन्तामापेदिरे सर्वे सकिंनरमहोरगाः ॥ ४८ ॥

Thereupon all the gods—including the Gandharvas (celestial musicians), as well as the Kinnaras (another class of demigods credited with a human figure and the head of a horse or with a horse's body and the head of a man) and huge serpents—as also Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers from their very birth) and great Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) fell a prey to anxiety. (48)

स्वस्ति गोब्राह्मणेभ्यस्तु लोकास्तिष्ठन्तु शाश्वताः ।
जयतां राघवः संख्ये रावणं राक्षसेश्वरम् ॥ ४९ ॥

“May all be well with the cows and the Brāhmaṇas. May all the worlds endure forever. May Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, conquer Rāvaṇa, the king of ogres, in combat!” (49)

एवं जपन्तोऽपश्यन्ते देवाः सर्षिगणास्तदा ।
रामरावणयोर्युद्धं सुघोरं रोमहर्षणम् ॥ ५० ॥

Saying so, the gods including the hosts of Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), present on the occasion, witnessed the fierce struggle between Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, which caused one's hair to stand on end. (50)

गन्धर्वाप्सरसां सङ्घा दृष्ट्वा युद्धमनूपमम् ।
गगनं¹ गगनाकारं सागरः सागरोपमः ॥ ५१ ॥
रामरावणयोर्युद्धं रामरावणयोरिव ।
एवं ब्रुवन्तो ददृशुस्तद् युद्धं रामरावणम् ॥ ५२ ॥

Watching that matchless struggle and observing that even as the sky is its own compeer and that the sea is its own analogue, the struggle between Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa can be likened only to the struggle between Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa, the hosts of Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Apsarās (heavenly nymphs) looked on that combat between Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa. (51-52)

ततः क्रोधान्महाबाहू रघूणां कीर्तिवर्धनः ।
संधाय धनुषा रामः शरमाशीविषोपमम् ॥ ५३ ॥
रावणस्य शिरोऽच्छिन्दच्छ्रीमज्ज्वलितकुण्डलम् ।
तच्छिरः पतितं भूमौ दृष्टं लोकैस्त्रिभिस्तदा ॥ ५४ ॥

Putting to his bow an arrow, which resembled a venomous serpent (in its fierceness) in wrath the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma, who enhanced the glory of the Raghus (his forbears), cut off the glorious head² of Rāvaṇa, which was graced with flaming earrings. The aforesaid head was seen fallen on the ground by the denizens of all the three worlds on that occasion. (53-54)

1. This verse ‘गगनं गगनाकारंरामरावणयोरिव’ has been quoted in works on Sanskrit poetics as an illustration of the figure of speech known by the name of ‘Ananyaya’, the occasion of which arises only where the object described is peerless and serves as its own comparison.

2. It seems Rāvaṇa appeared on the battlefield with a single head only during this combat.

तस्यैव सदृशं चान्यद् रावणस्योत्थितं शिरः ।
 तत् क्षिप्तं क्षिप्रहस्तेन रामेण क्षिप्रकारिणा ॥ ५५ ॥
 द्वितीयं रावणशिरश्छिन्नं संयति सायकैः ।
 छिन्नमात्रं च तच्छीर्षं पुनरेव प्रदृश्यते ॥ ५६ ॥
 तदप्यशनिसंकाशैश्छिन्नं रामस्य सायकैः ।
 एवमेव शतं छिन्नं शिरसां तुल्यवर्चसाम् ॥ ५७ ॥
 न चैव रावणस्यान्तो दृश्यते जीवितक्षये ।
 ततः सर्वास्त्रविद् वीरः कौसल्यानन्दवर्धनः ॥ ५८ ॥
 मार्गणैर्बहुभिर्युक्तश्चिन्तयामास राघवः ।
 मारीचो निहतो यैस्तु खरो यैस्तु सदूषणः ॥ ५९ ॥
 क्रौञ्चावटे विराधस्तु कबन्धो दण्डकावने ।
 यैः साला गिरयो भग्ना वाली च क्षुभितोऽम्बुधिः ॥ ६० ॥
 त इमे सायकाः सर्वे युद्धे प्रात्ययिका मम ।
 किं नु तत् कारणं येन रावणे मन्दतेजसः ॥ ६१ ॥

Another head, exactly similar to the former, cropped up on the shoulders of Rāvaṇa. That second head too of Rāvaṇa was struck off on the battlefield in no time by the nimble-handed Śrī Rāma, who was quick in action, with his arrows. The aforesaid head rose into view once more the moment it was severed; but that too was severed by the thunderbolt-like shafts of Śrī Rāma. In the same way a hundred of heads, equally brilliant, was successfully struck off by Śrī Rāma, yet no certainty about his death could be arrived at. Though equipped with numerous arrows and well-versed in the use of all kinds of mystic missiles, the valiant Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the enhancer of Kausalyā's joy, thereupon became thoughtful. (He said to himself:) "I wonder what is the reason why these well-known shafts—which have all been tried and found infallible by me on the battlefield, nay, by the help of which the ogre, Mārīca, for his part was made shortwork of by me as also Khara alongwith Dūṣaṇa, nay, the ogre Virādha too was disposed of in a hole in the ground in the Krauñca wood, and Kabandha in the Daṇḍaka forest, by which again were the seven sal trees at Kiṣkindhā and mountains too were transfixed as also Vālī (the lord of monkeys) and (last of all) the sea was thrown into agitation—have proved of little efficacy against Rāvaṇa."

(55—61)

इति चिन्तापरश्चासीदप्रमत्तश्च संयुगे ।
 ववर्ष शरवर्षाणि राघवो रावणोरसि ॥ ६२ ॥

Though absorbed in thought as aforesaid, yet not at all careless on the battlefield, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, rained showers of arrows on the breast of Rāvaṇa.

(62)

रावणोऽपि ततः क्रुद्धो रथस्थो राक्षसेश्वरः ।
 गदामुसलवर्षेण रामं प्रत्यर्दयद् रणे ॥ ६३ ॥

Provoked to anger the king of ogres, Rāvaṇa, too, who was seated in his chariot, tormented Śrī Rāma in return with a shower of maces and mallets on the battlefield.

(63)

तत् प्रवृत्तं महद् युद्धं तुमुलं रोमहर्षणम् ।
 अन्तरिक्षे च भूमौ च पुनश्च गिरिमूर्धनि ॥ ६४ ॥

Then followed a great and tumultuous fight, which caused one's hair to stand on end, in the air as well as on the earth and again on the top of the Trikūṭa mountain.

(64)

देवदानवयक्षाणां पिशाचोरगरक्षसाम् ।
 पश्यतां तन्महद् युद्धं सर्वरात्रमवर्तत ॥ ६५ ॥

While the gods, the devils and the Yakṣas as also the fiends, the Nāgas (serpent-demons or semi-divine beings credited with the face of a man and the tail of a serpent, and said to inhabit the nethermost subterranean region, Pātāla) and the ogres looked on that major conflict that continued for entire days and nights.

(65)

नैव रात्रिं न दिवसं न मुहूर्तं न च क्षणम् ।
 रामरावणयोर्युद्धं विराममुपगच्छति ॥ ६६ ॥

The contest between Śrī Rāma and Rāvaṇa ceased neither by night nor by day, not even for an hour or a moment.

(66)

दशरथसुतराक्षसेन्द्रयोस्तयो-

र्जयमनवेक्ष्य रणे स राघवस्य ।

सुरवररथसारथिर्महात्मा

रणरतराममुवाच

वाक्यमाशु ॥ ६७ ॥

Not perceiving the victory of Śrī Rāma in the duel between the aforesaid two, the son of Daśaratha and the king of ogres, that high-souled charioteer of Indra (the foremost of gods) quickly spoke as follows to Śrī Rāma, while he was still engaged in fighting.

(67)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्ताधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०७ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and seven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CVIII

Rāvaṇa's death at Śrī Rāma's hands

अथ संस्मारयामास मातली राघवं तदा ।

अजानन्निव किं वीर त्वमेनमनुवर्तसे ॥ १ ॥

Mātali forthwith refreshed the memory of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) on that occasion and said, "How do you merely do as Rāvaṇa does (by acting on the defensive) as though you did not know how to dispose him of, O gallant prince? (1)

विसृज्यास्मै वधाय त्वमस्त्रं पैतामहं प्रभो ।

विनाशकालः कथितो यः सुरैः सोऽद्य वर्तते ॥ २ ॥

"With a view to his destruction discharge you on him the mystic missile presided over by Brahmā (the grandfather of the universe, which was created by the ten Prajāpatis or lords of creation, who were all his mind-born sons), my lord. The hour of his doom, which was foretold by the gods, has now arrived." (2)

ततः संस्मारितो रामस्तेन वाक्येन मातलेः ।

जग्राह स शरं दीप्तं निःश्वसन्तमिवोरगम् ॥ ३ ॥

Reminded of that missile by the aforesaid suggestion of Mātali, Śrī Rāma then seized hold of a flaming arrow, which flew like a hissing serpent. (3)

यं तस्मै प्रथमं प्रादादगस्त्यो भगवानृषिः ।

ब्रह्मदत्तं महद् बाणममोघं युधि वीर्यवान् ॥ ४ ॥

The glorious and powerful Sage Agastya had already bestowed on him (while he was moving in the Daṇḍaka forest) that enormous arrow, gifted to him by Brahmā, the creator, which never missed its target. (4)

ब्रह्मणा निर्मितं पूर्वमिन्द्रार्थममितौजसा ।

दत्तं सुरपतेः पूर्वं त्रिलोकजयकांक्षिणः ॥ ५ ॥

Having been created of yore for the use of Indra, the ruler of gods, by Brahmā (the creator), whose strength was immeasurable, it was bestowed in the past on the ruler of gods, who was eager to conquer the three worlds. (5)

यस्य वाजेषु पवनः फले पावकभास्करो ।

शरीरमाकाशमयं गौरवे मेरुमन्दरौ ॥ ६ ॥

The wind-god presided over its feathers; the god of fire (lit., the purifier) and the sun-god (the source of light) over its head; its shaft was made up of ether; while the Mandara and Meru mountains presided over its weight. (6)

जाज्वल्यमानं वपुषा सुपुङ्खं हेमभूषितम् ।
तेजसा सर्वभूतानां कृतं भास्करवर्चसम् ॥ ७ ॥

Provided with lovely feathers and decked with gold, the arrow, which emitted splendour from its body, had been made up of the essence of all the elements and shone like the sun. (7)

सधूममिव कालाग्निं दीप्तमाशीविषोपमम् ।
नरनागाश्ववृन्दानां भेदनं क्षिप्रकारिणम् ॥ ८ ॥
द्वाराणां परिघाणां च गिरीणां चापि भेदनम् ।
नानारुधिरदिग्धाङ्गं मेदोदिग्धं सुदारुणम् ॥ ९ ॥

Flaming like the fire of universal dissolution enveloped in smoke, and resembling a venomous snake, it was quick in action and capable of splitting asunder hosts of men, elephants and horses and smashing gateways and iron bars and mountains too. Smeared with the blood of various victims and coated with their marrow, it presented a dreadful appearance. (8-9)

वज्रसारं महानादं नानासमितिदारुणम् ।
सर्ववित्रासनं भीमं श्वसन्तमिव पन्नगम् ॥ १० ॥

Nay, hard as adamant and loud-sounding, it was capable of dispersing armies of every kind. Terrible to behold and hissing like a serpent, it frightened all. (10)

कङ्कगृध्रबकानां च गोमायुगणरक्षसाम् ।
नित्यभक्षप्रदं युद्धे यमरूपं भयावहम् ॥ ११ ॥

Providing lasting nourishment on the battlefield to buzzards, vultures and herons as well as to packs of jackals as also to ogres, it assumed the aspect of Yama (the god of retribution) and inspired terror. (11)

नन्दनं वानरेन्द्राणां रक्षसामवसादनम् ।
वाजितं विविधैर्वाजैश्चारुचित्रैर्गुरुततः ॥ १२ ॥

The delight of monkey chiefs and the scourge of ogres, it was provided with various kinds of lovely and picturesque plumes of Garuḍa. (12)

तमुत्तमेषु लोकानामिक्ष्वाकुभयनाशनम् ।
द्विषतां कीर्तिहरणं प्रहर्षकरमात्मनः ॥ १३ ॥
अभिमन्त्र्य ततो रामस्तं महेषु महाबलः ।
वेदप्रोक्तेन विधिना संदधे कार्मुके बली ॥ १४ ॥

Charged with a mystic spell in accordance with the scriptural ordinance that great arrow which was supremely destructive, nay, capable of dispelling the fear of all the worlds in general and the Ikṣvākus in particular, taking away the glory of the enemies and delighting one's own self, the mighty Śrī Rāma, who was endowed with extraordinary strength, then placed it on his bow. (13-14)

तस्मिन् संधीयमाने तु राघवेण शरोत्तमे ।
सर्वभूतानि संत्रेसुश्चाल च वसुंधरा ॥ १५ ॥

While that excellent arrow was being set by Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) to his bow, all created being for their part felt terrified and the earth shook. (15)

स रावणाय संक्रुद्धो भृशमायम्य कार्मुकम् ।
चिक्षेप परमायत्तः शरं मर्मविदारणम् ॥ १६ ॥

Stretching his bow at full length, Śrī Rāma, who felt highly provoked and was supremely active, shot at Rāvaṇa the arrow, which was capable of tearing asunder his vital parts. (16)

स वज्र इव दुर्धर्षो वज्रिबाहुविसर्जितः ।
कृतान्त इव चावार्यो न्यपतद् रावणोरसि ॥ १७ ॥

Difficult to prevail against like the thunderbolt hurled by the arm of Indra (the wielder of the thunderbolt), nay, incapable of being warded off like Death, the arrow impinged on the breast of Rāvaṇa. (17)

स विसृष्टो महावेगः शरीरान्तकरः परः ।
बिभेद हृदयं तस्य रावणस्य दुरात्मनः ॥ १८ ॥

As soon as discharged, the arrow, which was endowed with exceeding velocity and was supremely capable of putting an end to the enemy's body, pierced the heart of the notorious and evil-minded Rāvaṇa. (18)

रुधिराक्तः स वेगेन शरीरान्तकरः शरः ।
रावणस्य हरन् प्राणान् विवेश धरणीतलम् ॥ १९ ॥

Taking the life of Rāvaṇa with all speed and stained with blood, that deadly shaft penetrated the earth's surface. (19)

स शरो रावणं हत्वा रुधिरार्द्रकृतच्छविः ।
कृतकर्मा निभृतवत् स तूणीं पुनराविशत् ॥ २० ॥

Soaked in blood on having killed Rāvaṇa, and thereby having accomplished its mission, nay, appearing graceful, that well-known arrow re-entered the quiver of Śrī Rāma like a meek servant. (20)

तस्य हस्ताद्धतस्याशु कार्मुकं तत् ससायकम् ।
निपपात सह प्राणैर्भ्रश्यमानस्य जीवितात् ॥ २१ ॥

The notorious bow of Rāvaṇa, when the latter was struck, immediately dropped down from his hand alongwith the arrow (set to it), synchronously with his life-breath even while he was being separated from his life. (21)

गतासुर्भीमवेगस्तु नैर्ऋतेन्द्रो महाद्युतिः ।
पपात स्यन्दनाद् भूमौ वृत्रो वज्रहतो यथा ॥ २२ ॥

His life having departed, the ruler of ogres (lit., the progeny of the ogre Nirṛti, the deity presiding over the south-west corner) for his part, who was (once) endowed with terrible impetuosity and invested with extraordinary splendour, fell from his chariot to the ground even like the demon Vṛtra when the latter was struck down by the thunderbolt of Indra. (22)

तं दृष्ट्वा पतितं भूमौ हतशेषा निशाचराः ।
हतनाथा भयत्रस्ताः सर्वतः सम्प्रदुद्भुवुः ॥ २३ ॥

Seeing him fallen on the ground, the night-rangers, who had escaped the carnage, ran very fast in all directions panic-stricken, their lord having now been killed. (23)

नर्दन्तश्चाभिपेतुस्तान् वानरा द्रुमयोधिनः ।
दशग्रीववधं दृष्ट्वा वानरा जितकाशिनः ॥ २४ ॥

Nay, monkeys, who fought with trees, fell roaring upon them. Perceiving the destruction of Rāvaṇa (the ten-headed monster), the monkeys had assumed a triumphant air. (24)

अर्दिता वानरैर्हृष्टैर्लङ्कामभ्यपतन् भयात् ।
हताश्रयत्वात् करुणैर्बाष्पप्रस्रवणैर्मुखैः ॥ २५ ॥

Harassed by the jubilant monkeys, the ogres rushed back in panic towards Laṅkā, with faces exciting pity and raining tears, their mainstay having now been killed. (25)

ततो विनेदुः संहृष्टा वानरा जितकाशिनः ।
वदन्तो राघवजयं रावणस्य च तद्वधम् ॥ २६ ॥

Assuming a triumphant air, highly rejoiced as they were, and proclaiming the victory of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) and the death of Rāvaṇa at his hands, the monkeys thereupon shouted at the top of their voice. (26)

अथान्तरिक्षे व्यनदत् सौम्यस्त्रिदशदुन्दुभिः ।
दिव्यगन्धवहस्तत्र मारुतः सुमुखो ववौ ॥ २७ ॥

Presently there sounded loudly in the air the happy drums of the gods and a highly delightful breeze sprang up there, wafting heavenly odours. (27)

निपपातान्तरिक्षाच्च पुष्पवृष्टिस्तदा भुवि ।
किरन्ती राघवरथं दुरावापा मनोहरा ॥ २८ ॥

Nay, covering the chariot of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), a soul-ravishing shower of flowers, which was difficult to find elsewhere, fell from the heavens to the earth on that occasion. (28)

राघवस्तवसंयुक्ता गगने च विशुश्रुवे ।
साधुसाध्विति वागग्या देवतानां महात्मनाम् ॥ २९ ॥

Nay, the excellent utterance of the high-souled gods saying 'Well done! Bravo!!', combined with a panegyric in praise of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), was distinctly heard in the heavens. (29)

आविवेश महान् हर्षो देवानां चारणैः सह।
रावणे निहते रौद्रे सर्वलोकभयंकरे ॥ ३० ॥

The fierce Rāvaṇa, the terror of all the worlds, having been killed, a great joy filled the heart of the gods, including the Cāraṇas, the celestial bards. (30)

ततः सकामं सुग्रीवमङ्गदं च विभीषणम्।
चकार राघवः प्रीतो हत्वा राक्षसपुंगवम् ॥ ३१ ॥

Rejoiced on having dispatched the foremost of the ogres, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) then fulfilled the desire of Sugrīva, Aṅgada and Vibhīṣaṇa by seeing and felicitating them on the fall of Rāvaṇa. (31)

ततः प्रजग्मुः प्रशमं मरुद्गणा
दिशः प्रसेदुर्विमलं नभोऽभवत्।
मही चकम्पे न च मारुतो ववौ
स्थिरप्रभश्चाप्यभवद् दिवाकरः ॥ ३२ ॥

Thereupon the hosts of gods attained great peace of mind, all the four quarters brightened up and the sky too became clear. The earth no longer shook, the wind blew gently and the sun shed a steady light. (32)

ततस्तु सुग्रीवविभीषणाङ्गदाः
सुहृद्विशिष्टाः सहलक्ष्मणस्तदा।
समेत्य हृष्टा विजयेन राघवं
रणेऽभिरामं विधिनाभ्यपूजयन् ॥ ३३ ॥

Coming together, rejoiced as they were by the victory of Śrī Rāma, Sugrīva, Vibhīṣaṇa and Aṅgada for their part, who were supplemented by their friends and accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, then paid their homage with due ceremony to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) who looked charming on the battlefield. (33)

स तु निहतरिपुः स्थिरप्रतिज्ञः
स्वजनबलाभिवृतो रणे बभूव।
रघुकुलनृपनन्दनो महौजा-
स्त्रिदशगणैरभिसंवृतो महेन्द्रः ॥ ३४ ॥

Śrī Rāma, the delight of Daśaratha (the king of Raghu's race), for his part, who had just killed his adversary, Rāvaṇa, and was thus steadfast in his vows, and who was endowed with extraordinary might, stood encompassed on the battlefield by his own people as well as by his army, even like the mighty Indra, the ruler of gods, surrounded by the celestial hosts. (34)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डेऽष्टाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०८ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and eight in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

नवाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CIX

Vibhīṣaṇa bursts into a lament and Śrī Rāma comforts him and asks him to perform the obsequies in relation to his deceased eldest brother

भ्रातरं निहतं दृष्ट्वा शयानं निर्जितं रणे।
शोकवेगपरीतात्मा विललाप विभीषणः ॥ १ ॥

Seeing his eldest brother, Rāvaṇa, lying vanquished and killed on the battlefield, Vibhīṣaṇa began to lament as follows, his mind overcome with an outburst of grief: (1)

वीरविक्रान्त विख्यात प्रवीण नयकोविद ।
महार्हशयनोपेत किं शेषे निहतो भुवि ॥ २ ॥
निक्षिप्य दीर्घौ निश्चेष्टौ भुजावद्भूषितौ ।
मुकुटेनापवृत्तेन भास्कराकारवर्चसा ॥ ३ ॥

“O renowned and valiant hero, powerful and skilled in polity, having thrown about your two arms, which though still adorned with armlets are now motionless, and with your diadem, brilliant as the sun, knocked down, why are you lying killed on the ground, O brother, who were accustomed to a luxurious bed? (2-3)

तदिदं वीर सम्प्राप्तं यन्मया पूर्वमीरितम् ।
काममोहपरीतस्य यत् तन्न रुचितं तव ॥ ४ ॥

“That very fate which was predicted by me has been met with by you, O valiant brother, inasmuch as my aforesaid advice did not find favour with you, overcome as you were with concupiscence and infatuation. (4)

यन्न दर्पात् प्रहस्तो वा नेन्द्रजिन्नापरे जनाः ।
न कुम्भकर्णोऽतिरथो नातिकायो नरान्तकः ।
न स्वयं बहु मन्येथास्तस्योदकोऽयमागतः ॥ ५ ॥

“This calamity has come about as a sequel to the fact that in their presumption neither Prahasta nor Indrajit nor other people nor even Kumbhakarṇa, an exceeding car-warrior, nor, again, Atikāya nor Narāntaka nor you yourself prized my counsel. (5)

गतः सेतुः सुनीतानां गतो धर्मस्य विग्रहः ।
गतः सत्त्वस्य संक्षेपः सुहस्तानां गतिर्गता ॥ ६ ॥
आदित्यः पतितो भूमौ मग्नस्तमसि चन्द्रमाः ।
चित्रभानुः प्रशान्तार्चिर्व्यवसायो निरुद्यमः ।
अस्मिन् निपतिते वीरे भूमौ शस्त्रभृतां वरे ॥ ७ ॥

“Since this hero, who was the prince of those wielding weapons, has fallen on the ground, the foremost of those conducting themselves with prudence has disappeared, the incarnation of virtue has departed, the repository of might has left for good, the refuge of deft-handed warriors has gone out of sight, the sun has fallen to earth, the moon has merged in darkness, fire has ceased to emit flames and all enthusiastic energy has become worthless. (6-7)

किं शेषमिहलोकस्य गतसत्त्वस्य सम्प्रति ।
रणे राक्षसशार्दूले प्रसुप्त इव पांसुषु ॥ ८ ॥

“Now that Rāvaṇa, a tiger among the ogres, is lying fast asleep, as it were, in the dust on the battlefield, everything belonging to the people in this city of Laṅkā, whose strength has departed, has gone to the dogs. (8)

धृतिप्रवालः प्रसभाग्रपुष्प-स्तपोबलः शौर्यनिबद्धमूलः ।
रणे महान् राक्षसराजवृक्षः
सम्पर्दितो राघवमारुतेन ॥ ९ ॥

“With firmness for its foliage, stubbornness for its excellent blossom, asceticism for its strength and valour for its firm roots, the huge tree in the shape of Rāvaṇa (the king of ogres) has been crushed on the battlefield by the tempest in the shape of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu. (9)

तेजोविषाणः कुलवंशवंशः
कोपप्रसादापरगात्रहस्तः ।
इक्ष्वाकुसिंहावगृहीतदेहः
सुप्तः क्षितौ रावणगन्धहस्ती ॥ १० ॥

“With ardour for its tusks, the line of ancestors for its backbone, wrath for its lower parts (legs etc.), and graciousness for its proboscis, the elephant in rut in the shape of Rāvaṇa is lying asleep on the ground, its body having been overthrown by a lion in the shape of Śrī Rāma, a scion of Ikṣvāku. (10)

पराक्रमोत्साहविजृम्भितार्चि- र्निःश्वासधूमः स्वबलप्रतापः ।
प्रतापवान् संयति राक्षसाग्नि-
निर्वापितो रामपयोधरेण ॥ ११ ॥

“With prowess and energy for its developed flame, sighs for its smoke and his native strength for its scorching heat the blazing fire in the shape of the ogre, Rāvaṇa, has been extinguished on the battlefield by the rainy cloud in the shape of Śrī Rāma. (11)

सिंहर्क्षलाङ्गुलककुद्विषाणः

पराभिजिदगन्धनगन्धवाहः ।

रक्षोवृषश्चापलकर्णचक्षुः

क्षितीश्वरव्याघ्रहतोऽवसनः ॥ १२ ॥

“With the ogres* (who followed him) for its tail, hump and horns, and lasciviousness for its ears and eyes, the bull in the shape of the ogre, Rāvaṇa, the conqueror of its enemies, which vied with the wind in energy, is lying dead, struck down by a tiger in the shape of Śrī Rāma (a ruler of the earth).” (12)

वदन्तं हेतुमद्वाक्यं परिदृष्टार्थनिश्चयम् ।

रामः शोकसमाविष्टमित्युवाच विभीषणम् ॥ १३ ॥

To Vibhiṣaṇa, who was uttering words full of reason, nay, which revealed his determined view of the matter, nay, who was fully possessed by grief, Śrī Rāma spoke as follows: (13)

नायं विनष्टो निश्चेष्टः समरे चण्डविक्रमः ।

अत्युन्नतमहोत्साहः पतितोऽयमशङ्कितः ॥ १४ ॥

“Rāvaṇa has not met his death because he lacked in energy. He has fallen in combat for the good of the world even though he was endowed with terrific prowess and exhibited extraordinary enthusiasm of a very exalted type and remained undaunted throughout. (14)

नैवं विनष्टाः शोचन्ते क्षत्रधर्मव्यवस्थिताः ।

वृद्धिमाशंसमाना ये निपतन्ति रणाजिरे ॥ १५ ॥

“Warriors who fall on the battlefield while remaining steadfast in the duty of a

Kṣatriya (warrior) and seeking advancement in the shape of victory and are thus killed, need not be mourned for. (15)

येन सेन्द्रास्त्रयो लोकास्त्रासिता युधि धीमता ।

तस्मिन् कालसमायुक्ते न कालः परिशोचितुम् ॥ १६ ॥

“There is no occasion to grieve for his having been brought under the sway of death, by whom, intelligent as he was, (all) the three worlds (viz., earth, heaven and the intermediate region), including Indra, their ruler, were constantly thrown into a fright. (16)

नैकान्तविजयो युद्धे भूतपूर्वः कदाचन ।

परैर्वा हन्यते वीरः परान् वा हन्ति संयुगे ॥ १७ ॥

“None has ever been exclusively victorious even in the past. A hero is either killed by his enemies or makes short work of them in combat. (17)

इयं हि पूर्वैः संदिष्टा गतिः क्षत्रियसम्पत्ता ।

क्षत्रियो निहतः संख्ये न शोच्य इति निश्चयः ॥ १८ ॥

“Such indeed is the destiny proclaimed by the ancients as highly esteemed for a warrior. A warrior killed in action does not deserve to be mourned: such is the conclusion of the scriptures. (18)

तदेवं निश्चयं दृष्ट्वा तत्त्वमास्थाय विज्वरः ।

यदिहानन्तरं कार्यं कल्प्यं तदनुचिन्तय ॥ १९ ॥

“Therefore, bearing this conclusion in mind, nay holding on to the right path and freed from grief, please consider what duty deserves to be performed next at this juncture.” (19)

तमुक्तवाक्यं विक्रान्तं राजपुत्रं विभीषणः ।

उवाच शोकसंतप्तो भ्रातुर्हितमनन्तरम् ॥ २० ॥

To that valiant prince, Śrī Rāma, who had just finished his say, Vibhiṣaṇa, who was torn with grief, next made the following

* The word ‘Simharkṣa’ stands for the lunar mansion known by the name of Mūla, which holds sway over the ogre race. Due to its close association with the ogre race the word has been used in this verse as a synonym for the ogres.

submission in the interest of his deceased eldest brother. (20)

योऽयं विमर्देष्वविभग्नपूर्वः
सुरैः समस्तैरपि वासवेन ।
भवन्तमासाद्य रणे विभग्नो
वेलामिवासाद्य यथा समुद्रः ॥ २१ ॥

“This ogre, who had never been vanquished before in trials of strength by all the gods combined, or even by Indra himself, has been routed on confronting you on the battlefield even as the sea breaks up on reaching the shore. (21)

अनेन दत्तानि वनीपकेषु
भुक्ताश्च भोगा निभृताश्च भृत्याः ।
धनानि मित्रेषु समर्पितानि
वैराण्यमित्रेषु च यापितानि ॥ २२ ॥

“By him gifts were conferred on mendicants, pleasures too were enjoyed and dependants were fully maintained, riches were bestowed on friends and grudges against enemies were also revenged. (22)

एषोऽहिताग्निश्च महातपाश्च
वेदान्तगः कर्मसु चाग्र्यशूरः ।
एतस्य यत् प्रेतगतस्य कृत्यं
तत् कर्तुमिच्छामि तव प्रसादात् ॥ २३ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे नवाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १०९ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and nine in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

दशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CX

The lament of Rāvaṇa's consorts

रावणं निहतं श्रुत्वा राघवेण महात्मना ।
अन्तःपुराद् विनिष्येतू राक्षस्यः शोककर्षिताः ॥ १ ॥
वार्यमाणाः सुबहुशो वेष्टन्त्यः क्षितिपांसुषु ।
विमुक्तकेश्यः शोकार्ता गावो वत्सहता इव ॥ २ ॥

Emaciated through grief on hearing of “Nay, he maintained a perpetually sacred fire and practised great religious austerities, had completely mastered the Vedas and was highly proficient in ritual acts. Through your goodwill I seek to perform that which ought to be performed in relation to this brother of mine, who has departed to the other world.” (23)

स तस्य वाक्यैः करुणैर्महात्मा
सम्बोधितः साधु विभीषणेन ।
आज्ञापयामास नरेन्द्रसूनुः
स्वर्गीयमाधानमदीनसत्त्वः ॥ २४ ॥

Appealed to by Vibhīṣaṇa in his own pathetic words, that high-souled prince,
Śrī Rāma, who was undepressed in spirits, commanded him to perform funeral rites, which were calculated to lead the departed soul to heaven: (24)

मरणान्तानि वैराणि निर्वृत्तं नः प्रयोजनम् ।
क्रियतामस्य संस्कारो ममाप्येष यथा तव ॥ २५ ॥

“Animosity ends with death. Our purpose has been achieved. Therefore, let obsequies be performed in relation to him
now. He is as good as mine too as yours.”
(25)

Rāvaṇa having been killed by the highsouled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the ogresses living in the gynaeceum of Rāvaṇa, rushed out of the gynaeceum, rolling in the dust of the streets, though being held back every now and then by their maid-servants, their hair dishevelled, stricken as they were with grief like cows that had lost their calf. (1-2)

उत्तरेण विनिष्क्रम्य द्वारेण सह राक्षसैः।
प्रविश्यायोधनं घोरं विचिन्वन्त्यो हतं पतिम्॥ ३॥
आर्यपुत्रेति वादिन्यो हा नाथेति च सर्वशः।
परिपेतुः कबन्धाङ्गां महीं शोणितकर्दमाम्॥ ४॥

Issuing out of the northern gate of Laṅkā alongwith ogres, and penetrating deep into the dreadful battlefield searching for their husband, who had been killed, nay, crying out, “O my husband! Ah my lord!!”, they all ran hither and thither on the ground, which was covered with headless trunks and rendered muddy with gore. (3-4)

ता बाष्पपरिपूर्णाक्ष्यो भर्तृशोकपराजिताः।
करिण्य इव नर्दन्त्यः करेण्वो हतयूथपाः॥ ५॥
ददृशुस्ता महाकायं महावीर्यं महाद्युतिम्।
रावणं निहतं भूमौ नीलाञ्जनचयोपमम्॥ ६॥

Crying like female elephants, their eyes full of tears, overcome as they were with grief for their husband, the aforesaid ogresses, who also looked like female elephants that had lost the leader of their herd, saw the gigantic Rāvaṇa, who was endowed with extraordinary prowess and invested with great splendour, lying killed on the ground like a heap of black antimony. (5-6)

ताः पतिं सहसा दृष्ट्वा शयानं रणपांसुषु।
निपेतुस्तस्य गात्रेषु च्छिन्ना वनलता इव॥ ७॥

Beholding their husband lying in the dust of the battlefield, they precipitately fell down on his limbs like so many uprooted wild creepers. (7)

बहुमानात् परिष्वज्य काचिदेनं रुरोद ह।
चरणौ काचिदालम्ब्य काचित् कण्ठेऽवलम्ब्य च॥ ८॥

Embracing him out of great regard, one burst into tears, another sobbed holding his feet; while a third began to weep hanging on his neck. (8)

उत्क्षिप्य च भुजौ काचिद् भूमौ सुपरिवर्तते।
हतस्य वदनं दृष्ट्वा काचिन्मोहमुपागमत्॥ ९॥

Yet another rolled on the ground, throwing up her arms; while still another fell into a swoon on seeing the face of her deceased husband. (9)

काचिदङ्गे शिरः कृत्वा रुरोद मुखमीक्षती।
स्नापयन्ती मुखं बाष्पैस्तुषारैरिव पङ्कजम्॥ १०॥

Laying his head in her lap, one wept as she looked on his countenance, bathing his face with tears even as nature would cover a lotus with dew-drops. (10)

एवमार्ताः पतिं दृष्ट्वा रावणं निहतं भुवि।
चुकुशुर्बहुधा शोकाद् भूयस्ताः पर्यदेवयन्॥ ११॥

Afflicted thus to see their husband, Rāvaṇa, lying killed on the ground as mentioned above, the ladies cried in diverse ways out of grief and then began to wail as follows: (11)

येन वित्रासितः शक्रो येन वित्रासितो यमः।
येन वैश्रवणो राजा पुष्पकेण वियोजितः॥ १२॥
गन्धर्वाणामृषीणां च सुराणां च महात्मनाम्।
भयं येन रणे दत्तं सोऽयं शेते रणे हतः॥ १३॥

“Here lies killed on the battlefield the warrior by whom Indra was thrown into a fright and Yama (the god of retribution) was also struck with terror, nay, by whom Kubera (son of Sage Viśravā), the king of Yakṣas, was deprived of his aerial car, Puṣpaka, and by whom fear was inspired on the battlefield in the Gandharvas (celestial musicians), in the Ṛṣis (the seers of Vedic Mantras) as well as in the lofty-minded gods. (12-13)

असुरेभ्यः सुरेभ्यो वा पन्नगेभ्योऽपि वा तथा।
भयं यो न विजानाति तस्येदं मानुषाद् भयम्॥ १४॥

“This catastrophe in the form of death has come from a mortal to him who did not conceive any fear from the demons or the gods or even from reptiles for that matter! (14)

अवध्यो देवतानां यस्तथा दानवरक्षसाम्।
हतः सोऽयं रणे शेते मानुषेण पदातिना ॥ १५ ॥

“Here lies killed in combat by a mortal come walking all the way from Ayodhyā, a warrior who was incapable of being killed by gods, and even so, by devils and ogres too! (15)

यो न शक्यः सुरैर्हन्तुं न यक्षैर्नासुरैस्तथा।
सोऽयं कश्चिदिवासत्त्वो मृत्युं मर्त्येन लम्बितः ॥ १६ ॥

“Here lies, conveyed by a mortal to the region of death, like one devoid of strength, he who could not be disposed of by gods, Yakṣas and demons alike.” (16)

एवं वदन्त्यो रुरुदुस्तस्य ता दुःखिताः स्त्रियः।
भूय एव च दुःखार्ता विलेपुश्च पुनः पुनः ॥ १७ ॥

Wailing as aforesaid, those wretched consorts of Rāvaṇa burst into tears. Nay, stricken with agony, they repeatedly lamented once more in the following words: (17)

अशृण्वता तु सुहृदां सततं हितवादिनाम्।
मरणायाहता सीता राक्षसाश्च निपातिताः।
एताः सममिदानीं ते वयमात्मा च पातितः ॥ १८ ॥

“To your own destruction was Sītā borne away by you, who did not listen to the remonstrances of your near and dear ones, who always offered friendly counsel to you. Nay, ogres too have been struck-down and here stand we, your consorts, as well as your ownself destroyed all at once. (18)

ब्रुवाणोऽपि हितं वाक्यमिष्टो भ्राता विभीषणः।
दृष्टं परुषितो मोहात् त्वयाऽऽत्मवधकांक्षिणा ॥ १९ ॥

“Though tendering salutary advice to you, your beloved younger brother, Vibhīṣaṇa, was harshly treated through ignorance by you, who evidently sought your own destruction; and the result has been seen by us. (19)

यदि निर्यातिता ते स्यात् सीता रामाय मैथिली।
न नः स्याद् व्यसनं घोरमिदं मूलहरं महत् ॥ २० ॥

“Had Sītā, a princess of Mithilā, been restored by you to Rāma, this appalling and major calamity, which has robbed us of our very root, would not have befallen us. (20)

वृत्तकामो भवेद् भ्राता रामो मित्रकुलं भवेत्।
वयं चाविधवाः सर्वाः सकामा न च शत्रवः ॥ २१ ॥

“Your brother, Vibhīṣaṇa, would have in that case had his desire fulfilled, Rāma would have turned our ally; nay, we all would have been spared the curse of widowhood and our enemies would not have realized their ambition. (21)

त्वया पुनर्नृशंसेन सीतां संरुन्धता बलात्।
राक्षसा वयमात्मा च त्रयं तुल्यं निपातितम् ॥ २२ ॥

“By you, however, who, hard-hearted as you were, was forcibly kept Sītā under detention, the ogres, we, your consorts, as well as your ownself—all the three have been ruined all at once. (22)

न कामकारः कामं वा तव राक्षसपुंगव।
दैवं चेष्टयते सर्वं हतं दैवेन हन्यते ॥ २३ ॥

“Your acting according to your own will, however, was not sufficient to ruin you, O bull among the ogres! For, Providence alone prompts all to action. He alone is killed who is killed by destiny. (23)

वानराणां विनाशोऽयं राक्षसानां च ते रणे।
तव चैव महाबाहो दैवयोगादुपागतः ॥ २४ ॥

“This destruction of the monkeys as also of the ogres as well as yours in the conflict courted by you has come about as an act of destiny alone, O mighty-armed one! (24)

नैवार्थेन च कामेन विक्रमेण न चाज्ञया।
शक्या दैवगतिर्लोके निवर्तयितुमुद्यता ॥ २५ ॥

“The course of destiny, when about to bear fruit, cannot be diverted by money, wish, valour or even by command.” (25)

विलेपुर्वं दीनास्ता राक्षसाधिपयोषितः ।
 कुर्य इव दुःखार्ता बाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणाः ॥ २६ ॥
 Thus lamented like female ospreys the aforesaid consorts of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres, stricken with agony as they were, their eyes bedimmed with tears.

 (26)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे दशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११० ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and ten in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

एकादशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXI

Mandodarī's lament and the funeral of Rāvaṇa

तासां विलपमानानां तदा राक्षसयोषिताम् ।
 ज्येष्ठपत्नी प्रिया दीना भर्तारं समुदैक्षत ॥ १ ॥

Of the aforesaid consorts of the ogre, Rāvaṇa, who were lamenting as above on that occasion, the beloved and seniormost consort, who was feeling miserable, gazed on her husband. (1)

दशग्रीवं हतं दृष्ट्वा रामेणाचिन्त्यकर्मणा ।
 पतिं मन्दोदरी तत्र कृपणा पर्यदेवयत् ॥ २ ॥

Seeing her spouse, Rāvaṇa, the ten-headed monster, made short work of by Śrī
 Rāma of inconceivable exploits, the wretched
 Mandodarī lamented as follows on that spot:
 (2)

ननु नाम महाबाहो तव वैश्रवणानुज ।
 क्रुद्धस्य प्रमुखे स्थातुं त्रस्यत्यपि पुरंदरः ॥ ३ ॥

"Indeed, it is well known, O mighty-armed younger brother of Kubera (son of Sage Viśravā), that even Indra, the destroyer of citadels, feared to stand in front of you when you were angry. (3)

ऋषयश्च महान्तोऽपि गन्धर्वाश्च यशस्विनः ।
 ननु नाम तवोद्वेगाच्चारणाश्च दिशो गताः ॥ ४ ॥

Even eminent Ṛṣis (seers of Vedic
 Mantras) and illustrious Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Cāraṇas (celestial bards) too, they say, actually fled in all directions for fear of you. (4)

स त्वं मानुषमात्रेण रामेण युधि निर्जितः ।
 न व्यपत्रपसे राजन् किमिदं राक्षसेश्वर ॥ ५ ॥

"How is it that you do not feel abashed even though vanquished in combat by Rāma a mere mortal, O king, O ruler of ogres! (5)

कथं त्रैलोक्यमाक्रम्य श्रिया वीर्येण चान्वितम् ।
 अविषह्यं जघान त्वां मानुषो वनगोचरः ॥ ६ ॥

"How did a mortal, wandering in the woods, kill you, who, having overcome all the three worlds by dint of your prowess, had grown irresistible and were endowed with glory? (6)

मानुषाणामविषये चरतः कामरूपिणः ।
 विनाशस्तव रामेण संयुगे नोपपद्यते ॥ ७ ॥

"That you, who lived in a place inaccessible to man and were able to assume any form at will, were destroyed in combat by Rāma, is not compatible with reason. (7)

न चैतत् कर्म रामस्य श्रद्धामि चमूमुखे ।
 सर्वतः समुपेतस्य तव तेनाभिमर्षणम् ॥ ८ ॥

"Nor do I believe that your discomfiture at his hands in the van, of your army, fully equipped as you were with all implements of war, was the achievement of Rāma. (8)

अथवा रामरूपेण कृतान्तः स्वयमागतः ।
मायां तव विनाशाय विधायाप्रतितर्किताम् ॥ १॥

“Or, taking recourse to inconceivable magic for your destruction, Death himself appeared in the form of Rāma. (9)

अथवा वासवेन त्वं धर्षितोऽसि महाबल ।
वासवस्य तु का शक्तिस्त्वां द्रष्टुमपि संयुगे ॥ १० ॥
महाबलं महावीर्यं देवशत्रुं महौजसम् ।
व्यक्तमेष महायोगी परमात्मा सनातनः ॥ ११ ॥
अनादिमध्यनिधनो महतः परमो महान् ।
तमसः परमो धाता शङ्खचक्रगदाधरः ॥ १२ ॥
श्रीवत्सवक्षा नित्यश्रीरजय्यः शाश्वतो ध्रुवः ।
मानुषं रूपमास्थाय विष्णुः सत्यपराक्रमः ॥ १३ ॥
सर्वैः परिवृतो देवैर्वारत्नमुपागतैः ।
सर्वलोकेश्वरः श्रीमाल्लोकानां हितकाम्यया ॥ १४ ॥
स राक्षसपरीवारं देवशत्रुं भयावहम् ।
इन्द्रियाणि पुरा जित्वा जितं त्रिभुवनं त्वया ॥ १५ ॥

“Or, it seems, you were overcome by Indra (disguised as Rāma), O lord endowed with extraordinary might! Indra, however, had no power even to gaze on you, the avowed enemy of gods, on the battlefield, endowed as you were with extraordinary might, valour and energy. “Assuming a human semblance, prompted as He was by the desire to do good to all the worlds and surrounded by all the gods, who had taken the form of so many monkeys, evidently the celebrated Lord Viṣṇu of unfailing prowess, the eternal Supreme Spirit, a great master of yoga, the gracious Ruler of all the three worlds as well as their sustainer, who has no beginning, middle or end, is supremely greater than the great and stands eternally beyond darkness (ignorance) who carries a conch, a discus and a mace on His person and is distinguished by the mark of Śrīvatsa (a curl of white hair) on the breast, who is constantly endowed with fortune, is invincible, everlasting and perpetual, made short work of you, a terrible enemy of gods, alongwith the ogres who surrounded you. After subduing the senses, including the mind, the internal sense, all the three worlds were conquered by you in the course of the austerities practised by you in the past.

(10—15)

स्मरद्भिरिव तद् वैरमिन्द्रियैरेव निर्जितः ।
यदैव हि जनस्थाने राक्षसैर्बहुभिवृतः ॥ १६ ॥
खरस्तु निहतो भ्राता तदा रामो न मानुषः ।
यदैव नगरीं लङ्कां दुष्प्रवेशां सुरैरपि ॥ १७ ॥
प्रविष्टो हनुमान् वीर्यात् तदैव व्यथिता वयम् ।
क्रियतामविरोधश्च राघवेणेति यन्मया ॥ १८ ॥
उच्चमानो न गृह्णासि तस्येयं व्युष्टिरागता ।
अकस्माच्चाभिकामोऽसि सीतां राक्षसपुङ्गव ॥ १९ ॥
ऐश्वर्यस्य विनाशाय देहस्य स्वजनस्य च ।
अरुन्धत्या विशिष्टां तां रोहिण्याश्चापि दुर्मते ॥ २० ॥
सीतां धर्षयता मान्यां त्वया ह्यसदृशं कृतम् ।
वसुधाया हि वसुधां श्रियाः श्रीं भर्तृवत्सलाम् ॥ २१ ॥

“You now stand vanquished in your turn by the senses themselves, who have ceased to co-operate with you as though they recollected their old grudge against you, occasioned by their discomfiture at your hands. The moment your brother, Khara, was actually killed by Śrī Rāma in Janasthāna, even though surrounded by numerous ogres, it became evident that Śrī Rāma was really no mortal. Nay, we all felt perturbed about our future the moment Hanumān penetrated by dint of his prowess deep into the city of Laṅkā, which was difficult to penetrate into even for gods. This nemesis has come upon you since you did not heed my advice. You were being repeatedly admonished by me to the effect that no hostility should be entered into with Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu). Nay, to the destruction of your sovereignty, life and your own people, you unaccountably conceived a passion for Sītā, O bull among the ogres! Surely an unworthy act was perpetrated by you, O foolish one, while treating with indignity, the celebrated Sītā, who is superior in point of devotion to her husband, even to Arundhatī (wife of Sage Vasiṣṭha) and Rohiṇī (the principal spouse of the moon-god), who deserved to be respected and who is the model of forbearance even to Goddess Earth and a model of grace even to Śrī, the goddess of fortune and charm, and is extremely fond of her husband. (16—21)

सीतां सर्वानवद्याङ्गीमरण्ये विजने शुभाम् ।
आनयित्वा तु तां दीनां छद्मनाऽऽत्मस्वदूषणम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Bearing away by recourse to a fraud the aforesaid Sītā, who was living in a lonely forest, was faultless of every limb and charming, though miserable, ruination has undoubtedly been brought by you on yourself as well as on your relations. (22)

अप्राप्य तं चैव कामं मैथिलीसंगमे कृतम् ।
पतिव्रतायास्तपसा नूनं दग्धोऽसि मे प्रभो ॥ २३ ॥

“Nay, having failed to realize the well-known ambition cherished by you for union with Sītā, the princess of Mithilā, you have surely been consumed by the asceticism of that lady devoted to her husband, O my lord! (23)

तदैव यन्न दग्धस्त्वं धर्षयंस्तनुमध्यमाम् ।
देवा बिभ्यति ते सर्वे सेन्द्राः साग्निपुरोगमाः ॥ २४ ॥

“It is because all the gods together with Indra (the ruler of gods), including those headed by the god of fire, fear you that you were not consumed even while laying violent hands on that slender-waisted lady. (24)

अवश्यमेव लभते फलं पापस्य कर्मणः ।
भर्तः पर्यागते काले कर्ता नास्त्यत्र संशयः ॥ २५ ॥

“When the time for retribution comes, O my lord, the doer assuredly reaps the fruit of his sinful deed: there is no doubt about it. (25)

शुभकृच्छुभमाप्नोति पापकृत् पापमश्रुते ।
विभीषणः सुखं प्राप्तस्त्वं प्राप्तः पापमीदृशम् ॥ २६ ॥

“The doer of a blessed act gathers happiness, while the perpetrator of a sinful act reaps misery. While Vibhiṣaṇa has attained happiness, you have met with such an evil destiny. (26)

सन्त्यन्याः प्रमदास्तुभ्यं रूपेणाभ्यधिकास्ततः ।
अनङ्गवशमापन्नस्त्वं तु मोहान्न बुद्ध्यसे ॥ २७ ॥

“There are in your gynaeceum other young ladies superior to Sītā in physical charm; having fallen a prey to concupiscence, however, you did not perceive this through ignorance. (27)

न कुलेन न रूपेण न दाक्षिण्येन मैथिली ।
मयाधिका वा तुल्या वा तत् तु मोहान्न बुद्ध्यसे ॥ २८ ॥

“The princess of Mithilā is no match for me, much less superior to me, in birth, nor in comeliness, nor again in urbanity. You, however, did not perceive this through infatuation. (28)

सर्वदा सर्वभूतानां नास्ति मृत्युरलक्षणः ।
तव तद्वदयं मृत्युर्मैथिलीकृतलक्षणः ॥ २९ ॥

“Death does not come to any living being at any time without any (exciting) cause. Your demise on this occasion has likewise been brought about on account of Sītā (a princess of Mithilā). (29)

सीतानिमित्तजो मृत्युस्त्वया दूरादुपाहृतः ।
मैथिली सह रामेण विशोका विहरिष्यति ॥ ३० ॥
अल्पपुण्या त्वहं घोरे पतिता शोकसागरे ।
कैलासे मन्दरे मेरौ तथा चैत्रश्रे वने ॥ ३१ ॥
देवोद्यानेषु सर्वेषु विहृत्य सहिता त्वया ।
विमानेनानुरूपेण या याम्यतुलया श्रिया ॥ ३२ ॥
पश्यन्ती विविधान् देशांस्तांस्तान्नित्रस्त्रगम्बरा ।
भ्रंशिता कामभोगेभ्यः सास्मि वीर वधात् तव ॥ ३३ ॥

“Death, which was to be brought about on account of Sītā, was invited by you from afar. Rid of her grief, the princess of Mithilā will now sport with Śrī Rāma. I, however, whose stock of merit was poor, have tumbled into a fearful ocean of grief. I, who, having sported with you on Mount Kailāsa, Mount Mandara, Mount Meru, in the grove known by the name of Caitraratha (belonging to Kubera and named after Caitraratha, the king of the Gandharvas, who is reputed to have planted it) as well as in all celestial gardens, adorned, as I was, with lovely garlands and clad in picturesque robes and invested with a matchless splendour, roamed in a suitable aerial car, visiting various lands of every description—have now been deprived of all sense-enjoyments because of your fall. (30—33)

सैवान्येवासि संवृत्ता धिग्राज्ञां चञ्चलां श्रियम् ।
हा राजन् सुकुमारं ते सुभ्रु सुत्वक्समुन्नसम् ॥ ३४ ॥
कान्तिश्रीद्युतिभिस्तुल्यमिन्दुपद्मदिवाकरैः ।
किरीटकूटोज्ज्वलितं ताम्रास्यं दीप्तकुण्डलम् ॥ ३५ ॥
मदव्याकुललोलाक्षं भूत्वा यत्पानभूमिषु ।
विविधस्त्रग्धरं चारु वल्गुस्मितकथं शुभम् ॥ ३६ ॥
तदेवाद्य तवैवं हि वक्त्रं न भ्राजते प्रभो ।
रामसायकनिर्भिन्नं रक्तं रुधिरविस्रवैः ॥ ३७ ॥

“Though the same, I stand transformed into another, as it were. Woe be to the fleeting fortune of kings! Alas, that very countenance of yours, O king, which was so tender and distinguished by charming eyebrows, a glossy surface an exceptionally prominent nose, coppery lips and brilliant earrings, nay, which vied with the moon, the lotus and the sun in radiance, grace and brilliance, respectively, was illuminated by a number of diadems which looked like so many peaks of a mountain, which shone with its eyes wild and rolling through inebriety in banquet halls, bore garlands of every description, was lovely and charming in every way, was lit with a captivating smile and indulged in a delightful talk, does not actually shine as before today, my lord! Pierced with the shafts of Śrī Rāma, it lies dyed with streams of blood. (34—37)

विशीर्णमेदोमस्तिष्कं रूक्षं स्यन्दनरेणुभिः ।
हा पश्चिमा मे सम्प्राप्ता दशा वैधव्यदायिनी ॥ ३८ ॥
या मयाऽऽसीन्न सम्बुद्धा कदाचिदपि मन्दया ।
पिता दानवराजो मे भर्ता मे राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ ३९ ॥

पुत्रो मे शक्रनिर्जेता इत्यहं गर्विता भृशम् ।
दूसारिमथनाः क्रूराः प्रख्यातबलपौरुषाः ॥ ४० ॥
अकुतश्चिद्भया नाथा ममेत्यासीन्मतिर्धुवा ।
तेषामेवंप्रभावाणां युष्माकं राक्षससर्षभाः ॥ ४१ ॥
कथं भयमसम्बुद्धं मानुषादिदमागतम् ।
स्निग्धेन्द्रनीलनीलं तु प्रांशुशैलोपमं महत् ॥ ४२ ॥
केयूराङ्गदवैदूर्यमुक्ताहारस्त्रगुञ्ज्वलम् ।
कान्तं विहारेष्वधिकं दीप्तं संग्रामभूमिषु ॥ ४३ ॥
भात्याभरणभाभिर्यद् विद्युद्भिरिव तोयदः ।
तदेवाद्य शरीरं ते तीक्ष्णैर्नैकशरैश्चितम् ॥ ४४ ॥

“It has its marrow scattered and brains shattered and has got soiled through the dust raised by the chariots. Alas, the last stage of life, viz., death, which has conferred widowhood on me, and which was never contemplated by me, a wretched woman as I am, has been reached by you. I was extremely proud to think that Maya, the king of devils, was my father, you, the king of ogres, were my husband and Indrajit, the conqueror of Indra, was my son. My guardians were capable of crushing their arrogant enemies, cruel, nay, renowned for their might and valour and as such had no fear from any quarter: such was my firm conviction. How did this unknown peril come to you, who were so powerful, O bull among the ogres, from a mortal? That very body of yours—which was really dark as a glossy sapphire, gigantic like a lofty mountain, and resplendent with Keyūras and Aṅgadas (two varieties of armlets), necklaces of cat’s-eye gems and pearls and garlands, which looked more charming during pastimes and brilliant on the fields of battle, which shone with the lustre of jewels as a rainy cloud with flashes of lightning—lies transfixed with numerous arrows today. (38—44)

पुनर्दुर्लभसंस्पर्शं परिष्वक्तुं न शक्यते ।
श्वाविधः शललैर्यद्वद् बाणैर्लग्नैर्निरन्तरम् ॥ ४५ ॥
स्वर्पितैर्मर्मसु भृशं संछिन्नस्नायुबन्धनम् ।
क्षितौ निपतितं राजन् श्यामं वै रुधिरच्छवि ॥ ४६ ॥

वज्रप्रहाराभिहतो विकीर्ण इव पर्वतः ।
हा स्वप्नः सत्यमेवेदं त्वं रामेण कथं हतः ॥ ४७ ॥

“Though it will be difficult for me to touch it again, it is no longer possible to embrace it. It has tendons cut to pieces by arrows (discharged by Śrī Rāma) dug deep into your vital parts and closely transfixed like the spines of a porcupine. Though dark of complexion, it is now transformed, O king, into the colour of blood and lies fallen on the ground like a mountain broken into pieces when hit by a stroke of lightning. Alas, that which seemed a dream has turned a stark reality. But how could you be killed by Rāma?

(45—47)

त्वं मृत्योरपि मृत्युः स्याः कथं मृत्युवशं गतः ।
त्रैलोक्यवसुभोक्तारं त्रैलोक्योद्वेगदं महत् ॥ ४८ ॥
जेतारं लोकपालानां क्षेप्तारं शंकरस्य च ।
दृष्टानां निग्रहीतारमाविष्कृतपराक्रमम् ॥ ४९ ॥
लोकक्षोभयितारं च साधुभूतविदारणम् ।
ओजसा दृष्टवाक्यानां वक्तारं रिपुसंनिधौ ॥ ५० ॥
स्वयूथभृत्यगोप्तारं हन्तारं भीमकर्मणाम् ।
हन्तारं दानवेन्द्राणां यक्षाणां च सहस्रशः ॥ ५१ ॥
निवातकवचानां तु निग्रहीतारमाहवे ।
नैकयज्ञविलोप्तारं त्रातारं स्वजनस्य च ॥ ५२ ॥
धर्मव्यवस्थाभेत्तारं मायास्रष्टारमाहवे ।
देवासुरनृकन्यानामाहर्तारं ततस्ततः ॥ ५३ ॥
शत्रुस्त्रीशोकदातारं नेतारं स्वजनस्य च ।
लङ्काद्वीपस्य गोप्तारं कर्तारं भीमकर्मणाम् ॥ ५४ ॥
अस्माकं कामभोगानां दातारं रथिनां वरम् ।
एवंप्रभावं भर्तारं दृष्ट्वा रामेण पातितम् ॥ ५५ ॥
स्थिरास्मि या देहमिमं धारयामि हतप्रिया ।
शयनेषु महार्हेषु शयित्वा राक्षसेश्वर ॥ ५६ ॥
इह कस्मात् प्रसुप्तोऽसि धरण्यां रेणुगुण्ठितः ।
यदा मे तनयः शस्तो लक्ष्मणेनेन्द्रजिद् युधि ॥ ५७ ॥
तदा त्वभिहता तीव्रमद्य त्वस्मिन् निपातिता ।
साहं बन्धुजनैर्हीना हीना नाथेन च त्वया ॥ ५८ ॥
विहीना कामभोगैश्च शोचिष्ये शाश्वतीः समाः ।
प्रपन्नो दीर्घमध्वानं राजन्नद्य सुदुर्गमम् ॥ ५९ ॥
नय मामपि दुःखार्ता न वर्तिष्ये त्वया विना ।
कस्मात् त्वं मां विहायेह कृपणां गन्तुमिच्छसि ॥ ६० ॥

“You were death to Death himself; how did you fall under his sway? Stony indeed am I, who, though having lost my darling, still retain this body of mine even on seeing struck down by Rāma, my husband, who enjoyed treasures of all the three worlds and proved to be a great source of annoyance to all the three worlds; who was able to conquer even the guardians of the worlds and lifted up Lord Śiva alongwith his seat, Mount Kailāsa; who manifested his prowess by subduing the arrogant, threw into disorder all the worlds by oppressing them, and tormented pious men; who by virtue of his might uttered insolent words in the presence of his enemy, protected his own band as well as his dependants and killed those who indulged in terrible deeds; who made short work of devil chiefs and Yakṣas (a class of demigods) in thousands, subdued the Nivātakavacas (a class of Dānavas) in combat, put an end to a number of sacrificial performances and protected his own people; who violated the moral order, employed conjuring tricks on the battlefield and bore away from various places the virgin daughters of gods, demons and human beings; who brought mourning to his enemys’ wives, was the leader of his own people and protected the island of Laṅkā, who perpetrated terrible deeds, provided sense-enjoyments to us and was the foremost of car-warriors—in other words, who was endowed with such unique power. Having reposed on sumptuous couches, O ruler of ogres, wherefore are you lying buried in deep slumber on the bare ground and shrouded in dust? I was really hard hit on the occasion when my eldest son, Indrajit, was killed in combat by Lakṣmaṇa. Today, of course, I am undone. Disunited from my kinsfolk, nay, forsaken by you, my lord, and deprived of sense-enjoyments, I shall grieve for innumerable years. Having embarked today on a long journey, which is very difficult to undertake, O king, take me also with you, stricken as I am with agony. I shall no longer survive without you. Wherefore do you wish to depart, leaving me miserable, as I am, here? (48—60)

दीनां विलपतीं मन्दां किं च मां नाभिभाषसे ।
दृष्ट्वा न खल्वभिक्रुद्धो मामिहानवगुण्ठिताम् ॥ ६१ ॥
निर्गतां नगरद्वारात् पद्भ्यामेवागतां प्रभो ।
पश्येष्टदार दारांस्ते भ्रष्टलज्जावगुण्ठनान् ॥ ६२ ॥

“Why do you not speak to me, a forlorn and unfortunate creature, wailing as I am? How are you not enraged at me, who have issued out of the city gate, unveiled and come on foot here, my lord? Look on your consorts, whose veils have dropped off, O lover of your spouses! (61-62)

बहिर्निष्पतितान् सर्वान् कथं दृष्ट्वा न कुप्यसि ।
अयं क्रीडासहायस्तेऽनाथो लालप्यते जनः ॥ ६३ ॥
न चैनमाश्वासयसि किं वा न बहुमन्यसे ।
यास्त्वया विधवा राजन् कृता नैकाः कुलस्त्रियः ॥ ६४ ॥
पतिव्रता धर्मरता गुरुशुश्रूषणे रताः ।
ताभिः शोकाभितप्ताभिः शप्तः परवशं गतः ॥ ६५ ॥

“Why do you not feel enraged to see them all come forth? Nay, this Mandodarī, your playmate, is lamenting in a forlorn condition. Why do you not comfort her or treat her with respect? You have fallen under the sway of your enemy, Śrī Rāma, in that you were cursed by those numerous ladies of noble lineage, who, though devoted to their husband, fond of piety and intent on the service of their elders, had been widowed by you, O king, and were accordingly tormented with grief. (63—65)

त्वया विप्रकृताभिश्च तदा शप्तस्तदागतम् ।
प्रवादः सत्यमेवायं त्वां प्रति प्रायशो नृप ॥ ६६ ॥
पतिव्रतानां नाकस्मात् पतन्त्यश्रूणि भूतले ।
कथं च नाम ते राजल्लोकानाक्रम्य तेजसा ॥ ६७ ॥
नारीचौर्यमिदं क्षुद्रं कृतं शौण्डीर्यमानिना ।
अपनीयाश्रमाद् रामं यन्मृगच्छन्नना त्वया ॥ ६८ ॥

आनीता रामपत्नी सा अपनीय च लक्ष्मणम् ।
कातर्यं च न ते युद्धे कदाचित् संस्मराम्यहम् ॥ ६९ ॥

“That curse which was pronounced by them at that time on their having been wronged by you, has fallen on you. The popular saying that ‘the tears of women devoted to their husband do not generally fall on the earth’s surface in vain’ has come out true in your case, O king! Nay, how was this mean act of abducting a woman actually perpetrated by you, O king, who, having invaded all the three worlds by your might, prided on your heroism? How cowardly it was on your part that the aforesaid consort of Śrī Rāma was borne away by you after luring away Śrī Rāma from his hermitage by recourse to a fraud in the shape of an illusory deer and also removing Lakṣmaṇa from the scene. Nay, I do not recall your faint-heartedness on any occasion on the battlefield. (66—69)

तत् तु भाग्यविपर्यासानूनं ते पक्वलक्षणम् ।
अतीतानागतार्थज्ञो वर्तमानविचक्षणः ॥ ७० ॥
मैथिलीमाहतां दृष्ट्वा ध्यात्वा निःश्वस्य चायतम् ।
सत्यवाक् स महाबाहो देवरो मे यदब्रवीत् ॥ ७१ ॥
अयं राक्षसमुख्यानां विनाशः प्रत्युपस्थितः ।
कामक्रोधसमुत्थेन व्यसनेन प्रसङ्गिना ॥ ७२ ॥
निवृत्तस्त्वकृतेनार्थः सोऽयं मूलहरो महान् ।
त्वया कृतमिदं सर्वमनाथं राक्षसं कुलम् ॥ ७३ ॥

The pusillanimity which appeared in you on the solitary occasion of your carrying off Sītā, due to an irony of fate was surely an indication of your impending doom. Whatever, O mighty-armed one, my younger brother-in-law, Vibhiṣaṇa, who knows matters relating to the past as well as to the future, and is also conversant with the present—said after reflecting and sighing for long, on seeing Sītā (a princess of Mithilā) borne away by you, viz., ‘the extermination of the jewels among the ogres is now imminent!’ has come true. Your entire fortune has disappeared due to the sin perpetrated by you in the shape of Sītā's abduction, which had sprung from concupiscence and wrath and was attended with deep attachment. Hence this major disaster, which has destroyed our very root. This entire race of ogres has been deprived of its protector by you. (70—73)

नहि त्वं शोचितव्यो मे प्रख्यातबलपौरुषः ।

स्त्रीस्वभावात् तु मे बुद्धिः कारुण्ये परिवर्तते ॥ ७४ ॥

“You, who were far famed for your strength and valour, do not deserve to be mourned for by me. Due to feminine nature, however, my mind is leaning towards sadness. (74)

सुकृतं दुष्कृतं च त्वं गृहीत्वा स्वां गतिं गतः ।

आत्मानमनुशोचामि त्वद्विनाशेन दुःखिताम् ॥ ७५ ॥

“Taking with you the stock of your merit and sin, you have gone to the place for which you were destined. I, however, mourn for my own self, afflicted as I am by your loss. (75)

सुहृदां हितकामानां न श्रुतं वचनं त्वया ।

भ्रातृणां चैव कात्स्न्येन हितमुक्तं दशानन ॥ ७६ ॥

“The absolutely salutary advice tendered by your friends, who wished well of you, as well as by your brothers, was not heeded by you, O ten-headed ogre! (76)

हेत्वर्थयुक्तं विधिवच्छ्रेयस्करमदारुणम् ।

विभीषणेनाभिहितं न कृतं हेतुमत् त्वया ॥ ७७ ॥

“The counsel duly offered by Vibhīṣaṇa, which was full of reason and pregnant with meaning, wholesome and agreeable, was not put into effect by you. (77)

मारीचकुम्भकर्णाभ्यां वाक्यं मम पितुस्तथा ।

न कृतं वीर्यमत्तेन तस्येदं फलमीदृशम् ॥ ७८ ॥

“The advice given by Mārīca, your maternal uncle and Kumbhakarna, your own brother as also the counsel of my father (the demon Maya) was not followed by you, drunk as you were with power. What has followed is the bitter consequence of your perversity. (78)

नीलजीमूतसंकाश पीताम्बर शुभाङ्गद ।

स्वगात्राणि विनिक्षिप्य किं शेषे रुधिरावृतः ॥ ७९ ॥

“My lord, resembling a dark cloud in hue, nay, clad in yellow and adorned with brilliant armlets, why having thrown about your limbs are you lying covered with blood? (79)

प्रसुप्त इव शोकार्ता किं मां न प्रतिभाषसे ।

महावीर्यस्य दक्षस्य संयुगेष्वपलायिनः ॥ ८० ॥

यातुधानस्य दौहित्रीं किं मां न प्रतिभाषसे ।

उत्तिष्ठोत्तिष्ठ किं शेषे नवे परिभवे कृते ॥ ८१ ॥

“As though fast asleep, why do you not answer me, stricken with grief as I am? Why do you not vouchsafe a reply to me, the grand-daughter (daughter's daughter) of an ogre (Sumālī by name), who was clever and endowed with extraordinary prowess, and never retreated in battles. Get up! Rise!! How are you lying down even though subjected to a fresh insult? (80-81)

अद्य वै निर्भया लङ्कां प्रविष्टाः सूर्यरश्मयः ।

येन सूदयसे शत्रून् समरे सूर्यवर्चसा ॥ ८२ ॥

वज्रं वज्रधरस्येव सोऽयं ते सततार्चितः ।

रणे बहुप्रहरणो हेमजालपरिष्कृतः ॥ ८३ ॥

परिघो व्यवकीर्णस्ते बाणैश्छिन्नः सहस्रधा ।

प्रियामिवोपसंगृह्य किं शेषे रणमेदिनीम् ॥ ८४ ॥

“Rid of all fear, the sun's rays have actually penetrated deep into Laṅkā today. Torn into a thousand splinters, that very iron bludgeon of yours, which was brilliant as the sun and resembled the thunderbolt of Indra (lit., the wielder of the thunderbolt), with which you exterminated your enemies on the battlefield, and which was constantly honoured by you, which had struck many in combat and which was adorned with a net of gold, lies scattered. Why do you lie embracing the battleground as one would embrace a loved one? (82—84)

अग्रियामिव कस्माच्च मां नेच्छस्यभिभाषितुम् ।
 धिगस्तु हृदयं यस्या ममेदं न सहस्रधा ॥ ८५ ॥
 त्वयि पञ्चत्वमापन्ने फलते शोकपीडितम् ।
 इत्येवं विलपन्ती सा बाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणा ॥ ८६ ॥
 स्नेहोपस्कन्हदया तदा मोहमुपागमत् ।
 कश्मलाभिहता सन्ना बभौ सा रावणोरसि ॥ ८७ ॥
 संध्यानुरक्ते जलदे दीप्ता विद्युदिवोज्ज्वला ।
 तथागतं समुत्थाप्य सपत्यस्तां भृशतुराः ॥ ८८ ॥
 पर्यवस्थापयामासू रुदत्यो रुदतीं भृशम् ।
 किं ते न विदिता देवि लोकानां स्थितिर्ध्रुवा ॥ ८९ ॥
 दशाविभागपर्याये राज्ञां वै चञ्चलाः श्रियः ।
 इत्येवमुच्यमाना सा सशब्दं प्ररुरोद ह ॥ ९० ॥
 स्नपयन्ती तदास्त्रेण स्तनौ वक्त्रं सुनिर्मलम् ।
 एतस्मिन्नन्तरे रामो विभीषणमुवाच ह ॥ ९१ ॥
 संस्कारः क्रियतां भ्रातुः स्त्रीगणः परिसान्त्व्यताम् ।
 तमुवाच ततो धीमान् विभीषण इदं वचः ॥ ९२ ॥
 विमृश्य बुद्ध्या प्रश्रितं धर्मार्थसहितं हितम् ।
 त्यक्तधर्मव्रतं क्रूरं नृशंसमनृतं तथा ॥ ९३ ॥
 नाहमर्हामि संस्कर्तुं परदाराभिमर्शनम् ।
 भ्रातृरूपो हि मे शत्रुरेष सर्वाहिते रतः ॥ ९४ ॥
 रावणो नार्हते पूजां पूज्योऽपि गुरुगौरवात् ।
 नृशंस इति मां राम वक्ष्यन्ति मनुजा भुवि ॥ ९५ ॥

“And why do you not feel inclined to speak to me as though I were loathsome to you? Woe be to me, whose heart does not split into a thousand pieces, even though stricken with grief, now that you have returned to the five elements.” Wailing as aforesaid, Mandodarī, her eyes bedimmed with tears and heart moistened by love, presently fell into a swoon. Fallen on the breast of Rāvaṇa in a fit of unconsciousness, she shone like a vivid flash of lightning across a rainy cloud reddened by the glow of twilight. Raising up Mandodarī, who was reduced to such a plight, and was still bitterly weeping, her co-wives, who were also weeping, sore distressed as they were, restored her to her normal condition. They said to her: “Is the uncertain existence of the worlds known to you, O queen? The wealth of kings actually becomes unsteady when there is a change in the tide of their fortune.” While being consoled in these words, Mandodarī, they say, wailed aloud at that moment, bathing her breasts as well as her spotless countenance in tears. In the meantime Śrī Rāma spoke as follows to Vibhiṣaṇa: “Let obsequies be offered to your eldest brother and let the womenfolk be comforted.” Reflecting within himself, the sagacious Vibhiṣaṇa thereupon made to Śrī Rāma the following humble and wholesome submission, which was in conformity with righteousness and self-interest: “I cannot perform the funeral rites in relation to one who had abandoned the path of virtue and good conduct, who was cruel, merciless and untrue and laid his hands upon others’ wives. Intent upon doing harm to all, Rāvaṇa was my virtual enemy in the guise of a brother. Though worthy of adoration by virtue of his seniority in that he was my elder brother, he does not merit my respect. On my refusing to perform his obsequies people on earth will surely brand me as ruthless, O Rāma! (85—95)

श्रुत्वा तस्यागुणान् सर्वे वक्ष्यन्ति सुकृतं पुनः ।
 तच्छ्रुत्वा परमप्रीतो रामो धर्मभृतां वरः ॥ ९६ ॥
 विभीषणमुवाचेदं वाक्यज्ञं वाक्यकोविदः ।
 तवापि मे प्रियं कार्यं त्वत्प्रभावान्मया जितम् ॥ ९७ ॥

“On hearing of his blemishes, however, all will speak of me as having done well.” Highly pleased to hear the aforesaid answer, Śrī Rāma, the foremost of those upholding the cause of virtue, who was an adept in the art of expression, replied as follows to Vibhiṣaṇa, who also knew how to speak: “A kindly act must be done by me to you as well inasmuch as victory has been scored by me through your might. (96-97)

अवश्यं तु क्षमं वाच्यो मया त्वं राक्षसेश्वर ।
 अधर्मानृतसंयुक्तः कामं त्वेष निशाचरः ॥ ९८ ॥
 तेजस्वी बलवाञ्छूरः संग्रामेषु च नित्यशः ।
 शतक्रतुमुखैर्देवैः श्रूयते न पराजितः ॥ ९९ ॥

“You, for your part, need must be told by me that which is proper, O lord of ogres! Granted that this ranger of the night was full of unrighteousness and falsity, he was all the same energetic, mighty and always heroic in battles. He was never heard of as vanquished even by gods with Indra (who is presupposed to have performed a hundred horse-sacrifices as a condition precedent for his attaining Indrahood) at their head. (98-99)

महात्मा बलसम्पन्नो रावणो लोकरावणः ।
मरणान्तानि वैराणि निर्वृत्तं नः प्रयोजनम् ॥ १०० ॥

“Though he made people cry by his tyranny, Rāvaṇa was high-minded and richly endowed with might. Hostilities endure till death only. Our purpose too stands accomplished now. (100)

क्रियतामस्य संस्कारो ममाप्येष यथा तव ।
त्वत्सकाशान्महाबाहो संस्कारं विधिपूर्वकम् ॥ १०१ ॥
क्षिप्रमर्हति धर्मेण त्वं यशोभाग् भविष्यसि ।
राघवस्य वचः श्रुत्वा त्वरमाणो विभीषणः ॥ १०२ ॥
संस्कारयितुमारेभे भ्रातरं रावणं हतम् ।
स प्रविश्य पुरीं लङ्कां राक्षसेन्द्रो विभीषणः ॥ १०३ ॥
रावणस्याग्निहोत्रं तु निर्यापयति सत्वरम् ।
शकटान् दारुरूपाणि अग्नीन् वै याजकांस्तथा ॥ १०४ ॥
तथा चन्दनकाष्ठानि काष्ठानि विविधानि च ।
अगरूणि सुगन्धीनि गन्धांश्च सुरभींस्तथा ॥ १०५ ॥
मणिमुक्ताप्रवालानि निर्यापयति राक्षसः ।
आजगाम मुहूर्तेन राक्षसैः परिवारितः ॥ १०६ ॥
ततो माल्यवता सार्धं क्रियामेव चकार सः ।
सौवर्णीं शिबिकां दिव्यामारोप्य क्षौमवाससम् ॥ १०७ ॥
रावणं राक्षसाधीशमश्रुवर्णमुखा द्विजाः ।
तूर्यघोषैश्च विविधैः स्तुवद्भिश्चाभिनन्दितम् ॥ १०८ ॥

“Let his obsequies be performed. He is as well mine as yours. He deserves to be cremated by you with due ceremony in accordance with the prescribed course of conduct without delay. You will thereby earn good repute, O mighty-armed one!” Hearing the appeal of Śrī Rāma, Vibhiṣaṇa hastily proceeded to perform the obsequies relating to his eldest brother, Rāvaṇa, who had been killed in combat. Penetrating deep into the city of Lāṅkā, Vibhiṣaṇa, the celebrated king of ogres, for his part quickly concluded the Agnihotra (the act of pouring oblations into the sacred fire) carried on by Rāvaṇa. The ogre, Vibhiṣaṇa, actually caused to be brought together carts, excellent species of firewood, the three sacred fires maintained by Rāvaṇa, as well as the priests required to officiate at the obsequies, likewise logs of sandalwood as also various other species of firewood, pieces of fragrant aloe wood and odorous perfumes as well as gems, pearls and corals. Surrounded by other ogres, he returned awhile to the field of battle and then he initiated the obsequies themselves in conjunction with Mālyavān (the father of his own mother). Placing the dead body of Rāvaṇa, the suzerain lord of ogres—who was shrouded in linen and was hailed with the blasts of various musical instruments as well as by panegyrists singing his praises, Brāhmaṇas (forming part of the ogre race, which was apparently divided into four grades like human beings) stood round him with their faces bathed in tears. (101—108)

पताकाभिश्च चित्राभिः सुमनोभिश्च चित्रिताम् ।
उत्क्षिप्य शिबिकां तां तु विभीषणपुरोगमाः ॥ १०९ ॥
दक्षिणाभिमुखाः सर्वे गृह्य काष्ठानि भेजिरे ।
अग्रयो दीप्यमानास्ते तदाध्वर्युसमीरिताः ॥ ११० ॥
शरणाभिगताः सर्वे पुरस्तात् तस्य ते ययुः ।
अन्तःपुराणि सर्वाणि रुदमानानि सत्वरम् ॥ १११ ॥
पृष्ठतोऽनुययुस्तानि प्लवमानानि सर्वतः ।
रावणं प्रयते देशे स्थाप्य ते भृशदुःखिताः ॥ ११२ ॥
चितां चन्दनकाष्ठैश्च पद्मकोशीरचन्दनैः ।
ब्राह्मणा संवर्तयामासू राङ्गवास्तरणावृताम् ॥ ११३ ॥

Lifting up that bier, which had been decorated with picturesque pennons and flowers too, and taking up blocks of wood, all the ogres for their part, with Vibhiṣaṇa at their head, proceeded with their faces turned towards the south. All the aforesaid sacred fires, which were borne by priests well-versed in Yajurveda and were contained in copper vessels, nay, which were bursting into flames at that time, went in front of Rāvaṇa. All the well-known women of the gynaeceum followed at his heels with quick paces, sobbing and tottering on all sides. Having placed the bier bearing Rāvaṇa on a consecrated spot, Vibhiṣaṇa and others, who were all feeling sore afflicted, piled up a pyre with logs of sandalwood, as well as with blocks of Padmakawood, the fragrant root of the Uśīra plant and the grass Bhadrakālī in accordance with Vedic rites, and covered it with the skin of black antelopes. (109—113)

प्रचक्रू राक्षसेन्द्रस्य पितृमेधमनुत्तमम् ।
वेदिं च दक्षिणाप्राचीं यथास्थानं च पावकम् ॥ ११४ ॥
पृषदाज्येन सम्पूर्णं स्तुवं स्कन्धे प्रचिक्षिपुः ।
पादयोः शकटं प्रापुरूर्वोश्चोलूखलं तदा ॥ ११५ ॥

Placing Rāvaṇa on the pyre, they then duly performed the obsequies in honour of the ruler of ogres in a superb way as follows: Constructing an altar to the south-east of the funeral pile and placing the sacred fire in its proper place, they then poured a ladle full of ghee mixed with curds on his shoulders and placed a cart on his feet and a mortar on his thighs. (114-115)

दारुपात्राणि सर्वाणि अरणिं चोत्तरारणिम् ।
दत्त्वा तु मुसलं चान्यं यथास्थानं विचक्रमुः ॥ ११६ ॥
शास्त्रदृष्टेन विधिना महर्षिविहितेन च ।
तत्र मेध्यं पशुं हत्वा राक्षसेन्द्रस्य राक्षसाः ॥ ११७ ॥
परिस्तरणिकां राज्ञो घृताक्तां समवेशयन् ।
गन्धैर्माल्यैरलंकृत्य रावणं दीनमानसाः ॥ ११८ ॥
विभीषणसहायास्ते वस्त्रैश्च विविधैरपि ।
लाजैरवकिरन्ति स्म बाष्पपूर्णमुखास्तथा ॥ ११९ ॥

Having set at the proper places all the wooden vessels (used in Agnihotra) the lower piece of wood used for kindling fire at a sacrifice as well as the upper wood, (which is rotated at great speed on the lower one to produce fire by friction), as also the wooden pestle used in a Cāturmāsya sacrifice, they performed the obsequies according to the rules prescribed in the Vedas as well as according to the ordinance laid down by eminent Ṛṣis (in the Kalpa-Sūtras or manuals containing aphoristic rules for the performance of sacrifices). Having sacrificed a goat fit for sacrifice on that spot, the ogres spread a sheet daubed with ghee on the king of ogres. Nay, adorning Rāvaṇa's body with perfumes and garlands the ogres accompanied by Vibhiṣaṇa, who were afflicted at heart, covered the former with clothes of various kinds as well as with parched grains of rice, their faces bathed in tears. (116—119)

स ददौ पावकं तस्य विधियुक्तं विभीषणः ।
स्नात्वा चैवार्द्रवस्त्रेण तिलान् दर्भविमिश्रितान् ॥ १२० ॥
उदकेन च सम्मिश्रान् प्रदाय विधिपूर्वकम् ।
ताः स्त्रियोऽनुनयामास सान्त्वयित्वा पुनः पुनः ॥ १२१ ॥

The celebrated Vibhiṣaṇa set fire to Rāvaṇa's body according to the scriptural ordinance. Nay, washing himself and offering with due ceremony in a wet cloth sesamum seeds mixed with blades of the sacred Kuśa grass as well as with water, he entreated the aforesaid ladies to return, consoling them again and again. (120-121)

गम्यतामिति ताः सर्वा विविशुर्नगरं ततः ।
प्रविष्टासु पुरीं स्त्रीषु राक्षसेन्द्रो विभीषणः ।
रामपाश्वर्षमुपागम्य समतिष्ठद् विनीतवत् ॥ १२२ ॥

Thereupon they all re-entered the city. Moving, when the ladies had penetrated deep into the city, to the side of Śrī Rāma, Vibhiṣaṇa, the king of ogres, remained standing in a submissive manner. (122)

रामोऽपि सह सैन्येन ससुग्रीवः सलक्ष्मणः ।
हर्षं लेभे रिपुं हत्वा वृत्रं वज्रधरो यथा ॥ १२३ ॥

Having made short work of his enemy, Śrī Rāma too experienced joy with his army as well as with Sugrīva and Lakṣmaṇa, even as Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, did on dispatching of the demon Vṛtra. (123)

ततो विमुक्त्वा सशरं शरासनं
महेन्द्रदत्तं कवचं स तन्महत् ।
विमुच्य रोषं रिपुनिग्रहात् ततो
रामः स सौम्यत्वमुपागतोऽरिहा ॥ १२४ ॥
Having laid aside once for all the bow alongwith the arrows, as well as the massive armour, conferred on him by the mighty Indra (the ruler of gods), and having totally given up his anger now that his enemy had been subjugated, the aforesaid Śrī Rāma, the destroyer of his enemies, thereupon assumed a gentle mien. (124)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे एकादशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ १११ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and eleven in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

द्वादशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXII

Installation of Vibhīṣaṇa on the throne of Laṅkā; Śrī Rāma sends his message to Sītā through Hanumān

ते रावणवधं दृष्ट्वा देवगन्धर्वदानवाः ।
जग्मुः स्वैः स्वैर्विमानैस्ते कथयन्तः शुभाः कथाः ॥ १ ॥
Seeing the destruction of Rāvaṇa, the aforesaid gods, Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and demons dispersed in their respective aerial cars, indulging in happy talks relating to that episode. (1)

रावणस्य वधं घोरं राघवस्य पराक्रमम् ।
सुयुद्धं वानराणां च सुग्रीवस्य च मन्त्रितम् ॥ २ ॥
अनुरागं च वीर्यं च मारुतेर्लक्ष्मणस्य च ।
पतिव्रतात्वं सीताया हनूमति पराक्रमम् ॥ ३ ॥
कथयन्तो महाभागा जग्मुर्हृष्टा यथागतम् ।
राघवस्तु रथं दिव्यमिन्द्रदत्तं शिखिप्रभम् ॥ ४ ॥
अनुज्ञाप्य महाबाहुर्मतिलं प्रत्यपूजयत् ।
राघवेणाभ्यनुज्ञातो मातलिः शक्रसारथिः ॥ ५ ॥
दिव्यं तं रथमास्थाय दिवमेवोत्पपात ह ।
तस्मिंस्तु दिवमारूढे सरथे रथिनां वरः ॥ ६ ॥
राघवः परमप्रीतः सुग्रीवं परिष्वजे ।
परिष्वज्य च सुग्रीवं लक्ष्मणेनाभिवादितः ॥ ७ ॥
पूज्यमानो हरिगणैराजगाम बलालयम् ।
अथोवाच स काकुत्स्थः समीपपरिवर्तिनम् ॥ ८ ॥

सौमित्रिं सत्त्वसम्पन्नं लक्ष्मणं दीप्ततेजसम् ।
विभीषणमिमं सौम्य लङ्कायामभिषेचय ॥ ९ ॥
अनुरक्तं च भक्तं च तथा पूर्वोपकारिणम् ।
एष मे परमः कामो यदिमं रावणानुजम् ॥ १० ॥
लङ्कायां सौम्य पश्येयमभिषिक्तं विभीषणम् ।
एवमुक्तस्तु सौमित्रि राघवेण महात्मना ॥ ११ ॥
तथेत्युक्त्वा सुसंहृष्टः सौवर्णं घटमाददे ।
तं घटं वानरेन्द्राणां हस्ते दत्त्वा मनोजवान् ॥ १२ ॥
व्यादिदेश महासत्त्वान् समुद्रसलिलं तदा ।
अतिशीघ्रं ततो गत्वा वानरास्ते मनोजवाः ॥ १३ ॥
आगतास्तु जलं गृह्य समुद्राद् वानरोत्तमाः ।
ततस्त्वेकं घटं गृह्य संस्थाप्य परमासने ॥ १४ ॥
घटेन तेन सौमित्रिरभ्यषिञ्चद् विभीषणम् ।
लङ्कायां रक्षसां मध्ये राजानं रामशासनात् ॥ १५ ॥
विधिना मन्त्रदृष्टेन सुहृद्गणसमावृतम् ।
अभ्यषिञ्चस्तदा सर्वे राक्षसा वानरास्तथा ॥ १६ ॥

Speaking about the fall of Rāvaṇa and the terrific prowess of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the excellent fighting of the monkeys and the sage counsel tendered by Sugrīva, the devotion and valour of Hanumān (son of the wind-god) and Lakṣmaṇa, the fidelity of

Sitā to her husband and the heroism of Hanumān, the highly blessed ones joyously returned as they had come. Bidding adieu to the ethereal chariot which had been provided to him by Indra and shone like fire, the mighty-armed Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) respectfully saluted Mātali (Indra's charioteer). Mounting the aforesaid heavenly car, when dismissed by Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), Mātali, Indra's charioteer, ascended to heaven itself: so the tradition goes. Mātali having ascended to heaven in his chariot, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the foremost of car-warriors, for his part, who felt highly rejoiced, embraced Sugrīva. Having hugged Sugrīva, nay, greeted by Lakṣmaṇa and being honoured by the hordes of monkeys, Śrī Rāma returned to the camp where the troops had been stationed. The aforesaid son of Kakutstha then spoke as follows to Lakṣmaṇa, son of Sumitrā, who was full of courage and afire with spirit, and standing nearby: "Consecrate, O gentle one, on the throne of Laṅkā the yonder Vibhīṣaṇa, who is fond of, nay, devoted to me, and has done good offices to me in the past. It is my foremost desire, O gentle one, that I should see this younger brother of Rāvaṇa, Vibhīṣaṇa, consecrated on the throne of Laṅkā." Saying "Amen!" when commanded as aforesaid by the high-souled Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), and supremely rejoiced, Lakṣmaṇa (son of Sumitrā) for his part took up golden jars. Nay, placing them in the hands of monkey chiefs, he particularly enjoined such of them as were quick as thought and endowed with extraordinary energy to fetch sea-water on that occasion. Moving with all speed from that place, the aforesaid monkeys, the foremost of them all, for their part, who were quick as thought, returned at once taking water from all the four seas. Taking one jar and duly installing Vibhīṣaṇa on an excellent seat, Lakṣmaṇa

(son of Sumitrā) for his part then consecrated the former as the king of ogres in Laṅkā in accordance with the scriptural ordinance with the water contained in that jar in obedience to the command of Śrī Rāma. All the ogres as also the monkeys then consecrated Vibhīṣaṇa, who was surrounded by hosts of his dear and near ones. (2—16)

प्रहर्षमतुलं गत्वा तुष्टुवू राममेव हि ।
तस्यामात्या जहृषिरे भक्ता ये चास्य राक्षसाः ॥ १७ ॥
दृष्ट्वाभिषिक्तं लङ्कायां राक्षसेन्द्रं विभीषणम् ।
राघवः परमां प्रीतिं जगाम सहलक्ष्मणः ॥ १८ ॥

Experiencing an incomparable ecstasy, they all actually paid tribute to Śrī Rāma alone. His ministers as well as the ogres who were devoted to him rejoiced to see Vibhīṣaṇa consecrated on the throne of Laṅkā as the ruler of ogres. Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) with Lakṣmaṇa too experienced supreme felicity on this occasion. (17-18)

स तद् राज्यं महत् प्राप्य रामदत्तं विभीषणः ।
सान्त्वयित्वा प्रकृतयस्ततो राममुपागमत् ॥ १९ ॥

Having inherited that great kingdom bestowed on him by Śrī Rāma, and consoled his subjects, the celebrated Vibhīṣaṇa forthwith sought the presence of Śrī Rāma. (19)

दध्यक्षतान् मोदकांश्च लाजाः सुमनसस्तथा ।
आजहृथ संहृष्टाः पौरास्तस्मै निशाचराः ॥ २० ॥

Now the rangers of the night residing in the city of Laṅkā, who were all feeling highly rejoiced, brought to him by way of presents curds and unbroken grains of rice and Modakas (a variety of sweets shaped like balls), parched grains of unhusked rice and flowers too. (20)

स तान् गृहीत्वा दुर्धर्षो राघवाय न्यवेदयत् ।
मङ्गल्यं मङ्गलं सर्वं लक्ष्मणाय च वीर्यवान् ॥ २१ ॥

Accepting them all, the valiant Vibhīṣaṇa, who was difficult to overpower, placed all those benign offerings, which were intended to bring felicity, at the disposal of Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) and Lakṣmaṇa. (21)

कृतकार्य समृद्धार्थं दृष्ट्वा रामो विभीषणम्।
प्रतिजग्राह तत् सर्वं तस्यैव प्रतिकाम्यया ॥ २२ ॥

Seeing Vibhiṣaṇa accomplished of purpose and abundantly endowed with riches, Śrī Rāma accepted it all in sheer deference to his desire. (22)

ततः शैलोपमं वीरं प्राञ्जलिं प्रणतं स्थितम्।
उवाचेदं वचो रामो हनूमन्तं प्लवङ्गमम् ॥ २३ ॥

Thereupon Śrī Rāma addressed the following words to the valiant monkey, Hanumān, who resembled a mountain (in size) and stood in a suppliant mood with joined palms: (23)

अनुज्ञाप्य महाराजमिमं सौम्य विभीषणम्।
प्रविश्य नगरीं लङ्कां कौशलं ब्रूहि मैथिलीम् ॥ २४ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे द्वादशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११२ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and twelve in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

त्रयोदशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXIII

Hanumān delivers Śrī Rāma's message to Sītā and brings back her message to him

इति प्रतिसमादिष्टो हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः।
प्रविवेश पुरीं लङ्कां पूज्यमानो निशाचरैः ॥ १ ॥

Particularly commanded as aforesaid, Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god, penetrated deep into the city of Laṅkā, being treated with honour by the rangers of the night, (1)

प्रविश्य च पुरीं लङ्कामनुज्ञाप्य विभीषणम्।
ततस्तेनाभ्यनुज्ञातो हनूमान् वृक्षवाटिकाम् ॥ २ ॥

वैदेह्यै मां च कुशलं सुग्रीवं च सलक्ष्मणम्।
आचक्ष्व वदतां श्रेष्ठ रावणं च हतं रणे ॥ २५ ॥

“Taking the permission of this great monarch, Vibhiṣaṇa, O gentle one, and penetrating into the city of Laṅkā, inquire of Sītā (the princess of Mithilā) how she is doing. Also speak to Sītā (the princess of the territory of Videha) about me as well as about Sugrīva, including Lakṣmaṇa being well, and also speak to her about Rāvaṇa having been killed in combat, O jewel among the eloquent! (24-25)

प्रियमेतदिहाख्याहि वैदेह्यास्त्वं हरीश्वर।
प्रतिगृह्य तु संदेशमुपावर्तितुमर्हसि ॥ २६ ॥

“Communicate, O chief of monkeys, these agreeable tidings to Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), and you, for your part, should return hereafter receiving her message.” (26)

सम्प्रविश्य यथान्यायं सीताया विदितो हरिः।
ददर्श मृजया हीनां सातङ्कां रोहिणीमिव ॥ ३ ॥
वृक्षमूले निरानन्दां राक्षसीभिः परीवृताम्।
निभृतः प्रणतः प्रह्वः सोऽभिगम्याभिवाद्य च ॥ ४ ॥

Having penetrated deep into the city of Laṅkā and seeking the permission of Vibhiṣaṇa, nay, duly entering the grove of Aśoka trees (where Sītā had been detained), when permitted by him, Hanumān then attracted the notice of Sītā. He found her without a bath and sitting cheerless at the foot of a tree surrounded by ogresses and looking like Rohiṇī (the deity presiding over a constellation of the same name and the favourite consort of the moon-god) in anguish (due to the evil influence exerted by a malevolent planet). Greeting and approaching her, Hanumān stood motionless, bent low and meek. (2—4)

दृष्ट्वा तमागतं देवी हनूमन्तं महाबलम् ।
तूष्णीमास्त तदा दृष्ट्वा स्मृत्वा हृष्टाभवत् तदा ॥ ५ ॥

Seeing the said Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary might, duly arrived (but failing to recognize him), the godlike lady kept quiet in the first instance. Looking at him again and recognizing him, she felt rejoiced at that moment. (5)

सौम्यं तस्या मुखं दृष्ट्वा हनूमान् प्लवगोत्तमः ।
रामस्य वचनं सर्वमाख्यातुमुपचक्रमे ॥ ६ ॥

Marking her placid countenance, Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, proceeded to communicate to her all that Śrī Rāma had said. (6)

वैदेहि कुशली रामः सहसुग्रीवलक्ष्मणः ।
कुशलं चाह सिद्धार्थो हतशत्रुरमित्रजित् ॥ ७ ॥

Hanumān said: “Śrī Rāma is doing well, O princess of the Videha territory, alongwith Sugrīva, the ruler of monkeys, and Lakṣmaṇa. And Śrī Rāma (the conqueror of his enemies), who stands accomplished of purpose—now that his enemy, Rāvaṇa, has been killed, has inquired after your welfare. (7)

विभीषणसहायेन रामेण हरिभिः सह ।
निहतो रावणो देवि लक्ष्मणेन च वीर्यवान् ॥ ८ ॥

“The valiant Rāvaṇa has been killed by Śrī Rāma, assisted by Vibhīṣaṇa and with the co-operation of the monkeys, O divine lady! (8)

प्रियमाख्यामि ते देवि भूयश्च त्वां सभाजये ।
तव प्रभावाद् धर्मज्ञे महान् रामेण संयुगे ॥ ९ ॥
लब्धोऽयं विजयः सीते स्वस्था भव गतज्वरा ।
रावणश्च हतः शत्रुर्लङ्का चैव वशीकृता ॥ १० ॥

“I communicate this pleasant news to you, O godlike lady, and will delight you, further by telling you, O knower of what is right, that this great victory in war has been scored by Śrī Rāma by strength of your devotion to your husband. Take heart, O Sītā, and be freed from anxiety, since the enemy, Rāvaṇa, has been killed and Laṅkā too has been subdued. (9-10)

मया ह्यलब्धनिद्रेण धृतेन तव निर्जये ।
प्रतिज्ञैषा विनिस्तीर्णा बद्ध्वा सेतुं महोदधौ ॥ ११ ॥

“The following is the message of Śrī Rāma: ‘By me, who have had no sleep all these months and was resolved to win you back, has this vow of winning you back been actually redeemed after constructing a bridge over the extensive sea. (11)

सम्भ्रमश्च न कर्तव्यो वर्तन्त्या रावणालये ।
विभीषणविधेयं हि लङ्कैश्वर्यमिदं कृतम् ॥ १२ ॥

“‘Fear should no longer be entertained by you, living as you do in the abode of Rāvaṇa; for the dominionship of Laṅkā has now been placed under the control of Vibhīṣaṇa, who is our friend. (12)

तदाश्वसिहि विस्रब्धं स्वगृहे परिवर्तसे ।
अयं चाभ्येति संहृष्टस्त्वदर्शनसमुत्सुकः ॥ १३ ॥

“‘Therefore, complacently be at ease. Feel that you are dwelling in your own abode. Nay, Vibhīṣaṇa himself, who is very keen to see you, is coming to pay his respects to you, he being highly rejoiced.’ ” (13)

एवमुक्ता तु सा देवि सीता शशिनिभानना ।
प्रहर्षेणावरुद्धा सा व्याहर्तुं न शशाक ह ॥ १४ ॥

Spoken to in these words, the divine Sītā for her part, whose countenance shone like the moon, felt tongue-tied due to excessive joy and could not speak; so the tradition goes. (14)

ततोऽब्रवीद्धरिवरः सीतामप्रतिजल्पतीम् ।
किं त्वं चिन्तयसे देवि किं च मां नाभिभाषसे ॥ १५ ॥

Thereupon Hanumān, the foremost of monkeys, spoke as follows to Sītā, who was not making any answer: “What are you thinking of, O godlike lady? And why don’t you speak to me?” (15)

एवमुक्ता हनुमता सीता धर्मपथे स्थिता ।
अब्रवीत् परमप्रीता बाष्पगद्गदया गिरा ॥ १६ ॥

Thus pleaded by Hanumān, Sītā, who was devoted to the path of virtue and felt supremely delighted, replied as follows in a voice choked with tears of emotions: (16)

प्रियमेतदुपश्रुत्य भर्तुर्विजयसंश्रितम् ।
प्रहर्षवशमापन्ना निर्वाक्यास्मि क्षणान्तरम् ॥ १७ ॥

“Overpowered by excessive joy on hearing this pleasant tidings bearing on the victory of my husband, I turned speechless for a while. (17)

नहि पश्यामि सदृशं चिन्तयन्ती प्लवंगम् ।
आख्यानकस्य भवतो दातुं प्रत्यभिनन्दनम् ॥ १८ ॥

“Though taxing my brain, I really conceive no gift equal (in value) to the news conveyed by you, O valiant monkey! (18)

न हि पश्यामि तत् सौम्य पृथिव्यामपि वानर ।
सदृशं यत्प्रियाख्याने तव दत्त्वा भवेत् सुखम् ॥ १९ ॥

“Nay, I can think of nothing on earth or even in the other worlds which is worthy of you or commensurate to the act of communicating this most agreeable news to me, and bestowing of which on you satisfaction may come to me, O good monkey. (19)

हिरण्यं वा सुवर्णं वा रत्नानि विविधानि च ।
राज्यं वा त्रिषु लोकेषु एतन्नार्हति भाषितम् ॥ २० ॥

“Neither silver nor gold nor even precious stones of various kinds, nor again sovereignty of all the three worlds can be equal in value to this message.” (20)

एवमुक्तस्तु वैदेह्या प्रत्युवाच प्लवंगमः ।
प्रगृहीताञ्जलिर्हर्षात् सीतायाः प्रमुखे स्थितः ॥ २१ ॥

Spoken to in these words by Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), the monkey, Hanumān, for his part, who stood in front of Sītā with joined palms, joyfully submitted as follows: (21)

भर्तुः प्रियहिते युक्ते भर्तुर्विजयकांक्षिणि ।
स्निग्धमेवंविधं वाक्यं त्वमेवार्हस्यनिन्दिते ॥ २२ ॥

“You alone can utter such kind words, O irreproachable lady, devoted as you are to that which is pleasing and conducive to the good of your spouse, and solicitous of your husband’s victory! (22)

तवैतद् वचनं सौम्ये सारवत् स्निग्धमेव च ।
रत्नौघाद् विविधाच्चापि देवराज्याद् विशिष्यते ॥ २३ ॥

“This speech of yours, O gentle lady, which is full of substance and affectionate too, is superior in value to a heterogeneous collection of precious stones and even to the rulership of gods. (23)

अर्थतश्च मया प्राप्ता देवराज्यादयो गुणाः ।
हतशत्रुं विजयिनं रामं पश्यामि सुस्थितम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Nay, all blessings like the rulership of gods have been truly attained by me in that I see Śrī Rāma victorious and happy, now that his enemy, Rāvaṇa, has been killed.” (24)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा मैथिली जनकात्मजा ।
ततः शुभतरं वाक्यमुवाच पवनात्मजम् ॥ २५ ॥

Hearing his foregoing submission, Sītā (a princess of Mithilā), daughter of Janaka, paid the following still more agreeable compliment to Hanumān, sprung from the loins of the wind-god: (25)

अतिलक्षणसम्पन्नं माधुर्यगुणभूषणम् ।
बुद्ध्या ह्यष्टाङ्गया युक्तं त्वमेवार्हसि भाषितम् ॥ २६ ॥

“You alone can actually utter words which are endowed with rare characteristics of good speech, nay, adorned with the quality of mellifluity and dictated by an intellect which is characterized by the well-known eight excellences.* (26)

श्लाघनीयोऽनिलस्य त्वं सुतः परमधार्मिकः ।
बलं शौर्यं श्रुतं सत्त्वं विक्रमो दाक्ष्यमुत्तमम् ॥ २७ ॥
तेजः क्षमा धृतिः स्थैर्यं विनीतत्वं न संशयः ।
एते चान्ये च बहवो गुणास्त्वय्येव शोभनाः ॥ २८ ॥

“You are a praiseworthy and supremely pious son of the wind-god. Nay, physical strength, valour, knowledge of scriptures, vigour, prowess, superlative skill in action, spirit, forbearance, firmness, stability and humility: these and numerous other brilliant qualities exist in you alone.” (27-28)

अथोवाच पुनः सीतामसम्भ्रान्तो विनीतवत् ।
प्रगृहीताञ्जलिर्हर्षात् सीतायाः प्रमुखे स्थितः ॥ २९ ॥

Standing unembarrassed, with joined palms, before Sītā, Hanumān meekly and joyfully submitted once more as follows: (29)

इमास्तु खलु राक्षस्यो यदि त्वमनुमन्यसे ।
हन्तुमिच्छामि ताः सर्वा याभिस्त्वं तर्जिता पुरा ॥ ३० ॥

“If you permit me, I, for my part, would surely make short work of all these notorious ogresses, by whom you have been intimidated in the past. (30)

क्लिश्यन्तीं पतिदेवां त्वामशोकवनिकां गताम् ।
घोररूपसमाचाराः क्रूराः क्रूरतरेक्षणाः ॥ ३१ ॥
इह श्रुता मया देवि राक्षस्यो विकृताननाः ।
असकृत्पुरुषैर्वाक्यैर्वदन्त्यो रावणाज्ञया ॥ ३२ ॥

“These cruel ogresses of hideous aspect and conduct and with still more cruel eyes and distorted features were heard by me at this very place addressing you, who are so devoted to your husband, more than once in unkind words at Rāvaṇa's command when you were suffering hardships in the Aśoka grove, O divine lady! (31-32)

विकृता विकृताकाराः क्रूराः क्रूरकचेक्षणाः ।
इच्छामि विविधैर्घातैर्हन्तुमेताः सुदारुणाः ॥ ३३ ॥

“I wish to kill by means of strokes of every description these cruel, extremely violent, and deformed ogresses with distorted features and hideous hair and eyes. (33)

राक्षस्यो दारुणकथा वरमेतत् प्रयच्छ मे ।
मुष्टिभिः पार्ष्णिघातैश्च विशालैश्चैव बाहुभिः ॥ ३४ ॥
जङ्घाजानुप्रहारैश्च दन्तानां चैव पीडनैः ।
कर्तनैः कर्णनासानां केशानां लुञ्चनैस्तथा ॥ ३५ ॥
निपात्य हन्तुमिच्छामि तव विप्रियकारिणीः ।
एवं प्रहारैर्बहुभिः सम्प्रहार्य यशस्विनि ॥ ३६ ॥
घातये तीव्ररूपाभिर्याभिस्त्वं तर्जिता पुरा ।
इत्युक्ता सा हनुमता कृपणा दीनवत्सला ॥ ३७ ॥
हनूमन्तमुवाचेदं चिन्तयित्वा विमृश्य च ।
राजसंश्रयवश्यानां कुर्वतीनां पराज्ञया ॥ ३८ ॥
विधेयानां च दासीनां कः कुप्येद् वानरोत्तम ।
भाग्यवैषम्यदोषेण पुरस्तादुष्कृतेन च ॥ ३९ ॥
मयैतत् प्राप्यते सर्वं स्वकृतं ह्युपभुज्यते ।
मैवं वद महाबाहो दैवी ह्येषा परा गतिः ॥ ४० ॥

“I wish to make short work of these ogresses, who have spoken harsh words to you and wronged you, striking them down with my fists, kicks, long arms, the blows of my shanks and knees, as well as by causing pain to their teeth biting off their ears and nose and pulling out their hair. Pray, grant your acquiescence to me. Striking them violently by means of repeated blows as aforementioned, I would kill the ogresses of

* The eight excellences of an intellect are enumerated in the following verse of the Nīṭisāra Kāmandaka quoted by the commentators:

शुश्रूषा श्रवणं चैव ग्रहणं धारणं तथा । ऊहोऽपोहोऽर्थविज्ञानं तत्त्वज्ञानं च धीगुणाः ॥

“(1) Keeness to hear discourses on the Spirit, (2) readiness to hear such discourses, (3) receptivity and (4) retentive power, (5) reasoning for and (6) against a proposition, (7) the faculty of comprehension and (8) realization of truth: these are the eight characteristics of a sound and ripe intellect.”

terrible aspect by whom you have been threatened in the past, O illustrious lady!” Reflecting and pondering a while, when told thus by Hanumān, the wretched Sītā, who was fond of the miserable, spoke to him as follows: “Who will be angry, O prince of monkeys, with obedient maid-servants, who are dependent on a king because of their being in his service and as such act according to other’s command? All this is being reaped by me as a result of my own fault in the shape of adverseness of fate, nay, on account of a misdeed committed in the past; for the fruit of one’s own actions is reaped in one’s life. Therefore, do not speak thus, O mighty-armed one! Such was the destiny, which is supreme. (34—40)

प्राप्तव्यं तु दशायोगान्मयैतदिति निश्चितम्।
दासीनां रावणस्याहं मर्षयामीह दुर्बला ॥ ४१ ॥

“It was in fact predetermined that this must be reaped by me through a combination of circumstances. As such I condone the fault of the slaves of Rāvaṇa, feeble-hearted as I am in these matters. (41)

आज्ञप्ता राक्षसेनेह राक्षस्यस्तर्जयन्ति माम्।
हते तस्मिन् न कुर्वन्ति तर्जनं मारुतात्मज ॥ ४२ ॥

“The ogresses threatened me because they had been ordered by the ogre-king to do so. Now that he has been killed, they no longer threaten me, O offspring of the wind-god! (42)

अयं व्याघ्रसमीपे तु पुराणो धर्मसंहितः।
ऋक्षेण गीतः श्लोकोऽस्ति तं निबोध प्लवंगम् ॥ ४३ ॥

“The following is an old maxim, conformable to righteousness, actually uttered by a bear in the presence of a tiger. Please hear it, O monkey-chief! (43)

न परः पापमादत्ते परेषां पापकर्मणाम्।
समयो रक्षितव्यस्तु सन्तश्चारित्रभूषणाः ॥ ४४ ॥

“‘A superior man does not take into account the sin of those who have committed an offence against him. The vow of not returning evil for evil must be redeemed at all costs; for the virtuous account good conduct as their ornament.’ * (44)

पापानां वा शुभानां वा वधार्हानामथापि वा।
कार्यं कारुण्यमार्येण न कश्चिन्नापराध्यति ॥ ४५ ॥

“Compassion should be shown by a noble soul towards sinners as well as for the good, nay, even for those deserving death; for there is none who never commits a wrong. (45)

लोकहिंसाविहाराणां क्रूराणां पापकर्मणाम्।
कुर्वतामपि पापानि नैव कार्यमशोभनम् ॥ ४६ ॥

“No evil should be done even to those cruel men of sinful deeds, who revel in genocide, and continue to perpetrate sins.” (46)

एवमुक्तस्तु हनुमान् सीतया वाक्यकोविदः।
प्रत्युवाच ततः सीतां रामपत्नीमनिन्दिताम् ॥ ४७ ॥

Admonished in the foregoing words by Sītā, Hanumān for his part, who was an

* Formerly a tiger ran in pursuit of a hunter. The latter climbed up a tree. There was a bear already perched on a bough of the tree. Making to the foot of the tree, the tiger addressed the following words to the bear : “Look here, both of us are denizens of the forest. The hunter is our common enemy. Therefore, knock him down from the tree.” The bear, however, replied, “Having reached my abode, the hunter has in a way sought asylum with me. I am, therefore, not going to hurl him down; I would be deviating from my duty if I do so.” Saying so, the bear laid himself down to sleep. The tiger now turned to the hunter and said, “Push the bear down. I shall afford protection to you.” The hunter thereupon pushed the sleeping bear. The bear, however, clutched at another bough and thus escaped from falling down. The tiger now addressed the following appeal to the bear: “The hunter sought to hurl you down and has thus wronged you. Therefore, push him down.” Though pressed by the tiger again and again, the bear refused to hurl him down and repeated the above-quoted verse in support of his attitude.

adept in expression, then replied as follows to Sītā, the irreproachable consort of Śrī Rāma: (47)

युक्ता रामस्य भवती धर्मपत्नी गुणान्विता ।
प्रतिसंदिश मां देवि गमिष्ये यत्र राघवः ॥ ४८ ॥

“You are the lawfully wedded spouse of Śrī Rāma, full of excellences and worthy of him in all respects. Pray, give me a message in return. I shall proceed to the place where Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) is, O godlike lady!” (48)

एवमुक्ता हनुमता वैदेही जनकात्मजा ।
साब्रवीद् द्रष्टुमिच्छामि भर्तारं भक्तवत्सलम् ॥ ४९ ॥

Requested thus by Hanumān, Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), the celebrated daughter of Janaka, said, “I long to see my husband, who is so fond of his devotees.” (49)

तस्यास्तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा हनूमान् मारुतात्मजः ।
हर्षयन् मैथिलीं वाक्यमुवाचेदं महामतिः ॥ ५० ॥

Hearing her aforesaid reply, the highly intelligent Hanumān, an offspring of the wind-god, submitted to the princess of Mithilā as follows, bringing delight to her: (50)

पूर्णचन्द्रमुखं रामं द्रक्ष्यस्यद्य सलक्ष्मणम् ।
स्थितमित्रं हतामित्रं शचीवेन्द्रं सुरेश्वरम् ॥ ५१ ॥

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे त्रयोदशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११३ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and thirteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

चतुर्दशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXIV

At the command of Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa escorts Sītā to the former's presence and she feasts her eyes on the moon-like countenance of her darling

तमुवाच महाप्राज्ञः सोऽभिवाद्य प्लवङ्गमः ।

रामं कमलपत्राक्षं वरं सर्वधनुष्पताम् ॥ १ ॥

Having greeted the foremost of all

“You shall see this very day Śrī Rāma—whose countenance resembles the full moon, whose friends (such as Sugrīva and Vibhīṣaṇa) are alive, nay, whose enemies have been got rid of—accompanied by Lakṣmaṇa, even as Śacī, the consort of Indra, would see Indra, the ruler of gods.” (51)

तामेवमुक्त्वा भ्राजन्तीं सीतां साक्षादिव श्रियम् ।
आजगाम महातेजा हनूमान् यत्र राघवः ॥ ५२ ॥

Assuring in the foregoing words Sītā, who shone like Śrī, the goddess of prosperity, i.e., Herself, Hanumān, who was endowed with extraordinary energy, came back to the place where Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) was awaiting his return. (52)

सपदि हरिवरस्ततो हनूमान्
प्रतिवचनं जनकेश्वरात्मजायाः ।
कथितमकथयद् यथाक्रमेण
त्रिदशवरप्रतिमाय राघवाय ॥ ५३ ॥

Hanumān, the prince of monkeys then speedily repeated in order of sequence to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who vied with Indra (the foremost of gods) the message which had been delivered in return by Sītā (daughter of the ruler of the Janakas). (53)

archers, Śrī Rāma, whose eyes resembled the petals of a lotus, that highly intelligent monkey, Hanumān, submitted to him as follows: (1)

यन्निमित्तोऽयमारम्भः कर्मणां यः फलोदयः।
तां देवीं शोकसंतप्तां द्रष्टुमर्हसि मैथिलीम् ॥ २ ॥

“You ought to see that godlike princess of Mithilā, who is sore stricken with grief, for whose sake this course of actions was undertaken, which has now borne fruit. (2)

सा हि शोकसमाविष्टा बाष्पपर्याकुलेक्षणा।
मैथिली विजयं श्रुत्वा द्रष्टुं त्वामभिकांक्षति ॥ ३ ॥

“Having heard of your consummate victory, that princess of Mithilā, who is overwhelmed with grief, her eyes bedimmed with tears, longs to see you. (3)

पूर्वकात् प्रत्ययाच्चाहमुक्तो विश्वस्तया तया।
द्रष्टुमिच्छामि भर्तारमिति पर्याकुलेक्षणा ॥ ४ ॥

“By her, who was full of trust in me because of the confidence which had been inspired by me on a former occasion, I was spoken to in these words, ‘I desire to see my husband’, and her eyes grew wild with emotion.” (4)

एवमुक्तो हनुमता रामो धर्मभृतां वरः।
आगच्छत् सहसा ध्यानमीषद्बाष्पपरिप्लुतः ॥ ५ ॥

Appealed to as aforesaid by Hanumān, Śrī Rāma, the foremost of those who uphold the cause of virtue, became a bit thoughtful all of a sudden, and got bathed in tears. (5)

स दीर्घमभिनिःश्वस्य जगतीमवलोकयन्।
उवाच मेघसंकाशं विभीषणमुपस्थितम् ॥ ६ ॥

Drawing a deep audible breath, and casting his eyes on the ground, he spoke as follows to Vibhīṣaṇa, who closely resembled a cloud in hue, standing near: (6)

दिव्याङ्गरागां वैदेहीं दिव्याभरणभूषिताम्।
इह सीतां शिरःस्नातामुपस्थापय मा चिरम् ॥ ७ ॥

“Bring here Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, after she has bathed her head, has been anointed with heavenly cosmetics and adorned with celestial jewels, Let there be no delay.” (7)

एवमुक्तस्तु रामेण त्वरमाणो विभीषणः।
प्रविश्यान्तःपुरं सीतां स्त्रीभिः स्वाभिरचोदयत् ॥ ८ ॥

Hurriedly penetrating deep into the gynaeceum, when commanded thus by Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa for his part communicated his presence to Sitā in the Aśoka grove through his own women. (8)

ततः सीतां महाभागां दृष्ट्वोवाच विभीषणः।
मूर्ध्नि बद्धाञ्जलिः श्रीमान् विनीतो राक्षसेश्वरः ॥ ९ ॥

Forthwith beholding the blessed Sitā, the glorious Vibhīṣaṇa, the ruler of ogres, meekly submitted as follows to her with palms joined over his head: (9)

दिव्याङ्गरागा वैदेहि दिव्याभरणभूषिता।
यानमारोह भद्रं ते भर्ता त्वां द्रष्टुमिच्छति ॥ १० ॥

“Having taken your bath, nay anointed with heavenly cosmetics and adorned with celestial jewels, pray, mount the palanquin. May prosperity attend you. Your husband desires to see you, O princess of the Videha territory!” (10)

एवमुक्ता तु वैदेही प्रत्युवाच विभीषणम्।
अस्नात्वा द्रष्टुमिच्छामि भर्तारं राक्षसेश्वर ॥ ११ ॥

Requested in these words, Sitā, a princess of the Videha territory, for her part replied to Vibhīṣaṇa as follows: “Without having bathed, O king of ogres, I wish to see my husband immediately.” (11)

तस्यास्तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा प्रत्युवाच विभीषणः।
यथाऽऽह रामो भर्ता ते तत् तथा कर्तुमर्हसि ॥ १२ ॥

Hearing her aforesaid answer, Vibhīṣaṇa submitted in reply: “You ought, to do the bidding of your husband, Śrī Rāma, precisely as he has enjoined you to do.” (12)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा मैथिली पतिदेवता।
भर्तृभक्त्यावृता साध्वी तथेति प्रत्यभाषत ॥ १३ ॥

Hearing the aforesaid submission of Vibhīṣaṇa, the virtuous Sitā (a princess of Mithilā), who looked upon her spouse as a god and was adorned by devotion to her husband, said in reply, “Amen!” (13)

ततः सीतां शिरःस्नातां संयुक्तां प्रतिकर्मणा।
महार्हाभरणोपेतां महार्हाम्बरधारिणीम् ॥ १४ ॥

आरोप्य शिबिकां दीप्तां परार्घ्याम्बरसंवृताम्।

रक्षोभिर्बहुभिर्गुप्तामाजहार विभीषणः ॥ १५ ॥

Prevailing upon Sītā to ascend a brilliant palanquin covered with an exceedingly valuable cloth and guarded by numerous ogres, after she had laved her head, and had put on very costly robes and had been adorned with exceedingly valuable jewels and decorated, Vibhīṣaṇa then brought her to the presence of Śrī Rāma. (14-15)

सोऽभिगम्य महात्मानं ज्ञात्वापि ध्यानमास्थितम्।

प्रणतश्च प्रहृष्टश्च प्राप्तां सीतां न्यवेदयत् ॥ १६ ॥

Approaching Śrī Rāma (the high-souled prince), and even after coming to know that he was still absorbed in thought, nay, bent low and full of great joy, he announced to him that Sītā had arrived. (16)

तामागतामुपश्रुत्य रक्षोगृहचिरोषिताम्।

रोषं हर्षं च दैन्यं च राघवः प्राप शत्रुहा ॥ १७ ॥

Hearing that Sītā, who had lived long in the abode of an ogre, had arrived, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), the destroyer of enemies, was filled with indignation and joy and felt miserable too. (17)

ततो यानगतां सीतां सविमर्शं विचारयन्।

विभीषणमिदं वाक्यमहृष्टो राघवोऽब्रवीत् ॥ १८ ॥

Feeling distressed on considering with deep thought the question of Sītā having come all the way in a palanquin, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) then spoke to Vibhīṣaṇa as follows: (18)

राक्षसाधिपते सौम्य नित्यं मद्विजये रत।

वैदेही संनिकर्षं मे क्षिप्रं समभिगच्छतु ॥ १९ ॥

“Let Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) duly seek my presence soon, O suzerain lord of ogres, O gentle one, ever intent on scoring a victory for me!” (19)

तस्य तद् वचनं श्रुत्वा राघवस्य विभीषणः।

तूर्णमुत्सारणं तत्र कारयामास धर्मवित् ॥ २० ॥

कञ्चुकोष्णीषिणस्तत्र वेत्रझर्झरपाणयः।

उत्सारयन्तस्तान् योधान् समन्तात् परिचक्रमुः ॥ २१ ॥

Hearing the foregoing command of the aforesaid scion of Raghu, Vibhīṣaṇa, who knew what is right, speedily began to disperse the crowd (of monkeys, who had gathered out of curiosity to have a look at Sītā). Ogres clad in jackets and wearing turbans their hands carrying staffs, which made a jingling sound, paced all round dispersing the aforesaid warriors. (20-21)

ऋक्षाणां वानराणां च राक्षसानां च सर्वशः।

वृन्दान्युत्सार्यमाणानि दूरमुत्तस्थुरन्ततः ॥ २२ ॥

While being driven away collectively from the vicinity of the palanquin, the hordes of bears, monkeys and ogres moved to a distance. (22)

तेषामुत्सार्यमाणानां निःस्वनः सुमहानभूत्।

वायुनोद्धूयमानस्य सागरस्येव निःस्वनः ॥ २३ ॥

A tremendous uproar, resembling the roar of sea, which was being lashed by a storm, arose even as the aforesaid warriors were being driven away. (23)

उत्सार्यमाणांस्तान् दृष्ट्वा समन्ताज्जातसम्भ्रमान्।

दाक्षिण्यात्तदमर्षाच्च वारयामास राघवः ॥ २४ ॥

Seeing them being dispersed on all sides and, therefore, excited, Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) stopped those who were dispersing them, out of kindness (for those who were being dispersed) and resentment at the behaviour of the ogres who were dispersing them. (24)

संरम्भाच्चाब्रवीद् रामश्चक्षुषा प्रदहन्निव।

विभीषणं महाप्राज्ञं सोपालम्भमिदं वचः ॥ २५ ॥

Nay, consuming the ogres with his glances, as it were, Śrī Rāma addressed in indignation the following reproachful words to the highly intelligent Vibhīṣaṇa: (25)

किमर्थं मामनादृत्य क्लिश्यतेऽयं त्वया जनः।

निवर्तयैनमुद्वेगं जनोऽयं स्वजनो मम ॥ २६ ॥

“Why, disregarding me, are these people being harassed by you? Pray, stop this annoyance. They are my own people. (26)

न गृहाणि न वस्त्राणि न प्राकारस्तिरस्क्रिया ।
नेदृशा राजसत्कारा वृत्तमावरणं स्त्रियाः ॥ २७ ॥

“Neither apartments nor costumes nor a protective wall nor again royal honours constitute a veil for a woman. Her character alone is her shield. (27)

व्यसनेषु न कृच्छ्रेषु न युद्धेषु स्वयंवरे ।
न क्रतौ नो विवाहे वा दर्शनं दूष्यते स्त्रियाः ॥ २८ ॥

“The appearance of a woman in public is not condemned in times of adversity, in straits, in conflicts, during the selection of a husband (by a princess or daughter of a Kṣatriya at a public assembly of suitors), at a sacrificial performance or at the nuptial ceremony. (28)

सैषा विपद्गता चैव कृच्छ्रेण च समन्विता ।
दर्शने नास्ति दोषोऽस्या मत्समीपे विशेषतः ॥ २९ ॥

“The yonder Sītā is in distress and beset with difficulty. Hence there is no objection to her appearing in public, particularly in my presence. (29)

विसृज्य शिबिकां तस्मात् पद्भ्यामेवापसर्पतु ।
समीपे मम वैदेहीं पश्यन्त्वेते वनौकसः ॥ ३० ॥

“Therefore, leaving the palanquin, let Sītā seek my presence on foot alone. Let these monkeys (lit., denizens of the forest) have a look at the princess of the Videha kingdom.” (30)

एवमुक्तस्तु रामेण सविमर्शो विभीषणः ।
रामस्योपानयत् सीतां संनिकर्षं विनीतवत् ॥ ३१ ॥

Becoming thoughtful when commanded as aforesaid by Śrī Rāma, Vibhīṣaṇa reverently conducted Sītā to the former's presence. (31)

ततो लक्ष्मणसुग्रीवौ हनूमांश्च प्लवङ्गमः ।
निशम्य वाक्यं रामस्य बभूवुर्व्यथिता भृशम् ॥ ३२ ॥

Lakṣmaṇa and Sugrīva as well as the monkey chief, Hanumān, thereupon felt greatly distressed to hear the order of Śrī Rāma. (32)

कलत्रनिरपेक्षैश्च इङ्गितैरस्य दारुणैः ।
अप्रीतमिव सीतायां तर्कयन्ति स्म राघवम् ॥ ३३ ॥

From his stern gestures, which were lacking in regard for his consort, they concluded Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) to be displeased with Sītā. (33)

लज्जया त्ववलीयन्ती स्वेषु गात्रेषु मैथिली ।
विभीषणेनानुगता भर्तारं साभ्यवर्तत ॥ ३४ ॥

Shrinking into her limbs out of modesty, and followed by Vibhīṣaṇa, the said princess of Mithilā, for her part, approached her husband. (34)

विस्मयाच्च प्रहर्षाच्च स्नेहाच्च पतिदेवता ।
उदैक्षत मुखं भर्तुः सौम्यं सौम्यतरानना ॥ ३५ ॥

Sītā, who looked upon her spouse as a god, of still more gracious aspect regarded the agreeable countenance of her husband with a mixed feeling of astonishment, excessive delight and affection. (35)

अथ समपनुदन्मनःक्लमं सा
सुचिरमदृष्टमुदीक्ष्य वै प्रियस्य ।

वदनमुदितपूर्णचन्द्रकान्तं
विमलशशाङ्कनिभानना तदाऽऽसीत् ॥ ३६ ॥

Gazing on the face of her darling, which had not been seen by her for long and which was lovely like the full moon just risen, she forthwith actually dispelled the fatigue of her mind and her face shone at that time as the cloudless full moon. (36)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे चतुर्दशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११४ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and fourteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

पञ्चदशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXV

Regarding with suspicion the character of Sītā, Śrī Rāma repudiates her and asks her to seek shelter elsewhere

तां तु पाशर्वे स्थितां प्रह्नां रामः सम्प्रेक्ष्य मैथिलीम् ।
हृदयान्तर्गतं भावं व्याहर्तुमुपचक्रमे ॥ १ ॥

Looking intently on the aforesaid princess of Mithilā, who stood by his side bent low, Śrī Rāma for his part proceeded forthwith to give expression (as under) to the feelings concealed in his heart: (1)

एषासि निर्जिता भद्रे शत्रुं जित्वा रणाजिरे ।
पौरुषाद् यदनुष्ठेयं मयैतदुपपादितम् ॥ २ ॥

“You stand here won back by me after conquering the enemy on the field of battle, O blessed one! That which was worth doing for me through human effort has been accomplished by me. (2)

गतोऽस्म्यन्तममर्षस्य धर्षणा सम्प्रमार्जिता ।
अवमानश्च शत्रुश्च युगपन्निहतौ मया ॥ ३ ॥

“I have attained the reward of my indignation; nay, the wanton offence given to me by your abduction has been fully requited and the indignity offered to me as also the enemy, who did it, have been wiped out all at once by me. (3)

अद्य मे पौरुषं दृष्टमद्य मे सफलः श्रमः ।
अद्य तीर्णप्रतिज्ञोऽहं प्रभवाम्यद्य चात्मनः ॥ ४ ॥

“Today my manliness has been witnessed, today my exertion has become fruitful, today I have fulfilled my vow and today I am the master of myself once more. (4)

या त्वं विरहिता नीता चलचित्तेन रक्षसा ।
दैवसम्पादितो दोषो मानुषेण मया जितः ॥ ५ ॥

“The wrong done to you, in that you, when you were quite alone, were borne away by the fickle-minded ogre (Rāvaṇa), which was ordained by destiny, has been repaid by me, a mortal. (5)

सम्प्राप्तमवमानं यस्तेजसा न प्रमार्जति ।
कस्तस्य पौरुषेणार्थो महताप्यल्पचेतसः ॥ ६ ॥

“What purpose will be served by the prowess, however great, of that petty-minded fellow who does not avenge by his might the insult suffered by him. (6)

लङ्घनं च समुद्रस्य लङ्कायाश्चापि मर्दनम् ।
सफलं तस्य च श्लाघ्यमद्य कर्म हनूमतः ॥ ७ ॥

“Nay, the laudable achievement of the celebrated Hanumān in the shape of leaping across the sea and the devastation of Laṅkā has borne fruit today. (7)

युद्धे विक्रमतश्चैव हितं मन्त्रयतस्तथा ।
सुग्रीवस्य ससैन्यस्य सफलोऽद्य परिश्रमः ॥ ८ ॥

“The exertion of Sugrīva, who exhibited his prowess on the battlefield with his army, and tendered friendly counsel, is fruitful today. (8)

विभीषणस्य च तथा सफलोऽद्य परिश्रमः ।
विगुणं भ्रातरं त्यक्त्वा यो मां स्वयमुपस्थितः ॥ ९ ॥

“Nay, fruitful likewise is the exertion today of Vibhīṣaṇa, who personally sought my presence, deserting his own brother (Rāvaṇa), who was devoid of virtues.” (9)

इत्येवं वदतः श्रुत्वा सीता रामस्य तद् वचः ।
मृगीवोत्फुल्लनयना बभूवाश्रुपरिप्लुता ॥ १० ॥

Hearing the foregoing speech of Śrī Rāma, even while he was speaking as aforesaid, Sītā, her eyes wide open like those of a female deer, was bathed in tears. (10)

पश्यतस्तां तु रामस्य समीपे हृदयप्रियाम् ।
जनवादभयाद् राज्ञो बभूव हृदयं द्विधा ॥ ११ ॥

The heart of King Śrī Rāma, even as he beheld Sītā, the beloved of his heart, near him, was torn within him for fear of public sarcasm. (11)

सीतामुत्पलपत्राक्षीं नीलकुञ्चितमूर्धजाम्।
अवदद् वै वरारोहां मध्ये वानररक्षसाम्॥ १२॥

In the midst of monkeys and ogres present on the spot he actually spoke (as follows) to Sītā, whose eyes resembled the petals of a lotus, who wore dark curly hair on her head and was endowed with shapely limbs: (12)

यत् कर्तव्यं मनुष्येण धर्षणां प्रतिमार्जता।
तत् कृतं रावणं हत्वा मयेदं मानकाक्षिणा॥ १३॥

“That which ought to be done by a man, revenging an insult, has been accomplished by me by killing Rāvaṇa, seeking, as I did, to redeem my honour. (13)

निर्जिता जीवलोकस्य तपसा भावितात्मना।
अगस्त्येन दुराधर्षा मुनिना दक्षिणेव दिक्॥ १४॥

Though difficult to approach for the world of mortals for fear of Rāvaṇa, you have been won back by me whose mind stands purified by asceticism in the same way as the southern quarter, which was difficult to assail (for fear of the ogres Ilvala and Vātāpi) for mortals was conquered by Sage Agastya, who had realized his Self through austerities. (14)

विदितश्चास्तु भद्रं ते योऽयं रणपरिश्रमः।
सुतीर्णः सुहृदां वीर्यान् त्वदर्थं मया कृतः॥ १५॥

“Let it be known to you that all this exertion in the shape of war, which has been successfully carried through, thanks to the prowess of my friends (the monkeys and Vibhiṣaṇa), was not undertaken for your sake: may prosperity attend you! (15)

रक्षता तु मया वृत्तमपवादं च सर्वतः।
प्रख्यातस्यात्मवंशस्य न्यङ्गं च परिमार्जता॥ १६॥

“This was, however, done by me in order to vindicate my good conduct and wipe off the obloquy coming to me from all sides as well as the stigma on my illustrious House. (16)

प्राप्तचारित्रसंदेहा मम प्रतिमुखे स्थिता।
दीपो नेत्रातुरस्येव प्रतिकूलासि मे दृढा॥ १७॥

“Standing unabashed before me, even though suspicion has arisen with regard to your character, you are extremely disagreeable to me even as a light to one who is suffering from sore eyes. (17)

तद् गच्छ त्वानुजानेऽद्य यथेष्टं जनकात्मजे।
एता दश दिशो भद्रे कार्यमस्ति न मे त्वया॥ १८॥

“Therefore, go wherever you like, O Janaka’s daughter; I grant you leave to do so this very day. All these ten directions are open to you, O good lady! No more purpose of mine remains to be served by you. (18)

कः पुमांस्तु कुले जातः स्त्रियं परगृहोषिताम्।
तेजस्वी पुनरादद्यात् सुहृल्लोभेन चेतसा॥ १९॥

“What man of spirit and born in a noble family for his part would take back with an eager mind a woman who has dwelt in another’s house, simply because she has been kindly disposed towards him in the past? (19)

रावणाङ्कपरिक्लिष्टां दृष्टां दुष्टेन चक्षुषा।
कथं त्वां पुनरादद्यां कुलं व्यपदिशन्महत्॥ २०॥

“While boasting of my lineage, how can I accept again you, who were squeezed into the arms of Rāvaṇa (while being borne away by him) and regarded by him with an evil lustful eye? (20)

यदर्थं निर्जिता मे त्वं सोऽयमासादितो मया।
नास्ति मे त्वय्यभिष्वङ्गो यथेष्टं गम्यतामिति॥ २१॥

“That object, viz., the retrieval of my lost honour for which you have been won back by me, has been achieved by me. There is no more attachment for you in my heart. You may, therefore, go wherever you like. (21)

तदद्य व्याहृतं भद्रे मयैतत् कृतबुद्धिना।
लक्ष्मणे वाथ भरते कुरु बुद्धिं यथासुखम् ॥ २२ ॥

“Hence this utterance has been made by me today, resolved as I am to act accordingly. Set your mind on Lakṣmaṇa or even on Bharata according to your pleasure. (22)

शत्रुघ्ने वाथ सुग्रीवे राक्षसे वा विभीषणे।
निवेशय मनः सीते यथा वा सुखमात्मना ॥ २३ ॥

Nay, fix your mind on Śatrughna or even on Sugrīva or on the ogre, Vibhīṣaṇa, O Sītā, or do as it pleases your mind. (23)

नहि त्वां रावणो दृष्ट्वा दिव्यरूपां मनोरमाम्।
मर्षयेत् चिरं सीते स्वगृहे पर्यवस्थिताम् ॥ २४ ॥

“Seeing you, who are endowed with a charming exterior and are so soul-ravishing, detained in his abode, Rāvaṇa could not have endured your separation for long, O Sītā!” (24)

ततः प्रियार्हश्रवणा तदप्रियं
प्रियादुपश्रुत्य चिरस्य मानिनी।
मुमोच बाष्पं रुदती तदा भृशं
गजेन्द्रहस्ताभिहतेव वल्लरी ॥ २५ ॥

Hearing that unpalatable speech from the mouth of her beloved lord, the proud lady, who had been used to hearing pleasing words alone, thereupon shed tears for long on that occasion, weeping bitterly and looking like a creeper struck down by the proboscis of a lordly elephant. (25)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे पञ्चदशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११५ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and fifteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

षोडशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXVI

With a taunting reply, Sītā undergoes a fire-ordeal in order to prove her conjugal fidelity

एवमुक्ता तु वैदेही परुषं रोमहर्षणम्।
राघवेण सरोषेण श्रुत्वा प्रव्यथिताभवत् ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the harsh utterance, which caused her hair to stand on end, when spoken to as aforesaid by Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who was full of anger, Sītā, a princess of Videha territory, for her part, felt greatly afflicted. (1)

सा तदाश्रुतपूर्वं हि जने महति मैथिली।
श्रुत्वा भर्तुर्वचो घोरं लज्जयावनताभवत् ॥ २ ॥

That princess of Mithilā stood bent low with shame on hearing on that occasion in the presence of a large gathering the foregoing vehement speech of her husband, the like of which had not been actually heard by her before. (2)

प्रविशन्तीव गात्राणि स्वानि सा जनकात्मजा।
वाक्शरैस्तैः सशल्येव भृशमश्रूण्यवर्तयत् ॥ ३ ॥

As though pierced by those arrow-like words, nay, shrinking into her limbs as it were with shame, that daughter of Janaka shed profuse tears. (3)

ततो बाष्पपरिक्लिनं प्रमार्जन्ती स्वमाननम्।
शनैर्नैर्द्गदया वाचा भर्तारमिदमब्रवीत् ॥ ४ ॥

Then, wiping clean her face, which was bathed in tears, she slowly addressed in faltering accents the following reply to her spouse: (4)

किं मामसदृशं वाक्यमीदृशं श्रोत्रदारुणम्।
रूक्षं श्रावयसे वीर प्राकृतः प्राकृतामिव ॥ ५ ॥

“Why do you, like a common man, address to me, O hero, such unkind and unbecoming words, which are so jarring to the ear, as a common man would do to an ordinary woman? (5)

न तथास्मि महाबाहो यथा मामवगच्छसि।
प्रत्ययं गच्छ मे स्वेन चारित्र्येणैव ते शपे ॥ ६ ॥

“I am not as you take me to be, O mighty-armed one! Be restored to confidence about me. I swear to you by my own character. (6)

पृथक्स्त्रीणां प्रचारेण जातिं त्वं परिशङ्कसे।
परित्यजैनां शङ्कां तु यदि तेऽहं परीक्षिता ॥ ७ ॥

“Judging by the conduct of vulgar women, you seem to distrust the entire womankind, which is not reasonable. Pray, shake off this doubt if I have been actually tested and found trustworthy by you. (7)

यदहं गात्रसंस्पर्शं गतास्मि विवशा प्रभो।
कामकारो न मे तत्र दैवं तत्रापराध्यति ॥ ८ ॥

“I was helpless when I came into contact with the person of Rāvaṇa; I did not act of my own free will on that occasion. My adverse fate alone is to blame on that score, my lord. (8)

मदधीनं तु यत् तन्मे हृदयं त्वयि वर्तते।
पराधीनेषु गात्रेषु किं करिष्याम्यनीश्वरी ॥ ९ ॥

“That which is under my control, viz., my heart, ever abides in you. What could I do, helpless as I was, with regard to my limbs, which had fallen under the sway of another? (9)

सह संवृद्धभावेन संसर्गेण च मानद।
यदि तेऽहं न विज्ञाता हता तेनास्मि शाश्वतम् ॥ १० ॥

“If I could not be fully known to you, O bestower of honour on others, in spite of our love for each other having simultaneously grown and despite our having lived together for so many years, I am undone for good, thanks to such ignorance. (10)

प्रेषितस्ते महावीरो हनुमानवलोककः।
लङ्कास्थाहं त्वया राजन् किं तदा न विसर्जिता ॥ ११ ॥

“When the eminent hero, Hanumān, was dispatched by you in order to find me out, why, O king, was I not repudiated by you even while I was still in Lāṅkā? (11)

प्रत्यक्षं वानरस्यास्य तद्वाक्यसमनन्तरम्।
त्वया संत्यक्तया वीर त्यक्तं स्याज्जीवितं मया ॥ १२ ॥

“Life, O hero, would have been yielded up by me, when repudiated for good by you, immediately on hearing the message, conveying the repudiation, before the very eyes of this monkey, Hanumān. (12)

न वृथा ते श्रमोऽयं स्यात् संशये न्यस्य जीवितम्।
सुहृज्जनपरिक्लेशो न चायं विफलस्तव ॥ १३ ॥

“This useless exertion in the shape of crossing over to Lāṅkā and waging war with the mighty Rāvaṇa, which you have put forth exposing your life to danger, would not have been undertaken nor would your friends, viz., the monkeys and Vibhiṣaṇa, have been put to such fruitless hardship. (13)

त्वया तु नृपशार्दूल रोषमेवानुवर्तता।
लघुनेव मनुष्येण स्त्रीत्वमेव पुरस्कृतम् ॥ १४ ॥

“By you, however, who, like a small man, gave yourself up to anger alone, O jewel among the rulers of men, womanliness alone has been mainly taken into consideration. (14)

अपदेशो मे जनकान्नोत्पत्तिर्वसुधातलात्।
मम वृत्तं च वृत्तज्ञ बहु ते न पुरस्कृतम् ॥ १५ ॥

“Only my appellation, Jānakī or Vaidehī, has been derived from King Janaka (not that I owe my descent to him), since my birth took place from the sacrificial ground of Janaka. This divine origin of mine was, however, not taken into account by you. My exalted character was not prized by you either, O appraiser of good conduct? (15)

न प्रमाणीकृतः पाणिर्बाल्ये मम निपीडितः ।

मम भक्तिश्च शीलं च सर्वं ते पृष्ठतः कृतम् ॥ १६ ॥

“The fact that my hand was pressed by you in my childhood as a token of your acceptance when it was placed in yours by my father during the nuptials was not duly recognized by you while repudiating me. Nay, my devotion to you as well as my chastity have all been ignored by you.” (16)

इति ब्रुवन्ती रुदती बाष्पगद्गदभाषिणी ।

उवाच लक्ष्मणं सीता दीनं ध्यानपरायणम् ॥ १७ ॥

Speaking as aforesaid in a voice choked with tears and weeping all the while, Sītā appealed as follows to Lakṣmaṇa, who was absorbed in thought and feeling sore distressed: (17)

चितां मे कुरु सौमित्रे व्यसनस्यास्य भेषजम् ।

मिथ्यापवादोपहता नाहं जीवितुमुत्सहे ॥ १८ ॥

“Pray, O Lakṣmaṇa! raise for me a pyre, the only antidote against this calamity. I no longer desire to survive, smitten as I am with false reproaches. (18)

अप्रीतेन गुणैर्भर्त्रा त्यक्ताया जनसंसदि ।

या क्षमा मे गतिर्गन्तुं प्रवेक्ष्ये हव्यवाहनम् ॥ १९ ॥

“I will enter a fire, which is the only course appropriate for me, renounced as I am in a public gathering by my husband, who is no longer pleased with my virtues.” (19)

एवमुक्तस्तु वैदेह्या लक्ष्मणः परवीरहा ।

अमर्षवशमापन्नो राघवं समुदैक्षत ॥ २० ॥

Requested thus by Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), Lakṣmaṇa, the destroyer of hostile champions, looked at Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), overcome as he was with indignation. (20)

स विज्ञाय मनश्छन्दं रामस्याकारसूचितम् ।

चितां चकार सौमित्रिर्मते रामस्य वीर्यवान् ॥ २१ ॥

Ascertaining the pleasure of Śrī Rāma's mind as revealed by his facial expression, the valiant son of Sumitrā prepared a pyre in deference to the wishes of Śrī Rāma. (21)

नहि रामं तदा कश्चित् कालान्तकयमोपमम् ।

अनुनेतुमथो वक्तुं द्रष्टुं वाप्यशकत् सुहृत् ॥ २२ ॥

No one, near and dear, actually dared on that occasion to speak to or even look upon, much less pacify Śrī Rāma, who vied with Yama (the destroyer of the worlds) at the time of universal dissolution. (22)

अधोमुखं स्थितं रामं ततः कृत्वा प्रदक्षिणम् ।

उपावर्तत वैदेही दीप्यमानं हुताशनम् ॥ २३ ॥

Walking clockwise as a mark of respect about Śrī Rāma, standing with his head bent low, Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory) approached the blazing fire. (23)

प्रणम्य दैवतेभ्यश्च ब्राह्मणेभ्यश्च मैथिली ।

बद्धाञ्जलिपुटा चेदमुवाचाग्निसमीपतः ॥ २४ ॥

Nay, respectfully bowing down to the gods as well as to the Brāhmaṇas in general, the princess of Mithilā prayed as follows with joined palms in the presence of the fire: (24)

यथा मे हृदयं नित्यं नापसर्पति राघवात् ।

तथा लोकस्य साक्षी मां सर्वतः पातु पावकः ॥ २५ ॥

“As my heart never turns away from Śrī Rāma, so may the god of fire, the witness of the world, protect me on all sides. (25)

यथा मां शुद्धचारित्रां दुष्टां जानाति राघवः ।

तथा लोकस्य साक्षी मां सर्वतः पातु पावकः ॥ २६ ॥

“Since Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) takes me to be corrupt, though of unimpeachable conduct, let the god of fire, the witness of the world, under such circumstances, protect me on all sides. (26)

कर्मणा मनसा वाचा यथा नातिचराम्यहम् ।

राघवं सर्वधर्मज्ञं तथा मां पातु पावकः ॥ २७ ॥

“Inasmuch as I have never been unfaithful in act, thought and speech to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu) who knows the secret of all virtues, let the god of fire in that case afford protection to me. (27)

आदित्यो भगवान् वायुर्दिशश्चन्द्रस्तथैव च।
अहश्चापि तथा संध्ये रात्रिश्च पृथिवी तथा।
यथान्येऽपि विजानन्ति तथा चारित्रसंयुताम् ॥ २८ ॥

“Since the glorious sun-god, the wind-god, the deities presiding over the four quarters, and even so the moon-god, as also the deity presiding over the daytime and the morning and evening twilights and the night as also Mother Earth and others too likewise know me to be richly endowed with good character, let the god of fire protect me.” (28)

एवमुक्त्वा तु वैदेही परिक्रम्य हुताशनम्।
विवेश ज्वलनं दीपं निःशङ्केनान्तरात्मना ॥ २९ ॥

Saying so, and going clockwise round the fire as a mark of respect, Sītā (a princess of the Videha territory), for her part entered the blazing fire with a fearless mind. (29)

जनश्च सुमहांस्तत्र बालवृद्धसमाकुलः।
ददर्श मैथिलीं दीपं प्रविशन्तीं हुताशनम् ॥ ३० ॥

Nay, the huge gathering present there, teeming, as it was, with children and old people, witnessed the resplendent princess of Mithilā entering the fire. (30)

सा तप्तनवहेमाभा तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणा।
पपात ज्वलनं दीपं सर्वलोकस्य संनिधौ ॥ ३१ ॥

The lady, who shone like fresh refined gold and was decked with ornaments of refined gold, rushed into the blazing fire in the presence of all the people. (31)

ददृशुस्तां विशालाक्षीं पतन्तीं हव्यवाहनम्।
सीतां सर्वाणि रूपाणि रुक्मवेदिनिभां तदा ॥ ३२ ॥

All created beings beheld that large-eyed lady, Sītā, who shone like a golden altar, descending into the fire (lit., the bearer of sacrificial offerings) on that occasion. (32)

ददृशुस्तां महाभागां प्रविशन्तीं हुताशनम्।
ऋषयो देवगन्धर्वा यज्ञे पूर्णाहुतीमिव ॥ ३३ ॥

R̥sis (the seers of Vedic Mantras), gods and the Gandharvas saw that highly blessed lady penetrating deep into the fire (lit., the consumer of oblations) like the consummating offering of ghee. (33)

प्रचुक्रुशुः स्त्रियः सर्वास्तां दृष्ट्वा हव्यवाहने।
पतन्तीं संस्कृतां मन्त्रैर्वसोर्धारामिवाध्वरे ॥ ३४ ॥

All the women present on the occasion screamed on perceiving her, adorned as she was, falling into the fire like an unbroken stream of ghee, duly consecrated by the recitation of Mantras, falling into a sacrificial fire. (34)

ददृशुस्तां त्रयो लोका देवगन्धर्वदानवाः।
शप्तां पतन्तीं निरये त्रिदिवाद् देवतामिव ॥ ३५ ॥

The denizens of all the three worlds, including gods, the Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and Dānavas (the demons), witnessed her jumping into the fire like a goddess, subjected to a curse, falling from heaven into hell. (35)

तस्यामग्निं विशन्त्यां तु हाहेति विपुलः स्वनः।
रक्षसां वानराणां च सम्बभूवाद्वतोपमः ॥ ३६ ॥

While she was entering into the flames, a loud cry, which appeared strange, rose from the ogres and the monkeys alike. (36)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे षोडशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११६ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and sixteen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a R̥si and the oldest epic.

सप्तदशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXVII

Gods seek the presence of Śrī Rāma, and Brahmā (the creator) proclaims his divinity and extols him

ततो हि दुर्मना रामः श्रुत्वैवं वदतां गिरः ।
दध्यौ मुहूर्तं धर्मात्मा बाष्पव्याकुललोचनः ॥ १ ॥

Hearing the cries of those who were wailing as aforesaid, Śrī Rāma for his part, whose mind was set on virtue, thereupon became thoughtful for a while, afflicted as he was in mind, his eyes blinded by tears.

(1)

ततो वैश्रवणो राजा यमश्च पितृभिः सह ।
सहस्राक्षश्च देवेशो वरुणश्च जलेश्वरः ॥ २ ॥
षडर्धनयनः श्रीमान् महादेवो वृषध्वजः ।
कर्ता सर्वस्य लोकस्य ब्रह्मा ब्रह्मविदां वरः ॥ ३ ॥
एते सर्वे समागम्य विमानैः सूर्यसंनिभैः ।
आगम्य नगरीं लङ्कामभिजग्मुश्च राघवम् ॥ ४ ॥

Nay, gathering together and reaching the city of Laṅkā in their aerial cars, which shone brightly like the sun, Kubera (son of Sage Viśravā), the king (of Yakṣas), and Yama (the god of retribution), alongwith the Pitṛs (the eternal manes), as also the thousand-eyed Indra (the ruler of gods) and Varuṇa, the ruler of the waters, the glorious three-eyed Lord Śiva (the Supreme God) who bears the device of a bull on His banner, Brahmā, the creator of the entire universe, the foremost of the knowers of Brahma (the Absolute)—all these then approached Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu).

(2—4)

ततः सहस्ताभरणान् प्रगृह्य विपुलान् भुजान् ।
अबुवंस्त्रिदशश्रेष्ठा राघवं प्राञ्जलिं स्थितम् ॥ ५ ॥

Lifting up their long arms, their hands adorned with jewels, the foremost of gods thereupon submitted as follows to Śrī Rāma (a scion of Raghu), who stood with joined palms by way of salutation: (5)

कर्ता सर्वस्य लोकस्य श्रेष्ठो ज्ञानविदां विभुः ।
उपेक्षसे कथं सीतां पतन्तीं हव्यवाहने ।
कथं देवगणश्रेष्ठमात्मानं नावबुद्ध्यसे ॥ ६ ॥

“The Maker of the entire cosmos, the foremost of those well-versed in the spiritual lore, and the suzerain lord of the cosmos, how do You ignore Sītā falling into the fire, the bearer of sacrificial offerings? How do You not recognize Yourself to be the foremost of the hosts of gods? (6)

ऋतधामा वसुः पूर्वं वसूनां च प्रजापतिः ।
त्रयाणामपि लोकानामादिकर्ता स्वयंप्रभुः ॥ ७ ॥

“Among the Vasus (a class of gods) You are the Vasu Ṛtadhāmā, who was formerly a lord of creation and the first creator of all the three worlds, their self-constituted Ruler. (7)

रुद्राणामष्टमो रुद्रः साध्यानामपि पञ्चमः ।
अश्विनौ चापि कर्णौ ते सूर्याचन्द्रमसौ दृशौ ॥ ८ ॥

“You are the eighth Rudra (Mahādeva) of the eleven Rudras and the fifth Vīryavān by name among the Sādhyas (a particular class of celestial beings). The twin Aswins (the physicians of the gods) are Your ears and the sun and the moon, likewise, constitute Your eyes. (8)

अन्ते चादौ च मध्ये च दृश्यसे च परंतप ।
उपेक्षसे च वैदेहीं मानुषः प्राकृतो यथा ॥ ९ ॥

“Nay, You are seen to exist at the end as also at the beginning, as well as at the middle of the creation, O scourge of Your enemies! And yet You seem to ignore Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, as a common man would do.” (9)

इत्युक्तो लोकपालैस्तैः स्वामी लोकस्य राघवः ।

अब्रवीत् त्रिदशश्रेष्ठान् रामो धर्मभृतां वरः ॥ १० ॥

Spoken to in these words by the aforesaid protectors of the world, Śrī Rāma, a scion of Raghu, the lord of the universe and the foremost of those upholding the cause of righteousness replied as follows to the aforesaid jewels among the gods: (10)

आत्मानं मानुषं मन्ये रामं दशरथात्मजम् ।

सोऽहं यश्च यतश्चाहं भगवांस्तद् ब्रवीतु मे ॥ ११ ॥

“I account myself a human being, Rāma by name, sprung from the loins of Emperor Daśaratha. And yet let the glorious lord Brahmā tell me that which I as such really am and whence I have come.” (11)

इति ब्रुवाणं काकुत्स्थं ब्रह्मा ब्रह्मविदां वरः ।

अब्रवीच्छृणु मे वाक्यं सत्यं सत्यपराक्रम ॥ १२ ॥

To Śrī Rāma (a scion of Kakutstha), who was speaking in this strain, Brahmā, the creator, the foremost of the knowers of Brahma, replied as follows: “Listen, O Lord of unfailing prowess, to my true submission. (12)

भवान् नारायणो देवः श्रीमांश्चक्रायुधः प्रभुः ।

एकशृङ्गो वराहस्त्वं भूतभव्यसपत्नजित् ॥ १३ ॥

You are Lord Nārāyaṇa Himself, the glorious god who wields the discus, ‘Sudarśana’. Nay, You are the divine Boar with a single tusk, the conqueror of Your bygone as well as future enemies. (13)

अक्षरं ब्रह्म सत्यं च मध्ये चान्ते च राघव ।

लोकानां त्वं परो धर्मो विष्वक्सेनश्चतुर्भुजः ॥ १४ ॥

“You are the imperishable Brahma, the Absolute, the Truth abiding at the beginning, in the middle, as well as at the end of the universe, O scion of Raghu! You are the supreme Law operating in all the worlds. Your forces in the shape of Your controlling agents are spread all round; You are the four-armed Lord, Śrī Hari. (14)

शार्ङ्गधन्वा हृषीकेशः पुरुषः पुरुषोत्तमः ।

अजितः खड्गधृग् विष्णुः कृष्णश्चैव बृहद्बलः ॥ १५ ॥

“You are the Wielder of the Śārṅga bow, the Subduer of the senses, the Inner Controller and the Supreme Person, the invincible Viṣṇu, the Wielder of a sword called Nandaka as well as Śrī Kṛṣṇa endowed with great might. (15)

सेनानीर्ग्रामणीश्च त्वं बुद्धिः सत्त्वं क्षमा दमः ।

प्रभवश्चाप्ययश्च त्वमुपेन्द्रो मधुसूदनः ॥ १६ ॥

“You are Lord Kārtikeya (the commander of the celestial army) as well as the village headman. You are the faculty of understanding, strength, forbearance and sense-control. You are the origin as well as the end of all. You are the Divine Dwarf (the younger brother of Indra) as also the exterminator of the demon Madhu. (16)

इन्द्रकर्मा महेन्द्रस्त्वं पद्मनाभो रणान्तकृत् ।

शरण्यं शरणं च त्वामाहुर्दिव्या महर्षयः ॥ १७ ॥

“You are the creator of Indra (in the form of Prajāpati, a creator of beings), the Supreme Ruler, Lord Viṣṇu (who has a lotus sprung from His navel), who puts an end to all in combat. Eminent divine sages pronounce You to be fit to afford protection to all as well as the refuge of all. (17)

सहस्रशृङ्गो वेदात्मा शतशीर्षो महर्षभः ।

त्वं त्रयाणां हि लोकानामादिकर्ता स्वयंप्रभुः ॥ १८ ॥

In the shape of the Vedas, You are the great Bull with a thousand horns (in the shape of as many redactions) and a hundred heads in the shape of as many precepts. You are the first Creator of all the three worlds and the self-constituted Lord of all. (18)

सिद्धानामपि साध्यानामाश्रयश्चासि पूर्वजः ।

त्वं यज्ञस्त्वं वषट्कारस्त्वमौंकारः परात्परः ॥ १९ ॥

You are the refuge as well as the forbear of the Siddhas (a class of demigods endowed with mystic powers by virtue of their very birth) as well as of the Sādhyaṣ (a class of celestial beings). You are the Sacrificial performance; nay, You are the sacred syllable 'Vaṣaṭ' (on hearing which the Adhvaryu priest casts the oblation offered to a deity into the sacred fire); You are the mystic syllable 'OM' (an appellation of God) and higher than the highest. (19)

प्रभवं निधनं चापि नो विदुः को भवानिति ।

दृश्यसे सर्वभूतेषु गोषु च ब्राह्मणेषु च ॥ २० ॥

"People neither know your origin, nor Your end, nor who You are in reality. You alone are manifest in all created beings, in the cows as well as in the Brāhmaṇas. (20)

दिक्षु सर्वासु गगने पर्वतेषु नदीषु च ।

सहस्रचरणः श्रीमान् शतशीर्षः सहस्रदृक् ॥ २१ ॥

"You exist in all the quarters, in the firmament, in mountains as well as in rivers. You are the glorious Being endowed with thousand of feet, hundreds of heads and thousand of eyes. (21)

त्वं धारयसि भूतानि पृथिवीं सर्वपर्वतान् ।

अन्ते पृथिव्याः सलिले दृश्यसे त्वं महोरगः ॥ २२ ॥

"You sustain all created beings, the earth as also all the mountains. On the disappearance of the earth at the end of the Cosmic day, You are seen lying on a huge serpent known by the name of Śeṣa, on the waters. (22)

त्रील्लोकान् धारयन् राम देवगन्धर्वदानवान् ।

अहं ते हृदयं राम जिह्वा देवी सरस्वती ॥ २३ ॥

"You are the Cosmic Person, Lord Nārāyaṇa, supporting all the three worlds as also the gods, the Gandharvas (celestial musicians) and the devils, O Rāma! I, Brahmā, constitute Your heart, while Goddess Saraswatī, O Rāma, Your tongue. (23)

देवा रोमाणि गात्रेषु ब्रह्मणा निर्मिताः प्रभो ।

निमेषस्ते स्मृता रात्रिरुन्मेषो दिवसस्तथा ॥ २४ ॥

"The gods created by Brahmā are the hair on Your limbs, O Lord! Night has been recognized as the closing of Your eyelids and the day as the opening of your eyelids. (24)

संस्कारास्त्वभवन् वेदा नैतदस्ति त्वया विना ।

जगत् सर्वं शरीरं ते स्थैर्यं ते वसुधातलम् ॥ २५ ॥

"And the latencies of Your mind appeared as the Vedas. The visible universe does not exist but for You. The entire Cosmos is Your body and the earth constitutes Your firmness. (25)

अग्निः कोपः प्रसादस्ते सोमः श्रीवत्सलक्षणः ।

त्वया लोकास्त्रयः क्रान्ताः पुरा स्वैर्विक्रमैस्त्रिभिः ॥ २६ ॥

"Fire is Your wrath and the moon constitutes Your placidity. Nay, You are Lord Viṣṇu, who bears the mark of Śrīvatsa—a curl of white hair on His breast. All the three worlds were covered by You in Your three strides in the past. (26)

महेन्द्रश्च कृतो राजा बलिं बद्ध्वा सुदारुणम् ।

सीता लक्ष्मीर्भवान् विष्णुर्देवः कृष्णः प्रजापतिः ॥ २७ ॥

"Nay, after binding the exceptionally formidable Bali (the ruler of the three worlds) the mighty Indra was crowned king by you. Sītā is no other than Goddess Lakṣmī, the divine consort of Lord Viṣṇu, while You are the same as Lord Viṣṇu. You alone are Kṛṣṇa, who is all Truth, Consciousness and Bliss and You are the Lord of created beings. (27)

वधार्थं रावणस्येह प्रविष्टो मानुषीं तनुम् ।

तदिदं नस्त्वया कार्यं कृतं धर्मभृतां वर ॥ २८ ॥

"For the destruction of Rāvaṇa You assumed a human semblance on this earth. This aforesaid purpose of ours has been accomplished by You, O prince of those upholding the cause of virtue! (28)

निहतो रावणो राम प्रहृष्टो दिवमाक्रम ।

अमोघं देव वीर्यं ते न ते मोघाः पराक्रमाः ॥ २९ ॥

"Rāvaṇa has been killed by You, O Rāma! Therefore, highly rejoiced, return to Your divine Abode. Unfailing, O Lord, is

Your valour; while Your exploits never go in vain. (29)

अमोघं दर्शनं राम अमोघस्तव संस्तवः ।
अमोघास्ते भविष्यन्ति भक्तिमन्तो नरा भुवि ॥ ३० ॥

“Your blessed sight is unfailing in its effects; singing Your praises, too, never goes in vain. Nay, those who are full of devotion to You will never be unsuccessful on earth. (30)

ये त्वां देवं ध्रुवं भक्ताः पुराणं पुरुषोत्तमम् ।
प्राप्नुवन्ति तथा कामानिह लोके परत्र च ॥ ३१ ॥

“Those who are devoted to You, the primeval and eternal Lord, the Supreme Person, likewise attain all their desired objects here as well as hereafter.” (31)

इममार्षं स्तवं दिव्यमितिहासं पुरातनम् ।
ये नराः कीर्तयिष्यन्ति नास्ति तेषां पराभवः ॥ ३२ ॥

Discomfiture will never be the lot of those men who will repeat this hymn sung by Brahmā (the foremost seer) and recount this ancient story. (32)

इत्यार्षे श्रीमद्रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकाव्ये युद्धकाण्डे सप्तदशाधिकशततमः सर्गः ॥ ११७ ॥

Thus ends Canto One hundred and seventeen in the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the glorious Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki, the work of a Ṛṣi and the oldest epic.

अष्टादशाधिकशततमः सर्गः

Canto CXVIII

The god of fire emerges in person from the burning pyre with Sītā and, restoring her to Śrī Rāma, testifies to her purity and the latter joyfully accept her

एतच्छ्रुत्वा शुभं वाक्यं पितामहसमीरितम् ।
अङ्गेनादाय वैदेहीमुत्पपात विभावसुः ॥ १ ॥

On hearing the foregoing excellent panegyric addressed by Brahmā, the creator, the god of fire presently emerged from the burning pyre taking Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory, in his arms. (1)

विधूयाथ चितां तां तु वैदेहीं हव्यवाहनः ।
उत्तस्थौ मूर्तिमानाशु गृहीत्वा जनकात्मजाम् ॥ २ ॥

Scattering that funeral pile, and taking the aforesaid daughter of Janaka, a princess of the Videha territory, in his arms, the god of fire (lit., the bearer of sacrificial offerings) for his part forthwith rose at once from the fire in a corporeal form. (2)

तरुणादित्यसंकाशां तप्तकाञ्चनभूषणाम् ।
रक्ताम्बरधरां बालां नीलकुञ्जितमूर्धजाम् ॥ ३ ॥

अक्लिष्टमाल्याभरणां तथारूपामनिन्दिताम् ।
ददौ रामाय वैदेहीमङ्गे कृत्वा विभावसुः ॥ ४ ॥

Bearing in his arms the youthful princess of the Videha territory, who was shining brightly as the rising sun, was decked with ornaments of refined gold and attired in a red robe, and wore dark curly hair, who was further adorned with ornaments of flowers which had not been blasted even on her entering the fire and emerging out of it, who was absolutely beyond reproach and looked just the same as she did while entering the flames—the god of fire restored her to Śrī Rāma. (3-4)

अब्रवीत् तु तदा रामं साक्षी लोकस्य पावकः ।
एषा ते राम वैदेही पापमस्यां न विद्यते ॥ ५ ॥

The god of fire, the witness of the whole world, for his part then spoke as follows to Śrī Rāma: “Here is your spouse, Sītā, a princess of the Videha territory! No sin exists in her. (5)

नैव वाचा न मनसा नैव बुद्ध्या न चक्षुषा।
सुवृत्ता वृत्तशौटीर्यं न त्वामत्यचरच्छुभा ॥ ६ ॥

“The blessed lady, whose conduct has been excellent, has never been unfaithful to you, who are endowed with strength of character, either by word or by mind or again by conception or even by glance. (6)

रावणेनापनीतैषा वीर्योत्सिक्तेन रक्षसा।
त्वया विरहिता दीना विवशा निर्जने सती ॥ ७ ॥

“This wretched yet virtuous lady was borne away by the ogre, Rāvaṇa, who was proud of his valour—while she was lonely in her hermitage and separated from you, and as such powerless. (7)

रुद्धा चान्तःपुरे गुप्ता त्वच्चित्ता त्वत्परायणा।
रक्षिता राक्षसीभिश्च घोराभिर्घोरबुद्धिभिः ॥ ८ ॥

“Though detained in his gynaeceum, kept hidden and guarded by frightful ogresses of a cruel mind, she kept her mind focussed on you and looked on you as her ultimate resort. (8)

प्रलोभ्यमाना विविधं तर्ज्यमाना च मैथिली।
नाचिन्तयत तद्रक्षस्त्वद्गतेनान्तरात्मना ॥ ९ ॥

“With her mind set on you, the princess of Mithilā never thought of that ogre, even while being tempted in various ways and threatened by him. (9)

विशुद्धभावां निष्पापां प्रतिगृहीष्व मैथिलीम्।
न किञ्चिदभिधातव्या अहमाज्ञापयामि ते ॥ १० ॥

“Therefore, accept the sinless princess of Mithilā of absolutely untainted mind. I hereby command you that she should not be told anything harsh.” (10)

ततः प्रीतमना रामः श्रुत्वैवं वदतां वरः।
दध्यौ मुहूर्तं धर्मात्मा हर्षव्याकुललोचनः ॥ ११ ॥

Śrī Rāma, the foremost of the eloquent, whose mind was set on virtue, felt rejoiced in mind to hear the aforesaid speech, and reflected for a while, his eyes blinded by tears of joy. (11)

एवमुक्तो महातेजा धृतिमानुरुविक्रमः।
उवाच त्रिदशश्रेष्ठं रामो धर्मभृतां वरः ॥ १२ ॥

Spoken to as aforesaid, Śrī Rāma, the foremost of those upholding the cause of virtue, who was endowed with extraordinary energy and great valour, and was full of firmness, replied as follows to the god of fire (the foremost of gods): (12)

अवश्यं चापि लोकेषु सीता पावनमर्हति।
दीर्घकालोषिता ह्रीयं रावणान्तःपुरे शुभा ॥ १३ ॥

“Sītā undoubtedly needed this purificatory ordeal in the eyes of the people inasmuch as this blessed lady had lived for a long time in the gynaeceum of Rāvaṇa. (13)

बालिशो बत कामात्मा रामो दशरथात्मजः।
इति वक्ष्यति मां लोको जानकीमविशोध्य हि ॥ १४ ॥

